In a talk with Eddie Bras, a member of the local group, Sanderson explained that the program was designed to help farmers by providing them with a guaranteed market for their grain.

Under the 1965 program growers may participate by diverting at least 20 percent of their feed-grain base acreage and devoting it to conservation or they may substitute crops upon request with a reduction in diversion payments.

Group Passes On Resolution

Colorado City Classroom Teachers Assn. voted unanimously to support the teacher pay raise proposal sponsored by the Texas State Teachers Assn.

Do not make the mistake of thinking that the measure during the business session of the group's banquet Monday night in Primary School Cafeteria. His motion won immediate and unanimous approval from the teachers present.

Sanderson spoke for the evening affair was Charles E. Sanderson of Austin who is the executive secretary-treasurer of the Texas Classroom Teachers Assn.

During the course of his talk Sanderson hit on subjects of interest to school personnel on the national, state and local levels.

The meeting was attended by local teachers having administrators and school trustees as their guests.

Agency Figures Sanderson told the group that the latest figures published by the Texas Education Agency revealed that 98.34 percent of Texas teachers have a bachelor's degree, or higher on their educational record. He further explained that 37 percent had their master's degree.

Sanderson spoke in opposition to the proposal by the Texas Manufacturers Assn. to grant pay raises for teachers on the basis of merit. The position of merit pay raises has been much opposed in the Governor's Plan for the teacher pay raises.

Teacher Supply "We must be greatly concerned about the teacher supply in Texas," Sanderson told the audience.

He explained that 500 new teachers were needed each year to supply new classrooms with instructors. Also, he said about 5500 new teachers were needed annually to replace instructors retiring or going into other fields of endeavor.

Keep Standards High Sanderson told the group that some factions wanted to fill the need for more teachers by lowering standards in the field of teacher education.

In regard to lowering the standard, Sanderson commented, "We need better teachers every year and lowering standards for certification won't help the problem."

Anglers Urged To Buy Permit

Idea of catching fish with, reside or own; and persons out getting caught without fishing in the county of their a license is a favorite selling point nowadays by J. B. Phillips, coordinator of law enforcement of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

The fishing license, for residents and non-residents alike, costs only $2.15. If caught without one, a fisherman can expect to pay fines ten times as much as the cost of the license.

A fishing license is required of everyone who fishes in Texas with only three exceptions: persons less than 17 or over 65 years of age; persons fishing on property on which they cent column: "You do not need a license if you take your kids fishing and do no fishing your self. But if you take the rod and reel in your hands and a game warden sees you with the fishing outfit in your possession, what is the warden to think?"

Dan added: "It also is advisable to pick up a copy of the fishing laws before you fish in an unfamiliar area. Size and bag limits often vary from county to county and from lake to lake. A copy of the laws, available at most sporting goods stores, is free."

MUSICAL NOTE . . .

Now, anybody knows that I couldn't carry a tune, even with a basket. And that makes me even more appreciative of gents like Curtis Baker, who can teach and direct a group such as his Colorado High Choralettes to outstanding musical accomplishment.

This accomplishment, incidentally, includes all the top honors in Texas Interscholastic League competition from Sweepstakes to Special, which comes on top of No. 1 in sight and concert singing.

So, to Curtis and all his Choralettes, a glad note of congratulations from all of us who believe the world needs more music.

It's Teacher's Choice

Rather an interesting time to be a teacher, the spring. Even before the snow has completely gone, school boards and principals are flipping over logs and stones, in the forlorn hope of finding a teacher under one of them.

There are three reasons for the frantic spring scramble. The first two are deaths and retirements. The third, and major cause for the panic, is the population explosion. Classrooms are multiplying with the rapidity of rabbits.

Every one of these classrooms is full of kids. And the kids like baby robins expect to have something stuffed into them. Therefore, according to tradition, there must be a body, however little it resembles a Momma Robin, standing up there in front of the class, stuffing something — pebbles, or pearls, or even worms — into the gaping maws.

It is the time of year that has principals grinning wildly at old teachers, pouring on the charm with potential new ones, snapping at their own wives and biffing their own children about the ears, because they've heard by the snake-vine — that's the vine that runs from the staff-room to the bridge-club to the Saturday night party to the after-church coffee — that they're losing half their staff.

It is the time of year that has school board members deciding to take a holiday in Jamaica, or if they can't afford it, going to bed with the flu. On the one hand are the taxpayers, shouting that school taxes are away out of hand. And on the other hand are other taxpayers, declaring that the board must hire the best possible teachers.

And in between are the teachers, with 10,000 jobs open to them, every one, at first glance, better than their present one.

Last weekend I was in the city, and out of sheer curiosity it says here, dropped in at the hotel which is the centre of teacher-hiring for the coming year. It was interesting.

My first impression was that the whole thing was being run by one of the metropolitan newspapers. This enterprising sheet, in an effort to crack the monopoly on the fat, luscious acreage of teacher-advertising held by another newspaper, had hired half the ground floor, and was passing out free papers, free coffee, free interview — arranging whatever that is. The only thing missing was free teachers.

Protecting The Rocket

DALE DICKSON AND RICKY MASON STAND GUARD over a moon-bound rocket during action of "The Moon's Up There," a one act comedy presented by the eighth grade speech class of Colorado Junior High School. The pair portrayed Sgts. Diglin and Kimball.

Picture an old-fashioned slave-market, New Orleans, 1855. O.K.? Now, picture a slave market in which every slave market in which every report on slave-prices tucked under his left arm, in which every slave has ten potential buyers, in which every slave is free to choose his new boss or go back to Ole Massa.

I had an overwhelming impulse to jump up on one of the upholstered chairs and cry out, "One English specialist, split broken, but sound of wind limb and grammar. How much am I offered?"

Fortunately for my professional status, at that moment, simultaneously, the bar next door opened, and my wife grabbed me by the arm. She'd seen that look in my eye.

I would like to state that I was admitted to the bar and began a long and successful career as a lawyer. But my curiosity held me for another five minutes, to see what was being offered. It was fascinating. Salaries were almost standard, across the board. But those fringe benefits... wow!

City schools sang culture: museum, art galleries, theatres, opera. Rural schools heralded hunting, fishing, leisurely living. And both signed people up, on these grounds.

The birds who signed for the city schools will spend all their weekends, and most of their money, going to the country for swimming, fishing, skiing. And the types who head for the country will spend most of their weekends, and money, tearing to town for the shows, the ballet, the bright lights.

As I said, it's an interesting time to be a teacher.

Zetagathians Hear Timely Book Review

Review of a new, and currently popular book, "The Negro Cowboy," by Phillip Durham and Everett L. Jones, was presented by Mrs. Bob Robinson at the meeting of Zetagathian Study Club Thursday.

Mrs. Pete Warren, 1530 Dallas St., was hostess and Mrs. L. S. Girvin Jr., was leader who introduced the book reviewer.

"Now they are forgotten," Mrs. Robinson began, "but once they rode all the trails, driving millions of cattle before them. Some died in stampede, some froze to death, some drowned. Some were too slow with guns, some too fast."

"But most of them lived through long drives to Abilene, to Dodge City. And many of them drove on to the farthest reaches of the northern range, to the Dakotas, Wyoming and Montana."

"They numbered thousands, among them the best riders, ropers and wranglers. They hunted wild horses and wolves and few of them hunted men. Some were villains, some were heroes. Some were called offensive names and others given almost equally offensive compliments. But even when one was praised as 'the whitest man I've ever known' he was not white."

"For they were the Negro Cowboys," Mrs. Robinson's introduction continued. "They rode with white Texans, Mexicans and Indians. They ate the same food, slept on the same ground. But when the long drives ended and the great plains were tamed and fenced, the trails ended, too. The cattle were fenced in, the Negroes fenced out."

"Years later, when history became myth and legend, when cowboys became folk heroes the Negro was again fenced out. They found no place in the West of fiction," the reviewer told her audience.

Among cowboys who went up the trails from Texas after the Civil War, she said, more than 5,000 Negroes played a part and did a job.

After a mention of the "Negro Renegades" who sometimes led Indian attacks against white settlements, Mrs. Robinson added, "But for every Negro Renegade who joined against the white man, a company of Negro soldiers fought the Indians."

"The point of their (Negro cowboys) history is not that they were different from their companions but that they were similar. They had neither peculiar virtues nor vices to be glorified or condemned. But they should be remembered," the speaker said.

Most of the first Negro cowboys were slaves, not mavericks, she pointed out. When Texas entered the Union there were 100,000 white settlers, 35,000 slaves. When Texas seceded, it had more than 430,000 slaves. It has been estimated that 4 million head of cattle grazed on Texas ranges at the start of the Civil War. "Thus the story of the Negro cowboy began before the war."

"A story of the postwar racial antagonism and resultant violence would make a long and bloody story," Mrs. Robinson said before discussing and naming a number of unusual Negro cowboys.

"The trails end where fiction begins," she said. "Negroes helped to open and hold the West. They explored the plains and mountains, fought the Indians, dug gold and silver, trapped wild horses and wolves. Some were outlaws and some were law officers. Thousands rode in the cavalry and thousands more were cowboys. And for a while, at least, some performed in rodeos and others rode on many of the country's major race tracks.

"Yet Negroes rarely appear in Western fiction. Today, perhaps, ignorance of history is the most important reason the Negro cowboy does not ride in fiction. Americans have assumed that because Negroes haven't been in Western fiction they never were in the West. Perhaps all Americans may some day share in the heritage of the West."

"Eventually Negro children may (also) see, hear and learn about some of their own great-grandfathers who broke wild horses, fought wilder Indians and rode in the choking dust behind great herds of cattle," the review concluded.

Zetagathians will be among clubs welcoming Mesquite District Convention to Colorado City, April 5 and 6.

Their meeting Thursday was attended by two guests, Mrs. Robert Edison and Mrs. E. R. Edison, Denver Colorado houseguests of Mrs. Jim Edison. A new member was present Mrs. Joe D. Burchard. A new member was present, Mrs. Joe D. Burchard. Also attending were members Mmes. Don Butler, Girvin, Robinson, George O. Witten, Warren Anderson Bob Carver, O. B. ## An Astronaut Looks At Education

America's Gemini two-man flight definitely was successful and emphasizes again the giant steps taken within a few years by our scientists and engineers.

Right now, however, while the Gemini success is in the spotlight, is a good time to make an observation about astronauts and science and education.

To say that the race for space-age dominance has influenced our education outlook would be putting it mildly. In fact this time of earth orbits and astronauts and competition with Russia has created an unprecedented interest in science and math and other special fields.

But now, just as the two-man Gemini space capsule has orbited back to earth after being piloted manually while in flight, astronaut Walter M. Schirra gives a word of caution about over emphasis in areas of education.

"It may be that those who are working in the field of mathematics," said Schirra, 42, who in 1962 orbited the earth in a Mercury capsule, "are not aware of what their children are being taught but are so hepped up on the fact that we should be scientists at the age of 15 or 16 that they've lost sight of the fact that there are so many other things that are important."

"I, for example," Schirra continued in an NBC interview, "wouldn't tolerate this business (space flights) if I did not have other things of interest to me."

"I think it is fine profession to make an automobile, to make an airplane, to make a painting, to create music and I see no reason that this should be ignored in favor of science itself. If this is what they're creating... I'd like to back down on it."

GOVERNOR MAKES PUSH

Committee Bottles Up Extended Term Action

By VERN SANFORD

Texas Press Association
Gov. John Connally's push for a constitutional amendment to extend the terms of officials who now are limited to two years between elections is being bottled up in a balky House committee.

While the Senate Constitutional Amendments Committee advanced the proposal with minimum dissent, its House counterpart has postponed action until March 30. Rep. John Allen of Longview is chairman of this House Committee.

Opponents, led by Rep. Bill Hollowell of Grand Saline, made no secret of the fact they hope to block it indefinitely.

The resolution has tremendous political impact, agrees House sponsor Rep. Gene Hendryx of Alpine.

If Connally runs for reelection, as many feel he will, a four-year term would place him only at the midpoint of his third term when the national elections roll around in 1968. He thus would be free to concentrate his efforts on helping old friend President Lyndon B. Johnson in his expected bid for another four years in the White House.

Opponents offer a variety of reasons for their stand. Some say they don't want the governor in a position to take a hand in legislative races during his "off" year. Others claim they have no objection to the governor's having a four-year term, but don't want to extend the benefit to other statewide officials now limited to two years. Still others believe officials should be answerable to the voters often.

Proponents argue just as convincingly that most states already allow four-year terms to their chief executives, and that longer terms would give officials more time to concentrate on their duties without pressure of frequent political campaigns.

Odds are that the governor's proposed amendment to the constitution before session's end. Then, assuming the necessary two-thirds of lawmakers approve, it will be up to the voters to judge the issue raised.

WATER BILL—Most important piece of water legislation to come before the current session was introduced in the deadline rush.

Bill by Rep. Raleigh Brown of Abilene lays out a way for Texas to find out how much water it has in its streams and who can use it.

Water belongs to the state, of course, and can be used only by those to whom the state permits its use. Establishing the right to water, however, can be a long and complicated procedure.

Procedure could tie other bills which would give the present Texas Water Commission the authority to adjudicate water rights. It would not disturb present rights and would permit cancellation of the many permits which have been issued by the Commission but never have been used.

Provision is made for appealing Commission decisions to the courts.

CITRUS LABELING PROPOSED—A bill by Rep. A. C. Atwood of Edinburg proposes that all imported oranges and grapefruits be labeled with their country of origin and stores where they are sold display a sign reading "Imported Fresh Citrus Fruit Sold Here."

Bill also would require identification as "Cold Storage" of any place where products are stored under refrigeration for more than 60 days after harvest or initial refrigeration.

BIGGER SENATE—Many state senators, looking for a painless way out of legislative redistricting, may have found it in the proposed constitutional amendment to increase their membership.

Senate Constitutional Amendments Committee unanimously approved a resolution to add eight new senatorial districts to the present 31. It also calls for six-year terms for senators, who now serve four-year terms.

Some senators think an early statewide election should be called on the measure and a 39-district reapportionment bill passed in advance to meet the August deadline for redrawing lines on a equal - population basis.

DEAR DORIS

advice from Doris Clark

'How Far Can A Girl Go?

DEAR DORIS—We have the most wonderful group of young people in our church, boys and girls 16 to 18. We are discussing teen-age problems.

They have handed in questions in sealed envelopes (unsigned by request). The one question I find difficult to answer is: "How far can a decent young girl go on a date with her regular boy friend, and still keep his interest?"

Counselor

DEAR COUNSELLOR—When a couple become good friends, some affection is acceptable: a good-night kiss, a hand-hold at the movies, maybe a hug as a greeting. No long necking sessions, which so easily become heavier petting and sex experimentation.

We associate the "too fast" girl or boy with an empty mind. One boy said when criticized for his behavior with a certain girl, "Well, she can't dance, can't talk, won't walk with me. What else is there to do but neck with her?"

Far better to share interests in sports, or mental gymnastics; to concentrate on something outside of oneself. Physical indulgences have no place in good teen-age relationships.

DEAR DORIS—I once read in your column that you would send out to a lady a good diet, and I would surely like one, too. I am five foot five and a half and weigh one hundred and fifty-five. How much should I weigh?

Fatty

DEAR FATTY—You weigh more than the average, but without knowing your age, I can't say how much. Probably ten or 15 pounds. I'm sending you "Simple Reducing Diet." Follow it—which takes good sense and some will power—and you're bound to slim down. (Readers: Anyone may have this diet by writing in, enclosing ten cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

DEAR DORIS—Grant and I have been going steady for three years. We are both 17.

In October Grant left me. You see, I was "sick," crooked, nagging, over-possessive, I was seeing a psychiatrist regularly. When I saw Grant with another girl, I'd start crying, wherever I was.

Later he told me he was forced to break up with me because my mother asked him to leave me alone until I recovered. We made up and had some good times, then he said he was fed up with me "hanging around and tormenting him."

Sometimes he comes around, sometimes he avoids me. Are all boys moody like this? I love Grant very much. He's my reason for living. If I leave him, I'll have another breakdown.

Breaking Point

DEAR BREAKING—Being so exclusively Grant's from 14 to 17 handicaps you now. How can you know you wouldn't like someone else better?

When you marry, you choose to live in the same house with another person for the next 50 years or so. You agree to work with him, raise his children, get up in the night with them. To put up with all the queer things about him, as he will you. It's a terrific, adult undertaking.

Your mental health will improve when you free yourself for dates with others and open your mind for new friends and fun. And no serious decisions for a long time.

To Disappointed—Don't go thumbs down on adoption until you learn more about it. Child-care agencies go to no end of trouble in locating the just-right baby for a couple wanting to adopt. They examine background of natural parents, think about talents, level of intelligence, even color of hair and eyes! And a skilled child-care worker will guide you through those first anxious months and years.

Powder That Stain

DEAR SUSANNA—When is a truly marvelous method for removing grease spots from clothing and material. Immediately blot the spot with absorbent tissue. Then sprinkle on, and rub in, corn starch or fine talcum powder. Allow this to remain on overnight. The following day, brush off the powder. This even works when a grease spot remains after washing and ironing. Sprinkle on the powder, rub in and put the garment away as usual. When the garment is taken out to be worn, brush off the powder, and the grease spot will be gone. The powder absorbs the grease.

Mrs. T. Quinn—It actually does! Even that stubborn material broadcloth passed the test beautifully. However, on an all wool, smooth, beige-brown suiting material, where butter was the offending stain, it took two to three applications before the mark had completely disappeared. So who needs INSTANT miracles anyway!

making cookies or cake, and you have to add a beaten egg to the creamed shortening and sugar mixture, scoop your creamed ingredients to one side of the bowl. They are fairly stiff and stay put. Now break your egg in the other side. Tip the bowl up and beat the egg.

This way you don't dirty two dishes, and no egg is wasted transferring from one bowl to the other.

Mrs. K. Craig—My twin boys share a bedroom and one of them was careless with a large wad of bubble gum (they'll never tell me which one)! It got trapped into their wool rug so badly that I began to despair of ever getting it out. Someone told me to try carbon tetrachloride (from any drug store) and you'll be interested to know that it almost seemed to melt the gum away. For your readers who may not be familiar with it, be sure to follow directions when using this cleaner and keep the area in which you are working very well ventilated.

Another rug tip for unruly carpets that keep turning up at the corners, is to press the edges thoroughly, front and back, with a hot iron over a damp cloth.

Betty Jackson—The vacuum cleaner hose is ideal for cleaning out winter boots. It will also dry them in a remarkably short time if you reverse the vacuum so that it blows out, then insert the hose right inside the boot.

Melany—This is excellent advice. It is the blowing action that does the trick as the air from a vacuum is only faintly warm and leather boots especially, would never be dried by direct heat or on a radiator.

If your snow boots do get soaked, and you are leaving them overnight to dry, be sure to stuff them well with tissue paper so that they will not lose their shape. Then leave them some place to dry at room temperature—give them a good polishing before you wear them again.

Just follow the rule. When caring for leather, play it cool!

Susanna

Doctor's Losing Battle

The American Medical Association's last-ditch attempt to kill President Johnson's medical care for the aged scheme has an element of pathos in it.

For more than 20 years the A.M.A. has carried on a successful campaign to prevent any Federal activity in what has been a traditional doctor-patient relationship. Now with the hand-writing on the wall, the A.M.A. has come up with its "elder-care" scheme. (Under elder-care, the states rather than Washington, would be responsible for seeing that our aged received proper medical attention.)

Had "elder-care" been proposed 10 years ago, it might have had some impact. Today it's just a meaningless attempt to sabotage Johnson's scheme for tying the Federal Social Security program to medical care for the aged.

Still, in spite of President Johnson's resounding November victory, and in spite of the fact that most Americans want the Johnson bill, the medical association goes on fighting its losing battle.

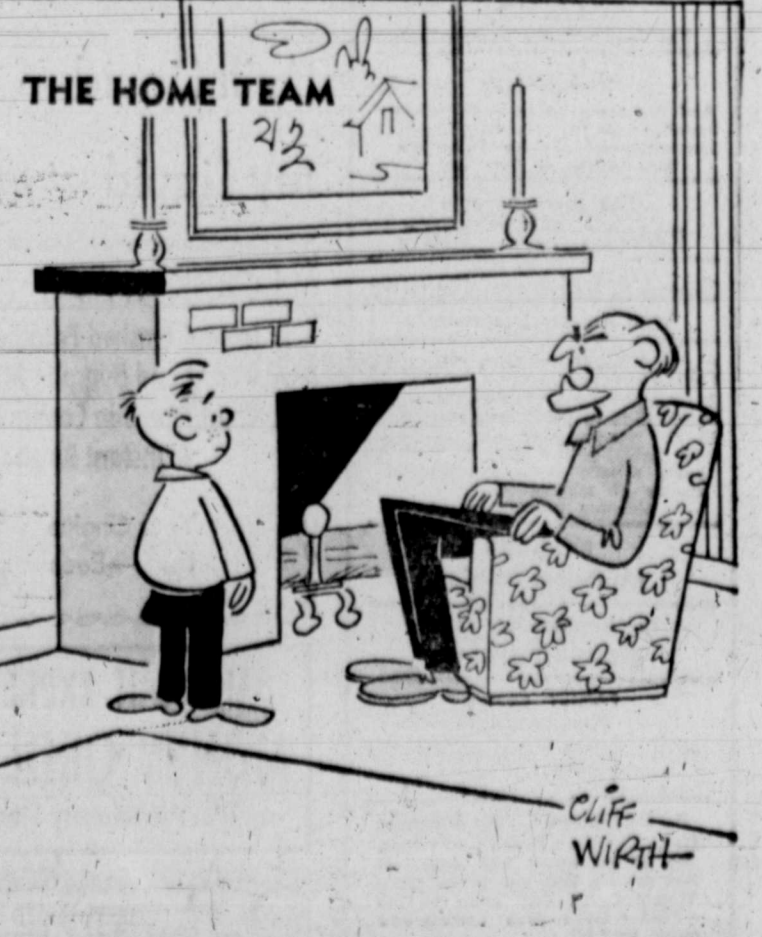

It would be foolish to depict the A.M.A. and the doctors who support its policies as villains who are out to deprive the aged of medical care. But had the doctors really felt concern about the aged, they would have taken more active interest long ago.

The crux of the medicare dispute is not the question of what sort of treatment the aged receive. To many doctors, the real issue is that now for the first time the Federal Government will be able to look closely into the financial and professional operations of our doctors and privately run hospitals. The mere fact that medicare funds will come from Uncle Sam (through Social Security and other Federal taxes) will make this Federal scrutiny a necessity.

Naturally, the Johnson medicare bill only covers the aged. But it could be the first step in an inexorable process which will bring the Federal Government into virtually every field of medical practice. This is why the A.M.A. has spent so much money in an attempt to kill medicare.

It would be safe to predict that 10 years from now the A.M.A. will be all in favor of Johnson's limited care-for-the-aged scheme. But it will be equally safe to predict that the medical association will be waging another last-ditch struggle against some new form of Federal entry into the medical field.

When voluntary health programs such as Blue Cross came into being, the A.M.A. frowned upon them. The reason for its disapproval was obvious — the Blue Cross-type schemes brought to mass public attention just how expensive our medical services can be. People who contribute to Blue Cross, however, didn't have much to say about their rising rates. But the U.S. taxpayer (who will pay for Federal medicare) does have something to say — as Congress is now proving by supporting the Johnson bill.

Each new government move in the medical field will bring under closer public and congressional scrutiny the rising cost of medical services in this country.

Let our doctors feel they are being treated unfairly, they should remember that the medicare battle is going on in many countries of the Free World.

One certainly can't blame our doctors for resisting something that they either don't believe in, or that they feel will be to their disadvantage.

But in mankind's long struggle for security, medicare is a natural desire. Inevitably, it must come.

Eventually, America's doctors will know when it's time to stop fighting a lost battle and give in gracefully, before they tarnish their Hippocratic oath.

Electrifying the LAST FRONTIER

It's getting harder every year to "rough" it.

The Lone Wolf Electric Cooperative has strung its lines to hunting lodges, fishing camps, summer cabins, busy ranches, rural retreats, lake-shore homes, motels, rural stores and camp grounds.

Today's outdoorsman enjoys nature in the raw but after the romp is over he expects electric lights and indoor plumbing. Thanks to the efficient, dependable Lone Wolf Electric Cooperative he can rough it in comfort.

In keeping its covenant for "Area Coverage", The Lone Wolf Electric Cooperative is bringing ease and comfort to rural areas, electrifying the last frontier.

BUDGET CONFEREES seasonal hands in cotton activities.

NAMED — Joint Conference Committee which will write the final version of the 1966-67 state spending bill already is at work.

Senate conferees are Sens. Dorsey Hardeman of San Angelo, A. M. Aikin of Paris, Bill Moore of Bryan, Martin Dies Jr. of Lufkin and J. P. Word of Meridian.

House conferees are Reps. W. S. Healy of Paducah, Maurice Pipkin of Brownsville, Gus Mutscher of Brenham, Tommy Shannon of Slack of Pecos.

Fort Worth and Richard FARMER SELF-ASSESSMENT — A bill by Rep. Felix McDonald of Edinburg to authorize agricultural producers to assess themselves up to one per cent the value of their produce for advertising, research and marketing funds was assigned to study by a subcommittee of the House Constitutional Amendments Committee.

Bill provides that if voters authorize the amendment in 1966, farmers within specified areas still would have to vote the assessment on themselves by at least a 2-to-1 vote. Amendment could be canceled by a simple majority vote later.

Proponents say the assessments would be much less than authorized and that any farmer who requested refund of his assessment would get it back.

Opponents believe the assessment would be a tax authorized by the Legislature, but imposed by a non-government body and that the money, as the bill is written, could be used to the detriment of farmers who contributed it.

LIQUOR BILL KILLED — Senate Jurisprudence Committee unceremoniously killed the bill to permit restaurant sale of liquor in small bottles with meals.

Unexpectedly, firm action liquor by the drink or open saloons bill will be passed this session.

Sen. Jim Bates of Edinburg sponsored the unsuccessful small-bottle bill which met opposition from liquor stores as well as dries. Bill was backed by the Texas Restaurant Association.

Rep. Jake Johnson of San Antonio says he will continue to push for hearing of his open saloons bill but admits it has little chance.

APPOINTMENTS ANNOUNCED — Governor Connally has completed a long list of appointments.

He reassigned Chester C. Wine of Corpus Christi and Claude W. Brown of McCamey to Texas Industrial Commission and named L. F. Bay of Brownwood to replace E. B. Germany of Dallas.

Reappointed to State Seed and Plant Board were Garwood Gerdes of Giddings, Hemo Staffel Jr. of Austin, C. B. Godbey of College Station and Dr. A. W. Young of Lubbock. New appointments went to B. Raymond Evans of Tulsa and Grady C. Clark of Corpus Christi.

Mrs. Nancy Lee Bass of Fort Worth was named to the State Board of Mansion Supervisors.

Mrs. Joyce Herd of Dallas was reappointed to the State Board of Tuberculosis Nurse Examiners.

Reappointed to the Advisory Council were James P. McCracken of Cisco and F. S. Walters Jr. of Amarillo. New appointees are Jack Price of Dallas and Vernon W. Forsman of Temple.

Connally's reappointments as presiding judges of administrative judicial districts include Judges Max Rogers of Huntsville, D. B. Wood of Georgetown, Solomon Casseb Jr. of San Antonio, Fidenio M. Guerra of McAllen, Roger Thurmond of Del Rio, Louis T. Holland of Montague, and Victor H. Lindsey of Lubbock.

Judge Owen Thomas of Abilene is a new appointee to the 194th district post.

Governor designated William D. Noel as State Liquor Control Board chairman.

Howard Rose of Midland was named to represent oil industry on Texas Water Pollution Board.

"OPEN MEETINGS" CHANCES DIM — Legislation to restrict secret sessions of government agencies again is in trouble.

Bill received a familiar cold reception in the Senate State Affairs Committee. Sen. George Parkhouse of Dallas suggested it should be killed on the spot. Sen. Tom Creighton of Mineral Wells offered an amendment to force newsmen to disclose these sources of information when questioned in court.

House State Affairs committee offered a more sympathetic ear.
