U.S.-China Accord Officially Adopted

Taiwan Given 'Status Quo' Offer

PEKING (AP) — The United States and communist China established formal diplomatic relations at the stroke of midnight Sunday after 30 years of mutual suspicion, misunderstanding and bloodshed.

Just before midnight, the Peking government that for years vowed to "liberate" Nationalist China made a dramatic announcement: it wants to negotiate a reunification with Taiwan that would preserve the "status quo" on that capitalist island.

No ceremony marked the moment as the world's wealthiest and the world's most populous nations officially ended their long enmity. But the good cheer was obvious — some Peking youths pasted up a wall poster on Wangfuching, Peking's main shopping street, that read simply, "LOVE."

Chinese Back Agreement

"We want to have more contact with the American people in all fields," it added in Chinese.

"It should have happened a long time ago," gray-bearded passerby Kao Chicheng told a reporter. "For the sake of the peace of the world. Ting Hao — it's very good."

Peking's surprise announcement calling for reunification talks also said China was halting its bombardment of the Nationalist islands ofhQuemoy and Matsu. This "war" between the two Chinas had lasted for 20 years.

The decision announced by President Carter Dec. 15 meant an end to U.S. diplomatic ties with Taiwan and the recognition of the communist government on New Year's Day, and the termination of the U.S.-Taiwanese mutual defense treaty at the end of 1979.

Leaders Exchange Messages

Carter sent a message to Communist Chairman Hua Kuo-feng on Sunday saying: "The cause of world peace will be served by this historic act of reconciliation" and added that the era of "misunderstanding, confrontation and enmity" was over.

Hua said in a message to Carter that normalization "accords with the fundamental interests of the Chinese and American peoples" and will "exert a favorable influence on the international situation."

A shared concern over Soviet ambitions and a desire for increased trade are the main reasons for the new link between China's roughly 900 million people and the 220 million people of the United States — together more than a quarter of the world's population.

The only events marking this turning point were diplomatic social gatherings planned for today in Washington and Peking.

Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, the main force behind Peking's rapprochement with America, and about 150 guests were to crowd into the modest home of Leonard Woodcock, chief of the U.S. liaison mission here, for a simple party and buffet supper.

Washington Event Scheduled

In Washington, where Teng is to begin an official visit Jan. 28, Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Chinese diplomat Chai Tse-min will toast at a party hosted by the Chinese this evening.

The Kuomin Nationalists, who fled to the island after the communists defeated them in China in 1949, reacted bitterly to U.S. recognition of China.

The artillery duels between the mainland and heavily fortified Quemoy and Matsu began after an unsuccessful communist attempt to battle Taiwan into submission. The shells often have most been contained propaganda leaflets, not explosives.

The New Year's message of the Standing Committee of China's National People's Congress proposed to start transportation, postal services and trade between the mainland and the island.

The statement said China favored a reunification plan that would "respect the status quo on Taiwan and the opinions of people in all walks of life there" and adopt reasonable policies and measures in settling the question of reunification so as not to cause the people of Taiwan any losses.

The message said China wanted to end military confrontation.

China's Hsinhua news agency said Peking television viewers would get their

GREETINGS EXTENDED

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — A group of 2,400 Vietnamese refugees crammed aboard a freighter anchored in Manila Bay unfurled a banner Sunday wishing Filipinos to have what they will not — a Happy New Year.

U.S. Embassy Urges Americans To Leave Riot-Battered Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — The U.S. Embassy urged Americans to leave Iran Sunday as bloody anti-shah rioting exploded anew despite announcements that the embattled monarch will temporarily abandon his Peacock Throne.

Opposition sources said more than 200 persons were killed in a weekend of fighting between anti-shah protesters and troops in the northeast city of Mashhad. The casualty reports could not be independently confirmed.

Despite the announcements, Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's plans remained mysterious. The official media reported he will leave Iran "at a convenient time" for rest and medical treatment of an unspecified nature. Many politicians believe such a move could calm rioting in this Moslem nation of 34 million.

Statement Later Dropped

But state-run Iranian radio later abruptly dropped that report from its newscasts.

It did not explain why the item was dropped and made no further mention of it. But a highly placed source close to the shah said the monarch told him Sunday that he would not leave the country for any reason and that he would not give up the throne.

The source, a longtime confidant of the shah, quoted the monarch as saying the Iranian press reports were the result of a misunderstanding.

Not Leaving Iran

The source, who did not want to be identified by name, said the chiefs of staff of the Iranian armed forces and other senior military officers loyal to the shah were concerned about the media reports and met with the monarch Sunday morning. The shah, who has ruled this country for 37 years, assured the officers he was not considering leaving Iran, the source said.

Aides to Shapour Bakhtiar, the lawyer-politician named by the shah to form a new civilian government, said Sunday he was having trouble recruiting a Cabinet. Bakhtiar, former No. 2 man in the National Front opposition group, had been told by the shah to present his Cabinet list by Sunday, but the aides said he probably could not complete the task before Wednesday.

Bakhtiar was expelled from the National Front on Saturday because he agreed to try to form a new government under a plan that would reduce the shah's powers but allow him to retain the throne.

The head of the National Front, Karim Sanjabi, rejected the plan. Sanjabi and Ayatullah Khomaini, the exiled Shiite Moslem leader who is the most influential figure in the anti-shah movement, both insist peace will come only when the shah abdicates.

Before the reports of a "misunderstanding," palace sources had indicated the shah would leave the country tempo-

By SHAUNA HILL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

OKAY, SO YOU ignored it — all the good advice about eating before and after the party and not drinking after you get sleepy.

Now your alarm clock sounds like the guns of Navarone, your stomach is gurgling ominously and the bed seems to spin.

Sit up slowly, walk to the kitchen without suddenly moving your head, and drink a beer or a another glass of the liquor that made your temples pound.

Although it sounds like adding insult to injury, the "hair of the dog" remedy is the best cure for a hangover, say spokesmen from four local liquor stores.

Steve Prosk of Chuck's Four Way Liquor Store said having a drink the morning after seems crazy, but works for those who can stomach liquor after waking up hung over.

The only other remedy I know of that really works is to drink a lot of Mexican hot sauce straight from the bottle," he said.

John Broome of Crossed Keys Package Store said most hangover remedies are folklore, but getting something in the stomach is a good idea.

"Time is the only real cure, but taking a cold shower wakes you up and running or doing any kind of strenuous exercise makes you sweat (the alcohol) out."

Dr. Alvin J. Crowson, a local psychiatrist, said coffee and aspirin, combination remedies and olive oil help cure hangovers.

"Drinking a small cup of olive oil is supposed to work really well, but I don't know of many people who could get it down," he said.

"The main problem with hangovers is that you remember the night before while you hurt.

"You just have to decide to face reality. You're not kidding anybody if you pretend nothing happened. Acknowledge you were a fool and then go about the business of living."

Swallowing a tablespoon of honey, drinking coffee, fresh air, sleep, tomato juice and beer, and sipping a soft drink were other hangover remedies recommended by the liquor store spokesmen.

Icy Storm Due To Ease

By RHONA SCHWARTZ
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE FRIGID winter storm which left the South Plains covered with sleet and ice whipped through the heart of the state Sunday, knocking down Dallas power lines in its path and leaving an estimated 1,500 residents without electricity throughout the weekend.

The storm is expected to weaken this afternoon, but in the meantime residents in the Texas Panhandle to the Great Lakes region continue to cope with howling snow, freezing rain and sleet.

Highways along the storm's path are expected to remain dangerously slick, and all Department of Public Safety officials strongly urge motorists to stay indoors this New Year's Day.

A new developing upper level storm over northern Mexico will threaten the Dallas-Fort Worth area today as additional rain and sleet are expected to cause further damage to trees and power lines.

Death Count Climbs

Although only 10 minor accidents were reported Sunday in Lubbock, statewide fatality totals for the holiday weekend had reached 17 by 7 p.m. Department of Public Safety officials predicted the death count would reach 35 before midnight, as partygoers and travelers took to the icy roads.

Lubbock's International Airport handled light traffic Sunday afternoon, but airport spokesmen said the facility would close if runways iced up as they did Saturday when the airport closed "the better part of the evening."

Amarillo reported an inch of snow on the ground all day Sunday, while Dalhart reported a 3-inch blanket. Tulia received two inches of snow, while a Matador resident said streets there were impassable because of a coating of ice and snow.

Ice Plagues Area

A two-inch thick layer of ice coated Hereford, and Big Spring and Dimmitt both reported 1 1/2 inches of ice on the ground there. Jayton, Paducah and Plains each had an inch of sleet, which fell steadily through Sunday.

Only a trace of snow was measured in Lubbock, according to the National Weather Service, although sleet and freezing drizzle drenched the city throughout the weekend.

Weather conditions are expected to clear somewhat today, but temperatures will remain bitterly cold.

A travelers advisory remains in effect throughout the day, and residents are urged to be very careful on the still slick roads.

A 20 percent chance snow remains for the South Plains, with temperatures expected to reach the upper teens this afternoon. Tonight's low should be near 5 degrees, with conditions expected to warm slightly Tuesday. Winds are expected to be northerly at 10 to 15 mph today.

Wichita Falls Deluged

Wichita Falls residents were forced to stay indoors Sunday, as two inches of snow engulfed the town. Roads remained impassable, according to one resident, who said road crews did not attempt to sand the streets.

Travelers advisories remain posted for all but the extreme southwestern portions of West Texas today, as residents remain under a winter storm warning due to expected additional snow.

Road conditions are "very poor at

Tech Student, Houston Pair Killed In Wrecks

By ESTHER LONGORIA
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE ICY weather conditions may have been responsible for the weekend deaths of a Texas Tech sophomore killed while on a New Mexico skiing trip, and a Houston pair killed Saturday near Anton.

Dennis Mark Solomon, 20, of 4109 63rd St., was dead on arrival at Coltax General Hospital in Springer, N.M., with injuries suffered in a one-vehicle rollover about 6 a.m. Saturday, about eight miles west of R[illegible], N.M.

Solomon was a passenger in a car driven by Mitch Edmond Brock, also 20, of El Paso. The two young men had been en route to Angel Fire, N.M., on Texas 120 when Brock apparently lost control of the car on a curve and it overturned, according to New Mexico investigative reports. Both men were thrown from the vehicle.

Brock reportedly was treated and released from Colfax General Hospital.

Solomon was a student at Texas Tech, a 1977 graduate of Monterey High School and a member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity.

About twelve hours later, Teresa Campion, 24, and Richard V. Tarkenton, 24, both of Houston, were killed Saturday in a three-vehicle collision on U.S. 84 about two miles east of Anton.

The pair was pronounced dead at the 6:10 p.m. accident scene by Justice of the Peace Earl Ford of Levelland.

Department of Public Safety reports indicated that Tarkenton was eastbound on U.S. 84 when he apparently lost control of his 1977 Chevrolet, crossed the median and was struck by a car driven by Eugene Avalos, 22, of Wolfforth. A car driven by James Edward[illegible] of Lubbock hit Avalos's car.

Edwards was not injured in the accident and Avalos and his wife were treated and released from Methodist Hospital.

Services for Solomon, a native of La Jolla, Calif. and a member of Lubbock's First Baptist Church, are pending with

PUSH TURNED TO WHOOSH — Brad Steck, 8, pushing his brother Tod, 5, on his sled along Lubbock's slippery snow-covered sidewalks Sunday, found out his boots don't give him much traction as he landed with a whoosh on his backside. U.S. Space Fleet To Examine Solar System

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An American space fleet — already scattered across the solar system as 1979 begins — is poised for a year of the most wide-ranging explorations ever made of other worlds.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration, still basking in December's triumphant probe of Venus by a half-dozen spacecraft, is commanding an armada of unmanned Pioneers, Voyagers and Vikings.

Spacecraft will continue their surveys of Mars and Venus in the new year. And other ships are soaring toward close encounters with mammoth Jupiter and distant Saturn, where a lonely little Pioneer is reaching farther into space than working machines have ever gone.

American spacecraft will apparently have the distant planets to themselves this year. The Soviets ended the year with two visits to Venus by fly-by craft that dropped probes to the surface. As far as is known, those are the only planetary searches on the Russians' agenda, but Soviet space flights are seldom announced in advance.

NASA says this "Year of the Planets" should help scientists understand Earth's atmosphere, weather and climate through studies of the simpler systems on other worlds. The probes may also provide new clues to the origin, evolution and future of the solar system.

On a less pragmatic — but perhaps more human — level, scientists sometimes talk of the grand adventure of it all.

"This is by no means a mundane or pedestrian endeavor," said Donald G. Rea of NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena. "It's a 'golly, gee whiz' sort of thing ... Space is one of the few frontiers we have left and there's a lot to explore out there.

"It's an adventure, an escape ... from our everyday existence," Rea said. "And although man isn't going there himself, we are getting to go by proxy: we can send our machines."

The machines' grand tour of the planets includes:

— Jupiter, a colorful giant bigger than 1,200 Earths that's encircled by bands of gold, white and brown. The planet, five times farther from the sun than Earth, seems to be made mostly of hydrogen and helium. Cameras and instruments packed into Voyager 1 will begin examining it and several of its 13, perhaps 14, moons this Thursday. The ship is to sail within 174,000 miles of Jupiter in March.

Voyager 2, trailing its sistership through space, is due at the planet in July. The spacecraft ran into problems last April when its primary communications system failed. But scientists re-established contact on a secondary unit, which has been operating well since.

— Saturn, a golden globe resting in a cradle of brilliant rings. Pioneer 11, after a journey of six years and 1¹₂ billion miles, is to zip beneath the famous rings in September as it flies past Saturn, where no man or machine from earth has ever gone.

The ship will also study Titan, one of Saturn's 10 moons. Nearly half the size of Earth, Titan is seen by some scientists as a likely place to look for life although no such search is planned.

The trail-blazing little Pioneer, along with a now-abandoned sistership, led the way to Jupiter with a visit in 1973-4.

— Venus, wrapped in the pale yellow swirls of sulfuric acid clouds that hide an incredibly harsh landscape. A flock of spacecraft surrounded Venus last month as NASA sent its first probes crashing through the venusian atmosphere to the surface, where they succumbed to intense pressures and 900-degree heat.

But another bundle of instruments, Pioneer Venus 1, is still locked in a long, looping orbit around the planet. It is to remain there, mapping Venus and measuring its atmosphere, for most of the year.

— And Mars, the bright red dot in the night sky that has fascinated generations of science fiction writers. The red, dusty planet was probed and photographed and analyzed in 1976 as two Viking landers searched without success for extraterrestrial life. That headline-making mission has long since ended, but both landers and one of two orbiters are still on the job, relaying more pictures and making regular weather reports.

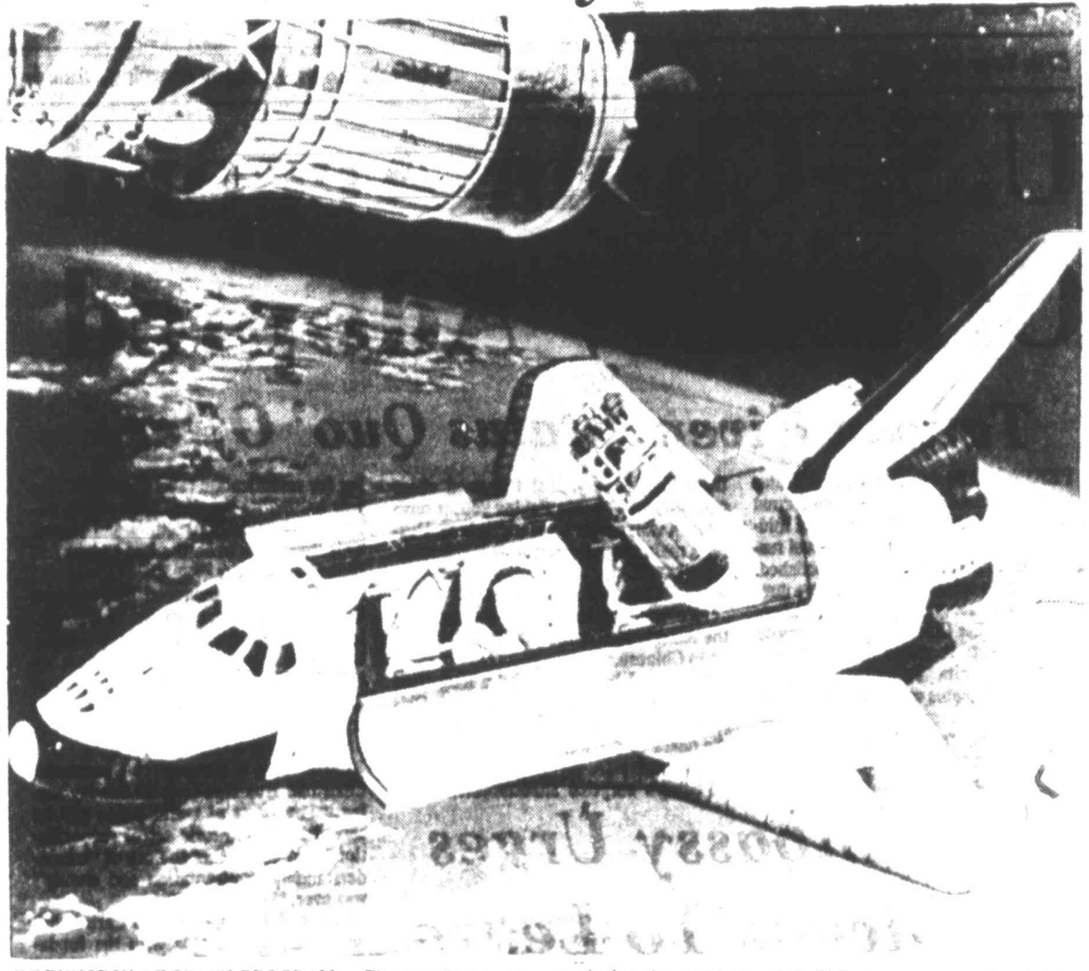

The busy year of space exploration may be capped late in 1979 with the first flight of the long-awaited space shuttle — the next generation of manned spacecraft.

The shuttle, designed as the workhorse of the U.S. space program through the end of the century, is a reusable bus that would ferry people and equipment into space. It will go up like a rocket and glide back down like a plane.

The shuttle, which could be used over and over again, is tentatively scheduled for its maiden flight in September.

Beyond 1979, both Voyagers will fly by Saturn in the next few years, and Voyager 2 may get to Uranus, the seventh most distant planet from the sun. That encounter might come in 1986.

Pioneer 11, its task at Saturn completed, will continue on an endless and silent journey among the stars. It carries a metal plaque engraved with the image of a man and a woman and the astronomical location of Earth.

Described as the workhorse of the U.S. space program, the shuttle is expected to make its maiden flight in September. (AP Laserphoto)

The plaque is there on the off chance that some civilization in a far corner of the galaxy might someday stumble across the Pioneer.

JAYCEES HONOR TECHEX

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Singer John Denver is among the 10 persons named by the U.S. Jaycees as "America's Outstanding Young Men" for 1979. The award has been given annually since 1940 to 10 men "who exemplify the best attributes of the nation's young men between 18 and 36 years of age." Denver was an architecture student at Texas Tech University in the early 1960s.

Hoffman Turns Up In Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Fugitive Abbie Hoffman surfaced briefly this weekend, saying he has had a nose job and two nervous breakdowns in the 10 years since the tumultuous 1968 Democratic National Convention here that made him one of the best known leaders of the counter-culture.

"This is memory lane," said Hoffman, who has been a fugitive since February 1974 when he went underground after being arrested for alleged possession and sale of three pounds of cocaine.

Hoffman came to Chicago on Saturday to work on his autobiography, which he has titled "Soon To Be a Major Motion Picture."

His trip to Chicago was reported Sunday in a copyrighted story in the Chicago Sun-Times.

"I'm not a genius or a media master," Hoffman said. "I am a good storyteller. I am an outlaw. And I am a survivor."

Referring to his breakdowns, he said he had fashioned a life of "controlled schizophrenia."

Hoffman was a leader of the Yippies, whose mass demonstrations against the Vietnam War during the Democratic convention here turned into bloody confrontations with the police that were televised nationally.

Hoffman and seven anti-war activists were indicted on conspiracy and riot charges. Hoffman and four others were convicted in 1970 of "crossing state lines with the intent to cause a riot." U.S. District Judge Julius J. Hoffman also cited the defendants and their attorneys for contempt of court nearly 200 times.

In 1972 the riot convictions and all but 15 contempt citations were dismissed. No jail sentences were issued on the remaining counts.

Animals Stay In Headlines In 1978

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dog bites man made news in 1978. Attacks on French postmen jumped 21 percent. But more heartwarmingly, a stray pooch saved a man from freezing in New York and two sharp cats were honored for heroism by the governor of Delaware.

Mighty oxen, a high-IQ gorilla and a hermaphrodite burro also helped make 1978 a notable year for four-footed, feathered and finny inhabitants.

Hsing-Hsing and Ling-Ling disappointed, and the long-awaited patter of tiny giant panda feet was still unheard at the Washington National Zoo.

But U.S. musk oxen which went to Russia in a 1976 animal exchange have given birth, said Moscow. U.S. oxen also distinguished themselves by winning the international ox-pull title for the second straight year in Nova Scotia.

And in April the 100th golden lion marmoset was born at the National Zoo. They are tiny, graceful monkeys from Brazil. A new gnulet, Bulletin, appeared at the Topeka, Kan., zoo. Gnus are South African antelopes.

But there will be no such news about Hermy, a hermaphrodite burro born with both male and female sex organs in Illinois.

Canine heroism occurred in New York City when a stray dog, later named "Turkey," used his body warmth to save a man who collapsed in snow as deep as his waist. The dog's persistent barking finally attracted passersby. The two cats were cited by Delaware Gov. Pierre du Pont IV for rousing Susan Dyson of Wilmington before her smoke-filled kitchen burst into flames.

The dog Turkey received an award from the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and cats Tiki and Minet got the William O. Stillman award from the National Humane Association.

Porkers' images were heightened in 1978 by a September article in the National Geographic in which Ken Britt praised hogs as being clean, trainable, and non-gluttonous, contrary to popular notion.

Primate newsmakers included Koko, a lowland gorilla who has learned to lie, insult and swear in sign language.

Morris, the finicky TV cat, purred his last commercial at the age of 17 and went to his cream-and-catnip reward in the sky.

Another notable feline death was that of fat cat Blackie, 19, in Sheffield, England. His owner left Blackie a 35,000-pound estate, then worth $77,000, when she died in 1975.

In the world of science, seven Doberman Pinschers proved that narcolepsy, a deep craving for sleep, is of genetic origin. Baboons were rescued from simulated auto wreck tests and a liquid birth control drug for female dogs was introduced by the Upjohn Co.

Thoughts On A 'Special' Day

THE NEW YEAR observance may fast be nearing the point where it is "just another holiday."

While millions mark the occasion by the traditional "ringing out the Old and ushering in the New Year," the fact is the day is viewed with something less than major interest by many.

While many Americans, and others, "take stock" of both their business affairs and personal lives, we suspect a majority see New Year's Day itself as a day of rest, a day to satiate the football appetite, a day to gird for what's ahead.

WHAT'S AHEAD this New Year's has to come under the heading of facts, fancy and who knows?

In the factual category, several major changes affecting the lives of most Americans—by government edict, naturally—are on tap.

First off, the tax revolt notwithstanding, taxes are going up for almost everyone. The reason is that Social Security payroll taxes will rise with the start of the New Year. In all there will be eight more such annual boosts, which will produce $227 billion, the largest peacetime tax increase in history.

On the other side of the coin, about five million American workers will receive automatic 9.5 percent pay raises, not as a reward for greater productivity or some sort of meritorious performance on the job, but because of an increase in the federal minimum wage from $2.65 to $2.90 an hour.

THE BOOST, says the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, will raise the annual wage bill of employers by more than $2 billion.

On another front, today will bring good and bad news to those Americans who depend on food stamps to feed themselves and their families. The good news: Effective today, food stamps will be given to qualified families at no cost. The bad news: Eligibility standards will be tightened to such an extent that as many as one million or more current recipients will no longer be qualified to receive stamps.

Those are some of the "nuts and bolts" of the New Year.

In the background is the upcoming 96th session of Congress, the President's State of the Union message and his annual Budget message, viewed with more interest than usual because of its effect on inflation.

BUT, THERE are other things on the horizon as this New Year Day dawns.

And not all of them are pleasant.

In Iran, near-anarchy in the streets has not only threatened the rule of the Shah of Iran, but the interests of the Western World, the vital oil supplies of the Mideast nation and the balance of power with Soviet Russia.

In Africa, Moscow, with its "hired guns" from Premier Fidel Castro's Cuba, has enlarged its hold in key areas of the huge continent. And, with the deliberate and/or unwitting aid of the U.S. State Department and UN Ambassador Andrew Young, the Communists have been able to make inroads in the Rhodesian and South-West Africa disputes.

In Southeast Asia, hundreds of Indochinese refugees, fleeing from Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos—all Communist slave nations—drift on the seas, homeless.

A YEAR AGO, we noted that 1978 would be not only traumatic but decisive in many ways, for the U.S. and Americans as a people and individuals.

And so it has. Looking to 1979, we see no less challenges and perhaps trauma on the domestic and international scene. The hope is that the men and women who have made mistakes in the past—from the White House down—have learned from them.

On an individual level, the usual thing to do on this day is to recount the past year's accomplishments, failings, blessings. And to look forward to a Happy and Healthy New Year.

Despite problems over which we seem to have little or no control, we indeed do have much for which to be thankful in years past. We do have much to anticipate. And there is good reason to believe that as a nation we will prevail.

If there is one resolution each of us might adopt, it is to act responsibly as American citizens, to keep informed, to maintain an active interest in how we are governed, to stand up for—fight, if necessary—to preserve the Freedom of this Nation, as it was conceived by the Founding Fathers. No less will do.

AN EDITORIAL:

Jury Out On HB47

A BILL TO GET more names into the hat from which jury summonses are drawn has been pre-filed by state Rep.-elect Lloyd Criss, D-LaMarque.

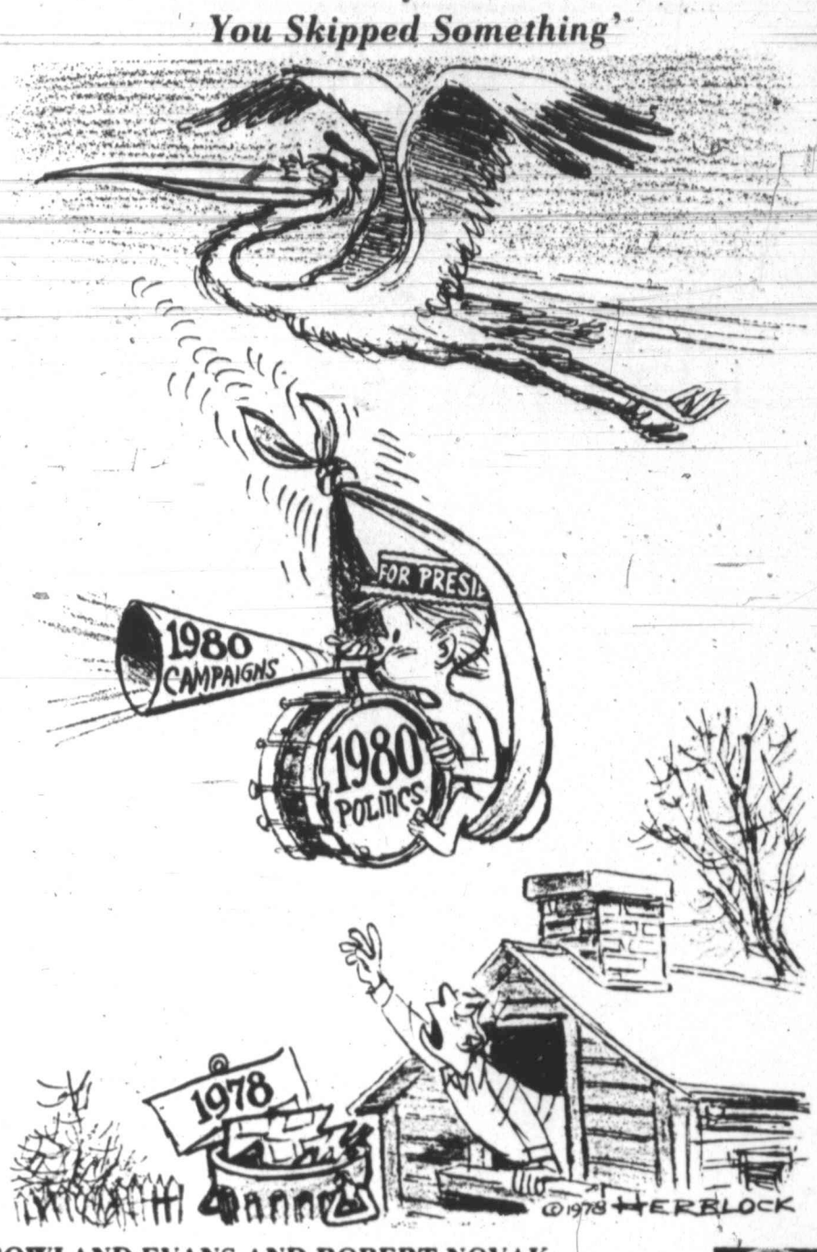

Jury pools would be selected not only from voter registration lists but also from vehicle registration lists and property tax rolls if HB 47 becomes law.

The measure provides a safeguard so that, if a person's name appears on all three lists, it'd go into the pool only once.

This is a needed reform. As more and more litigation requiring jury service swamps the courts, those who avoid possible jury service by failing to register to vote need to be added to the jury pool.

Jury service is a responsibility of good citizenship. Together with court reforms to prevent lawyers from wasting the time of the courts and of jurors, HB 47 is a needed step.

ART BUCHWALD:

Tings Go Better With Honorable Coca-Cola

WASHINGTON—The China-watchers at the State Department have had a busy time of it in the last few weeks.

The biggest news, of course, is that Coca-Cola has struck a deal with the People's Republic of China, which could affect our foreign relations for years to come.

Rodney Pinstripe who mans the China Desk in Foggy Bottom was my main unidentified source for this story.

"Is the Coca-Cola deal good or bad for the United States?" I asked.

"It is both good and bad," he said. "It's good in the sense that if we can get 900 million Chinese to drink a bottle of Coca-Cola a day, it will solve our balance of payments problem."

"What's bad about it?"

"THE BAD thing is if someday the 900 million people decide to wade up on the shores of California and demand five cents deposit back on each empty bottle."

"That could break us," I said.

"Of course the good thing is that it puts the Kremlin under tremendous pressure," he told me, "since the Soviets only have 250 million people, they will have to drink three and a half times as many Pepsi-Colas just to stay even with the Chinese."

"I read somewhere where the Soviets had vowed to drink the Chinese under the table. Does this mean there will be war between the Russians and mainland China?" I asked.

"IT'S HARD to say. There is a definite ideological Marxist split between the two countries. The Chinese believe things will go better with Coke, but the Soviets are adamant that their future depends on the Pepsi generation."

"It sounds like a no-win situation to me," I said.

"At the moment the Soviets have the upper hand because they've developed a retrievable aluminum can which can be recycled into the wing of a MIG-23."

"At the same time the Chinese, having started so late in Cola warfare, have decided to bypass the six-pack and spend their money on developing a 12-pack cardboard container, giving them twice the pause that refreshes."

"I imagine this has made the bottling commissars in Moscow very nervous."

"THEY CAN live with the 12-pack, since the Soviets are now producing 16-ounce Pepsi bottles with double the carbonated throw weight of the 12-ounce Coca-Cola bottle."

"What will happen if the Chinese get a flip-top can of their own?"

"That does worry the Soviets. I don't think they object to us recognizing Red China—nor do they care if we give them Coca-Cola out of a spigot. But if we help the Chinese develop a flip-top Cola can, the Kremlin could get very cranky."

"Why are they so uptight about the flip-top can?"

"Because it would make the Molotov Cocktail Bottle obsolete."

"What evidence do the Soviets have that the Chinese are trying to develop a flip-top can of their own?"

"Their agents report that all over China people are walking around with bandages on their index fingers. Peking has also asked the Coca-Cola Co. to throw in one Band-Aid with each can of soda they buy."

"IT SEEMS a crying shame," I said. "Nixon opened the doors to China and his best friend was Donald Kendall, chairman of Pepsi-Cola. Now that we plan to have normal relations with the People's Republic, Coca-Cola is going to wind up as their national drink."

"Carter will make it up to Pepsi some way."

"How?"

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Backfire On Shulman

EVANS

WASHINGTON—Marshall Shulman, the State Department's Soviet expert, has angered congressmen by advising them not to worry about Soviet influence in Iran because, he argues, Marxism and Islam will never mix.

Since there is clear evidence to the contrary in other Moslem states, Shulman's briefings have angered some of the shrewdest students of the political turmoil in Iran.

Despite all the obvious contradictions between Marxism and Islam, Soviet influence managed deep penetrations into the Egypt of Gamal Abdel Nasser, a near takeover of power that would never have been possible without quiet help from the right-wing Moslem brotherhood.

In Libya, Soviet influence is still pervasive although the Libyan strongman, Col. Moammar Khadafy, is probably the world's purest Moslem leader.

Administration officials other than Shulman believe that Soviet influence is definitely on the rise not only in Iran's major cities but also in its 55,000 villages.

They see gradual enhancement, with Soviet power keeping a low profile at least through the possible second stage of the current turmoil: the shah's loss of control and succession.

Only after that second cycle has run its course, according to the anti-Shulman line, will Soviet influence surface with all its dangers for the West's access to Iranian oil.

IN AN INGENIOUS use of the new campaign funding law that permits political action committees (PACs) to collect and disburse campaign money, two-term Democratic Rep. Henry Waxman of California contributed at least $21,000 to help members of the House Commerce Committee in their 1978 election campaigns.

What makes those contributions especially interesting is Waxman's candidacy to take over the panel's health subcommittee, which had been led by the now retired Rep. Paul Rogers of Florida.

Under House reform laws, subcommittee chairmen are elected by members of the full committee.

Accordingly, Waxman's contributions of $1,000 to $4,000 to each of 11 members of the full committee seems aimed at soliciting their support for the health subcommittee chairmanship—an unexpected and probably unique use of a political action committee.

Originally designed as a vehicle for corporate contributions, the PACs have been set up by politicians to help finance their presidential campaigns or contribute to office-seekers.

Now Waxman has turned this into a device to gain the chairmanship of the powerful health subcommittee at a time health legislation is paramount.

The Ford cabinet and White House senior staff held one of its periodic meetings in Washington Dec. 14, presided over by the former President.

After a review of bleak economic prospects, Ford turned to his former national security adviser—retired Lt. Gen. Brent Scowcroft for a briefing on international affairs.

He then predicted that President Carter would press for relations with mainland China but added he could see no useful purpose in that for the U.S. This seemed to be the consensus of everybody around the table—including Jerry Ford.

Accordingly, all present were perplexed by Ford's unqualified support for Carter's sudden move the next day, Dec. 15, shifting recognition from Taipei to Peking.

A footnote: Ronald Reagan's advisers are recommending that he not agree to a plea from conservative Republican senators promising to restore relations with the Nationalist regime on Taiwan if elected President.

SEN.-ELECT William Cohen of Maine, who as a congressman was the first Republican member of the House Judiciary Committee to advocate impeachment of Richard Nixon, is being incorrectly put into a liberal pigeonhole.

For instance, the White House—without contacting Cohen—lists him in the "leaning favorable" column on the forthcoming strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT II) with the Soviet Union.

Wrong. Cohen is undecided, and if he leans at all it is slightly to the "unfavorable" side.

Similarly, Cohen has been counted as a sure vote for moderate Sen. John Heinz of Pennsylvania in the hot race for Senate Republican campaign committee chairman.

Wrong again. Cohen is undecided and personally prefers Heinz's opponent, conservative Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah. However, he worries about some of Hatch's right-wing allies, who opposed Cohen for the Senate.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

I Jushht Had Two

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This Virginia Payette column first appeared in December, 1972. It is being repeated by request.)

'TWAS THE night before New Year's
When all through the town
The creatures were swinging
And drinking it down.
The bottles were stacked
On the bar with great care,
In hopes that more revelers
Soon would be there.
The children were nestled
All snug in their beds;
No visions of accidents
Danced in their heads.

THE BOOZERS were toasting
With champagne and wine,
All anxious to celebrate
New Year — '79!
More rapid the cocktails
Hosts scurried to pour,
Guests whistled and shouted
And called out for more.
"Now eggnog, now bourbon,
Now scotch and champagne;
On whiskey, on vodka,
We're feeling no pain!"

SO UP TO the punch bowl
The happy ones flew,
To fill up their glasses,
With bubbles and brew.
Forgotten the memories
Of last year's big bashes;
That ended for thousands
In bone-crunching crashes.
They spoke with a slur,
But went straight to their work
And emptied the bottles;
Then turned with a jerk.
And laying their glasses
Along the sideboard
And giving a lurch,
Out the doorway they poured.
They sprang to their cars,
To their gears gave a whistle,
And away they all flew
Like a none-guided missile.

AND THEN in a twinkling
Is heard a loud thunk,
The moaning and groaning
Of each little drunk.
And I heard them exclaim
To the ambulance crew:
"But, offisher, honesht,
I only had two!"

JAY HARRIS:

One Year, One Life

IT WAS A year to boggle the mind.

And there is no indication that the New Year will be any different.

From the crime-ridden streets of Lubbock, Texas, to the strife-torn ones of Teheran, Iran, it was a year that shook society to its foundations, on the economic, political and religious fronts.

The day-to-day life of the average individual perhaps was not much changed, on the surface. Beneath it, a portent of "things to come" touched everyone.

At home, there was more and more government, not less, despite a tax revolt, the full effects of which are not yet known. Abroad, such names as the Panama Canal, the Persian Gulf, Jerusalem, Cairo, Peking, Taiwan and Rhodesia dominated the news. And a place called Jonestown joined other low points in man's history.

IF THERE WAS a common theme, it was the feeling that "the worst of times kept trying to get the upperhand over the best of times."

In Lubbock and on the South Plains of Texas, the mood was for the most part upbeat. The city's fantastic building boom continued, even as clouds appeared on the interest rate horizon. Lubbock's unemployment total, thanks to a highly diversified economy, remained among the lowest in the state and nation.

In the area and elsewhere, the farmer fought to keep his head above water as he continued to play his vital role in feeding and clothing the nation and much of the world.

Texas Tech and the Med School Complex, as well as the County's Health Sciences Center Hospital, enjoyed a good "first year," although facing some challenges ahead. The same could be said for the school's new Coach Rex Dockery and his Red Raider football team.

IT WAS A year of humdrum and surprises on the political scene, locally, statewide, nationally. What it all means remains to be seen.

An era ended for the 19th Congressional District when veteran Cong. George Mahon stepped down after 44 years in a Congress as different as night from day from the time he first entered it.

And the area sent a young Democrat to Washington to assume his mantle, at the same time voting to help elect the state's first Republican Governor in 104 years.

On the national scene, the forces of Conservatism scored some notable gains. But, more than four decades of Big Brother government tightened its fingers even closer around the throats of most citizens.

And in the icy wastes of Canada, a Red metal moon—an atomic powered satellite—fell in fragments, fortunately over a lightly populated area. In some ways, the fallout was far less dangerous than that from other parts of the world's happenings.

IF THERE seemed to be a lack of cohesion in thought in the nation, it could be traced in part to a lack of leadership at many levels.

The President early on in the year pressed his "human rights" theme in foreign policy, enunciated for the most part by the bombast of his black UN Ambassador Andrew Young.

And a man named Solzhenitsyn, who had been there, asked a most pertinent question: Does the West any longer have the will to stand up for what it believes? It was a timely one, for which no one, including the leaders in the West had a ready answer.

It was timely because on several fronts, from Ethiopia and the Horn of Africa to South Yemen, Afghanistan and Iran, the U.S., which was once the bulwark of freedom everywhere seemed to play a waiting game, or worse, quaked before the brusque Russian Bear.

AT YEAR'S END, Moscow was in control of vast areas it only yearned for earlier, and threatened to move more boldly in the Persian Gulf.

At year's end, hopes for a Mideast Peace hung like a thread to the Star on one hand and as a sliver anchored to a Sword on the other.

At year's end, a President announced that America would no longer recognize a longtime ally and friend as a bulwark of free enterprise in the Far East, but instead would shake the hand that has shaped the fate of 800 million slave subjects for four generations or more.

At year's end, a President, a Congress and the Supreme Court of the United States stood at odds with one another and in the dock of public judgment. Both the President and Congress were seen as something less than each could or should be.

At year's end, millions of innocents abroad and next door were the pawns as men from Moscow and Washington talked about SALT II talks and Doomsday.

WHAT DID it all mean? What sort of New Year was it to be? Where does man fit into it all? The God or gods we may worship?

For, whatever it may be worth, one thing did emerge out of the past year's events. Whether it was a thing called Proposition 13 on a positive note, or 960 people blindly following a Pied Piper to needless death, man as an individual still counted—for better or worse.

In a complicated world in which the mass media all too often mesmerizes the mind, it still was a world of people.

One member of a fleeing "People's Boat" one shouting Iranian fanatic, one besieged ruler, one hopeful Prime Minister or President at Camp David, one irate taxpayer, one ill person, one doctor, one couple, a lover, a teacher, one motorist, one mother, one father, one child, one idea, one goal, one defeat, one victory, one Earth, one God...

In the final analysis, it all comes down to that one and oneness. How we put it together, what we do with it. What we sow, so shall we reap. That was what sort of year it was...

Q. "WHY CAN'T you turn in stamps at the U.S. Postal Service and get your money back?"

A. For one thing, the postal folk don't know which stamps might have been licked already. In effect, Stamps, once issued, are deemed unsanitary. For another, stamps are fairly easy to counterfeit.

The rings in each Northern Hemisphere tree are farther apart on the tree's southern side.

Q. "Ask your Love and War man to define that form of marriage known as 'serial monogamy'."

Farmers Occupy Missouri Courthouse Protesting Arrest Of 10 Demonstrators

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo. (UPI) — Leaders of the American Agriculture Movement predict farmers from throughout the country will demonstrate against low farm prices, but law authorities said Sunday there were no signs of a mass protest forming

"We've got farmers representing most of the state (Missouri) coming in," Charles Holiman of Gideon, Mo., said while manning the AAM command post on the first floor of the Butler County courthouse.

"People are coming from Texas, Illinois, Arkansas," he added. "The weather's kind of slowing it down. But I'd say we've got 300 to 350 farmers in the courthouse right now. We're kind of holding the fort, waiting for further developments."

Holiman said the farmers plan to stay in the courthouse until charges are dropped against 10 farmers arrested Friday, the first day of the protest.

The sheriff's office, however, said there were only about 50 farmers in the courthouse and a dozen tractors scattered around town.

"We've heard a lot of talk about it," the dispatcher said. "We're in contact with law enforcement agencies all over and no one is reporting large numbers of tractors heading our way."

Movement leaders had said up to 1,000 tractors would be in Poplar Bluff by Tuesday.

The protest started Friday when about 70 tractors were used to block a four-lane highway for about two hours. Highway Department crews used heavy machinery to clear the farm equipment off the roadway.

Ten farmers were arrested, most for obstructing traffic and resisting arrest, and six signed recognizance bonds Saturday. The four others, including one charged with assaulting a sheriff's deputy, refused to sign the bonds and remained in the jail.

"All they have to do is sign the bond stating they will be there for the court date and we'll let 'em go," said the dispatcher. "But they want all the charges dropped and the sheriff can't do that because they were arrested by the Highway Patrol."

Holiman said the farmers plan to remain in the courthouse until the four are freed.

"There's been a delegation here since the boys were picked up," Holiman said. "We'll be here around the clock until the charges are dropped."

Star Talks Continue As Shutdown Threat Ended

WASHINGTON (AP) — Executives of The Washington Star withdrew a threat to shut down at midnight Sunday and agreed to resume bargaining with two unions in an attempt to head off the permanent closing of Washington's only afternoon newspaper.

As part of the agreement, U.S. District Judge Charles Richey temporarily lifted a court order which would have required the newspaper to continue publication.

George W. Hoyt, the Star's publisher and vice president, earlier had said despite the court order, the newspaper would have to cease publication and file for bankruptcy because it would have no money after midnight. Hoyt made the statements at a court hearing.

"The bankruptcy of The Washington Star will in effect take place tomorrow — or at 12:01 tonight — if all of the unions have not ratified with us," Hoyt declared. He said the newspaper's parent company, Time Inc., would provide no additional money after Sunday without renegotiated contracts from all 11 newspaper unions.

Two unions representing printers and pressmen have not reached agreement on a renegotiated contract.

After a court recess, both the newspaper and lawyers for the printer's union offered the judge a proposal in which the newspaper would postpone filing bankruptcy at least until 2 p.m. (CST) today and the union would seek ratification of a contract within the same deadline.

Federal mediators announced that the pressmen's union would vote on the company's latest contract offer Sunday night and the printers' union would probably vote today after further bargaining talks.

Reporters and editors, uncertain of their paper's future, were preparing what could be the 126-year-old newspaper's last edition for New Year's Day.

"We're working as though we're going to publish," one editor said, not wanting to be identified.

If the Star closes, it will leave the nation's capital with only one general circulation daily newspaper, the Washington Post.

The labor dispute focused on talks between the Star and two unions representing about 260 pressmen and printers in an effort to renegotiate their current contracts.

Time Inc., which bought the Star last March, told its employees last November that without renegotiated contracts from each of the 11 unions that represent 1,275 workers, the newspaper would shut down permanently.

They set a deadline of midnight Sunday.

Tenative agreements have been reached with nine of the 11 unions, including those representing editorial and advertising employees and truck drivers.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're likely to have a chance today to put to use personally a lesson you've learned from a painful past experience.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't take anything at face value today, especially things involving money. There are hidden benefits as well as pitfalls, but each will have to be dug out.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A willingness to cooperate and a desire to want what's good for everyone will go a long way to head off opposition you're likely to encounter today.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Most of the day you'll be imaginative and alert to opportunities, but you'll tire earlier than usual and could end up doing things the hard way.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your methods today are innovative and farseeing. However, you could run into opposition because of your authoritarian actions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You'll meet with resistance today in any situation you apprise selfishly. So long as you consider the other guy, good things can happen.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you're not careful of what you say today you run the risks of something slipping out that will be difficult to retract.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Something you're involved in requires more resources than you have at your disposal. You may have to search for a helpful ally.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) As long as everyone is cordial you'll be as happy as a lark. Unfortunately, with the first encounter of a negative individual you'll go into a tailspin.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You can pass the buck only so long today. If you pile one to many things on others, you'll find the whole project back in your lap.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) There is nothing wrong with your views and thinking today, but you may have to compromise in order to placate someone who is being difficult.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Good things are happening for you today, but unless you are willing to share them your good fortune will be without happiness.

Peace, Prosperity Predicted For 'Sheep Year'

By KAY TATEISHI

TOKYO (AP) — The Year of the Sheep, 1979, will be a year of peace, say Japanese soothsayers familiar with the 3,000-year-old Oriental Zodiac.

The sheep is a timid, defenseless and mild-natured animal, soothsayers say, and his year should be considerably more placid than 1978, Year of the Horse. The sheep also likes to graze leisurely, and the soothsayers interpret this as a sign that the comforts of life will improve in 1979.

According to ancient Oriental custom, the sheep was the eighth animal among 12 to reach the bedside of the dying Buddha to pay homage.

The first was the rat, followed by the ox, tiger, rabbit, dragon, snake, horse, sheep, monkey, rooster, dog and boar. A year was named for each. The 12 animals and what they symbolize are said to influence the year and the character of individuals born during the period.

Sheep Year 1979 opened with what many consider a harbinger of greater peace — the establishment of diplomatic relations between the United States and the People's Republic of China.

Sheep Year people, the old Zodiac says, are gentle, wise and intelligent, generous and kind, but at times stubborn and pessimistic. They are elegant and refined, gregarious, compassionate and loyal, and have high artistic tastes and probing minds — qualities liable to make them over-cautious, indecisive and timid.

Some noted personalities born in the Year of the Sheep are Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, Mount Everest conqueror Sir Edmund P. Hillary, cowboy-singer Gene Autry, comedian Red Buttons, actors Lord Olivier, John Wayne, Robert Stack and Cesar Romero, actresses Celeste Holm, Claire Bloom, Dorothy McGuire and Barbara Stanwyck, and singers Leslie Uggams and John Denver.

Previous Years of the Sheep in the 20th century were 1967, 1955, 1943, 1931, 1919 and 1907. The next is 1991.

Sheep years have had their share of disasters. In 1931, diphtheria killed 17,000 children in the United States and 500,000 people died in five major floods in China. A plague that hit India in 1905 reached its peak in 1907 with deaths totaling 1,316,000. Influenza that began in 1917 spread throughout the world with deaths reaching 25 million in the Sheep Year of 1919.

Most countries in Asia, except Japan and parts of South Korea, still observe the New Year according to the lunar calendar. This year it falls on Jan. 28.

Calendars Not Always Public Information

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — It may be hard to believe with all the calenders around, but the right to know what day it is was once restricted to priests and politicians.

Rufus Fears, associate professor of history at Indiana University and an authority on ancient history, said in an interview the calendar we have now is little changed since it was revised by Julius Caesar 2,000 years ago.

But, he said, the first Roman calendars had gotten enough out of phase with nature that by Caesar's time they needed changes to remain useful. The changes resulted in what had originally been the fifth month being renamed July in honor of Caesar.

"The first Roman calendar appeared possibly as early as 700 B.C. It had only 10 months," Fears said. "January and February were excluded because this was the time when nature was dead and there was little activity among the people. The year started in March when crops were planted.

"To make up for the missing two months, there were floating days which could be manipulated for political advantage by the high priest who controlled the calendar," he said. "The calendar was classified material and available only to high government officials and political leaders."

Fears said the calendars served as a kind of almanac by listing holy days in honor of various deities and also listed days on which public business could be conducted and days when no business was allowed.

About 550 B.C. January and February were added to the calendar to make it more in line with the solar year and because Rome was changing from a society tied strictly to farming to a complex, cosmopolitan empire that operated year round.

"This calendar still had only 355 days, however, and to complete the solar year, the chief priest could add days at his discretion," Fears said. "If not all the days were used, they were cumulative so that the calendar could fall behind.

"Even worse, the priest could be bribed by politicians to insert extra days at a propitious time so that it would be advantageous to the politicians," he added.

"Eventually, the people got fed up with being told arbitrarily when public business could be conducted and when action could not be taken because 'the gods don't favor it,' " Fears said.

"They demanded and received a public calendar which was painted on wood and hung in the forum. It was at this time, about 304 B.C., that freedom of information became an issue and the people's right to know what day it was was established."

The calendar we have today is the one devised by Julius Caesar with slight modifications by Pope Gregory XIII in 1582, Fears said.

AID FOR TURTLES

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — Help is on the way for 10 Plymouth red-bellied turtles threatened by encroaching humans, thanks to a private environmental agency which has bought the reptiles' home. The rare turtles, which have coral-colored undersides, dwell in two ponds near the Myles Standish State Forest here and are endangered by surrounding development. But the Nature Conservancy, a private environmental group based in Washington, has announced plans to purchase the ponds and 183 acres to preserve the turtle sanctuary.

Pope Renews Stance Against Abortions, Divorces

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II appealed to Roman Catholics in a year-end homily Sunday to oppose divorce and abortion with "tenacity and firmness."

The 58-year-old Polish pontiff, reviving a New Year's Eve tradition that had been ignored for more than 100 years, came to downtown Rome's 16th-century Chiesa del Gesu, the principal Jesuit church of the city and one noted for its long nave, lateral chapels and colored marbles.

The papal Mass was held several hours after the 58-year-old pope spoke to crowd of about 20,000 in rain-soaked St. Peter's Square and gave a special blessing to the elderly.

In his homily during the Mass, the pope cited the value of family life and said, "One must defend fundamental values with tenacity and firmness."

He said he was referring to marital fidelity and "respect for the new life, that of the baby, from the moment of conception."

"One cannot say that the principle of divorce and the principle of abortion serve the well-being of man and help make human life more human," the pontiff said.

Last Thursday, addressing Catholic doctors, the pope praised Italian physicians who refuse to perform abortions and characterized Italy's abortion-on-demand law as "painful."

After his Thursday statement against abortion, Italian leftists sharply criticized the pope, ending the universally favorable press and public image he had enjoyed in Italy since his election Oct. 16 as the first non-Italian pontiff in 455 years.

The pope, in his year-end homily, made no reference to lay criticism of his anti-abortion statements, but said, "The church can never dispense itself from the obligation of being the custodian of the (defense of marriage and new life). The custody of these has been assigned to the church of Christ in a way that leaves no doubt."

John Paul II said he was ending the year 1978 with prayers that there would be more brotherhood in the world.

"At the same time," the pontiff added, "we ask forgiveness for all those who are aloof to the brotherhood of man, who destroy the unity of the human family and who threaten and impede it."

Jan. 1 marks the Roman Catholic Church's "Day of Peace," a practice begun by Pope Paul VI in 1968. This year's theme is, "To reach peace, teach peace."

In his noon blessing at the Vatican, the pontiff said, "Today the pope's thoughts and prayers go to the elderly." He said people should not be abandoned because of old age and infirmities, and should not be treated as if they were useless.

"They have experience and sagacity," the pontiff declared.

After the Angelus, a noontime prayer, the pope took special note of people with umbrellas and said, "Umbrellas are necessary in Poland." Thinking of the cold in his native Poland, the pontiff said, "Let's appreciate the climate in Rome."

Rome seldom gets very cold in the winter and snow is rare. December was an unusually warm month.

Hunter Dies In Cold

RIVERTON, Wyo. (UPI) — A 19-year-old rabbit hunter stranded by stuck vehicles did "something you just cannot do" and struck out afoot across a frozen lake for help, despite temperatures that probably reached 50 degrees below zero. He never made it.

Fremont County Coroner Larry Lee said the body of James Bruce Rogers of Riverton, Wyo., who left three companions with the vehicles and had planned to walk as far as 12 miles for help, was taken off the ice of Boysen Reservoir Saturday. Searchers followed his tracks to the body and found it less than two miles from the vehicles.

Fremont County Coroner Larry Lee said the other hunters, all teen-agers from the Riverton area, were rescued unharmed after spending the night in one of the vehicles.

"They had plenty of gasoline and they stayed warm all night," a spokesman for the Fremont County sheriff's office said. "They tried to talk him (Rogers) out of it but he went anyway."

The spokesman identified the three as Eric Eaton, Rory Spillman and Travis Boardman.

The four, in two four-wheel-drive vehicles, became stuck near Boysen Reservoir about 20 miles east of Riverton Friday, Lee said. They stayed with the vehicles but about 5 a.m. Saturday Rogers struck out by himself.

"That's something you just cannot do," Lee said. "He was going to walk to Lakeside Resort clear on the other end of the lake — that's 10 to 12 miles.

"I'm sure what he did, he walked over a ridge toward Lakeside and then he could see a rig across the lake, and then he struck out for that rig. He got a mile and a half and then he started falling down in the snow, and he perished from exposure. That's usually what happens — they start falling and then they just lay down and die. It was maybe 50-below out there.

"These people that leave their vehicles are going to perish in Wyoming in the winter time," the coroner said. "They've got to stay with these vehicles if they're going to survive."

Lee said Rogers, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Rogers of Riverton, probably died within an hour after leaving the vehicles.

"I just can't imagine people doing this. I just don't understand it," he said. "That four-wheel drive and that CB radio aren't half as tough as this Wyoming winter, I'll tell you that."

Executive Set Free In El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Anti-government guerrillas late Saturday released a 34-year-old Dutch executive they had held for more than a month, authorities reported.

They said Fritz Schuitema, general manager of the Salvadoran subsidiary of Holland-based Philips Corp., was freed unharmed just before midnight by his captors, members of the Salvadoran Guerrilla Armed Forces of National Resistance, a group opposed to the government of President Carlos Humberto Romero.

Two British bankers and a Japanese businessman were still being held by guerrilla kidnappers.

Schuitema, kidnapped Nov. 24, was found by a taxi driver north of the capital. His wife, Ana Maria Vander Pol de Schuitema, said he would leave the country for medical treatment because he had been under "serious pressure."

A source close to his family, asking for anonymity, said Schuitema, his wife and mother left secretly for Guatemala by private plane early Sunday to connect with a commercial flight to Holland.

In Eindhoven, the Netherlands, Philips officials said Schuitema had been held in a 9-by-9-foot cell and had been kept informed by the guerrillas of developments connected with his abduction.

The guerrillas had demanded ransom and publication of a manifesto in several countries, including El Salvador, as a condition for Schuitema's release.

Philips reportedly paid a cash ransom, but the sum was not disclosed. The company also paid for publicaton of the manifesto, an attack on Romero, in several countries, but could not have it published in El Salvador because of a ban on "subversive materials."

Philips had the manifesto transmitted to El Salvador by radio from the Netherlands Saturday night and placed advertisements for the broadcast in local newspapers. Schuitema was released before the broadcast was finished.

The guerrillas still are holding British bankers Ian Massie, 46, and Michael Charterton, 45, and Japanese businessman Takakasu Suzki, 42, chairman of a textile company in San Salvador. All were kidnapped early this month.

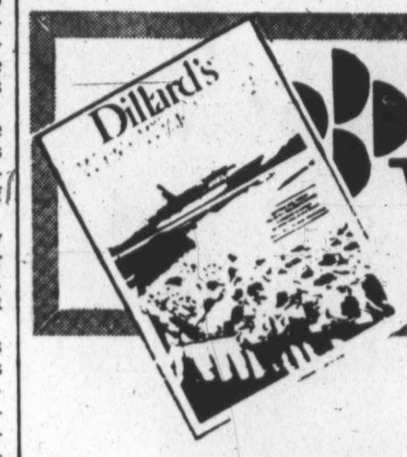

The guerrillas are demanding ransom, publication of the manifesto in El Salvador and release of what they call five political prisoners. Romero denies his government is holding political prisoners.

Schuitema was quoted by Philips officials as saying he had no contact with the other three kidnapped men.

TRIP TO ROMANIA

PARIS (AP) — President Valery Giscard d'Estaing will make an official visit to Romania next month at the invitation of Romanian President Nicolae Ceaucescu, the government said Friday. Giscard d'Estaing and his wife will be in Romania from Jan. 18 until Jan. 20.

Sub-Zero Temperatures Hit Northern Europe

By The Associated Press

Blizzards and cold weather froze much of Northern Europe in its tracks Sunday. Temperatures in Moscow dropped to 36 degrees below zero Fahrenheit, the coldest New Year's Eve there since 1904. Muskovites were urged to stay indoors.

State radio advised party-goers to lay off the vodka, noting that it reduces body temperatures and increases sensitivity to cold.

From Sweden, across Denmark, through parts of West Germany, where three persons died, and into Britain, winter storms stranded motorists, closed airports and forced many to find temporary accommodations.

The Russians are used to cold winters, but in the steaming subways and buses everybody is talking about this one. Most say they've never seen it so cold.

On Jan. 17, 1940, it was 44 degrees below zero in Moscow, but that pales when compared to the minus-67 reading Saturday in the Siberian town of Oymyakon, where 600 people live on the banks of the Indigirka River. The coldest temperature ever recorded there was minus 95.8 degrees in January 1959.

Gov. Nils Horjel declared the province a disaster area and the military moved in to try and help plow roads. Ferry routes to West Germany and Denmark were closed and many flights were grounded, authorities said.

In Denmark, the nation was cut off by snow and gale-force winds that brought international traffic by rail, road, sea and air to a standstill.

Thousands were marooned in emergency shelters and even army tanks were unable to negotiate the roads in many parts of the country, which is reeling from four days of blizzards.

In northern West Germany, thousands of livestock froze to death and 80 villages remained snowbound without electricity in the third day of winter storms, authorities said.

Snow drifts up to 18 feet high were reported in the hardest hit regions of Schleswig-Holstein and Lower Saxony states.

Most major highways and rail lines were blocked by snow in the north German plains, and motorists were warned by police to stay home.

A 45-year-old man froze to death at the wheel of his tractor after the vehicle became stuck in a snowstorm near the North Sea port of Cuxhaven, police said. Another man was found frozen to death on a Hamburg street and a third man died of a heart attack there while shoveling snow, police said.

In Brussels, heavy snow clogged roads and delayed trains up to three hours and temperatures dropped.

In England, many Britons put their feet up before the fire Sunday and started celebrating New Year's Eve early as a snowy cold snap closed airports, forced cancellation of soccer games, and made traveling tricky.

London's Heathrow and Stanstead airports were closed during the morning, although Heathrow took in a limited number of flights in the afternoon.

It was not cold everywhere in Europe on Sunday. In Switzerland, authorities reported warm weather loosened snow and touched off avalanches, killing four persons.

In Athens, warm winds moving northward from Africa kept temperatures in the 60s.

Indian Woman Claims Hospital Sterilized Her

SHAWNEE, Okla. (UPI) — A Shawnee-Creek Indian woman who alleges medical and welfare officials tricked her into being sterilized and took her children away will take her federal civil rights case to court Friday, she said.

Mrs. Norma Jean Serena filed the suit in 1974 against a New Kensington, Pa., hospital, two doctors, the child welfare agency in Armstrong County, Pa., and the Pennsylvania state welfare department.

The trial is due to start Friday in federal court in Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Serena is a native Oklahoman who lived in the Pittsburgh area at the time of the alleged sterilization.

She alleges her three children were taken to foster homes and she was sterilized without her knowledge while in the hospital bearing her fourth child.

Mrs. Serena has regained custody of her three children since then.

The suit asks $20,000 in both punitive and compensatory damages.

Her attorney, Richard Levine of Pittsburgh, said Mrs. Serena signed a consent form for the sterilization procedure after it was performed. Mrs. Serena charges she knew nothing of the operation until another patient told her.

"They kept me under drugs," she said. "I stayed groggy all the time."

Mrs. Serena, now 41, said she has been in bad health since the operation.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A very good day to stick to the tried and true, and act in a sensible manner. Make some New Year resolutions and refrain from anything that could start you off on the wrong foot.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Study your work well and know where to make changes that will bring you better results in the new year. Express happiness.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Take your time in making decisions today and be sure they are right. Do nothing to jeopardize your present standing.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Begin the new year on the right note by seeking the company of persons who can help elevate your consciousness.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Being wise is the keynote today and tonight. Attend to special duties and impress others with your ability.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Good day to be out where you can enjoy yourself and start the new year on a happy note. Show others you have poise.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Try to stay in protective surroundings today and avoid possible accident. Plan how to handle a new responsibility wisely.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Accept invitations extended to you now and have a good time with congenials. Use good judgment in all that you do or say.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study the right methods of handling obligations in the future so you can be more efficient. Your intuition is very accurate now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't permit a possible annoyance from another disturb the harmony you enjoy with family members.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Begin the New Year right by planning to have greater abundance in the future. Engage only in worthwhile activities today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Concentrating on personal affairs is wise since little or nothing can be accomplished in the business world today.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) It is wise to confer with a trusted adviser before making plans for a new venture that appeals to you. Don't take unnecessary risks.

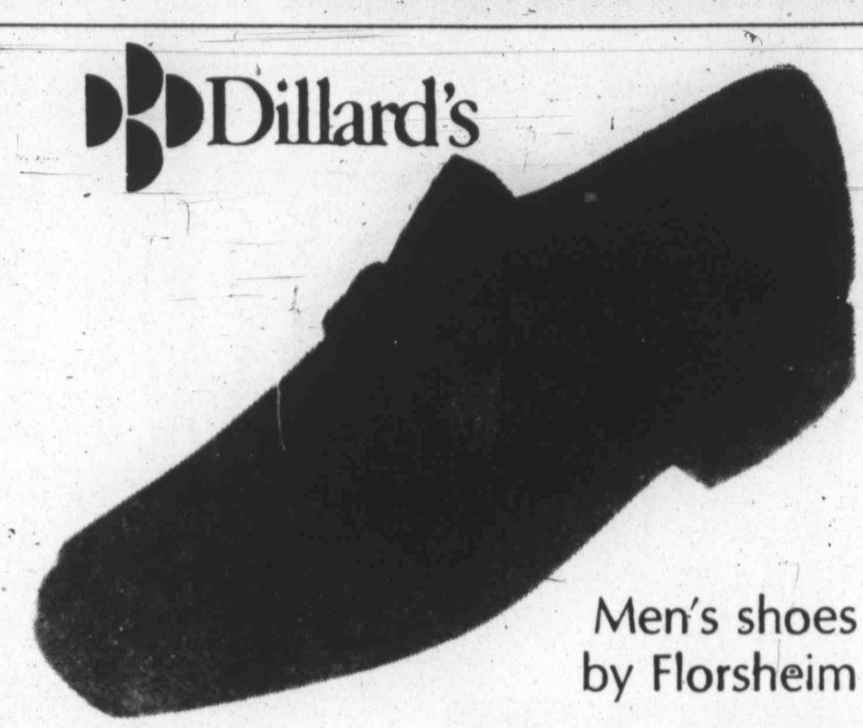

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will easily understand matters of great scope and will have the ability to make them successful. One here who will take pride in doing an excellent job. Be sure to give good moral training early in life.

U.S. Ends Diplomatic Relations With Taiwan

WASHINGTON (AP) — One era in U.S.-China relations ended Sunday and another began as communist China was recognized officially by the United States as the government of China.

Declaring "we shall return," diplomats of the Republic of China struck their colors for the final time from the embassy flagpole at dusk Sunday, marking the end of diplomatic relations with the United States.

The ceremony at Twin Oaks, Taiwan's stately embassy in Washington, was the first of several rites of passage this weekend symbolizing the transferral of American diplomatic recognition to the People's Republic of China in Peking.

As of midnight, the government of Taiwan becomes, in official American eyes at least, an ambiguous "entity," and the government in Peking will be recognized as the legitimate government of China.

Marking the event, President Carter sent a message Sunday to Chinese Communist Party Chairman Hua Kuo-feng saying, "The cause of world peace will be served by this historic act of reconciliation.

"The estrangement of our peoples has sometimes produced misunderstanding, confrontation and enmity. That era is behind us. We can now establish normal patterns of commerce and scholarly and cultural exchange," Carter said.

In Peking, Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-Ping will attend a reception Monday at the American mission, toasting the beginning of relations.

Similar ceremonies will take place 12 hours later at the Chinese liaison office in Washington. Vice President Walter Mondale, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and others will represent the Carter administration.

At Twin Oaks, a crowd of about 300 people gathered at the end of a cold, damp, gray afternoon. Most were Chinese, but there were a handful of Americans, the remnants of the once powerful China lobby.

The crowd was solemn but dry-eyed as Vice Minister for Foreign Affairs H. K. Yang said they would not give up the fight against the Peking regime.

"Fight we will. We in the Republic of China have the courage not to bow before the brutal forces of communism," he said. "We may be facing a long, dark night. But I should like to assure you that with conviction and confidence, we shall return. And we shall return with this same flag, the flag of the Republic of China."

The crowd sang the Nationalist Chinese anthem as the red and blue flag with its white sunburst, the symbol of Chiang Kai-Shek, was lowered and presented to Yang.

Meanwhile Sunday, State Department officials said they were pleased with a New Year's statement of policy by Peking toward Taiwan that offered to allow the status quo to continue on the island while a process of gradual reunification is begun.

The statement, by the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, was an amplification of the softer line toward Taiwan that Peking has taken since Teng set his sights on normalization of relations with Washington.

"It's a very welcome statement," said one State Department China expert, who called it a "logical extension of the less belligerent and more accommodating line Peking has taken in the past months."

The official, who asked not to be identified, said there had been no prior understanding that Peking would issue such a statement to calm American fears that Taiwan has been left in peril by the change in American policy.

TEARS FOR THE FLAG — Members of the Taiwanese community who live in the Washington, D.C., area look on with grim expressions as their national flag was lowered for the last time Sunday in Washington. The flag-lowering ceremony was conducted at the embassy of the Republic of China, ending U.S.-Taiwan diplomatic relations. (AP Laserphoto)

He said the statement tends to confirm the administration's belief that "in a paradoxical way, Taiwan's security is better assured under normalization than before."

For the time being, there will be no major changes in the function of the U.S. missions in Taipei and Peking, nor in those of the two Chinese offices in Washington.

The U.S. mission in Peking, as well as the Chinese mission in Washington, will become full-fledged embassies on March 1. The United States is still trying to determine what will eventually happen to the U.S. embassy in Taipei and Taiwan's embassy and consulates in the United States.

The United States wants to continue all the usual relations, but to conduct them through a non-governmental corporation.

But Taiwan has insisted that relations continue on a government-to-government basis.

Last week, the administration sent Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher to Taipei to try to resolve the problem. Christopher was met by a mud-slinging, egg-throwing mob at the airport. His talks ended with the problem still a major sore point.

Administration officials have said they think a major guarantee of Taiwan's security is the fact that Peking will not jeopardize its new relations with the West by attempting to use force to capture the island.

A TRIM 131 — Margie Viring, now 16, of Chicago tips the scales at 131 pounds. But when she graduated from grade school, right, she looked considerably different at 310 pounds. Margie lost nearly 200 pounds in 18 months by giving up junk food and learning how to eat sensibly, she said. (AP Laserphoto)

'Sensible Eating' Credited For 180-Pound Weight Loss

CHICAGO (AP) — Because she weighed 318 pounds, 16-year-old Margie Viring used to hide in her room when visitors came to her house. She was unable to wear conventional jewelry and blue jeans. Children used to taunt her.

But that was before Margie lost nearly 200 pounds in 18 months by swearing off junk food with the help of a sympathetic dietician.

Now Margie, who is 5-feet-4 and a trim 131 pounds, gets whistles at the beach.

"It's such a relief that I lost all that weight," she said. "It's a whole new world. Before, my life was all eating and staying inside. Now eating is still a part of my world, but not the biggest part, and I go out a lot."

Margie said she lost the weight by sensible eating.

"I quit the junk foods and extra portions. I eat fruits, vegetables and meat, and I watch calories. If I wanted a potato, I'd just watch the calories, maybe cut back on something else," she said.

"I really don't miss the candy at all," she added. "Fruit is just like candy to me."

Woman Jailed For Assaulting Officer

A 45-year-old Lubbock woman was in Lubbock County Jail late Sunday for aggravated assault on a police officer after an incident late Saturday at a North Avenue Q motel.

The motel's night clerk told police that the woman walked behind the desk, removed a pistol from the drawer and began firing at the ceiling

When officers arrived at the scene, the clerk told them that the woman had gone back to her motel room.

Reports show that as officers approached the woman's room, she stepped out and pointed a pistol at them. When officers told the woman to drop the gun, she went back into the room.

When officers told her to come out, and she walked out of the room without a weapon. The woman was arrested and taken to the county jail. Police confiscated a pistol, which was lying on a bed in the woman's room.

Jim D. Kelley of 2210 20th St. reported that thieves took $399 worth of property from his home sometime between 3 a.m. and 11:30 a.m. Sunday. Kelley said the stolen goods included a typewriter, tape player, camping gear and skin diving equipment.

Warren Mitchell of 2517 33rd St. said someone removed $100 worth of tools from his pickup truck sometime between 1 a.m. and 1 p.m. Sunday.

Someone carted off a $230 shotgun from Benny Ralph Williams' pickup truck, which was parked at 5525 4th St., sometime between 10 p.m. Saturday and 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

Many Young Runaways Go Home; Others Can't

By LEE MITGANG

Their average age is 16 — youngsters from all economic and social backgrounds. Maybe they had an argument at home, maybe they are just confused, or worse.

Each year about a million of them leave their homes and enter a twilight zone of bus stations and bright city lights. File them under "missing persons."

The odds are "better than even," says Sgt. Teddy Newman of New York's Missing Persons Bureau, that they just return home by themselves, after they've thought things over. "Some kids just want to stay out of school for a few days, some take off with their boyfriends."

But grimmer fates befall some listed among the missing.

In a Chicago suburb this past week, the nation's worst case of mass murder this century was taking shape, as John Wayne Gacy Jr. allegedly confessed to sexually assaulting and slaying 32 young men and burying their remains at his home. In that case, 27 bodies have been found at Gacy's house and two have been dragged from the Des Plaines River. One of the bodies has been identified.

The magnitude of the slaughter has already eclipsed the 1973 murders of 26 youths — many of them runaways — by a Houston homosexual ring. That incident so shocked the state and the nation that Gov. Dolph Briscoe established "Operation Peace of Mind," a 24-hour telephone hotline that runaways can call to leave messages for their parents that they are safe.

There also is a toll-free number — 800-621-4000 — to reach the National Runaway Switchboard, a hotline similar to the one set up in Texas.

A publicist for the service says it's difficult to do more than generalize about the scope of the problem. Even the federal government has little information on the subject.

But the publicist said the National Runaway Switchboard receives 100,000 calls from runaway teen-agers each year, and estimates that about 1 million youngsters leave home each year.

According to the hotline services and to local missing persons bureaus in big cities like Dallas, New York and San Francisco, youngsters are likely to run out of money after a few days and either go home on their own or look for help. In Chicago, for instance, 17,000 of the 19,000 missing persons on file in 1977 eventually returned, mostly of their own choosing.

But there are also teen-agers who seek help from the wrong kinds of people.

Many children who call the Texas hotline for help report being physically abused by adults who promise them jobs, Briscoe spokesman Roy May says. The adults tell the children that they can't report the abuse because they will be arrested as runaways.

Sgt. Tom Mazzucco, supervisor of San Francisco's Missing Persons Bureau, which handled 3,045 cases in 1978, tells of a 14-year-old girl, missing from New Orleans, who was found working as a prostitute in the seedy Tenderloin district. Her parents borrowed money to fly from New Orleans to pick her up, but when they arrived she had vanished again.

The people who inhabit the world of the missing are not all young runaways.

In New York, for instance, Detective Florence Watts of the Missing Persons Bureau says there were 14,500 missing persons reported in the city in 1978, mostly teen-agers between 12 and 16. But in addition, 3,028 were considered sick or senile, about 1,000 more were listed as psychotics, and about 4,000 persons each year are found dead on New York's streets, often as drug or alcohol derelicts.

Many are never found. In San Francisco, Mazzucco figures the number at 40 or 50 a month, "as in a husband telling his wife, 'bon voyage,' and that's the end."

Hotline operators say that holiday seasons are especially poignant times for runaways and their parents.

Earthquake Shakes Area Of Washington

SEATTLE (AP) — An light earthquake shook an area between Everett, Wash., and Victoria, British Columbia, late Saturday, authorities reported.

Snohomish County, Wash., sheriff's deputies said there were no reports of damage, although many residents reported the quake.

Bud O'Dell of the Newport Observatory in eastern Washington said the quake was centered north of Everett, about 25 miles north of Seattle. It measured 4.0 on the Ricter scale, he said.

The quake was also recorded by the National Earthquake Information Center at Golden, Colo. It occurred at 7:24 p.m. PST, said center spokesman Marvin Carlson

Sparkman Urges U.S. Re-Evaluation Of Soviets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The retiring chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is leaving Congress with a plea for the United States to "sit down" with the Soviet Union as well as "stand up" to it's leaders.

Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., said the United States tends to see the Soviet Union solely as a military threat but fails to see Russia's many weaknesses.

The 80-year-old veteran of 42 years in Congress said misconceptions, misunderstandings and "plain bad luck" have complicated U.S.-Soviet efforts to reach an understanding.

"Despite the historical and ideological gulf that separates our two nations, there is an obvious commonality of interests," he said. "In a word, survival."

The senator's plea for Congress and his fellow citizens to take a more realistic look at U.S.-Soviet relations came in a farewell introduction to a study made for the committee by a group of Russian and Western scholars.

The 500-page report released Sunday includes essays by 79 contributors on such subjects as the Soviet Union's military might, economy, relations with China, intervention in the "Third World" and attitude toward human rights.

Sparkman expressed hope the study would provide the American people with the knowledge necessary to prod their presidents into sitting down and talking with Soviet leaders.

"With a more accurate perception of the Soviet Union, Americans may demand of their presidents that they be as willing to 'sit down' with the Russians as they have been to 'stand up' to them," he said.

Sparkman said he also hopes the study will help Congress make "a more informed judgment" about U.S.-Soviet relations in general and a new strategic arms limitation talks treaty in particular.

"Despite the irritating delays in the birth of a SALT II accord, I am confident as I am hopeful that such an accord will be reached and forwarded to the new Congress early in the next session," he said.

A decision on SALT II, he said, would be a "momentous" one and go far beyond the issue of arms control and "nuclear restraint."

"For better or for worse, it will serve to chart the course of United States-Soviet relations for the foreseeable future," he said.

Sparkman said each of the essays in the study was prepared by a recognized expert in an effort to correct misconceptions about the Soviet Union.

He said the Soviets had made the task "more difficult than it need be" because of the secretive nature of their society.

But he said there also was the difficulty of "distilling reality from rhetoric" in news accounts because of the "media's proclivity to dramatize the one and downplay the other."

Minister Varies Theme Of Talents Parable

MANCHESTER, Conn. (AP) — The Rev. Edmund Nadolny, in a variation of the biblical parable of the talents, promised $12,000 during a radio-talk show to listeners who said they could turn a profit for Hartford Archdiocese's Office of Radio and Television.

Nadolny, who heads the church's radio and TV office, gave away the money during a broadcast Saturday on WINF Radio. His only condition was that recipients sign a non-binding agreement to return the money — with profit — within two months.

In the biblical talents parable, three men were given different amounts of money for safekeeping. Two made profits from their shares.

The priest, who also serves as a public-relations man for the archdiocese, pledged $1,000 to a woman who wanted to use the money to make a record of religious music.

Other callers proposed such schemes as buying wool to knit sweaters to sell, renting gallery space to sell paintings and buying discount jewelry to sell at a profit.

Nadolny even gave $1,000 to a man who would not tell him exactly what he would use it for.

"I just want to see if anyone has complete trust these days," said Nadolny.

House Fires In Three States Claim 13 Lives

By United Press International

Thirteen people died in three house fires early Sunday in Massachusetts, New York and North Carolina, including one blaze that killed five at a century-old home where the batteries on a smoke detector had gone dead.

In East Longmeadow, Mass., a predawn blaze killed William Hafey, 52; his wife Theresa; their sons William, 20, and James, 12, and Mrs. Hafey's aunt, Ann Driscoll, 80.

Two other Hafey children, David, 18, and Patricia, 20, escaped with minor injuries by jumping from a second story window after the fire erupted at about 5:45 a.m. in the century-old two-story colonial home.

Fire officials said the home was equipped with a fire detector but the batteries were dead.

"The fire started in a kitchen downstairs and spread upwards and forward," East Longmeadow Fire Chief Forest Goodrich said Sunday. "The home is more than 100 years old and the fact the wood was very dry contributed to the fire moving as fast as it did."

In the New York City suburb of Bellmore, a lawyer and his two young daughters were killed in their two-story home despite the warning of a fire detector that was still ringing when their bodies were found, authorities said.

Fire officials said Warren Levy, 33, was able to toss his 31-year-old wife Esther to safety from a second-floor window before falling victim to the heat and smoke.

Their only children — Deborah, 8, and Sharon, 4 — were also overcome by smoke and heat while trying to escape from the house in this Long Island suburb.

Mrs. Levy was listed in poor condition at Nassau County Medical Center with burns over 35 percent of her body.

Bellmore Fire Chief Kenneth Noon said the blaze began on the ground floor of the three bedroom, split-level frame house about 4:20 a.m.

"They did have a fire detector, and it did go off," said Bellmore Fire Chief Kenneth Noon. "In fact, it was still going off when our firemen got up to the second floor.

"Why it didn't give them enough warning, we just don't know. Maybe they had their door closed and didn't hear it," he said.

In Shelby, N.C., five people ranging in age from 3 to 17 died in the early morning fire that raced quickly through an eight-room frame house where 13 members of two families gathered for the holiday.

Seven people escaped the flames unhurt, but a 19-year-old woman received burns over 80 percent of her body and was taken to Duke University Medical Center in Durham were she was listed in critical condition.

"When we arrived, every room in the house was on fire," said Shelby Fire Capt. Boyd Anthony.

Firemen made a futile effort to rescue the victims by breaking out windows in the home, located about 100 yards from the main fire station.

Anthony said the fire in the home of Roger Brown, 38, was apparently triggered by a spark from an oil heater in the den that fell on a chair. The chair smouldered for several hours before bursting into flames just before 7 a.m.

In the house when the blaze broke out were Brown's family of 10, including his grandson, and three nieces who had come for a holiday visit from an orphan-

New Philippine Base Accord Reached

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — American and Philippine negotiators concluded two years of talks Sunday with an agreement for continued U.S. use of two strategic military bases here under broadened Philippine sovereignty.

President Ferdinand E. Marcos said the five-year agreement sets rent for U.S. use of Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval Base and outlines criminal jurisdiction over U.S. personnel on the bases — the two issues that proved the most difficult to resolve in the long negotiations. Marcos would not discuss details.

He said the pact would have to be approved by "the highest officials of both governments," and added he expected a "formal exchange of notes" sometime in January.

The U.S. Congress will be "notified" of the agreement, he said. Amendments to executive agreements are not subject to congressional approval.

The statement issued after the final three-hour round of talks at Malacanang Palace said the agreement assures the United States of "unhampered military operations" at Clark and Subic Bay, and calls for "thorough review of the agreement every five years."

"Unhampered military operations" means facilities assigned to the United States will have American commanders, Marcos explained. These will be specified areas within bases commanded by Filipinos.

The statement said amendments to a 1947 agreement "reaffirm Philippine sovereignty over the bases."

The statement also said the agreement provided "for significant reductions in the areas for use by the United States within the Philippine military bases, and for assumption by Philippine forces of responsibility for perimeter security."

Marcos also said the Philippine flag will fly over the bases, but that both colors will fly over U.S. facilities, with the Philippine flag having the "point of honor."

In Washington, State Department spokesman Tom Reston said, "The steps we will take to give fuller expresson to Philippine sovereignty over the bases will assure the durability of our defense relationship and thereby serve to preserve peace and stability in the region."

The American panel was headed by U.S. Ambassador Richard Murphy, and the Philippine team by Marcos.

DR. LAMB

Altitude Affects Lungs

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — What is the true story about elevation and how does it really affect us? I am planning a move but want to know more first. I am 50 years old, my blood pressure is up a little. On my side of the family, deaths were due to heart attacks. My wife has bronchial asthma. We moved to 3,600 feet elevation first. Since it was dry, it seems to have helped her. She is not bothered anymore as she was back East.

On the other hand, our teenage daughter developed a problem with very dry skin. I have heard about two people in their 70s who had heart attacks and lung problems that moved to a higher elevation and the claimed to feel better than ever with no problems.

I want to move to an altitude of about 5,000 feet. It won't be damp like it is back East, but I have found out it will be colder than where we are right now. It's a dry cold. Before I do anything, though, I would like to know how it would affect the three of us.

DEAR READER — As you go up in altitude, the atmospheric pressure decreases. This is often associated with less moisture in the air and there is less oxygen pressure.

Below 5,000 feet the decrease in oxygen pressure doesn't make much difference to healthy people. Beyond that, the thinner air tends to increase the work of the heart and circulation. That's all right in normal people, too.

But because heart and vascular disease is common in our population, people who go from sea level to altitudes of 5,000 feet or above should be careful not to exert too much when they first get there. They need to gradually improve their physical capacity and not overdo it.

You can think of the effects of altitude as similar to exercise so you should be less active at altitude at first and gradually increase your activity to your previous level.

People who have lung disease may have more problems with altitude than others. Why? Because if air is trapped in their lungs (as from emphysema), the stale air trapped in the lungs already has the effect of making them live at altitude. The more severe the lung disease a person has the less likely he is going to be able to tolerate altitude.

You should realize that you are already acclimated to 3,600 feet. Going on up to 5,000 feet, in your case, won't be a major transition. The fact that your wife has done better with the present change suggests that the additional altitude might not make any difference. I believe that she is the one who will need to be examined to make sure that her lung functions are adequate for the change.

While 5,000 feet won't make much difference, if you are planning on spending much time at 6,000 and 7,000 feet elevations, which may be present in the locality you are planning on moving to, the altitude may become a more significant factor.

The one recommendation I'd make to everyone who wants to go to higher altitudes, for whatever reason, is to improve their physical fitness levels before they go. The higher your level of physical fitness before you are exposed to altitude, the less effect the change in altitude will have upon your body and your ability to cope with it.

Ray's Attorney Scorns Report Of Assassinations Committee

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A House committee report on the Martin Luther King Jr.'s assassination would make a good novel, a lawyer representing the man who once confessed to killing King says.

"The comittee's conclusions as to what they think is likely or unlikely make interesting reading and perhaps they will publish a fiction novel on their view of the assassination of Dr. King," Mark Lane said Saturday night.

"I'm an old-fashioned lawyer. I think it would be good if we had a trial," he said after reading news accounts of the conclusions reached by the House Select Committee on Assassinations. James Earl Ray, serving a 99-year prison sentence for the killing, pleaded guilty in 1969 to murdering King and was never tried on the charge. He has since tried to withdraw the plea.

The committee concluded in its report that King was likely the victim of a conspiracy — something Lane has been contending for several years.

But the committee also concludeed that Ray fired the fatal shot and that Ray's story about a mysterious "Raoul" who he says set him up to take the blame for the killing was not worthy of belief.

The committee also concluded that no federal, state or local government agency was involved in the slaying.

Lane recently moved to Memphis to represent Ray in his efforts to win a full trial on the charges. Ray is at the Brushy Mountain State Penitentiary in Petros, Tenn., across the state from Memphis.

Lane contends that the slain civil rights leader was a victim of a conspiracy that could have involved the FBI and the late FBI director J.Edgarr Hoover.

Lane, author of a book, "Code Name Zorro," about the King slaying, termed the House committee conclusions "outrageous."

He was critical of the committee's handling of the investigation and its treatment of witnesses, particularly Ray.

"Never before in the history of this nation ... has a Congressional committee taken evidence against a man charged with a crime (and) at the conclusion of that process of taking evidence, denied the person ... the right or the opportunity to answer the specific charges against him," Lane said.

Lane complained that the committee cancelled an appearance by Ray that had been scheduled Nov. 16. He said Ray, who has appeared as a witness earlier, would have answered the accusations against him.

"Even Senator (Joseph) McCarthy always permitted those who he attacked ... to come ...and make a statement under oath in opposition to the testimony," Lane said.

Lane referred to the late Wisconsin senator, who conducted widely-publicized hearings during the 1950s in which he accused dozens of employees of the State Department and the Army of being communists.

Iranian Turmoil Leaves Western Economy Shaky

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE

LONDON (AP) — The violence and strikes against the shah of Iran are sending shock waves through Western Europe. Government leaders are keeping close watch on developments in Iran's oilfields, which are producing only a trickle because of the turmoil.

At stake for Western Europeans — as for Americans — are the future of oil supplies and industrial contracts worth billions of dollars. Moreover, the Iranian upheaval is already dragging down the American dollar, affecting world trade and raising new uncertainties in strategic military planning.

The money Iran earns as the world's second-largest oil exporter pays for imports that maintain thousands of workers in jobs in Western countries.

Premier Andries van Agt of the Netherlands said after his weekly Cabinet meeting last Thursday that if Iranian oil supplies are cut off for an indefinite period "the situation might become critical" and that "might get Holland, like all other vulnerable industrial nations in the West, into a very serious situation." On top of that it would certainly mean another hike in oil prices, he added.

Because oil is traded in dollars, the U.S. currency is hit the hardest by the political difficulties of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. The dollar slid day by day on European money markets last week and has lost half the gains it made following President Carter's rescue plan of Nov. 1. Dealers cited the Iranian unrest as the chief factor in the dollar's new decline.

Antonio Airaghi, a senior foreign-exchange dealer of the Milan-based Banca d'America e d'Italia, told a reporter: "The Iranian crisis is mainly responsible for the dollar's current problems. I personally believe that the shah is done for. His fall and the repercussions could only have a further and worse effect on the dollar."

The British weekly Economist said in an editorial: "The uprising against the shah faces the West with what is potentially its worst crisis in 25 years. Iran is not just a major oil supplier. It has also been the major local protector of Western interests in a region which itself produces nearly half the non-communist world's oil, and along whose northern edge run hundreds of miles of Russia's southern frontier."

The weekly noted that in the past 12 months, Iran placed contracts worth more than $6 billion for power stations, construction projects, whole factories and industrial equipment in Britain, France, Japan, Switzerland, the United States and West Germany.

Businessmen fear signed contracts may be canceled and payment for goods and plants already supplied could stop if Iran's oil income of $20 billion a year is slashed by an evacuation of the hundreds of foreign technicians who oversee the oil industry.

The United States accounts for 25 percent of the goods Iran imports, Japan 20 percent, West Germany 18 percent and Britain 10 percent. About 170,000 British jobs are tied up in Iranian orders — worth $1.3 billion last year — and Iran and neighboring Saudi Arabia buy about two-thirds of all British armaments exports. Much of the payment for the arms is in oil.

In Denmark, which sold Iran goods worth $80 million last year, a trade official said there is a general impression that exporters are reluctant to ship there, and with Iranian banks closed trade inevitably will be affected.

The countries most dependent on Iranian oil are South Africa (90 percent of its oil is Iranian) and Israel (60 percent). A dozen countries, including Japan, Italy, Belgium, West Germany, Netherlands, Norway, Britain and Denmark, get up to a fifth or more of their oil needs from Iran. The United States has been importing from Iran about 894,000 barrels of oil a day — 5 percent of the nation's needs and 10 percent of all U.S. petroleum imports.

The South African economic affairs minister, Chris Heunis, said last week the situation facing his country is serious.

Appeal Made For Release Of Rudolf Hess

BERLIN (UPI) — Eugene K. Bird, former American warden at the four-power Spandau war crimes prison, appealed Sunday to President Carter to intercede on behalf of Rudolf Hess, 84-year-old former deputy of Adolf Hitler, and "let this old man die in freedom."

Bird, a retired U.S. army lieutenant colonel, also asked West German President Walter Scheel to use his influence to gain freedom for Hess, who is serving a life term in Spandau for war crimes.

"His death is but a matter of time," Bird said in a telegram to Carter at the White House. "Start the new year with an act of clemency and make it possible for this old man to die in freedom."

Hess was taken from the West Berlin prison Friday to the nearby British military hospital after he complained of trouble with his vision. A British spokesman said Hess had a minor circulatory ailment but Bird called it a stroke.

Bird noted Hess has been a prisoner since his 1941 flight to Scotland and said the United States should refuse to be a party to such a continued "act of inhumanity."

Bird, American warden at Spandau Prison from 1964 to 1972, has been campaigning for years for the release of Hess, the only Nazi leader still held in the prison run by the Americans, Russians, British and French. He is the author of a book about Hess called "The Loneliest Man in the World."

He appealed to Carter once before in Hess's behalf after Hess slashed his left wrist, elbow and foot with a table knife in a suicide attempt in February 1977.

Bird did not spell out what he thought Carter could do. Western officials pointed out that all four powers must agree to grant Hess an amnesty and they recalled that the Russians have repeatedly rejected Western proposals to free Hess.

"If it were up to the Americans, British and French, Hess would have been out 10 years ago at least," one diplomat said.

Israeli Cabinet Approves Budget For Fiscal 1979-80

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Israeli Cabinet Sunday approved a $16 billion budget for fiscal 1979-80 after three weeks of debate over the breakdown of the budget and the sum itself.

The budget is about 5 percent higher in real terms than the current budget, but most civilian sectors will suffer slight cuts to help pay for the army's withdrawal from the Sinai Peninsula into the Negev Desert, a cost of a still-unsigned peace treaty with Egypt.

The withdrawal cost is now estimated at $4 billion, but most of that is expected to come from United States grants and loans and is not included in the defense budget.

The Defense Ministry is to receive a slightly bigger share than in past years, 32 percent of the total budget. In 1978 the ministry's share was 30 percent.

Israel's fiscal year begins April 1.

The total budget is nearly 50 percent above the current budget, but because of inflation, it represents only about 5 percent real growth.

The inflation rate in Israel is now at over 43 percent and is expected to reach 50 percent by the time year-end figures are in.

Energy Minister Yitzhak Modai was the only member of the 17-member Cabinet to vote against the budget, claiming it needed trimming to hold down inflation. Three other ministers abstained.

The affects on the Israeli public likely will include:

•Gradual cuts of government subsidies for basic foodstuffs and public transport, which will increase prices in those areas.

•Higher prices for government-run public services, including telephone rates, car and radio licenses and health insurance.

•A freeze on the number of workers in the public sector and a reduction in new construction of public buildings.

A trademark, also called a brand name, can be almost anything — a word, a name, a symbol, or any combination of the three — that identifies the origin of a product or a service.

Americans, Others Begin Iran Exits

rarily if the proposed new government is formed, he approves of it and rioting calms down. These sources said he would not abdicate.

American Firms Mobbed

Mobs rampaged through Tehran Sunday, and eyewitnesses reported they attacked several buildings housing offices of American firms. No casualties were reported in the capital.

National Front sources claimed more than 100 persons were killed Sunday in Mashhad. They said another 100 died Saturday when troops opened fire on anti-shah protesters near the home of Mashhad's 88-year-old Moslem religious leader, Ayatullah Sayed Abdullah Shirazi. The troops apparently had attacked in reprisal for the mob lynching of three SAVAK secret police agents and a soldier.

The ayatullah's son, Mohamad Ali Shirazi, said in a telephone interview the enraged mob seized the SAVAK agents and the soldier, brought them to his father's home, then killed them despite the ayatullah's appeals that they be spared.

Curfews Maintained

Martial-law authorities extended the curfew in Mashhad so that it will begin at 1 p.m. daily. Tehran and 10 other cities remain under a 9 p.m.-5 a.m. curfew.

U.S. Embassy officials urged that dependents of U.S. citizens working in Iran leave the country. The embassies of other Western nations urged that all "non-essential" people leave. The embassies told their nationals to use commercial means of transportation.

Some American companies were ordering charter flights for employees from Tehran and the nation's oil-producing areas in the southwest.

Canadians, French Vacating

Two Canadian military planes left their Trenton, Ont., base Sunday for the northern Iranian town of Rasht to evacuate 300 Canadians there. The Canadians are employed by two companies setting up pulp and paper mills in the area.

In Paris, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said France is prepared to evacuate its 6,000 nationals in Iran but as of Sunday had not received a sign from the French ambassador in Tehran that such evacuation was necessary.

Iran's international air traffic, already severely curtailed because of a shutdown of the government airline IranAir, was threatened with further disruptions by a walkout of airport employees.

Officials of Western embassies said a key reason foreigners should leave is to avoid putting unnecessary strain on the nearly paralyzed Iranian economy. A strike by oil workers has crippled Iran's main industry, cutting the normal 6-million-barrel daily production to about 300,000 barrels. All oil exports have stopped.

But foreign diplomats noted privately that much of the violence in recent weeks has been aimed against Americans and others whose governments support the pro-West shah. There was an ironic twist to the U.S. Embassy appeal — it came a year to the day after President Carter toasted U.S.-Iranian friendship on a New Year's visit here.

Some Americans Staying

It is expected that probably half of the 30,000 Americans still in Iran will take the embassy's advice and leave. Thousands had already left.

The shah's opposition is two-fold — political foes who oppose his authoritarian rule, government corruption and foreign influences, and orthodox Moslems who say his Western-style modernization corrupts traditional Islamic values.

In Tehran Sunday, demonstrators picked their way through a wrecked SAVAK building and reporters said they saw numerous instruments of torture. They said they found electrical devices, burners apparently used to torture suspects, and severed human limbs in underground chambers. Troops later sealed the building off.

In Manila, the U.S. Navy confirmed that the aircraft carrier Constellation and its escorts had left their port in the Philippines and were in the South China Sea.

FRIENDSHIP POSTER—Chinese students pause by a Peking wall poster emblazoned with "LOVE" in English and following message in Chinese: "We want to have more contact with the American people in all fields." Carter Confident Of Authority To End Taiwan Treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter doesn't believe he needs a green light from Congress to end the U.S. defense treaty with Taiwan, and his lawyers have lined up scholars and records of presidents from James Madison to Lyndon Johnson to prove the point.

But not everybody is convinced.

The conservatives' U.S. District Court suit declares that Carter's unilateral decision to terminate the 1954 treaty, effective Jan. 1, 1980, is "one of the worst power grabs in history." They also contend that Carter's go-it-alone action is unprecedented, where treaties are concerned.

Generally, the courts avoid collisions with the White House, as they would the plague. They may steer clear of this one, deciding that the dispute is basically political. If not, the White House may be faced with the most serious challenge to presidential powers since protesters went to court in efforts to force an end to the Vietnam War.

Carter's supporters acknowledge that the U.S. Constitution does not specifically address the question of treaty termination.

The subject was not discussed at the Constitutional Convention. And it did not receive much attention in the early years of the Republic.

Hamilton Remarks Recalled

But way back in 1793, Alexander Hamilton, an ardent champion of presidential powers, might just as well have had Carter in mind when he said in defense of President George Washington's Neutrality Proclamation:

"... Treaties can only be made by the president and Senate jointly, but their activity may be continued or suspended by the president alone."

Nearly 200 years later, professor Louis Henkin of Columbia wrote:

"Once the Senate has consented, the president is free to make (or not to make) the treaty and the Senate has no further authority in respect of it ... ."

Previous Treaties Ended

Through the years, according to State Department lawyers, presidents have ended treaties on their own, without congressional approval.

It began, they say, with Madison ending a commerce treaty with the Netherlands in 1815, and kept on through Johnson's withdrawal from an international air travel agreement in 1965.

The treaty with Taiwan includes a termination provision. It reads: "This treaty shall remain in force indefinitely. Either party may terminate it one year after notice has been given by the other party."

Administration lawyers say that in giving notice, Carter did not have to consult with the Senate, which ratified the treaty in 1955.

He could decide on his own whether ending the treaty — which was a condition imposed by mainland China on normalizing relations — was "in the best interests of the United States," they say.

Opponents Differ

In their suit, however, Goldwater and 14 other congressional conservatives, have an entirely different view of American history and Carter's authority. They say the Constitution makes the president and the Senate partners in the treaty-making and breaking process.

By constitutional interpretation, they contend, the term "party," as used in the treaty, "means the president acting together with the Senate or both houses of Congress."

To underline the point, Carter's opponents cite a clause that Congress added last September to the International Security Act of 1978.

Before there is any change in a defense treaty, this clause says, "it is the sense of Congress that there should be prior consultation between Congress and the executive branch."

Goldwater's lawyers read historical precedents this way:

Forty-eight treaties have been denounced or terminated by the United States.

Of these, 30 were ended by acts of Congress; eight by joint resolution; two by Senate resolution, and four superseded by new laws or treaties.

The four remaining were ended — without challenge — because of changed circumstances.

If Carter is not stopped by the courts, his opponents say, he will be able to terminate any U.S. defense treaty. The conservatives say this would cause allies to lose their confidence in the United States.

Carter Right Declared

Last week a State Department internal memorandum asserted that Carter had the right to unilaterally terminate the defense treaty with Taiwan.

"The Senate's role in giving advice and consent is to the making of the treaty is fulfilled when the treaty is made," said the memorandum written by Herbert J. Hansell, the department's legal adviser.

Goldwater, responding to the memorandum and accompanying legal brief, said, "If taken at face value, the brief amounts to a confession of past illegalities by the president.

"State (State Department) seems to argue that because the president has gotten away with some illegal acts in the past, which may have been kept secret from Congress or the people at the time, it somehow makes it legal for him to violate the Constitution in the future," the senator added. Goldwater said the department's argument is "totally lacking in any constitutional basis."

best," according to the National Weather Service, and travel is discouraged.

Clearing and colder weather is forecast today for north Texas and the Panhandle.

An ice-snow warning is in effect this morning for portions of north and east Texas, as the storm passes out of the state. Thunderstorms began developing late Sunday along the cold front, which continues to send freezing showers over southwest and south central portions of the state.

The winter storm has become a dangerous one, weather experts say, as it moves across Texas, spreading ice into the south and freezing air and heavy snow from eastern Kansas through northern Missouri and Iowa and across Wisconsin.

More than 10 inches of snow fell in Kansas City, Mo., Sunday, with more expected today. Highways along the storm's path were glazed with ice.

U.S.-China End 30-Year Split

first look at Taiwan in a film New Year's Eve. It said a new play would show how the communists and the Nationalists joined forces against the Japanese in the 1930s.

The Nationalist Chinese president, Chiang Ching-kuo, son of the late Nationalist leader Chiang Kai-shek, has said his nation will not negotiate with the communists. But there was no immediate Taiwanese reaction to Sunday's announcement. Chiang will make his annual New Year's speech today.

"We didn't bust up (at de-recognition) and we haven't evidenced any sign at all of panic," said Taiwan's China News daily Sunday. "We didn't even waste much time in protesting the whole shabby business."

The American flag has flown over the liaison mission in Peking, as has the Chinese flag in Washington, since 1973, the year after Richard M. Nixon made his historic presidential visit to China.

A full-fledged U.S. ambassador will present his credentials here March 1. Woodcock, who is likely to get the job, says there will be a small increase in the staff of 35.

Some American visitors in cold, sunny Peking grumbled Sunday that they had not been invited to Woodcock's party, but one U.S. diplomat said, "Everyone will be jammed together like Peking duck."

Feasts Planned

Many Chinese will eat, drink and dance with thousands of visiting foreigners in hotels and public halls. For $10 at the 17-story Peking Hotel, they will feast on holiday menus of turtle dove, wild rabbit, pheasant, partridge and yams stuffed with dates.

The United States was the last of the big powers to keep alive the idea that Taiwan represented all of China, but the Nationalists had seen the handwriting on the Chinese wall since 1971, when an American ping-pong team preceded Nixon's visit.

The United States passed up its first opportunity to establish relations with the infant People's Republic of China when it rejected a secret initiative from Prime Minister Chou En-lai in 1949.

Chinese "volunteers" fought American GIs in Korea, and in the mid-1950s John Foster Dulles cold-shouldered another Chou offer.

The Vietnam War bred more antagonism, with the Chinese backing North Vietnam. But it created an opportunity for a third overture, stemming from Nixon's desire to withdraw American troops from Indochina "with honor."

Conspiracy Report Elates Mother Of Lee Harvey Oswald

DALLAS (AP) — The mother of accussed presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald was elated with a House panel's report that a conspiracy was probably behind the murder of President John F. Kennedy.

But Texans involved in the assassination probe were not impressed by a House Assassination Committee conclusion Saturday that a second gunman, perched on a grassy knoll near Dallas' Dealey Plaza, probably squeezed off a shot at the presidential motorcade.

"I don't know how it could make any difference at all now," said Jesse Curry, Dallas police chief at the time of the assassination. "It will not make any difference to me."

Although committee members concluded Oswald probably fired the fatal shots, Marguerite Oswald predicted the report will ultimately vindicate her son.

"My late son Lee Harvey Oswald was framed for the murder of President Kennedy," Mrs. Oswald said Saturday. "My late son was not part of that conspiracy.

"I will hope and know the future will vindicate my son entirely. It took us 15 years to come this far. I probably won't be around, but the world will know that Lee Harvey Oswald was innocent."

J. Gordon Shanklin, former head of the Dallas FBI office, took exeption to committee conclusions that the FBI "failed to investigate adequately the possibility of a conspiracy."

"I think they can still go back and see all the allegationns that were made and how they were run out. I know of nothing we didn't run out," said Shanklin.

Dallas police spokesman Dave Beitelman said the department has no plans to reopen the investigation.

"Anything and everything we had was turned over to the Warren Commission and the Assassinations Committee. They have everything we possibly have," said Beitelman. "And how do you follow an act like that (the Assassination Committee report)."

Ray Link To Plot Promised

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Louis Stokes said Sunday the final report of his House assassinations committee "will be able circumstantially to connect" James Earl Ray to a $50,000 bounty conspiracy to assassinate Dr. Martin Luther King.

The committee chairman said the final report also will accuse the FBI, by its harassment of King, of "creating the kind of atmosphere in which this type of assassination could take place."

Stokes also said his committee shares its experts' 95 percent certainty that President John F. Kennedy was assassinated in a crossfire by two gunmen, but said the committee knows little more about the probable conspiracy.

Mafia Link Seen

In final conclusions, the committee said the only conspiracy possibilities it cannot preclude involve maverick Mafia figures or Cubans opposed to President Fidel Castro. Stokes said the final report will establish Lee Harvey Oswald's "relationships to other persons in New Orleans," and committee sources say there is evidence possibly linking Oswald to Mafia figures and to the anti-Castro Cubans.

But when asked if those relationships amount to leads on the identities of the Kennedy conspirators, Stokes replied: "No, we say quite candidly we do not know the extent of the conspiracy.

In conclusions released Saturday, the committee said Oswald fired the shots killing Kennedy and Ray fired the shots at King.

"Our conclusions sort of vindicate what the American people thought all along," Stokes said.

JFK Conspiracy Victim

But the committee also said in final conclusions on its two-year, $5.8 million investigation that:

—Kennedy "was probably assassinated as a result of a conspiracy" in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

—"Scientific acoustical evidence establishes a high probability that two gunmen fired at President John F. Kennedy."

—"The committee believes on the basis of the circumstantial evidence available to it that there is a likelihood that James Earl Ray assassinated Dr. Martin Luther King as a result of a conspiracy" in Memphis on April 4, 1968.

—"The Department of Justice should review the committee's findings and ... analyze whether further official investigation is warranted."

The findings conflict with the Warren Commission's conclusion that Oswald acted alone in the Kennedy assassination, firing three shots from a window in the Texas School Book Depository.

A St. Louis man, Russell George Byers, swore to the committee under oath that he rejected a $50,000 offer from the lawyer, John Sutherland, to kill King.

Texas Politicians Take Oaths Today

AUSTIN (AP) — Somewhere between New Year's Eve headaches and the football bowl games, Texas' successful politicians begin to take office Monday.

However, among those stepping into their new jobs on the first day of the year was Mark White, new Texas attorney general.

White scheduled a 11 a.m. swearing-in ceremony in the Texas Senate chamber with Dr. Abner McCall, president of Baylor University, presiding. Gov. Dolph Briscoe plans to take part in the ceremony.

White succeeds John Hill, who was an unsuccessful Democratic candidate for governor. He defeated Republican Jim Baker, Houston attorney, in the general election.

Another ceremony Monday sees Presiding Judge John F. Onion of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals swear in Austin attorney Sam Houston Clinton as a new member of the state's highest appellate court for criminal cases. The ceremony was set for 10 a.m. in the Court of Criminal Appeals.

In a dual ceremony on Tuesday, Jan. 2, Associate Supreme Court Justice Price Daniel Sr. will retire from the state's highest bench and be succeeded by Franklin S. Spears, San Antonio district judge. The oath will be administered by Chief Justice Joe R. Greenhill.

On Jan. 4, Thursday, in Kerrville, former Rep. Jim Nugent, D-Kerrville, will be sworn in as a member of the Texas Railroad Commission by Greenhill. Nugent was appointed to the position by Briscoe after Commissioner Jon Newton resigned.

The biggest oath-taking of all comes Jan. 16 when Bill Clements is sworn in as the first Republican governor in more than 100 years to succeed Briscoe. The swearing-in takes place at noon on the Capitol steps followed by an afternoon and night of parades, programs and inaugural balls.

Also honored Jan. 16 will be Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, now the top elected Democratic official. He will be sworn in for a another 4-year term.

Ex-Flier Finds Rescuer Almost 26 Years Later

FINDS RESCUER — Twenty-six years ago Lionel Levin, left, then an Air Force lieutenant flying out of Galena, Alaska, crash landed in 54 degrees-below-zero weather. He and the pilot, both seriously injured, crawled from the wreckage. He remembers during periods of consciousness a man on a dog sled building a fire to warm them. In September, Levin returned to Galena and located Edgar Nollner Sr., right, who rescued them. At bottom is an Air Force photo of the wrecked plane taken several days after the crash in 1953. (AP Laserphoto)

IRVINE, Calif. (AP) — It seemed like mission impossible, but for Lionel W. Levin finding the man who saved his life was just another miracle.

Levin set out last September to find the dogsledder who rescued him after a plane crash nearly 26 years ago in the middle of an Alaskan winter.

It all began on Feb. 7, 1953, when 22-year-old Air Force 2nd Lt. Levin boarded an F-94 Starfighter jet in 54-below-zero weather on a routine patrol flight from a small base near Galena, Alaska, about halfway between Fairbanks and Nome.

Now a resident of Irvine, Levin recalls, "We hadn't gone far when the plane developed a flameout. The engine failed. We lost power."

With no ejector seats and flying too low to parachute safely into the hostile wilderness, the crew was forced to attempt a crash landing.

"The pilot (1st Lt. Robert Royer) did an incredible job," Levin recalled. "He guided it so that the wings were sheared off by trees."

Somehow, Levin — suffering a broken back, broken ribs and internal injuries — and Royer, also seriously injured, crawled away from the wreckage and tried to build a fire in the bone-chilling deep freeze.

"I was too weak to break a twig. It looked like the end," Levin said. "We wouldn't live 30 minutes in that cold."

He vaguely remembered the approach of a dogsled before losing consciousness.

"The next thing I knew," Levin said, "we were lying beside a fire. I assumed the dogsledder built the fire and pulled us over to it."

He learned later that his rescuer had also called another sledder, who helped carry the fliers back to Galena. Both men were then flown to Anchorage, where they were hospitalized.

After recovering, Levin asked who had rescued him, "but nobody knew."

"It has preyed on my mind all these years," he says. "I wanted to meet the man and say thanks, face to face."

So, last September, Levin and his wife, Suzanne, flew to Galena to find his rescuer. But none of the villagers could help him on his quest.

"We were disappointed and discouraged," he recalls.

About to give up and waiting for their flight home, the Levins met a woman who operated a flying service at the airport. She said her grandfather, Edgar Nollner Sr., had long hunted and fished by dogsled. She contacted him and ran back into the airport shack with the miraculous news. It turned out that Nollner, an Athabaskan Indian, had been Levin's rescuer.

"She drove us...to this small house. We walked in and there was this white-haired, bearded man in his 80s," Levin said. "He was a stranger, yet I felt like I knew him.

"I thanked him for saving my life. He spoke in broken English, recalling details of the crash that I didn't remember because I was unconscious," said Levin.

"It was a dream come true, a miracle."

FAA To Ask Pilot About Crash Events

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Investigators are hoping that the pilot of the DC-8 that went down in a residential area will be able to tell them exactly what happened in the moments before the crash, which killed 10 people.

There was speculation that the plane had run out of fuel, that its internal power system had failed and that the pilot, Capt. Malburn McBroom, had circled in vain, trying to use up excess fuel, because he erroneously thought his landing gear had failed.

At the urging of the pilot's doctors, federal investigators on Saturday postponed a scheduled interview with McBroom, according to Robert Buckhorn of the National Transportation and Safety Board.

Buckhorn said the investigating team is tentatively scheduled to interview him today. It was not known whether his remarks would be made public.

McBroom, 52, a 27-year employee of United Airlines, was listed in good condition with broken ankles and ribs and some head cuts from the Thursday night crash.

Investigators determined Friday that the landing gear was down and locked in place, but they said McBroom could not be certain of that because an indicator light apparently had failed.

Elwood Driver of the National Transportation Safety Board said McBroom "evidently lost power as he came in" but "we don't know if he knew he was going down."

Investigators theorized the plane carrying 186 persons may have been without fuel or an electrical system when it plunged into the grove of evergreens in a residential area three miles southeast of Portland International Airport.

Eighteen persons remained hospitalized Saturday; 51 others were treated and released following the crash.

Driver said one of the plane's four fuel tanks appeared to be intact and "capable of holding fuel."

He said investigators wanted to determine whether the tank actually contained the kerosene-like mixture. Fire officials said chilly air could have slowed any evaporation of fumes, preventing a fire.

Before the plane went down, McBroom circled the airport nearly an hour. Some investigators speculated the pilot circled to consume excess fuel and reduce the danger of fire.

"It is reasonable to assume that one of the causes (of the crash) could be lack of fuel," Driver said.

About 10 minutes before the DC-8 skidded into the trees, McBroom told the control tower he had about 3,000 pounds of fuel. A Federal Aviation Administration examiner said that equals about 500 gallons, which could power a DC-8 for 10 minutes or more.

"A failure of the aircraft's electrical system also is a possibility" and could have rendered the fuel gauges inaccurate, Driver said.

Assistant Fire Chief Dan Smith of Multnomah County District 10 said he believed McBroom "probably aimed for a dark spot (indicating little human activity below)" just before crash.

"The guy did a pretty good job if he still had any control over it at the time," Smith said.

The craft demolished one unoccupied home and landed on top of another vacant house but there were no injuries on the ground.

Prisoner Aided Crash Victims Before Escape

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — After surviving an airliner crash, prison escapee Kim E. Campbell pitched in to pull other passengers to safety. Moments later Campbell had escaped again, his police escort said Friday.

Police issued an all-points bulletin for Campbell after the crash Thursday night.

Capt. Roger Seed of the state corrections division was with the 27-year-old convicted robber when the United Airlines DC-9 crashed three miles southeast of Portland International Airport. Ten of the 185 people aboard the plane were killed, and 69 were injured.

"The kid did a hell of a good job, he really did," Seed said of Campbell, whom he was taking back to the Oregon State Penitentiary. "He was scared, but he stuck around and helped out, helped out more than a lot of other people would ....

"I personally think it (the escape) was a last-minute decision," Seed said when contacted at his home Friday.

Penitentiary Superintendent Hoyt Cupp said Campbell reportedly telephoned his father, Thomas Campbell of Sequim, Wash., from an unidentified hospital Thursday night. But a list of survivors admitted to seven local hospitals did not did not include Campbell's name.

Campbell walked away from the prison's forest work camp at Tillamook on Jan. 27, 1978. He had 14 months left on a four-year sentence after a robbery conviction. He was recaptured in Denver earlier this month.

Seed, 48, said he and Campbell talked about the possibility of a crash after passengers were told by the pilot that there were problems with the lowering of the landing gear.

"He said, 'Hey, don't worry about me, I'll be right behind you,'" Seed said. "I was supposed to open the right rear emergency exit door and the slide was to come out, then he and I were to be the first ones out and help the others down," Seed said.

After the crash, Seed said he opened the door but the thick trees made use of the inflatable slide impossible.

"I jumped to the ground, about seven to eight feet, and he (Campbell) stood in the door and handed passengers down to me," said Seed, who was slightly injured. "When they stopped coming out, he helped me back into the plane and we did a quick check to see if anyone else was left.

"I went back out another door and he never did come out (that door) ... I looked around but it was dark and there were a lot of people."

Department Asks Benzene Review

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department is asking the Supreme Court to review a lower court order which struck down tough federal standards for benzene exposure for as many as 629,000 workers.

The department said scientific evidence shows a significant link between benzene exposure and the incidence of leukemia. But the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in October ruled in favor of the American Petroleum Institute and the National Petroleum Refiners Association, saying the Ocupational Safety and Health Administration had not shown its new rules benefited workers in a reasonable relationship to the cost.

ABANDONED BABY — Nurse Beverly Green of the Oschner Foundation Hospital in New Orleans holds the hours-old baby boy found abandoned outside a suburban apartment building Sunday. The infant was reported in fair condition. (AP Laserphoto)

Abandoned Baby Found Under Stairwell

METAIRIE, La. (UPI) — An abandoned baby, who spent the first two hours of his life inside a paper grocery bag wrapped in a dirty sweatshirt, Sunday was doing just fine, doctors at Oschner Foundation Hospital said.

The 7-pound, 11½-ounce boy was discovered beneath a stairwell overhang at a suburban New Orleans apartment complex by Timothy Tate, 6, who was walking his dog before breakfast Sunday morning.

"He took his dog out for a walk and came back and said, 'Mommy, there's a little baby in a bag downstairs,'" said Veronica Tate, Timothy's mother. "I didn't think it was too serious, but I sent my older son (Jimmy) down there. He said, 'Mommy, there is a live baby in a paper bag.'

"Jimmy's imagination is not as wild as Tim's and I can usually rely on him. They both thought it was neat. They didn't understand that the child had been abandoned."

The full-term infant, born about two hours earlier, was wrapped in a terry cloth towel and a dirty sweatshirt. A padding of old newspapers covered the bottom of the grocery bag, but it was drenched by the wet ground.

"It was damp and the bottom of the bag was wet," Mrs. Tate said. "His little feet were like ice. The paramedics came and used a syringe to clean out his eyes and nose.

"I wasn't really sure what danger he was in. The (umbilical) cord was not cut or clamped. I've had two babies before but I never delivered any."

Oschner spokesman Tom Gore said the baby was placed in the neonatal intensive care unit, suffering from low body temperature, an excess of blood in his system and an infection. He was in stable condition. Doctors allowed photographers to take pictures of the infant Sunday afternoon.

"He held on to my hand real tight," Mrs. Tate said. "I concentrated on getting him warm and cleaning him off. That sweatshirt was dirty up against his face. I used to work for a pediatrician, but I did not feel medically qualifed to attempt to do anything to the cord or the child.

"My main concern was getting him to the hospital."

Mrs. Tate was on the phone to Oschner doctors throughout the day, asking for reports on the baby's progress. Even though she has two children, she said she considered adopting the infant.

"It's tempting, as impractical as it is," Mrs. Tate said. "I asked the detectives what would happen to him. They'll proably take him from the hospital to a home, and if none of the parents claim him, then they'll probably put him up for adoption.

Burglary Investigators Find Bodies

CHADDS FORD, Pa. (AP) — Three bodies were found in one grave in a wooded farmland area near here Saturday night, and authorities said the discovery could be linked to an interstate burglary ring.

The discovery brings to four the number of bodies found in the investigation of the the ring that operated for 10 years in Maryland, Delaware and southeastern Pennsylvania.

Names of the three white males found Saturday will be released later this week after autopsies and tests, officials said. Investigators said the dead men may have been among five potential witnesses who disappeared before testifying to a federal grand jury investigating the burglary ring.

Chester County District Attorney William Lamb said it was too early to comment on possible suspects in the slayings and said it was not known immediately how the three had died.

Lamb said an informant's tip led him and county, state and FBI investigators to the multiple grave.

On Nov. 30, officials working with Leslie Dale, 37, now awaiting trial on theft and conspiracy charges, turned up the body of reputed informant Gary Wayne Crouch of Elkton, Md., in a remote wooded area in western Chester County.

Crouch, who died of a bullet wound, was reputed to have been an informant in the federal-state investigation of the burglary ring.

Auctioneer Sells Nazi Mementoes

MUNICH, West Germany (UPI) — Auction house owner Count Klenau von Klenowa says he specializes in Nazi memorabilia because of its historical value.

But Bavarian state officials and most local newspapers thought it simply bad taste when Klenau chose Nov. 9, the 40th anniversary of the "Crystal Night" pogrom, to auction some of the yellow stars the Nazis forced Jews wear on their clothing.

The fact that Klenau's auctions are held in the city which Adolf Hitler called "the capital of the (Nazi) movement" adds to the questions many have raised about his activities.

Bavarian justice authorities recently tried to stop Klenau's auctions of Nazi relics. West German law prohibits dealing in Nazi books, insignia, uniforms, weapons and other memorabilia except for academic and historical purposes.

Klenau said his auction house also specializes in medieval weapons and that he has connections with military museums around the world. The authorities dropped their action against him.

"We can do nothing with the law," Bavarian Justice Ministry spokesman Reinhard Beck said. "But I personally consider the whole thing tasteless."

Tasteless or not, doing business in Nazi memorabilia definitely is lucrative.

At a December auction, the guest book of Col. Gen. Eduard Dietl, commander of the 20th Mountain Army from 1942-45, sold for $2,700. A major general's uniform went for $1,350, a Nazi judge's cap and gown for $432, a pair of boots belonging to one of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's "Desert Rats" for $350, and a silver butter knife belonging to Hitler's deputy, Hermann Goering, for $200.

At the last minute the Bavarian Ministry of Finance did force Klenau to withdraw about 20 volumes of Hitler's book, "Mein Kampf," a number of Nazi propaganda brochures including one entitled "The Jews in Holland," and a tablecloth and napkins embroidered with the initials "AH."

The finance ministry insists it owns the copyright to "Mein Kampf" and uses this ownership to prevent its distribution. It also owns all property of Nazi leaders found in Bavaria after their defeat.

Klenau contends, however, that the table linen and copies of "Mein Kampf" belonged to Hitler's housekeeper, Mrs. Winter, and hopes he will have won the argument in time to reoffer the items at his next auction in the spring.

Klenau and his employees become reticent when asked to discuss their customers.

"There are all sorts — historians, museum custodians, dealers and private collectors," auctioneer Wolfgang Hermann said. He said that, in any event, only one-third of the items they handle are from the Nazi period.

Three Frenchmen who attended the auction seeking items for their private collections expressed disappointment at the withdrawals. Among them, they bought only five copies of the SS publication, "The Black Corps," and two SS daggers.

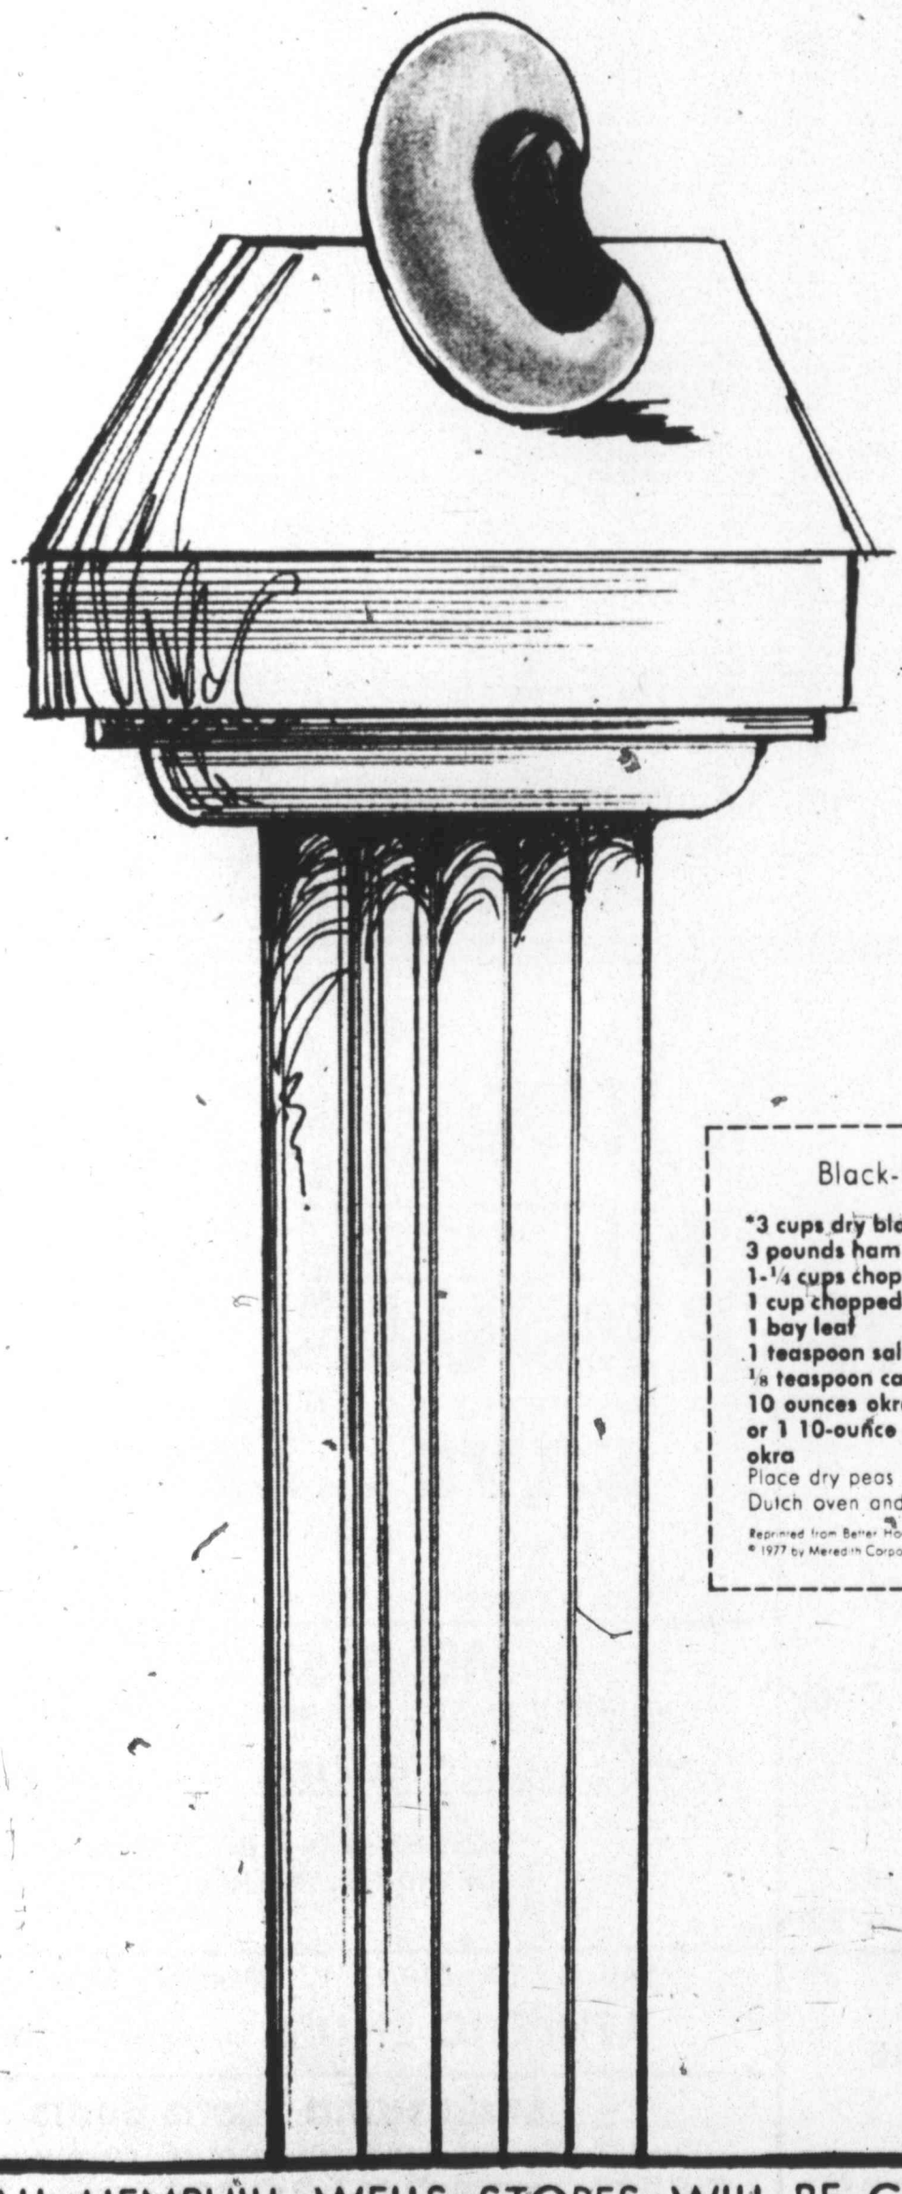

Copies of the official pictures taken after their deaths of the 11 Nazi war criminals hanged at Nuernberg in 1946 by the Americans, British, French and Russians, went for only $35, to a mailed bid.

When the auction ended, the young man withdrew several SS medals from his pocket and offered them to a portly Bavarian in his early 50s who had shown a keen interest in Nazi trivia. As the crowd of bidders broke up, the two began a serious negotiation.

CIVIL DEFENSE

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's record defense budget for fiscal 1980 will contain $110 million for civil defense spending, up by $13 million from the 1979 budget. Administration sources, asking not to be named, said the civil defense spending proposal Carter will send to Congress next month was far short of the $140.7 million sought by Defense Secretary Harold Brown.

Once a year, the homely black-eyed pea is elevated to a pinnacle ...

How and why the tradition began no one seems to know, but every year in the South, the lowly black-eyed pea takes on miracle-working powers. Eating black-eyed peas on New Year's Day is said to insure good fortune for the coming year. Whether this is true or not we don't know, but the tradition is as real as Santa Claus and the Easter Bunny to Southerners ... so just in case you don't want to take any chances with the New Year, here is a tasty recipe to help you prepare your own kettle of GOOD LUCK:

Black-Eyed Peas and Ham Hocks

3 cups dry black-eyed peas
3 pounds ham hocks
1-¼ cups chopped onion
1 cup chopped celery
1 bay leaf
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon cayenne
10 ounces okra, cut up (2 cups), or 1 10-ounce package frozen cut okra

Place dry peas in a 6-quart kettle or Dutch oven and add 12 cups water. Bring to boil, simmer 2 minutes, remove from heat. Cover and soak one hour. Do not drain. Stir in ham hocks, onion, celery, bay leaf, salt, and cayenne. Bring to boiling. Reduce heat; cover and simmer till ham hocks are tender and peas are done, about 1½ hours. Stir in fresh or frozen okra; cook till okra is very tender, 10 to 15 minutes. Remove bay leaf. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Makes 6 servings.

River Retains Unspoiled Charm

By Barbara S. Moffet
National Georgraphic News Service

WASHINGTON — Sailors delight in its wide open waters, and anglers extol its teeming depths. Yet the River Shannon — the longest river in the British Isles — has so far avoided the eye of big-time developers and manufacturers.

Remarkably free of commercial traffic or industrial development, the river wanders past bucolic countryside and storybook villages. Although its banks are dotted with a handful of utility plants and oil depots, vast stretches remain much as they have for centuries.

Even more unusual, the Shannon is virtually pollution free.

"You can stick your kettle down here and make your tea with the water. It's that pure," said one of the many farmers who make a living along the river.

Lying wholly within the Republic of Ireland, the River Shannon flows through the heartland of the country for 214 miles. With its 32 tributaries, it drains a fifth of all Ireland.

If the freshwater Shannonn can be said to have an industry, it is boating, writes Allan C. Fisher Jr. in the National Geographic. About 21,000 visitors a year — mostly Germans — rent cabin cruisers to venture down the river.

The river that teems with fish overflows with legends — and people to pass them on. There is Jerry Martin, a living Irish legend who has been making violins (or fiddles, as he calls them) since 1922.

Martin leads a Spartan life in a dirt-floored cottage near the tiny harbor of Garrykennedy on Lough Derg, one of the three major lakes along the River Shannon. His fiddles are collectors' items.

Now 81, frail, and arthritic, Martin's fiddle making has slowed.

"I sued to make one in three weeks," he lamented. "Sometimes I would work 14 hours straight. I'm not able to do that anymore."

Downstream, near the Shannon's mouth, lives Michael Scanlan, a harbor pilot who plied the river for more than 30 years. Scanlan recalls in legend about Kilstiffin Bank, a shoal in the Shanon.

"Kilstiffin Bank probably once was a part of the mainland, an old Irish annals says that in the ninth century a great storm ravaged the area,". he related. "Many people lost their lives, and scores of houses disappeared beneath the sea.

"When I was a kid, I used to hear old people say that if a sailing ship dropped anchor on Kilstiffin Bank, during the night a little man would climb the anchor cable and say, 'Take up your cable; it's gone down the chimney of my house.'"

And there's a notable dog of the river's Clarendon Lock area that could guide a thristy boatman to a pub.

The way George McArdle, the thristy boatman, tells it, he was advised to follow Manfred, the pooch, down a path. "Finally we reached a crossroads with two pubs," he recalled. "Manfred went straight to the one on the right, stood at the bar on his hind legs, with his front paws against it, and looked expectantly at the pub owner's wife." Manfred was rewarded with a dog biscuit.

When asked why the dog had chosen her pub over the one on the left, the pub owner's wife smiled a bit smugly and replied, "It doesn't have dog biscuits."

MASTER FIDDLE MAKER — "I live for music Says Jerry Martin, a fiddle maker who for 48 years has worked in a cottage near Ireland's River Shannon. At age 81, Martin says he'll finish only one more violin, his 75th. Long ago his violins became collectors' items, and Martin became a living legend along the river. (NEA Photo)

Food Price Rise Seen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland predicts food prices will rise between 6 percent and 10 percent in 1979, with beef leading the increase.

In a copyrighted interview released Sunday by U.S. News and World Report magazine, Bergland said the cost of hamburger and steak will rise 10 percent to 14 percent and most of the increase will be in the next six months. He said the price hike will be higher for ground meat than for choice cuts.

But he said, "Overall meat prices may be held down because consumers are shifting to poultry — chicken and turkey — to avoid high beef prices. Poultry producers are expanding output by 8 percent to 10 percent a year."

Bergland said pork prices should rise 2 to 5 percent, and the cost of dairy products, fruit, vegetables and grain should remain stable in 1979.

However, he said, "We are still assessing the damage from the freeze in Southern California in early December. The crops of lemons, navel oranges and lettuce were most affected and their prices may rise somewhat as a result."

Asked why President Carter's inflation-control efforts seem ineffective in holding down food prices, Bergland noted that Carter exempted raw-material costs from his wage-price guidelines.

"The president has decided that you can't place a limit on raw-material costs and expect any response to demand," he said.

Bergland said the outlook for U.S. produce exports in 1979 is "probably better" than the $27 billion earned in 1978.

"Food is becoming a commodity that is negotiable like currency in the world market," he said.

Study Says Bookworms Don't Fit Stereotype

By Donald J. Frederick
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — Bookworms, it turns out, are not necessarily introspective men and women dressed in tweeds, wearing thick glasses and doting on obscure volumes.

Instead, they are more often the active members of the community, the people who also go in for physical fitness activities, listen to music, go the theater, travel, and watch television, the National Georgraphic Society reports.

At least that's the story sketched by a recent study of America's reading habits. The survey was based on long-hour interviews with 1,450 people of varying economic backgrounds in all parts of the country.

Conducted by the research firm of Yankelovich, Skelly, and White for the Book Industry Study Group, the survey also shows that women are the nation's most dedicated bookworms. The most avid reader of all is a woman with a total household income of $29,000 to $30,000.

This doesn't mean men don't get lost in books. More than half of all Americans age 16 or older read one or more books in the six months surveyed, the study found, and one out of four of these devoured 10 or more books.

Why do they read? Pleasure, sheer pleasure. "A lot of reading is done these days for career advancement, but many of these heavy readers have been hooked on books from an early age and read for enjoyment," said Arthur H. White, whose firm conducted the study.

"Unfortunately, there's a dark side to this," he sasid. "If kids aren't book readers by the time they leave high school, there seems to be a little chance of converting them."

Statistics seem to bear out this fact. The survey showed that newspapers and magazines are the sole reading fare for 39 percent of the population. Perhaps as many as 12 percent don't read anything, because they've never acquired the skill.

Despite the gloomy figures, book stores have never been more popular, and even a lot of people who don't read books reported visiting them regularly, either to browse or buy a volume or two for friends.

Americans seem to love biographies and autobiographies. Among book readers the biggest proportion — 44 percent — said they liked to read them. Next most popular were action/adventure fiction, followed by historical novels, mysteries/detective stories, short stories, and cookbooks/home economics books.

Language books were the least popular category overall, and in the fiction field, the once powerful "western" has ridden into the sunset, for the moment at least.

Neuharth Heads Gannett Newspapers

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Allen H. Neuharth, president of Gannett Co. Inc. since 1970, has been named Gannett's chairman and president, the nationwide newspaper group announced Sunday.

Neuharth, who will retain the title of chief executive officer, succeeds Paul Miller, 72, who retired effective Sunday.

Neuharth, 54, joined Gannett in 1963, after 10 years with Knight newspapers in Miami and Detroit. He was named executive vice president of the Rochester-based Gannett group in 1966, president and chief executive operating officer in 1970 and chief executive in 1973.

Neuharth is also chairman and president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. A native of South Dakota, he began his journalistic career as a reporter for The Associated Press in Sioux Falls, S.D., in 1950.

Aspects Of Death Viewed By Series

Last year, more than two million Americans died; millions of others grieved. Yet death, our constant companion and ultimate threat, remains a powerful modern taboo. Even repetitive headlines fail to shake society's aversion to discussing death and dying.

Such concerns are explored this spring in a 3 credit hour course offered by Texas Tech University in cooperation with the Avalanche-Journal.

Weekly newspaper articles, the main component of the course, entitled "Death & Dying: Challenge & Change," will appear each Sunday beginning January 21 for fifteen consecutive weeks in The Avalanche Journal.

Death & Dying: Challenge and Change focuses on the various issues and complex problems associated with death and dying resulting from changes in society itself. The course encompasses a full range of topics, from grief, funeral practices, and widowhood to suicide, life beyond death, and the moral and ethical issues related to this subject of universal, compelling interest.

Robert Fulton, Professor of Sociology at the University of Minnesota and Director of the Center for Death Education and Research, is the national academic coordinator for Death and Dying. Psychologists, sociologists, and medical professionals are among the 15 nationally known scholars who probe mortality, recent changes in the approach to dying and the personal and social dilemmas they pose.

Dr. S.M. Kennedy, University Professor at Texas Tech, will instruct and coordinate the course. In addition to reading the newspaper articles, the Course Reader, and the Study Guide — two classes and an examination meeting are required to obtain credit. Meeting will be scheduled on Saturdays as a convenience for participants and they will be notified by mail of the times and places of the meetings. The Reader and Study Guide will be available at the Texas Tech Bookstore for $9.95.

"Death & Dying: Challenge & Change" is a tahree hour credit course listed in the University General Catalog as Humanities 230. Students may register for this course at spring registration as part of their regular load. Those persons interested in this course only, have the option of taking it for regular residence credit or by correspondence. Persons taking the class by correspondence must attend the same three meetings as the other students, but should register for it at the Division of Continuing Education, Building X—15.

For additional information on this course, contact D. M. McElroy, Director of Special Projects, call 742-2354.

Courses by Newspaper was developed in 1973 by University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and is funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The spring series "Death & Dying: Challenge & Change" is the tenth in a continuing series of timely educational features prepared by Courses by Newspaper.

Previous courses have been offered by more than 1,100 newspaper with a combined circulation of approximately 25 million readers. An estimated 40,000 newspaper readers have earned valuable college credit through the program offered by more than 700 educational institutions.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I want to thank you for the most wonderful present I have ever received. Because of an item in your column last year, I sent for "The Living Will." Now I have peace of mind, knowing that if my husband or I shall ever become terminally ill, our loved ones will never have to watch us die slow and agonizing deaths as some we have witnessed.

I saw my husband's, 6-foot, 200-pound father waste away to an 88-pound skeleton after fighting a two-year battle with cancer. The doctors told us it was hopeless, yet kept that poor dear man alive month after month with transfusions, tubes, needles and drugs, while he prayed to God to take him.

Abby, you would do millions of readers a priceless service by acquainting them with "The Living Will" as you did me.

Grateful In Joliet, Ill.

Dear Grateful: Thank you for giving me the opportunity to publicize "The Living Will" again. It reads as follows:

To My Family, My Physician, My Lawyers

And All Others Whom It May Concern

Death is as much a reality as birth, growth, maturity and old age — it is the one certainty of life. If the time comes when I can no longer take part in decisions for my own future, let this statement stand as an expression of my wishes and directions, while I am still of sound mind.

If at such a time the situation should arise in which there is no reasonable expectation of my recovery from extreme physical or mental disability, I direct that I be allowed to die and not be kept alive by medication, artificial means or "heroic measures." I do, however, ask that medication be mercifully administered to be used to alleviate suffering even though this may shorten my remaining life.

This statement is made after careful consideration and is in accordance with my strong convictions and beliefs. I want the wishes and directions here expressly carried out to the extent permitted by law. Insofar as they are not legally enforceable, I hope that those of whom this Will is addressed will regard themselves as morally bound by this provisions.

To date, over two million "Living Will" have been distributed. Yes, I have signed one. I requested six copies and enclosed my check for $10 to cover cost of documents and mailing. (It is tax deductible.)

If you send for "The Living Will," please be patient. I promise your request will not be overlooked. Be sure to enclose your name and address, clearly written.

The document is free but this is a nonprofit organization, so all donations are gratefully accepted.

One woman requested eight copies and enclosed her check for $500 saying, "This is the most marvelous thing I've ever heard of." I agree.

P.S. If you or your lawyer have any questions concerning the legality of "The Living Will," please write to Concern For Dying, same address as above.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

IN COLLABORATION WITH PAUL E. RUBLE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Just what is moniliasis? I understand it may effect various parts of the body. Which parts are most apt to show it? What about treatment? — M.K.

It is a yeast infection, also called candidiasis for the specific organism that causes it — candida albicans, a kind of fungus. It causes more than its share of trouble.

The organism may be present normally in the body and cause no undue symptoms until constitutional changes occur to alter the normal balance of bacteria. A reduction in normal bacteria, for example, can be just what the yeast needs to flourish. Pregnancy, diabetes or a number of other disturbances of body chemistry may contribute.

The chief infection sites are the mouth (a condition called thrush), the skin, as in breast folds, and the nails of the fingers or toes. While not strictly a venereal disease, it can be transmitted via the genitals and appear, for example, on the penis of males, especially of uncircumcised ones. It may appear as diaper rash in infants.

Longterm use of bacteria-fighting medicines (antibiotics) may set the stage for the yeast to take over. Some suggest that the birth control pill is involved, but no definite relationship has been found.

The standard treatment is with mystatin or amphotericin B. Other, more potent medicines can be used with more stubborn infections. The medicine can be in the form of oral pills, creams or suppositories. Often, combinations of these applications may be needed to bring an infection under control. For instance, if nails are invaded by the yeast both the creams and oral medicines may be required.

I have noted many complaints of recurrent infections of the monilia type for women who I suspect have simply failed to continue the full course of their prescribed medicine. With monilia the usually effective length of dosage is about 14 days. If stopped too soon, the yeast will take advantage of the break in medicine and begin multiplying again.

Tight-fitting, non-absorbent undergarments (as pantyhose) may provide a helpful environment for the little troublemaker as it may for other similar organisms.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: I am almost 15 and have had a bad case of arthritis in my fingers. I have an awful habit of cracking my knuckles. Please tell me if this is a part of my problem. I try soaking my fingers in hot water but it only gives me temporary comfort. — S.P.

At your age, I suspect this is a mechanical problem brought on by your habit. Knuckle-cracking is seldom troublesome, but you may have managed to cause some injury to the joint capsule. Osteoarthritis is the wear and tear variety, and that is probably what you have in mind. It seldom affects the muscles and it would be unusual at your age. As I see it, your only solution is to avoid the knuckle-cracking. The pain should disappear shortly.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: Please tell me what kind of ointment or salve to buy. I just about always have sores in my nose and also cracks on each side of my mouth. My kids get the mouth cracks too. — A.J.

These cracks often mean a vitamin deficiency. A daily capsule containing vitamins A and B usually help if that is the case. I presume the sores are on the inside of your nose. The most frequent cause, especially in children, is finger irritation. Healing can be speeded up with any ointment containing bacitracin in a petroleum base. Chronic ulceration (sores) may produce infection, and if that has happened an antibiotic ointment would be needed. You may have to have the family seen by a physician. He may be able to pinpoint a specific cause among those I mention.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: What is connective tissue disease? How does it affect the retina of the eye? What can be done for it? — Mrs. M.J.E.

Connective tissue disease is similar to collagen disease, perhaps a bit more descriptive. Collagen (KOL-uh-gen) is from a Greek word meaning glue. The skin contains collagen tissue, as does any that serves to hold organs in place, etc. There are several puzzling disorders involving inflammation of this tissue, including, of course, rheumatoid arthritis. Steroid drugs are sometimes used. It is possible for the eye retina to be affected, resulting in retinal detachment.

• • •

Arthritis sufferers can be helped. For a copy of the booklet "How You Can Control Arthritis," which discusses many types of arthritis and related joint diseases as well as effective treatments and medications, write to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Ruble welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Clothing Specialist Offers Sale Advice

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (Special) — Susan Wright, Extension clothing specialist for New Mexico State University, has some information about the upcoming January White Sales and the present after-Christmas sales.

"To get the most for your 'sale' dollar, you must use the same kind of thinking, planning, comparing and judging of quality you do at any other time," she said.

Workmanship in the product is the key to the value of anything on sale. Miss Wright pointed out that such features as careful matching of plaids, checks or strips, and matching designs at front, back, and side seams are important.

Check for such things as: Are the seams and hems flat and even in width? Is the thread used of an inconspicuous color and appropriate to the garment and the fabric?

Fasteners are often clues to the quality of the product. Hooks and eyes, snaps and buttons should be sewn on securely and button and bottonhole areas should be interfaced with a fabric of comparable weight and with similar care requirements. Zippers should be flat, evenly stitched and inconscipuous. A hook and eye should be found at the top of a neckline zipper.

Miss Wright also has some advice about buying goods in the White Sales. "Don't rush out and buy a lot of colorful sheets and pillowcases just becuase they are on sale. With normal care good linens will wear for years. Check your present supply and buy only what is needed."

She suggests that three sets of linen for each bed should be adequate — one on the bed, one in the laundry, and one for emergecny use.

Again her advice to shoppers has to do with checking the quality of the product.

Look for closeness and firmness in the weave. A close weave which uses more thread will wear much longer and, of course, cost more.

Most sheets are a blend of 65 percent polyester and 35 percent cotton and can be tumble dried.

With colors becoming so popular, it is especially important to read care tags. Hot water can fade some colors.

Designer sheets and towels have become a fashion item for the home. As always, fashion costs more. You must decide if fashion is worth the extra dollar when purchasing linens, Miss Wright said.

Assertiveness Key To Improved Self-esteem, Human Relations

LAS CRUCES (Special) — "Next year I will try to get along better with everyone and have better self-esteem." While this looks like a great New Year's resolution, it's often hard to know exactly how to start. The key is to assert yourself, says Leo Yates, Extension family life specialist at New Mexico State University.

Someone who is self-assertive can express himself honestly, achieve his goal in life, make his own choices, and be responsible for the consequences, says Yates. That's what makes a self-assertive person feel good about himself.

The submissive or aggressive person is one who really isn't very happy about himself, Yates explains. He manages to find someone to blame for his decisions and shifts responsibility in his own behavior to somebody else. Rationalization is his common defense.

Both aggressive and submissive behaviors are seen in children. Submissive children may sit, cry and make no effort to recover their losses.

Like the aggressive child, the submissive child finds others to blame for his failure. Adults often play the same games — blaming, ducking responsibility, criticizing and shifting accountability for behavior over to others.

Although the self-assertive person makes mistakes, he is willing to say he's wrong and to change if necessary, observes Yates.

He also stands up and defends his behavior if he believes he's right. He doesn't need or want to blame others for what he does.

Thus, a person who strives to be assertive without being too aggressive or passive, will probably have the most success in achieving this year's New Year's Resolutions.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

Mix together equal parts of brilliant, stimulating guests, good food and drink. Toss in a piano in key and blend into a bare room void of chairs. Mix for about five hours. Yield: A fantastic evening.

I'm not good at parties, no matter how closely they follow the recipe. I hit for a chair, preferably within arm's length of the chips, and dip and eat myself into a coma.

For me a party depends on who I meet. I have my own guidelines of what constitutes a perfect evening.

It's a good night for me when I meet another mother whose children are rotten. Deliver me from the woman who sits around all night telling me her son used his paper route money to send her to the Greek Islands, her daughter is happily married with three wonderful children and is running for Governor, and her "baby" was born with capped teeth, makes his bed every morning and doesn't want to drive until he is 35.

It's a great party for me when I sit next to a woman who has been on a diet for three weeks and has lost two pounds in her neck and one pound in her bust. The rest of the measurements remain the same. I don't want to hear from the woman who comes in wearing an Industrial Strength bra and tells me how being endowed makes you look fat.

My evening is made when the woman who comes in wearing a dress like mine — and she's pregnant — spills marinated herring down the front of it and must go home early.

It's a grand night for me when anyone asks for my recipe for anything.

It's a great evening when I don't encounter a woman who wears wet lipstick that stays wet, is trying to gain weight, is into white wine, loves football and wants to know who that "interesting older man is" and it's my husband.

Coming home of other night my husband said, "Did you have a good time?"

"I had a wonderful time," I said. "Louise is unfulfilled as a mother. Brenda doesn't have her screens out yet. Ann is naming ABC Sports in an alienation suit. Helen told her son they couldn't afford $2,000 at the orthodontist and he would have to develop a pleasant personality, and just as that lecherous Fred asked Mary to dance, her sitter called to tell her Kathy was throwing up."

GOREN ON BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune

♠Q872 ♡A ◇A1053 ♣9852
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♡	Pass	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—It is not our practice to let the opponents play unmolested at the one-level. Here the auction has marked North with some values—West passed originally and it looks as if East made a light opening bid in third seat. Therefore, we would double to elicit a black suit from partner.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K98 ♡AJ1072 ◇J ♣A853
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—You are in slam territory, for partner has made a "high reverse." In such situations, it's always best to set the trump suit as quickly as possible. However, you need do no more than rebid three spades. Partner will get the message about the strength of your hand when you cue-bid the ace of clubs at your next turn.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable with 40 on score, you hold:
♠J5 ♡AQ92 ◇AQ76 ♣AQJ
Partner opens the bidding with three spades. What action do you take?

A.—Despite the fact that partner has denied the values for an opening bid, slam is still a possibility in view of your potential trick-taking power and partner's long suit. This is a case where the part score is an asset. You can show your aspirations by simply bidding four spades, and avoid getting too high if partner has an unsuitable hand.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A1032 ♡83 ◇QJ7643 ♣4
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	2 ♠	Dble.	?

What action do you take?

A.—Unless partner is well known for magnanimous donations to the opponents, there is no reason to suppose you have a better spot. Partner should have a good suit to overcall at the two-level vulnerable, and there is no guarantee that he has a fit for your weak diamond suit. Indeed, since partner rates to have some spades (East's double suggests spade shortness) and there are a lot of hearts missing, it is quite likely that he is short in diamonds.

Q.5—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ104 ♡7 ◇KJ83 ♣A752
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—As stated earlier, we are reluctant to allow the opponents to play at the one-level. Here, however, any action we take is fraught with risk. If we double, partner will surely respond in hearts. If we overcall with a weak four-card minor, we are inviting trouble. And if we balance with one no trump, the opponents might locate a hidden heart fit. It seems clearly best to let West struggle in one spade, and hope for undertricks at 100 each.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ9762 ♡6 ◇93 ♣AKQ5
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♡	2 ♠	3 ♡

What do you bid now?

A.—Clearly, you have the playing strength for four spades. Tactically, however, it would be wise to bid for clubs now. Should the opponents sacrifice over four spades, you want partner to lead a club, so make your lead-directing bid while it's convenient to do so.

Q.7—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ104 ♡QJ ◇J6 ♣AKQJ6
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—This is a matter of simple arithmetic. You have 18 points in high cards, and partner should have at least 19-20 for his reverse and jump in no trump. You will probably be missing at most a queen, and, in addition, you have a running five-card suit. To bid anything less than seven no trump would be the height of conservatism.

Q.8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A ♡62 ◇QJ1054 ♣QJ863
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble.	?

What action do you take?

A.—Opposite an opening bid, you have a most useful hand—enough for a redouble. However, that would leave you poorly placed if the opponents have bid some number of hearts when the auction gets back to you. Therefore, we suggest a response of two diamonds. The auction is unlikely to die there, so you will get a chance to show your other suit at your next turn, which will then give partner a fair picture of your distribution and high-card strength.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: May I reply to "Deeply Concerned In Boston," the woman who was afraid the test-tube baby might reduce child-bearing to a cold, scientific procedure, devoid of caring or love?

My husband and I chose artificial insemination as the last resort. We had been trying for several years, without success, to have a baby the natural way. I can tell you from first-hand experience that very few babies would be born if they all had to be conceived in this manner. Furthermore, not many marriages could endure the tension and disappointments connected with artificial insemination. It takes true dedication and a tremendous desire on the part of both parties to have a child with the help of physicians, nurses and technicians. On the other hand, no love or caring is needed to produce a baby through sexual intercourse. All it takes is one lustful moment.

So, please tell "Deeply Concerned" that her fears are unfounded. Even though science has figured out a way to make babies in test tubes, the world is in no danger of being populated by "biological fusions." Not THAT many people want children badly enough to go through the anxiety. — Been There

Dear B.T.: Thanks for the words of reassurance. Many other "Been There's" echoed your sentiments and gave me new respect for those who do it "the other way."

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: My girl friend and I had dinner at a nice restaurant recently. We were seated next to an older gentleman and his wife.

The fellow kept interrupting our conversation by asking questions such as, "Are you two married?" and, "How long have you been going together?" He also wanted to know where we worked, what we thought of the Carter administration, and how we felt about the state of the world in general.

He kept the conversation going throughout our entire meal. The man was not an ignoramus; in fact, he was well-informed and quite interesting.

When the waiter brought our dinner check he insisted on paying. I allowed him to do so since I figured we had provided him with an evening's entertainment. My friend was upset and said I behaved improperly. What is your opinion? — Pleased At The Bail-Out

Dear Pleased: I agree with your friend. Why obligate yourself to a total stranger? If you should run into him again he would undoubtedly move right in and then it would be YOUR turn to pick up the check. There's no such thing as a free lunch — or dinner or anything else.

• • •

Dear Ann: Usually you're pretty sharp but you passed up a great opportunity recently. I refer to the woman who complained that "Mrs. Goody Two Shoes" spoiled the local coffee klatches by constantly asking, "Were you there?" "How can you be sure the story is true? Did you hear it from a fly on the wall?"

Why didn't you tell her off in your inimitable style? The perfect squelch would have been, "Intelligent people talk about ideas. Average people talk about things. Small people talk about other people." I read that line somewhere and never forgot it. — Cheyenne Fan

Dear Cheyenne: You read it in my column. And I never forgot it! It would have been the perfect squelch. Thanks for turning up an old goldie.

Opening lead: ♠A

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Oswald: "Here is one of the luckiest hands of all time to start off the year. Bob Slavenburg perhaps the greatest of all the Dutch players was the hero or villain, depending on which side of the table you are identified with. He opened with a psychic one-spade bid in third seat and in no time at all found himself playing in seven spades doubled."

Alan: "You say the hand was one of the luckiest of all time. Let me look at it for a second. West must have opened his ace of clubs and Bob must have made the grand slam."

Oswald: "That is just what happened. Bob ruffed and led his nine of diamonds. West ducked and dummy's six of hearts was discarded. Bob ruffed a heart in dummy and carefully led back dummy's six of clubs to ruff with his nine of trumps. Poor East had to drop the queen of clubs on his partner's ace and now his king of clubs had fallen also. Bob ruffed back to dummy with a heart, laid down the ace of trumps, saw the king fall, drew the rest of the trumps and had made his silly grand slam."

Alan: "Do you think this hand actually happened?"

Oswald: "Maybe, maybe not. Victor Mollo reports it, but Bob and Victor might well have contrived it. In any event South was lucky."

Ask the Experts

It is approximately one in 379.

World Events Year-end Report
Notes Effect Of Women In News

By BARBARA BROOKS
Family News Staff

Looking back on 1978 we find it, like all other years, a mixture of good and bad news. All of the major news stories of the year affect everyone, somehow.

Many stories in 1978 were of particular interest to women, however. Foremost among these, the senate rejected three amendments designed to prevent passage of the Equal Rights Amendment.

The first amendment rejected was designed to recognize the action of four states — Idaho, Kentucky, Nebraska and Tennessee — that had rescinded their previous ratifications of the Amendment. The amendment, which would have allowed other states to do the same, was rejected by a vote of 64 to 26.

Again an amendment requiring a 2/3 vote of both houses for extention of the ERA was defeated by a vote of 58 to 33.

Also defeated in that session by a vote of 54 to 44 was a rescission amendment by Sen. Jack Garn (R-Utah), which would have allowed states that have ratified the ERA additional time to reverse their decisions.

The upshot of the action was that the equal rights amendment extending civil rights to women was granted an extension for acceptance by the states.

In another news event of the year, Golda Meir, a woman known and respected throughout the world, died this year at the age of 80. Mrs. Meir was diagnosed 12 years ago as having malignant lymphomia, a cancer of the lymph system.

A dominant figure throughout Israel's history as an independent state, she was honored by international leaders as well as by her own people during the official 20-hour lying-in-state, in the plaza in front of the Israeli Parliament Building.

Another prominent woman who died during the year was Margaret Mead, American anthropologist, writer, lecturer, researcher, whose career and lifestyle represented, long before the "women's liberation movement," the goals of personal freedom and self-fulfillment which that movement was to reflect.

At the end of her life, this outspoken champion of individual freedom whose first book, "Coming of Age In Samoa," brought her worldwide fame, reflected in her writings a stubborn defense of the family and a concern for the effects of its demise on Western society.

Another prominent woman, Betty Ford, came out with her autobiography, causing a stir with her frank revelations about her children's personal lives during the White House years.

Nancy Landon Kassenbaum won a vote for women this year by capturing a seat in the United States Senate as a legislator from Kansas. Mrs. Kassenbaum will be the only woman senator in Washington next year, and is the first woman senator to be elected since Margaret Chase Smith.

In India, Indira Ghandi was jailed for one week by order of the lower house of Parliament. She was also expelled from the seat she had won in a special election which had been seen as a major step in her political comeback. Mrs. Ghandi, who ruled India for 11 years vowed once again to make a political comeback after her sentence for breech of privilege and contempt of Parliament.

This culminated a year of investigation by the Committee on Parliamentary Privileges, which found that Mrs. Ghandi and two of her aides had ordered the harrassment of four government officials investigating a company run by her son. Although Mrs. Ghandi was released last week from prison, her case will undoubtedly continue to receive attention in the weeks to come.

Another event of particular interest to the cause of women's rights was decided a few days ago. In the first such case since the change of rape laws in Oregon, Delaware and Iowa, John L. Rideout was charged in Salem, Oregon with raping his wife. Rideout was found innocent by an eight woman, four man jury.

The laws were changed by a bill backed by women's rights activists, repealing a provision making cohabitation a defense in sexual offense cases, and deleting the phrase "not married to each other" or "not his wife" from the definition of rape. The law also goes into effect in New Jersey tomorrow.

In local news related to the family, many families in Lubbock adjusted to the fact of their children attending schools outside their own neighborhoods and often riding the bus for the first time, with a success that came to a surprise to even the most optimistic of local officals. After the first semester of the new operation, students who wanted to remain in their "sister schools" second semester far exceeded expectations.

In news that hit the family where it hurts most, the pocketbook, the price of groceries rose an estimated 8.9 percent nationally this year, sending more women than ever into the work force to help balance the family budget. The 1978 inflation figure predicted by economists was between 8.5 and 9 percent.

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON—MICHAEL REED

ALL MY CHILDREN: Tom gave Erica a scare by splitting, but returned and reconciled. Benny blamed Phoebe for leaking information on Estelle's whereabouts to Billy and Edna kept mum that she was the big mouth. Donna's pregnancy tests were positive, but Chuck convinced Dr. Clater to stall telling Donna. Tad received a Christmas card from Ray, who was later reported to have escaped from prison. Phoebe had trouble not telling Charlie he wasn't a Tyler. Chris told Jeff the truth about the San Francisco deal but used it as a sympathy-drawing advantage. Eddie dreamed of riches once he's wed to Kelly.

ANOTHER WORLD: Brian tore off Olive's maternity dress to prove she's not pregnant, but she threatened to testify against Pat unless Olive gets Dan as a husband. Despite being on opposing sides in Pat's case, Mike and Karen Campbell, assistant to the D.A., were drawn to each other, which made Kate decide to split. Clarice continued dating Larry after she broke up a fistfight between him and Charlie. Gwen was upset that Angie began working for Willis again. Mimi gave Vince the option to return to Angie.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Joyce convinced Ralph and Mary not to tell Don the truth about her miscarriage, at least until after the holidays. Melinda made a play for John, then stole his records about Beau's parentage and decided to blackmail Jane. The Spencers left for Vail for a skiing holiday. Sandy got over Kevin's death, thanks to Ralph and Doug's comforting advice. Betsy returned for Christmas. Carol pleaded with Hank to reconsider Jay for the supervisor job and Lori was suspicious of Hank bugging Carol again.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Mary and Margo realized how precious their men are when Chris and Mike were rescued from a construction site accident. Pete warned Donna against hoping for a marriage. The Hortons trimmed the Christmas tree, while Doug and Maggie realized they are becoming "soulmates." Chris and Mary decided to start fresh and go to his folks for Christmas, while Stephanie accepted an invitation to Bob and Linda's.

THE DOCTORS: Missy confessed to Luke that she's a virgin. Missy warned Greta that Kim has eyes for Luke and perhaps Billy, who was swept off his feet after he and Greta moved in with Kim. Doreen asked her new "friend" Mel where she could hire a hit man. Nola swore Carolee to secrecy about Nola's affair with Colin. M.J. accepted a Christmas date with Colin at Mona's.

EDGE OF NIGHT: In cahoots with Margo, Wade drugged Nicole and snapped suggestive passion pics to make Miles jealous. Diane returned to the Children. A not-too-bright "giant," Albert, was introduced at the Children headquarters. April told a prison psychiatrist about her mother's interest in the occult.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Scotty popped the marriage question to a gleeful Laura. Heather tipped off Cal that the cops were on his tail so he split before meeting Jeff. Heather collapsed and later aborted despite Gina's efforts. Bobbi paid Cal more blackmail money to acquire photo negatives of her during her floozie days. Ann sympathized with Jeff about Heather, who cracked after learning about the baby.

GUIDING LIGHT: Roger was rehospitalized after a tiff with Barbara and his wedding to Holly was postponed. Ben gently rejected Amanda's love advances. Phillip wasn't overjoyed about Alan and Jackie's wedding plans and neither was Diane. Katie used Peter to make Mark jealous. Dean and Sarah played games about trusting each other, but Dean got wise and bought a gun.

LOVE OF LIFE: Bambi was doctored by Paul Graham but she's paralyzed on her left side. Arlene broke off with Tom, saying she's in love with Ray. Elliott was in the dumps when Betsy insisted on splitsville. Ray convinced Bambi's pa, who's a minister, that his "wayward" daughter needs him. Mia and Ben headed for a holiday in Vegas.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Half of Llanview were suspects in Marco's murder. Greg spotted Vicki cleaning out Marco's office of all Tina's "nude pics." Talbot paid off Beverly to keep mum about Greg's threats to Marco. Ina found the body after a call from Marco's brother, Mario. An antique gun Dorian bought Peter disappeared while Melinda acted weird. Pat noticed that Brad, who arrived late for the trip to Vegas with Adam, had blood on his arm. Everyone told tales out of school about their whereabouts and "Nicki" sent another letter.

RYAN'S HOPE: The clan partied at the Ryan Bar. Faith improved but Tom continued to be "driven" by Theresa. Rae helped Seneca by convincing a judge to speed up Seneca's adoption of Edmund. Pat and Faith renewed and reviewed their former relationship.

SEARCH FOR TOMORROW: The Phillips family departed to start a fresh life. Travis allowed Liza to believe he was a pilot named Rusty, and they romanced when a storm forced them to seek shelter. John told Stephanie he'd stay on for the sake of the kids but no "loving" would be allowed. Ted offered his services, both in business and love, to Stephanie. Bill made a pitch for Laine who can't forget Gary.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Peggy returned to put her two cents in to Stu about Jill. He broke off with Jill, then exchanged Christmas gifts with Liz. Brock took Casey and Nikki skiing. Kay gave Suzanne loot for Jamie's medical expenses. Leslie and Lance talked about her baby.

POETIC RESPONSE

CHESWARDINE, England — William Bourne, 13, was willing to accept a ten percent raise in his weekly allowance, but his 14-year-old sister Elizabeth was not.

She wrote a poem of protest that the British equivalent of a dollar a week is not enough to cover school expenses in 1978, made brother Bill sign it too, and mailed it off to the Prime Minister.

Sure enough Beth promptly received a poetic respnse from 10 Downing Street. The government agreed to a 50 percent raise if the kids did extra work around the farm. Dad Frank Bourne quickly capitualated to government decree.

COUPLE CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY — Mr. and Mrs. Willie Hill will celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary at 1 p.m. today with a reception in State Savings and Loan party room. Children of the couple, T.J. Hill of Slaton, Mrs. Almeta Cain, Mrs. Mary Lea Taylor, Bill Hill, Bobby Hill, Mrs. Joan Johnson and H.R. (Sonny) Hill, all of Lubbock, will host the event. Hill and the former Effie Tice were married Jan. 1, 1919 in Atoka, Okla. The couple has lived in Lubbock since 1942.

POET AND PROTEGE

Age Gap No Barrier To Friendship Between Pair

By CHRIS BUTLER

Hearing groans and an alarm clock, he dresses, preparing a single breakfast of pine coffee, cottage cheese and pie. It's a soft breakfast; his teeth aren't what they used to be and some throat trouble a few years back still pains him.

In the tub, the young apartment dweller splashes and sings enthusiastically. He's just trying to wake up, but knows it must grate a little on his guest's nerves.

Taking coffee to the living room, where it's quieter, the old fellow sits out the ablution ceremonies quietly, wordlessly. In the poor light, he picks through a few decades-old texts — his texts.

"Ready, Mac"

The aged gentleman nods.

Together, carefully, they negotiate the long dark flight of stairs down to Main Street. Few words are exchanged as they cross, gauging the oncoming lights against Mac's steady, determined gait.

Unlocking newspaper office doors, the two part company for a while — the younger to cover the county beat, the older to read proof — savoring the day a little more because of their affectionate and sometime difficult bond.

Leslie A. McRill first ran into Dan Proctor about eight years ago, when Proctor was 17 and foolish enough to want to be a poet. McRill seemed like a good mentor since he had just been named poet laureate of Oklahoma.

Proctor's poetic ambition was supplanted by journalism only a few months later, but the curious friendship survived.

The pair worked up a repertoire and performed at an Oklahoma City coffeehouse. Occasionally, Proctor's punchy blues and folk riffs on the guitar must have seemed a little boisterous for McRill's delicate voice and phrasing. (Or, from Proctor's standpoint, McRill's peculiarities of rhythm often made accompaniment just a jazz variation of hide-and seek.)

Chauffeur, sideman, student, companion — Proctor was those things, but something more kept him in McRill's affections.

Proctor was a kid — brash and energetic, lean on direction but a real hellion about getting there quickly. He was the incarnation of the '60s — an era McRill had never quite come to terms with, a decade that fascinated him, troubled him and, worst of all, largely ignored him.

Because even then, McRill was old.

"The old skins thrown away, like all worn out or tired of too much repetition ... Man, bring out the NEW!

— From "The New Arts" by L.A. McRill

of it all — the bloodshed, the fads, the dope. It was a time to be young, and octogenarians like himself seemed in real danger of being canceled.

Lay minister, college teacher of literature and the romance languages, historian, newsman, typesetter — McRill's indignation might seem well-founded and understandable. So why the companionship of a sensitive but headstrong kid?

Maybe it was because the lifestyle espoused in the '60s was one McRill had been living since the turn of the century: no family, no steady career, sojourns in California, Wyoming or wherever. He lived the life those brats only shouted about.

And long after most have given it up for pension plans, McRill is still out ther writing poems and traveling.

Maybe that's the reason he enjoys the Proctors and why they are intrigued by him. It's an odd symbiosis of vanity, rspect and curiosity, but it has worked for these two.

McRill just turned 92. His health has been pretty good lately, but for some years his stone has been ready in an Oklahoma City cemetery. Awhile back, he gave Proctor a $1,000 certificate of deposit to see that it's all done properly when the day comes.

In the meantime, he'll stay a little longer in Woodward, correcting proof and writing when the mood strikes.

Somebody's got to keep writing decent poetry instead of this incoherent contemporary garbage, he'll tell you. Sonnets, a respect for language, a reverence for form — that's what is really dying and it bothers him.

Last summer, Proctor drove McRill to the annual reunion at the old man's hometown, an event he had been trying to attend for a decade. The town has been just dust for years, and the 72-year-old daughter of an old, dead friend was the only acquaintance McRill encountered. But Proctor got a good feature story out of it, and McRill got to remember.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR JAN. 1, 1979

PHYSICAL
Criticals: 3, 15, 26, 38, 49, 61, 72 ... Easily bewildered
Highs: 1-2, 16-25, 39-48, 62-71 ... Brimming with force
Lows: 4-14, 27-37, 50-60, 73-75 ... Relax and restore energy

EMOTIONAL
Criticals: 2, 16, 30, 44, 58, 72 ... Tricky day emotionally
Highs: 1, 17-29, 45-57, 73-85 ... Happy as a bird
Lows: 3-15, 31-43, 59-71 ... Trying time emotionally

INTELLECTUAL
Criticals: 10, 26, 43, 59, 76, 92 ... Accident prone, watch out
Highs: 11-25, 44-58, 77-91 ... Your thinking hat is on Lows: 1-9, 27-42, 60-75, 93-95 ... Give your brain a rest

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

'Passive Solar' Home Cuts Electricity Costs

By GAYLE FISHER

TAHOE CITY, Calif. (AP) — Tom Smith has solved his own winter energy crisis with a custom-designed, "passive solar" home. He says it saved about $120 on his heating bill for one month alone.

The principal "mechanism," Smith says, is a solarium, or greenhouse, attached to the south side of the house. Double-paned glass is specially placed to collect radiation from the sun, which is lower in the winter.

The heat then is distributed through passages under and over the house, creating a "thermal envelope," Smith says. Vents are used to cool the home in warmer months.

Smith, who had the house built last February, says a simple way to explain the process is that "the house is fooled into thinking that it exists in the climate provided by the envelope rather than the harsher winter climate."

He says other solar houses have been built, including similar "passive solar" homes, but none that match his strict requirements.

"This house is different from 'active solar' homes because it doesn't need solar panels, pumps, fans and other mechanical devices. All you need are regular building materials," the owner says.

Smith says low cost is one of his goals. He says his two-story, three-bedroom home has cost about $65,000 to date. Construction cost was $51,200 for 1,800 square feet. Included in the design is an aesthetically-pleasing greenhouse.

Another requirement was that the home be 80 percent self-sufficient in winter and summer. On those days when it's not, a wood-burning stove is used to heat the house.

"I'm still using wood that was leftover from construction," he says. "I just bought a cord of wood for the first time."

As for heating costs, Smith says he spent $38 on his utility bill last February compared to a neighbor's $158.

Smith, who temporarily left a research consultant's business in Japan to experiment on the house, says he wanted a site that would face extreme weather conditions.

"Last winter, we had up to 10 feet of snow on the roof," Smith said. "Instead of making the house colder, it actually served as an insulator."

He says the house can circulate warm air comfortably for about three days on cloudy days without sun. After that, the stove must be used.

"It really depends on somebody's personal preference," he says. "Some people may use the stove after two days."

He says the average temperature range is in the 60s and 70s.

Along with the heat, another advantage the "passive solar" house provides is high relative humidity and radiant temperatures.

"What you have is a climate and not a household," Smith says.

As for radiant temperatures, he says the use of the envelope virtually eliminates cold surfaces in the house. The reason is that the circulating warm air in the daytime warms all the structures so that they radiate heat.

He says that already-built homes can be converted to "passive solar" houses, but it is more difficult because of the passages that must be built into the homes.

For Smith, 38, the "passive solar" house is an adventure and an investment. He has written a book outlining the concepts and the design of the house. He hopes to make some profit from that venture.

"I might stay here a couple of years," Smith says. "I'm thinking about writing a book. I am pretty isolated up here."

Sen. Muskie Says $30 Billion Deficit Bodes Ill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edmund Muskie said Sunday the administration's determination to hold the fiscal 1980 budget deficit to $30 billion could lead to economic results "we would not like."

Muskie, D-Maine, is chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, which will consider President Carter's budget proposals next year.

In an interview on NBC's "Meet the Press" program, Muskie said it will be "very difficult" to hold the deficit to $30 billion if the economy is not strong enough to produce the revenues the administration is counting on.

Besides that problem, he said, a $30 billion deficit would mean cutting $15 billion to $20 billion from the cost of maintaining federal programs at current levels.

"I think budgetary restraint is a must," he said. "But I think to try to tie oneself to a specific number like the deficit ... could well prompt us to take actions that would trigger economic results we would not like."

Although Congress is in the mood for budget restraint, he said, "I think the $30 billion deficit figure is an overpreoccupation with a number and that we ought rather to look at what the program needs are — and I'm talking about rock bottom program needs — and fairness."

Muskie said the Congressional Budget Office has predicted a "shallow recession" for the last half of 1979, and a strong economy in 1980.

He said he takes all economic predictions "with a touch of salt," but they must be considered in making up budgets.

ERA Extension High Point Of Feminists' Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Feminists have described 1978 as the year their movement came of age because of the widely-based effort that won a time extension for the Equal Rights Amendment and the election of more women to state and local office.

But those victories must be assessed alongside setbacks in Congress which feminists say infringe upon a woman's right to reproductive freedom, one of the fundamental objectives of the women's movement.

All in all, "I would say it was a growth year," said Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women. "I feel that we're in a moving and building campaign. We're coming of age politically and maturing."

The time extension granted the Equal Rights Amendment by Congress was unquestionably the highlight of the year for women activists.

When it appeared that the stalled amendment would not be approved within the original time period by the three more states needed to add it to the Constitution, women's groups organized at the state, local and national levels to build pressure for a time extension.

The coalitions they formed steered the extension through Congress. The ERA must now be ratified by 38 states by June 22, 1981, three years and three months later than the original deadline.

So far, 35 states have approved the amendment. But four of them have since voted to rescind the amendment. Congress must decide if recisions are valid, but votes taken during the extension debate showed that a majority of members opposed the idea.

The success of the extension drive was accompanied by the failure of any more states to ratify the amendment. Supporters of the amendment still say they are optimistic about meeting the deadline. But there appears to be little chance of an affirmative vote soon in any of the states they have targeted.

Another major plus for the women's movement was the election of more women to state and local office. Feminists look on these victories as the necessary groundwork for success in later national elections.

The number of woman state legislators, for instance, rose from 703 to 767, or 10.2 percent of the total number. Republican women accounted for an overwhelming number of the gains. The Republican women's task force of the National Women's Political Caucus said 62 of the 66 newly-elected women are Republicans.

"Women are running in greater numbers and winning in greater numbers in local public office political races," said caucus chair Mildred Jeffrey. "We think among these women are many future members of Congress."

The number of women in Congress fell to 17 from 20. But Nancy Landon Kassebaum became the first woman to win a Senate seat without having been the widow of a senator.

Feminists made other gains in Congress with passage of a pregnancy disability law, adding pregnancy to the list of disabilities covered by company insurance plans; a bill providing training and assistance for displaced homemakers; another improving the inheritance status of farm widows, and an amateur sports law offering women greater access to sports.

Other legislation which was enacted — the extension of jobs and employment programs, part-time career and flexitime bills and the elimination of the purchase requirement on food stamps — are considered important to women because of their special status in society.

And a likeness of suffragist Susan B. Anthony was chosen for the dollar coin, making hers the first American woman's face to appear on currency.

But Congress also dealt the women's movement a number of setbacks. Veterans preference rules, which work to the disadvantage of women who apply for federal jobs, were retained when Congress made changes in the civil service system.

Probably the most disappointing series of actions for feminists came when Congress placed more restrictions on the right of women receiving federally funded health care to obtain abortions.

Restrictions, which had first been placed on abortions for poor women through Medicaid, were imposed on Peace Corps volunteers and women and the spouses and daughters of men in the military.

Congress also forbade the U.S. Civil Rights Commission to make any studies on abortion and left it up to employers to decide if their private disability plans will cover abortions.

Miss Jeffrey described these actions as "a dismal mark on the Congress. We know that in the 96th Congress this will continue to be an uphill battle."

On the economic front, women made little or no progress toward closing the earnings gap with men. On an average, women who work fulltime earn 59 cents for every $1 earned by men. Women of black and Spanish origin earn 54 cents and 49 cents, respectively, for each $1 earned by the average man.

Of the women in the workforce last March, 80 percent were in clerical, sales, service, factory or plant jobs according to statistics compiled by the National Commission on Working Women.

Women make up 42 percent of the workforce and 42 million of them are employed.

Despite the problems, Miss Smeal, whose organization is the largest feminist group, said she sees a growth in the movement as more women and younger women join it.

"Most of us are taking it for granted that our daughters are going to have it better than we have," she said. But more women and men have begun to realize "how perilously close we are" to a situation where educational and employment opportunities could shrink instead of grow.

Egypt Clears Villas Away From Giza Pyramids

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Bulldozers demolished 32 illegally-built bungalows on the Giza Plateau during the weekend, cleaning up the lands surrounding the world's most magnificent tombs — the Great Pyramids.

The sandy plateau that stretches for miles behind the ancient burial ground of the pharaohs is dotted with about 500 makeshift villas, known as "chalets," used mostly for parties and vacation retreats. Most were torn down to keep the area free of everything but the pyramids.

Four truckloads of police, some decked out in riot gear and carrying rifles, accompanied the demolition crews but encountered no resistance.

Antiquities authorities said the structures don't belong atop burial ground that dates back more than 5,000 years.

"There are many tombs of commoners and perhaps royalty in the area dating from the fourth pharaonic dynasty up to the Greek and Roman periods," said Zahi Hawa, chief inspector of the pyramids.

Hawas said the villas have sprung up at an alarming rate and threatened relics in still unexcavated sites.

"We believe some of these chalets rebuilt on top of tombs and that water could seep down and destroy these treasures before they are even known about," he said.

He said the next target would be 200 vacation villas that have sprung up since March while nother 280 bungalows there for nearly a generation would be saved until last.

"This is the first step in campaign to clean up the whole pyramids area and prevent it from becoming city. This would not only be eyesore, but would hurt tourism," he said.

Few of the owners were present when the buildings were hauled down, but some who were said they were angry because the government had given them no advance warning.

"I'll sue the antiquities department," vowed Mamouh Abdel Latif, who said owned one of the bungalows that was demolished.

"Why don't they remove President Anwar Sadat's chalet or (former Prime Minister) Mamdouh Salem's?"

Sadat's villa is on the plateau to the west of the Great Pyramid of Cheops, nearly a mile from the cluster of houses torn down Saturday. Police said the houses slated for demolition were built without permits or official approval.

PYRAMID SLUMS — Furniture from vacation bungalows built by squatters was piled in heaps near the Great Pyramids before police bulldozed the bungalows into the ground. The move was part of a government campaign to clean up the historic area near Cairo, Egypt, that attracts thousands of tourists each year. (AP Laserphoto)

Israel Ready To Start Mideast Parley Again

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Sunday that Israel is ready to reopen the stalled peace talks with Egypt, possibly this week. But the Cabinet again rejected the Egyptian demand to link the proposed treaty with progress on the Palestinian issue.

Begin told reporters the peace talks may resume this week or next and that diplomatic efforts would begin immediately to set a time and place.

In Cairo, Egypt, a foreign ministry spokesman Sunday welcomed Israel's call for renewed talks, but stressed a settlement must include a timetable for achieving Palestinian autonomy in Israeli-occupied territories, the official Middle East News Agency said.

The Israeli leader and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat agreed at the Camp David summit to sign a peace treaty between their two countries by Dec. 17, but the negotiations in Washington broke down in mid-November.

Israel blamed Egypt, saying Sadat had tried to make last-minute changes in a U.S. draft treaty already approved by Israel. The United States said the new Egyptian proposals that caused the Israelis to leave Washington were reasonable and should have been approved by Israel.

Begin disclosed that Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan had written to Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance last Thursday "rejecting completely" an interpretive note regarding the draft treaty's "priority of obligations" clause.

The clause states that the treaty overrides all previous commitments, which Israel understands as voiding Egypt's defense agreements with the other Arab states.

The U.S. interpretive note said Egypt could come to the aid of any "victim of aggression" by Israel. The Israelis contend that would allow Egypt to join in a war under any circumstances.

"Israel will approach the U.S. government with a view to ensuring the sole and unequivocal meaning of this article," Begin said, reading from a Cabinet statement.

The Cabinet showed some softening of its stand by agreeing to strengthen a commitment to review military deployments in the Sinai Peninsula, but it rejected Egypt's call for an automatic reassessment in five years. Begin said the review should not be fixed in advance to avoid giving the treaty a flavor of impermanence.

The Cabinet statement said Israel would renegotiate a joint letter outlining procedures for setting up Palestinian self-rule in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip "but without setting a target date" for electing a governing council.

Boston Center Offers Adults Variety

BOSTON (AP) — Whether it's disco in the Victorian-era ballroom or a business course in the old servants' quarters, the Boston Center for Adult Education tries to have something for everyone.

The 45-year-old private center, housed in a brownstone mansion on the edge of the Boston Public Gardens, schools about 1,500 people in over 300 subjects a year, ranging from "Foot Massage" to "Business Taxation."

"We don't offer traditional night school courses," says Gregory Barattini, the center's assistant director. "Our goal is to offer learning as a living experience to people. I think our genius lies in the fact that we offer all spectrum of things to the community."

During the day, secretaries and executives from Boston's downtown can walk into the center for quick lunch hour lessons in photography, drawing or exercise. There's even a class on "Lunching in Boston."

On a recent Thursday night, there were sessions in assertiveness training and Gestalt; careers courses in job hunting, business planning, investment and writing a resume; instruction in chair caning, woodworking, darkroom technique, pen and ink drawing, pottery, quilting and weaving; three separate cooking lessons; classes in Swedish; courses in writing for business, art and childrens' books and another course in book illustration.

And there were miscellaneous courses in astrology, blacksmithing, disco, ballet, massage, music theory, sign language, wilderness experience, and a class entitled in "Dressing for Success."

"We get a lot of people from the Harvard Business School in that one," says Harrie McLean, the center's director.

The center, founded in 1933, moved into its ornate headquarters in 1941 when it purchased the home of a wealthy textile manufacturer.

The center has tried to preserve the building's luxurious chandeliers, murals and silk wallpaper to give the students a taste of Brahmin Boston.

"We feel that classroom settings can be intimidating so we try to maintain the place like a home," Miss McLean said. "One of the reasons that people come here is that we are not a school. There's a much more casual environment here."

The center has seen a 10 percent increase in registration this year as part of a growing movement in adult education. Miss McLean said one out of every eight adults is in continuing education — more than the current college enrollment.

"More people than ever have been to college and that creates a love of learning that doesn't stop at graduation," she says.

While the center's most popular courses are in careers training, classes like Yankee Ghostlore and Whale Watching always are full.

"We have a three-member board that gets together and brainstorms about courses," says Barattini. "We check the bookstores and magazines to see what people are interested in. We also get resumes from people all over the world who want to teach a course here."

But whether its a course in "How to Incorporate" or "How to Be A Clown," both students and instructors say they're in it for the fun.

"I'm doing things that I didn't get a chance to do when I was younger," says Betty Latner, a Boston woman who has taken food, music and literature appreciation, and "Architecture in Boston."

The center's 250 instructors — or "leaders" — often come from the ranks of the students. Josette King, a native of France, came to the school seven years ago as a would-be translator trying to learn shorthand. She stayed on to teach several courses in cooking, leads the class in "Lunching in Boston" and offers gourmet cooking lessons throughout New England.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible

Luke 8:4—13A, The Living Bible

4 One day He gave this illustration to a large crowd that was gathering to hear Him — while many others were still on the way, coming from other towns.

5 "A farmer went out to his field to sow grain. As he scattered the seeds on the ground, some of it fell on a footpath and it was trampled on; and the birds came and ate it as it lay exposed.

6 Other seeds fell on shallow soil with rock beneath. These seeds began to grow, but soon withered and died for lack of moisture.

7 Other seeds landed in thistle patches, and the young plants were soon choked out.

8 Still others fell on fertile soil; these grew and produced a crop 100 times as large as he had planted." (As He was giving this illustration He said, "If anyone has listening ears, use them now!")

9 His apostles asked Him what the story meant.

10 He replied, "God has granted you to know the meaning of these parables, for they tell a great deal about the Kingdom of God. But these crowds hear the words and do not understand, just as the ancient prophets predicted.

11 This is its meaning: The seed is God's message to men.

12 The hard path where some seed fell represents the hard hearts of those who hear the words of God, but then the devil comes and steals the words away and prevents people from believing and being saved.

13 The stony ground represents those who enjoy listening to sermons, but somehow the message never really gets through to them and doesn't take root and grow.

Calendar Trick Starts New Year Off Right

By SHARI LEWIS
(c) 1979, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Starting a new calendar? Here's a quick trick that'll start your new year off right! Ask your pal to pick any seven-day row of numbers on your brand-new calendar. Say "I'll add up the sum of that week of dates faster than you can!"

On the word "go!" all you do is take the lower number in that row and add three to it. Then multiply the answer you get by seven. You'll have the sum of those seven dates faster than your friend, unless your pal's a whiz!

For example, this year the second week in January starts with the number 7. Seven plus 3 equals 10. Ten times 7 equal 70. And if you add up the dates of that week, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12 and 13, you get 70!

Today's Brain Twister: 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 16, 17, 18. Can you place each one of these numbers into an empty space so that every vertical (up and down) row adds up to 40? (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids—Only Club column.)

School Break Brings Lull To Flu Epidemic

ATLANTA (AP) — An outbreak of influenza on the West Coast has subsided, possibly because of school holidays, a researcher at the national Center for Disease Control said Sunday.

"We were seeing a lot of activity before school let out," said Dr. Tim Nolan of the CDC. "But except in a few areas where pediatricians have seen some influenza-like illness, my impression is that it died off after Christmas vacation began."

Nolan said that one reason flu declined may be that "school isn't a vehicle of transmission" during the vacation period.

Researchers have said that the only way to avoid contracting the flu during an outbreak is to either be immune — possibly through immunization — or to avoid contact with large groups of people.

The variety of influenza isolated in 1978, Nolan said, has been named A-Brazil because of its similarity to a strain found in that South American nation.

A-Brazil is very similar to the A-USSR strain that struck college campuses and military bases early last year, he said. It is natural for flu strains to change slightly from year to year.

Like A-USSR, A-Brazil tends to affect persons younger than 26, who were born after a similar outbreak in the late 1940s and early 1950s and therefore have no natural immunity to it.

Nolan said reports of new A-Brazil cases in Minnesota and Missouri were received Friday.

Influenza already has been confirmed this season in California, Utah, Arizona, Washington, Florida and Georgia.

A vaccine is available to combat the A-Brazil flu virus, but it is recommended only for the elderly and those of any age with chronic illness.

Nolan said no cases similar to the A-Victoria and A-Texas strains have been isolated this fall and winter. Those varieties of flu infect persons of all ages and were responsible for many deaths in late 1977 and early 1978.

Benjamin Disraeli, English statesman and man of letters, was born in 1804.

CB Fans Likely Not Affected By Conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. representatives will sit down with officials of 153 other nations next September to determine how the radio spectrum will be used in the next two decades.

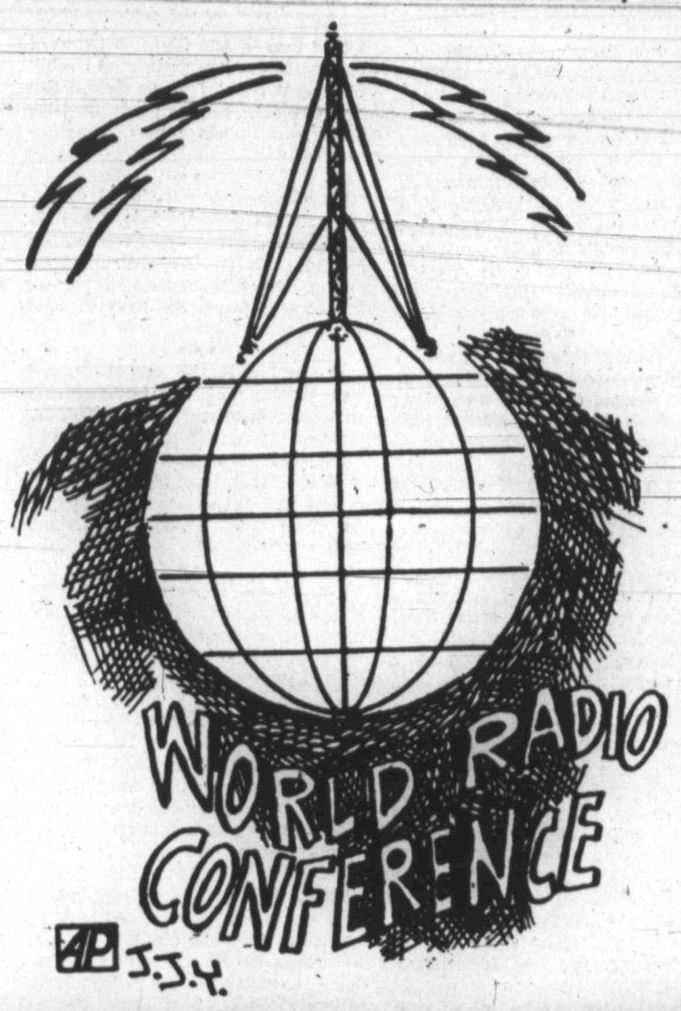

But their decisions, which will be governed by international treaty, probably will have no effect on the frequencies now used by Citizens Band radio operators.

The Federal Communications Commission has recommended to the State Department some changes in frequency allocation, including expanding the number of frequencies available for commercial broadcasting.

But, according to FCC officials, none of the recommendations involve the frequencies now used or anticipated for use by the CB radio service.

Actually, CB radio probably will not even be mentioned at the World Administrative Radio Conference next September in Geneva, Switzerland.

Few countries other than the United States permit such a personal radio medium, and those that do usually use frequencies formally allocated for other uses.

CB channels in the United States, for instance, are located in the 27 megahertz band designated for industrial, scientific and medical operations.

But the CB channels are located so as not to interfere with the the primary purpose of those frequencies and thus do not contradict the internationally recognized purpose of that part of the radio spectrum.

Nor would location of the proposed CB service in the 900 megahertz range interfere with the international treaty, which now allocates those frequencies for land-mobile use. The FCC proposes no changes in that allocation.

The U.S. proposals must be reviewed by the State Department before they are formally submitted to the Geneva conference.

Although the decisions reached at the conference could clear the way for the FCC to implement new services on various frequencies, it would be up to the agency decide actual domestic uses in future proceedings.

"No domestic decisions have been made ... the commission is simply giving itself flexibility," says Konnie Schaffer, the FCC's foreign affairs adviser.

Besides expanding the AM radio band to accommodate another 700 radio stations, mobile frequencies, navigational channels and satellite systems, the FCC would expand the frequencies available for shortwave, or high frequency, broadcasting and maritime and amateur communications.

These recommendations were made, the FCC said in a statement, because of the Carter administration's "interest in increasing the international flow of information ... to accommodate growth in the maritime industries" and accommodate the growing number of amateur radio operators.

HEARTLINE

Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 114 East Dayton Street, West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.

HEARTLINE: I will be 65 years old in March and I hope to continue to work until the end of 1979. My company has a health insurance plan that I am covered under. Do I still have to take out Medicare when I turn age 65? — R.D.

No, you do not have to take Medicare at age 65. However, you should check very carefully with your company because many group policies will not cover employees over the age 65.

You should sign up for the hospital portion of Medicare because this is free. The medical benefits are currently $8.20 per month and for each year after the age of 65 that you do not take the medical benefits, the premium will be increased by 10 percent.

For those people on Medicare, Heartline has developed a detailed book covering the whole Medicare program. Heartline's Guide to Medicare is written in easy-to-understand question and answer form and contains all of the up to date information on Medicare. This book explains many medical items and services that are covered by Medicare, complete information on the deductibles you have to pay, a sample Medicare claim form with detailed instructions on how to fill it out, and a complete explanation on how the reasonable charges under Part B are figured. This book may be ordered by sending $1.75 to Heartline's Guide to Medicare, 114 East Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. This book is completely guaranteed and if you are not satisfied, your money will be refunded. Please allow six weeks for delivery.

HEARTLINE: I have recently been named representative payee for my husband's Social Security benefits, as he is in a nursing home and not able to take care of his own affairs. I am still a little confused about what my responsibilities are in this matter. Can you tell me? — J.S.

Your job is to use the Social Security benefits in the beneficiary's best interest. To do this, you must keep yourself informed of what the beneficiary needs. This is particularly important when the beneficiary does not live in your home. You must also report (for the beneficiary) certain events which can affect the payment of his Social Security benefits, and upon request, you must be able to account for what you did with the Social Security benefits paid to you on behalf of the beneficiary.

HEARTLINE: I filed a claim for Social Security disability benefits in March 1978. I was turned down. I filed a reconsideration and that too was denied. Now, I have filed for a hearing before an administrative law judge. Can you tell me something about these judges and what the hearing will entail? — R.K.

An administrative law judge is an officer of the Bureau of Hearings and Appeals of the Social Security Administration. The administrative law judge had no part in the initial or reconsidered decision. A hearing is usually held in the city where the Social Security office that handles your claim is located so that you may conveniently attend the hearing and present your case in person. At the hearing, the administrative law judge reviews what has gone before in the case, states exactly what issues must be decided, and asks questions of you and your witnesses present. All testimony is taken under oath. You and your representative may question the witnesses, present new evidence and examine the evidence on which the administrative law judge's decision will be based.

If you prefer, you may request that the administrative law judge review the case without your personal appearance. In that event, the administrative law judge will base his or her decision on the evidence which was previously submitted in the case plus any additional evidence or statement which you submit. A request for a hearing must be filed within 60 days from the date you receive the notice of the reconsidered decision.

A copy of the administrative law judge's written decision will be sent to you. If you disagree with this decision, you may request a review by the Appeals Council.

USDA Offers Green Thumb Plant Book

WASHINGTON (AP) — Have you ever noticed that some people seem to have a way with indoor plants, while others manage to destroy every living, green thing?

Well if you're one of those who can't seem to get house plants to grow, the Agriculture Department has a new booklet that just might be the ticket.

"Selecting and Growing House Plants" tells everything from how to choose the right plant for your temperament to tips on caring for temperamental plants.

A talent with plants depends as much on how you select them as how you care for them, the booklet explains. So decide right away what kinds of plants you can handle — the kind that serve a decorative purpose, or the kind that bring joy from constant tending and tender, loving care.

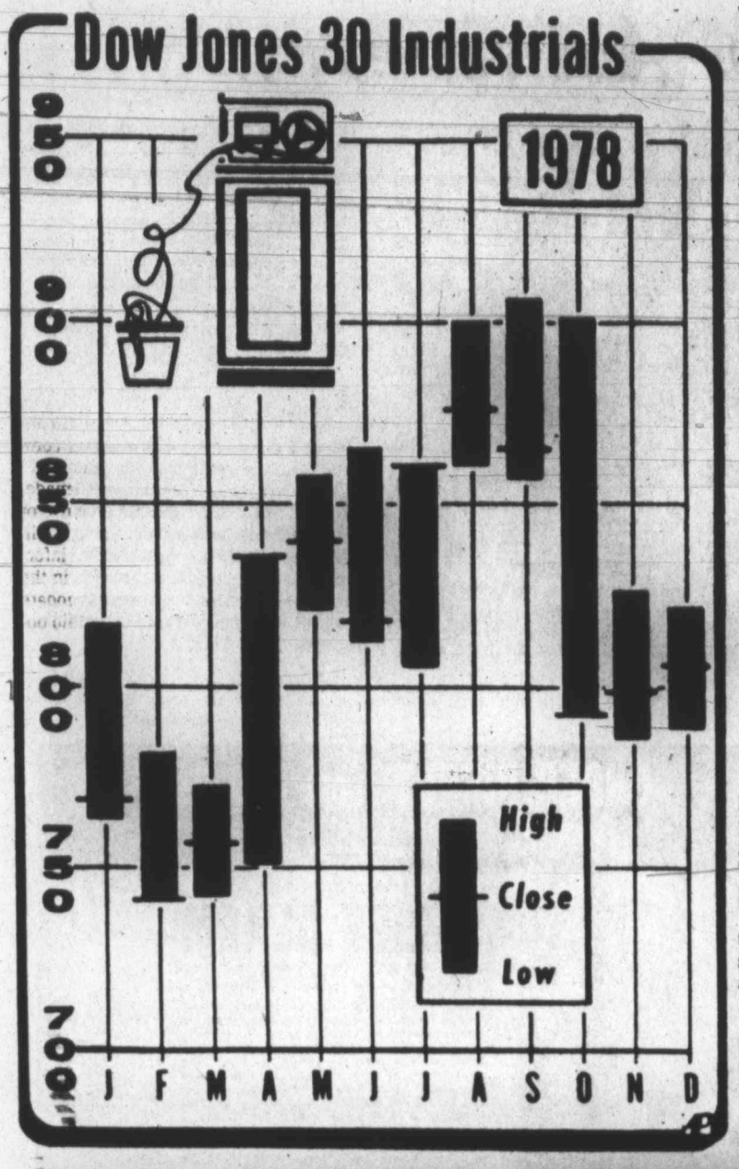

While many house plants can survive under adverse conditions, the booklet says that to get really good results you need the correct light, water, temperature and humidity.

Proper watering is the key to success and, in fact, the most common plant complaint is too much water.

1978 Chaotic Year For Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP) — The volatile combination of revived inflation, a slumping dollar and fears of a recession provided the backdrop for a chaotic year in the stock market in 1978.

And heading into the new year, there was little immediate relief in sight from the long list of economic problems preoccupying investors.

Corporate profits and dividends did manage to register healthy gains as the business recovery from the last recession neared the end of its fourth year.

But stock prices could not match that steady pace. "What really went wrong in 1978 was that the rate of price inflation started accelerating again," said analysts at Loeb, Rhoades, Hornblower & Co. "The resulting weakness of the U.S. dollar began, in a self-reinforcing cycle, to contribute to those pricing pressures."

The market's year began with a sharp decline in January and February. The trend was reversed with powerful rallies in April and again at mid-summer, but then stocks were battered again in a steep two-week slide that Wall Streeters came to call the October Massacre.

Along the way, just about every trading-volume record on the books of the New York Stock Exchange was eclipsed.

The 66.37 million shares that changed hands at the Big Board on Aug. 3 marked the busiest day in the exchange's history. And NYSE volume for the year reached 7.20 billion shares, far outstripping the previous record of 5.36 billion set in 1976.

For all its month-by-month excitement, the year's activity produced surprisingly small net changes in the popular market averages.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials wound up at 805.01, off 26.16 points or 3.15 percent.

The market value index at the American Stock Exchange, on the other hand, climbed 17.7 percent, on top of a 16.4 percent advance in 1977.

The Amex indicator's strength pointed up the revival since the mid-1970s of the wide range of lesser-known issues that analysts refer to as "secondary stocks."

One particular group of secondary issues — the gambling stocks — in fact was the subject of some of the most intense speculative buying Wall Street had seen since the 1960s.

The action in these stocks had begun to heat up well before the opening in late May of Resorts International's casino in Atlantic City, N.J. — the first legal gambling casino in this country outside Nevada.

As Resorts issued impressive reports, month by month, on the money the casino was taking in, the gambling-stock fad on Wall Street became a runaway craze.

In one week in September, Resorts' class A shares soared from 123½ to 180, and the company's class B stock from 150½ to 275, on the Amex.

But soon after that the group underwent a painful shakeout. Resorts A and B both fell about 65 percent to 70 percent from their peaks by December, and other gambling stocks also dropped precipitously.

Elsewhere in the market there were other symptoms of speculative fever — for example, in margin debt, or the total of money borrowed by investors from their brokers to finance part of their stock purchases.

Margin debt outstanding, as tabulated by the Big Board, hit an all-time high above $12 billion as of early fall. More than $1 billion of this debt was later liquidated when a declining market touched off margin calls — requests from brokers for additional collateral in margin accounts.

The dollar's slump in foreign exchange during the year, meanwhile, helped bring an increased awareness on Wall Street that foreign investors had come to be a major force in the U.S. market.

The Securities Industry Association published studies showing that overseas investors, after playing virtually no role in the market until about 10 years ago, had become buyers and sellers of several billion dollars worth of stock annually by the mid-1970s.

That in turn made the foreign-exchange market a subject of special concern to stock traders. A weak dollar, analysts pointed out, was likely to deter foreigners from buying U.S. stocks, and a strong dollar could encourage them to do so.

In 1978 the dollar struggled through a long decline against most leading foreign currencies. That apparently helped to explain why the U.S. stock market's performance during the year ranked next to last among 15 markets around the world, according to figures compiled late in the year by analyst William LeFevre at Granger & Co.

Heading into 1979, predictions of an impending recession abounded in the financial community, with the bank prime lending rate hovering just under its 1974 peak of 12 percent.

But even amid those gloomy economic expectations, many a broker was professing an optimistic view about the market's prospects.

As the firm of Bache Halsey Stuart Shields put it in a discussion of the 1979 investment outlook:

"The onset of a recession and the consequent lowering of short-term interest rates could lead to the beginning of a major uptrend in the stock market well before the recession is over."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. You often recommend dividend reinvestment plans. But are they really worthwhile? Look at the bookkeeping. One year, with four dividend reinvestments, is not too bad. But, after five or more years, if you want to sell or if you die and your heirs want to sell — with the last three reinvestments being short-term and the others long-term for tax purposes — you would need an accountant.

So, I'd like to ask: Do you reinvest dividends?

A. Yes, we do. Both my blue-eyed financial officer and I reinvest all our dividends. Whether or not a stock has such a program is a major factor in deciding to buy in the first place.

And we look at each company's dividend reinvestment plan, carefully. Some lay on service charges — which can be expensive on a percentage basis. We steer clear of those. Many companies allow stockholders to reinvest dividends at discounts of 5 percent or so from the going market prices.

Frankly, I can't see any bookkeeping problem. You get a statement every time a dividend is reinvested and another statement at the end of each year. Just put those statements in a safe place, as you should with all important records. I hope you do the same with the confirmation statement you receive every time you buy or sell a stock.

Then, if you sell or have the custodian bank handling the particular reinvestment program handle the sale for you, it's no big chore to figure out your cost, proceeds and profit — hopefully, not a loss. Some custodian banks do this automatically for you.

Meanwhile, you have been compounding your dividends through reinvestment and increasing the number of shares you own. It's a simple and inexpensive way to increase your wealth. I really think you are looking for complications that don't exist.

Q. I am 75, living on Social Security. I have $50,000 in the bank, at 5 percent interest. I would like to invest all of this money, tax free. Which is the best and most secure, U.S. Treasury bills or tax-free municipal bonds? I want to be worry free. I'm enclosing a list of municipal bonds I got from a brokerage firm. I don't understand this list at all.

A. Maybe that's just as well. You should not — repeat NOT put your money into municipal bonds. The interest on such bonds is not subject to federal income tax. But it is also low better by putting your money into things paying higher interest. Even after taxes, you'll come out ahead.

Also, none of your money should be in a 5 percent account. About $5,000 should be transferred to a federally-insured savings account paying 5 1/4 percent.

The rest can go into six-month savings certificates paying much higher interest — also federally insured. Make the rounds of savings and loan associations and banks in your area to get the highest rate available.

Q. You recently wrote that the interest paid on U.S. Treasury bills is not subject to state income tax. How about the state tax on the six-month "T-bill" or "money market" savings certificates offered by banks and savings and loan associations. These, too, are Treasury bills.

A. No,-they're not. Although the interest rate paid on those six-month savings certificates is determined by the rate the U.S. Treasury pays on its 26-week T-bills, the six-month certificates are not T-bills.

The interest on all savings certificates is subject to both federal and state income tax. City income tax, too, if you live where there is such a levy. Doyle welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

For a list of growth stocks, please include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Address your requests to William A. Doyle, 235eEast 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Work Days Lost To Strikes Down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Working days lost because of strikes in November fell to a three-year low for the month, the Labor Department reports.

The department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said employers lost 1.9 million worker days due to walkouts, down from 2.3 million days in October and 3.2 million days in November 1977.

The department said there was only one major strike during the month, a walkout by 5,000 paper workers against the Crown Zellerbach Corp. at six West Coast locations. The strike began in August.

Through the first 11 months of the year, the country has been hit by the fewest number of strikes in more than 10 years, in part because of a light contract bargaining schedule, the department said.

Rules For Advertising Left To Veterinarians

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission is backing away from the notion of issuing rules governing advertising by veterinary associations.

In a statement, the regulatory agency said Saturday that veterinary associations are making voluntary efforts to "ease restraints on veterinary advertising by their members."

An FTC staff report noted, for instance, that the American Veterinary Medical Association has revised its code of ethics to permit its members to advertise. In addition, the report said, the association has recommended that state veterinary licensing boards revised their regulations to allow most forms of advertising.

Castro's 'New Order' Marks 20th Anniversary

By IKE FLORES

HAVANA (AP) — Fidel Castro's "new order" is 20 years old, and the Cuban leader enters the new year brimming with confidence for the future while savoring a number of major accomplishments by his socialist revolution in the past.

In the 20 years since Castro and his troops marched into Havana from the Sierra Maestra, the little Caribbean island nation of 9 million people has undergone almost a complete transformation — politically, economically and socially.

And the outlook is for continued "institutionalization" — a favorite Castro word — of his tough-minded policies.

Whatever dissent there is among the populace is one of passive resignation rather than any generally expressed dissatisfaction or organized resistance.

Even his exiled enemies have given up hope that the autocratic Cuban president's regime will fall of its own weight.

Perhaps the greatest achievement to be celebrated on the 20th anniversary, observed Jan. 1-2, is that "El Maximo Lider" has succeeded in convincing the doubters among his own people that "la revolucion" is here to stay.

It hasn't been easy. But even his most vociferous foes — the true political exiles and many former political prisoners — grudgingly concede now that Castro's brand of socialism is as permanent a fixture on the island as their pre-Castro "democracy" ever was.

By most yardsticks, Castro has achieved permanence, a great deal of respectability and more than a small measure of satisfaction over the 20 long years.

He is now using the title of president in a newly reorganized structure of government, and there is more emphasis on the Communist Party machinery of leadership. But Fidel, as he is called by virtually everyone, remains the person around which everyone and everything revolves.

His personal style and magnetism still keep everything together and functioning. "He's the only one who can really get things done and get people to move," one Western observer said recently.

Those 20 years must have seemed some of the toughest ever experienced by any head of state.

His regime teetered and tottered; it bent and swayed under almost constant assault from within as well as without. But it never broke. And it appears to have emerged the stronger for it.

That period brought the 1961 Bays of Pigs invasion, the October 1962 "missile crisis," numerous exile incursions of the island, terrorist acts against Castro followers and Cuban property around the world, and the ever-present danger of attack from the "monster to the North."

Through his skillful use of propaganda and public opinion, Castro turned each and every one of those "counter-revolutionary" actions to his own advantage.

His constant refrain that he and his regime were beleaguered victims and not the villains has been a major factor in changing many foreign governments' attitudes toward Cuba.

Along with the Communist bloc, these Western nations have enabled the country and Castro socialism to survive, and to flourish in some respects.

One of Castro's most recent successes — and it is a curious one — is a dramatic start toward the "reunification of the Cuban family," meaning Cubans on the island and abroad.

More than 750,000 Cubans have left their homeland in the 20 years that Castro's been in power. An estimated 30,000 to 40,000 people were put in prisons for their opposition to the regime in some degree or another.

Now, Castro has opened the doors to those remaining in jail and the ports of entry to those exiles-refugees wishing to return to visit. He is permitting a limited number of those on the island to travel abroad for humanitarian reasons such as joining close family members and visiting elderly or infirm relatives.

In the process, some leading exiles say, Castro is getting many of them on his side and is gaining an effective power lobby in this country for his own policies.

The logical end would be the breakdown of Washington's determination not to establish diplomatic and economic relations, it is believed.

Castro has come a long way in just a short time on this issue, one skeptic observed recently. Up until a few weeks ago, these exiles were "despicable worms." Now, he refers to them politely as "members of the Cuban community in the United States."

Among Castro socialism's major achievements are two that he proudly points to as "the revolution's shining lights."

These are the almost complete eradication of illiteracy and a system of health care superior to anything ever available in the past.

The key here is that these benefits extend throughout the populace.

Critics say, however, that what people read is virtually as important as the fact that they be able to do so.

Children are taught Marxist philosophy along with their ABC's, and the educational system from top to bottom is carefully aimed at making the student a disciple of the socialist system.

The health care program, like so many other enterprises in Castro's Cuba, is bogged down in bureaucracy. And there is a perennial shortage of personnel, equipment, medical facilities and drugs, making it difficult for the individual to get speedy or adequate care and attention.

Among the major problems of Castro's ongoing revolution, the lack of adequate housing is perhaps its biggest internal difficulty.

The government has made big strides in building multiple housing units in the interior, clustering sugarcane workers and their families in dwellings near their work areas, for instance.

The economic situation can be described, at best, as being on a tortuously slow upward curve, with many ups and downs depending, primarily, on the world price of sugar, Cuba's principal hard currency export.

Cuba has slowly been expanding its limited list of products for export and strengthening its own agricultural and ranching industries.

It has in the past few years developed a successful fishing industry, with the product going both to domestic and international markets.

Ever-widening trade relations with non-Communist countries are slowly making inroads into "the problem of shortages," as Cubans categorize the lack of consumer goods.

There are a few more items on the shelves, although strict rationing on food, clothing, shoes and many other goods is still a harsh fact of life for the average person.

Even the famous Cuban cigars and the country's good rum are in short supply — for Cubans. Both are big hard-currency export items along with sugar, nickel and fish.

Another major "new" industry is tourism. East and West Europeans, Canadians, Latins and — lately — Americans are much in evidence throughout the country, sightseeing, fishing, hunting, sailing, going to the beaches and even bird watching.

This so-called "clean tourism," meaning no casinos or the exotic pre-Castro nightlife, promises to become a thriving money-maker. Cuba has become more open in the past three or four years of Castro rule.

No longer is there the overwhelming physical evidence of a police state. Armed soldiers on patrol are not as visible as in the past. Camera-carrying tourists have taken their place on street corners or along Havana's famous Malecon seashore drive.

The young and not-so-young have adopted the disco craze as their own. And bars and nightclubs, restaurants and hotel lounges are packed with revelers on Friday and Saturday nights.

Castro still maintains the largest standing army in Latin America, and his 40,000-plus troops in Africa are physical proof that his soldiers "will go anywhere they are needed to fight alongside oppressed people seeking liberation from imperialism."

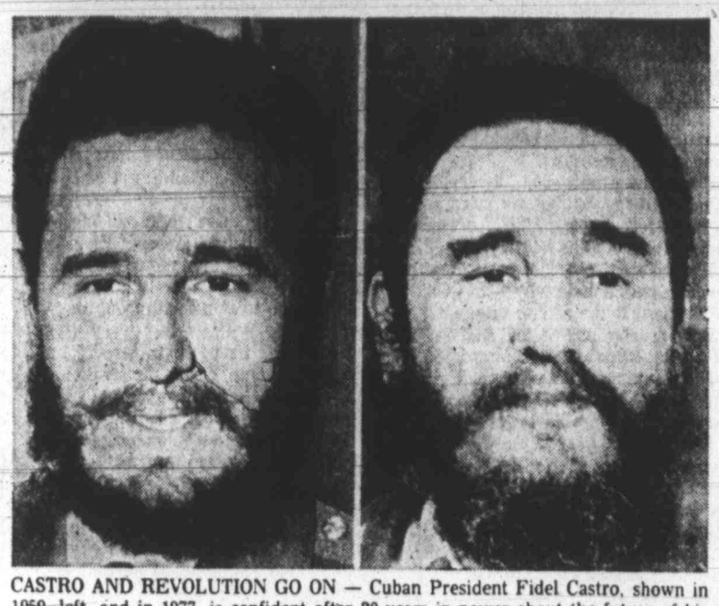

Castro's admirers — and there are an increasing number in this country, Europe and Latin America — marvel at his ability to keep one or two steps ahead of his enemies.

They point out that few, if any, heads of state have taken their countries so far in so short a time, transforming an entire society so completely.

A Western diplomat in Havana said recently that despite the many difficulties in the past 20 years, Castro would go down in history as "a truly important figure on the world stage."

He and others have expressed amazement over the years that the leader of such a small, rather insignificant island nation could have had such an impact on the relationship between the world's super powers; that this third-nation equation came close to igniting a nuclear war and led to important revisions in the foreign and economic policies of both the United States and the Soviet Union.

"Love him or hate him, there's no question that he has had great personal success," the diplomat said.

CASTRO AND REVOLUTION GO ON — Cuban President Fidel Castro, shown in 1959, left, and in 1977, is confident after 20 years in power about the future of his socialist revolution in Cuba. The 20th anniversary of Castro's "New Order" will be observed Jan. 1 and 2. (AP Laserphoto)

Rules To Encourage Home Dialysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — New government regulations will encourage kidney disease patients to undergo dialysis at home and to seek kidney transplants when feasible, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare says.

HEW said Wednesday it will pay a greater portion of patients' home dialysis, which is about half as expensive as hospital treatment, in a rule change retroactive to Oct. 1. It will also eliminate payment waiting periods for persons who take self-dialysis training or who must resume dialysis after their bodies reject transplants. The changes are aimed at cutting costs of the government's $1.1 billion program that aids 43,000 Americans with kidney disease.

CHINA FILM BILL

TOKYO (AP) — China has billed four foreign films, including a Charlie Chaplin classic, on its New Year program for Chinese cinemas, Peking's official news agency Hsinhua reported Saturday. Besides the Chaplin silent comedy "Modern Times," Hisnhua said in a dispatch received here, the films are "Notre Dame de Paris," a French-Italian wide-screen color production adapted from Victor Hugo's novel; the British-made "Carve Her Name with Pride," and the Indian film "Vagabond," which also was shown in China before Mao Tse-tung's Cultural Revolution in the 1960s. Under the current modernization drive, China has invited Western entertainment and initiated student exchange programs with the West after 30 years of isolation.

Business & Industrial Review

New Industrial Technologies Sessions Beginning In January

New classes commence early this year in the Industrial Technologies Division at Lubbock Christian College.

"The opportunities afforded through these several fields could be of significant benefit to you, or someone of your acquaintance, we are sure."

The five areas of training include Automotive Technology, Drafting Technology, Electronics Technology, Machine Trades Technology and Welding Technology.

Registration is now underway, and full details can be obtained from Reginald Duncan, director of Industrial Technologies, Lubbock Christian College, 5601 W. 19th St., Lubbock, phone 792-3221.

Schedules are available in day and night classes in all areas except dafting that is offered only at night.

Many people, in a wide age range, take the classes to aid in their job change or to develop new skills with which to enter the job market. Industry needs skilled craftsmen, and the programs at LCC train and provide such individuals.

Operating in its 13th year, the Industrial Technologies Division has built a tradition of good training and has many satisfied graduates (check with us for documented testimonials.

Non-Academic

Courses are non-academic in nature, with one taking only the courses that pertain to a chosen field of study. Students enrolled in the Industrial Technologies program receive CEU's credit (continuing education units). All courses are NC (non-college credit) and do not lead to a degree; however, students completing a program will receive a certificate of completion and will have on file a permanent record of course work they have taken at LCC.

Financial aid also is available to qualifying persons, in the form of grants, student loans and scholarships. All courses are approved for veterans training.

In general, all the courses are open to high school graduates or those over 18 years of age. Admission is an individual matter and LCC reserves the right to admit any student upon the basis of personal qualifications.

Each course is set on a "clock hour" basis, with 798 clock hours involved in automotive technology, as example, and in machine trades and in welding; with even more hours in electronics technology, and 528 hours for drafting.

Right Equipment, Tools

Located in adjoining buildings on the west side of the campus, the division has all the up-to-date facilities a good program needs. The student learns under qualified instructors and with the use of modern equipment.

Not all classes start and end at the same time, and in some courses a student may enter the program at any time. To learn how any part of the program can work for you, a visit is invited, with full details gladly given and with inspection of facilities invited.

A very comprehensive and practical program is afforded in this unique division at Lubbock Christian College. Participation could well open new fields of achievement for you or a friend or family member. We at the LCC Industrial Technologies Division invite your inquiry, wishing for you the best in the new year.

Optical Store & Boutique, With Slide Road Location, Tells Wide Selection

"Changing of the calendar from the old year to the new focuses attention on a situation that we at The Optical Store & Boutique strive to recognize throughout the year.

"It is that without friends such as you, our efforts would be without meaning. We are most appreciative of the trade, the confidence and the enthusiastic support of so many of you who discovered during the year that 'our boutique is unique'!"

"So . . . the least we can do is say Happy New Year and continue our broad scope of service and products at The Optical Store & Boutique, 5202 Slide Road, stocking the complete spectrum in frames including the very finest and even a utility selection combining style with surprisingly low price."

Yes, again in 1979, quality lines in frames and lenses are just as near as The Optical Store & Boutique, just south of 50th and Slide, clearly marked on the west side of Slide, phone 792-0901. There is plenty of off-street parking immediately to the front of our entry.

A departmentalized arrangement of rooms and areas provides four distinct categories in our service: (1) utility selection, (2) another where quality is the sole consideration, (3) designer frames, and finally (4) the Boutique.

So, whether the attractively priced lines in frames and glasses for the student, as example, or the very finest in choices from the Designer collection or the unusual and expensive lines within the Boutique are preferred, this Lubbock facility is outstanding, in a class by itself.

Upon entry into The Optical Store & Boutique, one is impressed with the pleasing but striking decor (such as the art deco in the Designer Room carried out in mirrors, pictures and fixtures), a customer consideration that exemplifies the firm's uniqueness.

One may first discover the Designer Collection where an area is devoted entirely to designer frames by Ralph Lauren, Givenchy, Diane Vo Fustenberg, Oscar de la Renta and other top designers.

Then there is the Children's Corner in another segment of the complex.

And who could not help but be most intrigued by the Boutique where antique decor dominates and where the unusual and expensive lines are displayed. Some glasses are set with diamonds, some with 18k gold settings, some with real cultured pearls. Custom design with special precious stones, etc., is a specialty.

Lines are out-of-the-ordinary, with some exclusive in Lubbock to the Boutique, such as the Martin Creations from West Germany.

"See what we mean when we say that 'Our Boutique is Unique,' providing a product and service seldom experienced anywhere?"

"May we have the pleasure of your visits? We know we can serve you within one or more of our departments."

'NAME LINES', SERVICE, INTEGRITY IS RECORD AT QUIRT AVENUE FIRM

American Equipment & Trailer Service Spans Quarter Century

"Greetings and Best Wishes for the New Year!"

This is the sincere message from American Equipment & Trailer, Inc., on the job to serve since back a quarter century ago!

"In expressing our desires for a bountiful new year for our friends througout the Panhandle and South Plains, we want to emphasize that we are proud of our customer list, appreciating the opportunities of years past to serve the contractor, rancher, farmer, industrialist, trucker and all with quality products from recoginized lines. We look forward to continuation of these opportunities and privileges in years to come."

New items and lines are added to the American Equipment & Trailer scope of service in a continual program of anticipating and meeting today's and tomorrow's needs. During the past year, for example, the firm has been happy to become the authorized distributor for the Wilson livestock and grain trailers, the big name in the industry.

Wilson Trailer Co. has been most prominent in the transportation industry since back in 1890, the year young Frank T. Wilson went into business up in the Dakota Territory, complete with two carloads of carriage and wagon stock! Today, Wilson stands out as the specialist in the manufacturing of livestock and grain trailers, with plants in four locations.

American Equipment and Trailer, Inc., also starting from modest beginnings, has grown and served in an ever-expanding program. It began with the idea of having trailer equipment of all kinds for all size trucks from pickup to diesels. The firm started with a few good lines and built up its stock until now it can say it is the largest trailer service facility in the Panhandle-South Plains region.

Located in Lubbock at 3707 Quirt Ave., this facility is modern in every respect, built to afford exceptional service. The 12,000 sq.ft. building has multiple double-bay drive-through shop, parts department and spacious showrooms, and is located on eight acres of land.

Included in the large line-up of equipment are well known brand names such as Koenig service bodies, Galion dump bodies, Midwest farm bodies, Tulsa winches, RO cranes, Wilson livestock and grain trailers, Great Dane refrigerated trailers, Clement dump bodies, Bendix-Westinghouse air brake equipment, Michigan fleet gasoline tanks, tank installation kits, Henderson bulk bodies and spreaders, and more.

Need a crane? Several makes are available. Need a winch for pickup, four-wheel drive unit or truck? American can certainly supply the one needed.

American Equipment & Trailer not only has large facilities in Lubbock, but also at 610 N. Grand in Amarillo, and at 1400 West Overland Trail in Abilene.

"We appreciate your visits at any of our facilities; come on out or call us when in need of any product or service we can render. Our service department, remember, has seven double bays and long drive-through large enough to accommodate the largest tractor-trailer made.

Billie Jo's School Of Dance Schedules New Term Involving Multiple Subjects

"Dancing is the first of the fine arts and should be taught to children."

We at Billie Jo's School of Dance, 4228 Boston Ave., phone 795-0108, teach coordination of mind and body, cooperation with others through group training, instill confidence and self assurance. These are the required qualifications for social success and good citizenship.

Spring classes start Jan. 8 and enrollment will continue throughout the month. Five teachers, all specialized in their field, will be doing his or her job to perfection.

At Billie Jo's, Sherry Hornack heads up the Ballet Department. Pictured here is one of her ballet classes. Ballet gives a child the feeling of self assurance, builds a beautiful and healthy body, lends grace, poise and charm to the personality. Ballet is fantasy, and the world of fantasy (a very real world for children) should be encouraged.

Sherry has been teaching at Billie Jo's for three years; she has her Bachelors degree of Arts in Dance from Texas Tech.

Sherry Allen is pictured teaching one of her jazz classes. Modern jazz is sweeping the country today. All children love to do jazz; it gives them an opportunity for self expression and teaches them to project their personalities into all phases of dance. Sherry is a former member of the Apache Belles, an organization that featured Sherry for many Dallas Cowboy games. She is a member of Dance Masters of America. She also teaches baton and her students have won many titles due to her excellent training.

Every little boy and girl has a great desire to become a gymnast. Strength and muscle control are developed through this training.

Marilyn also teaches ballet modern jazz. She is a member of Dance Masters of America and is a favorite with all the students at Billie Jo's. She takes many of her students out to perform at various organizations. She is not only a marvelous dancer herself, but she can also sing like a lark! This will be Marilyn's third year on the staff.

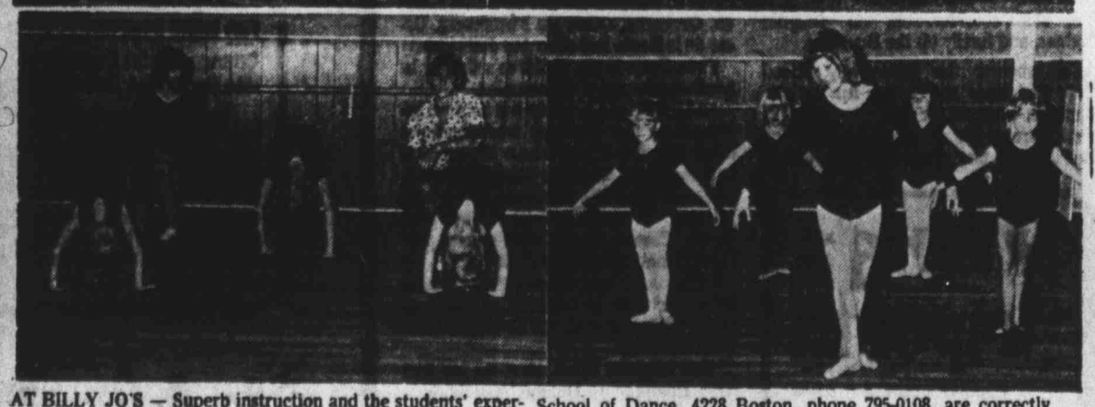

Billie Jo teaches the tap at this versatile dance studio. Tap is rhythm — the quickest and surest way of developing coordination. Children so trained are outstanding at sports in school and at social activities. Tap is enjoyable, good for children full of nervous energy and it creates self discipline.

Billie Jo has been teaching in Lubbock for 20 years.

Subjects taught at Billie Jo's School of Dance are Ballet, Tap, Modern Jazz, Baton, Tumbling and Balance Beam.

Special pre-school classes are offered for "tots" starting at the age of three. All teachers are specialized in the subjects they teach.

AT BILLY JO'S — Superb instruction and the students' expertise and enjoyment in the various departments of Billie Jo's School of Dance, 4228 Boston, phone 795-0108, are correctly hinted in these photos at the school.

Jean Bledsoe Insurance Agency Expresses New Year's Greetings

"We at the Jean Bledsoe Insurance Agency wish each of you a most rewarding New Year marked with achievement and fulfillment of your desires.

"At the same time we express heartfelt thanks for every consideration, for all the friendships we enjoy, and for so many of you relying upon us for your insurance services."

A new address and expansion of capabilities and services has marked the year for the agency.

Expanding with Lubbock, the agency has added personnel and also has added new markets.

Beginning primarily as a personal line business just over three years ago, the Jean Bledsoe Agency is now a multi-line agency, serving fully in commercial, life insurance, business, home, auto and other insurance needs, and bonds, too.

The consumer is given the kind of insurance needed at lowest possible cost, and claims are handled properly and promptly.

The knowledgeable and service-oriented staff includes Jean Bledsoe, agent; Gene Knight, lifelong Lubbock resident and with the firm as producer: Karen Ferrier, underwriter, Kathy Voss, secretary; and Kay Whitfield, bookkeeper.

Humbly appreciative of the customer confidence that has made the agency what it is today, each express deepest gratitude and pledge continuing service to the best of each member's ability.

"Isn't this the type agency and people to which you wish to entrust your insurance program in 1979? We hope so, and we'll continue to do our best to merit your consideration. In the meantime, 'Happy New Year'!"

Vetral's Fashions, Open New Year's, Stages Annual After-Christmas Sale

And something else . . Vetral's is open today, Jan. 1, for the convenience of working customers who have the day off to shop and save.

"Gorgeous in-season apparel is included in this meaningful sale, and more than a few have discovered how it saves to drive out to Vetral's Fashions."

Simply take FM 40 east of Lubbock for six miles, then go three-fourths mile south. The fashion shop on the west side of the pavement is clearly marked and features easy access and plenty of paved parking. No congestion here! No high overhead here!

Everything at Vetral's is new, nothing in the expansive racks but fresh, delightful stock.

Easy To Reach

"The Best for Less" is the meaningful slogan at Vetral's Fashions, located just east of Lubbock. Go east on the well-marked route, from Lubbock's East 4th Street, to north of the Roosevelt School. The drive takes less time than many instances of traffic fighting within one's own city area.

Though open from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m., Vetral's is glad to open late for the convenience of customers wishing to shop at a later hour.

This is just one of the thoughtful gestures of the smart apparel shop.

Owners Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Davis traditionally assure real treats in fashion and quality at sensible prices. They and their capable assistants give the customer every benefit.

Select from pant suits, coordinates, dresses, sweaters, blouses, etc., that reflect the care in which Vetral's buys and stocks.

For those who already know the everyday low prices and the chic merchandise at Vetral's, enthusiasm naturally is being shown for the just-commenced sale. For those who may not have patronized Vetral's, now would be an excellent time . . . come on out and shop while selection is at its best.

RIGHT EQUIPMENT FOR THE JOB SURE AT FABIT

Fabit's Capacity For Service Seen Benefitting Wide Region

"Greetings for the new year from Fabit, a company that can work for you, too, in 1979!"

"We at Fabit are especially mindful of the friendships, confidences and patronage of past years, and we look forward to further opportunities of serving."

"Are you acquainted with the unique services of the Lubbock-owned Fabit firm at North Quirt and Loop 289?"

Fabit Corp. since its establishment in mid-1968 has filled a distinct need in the area, and such has been its wide acceptance and growth that new production equipment and latest methods are continually added, to make an already-efficient facility even more serviceable.

"For custom manufacturing of complete machines or parts in small quantities or in large production runs, one may turn with confidence to Fabit, a firm that likely can serve you in your own industrial, agriculture or municipality needs."

Its services even include engineering and development of prototypes or production models, metal shearing, bending, hole punching, rolling, welding, shape cutting, grinding, painting, assembly and wiring, plus a complete metal fabrication service.

Rails, Stairs

Whatever the order, Fabit likes to prove that it is foremost in the things that count: experienced management, quality control, good machinery, prompt service, complete manufacturing ability and reasonable prices.

These qualities have made the firm indispensable to many other manufacturers, for ranchers, farmers, industrialists and for city units.

For Precision Assurance

Adherance to close tolerances is standard procedure. With experienced management and the best machinery available, Fabit has the capability of precision fabrication work. Accurate, precise work is the rule, and the result is better quality products that look better and work better. This highest quality costs no more!

In order to do this best possible job and to maintain a high volume of production, Fabit Corp. is equipped with the best shear and press brake available.

A five-ton bridge crane serrves the entire production area and helps speed the work and keep material handling costs down.

"Let Fabit prove its ability! Your work can be done with us for a quoted contract price or on an hourly basis. We will appreciate your fabrication orders, large or small, and will give them our prompt and careful attention."

Refuse Service

Also, learn of the Refuse Service Service Division, geared to manufacture, sell, lease and service refuse containers, with the division headed by O.T. "Ted" Ratcliff IV, a six-year staffmember at Fabit.

Providing side-loading container service, the Refuse Service Division services a growing number of enthusiastic area customers who appreciate the convenience and reliability.

The service is unique in that it uses new automatic side-loading container dumping equipment. Company officials state that the new equipment is better suited for use in narrow alleys or curbside container installations and that it does not spill as much trash as front-loading container systems.

Lubbock Owned-Operated

Further Advantage

Furthermore, there is provided one source for:

(1) Dependable refuse container service with the best equipment;

(2) Container purchasing, front or side loading containers.

Safety, Speed Involved

Safety is another big factor, as the truck doesn't back, it just stops, dumps, then goes on, and the driver can see the container during the entire operation.

Less Noise

If noise is a factor, consider the advantages of a container held firmly and handled gently, without banging and clattering and with far less damage to the container.

"Establishment of this division with its wide range of services, provides the first opportunity commercial users have had locally for side-loading refuse services." For small businesses, apartments, etc., the advantages are evident.

Fabit knows its business; it holds process and apparatus patents in the refuse services field . and it is locally owned.

Housecleaning Convenience For '79 Affordable Via Dial-A-Maid In City

"Weren't the holidays hectic!"

"For most of us, this likely is true. And now comes clean-up time! Wouldn't a maid come in handy . . . now and for other occasions during the new year?"

Actually, maid service can be a most thoughtful gesture . . . and even inexpensive, and not just advantageous after the holidays but throughout the year.

Now would be an excellent time to learn of the services of Dial-a-Maid, with basic cleaning as its specialty, for residential and small commercial jobs.

("Wives and mothers, we know you'll like this service. Why not pass the hint on to husband and father that Dial-a-Maid is desired in your cleaning or housekeeping program. Reliance upon its expertise and convenience could well be the most rewarding New Year's resolution you could make!")

Yes, in Lubbock one can call Dial-a-Maid, bonded and dependable, and enjoy a great new convenience. Its services can be especially appreciated as a weekly or bi-weekly service for the working woman.

Call 792-3158 for full details or for reservation of the Dial-a-Maid services, (Call between 8:30 a.m. and 12:30 noon or after 5 p.m.)

Dial-a-Maid was established in Lubbock in mid-summer by Mildred Martin and Pat Arciniega who still own and operate the business. They have gathered about them a staff that is most adept. Mildred and Pat each are Lubbock residents of several years, and with each teaching in the Lubbock Public School System they recognized first hand how the working woman could benefit by such services as they provide. They continue to teach but keep close contact and supervision with all operations of the business.

Services Outlined

Included in the basic cleaning services is vacuum, mop and wax of floors; dusting and polishing of furniture; kitchen functions including shining appliances and counter tops, carrying out trash and even loading the dishwasher; cleaning to extent needed in the bath; cleaning of all mirrors, storm doors and sliding glass doors.

And the cost . . . most likely considerably less than one would imagine, with pay "by the job" gauged to house size.

At least two girls are sent to each job, the owners emphasize. "Follow up" is a regular procedural check on every first job, with spot checks made on others in the program of supervisioion to assure customer satisfaction.

Dial-a-Maid has an extremely good track record, and references are gladly furnished.

"Ask folks who have used Dial-a-Maid."

All bookkeeping is kept by the management, with the customer only involved in the flat fee.

Cleaning of vacant apartments and houses is one of the key services of Dial-a-Maid, of special benefit to apartment owners, real estate management firms, etc.

Dial-a-Maid is a member of the West Texas Trade Exchange as an added benefit in so many instances.

"For new convenience and service, with assurance that all jobs are supervised and that a well-done job is the rule, become acquainted now with Dial-a-Maid, phone 792-3158, with its services available Mondays through Saturday with advance notice."

"BOWMAN MAKES IT POSSIBLE TO FIX YOUR HOME THE WAY YOU WANT IT"

Bowman Extends 'Thanks' With Special Month-Long Markdowns

Closed today, Bowman's will open Tuesday morning with its January Sale in full swing!

Proving that again in 1979 Bowman "makes it possible to fix your home the way you want it", banner specials have been arranged to be effective throughout this first month of the new year.

Now, isn't this a practical and thoughtful way to say "Happy New Year; we appreciate your business!"

The several departments at Bowman's are represented in the sale, and items are listed here at random to hint of the economy possible in home remodeling, building, etc., but the full picture can only be viewed by coming on out to Bowman, 8301 S. University in Lubbock; see for yourself!

All housewares in stock are marked at close-out prices, and include toasters, coffee pots, can openers and many more items.

Armstrong flooring is just $3.79 sq. yd., with many colors and styles available from which to choose. Cono-Flex counter top material is $1.89 lin. ft.

And super low prices are posted on the L.D. Brinkman kitchen carpet, with the 12 ft. wide at $3.69 per sq. yd. (reg. $4.29).

Thomas light fixtures are 50 per cent off.

Pre-formed counter tops are a modest $3.95 lin. ft., in 4 ft. through 12 ft. lengths, and in butcher block, gold leather and white sequin finish.

A big paneling sale features Autumn Oak at $2.59 per sheet, with all other paneling in stock at 10 per cent off regular price, with over 100 styles for the choosing.

Fireplace accessories are 15 per cent off.

ABS qulity Latex wall paint is just $4.79 per gallon, and ABS quality Latex house paint is a modest $7.99 gallon.

Or select a dog house at $39.95; or a Stanley garage door opener at just $105.95 (deluxe model with light time delay and digital controls).

Power Tools

Skil power tools and the famous 10-in. DeWalt radial arm saw are specially priced, with unbelievable bargains. See the several specials in the Black & Decker line, too.

Door chimes are 10 per cent off; a Jensen double bowl stainless steel sink is just $32.99; and Peerless washerless kitchen faucets are sale priced.

McCulloch Chain Saws

•Then there is the 1/2-Price Sale on Christmas ornaments and decorations. Now is the time to buy and save for next year.

Even the Trellis Shop has specials, with African violets (regular $3.99) at a much lesser $1.99; and beautiful copper and brass pots, ladles, buckets, etc., at 25 per cent off.

It is a tremendous sale underway at Bowman, 8301 S. University; come on out!

Spring Crest Draperies Reveals Special Prices In January Sale

This means that significant specials are posted at Spring Crest Draperies of Lubbock, 5302 Ave. Q, in Briercroft Shopping Center, and at the newer Spring Crest store, under same ownership, at 2613 Yonkers in Plainview.

"All in all, it makes it easier than ever for you to move up to Spring Crest!"

Specifics Given

Among the sale values at each of the two stores are:

Selected fabrics at 20 per cent off;

Custom bedspreads at 15 per cent off;

Crestran sheers at a big 30 per cent off; and

Such values make it exceptionally easy to secure "something better for your home", affording a great opportunity to get acquainted with Spring Crest . . . with the products and services afforded, and with the home ownership and management.

Ben and Brenda Powell are owners, and they are most appreciative of the trade and friendships of the year past, welcoming opportunity to usher in the new year with price savings.

Free estimates are a feature of Spring Crest of Lubbock, and there is full assurance that each valued customer is completely satisfied with the latest in design and workmanship that are hallmarks of Spring Crest, "the finest in the industry"

Hang From Steel Spring

Why is Spring Crest different?

"Actually, Spring Crest Spring-Pleated Custom Draperies are the neatest hanging draperies in the world because they actually hang from a steel spring inserted in the top hem, with no crinoline headers to get soft and fall apart. They must be seen to be thoroughly appreciated."

Furthermore, aside from their beauty and simplicity, they are competitively priced.

Warranty Unique

There is 10-year warranty on drapery hardware.

Only three to four week delivery time is involved for the custom made drapes.

Also available are woven woods, shades, shutters, custom bedspreaus and the Classique metal blinds.

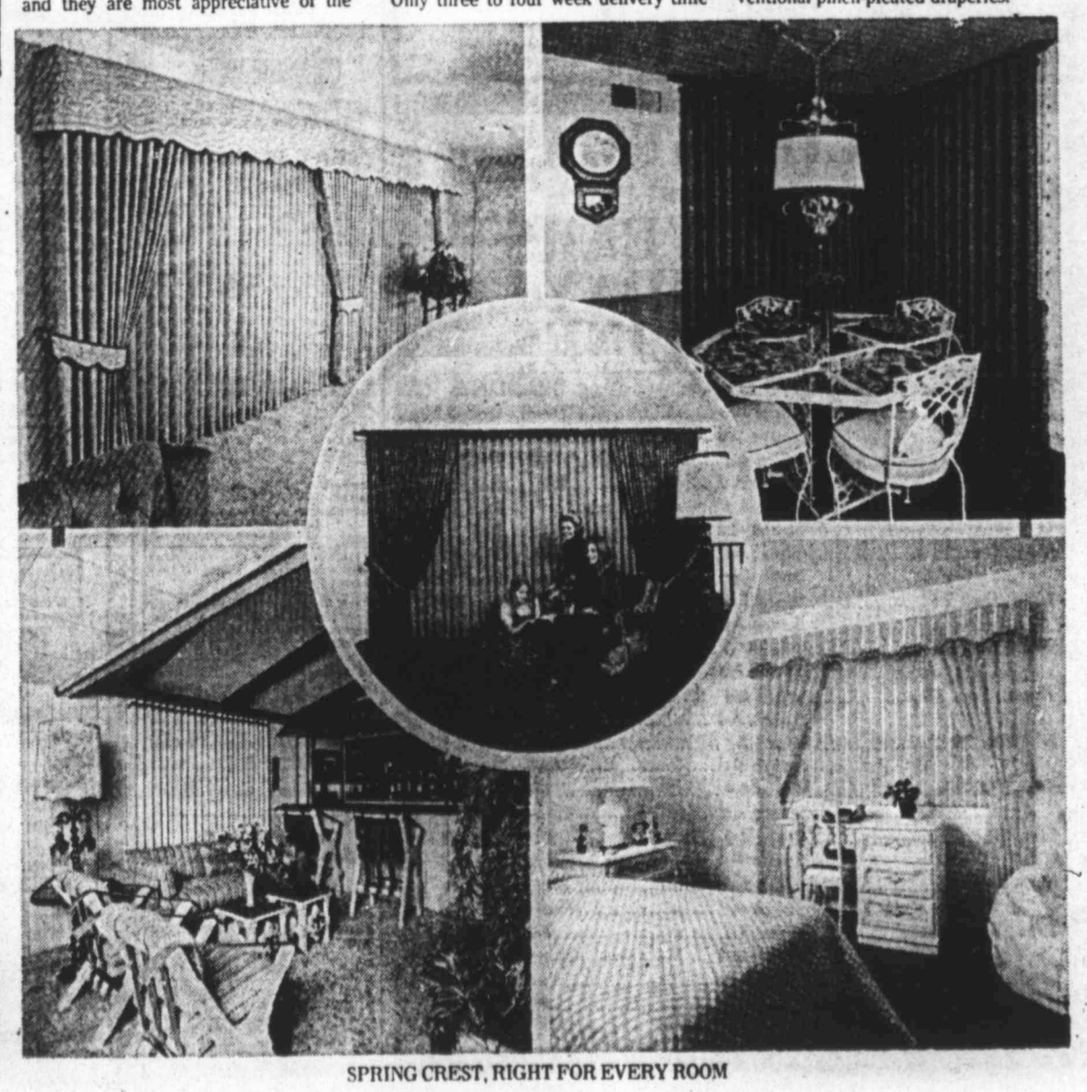

Drapery hardware is stocked for the "do it yourself" trade, too, with its simplicity lending itself to ease in installation.

Crestrand, the alternative to sheers (the elusive sheer that is different and popular) is stocked. It is beautiful, unique and thoroughly different.

BankAmericard and Master Charge purchase plans are welcomed at Spring Crest Draperies of Lubbock, located remember in Briercroft Center, between Earl Ray Music Co. and Maxine's Accent, with plenty of off-street, at-the-door parking for customer convenience.

And remember this:

"No matter what your style, Spring Crest can dress your windows better: these custom draperies add elegance to the most formal setting, but also can be the perfect finishing touch to a casual room. These unusual draperies are formed by threading a spring steel pleater through a narrow hem at top of the material. Result: a drapery that hangs beautifully with rounded, supple folds rather than the sharp, stiff edges of conventional pinch-pleated draperies."

YEAR END SALE

PUBLIC NOTICE

FACT #1 Everyting in our Inventory on Jan. 1 is taxable. We had much rather cut 2 to 3 hundred dollars off the price than to pay the same amount in tax dollars.

FACT #2 After Jan. 1 the taxes paid on unsold cars must be considered expense. In actuality this creates a consumer price increase.

Sorvino Quit Acting; Then Became Star

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Some performers are late bloomers; it takes time for them to put it all together," observes Paul Sorvino, whose acting career is blooming, with three films in current release.

Sorvino can be seen this season as one of the heisters in "The Brinks Job," as a sentimental New York columnist in "Slow Dancing in the Big City," and as an Italian-American primitive in "Bloodbrothers." Coming up: "Lost and Found," a comedy with Glenda Jackson and George Segal; and "Dummy," a television movie with Sorvino as a real-life deaf lawyer.

Sorvino readily admits that he is 39 — "because most people think I'm 45 or 40, based on the roles I play. In 'Made for Each Other,' I was cast as Joe Bologna's father — and he's older than I am." Sorvino's success as he approaches middle age is all the more enjoyable because of the remembered pain of his earlier years.

"In my 20s, I had the body of an Olympic athlete but with a cherubic face," he recalled. "The look was off, and so I was hard to cast. I sang and acted in New York, but I was only marginally effective.

"I knew I was at loose ends. I felt I had the talent, but I didn't have the nerve to pull it off. I ended up with a barrelful of contempt for myself. I had a view of a myself as a victim. Rejection is hard for any person to endure, but it is especially hard for an actor, who must rely on acceptance. It took years of therapy to come to terms with myself."

At 28, he was married to actress Lorraine Davis and they had the first of their three children. The uncertainty of the acting life seemed unendurable, and Sorvino took a job as a copy writer in an advertising agency.

"I was good at it, too," said Sorvino, a big, friendly bear of a man. "I was into the $300 suits and the $1 cigars, and I rose to become vice president and creative director. My company had bought another agency and wanted me to move over at $60,000 a year. I had five job offers at more money than I was making."

Yet his advertising career ended after 1½ years. What happened? He saw a performance of Jack Warden in "The Man in the Glass Booth."

"Why?" he asked. "Nobody wants me."

"They will. You're a great actor."

Sorvino returned to acting classes the next day. Within four months, he quit advertising "and ever since, I've never been out of work — except by choice."

He scored on Broadway in "That Championship Season;" starred in a pair of failed television series; and played a variety of film roles, mostly as characters. That was because of his heft — at one point 280 pounds on a 6-foot-3 frame. He has trimmed to 212 and hopes to reach 195 — "the price you pay to get the girl in films."

His first real romance came with "Slow Dancing," which he admits is his best shot so far. Business has been slow, with no help from two bad reviews in the news magazines. Director John Avildsen has added 15 minutes to help develop Sorvino's character and the actor believes the film is much improved.

About "Bloodbrothers" he is less pleased — "let's just say I had a difference of opinion with the editing department." Half of his scenes were junked, he said.

"Brinks" gave him pleasure, especially meeting with Jazz Maffie, the real-life robber Sorvino portrayed. Maffie's tribute was worth a dozen reviewers' raves: "I think he done a good job."

At this point in his career, said Sorvino, he could sign on for a TV series at $50,000 a week. "But how many Rolls Royces can I drive? I don't even want one," he reasons.

HARD-BOILED — Actor Paul Sorvino works at his cluttered desk during the filming of "Slow Dancing in the Big City" recently. Two more of Sorvino's films, "The Brink's Job" and "Bloodbrothers," are also currently in release. (AP Laserphoto)

Shortage Of Blood Postpones Surgery

NEW YORK (AP) — A severe shortage of blood has caused surgery postponements at some metropolitan-area hospitals, where blood is being delivered only on an emergency basis, a spokeswoman for the Greater New York Blood Program said Sunday.

Cathie Schilling said there has been no improvement in the blood emergency, which has forced an 80 to 85 percent cutback in hospital deliveries. She blamed the shortage on holiday closings of businesses which would ordinarily be scheduled to give blood. All types of blood were in demand, especially for platelets, a blood part used to treat cancer patients, she said.

Miss Schilling said that 2,000 to 2,500 units (pints) of blood are usually donated daily, but only 600 units have been received since Friday.

PEKING MAN APPROVES — Goa Zhi-cheng, 76, photographed while strolling through Peking's Forbidden City compound Sunday, said he's all for U.S.-Chinese relations. "It's very good and it should have happened years ago," Gao said. He is a native of Shensi Province. (AP Laserphoto)

Few Changes Noted As Taiwan Status Shifts

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — At midnight Sunday, the Republic of China became a non-country in the official eyes of the U.S. government, but there was little visible evidence of the change.

The Nationalist Chinese government, which fled China when the communists came to power in 1949, says President Chiang Ching-kuo may comment on the de-recognition in his annual New Year's speech today.

There were no reports of demonstrations or rallies in Taipei, nor was there any government reaction to Peking's surprise announcement Sunday that it wanted to negotiate a reunification with Taiwan that would preserve the "status quo" of the capitalist island.

Chiang has steadfastly refused to negotiate with Peking, which established diplomatic relations Sunday with United States.

U.S. Ambassador Leonard Unger left quietly Sunday for a meeting of America's Asian ambassadors in Bangkok, Thailand. He will return here around Jan. 10, then leave permanently for Washington.

There will be no flag-lowering ceremony, and a U.S. Embassy spokesman said the signs on the gate will be removed whenever the maintenance people can get around to it.

The U.S. Embassy will remain open while transition teams work out ways to maintain trade and cultural ties on an unofficial basis.

"We will go on in our usual busy and thriving way," The China News newspaper wrote Sunday. "We didn't bust up and we haven't evidenced any sign at all of panic."

"... We have gone from U.N. expulsion through successive de-recognitions by the big power nations of the world. The course is a pretty hard one, but can anyone say we are not stronger now? Obviously we are."

PEOPLE — PLACES — THINGS

Dime Parking Doesn't Sell

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Sometimes you can't even sell a bargain, not even a no-strings-attached parking space for a dime a day.

"It's just unbelievable," complained Barnes Romine Jr.

With business sagging at his huge parking lot, he dropped his daily price to 10 cents, an unusually low charge for downtown drivers who generally shell out $1 and up. But it didn't help a bit.

"I got some signs that are 8 feet long," Romine said. "Why I'm not getting any business I just don't know."

Trio Slated For Walk

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The Bee Gees will be "stayin' alive" in Hollywood Boulevard's prestigous Walk of Fame when they get their own star Jan. 12.

The brothers Barry, Robin and Maurice Gibb will become the fifth singing group to be honored with a star by the Chamber of Commerce. The trio broke record sales with their soundtrack "Saturday Night Fever."

Other groups with Walk of Fame stars are the Mills Brothers, Crosby, Stills & Nash, Sons of the Pioneers and the Spinners.

Maryland AG Job Shifts

BALTIMORE (AP) — Maryland Attorney General Francis B. Burch, whose resignation from the post he has held since 1967 became effective Sunday, arranged for two of his deputies to earn a footnote in the state's history.

At 11 a.m. Monday, Jon F. Oster, a deputy prosecutor who finished second in the Democratic primary, was to be sworn in as attorney general by Acting Gov. Blair Lee III. Oster's term will last until midnight, and at 9 a.m. Tuesday, Lee will swear in George A. Nilson, the other Burch deputy, as the state's chief law enforcement officer.

Nilson's term will also be a short one. At 4 p.m., Stephen H. Sachs, who defeated Oster in the primary and Republican Warren Rich in the general election, will be sworn in as attorney general for a full four-year term.

"I thought it would be a nice gesture," Burch said of the complicated arrangement. "They've both served me with distinction and this will give each of them a little memento for their families in the future."

Sin Crackdown Planned

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Whispering love words in a woman's ears on a Cairo street may land you in trouble as of Monday.

The government is launching a New Year campaign to "restore discipline to the streets of Cairo," which will include a crackdown on a variety of offenders, ranging from beggars to violators of traffic rules and public morals.

"Obscene conduct" in public will be punishable by a year's imprisonment and "molesters" of women will get six months.

These punishments are codified in law already, but the government has been lax in enforcing them.

But as of Monday, thousands of uniformed and plainclothes policemen have been mobilized to ensure greater order and discipline in the crowded streets of this city of eight million.

Rules banning smoking inside theaters, movie houses and public transport vehicles will be enforced more strictly.

Motorists and pedestrians alike will have to show greater respect to traffic rules.

Thousands of beggars and pickpockets are expected to be rounded up.

Cock Attacks Handler

HONOLULU (UPI) — A fighting cock attacked its handler instead of the opposing bird Saturday, critically wounding the man, police reported.

Officers said they learned about it when a hospital made a report on treatment of Enrique Alonzo, 41.

According to the account given police, the bird, equipped with the sharp gaffs attached to its feet for the fight, jumped up and punched Alonzo's abdomen as it was released.

Sadat, Begin Tailors Apart

NEW YORK (AP) — A tailor who says he works for the stars has Anwar Sadat on his list of best-dressed men and Menachem Begin among the worst.

Break Ice For Last Dip

Vic Boff, president of the Iceberg Athletic Club, said it was the 61st time the club observed the coming of a New Year with a swim.

The temperature was 43 degrees and Boff said the water was about 39.

"We like cold weather," Boff said, and he claimed that he and most members take a chilly dip four times a week.

"It keeps us in great shape."

Arabs Like Peanut Butter

MACON, Ga. (AP) — Peanut butter is getting popular in the Middle East.

In the second year of a Georgia Farm Bureau exporting program, $120,000-worth of peanut butter has been shipped to the area.

That may not seem much but, as program director Bob Marlowe says, "You have to remember that the man I sold the first 15 cases to didn't even know what the stuff was."

Today it is distributed and sold in five Arab countries through food stores, and it is part of school lunch programs in Syria and Jordan.

Marlowe said Arab governments liked peanut butter because of its high protein and low sugar content. And to help educate Arab consumers about its merits, the Farm Bureau has a Lebanese public relations firm coordinating promotion of the product.

Judy Garland Suit Set

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — A judge will hear testimony this week on a lawsuit filed by Liza Minnelli to stop the further sale of items belonging to her mother, the late Judy Garland.

Superior Court Judge Laurence Rittenband will hold the hearing Friday.

Miss Minnelli, daughter of Miss Garland's second husband, director Vincente Minnelli, was seeking an injunction to prevent further sale of the mother's possessions and to have funds from a previous sale put in her mother's estate.

Sid Luft, who was Miss Garland's third husband, recently had a two-day sale in Los Angeles of Miss Garland's memorabilia.

Rose Figures Selected

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Los Angeles Dodgers Manager Tommy Lasorda was among several sports figures selected to ride in the 90th annual Tournament of Roses parade today.

Lasorda was picked to join Stan Musial and golfer Gay Brewer on one float, while 16-year-old tennis star Tracy Austin, swimmer John Naber, baseball's Bob Lemon, football's Jim Plunkett and skater Linda Fratianne were chosen for others.

Also recruited for floatmanning duty were Olympians Jesse Owens, Bob Mathias, Bill Toomey, Parry O'Brien, Wilma Rudolph and Dona DeVarona.

Lance Eyes Senate Seat

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former federal Budget Director Bert Lance, who resigned in 1977 under fire for alleged financial irregularities, is considering a bid for the U.S. Senate, Newsweek magazine reported.

Lance, a close friend of President Carter, has told friends he may run for the Senate if Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., decides against seeking re-election, the magazine reported in this week's issue.

There is speculation the outcome of a Senate investigation into Talmadge's finances may cause him to back off the race, Newsweek said. It said Lance reportedly believes he may be indicted for his affairs but is convinced he will be cleared in court.

Turtle Begs For Supper

Peggy Detmer says her painted turtle, Jimmy, has mastered the trick of standing on his back legs. The only help he needs is incentive, in the form of a piece of fish.

Most turtles couldn't stand on their hind legs if they wanted to, but Jimmy's shell curves upward at the ends, which makes the difference, she says.

His owner says she isn't about to stop with a single trick for the standing turtle and claims Jimmy is learning to roll over and come when called.

Oilers Make Patsies Out Of Patriots

HANDING OFF — Houston Oilers quarterback Dan Pastorini (7) hands the ball off to teammate Tim Wilson (45) who in turn ran for short yardage against the New England Patriots in the fourth period of their AFC playoff game Sunday at Schaefer Stadium in Foxboro Mass. Houston won the right to meet Pittsburg in the AFC championship game by beating New England 31-14. (AP Laserphoto)

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Coach Bum Phillips of the Houston Oilers was his usual humorous self. Although, "scared to death" by the New England Patriots he was ready to declare war on the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"I'll tell you one thing, I was scared to death, scared to death," Phillips said Sunday after Dan Pastorini passed for three second period touchdowns in leading the Oilers to a 31-14 victory over the Patriots in their National Football League playoff.

Then, looking ahead to the Steelers in Pittsburgh next Sunday in a showdown for the American Conference championship, Phillips said: "I expect a knockdown, drag-out fight with them."

Asked his plans for the Steelers, Phillips replied:

"We'll sever diplomatic relations with them. That's what you do when you declare war on someone."

Phillips said New England has as much ability as anybody in the league, adding "we got a lot of breaks."

"I thought one team would win big," he said. "In a real clutch ball game with emotions running hard that's how I thought it would go."

Pastorini, wearing a flak jacket to protect injured ribs, said that the Oilers' second victory in the playoffs was "like a fairy tale."

"I don't know if I'm playing better or we're playing better," the veteran quarterback said. "We've never been in this situation before. I hope we're picked as the underdogs next week. We always play better when we're the underdog."

"Give the Oilers credit," New England Coach Chuck Fairbanks said. "They beat us twice on our football field. They're a great football team, although I still feel we could beat them on a given day. I'm proud of the Patriots. I think they played with class."

Fairbanks said that he didn't think the Patriots were "flat," but the team was hurt when quarterback Steve Grogan had to retire to the sidelines after aggravating a left knee injury late in the first half.

"If Grogan had to play last week, he could not have done so. His knee started to hurt in the second period. Tom Owen (Grogan's understudy) has not had enough playing time. Without Grogan the Oilers knew Tom had to put the ball in the air."

Pastorini picked apart the New England defense in the second period as the Oilers built a 21-0 lead. Houston widened the margin to 24-0 in the third period, withstood a New England comeback and nailed down the decision by capitalizing on a pass interception late in the game.

Pastorini broke a scoreless deadlock in the second period by connecting on a 71-yard scoring shot to Ken Burrough. He then hit Barber on scoring tosses covering 19 and 13 yards.

Toni Fritsch booted a 30-yard field goal midway through the third period, before the Patriots came alive behind veteran backup quarterback Tom Owen.

Lions Battle Tide For Title

By The Associated Press

It is being called college football's version of the Super Bowl — but don't even suggest that to the University of Southern California.

Southern Cal's third-ranked Trojans think they have just as might right to consideration as the national champion as to Penn State and Alabama, the No.1 and No.2 teams in the country.

The problem for the Trojans is that Penn State and Alabama are playing each other on Monday in the Sugar Bowl game in New Orleans while Southern Cal's Rose Bowl foe in Pasadena, Calif., is Michigan, ranked "only" fifth.

The winner of the Sugar Bowl is almost sure to be the national champion, especially if Penn State's Nittany Lions, under Coach Joe Paterno, finish at 12-0. If the 10-1 Crimson Tide wins, Southern Cal, once-beaten in 12 games, has a shot. What the Trojans are no doubt hoping for is a Sugar Bowl tie by Penn State and Alabama and a Rose Bowl romp over Michigan's Wolverines.

In the two other New Year's Day classics, fourth-ranked Oklahoma faces sixth-rated Nebraska in the Orange Bowl in Miami and No.9 Houston opposes No.10 Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl in Dallas.

The Sugar Bowl brings the nation's 1-2 teams together for the first time since top-ranked Nebraska whipped Alabama 38-6 eight years ago. The Crimson Tide was denied that year, but has three other national championships to its credit — 1961, '64 and '65. But Penn State, perhaps victimized by its being an eastern college team, has never won the national championship despite going undefeated in 1968, 1969 and 1973. Last year the Nittany Lions finished No.2 to Notre Dame.

Southern Cal, the Pacific-10 Conference champion, is making an unprecedented 22nd Rose Bowl appearance, the most recent a 14-6 victory over Michigan two years ago. Charles White, a Southern Cal freshman then and an All-American now, rushed for 122 yards in that game as a replacement for injured Ricky Bell. Michigan's biggest gun is left-handed quarterback Rick Leach, who has passed for 16 touchdowns and run for 12 and, in his career has accounted for an NCAA-record 81 TDs.

Oklahoma and Nebraska will be having a super rematch of ther own on Monday night — a Big Eight Conference Super Bowl of sorts. The Cornhuskers took advantage of six Oklahoma turnovers and beat the Sooners 17-14 last Nov. 11. The loss ruined Oklahoma's national championship dreams and led to the two teams finishing tied for the Big-8 title.

Both sides say they bear no grudges.

"There is no animosity on the part of our players that I have picked up," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne says. "I don't feel that it's a grudge match."

The question for 8-3 Notre Dame is, can the Fighting Irish fight with the same intensity against Houston as they did a year ago when they routed Texas 38-10 in the Cotton Bowl to take the national championship?

"Our kids have pride and they know they are playing a good football team," says Notre Dame Coach Dan Devine. "We don't consider it a meaningless game. We don't have those kind of players or coaches. I do not fear a letdown.

"Our kids will wear white jerseys with green numbers and gold helmets," said Devine. "If that doesn't do something for them, they might as well go home."

Rams Easily Thrash Hapless Vikings

Los Angeles, Dallas To Meet

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Quarterback Pat Haden said Sunday the turning point of his Los Angeles Rams' 34-10 victory over the Minnesota Vikings in their National Football Conference semifinal playoff game came in the third quarter on a drive capped by his touchown pass to Ron Jessie covering 27 yards.

"Everything went perfectly on that drive," said Haden, who earlier had thrown a 9-yard touchdown pass to Willie Miller opening the Rams' scoring.

"They have denied us before, but they sure weren't going to do it today," added Haden after the Rams broke the Vikings' post-season jinx over Los Angeles.

Haden, the Rhode Scholar, said his passes to Jessie worked well for three or more reasons.

"First, I had protection. Secondly, we were reading the coverage right and thirdly, Jessie was running the routes."

Then he added that Miller did a great job as a decoy and also that Minnesota had a rookie, John Turner, who had taken over the injured Nate Wright in the secondary.

The Rams exploded in the second half and their great defense limited the Viking runners to just 36 yards, forcing Minnesota to place full emphasis on quarterback Fran Tarkenton's passing.

The veteran Tarkenton may have played his finwl game for the Vikings, but he evaded questions by saying, "If I show up in July, I do. If I don't, I don't.

In addition to his two touchdown passes, Haden's passes set up Los Angeles' other two touchdowns as the favored Rams won before a crowd of 69,631 at the Coliseum.

The game was tied 10-10 at halftime before the Rams took control, scoring two touchdowns in the third quarter while holding the Vikings to minus three yards in total offense.

Los Angeles, leading 24-10 after three periods, extended its lead on a 28-yard field by Frank Corral and a 3-yard touchdown run by Jim Jodat in the final quarter.

The 38-year-old Tarkenton kept Minnesota in the game in the first half as he completed 13 of 24 passes for 177 yards. The Vikings scored first on a 42-yard field goal by Rick Danmeier.

Haden's pass to Miller and a 43-yard field goal by Corral inlthe second period put Los Angeles ahead 10-3 before Tarkenton knotted the score at halftime with a 1-yard pass to Ahmad Rashad just six seconds left before the intermission.

Los Angeles came back to dominate the third quarter, scoring touchdowns on a 3-yard run by Cullen Bryant, who gained 100 yards in the game, and Haden's pass to Jessie.

The Vikings had beaten the Rams in each of four previous playoff meetings, including a 14-7 decision last year.

Haden, a star at Southern California, completed 15 of 29 passes for 209 yards with one interception.

He completed two key passes before Bryant's touchdown run and also started the Rams on the way to their final touchdown. That drive was highlighted by the running of reserves Anthony Davis and Jodat.

The Rams, who have won six straight NFC Western Division championships, were eight-point favorites after finishing the regular season with a 12-4 record compared with 8-7-1 for the Vikings, representing the Central Division.

In playoffs, the teams had met in 1969, 1974, 1976 and last season with Minnesota winning each time, leading many to believe the Vikings held a jinx over the Rams.

The Vikings actually led the Rams in total yardage in the first half, 196-175. Two interceptions by Los Angeles' Bill Simpson perhaps kept Minnesota from leading at the intermission.

The final two quarters were all Los Angeles. Minnesota recorded only two first downs in the second half to 16 for the Rams. Los Angeles finished with a 409-244 advantage in total offense.

Tarkenton, after his great first half, finished with 18 completions in 37 attempts for 219 yards, giving him only 42 yards passing in the final 30 minutes as he was contained by the Rams' defense.

The Vikings' ace runner,x chuck Foreman, was held to only 31 yards in 13 carries. He caught three passes for another 38 yards.

Bryant gained his even 100 yards in 27 carries while Jessie led the Los Angeles receivers with six catches for 108 yards. Rashad paced the Vikings in that category with seven receptions for 84 yards.

Haden 'Satisfied' After Posting Win

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Quarterback Pat Haden said the Los Angeles Rams' 34-10 victory over the Minnesota Vikings "has to rank as one of my most satisfying games.

"We executed today better than we have all year," added Haden. "I knew all week that we were ready. They have denied us before, but they sure weren't going to do it today."

Los Angeles faces the Dallas Cowboys in the National Football Conference championship game next Sunday at the Coliseum to decide which goes to the Super Bowl.

Coach Ray Malavasi, in his first year at the Los Angeles helm, commented, "In the past we beat ourselves when we have played the Vikings. But today we didn't. We stumbled a bit in the first half, but we just went in at halftime, picked out a few plays we felt would work and went out and played a great second half.

"I thought our defense played exceptionally well in the third quarter and Pat Haden was super."

That could have been an understatement. The Minnesota offense had a minus three yards for the period as the defense throttled the Vikings and Haden engineered two touchdown drives that virtually put the game out of reach.

Cullen Bryant scored on a 3-yard run on a drive in which Haden's passes were instrumental and the quarterback and Ron Jessie hooked up on a 27-yard scoring pass culiminating a 60-yard drive in five plays.

On the Minnesota side, veteran quarterback Fran Tarkenton stuck his head into the radio interview room and yelled at Haden, "Hey, Pat, if you need any help in beating Dallas, call on me."

Referring to the Rams, Tarkenton said, "They have a vastly superior football team to us. All you have to do is look at the statistics. But I still thought we could win.

Tarkenton Silent

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Minnesota quarterback Fran Tarkenton refused to audible his future following the loss to the Los Angeles Rams.

"If I show up in July to training camp, I do; if I don't, I don't," said the 18-year veteran. "There's no question that I could play another one or two years if I wanted to. I feel very good physically but I'm not saying anything right now."

Tarkenton, 38, who added two more National Football League records to his list this season by throwing 572 times and completing 345 passes, was pressed into why he was keeping his decision a secret.

"Why should I tell you?" he asked a reporter. "It's my business. Sure, people are interested, but why should I tell everyone about my own personal life?"

Tarkenton, who suffered a broken leg in 1977 and considered leaving the game then, said he knows what his decision will be.

"Sure I know," he said. "I've pretty much known for quite awhile."

He apparently has kept his thoughts from most of his teammates as well as the public. Linebacker Jeff Siemon admitted that he couldn't read the quarterback's mind, but that he felt 1978 was Tarkenton's final season.

"I think he'll retire," said Siemon. "I think last year he saw something in this team that he liked, but it just didn't work out as well as we all hoped."

Hindman Starts Search

A-J News Services

Ohio State University athletic officials begin a job Tuesday they haven't faced in 29 years — hiring a new football coach.

That task was created Saturday when Hugh Hindman, the Big Ten Conference school's athletic director, fired the legendary, tempestuous Woody Hayes.

Hindman said Hayes was dismissed solely for slugging Clemson middle guard Charlie Bauman in the waning moments of a 17-15 Gator Bowl loss Friday night to the Atlantic Coast Conference champions.

Harold Enarson, Ohio State's president, will huddle with Hindman Tuesday, but Enarson makes it clear the decision to find a new man rests solely with the athletic director.

"I guarantee you Hugh has my complete confidence," said Enarson, who backed Hindman's decision to fire his old boss. Hindman played and coached under Hayes for eight seasons.

"He is the key guy in recruiting a new coach," said Enarson.

Hindman will not discuss the leading candidates for the assignment of replacing the college sport's second winningest active coach. Hayes had 238 career victories to 283 for Alabama's Bear Bryant.

"Like any major position anyplace, you try to get the best possible person available," said Hindman, a coach himself for two decades.

A report originating in Little Rock that current Arkansas Coach Lou Holtz was flying to Columbus was branded as "ridiculous" by Hindman. Holtz coached under Hayes at Ohio State.

Holtz, a native Ohioan, said he has no current plans to leave the Southwestern Conference school. "I plan to be at the University of Arkansas for as long as the people want me to," said Holtz from Hawaii, where he is coaching in the Hula Bowl.

When asked if he would accept the job, Holtz replied: "I have a job. That's what people don't understand. Ohio State is a great job, and they're great people, and I'm a Ohio boy.

"But we have a great place at Arkansas. I made a committment there, and that's where I plan on being until something happens different."

till, Ohio State is expected to bid for Holtz's services.

Certain to be mentioned as other leading candidates are a horde of former Hayes' lieutenants or players who have gone on to become head coaches; Michigan's Bo Schembechler, Dave McClain of Wisconsin, Gary Moeller of Illinois, Jim Young of Purdue, Bo Rein of North Carolina State and Ralph Staub of Cincinnati.

Oilers Whip Patriots

scored after interceptions, two by Mike Reinfeldt in the second period, and another by Gregg Bingham in the fourth quarter.

Pastorini, who led Houston from a 23-0 deficit to a 26-23 victory over the Patriots here during the regular season, completed 10 of 13 passes for 184 yards in the first half. Then, he directed a ball-control game, sticking mostly to the ground as the Oilers became conservative with their big lead in the final two periods.

Campbell, the 1977 Heisman Trophy winner from Texas who won the NFL ground-gaining championship, carried 27 times for 118 yards and one touchdown for the Oilers.

In the scoreless first period, Pastorini was sacked twice by the hard-charging Patriots before he had a pass intercepted by Tim Fox at the New England 41.

The Patriots moved to the Houston 23 at the outset of the second period, but Grogan was sacked for a three-yard loss by Elvin Bethea, and David Posey was wide with a 43-yard field goal attempt.

Three plays later, Pastorini read the New England blitz and uncorked a desperation pass to Burrough. The veteran wide receiver took the ball away from New England's Mike Haynes on the left sideline at the Patriots' 40 and pulled away to complete a 71-yard scoring play.

That stunned the Patriots, as well as more than 60,000 partisan fans, and two plays later, Grogan's pass off the old flea-flicker was intercepted by Reinfeldt at the Houston 1.

The Oilers appeared to be held on downs when Tim Wilson managed to reach only the 7 on the third straight running play. However New England was called for unnecessary roughness, giving the Oilers a first down at the 22.

The Patriots rebounded by rolling from their 19 to a first down at the Houston 23, but on third down, Reinfeldt picked off a Grogan pass at his 7.

Reinfeldt's return and another unnecessary roughness penalty against the Patriots put the Oilers on the New England 49. Houston promptly moved to a touchdown with Pastorini hitting Barber on a 22-yard strike before finding his tight end again on a 13-yard scoring shot.

Late in the third period, New England marched from its 25 to a first down at the Houston 24. Andy Johnson, working the halfback option to perfection, then lobbed a pass to Harold Jackson in the end zone for a touchdown.

In the fourth period, after a poor Houston punt against the wind, Owen passed 24 yards to Russ Francis in the end zone for another New England score, cutting the deficit to 24-14.

However, New England's comeback hopes were dashed when Bingham intercepted an Owen pass.

Phillips Gears Up For 'War'

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — To Houston Coach Bum Phillips, it was the opening barrage of a war. His quarterback Dan Pastorini called it another chapter in a "fairy tale." But to the New England Patriots it was a disappointing 31-14 loss to "one helluva a football team."

Phillips' battered and bruised Oilers won their second National Football league playoff game Sunday, scoring on three second-quarter touchdown passes by Pastorini.

But although the wisecracking coach said he was "scared to death" going into the game against the American Football Conference East champions, Phillips had some militant words for tge Pittsburgh Steelers who face the Oilers next week for the AFC championship.

"It's going to be war," he said. "We're going to sever diplomatic relations with 'em. That's what you do when you declare war on someone, you sever relations with 'em."

Pastorini, who completed 12 of 15 passes for 200 yards, said his broken ribs — subject of much discussion in the Oilers' 17-9 victory in Miami last week — gave him no trouble.

"The thing about broken ribs is that after the ligaments stop aching, you don't feel them anymore," he said.

"I don't know if I'm playing better or if we're playing better than last week. We've never been in a situation like this before. It's like a fairy tale."

Earl Campbell, the NFL rookie of the year, said he planned a subdued New Year's Eve after rushing 118 yards in 27 carries including one touchdown.

"I'm just happy I'm alive to see another year," he said. "I'm just going to ride the plane home and maybe call my family. Then I'll start learning what I need to know for next week."

Backups Play Key Roles In Dallas' Victory

DALLAS (UPI) — There are those who contend that the nucleus of a playoff team could be made up of the backup people currently hiding out on the roster of the Dallas Cowboys.

And the Cowboys' NFC divisional playoff victory over the Atlanta Falcons was a good example of that.

Some of those who played key roles in the Dallas win included:

• Scott Laidlaw, the forgotten fullback who was pressed into service late in the year when Robert Newhouse broke a bone in his right leg. Laidlaw scored twice in Dallas 27-20 comeback win over the scrappy Falcons, set one of his own scores with a 14-yard run and set up another touchdown by catching a 15-yard screen pass that carried to the Atlanta 2.

• Jackie Smith, the one-time superstar tight end for St. Louis who was signed by Dallas five weeks into the season when backup tight end Jay Saldi went on the injured reserve. Smith had not caught a pass for Dallas until last Saturday, when he caught three for 38 yards. One of those was a 2yard touchdown catch that tied the game in the third period.

• Danny White, who for three years has seldom taken a center snap in anger but who was thrown into the Atlanta game late in the first half when starter Roger Staubach was knocked silly by a hard lick from linebacker Robert Pennywell. White directed Dallas to two second half touchdowns while the Cowboys defense was shutting out the Falcons in the final two quarters.

"I've put in my application for the starting job," Laidlaw said in a good natured way after the Atlanta game. "I don't know how many other applications there are, but I'm thinking about stuffing the ballot box."

Staubach Return Expected

DALLAS (UPI) — Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach, knocked unconscious during the Cowboys' 27-20 victory over Atlanta Saturday, will be able to work out with the team Monday — weather permitting.

Cowboys team doctors said Staubach's dazed condition improved rapidly following the game and gave him the go ahead to take part in practice sessions.

Coach Tom Landry said following the game that although he could not be certain of Staubach's status until later in the week, "you normally come back pretty quickly from that sort of thing."

Staubach suffered a concussion when he was tackled late in the first half by Atlanta linebacker Robert Pennywell.

Duke Shocked During Weekend

By The Associated Press

"I wasn't planning on losing two games here."

The rest of the college basketball world will have to agree today with the sentiments of Duke Coach Bill Foster.

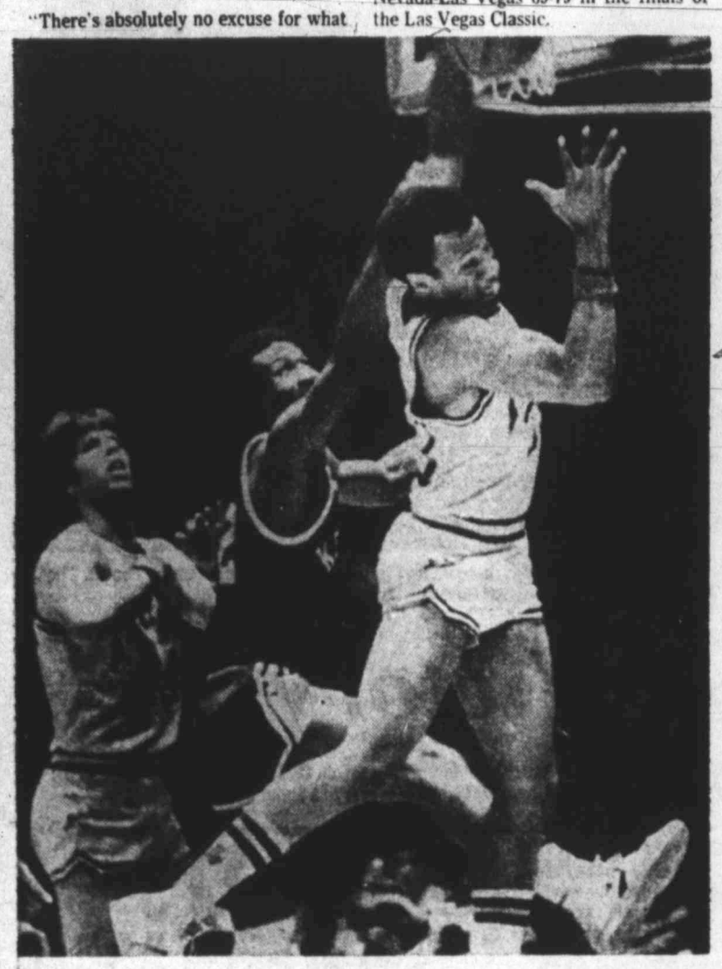

Neither Foster, nor anyone else, could have imagined the kind of trouble his top-ranked team would have in the ECAC Holiday Festival Tournament in New York over the weekend.

The Holiday Festival turned into the Holiday Famine for the Blue Devils, who lost two straight games in Madison Square Garden, the last a 69-66 shocker to St. John's in Saturday night's consolation game.

"There's absolutely no excuse for what happened to us," said Foster, whose team also lost a 90-84 overtime thriller to Ohio State in the first round Friday night. "But strange things are happening to us. It's a complete turnabout from what we've been doing."

St. John's remarkable victory, fashioned after cutting through a mountainous 19-point deficit in the first half, did wonders for the long-suffering Eastern image in college basketball. So did the championship game in this same Holiday Festival, a heart-stopping 97-96 triple-overtime victory for Rutgers over Ohio State.

Temple scored another big blow for Eastern prestige by whipping 14th-rated Nevada-Las Vegas 89-79 in the finals of the Las Vegas Classic.

IRISH IN ACTION — Notre Dame's Tracy Jackson (30) rips down a rebound Saturday night in a college basketball game with Kentucky as Laven Williams of Kentucky attempts to get the ball himself. Kentucky upset the second-ranked Irish 81-76. (AP Laserphoto)

Duke, Ohio State and Nevada-Las Vegas weren't the only teams that lost prestige with their lost weekend. Notre Dame, the nation's second-ranked club, was knocked off by 13th-ranked Kentucky 81-76 in a wild Saturday night game in Louisville, a circumstance sure to shake up the national rankings.

Elsewhere, fourth-ranked Michigan State made points toward a higher position in the Top Twenty standings by winning the Far West CLassic with a 74-57 victory over Big Ten colleague Indiana.

Fifth-ranked North Carolina won the Rochester (N.Y.) Classic with a 121-69 rout of Niagara and No. 6 Illinois took the Glacier Classic in Anchorage, Alaska, with a 98-90 victory over Alaska-Anchorage.

Indiana State, ranked No. 11, defeated Morris Harvey 99-63; 12th-ranked Texas A&M turned back Vermont 104-76 in the finals of the Vermont Classic; 15th-ranked Georgetown blasted the University of the District of Columbia 96-56; 16th-rated Marquette took the Milwaukee Classic with a 61-57 decision over North Carolina-Charlotte; 17th-ranked Long Beach stopped Loyola of Chicago 84-73; No. 18 Kansas beat Colorado 72-66 in the finals of the Big Eight Tournament in Kansas City, Mo.; and No. 20 Arkansas defeated Memphis State 82-69.

In other tournament action, Purdue won the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu with a 77-62 decision over Utah; Idaho State surprised New Mexico 73-67 in the Lobo Invitational in Albuquerque, N.M.; New Mexico won the All-College Tournament in Oklahoma City by beating Weber State 63-58; Maryland scored an 83-79 decision over Southern Cal in the finals of the Maryland Invitational; and Iowa beat Stanford 83-68 in the championship game of the Cabrillo Classic in San Diego.

Central Michigan won the Evansville Holiday Tournment with a 74-73 victory over the University of Evansville; Connecticut defeated East Carolina 80-68 in the finals of the UConn Classic; Duquesne rolled past Ohio University 85-74 in the finals of the West Virginia Classic in Morgantown; and Drexel stopped Lafayette 69-61 in the championship game of the Lafayette Invitational.

Also, the University of Portland won the KOA Classic in Billings, Mont., by defeating the University of Montana 77-69; Old Dominion won the Times-Dispatch Invitational in Richmond, Va., with a 70-68 decision over Virginia Commonwealth; Iona beat St. Mary's of California 84-74 in the championship game of the Manufacturer's Hanover Tournament in New Rochelle, N.Y.; and Bowling Green won the Glass City Classic in Toledo, Ohio, with a 67-64 decision over Villanova.

Of all the developments over the weekend, Duke's New York disaster was the most dramatic. The Blue Devils, last year's NCAA finalists, came into town a heavy favorite, riding the crest of a six-game winning streak.

In both the Ohio State and St. John's games, the usually-poised Blue Devils lost big leads in the second half. On Friday night, it was a 17-point lead that Duke let slip away. On Saturday night, the Atlantic Coast Conference power couldn't hold on to a 19-point advantage.

"Usually, in the first half we've been having our problems," said Foster. "But now we seem to be having them in the second."

"There was no finger-pointing," Foster noted. "Nobody is panicking yet. We still have confidence in ourselves."

It was a high point for St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca, considering the desultory way his team has been playing this year. They came into Saturday night's consolation game with a modest 6-4 record.

"I'm so happy," said Carnesecca. "We've been having our frustrations this year and many problems, but this makes up for it."

Wayne Mckoy and Frank Gilroy led an inspired St. John's rally in the second half as the Redmen slowly cut away all of Duke's huge 42-23 lead. McKoy and Gilroy each scored 20 points apiece for St. John's, while Jim Spanarkel had 22 for Duke.

Bailey put on a wonderful show for the roaring crowd of 16,369 at the Garden, scoring 31 points. The underdog Scarlet Knights lost an 11-point lead, and looked just about dead in the first overtime before staging their comeback.

"This is going to help turn our season around," said Rutgers Coach Tom Young, whose team had lost three of its first eight games before Saturday's night's satisfying victory.

Texas, Tech Grab Spotlight In SWC

By The Associated Press

The Southwest Conference — which has rolled up an impressive 56-31 edge over non-conference opponents — gets down to family feuding this week with Texas Christian and Texas opening league warfare Thursday night at the Longhorns' Super Drum.

On Saturday night, there is a full slate of action with the Texas at Texas Tech match featured at 12:40 p.m. on a regional television network.

Arkansas remained the only unbeaten team in the SWC over the weekend by whipping Memphis State 82-69. The Razorbacks will start SWC play with an 8-0 record if they can control North Texas State Thursday night in Little Rock.

The Aggies earlier had captured the San Francisco Classic and earned third place in the Wildcat Invitational.

Tech shocked nationally-ranked Michigan 87-85 Thursday in the Sun Bowl Classic but fell 58-58 to Clemson Friday night in the finals on a last-second shot.

Baylor grabbed third place in the Las Vegas Holiday Basketball Classic with a 101-73 trouncing of Loyola of Los Angeles.

Tech is now 8-2 while Baylor is 6-4.

Texas' record dipped to 6-3 on the West Coast as the Longhorns bounced the University of the Pacific 70-53 but lost Saturday night to San Francisco 69-48.

Houston, now 7-4, lost both its games in the Pillsbury Holiday Basketball Classic, falling 84-77 to Brigham Young Saturday night.

TCU is 3-5 and Rice 3-6.

LOOKING TOWARD TITLE — Steelers' quarterback Terry Bradshaw looks up as he contemplates next week's AFC championship game with Houston and then the Super Bowl as he talked to newsmen in the locker room following Saturday's victory over the Denver Broncos. (AP Laserphoto)

Bradshaw: 'Incredible'

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Forget the terry cloth. Terry Bradshaw was the real reason the Pittsburgh Steelers wiped up the Denver Broncos.

But they might have been crying towels had not Bradshaw's passing put the Broncos away by a 33-10 score and boosted Pittsburgh into the AFC title game here next Sunday.

"Terry Bradshaw was increbidle," Denver defensive end Lyle Alzado said after Bradshaw hit 16 of 29 passes for 272 yards and a pair of fourth-quarter touchdown bombs to John Stallworth and Lynn Swann.

"It's a travesty if Bradshaw isn't the Most Valuable Player in the AFC. He had a hell of a game," said Denver backup quarterback Norris Weese, who tried in vain to turn the tide.

"It seemed like every third down he hit somebody," said Denver linebacker Bob Swenson.

"I had a lot of action on my side," understated Bronco cornerback Steve Foley, wearing burnt orange after being the prime victim on 10 receptions by Stallworth, a record for an NFL Divisional Playoff game.

And what did Bradshaw have to say about all that?

Well, he praised Stallworth, pointed out that double coverage on Lynn Swann made Stallworth open, and then talked about those "Terrible Towels," a gimmick devised by a Steeler broadcaster especially for the playoffs.

"Wasn't that nice. We had our fans behind us, doggone 'em, bless their hearts," gushed Bradshaw.

"It was just good to have all that yellin', hollerin' and booin' going on. I missed that boy. It's been a few years since we've had that."

The past two years the Steelers were eliminated from the playoffs in road games. Last year, it was a 34-21 first-round loss in Denver to the Broncos, then riding the crest of their "Orange Crush" craze.

By halftime Saturday Pittsburgh led 19-10 with the aid of touchdown runs of one and 18 yards by Franco Harris, who rushed for 105 yards on the game.

"We wanted this game bad, really bad. We just weren't going to be denied," said Harris, who always seem to play his best at playoff time.

Weese, who replaced starting Denver quarterback Craig Morton in the first half, directed the lone Denver touchdown drive in the second quarter. And he had the Broncos moving early in the third quarter.

It was same right hand Greene used in last season's playoff loss to Denver to deliver a punch to the midsection of Denver guard Paul Howard.

That punch, which cost Greene a $5,000 league fine, summed up a year of frustration and misdirection for Greene and the Steelers.

Saturday's block was also pivotal. It kept the Broncos behind 19-10. Then, in the last quarter, Bradshaw hit Stallworth with a 45-yard touchdown pass and Swann with a 38-yarder, both on leaping, circus catches.

Ali Again Ruled Boxing

By The Associated Press

Muhammad Ali began 1978 as heavyweight champion of the all the world and ended it the same way ... at least in the eyes of Ali and his adoring fans, if It was a year in which Leon Spinks upset Ali and had problems with the police, especially traffic police.

It was a year in which first Ken Norton, then Larry Holmes gained heavyweight title recognition from the WBC.

If was a year in which Mike Rossman of Turnersville, N.J., and Marvin Johnson of Indianapolis brought both parts of the light heavyweight championship back to the United States.

It was a year in which Roberto Duran showed he might be just as devastating as a welterweight as he was as a lightweight, a division he has ruled with an iron hand since 1972.

But it also was a year like so many others in boxing. The Fight Game again revolved around Ali.

The 36-year-old Ali refused to talk to the news media for two months leading up to his fight against Spinks, a ban of silence he lifted the day before the fight at Las Vegas. Later, Ali said he didn't talk because people considered the fight a mismatch.

Spinks, the 1976 Olympic light heavyweight champion, was a heavy underdog in what was only his eighth pro fight. But at the end of 15 tough rounds, Spinks was the heavyweight champion on a split decision.

Spinks lost part of the title without lifting a glove. On March 18, the WBC withdrew title recognition from Spinks for failing to sign for a defense against No.1 challenger Norton within a prescribed time and bestowed it on Norton. The World Boxing Association continued to recognize Spinks.

Spinks continued to make news with a series of run-ins with police, most involving the driving of his car. He also was arrested for possession of drugs but that charge was dropped.

On Sept. 15, Spinks defended the WBA title against Ali in New Orleans, and Ali, who worked extremely hard to get into condition this time, was an easy winner by decision.

Meanwhile, Norton who had lost a controversial decision to Ali in 1976, defended against Larry Holmes June 9 at Las Vegas and lost a split decision in a brutally-paced fight which Holmes won by earning the last round on the cards of two of the three officials.

It was a big year for the unbeaten 29-year-old from Easton, Pa. He earned the WBC title shot with a one-sided, 12-round decision over Earnie Shavers and defended the title by knocking out Alfredo Evangelista in the seventh round at Las Vegas Nov. 10.

So, at year's end, there were two heavyweight champions and strong speculation that Ali would retire.

Ali clarified the situation, typically, by saying, "I might fight again. You never know what I might do."

On the same card on which Ali beat Spinks, the 22-year-old Rossman won the WBA light heavyweight championship, stopping Victor Galindez of Argentina in the 13th round in an upset. Rossman defended the title Dec. 5 in Philadelphia, stopping European champion Aldo Traversaro in the seventh round.

Three days before Rossman's first defense, Johnson won the WBA light heavyweight title, stopping Mate Parlov of Yugoslavia in the 10th round at Marsala, Sicily. That meant there were five world champions born in the continental United States — Ali, Holmes, Rossman, Johnson and WBC featherweight king Danny "Little Red" Lopez of Alhambra, Calif. Two other American titleholders were Puerto Ricans Sammy Serra, the WBA junior lightweight champ, and Wilfredo Gomez, the WBC junior featherweight champ who handed Carlos Zarate, the WBC bantamweight king from Mexico, his first loss in 56 fights, stopping him in the fifth round Oct. 20 at San Juan.

One was the middleweight, which changed hands April 22 at San Remo, Italy, where Hugo Corro of Argentina outpointed Rodrigo Valdes of Colombia.

The other was the lightweight. Duran, although the dominant 135-pounder over the past seven years, had lost WBC recognition. He regained universal recognition by knocking out Esteban de Jesus of Puerto Rico Jan. 21 at Las Vegas. On Dec. 8 in New York, the Panamanian showed he was ready to go after the welterweight title when, weighing the welterweight limit of 147, he knocked out Monroe Brooks in the eighth round.

Stanford Nips Georgia 25-22

HOUSTON (AP) — Stanford quarterback Steve Dils threw three touchdowns passes over a 4:30 span of the third quarter Sunday night to rally the Cardinals from a 22-0 deficit to a 25-22 victory over 11th-ranked Georgia in the Bluebonnet Bowl.

Dils tossed touchdown passes of 32 and 14 yards to Ken Margerum and hit Darrin Nelson with a 19-yard touchdown strike during the third quarter spurt.

The Bulldogs still had a chance to win, driving to Stanford's 10-yard line before a fourth down pass by Pyburn fell incomplete with 3:38 left to play.

Georgia, which specialized in frantic fourth-quarter rallies in the regular season, took a 22-0 third quarter lead and appeared to have the game under control before Dils showed the 34,084 Astrodome fans why he is the nation's No. 1 passer.

Georgia looked just as strong to start the third quarter when the Bulldogs drove 75 yards in only six plays with Pyburn running over from the one for the touchdown. Robinson, who had missed his first two extra points of the season earlier in the game, then made good his third try for a 22-0 Georgia lead.

Smallpox Believed Eradicated; No Cases Seen

By WILLIAM J. O'NEILL
NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — When Dr. Donald A. Henderson agreed to head a United Nations drive to wipe out smallpox, a colleague warned him bluntly, "You don't stand a chance."

Three years later, when a massive campaign had rid several countries of the dread disease, a professor from England cautioned him: "Bear in mind that Asia is the ancient home of smallpox. Eradication in South America or Africa is one thing; Asia is quite impossible."

Yet in just a decade the disease that had scourged humanity for thousands of years apparently has been vanquished. The last known smallpox on earth is frozen in a few glass vials held in a dozen labortories around the world.

Kept for an Emergency

The closely guarded virus is being stored so that it can be used to produce vaccine if the disease should reappear.

In the December National Geographic, Dr. Henderson, dean of the School of Hygiene and Public Health at the Johns Hopkins University, recalls the day last April that he received word his efforts had been successful.

"The telegram from Nairobi, Kenya," he writes, "lay on my desk. 'Search complete. No cases discovered. Ali Maow Maalin is world's last known smallpox case.' "

Maalin, a cook in Somalia, contracted smallpox in October, 1977. He was quarantined and health workers vaccinated 161 people who had been in contact with him. Maalin lived, but he wasn't the last victim of the disease.

Last September a British medical photographer, Janet Parker, died of smallpox as a result of a laboratory accident. Her mother also became ill, but survived. There have been no known cases of smallpox since then.

3,100-Year-Old Case

The earliest confirmed smallpox fatality may be Raamses V of Egypt. Examination of his mummy has revealed scars on his face that led experts to conclude smallpox probably killed him about 1160 B.C.

In the centuries separating the pharaoh and the photographer, untold millions succumbed to the disease. Those it didn't kill were permanently scarred, sometimes blinded. The revages of smallpox repeatedly altered history.

"Brought by Cortes to the New World, it eventually killed an estimated 3.5 million Indians and contributed to the collapse of the Inca and Aztec civilizations," Dr. Henderson writes. "Decimation of North American Indians paved the way for European settlement."

Smallpox is transmitted in tiny droplets expelled from the mouth and nose. A victim develops pain and fever within two weeks, then the rash. No treatment exists, and in the past 20 to 30 percent of those afflicted with the severe Asian strain died.

Vaccine Discovered In 1796

In 1796 Dr. Edward Jenner found that milkmaids in England who caught a mild infection called cowpox never got smallpox. He used cowpox to develop the world's first vaccine.

Compulsory vaccination rid many nations of the disease by the 1940s. In 1959 the World Health Organization (WHO) launched a drive to wipe out smallpox entirely. It failed, but the idea was not dropped.

"Despite the enormity of the task," Dr. Henderson says, "the nature of smallpox gave grounds for optimism. Unlike many diseases, smallpox virus has no known reservoir other than man."

Since one person seldom infects more than five others, the disease spreads slowly — and its trail is easily followed by the scarred faces or survivors.

Second Assault

WHO tried again in 1967, under Dr. Henderson's directions.

"That year 131,000 cases were reported," he recalls. "We now estimate there were actually 10 to 15 million cases in 44 countries."

To make the enormous task easier, Wyeth Labortories designed a two-tined needle that could be sterilized and reused. When dipped in vaccine, the tines captured enough fluid between them for a vaccination to be applied with 15 quick jabs to the arm.

Health teams that included teachers and Boy Scouts took to the field. By 1972, smallpox was prevalent in only 19 nations. By 1975, that number was reduced to five; in 1977, to none.

Confirmation to the campaign's success required that a two-year search of every infected area of the world finds no new cases of smallpox anywhere.

U.S. Commends Whaling Reduction

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. representative to the International Whaling Commission has praised the commission's decision to reduce sperm whale quotas by more than 40 percent in the North Pacific.

"The United States would have preferred and strongly urged a complete elimination this year of sperm whaling in the North Pacific," U.S. Delegate Richard A. Frank said. "However, we believe that the substantial reduction voted by the commission will mean the end of pelagic (open sea) whaling in this region by Japan."

The whaling commission cut the North Pacific quota from 6,444 in 1978 to 3,800 in 1979. The commission also called on the countries of the world to prohibit trade in whale products.

George Washington's father died when George was 11.

Refinery Threatens Endangered Eagles

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — The survival of the bald eagle, America's national symbol, could be threatened by a proposed $600 million oil refinery on the Maine coast, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said this week.

In a news release, the agency warned that air pollution, oil spills and development resulting from the Pittston Co. refinery at Eastport were "likely to jeopardize the continued existence of the bald eagle."

Andy Moser, a biologist at the wildlife service's regional office in Newton, Mass., said the new findings could bring an end to the decade-long refinery project, which is still in the planning stage.

"It could halt the project. It won't necessarily halt it, but it definitely could," Moser said in a telephone interview.

The threat to the species is serious, he said, because Maine has the only remaining nesting eagle populations in the Northeast. "Anytime you reduce the distribution of a species, you're threatening its survival," he said.

Officials of Pittston, a major coal producer with corporate headquarters in New York, could not be reached for comment.

The fish and wildlife findings were contained in a "biological opinion" of the refinery project, which was forwarded to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. The opinion was mandated by the Endangered Species Act.

Up to the early part of this century, bald eagles bred along the Maine coast from Portland to Eastport, the agency said. "Today only four breeding pairs remain in the western half of coastal Maine and of these pairs only one has successfully fledged any young in recent years.

"However, in the last several years, the numbers and productivity of the eagle have begun to increase in one area — northeastern coastal Maine from Penobscot Bay to Cobscook Bay," the wildlife service said.

"This is the only location in the northeastern United States where the eagle population has begun to recover. Production of eaglets in the northeastern states outside of Maine remains near zero."

Illness Reductions May Ease Inflation

CHICAGO (AP) — A reduction in accidental deaths and occupational illness would translate into a reduction in the nation's inflation rate, the head of the National Safety Council says.

The current annual inflation rate of more than 6 percent could be cut by 15 percent if accidental deaths and occupational illnesses would decrease by 40 percent, said Council President Vincent Tofany. In a letter to President Carter released Thursday, Tofany said a 40 percent lower accident and illness rate would improve productivity and thus reduce inflation. The nation recorded 104,000 accidental deaths and 10.4 million disabling injuries in 1977.

CHARLEMAGNE RULE WIDE

Charlemagne, or Charles the Great (742-814), became king of the Franks in 768, with his brother Carloman, who died in 771. He ruled France, Germany, parts of Italy, Spain and Austria and enforced Christianity. He was crowned Emperor of the Romans by Pope Leo III in St. Peter's in 800 A.D.

Food Stamp Benefits Due To Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government food stamp benefits that now help feed one out of 14 Americans will be increased today to help needy families cope with rising grocery costs.

But the most dramatic change in 1979 — one that already is taking place in some states — will be the way in which food stamps are allocated to low-income families. A new program also will cut some 1 million persons from food stamp rolls while providing benefits to an additional 3 million poorer persons, a net gain of roughly 2 million.

Since 1964, when Congress made the food stamp program a permanent federal program, recipients have had to spend some of their own money on stamps to get additional free coupons that can be used like money at retail grocery stores.

That requirement was dropped by Congress in the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977, and the Agriculture Department — which administers the food stamp program — has issued regulations to carry out the new law.

Thus, instead of having to buy some stamps with their own money, qualified families will get bonus coupons free of charge, depending on size of households, incomes and other factors, beginning Jan. 1.

The law also includes other provisions that generally are aimed at tightening up on abuses in the food stamp program and making it more easily available to older people and poorer families.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said in a year-end interview that the changes "have gone extremely well" and that he expects most states will put them into effect soon after Jan. 1. He said:

"Everything is on track. I think we're going to see a substantial reduction in errors and in fraud because of the new system."

Department officials estimate that when the new program is in full swing — including simpler rules for computing income requirements and the new method of distributing bonus stamps — it will funnel benefits more carefully to the poorest families and cut off some near the top of the low-income scale.

Under the new program, the maximum income that a four-member family can have to qualify for food stamps is $542 a month, or $6,540 a year. The old program — which will still be in use for a time after Jan. 1 in some areas — will allow four-member families to have net incomes up to $640 a month, or $7,680 a year.

Eight states and Puerto Rico already are using the new system of issuing stamps without requiring families to buy some first. The states are Alaska, Florida, Minnesota, New Mexico, Oregon, Rhode Island, Tennessee and Texas.

The food stamp rules change means that as of Jan. 1, no food stamp recipient will have to put down cash to obtain coupons, even though the state where he is living is still on the old program.

Meanwhile, most Americans getting food stamps — 15.5 million in October, the latest month tabulated — are governed by the old rules requiring them to spend some of their money to get the stamps.

The old rules use a dual standard to determine who is qualified for food stamps. One is that persons getting welfare are automatically eligible. Another involves low-income people who are not on welfare but who may be eligible if their incomes are low enough. Currently, about 48 percent of those getting benefits also get welfare.

The new regulations will do away with the dual standard and put everyone on the same footing based on income — regardless of sources — and on assets, family size and other guidelines.

Low-income persons periodically must be recertified as to their eligibility. As these persons apply for new certification, the new formula for food stamp allocation will be used.

But the department says that until they are recertified, these recipients will continue getting monthly food stamp allocations based on the old formula — with the difference that beginning Jan. 1, they will not have to pay any money for them.

Federal costs of the food stamp program totaled about $5.5 billion in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30 and tentatively have been estimated at around $6.1 billion in the current budget year.

One factor in the rising costs is that food stamp allocations are adjusted twice a year to offset increases in grocery prices. Because of this feature, to continue under the new rules, a family of four will have its monthly food stamp allocation increased 5.2 percent on Jan. 1 under the old system and slightly less under the new one.

—A four-member household technically is eligible for $192 in food stamps a month, compared to $182 now. But now it has to pay for some of its stamps. Beginning Jan. 1, no payment will be required.

—If the family has an income of $250 a month after allowing deductions for child care, high shelter costs and other expenses, it would have had to pay $71 to get $192 in stamps, a free bonus of $121. After Jan. 1, it will just get the free bonuses.

—The maximum adjusted income a four-member family can have and qualify for stamps under the old law will be $640 a month.

Now, here is how it will work for persons certified under the new system:

—A new method of computing net incomes will be used to determine eligibility. Instead of more than a dozen items now being used, it will allow only a limited amount of child-care and high shelter costs to be deducted from gross income, along with a standard $60 deduction for all families and a special deduction for workers.

—The maximum in monthly food stamps that a family can get if it has no net income is $191. This is $1 less than the old program because of a change in rounding off the cost of a "thrifty food" plan used by the Agriculture Department to compute allocations.

—If a family of four has an adjusted net income of $250 a month after using its deductions, it will get free stamps worth $116 a month without spending anything.

That's $5 less in bonus stamps than with the old plan because the government expects families to spend more of their own money on food. The discrepancy will end once all states convert to the new system.

Suggestions Readied On Mopeds' Use

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the growing popularity of mopeds, the government is preparing some suggested regulations which it will make available to states.

The small motorized bicycles are regulated in some states and not in others, so some standardized rules are being drawn by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

The proposals are still on the drawing board and suggestions and comments are welcome. Interested persons may write to Docket Number 75-29, Notice 3, Room 5108, Nassif Building, National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, Washington, D.C., 20590.

—Each moped should be registered and its operation licensed.

— Accident reporting data should be compiled so that moped accidents can be clearly identified.

— Liability insurance or financial responsibility requirements should be applied to moped operators.

— Moped drivers should be tested and licensed. The minimum age for licensing drivers should be the same as for automobiles.

— Information on moped safety should be included in driver education courses and highway safety and public information programs.

— Safety helmets should be required.

— Mopeds should never be allowed on high-speed, limited-access highways. Consideration should be given to allowing mopeds to use improved shoulders on certain roads when low-speed alternative routes are not available.

'78 CALLED BAD BUSINESS YEAR

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the National Business League, an organization for minority businesses, says 1978 was a disappointing year not only for the minority private sector but for the American economy as well. "Prospects for 1979 are even dimmer, with increased inflation a certainty and recession a growing and distinct possibility," Berkeley G. Burrell said in a year-end statement.

Police Alarmed By Realistic 'Toys'

By TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON (NEA) — As usual, Santa left an assortment of merry-making weapons under the Christmas tree of America this year: cap guns, snap guns, laser beams and death rays. What's more, merchandisers say the toy pistols and rifles are among the most faithfully authentic ever created.

Indeed, in some cases the fun guns cannot be distinguished from the real thing. Over the holidays, airgun manufacturers sold untold thousands of make-believe arms, which salesmen insist, and the police ruefully agree, look real, feel real, act real — and may in point to fact be real.

The Crossman company, for instance, advertises that its .177 caliber pellet pistol is so much like a .38 caliber revolver that "You won't believe it's an airgun." The company says the six-shot automatic are "the right weight, precisely balanced" and "they perform as beautifully as they look."

Perform? Crossman's airguns fire hollow projectiles through steel barrels at speeds that can penetrate flesh. Police officers say other pellet guns, with pump action, may attain muzzle velocities equal to that of real (small) handguns. They are hardly toys, therefore, they are deadly arms. And here is the rub of the evermore authentic toy weapons appearing on the market. They can fire, they can injure, and they look absolutely genuine — but they continue to be classified as playthings. In most areas, police say, anyone of any age can buy the guns, with no questions asked.

Federal regulations regarding the sale and use of guns refer only to arms that shoot by explosion. Hence airguns, which use air or air cartridges for energy, are exempt. Some jurisdictions do restrict the sale of airguns to minors, but that rarely prevents young people from getting them as gifts.

So it is, with kids from eight to 18 now carrying around what Crosman calls "unbelievable authentic" airguns, police report an increase in the use of the weapons for crime. Since the guns are unrestricted, police say they are used by some juveniles as the ultimately accessible Saturday night special.

In Chicago, recently, police says a young man held up a late night store, and threatened to kill the counter clerk. The robber only had a pellet pistol, which he fired at dry goods, but the clerk told officers afterwards that he was so terrified by the weapon that he lay on the floor and cried.

There is of course nothing new about the use of airguns in crime. Federal firearms officers say thugs have even used beebee rifles and antique replicas to victimize people. But the realism of today's models is seductive, officers add, and they may thus be encouraging youngsters to take a chance.

This encouragement is condemned by most police. Glen King, director of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, says manufacturers should be ashamed: "They know the potential of these guns. What they are doing, in fact, is making weapons that evade the existing laws regarding weapons."

Another observer, Howard Criswell of the Treasury Department, says authentic fun guns are "just another case of industry leading kids down the primrose path." Last year, Criswell recalls, a brewer began marketing "baby beer" (1 percent alcohol), "and before that it was candy cigarettes."

Not that there isn't a legitimate use for airguns, authorities add. Manufacturers say the weapons are designed to be beneficial for children. The idea is that a lad who learns to handle an airgun will be picking up habits of safety and responsibility that "will be valuable when he owns real guns."

On the other hand, airgun responsibility is often more hope than fact. Jack Scheli, a Washington area gun dealer, says he dreads to see parents buy the fun guns for children: "The sad thing is that guns will be treated like toys, and many parents will not bother with any kind of supervision."

Actually, society is also not bothering to supervise the airguns. Though the proliferation of steel weapons has been regulated by law, airguns have not. "We've failed on this point," admits David Steinberg of the National Council of Responsible Firearm Control. "We should be more concerned."

Steinberg says that airgun concern is already in force in other nations. In Japan, for one place, the barrels of all toy guns must be painted yellow. This doesn't help much if someone wants to use a pellet pistol in a hold up, but the Japanese say there are time when the color code is helpful.

Girl's Death Shows Meaning Of Giving

HOUSTON (AP) — This holiday season is special to a young Ohio girl who learned, through the death of her best friend, what the gift of life means to those who give, as well as those who receive.

In a poignant letter, 18-year-old Betty told of her friend Jean, who was killed in an automobile accident three months ago.

Jean had suffered a rare eye disease throughout her short life. In the brief time before she died, she asked that her eyes be donated to research in finding a cure for the disease.

Through the help of the Living Bank, an international organ donor registry headquartered in Houston, Jean was able to donate not only her eyes, but also her heart and kidneys.

"Jean taught me so much when she died," Betty said in her letter. "I often think of Jean's courage in facing her death, even if it happened so fast, and I'm especially proud of her in giving and donating after life.

"She taught me that giving unselfishly doesn't have to end when one dies," Betty continued. "I'd like to receive a donor card so that, whenever my turn comes to meet my friend Jean, I too can help another in life when I leave."

Although the names of the girls are fictitious, the letter is real — one of 72,000 sent during 1978 to the Living Bank, which celebrated its tenth anniversary in August.

"It takes something that touches the heartstrings of people to make them understand what it means to donate an organ," Lorraine Gress, executive director of the Living Bank, said in an interview.

"We are dedicated to educating the public, to showing them that through organ donation, they can give a gift after life if they want to," she said.

The executive director said her organization, which has about 100,000 members in all 50 states and 57 countries, also maintains a 24-hour telephone referral service and a computerized registry of its members.

"Unlike the Eye Bank or the kidney center, we are not involved in the medical aspect of organ donations," she said. "We are concerned with the donor and the donor's family, and with connecting the donation with the need as quickly as we can, if we can.

"But that's not always possible," she added. "When dealing with organ donations, you're in a race against time, and you don't always win."

The Living Bank is a non-profit organization, she said, financed through contributions, grants and an endowment from the Floyd L. Karsten Jr. Foundation.

"There are thousands and thousands of people dying from kidney disease and suffering from blindness who are on long waiting lists for the donated organs that can return them to a normal life," she said.

Air Force Checks Crashing Eagles

RAMSTEIN, West Germany (AP) — The U.S. Air Force has ordered an immediate review of maintenance procedures for its F-15 Eagle following nine crashes of the new fighters in recent months.

Gen. John W. Pauly, commander of the Air Force's European forces, ordered the review Friday following the latest crash of an F-15 near Daun, West Germany, on Thursday.

A spokesman said experts from the Pauly's headquarters here and the United States will inspect maintenance control and technical procedures at the 36th Tactical Fighter Wing at Bitburg Air Base, West Germany.

Five of the planes that have crashed since last April were from that unit, the spokesman, Lt. Col. Ron Sherman, said.

During the review, most of these fighters based in Europe will operate at a step lower than maximum power, Sherman said.

Pauly has also ordered a speed up in modification of the F-15's jet fuel starter system.

"The modifications ... will make airborne restarts of the aircraft's engines easier by increasing engine revolutions per minute independent of the plane's airspeed," Sherman said.

The Air Force says there is no single cause for the crashes, and there are no discernible trends which might have caused them.

Of the nine F-15 losses world-wide, four were attributed to pilot errors, three to mechanical problems and two are still being investigated.

One pilot was killed in a crash of an F-15 last July 6 near the spot where the ninth fighter went down. The dead pilot was 1st Lt. Michael J. Mark,25, of Roy, Utah, the Air Force said.

According to Sherman, the F-15 loss rate of 6.6 per 100,000 flying hours is the lowest of all fighter aircraft during the break-in period of a new model.

Deadly Theater Fire Brought Improved Construction Codes

CHICAGO (AP) — The match fell from the ashtray onto the carpet, and as they did once before, flames ate their way along ornate corridor and wall.

As smoke slowly filled the Oriental Theater last June 4, moviegoers inside quickly realized something was wrong.

This time, the 2,000 people inside escaped safely and the building was saved. But 75 years ago Saturday, 600 people died when they tried to flee a fire that gutted a theater that stood on the same spot — the famed, supposedly fireproof Iroquois.

"Since the Iroquois Theater fire, in the city of Chicago, we have had only one fatality in a theater. Literally millions of persons have sat through thousands of performances in theaters that have been altered to meet codes that were passed as a consequence of the Iroquois fire."

The same can be said for hundreds of theaters around the country.

The Iroquois was a proud, 38-day-old addition to Chicago's Loop area on Dec. 30, 1903, when the late Eddie Foy brought his extravaganza "Mr. Blue Beard" to its stage. The show began, and he was making up backstage for his appearance.

A standing-room-only crowd — about 1,900 people, many of them children — packed the auditorium. So prized were tickets that Foy's son Bryan, then 4, could not get one. He had to watch from backstage.

At 3:15 p.m., Frank Holland and his seven Hussars were singing "Let Us Swear by the Pale Moonlight." Unseen by the audience, a strip of gauze hanging from the draperies was blown onto a sputtering, open arc light at the right side of the stage.

Instantly, the strip ignited. A stagehand tried to kill the flame with a fire extinguisher, but failed. Quickly, the fire spread to the draperies, then up to the ceiling and across the stage.

Foy, his face halfway in makeup, rushed to the stage and faced the audience with flaming embers falling around him, trying to calm the crowd.

"See?" he called out, catching one of the embers. "I'm a pretty good catcher." Then, turning to the orchestra, he ordered, "For God's sake, play, play, play and keep on playing!"

But by then, the spectators had run from their seats in panic. The asbestos curtain, which was designed to prevent the spread of flames, jammed and would not close. Someone opened the back stage door, and the draft that gushed in swelled the fire into a pillar of flame that filled the interior.

The screaming mob inside found many theater doors locked. Others opened only inward, and couldn't be used because people crushed against them, terrified.

Some people reached fire escapes, and others jumped from windows. But when firemen finally were able to see the charred interior, they found 575 bodies — 200 piled dead on the staircase, lying six to 10 deep around exits, About two dozen others died of their injuries during the next two weeks.

The final death count was 602 — "the most serious theater fire of modern times," according to a National Fire Protection Association assessment 25 years ago.

No one was ever punished for the tragedy, though the theater's managers and several city officials were indicted. Civil suits dragged out for years.

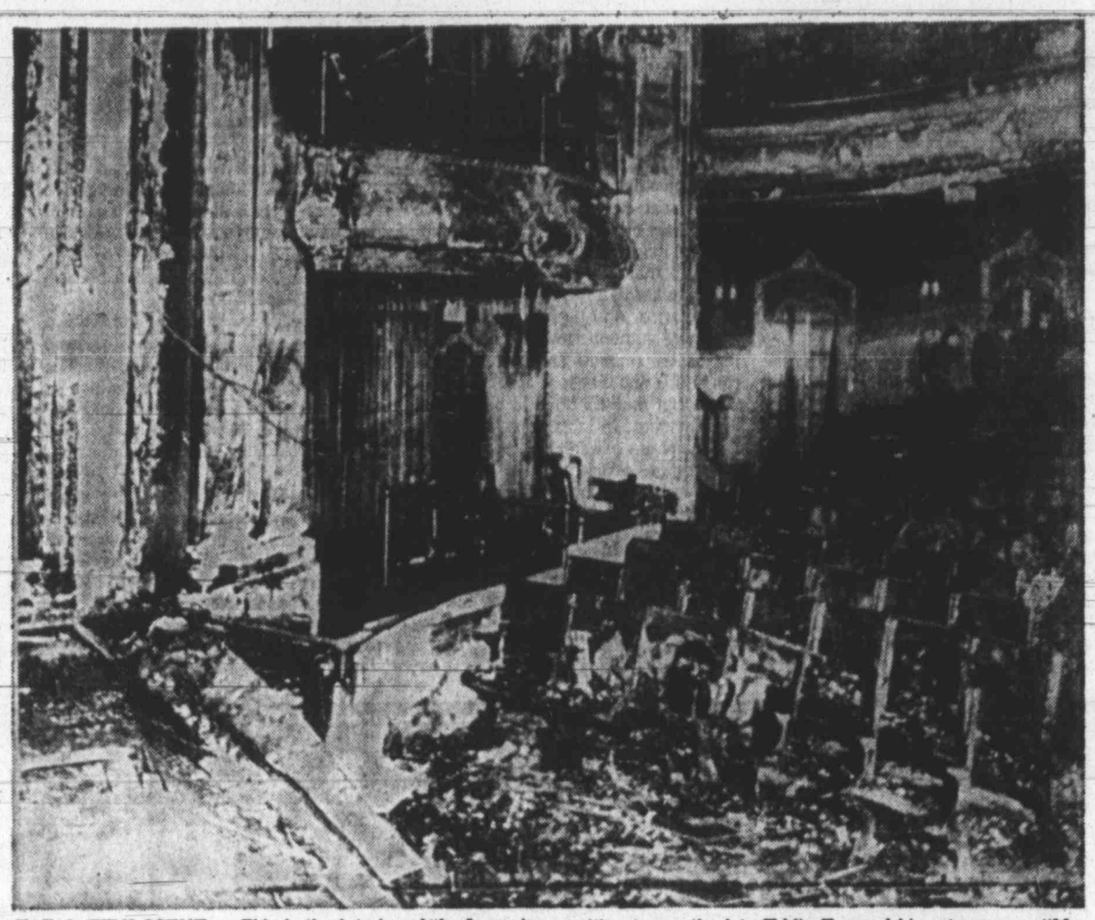

The disaster touched off a theater safety movement, and regulations that came into general use as a consequence included use of quick-opening vents over stages and automatic sprinklers, reinforced asbestos or metal fire curtains, flame-resistant scenery, emergency lighting systems and exit doors clearly marked and opening outward.

These major safety precautions were built into the Oriental Theater, a 3,100-seat house which opened on the Iroquois site in 1926. At first, the Oriental was a posh addition to the Loop theater district and last September its architecture earned it a place in the National Register of Historic Places.

It is still ornate, with a heavily decorated entryway and rich appointments. But now it is surrounded by a deteriorating part of the downtown business district, and it shows mostly tawdry Grade B films. The balcony remains closed because of the June fire.

Memories of the Iroquois have faded. "Most people who come here don't know what happened or couldn't care less," says Dan Moore, a theater employee. Isaac Levy, a 91-year-old doorman and ticket salesman, adds: "It just never comes up. Oh, once in a great while some old-timer comes in and can remember that far back."

But there is a legacy, of sorts. After the fire last June, the patrons remained very much alive — so much so that they broke the ticket booth window demanding their money back.

FATAL FIRE SCENE — This is the interior of the Iroquois Theater in Chicago taken in 1903 shortly after a fire swept the theater on December when the house was filled with customers waiting to see the late Eddie Foy and his extravaganza "Mr. Blue Beard" on the ornate stage. The death toll was 602 persons who lost their lives from heat and smoke. (AP Laserphoto)

Postal Service Limits Refusals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service is proposng to place some limits on what mail can be refused.

Under current rules "refused" can be marked on mail and then returned to the post office without payment of postage for its return.

However, there have been instances, particularly in propositions and contests, of refusal of mail that had been solicited. This sometimes occurs, officials said, when a limited number of tickets or other items are offered to persons who write in. After the supply has been exhausted, the remaining letters are refused and returned to postal authorities.

The Postal Service wants to change the rule to prohibit this, by no longer allowing mail which has been solicited to be refused. Unsolicited mail could still be rejected.

The proposed change is open for comments from the public until Jan. 10 and interested persons should write to the Director, Office of Mail Classification, Rates and Classification Department, U.S. Postal Service, 475 L'Enfant Plaza, West, SW, Washington, D.C., 20260.

CONSUMER SUGGESTION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a shopping suggestion from the federal Office of Consumer Affairs: "If a supermarket is out of an advertised special, the store should issue you a rain check. If your store has neither the special nor the rain check, you should complain, and contact the Federal Trade Commission regional office in your area, if necessary."

Country, Western Song Titles Eyed

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Imagine it's your 25th wedding anniversary. You're ensconced in a cozy corner of a posh restaurant. Fine wine sits invitingly on the table. A candlelight flickers. Your spouse hands you this card:

"You're the reason our kids are ugly."

There were some other dandies in 1978, but nothing else to rival the all-time twin titans, "May the Bird of Paradise Fly Up Your Nose" and "Drop Kick Me Jesus (Through the Goalpost of Life)."

Not all the country music songs this year were so, ah, contemptuous of the opposite sex. Brian Collins evened the score with "Old Flames Can't Hold a Candle to You."

Liquor inspired the alcoholic acclaim of "The Power of Positive Drinking" by Mickey Gilley, and "Teardrops in My Tequila" by Paul Craft.

Looking upward, song titles with religious overtones hit the charts, too, including this trinity: "What Time Do You Have to be Back to Heaven" by Razzy Bailey, "I'd Like to See Jesus (On The Midnight Special)" by Tammy Wynette and "Bob's Got a Swing Band in Heaven" by Red Steagall.

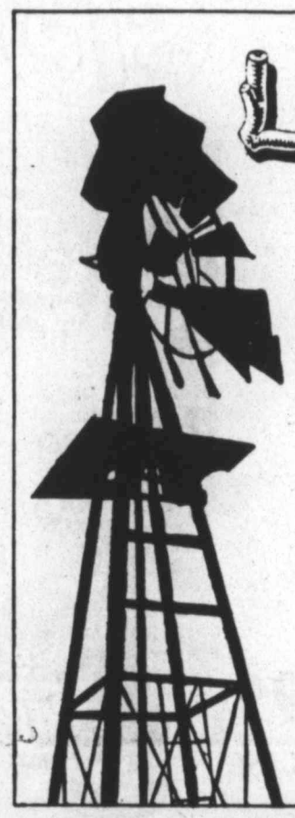

Plunging further into the titles, you can find "Divers Do It Deeper" by David Allan Coe.

Cowboys have always been revered in country music, but this year they were shocked by this campfire crusade — "Mamas, Don't Let Your Babies Grow Up to be Cowboys" — by Waylon Jennings and Willie Nelson.

Disco is the rage of rock 'n' roll, and Billy Stack kept country music in step with "Boogiewoogieitis."

There were, of course, meditative titles like "You're A Violin That's Never Been Played" by Billy Walker, "The Price of Borrowed Love Is Just Too High" by Charlotte Hunt and "The Weeds Outlived the Roses" by Darrell McCall.

Music Confusion Reigns

By ROB PATTERSON

The musical year of 1978 ends as it began — mired in confusion.

One one hand we have the pessimists' view:

Rock at 25 faces anarchy from the young punks, or death by boogie boredom from some of the sludge on FM radio. Country has sold out to uptown, plastic glitter. Disco has sold the soul from black music and reduced dance music to a solitary thumping beat. Jazz is beginning to sound like all-too-soothing Muzak or fusion funk that begins, goes and ends nowhere.

But the optimists will counter:

Punk has brought back energy to rock. The country "outlaws" still cut to the bone of American life. Disco and "Saturday Night Fever" have illuminated the escapist urges of our culture, and the importance of music in that escape. Jazz is freer and more inventive than ever, despite commercial success.

The truth lies somewhere in between, and as always, there is music that keeps alive the energy excitement and imagination that makes for great and meaningful art.

Even the arbitrary choice of 10 "best" albums gives an idea of the shifting winds in music this year. Those albums are, in no particular order:

Who Are You — The Who — Playing rock's mind to the Stone's body, the Who keep their music youthful, but still thoughtful and changing.

Heaven Tonight — Cheap Trick — Heir apparent to the above groups, making energetic, humorous and youthful rock for teenagers of all ages.

Comes a Time — Neil Young — Neil ages gracefully, beautifully and thoughtfully.

Darkness On The Edge of Town — Bruce Springsteen — Bruce comes of age and copes with fame gracefully ... and powerfully.

Peter Gabriell — Peter Gabriell — Rock's only remaining true "progressive" rocker scores another masterpiece with the same title as last year's.

Misfits — The Kinks — If only for being there so long, and still smiling through the tears.

Of course any top 10 ignores certain achievements that must be heralded, such as those LPs just bubbling under, like: Pure Pop For Now People — Nick Lowe; The Cars; Stranger In Town — Bob Seger; Wavelength — Van Morrison.

COMEBACK OF THE YEAR — Luxury You Can Afford — Joe Cocker; Stealin' Home — Ian Matthews.

CAME BACK AND SHOULDN'T HAVE — Yes and Emerson, Lake & Palmer.

BEST LIVE ACTS — Bruce Springteen; Neil Young; Rockpile (Dave Edmunds and Nick Lowe.)

AUSPICIOUS COUNTRY ALBUMS — Ain't Living Long Like This — Rodney Crowell (country-rock and Texas country categories); Sleeper Wherever I Fall — Bobby Bare (commercial country); Jaded Virgin — Marshall Chapman (female country).

REDISCOVERY OF THE YEAR — Buddy Holly.

BEST FAD THOUGHT DEAD BUT STILL VERY ALIVE — Reggae, as evidenced by superb new records by Peter Tosh; Bob Marley; and Jimmy Cliff.

BEST MAJOR INVESTMENT — The Sun Bear Concerts — A 12 record set by Keith Jarrett.

WORST MINOR INVESTMENT — Thoroughfare Gap — Stephen Stills, or, how a once-good artist is mistaken for being alive while actually quite dead.

WORST MAJOR INVESTMENT — The Sgt. Pepper Soundtrack (or movie, for that matter).

UGLIEST SELL OUT — Bob Dylan.

BEST UNSIGNED BAND — NRBQ.

BANDS WE COULD DO WITHOUT — Foreigner; Kansas; Styx; The Village People; Kiss; Rush; Stars; and yes, even Devo.

And in closing:

MY BRIGHTEST HOPE — Rockpile, the collaboration between Dave Edmunds' pure rock and Nick Lowe's pure pop. The result in a stirring, rocking, tight-as-a-steel-corset four-piece rock 'n' roll band, whose relentless energy and inspiration are unequaled. They offer no-frills rock with snapping drums, throbbing bass and two searing guitarists.

And theirs is the message for 1979 — simplicity. Rock 'n' roll is the prototypical modern music, seething with the energy and passion of today's life.

Count Basie, Though 74, Plans To Retire 'When I Get Old'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Count Basie, still full of life at 74, has been traveling and leading a big band for 40 years, and he says he doesn't plan to stop until he gets old.

"As long as I get carfare home and room rent I'll be around, one way or another, because this is my life. I enjoy it or I wouldn't be doing it," he said in an interview.

At an age when many people are in the rocking chair, Basie still keeps his 17-piece band on a traveling schedule that would wear out a man half his age.

Take a typical two-week itinerary: Los Angeles to Rock Hill, S.C., to Decatur, Ala., to New Orleans to Atlanta to Little Rock to Skokie, Ill., to Galveston — all for one-night stands.

"We'll work seven or eight weeks, then take off for two or three weeks. That's not too bad," Basie said. His permanent home is in the Bahamas.

Except for a brief period in the early 1950s, Basie has had a big band continuously since about 1938, when he was discovered by John Hammond while playing in Kansas City.

It's an amazing record of longevity for any kind of band, and Basie says he can't explain it.

"We just moved together and enjoyed one another," he said. "It's a family. It's always been that way."

The Basie band has survived and flourished without radical changes in its style — blasting ensembles; simple, hummable riffs; exciting solos, and the light, infectious tinkling of the Count at the piano.

Basie has been called the world's most economical piano player, one who can get more out of two fingers than others can with 10.

In New Orleans, as he was about to be presented an official proclamation from the city, a television cameraman asked if he could film Basie on a piano solo for about 30 seconds.

"I can't do that," Basie said. "I never play that long."

"What about maybe 10 seconds?" the cameraman pleaded.

"Well, okay," Basie deadpanned. "But 10 seconds is a long time!"

Basie, a short, pudgy man with big, soft eyes that twinkle when he speaks, doesn't waste much motion directing his band either. A nod, a shrug or a three-note chord on his piano usually is all he needs to keep the band running like a well-oiled machine.

The Count is optimistic about the future of jazz, blues and big bands.

"I never did think it was dead," he said. "I knew it was going to come back. I knew jazz in some form would always be here.

"The young people today are interested, and I think that's wonderful. They know what's going down, and they're good musicians, they're playing good jazz. And they're beginning to like the blues."

Suggestions Offered For Snow Driving

WASHINGTON (AP) — With snow now a reality in a good portion of the country, the Tire Industry Council has some tips that could ease some of the problems encountered in driving through the white menace.

Malcolm R. Lovell Jr., chairman of the council, said that in most vehicles the rear wheels are still the place for the special tires, but the front-wheel drive models are becoming more common.

•Never reduce tire pressures to increase traction on ice or mud. It doesn't work and can lead to excessive heat buildup which may damage the tires.

•Avoid free spinning wheels. When one wheel is stuck and the other isn't, the free wheel on an axle with a conventional differential gear spins at twice the speed shown on the speedometer. This can cause a tire to explode.

•Check with the state police or highway patrol to determine whether studded tires are allowed in your state. Some states ban them, while others have time limits.

•If you use snow tires, store your regular tires on their sides in a cool, dry place. Keep them away from the sunshine and electric motors, which produce ozone, which damages rubber. Stack white sidewalls facing each other to help keep them clean, and mark wheel position on radials so you can put them back on the same wheel.

Sales Calendar Recommended In 1979

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The bills of Christmas past may still be with us, but it's time to start thinking about spending again.

The end of the holiday season brings the start of the January sales. And those sales are just the beginning of a calendar of seasonal specials that can save you money if you know what to look for.

Clearance sales are designed to move discontinued goods, high-style fashion merchandise or out-of-season items. You can save as much as 50 percent, but you must be careful. A bright purple miniskirt you will never wear is no bargain, no matter what the price.

Annual sales offer standard stock at reduced prices, usually for a very limited period of time. Savings vary from 10 percent to 15 percent. This is your chance to pick up items you've always wanted, but couldn't afford. Make sure you have some idea of regular prices so you can tell whether a "special" is really a good buy.

Seasonal sales occur at regular times each year. Individual stores have their own schedules, but advisers from Citibank have come up with a rough guide of what to look for when.

Start by drawing up your personal spending calendar. Mark down birthdays, anniversaries, graduations and other occasions for which you will need gifts in 1979. Make a note of medical and dental checkups, car tune-ups, school vacations and long weekends. Sports gear, camping equipment and other leisure-time items will be more expensive if you wait until peak season to buy. Here is a month-by-month look at some seasonal bargains:

JANUARY: Stores traditionally have post-holiday and inventory sales as well as white sales during the first month of the year. You should be able to find toys, books, Christmas wrapping and decorations, drugs, clothing, furniture, appliances and bicycles. Hams and holiday luxury foods also may be good buys.

FEBRUARY: Washington's and Lincoln's birthday sales offer a wide range of goods, but you may find a smaller selection than you did in January. Look for sports equipment, curtains, hosiery, storm windows and air conditioners. Order bulbs for spring flowers.

MARCH: You should find washers, dryers, winter coats, boys' and girls' shoes, luggage and ski equipment on sale. Wait until after Easter — April 14 — to buy spring clothes. If you can take an early vacation, consider ski resorts; rates start to drop in March.

APRIL: Post-Easter sales feature children's clothes, lingerie, infant's wear, outdoor paints and garden items as well as spring fashions. Look for good buys on hams after the middle of the month.

JUNE: You'll find Father's Day specials, plus supermarket sales of dairy products and frozen foods. Look for sportswear, men's wear, floor coverings, bedding, building materials and tires. Check for outdoor furniture and playthings after the middle of the month.

JULY: Watch for summer clearances, fur sales and Fourth-of-July specials on summer clothes, sportswear, bathing suits, stereo equipment, air conditioners, freezers, outdoor furniture, fuel oil, firewood and storm windows.

AUGUST: Final clearances on summer clothes can yield savings of up to 50 percent. Car sales begin in August. Other bargain items include linens, back-to-school items, fur coats, housewares and furniture.

SEPTEMBER: Keep an eye out for Labor Day sales and specials on home-improvement products, dishwashers, freezers, bicycles and car batteries. Watch for season-ticket offers for entertainment events.

OCTOBER: Columbus Day sales feature specials on coats. You also should find good buys on floor coverings, electric blankets, silverware, school clothes and supplies and fishing equipment. Start shopping now for holiday gifts.

NOVEMBER: Veterans Day and Thankgiving sales highlight November. You'll find fall clothing, fabrics, quilts, water heaters, bicycles, wines and liquors and special offers on holiday items.

DECEMBER: This is the most expensive month of the year and the one in which the stores do the most business. Sales are few and far between, though some larger stores have begun pre-Christmas sales that seemed successful this year.

Consumer Gripes Against Airlines Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Delta Airlines posted the lowest complaint average for September, a month in which the total number of consumer complaints against airlines increased over the same month last year, according to the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Delta recorded only 0.7 complaints per 100,000 passengers during the month, best of the nation's major scheduled airlines.

Overall, consumer complaints against the airlines were up 14 percent in September from the same month last year, while the number of people flying was up 16 percent.

Through the first nine months of 1978 the CAB recorded 17,937 complaints against airlines, compared with 13,073 in the same period a year ago.

Consumers who are unable to resolve a problem with an airline can contact the CAB Bureau of Consumer Protection, Washington, D.C. 20428.

Following Delta, the airlines with the lowest consumer complaints are Hawaiian, 1.18 complaints per 100,000 passengers; Ozark, 1.72; Aloha, 1.97 and North Central, 2.77.

The five airlines with the most complaints per 100,000 passengers are Pan American, 15.25; Frontier, 9.77; Trans World, 7.51; National, 6.20 and Piedmont, 5.86.

Businesses Asked To Pay Tax Early

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Franklin County businesses, including large corporations, will pay more than $5 million in 1978 property taxes this week to help financially troubled public schools. The taxes aren't due until Feb. 12.

County Treasurer Dana Rinehart asked businesses to make the payments last week after banks refused to loan the Columbus school district $18 million to meet its payroll. Rinehart said Tuesday that Columbia Gas of Ohio had paid $742,000, and Ohio Bell and Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric pledged a total of $4.3 million. "There are a lot of people out there who want to help ...," he said.

'Bionic Woman' Lindsay Wagner Makes Television Film Debut

By JERRY BUCK

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Lindsay Wagner makes her television movie debut as a doctor battling backwoods superstitions in "The Incredible Journey of Doctor Meg Laurel" on CBS.

Miss Wagner, who starred in two theatrical films, her own special and for three years as "The Bionic Woman," said she'd never before had time for a TV movie.

"I was just too busy with the series," she said, throwing her long blonde hair back over her shoulders. She won an Emmy last year as best lead actress in a series. "I didn't have time. And there weren't that many things that excited me."

She said "Incredible Journey" was brought to her when it was still in story form.

"They thought it might interest me, and it did," she said. "The character was interesting, yes, but the story expresses a growth in an old woman and in a young woman. It represented something personal to me, the growth of a certain element of our society, which has to do with understanding yourself and your feelings.

"I'm very into holistic medicine, and it's something that needs to be expressed more and more. There is a power within to heal ourselves."

The movie also stars Academy Award-winner Jane Wyman, who plays an indomitable mountain medicine practitioner of the 1920s named Granny Arrowroot. Guest stars are Andrew Duggan, Gary Lockwood, Brock Peters, John Reilly, Charles Tyner and James Woods.

The film, which airs Tuesday on CBS, was not available for preview.

Miss Wagner plays a happily married Boston physician whose conscience compels her to abandon her husband and return to a poor Virginia orphanage to repay the love and inspiration given her by its director, played by Dorothy McGuire. She finds the orphanage empty and journeys into the Blue Ridge Mountains and broke though the cultural barrier. The movie was filmed entirely on location in and around Nevada City, in Northern California.

There, her "new-fangled" medicine comes into conflict with the folk medicine of Granny Arrowroot. She remembers a bad experience with a folk doctor at the orphanage. She also finds the mountain people hostile and distrustful.

"My character represents the trained medical doctor and the rigid belief that they have all the answers," Miss Wagner said. "She learns from Granny Arrowroot first of all that if someone doesn't want to be healed they won't be healed.

"Through the course of the story they start to open up to each other and accept each other's ideas. They eventually start a clinic using both of their beliefs in medicine."

She said the story was loosely based on a real midwife who went into the mountains and broke though the cultural barrier. The movie was filmed entirely on location in and around Nevada City, in Northern California.

"I wanted to go to Oregon or some place that looked more like Appalachia," Miss Wagner said. As a teen-ager she lived in Oregon.

"They did a lot of spraying to make it look green, but it was very dry. If you see all those pines and manzanitas it's a dead giveaway."

Miss Wagner said that after three years, "it was fine with me" that "The Bionic Woman" was canceled.

"It gives me more freedom," she said. "I don't want to do another series. It's too restrictive. You can't possibly get the quality I like. You don't have the time to develop quality. But it is amazing that so many series do turn out so well.

"They asked me to 'Dr. Laurel' as a series, but I said no. They're doing 'Paper Chase' without me."

In the movie "Paper Chase" she played Professor Kingsfield's daughter. She also starred in the movie "Two People."

Inflation Library Ready For Public

WASHINGTON (AP) — Want to learn more about inflation? A visit to the Library of Congress provides a variety of some 1,100 volumes on the economic nuisance that has been accorded much attention this year.

There's a book on inflation to suit virtually every intellectual demand, including such titles as "Our Tragic Inflation Orgy," "The Inflation Swindle" and "Hydra-Headed Monster."

LINDSAY WAGNER, THE MEDICAL DOCTOR — Lindsay Wagner makes her debut as a doctor battling backwoods superstitions in "The Incredible Journey of Doctor Meg Laurel." Miss Wagner, who has starred in two theatrical films, her own special and for three years as "The Bionic Woman," said she never before had time for a TV movie. The film will air Tuesday on CBS.
