Abbott praises boom, vows to shrink government

By Maggie Hyde
MRT Correspondent

Attorney General Greg Abbott vowed, during a Permian Basin campaign stop, to scale back government and promote free enterprise across Texas if he is elected governor. In a Thursday evening speech to a crowd of workers and supporters gathered at the Compressor Systems plant operated by the Warren Equipment Co., Abbott said the area's economic success could serve as an example for the rest of the state.

"I'm so proud of the job creators here," he said.

Abbott also announced the tenets of his Texans Working plan, which he said will help address the top concern of many Texans: jobs.

The plan hinges on several measures that would limit state government. One would be a state constitutional limit on government expansion — that it should not exceed population growth and inflation.

"Increasingly, we are seeing government as a hindrance, rather than a help," he said.

He also said if elected in 2014, he would push for the governor's office to be given greater veto power to cut unnecessary programs and spending. He also plans to constitutionally limit the use of the state's rainy day fund to instances of unforeseen budget shortfalls, one-time infrastructure projects and disasters. The rainy day fund has reached dangerously low levels in past years as a result of policymakers' indiscriminate use, he said.

The state's debt should also be reined in, Abbott said, by constitutionally prohibiting unfunded state mandates to local governments, which he said have caused many cities to take on more and more debt. He also said he would introduce a citizen-led commission to identify wasteful agencies, retiring the state's current "sunset commission" that is tasked with closing ineffectual programs.

"The key to unlimited economic opportunities is limiting the role of government," he said.

To assist the Permian Basin during the energy economic boom, Abbott also said he would work to make road and infrastructure improvements, and said he supported Proposition 6, which passed in the statewide elections on Tuesday. The proposition allows for using the state's rainy day fund to create accounts that could provide future solutions to regional water needs.

Abbott announced his candidacy in June, well ahead of his Democratic rival, Wendy Davis, who declared in early October she would run for the highest office in the state, though she had been expected for months to join the race. Abbott remains the strong favorite Republican candidate.

Recent polls differ on the spread between Abbott and Davis. An Oct. 2 Texas Lyceum Poll put Abbott ahead of Davis by 8 points, with his 29 percent to her 21. Fifty percent were undecided, with a margin of error of 3.47 percent-

Rusk program shows respect to, honors veterans

Rusk Elementary presented its 16th annual Veteran's Program at the Commemorative Air Force hangar Thursday.

During the first week of October, about 1,300 invitations went out to local and long-distance veterans. This program is based on the nine MISD character traits, as recited in the pledge that the children say each day. The program grew out of the study of "Citizenship" and the urgency to honor American veterans. The children pledge to "never forget" the service and sacrifice that has provided us the freedoms we practice every day.

The program is divided into three parts. In the first few minutes of the program, pledges are recited — this year led by first-grader Ayden Castillo — the Star Spangled Banner is sung and the school pledge is said. The microphone is then handed to a featured speaker. Our speaker this year was former Rusk principal, Vickie Shenk, who now resides in Houston. She is also a member of the Commemorative Air Force and having

Judge allows comptroller to intervene in lizard lawsuit

By Neena Satija
Texas Tribune

A federal judge has granted Comptroller Susan Combs the day in court she hoped for to address conservation of endangered species in Texas.

Combs asked earlier this year to intervene in a lawsuit over the dunes sagebrush lizard, a threatened reptile that calls West Texas' oil-rich Permian Basin home. The lawsuit, which the advocacy group Defenders of Wildlife filed against the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in June, alleges that a controversial plan Combs' office oversees to conserve the lizard's habitat is not adequate and that the lizard should be protected under the federal Endangered Species Act.

The federal agency declined to list the lizard as endangered in 2012, a decision based largely on Combs' conservation plan. While Texas officials applauded the decision, environmental advocates have decried Combs' plan, known as the Texas Conservation Plan, for being too secretive and for not providing enough protection for the lizard.

Combs was not a target of the lawsuit. But U.S. District Judge Rudolph Contreras ruled in late October that she could intervene in the lawsuit, along with a coalition of energy exploration companies that had also asked to intervene, including the Texas Oil and Gas Association (TXOGA).

"Comptroller Combs has an interest as the chief financial officer of the state of Texas in 'regulating environmental

FROM STAFF REPORTS

MPD: 4 teenagers arrested after more than 50 cases of vandalism

Four Midland teenagers were arrested Wednesday for their alleged involvement in more than 50 cases of vandalism that day, according to court documents.

Isaac Brien, 17, is being held on a second-degree felony charge of engaging in organized criminal activity.

Joshua L. Iglesias, 18, is being held on two second-degree felony charges of engaging in organized criminal activity.

Ian Kepple, 17, is being held on a state jail felony charge of engaging in organized criminal activity.

Kenneth E. Mansell, 18, is being held on a third-degree felony charge of criminal mischief between $20,000 and $100,000 and state jail felony charges of criminal mischief between $1,500 and $20,000 and engaging in organized criminal activity, according to the Midland County Sheriff's Office website.

A Midland police officer responded to a vandalized vehicle at about 8:30 a.m. Wednesday in the 3700 block of Tanner Drive.

The vehicle's right front passenger window had been shot out with a BB gun. Officers responded to more than 50 similar vandalism calls throughout the day, with total damage between $20,000 and $100,000, according to the arrest affidavit.

MPD initially reported that the suspects also broke business windows during this time, said Sara Higgins, public information officer for the city, but that information was not included in the affidavit.

Witnesses provided a description of the vehicle used by the suspects. It was located in the 5300 block of Lavace Court. The responding officer saw several BBs on the driver's seat. Kepple was found at the residence; Mansell, Iglesias and Brien were arrested at different locations, according to the report.

If convicted, the suspects face up to two years in prison for each state jail felony charge. Iglesias and Brien face up to 20 years in prison for each second-degree felony charge. Mansell faces up to 10 years in prison for the third-degree felony charge.

Jailer behind bars following burglary, attempted assault

A Midland County jailer was arrested Thursday for allegedly breaking into a woman's home to commit assault, according to her arrest affidavit.

Jessica Anne Caro, 22, is being held on a $10,000 bond for a first-degree felony charge of burglary of a habitation with intent to commit assault.

A Midland police officer responded to a disturbance at about 3:40 a.m. Thursday at an apartment complex in the 3400 block of North Midland Drive.

The officer found an apartment door broken at the deadbolt and slightly open. There were two women at the apartment. One woman told the officer she had an intimate relationship with Caro, who found out that she had started a relationship with the second woman, the apartment's resident.

The women said Caro arrived at the apartment complex and was yelling. Caro kicked at the apartment door, damaging it in the process. The women tried holding the door shut from the other side to prevent Caro from entering the apartment, according to the affidavit.

Caro entered the apartment and one of the women grabbed her and forced her to leave the apartment, according to the affidavit.

Caro was apprehended at her apartment, which was at another complex.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said Caro tendered her resignation Thursday afternoon.

If convicted, Caro faces five to 99 years in prison.

MPD to test for new police academy students

The Midland Police Department has several vacancies, including a couple of new positions approved for the 2013-2014 budget, and hopes to fill them in the upcoming police academy.

The process begins at 9 a.m. Saturday during open testing. Applicants should go to the MPD front lobby, 601 N. Loraine St., and present a photo ID. They will be tested on their physical strength and knowledge of law enforcement, said Sgt. Alfredo Grimaldo.

He said MPD is looking for people who can pass physical and written tests and a background check and who have a desire to work hard.

"We mainly want someone who wants to help out in the community and (will) be a good fit for our department," Grimaldo said.

He emphasized the importance of having a clean background. Many candidates will attempt to join the force but will be disqualified because of drug use, criminal activity or DWIs. He said convicted felons and applicants who have ever been charged with a class A or B misdemeanor are not eligible.

For the physical fitness test, applicants must be able to do a minimum of 30 sit-ups and 25 push-ups and run 1.5 miles in less than 14 minutes, 46 seconds. Candidates must pass the fitness test before proceeding to the written test, said Sara Higgins, public information officer for the city.

Applicants also must have at least 60 college credit hours, but those with fewer than 60 may still qualify depending on past military, police, jailer or corrections experience, Higgins said:

The next police academy begins in January and consists of 17 weeks of classroom training and 17 weeks of field training. Grimaldo said the process takes about six to eight months to complete before those officers are out patrolling the streets.

Recent high school graduates and college students with an interest in law enforcement can sign up to test for the cadet program. Those applicants undergo the same testing and must meet the same qualifications as police officer candidates, except for the education requirement.

Grimaldo said the department's paramilitary regimen provides the greatest challenge for academy students.

He urges anyone interested in pursuinge a career in law enforcement to protect their image and reputation by abstaining from activities that would lead to disqualification during the application process.

For information on the Midland Police Department's upcoming police academy, call the recruiting division at 685-7590, or visit www.midlandtexas.gov/291/Become-a-Police-Officer.

Texas has had fatality every day for past 13 years

Texas has not had a fatality-free day on the state's roadways since Nov. 7, 2000, according to a press release from the Texas Department of Transportation.

There have been 45,032 motor vehicle traffic deaths in the past 13 years. Despite a steady decline in traffic fatalities in recent years, Texas saw an 11 percent increase in fatalities from 2011 to 2012, according to the release.

"Having at least one person killed on a Texas road every single day for 13 years is a sobering reminder that we must drive carefully and do everything in our power to stay focused behind the wheel," said John Barton, TxDOT deputy executive director.

He also said people must take responsibility for their driving habits.

Alcohol continues to be a leading cause in traffic fatalities, with 13,544 alcohol-related fatalities since Nov. 7, 2000. Distracted driving has led to 2,719 fatalities and 5,469 people have died while not wearing a seat belt since Jan. 1, 2008.

AUSTIN

State toughens zebra mussel attack in 17 counties

A state commission has made permanent requirements for boaters to clean, dry and drain their watercraft before and after entering lakes and streams in 17 North Texas counties.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission voted without dissent Thursday in Austin to fix the requirements aimed at keeping invasive zebra mussels and their larvae from spreading.

Freshwater fisheries regulation coordinator Ken Kurzawski said Parks and Wildlife Department staff will begin drafting regulations extending to Bell and Coryell counties in Central Texas. That's after zebra mussels were found in Lake Belton, prompting an emergency "wash, dry and drain" order in September for Lake Belton, Stillhouse Hollow Lake and the Leon and Lampasas rivers.

Kuzawski said the proposal will probably be published for public comment in December and go before commissioners in January.

Teen accused of recruiting friends as prostitutes

Prosecutors in Texas have accused a 17-year-old girl of recruiting her girlfriends to have sex with a 62-year-old Houston-area businessman for money.

Galveston County prosecutor Adam Poole said the League City high school student solicited her "easily manipulated" friends to provide sex for Michael Wayne McIntosh at his home in Friendswood this past summer. Webster police detective David Nettles said the student would drive the girls to McIntosh's home and receive a percentage of more than $3,600 paid to the girls.

Police said the friends were as young as 14.

The alleged teen madam is charged with compelling prostitution. She's free on $40,000 bond.

McIntosh is charged with three counts of sexual assault on a child and is free on $120,000 bond.

AUSTIN

Most Texas wireless 911 calls lack location info

An advocacy group says two-thirds of all wireless 911 calls in Texas don't provide enough location information for the caller, violating federal requirements.

Find Me 911 Coalition reported Thursday that recent Federal Communications Commission data shows the rate of Texas wireless emergency callers with detailed location information has fallen by about half since 2011.

Statewide data released by the FCC shows that 403,571, or 67 percent, of the 601,106 wireless 911 calls in June didn't provide full location information.

Mostly, those calls only showed the location of the cell tower where the call originated.

The coalition includes first-responders and 911 dispatchers nationally. It said FCC rules require wireless calls to have location information to aid first-responders in an emergency.

Duncan announced that today's fourth- and eighth-graders are doing better than their predecessors in math and reading, but despite record high scores, it's too soon to start celebrating. The vast majority of students still are not demonstrating solid academic achievement in either subject, according to the Nation's Report Card, released Thursday.

NOT GOOD ENOUGH

Many students lack basic math, reading skills

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sometimes the best isn't good enough: Most American fourth- and eighth-graders still lack basic skills in math and reading despite record high scores on a national exam.

Yes, today's students are doing better than those who came before them. But the improvements have come at a snail's pace.

The 2013 Nation's Report Card released Thursday finds that the vast majority of the students still are not demonstrating solid academic performance in either math or reading. Stubborn gaps persist between the performances of white children and their Hispanic and African-American counterparts, who scored much lower.

Overall, just 42 percent of fourth-graders and 35 percent of eighth-graders scored at or above the proficient level in math. In reading, 35 percent of fourth graders and 36 percent of eighth graders hit that mark.

Still, as state and federal policies evolve in the post-No Child Left Behind era, the nation's school kids are doing better today on the test than they did in the early 1990s, when such tracking started, with more improvement in math than in reading. Students of all races have shown improvement over the years.

The results come from the National Assessment of Educational Progress, or NAEP, which is given every two years to a sample of fourth- and eighth-graders.

This year's results, compared to results in 2011, show average incremental gains of about one or two points on a 500-point scale in math and reading in both grades, although the one-point gain in fourth grade reading was not considered statistically significant.

"Every two years, the gains tend to be small, but over the long run, they stack up," said Jack Buckley, commissioner of the Education Department's National Center for Education Statistics.

Buckley said he was "heartened" by some of the results, "but there are also some areas where I'd hoped to see improvement where we didn't."

Today, President W. Bush's landmark education law No Child Left Behind, which sought to close achievement gaps among racial groups and have every student doing math and reading at grade level by 2014, has essentially been dismantled.

After Congress failed to update the law before it was due for renewal in 2007, President Barack Obama allowed states to get waivers from it if they showed they have their own plans to prepare students. Most states took him up on the offer.

Meanwhile, a majority of states are rolling out Common Core State Standards with the goal of better preparing the nation's students for college or a job. The states-led standards establish benchmarks for reading and math and replace goals that varied widely between states.

Academic scholars have long debated what effects the law and other state-led reforms have had on test scores.

This year, Tennessee and the District of Columbia, which have both launched high-profile efforts to strengthen education by improving teacher evaluations and by other measures, showed across-the-board growth on the test compared to 2011, likely stoking more debate. Only the Defense Department schools also saw gains in both grade levels and subjects.

In Hawaii, which has also seen a concentrated effort to improve teaching quality, scores also increased with the exception of fourth-grade reading. In Iowa and Washington state, scores increased except in eighth-grade math.

Specifically pointing to Tennessee, Hawaii and D.C., Education Secretary Arne Duncan said on a conference call with reporters that many of the changes seen in these states were "very, very difficult and courageous" and appear to have had an impact.

Chris Minnich, executive director of the Council of Chief State School Officers, said the biggest problem revealed in the results is the large gap that exists between the performances of students of different races.

There was a 26-point gap, for example, between how white and African American fourth graders performed on the math section. In eighth-grade reading, white students outperformed Hispanic students by 21 points.

Modest progress in reading, math

While more U.S. fourth and eighth graders are showing solid academic performance in reading and math, overall proficiency levels remain low.

A Nov. 4 poll of 500 Texans by Public Policy Polling, however, put Abbot 15 percentage points ahead of Davis, with a margin of error of 4.4 percentage points.

In an interview with the Reporter-Telegram, Abbott would not give a specific reaction to Davis' candidacy.

"There are a lot of people running," he said.

His campaign website features a petition opposing Davis, which it calls "Washington's candidate." The petition claims that Davis recast her stance on abortion after discovering that it was unpopular with Texas voters.

On Wednesday, Davis referred to herself as "pro-life," a semantic reversal in the controversial debate.

"I am pro-life," Davis told the Brownsville Herald. "I care about the life of every child: every child that goes to bed hungry, every child that goes to bed without a proper education, every child that goes to bed without being able to be a part of the Texas dream, every woman and man who worry about their children's future and their ability to provide for that future. I care about life and I have a record of fighting for people above all else."

Abbott also pledged Thursday to continue his staunch opposition of President Barack Obama's policies. As Texas attorney general, he claims to have sued Obama's administration 30 times; his latest lawsuits are over constitutionality of the Affordable Health Care law. The Supreme Court ruled in favor of the law. Most recently he has filed a suit against the law, saying it violates patient confidentiality.

"We are seeing the implementation is a complete disaster," Abbott said of the health insurance law changes.

Abbott's words about fewer taxes struck a chord with Edward Olivarez, 35, a welder at the compression plant.

"The fact that he mentioned he wanted to limit government and reduce taxes, I liked that," he said. "I hope he wins."

been gone from Midland for two years, was happy to come and share some thoughts with the veterans.

Our congressman, Mike Conaway, also spoke to the veterans. He has spoken at our veterans' program before, and we welcomed him again as he has a real heart for veterans. Rusk was also privileged to have Superintendent Ryder Warren in attendance, as well as our new principal, Leslie Goodrum, and assistant principal, Dora Flores.

As always, Sharon Morgan, who was Rusk physical education teacher for 20 years and who helped establish this tradition, attended to thank our sponsors and help draw winners of the Southwest Airlines raffle.

Our annual "USO Show", featured the fifth- and sixth-graders from Rusk "entertaining the troops" through song and dance and a few "shenanigans."

The last portion of the program is our favorite time of the day. We sing the "Armed Forces Medley" and are thrilled to watch the veterans stand when their song plays and students can see the people who represented America in the military. Taps was played by John Williams, a Vietnam veteran. He has attended many Rusk programs, but this was his first time to play taps for us. Mickey Cunningham sang "You Raise Me Up" as students went into the audience to give a special gift to each veteran and thank them for their service. The Patriot Guard helped us usher the veterans to sack lunches provided by H-E-B as they leave in a "grand exit" and find a class of students to picnic with.

The students get to see, visit with and thank and honor veterans in a firsthand experience. This is the best part of the program. We all look forward to this special day. The veterans have told us the same. The study and the understanding of the special veterans we honor on this day is part of the great tradition of Rusk. Thank you, veterans, for all you do and have done for us.

The event is developed by myself and physical education teacher Crista MacPherson, but it takes the entire faculty and staff to make it work.

quality and also protecting its financial and socioeconomic stake in oil, gas and agricultural production in the Permian Basin,'" Contreras wrote, quoting from Combs' own request.

The lawsuit could have major implications for the future of endangered species conservation in Texas, and for the oil and gas industry, whose activities could be severely limited if the lizard is given federal protections. Speaking on a recent conservation panel in Washington, D.C., Combs defended her plan for the lizard, which was set up by TXOGA lobbyists. Under the plan, which Combs says could be a model for the nation, oil and gas companies that want to develop in the Permian Basin pay other landowners to conserve lizard habitat. Much of the information about where and how conservation is occurring under the plan is kept private.

The Permian Basin Petroleum Association told the Reporter-Telegram it had no comment on the ruling.

Contreras' ruling is a victory for Combs, who said in a statement, "The judge's decision ensures that stakeholders who worked on an important lizard conservation plan have a say in the proceedings. The plan is part of our continuing efforts to help Texas strike an appropriate balance between environmental protection and economic growth."

Defenders of Wildlife also celebrated the ruling — for an entirely different reason.

"That Comptroller Susan Combs has been granted intervention in the case is great news; perhaps now the state will explain the violations in the conservation agreements that have resulted in harm to the lizard and damage to its habitat," said Ya-Wei Li, an attorney for the organization.

No more trans fat: FDA banning the artery-clogger

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Heart-clogging trans fats were once a staple of the American diet, plentiful in baked goods, microwave popcorn and fried foods. Now, mindful of the health risks, the Food and Drug Administration is getting rid of what's left of them.

Condemning artificial trans fats as a threat to public health, the FDA announced Thursday it will require the food industry to phase them out.

Manufacturers already have eliminated many trans fats, responding to criticism from the medical community and to local laws. Even so, the FDA said getting rid of the rest — the average American still eats around a gram of trans fat a day — could prevent 20,000 heart attacks and 7,000 deaths each year.

It won't happen right away. The agency will collect comments for two months before determining a phase-out timetable. Different foods may have different schedules, depending how easy it is to find substitutes.

"We want to do it in a way that doesn't unduly disrupt markets," said Michael Taylor, FDA's deputy commissioner for foods. Still, he said the food "industry has demonstrated that it is, by and large, feasible to do."

Indeed, so much already has changed that most people won't notice much difference, if any, in food they get at grocery stores or restaurants.

Scientists said there are no health benefits to trans fats. And they can raise levels of "bad" cholesterol, increasing the risk of heart disease, the leading cause of death in the United States. Trans fats are widely considered the worst kind for the heart, even worse than saturated fats, which also can contribute to heart disease.

Trans fats are used both in processed foods and in restaurants, often to improve the texture, shelf life or flavor of foods. Though they have been removed from many items, the fats are still found in some baked goods such as pie crusts and biscuits and in ready-to-eat frostings that use the more solid fats to keep consistency.

They also are sometimes used by restaurants for frying. Many larger chains have phased them out, but smaller restaurants may still get food containing trans fats from suppliers.

How can the government get rid of them? The FDA said it has made a preliminary determination that trans fats no longer fall in the agency's "generally recognized as safe" category, which covers thousands of additives that manufacturers can add to foods without FDA review. Once trans fats are off the list, anyone who wants to use them would have to petition the agency for a regulation allowing it, and that would likely not be approved.

The fats are created when hydrogen is added to vegetable oil to make it more solid, which is why they are often called partially hydrogenated oils. The FDA is not targeting small amounts of trans fats that occur naturally in some meat and dairy products, because they would be too difficult to remove and aren't considered a major public health threat on their own.

Rhetoric doesn't match Obamacare reality

■ President continues to tell untruths even though he knows Americans will find an alternate ending

CHARLES KRATHAMMER
Washington Post Writers Group

"Obama to campaign to ensure health law's success"
— The New York Times, Nov. 4

The Obamacare website doesn't work. Hundreds of thousands of insured Americans are seeing their plans summarily terminated. Millions more face the same prospect next year. Confronted with a crisis of governance, how does President Obama respond?

He campaigns.

"I've got one more campaign in me," he told grass-roots supporters Monday — a series of speeches and rallies, explains The New York Times, "to make sure his signature health care law works."

Campaigning to make something work? How does that work? Presidential sweet-talk persuades the nonfunctional Web portal to function?

This odd belief that rhetoric trumps reality leads to strange scenes. Like the ShamWow pitch, Obama's nationally televised address trying to resell Obamacare. Don't worry about the website, he said. I'll get it fixed. And besides, there are alternatives, such as an 800 number that he promptly gave out. Twice.

You half expected him to offer a ShamWow special: Add the mop and get a free year of Obamacare! But the 800 number was more than bad form. It was bad substance. Turns out you can give all the information you want to the person at the other end of the line — or to your friendly community "navigator" — but that person must enter your data into the very same nonfunctioning website.

Doesn't Obama know this? Does he really think that this TV campaign would work when anybody who actually does what he suggests would find himself still stuck in the same cul-de-sac?

And yet he tried precisely the same tack when the second crisis — the canceled policies — struck.

Last Wednesday, he simply denied reality and said he really hasn't changed his message from when he promised in June 2009: "If you like your health care plan, you'll be able to keep your health care plan. Period."

Instead of simply admitting he was wrong, he goes Clintonian, explaining that the pledge only applied to certain specified plans — which he now says he meant all along. Alas, this is one case of death by punctuation. "Period" means without caveats, modifications, loopholes or escape hatches.

Having denied the obvious deception, the president proceeds to say that, well, anyway, you'll be better off under the plan my health care experts have imposed on you.

But many of those getting notices will find this equally untrue: Their new plan is likely to carry a higher premium and a bigger deductible and cut them off from their current doctor.

Does Obama really think that recipients of those notices — millions of them — won't notice that? Even the mainstream media have featured dozens of interviews with people tossed off plans they like — only to be offered expensive, less attractive Obama-mandated alternatives.

Obamacare proponents who live in the real world might admit that they intended to cancel people's individual plans all along because kicking people off individual policies is at the heart of populating the health exchanges. You must cancel the good, less frilly plans because forcing these people into more expensive plans (that they don't need) produces the inflated rates that subsidize the health care of others.

The more honest Obamacare advocates are in effect admitting that to make this omelet you have to break 8 million eggs — roughly the number of people with individual plans who are expected to lose them. Obama, however, goes on as if he can conjure omelets out of thin air.

This rather bizarre belief in the unlimited power of the speech arises from Obama's biography. Isn't that how he rose? Words. It's not as if he built a company, an enterprise, an institution. He built one thing — his own persona. By persuasion. One great speech in 2004 propels him to the presidential level. More great speeches and he wins the White House.

But then comes governance. A speech in Cairo, utterly crushed by the Arab Spring. Talk of a Russian reset, repeatedly thrown back at him by a contemptuous Russian dictator. Fifty-four speeches to get health care enacted — only to see it now imperiled by the reality of its ruinous rollout and broken promises.

I'm not surprised that Obama tells untruths. He's surely not the only politician to do so. I'm just surprised that he chooses to tell such obvious ones — ones that will inevitably be found out.

Who will tell Obama that lies so transparent render rhetoric not just useless but ridiculous?

OUR VIEW

Competitive local elections always beat the alternative

Laurels

■ For contested races. The Reporter-Telegram is thankful that the Midland City Council races bucked the recent trend communitywide of not having competitive elections. And while we believe this community punted when it came to debating the big needs and challenges facing Midland, having competitive elections is better than the alternative. We have some concern about how the process played out. There were elements in this race that haven't been an issue to the same degree in previous elections. We support any Midlander's desire to disseminate information to the electorate. But if this prevents good candidates from running because they believe their reputation will be smeared, there is reason for concern. We fear that what occurred in the mayoral race will keep needed leaders from running for offices, no matter the taxing entity.

■ For Ruth Sloan. The Midland County Elections Office administrator continues to surpass all expectations when it comes to conducting elections. The people of Midland County should know that Sloan continues the tradition of making sure members of the public have all the information they need to make the voting process as smooth and fair as possible. She and the rest of the Elections Office staff did so while under the biggest microscope one can imagine with the Voter ID process put into effect. Sloan also has been a pleasure for this newspaper to work with, and she deserves a pat on the back for a job well done.

■ For Scarborough/Linebery House. The facility that is the city's second oldest home annually hosts an open house to kick off the Christmas season. Familes had the opportunity on Sunday to tour the decorated home, enojoy Christmas cookies and visit with Santa. What a nice way to spend an afternoon before the busy holiday season begins.

■ For SHARE (Sharing Hands, a Respite Experience). The local organization is hosting a celebration for siblings of special-needs children. The Saturday event is all about the siblings, who often feel left out and resentful that their parents don't seem to have time for them. We hope the kids have a great time, and we want them to know: you are loved! And thanks to the great job done by Malissa Roach, SHARE's program director.

■ For undefeated football records. With wins tonight, the Midland Christian and Lee football teams accomplish a pair of remarkable feats having to do with winning all their games on a schedule. With a victory, Midland Christian will go undefeated in the regular season for the first time under head coach Greg McClendon (the same coach who has won six TAPPS titles at MCS). Lee, with a victory, will go perfect in district competition for the first time since 1999. In Rebel land, that's just too long.

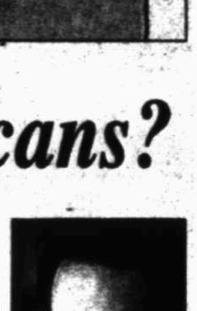
Is Christie the one for Republicans?

■ New Jersey governor needs to convince GOP that the goal is about winning in 2016 and he's the one who can do so.



CAL THOMAS
Tribune Media Agency

Last August before a closed meeting of Republican leaders in Boston, Gov. Chris Christie, of New Jersey, said, "We are not a debating society. We are a political operation that needs to win."

Tuesday night, Christie won. Big time. In one of the nation's bluest states, Christie got 60.5 percent of the vote. His Democratic opponent, Barbara Buono, claims she lost because "Democratic political bosses" made a deal with Christie "despite him representing almost everything they're against. ... They did it to help themselves politically and financially." In other words, they voted out of self-interest. Imagine that. Self-interest in politics.

"I didn't seek a second term to do small things," Christie said Tuesday night. "I sought a second term to finish the job. Now watch me do it."

It was the first Christie speech I have seen in several months and it was the first time I didn't think of his weight before considering his words. Christie, who had lap-band surgery to lose weight, appears committed to slimming down and looks good. If he can drop another 50 to 100 pounds, he could be in shape for 2016. After demonstrating his ability to attract Democrats and independents during his re-election campaign, Christie must be considered the front-runner for the Republican presidential nomination.

"A political celebrity" is what Newark Star-Ledger reporter Jenna Portnoy called him in her Election Night story. The last time Republicans had one of those, his name was Ronald Reagan.

Christie does more than dump on Washington's gridlock and dysfunction. He contrasts his accomplishments with Washington's failures. It's not only style, but substance. As when he said Tuesday night: "I know that if we can do this in Trenton, New Jersey, then maybe the folks in Washington, D.C., should tune in to their TVs right now and see how it's done."

Virtually everyone runs against Washington, but none have been able to slay the dragon. That's because changing Washington ought not be the goal; the goal should be to change ourselves and our attitudes about government. Virtually everyone dislikes "Washington," but when it comes to giving up a favorite program, they resist. If Christie seeks the presidency, he will have to say what he will eliminate and how he will do it, as well as tell voters they must do more for themselves. The force of his personality will not be enough. Few change Washington. Usually Washington changes them.

For Christie to have a successful run at the presidency, he might assemble a bipartisan group of advisers. If he has Democrats working with him, that would make it more difficult for them to attack him, giving him the chance to replicate nationally what he has done in New Jersey. He doesn't have to compromise his principles. He should focus on what works. It's one thing to take on the unions in New Jersey, for example. It's quite another to take them on nationally.

Should Christie run for president, the national media initially will be torn between a sure-fire ratings booster like Christie and the possibility of the first woman president. Ultimately, it'll be no contest. Media will likely back Hillary Clinton.

But Hillary Clinton can be beaten. After all, Barack Obama did it. In 2008, it was a choice for Democrats between Clinton and the first African-American president. That choice won't be as profound, or as historic, in two years. Christie will have to run on a platform of knowing how to succeed, which puts Clinton at a disadvantage, since her list of accomplishments is meager, if not nonexistent.

The conservative wing of the GOP will have to decide whether they want purity or victory. No politician (including the sainted Reagan) is perfect.

At the August GOP gathering in Boston, Christie said, "I'm in this business to win ... if we don't win, we don't govern. And if we don't govern, all we do is shout into the wind...."

This country needs someone who will govern. Is Christie the one?

Senate OKs gay rights bill banning discrimination

Reflecting Americans' increasing acceptance of gays, the Senate on Thursday approved legislation that would bar workplace discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity.

Gay rights advocates hailed the bipartisan, 64-32 vote as an historic step although it could prove short-lived. A foe of the bill, Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, has signaled that the Republican-led House is unlikely to even vote.

Seventeen years after a similar anti-discrimination measure failed by one vote, 54 members of the Senate Democratic majority and 10 Republicans voted for the Employment Non-Discrimination Act. It is the first major gay rights bill since Congress repealed three years ago the ban on gays serving openly in the military.

"All Americans deserve a fair opportunity to pursue the American dream," said Sen. Susan Collins, R-Maine, a chief sponsor of the bill.

Proponents cast the effort as Congress following the lead of business and localities as some 90 percent of Fortune 500 companies and 22 states have outlawed employment discrimination against gay, bisexual and transgender Americans.

Supporters described it as the final step in a long congressional fight against discrimination, coming nearly 50 years after enactment of the Civil Rights Act and 23 years after the Americans with Disabilities Act.

"Now we've finished the trilogy," said Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, a chief sponsor of the disabilities law, at a Capitol Hill news conference.

Two Republican senators who voted against anti-discrimination legislation in 1996, Arizona's John McCain, the presidential nominee in 2008, and Orrin Hatch of Utah, backed the measure this time. Alaska Republican Sen. Lisa Murkowski voted in favor; her father, Frank, opposed a similar bill nearly two decades ago, underscoring the generational shift.

DES MOINES

Potential Perry 2.0 Iowa return far quieter

DES MOINES — This time, there were no satellite TV trucks, media throngs or fawning Republicans awaiting his arrival.

As he weighs whether to run for president again, Gov. Rick Perry returned Thursday to this leadoff presidential caucus state for the first time since his flameout during his first White House bid last year. His arrival was much more muted than before.

"I would do a number of things differently," Perry told a small group of mostly local reporters on hand at the start of a two-day trip. He planned to meet privately with political leaders and business groups, the quiet work typical of more successful presidential campaigns.

Reminded he was in Iowa far earlier than he was the first time he ran, Perry quipped: "That would certainly be one of the things I would do differently."

Among the other things he's doing this time: introducing himself to Iowans more deliberately.

Perry met Thursday with Iowa's Republican Gov. Terry Branstad and GOP Lt. Gov. Kim Reynolds and was scheduled to headline in Des Moines the annual Republican fall fundraising dinner in Iowa's most populous county. He plans to return in December.

The stakes are high, given how far and fast Perry fell before.

"Making a first impression a second time is hard, very hard," said David Carney, Perry's chief strategist as governor and in his 2012 presidential campaign.

A full year before those caucuses, rumors spread about a possible Perry campaign as Republicans looked for an alternative to front-runner Mitt Romney.

With folksy charm and an outsider's pitch, the conservative Perry didn't get into the race until the summer of 2011. During his first Iowa visit that August just after announcing his candidacy, he was smothered by media and photo-grabbing GOP activists as he moved from table to table at a Republican banquet in the north part of the state.

PHILADELPHIA

Voters elect a Whig to public office

Voters in Philadelphia have elected a Whig to public office for what the victor believes may be the first time in nearly 160 years.

Robert "Heshy" Bucholz, a member of the Modern Whig party, campaigned door-to-door and won 36 votes to his Democratic opponent's 24 on Tuesday to become an election judge in the city's Rhawnhurst section.

Election judges, who serve four-year terms, receive about $100 annually and are responsible for overseeing equipment and procedures at the polls.

Now a heavily Democratic city, Philadelphia's last Whig mayor was elected in 1854. It's hard to verify whether Whigs won any lower offices after that, said Stephanie Singer, one of three commissioners overseeing local elections.

Previously an independent, Bucholz said he joined the Whigs three years ago because of their fiscally conservative but socially liberal views. They represent a sensible "middle path" between Democrats and Republicans, especially in light of the recent government shutdown, he said.

"That pretty much told us we can't trust either party and the system is broken," Bucholz said Thursday.

Four U.S. presidents were Whigs in the mid-1800s. The party largely disappeared in the 20th century, but was revived in 2007 by veterans of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan who were upset at the lack of bipartisanship in Washington, according to the group's website.

The Modern Whigs have about 30,000 members nationwide, Chairman Andrew Evans said. Bucholz and J. Brendan Galligan, who serves on the school board in Westfield, N.J., are the only two currently holding elected positions, he said.

Bucholz, a 39-year-old engineer, admitted to being "a little bewildered" by the attention to his win, noting that his wife, Dinah, is usually the one getting publicity.

Dinah Bucholz is the author of "The Unofficial Harry Potter Cookbook." A registered Republican, she won a term on Tuesday as an election inspector.

PRAYERS for the PERSECUTED

Midland-Odessa to host International Day of Prayer events

By Ragini Venkatasubban
ragini@mrt.com

On the morning of Feb. 7, Ibrahim Makunyi was riding down a highway in his native Kenya when he noticed a car following closely behind him. He was seated in the passenger seat, and a friend from Somalia was driving. The two were returning from an errand at the bank.

His memory is hazy on what happened next, but Makunyi was the first one shot, the bullet entering his upper arm and exiting through his chest. Despite his confusion, he clearly remembers a hand holding a pistol and pointing at his Somali friend next.

"The bullet hit (my friend) and he was still," Makunyi said. "Seated, he rose up and leaned on the steering wheel — and died."

Such violence is not uncommon to Makunyi, a Christian pastor at the East Africa Pentecostal Church in Garissa, Kenya. His church has been attacked before, he said. He attributes the violence to al-Shabab, a militant Islamic group in Somalia that has been linked to al-Qaida.

Makunyi will speak this weekend at Awake the Nations: An International Day of Prayer for the Persecuted Church, a two-day event in the Permian Basin that aims to inspire Christians to pray for persecuted Christians around the world. The day of prayer is a global event, and Midland-Odessa have been chosen as the host cities for 2013.

The event will be hosted by Awake 7:14, Watch and Pray International Ministries and

Erik Estrada to speak at film screening in Midland

By Ragini Venkatasubban
ragini@mrt.com

Actor-turned-police officer Erik Estrada, famous for his co-starring lead role in the police television series "CHiPs," will visit Midland next week to speak at a screening of his latest film, "Finding Faith."

The film will be shown at 6 p.m. Monday at St. Mark's United Methodist Church, 1701 N. Main St.

"Finding Faith" is a faith-based film, based on real events, about a young teenager kidnapped from a meeting planned online. The movie aims to educate parents and young people about Internet safety and the dangers of "online grooming," the process of priming a young person for abduction through the Internet.

Erik Estrada will speak Monday at a screening of his film "Finding Faith," at St. Mark's United methodist Church.

In email correspondence with the Reporter-Telegram, Estrada shared insights on his acting career, his life in law enforcement and how he hopes his latest film will educate viewers on the dangers of Internet crimes against children.

MRT: As a police officer, what inspired you to turn to acting?

Estrada: Actually, I was an actor before I was a cop. Growing up, I always thought I would be a NYC police officer, since my mom had dated a cop for many years, and he was a wonderful man, which instilled in me a love for law enforcement. But, I was bitten by the acting bug when I was 18, and decided to pursue that, landing the role of Nicky Cruz in "The Cross and the Switchblade" when I was 19. I followed that career path for many years, including my

'The Bridge' offers contemporary worship at First Presbyterian Church

Editor's note: Every few weeks, MRT staff writer Ragini (rhymes with mahogany) Venkatasubban will visit a different religious gathering in the Permian Basin and write about her experience. The column serves to give readers, especially those who are new to Midland, a glimpse inside West Texas churches, temples and religious communities.

RAGINI VENKATASUBBAN
rvenkatasubban@mrt.com

"New worship, ancient faith" is the tagline of The Bridge at First Presbyterian Church, a contemporary alternative to the church's more traditional services.

Held in a converted chapel off the sanctuary, with rugged architecture and a stained glass cross on the wall, The Bridge offers contemporary Christian music and a hands-on atmosphere. The congregation interacts with the pastor through call-and-answer psalm readings and weekly creative projects.

Last Sunday, I attended The Bridge. The church's five pastors rotate between The Bridge at 11 a.m. and traditional worship services in the sanctuary at 8:15 and 11 a.m.

The service began with contemporary music

When life throws you a major curveball, like the loss of a job, home or relationship, it can be hard to recover. You may not feel like you can go on, but fortunately, God is there. When all appears to be lost, you can count on God to comfort you and give you the strength to carry on.

Top Catholic bishop presses House on immigration

The president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops is pressuring the House to act on immigration legislation before the end of the year, calling the issue "a matter of great moral urgency" that cannot wait.

Cardinal Timothy Dolan, the archbishop of New York, said in a letter to Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, on Thursday that he was troubled by reports that immigration reform is delayed in the House because lawmakers have a responsibility to resolve the issue. Writing on behalf of the 450-plus U.S. cardinals and bishops, Dolan said they respectfully request that the House address the immigration issue as soon as possible.

The Senate passed a bill in June that would provide a path to citizenship for the estimated 11 million immigrants living here illegally and tighten border security, but the measure has stalled in the House where Boehner and GOP leaders have argued for a piecemeal approach.

"As a moral matter ... our nation cannot continue to receive the benefits of the work and contributions of undocumented immigrants without extending to them the protection of the law," Dolan wrote. "Keeping these human beings as a permanent underclass of workers who are unable to assert their rights or enjoy the fruits of their labor is a stain on the soul of the nation."

Dolan reiterated the bishops' stand that immigration legislation includes a path to citizenship, reaffirms family reunification, deals with future flows of migrant workers and restores basic due process protections to immigrants.

He wrote Boehner, a Catholic, that immigration is "a challenge that has confounded our nation for years, with little action from our federally elected officials. It is a matter of great moral urgency that cannot wait any longer for action."

The House has just a few legislative days left in the year, and prospects for any legislation are murky.

Responding to Dolan's letter, Michael Steel, a spokesman for Boehner, said the speaker "has been very clear that he supports common-sense, step-by-step reforms to fix our broken immigration system."

Most House Republicans reject a comprehensive approach and the Senate bill, with many questioning the offer of citizenship to people who broke U.S. immigration laws to be in this country. The House Judiciary Committee has moved forward with individual, single-issue immigration bills.

Although House Republican leaders say they want to resolve the issue, which has become a political drag for the GOP, many rank-and-file House Republicans have shown little inclination to deal with it. The bitter standoff with President Barack Obama on the budget and near default further angered House Republicans, who have resisted any move that might give Obama an immigration overhaul, the top item on his second-term domestic agenda.

Numerous House Republicans also are wary of passing any immigration legislation that would set up a conference with the Senate, fearing that they would lose out in final negotiations.

The Senate bill, strongly backed by the White House, includes billions for border security, a reworked legal immigration system to allow tens of thousands of high- and low-skilled workers into the country and a 13-year path to citizenship for those living here illegally.

MONTREAL

Quebec proposes ban on wearing religious symbols

The Quebec government moved forward Thursday with a proposed law that would ban public employees from wearing overt religious symbols, setting the stage for a showdown over the place of religion in the province.

Quebec Premier Pauline Marois said the law aims to preserve the province's fundamental values, including the equality of men and women and the separation of church and state. Her separatist Parti Quebecois on Thursday introduced its Charter of Values in the province's legislature.

"Today, we're taking steps to build a diverse Quebec that will endure for a long time," she said at a news conference in Quebec City.

The law would forbid government employees from wearing Muslim headscarves, Jewish kippas, Sikh turbans and larger-than-average crucifixes. It would also prohibit citizens from covering their faces while receiving public services, such as applying for driver's licenses, for the purpose of identification.

The Parti Quebecois does not have a majority in the provincial legislature and faces an uphill battle to get the law passed. Canadian Prime Minister Stephen Harper's conservative government opposes the initiative and has warned it could launch a legal challenge against it if it does pass.

"We will strongly defend the fundamental Canadian freedom and association against any effort to encroach upon those fundamental constitutional rights," said Jason Kenney, Canada's minister for multiculturalism.

Quebec's opposition Liberals have criticized the plan, except for the provision banning people from covering their faces while providing or receiving state services.

Liberal Leader Philippé Couillard called the law a "direct attack" on the rights and freedoms of all citizens that threatens to fracture Quebec society.

The Coalition party, which holds the swing vote in the legislature, said it's open to discussions with the PQ.

Polls suggest Quebec, a primarily French-speaking province with a population of 8.1 million, is deeply divided on the issue. Support is higher outside metropolitan Montreal.

Protests both for and against the proposal have been staged since it was first announced in September.

Thousands of Muslims, Sikhs and Jews have marched through Montreal's streets to denounce what they call an affront on religious freedom. Many have said they would lose their jobs rather than comply with the law.

The law would apply to those who work in public institutions such as day cares, schools and hospitals.

Rev. Eugene Callender, who saw potential of dropouts, dies at 87

By Margalit Fox
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The Rev. Dr. Eugene S. Callender, a civil rights advocate best known for starting an innovative series of "street academies" for disadvantaged New York City youths that became a model for nontraditional educational programs nationwide, died Saturday in Manhattan. He was 87.

His death was confirmed by Lorena Rostig, a co-author, with George A. Zdravecky, of Callender's 2012 memoir, "Nobody Is a Nobody: The Story of a Harlem Ministry Hard at Work to Change America."

A Presbyterian minister, Callender was for decades "one of Harlem's most active leaders," as The New York Times wrote in 1967. The longtime senior minister and chief executive of the Church of the Master, he was also a past executive director of the New York Urban League and a former president of the New York Urban Coalition.

Callender, who preached and lectured throughout the country, also served in the administrations of Mayor John V. Lindsay, for whom he was deputy administrator of the New York City Housing and Development Administration, and Gov. Mario M. Cuomo, for whom he was the director of the New York State Office of the Aging.

A Democrat, Callender turned down a position as an assistant labor secretary in the administration of President Richard M. Nixon in 1969.

Though Callender was a Massachusetts native, he had lived and worked in Harlem since the 1950s. He had vowed to live there as a young man, after seeing it for the first time on a visit to New York.

"There was a sea of black faces," he said in an unpublished 1967 interview with The Times. "'Boy,' I thought, 'this must be our land.' I made up my mind right there that I was going to live in Harlem."

By the late '50s, Callender had established the Addicts Rehabilitation Center, a drug program in Harlem. At the time, addicts were widely considered a marginal population unworthy of much attention, and such programs were rare.

He was later the chairman of Haryou-Act Community Corp., a Harlem antipoverty agency.

Callender, who in the 1960s accompanied the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. on civil rights marches in the South, often said he had been concerned with the disenfranchised from the time he was very young.

Eugene St. Clair Callender, the son of immigrants from Barbados, was born in Cambridge, Mass., on Jan. 21, 1926.

His father, a factory worker, and his mother, a domestic, were determined that their children go to college. The way seemed clear for Eugene when he graduated second in his class from the Cambridge Rindge and Latin School: The school's top three graduates traditionally received scholarships to Harvard.

But when he went to Harvard to apply for his scholarship, he was told that the college had already admitted its quota of "negroes" for the year.

"That was my first act of social injustice," Callender told The Cambridge Chronicle, a community newspaper, in an interview last year.

He earned a bachelor of arts degree from Boston University and on graduating enrolled in the Westminster Theological Seminary, near Philadelphia.

"You're Eugene Callender!" an astonished administrator exclaimed the day he arrived there. The seminary had not known his race, and he would be its first black student.

Before long, however, as Callender recalled, the entire student body and faculty had descended in protest on a Philadelphia restaurant that refused to serve him.

After receiving a bachelor of divinity degree from Westminster in 1950, he earned a doctorate in divinity from Knoxville College in Tennessee. He later earned a law degree from New York Law School.

Callender was the pastor of the Mid-Harlem Community Parish before joining the Church of the Master in 1959. He served with that church for decades and remained a guest pastor there until his retirement in 2010.

In the mid-1960s, under the aegis of the Urban League, Callender established what became a chain of more than a dozen street academies in depressed New York neighborhoods.

Storefront establishments financed with corporate contributions, the academies enrolled black and Hispanic high school dropouts and inspired similar programs in other cities.

In 1975, The Times reported that 600 of New York's street academy graduates had gone on to college.

Callender also founded the Harlem Preparatory School, intended to further prepare street academy graduates for a college education.

Callender, who lived on the Upper West Side of Manhattan, was married and divorced several times. His survivors include a daughter, Renée; a sister, Thelma Burns; a brother, Leland; a grandson; and a great-granddaughter.

China Aid and will feature Christian speakers from Kenya, Dijibouti, Syria, Somalia, China and other nations.

The Rev. Getaneh Getaneh, a Midland pastor who escaped to the U.S. after being persecuted in his native Ethiopia, said the event has three objectives: to pray, to bond with persecuted "brothers and sisters" around the world and to speak out to politicians and global leaders.

"Those who kill you think they are doing some service to God," he said.

Getaneh is the founder of Watch and Pray International Ministries and will be one of the speakers. Others include Michael Horowitz, founder of a human rights think tank, and Stephen Khoury, pastor at Holy Land Missions, an organization that preaches the gospel in Israel and Palestine.

Makunyi said his message to the American people is for them to understand that persecution around the world is not just a myth; it is real. After he was shot in February, he was transported to a hospital in Nairobi, where he slowly recovered.

years as "Ponch" on the TV series "CHiPs," until some years ago when I became an actual beat cop in Muncie, Ind., and then a Bedford County, Va. deputy sheriff and an Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force (ICAC) investigator, and the national spokesman for the Safe Surfin' Foundation.

So, I was a kid who wanted to be a cop, but became an actor who played a cop, and now, I'm a cop who sometimes acts.

MRT: How do you use your police knowledge in acting?

Estrada: In my role as Sheriff Mike Brown in "Finding Faith," I was able to draw on the years of experience I have had, not only as a sworn law enforcement officer, but more specifically, from the knowledge I have of the world of Internet predators of children, and the procedures involved in taking them down.

In the movie "Finding Faith," did you have any personal experiences that led you to take this role?

My position as national spokesman for the Safe Surfin' Foundation, and my personal experiences as an ICAC investigator were primarily responsible for my involvement in "Finding Faith."

MRT: In articles about "Finding Faith," you speak about the dangers of "online grooming." Can you elaborate on these dangers?

Estrada: "Online grooming" is the process of priming a young person for abduction. It will normally start as an online friendship in which the abductor poses as a peer, and over time gains the victim's trust. Once that trust is established, the victim often feels more comfortable sharing information that he/she normally wouldn't share with someone they've never met. Eventually, the abductor will use that information against them, such as telling the victim that he will expose what has been shared with the victim's parents if the victim doesn't agree to meet him face-to-face.

Once that meeting happens, the child is abducted, abused (often on a video recording to be sold in the child pornography industry) and then is either released, killed or shipped elsewhere and put into sex trafficking. Those who are released or rescued often face a lifetime of dysfunction. Education is the best prevention, which is why we made this movie, and why I have been taking it to churches across the country since January.

Event at CJ Kelly Park to benefit West Texas teen

From staff reports

Katie Gutierrez is a 15-year-old ninth-grader at Snyder High School who is battling a recurring brain tumor.

In 2009, Katie was playing softball when she was hit in the head with a ball. After being diagnosed with a severe concussion, Katie returned home. Over the next few weeks she began having headaches and some vision changes.

An MRI revealed that she had a rare brain tumor that had been growing since birth. Doctors recommended surgery to remove the tumor.

In October, four years after her diagnosis, doctors performed the fifth surgery to drain and remove the tumor from her brain. Unable to access the tumor, they told Katie and her family they will need to plan another surgery. The family hopes it can wait until after the holidays.

"She's fighting so badly to just have a normal life — even though we haven't had big Christmases in a long time, that's still important to her," said her mother, Amy Ramirez-Gutierrez. "She's only 15 years old, she feels like she's missed out on a lot of her life. I know she was really wanting to have a special Christmas."

Katie and her family will be the guests of honor at the Looking Up for Hope event Saturday at CJ Kelly Park. A motorcycle, car or truck procession will arrive at the park around 2:30 p.m. where Midlanders of all ages can listen to live music by Justin Langston. There will be jumpers for kids and numerous raffle prizes from the Harley Davidson shop, Midland Power Sports, Family Fitness, Gold's Gym and other local businesses. Money raised will go to Katie and her family.

This is the second year for the event hosted by Looking Up For Hope, a local nonprofit founded last year by Brandon Van Huss.

"It's a very family-oriented, Christian-based nonprofit," Van Huss said. "Everybody is more than welcome to come."

The Rev. Steve Schorr led the day's worship, beginning by quizzing the congregation on the dates of various events in world history — the start of the Great Depression, John F. Kennedy Jr.'s assassination and the date Texas became a state, among others. Using this quiz as a springboard, he launched into a sermon on the importance of memory.

Forgetting the past can lead to pride, vanity and disobedience, he told the congregation. In keeping with the biblical story of the Ebenezer stone, which represented a fresh beginning and a reminder of God's faithfulness, the congregation was encouraged to write on stones that were provided by the church. Such hands-on creative projects are typical of The Bridge services, said the Rev. Shannon Weisenfels, another of the church's five pastors.

The service lasted about an hour and a half and was interspersed with contemporary Christian songs and prayers, ending with an open Communion.

The Bridge, which began in early 2009, will celebrate its fifth anniversary in January.

JFK's mark on religion was a surprising but substantial one

WILLIAM MCKENZIE
The Dallas Morning News

The closer it gets to Nov. 22 and the 50th anniversary of that awful day, the more we are hearing about John F. Kennedy's career, presidency and gruesome death. But one element we should not forget is his impact on religion in America.

That's an unusual feature of the Kennedy legacy for a couple of reasons.

First, his faith was a private one, especially when compared with the way later leaders like Jimmy Carter, George W. Bush and Bill Clinton easily talked about sin, redemption and other theological topics. Nor did Catholic teachings and thinking appear to influence Kennedy's intellectual currents the way they did Mario Cuomo's when the New York Democrat, an active Catholic, was on the ascendancy in the 1980s.

Kennedy certainly attended Mass and made note of God in his speeches. And none of us can or should judge the sincerity of another's faith. But Kennedy's personal religiosity was not his defining mark.

Second, Kennedy exuded an urbanity that gave him the greatest secular appeal of any modern president. For that reason, it is ironic that a president known for his citizen-of-the-world manner and, yes, dalliances, had one of the most profound effects of any White House occupant on American religion.

Nevertheless, Kennedy did leave a substantial mark.

The most profound way is the obvious one. John Fitzgerald Kennedy, whose very name denotes deep Irish Catholic roots, brought Catholicism into America's mainstream.

That much we all know. Still, it is hard to overestimate the impact of that change.

In the middle of the last century, American Catholicism was largely a religion of the Northeast and Upper Midwest. In the Farm Belt, the South and the West, Catholicism was fairly scarce or limited to immigrant communities in places like Northern California and the Rio Grande Valley.

Kennedy, though, put an American face on the religion. And he did so with his comfortable style and natural charm. He was not an angry scowler, which those trying to convince others to accept their religion should remember.

Kennedy demystified Catholicism to those on Main Street in midsize towns, in communities where mainline Protestants led the chambers of commerce and held office, and in rural spaces culturally and physically distant from Boston. At last the rest of America had to deal with a faith many did not understand or accept.

Today, Catholicism is fully integrated into American life. In the last presidential election, Newt Gingrich ran proudly as a recent convert to Catholicism. Joe Biden, an Irish Catholic like Kennedy, is vice president. And six Catholics sit on the U.S. Supreme Court.

Perhaps another Catholic leader would have made his or her faith less alien to the rest of the country if Kennedy and his famous siblings had not surfaced. But he, his wife and the energetic Kennedy brood took away the animus some felt toward Catholicism with their all-American, football-playing, familial ways.

Yet for all his popularizing of Catholicism, Kennedy also affected American religion through the privatization of his faith. In his famous speech during the 1960 campaign to a group of Houston ministers, he essentially told his skeptics that his faith would not influence his politics.

To some extent, he had to reassure the conspiracy-minded that Rome would not call the shots. Still, he segregated his faith, giving credence to the belief among some at the time that religion was merely about personal piety.

Ironically, as Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary theologian Cynthia Rigby wrote in a recent Texas Faith discussion, the nation's first Catholic president was much closer to evangelicals of that period. They, too, saw their faith as personal, not political.

The split between personal piety and public theology remained in the national political conversation until Carter's presidential campaign. Fortunately, he showed that religion had a larger communitarian element. Most major faiths call upon their adherents to act upon their beliefs in values like mercy, justice and compassion, and that impetus can lead them into the political arena.

Kennedy didn't make that connection, but he indisputably left his mark on religion in America.

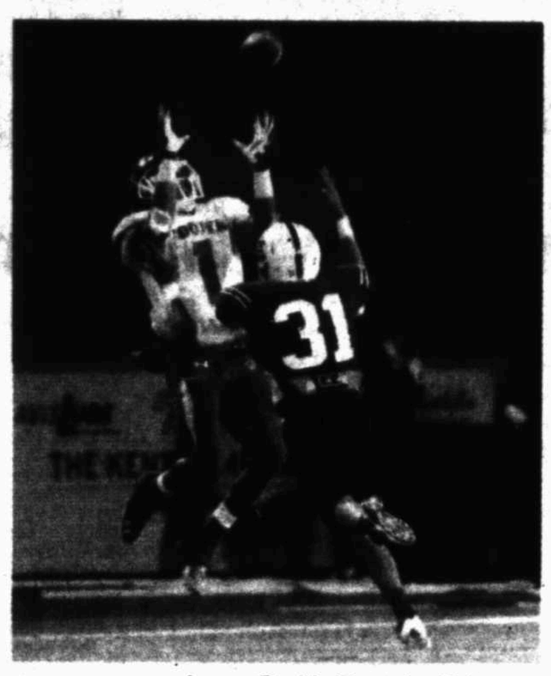
Improved play at corner key for Rebels' success



Lee's Anthony Navarrete tries to break up a pass intended for Abilene Cooper's Trey Dye on Sept. 13 at Grande Communications Stadium.

James Durbin/Reporter-Telegram

By Len Hayward
lhayward@mrt.com

The biggest compliment Juwan Lee could've received for the play of the Rebel cornerbacks this season may have come from a Rebel receiver.

Juwan Lee, who was on the sideline during the game against Amarillo Tascosa a few weeks ago, asked a Rebel receiver why he didn't show as quick of feet out there like he did in practice nearly every day.

Juwan Lee said the receiver responded by saying, "He said our corners are better than them."

Juwan Lee was a little bit surprised but also happy, and it also showed how far not only the Rebels have progressed this season but the players at the cornerback position, as well.

That progress will certainly be tested at 7:30 p.m. tonight as the Rebels (8-1, 7-0 in 2-5A) go on the road to take on a San Angelo Central (8-1, 6-1) team that has the district's best offense statistically.

But the trio of players that have played in the two corner spots for most of this season have been facing challenges from the first day of August workouts. None of the three players — Juwan Lee, a junior, senior Anthony Navarrete and junior Darrien Wallace — had much varsity experience at the position.

"We've gotten pretty comfortable and gotten good," said Navarrete, who has 25 tackles this season with two pass breakups. "Just our whole defense has gotten real good in pass coverage, and that's helped us a lot where we've gotten right now."

MHS looks to end skid against Abilene High

By Jonathan Hull
jhull@mrt.com

Craig Yenzer is hoping to see a trend of his tenure as Midland High's football coach come to an end. Abilene High coach Steve Warren hopes to see it continue.

The Bulldogs (4-5, 3-4 in District 2-5A) and Eagles (3-6, 3-4) face off with playoff implications on the line at 7:30 p.m. today at Grande Communications Stadium. There is still one playoff berth available out of District 2-5A and both Midland High and Abilene High have a chance at claiming it.

Although, both teams need help from outside forces to get into the playoffs, the first goal for Yenzer and Warren is to have their squads ready to handle the task at hand and pick up a win tonight.

Big Spring vying for 4-3A title 2 years after going 0-10

By Oscar LeRoy

Big Spring senior linebacker Tyler Wigington remembers what it was like to go through the 2011 season with an 0-10 record. Needless to say, this season's success feels a whole lot better for Wigington and the rest of the Steers after what they endured the past few years.

Wigington

Wigington is one of five third-year varsity players on this Big Spring team that is enjoying a turnaround season that has them at 7-2 overall and 3-1 in District 4-3A play. The Steers have already clinched a spot in the playoffs for the first time since 2009 and now they would love to at least claim a share of a district title for the first time since 1990 when they host Monahans (5-4, 3-1) tonight at Memorial Stadium.

Looking back on the past few years and some of the tough times this team has had, the Steers certainly appreciate to see how far they've come

No. 5 Baylor beats No. 12 Oklahoma

WACO — Bryce Petty threw for three touchdowns and ran for two more, Shock Linwood ran for 182 yards and fifth-ranked Baylor stayed undefeated by passing its first big test with a 41-12 victory over No. 12 Oklahoma on Thursday night.

Baylor (8-0, 5-0 Big 12) scored twice in the final minute before halftime and stretched its school-record winning streak to 12 games since a loss at Oklahoma last November. The Bears are 8-0 for the first time.

"We're just talented, man. We're committed. I think that's all you can say about it," Petty said. "It's a very special team."

Even though Baylor came in leading the nation in scoring (64 points per game) and total offense (718 yards per game) — and was outscoring opponents by an average margin of 48 points — many questioned how good the Bears were after getting into November without playing a ranked opponent. They have now, and they responded with an impressive victory against a team that used to routinely overwhelm them.

Oklahoma (7-2, 4-2) has a 21-2 lead in the series, but both losses have come in its last two trips to Floyd Casey Stadium for prime-time games.

Running backs Lache Seastrunk and Glasco Martin got banged up in the game, so Linwood ran 23 times. The Bears also were missing top receiver Tevin Reese, who was without a catch before dislocating his right wrist. He spent the second half on the sideline with his arm in a sling, and

Angelina College hands Lady Chaps first loss

From staff reports

LUFKIN — Inconsistent play on the offensive end ultimately handed the Midland College women's basketball team its first loss of the season Thursday.

The Lady Chaparrals dropped a 63-57 decision to Angelina College at the Angelina College Classic. Coach Ron Jones said the team was able to fight through some early foul trouble to hang with the Lady Roadrunners, but couldn't execute consistently on the offensive end.

"We had lots of really bad offensive possessions," Jones said. "We didn't score like we needed to and had too many mistakes to give ourselves a chance to win."

The Lady Chaps were led by Catherine Kruschke's 14 points as she was their only player to score in double figures.

MC (3-1) takes on Panola College at 4 p.m. today.

2-5ACAPSULES

BY JONATHAN HULL

DISTRICT 2-5A ODESSA HIGH AT AMARILLO TASCOSA

When/where: 4 p.m. today, Dick Bivins Stadium, Amarillo

On the air: KMCM (96.9 FM)

Records: Odessa High 4-5, 3-4 in 2-5A; Tascosa 3-6, 2-5

Last game: Odessa High 35, Midland High 30; Tascosa 47, Lubbock Coronado 45

Last meeting/series: Odessa High 14, Tascosa 7 (2012); Odessa High leads series 5-2.

Weather forecast: Clear skies with a game time temperature of 56 degrees, dipping into the lower 50s as the game progresses. No chance of precipitation.

Three things you need to know

■ Odessa High remains in the playoff hunt after last week's victory against Midland High. The Bronchos need a win against Tascosa today coupled with a Midland High victory against Abilene High to get into the playoffs.

■ Tascosa picked up its second win of the district season after stuffing rival Lubbock Coronado on a two-point conversion with 2:12 left in the game last week.

The Rebels are now trying to play spoiler for Odessa High's season as a win tonight would knock the Bronchos out of playoff contention.

■ This is the eighth consecutive year Tascosa and OHS have played each other after the two programs had never crossed paths before 2006. After winning the first two matchups in the series, Tascosa is now on a five-game losing streak to the Bronchos.

Next: Odessa High, TBD; Amarillo Tascosa's season is complete.

LUBBOCK CORONADO AT ODESSA PERMIAN

When/where: 7:30 p.m. today, Ratliff Stadium, Odessa

On the air: KHKX (99.1 FM)

Weather forecast: Partly cloudy skies with a game time temperature of 58, dipping into the mid-50s as the game progresses. No chance of precipitation.

Five things you need to know

■ Permian can qualify for the postseason with a win tonight and a Midland High loss to Abilene High. The Panthers own the head-to-head tiebreaker with Abilene High, but also have the edge in a points tiebreaker should they end up in a three-way tie with Odessa High and Abilene High.

-- Lubbock Coronado remained winless in district play after being stopped on a two-point conversion late in the game against Tascosa. The Mustangs got another strong performance from freshman quarterback Christian Hayes in the loss as he passed for 283 yards and five TDs. Hayes also threw three interceptions, though.

■ There's not much history between these two teams as this is only the seventh time the programs have crossed paths. Before 2008, Coronado and Permian had only met in the bi-district round of the playoffs.

Coronado's lone win against Permian in the program's history came in a 1996 playoff game, 23-7.

Next: Lubbock Coronado's season is complete; Odessa Permian, TBD.

LEE

From 1C

Navarrete was the only player returning of the trio who gained much varsity experience last year, but that was at safety. As this season has progressed, coach James Morton, who is also the direct position coach for the cornerbacks, said Navarrete has been the team's most consistent player at the position.

Plus, over time Navarrete has turned into the leader for the cornerbacks.

"Going into the year, I thought me might be a second or third guy, but not the first guy," Morton said. "But he's been consistent and improved each week, and he's gotten better fundamentally."

Juwan Lee was a receiver a year ago, and Morton said it took him some time to transition into playing defense. And Juwan Lee admitted it as well.

But as this season has progressed, Juwan Lee has grown into a solid corner. He has 21 tackles and returned an interception 60 yards for a touchdown against Southlake Carroll, along with four pass break-ups. Juwan Lee will likely make his return to the lineup this week after sitting out the last three weeks nursing a shoulder injury.

In Juwan Lee's absence, Wallace moved into the spot and has garnered 20 tackles this season.

"I didn't think I would come this far being on defense with me being so skinny," said Juwan Lee, who is listed at 6-foot, 160 pounds on the Rebels' roster. "I make a lot of plays. I like hitting the receivers ... I love knocking the crap out of them."

Both Navarrete and Juwan Lee said the key this season has been the ability to put negative plays behind them. Yes, they know they are going to give up some yards at corner, but they have to forget those as quick as possible and move to the next play.

It's served them well this year, and Navarrete said that it's been a reason Lee's defense has been able to recover so many times this season to make the plays needed to win.

"There are some times you make that one play that makes the other team go ahead," Navarrete said. "But since you forget about it, you may make that one play that helps your team go ahead and score. We've been doing pretty good at it so far, and it's just playing it play by play."

LEE AT SAN ANGELO CENTRAL

When/where: 7:30 p.m. today, San Angelo Stadium, San Angelo

On the air: KCRS (550 AM)

Records: Lee 8-1, 7-0 in District 2-5A; San Angelo Central 8-1, 6-1

Last game: Lee 42, Odessa Permian 21; San Angelo Central 31, Abilene Cooper 28

Last meeting/series: San Angelo Central 28, Lee 21 in 2012 and Lee leads overall series 28-17

Weather forecast: Cloudy with a temperature of 56 degrees expected at game time, and no chance of precipitation.

Five things you need to know

■ Lee has clinched a spot in the Division I playoffs, but who it will play and what seed it will be will be determined today. If Lee wins, it will be the top seed in Division I, but a loss and Abilene High making the postseason will put Lee as the No. 2 seed. If Midland High, Odessa High or Odessa Permian earn a spot in the postseason, Central will be the top Division II seed, but if Abilene High qualifies, Central will be in Division I.

■ Lee will play either El Paso Franklin or El Paso El Dorado in the playoffs next week, and the Rebels will have to travel to El Paso regardless of the opponent. If Lee plays El Paso Franklin, it will play at 7 p.m. (CDT) next Friday at the Sun Bowl. If the Rebels face El Dorado, they will play at 7:30 p.m. (CDT) next Friday at the Socorro ISD Activities Complex.

■ Lee senior quarterback Caden Coots continues to etch his name in the school's passing record book. Coots has thrown for 2,511 yards this season, a record he set three weeks ago, and also last week set the school record for passing yards in a game with 401 against Odessa Permian. But Coots also threw his first two interceptions of the season last week. Coots went 244 attempts without being intercepted. He also has 29 touchdowns this season, also a school record.

■ With as successful as Coots has been this season, Central quarterback Mickey Scott has been just as good. Scott has completed 177 of 230 passes for 2,401 yards with 25 touchdowns and five interceptions.

■ San Angelo Central defensive tackle Joseph Brooks was involved in a car accident on Wednesday morning, along with three other junior varsity players. The San Angelo Standard-Times reported that he was released the hospital on Wednesday, and will likely play in today's game.

BULLDOGS

only team in the district a Yenzer-led Midland High squad hasn't beaten during his 12-year tenure.

"It's quite a deal. What do you say? They've got a great program," Yenzer said. "They've always had a great staff. I have a lot of respect for coach Warren. All we can do is put it out on the line this year and hopefully get it done."

Of course, Warren isn't ready to see his winning streak against the Bulldogs come to an end quite yet.

"I hope we can keep it going one more year," Warren said. "It gets tougher all the time. It's just more motivation for (Midland High) to try to end the streak. It's always a good game against them and I enjoy playing against Craig Yenzer-coached teams. It's always going to be a challenge."

Midland High's seniors would love to deliver their coach his first win against Abilene High, partly because it's a key component to them getting into the playoffs.

"I think last year we realized late in the game that (Abilene High) is beatable," MHS senior defensive end Brady Watson said. "We can beat them. We have the players and the talent to do that. It's been building up. I think we're going to do it this year. It's time."

But winning Friday doesn't guarantee Abilene High or Midland high a playoff spot.

Odessa High and Odessa Permian each have claims on that fourth spot as well, and none of the four teams bidding for that playoff berth control their own destiny.

Abilene High needs to win and then have Permian lose to get in. The Bulldogs need a win and an Odessa High loss.

"It's really a unique situation we're all in," Warren said. "Everybody needs some help from somebody else. I don't know that I've ever seen anything like this before."

But the Bulldogs' situation is probably the most unique of all. That's because they could already know their fate prior to kickoff tonight.

Odessa High and Amarillo Tascosa begin play at 4 p.m. in Amarillo. If the Bronchos win, Midland High's playoff chances no longer exist, making the outcome against Abilene High moot.

Yenzer has been debating all week on whether or not to allow the team to know the outcome of the OHS-Tascosa game prior to kickoff.

"It could be a good motivational factor if Odessa High loses," Yenzer admitted. "But you hope your team would play the same way even if Odessa High wins. It's really a tough decision on how to handle it. I'm not really sure. We'll have to see how it plays out."

MHS senior receiver Mazelle Justice says he'd prefer to know.

"I want to know," Justice said. "I want to know what I'm playing for, but that's because I'm going to step out on the field and try to embarrass Abilene High either way. That's my goal every game no matter what's on the line."

Still, ending the 10-game losing streak to Abilene High remains a part of the equation to get the Bulldogs into the playoffs. Not beating the Eagles would buck a different trend of Midland High's Yenzer era.

The Bulldogs have never missed the postseason two years in a row under Yenzer. The danger of doing so for the first time is a reality tonight.

ABILENE HIGH AT MIDLAND HIGH

When/where: 7:30 p.m. today, Grande Communications Stadium

On the air: KNFM (92.3 FM)

Records: Abilene High 3-6, 3-4 in 2-5A; Midland High 4-5, 3-4

Last game: Abilene High 42, Odessa High 21; Odessa High 35, Midland High 30

Last meeting: Abilene High 28, Midland High 21 (2012); Abilene High leads series 48-21.

Weather forecast: Partly cloudy skies with a game-time temperature of 58, dipping into the mid-50s as the game progresses. No chance of precipitation.

Five things you need to know

■ Abilene High junior quarterback Derek Scott has passed for 1,109 yards and 12 TDs with just two interceptions in Abilene High's last four games. Scott has also rushed for six TDs. All of those totals are more than half of the production he's had in nine total games this season.

AHS coach Steve Warren said "a black cloud" has recently been lifted off of Scott and the team, and is a major result of the quarterback playing better late in the season.

Scott's mother, Michelle, passed away suddenly in her sleep a couple weeks before two-a-days started, and her death had an obvious effect on him and his father, Mike, who is the Eagles' quarterbacks coach.

"I think Derek always had the ability, but his mind wasn't exactly on football and with good reason," Warren said. "I think his mind cleared a little and he refocused. I think that's why he's started to play better."

■ Abilene High lost senior running back Jay Robinson three weeks ago due to injury, and after examining their best options, the Abilene High coaching staff decided a freshman was the best choice to replace Robinson.

Abram Smith affirmed his coaches' decision by rushing for 137 yards and three TDs on 12 carries in his varsity debut against Odessa High two weeks ago.

"Obviously you don't want to put a kid in that arena unless he can physically handle it and we thought he could," Warren said of Smith. "He had been one of the best players on the field for our junior varsity all season, so we also thought he could handle the mental part of the varsity game. He was our best option."

Smith is only the second freshman to ever play a varsity game during Warren's 18-year tenure with the Eagles. The first was Jake McMillon, who is now a senior defensive end verbally committed to the University of Texas.

■ On the topic of McMillon, MHS coach Craig Yenzer considers him one of the best players in the district and notes how tough it can be to run against the Eagles' 3-4 defense because of his presence.

That said, the Eagles have surrendered 233.3 rushing yards per game this season and are allowing 451.8 total yards per game this year.

■ Midland High's defense has had similar issues, giving up 453.2 yards per game. The Bulldogs are in danger of giving up the most points in a single season.

The record is 394 set over 10 games in 1993. Midland High has allowed 356 points through nine game this season and are allowing 39.5 points per game.

■ Midland High senior running back Lance White has been held out of contact during practice this week as he nurses a shoulder injury. White will be available for the game, but backups Brandon Infiesto, Darius Reed and Chris Douglas could see more carries as a result.

Warren said senior tailback Jay Robinson is the only recent injury the Eagles have had and Friday's lineup should similar to the one from two weeks ago against Odessa High.

BIG SPRING

build us to what we are today. That disappointment that we felt, we knew we weren't going to let that happen again."

For seniors Wigington, Ronnie Bell, Devin Roberson, Aric Rutledge and Chris Lindem, they experienced plenty of disappointment. They saw the Steers struggle to a winless 2011 season. And then after starting last season 5-0, the team went through injuries and not playing up to its potential in an 0-5 finish.

"After going 5-0 and the losing the first two (district games) you could see the turmoil and people were more selfish," said Rutledge, an offensive guard. "We just didn't play together as a team."

"After winning the first five games and then going 0-5 in district, it really hurt because everybody started getting selfish after the second game because they didn't think we were going to win," added Bell, a defensive end. "But this year we're playing for each other, everybody wants to win and everybody wants to work hard."

Playing as a team is something the Steers say is a big reason for their success for this season. Big Spring Phillip Ritchey and others have commented that this year's team also has the leadership that has helped the team stay focused and together.

"It's all teamwork this year," said Lindem, a defensive end. "Last year it was about people thinking about themselves. This year is not like that. We're all one team. You could tell by the way in practice how everybody worked as a team and not as individuals. It's not about me, it's us."

Added wide receiver/safety/kicker Devin Roberson, "We've got more leadership this year, definitely, and we're playing as a unit. We've worked for the past few years and now we're seeing that work finally pay off for us."

That strength the Steers have at the top is not lost on Monahans coach Mickey Owens.

"They're playing harder this year and have more leadership," said Owens when asked the difference between this year's Big Spring team and last year's. "Even when they've gotten behind in games, they're storming back. They're the hottest team in the district. And other than the first quarter against Abilene Wylie, they're playing as good as anybody in our district."

Roberson said the team has also been aided by more depth this season, which unlike last year, has helped to overcome any injuries.

"We're not as down in any position," he said. "We don't feel like we have a weakness on offense or defense."

Earlier this season, the Steers ended a 12-game district losing streak. Tonight, they can make more history with a chance for at least a district title — the first in more than two decades. Rutledge said his mom was a senior at Big Spring High School the last time the Steers claimed that district crown, so it would be special for this group.

"It would mean a lot to us seniors to get the gold ball on the side of our locker room this year," Wigington said. "We're just looking to win a few gold trophies this year. "

After what these Steers have gone through the past few seasons, winning some more games this season would only add to what has been a season of redemption for this Big Spring team.

MONAHANS AT BIG SPRING

When/where: 7:30 p.m. today, Memorial Stadium, Big Spring

On the air: KBEST FM (95.7), KBYG FM (106.3), Big Spring; KKCM (1330 AM), Monahans

Records: Big Spring 7-2, 3-1 in District 4-3A; Monahans 5-4, 3-1

Last game: Big Spring 55, Greenwood 24; Sweetwater 28, Monahans 9

Last meeting/series: Monahans defeated Big Spring 36-13 last year to even up the all-time series at 8-8-1.

Weather forecast: Temperatures in the upper 50s with the wind at about 13 mph at kickoff, getting down to the lower to mid 50s at the end of the game.

Five things you need to know

■ The winner of this game clinches at least a share of the district title. The winner can clinch the outright district title if Abilene Wylie loses to Sweetwater.

■ Big Spring clinched a playoff spot with its resounding win over Greenwood last week. Junior QB Tobyn Tannehill passed for 178 yards and three touchdowns, and rushed for 156 yards and two more TDs. Senior WR Tate Kennedy added five catches for 95 yards and one touchdown, while freshman RB Preston Alexander had 87 yards and two TDs on 11 carries.

■ Monahans is coming off a disappointing loss to Sweetwater as the Loboes were held to 284 total yards by the Mustangs. Junior RB Jacob Lair led the Loboes with 156 yards rushing and a touchdown. Monahans coach Mickey Owens said his team just didn't play well in all three phases of the game.

"We kind of hit a speed bump and just didn't play hard," Owens said. "Sweetwater also kind of exposed some things that we were getting away with. But give Sweetwater credit. They came out swinging, and if you don't play well against good teams, you're going to get your tails beat and that's what happened to us."

■ Big Spring coach Phillip Ritchey said Monahans losing to Sweetwater shows that anything can happen in a district loaded with talented teams. He added that the key for his team against Monahans is to get stops against Monahans and put some points on the board. He also believes that special teams and turnovers may play a big part in determining the outcome of this game.

■ Owens said the key for his team is to try and keep the ball away from Big Spring. He added that having the opportunity to play for a district title is something his team will relish.

"If you would have told the kids at the beginning of the year that we would have a chance to play for a district title in Big Spring, we would have taken that," Owens said.

Mustangs focused on undefeated regular season

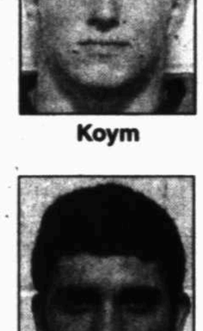
WACO REICHER AT MIDLAND CHRISTIAN

When: 7:30 p.m. today
Location: Mustang Field
Online: www.midland-christianschool.org; www.bit.ly/mustangslive

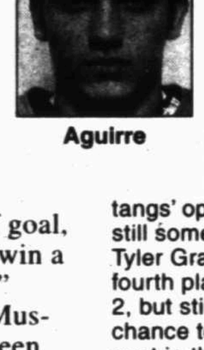
The Midland Christian football team has already done plenty this season to help pour the foundation for its legacy in the school's football history.

But this year's squad will have the chance to do one thing no 11-man team has been able to do at the school and that's finish a regular season undefeated.

The Mustangs enter today's final regular season game against Waco Reicher sporting a 9-0 overall record and 5-0 mark in TAPPS Division II, District 1 play. But in typical Midland Christian fashion, though, the players say what happens this week is just one part of the major goal of winning an unprecedented third straight state title.



Koym



Aguirre

Midland Christian will try to finish its regular season unblemished as it takes on Waco Reicher at 7:30 p.m. at Mustang Field.

"It'd be a great accomplishment for the team with all the hours of work the coaches and all the team put in," said senior wide receiver/defensive back Jarrod Koym. "Let's say we do win, and go undefeated, we know that's not our main goal. We have a higher standard of goal, and it's set more to win a state championship."

This season, the Mustangs have simply been dominating on the way to another district championship and the undefeated record. Midland Christian not only rolled through a non-district schedule that included three potential Class 3A playoff teams, but have also dominated in district play.

The Mustangs have outscored their five district opponents 277-12, and nearly all of those games featured a running clock in the second half. But with as dominating as those scores look, Koym and fellow senior Elias Aguirre said the Mustangs had to be refocused a few times late this season.

But now the team is back focused and ready for a playoff run.

"(Coach Greg McClendon) says he can smell when we lose focus, and he can sense it even though we can't," said Aguirre, who has caught 31 passes for 631 yards and 10 touchdowns this season. "I think we've gotten a lot better over the weeks about focusing up in practice. Sometimes it's hard getting into practice, but once we start sweating and working hard it's easy for us to finish what we need to finish."

And finishing has not been a problem for this team this season.

Last meeting/series: Midland Christian 46, Waco Reicher 21 in 2012; this is the second meeting between the two teams

Weather forecast: Cloudy with a temperature of 56 degrees expected at game time, and no chance of precipitation.

Five things you need to know

■ Midland Christian's TAPPS Division II bi-district playoff game has tentatively been set for 7 p.m. Friday, Nov. 15 at Mustang Field. The Mustangs' opponent, though, is still somewhat up in the air. Tyler Grace Community is the fourth place team in District 2, but still has an outside chance to end up in the third spot in the district on Friday.

■ The Mustangs went back to their running roots last week in a 55-9 victory against Arlington Pantego. Midland Christian rushed for 358 yards, averaging just under 10 yards a carry in the victory. Junior Sam Gilbert rushed for 117 yards on 17 carries with four touchdowns, and Elias Aguirre had a 74-yard touchdown.

■ Mason McClendon eclipsed his own record for yards passing in a season last week against Pantego. McClendon threw for 172 yards and now has 2,735 yards this season. McClendon threw for 2,683 in 2012. McClendon also has the new record for TD passes in a season with 38 so far this year and the old record was 29, also set in 2012.

■ Reicher has clinched a playoff spot. If the Cougars win they could clinch the district's third seed, while a loss could move them into the fourth slot coming out of the district. The Cougars have lost two straight games after starting district play with three straight wins.

■ Reicher is led by senior QB Payne Sullins. Sullins has completed 173 of 297 passes for 2,205 yards with 18 touchdowns and 11 interceptions. He's also rushed for 565 yards.

No. 6 Stanford holds off No. 2 Oregon

By Ralph D. Russo
Associated Press

No. 6 Cardinal	26
No. 2 Ducks	20

STANFORD, Calif. — Tyler Gaffney ran for 157 yards and No. 6 Stanford hammered No. 2 Oregon for three quarters, then held off a furious rally by the Ducks to crush their national title hopes for a second straight season, this time with a 26-20 victory Thursday night.

Kevin Hogan ran for a touchdown and played a mistake-free game for Stanford (8-1, 6-1 Pac-12). The Cardinal put on a clinic in how to play keep away from a team that was averaging 55.6 points. Stanford ran for 274 yards and held the ball for 42 1/2 minutes.

Heisman Trophy contender Marcus Mariota was inaccurate and under pressure much of the night, but he threw two fourth-quarter touchdown passes, sandwiched around a blocked field goal return for a score by Rodney Hardrick, to pull the Ducks (8-1, 5-1) to 26-20 with 2:12 left.

Oregon couldn't recover a second onside kick and Stanford ran out the clock.

And the biggest winners of all? No. 3 Florida State. The Seminoles don't have to worry about the Ducks nudging them out of second place in the BCS standings.

The Seminoles were in danger of slipping to third in the BCS if Oregon could have registered a big road victory against a quality opponent. Now, Florida State faces a manageable remaining schedule with a good chance to win its way to the BCS championship game at the Rose Bowl in January.

Stanford won a three-point game in overtime at Oregon last year to deny the Ducks a chance to play for the national title. It didn't look as if there would be any drama in the return bout on the Farm. Stanford led 17-0 at halftime and added three more field goals by Josh Williamson in the second half.

Oregon looked like dead Ducks, down 26-0 early in the fourth with Stanford hammering away behind Gaffney, who set a school record with 45 carries. Even after Oregon finally broke the seal with a 23-yard touchdown pass from Mariota to Daryle Hawkins, the Cardinal went on another time consuming drive and attempted a long field goal that would have sealed it.

BAYLOR

coach Art Briles said afterward he hopes Reese could be back for a bowl game.

Baylor trailed 5-3 after a strange sequence that started at the end of the first quarter when the Bears were penalized 38 yards on one play, and had a player's ejection overturned before he made a touchdown-saving play.

After Petty scored on a 1-yard keeper with a minute to go in the first half, Oklahoma gave the ball right back when Blake Bell threw an interception right into the arms of linebacker Eddie Lackey at the Sooners 38.

Petty ran 14 yards on third-and-10 before a double-pump throw to Antwan Goodley, whose Big 12-leading ninth TD catch was a spectacular grab with both arms fully extended. He held on for a 24-yard play that put the Bears up 24-5 at halftime.

Goodley made it 10 touchdown receptions he had a 25-yard catch with 9 minutes left in the game. He finished with six catches for 80 yards.

Petty completed 13 of 26 passes for a season-low 204 yards. He ran 16 times for 45 yards.

Bell finished 15-of-35 passing for 150 yards with a touchdown and two interceptions. Oklahoma had 237 total yards.

The Bears are 5-0 at home against Top 25 teams since the start of the 2011 season. That includes a 45-38 win over the Sooners two years ago in a game that likely clinched the Heisman Trophy for Robert Griffin III, and 52-24 last November over Kansas State, which arrived in Waco as the No. 1 team in the BCS standings.

Baylor got penalized 38 yards on one play late in the first quarter, including a targeting penalty and two flags for unsportsmanlike conduct, setting up Oklahoma at the 7.

The Sooners failed to score when Bell was tackled for a 1-yard loss on fourth-and-goal from the 1 by cornerback K.J. Morton, who had been called for targeting only a few plays earlier.

Morton was flagged after a vicious hit on Sterling Shepard that knocked the ball loose and laid out the receiver. Officials reviewed the play and determined it was a shoulder-to-shoulder hit, overturning Morton's ejection and keeping him in the game. But the penalty still stood, and there was extra yardage tacked on for the calls against cornerback Ahmad Dixon for unnecessary roughness and then taking his helmet off while on the field.

Two plays after Bell was stopped on fourth down, Petty was sacked in the end zone by Dominique Alexander for a safety. Jalen Saunders then returned the free kick 55 yards to the Baylor 12, though the Sooners had to settle for Michael Hunnicutt's 22-yard field goal.

The teams traded missed field goals before Linwood ran for 20 yards on his first carry of the game. That was the start of a 69-yard drive that took 74 seconds and ended with Petty scoring on a 5-yard run that made it 10-5.

Oklahoma finally got in the end zone when Bell threw a 10-yard TD pass to Roy Finch on a fourth-and-3 play with 3:20 left in the third quarter.

LAKERS 99
ROCKETS 98

HOUSTON — Steve Blake hit a 3-pointer with 1.3 seconds remaining to lift the Los Angeles Lakers to a 99-98 victory over the Houston Rockets and Dwight Howard on Thursday night.

Houston led by two points before Blake took the inbounds pass from Jodie Meeks and made the shot to win the game.

The Rockets had a chance to win it at the buzzer, but Patrick Beverley's 3-point attempt bounced off the backboard.

James Harden had 35 points and Howard finished with 15 points and 14 rebounds against his former team. Howard missed seven free throws in the last 3 1-2 minutes that could have secured the win for Houston.

Howard spurned the Lakers to sign an $88 million deal with Houston, joining Harden and a team that made the playoffs last season for the first time since 2009.

The Rockets took their first lead since the first quarter on a dunk by Chandler Parsons following a steal by Harden that made it 93-91 with about 4 minutes left.

NUGGETS 109
HAWKS 107

DENVER — Ty Lawson had 23 points and eight assists and the Denver Nuggets held on to beat the Atlanta Hawks 109-107 on Thursday night to give new head coach Brian Shaw his first win.

Nate Robinson added 15 points and JaVale McGee had 14 for Denver (1-3), which rallied from eight points down in the fourth quarter before surviving a late Atlanta rally.

The win leaves Utah (0-5) as the NBA's only winless team.

Paul Millsap scored a season-high 29 points and grabbed 10 rebounds for the Hawks but missed a short jumper that would have tied the game with 1.9 seconds left. Al Horford, who had 21 points, grabbed the rebound but his shot was off as time expired.

HEAT 102
CLIPPERS 97

MIAMI — Dwyane Wade scored 29 points, 11 in the fourth quarter, and the Miami Heat held off the Los Angeles Clippers 102-97 on Thursday night.

LeBron James added 18 points for the Heat (4-2), who won their third straight and extended their club record by scoring at least 100 points in a sixth consecutive game to start the season. Chris Bosh, playing for the first time since his wife delivered a baby earlier this week, finished with 12 points for Miami.

Blake Griffin had 27 points and 14 rebounds for the Clippers (3-3). His dunk with 31 seconds left got the Clippers within four, but Griffin allowed about 15 seconds to run off the clock without fouling James on the ensuing possession.

What food allergy sufferers don't know can kill them

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 25-year-old woman with a food allergy. Last year I was a guest at a Thanksgiving dinner where the host insisted I could eat the food "since there was just a little in there."

I understand that making separate food is difficult, but all I ask is that people let me know if a dish contains an ingredient that will make me sick. At best, an allergic reaction is uncomfortable. At worst, it can be life-threatening.

Would you please print a message about allergy awareness before the holidays? If you do, perhaps someone will be spared what I went through. — NOT PICKY, REALLY ALLERGIC IN ILLINOIS

DEAR REALLY ALLERGIC: I'm glad to raise awareness because every year there is at least one story in the media about some poor individual winding up in an emergency room or dying because of an allergic reaction. Exposure to even a TRACE of a substance that an individual is allergic to is dangerous because "just a little" CAN hurt you.

The symptoms of a potentially fatal allergic reaction — which have appeared in this column before — are a tingling sensation, itching or metallic taste in the mouth followed by hives, a sensation of warmth, asthma symptoms, swelling of the mouth and throat area, difficulty breathing, vomiting, diarrhea, cramping, a drop in blood pressure and loss of consciousness. The symptoms can occur in as few as five to 15 minutes after exposure, but life-threatening reactions may progress over several hours. Someone experiencing these symptoms should be treated at the nearest emergency room or hospital.

This information was provided by Food Allergy Research and Education, an organization whose mission is to raise public awareness about food allergies, provide education and advance research. Its website is loaded with valuable information on this important subject. Check it out at www.foodallergy.org.

DEAR ABBY: Last week I attended two events for my grandchildren. One was a school concert, the other a dance recital. Both times, during the performance I saw electronic devices turned on throughout the audience. It seemed that parents were encouraging children to play video games, watch movies or surf the Internet instead of pay attention to the show. It drove me crazy.

What are these parents teaching their children? Not only are they missing out on the experience, but they are also being taught terrible manners. I held my tongue, but it was a struggle because I wanted to slap the parents in the back of the head. (I'm old school.) Am I wrong? — HOLDING MY TONGUE

DEAR HOLDING: No, you're 100 percent right. Before many performances, the director or principal will request that electronic devices be turned off. That's what should have been done at the concert and recital you attended. Parents who allow or encourage their children to behave this way aren't doing their job, which is to teach them to be respectful of the performers and the effort that was put into the show.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, Nov. 8, 2013:

This year you will be more optimistic and expressive than you have been for quite a while. If you are single, you might feel bowled over by your popularity. Before you know it, you could be acting like a kid in a candy store. Date as much as you want. You will know when you connect with someone significant. If you are attached, the two of you could have your share of misunderstandings, but you'll learn to see them as quick passages. You will relate on an intense level. AQUARIUS is a loyal friend.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ You could be dealing with someone who thinks he or she is in charge. You might prefer to not take this person on. Anger builds and comes out in a meeting. Choose your words with care; you won't be able to take them back later. Tonight: Let the fun begin.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ Keep reaching out to someone at a distance. This person might be resistant at first, but you will be able to help him or her see your logic. A discussion about your feelings with a child or loved one needs to happen soon, because the other party is on edge. Tonight: Chat over dinner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ You have an opportunity to reach out to someone you really care about. It is time for a one-on-one conversation. Make a point of having this chat as soon as possible; otherwise, you might be unduly concerned or uptight. Tonight: Have a discussion over dinner.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ You have a great sense of when is and when is not a good time to bend for someone else. A friend or loved one could have pushed you very hard. You might decide to go along with this person one more time only to be sorry that you did later. Tonight: Curb your anger.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ Get as much done as possible. You'll want to free up time earlier than on most Fridays. You will enter a very social period this weekend. You might network some, but you also will become a party animal soon enough. Tonight: Sort through your many invitations and requests.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Focus on the lighter side of what is happening. Detach, and you won't get triggered. Tempers will flare otherwise, and you easily could lose your temper. Be aware that tension might build all day long. Tonight: Make plans that will allow you to work through some of the stress.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★ You might have difficulty getting going. So much so, you might decide to cancel plans and assume the role of couch potato. Everyone needs to take some much-needed down time sooner or later. That time is now for you. Tonight: You might get a last-minute urge to go out.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ You are all smiles and seeing life from a Friday point of view. How you deal with a very assertive friend might surprise him or her. You rarely lose your temper when dealing with this person, so he or she will need to be ready to accept this side of you. Tonight: Mosey on home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22- Dec. 21) ★★★★ Deal with a money matter as quickly as possible. You could be pondering an important decision. If you can take the weekend to mull over this issue, do. Try not to get into a tiff with a difficult associate. Return calls later in the afternoon. Tonight: Go with the most fun option.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ You might have been toying with the idea that you would like to do something silly. Your sense of humor and the time you spend to involve someone else demonstrates your caring far more than you realize. Tonight: Be clear about your plans in order to avoid a misunderstanding.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ You might want to be a couch potato just for a day. Everyone, including you, needs time off to do what he or she wants — even if that is doing nothing. You put yourself out for others so often that you do not make enough time for you. Tonight: Catch a second wind.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ Use the daylight hours to the max, when success seems to travel with you. Your unusual creativity and charisma draw many people toward you. Complete as much as you can today, while the Force is with you. Tonight: Vanish. Let others wonder where you are.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Ace of ◇

After South's one-heart opening, West overcalled two diamonds, certainly not everyone's choice. Many would start with double. Both South and West caught a fit with their partner, though values were scarce. North raised to two hearts and East bid three diamonds.

South, with exciting distribution and a partner who raised him, correctly continued with three hearts. West had a dilemma. What in the world was going on here? He held 23 points, almost all aces and kings, and everyone else was bidding!

West doubled with gusto. He would teach them a lesson they would never forget! South made 11 tricks on the ace of diamond's lead! Ace of spades and another spade would have held him to 10 tricks. Doubled!

It takes a club lead from North to beat six diamonds by East-West and it takes a spade lead to beat six no-trump. Five diamonds and three no-trump are unbeatable. West should have just pursued his offensive chances and ignored the enemy bidding.

There is an old saying in bridge: Respect your vulnerable opponents. West is busy memorizing this advice right now.

Dazzling Twitter debut sends stock soaring 73 percent

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Shares of Twitter went on sale to the public for the first time Thursday, instantly leaping more than 70 percent above their offering price in a dazzling debut that exceeded even Wall Street's lofty hopes.

By the closing bell, the social network that reinvented global communication in 140-character bursts was valued at $31 billion — nearly as much as Yahoo Inc., an Internet icon from another era, and just below Kraft Foods, the grocery conglomerate founded more than a century ago.

The stock's sizzling performance seemed to affirm the bright prospects for Internet companies, especially those focused on mobile users. And it could invite more entrepreneurs to consider IPOs, which lost their luster after Facebook's first appearance on the Nasdaq was married by glitches.

In Silicon Valley, the IPO produced another crop of millionaires and billionaires, some of whom are sure to fund a new generation of startups.

Twitter, which has never turned a profit in the seven years since it was founded, worked hard to temper expectations ahead of the IPO, but all that was swiftly forgotten when the market opened.

Still, most analysts don't expect the company to be profitable until 2015. Investors will be watching closely to see whether Twitter was worth the premium price.

Thursday's stock surge was "really not as important as you might think," said Kevin Landis, a portfolio manager with Firsthand Funds, which owns shares in Twitter. "What really matters is where the stock is going to be in six months, 12 months."

The most anticipated initial public offering of the year was carefully orchestrated to avoid the dysfunction that surrounded Facebook's debut.

Trading on the New York Stock Exchange under the symbol TWTR, shares opened at $45.10, 73 percent above their initial offering price.

In the first few hours, the stock jumped as high as $50.09. Most of those gains held throughout the day, with Twitter closing at $44.90, despite a broader market decline.

The narrow price range indicated that people felt it was "pretty fairly priced," said JJ Kinahan, chief strategist at TD Ameritrade.

The price spike "clearly shows that demand exceeds the supply of shares," said Wedbush analyst Michael Pachter.

Earlier in the day, Twitter gave a few users rather than executives the opportunity to ring the NYSE's opening bell. The users included actor Patrick Stewart, who played Captain Jean-Luc Picard in "Star Trek: The Next Generation"; Vivienne Harr, a 9-year-old girl who ran a lemonade stand for a year to raise money to end child slavery; and Cheryl Fiandaca of the Boston Police Department.

Twitter raised $1.8 billion Wednesday night when it sold 70 million shares to select investors for $26 each. But the huge first-day pop left some analysts wondering whether the company could have raised more. Had Twitter priced the stock at $30, for instance, the company would have taken away $2.1 billion. At $35, it would have reaped nearly $2.5 billion. That's a lot for a company that's never made a profit and had revenue of just $317 million last year.

There's no doubt, of course, that Thursday's stock price jump made a lot of Twitter stockholders happy — and if it stays this high, or goes even higher, they'll keep grinning. But the money that these shareholders might make from any stock sale doesn't go to the company.

"Ultimately what you want is a nice pop," said Roger Entner of Recon Analytics. "Twitter now just has to deliver on all this."

Named after the sound of a chirping bird, Twitter's origins date back to 2005, when creators Noah Glass and Evan Williams were trying to get people to sign up for Odeo, a podcasting service they created. Odeo didn't make it.

By early 2006, Glass and fellow Odeo programmer Jack Dorsey began work on a new project: teaming with co-worker Christopher "Biz" Stone on a way to corral text messages typically sent over a phone.

It was Glass who came up with the original name Twttr. The two vowels were added later. The first tweets were sent on March 21, 2006.

By 2007, Twitter was incorporated with Dorsey as the original CEO and Williams as chairman. Dorsey and Williams would eventually swap roles. Both remain major shareholders, though neither runs the company. Glass, meanwhile, was effectively erased from Twitter's history, writes New York Times reporter Nick Bilton in "Hatching Twitter: A true story of money, power, friendship, and betrayal."

Since those early days, the site has attracted world leaders, religious icons and celebrities, along with CEOs, businesses and countless marketers and self-promoters.

The company tried to avoid the trouble that plagued Facebook's high-profile debut, which was marred by technical glitches. As a result, the Securities and Exchange Commission fined Nasdaq $10 million, the largest ever levied against an exchange.

The clumsy debut had lasting consequences for Facebook, which closed just 23 cents above its $38 IPO price on that first day and later fell much lower. The stock needed more than a year to climb back above $38.

Those problems likely led Twitter to the NYSE.

Thursday's trading went on "pretty flawlessly," Kinahan said.

At its IPO price, Twitter was valued at roughly 28 times its projected 2013 revenue — $650 million based on its current growth rate. In comparison, Facebook trades at about 16 times its projected 2013 revenue, according to analyst forecasts from FactSet.

Oil price falls

The price of oil fell Thursday, as an unexpected rate cut by the European Central Bank strengthened the dollar and OPEC said global supplies of oil are abundant.

Benchmark U.S. crude for December delivery fell 60 cents to $94.20 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Brent crude fell more sharply, dropping $1.78, or 1.7 percent, to $103.46 a barrel on the ICE Futures exchange.

Aiming to encourage Europe's modest growth rate, the ECB cut its benchmark interest rate to a record low 0.25 percent, a move not generally expected until at least next month.

The cut weakened the euro and strengthened the dollar, making commodities like crude more expensive for traders using currencies other than the U.S. currency. The euro was down to $1.3365 from $1.3520 before the rate cut was announced.

A report from some of the world's key oil producers forecasting rising energy supplies in the coming years also weighed on prices.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries said it expects demand for its crude oil to fall to 29.2 million barrels a day in 2018 from 30.3 million barrels a year this year.

Most metals fall

December gold fell $9.30 to $1,308.50 an ounce. Silver, platinum and palladium also fell. Copper rose.

Silver for December delivery fell 11.1 cents to $21.657 an ounce and December high-grade copper rose 1.15 cents to $3.2485 a pound.

December palladium fell $5.20 to $759.15 an ounce and January platinum fell $10.60 to $1,456.80 an ounce.

New Texas AD says no changes for changes' sake

By Jim Vertuno
Associated Press

AUSTIN — New Texas athletic director Steve Patterson said Thursday he doesn't intend to "make change just for the sake of making change" at the nation's wealthiest athletic department and he didn't discuss specific Longhorns' sports during his job interview.

"I don't see it as a situation where we need a dramatic turnaround," Patterson said at his introductory news conference on campus. "I don't anticipate monstrous changes to the department."

Patterson doesn't yet have a contract and won't until at least next week when the university's board of regents is expected to approve him as the replacement for DeLoss Dodds, who built Texas into one of the most powerful athletic departments in the country over the last 32 years.

"This is a premier program, it has been for decades," Patterson said. "We want to compete for championships, day in and day out."

Patterson inherits a department that has struggled to win at the level fans expect of a program so rich with resources.

Mack Brown's football team has fallen back into the pack in the Big 12 after playing for the 2009 national championship. Men's basketball had its first losing season since 1997-1998. And baseball, a perennial power, missed the Big 12 tournament last season.

Patterson

Brown, basketball coach Rick Barnes and baseball coach Augie Garrido all have been at Texas more than 15 years and their recent struggles have led to speculation their jobs are on the line.

Patterson noted Texas has "very successful coaches."

When asked what he sees as his biggest challenge, Patterson said he wants to "take some time to evaluate the culture, the people that are here, the way the organization is heading ... I don't see this as an organization that is over the ditch."

Patterson met with department staff Thursday morning and planned to meet with coaches in the afternoon.

Patterson, 55, was hired away from Arizona State, where he had led the Sun Devils athletic department for less than two years. Prior to that, he had executive roles with the Houston Rockets and Portland Trail Blazers in the NBA and the Houston Texans in the NFL. He also earned his undergraduate and law degrees from Texas.

"It's nice to be home," Patterson said. "(Texas) is a great brand. It's a great life-changing place."

Patterson will find Texas a challenge in ways beyond the wins and losses.

Although respected, the school's rivals have sometimes felt Texas carried too much weight in conference decisions. How Patterson maintains relationships with the Big 12 and its members will be watched closely.

Former women's track coach Bev Kearney, who was forced to resign after revelations of a romantic relationship with one of her former athletes, has filed state federal discrimination complaints and has threatened to sue the university.

Patterson's boss, school President Bill Powers, is in the middle of his own fight with some regents who want to replace him. Three regents, including Steve Hicks, one of the members of the advisory committee that interviewed Patterson, were involved in efforts last January to gauge Alabama coach Nick Saban's potential interest in coming to Texas.

Texas fans also will be eager to know if the Longhorns will resume the regular-season rivalry with Texas A&M, which broke up in 2011 when the Aggies left the Big 12 for the SEC.

And Patterson will also have to study where to build a new basketball arena amid plans for a new medical school. And it won't be long before it will be time to negotiate a new contract for the annual rivalry football against Oklahoma in Dallas.

That game is scheduled to be played at the Cotton Bowl through 2020 and the schools will again have to decide whether to keep it there or break tradition by either moving to another neutral field or making it a home-and-home series.

Attorney says Martin was harassed by teammates

By Steven Wine
Associated Press

DAVIE, Fla. — Jonathan Martin's new attorney says the Miami Dolphins tackle endured harassment from teammates that went far beyond the traditional locker room hazing, including a malicious physical attack and daily vulgar comments.

The allegations were made in a statement Thursday night by David Cornwell, hired this week as Martin's attorney.

"These facts are not in dispute," Cornwell said.

Martin, upset by treatment he considered abusive, left the Dolphins last week. His agent then complained to the Dolphins, who suspended guard Richie Incognito.

The NFL is investigating whether Incognito harassed or bullied Martin, and whether their teammates and the organization mishandled the matter.

Cornwell is a lawyer who has represented the NFL and several prominent players, including Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Ben Roethlisberger. He was a candidate in 2009 to become executive director of the NFL Players Association, a job that went to DeMaurice Smith.

Cornwell's statement alleges an unidentified Dolphins player threatened Martin's sister in vulgar fashion.

"For the entire season and a half that he was with the Dolphins, he attempted to befriend the same teammates who subjected him to the abuse with the hope that doing so would end the harassment," the statement said. "This is a textbook reaction of victims of bullying. Despite these efforts, the taunting continued. ...

"Eventually, Jonathan made a difficult choice. Despite his love for football, Jonathan left the Dolphins. Jonathan looks forward to getting back to playing football. In the meantime, he will cooperate fully with the NFL investigation."

The Dolphins and Incognito's agent didn't respond to requests for comment on Cornwell's statement.

Some say Martin, a Stanford graduate who went about his business quietly, handled the situation well. But pro football is a macho world, and some players believe Martin should have responded more firmly.

"Is Incognito wrong? Absolutely. He's 100 percent wrong," New York Giants safety Antrel Rolle said. "No individual should have to go through that, especially in their workplace.

"But at the same time, Jonathan Martin is a 6-4, 320-pound man. I mean, at some point and time you need to stand your ground as an individual. Am I saying go attack, go fight him? No. I think we all understand we can stand our ground without anything being physical."

Cornwell disagreed.

"Jonathan Martin's toughness is not at issue," Cornwell said. "The issue is Jonathan's treatment by his teammates."

Dolphins players have robustly defended Incognito, long considered among the NFL's dirtiest players. He's now a notorious national villain, but teammates praise his leadership and loyalty.

They've been less passionate in their support of Martin, saying he and Incognito behaved like best friends.

"They did a lot of stuff together," tackle Tyson Clabo said. "So if he had a problem with the way he was treating him, he had a funny way of showing it."

Martin is with his family in California to undergo counseling for emotional issues.

A senior partner in a New York law firm was appointed by NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell to investigate possible misconduct and prepare a report. DeMaurice Smith, executive director of the NFL Players Association, said Thursday that he continues to be in touch with those involved.

"The NFLPA has taken steps to ensure that every one of our affected members is represented," Smith said in a statement. "It is our duty as a union to learn the full facts, protect the interests of players involved and hold management accountable to the highest standards of fairness and transparency."

Brian Gay hits his shot to the 18th green at the McGladrey Classic on Thursday in St. Simons Island, Ga.

Brian Gay, Briny Baird lead at Sea Island

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga. — Heavy fog allowed Brian Gay a quick nap, and he no longer felt so sluggish after traveling halfway around the world from Shanghai to Sea Island.

Gay had enough energy Thursday to make eight birdies on his way to a 7-under 63, giving him a share of the lead with Briny Baird among early starters in the McGladrey Classic. The opening round could not be completed because of a fog delay lasting nearly two hours.

Once the sun burned off the fog, the Seaside course was a pushover with virtually no wind. George McNeill ran off five straight birdies and was 8 under with two hole remaining. Will MacKenzie reached 7 under through 16 holes until dropping three shots in two holes for a 66.

The morning fog off coastal waters could not have been better for Gay.

"I was super tired," he said.

Players were told the round would resume when the fog lifted. Gay didn't want to stand around on the range. He also wanted to stay loose. So he took a chance by going into the locker room at Sea Island, relaxed in a leather chair for a quick nap and then warmed up for the second time.

"I felt pretty good when I teed off," he said. "I felt like I had a lot more energy."

The McGladrey Classic is the third event in Gay's most unusual itinerary — four PGA Tour events in four weeks in four countries. He started two weeks ago at the CIMB Classic in Malaysia, and then flew eight hours to Shanghai for the HSBC Champions. He would not have played this week except that it's only about three hours from his home in Orlando, Fla., and he loves the Seaside course. And then he'll finish out the fall portion of the PGA Tour schedule next week in Mexico.

Scott Piercy and Boo Weekley also were in China last week, and each opened with a 67.

Ponder, Peterson help Vikings rally to beat Skins

By Dave Campbell
Associated Press

Vikings	34
Redskins	27

MINNEAPOLIS — Adrian Peterson ran for 75 yards and two scores and the Minnesota Vikings stopped the Washington Redskins at the 4 in the final seconds to hold on for a 34-27 victory Thursday night.

Christian Ponder went 17 for 21 for 174 yards with two touchdowns and an interception before leaving late in the third quarter with an injured left shoulder. John Carlson had seven catches for 98 yards and a touchdown for the Vikings (2-7).

Robert Griffin III was 24 for 37 for 281 yards and three touchdowns for the Redskins (3-6), who led 27-14 early in the third quarter. But Santana Moss couldn't get his second foot in bounds on a pass in the corner of the end zone on fourth down, giving Minnesota the victory.

John Force goes to finale with 16th title in hand

By Jenna Fryer
Associated Press

As he lined up for the final round at Las Vegas two weeks ago, John Force refused to look over at his competitor.

Force had a shot to wrap up a record 16th Funny Car title and couldn't let the emotions of racing his daughter affect the outcome.

"I turned the switch on, I didn't even want to know that was Courtney next door to me," Force recalled.

He avoided Courtney after they both advanced out of the semifinals at the NHRA Toyota Nationals, and told his youngest daughter after the event that he loved her, always wants her to do her best — but he just couldn't be around her that day.

"I didn't need the emotion to take over that that's my little girl, or I would have choked. I needed that round. Probably the worst that I've ever needed to win a round to win a championship," Force said. "I needed it in my whole career more than my first championship. This is the one that's going to keep John Force in business."

Force

Force went on to beat Courtney, wrapping up the title in the penultimate event of the NHRA season. It's made this weekend's finale at Auto Club Raceway at Pomona, Calif., a coronation for the 64-year-old drag racer.

The championship comes at a crossroads for the larger-than-life Force, who won't pick up his AARP card and slide quietly into some blissful life of retirement. He wants to keep racing and he wants his team to stay in business, so he's fighting hard to do so despite losing his two biggest sponsors in a brutal 1-2 punch earlier this year.

In separate and unrelated decisions, both Ford and Castrol motor oil said they are pulling their support of John Force Racing after the 2014 season in what both companies said were pure business decisions.

Force has is working hard to find replacement money, but learned from the late Dale Earnhardt that winning is the ultimate selling point.

"Earnhardt made the statement, he told his people in the boardroom, I was there, 'I'll do the winning, you guys sell me,' " Force said. "Well, I'm not exactly Dale Earnhardt. I don't try to kid nobody. He had confidence like you couldn't believe. But so do I."

Force has hired motorsports agency Just Marketing Inc. to lead his sponsorship search. He's also using Octagon Entertainment, publicist Rogers and Cowan and is bringing back the reality show that features Force and his family, including drag racing daughters Brittany and Courtney.

"I was on my toes wanting to close this thing out. I didn't want to have to go to Pomona," Force said. "I like the excitement, you know what I mean, the hype. But I wanted to close it. I couldn't take any chances. I'm trying to sell corporate America. I needed to deliver and show that I could win. I've got to find new partners for 2015. I needed to have that championship as part of it."
