To Organize P-TO Next Tuesday

A public meeting to form a Parent-Teacher Organization for patrons of Winters Independent School District has been set for next Tuesday, May 22, at 7 p.m., in the Winters Community Center.

Planners said the proposal to organize a PTO here has been initiated to "promote better relationships and cooperation between parents, teachers and students, and the school administration, with the welfare of the students foremost." There are "no axes to grind," planners said, but only a sincere effort to offer "assistance in the educational process of the children of the community."

Churches Will Observe Soil Stewardship Week

"The citizens of Texas have a mutual interest in the soil and water resources which God has entrusted to our care," Governor W. P. Clements said in a proclamation calling for observance of the week of May 20-27 as "Soil Stewardship Week" in Texas.

"Interdependence" is the theme of the special observance, and Winters churches have been provided special material to be distributed to congregations at the beginning of the week, by Texas Soil and Water Conservation Districts' Soil Stewardship Committee, which are sponsoring the observance.

In his proclamation, Gov. Clements said, "It is the concern and responsibility of Texans that soil and water resources be conserved and managed properly to assure the welfare of all citizens of this State. Soil and Water Conservation Districts throughout this State have dedicated almost forty years to provide leadership through which landowners initiate a program to conserve and manage these resources properly."

The Governor continued, "Soil and Water Conservation Districts are devoted to continuing their efforts to maintain the wise use and development of our soil and water resources in cooperation with landowners and operators, agencies and individuals."

It has been many years since there has been an active Parent-Teacher Assn. or PTO in this community, it was pointed out, and there are many areas where such an organization would be of benefit to the school and to the students.

All parents of children in grades from kindergarten through high school have been urged to attend this organizational meeting.

Getting Married in Early West Texas

Gold is where you find it and so are stories.

Imagine my surprise when I opened a copy of "Frontier Times" for March, 1926 and found a story, copied from the Dallas News, by J. B. Masters concerning his interview with C. M. Hunt of Bradshaw, father of Wayne and Opal Hunt, who now operate the Audra Mercantile Store at Bradshaw.

The story follows:

"C. M. Hunt, one of the pioneer settlers of West Texas, who is now engaged in the banking and mercantile interests at Bradshaw and an officer in the Taylor County Old Settlers' Association, was in an animated mood when he was asked to review the life of the pioneers."

"As another Christmas is just fading from memory I am reminded of the first marriage that ever occurred in this section among the white settlers. It was in 1879. Sawdie, an old bachelor, and Frony Hinard, an old maid, had sparked long enough—they wanted to be tied. The cowpunchers had been watching this courting quite awhile and were betting on the day when the parson would stop these old kids bashful behavior and squirrel-squinting smiles. At length the night arrived and the dust in every cow trail in these quarters was stirred."

Here the speaker was interrupted: "What was the full name of the groom? Sawdie who, or what Sawdie?"

"Young man," Hunts' eyes flickered with fun and his mind rippled over a period of forty years, "we didn't question settlers who came West about their private lives. We called a man by the sound that he gave to himself. Nobody especially rared to rake up kin-folks on the frontier. And not many people bothered us with their biography. The groom was Sawdie—just Sawdie. I guess that if his and Frony's family ever multiplied the young ones were called Little Sawdies unless they had occasion to drift further West."

"Sawdie and Frony were at the two-room log cabin that Christmas night when John Creager, Sawdie's best man, arrived. Creager's coat wasn't a stylish cutaway garment, and his trousers were short of cloth. He was an exceptionally tall cowpuncher and extra sized breeches couldn't be bought this side of Fort Worth. In fact, he didn't have any Sunday pants, and he borrowed any pair of trousers that the others were not using at the camp, which stopped halfway between the knees and the shootups. He wore white summer socks, from necessity, you might surmise."

"After all the cowpunchers had arrived they were so tightly crammed between the log walls that, when Sawdie and Frony were asked to join hands for the ceremony, Sawdie was too bashful and scared to ask the boys to widen out so that he could loosen his right arm that was wedged in the

Harold Allen Died Here Last Thursday

Harold (Rusty) Allen, 58, died at 8 a.m. Thursday of last week enroute to North Runnels Hospital, after suffering an apparent heart attack.

Funeral services were held at 4 p.m. Friday in Winters Memorial Chapel with the Rev. Virgil James, pastor of the Wilmeth Baptist Church, and Mr. Bruce Black, minister of the Main Street Church of Christ, officiating.

Masonic graveside services were held at the Wingate Cemetery. Burial was under direction of Winters Funeral Home.

Mr. Allen was born at Wingate, Nov. 11, 1920, son of the late Dick and Myrtle Smith Allen. He had lived in the Wingate-Winters area all of his life and was a rancher and stockfarmer.

He married Marie Burkett, May 30, 1942, at Winters.

He was a veteran of World War II, and a member of Winters Post 9193, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the Winters American Legion Post. He also was a 32nd degree Mason, and a member of the Wingate Masonic Lodge.

He recently was elected as junior commander of the VFW Post for 1979-80.

Survivors include his wife; one son, Rusty Jr., of Winters; three daughters, Mrs. Larry Hafer of Denver, Colo., Mrs. Kenneth Moore of Lubbock and Mrs. Dwayne Brandon of Susanville, Calif.; three sisters, Mrs. Louis Scott of Andrews, Mrs. Joe Wilson of Tatum, N.M., and Mrs. Juanita Wilson of Odessa; and three grandchildren.

Pallbearers were D. E. Pinegar, Barney Puckett, Jim King, B. J. Walker, Bob Webb, and John Hancock.

jam, and, if I remember right, he was tied to Frony with the left hand clasped."

"A big beef supper awaited the crowd, spiced, of course, with Kentucky sour mash."

"After the ceremony and feast the fiddlers began to tune up the catgut, which was a signal for the gents to arm the ladies to the center of the floor."

"The dance started with the old quadrille and as many as could crowd upon the floor turned about to the tune of the fiddlers. And then the old square dance was carried out while the ladies and the gents promenaded and paraded."

"As the dance continued the sour mash jugs gurgled oftener. At 2 o'clock the next morning John Creager fell, a drunk. But that caused no interruption. Bert Brewer was selected for the new best man in John's stead, and the dancers romped on until daylight peeped in at us across the hills."

Although civilization has presented us with a more progressive living it is not as exciting as in the pioneer days when a wedding was the main social event and participated in by everyone in the community.

Stocking Ponds With Florida, "Super" Bass

Florida bass, Texas largemouth bass and the "Super" bass cross are now being reared commercially in Texas for stocking private ponds and club lakes.

That word comes from Dr. Joe T. Lock of Overton, area fisheries specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Florida bass are a strain of largemouth bass that grow larger than the native species, points out

Lock. They are distinguished from native largemouths by the number of scales on the lateral line. Florida bass have about 70 scales while Texas bass have less than 67. Florida bass also have smaller scales and more surface area in appendages of the intestinal tract.

According to Lock, the Florida strain seems to be more effective at reducing populations of stunted sunfish in farm ponds. Florida bass will cross

Farmers Union Will Hear Talk On Estate Planning

Don Gray, representing the State Farmers Union organization, will be the principal speaker at a meeting of the Runnels County Farmers Union Thursday, May 17, at 7:30 p.m. in the meeting room of the Winters Housing Authority.

Gray's subject will be "Estate Planning." Spokesmen for FU said this will be a most important meeting, "to assist members, and others, in planning settlement of estates when you die." In so many instances, they said, "the government gets more than a fair share of your money, instead of your heirs." Gray, with degrees in law and agri-business and experience as a farmer and as an attorney, will explain some of the things which must be done to keep your estate in the family. He will be available for private consultation without charge.

This meeting will be open to all Runnels County citizens, and membership in Farmers Union is not necessary to attend.

Loeffler Proposes Alternative To Gasoline Rationing Plans

Texas Congressman Tom Loeffler proposed an alternative to gasoline rationing during House debate on the Carter Administration's rationing proposals.

Speaking against rationing, Loeffler called upon the Administration to "pursue utilization of the Strategic Petroleum Reserve to supply additional crude oil during possible time of severe supply interruption."

Loeffler noted that the SPR is distinctly different from the Naval Petroleum Reserve and other reserves which would supply the military in times of need, and that with native bass to produce a faster growing fish than either strain which is commonly referred to as "Super" bass.

Information on sources of these bass for stocking ponds is available from Extension wildlife and fisheries specialists at Texas A&M University or from local county Extension agents.

"the SPR is already in place and can supply sufficient crude to meet projected shortfall requirements for at least a year and a half, until increased exploration efforts can bring on-stream additional reserves."

"The gasoline rationing plan proposed by the Administration will cost $2 billion a year to administer, require over 20,000 governmental employees, and will take nine months or longer to implement," Loeffler said. "The SPR exists today with some 10 million barrels of crude sitting there, and these supplies could be brought on-stream much quicker and certainly at a far lesser burden to the taxpayer than would the rationing plan."

Loeffler, a member of the Energy and Power Subcommittee of the Commerce committee, testified against rationing before the Rules Committee.

Blood Pressure Tests Planned For May 23

As the month of May has been designated "National Hypertension Month," free blood pressure tests will be given at the Winters Multi-Purpose Center, 142 W. Dale, May 23, from 9:30 a.m. to 12 noon. According to the Texas Department of Health, more than two million Texans suffer from high blood pressure, and run a greater risk of heart and kidney disease, or stroke. Most people with high blood pressure have no symptoms, there are no specific warning signs, although persistent headaches, dizziness, fatigue, tension and shortness of breath sometime go with high blood pressure. The one sure way to find out if you have high blood pressure is to have a blood pressure test. Hypertension is more prevalent among blacks than in whites, especially black women. Among those with hypertension, one-fourth are likely to be overweight and have diabetes. In addition to blood pressure tests, weight and diabetes screening will be done at the May 23 clinic.

Reports from Washington

Our Changing Rights

It was my privilege to speak before the San Antonio Bar Association at their Law Day Luncheon speaker. I'd like to share with you a few of the things I discussed concerning the topic, "Our Changing Rights".

Perhaps no man among this nation's Founding Fathers spoke more eloquently or passionately about individual freedom and the role of the federal government in interfering in that freedom than did Thomas Jefferson. In his first inaugural address, he clearly stated his mind:

"A wise and frugal government, which shall restrain men from injuring one another, which shall leave them otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits of industry and improvement... This is the sum of good government, and this is necessary to close the circles of our felicity."

Think about that for a moment: "... otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits..." I think Jefferson, as one of the guiding forces behind our Constitution and the aims and goals of that instrument, left little room for doubt as to the intent of establishing a nation and government where individual rights are paramount.

And that he would choose to use the very word, REGULATE, in that speech almost two hundred years ago gives us some idea about how long the concept of "regulation" has been in such proximity to our philosophy of federal government.

What would Thomas Jefferson have to say about the far-reaching tentacles of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration? The Consumer Product Safety Commission? The Environmental Protection Agency? The Department of Health, Education and Welfare? The Department of Energy? And on and on and on....

"There oughta' be a law"

I think Jefferson might well ask, "How did you let this happen?"

I will tell you how this happened: we started down this path of stifling overregulation the first time a person, disgruntled because a free society puts such demands upon the individual, said, "There oughta' be a law".

That kind of thinking, which epitomizes the concept of government regulation, represents a fundamental social philosophy of government regulation — one which has increasingly characterized our society since the days of the New Deal.

The perception that many areas of society will benefit from government control is pervasive. It has been in the public consciousness for a long time, and it will take a great deal of effort and discussion if we are ever to change that premise. Also fueling the regulation fire, but on a more subtle basis, is a line of economic thought which says the federal government should find some way to take from the rich and give to the poor.

"Income redistribution", it's called. A Robin Hood approach, sometimes popularized, but inconsistent with the economic right of the individual as expressed in the free enterprise system.

Some argue that unfettered competition within the private sector is or should be a thing of the past... that we should have a duty to insure the financial viability of every person in this nation, no matter what, and to spread all the money in the United States around equally to all persons, regardless of their individual contribution to our society.

Of course, to do so takes away the one element essential to the unequalled growth and prosperity of this country which has made us the envy and the economic phoenix of the world. That key element is "incentive", and without incentive, we will soon find that there is less and less prosperity, and that no one will have enough.

So much for the philosophy, pro and con, about government regulation in general terms. Next week, I would like to discuss specific problems with regulations today.

Hog Feeds Being Checked For Sulfa Residues

A program to help pork producers detect sulfa residues in withdrawal rations is now into its third month. Dr. James M. Armstrong, veterinarian with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, reports.

"Feed samples are being tested from 60 hog farms in Texas, as well as 780 farms in nine other states. The samples are being collected by Extension personnel and others in major pork producing states. Before the program ends this summer, it is estimated that at least 4,000 farms will be sampled in about 20 states," Armstrong says.

Sulfa residues are showing up in hogs from farms where the producer uses no sulfa, he points out.

Consequently, samples are being taken Woodrow spent the day Saturday with the Norvell Alexanders.

Hazel Dietz spent Saturday with his mother Mrs. Lillie Dietz at Ballinger Center.

Visiting with the Earl Coopers over the weekend were Guenter Reif of Houston, Nira Champagne of Houston, Tierie Massyn of South Africa.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jacob spent the weekend with their daughter Mr. and Mrs. Mike Kozelsky and family in Snyder.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Fuller of Ballinger were out to see Mrs. Amber Fuller Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Amber Fuller, Fairy and Wilbur Alcorn were in San Angelo Sunday and attended church with the Johnny Densons at the West Side Baptist.

Around another inch of rain fell last of the week and some folks had to much hail.

from these farms as well as from farms where sulfa is used, since the program is aimed at helping producers pinpoint the contamination sources. Samples are also being taken on farms where feed is farm-mixed and on farms using commercially mixed feeds," Armstrong adds.

Hogs with more than one-tenth part per million sulfa residue in their carcasses at slaughter may not be sold for human consumption. Residues result when hogs consume sulfa contaminated feeds or water.

With the limited number of feed samples taken to date, about 10 to 15 percent have sulfa levels that could cause violations. While there is no connection between the feed sampling program and tissue sampling at packing plants, reports show that of all hog carcasses checked at the packing plants, from 10 to 15 percent have violative sulfa residues.

Hogs must be off sulfa-medicated feed at least 15 days before slaughter.

"The problem comes," Armstrong explains, "when the producer feeds a sulfa-contaminated withdrawal ration that he believes is sulfa-free." This contamination can come from feed-mixing equipment, on the farm or in a commercial mill, that was not adequately cleaned following its use to mix sulfa-medicated feeds. It can also come from producer's mixing clean feed with sulfa-contaminated feed ingredients, such as protein supplement, purchased from another source.

"Another source of contamination," Armstrong says, "comes from hogs' eating manure that was dropped by sulfa-contaminated hogs in

Plan to share a ride with friends to the beach or the mountains during the summer.

You'll have more time to visit, and you'll reduce travel costs and save gasoline, points out Pat Seaman, a housing and home furnishings specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Some kelp tablets contain high arsenic levels, points out Mary K. Sweeten, a foods and nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Researchers report high levels of arsenic in the urine of people who took kelp tablets. Arsenic exposure of industrial workers is linked with cancer, Mrs. Sweeten reports.

Spraying Of Pecan Trees

"When should I spray my pecan trees?" This question is asked more often than any other of the County Extension Agents office.

There is no need to spray your pecan trees for the pecan nut casebearer until the insect appears, which will probably be after May 22 in our area. Any spraying before this date will be money wasted, except for the benefit of the zinc that may have been added.

Our office is watching the activity of this insect very closely and will alert you as to the exact time you need to spray, but again, let me caution you that if you spray too early, you are throwing your money away. In fact, it is advisable to have 1% to 2% entries into the nuts before sprays are applied.

Once we see the casebearer become active, we will advertise exactly when is the best time to spray. I realize it is difficult to have your trees sprayed at exactly the right time, but it is of no benefit if you spray before these insects emerge.

Effective insecticides include Guthion, Malathion, Sevin or Zolene. Before using any of these materials, read the label directions and follow carefully.

Growers should add 2 pounds of Zinc Sulfate to 1 1/4 quarts of NZN per 100 gallons of water to the spray mixture to control zinc deficiencies.

Duter or Benlate can be added to spray mixture to control scab, powdery mildew and stick shuck disease.

Select beans, peas and lentils with a bright, uniform color, a consumer marketing information specialist recommends.

Loss of color usually indicates long storage, lack of freshness and a product that will take

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Lewis Smith had as their visitors over the weekend Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Hill of Lubbock.

Mr. and Mrs. Grady Patterson and granddaughter, Shrandia had as their guests after the church services Thursday night for a late dinner, the evangelist, Bob Parrish, the singer and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Ellis of Ballinger, the Blackwell Baptist pastor and his wife, the Rev. and Mrs. Buddy Trull, Mr. and Mrs. Truman Parker of Bronte and Savannah Thompson. On Saturday night they had another late dinner after church services with Mr. and Mrs. Dale Ellis of Ballinger, Mr. and Mrs. Jewel Turner (Mrs. Patterson's sister and her husband), and Mrs. Lester Webb of Bronte, Mrs. Charity Pursell and Savannah Thompson.

Mrs. Lester Webb of Bronte also visited with her daughter and her family, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Poehls and daughters, Lana and Stephanie, and other friends and attended the revival two nights.

Blackwell had a bad thunderstorm early Sunday morning. Lots of thunder, lightening and real high wind and received two-tenths of an inch of rain and then again early Sunday morning another thunderstorm. Lots of thunder and lightening, not as bad a wind but received eight-tenths of an inch of rain so that made one inch of rain for both mornings.

Mrs. Ben Henderson of Hermleigh visited Tuesday afternoon and night with Mrs. Thelma Fry and on Wednesday with her sister, Savannah Thompson. Mrs. Henderson reported that they hadn't had the good rains around Hermleigh that we had had in and around

Certified Seed Pays

In side-by-side field tests, cotton researchers have proven that certified seed produces higher yields than farmer-saved or select seed of the same varieties. And the extra production — as high as 18% more lint — is more than enough to pay for the cost of planting the certified varieties.†

Before you plant another row of non-certified seed, consider the advantages you get from Pioneer® brand certified cotton planting seed:

- Certified cotton planting seed from Pioneer has not undergone genetic deterioration in the field. Volunteer plants and undesirable cross-pollinations have been eliminated.
- Certified cotton planting seed from Pioneer is free from pests and weeds which often accompany non-certified varieties. You can be sure of the purity and uniformity in the seed and the crop it produces.
- Certified cotton planting seed from Pioneer is carefully handled and stored to avoid contamination by other varieties. Then, if it doesn't meet high standards for germination and purity, it's not used.

Sewing With Silks

Sew with silks to create fashions for summer.

Silks come in a variety of fabrications from the beginner's best-bet, broadcloth, to delicate transparent chiffon, to the lustrous crepe de chine, to slightly nubby, sporty-looking noil.

Silk linen comes in weights from light handkerchief to heavy quilting.

Many silks combined with other natural or man-made fibers produce lower-priced, washable blends.

BUYING SILKS

When buying silk fabric, check the stability of the fabric. It should resist slipping and twisting.

Check the drape of the fabric. It should fall naturally when hung.

Silk should have a dry "hand" (feel dry when touched). This makes it easy to work with and signifies the fabric has a rich body.

CUTTING

In cutting silk, follow the pattern guide. Always use sharp, long-blade shears.

If using nubby or coarse/crisp silks, such as tussah, cut pieces singly. The folded fabric may stick to itself and not lay flat.

When cutting soft, slippery, lightweight silk, pin to lightweight paper for more stability.

NOTIONS

On fine silk fabrics, use a toothed tracing wheel without carbon paper.

Also, use chalk or white carbon paper rather than wax—the grease will stain the fabric.

Tailor tacks can always be used.

Select a natural cotton 60's thread or cotton 50's for heavier fabric.

Silk thread is acceptable for basting but not for final stitching—it is too strong. Always use a weaker thread than the fabric for final stitching so that in case of stress the thread breaks instead of fabric tearing.

Use fine silk pins to prevent pin hole markings.

MACHINE ADJUSTMENTS

Use size 11 sharp needle for fine fabric and size 13 for heavier weights.

To avoid puckering, machine tension should be loose and well-balanced. The presser foot pressure should be light.

Use 10-12 stitches per inch for fine silks and 8-10 for heavier silks.

SEAM FINISHES

Seam finish will depend on the amount of tailoring and fabric weight.

Sheer silks, such as chiffons and georgettes, because of the fabric's transparency, should have enclosed seams such as French or flat-felled. These are used on straight or slightly curved seams only.

On heavier, unlined silks, use bound seams or a Hong Kong finish.

For lightweight silks, press seam open with one-fourth inch of the raw seam edge turned under and stitched.

A plain seam with pinked edges or hand or machine overcasting can be used on firmly woven silks.

INTERFACINGS

Interfacings are very important for the shape of the garment. Always try to use a natural fiber.

Do not use fusible interfacing on fine sheer silks. Use interfacings that are lighter in weight than the outside garment.

Always remember to use quality interfacings for quality fabrics.

PRESSING

When pressing silks, use a clean steam iron with plenty of steam.

The temperature setting should correspond to the component fiber with the lowest heat tolerance.

Use a press cloth to prevent shine.

Creamy Egg and Macaroni Bake

4 ounces (1 cup) elbow macaroni

1-10½ oz. can condensed cream of celery soup

¾ c. milk

2 T. finely chopped green pepper

1 T. minced onion

1 tsp. Worcestershire

½ tsp. salt

4 hard-cooked eggs, sliced

Buttered bread crumbs

Grated Parmesan cheese

Cook macaroni as directed on package. Drain. Meanwhile, in a saucepan, combine soup, milk, green pepper, onion, Worcestershire and salt. Stir and heat to piping hot. Arrange a layer of egg slices in bottom of buttered 1½ quart casserole. Cover with a layer of macaroni. Repeat layering twice. Pour soup mixture over all. Combine buttered crumbs and cheese. Sprinkle over top of casserole. Bake in 350 degree oven about 20 minutes. Serves 4.

Accent On Health

Texas Department of Health
Raymond T. Moore, M.D., Commissioner

It may nestle among the weeds as a bush or climb upward as a vine.

It may go by the different names of poison ivy, poison oak or poison sumac. But by any name, it can cause a minor skin irritation lasting a few days or a weeping, itching ailment which may go on for weeks.

Human contamination, says the Texas Department of Health, often is the result of picnicking, hiking, playing in grass, weeds or woods, or working in overgrown areas.

The offending plants are found from Canada to the West Indies and from Mexico to Maine, says the State Health Department, and spring and summer outdoor activity are likely times for exposure.

The plants may grow in boggy areas and upland pastures, in hedgegrow thickets and open woods, in cornfields and along fences, in back yards and city parks and on railroad rights-of-way. The plants may be almost anywhere. Experts say that few plants are less demanding—a little sun and soil and as little rain as 10 inches a year.

Their blossoms, their mistletoe-like berries, and leaves of various shades of colors during the growing season give them a beauty belying their toxic touch.

One thing is common among the plants: the leaves cluster together in threes. This is the one identifying characteristic. But although the shape of the leaves is generally egg-shaped with a pointed end, the leaves even on the same plant may vary widely. Their edges may be smooth, deeply lobed or saw-toothed, says the Health Department.

Texans normally refer to poison oak as the bushy-type plant, while the climbing version is known as poison ivy. In East Texas, poison sumac may be the common name.

For all practical—and itching purposes—they are the same and should be avoided. All parts of the plant—leaves, flowers, berries, twigs, stems and root—can be dangerous.

The poison of poison ivy is a phenolic or carbolic substance called urushiol, which appears as a sticky, resinous, saplike fluid. It can be—and often is—transferred to different parts of the face and body by the hands.

The plant appears to be most virulent in the spring when the plants are young, frail and easily bruised and the sap is most readily released. As the seasons advance, the plants become tougher. But in winter the twigs, roots and leaves still present a danger. People should remember this if attempting to pull or dig up a plant, advises the Texas Department of Health.

Urushiol may be carried from the plant on clothing, shoes, tools, by animals and by smoke from burning plants. It is virtually indestructible.

More than one housewife, sorting her husband's work clothes preparatory to washing them has received enough urushiol to suffer its consequences. In some cases, this residue on clothing has produced a full blown

Here are some things to avoid in planning kitchen renovation

Along with the basic "do's" of kitchen planning, such as creating a convenient work triangle, there are of course numerous "don'ts." According to professional planners, here are some things to avoid.

• Don't install a built-in oven too high. When open, the door should be approximately the same height as the counter-top. Then it's easy to load.

• Don't waste corners. For example, if you place your dishwasher near a corner on one wall and your range next to it on the adjacent side wall, you block off the corner and lose its storage capacity.

• Don't install a built-in oven next to a range. This not only creates a fire hazard, it eliminates space for cooking utensils alongside the range.

• Don't place a refrigerator or oven near a doorway, where the door of the appliance would block traffic when open.

• Don't locate any work area near a closed door. A swinging door can cause injury, or damage itself and the cabinets or appliances on the other side.

• Don't install a built-in oven without counter space alongside. You need a place to rest prepared food while loading or unloading the oven.

• Don't locate a dishwasher

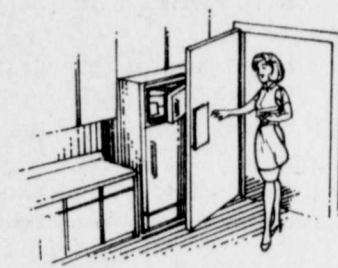

DON'T PLACE SINK too close to range. A sink placed too close to the range can result in flesh burns, grease fires and excessive spilling.

around the corner from the sink without a cabinet in between. It's too easy to fall over the open door of the appliance, bruising yourself and possibly breaking dishes.

• Don't place the sink too close to the range. Proximity can result in spills, flesh burns and grease fires.

• Don't put a refrigerator or tall utility cabinet in the middle of a run of cabinets, where it would tend to obstruct work flow.

• Don't have an aisle narrower than 48 inches. You need this much "walk space," considering that cabinet and/or appliance doors may open out 24 inches.

DON'T LET DOORS create conflicting action. Keep all work areas away from closed doors. A swinging door can cause injury, as well as damage itself and appliances and cabinetry on the other side.

Lawns Slow To Respond

Home owners have been very disappointed at the response of their lawns this Spring, especially those having St. Augustine lawn. Up to 90% of some St. Augustine lawns were winter killed. Couple this with some heavy infestation of grub worms and we have a real problem, said Turner.

If you are one of these unfortunate people who have this problem, we suggest you treat your lawn with copperas at the rate of 10 pounds per 1000 sq. ft. and also provide it an application of ammonium sulfate at the rate of 10 pounds per 1000 sq. ft. and then pour the water to the treated area. Many people will mix these two products (Copperas and Ammonium Sulfate) together and apply at the same time, since this helps to get a more even application of the Copperas. Try not to get the Copperas (Iron Sulfate) on your sidewalk, since it will stain them a not so nice, rust color. I suggest you sweep off your walks before you go to watering.

The thatch has built up on some St. Augustine lawns that I have examined to the extent you may need to pull out this dead material, so the new runners can cover more readily. This is especially a problem where you do not have a grass catcher in your lawn mower.

The grubs—well, we can't do much good treating these right now, but mark your calendar to treat your lawn for grubs mid-July to mid-August.
