LOW PRICE OF WOOL AIDS CONSUMPTION.

Never has the wool industry in this country experienced such a year of losses or lack of profits as that of 1925. The year which has just gone into history has seen textile plants closed or curtailed because of lack of orders, with dividends passed or reduced and tremendous losses taken. The Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, Manchester, N. H., since it began to pay dividends in 1834, has never omitted to make a distribution to its stockholders in ninety-one years, until 1925, when the dividends were passed.

The Pacific Mills, Lawrence, Mass., had always paid good dividends since the first year the distribution began, 1859, but in 1925 they were cut down to 75 cents a share. The American Woolen Company took a loss of between $11,000,000 and $12,000,000 after charges, etc., were paid. Members of the wool trade took big losses from foreign wool bought at high prices, for instance 64-70s at $1.50 to $1.60 in bond, similar wools selling later at $1.15 in bond. A number saw the price of domestic wool go down for which they had contracted on the sheep's back at high figures.

Practically the entire year was dull, compared with some other years, as previously intimated. While the American Woolen Company opened its heavyweights February 4 with prices comparatively low on worsteds, when the clothing made up from the fabrics of this company and of independent mills was offered by the retailers to the public, there was not the generous response that was hoped for. Woollens have done fairly well, but in no sense as well as was desired.

The above article from the Philadelphia Inquirer, handed to us by Mr. Hamer of the local wool and mohair buyers, will be of interest to wool and mohair growers, as coming from the section of the country where the wool and mohair are manufactured into cloth, and becomes a considerable factor in big merchandising.

HONOR ROLL.

In publishing the honor roll of paid up subscribers last week, giving the names of those who had paid their subscription since the holidays, about half the number were omitted thru an oversight. Those omitted were as follows:

H. W. RIECK CO. ORGAN- IZE GOAT COAT BUSINESS

J. U. Rieck of Cape Girardeau, Mo., is now associated with his brother, Capt. H. W. Rieck of Roosevelt, in the development of sales for the Rieck Goat Coat, which was placed on the market for the first time last year.

Capt. Rieck was in town last Tuesday, and while at The Eagle plant arranging for publicity matter, letter heads, and other printing, stated that the firm name of H. W. Rieck Co., had been selected and hereafter all business connected with the manufacture and sale of the patented goat coat will be conducted under this firm name, and Mr. J. U. Rieck will be in charge of the sales end of the business.

An advertising schedule, covering the goat country, is already being run, the first of the series appearing in The Eagle this week, as it will appear in newspapers throughout the goat raising counties of this and other states.

The Rieck Goat Coat had a remarkable sale last year and was the means of thousands of dollars in savings to ranchmen who used them during the cold weather. Practically twice as many orders were received as it was possible to fill, but with increased facilities for manufacture and better organization for selling and distributing, the H. W. Rieck Co., is now in the field in a strong way, and the next few months thousands of goats will get protection after shearing time.

Phillip Luthringer, the Wind Mill man, was in town Saturday, taking a day off for the first time in some weeks. Phillip has built up such a reputation in this and adjoining counties that he is kept very busy. He is one of our regular advertisers and says when business gets to where it does not justify advertising, he is going into something else, so when your mill or pump needs fixing, just phone Mr. Luthringer at Roosevelt.

COMMISSIONERS' COURT.

A special meeting of the Commissioners' Court was called for Tuesday of this week, and after taking up several matters in the office, the members of the court went up to the South Llano road cut-off to look over the roadway and take up some matters relative to the change with some land owners.

At this term of court Bob Crisp, an elderly man, for many years a resident of this county, who was found to be without means of support, was allowed a temporary paupers' compensation of $20 per month.

One hundred gallons of dip was purchased and will be used for dipping cattle.

John Munn was authorized to make up the delinquent tax list for the past two years and will be allowed $75 for this work.

Ed Joy was paid a bounty for a grown wolf scalp.

The most important matter coming before the court was the application of the West Texas Utilities Co. for a permit to build its lines on the roads, streets, alleys, etc. for a period of 50 years. This permit is merely an easement and is not an exclusive grant, and contains conditions as to the proper building and maintaining of the lines along the sides of the roads and streets, and to keep harmless the county from any claims arising out of the construction, operation and maintenance of same.

My name appears in the political announcement column this week and I will have a statement to make to the voters in next week's paper. Please look for it. Guthrie Williams.

Durst Farmer left Tuesday for San Angelo where he has a position as bookkeeper with the West Texas Utilities Co.

Wahl Bros. & Jordan brought in a new Hupp Four this week, which they will use as a demonstration car, as they now have the agency for this and the Packard, in addition to their Star line.

EVENING CLASS AT THE SCHOOL AUDITORIUM.

The pecan crop of Kimble County during the year 1925, was worth more than $125,000. That crop of pecans was produced with very little effort. Why not give this important and growing business a little more time and thought and reap greater and greater returns in future years?

All owners of pecan lands and any others interested in the pecan industry of Kimble County are requested to meet at the High School Auditorium at 7:30, January 14, 1926, to devote a little time and thought to this important business of growing pecans.

The meeting Thursday night is to be the first of a series of ten meetings to be held during the winter and spring months, during each meeting some important phase of pecan growing will be discussed.

This series of meetings is arranged for you, so remember the time, place and date, and come out.

At 7:30, High School Auditorium, Thursday night.

R. H. Brison,
Prin. and Teacher of Vocational Agriculture.

MR. AND MRS. GUY WYNNE ENTERTAIN.

The beautiful ranch home (Terrace Hill) of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Wynne was opened Monday evening to their many friends, when they honored their daughter, Miss Elsie.

Dancing, bridge and 42 were the main diversions of the evening.

The luncheon table was centered with a mass of white and orchid chrysanthemums and was further decorated with a gorgeous Mexican hand-drawn cover.

Chicken salad on lettuce leaves, pickles, potato chips, cheese wafers, fruit cake, and hot chocolate and coffee topped with whipped cream, was served to about forty guests. Mesdames Victor Hardeman, Carl Wolf and H. G. Perry assisted Mrs. Wynne in serving.

MEMOIRS OF WAR BY THE MYSTERY MAN.

"There were hundreds of people in the big station; the night trains were beginning to fill, and passengers and their friends stood in groups before the big iron gates. Unnoticed by most of the crowd, a little man, wearing a soft hat, overcoat on the arm, with the collar of his waistcoat drawn about his throat, literally slunk in between the groups here and there and left the big station through an exit seldom used."

"This little man, with a furtive glance at the line of automobiles, quickly stepped inside a large, black car. He did not so much as nod to the chauffeur; instructions were unnecessary. Twelve minutes later this mysterious passenger was entering the White House. Attendants about the gates and doors of the big place just nodded and bowed as if they knew the President of the United States was waiting for the visitor."

"Woodrow Wilson and Col. E. M. House sat facing each other. The President of the United States had a worried look on his face, but Col. House was calm and meditative. Col. House, before the sun rose again, was on his way to Berlin. Perhaps he had in mind a plan that would have kept 100,000 American boys from French graves."

"Who knows what Woodrow Wilson rushed Col. House out into the darkness of the night to pass on to European rulers and Generals?"

The world had to guess. Col. House's lips were sealed—until now.

Col. House, the mysterious little man who selected Texas Governors up to fifteen years ago, before he branched out into world politics, kept a personal diary; and these memoirs, startling beyond measure, will be reproduced in the columns of The Dallas News (the only Texas newspaper that will publish them). Installments will begin soon.

The Dallas News' Christmas rate has been extended to January 31—one year by mail, daily and Sunday, $6.45. Orders for The News will be accepted by The Junction Eagle. You'll want to read these memoirs. Better subscribe today.

MASON COUNTY PECAN IS STILL WORLD'S LARGEST

Mr. E. J. Lemburg has again received a letter from Mr. Ross R. Wolfe, stating that he has again won a prize on large pecans.

This time, first prize was won at the San Saba Contest for the largest pecan on exhibit, and which Mr. Wolfe still contends is the largest pecan in the world. It again required 32 of these nuts to weigh a pound, and the closest competitor required 30 nuts to make a pound.

The total of the two prizes won by Mr. Lemburg on these Oliver pecans, now amounts to $17.50, which is indeed a very nice winning for a pound of pecans.

We hope that will be an inducement for pecan growers of Mason County to take more interest in the improvement of their pecan orchards.—Mason County News.

The above is another boost for Kimble County pecans. The original Oliver tree, from which these prize winning nuts originally came, is about 100 yards from the point where the Mason road turns off the highway.

THE WORLD TELLS ITS TALE OF 1925.

Ever unraveled a tangled skein of yarn? The year is a big tangle of many strands, varying in texture and color, length and thickness. Let us see what we can do with it.

On January 17th President Coolidge told a group of newspaper editors that American newspapers are the best in the world, or, at least, they so reported with no expressions of surprise or dissent. News, as newspapers present it, may, indeed, be history in the making but its essential, vital truth is often obscured by an excess of mere happenings, interesting, to be sure, but in the main unimportant if true.

When, for instance, on December 17, 1924, Brigadier General William E. Mitchell, assistant chief of the Army Air Service, told a committee of the House that America was backward in aviation and that the air service should be an independent unit of national defense, few editors realized and told their readers he had started something it would be hard to finish, if, indeed, it didn't finish him.

And when it was reported, on December 22, 1924, that the Allies would not evacuate the Cologne area of Germany on January 10, 1925, the treaty date, readers were left to attach their own significance to the disturbing announcement.

The explanation is easy. Over in Illinois a clergyman was on trial, charged with killing his wife that he might marry a more or less fair parishioner, also alleged to have paved the way by killing her husband, "Yellow Kid" Weil, picturesque Chicago confidence man, provided good copy. A Michigan Congressman was involved in a sensational divorce suit, and several other "big news stories" and local sensations filled the newspapers.

The Masons of America are just awaking to the fact that Free Masonry is practically outlawed in Italy and its members subjected to persecution. Had they read their newspapers carefully, inside small type as well as first page scare heads, they would have known all this months ago for Premier Mussolini, the Italian dictator, presented the law aimed at suppression of Masonry on January 12. The item was brief and inconspicuously displayed, but but it was there, although on the same day the retiring governor of Kansas was arrested on the charge of selling pardons—of which he was ultimately acquitted—and, more interesting still, on the following day of the next a seventeen-year-old San Francisco flapper killed her mother for trying to interfere with her riotous indulgence in jazz parties.

At the same time, it must be remembered, Paavo Nurmi, the Flying Finn, was defeating America's best runners in New York one day and Chicago the next, breaking records galore and having his amateur standing magnifyingly disputed, eventually returning to his native Finland chagrined at the reporters who, from the American viewpoint, treated him with a generosity "publicity experts" envied. Paavo didn't understand. He was an amateur in every sense. Months later it devolved upon one Harold (Red) Grange to show how such situations should be handled.

On January 18 it became apparent that the international opium conference at Geneva was "slipping" and that substantial curtailment of the evils of the drug was improbable but the editors realized that the public would be more interested in the recapture, on that day, of the romantic bandit, Gerald Chapman, in his country refuge near Munich, Indiana.

And this turned out a greater news story than the editors then suspected, with the surrender of the prisoner to Con-itics, his trial, conviction and death sentence for the murder of a New Britain policeman and his desperate attempt to escape execution by demanding the right to complete his twenty-five-year term in prison at Atlanta despite commutation by President Coolidge, a legal fight still in progress as these lines are written.

Then, as an accompaniment, his pals, George ("Dutch") Anderson, gentleman thief and supposed scion of a noble Scandinavian family, and William ("One Arm") Wolf, apparently common crook, on August 14, waylaid and killed Ben Hance, the Indiana farmer who revealed Chapman's hiding place, and his wife. Wolf was convicted and sentenced to prison for life but Anderson escaped, reappeared in several places, proclaimed his identity while committing other depredations only to meet death in Muskegon, Michigan, on November 2, while resisting arrest and after fatally wounding the arresting officer, each chapter of the lurid tale taking place concurrently with events of national and world-wide importance.

The opium conference struggled on to an inconspicuous fiasco, General Mitchell twice reappeared before the House committee, criticizing the nation's air defense and those responsible for it with no other effect than arousing the ire of those criticized.

Why? In part the answer is that on January 30 Floyd Collins became wedged in Sand Cave, near Cave City, Kentucky and from that date till excavators reached his dead body on February 16 speculations as to his fate and quarrels among his would-be rescuers constituted the big news of the day.

As if this were not enough a religious sect, with a membership scattered from Long Island to California, became imbued with the conviction that the world was coming to its end on February 6.

Then there was the thrilling rush of dog teams and drivers with antitoxin serum for diphtheria victims at Nome, Alaska.

When, on March 3, it was announced that General Mitchell would not be reappointed assistant air chief, would automatically revert to the rank of colonel and be transferred to Texas, the news was subordinated to that of a sensational English divorce suit and preparations for the reinauguration of President Coolidge.

Even the inauguration of the President was obscured by the impassioned assault of the new Vice-President upon the closure rules of the Senate. That seethed until March 10, when the absence of the same Vice-President Dawes from his official post blocked the confirmation of Charles B. Warren as Attorney-General of the United States and contributed to the final rejection of the President's nominee on March 16.

On the latter date the head of an "irregular medical institute" in Chicago confessed that he sold cultures of typhoid fever germs to William D. Shepherd and as William N. McClintock, the "millionaire orphan" had died at the Shepherd home on December 14, 1924, apparently of typhoid, leaving his wealth by will to Shepherd and his wife, the inference was clear enough to bring about Shepherd's indictment for murder.

It was a big story and the papers "played it up so strong" that when Shepherd was brought to trial on May 18, it took three weeks to obtain a panel of 12 men sufficiently free from preconvictions to qualify them for jury service. After a sensational trial Shepherd was acquitted on June 26, but to date he has not been able to procure probate of the will disposing of the fortune alleged to have been the cause of all the trouble.

While the Warren fight raged a beautiful dream of 1924 quiet-

We Court Public Opinion

WE Established our business on the principle of being fair with our customers, giving them full value for the money they leave with us.

WE Have continued that policy throughout the years we have been serving you, and we are pursuing it more persistently than ever, at this time, the beginning of the new year.

Our policy of ONE PRICE TO ALL, is maintained because we believe it is the only fair policy to all our customers. We do not think that it is fair to you to charge you a higher price than we do some other person who asks us to "cut the price" for them. That is why we mark all our goods in plain figures and sell to all at the marked price.

IT Would be a reflection on your good judgment to try to tell you that we can do business at less than a legitimate profit. Every business must have a fair profit or they will soon go out of business, then their usefulness to you and the community is gone. We are here to serve you in every legitimate way. We carry as complete stock of standard merchandise as is practicable for the demand and we are always ready and willing to do our part in every worthy enterprise. We are your friends and want you to be ours. Come to our store, during the New Year when you need anything in hardware and we will do our best to please you and you can rest assured we will treat you right. On this high plane of commerciality we solicit your patronage.

While in Menard Monday, we dropped into the Messenger office and enjoyed a very pleasant visit with Editor Warren. Mr. Warren came to Menard a few months ago and after getting some new equipment, including a large and expensive news press, enlarged the size of the paper and began giving the people of Menard County a real newspaper, and from the splendid patronage he is receiving, it is evident that the merchants and the public generally appreciate his efforts. The plant is now crowded for floor space, but he expects to erect a new building within a short time.

SOUTH LLANO NEWS

Since our last writing we have had another snow storm, that with the previous snow and rain, give us a good season.

Lane Hodges visited home folks last week-end.

Jack Hubbell and family visited his brother and family, Harry Hubbell, last Sunday.

A. Allsup and family were guests of their daughter, Mrs. Matt Burt, Sunday.

Mesdames F. Dupuy and F. Blardone were guests at the F. M. Hodges home last Saturday.

Burt Allsup captured a very large wild cat last week. Ask Bud Hodges the weight of the cat.

Mr. and Mrs. Gus Henderson and children left for their home last week-end, after attending the bed side of Mrs. Henderson's mother, who died in Junction last Wednesday, after several weeks' illness.

Our heart goes out to the dear orphan children who are left to battle life alone. Also to other bereaved ones: her aged father, especially. Quite a number from here attended the funeral Thursday.

THANKIN OUR CUSTOMERS

We wish to thank each and every one who has given us a part of their hauling through the year 1925.

We are going to continue the good work through 1926. Your hauling will be very much appreciated and given our very best attention. Our prices are reasonable.

Now in regard to trucking:

I have been in this service one-fifth of my life; I have learned some few things about trucking, and some things I haven't learned. Mud holes are some of the things I haven't learned all about. To be safe, I will say I have never had to stay in one over three days.

I haven't but one little truck; that's all, but I believe it will go anywhere any other will go. I use it for general use; also for emergency.

The roads are secondary; never too rough or muddy for a trip.

Would appreciate a share of your patronage. Call or see me for rates.

ELEMENTS OF SUCCESS

Every boy and every girl must have certain assets to achieve success—not material assets alone, but assets of character, and among the most important of these are ambition, industry, personality and thrift.

Ambition is the will to attain something. The desired object may be knowledge or honor or power, but whatever it is, the ambition to reach it must be backed by the willingness to work for it.

More wishes accomplish little without the aid of earnest application and industry.

The asset of personality is more elusive and seems to be born in some people without any effort on their part, but on the other hand, it may be acquired by everyone who will concentrate on his career and not let it be marred by carelessness and indifference.

To save a part of what one earns is another vital element in a successful life. Savings are not only insurance against the turns of fortune, but also a means of seizing golden opportunities, which are so often lost through the lack of a small amount of capital.

This brief sketch of some of the necessary qualities should be enough to show that there is no easy road or short cut to success. It means constant hard work and saving, and many sacrifices, but it is really worth them all through the ultimate feeling of accomplishment and the lasting happiness which it brings to its possessor.—Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. Walton says the recent rains and snow has put the ground in fine condition for breaking and getting ready for spring planting. The people in the London country are looking forward to a good crop year.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Heyman were in Menard Tuesday. Mr. Heyman attended the annual stockholders meeting of the Menard National Bank and was elected a member of the Board of Directors at this meeting. His son, Roscoe Heyman, is cashier of this bank. Mrs. Heyman visited at the Roscoe Heyman home.

County Judge Farmer and Supt. Cowles of the Junction school spent last Thursday visiting with the London school and report that the community is having one of the most successful years work that it has ever had.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Cherry and son, Jimmie Carroll, of Arkansas Pass, are visiting Mrs. Cherry's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Buck. Mr. Cherry went to Houston the first of the week for a few days and will probably return here for another visit before going home.

Prof. Patterson of the London school and Edgar Furr, business manager of the London School Booster, were in town Saturday in the interest of this publication, the next issue of which will come from the press this week end.

Howard Blackburn left last week-end for Camp Wood where he has a position in the First State Bank. Howard started out on his motorcycle, and the boys say he rode it one-third of the way and carried or pushed it the other two-thirds.

Scopes, a coterie of distinguished liberals had rushed to his defense, the Province of Ontario, Canada, returned to a beer basis and explorer Rold Amundsen, who on May 21 had undertaken an air-plane flight to the North Pole, failed to return to his base at Spitzbergen on scheduled time. Chicago experienced the hottest May 22 in 54 years, followed a few days later by a cold wave and damage to the fruit crop by frost in many places.

On May 28 the United States Court at Los Angeles ordered the cancellation of the E. L. Doheny lease of the Elk Hills naval oil reserve on the grounds that the transfer of the reserves from the navy to the Interior Department was illegal and the $100,000 "loan" to former Secretary A. B. Fall a bribe.

Those who recall the reams of fine, white print paper devoted to reports of the proceedings of the Senate committee's Teapot Dome investigation might have wondered why news of the verdict was not more conspicuously displayed.

Nor was the killing of half a dozen Chinese students by the foreign police of Shanghai, China, on May 30, reported as an event certain to have far-reaching and grave consequences.

A flurry followed Secretary Kellogg's warning to Mexico that her course threatened our peaceful relations with her; affairs in China seemed to go from bad to worse; the beer war and crime wave in Chicago increased in intensity and casualties.

Rodd Amundsen, rescued by a relief expedition, returned to Spitzbergen on June 18 and on June 23 Donald McMillan sailed north to the arctic accompanied by naval aviators whose return was ordered by Secretary Wilbur on August 20 when conditions made their proposed flight to the Pole too hazardous.

On June 19 the United States Court at Cheyenne, Wyoming, took issue with the Federal Court at Los Angeles and upheld the Sinclair lease of the Teapot Dome oil reserves. The two cases have been carried to two separate Federal courts of appeal, which, possibly, may also render different verdicts.

Toward the end of June the Riffians inflicted heavy losses upon the French in Morocco and the Italian debt partly collapsed, much to Dictator Mussolini's disappointment.

Throughout July the one absorbing topic of news was the Scopes trial. The preliminaries the trial itself, resulting on July 21 in the conviction of the accused, every possible feature of "local color" and "personalities" were exploited for domestic and distant foreign consumption. The grim aftermath, the sudden death of William J. Bryan in Dayton on July 26, only prolonged the controversy.

And yet, in other respects, July was a memorable month. After a delay of over three years France ratified two remaining parts of the Washington Arms Conference, one of them authorizing an international conference at Peking to readjust the Chinese tariff and deal with the problem of the extra-territoriality. Largely through American insistence, this conference met in Peking in October and reports indicate it may do much to better the Chinese outlook.

On July 8 France and Spain completed an agreement for concerted action against the Riffians, Marshall Petain took command on July 17.

Half a dozen American aviators joined out with the French, nominally in the service of the nominal Sultan of Morocco, and had bombed several villages and market places when word reached them that the American State Department regarded their activities as a violation of international law. They continued, however, to rain death in greater or smaller doses upon the belligerent and defenseless alike without fine distinction as to age or sex.

On July 21 Mussolini expelled George Seldes, American news correspondent, for sending out news that displeased the Italian dictator. On July 30 Elbert H. Gary called a meeting to organize a National Crime Commission, and on July 31 the French completed the evacuation of the Ruhr, formally relinquishing control a few weeks later.

August's most signal development was the failure to negotiate a renewal of the anthracite coal mine wage scale on August 4, the strike call of August 27 and closing of the mines at the end of the working day of August 31.

This, however, was not so newsworthy and interesting as Edward W. Browning's adoption on August 5, of a mature young woman, daughter of an immigrant, on the presumption that she was only a girl of sixteen.

Nor so spectacular as the big Ku Klux Klan parade and demonstration in Washington, D. C. August 8 and 9.

Between August 10 and August 18 the Belgian debt agreement was negotiated on terms very generous to the debtor. It was adequately reported except as to its effect upon the average American taxpayer. Nor was the full significance of the French-English settlement of August 26 clearly conveyed to American readers. England agreed to take in full payment two per cent a year for 62 years if the United States accepted the same terms. If not England reserves the right to require that France match payments to her with those demanded by America.

On September 1 two naval sea-planes, each carrying five men, left San Francisco for Honolulu. One was forced down soon after the start and the other failed to arrive in Hawaii. While the fate of its crew remained uncertain, the big navy dirigible, Shenandoah, was wrecked in Ohio, September 3, Commander Zachary Lansdowne and 13 of the crew losing their lives.

On September 5 Colonel, formerly General, Mitchell issued his arraignment of the army and navy aviation administration, thus precipitating a storm that was little if any allayed by rescue of the crew of the second plane in the Hawaiian flight on September 10.

President Coolidge on September 12 appointed a board of eminent men to investigate all branches of government aviation and Secretary Wilbur named a naval board to inquire into the causes of the Shenandoah disaster. The two boards began hearings on September 21, one in Washington and the other in Lakehurst, New Jersey.

In the meantime Col. Mitchell was ordered to Washington and on October 20 a court-martial was named to try him for violation of army regulations.

But aircraft was not allowed a monopoly of public attention. September 6 France found more trouble on her hands in a rebellion of the natives of Syria which she holds under League of Nations mandate and on September 13 the Federal Council of Churches issued the first of its six daily installments of reports on the progress and effect of national prohibition enforcement. The report aroused resentment among churches and prohibitionists.

The French debt mission arrived in Washington on September 23. Exactly what happened is still obscure. The effort was not conceded to have been a failure till New York bankers refused France a big loan because a full settlement had not been effected.

Naturally, amid so much of interest, the American public, through their newspapers, had little opportunity to follow closely the deliberations of the Assembly of the League of Nations. Nor was the loss considerable, for in the main the sixth Assembly of the League was regarded, even by some pro-Leagueurs, as wanting in special interest and importance. During the League sessions, however, the long pending security pact was again brought to the fore and a conference arranged to formulate terms.

On September 26 the navy submarine S. 51 was rammed by the steamer City of Rome, off Block Island, coast of Massachusetts, only three of its crew of 36 escaping with their lives.

Early in October the premiers and foreign ministers of France, Belgium and Germany gathered at Locarno, Switzerland, the first important conference since the World War in which German delegates met those of the victor nations on an equal footing and, through the good offices of Foreign Secretary Chamberlain of England, negotiated an agreement where by Germany accepted the status quo in Western Europe, eliminating Alsace-Lorraine as a possible cause of war in the immediate future. France, Belgium and Germany engaged to arbitrate their differences and England and Italy obligated themselves to take sides against the country declining to arbitrate or refusing to abide by an arbitration award. The entry of Germany into the League of Nations with a permanent seat in the Council was also provided for. The pact, agreed to on October 15 and initiated the BUILD NOW!

As a matter of fact there is no inopportune time for building. The quicker you get into the new home of your own—the quicker it will be "all yours."

Many experienced builders prefer winter's lively building days. There is a crispness in the air which makes for rapid and good construction.

Certainly materials of all kinds are cheaper in the winter of each year. Our price scales have not been lower in many moons. We are also headquarters in this territory for building materials and supplies of all kinds.

SUGGESTION FOR THE NEW YEAR

LET US BE YOUR GROCER IN 1926.

—S—S—

Although we were in business only a few months in 1925, our business volume was very satisfactory, and to our friends throughout the county, who turned their business our way, we wish to express our appreciation and thanks.

We are encouraged to make preparations for an even greater volume of business the coming year, and will be prepared to give better service than ever before. Your continued friendship and favors are earnestly solicited and will be appreciated to the fullest extent.

May the New Year be bountiful, and may you all enjoy greater prosperity, is the wish we extend.

following day, was accompanied by less specific agreements designed to relieve the tension in Eastern Europe.

On October 7 the Pittsburgh pennant winners of the National League and the Washington leaders of the American League began a series of contests to determine the 1925 baseball championship. The series went the limit of the first four in seven games and on October 15, the day the Locarno Conference reached its final agreement, the thousands who thronged the ball park, and a score-board and radio audience of many millions cheered the returns of the decisive game in which the Pittsburgh team, coming from behind in the game as well as the series, won the coveted prize and the big end of the money.

Scarcely had the cheering subsided when Greece and Bulgaria got into a wrangle and started to fight on October 20. The Council of the League of Nations met in Paris three days later and ordered a cessation of hostilities. An ultimatum on October 26 gave each country 24 hours to withdraw its forces within its own borders and the next day Greece, the apparent aggressor, bowed to the command.

France's difficulties increased in October at home over money and taxation and abroad because of a rebellion of her mandate subjects in Syria, whose disorders in Damascus resulted in the storming of that ancient city by French artillery without sufficient warning to foreigners, thus arousing outside criticism and making necessary the recall of the military governor, long known in army circles as the "political general."

Not ready to comply with the Socialists' demand for a "capital levy," and unable to increase the national income in any manner acceptable to the Chamber and Senate, Premier Painleve resigned October 27, but resumed office a few days later with a new cabinet which excluded Caillaux, the most determined opponent of the capital levy. Painleve still made no progress and his government fell in November. Foreign Minister Briand failed in his first effort to form a new ministry but after Baumer and Herriot had also tried and failed, Briand on November 28, effected a combination representing only a minority but with a divided opposition.

The Mitchell court-martial met October 23 and began its series of pyrotechnic sessions, while the President's aircraft board, its hearings over, digested its evidence and discussed its final report and while the Shenandoah inquiry struggled with a maze of conflicting testimony.

As the year grew old and time for the reassembling of Congress approached the American public, large and small taxpayers alike, were given ample assurance that the administration and both parties in Congress were agreed that Federal taxes be reduced, though they were not at all in accord as to what classes of taxpayers should benefit most by the promised reductions.

Naturally this has been very gratifying reading, but wasn't the Rhineland divorce trial a whale of a news story!—Dearborn Independent.

THE POWER BEHIND THE LAW.

The law, statute, is presumed to be the formal statement of crystallized public opinion, desire, or sentiment. Whether it simply recognizes long-established custom, tradition, or habit, or authoritatively formalizes new conditions for its being is presumed to be the same—an expression of well defined public opinion.

The power behind the law, any statute law, is measured by the extent and earnestness of this same public opinion. In effect the law assumes to express the will of the majority of the people in a community, a state, or a nation. In so far as it does this clearly it may be said to be effective.

Granting the correctness of this premise, and it is not likely to be questioned seriously, the following points must be obvious:

First. Any law that is not authorized and supported by an unquestionable majority of public opinion cannot be effectively and justly enforced. The minority cannot long control the majority under the representative form of government.

Second. If through close organization and shrewd political manipulation a minority of public opinion succeeds in placing a law on the statute books and sets in motion legal machinery to compel the majority of public opinion to obey it, the majority has the inherent right to withhold its respect for and obedience to that law.

Third. The effectiveness or ineffectiveness of a law if determined by the measure of public opinion voluntarily supporting it and observing its provisions.

The greater the number of laws, the more difficult it will be to gauge the amount of public opinion back of each one. Conversely, the smaller the number of laws, the easier will it be to measure the extent of their support by public opinion.

A law is enforced by public opinion. The policeman and the judge, with all their legal equipment, are but agents of the people, and they have no power save that delegated to them by the will of the people.

This line of reasoning, and we submit its soundness to our readers, leads to this conclusion:

First. No law should be passed by any lawmaking body until it has been definitely established that it will be approved and supported by a majority of public opinion.

Second. When it is evident, or even generally assumed, that a law has not the active and hearty support of a majority of public opinion, that law, with the least possible delay, ought to be submitted to all of the people affected by it for a definite expression of their opinion or their will concerning it.

Dangerous Cough—How to End it

To quickly end a dangerous cough there is a very simple treatment which gives almost instant relief and often breaks the cough entirely in 24 hours. This treatment is based on the famous Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You take just one teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but also loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of the coughing. So the worst cough usually disappears quickly. Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children, too—no harmful drugs. Very economical, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

FEDERAL AGENTS IN A LITTLE BOOZE RAID

Prohibition enforcement officers, 3 in all, paid an unpleasant call to several places here Wednesday afternoon. Accounts say that their findings were everything except enticing, amounting to hardly more than a dozen bottles of "cool" foamy beer. These were hurled in the yard of the first place where they made their call.

One of the victims reports that he was deceived by one of his own kinsmen who spent the holidays here, enjoying the kick, as they imbibed freely. A warrant in possession of the officers as they appeared on the scene, signed by the loyal kinsfolk, proved what spywork can accomplish.—Saguin Gazette.
