SPECIAL EDITION OF THE EAGLE BEFORE HOLIDAYS

During the three years of the present management of The Eagle, there has never been a special edition of the paper. During these three years the advertising patronage of the paper has been so far above the average for a town of this size, that we have never felt that the kind of special editions usually issued was necessary.

It is often the custom to get out special editions and charge exorbitant prices for advertising, pick up a lot of concerns that do not advertise regularly, etc., and as a consequence advertising volume drops off for a while.

The Eagle's special edition will not be of this kind. We have gone to a considerable expense for the 12-page paper that we will issue, but the advertising rates will be the same as for the regular editions.

Practically every business institution of the town is a regular advertiser of this paper now, and we hope to have them increase their space for the special issue.

We have made special arrangements to take care of the needs of our customers for the first two weeks in December, and have hundreds of cuts and advertising layouts that will be furnished free to our customers. Practically anything in illustrations of Junction are full of new merchandise and the people want to know about it. We offer the merchants the opportunity to tell them in the modern illustrated way, and we urge our readers to buy their Holiday goods at home. You will find here in Junction all the things you need and the prices are as low as you will find anywhere. Before you send your money away, try the local stores.

This special edition will be in the mails for Friday, December 19th.

R. H. Mayfield was in Junction Sunday. Mr. Mayfield lives in Llano and does a large amount of cotton buying. He says that if the farmers could be induced to plant a good grade of cotton instead of the short staple, "half and half," they would realize more on labor.

Only a short time until it will be too late to get your Holiday Greeting cards. Better call at The Eagle office and let us take your order now. Engraved, embossed or printed cards to fit every purse.

ERNEST HAMER PLAYING PROFESSIONAL FOOTBALL

From numerous clipping from the Philadelphia dailies and articles in the Franklin Athletic Association Official Organ, 'Tex' Hamer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex J. Hamer, is still adding to his well established reputation as a star player on the University team.

Ernest is now playing professional football each week-end and is pulling down a fine salary. The team of which he is full back, is now third from the top in the league composed of some twenty teams.

The following is taken from one of the several accounts of his playing which appeared recently in the Franklin Field program:

"Tex Hamer, captain of the University of Pennsylvania football squad last year, is making good with a bang in the ranks of professional football.

Tex has been a real star in every game played this season by the Yellow Jackets. A consistent ground gainer himself, Hamer also is in the game every minute showing interference with his running mates in the backfield when they have the ball.

Hamer has been doing a great deal of the kicking for the Frankford squad, and doing it well. Tex has mastered the art of kicking off from midfield with out a tee, and seldom do his kickoffs after a score or at the beginning of a game stop until they have gone beyond the opposition's goal line, and are brought by the officials with the defending team having no chance to run them back.

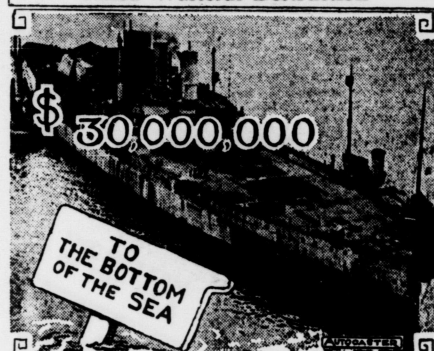

Hamer's line bucking has been terrific. The big Penn man has been hitting the line with the best in the league. He has great speed for such a big man and, as a result, is equally dangerous off-tackle or occasionally on an end run.

Hamer throws passes as well as he kicks or runs the ball, and as a result the opposition is always kept guessing when Tex receives the ball. And he is backing up the Frankford line in great style.

But what appeals to the home club's followers more than anything else, probably is the courage and absolute thoughtlessness of personal injury with which Hamer fights all the time. Twice last week-end, once against Cleveland and twice against State Island, Hamer recovered fumbles which might have been turned into touchdowns by the opponents.

Deputy Game Warden Will Emsley went to the Floyd Little ranch Saturday in response to a phone call from Mr. Little, and arrested a man, giving him name as C. L. Taylor, from Brownwood, who, with another man, had been hunting in a pasture leased from Mr. Little by Sam P. Harbin and others of Dallas. Mr. Little was unable to get close enough to the younger man to identify him later and no information could be secured from the man caught. Taylor is an elderly man and was allowed to wait until Monday, when he came into town and paid a fine of $15.70 to Justice of the Peace Holekamp.

Called Wasteful Destruction

Above is the U. S. S. Washington as she was towed toward the Virginia Capes to be used as a target in Navy practice. She cost $30,000,000 and is 85 per cent complete. Her destruction is in accordance with the "Washington Conference." Protests from all sources at such wasteful destruction have been made, the claim being that other powers have not lived up to their agreements made at Washington.

MODERN HOTEL NOW MORE THAN POSSIBILITY

For several weeks the business interests of the town have been discussing the means of financing a modern hotel for Junction, and numerous plans have been devised, but none have so far been carried out.

It is no longer a question of whether the town needs a first-class modern hostelry, and there is no doubt in the minds of those who have carefully considered the matter, that a first class hotel will be a going proposition, even if it will be able to make returns on the money for a few years, but the handicap that always confronts any project of this kind is the financing.

Joe P. Fritz, who now operates one of the three hotels, and his associates has devised a plan that seems to be satisfactory to a majority of those interested, and is a very practical one, for financing the hotel proposition, and is now busy seeing the business men of the town and others that may be interested.

While this plan is not for publication at this time, this paper subscribes to it and recommends it to all the people of the town and county as a safe proposition, and those interested can get detailed information about the plan from Mr. Fritz.

A modern hotel in Junction will not interfere with the other two hotels, but as a matter of fact, will bring them more business, and will at the same time bring to Junction as its patrons, a class of trade that we cannot secure at present.

Let's all boost and help put it over!

J. R. Smith, London garage man, was in town on business Monday and says business is very satisfactory down his way. Incidentally The Eagle reporter was in the court house with Mr. Smith and he stated that this was the second time he had ever been in the court house here. About ten years ago he was married there by Major Spencer and had not been there again since.

AGAIN DISCUSS CHANGE JUNCTION-MENARD ROAD

In response to the invitation of the Menard Chamber of Commerce, a number of business men, land owners and county officials, went to that little city Tuesday night and were guests at a dinner and later met at the Court House for going into the proposed change in the road between here and Menard, a change which if possible to make, will shorten the distance several miles and take the road out of the Bear Creek bottom, eliminating the many bad crossings along this creek.

With Judge Mathews of Menard County, presiding, a regular round table discussion was had. According to Judge Mathews, Menard County has the money and is ready to build the line at any point that can be reached by a right of way from Junction to the line. They have made a survey to a point on the line, but there seems to be some difficulty in connecting this point with a right of way that would be satisfactory to Moore and Kenedy and Ed Mears, who own the pastures through which the majority of the road will run.

An effort will shortly be made by A. G. Farmer, and others acting for the Chamber of Commerce, to find a suitable route that will be agreeable to Messrs. Moore, Kenedy and Mears. It is estimated that a road can be laid out that will shorten the distance 8 to 10 miles. W. H. Lewis, an old time resident and prominent citizen of Menard County, told The Eagle reporter that many years ago, there was a road between the two towns, running somewhere near the proposed route that was only 28 miles.

The following are those who made the trip Tuesday night: J. A. Heyman, A. G. Farmer, Emil A. Loeffler, J. N. Hodges, W. P. Riley, Bill Hamer, H. G. Perry, Jim Moore, Doug. Nance, P. Joseph, John M. Hankins and Jim Wright. Messrs. Heyman, Hankins and Hamer furnished the cars.

A. L. Mudge and daughter, Miss Dorothy, and Mr. Leel Jones of Fort McKavitt, passed through Junction Tuesday en route to Austin for the Thanksgiving Football game. Mr. Mudge went as far as San Antonio with Capt. H. W. Rieck. This will be the first visit Mr. Mudge has made to the Capitol and he expects to remain long enough to see the many interesting sights of the city.

Sallie's Temptations

ALWAYS THE LIFE OF THE PARTY.

Leaving Dr. Gray comfortably ensconced in an armchair beside Daddy's bed with one of his beloved books on psychoanalysis in his hand, I went to my own room to make up my mind whether I would go or not.

Curtiss Wright had gone. Hours ago I had heard his car start.

"Christmas Eve," I murmured, and with the words a sense of consuming loneliness crept over my heart. The reflection in the cheval-mirror showed that the days of confinement had left me pale and wan. I don't know how it is with other girls, but for me, happiness is the greatest beautifier in the world.

Of course I wouldn't go with Marj and Bob when they came. It wouldn't be right after I had told Curtiss Wright that I had to stay at home.

Walking to the window, I raised the shade. Holly wreaths with vivid red berries gleamed at the windows of our neighbor's home. Christmas Eve.

Suddenly it came to me. I knew what I'd do. Try on my new frock of silver-cloth that had come from New York that very afternoon. Just dressing up for fun would help kill time and besides there was nothing for me to do, for Dr. Gray had declared he would not allow me back at Daddy's side.

I skipped to my closet door. There it was. My silver gown shimmered and gleamed. Like some beaming adventuress, it tempted and allured. I took it gently from its satin-wrapped hanger and held it close to my face. I peeped into my bottom drawer. The silver sandals from Bob's were there. And silver hose, like the dust of moonbeams, I'd try everything on.

I cannot imagine heaven without clothes and the life of an angel would be dull indeed without gossamer and lace.

Just as I was giving the last touch to my bob I walked Mom Nellie with a package in her hand.

I tore open the package. It was a cap of rhinestones I had ordered when I bought my gown.

"Been on de hall table ever since I don't know when," Mom Nellie explained.

"How did you ever happen to bring it at just this very moment?" I was eager to put it on.

"When yo' loves somebody, Miss Sallie, yo' sorter knows what business is gwine on in dere hearts. I loved as how dis here being Christmas Eve, maybe Marse Gray he'd make our baby girl go out for a lil' while." Nodding her snowy white head, "Your papa's all right now, honey, go and make dem pretty fly fly."

She crooned an old-time Virginia Reel and made a voluminous turn.

A few turns before the mirror. A bit of sweet, misty perfume from the atomizer and all thoughts of a serious nature disappeared. I was just Sallie again. The carefree, frivolous and happy-go-lucky Sallie of yonder days. Once more my spirit of romance stirred and I felt a glow go over my whole being.

"Go, Mamma," I finally asked, realizing Mom Nellie was still there. "What made you say what you did about—er—oh, you know, about Mister Curtiss? And I began humming a tune.

"Honey chile, dese old eyes ain't stone blind. Ain't I done seen him moanin' 'round like a hart since yo' shut yo'self in up stairs? He can't fool Mom Nellie. I knowed he was jes' a-bankerin' for a look at my baby-chile."

The door bell rang.

"Dere dey is, Miss Sallie. Run 'long, now, and have a good time."

For one brief moment I thought of several reasons why I should stay at home.

"Here's yo' coat, chile, go 'long."

Mamma handed me my evening wrap from the closet, tucked a scrap of a handkerchief in my hand and before I realized what I was doing I was running down the hall. Bob had come to escort me to the car. I got in. Ted Billings was at my side.

"For some silly reason Ted was afraid you wouldn't come with us if he went in," Marjorie explained. "Oh, by the way, Sallie, this is going to be the loveliest party. We haven't had our 'life of the party' in such a long time." And so the subject was gracefully changed.

Before we alighted at the Windsor the conversation was smoothly running along. Ted laughed and chatted as if nothing had happened. He had evidently decided not to refer to the Beach episode. Well, certainly I would not. Perhaps I should have been too peeved and insulted to have a good time, but for some reason I couldn't stay mad.

BRADY SHIP'S THIRTY-EIGHT CARS TURKEYS.

Thirty-eight carloads represents Brady's offering this Thanksgiving season to the festive boards of some 60,000 families in effete East and North. Thirty-three carloads of dressed poultry has been routed to New York, Boston and other eastern points, while five carloads of live poultry has been sent from Brady to various markets. Although the Thanksgiving dressing season is passed, the local dressing plants are still running full blast and will continue straight through to shortly before Christmas. The plants are now turning out two car loads daily.

By reason of contracting the purchase of turkeys in advance, the dressing plants have been enabled to regulate the marketing of the birds so that they can dress out each day's purchase without accumulating a vast excess.

The market today is 15 cents per pounds, showing a drop of 1 cent since yesterday, when quotations were 16 cents.—Brady Standard.

EDWARDS COUNTY MAN KILLS ONLY BEAR.

Several of the local men returned last week from a hunt out in the Big Bend country, Perry Mayes, S. H. Guthrie, Leo Greer, Mason Johnson and Ed Miller. They all went after bear but Perry Mayes brought down the only bear that was killed. They said deer were plentiful where they hunted but they did not shoot them for fear of scaring the bear. Perry says the mountains are high in the Big Bend country; says the bear he got was seen walking along a ledge on the side of a high precipitous mountain. He made a good shot and said the bear must have rolled a thousand feet down the mountain side. They had bear meat and Perry brought the skin to a taxidermist in Del Rio to have it mounted.—Edwards County Leader.

KEEPING WELL

SUNLIGHT

Editor of "HEALTH"

WE ARE just beginning to appreciate the value of sunlight as a health-producer.

The ancient people worshiped the sun, which they recognized as the source of all energy and life. Modern science is proving what the ancient civilizations believed.

King Tut has had more front-page publicity in the last two years than any living man. His name is known today to ten times as many people as ever heard of him while he was alive. King Tut was a sun-worshiper, as were many of the people of his day.

The Greeks took sun baths regularly.

The Romans knew that sunlight is of benefit in healing sores and infections and in maintaining health. Pliny, the Roman historian, writes that his aged friend Spurinna kept himself youthful by taking an hour's sunbath every day.

When civilization moved from southern to central and northern Europe, people wore heavy clothing and lived in houses and forgot the value of sunlight.

Dr. Rollier of Switzerland reports remarkable cures of tuberculosis in children by the use of sunlight. Dr. Lo Grosso, medical director of J. N. Adams Memorial hospital at Perysburg, N. Y., gets wonderful results in bone and skin tuberculosis by undressing the children and keeping them in the sunshine and fresh air. Even in winter the children wear nothing but overshoes to keep their feet dry and caps to protect their heads and ears.

Dr. Lo Grosso says, "With the exception of one or two isolated hospitals we are neglecting the greatest of all healers, the sun. Our eyes are cast down, whereas healing is from the skies."

Sunlight kills disease germs in a short time. The more sunlight we have in our houses the healthier we are. The more we get out in the sunlight the healthier our bodies will be.

Exposure of the skin to sunlight lowers blood pressure, increases the depth of respiration, dilates the blood vessels and brings the blood to the surface. The number of blood corpuscles is increased, as well as the power of resisting disease.

This remedy must be used with common sense. A sunburn is just as painful and as bad as any other kind of burn. Don't go out the first day the bathing beaches are open and lie all day in the sunlight. Don't try to get the tan in a few days of summer vacation that should have accumulated all through the year. Get the good effects of the sun without the bad effects. Get outdoors every day all the year round, especially in the summer, and get the benefit of the healing and stimulating effect of sunlight—the source of all heat, light and life in the universe.

NEEDS OF AGRICULTURE.

In response to the letter of Mr. W. B. Yearly of Dallas and printed in The Texas Outlook, I am giving my views below as to the needs of agriculture in Texas and in the South.

I believe the needs of agriculture in Texas and the South are

1. A system of co-operative marketing which benefits both the farmer and the consumer.

2. Consolidated schools in which vocational agriculture, domestic science and home economics are taught. The teacher of vocational agriculture at least is needed in the community the year round.

3. A better social life. Social centers in the country are badly needed.

4. Better conveniences and more modern machinery are needed both on the farm and in the home.

5. Good roads are needed, not only as an economic factor, but also as a social one.

6. Diversity of crops, and a better understanding of the law of supply and demand, and of the economic system under which the farmer is being trampled.

7. Last but not least, the farmer needs labor that can be depended upon to take the place now occupied by farm women and children who should be in school.

The above is not necessarily named in the order of importance but I believe all are essential to the betterment of our agriculture.—Texas Outlook.

J. J. BUGG ACCEPTS PLACE AT AUSTIN.

Prof. J. J. Bugg will retire from the county superintendent's office of Runnels County, on December 31st, and on January 1st will report for duty at the State Superintendent's office in Austin.

Prof. Bugg has accepted the appointment of rural school supervisor in the State Department of Education. State Superintendent S. M. N. Marrs tendered Mr. Bugg the position of rural school supervisor several days ago, and it became known here Thursday that the county superintendent had accepted the place, and would report for duty on January 1st.

The State Superintendent has used good judgment in selecting Prof. Bugg to serve the State in the rural school division of the State Department of Education. The Runnels County superintendent has the reputation of being one of the most progressive and untiring county superintendents in the State. He has made a reputation in rural school work which has brought esteem from many other states.—Ballinger Ledger.

HOW 'PORTLAND' CEMENT RECEIVED THE NAME.

Portland cement is now 100 years old. It was invented in 1824 by an English mason, who called it "portland" cement because of its resemblance, when hardened, to an English building stone quarried on the Isle of Portland. The first American plants for its manufacture were established 48 years later. Today the United States produces more portland cement than all the rest of the world combined.—Exchange.

DENTON MERCHANT KEEPS TAB ON ADS.

A Denton merchant has an interesting scrap book of all advertisements he has ever published. He finds it helpful from time to time in preparing new advertisements, for it brings back to him good ideas that he used before and that likely would have passed completely from mind if he hadn't preserved it through his scrap-book. It is also interesting as showing the growth of the store's business—much of which its owner attributes to his persistent and consistent advertising—for the ads were small in the beginning and have increased in space proportionately with the continued growth of the big volume of business the store now does.

The idea is worthy of emulation by other merchants and has been already adopted by a few who have learned of it.—Denton Record-Chronicle.

The paper is in the post office a day earlier this week in order that The Eagle force may observe Thanksgiving. In common with all the people of the country, we have much to be thankful for. The past year has been a busy and prosperous one with most of the people of the country; with us it has been a very busy one, and a fairly profitable one. We, perhaps, should have done more, and doubtless could have done less.

During the past year Kimble County has been wonderfully blessed. There have been no destroying storms or pestilence; no ravages of disease; no feuds or serious strife. The people are happy and for these blessings of the past and for the clear sea ahead, we are thankful to a kind Providence.

Our good friend, Dollahite, of the Edwards County Leader, has been using considerable space the past few months in an effort to get the people of his county interested in raising more cotton and we hope his efforts in this direction will not fail to produce some good results.

Both this county and Edwards, have thousands of acres of fine farming land that can be utilized more profitably for farming than for stock raising, and the experiments that many ranchmen have made with small acreages have proven that cotton, and many other products are well adapted to this section.

Kimbles County, according to our way of thinking, has a wonderful future in its agricultural development. We have unlimited water supply that some day capital will develop and utilize for power and irrigation.

But the thing that we are interested in now is something that we, ourselves, can do without the aid of outside capital; and that is the development of our dry land farming methods.

With a several weeks' drought just at the time when rain was most needed this year, this county produced more cotton than for several years, and the price justified the efforts on the part of those who produced the crop. We hope that this county will produce 2,000 bales next year and that it will be gradually increased from year to year.

The constitutional amendment increasing the tax for Confederate Veterans and admitting to pensions thousands who are not now on the list was adopted at the recent election, though opposed by many of the veterans. Evidently the voters thought they were voting to help the old men, but in truth they will cut down the allowance of the old men of Texas and add to the pension list thousands who have come here from other states, and we have a suspicion that many of them are not entitled to pensions.—Granbury News.

We did not comment on our attitude toward the pension amendment, either before or after the election, but we voted against it feeling that the raise would not benefit those now receiving pensions—those who have lived in the State for many years—as the increase in available funds would be consumed by the large number of veterans who had recently moved into the State. We are willing to help the Ex-Confederate Veteran in every way possible, but we felt that it would be better to increase the amount going to our own long-time citizens than to admit many more and cut the allowance for all.

In this enlightened day it is seldom necessary to argue the question of whether or not it pays to advertise, but occasionally it is well to bring to the attention of those who make no study of the matter a few facts relative to the growth of advertising as an economic force in the nation. Today there are few public service corporations whose assets run into the millions, who do not use regular advertising space in the papers of their respective territories, spending huge sums for their daily and weekly talks to the people. None of the great stores and no successful small concerns of the country are without their annual appropriations for advertising and it is now an established economic fact that advertising saves money to the buying public instead of the old exploded assertion that it is charged in the cost of the commodity. Advertising brings volume of business to the merchant and volume reduces the average cost of selling on the dollars, therefore the public profits.—Clarendon News.

Why yes, preachers plead for the financial support of the institutions of the church. They do this in spite of the criticism of those who give grudgingly; if they do not present such causes as missions, schools, hospitals, orphanages, there would be no such things sustained by protestant churches. The fellow who clamors continually for the "preaching of Christ and Him crucified," and less money generally does not turn much coin of the realm into the church's exchequer. When did any one hear a preacher talking for a raise of salary, or even for the payment of his generally past due salary?—Lockhart Post-Register.

Although we talk a good deal about what the widespread education of this country means, I question if many of us deeply consider its meaning. From the lowest grade of the public school to the highest form of university training education in this country is at the disposal of every man, every woman, who chooses to work for and obtain it. * * * Each one of us, then, who has an education, school or college, has obtained something from the community at large for which he or she has not paid, and no self-respecting man or woman is content to rest permanently under such an obligation. Where the State has bestowed education the man who accepts it must be content to accept it merely as charity unless he returns it to the State in full in the shape of good citizenship.—Theodore Roosevelt.

ALWAYS TWO SIDES TO THE QUESTION.

Every proposition has two sides, and the hunting of wild game is no exception. Complaints are numerous about the inability of sportsmen finding a place to hunt, even when they are willing to pay for the privilege.

Viewed from the hunters' side of the controversy it looks like he should be allowed the opportunity of shooting deer and turkeys, since the game is not private-owned but belongs to the people of the State. His contention is that he should have the privilege of shooting the game wherever found, the fact that it is on private property at the time being no bar to his shooting.

On the other hand, the man on whose land the game may be found has possibly protected same for a number of years, in order that the species may not be exterminated in its wild state. Many ranchmen in the Hill Country have done on their ranches that have been there for several years and numbers of them have been feeding wild turkeys when dry seasons have made it impossible for the fowls to secure sufficient food from their natural sources.

Certainly a ranchman who has protected and fostered the game on his premises is entitled to backing from the State in his efforts to keep the game from becoming exterminated.

Another matter that enters into the hunting proposition is the fact that many hunters destroy other than wild game while hunting. Frequently a ranchman suffers the loss of a cow or yearling when some overzealous or inexperienced hunter mistakes it for a deer, and also numerous instances can be cited each season where stock are killed on the ranches by stray bullets from the hunters' guns.

Surely a man who has protected the game on his land has the right to say what kind of hunters he wants to come on his premises and kill the game he has raised, and it is not unreasonable for him to charge them for the privilege, since he knows from past experience that the money he derives there from will no more than pay for the damage they will probably do to his property and livestock while hunting.

But the biggest objection that can be raised to hunters from the viewpoint of the conservationists and ranchmen, are the game hogs. Deer and turkeys are protected by law, the limit being three buck deer per season to each hunter and three gobblers. Does and hen turkey are protected at all times.

Just over the line in Kimble County last week Deputy Game Warden J. J. Dent arrested four men who had between them 22 turkeys, and included in the number were seven hens. The game hogs were taken to Junction and paid fines of something over $200 for violating the game laws. But they were wealthy men and afterward bragged that they had received value for their money in the pleasure of slaughtering the game.

Down in Brewster County about a week ago, First Assistant Deputy Game Warden A. E. Peaty and Deputies Crawford and Miller arrested five men in whose camp they found hanging the carcasses of eight black-tailed does and two fawns. The hunters paid fines aggregating $890 at Marathon for violating the law. And they, too, said the money paid in fines was well spent.

Such acts as these are a stain upon the reputation of every sportsman in the State and do more than any other one thing to make lovers of wild game more reticent about allowing hunting on their premises.

The Sun believes that the statutes should be amended to read that a man who violates the game laws cannot secure a license to hunt inside the State for a period of years. A few paltry dollars' fine imposed on a man worth millions is no hardship, but the privilege of hunting inside the limits of the State might be some inducement for this class of people to respect the rights and property of others—which is something they neglect to do when they kill more than their lawful share of game.—Mountain Sun.

TEXAS FRUITS BEST.

Texas citrus fruit growers, members of the Rio Grande Valley association, are rendering an unusual service to merchants and consumers. They are sending out warnings against the "bootlegging" of Texas grapefruit in advance of the season. The reason is, say the growers, the ripening process has not advanced to the proper stage, and that fruits offered now must be of poor quality.

The motive of the growers' association is not altogether unselfish. Poor quality fruits sold as Texas grapefruit, in addition to disappointing the consumer, will react against the whole Texas grapefruit growing industry. The growers are trying to protect the good name of their product, which at present obtains a premium over both California and Florida grapefruit. But the public gets a benefit as well.

The pre-eminence of the Rio Grande Valley citrus fruit points again to the advantages of Texas as a fruit growing state. California and Florida may be able to grow fruits in quantity and of a sort, but a variety of seasons, considerable variations in temperatures, natural conditions of moisture and heat, are necessary for full flavor.

This is notably true in the case of peaches, that most piquant of all fruits. No epicure would look for a moment on a California peach if beside it were placed one of those ambrosial globules which is the Texas Elberta. Yet, Texas peaches are seldom seen outside the state, while California's fruit is seen everywhere and brings back millions of dollars to the enterprising growers of that state. Peaches could be made a commercial practical crop in Texas by the use of smudge pots and other devices known to growers for warding off the effects of late cold snaps in the Spring. A single lantern hung in the lower branches of a peach tree on frost nights often will increase the tree's yield many bushels. Texas growers, however, with hardly an exception, protect their peach tree not at all. Accordingly, no marketing system could develop, and when there is a good crop it must go to waste after glutting the local markets.

Perhaps the Texas peach, being left to its own devices, will eventually develop insulation against the rigors of chilly Springs. But Texas fruit growers are neglecting a resource that could be turned to great profit to themselves as well as great satisfaction to the rest of the country which now must depend upon California for its fruits.—Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

RECEIVE MARKER AT SAN ANGELO.

The local chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, sponsors of an undertaking looking to the establishment of a memorial stone at old Fort Concho, have received the marker, members of the chapter announced Wednesday. Preparations are now going forward for a public unveiling of the stone, commemorating the work of the pioneers in the development of the West.

The marker is of Llano granite, bearing on its face a bronze tablet on which is inscribed the purpose of this monument. It is to be erected on the city lot in Fort Concho.

The cost of the marker is $335, all of which money will have been raised by the San Angelo chapter of the D. A. R., by the time of the unveiling ceremonies. No donations from any source have been received.

The chapter, of which Mrs. J. T. Elder is regent, announces a candy sale at the Famous Market on Friday of this week, the money to go to the erection of the memorial stone.—San Angelo Standard.

COLORFUL ECLIPSE DUE JANUARY 24TH

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 21.—For a few minutes on the morning of January 24th next, the moon will get between the earth and the sun and cut off all the light we get from that body. This eclipse will be visible in the United States, and it doubtless will be seen by more millions of people than any such occurrence in the past, according to Professor E. W. Brown, of Yale University.

An eclipse is not a rare event, one or two occur every year, but the one next January is notable for the fact that it occurs in a territory from which the light of the sun has not been wholly obscured by the moon within the memory of any one living.

"If we look in the records of past eclipses," Professor Brown said, "and the predictions for future eclipses we soon see that in any one place there will be a total eclipse of the sun only once in every few hundred years. The coming eclipse will produce darkness over a narrow band of territory which stretches from a point somewhere west of Duluth and after crossing northern Michigan and Wisconsin, is seen in Connecticut and then passes out to sea. The hour of the phenomenon is between 9 and 9:30, eastern time."

School Notes.

Schreiner defeated Tivy High 40 to 0. Schreiner High showed to be in excellent form Saturday when they put up a crushing offense and registered a 40 to 0 score against their opponents. Only twice during the game were the heavy Schreiner backs held for down. Tivy, on the other hand, never carried the ball past the line of scrimmage. The Tivy boys, although small, were clean sports, hard fighters and are deserving for their grit and "stickability." This game closed the season for the local team, being unable to schedule other games.

Mr. Miller says if the pupils would study an hour or two after supper each night, they would study an hour or two after school and see what kind of work their children are doing.

Last Tuesday afternoon Elizabeth Murr was absent from school on account of illness.

Tuesday and Wednesday the second six weeks examinations were given.

The State Teachers convention meets this year in San Antonio November 27, 28, and 29. This is one of the biggest things in the teaching profession. It usually has an attendance of from eight to ten thousand.

At this convention the teachers will be given an opportunity to hear some of the best educators of the day. All kinds of sectional meetings are held; all kinds of problems are discussed and solved. This is, in short, a melting pot for the educational world. Educational facilities of the latest type from every department will be displayed. All kinds of play-ground and recreational apparatus will also be on display. The teachers of Schreiner High School and quite a number of patrons are going to attend this convention.

One of the questions asked most frequently by history students, and sometimes by parents of history, is this:

"What is use of studying history?"

In answer to this question I am stating the aims of history, which are seven-fold:

I. Discipline—History trains the mind, the imagination, and the judgment.

II. Culture—It enriches the humanity of the pupil.

III. Inspiration—It furnishes ideas of conduct, patriotism and social service.

IV. Practical knowledge—It teaches pupils how to act in the present.

V. Enlightenment—It illuminates other studies, especially literature and geography.

VI. It helps the student cultivate a taste for historical reading.

VII—The explanation of the present nothing in the world today is really intelligible apart from its history.

Now Mr. Father and Mrs. Mother, whose daughter and son are taking history in the Schreiner High School, do you see that your son or daughter studies at home? If you do not you should do so. If your son or daughter does not study at home it is not because he or she does not need that study. If he or she has made "F" is making "F" on his or her report card it means "failure," if it does not mean "fight." Let the teachers have your co-operation in this studying proposition for the good of your children.

You will remember the old adage "You can take a horse to water but you cannot make him drink." It is the same way with students; teachers can assign work to be done, but they cannot do the work for your child.

Moral—Let us have more home studying done by all (Donated by Miss Merchant.)

FORMER SONORA GIRL ELECTED GOVERNOR

Even the world is a small place!

If you should say to an Ozona girl, "Be good and maybe you'll be governor some day," it would make her laugh; but that is just what has happened to a girl of Sonora, Ozona's next-door neighbor to the east.

Mrs. Ross, who has been elected governor of the State of Wyoming, was formerly Miss Nellie Tayloe, of Sonora, Sutton County, Texas, and many of us in this immediate section knew her as an unusually bright young woman. She is a sister of Judge Tayloe, now of San Antonio, and is a relative of Mrs. Tom Nolan, of Ozona.

Mrs. Ferguson, also, recently elected governor of Texas, was a country girl of Bell County. Thus the two first women governors of States in the history of this country are native Texans.

The two governors-elect plan to meet in San Antonio during the Christmas holidays for a mutual love-feast.—Ozona Stock man.

HOW THE APOSTLES OF CHRIST DIED.

All of the apostles were insulted by the enemies of their Master. They were called to seal their doctrine with their blood, and nobly did they bear the trial, Schumacher says:

St. Matthew suffered martyrdom by being slain with a sword at a distant city in Ethiopia.

St. Mark expired at Alexandria after being cruelly dragged through the streets of that city.

St. Luke was hanged upon an olive tree in the classic land of Greece.

St. John was put in a chauldron of boiling oil, but escaped death in a miraculous manner, and was afterwards branded at Patmos.

St. Peter was crucified at Rome, with his head downward.

St. James the Greater was beheaded at Jerusalem.

St. James the Less was thrown from a lofty pinnacle of the temple, and then beaten to death with a fullers' stub.

St. Bartholomew was flayed alive.

St. Andrew was bound to a cross whence he preached to his persecutors until he died.

St. Thomas was run through the body with a lance at Coromandel in the East Indies.

St. Jude was shot to death with arrows.

St. Matthews was first stoned and then beheaded.

St. Barnabas of the Gentiles was stoned to death at Salomica.

St. Paul after various tortures and persecutions, was at length beheaded at Rome by the Emperor Nero.—Christian Evangelist.

MRS. RAGLAND DIES
AFTER LONG ILLNESS.

Mrs. Matilda Ann Plowman Ragland, wife of James W. Ragland, died at the family home in Junction Sunday morning about five o'clock, and was buried at the local cemetery at four that afternoon. Her pastor, Rev. J. Virgil Davis conducted the funeral services.

Mrs. Ragland was born in Gonzales County, January 9th, 1855, married J. W. Ragland in 1875 and came to this county about 23 years ago. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Ragland, seven of whom survive, as follows: Mesdames Annie Highsmith, Dora Wright, and Maggie Lowry of Junction; and Mrs. Mollie Williams of Smiley; and Messrs. T. W. of Dripping Springs, and G. R. and B. B. of Junction. Two sons, Mathew, who died before the family moved here, and J. L., who died here a little more than a year ago. Besides these, are 35 grand-children and 6 great-grand children.

Deceased was a faithful member of the Methodist church, and lived a life worthy of emulation. She was loved by all who knew her and was one of the old time women whose home was her throne, and whose devotion to her church, her family and her friends was an inspiration to all who were fortunate to know her.
