244 Parading Klansmen Arrested By Ohio Police

PROCESSION IS CHARGED WITH DEFYING EDICT

Crowd Estimated At 10,000 Gathers At the Police Station

187 IN FULL REGALIA

Boys Charged With Burning Cross During Arrest Also Taken

By The Associated Press.

PORTSMOUTH, Ohio, Oct. 28.—The edict of Mayor William N. Gableman against the ku klux klan, was enforced here this afternoon when police stopped a parade of alleged klansmen and arrested 244 of the paraders. Of this number 187 were fully garbed in klan regalia.

The paraders assembled in a local park and were marching to a church where they were to take part in the laying of a corner stone when Chief of Police Joseph Distell with a squad of patrolmen placed them under arrest and marched the entire procession to the police station. They were charged with having obstructed traffic and ordered to report for hearing in the municipal court tomorrow.

Most of the marchers were residents of nearby towns and villages.

While a crowd estimated at 10,000 gathered about the police station someone set up a burning cross on adjoining school property.

Klan leaders had been denied permission yesterday to parade in regalia, according to Mayor Gableman, and fifty special police were sworn in.

Two youths, one of whom told police he was a member of the klan, were arrested tonight after police say they burned a fiery cross in the heart of the business district. Later they were released to appear in juvenile court.

There was no sign of further disorders here late tonight.

L. GEORGE SEES BATTLE FIELDS

By The Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 28.—The battlefields of Fredericksburg and the Wilderness, scene of some of the heaviest fighting of the Civil war, were visited today by David Lloyd-George, the war-time premier of Great Britain, late on the day he came here to be the guest of John Stuart Bryan, publisher of the Richmond News Leader, and tomorrow he will inspect old battlefields in this vicinity.

Mr. Lloyd-George, who has always been an admirer of many of the Confederate generals, is visiting the Virginia battlefields with Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson of Washington, who is a native of this state, and a friend of the former premier since the days of the Versailles peace conference when the admiral accompanied President Wilson to the conference as his personal physician.

Arriving at Fredericksburg early this morning from Washington, the former premier, accompanied by Dame Margaret and Miss Megan Lloyd George, went to the scene of the battle of Salem Churches, then to Chancellorsville and later to Wilderness Run where General Grant for a time established his headquarters in the second Wilderness campaign.

Near Chancellorsville, Mr. Lloyd-George stood bareheaded before the monument marking the spot where "Stonewall" Jackson fell mortally wounded. An admirer of the southern military leader, he asked many questions concerning his personality and career, a number of details being given him by Judge John T. Goolrick of Fredericksburg, a Confederate veteran.

"You talk about your World war," Judge Goolrick exclaimed, "but it has not developed a Jackson or a Lee."

"I agree with that," Mr. Lloyd-George replied, "and Foch is the nearest to Lee."

"Yes," said the judge, "and without you they wouldn't have had Foch."

In the afternoon the former premier looked over the battlefields of Fredricksburg.

Rams Submarine; Five of Crew Lost

Fruit Steamer Collides With Underseas Boat in Limon Bay, Canal Zone; Divers Are After Bodies.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—The United States submarine O-5 was sunk in Limon bay, Canal zone after a collision early today with the United Fruit company's vessel Abangarez, the navy department has been notified by radio. Five members of the submarine's crew were reported missing.

The Abangarez was undamaged.

The belief that the five men missing went down with the submarine, divers immediately began efforts to recover their bodies.

The commanding officer of the submarine, according to navy department record, was Lieutenant Hamilton Avery, of Philadelphia. Only one other officer was listed as attached to the vessel, Lieutenant A. H. Bamberger. The collision occurred at 6:25 a. m., off Buoy, in Limon bay, which is at the eastern terminus of the Panama canal.

Those reported missing were:

Lawrence Brown, chief electrician's mate, Tynsboro, Mass.

Clyde E. Hughes, motor machinist's mate first class, Manito, Ill.

Henry Dreault, torpedo man, second class, Grand Isle, Vermont.

Thomas T. Melseler, fireman, 1221 S. 125th St., Philadelphia.

Fred C. Smith, mess attendant, first class, Cristobal, Canal zone.

The official dispatch to the department announcing the accident was the only one received up to a late hour today and in the absence of further details, officials here said they were unable to suggest the cause. The opinion was expressed, however, that contributory factors of weather, incorrect course or inaccurate interpretation of navigating signals would be found.

The OH-5 although launched during the world war, was one of a class already considered practically obsolete and restricted to coast and harbor defense. Built at the Fore river ship building company's plant at Quincy, Mass., in 1917, the submarine displaced slightly more than 520 tons and measured 175 feet in length with 88 feet beam. Her motive plant gave 14 knots on the surface and 10.5 submerged. Four torpedo tubes and a 3-inch gun comprised the offensive armament.

The crew if complete at the time of the disaster would have included three officers, three warrant officers and 24 men.

WORLD WAR VET DIES FIGHTING

By The Associated Press.

ALTON, Ill., Oct. 28.—John Preede, 38 years old, constable of East Alton, and Joseph McMahon, 20, of St. Louis, were shot to death when three masked men attempted to hold up and rob six persons who were playing poker in a room at an East Alton hotel this morning.

The robbers, flourishing revolvers, walked into the room and commanded the players to hold up their hands. All complied and were instructed to line up with their faces to the walls. The bandits then began searching the players' pockets.

Preede, who was a veteran of the World war, drew a pistol when the bandits came to him and fired. The robbers fled to the lobby and were pursued by Preede, who was shot to death there. The robbers escaped in an automobile.

The body of McMahon, with a black mask about his face, later was found in the lobby. It was learned that McMahon was a member of a construction company at St. Louis and had been engaged on work for his company near here.

Relatives of McMahon, who came to East Alton to claim the body, said they could assign no reason for his connection with the hold up. James T. McMahon, a brother of the dead man, said he did not believe his brother was shot by Preede, but that he was slain by his companions who believed that McMahon might implicate them if he were allowed to live.

CAR SOMERSAULTS ON BURK HIGHWAY

One woman sustained a broken arm and another woman and a man driving a severe shake-up when the car they were in turned upside down about three miles out on the Burkburnett road about 2:30 yesterday afternoon. Mrs. E. L. Butts of Burkburnett, who was injured, was taken to the general hospital here where last night her condition was pronounced very good. Harry Sisler, an employee of the Magnolia company at Burkburnett, who was driving at the time of the accident, and the other woman occupant were not injured.

According to witnesses, the car, a new Buick touring car, apparently became unmanagable on the slippery pavement at the time of meeting another car, and went off the left side of the road, breaking a wheel in the mud, and doing a forward half somersault, coming up facing toward Burkburnett. The top was crushed in by the impact.

The other car, which slightly bumped the Buick in passing, was not damaged.

PINCHOT BLAMES HIS WET STATE ON WASHINGTON

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 28. Governor Pinchot in a letter tonight to Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, placed the blame for what he termed the "break down" of federal prohibition enforcement in Pennsylvania upon the federal permit system. He declared Mr. Mellon, as secretary of the treasury, has the power, by control of these permits, to make violations "substantially impossible."

CHARGE 15 ARE DEAD FROM GUN FIRE OF TROOPS

Complaints on Teloloapan Deaths Are Lodged With Mexico

25 WERE WOUNDED

Previous Dispatches Said Only Three Dead and 12 Wounded

By The Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 27.—Fifteen unarmed manifestants were killed and 25 wounded when federal troops fired on a crowd in front of the city hall at Taloloapan state of Guerrero, according to complaints lodged with the war and interior departments by a deputation committee composed of two senators and three deputies from that state. The charges are based upon private advices received from towns adjacent to Teloloapan. Previous press dispatches had given the number of dead as three and the wounded about 12.

The deputation asserted that troops under orders of General Rumulo Figueroa fired on the assemblage before the city hall where Mayor Miguel Cervantes, a political enemy of Figueroa, the alderman and leading citizens were holding a session.

General Francisco Serrano, secretary of war, and Enrique Colunga, secretary of the interior, promised a speedy investigation and the punishment of the guilty.

REPORT SHOWS TRADE HEALTHY

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—Reports to the federal reserve board covering business conditions during the last six weeks show that wholesale trade was the largest in three years, that retail trade increased nine per cent over a year ago although the season increase over summer business was smaller than usual, and that production of basic commodities declined.

Unemployment was maintained at the high level of the last several months.

While a review by the board, made public today, showed a decline of five per cent in production in the six weeks period and a reduction of 10 per cent from the peak reached in May, some commodities, including cement and sugar meltings, were produced in larger quantities than in the months immediately preceding.

There also was an increase in contract awards for business and industrial buildings. Due to the decrease on contracts for residences, new building construction as a whole, however, showed a reduction as compared with preceding months. A substantial reduction in the production of iron and steel also was revealed.

Prices of certain farm products continued to increase in the first three weeks of October, the board reports, adding that wheat and cotton quotations reached the highest point in the current year. Prices and hogs, however, showed a decline.

The annual seasonal increase in bank credits began early in September and resulted, according to reserve board records, in increasing the loans by member banks in the leading cities by $116,000,000 between September 12 and October 10.

Money rates, however, showed an easier tendency and after September 15, commercial paper rates declined an average of about one-fourth of one per cent.

ULTIMATUM IS DISREGARDED BY SAXONY'S CHIEF

Demand of Resignation of Premier Zeigner Is Voted Down

ALL RUHR LAWLESS

Men, Women and Children Found Unconscious After Liquor Raiding

By The Associated Press

DESDREN, Germany, Oct. 28.—Premier Zeigner tonight notified the central government at Berlin that the Saxony ministry had voted to disregard Chancellor Stresemann's ultimatum calling for its immediate resignation.

The Saxon's government's reply sets forth that the Berlin government's procedure is wholly without foundation in law and not warranted by the political situation. It declares that the Saxon diet is the sole tribunal to determine the issue, which is now to be put up to it. Its findings will then be communicated to the Berlin government.

DUSSELDORF, Oct. 28.—Plundering and violence have suddenly become so general and menacing throughout the Ruhr that both the French and German authorities are beginning to realize that something drastic must be done to remove the economic causes immediately.

The pillaging of stores continued last night in the suburbs regardless of the curfew law and the mobs were so rampant today that the Duesseldorf police who have been disarmed dare not enter the district to face the looters who carry modern rifles, pistols and hand grenades.

Several were killed or wounded overnight. The plunderers emptied a large liquor store in Koelnerstrasse in the night and dawn found dozens of men, women and children scattered along the streets, apparently dead, an examination disclosed that all of them were suffering from a severe form of alcoholism.

The systematic pillaging of a large sugar plant in the suburb of Flingern began at about noon. Early this morning several hundred men broke into the jail at Geresheim another suburb and released 14 criminals, reported in almost every town in the Similar instances of lawlessness are Ruhr.

The French superior delegate of the Rhineland high commission, according to a report from Trier has issued a formal order to the old town officials that they must continue to function under the new government, as the separatists have been recognized as the defacto administrators of the town and all attempts to change the present form of government would be repressed by arms.

French and Belgian troops continue to guard the public buildings in all the towns where separatists are installed, and the maintenance of order has developed largely upon them in some cities, particularly Coblenz where the green capped separatists police have been withdrawn entirely.

A republic has been proclaimed in the villages of Kirn, Nonsenger and Sonderheim in the Coblenz district.

Doubting World for "Doc" Cook; Government in Doubt

(By Central Press)

FORT WORTH, Tex., Oct. 28.—This is a doubting world for Dr. Frederick A. Cook, best known as an arctic explorer, but now in the limelight because of the fact that he and 20 codefendants are on trial in the federal court here charged with misuse of the mails.

Back in 1908 Cook first drew the attention of the doubting world. Coming out of the arctic he announced that he had discovered the north pole. He was acclaimed a hero. For a time the scientific world waited on his words. Then someone doubted him. He failed to produce the necessary proofs.

For several years, however, he lectured on polar conditions. Then five years ago, he went to Texas and abandoned his lecture tours and other work to make a fortune in oil. About a year ago detectives entered his room in a Texas hotel and asked him to explain the presence of a young lady and a bottle of pre-Volstead liquor. The liquor case has not been tried todate.

Then his wife asked him to explain many things—and doubted his word when he tried to laugh them off. She received a divorce decree several months ago. Cook did not appear when the case came up.

As to the present situation, Cook and his fellow defendants are part of 100 indicted last April, charged with fraudulantly promoting stock sales, as a result of which, according to the district attorney's office, a large number of persons from different parts of the U. S. were relieved of $200,000,000.

The charges against Cook are in connection with his handling of the Petroleum Producers' association, of which he was the head. He and his associates are charged with perpetrating a fraud by the use of the "merger system." Investors were given their choice between investing "25 per cent more" in newly formed companies which were supposed to have taken over the old ones, or of losing their original investment. The few dividends paid, the district attorney's office charges, were paid out of funds so derived and no revenues resulted from the sale of products.

Cook's company, in advertisements, announced it paid large monthly dividends and that the company was in the midst of a drilling campaign. The government contends only two small dividends were paid and no drilling was started.

LONE DRUGGIST TAKES A CHANCE

One Restaurant Gives Away Cigarets; Whole County Complied

A deep, dark blue atmosphere hung over Wichita Falls and all Wichita county yesterday, the first day in the new regime of the Sunday "blue law" enforcement. One lone exception in the entire county braved the edict of the law when all else was wrapped in sombre quietude. A drug store in this city opened its doors, and proved a mecca to the host that had not purchased their smokes the day before or martered their craving for soda.

Garages, filling stations, cold drink emporiums, drug stores, everything observed the letter of the law. Burkburnett, Electra and Iowa Park reported "tight as a drum" and "true blue." Those open observed the restrictions placed by the law on certain and most commodities.

Along with the mints and tooth picks served out by the cashier over the checks at a local cafe, a supply of Camels and Chesterfields satisfied the temporary demands of customers, each receiving one of his "choice Cigarettes and cigars went at a premium of strongest friendship from those who happened to possess any and pipe stock went up over night, as open evidence went to prove.

Charges will be filed this morning against the Wilford-Harrison drug store operating a lone business yesterday, Sheriff Pat Murphy said that he had been informed last night. No arrests were made. Murphy stating that he would not take any action whatsoever, not having a warrant.

According to the sheriff, many people, business men included, expressed themselves as favorable toward the enforcement of this law. Subscribers to both sides of the question may be found at a moment's notice around this city, but so far the situation continues smoothly and without new complications.

The question was brought up some two weeks ago when theaters here opened on Sunday and were closed. Yesterday, upon the announcement from the county attorney's office that all violators of the Sunday law would alike be prosecuted, the compliance became general.

It has not been determined whether the bullet was fired from the military range.

PINCHOT ACCEPTS GOV. NEFF'S LID

By The Associated Press.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 28.—The governor of Pennsylvania will accept the gift of a hat from the governor of Texas.

The Pennsylvania governor, Gifford Pinchot, said so tonight he learned that Governor Neff of Texas had sent his big, black felt hat to him on condition that he would wear it at the next republican national convention.

"When Governor Neff generously offered to send me his hat on condition that I wear it to the republican national convention I accepted with great pleasure," Mr. Pinchot said. "That is the only way I know of that a democrat hat could get in there. I shall be proud to wear his hat anybow, because he is the kind of a man I like."

LABOR MEET AT MEXICO CAPITAL

Pan-American Convention Selects It Rather Than Guatemala

By The Associated Press.

EL PASO, Texas, Oct. 28.—Mexico City has been definitely selected as the place of meeting for the next convention of the Pan American federation of labor, to be held early in December, 1924, according to official announcement made today following adjournment of the Mexican American labor conference in this city.

The decision was reached by the executive committee of the Pan American federation of labor, which has for three days been in conference with representatives of the Mexican federation of labor.

Guatemala was originally designated as the country which should have the next convention, but it was found necessary to abandon the original plan, for two reasons which were set forth in a resolution adopted by the conference: "Political conditions in Guatemala, it was announced, make it impossible to plan for a convention there. The decision to go to Mexico City instead was because "an opportunity presents itself to be extremely helpful to the organized workers of Mexico."

"We are mindful of the fact," the resolution says, "that the conventions of the Mexican federation of labor and the American federation of labor will be held simultaneously at Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, and El Paso, Texas, and that the conventions will adjourn on or about the 1st of November, 1924, thus making it possible for representatives of these organizations to be present in the city of Mexico on the dates suggested.

"We are further mindful of the fact that on December 1 the incoming president of Mexico will be inaugurated. We have every reason to believe, and we sincerely hope, that General Plutarco Elias Calles will be the incoming president to be inaugurated at that time, and we believe it most fitting that representatives of labor from all Pan American nations should be present in Mexico City to rejoice with the workers of Mexico at a time which promises so much for their future.

"We have neither the right nor the desire to interfere in the purely international political affairs of any country, but we cannot refrain from expressing deep satisfaction at the prospect of seeing a devoted friend of labor, justice, freedom and democracy elected president of one of the great republics of the western hemisphere."

It was further announced that it is the intention to adjourn the convention in Mexico City and re-convene in Guatemala for the concluding sessions, if political conditions in Guatemala at that time permit of such a course.

NO REDUCTION IN REPARATION SAYS. POINCARE

Neither Will New Commission Be Allowed To Surplant Old

QUOTES 1921 TREATY

Places Project As a Mere Addition To Present Staff

By The Associated Press.

SAMPIGNY, France, Oct. 28.—Premier Poincare in a speech here today declared that France would refuse to allow the reparation commission to be divested of its functions or replaced by some other body. He said that France could not agree to any reduction in the German debt.

The premier asserted that he welcomed American representation on a committee charged by the reparation commission to investigate Germany's capacity to pay, but that every act of the committee must remain within the terms laid down by the Versailles treaty.

PARIS, Oct. 28.—An official communique written by Premier Poincare and issued at the French foreign office this evening reiterates the French government's determination to refuse to agree to any reductions of the German debt as fixed by the London conference in May, 1921.

The communique insists that a committee of experts, organized within the scope of the reparation commission, to investigate Germany's capacity for payment, has no authority to make any reduction in Germany's debt. It says considered that such a commission would practically be a mere addition to the present staff of experts of the reparation commission.

Quoting the Versailles treaty, the communique said the reparation commission itself has no power to grant any reduction in reparations, the treaty stipulating such a measure must be decided by the unanimous vote of the nations interested.

The text of the communique follows:

"The French government in its reply to the British government concerning the creation of a committee of experts bases its authority upon paragraph 7, annex 2, part 8, of the treaty of Versailles, permiting the constitution of such committees.

"This paragraph empowers the commission to nominate all functionaries, agents and employes necessary to the execution of its functions, to create committees, the members of which are not necessarily chosen from the commission and to give such functionaries, agents and committees full powers and authority.

"Thus the reparation commission, acting within the limits of its powers, may designate such experts, the help of which appears necessary in order to obtain the information it requires.

"Thus this implicates on the part of the commission, any abandonment of its powers, which it retains integrally; the consideration, advice and recommendation it would receive from such committee; it would have no other object than to enlighten it, as in the case of the experts now employed by the commission, which has the authority to increase their number."

The premier, who delivered a long speech at the unveiling of a monument to the war dead of the village in which his country residence is situated said:

"We constantly are being asked to proceed to a fresh estimate of Germany's capacity to pay. What does that mean? If it means by a round about way to reach a dimunition of the German debt, that is a combination we are sure not to favor.

"If it means an estimate of what Germany can pay tomorrow and in the near future nothing is more necessary than such an examination. The commission on reparations is charged by the treaty with such a task and there are no grounds to take one of its most important functions from it."

M. Poincare said the commission was above suspicion, it had shown itself competent and impartial; it was obliged to give Germany with each decision a fair opportunity to present her observations.

"It has the good fortune," the premier continued, "to have at each meeting a semi-official representative of the United States who is a man of the highest sense of justice and absolute integrity." Its British, Italian and Belgian delegates are most distinguished men, he said, and its president, none could say, lacked intelligence or experience.

"Germany has just resumed contact with the commission," went on M. Poincare, "and the reich delegates will undoubtedly soon be heard by it. Let it work and fulfill its mandate."

Having thus stated what he considered the position and value of the reparation commission M. Poincare took up the "invitation and supplication" addressed to him by Stanley Baldwin, the British prime minister—"a courteous invitation to an international conference or a commission of experts placed under the commission on reparations and a friendly supplication to reflect thrice before refusing these propositions."

"As Mr. Baldwin's speech dates back over thrice twenty eight hours," Mr. Poincare continued, "I have taken time to meditate it more than thrice." His first thought, he said, being that there was argument on the essential point as to the necessity for

TEXAS LEAGUE IN YEARLY MEET

Vinds Up 1923 Business and Makes New Rulings for 1924

Special to The Record News.

DALLAS, Tex., Oct. 28.—The Texas league at its annual meeting here today transacted largely routine business, winding up the business of 1923, and formally awarding the pennant to Fort Worth. The schedule for 1924 to be presented at a meeting January 26-27, 1924, at Shreveport, will conform to the dates of the Southern association probably, obviating this year's week's hiatus between the close of the two leagues.

President J. Doak Roberts in 1924 will finish out the three year term to which he was elected in the fall of 1921. Other officers were re-elected today as follows: vice president, Captain H. B. Hearn, Shreveport; Otto Send, Houston, secretary; statistician, William B. Ruggles, Dallas.

The league went on record as joining in the movement to erect a suitable headstone over the resting place of Paul Sentell in New Orleans and decided of its own volition to mark the grave of Wilson Matthews, veteran player, umpire and manager, who spent practically his lifetime in the Texas league and who died a few years ago.

Active committees of the league of 1924 were designated by the Sunday meeting as: Auditing, J. Walter Morris, Fred Ankerman, J. Will Gray; schedule, N. E. Leopold, Fred Ankerman, J. Will Gray. President as ex-officio chairman of motions and resolutions, H. J. Benson, Paul LaGrave, Ira Thomas.

Sport scribes around the Texas loop will be rejoiced to learn that the league elevated the scoring salary to to $3.00 per game for 1924, after the gallant battle for recognition of scorer's merits waged by some of the writers during the 1923 campaign.

The rule passed last year tacking on a $1,000 penalty on a club which has more than 16 men in uniform on the field after the limits take effect was amended to make the penalty forfeiture of the game if won, and a $200 fine if lost, and managers will be required next year to give to the plate umpire preceding the game a list of the 16 players eligible on any given day.

Players indulging in profane or indecent language in the hearing of the stands next season will pay $25 for he privilege, and the league went on record in order to enforce it as endorsing a suggestion of Commisioner Landis that he promulgate a rule fining any club heavily that pays its players' fines. If the commissioner's office does not take this action the Texas league will authorize its own president to do so.

N. E. Leopold comes back to the league as a majority stockholder with J. E. Barfield, of the Galveston franchise, Lee Kempner and W. A. Johnson retiring. Other magnates present besides the league officers were R. S. Farleton, Beaumont; Ike Sablosky, J. Walter Morris, Julius Scheppe, Dallas; Paul LaGrave, Fort Worth; N. E. Leopold, Galveston, H. L. Robertson, Fred Ankerman, Houston; H. J. Benson, San Antonio; R. O. Harvey, J. Will Gray, Wichita Falls; Charles Laska, of Shreveport.

"LIZZIE" BALLOON IS SUCCESSFUL

By The Associated Press.

BELLEVILLE, Ill., Oct. 28.—A successful demonstration of a "lizzie" balloon, operated by a hand-driven pulley, was given at Scott field, the army lighter-than-air station near here today. It was the first demonstration of the balloon. The exhibition was one of the features of an air carnival given for the benefit of the Army Relief society.

The little balloon, which is only 21 feet in diameter, carries no ballast and descends without any gas discharging. To go up one merely works the pulley and a six-foot propeller does the work. To come down one has only to operate the pulley in the opposite direction. The gas capacity of the "lizzie" is only 5,000 cubic feet.

The craft was designed by Norman Meadowcraft, with the aid of Charles Brannigan, both of whom are civilian aircraft engineers employed by the army. Meadowcraft was the designer of the British NS-2, which holds the non-rigid aircraft duration record of more than 100 hours.

SINGLE-HANDED HE FIGHTS "BLUES"

By The Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 28.—J. J. Hegman, motion picture operator, will defend himself in justice court on a charge of violating the Sunday closing law by opening his show house today, he announced today. He is conducting a single-handed campaign to secure Sunday motion pictures and has been fined several times. Mysterious Shooting of Wealthy Chemist Is Baffling

View of porch of Mrs. Ida M. Leslie's home at Sound Beach, Conn., on which Milton A. Maas was shot. Insert is of Mrs. Leslie

(By Central Press)

SOUND BEACH, Conn., Oct. 26.—Despite the efforts of detectives and police, mystery still surrounds the shooting of Milton A. Maas, wealthy New York chemical manufacturer, at the home near here of Mrs. Ida M. Leslie, attractive and wealthy young widow.

Was robbery or jealousy the motive? Mrs. Leslie explains away the incident as "an amateur attempt at robbery."

Maas, whose wounds were not fatal, evidently holds to the same belief.

Police, however, hold to the theory that Maas was shot by gunmen employed by a New York millionaire who is a candidate for Mrs. Leslie's affections. According to Mrs. Leslie's account of the shooting, she was seized by three men she had perceived by the aid of a flashlight standing in the shrubbery alongside of the porch. When she screamed, Maas rushed out on the porch and was shot by one of her assailants as he advanced.

How To Go To A Big Game

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

The first thing to be done in going to one of the big football games is to organize a party. The taxi fare from New York to Boston or Princeton or New Haven is quite high. Getting a seat on a train is impossible unless you have it bought six months in advance or know the general passenger by his first name. Nobody ever gets their seats in advance for nobody ever decides to go to a big football game until after some kind of a reunion the night before. But that time is too late to buy a railroad ticket, and inasmuch as only a limited number of people can be on terms of easy familiarity with the G. P. A. the only way to get there is by taxi.

A party of seven can reduce the taxi fare quite a bit provided all of them are willing to put up the cash for the ride. It is wise in getting up the party not to include any credit men. After they have made the trip they will want to meet the charge with deferred payments, and that puts an undue load on the shoulders of those who happen to have ready money.

Practically All Ticket Speculators Are Graduates

The party being organized, the next thing to be done is to get the tickets. Tickets to the big games can only be had from the students or graduates. If you do not happen to know any of these you would have a hard time getting in were it not for the fact that practically all the ticket speculators are graduates of one or another of the big colleges—usually one or both of the two that happen to be meeting by proxy on the gridiron that particular afternoon.

The chaps do not talk like college graduates. They do not even look like them. I never saw one of them yet wearing a frat pin or a Phi Beta Kev. But they always have the tickets, so they must at some time or other trod the dear old campus.

Of course they dislike to dispart with the tickets, it being held unethical to sell for money. But they will do it, especially if they are offered from $40 to $100 for a ticket which is marked $5.50 on its face. I suppose they turn over the profit they make to the colleges, or save it up till they can endow a laboratory or something. In a good football season, prevailing ticket rate some of those lads would not need to save very long in order to endow a brand new university, with a crackerjack football team of its own, thus adding to the number of big autumn games, and enabling themselves to endow university the next year and so on ad-in-finitum.

With the tickets in your pockets you go into the street to look for some kind of conveyance. All the regular taxi drivers will be glad enough to take you any place this side of the ocean for the regular meter rate. But that mounts up quite rapidly when you are on the high road, chiefly because of the detours, which the road authorities always put in each year just before the big games in order to save the expensive pavements on the new hard high roads. So its wiser to engage a car for the day which means an outlay from $60 to $70, according to the apparent gullibility of the game-goers and the business acumen of the man who owns the car.

As soon as the car is hired you inquire from the chauffeur about the places on the road where one can stop and get light meals and refreshments. He either knows a lot of these or is certain that he can find them, a certainty which is always born out by his later performance.

A start is made about 9 o'clock in the morning if you are going to New Haven or Princeton. If you are bound for Boston it is better to start the night before.

Taking New Haven as your destination you will find a nice little stopping place near New Rochelle, another at Greenwich, a third just outside of Stamford, a larger and more satisfactory one at Westport, and one of the very best at Fairfield. This brings you to Bridgeport along about 1 o'clock, with an appetite for lunch which has been augmented by the reception accorded you at the places along the way.

It is astonishing that in regions populated as Westchester county, New York and western Connecticut, so few of the tavern keepers have heard of the Volstead law, or are aware that it is no longer regarded as strictly legal to dispense at a price of wines beers and spirituous liquors. Yet such seems to be the case. These people have probably been so busy with customers since the automobile brought teeming thousands into their districts that they haven't had much time to read the newspapers.

Getting an Account of the Game so That You Can Discuss It

There are several places in Bridgeport where you can get luncheon and if you don't like any of them it is easy enough to go on to Stratford or Milford, or even to run down to Savin Rock, which is a New England Coney Island just outside of New Haven.

Arriving at the luncheon table about 2, you are ready to resume your journey about 3, but of course the chauffeur knows of a few other stopping places between there and New Haven and naturally not desiring to miss any of them you get out whenever he draws up alongside of an inn.

At 4:30 you bring up at the Yale bowl, count the crowds coming out of the field observe that there must be at least $3,000,000 worth of automobiles parked in the vicinity and start off for a return trip amid the beautiful autumn foliage on the Hartford-Danbury road.

You get to New York about midnight, having paused at other places the chauffeur told you about. The hotel where the party gathered that morning you buy an evening newspaper with a full account of the game so you can talk about it intelligently with the younger members of the family at the breakfast table the next morning.

Going to the football games in the crisp October weather is one of the most delightful of metropolitan sports. It means health and freedom from worry and the best of companionship, not to mention many interesting additions to your knowledge of the contiguous terrain.

Better still you don't ever have to worry about the early lack of education which rendered you quite unable to understand what is going on down on the gridiron.

NO REDUCTION

a settlement of the reparations questions and concerted action by the allies to insure payment.

"We also, like Mr. Baldwin," said M. Poincare, "hope that the United States consents not to keep itself completely disassociated from the affairs of Europe. We believe the stronger the economic, financial and moral solidarity is between the old and the new continent the better the cause of humanity be served.

"But what would such an international conference discuss? How would it be composed? What relations of collaboration and independence would it have as regard government's commission or reparations? What would be its powers?

"All these problems passed through my mind during the first state of meditation without my being able to solve them. Much fun has been made in England over my Sunday discourses; but what daily contradictory and useless discourses would an international conference mean while you, my friends still were waiting for stones and tiles to rebuild your homes?

"If in truth, the British government is not thinking of asking us to make Germany come and sit at the conference of which it speaks; if it has simply, like ourselves, a desire for obtaining the co-operation of the United States, it is easy for us to reach an understanding on the idea already considered at Paris, as at Washington, Brussels and Rome.

"The commission on reparations is there. It makes investigations, experts make inquiries daily; it can, without the slightest innovation, ask the semi-official delegate of the United States to nominate American experts to examine with the French, English and Belgians the present capacity for payment by Germany, and to demand that the reich draw up a program of financial restoration and a detailed plan of reparations without going outside the treaty."

Here the premier seemed to have reached the point he desired to emphasize "We cannot," he said, "accept that the committee be dispossessed of its functions of placed by an organism in which our share of influence, already inferior to our interests, would be still further reduced. We have reached the limit of our concessions. We shall not go further."

M. Poincare began his speech by pointing out that he, unhappily, had proved himself right in advising caution when "the German government noisily announced the cessation of passive resistance and when he warned France that intrigues and evasions had not yet ended." He then denied that France had been instrumental in arousing international troubles in Germany.

"We have always scrupulously remained outside the internal affairs of Germany," declared the premier, and "the allegations of the German government, scandulously spread in Europe and the new world, will not obscure the truth from impartial spectators. Whatever Germany's future constitution may be; whatever may be the relations between the states composing it, we shall never think of violating the conscience of the population. We pourish no plan of annexation, but we shall never renounce our claims to permanent guarantees for security."

M. Poincare then dealt with Germany's war preparations in aviation and other ways, saying France would not sacrifice her rights to reparations anymore than her claims to security. He defended the occupation of the Ruhr, saying that without that Germany today would be able to refuse payments and continue to enrich herself through her factories using Ruhr coal, whereas it now was to her interest to pay her creditors at the earliest possible time in order to hasten the evacuation of the Ruhr.

"All we ask of our allies," said M. Poincare, "is observation of the treaty they signed, as well as we. The schedule of May 5, 1921, is definite, and it can not be modified without our consent. The treaty lays down no reduction that can be granted Germany without unanimity on the part of the creditors, and France is too much tried to adhere to a reduction."

The premier ended his discourse with words of gratitude to the allies, recognizing that fraternity of arms had assured success to the French efforts.

"But," he declared, "each of us, struggling for the others, struggled also, and above all, for himself. We have given as much as we have received, and we are claiming gratitude equal to that we owe our friends."

Walter Eckersall

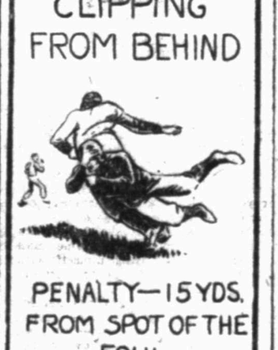

Without a doubt, Walter Eckersall, of Chicago, was one of the greatest football players of all time. He holds this distinction in spite of the fact that he was not a very large man (weighing less than 145 when he was playing football), and because of the fact that he was a fast, hard-hitting runner, a brainy team leader, a truly remarkable drop kicker, and a pillar of strength on the defense.

After booting a drop kick between the Wisconsin goal posts from the 45 yard line in 1903, and running back a Wisconsin kickoff 106 yards to a touchdown in 1904, he had pretty well convinced the Badgers of his ability as a football player. Next he proceeded to startle the football world the following year by kicking five field goals against Illinois and he repeated this same record performance against Nebraska in 1906. Eckersall came from Hyde Park high school where he was a star track man, with even time records on the sprints. He was also an all round base ball player. Eckersall was the only player ever to be chosen on Walter Camp's all-American team three years. He was awarded this distinction in 1904, 1905 and 1906.

LITTLE LESSONS IN Big Sports

FOOTBALL

How is a player "clipped"?
Answered by
R. C. "BOB" ZUPPKE
Head Football coach, University of Illinois. The man who has caused the Illinois teams to be known throughout the country as "The Fighting Illini."

A player is clipped from behind in the open field. The player who intends to clip is performing a foul act and the penalty is 15 yards from the spot of the foul. The clipper hurls his body across the calves at the spot nearest the knee and covers his own face with his forearms to protect it from the victim's heels. The act is known as "hair-stringing." If the clipper performs his act efficiently, he will do what we call "iron out his man," that is, throw him flat to the ground with stomach and face down. If he catches the victim in such a way as to produce a rolling motion during the fall and at the same time manages to hold one calf between his body and the ground, as in a vice, he will cause his victim to severely wrench his knee. This is the meanest play in football, and should be classed with the cowardly act.

DRAW GAMES IN MISSOURI VALLEY

By The Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 28.—The headline attractions of the Missouri Valley conference ended in draws Saturday, the Missouri Tigers battling Nebraska's Cornhuskers to a 7 to 7 tie, while the Kansas Aggies fought their family foes, the University of Kansas, to a scoreless issue.

Doped as a tossup, the fray between Kansas and the Kansas Aggies ended a tossup so far as the score was concerned. But the Aggies clearly outplayed their opponents, except when they buttered against the Kansas goal line.

Drake, playing its first conference game of the season, ousted Grinnell from the first division by administering a 41 to 0 defeat.

Washington University of St. Louis fell an easy prey to Ames, 54 to 7 for its third straight loss.

Oklahoma stayed outside the conference to establish her supremacy at home by shutting out Oklahoma A. & M. college 12 to 0.

DARTMOUTH WIN IS SENSATION

Defeat By 16 to 0 Of Harvard Was Unexpected Turn

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—The name of Jesse Hawley, Dartmouth coach, received prominent mention wherever football was discussed today, for among the many noteworthy gridiron happenings of Saturday that what stands out as most sensational was the 16-to-0 defeat of Harvard's stalwart eleven by the green-clad Warriors from the hills of Hanover, N. H.

There was a crisp decisiveness about the Dartmouth triumph which left no room for alibis. Two touchdowns clearly earned and a 40-yard placement goal from the field plus a point after touchdown gave Dartmouth its winning margin.

There were many other noteworthy occurrences in Saturday's football play. The defeat of Pittsburgh by its next-door neighbor, Carnegie Tech, was one of the the biggest upsets.

Slightly underranking the Dartmouth-Harvard and Pittsburg-Carnegie games were Pennsylvania's victory over Centre of Kentucky 24 to 0; Williams' third successive triumph over Columbia 10 to 0, and the bitterly waged tie contests between Penn State and West Virginia, Princeton and Navy, and Rutgers and Lafayette, the respective scores of which were 13-13, 3-3 and 6-6.

From an intersectional viewpoint the east scored a slight advantage of rival sections, with Pennsylvania's victory over Centre, Washington and Jefferson's 6 to 0 win over Detroit and Colgate's 27 to 0 triumph over Ohio Westlyn counting for the east again Marquette's 7 to 6 victory over Boston college and Oberlin's 14 to 7 win over Amherst.

Of the latter group the most spectacular and stubbornly fought fray was that between Boston college and Marquette.

Big three prestige suffered considerably through the Harvard defeat and the Princeton tie. At present Yale is the lone member of the three with a clean slate. The Eli's had less trouble than was expected against Brown, scoring 21 points.

Easterners who had witnessed Notre Dame's thrilling play against Army and Princeton, followed with interest the game between the South Bend eleven and Georgia Tech won by Notre Dame 35 to 7.

GEORGE FLAYED BY PARISIANS

Duelling Revived; Many "Affairs of Honor" Are Reported

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 28.—The hope expressed in the United States by former British premier Lloyd George that the French voters would repudiate premier Poincare appears sure to become an issue in the spring elections. Lloyd George, being out of power, his right to express opinions freely as a private citizen is fully recognized here, but his remarks at Louisville are considered as particularly in bad taste when the position he has held in Europe is considered.

It is, on the other hand, looked upon as first rate campaign material for supporters of Premier Poincare. Many good political judges who considered Poincare's majority doomed, now declare that if anything can save him it will be Lloyd George's speech. The former British premier now is regarded in France as the most hated of all statesmen, and his advocacy of any candidate would be expected to blast his chances for election.

Dueling Revived

Duelling in France has been thriving recently and scores of affairs of honor have been settled, usually with swords, since the government a year ago failed in its attempt to prosecute duellists and their seconds and parliament dropped the bill to penalize duelling. The story of Monday's combat in which Jacques Dicherin, the poet, wounded Dude De Camastra, the duel being the result of an argument in a theatre, was the first to be published in some time, it having been felt that publicity was likely to result in ridicule.

Georges Briettmayer, one of the most noted French duellists, recently in broadcasting a radio talk on duelling, said it is now the custom to require adversaries to fight until there is a definite result, such as a wound serious enough to make the combat unequal.

"Sometimes half a dozen slight wounds are inflicted before the seconds will agree that this condition has been reached, whereas formerly the slightest scratch was taken as grounds for stoping the fighting. When the affair is serious the seconds often require the adversaries to wear stiff gauntlets to protect their sword hand and forearm, forcing the duellists to make body attacks, thus increasing tremendously the seriousness of the possible wounds.

Furs Popular

Furs are enjoying exceptional vogue among all classes this fall. For those with long purses, astrakhan is all the rage, coats or cloaks or selected skins selling at six thousand to ten thousand francs, prices unheard of for this fur. Sable is also much in demand.

For the more humble followers of fashion's dictates there are various transformations of the spoils of the harmless but necessary cat and the domestic rabbit, which would seem to account for the large number of mysterious disappearances among these animals recently. Nothing is wasted. Even parts not needed for the adornment of the fair sex are used in helping to fight the high cost of living under the guise of what representative Freda Britten would prefer to call stewed rabbit with mushrooms.

So universal is the demand for furs that peddlers may be seen hawking furs from door to door.

New Types of Evening Gowns Appeal to Fashion's Leaders

The first, in the sketch to the left, shows the brilliant evening gown of metal cloth, brocaded in many colors and made with the utmost simplicity of line. The model is straight, with a waist fitted in ever so slightly, and bordered in rich and heavy fur. It is almost medieval in its elegance of material and simplicity of line.

The second type, worn in the photo by Bebe Daniels, who is featured in the Sam Wood Paramount picture, "His Children's Children," shows the gown of lighter material, charmeuse, of a light blue color, richly trimmed in crystal and strass. This light blue for the evening is the very latest shade to be adopted by the most fashionable women in America. It is a color long neglected by the smart woman of the world. It has for many years been left only to the sub-beb. But now it has been adopted by the fashionable woman of elegance and chic. Miss Daniels has therefore adopted it for her screen appearance in "His Children's Children."

Her gown rises some four inches in front and then slopes gently back into a long train. Strips of the strass run right down to the end of the train, lending long and glistening lines that accentuate Miss Daniel's slender grace. Crystal combs and crystal buckles are the proper accessories for this scintillating gown.

The third type of evening gown is sketched at the right. This is of a rare flame colored crepe de chine, straight in line, but falling into a series of ruffles below the knees. This type is the ideal dance frock. It has the straightness required, combined with the fashionable flare line at the bottom. It is a sleeveless thing, and is cut low and in a point at the neck line. Flesh colored stockings should accompany this. A Spanish shawl, if one is so lucky as to possess one, is the proper finishing touch to this traditional type of Spanish dress.

DOROTHY DIX

Has efficiency taken the place of romance in lovemaking?

Has Cupid substituted the time card for his little bow and arrows?

It appears so, for the other day courts awarded a young woman a dollar a day damages for all the time that she had wasted on a dilatory youth who called, and called, but never popped the question.

The girl was not suing for breach of promise, for there had never been any proposal of marriage. She did not claim that she had been wounded in her tender affections, and ask for heart balm. She merely demanded rent for the use of her faithful sofa for three or four nights a week during a period of years; for the consumption of electricity, and heat, and for the wear and tear on her constitution, incident to keeping a young man entertained, and flattered, and fascinated.

How the judge who handed down the momentous opinion that a dollar a day is a proper price for being a man's steady arrived at his decision is not stated. Probably he credited the young man's side of the account with a few boxes of candy, and trips to the movies, and a dance now and then and the general perequisites of "keeping company." Also, he was not unmindful of the fact that for a girl to have a real live beau that she can flaunt in the faces of her friends, confers a certain prestige upon her, and is a source of deep, inward joy and satisfaction to her, whether he means business of not.

Thus, taking all of these things hereinbefore mentioned into account the learned justice struck the balance that seemed to him fair and equitable.

A dollar a day for vamping a man seems cut-rate wages. A cook gets more. A washerwoman triples it. A competent saleswoman or stenographer more than quadruples it. Yet what is the labor in cooking a hot heal compared to that of keeping a man's interest at the boiling point? How much easier to sell a bill of goods than to sell it yourself as the commercial phrase goes, to a wary man who is hanging on to his bachelorhood with his teeth and toenails! How much less exasperating to take the dictation of the boss, who pays your salary, than that of the man who arrogates himself with the right to tell you where to get on and off without being willing to pay for the privilege with a wedding ring.

There are men so intelligent and entertaining, so nimble of wit, so sympathetic and understanding, that their society is worth the price of grand opera tickets, and no woman would begrudge paying the price of it. But there are other men so dull and stupid, and egotistic, that no money could pay a woman for having to endure their tedious company. Yet, under the stupid conventions of society, that do not permit a woman frankly to show her preference among men, women have to endure martyrdom from the bores to get a chance at the spellbinders.

When a woman is unattractive, with no charms or graces of mind or body, men steer clear of her, and avoid her as they would the plague. They don't have to bother with her. They can turn away from her to the nearest siren. But women cannot do this.

Men hunt in packs, and they never pursue the woman that other men are not trying to chase down. Hence, in order to have Mr. Right come along, a girl has to put up with a lot of Mr. Wrongs, for well she knows that if she once gets the reputation of being hard to please, and pernickity, that she will be left alone lamenting.

That is why you see women smiling sweetly while undergoing tortures of boredom that would qualify them for cancellization, and why you behold them working like coal heavers to entertain and fascinate men for whom they do not care a rap, and whom they would not marry on a bet. They are simply marking time, and keeping up their game, waiting for Himself.

Certainly a dollar a day is scant pay for this sort of work, but it may have a moral value in making girls realize how folish they are to waste their time on men whose attentions are without intention. For her youth is a woman's time to make matrimonial hay while the sun of her beauty shines, and if she fritters its golden hours away upon some man who is merely amusing himself with her, she is certain to rue her lost opportunities.

A dollar a day will not pay her for having let some man who never meant to marry her monopolize her, so that he drove eligible suitors away, so that he willed her heart so full of love for him that there was room for no other man in it; so that he doomed her to lonely, embittered spinsterhood.

And perhaps having to pay a dollar a day for the privilege of "keeping company" with a girl will deter these short sport men, for they are social deadbeats and grafters. They use a girl's house as a free club. They find her living room a comfortable loafing place where they are warmed in winter, and cooled in summer, and get many a meal for which they do not have to pay. They expect her to keep them entertained and amused. They expect to be comforted and sympathized with. And they never, never expect, or intend, to make any return for all that the woman gives them.

It will do these pikers in love good to know that they must either put up or shut up, and that the modern girl no longer intends to furnish free entertainment for man and beast.

Heart and Home Problems Solved

Dear Mrs. Thompsun: I am a girl of eighteen and go with a boy two years my senior. This boy and I have very good times together. He is a boy full of life and decent, and I like him very much. I have not gone with him so very long. Is there a possibility of love at first sight? Am I too young as yet to know the man I love?

I have been with a great many boys, but none have stirred up a feeling in my heart like this boy has. I feel sure I love him.

He talks of the sea and says he would be in the marines now if it were not for his mother. She does not want him to go. He also says he wouldn't think of going if the time came to get married and settle down. If the time came that we felt we loved each other enough to marry, would I be safe in marrying him? Would he then want to settle down to a steady job? Of course he is working now, but still he says the longing for the sea shuts out all other thoughts. I have not been contemplating marriage yet, but the time may come when I will.

He has told me he loved me, but of course that could be as friends.

BLUE EYES.

You may find that your love for the young men was a case of love at first sight. But the only way to test the depth of your affection is with time. If you care more and more for him as the months pass, you will know that yours is not a case of infatuation. Although you are young you are not too young to be deeply in love.

The boy's yearning for the sea may be so strong that some time he will turn to the life which makes such an appeal to him at present. More often, however, the yearnings of youth grow less and less strong as time goes on and new interests come. You can judge the prospects of your friend's future by the way in which he works. If he refuses to do the best he can in the position he now holds, you have reason to think he is a dreamer and lacks application. Observe conditions and draw your own conclusions. Even the most promising of marriages because the temperaments of the men and women are adaptable to the conditions of marriage. Love, loyalty, sympathy, steadfastness and unselfishness are necessary where great happiness is found. Have you reason to think that the marriage you consider would be so blessed?

Dear Mrs. Thompsun: I am a young man twenty years old and I go with a girl two years my junior. She chums with a girl the same age as herself. This girl friend of hers gets her to go with her in an auto belonging to two young fellows. They make love to the girls although they do not love them.

My girl friend does not let me know she loves me, but I am sure she does as she told another girl that she was madly in love with me, but she didn't want me to know it. Do you think she loves me?

I love her dearly and I would do anything for her. What should I do to keep her from going with those young men, as that sort of thing will come to no good?

WONDERING.

It never pays to put too much faith in what you hear indirectly. It may be that the girl loves you, but her conduct would hardly indicate that her love was very deep. You have every reason to object to her night rides and spooning with the other young man and unless she cares enough for you to give up that sort of thing I would advise you to find another girl.

Dear Mrs. Thompsun: Do you think vanishing cream causes growth of hair on the face?

ANXIOUSLY WAITING.

Vanishing cream is no more apt to cause a growth of hair on the face than any other cream. Good creams of both kinds are guaranteed not to grow hair. Ask your druggist to recommend something for your use.

COTTON TOPPED PRIOR HEIGHTS

Prices Reached New High Levels For Season in Week's Trading

By The Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 28.—The price of cotton last week was sent to new high levels for the season, such records being made repeatedly up to Friday when the December position traded at 30.52 cents a pound. At this stage, the active months in the contract market were 112 to 132 points over the last sales of the preceding week. On the close prices were 78 to 103 points net higher on the week, December closing at 30.23. In the spot department prices gained 62 points on middling which closed at 30.50 cents a pound against 23.25 on the close of this week last year.

There were two important factors working for higher prices, the lower range of crop ideas resulting from much unfavorable weather in the belt, more particularly in the extreme western sections and signs of improving trade in the large textile markets of the world. Markets on this side of the water were startled, soon after the middle of the week, by cables saying that one firm, doing a large business in the far east, had bought a million pieces of cloth in the Manchester market. At the end of the week, New York telegrams received here claim that some Worth street firms had been doing the largest business in their history and that one firm alone put through transactions amounting to more than 10,000,000 yards of goods on one day toward the end of the week.

Private crop estimates of the week reflected a decided downward revision in figures, earlier estimates ranging from 9,816,000 bales to 10,300,000, while on the closing session an estimate of 9,566,000 bales appeared and was seriously considered by the trade. The question of the size of the crop will be brought into greater prominence this coming week by the conditions and indicated crop figures due from the department of agriculture, they will carry the crop down to October 25, and will be issued Friday, Thursday will be a holiday in this market. The end of the week seems likely to be almost wholly dominated by the bureau report.

Old Stage Line History Is To Be Written In Concrete By The State

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 28.—Romance and glamor of the old stage coach, and historic stage roads of Texas will not be permitted to die out; but, through research made by the state highway department of Texas, the main stage routes of early Texas days have been mapped out. The winding trails of many of the old stage coach lines, rich in the traditions and lore of Texas pioneering, will be written into the concrete, visible story of Texas progress, through action of the highway department, converting them from dim, indistinct reminders of the past, into the smooth, everlasting highways of today.

Captain J. D. Fauntleroy, state highway engineer, administrative head of the highway department, has compiled records showing the principal stage lines shown by Texas almanacs, as existing in 1857. The list will be used by him in the October "Texas Highway bulletin" published by the department.

He also has recorded the history of the famous "Butterfield" line, between St. Louis and San Francisco, through Texas from Preston, Belknap to Cooper, Phantom Hill and Chadbourne direct to El Paso. This line had over 100 Concord stage coaches and about 1,500 horses and mules.

The following lines were in operation in 1857:

Galveston, Liberty, Livingston, Moscow, Sumpter, to Crockett.

Cypress, Rosehill, Montgomery, Huntsville and Cincinnati.

Crockett, Alto, Douglas, Nacogdoches; also from Crockett to Palestine, Kickapoo and Tyler.

From Nacogdoches four horse coaches were routed to San Augustine, Milam, Sabintown and Alexandria, La. Also from Nacogdoches via Crockett, Huntsville, Austin, Washington and Independence, to Brenham. From Nacogdoches to Henderson, Camden, Marshall and to Shreveport, La.

Two-hourse hacks were routed from Huntsville to Corsicana and Waxahachie, connecting with the great Northern Mail from San Antonio to Clarksville.

Stage lines from Marshall radiated to Jefferson, Mount Pleasant and Clarksville; to Tyler, to Crockett, Palestine and Dallas.

Hempstead was another point from which stage lines spread out, to Washington, to Waco and Marlin, to Chappel Hill, Brenham, La Grange, Bastrop and Austin and Nacogdoches.

Stages were run from Richmond to Columbus, to La Grange and Gonzales.

Victoria was a central point for stage lines to Port Lavaca, Gonzales and San Antonio, Goliad, and Aransas.

Other lines extended from Gonzales to Lockhart and Austin, to Seguin and San Antonio; from San Antonio to New Braunfels, San Marcos, Austin, Georgetown, Belton, Waco, Waxahachie, Lancaster, Dallas, McKinney, Bonham and Paris to Clarksville, thence through Arkansas to Memphis, Tenn.

A combination steamboat and stage line extended from Galveston by boat to Sabine City, now Sabine, thence by boat up the Neches river to Steep Bluff, and by stage to Woodville and Nacogdoches.

A thrice weekly stage was run from Huntsville to Livingston, Woodville, Burr's Ferry and Hineston, connecting at Chaneyville, La., with a line to the mouth of the Red river.

An episode of the Austin-San Antonio stage was related:

Bishop Gregg, beloved bishop of the Episcopal church was going by stage from San Antonio to San Marcos. He was the only passenger. The stage was held up by a highwayman, who demanded the bishop's watch and money. Bishop Greggs replied:

"My watch is old and would be of little or no value to you, but it is of great value to me on account of the many pleasant memories associated with it. I, therefore, beg you not to force me to give it up. Also I have very little money, barely enough to carry me through this trip. You see a preacher is always a poor man."

The robber inquired, "What church do you belong to?"

"I am a bishop of the Episcopal church," was the reply.

MUCH PRODUCE NOW MOVING

Fruits, Vegetables, Poultry and Eggs Off to Their Market

AUSTIN.—Good supplies of fruits, vegetables, poultry and eggs are now moving to market, according to the weekly summary of the state department of markets and warehouses issued here today.

The summary said in part:

"Fruits and Vegetables—Sweet potatoes have become increasingly plentiful and state markets generally reacted with easier tones and lower price levels. Quality is reported good. The smaller vegetables generally maintained the even tenor of their ways with the exception of peppers and okra which during the week suffered considerable price-cutting. Texas Kieffer pears took a 25-cent advance under a good demand. The following are representative prices being paid as this week opens in sales to retailers of Texas: Beets, home-growns, mostly 50-75 cents per dozen bunches; carrots, 50-75 cents per dozen bunches; green onions, 60-75 cents per dozen bunches; beans, 8-10 cents per pound; cucumbers, 8-10 cents; eggplant, 4-5 cents; Kieffer pears, $1.50-$2.50 per box; blackeyed peas, 3-6 cents; radishes, 40-50 cents per dozen bunches; and sweet potatoes, Porto Ricans, $2.50-$3 per hundredweight.

Pecans—The new crop has started to move forward more liberally and is in good demand at 15-25 cents per pound according to size, with old nuts bringing 20 cents.

Peanuts—Nuts of this season's crop have also started to market. Farmers offerings of Spanish No. 1 are at present bringing 13½ per pound, and No. 2s 10¾ cents.

Poultry and Eggs—A steady market has prevailed in poultry and egg circles and little price fluctuation is noted. Hens are bringing from 16 to 18 cents with some markets quoted up to 20 cents. Fryers are wanted at from 20-22 cents per pound and roosters 5-7 cents. Thirty dozen cases of eggs ruled from $9 to $8.20 for fresh candled offerings.

WOLF OF WALL STREET

David Lamar is known as the "Wolf of Wall Street." He is credited with having been a wolf of wall street for a quarter of a century. He was not popular with the other wolves. He was not popular with the legitimate kings of Wall Street. Men who dislike financiers as well as curb-stone crooks.

In war time the wolf of Wall Street entangled himself in the meshes of federal law. He was sent to trial and given a year in the federal penitentiary. His bail was fixed at $25,000 pending the disposition of an appeal to the higher court. The wolf scipped to Mexico and forfeited his bond.

This was before the United States had recognized the Obregon administration. After recognition, the wolf was arrested in the city of Mexico by a Burns detective. Burns had been on his trail a long time. Burns represents the American Bankers association as well as the secret service of the federal government. The wolf made no resistance. He was hurried from Mexico City to New York.

Now he is behind the bars. Now he must serve a term, or a stretch in the pen. This will be his finish. An ex-convict cannot travel very far. The eye of the law is ever upon him. He is constantly ordered to move on. He is an outlaw as well as an outcast.

This is what happened to David Lamar, highly educated, finished product of school and university and the cleverest crooked worker within the law that Wall Street has known for a long time. If all the wolves of Wall Street, all the wolves of the world who prey upon their kind, were behind the bars of the penitentiary, the prison population of the United States would be the largest in history, for there are men within the walls who are the victims of circumstance and wolves without the walls, who must have been born under a lucky star.

David got his. He was lucky for a long time.. Now he wears a stripped garb of a convict and over his cell door is written: "he who enters here leaves hope behind." There's a road called straight. It is paved with broken stones that are jagged and hard on the soles of the feet. It does not lead to the penitentiary. There's a road called the Easy Way. For those who travel it, the gates of the pen foreven yawn.

THIRTY-SIX CENT COTTON

A resolution was adopted at the annual convention of the American Cotton association favoring a minimum average selling price for cotton of 36-cents a pound. But the adoption of a resolution cannot fix an average selling price for cotton, or wheat, or corn, or petroleum.

There must be a demand. There's a demand for cotton this year because the world is facing a famine of raw material. England was a fair buyer last year; Germany was a fair buyer; Poland was a fair buyer. It should be recalled that this cotton year will not close until July 31, 1924. Unless the cotton experts of the world are false prophets, there will be no cotton to speak of at the close of this fiscal year.

THE NUT CROP.

A Novel of Strange, Wild People

INSTALLMENT NO. ONE

Chapter I

One night, in September, 1916, the Little Union club, rising above the calm waters of the Gulf of Aden, presented a scene of unusual activity.

A piano and two violins were making music; bursts of laughter came from the bar, where glasses tinkled; while out on the broad cement terrace there were tables crowded with intent bridge players, about whom hovered restless couples.

The Maloja had left some notables ashore that afternoon, and a dance was in progress, ostensibly in their honor.

The occasion was a double benefit, however, for it afforded an opportunity for the wives and daughters of officials to see new faces, hear fresh news and dance with men from home not yet grown anemic and blase, or insanely impassioned by corrupting heat of the arid tropics.

They chatted brightly, and their clear laughter was pleasant to hear and their presence, being a symbol of home, gave point to the argument that had been going on in the desert all day long.

By this argument, the Turks were attempting to prove that Aden was a besieged citadel, and had succeeded to such an extent that, the night before, the flashes of their guns could be seen from the veranda of the club.

There had been moments of considerable mental perturbation for the political resident, Colonel A. B. Whittington, K. C. I. E., who felt more than any one else the serious loss of prestige the British empire was suffering—and its far-reaching effects, which, like a fist of clouds on the horizon, suggested danger only to the experienced mariner.

A casual glance over the crowd, as it weaved in and out, gave no hint of seriousness in the situation. Their whole tone was that of idle, boresome entertainment.

Among the women, the most attractive was certainly Miss Barbara Whittington, daughter of the colonel.

As he made his way slowly across the veranda, with Barbara following at his elbow, he was subjected to a curious scrutiny by the crowd lined along the open bar. These men, mostly young officers, looked upon him with half-veiled insolence of young fighters who take no thought of the loads that press on the shoulders of experienced and conscientious administrators.

Some one murmured over his glass:

"Cheeri-o! The king of the Hadramaut! He smirks—h ecracks a joke. My sacred aunt! He's the shining wit of the party!"

"I say—have any of you chaps seen the proclamation he's posted in the bazaars—the latest?" asked another youth.

"No-o."

"Oh, it's priceless! A proclamation urging all those who may be interested to inform their friends within the Turkish lines that munitions must not be stored in mosques. He gives the whole show away—admits there is free and open communication between the bazaars and the enemy lines!"

This statement, intended to startle, only brought forth derisive laughter.

"Hell! I'd be uncomfortable if the place wasn't rotten with spies. Wouldn't seem like Aden."

"Just take a look at the foreigners in the bazaars—Somalis, Abyssinians, Indians, Jews, Armenians, Greeks——"

"And American," interjected a sallow-faced shipping agent, glancing sideways at a man who stood alone and seemed by his attitude to be a stranger to the group. All eyes for an instant were direted at him; but if he felt this scrutiny, he affected at first to ignore it.

Chapter II

Different Viewpoints

In the conventional black trousers and white jacket that make the mess dress of a civilian, there was nothing distinctive about his costume.

He presented, however, an interesting masculine impression. Slightly above the average in height, he had the neat head of an intelligent fighter, rough black hair, and blue, thoughtful eyes that flashed in the rare moments when excitement stirred him.

He had appeared in Aden a month before to revive the business of a defunct American trading company. As an American merchant, established in the Crater, he seemed to have little time for social amenities, but had, nevertheless, with annoying boldness made an opportunity to be presented to Miss Whittington, and through her had established, two evenings before, a casual acquaintance with her father, the political resident.

* * *

Awkwardness was now avoided by the shipping agent's lifting his glass and exclaiming mockingly.

"We drink to yeh, Yank!"

Encouraged by this mark of amiability, the shipping agent added, with the suggestion of a sneer,

"Let me have the next note that comes along, Yank, and if I like it, I'll drink to it then. We'd get bored stiff without the funny sheets, you know, old boy."

The American looked at the speaker with angry astonishment. One of the naval officers said under his breath:

"Easy there you silly chump! Don't start a muss in the club here. There are guests, you ruddy fool!"

"A muss?" said the shipping agent, with bibulous bravado. "Rot! I've heard Americans don't fight."

Several of the card players looked up with irritation and uneasiness. Miss Whittington, now standing behind her father's chair, could not conceal an expression of surprise and contempt.

The American instinctively started. The next instant he gave a grunt of amusement and turning his back on the people at the bar, walked deliberately toward Miss Whittington, murmuring, "Good evening," as though nothing of consequence had been said.

The shipping agent burst into laughter, and the group turned to the bar again and resumed its drinks.

The officers, however, felt an unhappy sense of depression. They had seen something they could not understand, and they resented the shipping agent's flippancy.

As the American approached, Miss Whittington responded to his greeting with a forced air of indifference, and continued to look down at her father's hand.

Colonel Whittington treated the newcomer to an indifferent nod. Undeterred by this cool reception, the American retained his place by Miss Whittington's side. His gaze rested long on the resident, as though trying to pierce a mask behind which was a countenance unfamiliar to any one else in the club.

The close scrutiny of a physiognomist would indeed have discovered a marked disquietude in Colonel Whittington's expression.

Miss Whittington experienced a startled feeling that his interest was not at all in her but entirely absorbed in him. She knew there must have been a reason for him to accept publicly an imputation of cowardice.

"I am wondering," she ventured deliberately, "why, you ignored what that man said."

"You think I should have magnificently punched his head?"

"It was just a thought—that's all. It struck me as curious. Our viewpoints are so different."

"I expect so. But it would have been a rather stupid waste of time you see." He looked up at the moon glowing radiantly above them. "Have you ever seen such beauty? Tonight, I should say, is a night for romance."

"You certainly are an extraordinary man!"

Miss Whittington looked out across the bay uneasily.

The American looked back again at the daughter, taking in at one glance her slim, firm figure, her blue eyes gazing away with a brooding expression, the soft mass of her hair touched with moonlight. She seemed to embody grace, reposeful beauty, yet an ardent and determined nature.

Suddenly rising his voice to a full conversational tone, designed to catch the ear of the resident, he said, with the inane flippancy that older men despise:

"Miss Whittington, let's go over to the railing and look at the little fishes. I've something very important I want to whisper to you."

Colonel Whittington glanced up sharply, with a perceptible frown.

Miss Whittington, perplexed, turned her head slowly. The American, touching her elbow, added earnestly in a low tone:

"Please come."

They walked slowly to the balustrade, presenting a picture of perfect friendship and understanding.

"Culverson, would you mind taking my hand?" said Colonel Whittington to a bystander, "I think this moonlight must affect me. My head's buzzing like the bazaar."

Chapter III

In the Moonlight

Whittington, with an air of indecision as though he had not a single thought on his mind, strolled casually in the direction of his daughter and the American, who were leaning over the balustrade.

"If we were in England," said Miss Whittington in a matter-of-fact tone, "I should say that faint rising about the moon meant snow."

"Snow?"

"Or frost, at least."

"Good heaven!" exclaimed the American in amazement. "Doesn't the sheer beauty of it—the glory—the romance touch you at all?"

So Goes It

A special writer says the cities of the country need better jails. We beg to take issue with the said s. w. Our contention is that they are comfortable enough, judging from the number of folks who are willing to take a chance on getting into them.

We believe we have unearthed the nuttiest nuts of them all. Out in California there is a fishless fishing club. Fine club house, beautiful lake, but no fish. They won't allow them there.

This "Fivcasters" club is the most aristocratic and exclusive in that neck of the woods. Every member owns a dress suit, we are told, although we are not informed whether they wear them when they acasting go in their fishless like. The club boasts some very expensive fishing tackle. What do they do with it?

Why, bless your fishy soul, they fish with it, knowing all the time that they can't catch any fish. Can you beat that? And they don't want to catch any. They just want to practice casting. They say fish interfere with their casting.

We have gone fishing many a time when we were unwilling to hazard a guess as to the size of our catch. We have fished where there weren't any fish. At least they didn't make their presence known. But we thought they were there.

We thought so just strong enough to sit all day in the broiling sun and bait our hook, and wait, and bait our book, and wait some more, expecting that some finny fellow would come our way. But never, in all our checkered career, have we gone fishing in a puddle that we KNEW contained no fish. Anyone who would is a nut even be he an aristocrat, and the proud possessor of a "waiter suit."

Having reviewed the case, we hereby tender our collection of trophies to the gentlemen who are nutty enough to fish in a fishless lake. They get them all, including our highly prized fur-lined bath tub.

To Prevent Round Shoulders

One Mother Says:

My little boy was inclined to be round shouldered, so I taught him the following exercise, recommended by a physical training teacher, to develop his chest and strengthen the weak muscles. Both arms are stretched sideward with stiff elbows. The weight of the body is then poised forward and held on the balls of the feet. The fingers of both hands grasp a piece of imaginary chalk, which is to draw circles as the arms are whirled backward, starting with small circles and gradually increasing their size—but not beyond the point of keeping the good poise and the power to hold the head erect. The arms should circle ten to twenty times.

WHAT TODAY MEANS

SCORPIO

Postpone the beginning of any new project today, or the result will be very disappointing. The whole day is unsuspicious except for minor matters. A splendid time to finish jobs of long standing! The evening aspects are very good and favor courtships and heart affairs.

A child born today will be generous, obedient and trustworthy.

If today is the anniversary of your birth your character is one that will always be an enigma to yourself as well as to others.

You are versatile and yet capable of concentrating your entire attention on the development of any one of your numerous talents. You are religious, but not orthodox. You are business-like, but you abhor details. You are forceful and self-reliant, but certain types can almost bend you around their fingers.

Perhaps the key to your nature is that to fully realize your capabilities you must love the task at hand, or the people with whom you are associated and to some extent they must reciprocate your affection for a harmonious atmosphere of good cheer to your finest pitch of activity.

You are naturally intuitive and a splendid judge of character. Your decisions on new enterprises will always rest on your estimate of the personalities involved rather than on the merits of the project itself.

You are sensitive, appreciative and creative. You know and feel the thoughts and actions of your fellow beings and you have the imagination to recreat life and ennoble it in art. You have a talent for writing and for music in a less degree, but you are fond of all the arts and you should indulge your tastes in this direction as your nature has a vital need for emotional stimulation.

Temperamentally you like to live life to its fullest sensation, if only to experience a new thrill. You are unafraid and willing to reap whatever harvest you have sown.

Emotionally you are affectionate and responsive. There is no harm in you and you would rather die than injure anyone. But if you choose to do a thing because it is beautiful and enjoyable you will do it regardless of public opinion.

About some gorgeous magazine
My eyes will often hover,
The while I revel in the scene
Depicted on the cover.
But when the magazine I've got
And read it inside out,
I never seem to find out what
The cover's all about.

I've often seen some charming dame,
In clothing known as "sport,"
Engaged upon a lively game
Upon the links or court.
But not a single line of print,
Although I read with care,
Conveys to me the slightest hint
Of why she's pictured there.

I see strong men with massive chests
And tan upon their cheeks,
Pursuing Indians to the crests
Of snow-clad mountain peaks.
"A tale," I cry, "The wild west kind,
Rough, full of pep and vim."
But when I look inside I find
No reference to him.

I do not think this thing is fair.
A circus bills with pride
The picture of a polar bear—
And shows the bear inside.
A magazine may love to thrill,
But it would help a lot
If it hereafter would not bill
The goods it hasn't got.

TIMELY VIEWS on WORLD TOPICS

"EUROPE'S DIPLOMACY SHAPED NOT TO AID BUT TO EXPLOIT PEOPLES OF VARIOUS COUNTRIES."

"None other than the omniscent knows whether the Ruhr situation may precipitate another world conflagration as destructive as the last war, declared Gov. John J. Blane of Wisconsin in a recent address before the German club of Chicago.

"And what are the interests involved in that contest? Identically those which have been involved in many recent contests," he continued. "Oil in Mexico; oil, not for the benefit of America, but oil for the benefit of international exploiters, disturbed our peace with Mexico until its recent recognition. Oil in western Asia—that was the struggle of Great Britain, France, and Turkey.

"In the Ruhr, steel, iron, coal—ah! there's the rub! Poincare, the attorney for the French steel magnates; Stresemann's connections I know not, but it is very clear that, with the industrial situation in Great Britain, behind the scenes, the steel, iron, and coal magnates of France, Germany, and Great Britain—with the part played by the United States steel trust unknown—the diplomacy of Europe is shaped. For whom? The peoples of those nations? No! That diplomacy is all exercised in the interests of exploitation of the peoples of those nations."

U. S. Diplomacy "Drifting."

"Today America's diplomacy and international policy is a drifting one. It is a policy of watchful waiting. It promises nothing for the future but the possibility of future wars—wars with which we should have no concern but into which we are doomed to be dragged because of our shiftless international policies.

"America can re-establish her traditional doctrine for international relationship without the consent of a single naiton, and then, for the purpose of protecting the American continent, both north and south, against the aggressions and imperialism of Europe, a defensive force on land and sea will be the great antidote against wars, and with the reestablishment of that doctrine never again will it be necessary for an American soldier or sailor to leave the threshold of his country in the pursuit of protecting his country.

Urges Cause of Fathers.

"America's international policy should be to keep her hands off of coal, oil, steel; keep away from protectorates; avoid 'spheres of influence,' 'balance of power'—in short, keep out of all foreign entanglements. History and experience brought to us through bloodshed, through privations, through the greatest travail, commends us to the diplomacy and principles of our fathers as it had been expressed for a century and a quarter."

FT. CONCHO TO BE RESERVED

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 28.—Historic Fort Concho, a noted Indian outpost of early Texas days, will be revived by Adjutant General T. D. Barton, and its ancient buildings will again respond to the bugle calls of reveille and taps.

The fort was built in 1869, and for years housed a company of Indian outpost scouts; and afterward for years was used by the United States government as outpost headquarters for troops. The original buildings are still standing.

Troop C, 112th cavalry, Texas national guard, is being organized at San Angelo, and will use the old fort for headquarters, armory and quarters. Captain Lyndon Dabb, at present in charge of a ninfantry cimpany at San Angelo, will command the cavalry troop.

The cavalry troop bearing this same designation, will be abandoned at McKinney, to permit the San Angelo organization. The San Angelo infantry company will be converted to a cavalry troop, under orders just issued.

Fort Concho is situated a few miles from San Angelo, between the converging forks of little Concho and big Concho rivers.

HOW TO BUILD, FINANCE BETTER HOMES AND FURNISH A HOME

HAPPINESS

Copyright, 1923

Wood Finish Vital in Building

Although many persons believe that the artistic decorating of homes is coupled with a considerable expenditure, there is no excuse for the home builder of moderate means to display poor taste in really beautifying the interior of his house. This applies particularly to the finish of the woodwork and floors, as well as the proper coloring of walls and ceiling. Even if the color scheme is very simple it can be executed with proper regard for harmony.

One of the commonest mistakes in interior decorating of homes of all classes is in the finish of wood work. Where the trim is in hardwood or dressed to resemble hardwood, the error is frequently made of choosing a mahogany finish in a red cherry tone, entirely out of harmony with the colorings of walls and furnishings.

An uninviting cheap effect is the result. Soft brown tones, such as antique walnut, will produce a softer and far more pleasing effect. Instead of finishing oak in light natural colors, the antique cathedral tone, with its darker shade, should be employed.

Where the enamel finish, whether ivory, or gray is used on wood work on the ground floor living rooms, it is well to use tones much deeper and richer than in the bedrooms, because the furniture in the living rooms is darker hues than bedroom pieces.

A pleasing effect in the downstairs rooms is often obtained by glazing the enamel to represent an antique finish.

Pleasing House

Perfection is not measured by inches. Large or small the house of the cultured gentlemen is of honest design, with its paintings and curtains, external trimmings and surrounding foliage in good taste. The approach to the house is kept beautifully clean, steps scrubbed, brass polished.

The personality of a home is that indefinable warmth that impels the visitor to linger, whether the home is but a hut or a palace; while the place correct to micrometrical fraction becomes but a show place, walls with furniture correctly placed, a gilded cage. Costliness is not necessarily comeliness. The home with "warmth" may have limited furnishings, yet breathe, in that very sparseness, the atmosphere of hospitality which is the unmistakable quality indicative of the taste of the well bred.

The aspirant to beauty should endeavor through guidance from books on home decorating and home furnishing, observation from what others do in their homes and the careful study of the needs of his or her particular home to make all the rooms composite of propriety, comfort, and charm.

Modern kitchen utensils are many and complicated, but a good many housewives still rely on the trusty can opener.

For the Nursery

Walls—A soft, misty, gray paint, tint, or plain paper.

Woodwork—A dull white.

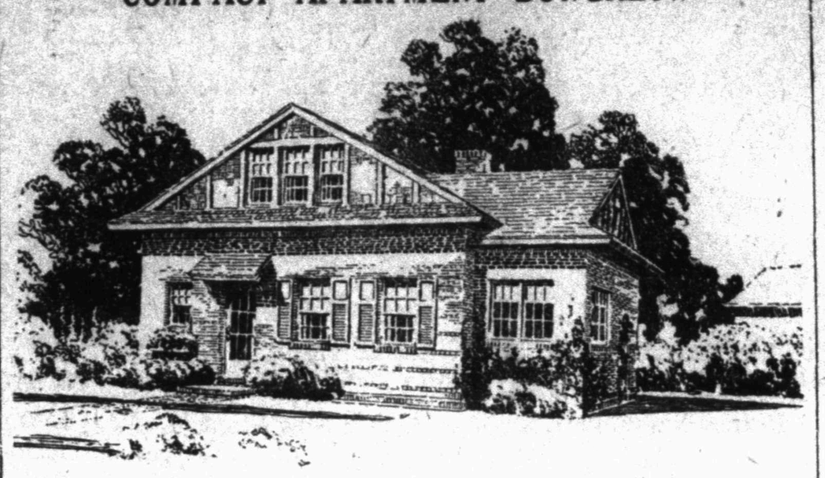

Floors—Plain hardwood, with a rug or braided rug in sapphire blue—or softwood, entirely covered in taupe Jaspe linoleum.

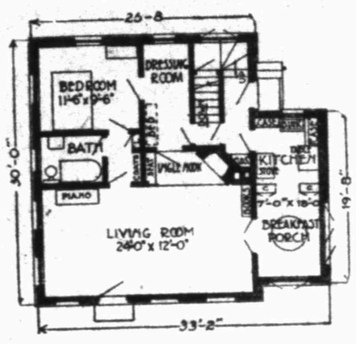

Rug Cleaning Made Easy

Here is a good way to keep rugs straight on the line while being cleaned.

Stretch the clothesline the same as on washday. Tie a rug pole or clothes prop (preferably a rug pole) lengthwise on the line, using a strong string or light cord. Tie this in about three or four places. This keeps the pole perfectly taut to the line. Then put your rug over pole and line.

COMPACT APARTMENT BUNGALOW

This interesting English design combines in the plan all of the most modern ideas in condensed house arrangement. The prominent feature is the unusually large living room, made even larger by the inviting fireplace nook. Adjoining it is the breakfast porch, enclosed in glass, so that it is not simply a fair weather porch, although it can be thrown wide open when the elements permit. It serves for dining room and porch, even for a sleeping porch if you choose. While the china cabinets screen it from the kitchen, the division is not so complete as to rob the kitchen of roomness. A short pasage gives access to the bedroom, the bath, the linen closet, and the coat closet. A sizable dressing closet not only gives an unusual amount of closet space but also accommodates a wall bed which can be swung out into the living room if required, making a spare bedroom on occasion. Infact, the dressing closet itself is large enough for a child's bed, a great convenience where there are small children.

This attractive bungalow is designed along apartment lines for those who wish the convenience of the apartment combined with the pleasures of their own home. It is not large or expensive to build and is suitable for a small lot, which would reduce the total investment.

The bungalow feeling predominates in the exterior, but the roof is high enough to allow the finishing of two more bedrooms and a bath, or a den, upstairs if desired. The openings are so carefully placed that the house is quite attractive from all points of view.

Any shade or texture of brick would be adaptable to this design, for which shrubbery and vines are especially suitable tending to make it appear as an integral part of its natural surroundings.

There is a basement under this house, with the usual laundry, heater room and fuel bins, a fruit closet and cellarge for vegetables.

Speaking Of Food

It isn't hard to cook; for I
Can cook a meal to satisfy.
My husband's fondest wishes
I like to roast, I like to bake,
I like to fry a chop og steak;
The time my heart begins to ache
Is when I wash the dishes.

Paint Your Home

Paint will do wonders for a home. It brings a refreshing appearance, gives a pleasing touch and always results in satisfaction to the owner. Probably you have noticed when one owner paints his dwelling that the painting germ soon inoculates all the other home owners near that property. It is an infection that works for better homes. A few dollars for paint is always a good investment.

A well lighted kitchen is highly desirable. Plenty of window light should be provided if a new house is being built. Care is needed in planning the electric lighting, wall lights being preferable to a central fixture. One side light over the table, one over the stove and one over the sink are usually adequate.

Mahogany Still Leads

Since Raleigh's Carpenter Made Use of Its Beauty, Its Vogue Has Held

Among cabinetmakers and users of furniture, mahogany is easily the most favored wood. It has beauty of surface, it is easily carved and it is not subject to changes in fashion. Also it is adaptable to any article of furniture.

Tradition has it that mahogany's discovery was quite accidental. A carpenter in Sir Walter Raleigh's shop in 1595 saw some of the wood, experimented with it, and convinced of its value, made use of it. Mahogany is found extensively in Africa, but the greater quantity used in the United States comes from Cuba, Mexico and Central America.

Right Rug Will Do Much

The fine lines of the trimly dressed bed, the comfortable lounge, the reading stand with its prettily shaded lamp, the placing of the well chosen articles in the room in perfect balance, the objects on the mantel shelf over the fireplace—all these are features which will make for the charm of the bedroom. A plain-toned rug often goes toward bringing the varied furnishings of the room into harmony and subduing the feeling of restlessness which otherwise might have intruded itself.

In any home, there should be as much individuality shown in the sleeping rooms as in any other rooms in the house. Each occupant of a room may have preferences to which the fancy should be given free reign, within the limits set by good taste. Then there is the guest room, which, too often, is lacking in the warm personal appeal which goes so far toward making the sense of hospitality apparent. The proper furnishing of the guest room deserves more consideration on the part of the hostess than it usually receives.

The hostess should think of the many small conveniences which make the stay of a guest in the home a time to be looked back upon with pleasure. A well placed reading lamp, a few timely books and above all a well appointed desk with stationery and a calendar are details which should not be overlooked in the guest room.

Whose Kitchen Was It?

That kitchen possessing an air of pleasing efficiency, not a cold laboratory-like effect, but an air of just-rightness that appealed to you! It might just as well have been yours. It really takes very little in the way of expenditure or effort to have the most charming sort of a kitchen.

WOLF OF WALL STREET

David Lamar is known as the "Wolf of Wall Street." He is credited with having been a wolf of wall street for a quarter of a century. He was not popular with the other wolves. He was not popular with the legitimate kings of Wall Street. Men who dislike financiers as well as curb-stone crooks.

In war time the wolf of Wall Street entangled himself in the meshes of federal law. He was sent to trial and given a year in the federal penitentiary. His bail was fixed at $25,000 pending the disposition of an appeal to the higher court. The wolf scipped to Mexico and forfeited his bond.

This was before the United States had recognized the Obregon administration. After recognition, the wolf was arrested in the city of Mexico by a Burns detective. Burns had been on his trail a long time. Burns represents the American Bankers association as well as the secret service of the federal government. The wolf made no resistance. He was hurried from Mexico City to New York.

Now he is behind the bars. Now he must serve a term, or a stretch in the pen. This will be his finish. An ex-convict cannot travel very far. The eye of the law is ever upon him. He is constantly ordered to move on. He is an outlaw as well as an outcast.

This is what happened to David Lamar, highly educated, finished product of school and university and the cleverest crooked worker within the law that Wall Street has known for a long time. If all the wolves of Wall Street, all the wolves of the world who prey upon their kind, were behind the bars of the penitentiary, the prison population of the United States would be the largest in history, for there are men within the walls who are the victims of circumstance and wolves without the walls, who must have been born under a lucky star.

David got his. He was lucky for a long time.. Now he wears a stripped garb of a convict and over his cell door is written: "he who enters here leaves hope behind." There's a road called straight. It is paved with broken stones that are jagged and hard on the soles of the feet. It does not lead to the penitentiary. There's a road called the Easy Way. For those who travel it, the gates of the pen foreven yawn.

THIRTY-SIX CENT COTTON

A resolution was adopted at the annual convention of the American Cotton association favoring a minimum average selling price for cotton of 36-cents a pound. But the adoption of a resolution cannot fix an average selling price for cotton, or wheat, or corn, or petroleum.

There must be a demand. There's a demand for cotton this year because the world is facing a famine of raw material. England was a fair buyer last year; Germany was a fair buyer; Poland was a fair buyer. It should be recalled that this cotton year will not close until July 31, 1924. Unless the cotton experts of the world are false prophets, there will be no cotton to speak of at the close of this fiscal year.

INSTALLMENT NO. ONE

Chapter I

One night, in September, 1916, the Little Union club, rising above the calm waters of the Gulf of Aden, presented a scene of unusual activity.

A piano and two violins were making music; bursts of laughter came from the bar, where glasses tinkled; while out on the broad cement terrace there were tables crowded with intent bridge players, about whom hovered restless couples.

The Maloja had left some notables ashore that afternoon, and a dance was in progress, ostensibly in their honor.

The occasion was a double benefit, however, for it afforded an opportunity for the wives and daughters of officials to see new faces, hear fresh news and dance with men from home not yet grown anemic and blase, or insanely impassioned by corrupting heat of the arid tropics.

They chatted brightly, and their clear laughter was pleasant to hear and their presence, being a symbol of home, gave point to the argument that had been going on in the desert all day long.

By this argument, the Turks were attempting to prove that Aden was a besieged citadel, and had succeeded to such an extent that, the night before, the flashes of their guns could be seen from the veranda of the club.

There had been moments of considerable mental perturbation for the political resident, Colonel A. B. Whittington, K. C. I. E., who felt more than any one else the serious loss of prestige the British empire was suffering—and its far-reaching effects, which, like a fist of clouds on the horizon, suggested danger only to the experienced mariner.

A casual glance over the crowd, as it weaved in and out, gave no hint of seriousness in the situation. Their whole tone was that of idle, boresome entertainment.

Among the women, the most attractive was certainly Miss Barbara Whittington, daughter of the colonel.

As he made his way slowly across the veranda, with Barbara following at his elbow, he was subjected to a curious scrutiny by the crowd lined along the open bar. These men, mostly young officers, looked upon him with half-veiled insolence of young fighters who take no thought of the loads that press on the shoulders of experienced and conscientious administrators.

Some one murmured over his glass:

"Cheeri-o! The king of the Hadramaut! He smirks—h ecracks a joke. My sacred aunt! He's the shining wit of the party!"

"I say—have any of you chaps seen the proclamation he's posted in the bazaars—the latest?" asked another youth.

"No-o."

"Oh, it's priceless! A proclamation urging all those who may be interested to inform their friends within the Turkish lines that munitions must not be stored in mosques. He gives the whole show away—admits there is free and open communication between the bazaars and the enemy lines!"

This statement, intended to startle, only brought forth derisive laughter.

"Hell! I'd be uncomfortable if the place wasn't rotten with spies. Wouldn't seem like Aden."

"Just take a look at the foreigners in the bazaars—Somalis, Abyssinians, Indians, Jews, Armenians, Greeks——"

"And American," interjected a sallow-faced shipping agent, glancing sideways at a man who stood alone and seemed by his attitude to be a stranger to the group. All eyes for an instant were diretd at him; but if he felt this scrutiny, he affected at first to ignore it.

Chapter II

Different Viewpoints

In the conventional black trousers and white jacket that make the mess dress of a civilian, there was nothing distinctive about his costume.

He presented, however, an interesting masculine impression. Slightly above the average in height, he had the neat head of an intelligent fighter, rough black hair, and blue, thoughtful eyes that flashed in the rare moments when excitement stirred him.

He had appeared in Aden a month before to revive the business of a defunct American trading company. As an American merchant, established in the Crater, he seemed to have little time for social amenities, but had, nevertheless, with annoying boldness made an opportunity to be presented to Miss Whittington, and through her had established, two evenings before, a casual acquaintance with her father, the political resident.

* * *

Awkwardness was now avoided by the shipping agent's lifting his glass and exclaiming mockingly.

"We drink to yeh, Yank!"

Encouraged by this mark of amiability, the shipping agent added, with the suggestion of a sneer,

"Let me have the next note that comes along, Yank, and if I like it, I'll drink to it then. We'd get bored stiff without the funny sheets, you know, old boy."

The American looked at the speaker with angry astonishment. One of the naval officers said under his breath:

"Easy there you silly chump! Don't start a muss in the club here. There are guests, you ruddy fool!"

"A muss?" said the shipping agent, with bibulous bravado. "Rot! I've heard Americans don't fight."

Several of the card players looked up with irritation and uneasiness. Miss Whittington, now standing behind her father's chair, could not conceal an expression of surprise and contempt.

The American instinctively started. The next instant he gave a grunt of amusement and turning his back on the people at the bar, walked deliberately toward Miss Whittington, murmuring, "Good evening," as though nothing of consequence had been said.

The shipping agent burst into laughter, and the group turned to the bar again and resumed its drinks.

The officers, however, felt an unhappy sense of depression. They had seen something they could not understand, and they resented the shipping agent's flippancy.

As the American approached, Miss Whittington responded to his greeting with a forced air of indifference, and continued to look down at her father's hand.

Colonel Whittington treated the newcomer to an indifferent nod. Undeterred by this cool reception, the American retained his place by Miss Whittington's side. His gaze rested long on the resident, as though trying to pierce a mask behind which was a countenance unfamiliar to any one else in the club.

The close scrutiny of a physiognomist would indeed have discovered a marked disquietude in Colonel Whittington's expression.

Miss Whittington experienced a startled feeling that his interest was not at all in her but entirely absorbed in him. She knew there must have been a reason for him to accept publicly an imputation of cowardice.

"I am wondering," she ventured deliberately, "why, you ignored what that man said."

"You think I should have magnificently punched his head?"

"It was just a thought—that's all. It struck me as curious. Our viewpoints are so different."

"I expect so. But it would have been a rather stupid waste of time you see." He looked up at the moon glowing radiantly above them. "Have you ever seen such beauty? Tonight, I should say, is a night for romance."

"You certainly are an extraordinary man!"

Miss Whittington looked out across the bay uneasily.

The American looked back again at the daughter, taking in at one glance her slim, firm figure, her blue eyes gazing away with a brooding expression, the soft mass of her hair touched with moonlight. She seemed to embody grace, reposeful beauty, yet an ardent and determined nature.

Suddenly rising his voice to a full conversational tone, designed to catch the ear of the resident, he said, with the inane flippancy that older men despise:

"Miss Whittington, let's go over to the railing and look at the little fishes. I've something very important I want to whisper to you."

Colonel Whittington glanced up sharply, with a perceptible frown.

Miss Whittington, perplexed, turned her head slowly. The American, touching her elbow, added earnestly in a low tone:

"Please come."

They walked slowly to the balustrade, presenting a picture of perfect friendship and understanding.

"Culverson, would you mind taking my hand?" said Colonel Whittington to a bystander, "I think this moonlight must affect me. My head's buzzing like the bazaar."

Chapter III

In the Moonlight

Whittington, with an air of indecision as though he had not a single thought on his mind, strolled casually in the direction of his daughter and the American, who were leaning over the balustrade.

"If we were in England," said Miss Whittington in a matter-of-fact tone, "I should say that faint rising about the moon meant snow."

"Snow?"

"Or frost, at least."

"Good heaven!" exclaimed the American in amazement. "Doesn't the sheer beauty of it—the glory—the romance touch you at all?"

So Goes It

By B. B.

A special writer says the cities of the country need better jails. We beg to take issue with the said s. w. Our contention is that they are comfortable enough, judging from the number of folks who are willing to take a chance on getting into them.

A burglar and a Marlin man engaged in a pistol duel. The Texan wasn't hurt, but the part of the item we can't understand is this: "The burglar escaped."

We believe we have unearthed the nuttiest nuts of them all. Out in California there is a fishless fishing club. Fine club house, beautiful lake, but no fish. They won't allow them there.

This "Flycasters" club is the most aristocratic and exclusive in that neck of the woods. Every member owns a dress suit, we are told, although we are not informed whether they wear them when they scasting go in their fishless like. The club boasts some very expensive fishing tackle. What do they do with it?

Why, bless your fishy soul, they fish with it, knowing all the time that they can't catch any fish. Can you beat that? And they don't want to catch any. They just want to practice casting. They say fish interfere with their casting.

We have gone fishing many a time when we were unwilling to hazard a guess as to the size of our catch. We have fished where there weren't any fish. At least they didn't make their presence known. But we thought they were there.

We thought so just strong enough to sit all day in the broiling sun and bait our hook, and wait, and bait our book, and wait some more, expecting that some finny fellow would come our way. But never, in all our checkered career, have we gone fishing in a puddle that we KNEW contained no fish. Anyone who would is a nut even be he an aristocrat, and the proud possessor of a "waiter suit."

Having reviewed the case, we hereby tender our collection of trophies to the gentlemen who are nutty enough to fish in a fishless lake. They get them all, including our highly prized fur-lined bath tub.

MOTHERS AND THEIR CHILDREN

To Prevent Round Shoulders

One Mother Says:

My little boy was inclined to be round shouldered, so I taught him the following exercise, recommended by a physical training teacher, to develop his chest and strengthen the weak muscles. Both arms are stretched sideward with stiff elbows. The weight of the body is then poised forward and held on the balls of the feet. The fingers of both hands grasp a piece of imaginary chalk, which is to draw circles as the arms are whirled backward, starting with small circles and gradually increasing their size—but not beyond the point of keeping the good poise and the power to hold the head erect. The arms should circle ten to twenty times.

WHAT TODAY MEANS

SCORPIO

Postpone the beginning of any new project today, or the result will be very disappointing. The whole day is inauspicious except for minor matters. A splendid time to finish jobs of long standing! The evening aspects are very good and favor courtships and heart affairs.

A child born today will be generous, obedient and trustworthy.

If today is the anniversary of your birth your character is one that will always be an enigma to yourself as well as to others.

You are versatile and yet capable of concentrating your entire attention on the development of any one of your numerous talents. You are religious, but not orthodox. You are business-like, but you abhor details. You are forceful and self-reliant, but certain types can almost bend you around their fingers.

Perhaps the key to your nature is that to fully realize your capabilities you must love the task at hand, or the people with whom you are associated and to some extent they must reciprocate your affection for a harmonious atmosphere of good cheer to your finest pitch of activity.

You are naturally intuitive and a splendid judge of character. Your decisions on new enterprises will always rest on your estimate of the personalities involved rather than on the merits of the project itself.

You are sensitive, appreciative and creative. You know and feel the thoughts and actions of your fellow beings and you have the imagination to recreat life and ennoble it in art. You have a talent for writing and for music in a less degree, but you are fond of all the arts and you should indulge your tastes in this direction as your nature has a vital need for emotional stimulation.

Temperamentally you like to live life to its fullest sensation, if only to experience a new thrill. You are unafraid and willing to reap whatever harvest you have sown.

Emotionally you are affectionate and responsive. There is no harm in you and you would rather die than injure anyone. But if you choose to do a thing because it is beautiful and enjoyable you will do it regardless of public opinion.

My eyes will often hover,
The while I revel in the scene
Depicted on the cover.
But when the magazine I've got
And read it inside out,
I never seem to find out what
The cover's all about.

I've often seen some charming dame
In clothing known as "sport,"
Engaged upon a lively game
Upon the links or court.
But not a single line of print,
Although I read with care,
Conveys to me the slightest hint
Of why she's pictured there.

I see strong men with massive chests
And tan upon their cheeks,
Pursuing Indians to the crests
Of snow-clad mountain peaks.
"A tale," I cry, "The wild west kind,
Rough, full of pep and vim."
But when I look inside I find
No reference to him.

I do not think this thing is fair.
A circus bills with pride
The picture of a polar bear—
And shows the bear inside.
A magazine may love to thrill,
But it would help a lot
If it hereafter would not bill
The goods it hasn't got.

TIMELY VIEWS on WORLD TOPICS

"EUROPE'S DIPLOMACY SHAPED NOT TO AID BUT TO EXPLOIT PEOPLES OF VARIOUS COUNTRIES."

"None other than the omniscent knows whether the Ruhr situation may precipitate another world conflagration as destructive as the last war, declared Gov. John J. Blane of Wisconsin in a recent address before the German club of Chicago.

"And what are the interests involved in that contest? Identically those which have been involved in many recent contests," he continued. "Oil in Mexico; oil, not for the benefit of America, but oil for the benefit of international exploiters, disturbed our peace with Mexico until its recent recognition. Oil in western Asia—that was the struggle of Great Britain, France, and Turkey.

"In the Ruhr, steel, iron, coal—ah! there's the rub! Poincare, the attorney for the French steel magnates; Stresemann's connections I know not, but it is very clear that, with the industrial situation in Great Britain, behind the scenes, the steel, iron, and coal magnates of France, Germany, and Great Britain—with the part played by the United States steel trust unknown—the diplomacy of Europe is shaped. For whom? The peoples of those nations? No! That diplomacy is all exercised in the interests of exploitation of the peoples of those nations."

U. S. Diplomacy "Drifting."

"Today America's diplomacy and international policy is a drifting one. It is a policy of watchful waiting. It promises nothing for the future but the possibility of future wars—wars with which we should have no concern but into which we are doomed to be dragged because of our shiftless international policies.

"America can re-establish her traditional doctrine for international relationship without the consent of a single naiton, and then, for the purpose of protecting the American continent, both north and south, against the aggressions and imperialism of Europe, a defensive force on land and sea will be the great antidote against wars, and with the reestablishment of that doctrine never again will it be necessary for an American soldier or sailor to leave the threshold of his country in the pursuit of protecting his country.

Urges Cause of Fathers.

"America's international policy should be to keep her hands off of coal, oil, steel; keep away from protectorates; avoid 'spheres of influence,' 'balance of power'—in short, keep out of all foreign entanglements. History and experience brought to us through bloodshed, through privations, through the greatest travail, commends us to the diplomacy and principles of our fathers as it had been expressed for a century and a quarter."

FT. CONCHO TO BE RESERVED

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 28.—Historic Fort Concho, a noted Indian outpost of early Texas days, will be revived by Adjutant General T. D. Barton, and its ancient buildings will again respond to the bugle calls of reveille and taps.

The fort was built in 1869, and for years housed a company of Indian outpost scouts; and afterward for years was used by the United States government as outpost headquarters for troops. The original buildings are still standing.

Troop C, 112th cavalry, Texas national guard, is being organized at San Angelo, and will use the old fort for headquarters, armory and quarters. Captain Lyndon Dabb, at present in charge of a ninfantry cimpany at San Angelo, will command the cavalry troop.

The cavalry troop bearing this same designation, will be abandoned at McKinney, to permit the San Angelo organization. The San Angelo infantry company will be converted to a cavalry troop, under orders just issued.

Fort Concho is situated a few miles from San Angelo, between the converging forks of little Concho and big Concho rivers.

HOW TO BUILD, FINANCE BETTER HOMES AND FURNISH A HOME

HAPPINESS

Copyright, 1923

Wood Finish Vital in Building

Although many persons believe that the artistic decorating of homes is coupled with a considerable expenditure, there is no excuse for the home builder of moderate means to display poor taste in really beautifying the interior of his house. This applies particularly to the finish of the woodwork and floors, as well as the proper coloring of walls and ceiling. Even if the color scheme is very simple it can be executed with proper regard for harmony.

One of the commonest mistakes in interior decorating of homes of all classes is in the finish of wood work. Where the trim is in hardwood or dressed to resemble hardwood, the error is frequently made of choosing a mahogany finish in a red cherry tone, entirely out of harmony with the colorings of walls and furnishings.

An uninviting cheap effect is the result. Soft brown tones, such as antique walnut, will produce a softer and far more pleasing effect. Instead of finishing oak in light natural colors, the antique cathedral tone, with its darker shade, should be employed.

Where the enamel finish, whether ivory, or gray is used on wood work on the ground floor living rooms, it is well to use tones much deeper and richer than in the bedrooms, because the furniture in the living rooms is darker hues than bedroom pieces.

A pleasing effect in the downstairs rooms is often obtained by glazing the enamel to represent an antique finish.

Pleasing House

Perfection is not measured by inches. Large or small the house of the cultured gentlemen is of honest design, with its paintings and curtains, external trimmings and surrounding foliage in good taste. The approach to the house is kept beautifully clean, steps scrubbed, brass polished.

The personality of a home is that indefinable warmth that impels the visitor to linger, whether the home is but a hut or a palace; while the place correct to micrometrical fraction becomes but a show place, walls with furniture correctly placed, a gilded cage. Coatliness is not necessarily comeliness. The home with "warmth" may have limited furnishings, yet breathe, in that very sparseness, the atmosphere of hospitality which is the unmistakable quality indicative of the taste of the well bred.

The aspirant to beauty should endeavor through guidance from books on home decorating and home furnishing, observation from what others do in their homes and the careful study of the needs of his or her particular home to make all the rooms composite of propriety, comfort, and charm.

Modern kitchen utensils are many and complicated, but a good many housewives still rely on the trusty can opener.

For the Nursery

Walls—A soft, misty, gray paint, tint, or plain paper.

Woodwork—A dull white.

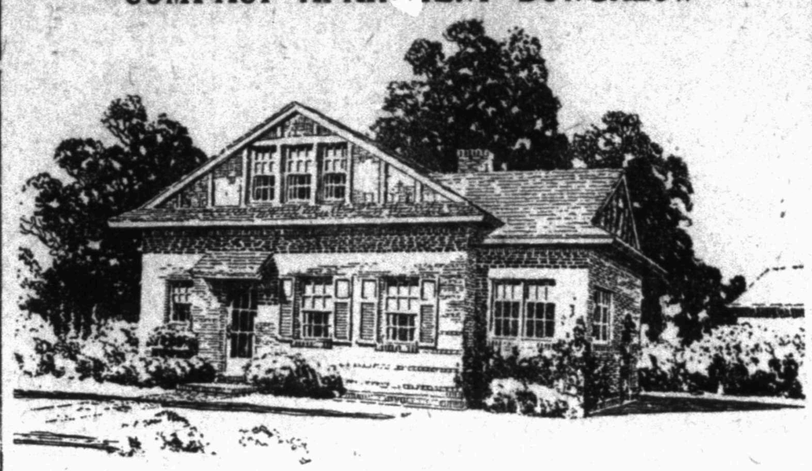

Floors—Plain hardwood, with a rag or braided rug in sapphire blue—or softwood, entirely covered in taupe Jaspe linoleum.

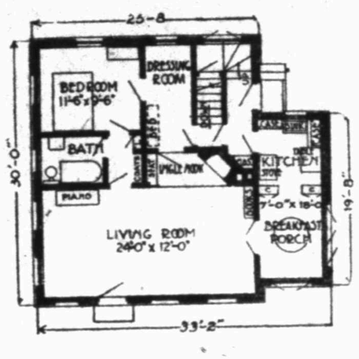

Rug Cleaning Made Easy

Here is a good way to keep rugs straight on the line while being cleaned.

Stretch the clothesline the same as on washday. Tie a rug pole or clothes prop (preferably a rug pole) lengthwise on the line, using a strong string or light cord. Tie this in about three or four places. This keeps the pole perfectly taut to the line. Then put your rug over pole and line.

COMPACT APARTMENT BUNGALOW

This interesting English design combines in the plan all of the most modern ideas in condensed house arrangement. The prominent feature is the unusually large living room, made even larger by the inviting fireplace nook. Adjoining it is the breakfast porch, enclosed in glass, so that it is not simply a fair weather porch, although it can be thrown wide open when the elements permit. It serves for dining room and porch, even for a sleeping porch if you choose. While the china cabinets screen it from the kitchen, the division is not so complete as to rob the kitchen of roomness. A short pasage gives access to the bedroom, the bath, the linen closet, and the coat closet. A sizable dressing closet not only gives an unusual amount of closet space but also accommodates a wall bed which can be swung out into the living room if required, making a spare bedroom on occasion. Infact, the dressing closet itself is large enough for a child's bed, a great convenience where there are small children.

This attractive bungalow is designed along apartment lines for those who wish the convenience of the apartment combined with the pleasures of their own home. It is not large or expensive to build and is suitable for a small lot, which would reduce the total investment.

The bungalow feeling predominates in the exterior, but the roof is high enough to allow the finishing of two more bedrooms and a bath, or a den, upstairs if desired. The openings are so carefully placed that the house is quite attractive from all points of view.

Any shade or texture of brick would be adaptable to this design, for which shrubbery and vines are especially suitable tending to make it appear as an intergal part of its natural surroundings.

There is a basement under this house, with the usual laundry, heater room and fuel bins, a fruit closet and cellarge for vegetables.

Speaking Of Food

It isn't hard to cook; for I
Can cook a meal to satisfy.
My husband's fondest wishes
I like to roast, I like to bake,
I like to fry a chop or steak;
The time my heart begins to ache
Is when I wash the dishes.

Paint Your Home

Paint will do wonders for a home. It brings a refreshing appearance, gives a pleasing touch and always results in satisfaction to the owner. Probably you have noticed when one owner paints his dwelling that the painting germ soon inoculates all the other home owners near that property. It is an infection that works for better homes. A few dollars for paint is always a good investment.

A well lighted kitchen is highly desirable. Plenty of window light should be provided if a new house is being built. Care is needed in planning the electric lighting, wall lights being preferable to a central fixture. One side light over the table, one over the stove and one over the sink are usually adequate.

Mahogany Still Leads

Since Raleigh's Carpenter Made Use of Its Beauty, Its Vogue Has Held

Among cabinetmakers and users of furniture, mahogany is easily the most favored wood. It has beauty of surface, it is easily carved and it is not subject to changes in fashion. Also it is adaptable to any article of furniture.

Tradition has it that mahogany's discovery was quite accidental. A carpenter in Sir Walter Raleigh's shop in 1595 saw some of the wood, experimented with it, and convinced of its value, made use of it. Mahogany is found extensively in Africa, but the greater quantity used in the United States comes from Cuba, Mexico and Central America.

Right Rug Will Do Much

The fine lines of the trimly dressed bed, the comfortable lounge, the reading stand with its prettily shaded lamp, the placing of the well chosen articles in the room in perfect balance, the objects on the mantel shelf over the fireplace—all these are features which will make for the charm of the bedroom. A plain-toned rug often goes toward bringing the varied furnishings of the room into harmony and subduing the feeling of restlessness which otherwise might have intruded itself.

In any home, there should be as much individuality shown in the sleeping rooms as in any other rooms in the house. Each occupant of a room may have preferences to which the fancy should be given free reign, within the limits set by good taste. Then there is the guest room, which, too often, is lacking in the warm personal appeal which goes so far toward making the sense of hospitality apparent. The proper furnishing of the guest room deserves more consideration on the part of the hostess than it usually receives.

The hostess should think of the many small conveniences which make the stay of a guest in the home a time to be looked back upon with pleasure. A well placed reading lamp, a few timely books and above all a well appointed desk with stationery and a calendar are details which should not be overlooked in the guest room.

THE NEBBS — Experience — —By Sol Hess

City of Lawrence, Kan., To Get Quantrell's Flag

By The Associated Press.

EL PASO, Texas, Oct. 28.—The flag said to be that which William Clark Quantrell, guerilla chief of the Civil War period, carried during many of his raids has been preserved and is in possesion of S. H. Sutherland of El Paso.

During the Quantrell excursions, according to the story related by Sutherland, who now is 65 years of age, the flag was carried by Jack Swartz. Swartz is said to have died at Las Cruces, N. M., 25 years ago and to have expressed the desire that the flag be buried with him. The wish was not granted, however, and Sutherland claims to have obtained it.

The emblem, according to Sutherland, was carried in the raid on Lawrence, Kansas, on the morning of August 3, 1863, when 110 persons were killed.

Quantrel, according to Sutherland, was a school teacher in Lawrence before the Civil War. He took up the cause of the Confederacy and organized his guerilla band when the war began. His record shows Quantrell was shot in a running fight with farmers and died in a military prison at Louisville, Ky., June 6, 1865.

Sutherland says he intends to give the flag to the City of Lawrence.

Avoiding Further Complications.

"Are you expecting the government to do something for the farmer?"

"I dunno's I am," replied Farmer Corntossel, "I don't expect much speed from the government, and it 'uses up about all the patience I've got waitin' fur rain."—Washington Star.

MONEY At Work

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.

It is a good idea in buying a bond to be sure that you are paying for what you want. Everybody doesn't want the same kind of a bond.

Let your banker or bond house know just what you want, before they start recommending bonds for you. Often an investor pays for something he doesn't want.

Take, for instance, convertible bonds which usually sell for higher prices than equally safe bonds that do not carry the conversion privilege.

An example of this class is the Anaconda Mining company 15 year seven per cent debentures of 1938 which are convertible into common stock. Because of this feature the bonds are more attractive, and they sell at a higher price than equally good non convertible issues.

But there is no reason for anyone who is looking merely for safety to pay extra for the convertibility feature on these 7's. Buy the first mortgage 6's of the same company and pay only for what you want, no more.

Mannheim Castle, Date Back to 1720

By The Associated Press.

MANNHEIM, Oct. 28.—Mannheim Castle, which the French recently took over, is the largest in Germany. Before the recent revolution it was the home of the Grand Duke of Baden, who now occupies a smaller castle which he owns in Freiburg. After the revolution the castle was used for municipal offices until the French took it over. The building has a length of 600 metres and contins 1,200 rooms. It stands in a park of more than 14 acres. The castle was begun in 1720 by the Electors Carl Philip and Carl Theodore and is regarded as one of the finest baroque buildings in Germany. It contains a museum, art gallery and chapel. The French have evacuated all German offices and closed the building to the public.

KAY SPEAKS ON WORLD'S PEACE

Bad Weather Reduces Attendance; "Castles in Spain"

Judge John C. Kay delivered the following address to the Kay Bible class at the Olympic theatre yesterday, bad weather reducing the attendence to 105.

"The Greek first woman, the Eve of the Greeks, was Pandora. Pandora opened a box and let out all the troubles on the world, and kept just one thing back in the box, and that was hope.

"Now, it is a peculiar thing, when you think about it, that it is your hope that furnishes all the driving power of your life. Every good man, every ambitious man, every man who is willing to work, is filled, or ought to be filled, with hope. Looking forward to a better, brighter day. That is the source for power that drives us forward.

"That is what the prophets were talking about here—a better time in the future. I think there is no man that doesn't build his castles in Spain, that doesn't create right out of the blue in his own mind and conscience a finer situation than that that he is living in. Do you do that? That man who does not build his castles of the mind must have very little, indeed, in him; very little looking forward, and his heart must be very weak if he doesn't build something in his mind for the future, something better, something stronger, than he has known before.

"Now, this prophet was telling the people that the time was coming when they were going to take their military workers and make them into agricultural workers. That's a great time. Men have thought about that for ages. It is the great question in the world today. It was strong in the conscience and in the life of this prophet, who said that they would take the sword and make it into a plowshare. And, that question—and that question alone—fills the newspapers today with more columns than any question that has ever faced the world.

"Now you men, when you read the papers, think that nothing is being done about world peace. I hear men say that the government has hid its head in the sand like an ostrich, and is not trying to do anything with world peace; that it is trying to disregard and hide itself from Europe. That's only shallow thinking. Let me say to you this morning, that I believe that men like Mr. Hughes are doing, and trying to do whatever can be done to bring about a better and a brighter world, all over the world. These things cannot be dne in a day, or in an hour, but it takes time, and thought, and effort, and patience to bring it about. So, let's don't go out here and cry out against our government, and against the magistrates, and against the authorities, because they fail to do in a day that that never was done before in all the tide of time.

"To use an illustration: You remember about Jonah and the gourd vine. Ah, how little and how selfish we can get sometimes. Here was Jonah, one of the greatest men and one of the greatest preachers that the world ever saw, over there in that hot country, and he had a gourd vine grow up for shade, and the gourd vine died, a worm cut it down, and he didn't have any shade. He gourd vine was gone. Now, because he had lost that little piece of shade, he wanted the whole city of Nineveh destroyed. I have lost my shade, Texas is not fit to live in. Did you ever feel that way? I lost my money at Burkburnett, therefore, the oil business is the rottenest business in the world and everybody that is in it ought to be in jail! Are you that way? Here is Jonah, who wanted to destroy a town as big as San Antonio, and all the women, and children, and even the cows, and wanted them slain utterly because his gourd vine died.

"Now, what has that got to do with this world peace that I was talking about? How come that to be mixed up with this? Just everything. It is because each nation, and each individual, would keep at all hazards its own gourd vine and let the world go hang. That's the reason that we do not have world pence. And the Lord said to Jonah: 'Here's 120,000 people. Now, you want Me to go out there and kill all these people, all these little babies, all the livestock in town, because your gourd vine died?' A fellow has felt that way sometimes, I expect, when he ran for an office. He didn't feel like doing much for the world right after that.

"When does this prophet say that these things would come about? This wonderful time in the future? It is to come about after the coming of the Savior and when men seek to follow Him. You know what the book says, and what the Savior says all through the book. He never said much about doctrine, but He says everywhere: 'Follow Me! Follow Me. Follow My life.' That's the great doctrine of religion, is to follow Him, and these prophets were talking about that and, the reason that they did not have world peace, and the reason that we do not have it, is because we are seeking everything except to be religious.

"Now, did you ever stop to think that war—war is often just crime on a large scale; not necessarily by both peoples, but what was war that was begun in Germany but crime itself? Lots of us do not know what we are talking about, when we get out here and get to talking for war. These boys who went over to France know. They know! Now, what can the church do about that, and what can religious men do about it?

"I see in the newspaper this morning that they have called on 150,000 preachers in the United States to use their influence to stop war. Whether they will do that, of course, I do not know. I am inclined to think that most of them will. Is it worth while to stop it? War is the great burden that is on the back of labor. England, today, is still paying the interest on the bonds that were issued to pay for Queen Annie's war before your great grandfather was ever born. It is the great burden, I say, on the back of labor. It is the burden on the back of the church. It is the burden on the back of the educational system of the country, and upon good roads, and a burden upon everything that we would seek to do to advance civilization, and it is a march backward and downward if we go into war, if it can be avoided.

"Let me give you a little example. Why is it that the foreigners who come to these shores are about six inches lower than the tall American? It is because of oppression and depression, and the hard struggle for existence that the people of central Europe, when they come here, are not more than that high. Not all of them, but most of them.

"These things are worth stopping. Well, how are you going to do it? You are going to do this by beginning with yourself. We can have a good government, and a good country, and a good world, if it has got enough of good men in it, and that is the only way you can have it. You cannot go out here and just simply save the world by writing a platform. It has been tried. You cannot go out here and save the world, or even help the world, by the passing of a law. We have eight thousand different laws right here in Texas. You cannot save the world that way. It cannot be done. Lots of the statutes I have never read, and I have been a minister about the altar of the law since I was a boy. Some of them I never sim to read. But, we have got them, and it won't save us. We have got to raise a citizenship that is above the law. As I said to you last Sunday, we have got to have enough good men in every community so that the law is respected.

"If you want to save the world—(I used to, when I was younger, try to go out and save it politically, but the treatment that I gave it never lasted but a few days) but, if you would save the world, and save Texas, and save Wichita Falls, you must begin by saving yourself, and not by going out here and talking about the woes of the world, when you haven't cleaned house at home, yet. Now, that is what is the matter with us; that is the reason we do not care who goes to the legislature, and to congress, and who is elected judge. We do not care about those things.

"Some fellows are running around talking about manhood sufferage. That sounds good. All that means is not to have any poll tax and let everybody that is 21 years old vote. Now, I would be for manhood sufferage, if it meant manhood. I heard a very strong man in Texas say he hadn't voted in 10 years, because his vote was always killed by some ignorant fellow's vote. He said he considered himself a strong, fine man, and he didn't want to cast a vote with that kind of a man. Those are some of the reasons why we do have war is because people neglect their citizenship, and neglect their religion, and forget God. Pay no attention, just going along tending to their own private affairs.

"Now, will this time ever come when they take the cannon and fould them into something more useful? When they will take the spear and would it into a pruning hook? Will that time come? This book says that it will.

"Many thousands of great men have thught that such a time will come, but it cannot come until men get more nearly perfect than they are now. It cannot come in a community where a whole page of the newspaper was devoted to locking things up, as one page was in our paper this morning. World peace cannot come until men are ready for it and fit for it. Think about that a little bit. I have tried to say something to you there. That, world peace can never come until men are ready and fit to receive it. Are they ready now? Can our secretary of state make a treaty now for a people like our people? Can our secretary of state, when he goes to write a treaty with other nations, can he assume that every citizen here is a good citizen and having the welfare of his country at heart? Can he write that kind of a treaty now? No! He has got to write what men call a practical treaty. Whatever that is.

"Now, these prophets were saying this for themselves, and for their people, and for you. Their words were lost on their people. They made their great effort without ever seeing it bear any fruit. They came at last to see Jerusalem a heap of stone, where the owl, jackal and the badger lived. All their talk, and all their effort was lost on their own people. Now, is their talk, and their effort, and their energy, and their wisdom, to be lost on you, even if it was on those people? He tells these people that they can stop war, not by creed, not by law, not with the cannon's mouth, but you can stop it by being righteous. Is it too great a price to pay? Is it too much for our people, in order to escape war, to be righteous, and to be clean? That is what He said it would take to stop it, and that is the only way, He says, that will stop it, is the righteousness of the people. Righteousness! That is a fine word. A righteous man!"

Designers At Home and Abroad Vie in Making Intriguing Negligee

Have you visited the negligee department in any of the shops lately? Well don't go if you need a negligee and haven't a nice, fat pocketbook. Not that the things are so high priced. Very reasonable, considering the garments.

And the colors and combination of colors! Rose, apricot, blues, greys, with bright colored linings. Here are three filmy things that are wonderfully intriguing. On the left a breakfast coat of palest flesh tint chiffon trimmed with flounces of fine shadow lace and metallized ribbon. Some of these breakfast peignors are slipovers, straight slips of crepe or crepe de chine with loose chiffon sleeves. Many of the garments are made of a wonderful silk corduroy called "waterfall."

The Japanese kimono's latest development is shown on the right. It it gorgeous in color albeit a trifle futuristic in its color scheme. A brilliant blue background shows "dogwood" blossoms in purple and white. The lining is a vivid red. Some of the latest peignors show the Chinese influence rather than the Japanese. Heavy materials with vivid colored linings and mandarin sleeves were some of these. Chinese beads were used on the girdle of another smart robe.

Embroidered orchid chiffon is used on the last model illustrated. The plain chiffon is used on the bottom and a corsage of French ribbon flowers catches it up at the left side.

The wonderful quilted robes shown make one long to smuggle down in their softness, and then there are those lined with lamb' wool and some velvet and corduroy ones with the softest imaginable fur outlining neck and sleeves. Reversible materials are alsoused for some of the heavier robes and even camel's hair, looking to the uninitiated like top coats gone astray or visiting in the negligee department.
