Long, But Worthwhile Wait...

Brice Family Happy To Become U.S. Citizens

By Shirley A. Gorman

Four of America's newest citizens are Snyder's very own Dr. and Mrs. Nelson Brice and their sons, Alex, 13, and Alfred, 11. They are originally from Chile.

After waiting nearly six years the Brices completed all requirements and passed the citizenship test in Lubbock January 21, a very special day for the family. Even though the Brices will not be officially sworn in for a couple of months (pending the arrival of an immigration official from Dallas and the processing of all papers), they are now official U.S. citizens. Their sons automatically became citizens when their parents did.

The family was accompanied by sponsors Joe Reaves and Dr. Robert Hargrove.

"We were nervous in the beginning," Mrs. Brice said, referring to the oral test during which both she and her husband were quizzed about the Constitution and American history. "As soon as we realized that we knew the answers we felt better."

According to Mrs. Brice, the oral quiz consisted of both easy and hard questions. At one point she was asked on what day do we celebrate Independence Day.

"At first I thought it must be a trick question since it was so easy," Mrs. Brice laughed.

When the time came for the tests to be administered Mrs. Brice let her husband go first. They were quizzed separately and had to answer six questions in all.

In preparation for the big day, the immigration office in Washington D. C. had given the Brices books about both the Constitution and American history which they studied together. The material was very interesting according to Dr. Brice.

The Brices first came to live in Snyder on April 5, 1975. It was the first trip to America for Mrs. Brice and her sons but not for Dr. Brice who had visited Texas, including Snyder, in 1970. The visit had been arranged through the Rotary Club and consisted of visiting area hospitals over a two month period.

A couple of years later Dr. Brice returned to Snyder for another two month visit, staying with the Hargrove family.

At that time the Communists were causing quite a bit of problems in their native country so they decided to immigrate to America. They applied for permanent residence in the United States but had to wait 2½ years before the application was approved.

After arriving in Snyder, another waiting period began--this time for U.S. citizenship. Besides studying the Constutition and American history, prospective citizens must also live here five years.

The Brices applied in April of 1980 to take the citizenship test, but had to wait until last week before they could actually take it.

"We called Dallas several times and were always told we had to wait, that others were ahead of

Japan Takes Steps

TOKYO (AP) — Japan unsnarled some red tape today in an attempt to calm its increasingly angry U.S. and European trade partners, but it still has "a long way to go" in opening its market to imports, a government official says.

In response to 67 specific complaints, a package of measures to remove or streamline importation procedures was adopted at a special meeting of Cabinet ministers and top officials of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party.

The government also decided to establish an ombudsman's office to handle trade grievances from foreign businessmen.

Decision Up To City

DALLAS (AP) — Mayor Jack Evans says he has been assured by Republican Party leaders that the GOP national convention will be in Dallas if city officials want it.

Members of the GOP site selection committee will arrive in Dallas Feb. 10 to examine convention and hotel accommodations, Evans said Friday.

He said Richard Richards, national chairman of the GOP, told him Thursday the party wants to have its nominating convention in Dallas. President Reagan has told Texas Gov. Bill Clements in a letter that he would like to have the 1984 convention here.

Other cities bidding for the convention are St. Louis, Atlanta, Detroit and Kansas City, Mo., Evans said.

Formula Under Investigation

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A U.S. Department of Justice spokesman says New Mexico is the only state being probed by the FBI to determine the constitutionality of the state's legislative reapportionment formula.

The FBI investigation in New Mexico is not related to a similar Justice Department investigation in Texas that led to federal rejection of Texas' reapportionment, said John Wilson, assistant director of public affairs at the Justice Department.

Texas is required under the Voting Rights Act of 1965 to submit its legislative reapportionment plans to the Justice Department for approval, he said.

New Trial Denied

HOUSTON (AP) — About 500 distant cousins denied a share of the late billionare Howard Hughes's fortune will not be given new trials in their claims against his estate, a probate judge ruled.

Judge Pat Gregory Friday reaffirmed a Sept. 4 jury verdict that swept away the claims of two groups of distant cousins who said they deserved half of Hughes' fortune, estimated to be worth up to $2 billion.

Both groups will have until Feb. 22 to take their cases to the appeals court.

Gregory, who presided over the 5½-year estate feud, signed the final decree Nov. 13 designating 17 maternal relatives and five paternal first cousins the sole heirs.

More Hispanics Needed...

Redistricting Plan Nixed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has overturned Texas' congressional redistricting plan with orders that more Hispanics be placed in a newly created South Texas district.

The action late Friday afternoon was announced by William Bradford Reynolds, an assistant attorney general in the department's civil rights division.

The federal agency, which enforces the 1965 Voting Rights Act, criticized keeping both Hidalgo and Cameron counties in the 15th District, represented by Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, who has served the Rio Grande Valley in Congress since 1964.

One of the counties should have been placed in the new 27th District, thus giving Hispanics a clear-cut majority in an area where two-thirds of the residents are now Mexican-Americans, Reynolds said.

Texas gains three seats in Congress — from 24 to 27 — because of population gains in the 1970s, and the Texas Legislature last summer designated one of the new seats for South Texas, because of the substantial increase in its Mexican-American population since 1970.

The state has two Hispanic congressmen in de la Garza and Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio. Two other districts — represented by Rep. Abraham Kazen, D-Del Rio, and Rep. Richard White, D-El Paso, have Hispanic populations of more than 50 percent.

In submitting its congressional redistricting plan to the Justice Department last September, the state said the newly created 27th District "almost certainly will be represented by a Hispanic."

Reynolds disagreed. By keeping Hidalgo and Cameron counties in the lower Rio Grande Valley district, the Legislature came out with one district with 80.4 percent Hispanic population and the new district with only 52.9 percent Hispanic population, he said.

A bare Hispanic majority is inadequate, considering the historically low political participation of minorities in South Texas, the Justice Department said. The Legislature last year rejected several more suitable alternatives, Reynolds added.

The Texas Legislature was forced into a special session last summer to approve congressional redistricting. Secretary of State David Dean suggested late Friday that instead of calling the legislators back again, Texas may leave the new revision to a three-judge federal court.

That panel — made up of judges William Wayne Justice of Tyler, Robert Parker of Beaumont and 5th Circuit Judge Sam Johnson — became involved when a suit was filed last September challenging the plan.

"The congressional redistricting plan is now before the court to rework. It would appear the court could logically start with the congressional redistricting plan adopted by the Legislature and make only such modifications as necessary to respond to the Justice Department objections," Dean said.

Last week, the judges pushed back the filing deadline from Feb. 1 to Feb. 22 for the 16 congressional districts where changes were being sought.

Tony Bonilla of Corpus Christi, national president of the League of United Latin American Citizens, said the reversal will cause several people who had decided against running for Congress, to reconsider. He praised the decision.

"Justice has struck another blow for justice. The state leadership now has the responsibility for calling a special session to deal with this issue, or the alternative (to) again turn their back and let the federal government do it," Bonilla said.

The Justice Department based its objection strictly on the South Texas matter and made no mention of arguments that had been raised about the way district lines were drawn in the Dallas and Houston areas.

Rep. Jim Mattox, D-Dallas, declared Thursday as a candidate for Texas attorney general rather than seeking a fourth 2-year term to Congress.

By moving black areas of Dallas into the adjacent district of Rep. Martin Frost, D-Dallas, and realigning his district to include the Republican stronghold of Highland Park and University Park, the Legislature made his district unwinnable for him, Mattox said.

BOBBY GOODWIN

R. C. NIXON

Nixon In JP Race...

Goodwin Seeks Judge's Post

Two more candidates have announced for public office here as the deadline approaches for filing.

Bobby Goodwin, former justice of the peace and police chief here, announced that he would seek the office of county judge. This increased the number of contested races to three.

At the same time, a third candidate entered the race for justice of the peace in Precinct No. 4 (Hermleigh). He is R. C. Nixon.

Candidates must file for places on the May 1 primary election ballot by 6 p. m. Monday.

Goodwin came here in 1966 when he became a patrolman for the Snyder Police Department. He was named chief of police in 1969, serving in that capacity until 1973. He was elected justice of the peace in Precinct No. 1 in 1974, serving through 1978. At present, he is a building superintendent for Arrow Construction Co.

Goodwin was a candidate for county judge in 1978 and was defeated in a close race by the incumbent, Preston Wilson, who is a candidate for re-election.

Nixon has lived at Hermleigh for the past 16 years and prior to his retirement he served 22½ years as a minister in the United Methodist Church.

He joined H. M. Lomax and the incumbent, T. E. Shelburne, in the race for justice of the peace at Hermleigh.

At the end of the week, the only other contested race reported was for county commissioner in Precinct No. 2 where Jerry House is opposing the incumbent, Earl "Hassie" Sneed.

Candidates unopposed, all incumbents, included Polly Underwood, district clerk; Beverly Ainsworth, county clerk; Eloise Morgan, tax collector; Billy Wayne Thompson, county treasurer; and Ted Billingsley, county commissioner in Precinct No. 4.

Front Brings Showers Here

A slow-moving cold front lowered temperatures but produced little moisture in the Snyder area Friday night. Thunderstorms did produce showers accounting for .28 inch in the official gauge at the city water plant, but severe weather which had been forecast did not develop. A few small hailstones were reported, but no damage had been reported Saturday.

The thundershowers increased the year's rainfall total to half an inch.

Forecasts called for showers and thundershowers in North Central Texas, Northeast Texas and Southeast Texas. Scattered light rain was forecast for the remainder of the state and some light snow was possible in the Panhandle. Colder temperatures were forecast statewide Saturday night.

Lows were due to range from the 20s in Northwest Texas and the 30s in North Texas and the Hill Country to the 40s in South Texas. Highs Sunday will be mostly in the 50s and 60s.

Ask Us

Q.—Why are we only voting on some of the public offices this year when all of them have the same length terms?

A.—When four-year terms were approved, they "staggered" the expiration dates so that approximately half of them would be on the ballot every two years. Also, not all offices have four-year terms. Representatives serve for two years and senators for six years.

WTC Extends Registration

Due to several requests from people who will not be paid until Feb. 1, registration for the spring semester at Western Texas College has been extended until Feb. 2, Dr. Duane Hood, dean of student services, said.

Students beginning registration are to go first to the administration building.

Poles Urged To Garden

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poles are being urged to plant gardens, raise chickens, pigs and rabbits and take second jobs to cope with price hikes that will quadruple the costs of some foods and other items starting Monday.

The sweeping price increases will make feeding families all the more difficult for Poles already weary from standing on long lines in hopes of buying what few items are on the shelves.

Long lines were seen Friday outside Warsaw stores selling clothing and quilts which apparently were available.

"You can swell your income by getting an extra job, growing things in a neglected garden plot, breeding rabbits, raising chickens or a piglet," the state-run newspaper Express Wieczorny said Friday.

The government also admitted that about 174,000 Poles emigrated last year, apparently in search of a better life in the non-Communist West.

Exemption Applications Mailed Out

Applications for exemptions qualifiying certain taxpayers for reductions in valuations have been mailed by the Scurry County Appraisal District.

The applications include those for homestead exemptions, agricultural land exemptions and farming equipment exemptions.

The applications must be filed by May 1, and new applications may be required to confirm eligibility each year if a notice is mailed by the chief apprasier.

If property owners fail to receive applications for exemptions, they should contact the appraisal district office at 2425 College Ave., or by telephone at 915-573-8549.

The SDN Column

Are you confused by all of the scrambling going on at all levels of government these days?

It is a political year of course, which usually means that you can take a lot of the statements with a grain of salt. But we believe there has been more firing from the hip, more changes of course in mid-stream and more hedging than we have seen before.

On the other hand, there probably have been more politicians showing a sensitivity to public opinion than ever before, which undoubtedly has led to some of the backtracking when it appeared that a specific course was unpopular.

Still, the adage that "haste makes waste" may not be out of date.

For example, the sudden reduction in personnel by the Texas Employement Commission may not have the result that most people hoped for, according to George Kuempel, chief of the Austin Bureau of the Dallas Morning News.

Now, shutting down a bunch of offices and removing 1,300 persons from the payroll may look like an economy measure, but it is not necessarily so in this case, according to Kuempel.

"The $31 million that was slashed from the TEC's projected $121 million budget simply was shifted to other states," Kuempel reported in a recent issue of the Dallas paper.

Texas employers were assessed $239 million last year to fund the job placement service. They will not save one cent as a result of the reductions in service. This means, of course, that Texas businesses are going to finance job placement services for other states while having their own service cut back. Kuempel says that is nothing new. From 1972 to 1977 Texas employers paid a total of $895 million in Federal Unemployment Tax Act taxes, but only $458 million of that found its way into the Texas system. By 1980, Texas was getting even less—only 38 percent of what it contributed, and by 1981 it was down to 37.3 percent.

These funds are apportioned by the Labor Department. Perhaps this system should be among those shifted from the federals to the states in President Reagan's new plan for social programs. It certainly would work to the advantage of Texas. According to Kuempel's report, Texas could restore the TEC to full strength and still save money if the FUTA taxes were not routed via Washington.

Word from Tulsa is that Nolan Richardson is beating the drums for a new cause—a big basketball facility on the Tulsa University Campus.

At present, Richardson's Tulsa U. basketball team plays its home games in the Assembly Center, which is about three miles from the campus.

"We're visitors no matter where we go...we have no home court advantage," Richardson was quoted in the Tulsa Tribune. He envisions a 12,000 to 15,000 arena, "nothing fancy...just a big old, round barn that seats 15,000 in bleachers and chairs all the way around to the floor."

Slash Mining Industry...

Uranium Prices Sagging

FALLS CITY, Texas — A uranium glut has forced energy companies to mothball half of the $171 million South Texas mining industry that had employed 3,600 persons.

The biggest blow to the South Texas uranium belt that extends through Atascosa, Bee, Duval, Karnes, Live Oak, McMullen and Webb Counties is the phasing out of the huge Conquista strip mining and milling project operated near here by Continental Oil Co. and Pioneer Nuclear, Inc.

More people were employed at Conquista than live in Falls City, population 442.

In 1980, the Conquista project was the largest in the state, employing 480 people and producing 1.3 million pounds of uranium yellowcake annually, more than one-fifth of the state total of 5 million [illegible]

That's when uranium was billed across the rolling hills of South Texas as "the energy of the future" and a blessing to this rural area where retirement and welfare payments rank second only to the oil and gas industry as the source of personal income.

Uranium had grown quickly to rank third as an income source at $42 million a year in the six counties, employing about 3,600 persons. But that is changing rapidly.

George Bokorney, director of community relations at the Conquista Project, said uranium mining will stop beginning in February because Canada and Australia have flooded the world market with uranium, driving prices down from a high of $43.50 a pound in the summer of 1980 to $23.50 a pound today.

"We're in the process of mothballing our operation here ..." Bokorney said. "We'll keep everything greased up and painted in hopes of a better day."

Many uranium industry officials predict another rise in yellowcake prices by 1985.

Bokorney said all milling should stop by May and about 75 employees would continue working until early 1983 to complete restoration of lands gored by the strip-mining. Then they would also be laid off.

Also phasing out their operations over the coming year are Exxon, which operates strip mines near Three Rivers and mills at the Conquista plant, and Wyoming Minerals, which is in the process of closing down leaching operations at Three Rivers and near Bruni.

"Ours was scheduled as a 5-year project and that's essentially what it's going to be," said Mo Garcia, head of Exxon's 19-man operation which was nearing completion even before the bottom dropped out of the uranium market. Garcia said Exxon employees would continue with reclamation through the year and were being offered other jobs within the company.

Dave Tawater, manager of administrations for Wyoming Minerals, said workers [illegible] month at its Three Rivers and Bruni facilities, with the remaining 35 or so workers continuing in restoration projects.

"We're going into a mothballing operation. Hopefully at the end of a five-year period, the uranium market will have improved," Tawater said.

The main salvation of the South Texas uranium district is the continued operation of Chevron's three-year old Panna Maria Uranium Operation which employees about 300 people five miles southeast of Falls City.

Chevron continues to receive a premium price of about double the world market because it has a long-term contract through 1986 to provide 800,000 pounds of uranium oxide each year for use in the start-up of the controversial South Texas Nuclear Project near Bay City.

"We have a sizable commitment clear into 1986 at current production levels," said Jay Reynolds, project manager for the strip-mining operation that has hired some of the workers laid off at the Conquista Project.

"We made our contracts in 1977 which basically was a boom year following Westinghouse saying it couldn't supply uranium to a lot of utilities," Reynolds said.

Bokorney, Reynolds and Falls City Mayor Sam Swierz all said the impact on the area economy was being softened because of the current oil and gas boom underway across South Texas.

Bokorney said many of the laid-off Conquista workers — 95 percent of them local Mexican-Americans and Polish-Americans who earned up to $18,000 a year operating heavy equipment — had obtained jobs at the Sigmor gasoline refinery which has expanded at Three Rivers, the San Miguel lignite electric plant under construction near Jourdanton, and in the thriving petroleum industry.

"Fortunately, because of the rapid development of oil and gas we're a lot better off than say Grants, N.M., where if you don't work in the mines, you don't work," Bokorney said. "It's still not very pleasant."

Swierc, who operates a grocery store in Falls City, estimated his business would not drop more than 5 percent despite closing of the Conquista mine.

"The oil boom has kind of hit right around us, so it should not affect us a whole lot at all," the mayor said.

Bokorney said all the workers dismissed so far had been given severance pay and help in locating new jobs in the area. "If you can't find a job around here, you're not looking," he said.

Several in situ leaching operations, which remove uranium solution through the drilling of wells, will continue at a scaled-down level throughout South Texas.

Ford Talks Could Succeed

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers' contract concessions talks with Ford Motor Co. could succeed where those with General Motors Corp. failed because Ford and its production workers have more at stake, company and union officials say.

Ford has been losing far more money than has GM in the automotive sales slump and the automaker announced Friday that its supplemental unemployment benefits fund for laid-off workers has nearly run dry.

Both companies wanted cutbacks in union contracts because of the slump and competion from foreign carmakers, who have nearly 30 percent of the U.S. market.

The UAW-Ford talks begin anew Monday.

The union's talks with GM failed just before a Thursday midnight deadline, and the union said it would not bargain with the giant automaker until July, the traditional starting date for industry contract talks. Contracts at both companies expire Sept. 14.

us," Mrs. Brice explained.

Dr. Brice is a family practioner and surgeon associated with Cogdell Center. When they first arrived in Snyder, he worked at Cogdell Memorial Hospital (but not as a doctor) because he did not yet have his license to practice here.

Preparations for obtaining that license consisted of taking three separate tests six months apart. To prepare for that Dr. Brice studied in New York as well as Lubbock. The final test was the FLEX exam which all doctors must pass in order to practice medicine in this country.

DR. BRICE...proud to be U.S. citizen

By December of 1976 Dr. Brice had obtained his American medical license and had started practicing in Snyder on that date.

After Dr. Brice finished high school in Chile he received a masters degree in both biology and chemistry. He said he thought about becoming a university instructor, but even though he wanted to teach, he decided to enter the field of medicine since that is what he really wanted to do. After eight years of study, he received his medical degree in 1968 from the Concepcion and Chile University in Santiago, Chile.

The family began the readjustment process in 1975 shortly after arriving in Snyder. Language presented a major obstacle at first. Dr. Brice spoke some English, Mrs. Brice none and the oldest son, Alex, knew about 20 words. English is a required subject in Chilean schools.

"It was terrible at first," Mrs. Brice explained. "It was another world". It was hard for Mrs. Brice to leave her family behind in Chile as she was the eldest in a large family. She said it was less so for her husband since he was an only child.

Even though Mrs. Brice says she is still learning English, she has learned to communicate very well. She has taken beginning English courses at Western Texas College.

"I also like to read and that helps," she said.

Mrs. Brice also works at Cogdell Center and she said she told the other workers to correct her when she says the wrong word because "that is the only way to learn."

Alex and Alfred also adjusted. Alex was in the third grade when they first came to Snyder. In Chile he had started school at age four since they follow the European system.

In less than two years, the boys adjusted very well, not only to a new school and a new way of life, but also to a new language.

The family had to adjust to different customs in their new land. For instance people in Chile do a lot more personal visiting since very few people have telephones.

During the time when the Brices were deciding to come to America, Mrs. Brice said that the situation in Chile was similar to Poland's present situation. "We had to stand in long lines just to get the essential items," Mrs. Brice said.

Now things have improved since Chile has martial law, but there is no freedom, Mrs. Brice explained.

During Christmas of 1977 they traveled back to Chile for a 15 day visit. And though they still keep in touch with loved ones there they have never regretted the decision to come to America, especially Snyder, Tex.

"We like Snyder and enjoy living here," Dr. Brice said. "We wouldn't live anywhere else in the world. Politically and economically America is the best. Every person here has an opportunity to do whatever they are capable of."

Minor Mishaps Are Reported

Snyder Police investigated three minor traffic mishaps Friday night, including a hit-and-run.

At 9:16 p.m., police were called to the Sonic Drive In where the parked 1979 Chevrolet of Silvia Sanchez and a 1973 Chevrolet driven by Brett Allen Martin were involved in a mishap. Damage was listed as minor.

A 1971 Pontiac parked at 408 28th St. and owned by Henry V. Hernandez and a 1978 Chevrolet pickup driven by Carol Ann Slaughter were involved in a collision reported at 10:31 p.m. A hit and run mishap was reported at 11:29 p.m. at Mason's Auto. Involved were a parked 1978 Chevrolet owned by Morris Head and a vehicle which left the scene.

Damages in both the latter mishaps also were listed as minor.

'His Song' To Perform

"His Song", a 13 member musical ensemble from the Baptist Student Center at Texas Tech, Lubbock, will sing at 7 p.m. Sunday at the First Methodist Church.

"His Song" will present the worship through music and drama.

Mike Greenfield, president of the Baptist Student Center, will speak on his work as a volunteer lay chaplain at Methodist Hospital, Lubbock. Mike is a 1979 graduate of Snyder High School and a member of Colonial Hill Baptist Church.

The Family Life Committee will feed the students at 5:30 p.m.

Dinner Theatre Set At College

"The Real Inspector Hound" will lead mystery fans on a merry chase when the annual Western Texas College dinner theatre takes the stage on Feb. 26-27 and March 1.

"This is a real "whodunit" comedy," Jim Rambo, director, said, "one we think everyone will enjoy."

The format for the dinner theatre will be changed this year. A buffet dinner will be served in the lobby of the Fine Arts Building starting at 7:30, with the performance to follow in the Fine Arts Theatre about 8:30 p.m. The meal will be catered by George Gann.

The show will also be WTC's entry in the Texas Junior College Speech and Theatre Association Play Festival scheduled March 3-6 at the North Harris County Community College in Houston.

Appearing in the cast for the new show will be Jay Blakemore of Indianapolis, Ind.; Bob Clark of Mineral Wells, Robin Banks of Lubbock, Tim Tatum of Post, James Meadows of Loraine, and Pam Trice, Becky Pierce and David Coats of Snyder.

Tod Fritz of Snyder will be the technical assistant in scenery and lights. Kelly Deavers of Snyder will be sound technician and Mickey Smith of Benjamin will be properties technician.

The WTC theatre department will begin rehearshals on March 8 for an April production of "Fiddler on the Roof."

Information about dinner theatre tickets can be obtained by calling the Fine Arts Division at 573-8511, extension 234.

Missing Wallet Is Returned

VENICE GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Edward and Cynthia Crowe say it was a regular miracle on 42nd Street.

The couple had gotten off their plane in Newark, N.J., last week and got on a bus to Manhattan when Crowe, a 47-year-old merchant seaman, put on his coat to brave the snow.

His wallet, containing $1,140 in cash, credit cards and identification accidentally fell out and was left on the bus when they got off at the Port Authority Bus Terminal on 42nd Street. They didn't notice the wallet was missing until they tried to take the subway, Mrs. Crowe said.

That left them penniless except for some small change in Mrs. Crowe's purse and their return airplane tickets.

The couple canceled their credit cards and returned home to Florida the same night.

Mrs. Crowe, who lived in New York 10 years before moving to Florida, said she was certain the money was gone forever.

But, said Mrs. Crowe Friday night, "Miracles do happen."

On Sunday, a man identifying himself as William Karp of Louisville, Ky., called.

"He said, 'I have your wallet and I am sending it to you by mail,'" Mrs. Crowe recalled. "We held our breath because we thought the call was a ploy."

The letter arrived on Friday. Inside was Karp's check for the full cash amount — and a letter.

Didn't Want One Anyway...

Court Blocks Girl's Abortion

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — A 13-year-old runaway fought her parents all the way to the state Supreme Court for the right to have an abortion, then tearfully announced she would have the baby and asked her father to take her home.

"God — He spoke to me. He told me to change my mind," the seventh-grader said Friday while embracing her father outside the court chambers.

Her announcement came after the Alabama Supreme Court temporarily blocked the operation, which had been scheduled for today. The girl's decision made the case moot and left unanswered the legal question of whether a minor can have an abortion without parental approval in Alabama.

She emerged from the closed hearing and said she decided against an abortion "because it would be killing my baby and I want it to live."

The court records did not identify the girl or her family because of the girl's age.

The Supreme Court, ruling for the first time on an abortion case involving a minor, split 5-2 on its decision temporarily halting the abortion until the parents' appeal could be heard. The judges did not know of the girl's decision when they issued the stay, lawyers said.

The parents went to court to block the abortion after Juvenile Court Judge John Davis of Montgomery ruled Tuesday the girl could do as she pleased.

Party Planned In Honor Of Capitol Anniversary

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Groundbreaking for the state Capitol a century ago was, one historian observes, an example of "Texas brag" — when the state didn't have much to brag about.

On Monday, Texans and others, including a prominent foreign visitor, will celebrate the 100th anniversary of that groundbreaking.

Festivities will begin at 11 a.m., with horse-drawn carriages bringing special guests to the south steps of the Capitol to watch performances by military and musical groups from the University of Texas and Texas A&M University.

The guests will include Lord Provost Alexander Collie of Aberdeen, Scotland.

Gov. Bill Clements has extended an invitation through the news media for all Texans to attend the party.

Those who do come will be offered a slice from a birthday cake in the shape of the Texas Capitol, which was modeled after the national Capitol and is the largest of any state Capitol in the nation.

Texas' fourth Capitol was built after the previous one burned down in 1881. Three million acres of public land — valued at 50 cents an acre — were traded to finance its construction.

Texas historian T.R. Fehrenbach noted in a recent article that the Capitol "was not erected without political feuds, rhetoric, controversy, and wheeling-dealing on a Texas scale."

"There was fighting over the choice of local limestone or the imported kind, finally settled by choosing native rock," Fehrenbach said. "There was fine-lining and manuevering, trade-offs made. There were cost overruns, 'incidentals' that had to be paid for with the sale of more land. And there was labor trouble, local artisans mollified with payments when foreign masons — Scots — were brought in to do the work."

The Capitol, he said, was designed as a "symbol, a statement for the ages. This involved a lot of what we would now call Texas brag, when the state did not have all that much to brag about — frontier conditions still prevailed, Texas was poor, largely undeveloped and unsettled, overwhelmingly agrarian and at the mercy of the elements and distant markets. The people still had not thrown off the effects of war, depression, and a hated carpetbagger rule."

Fehrenbach added:

"The roots of the Capitol, like the roots of the people, were in the land, and in a determination to make the land bear fruit by a people whose dreams and grasp have matched their reach.

"This, and not a mere historic monument, is what Texans will celebrate on Capitol Centennial Day."

Man Suffers Attack

WATERBURY, Vt. (AP) — The morning listeners of Rusty Parker's radio show heard a sudden gasp, then silence. "Call an ambulance," a second voice said, the plea sent over the airwaves.

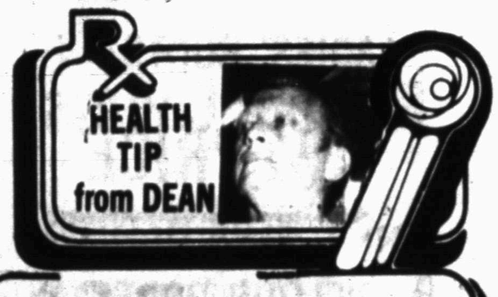
Dr. John Valentine, a physician driving to work at Central Vermont Hospital in Berlin, was near radio station WDEV and was listening to the show Friday morning.

He rushed in, began resuscitating Parker and possibly saved the man's life.

Parker, 55, was listed in critical condition at Central Vermont and, by Friday night was "responding a little bit," a hospital spokesman said. "He is recognizing family."

The cardiopulmonary resuscitation administered by Valentine was credited by other doctors with keeping him alive. Parker "would have died if CPR hadn't been done," Valentine said.

"I was listening to Rusty on the radio and driving by the station and I heard him choke," Valentine said. "And then I heard someone else say, 'Call an ambulance.'"



Strokes are caused by a restricted flow of blood to the brain. Warning signs are: sudden temporary weakness or numbness in the face, arm and leg on one side; sudden speech difficulty, loss of speech or ability to understand others; dimness or loss of vision, headache, dizziness, change in personality or mental ability. Lie down and get immediate medical help.

Dear Abby

Student Already Knows What Professor Wants to Teach

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: When I was 16 the man I loved was killed in a boating accident. He was 21, and we were going to be married on my 17th birthday. Six months later I married his 29-year-old brother. I was his fourth wife! I had the marriage annulled when I discovered he was only interested in weird and kinky sex. (I think he was crazy.)

I'm now going to a junior college. The very first day one of my professors asked me to stay after class. Then he told me he wanted to go to bed with me. At least he was up-front about it, but I was hurt and disappointed. Even though I'm no virgin, I don't want to go to bed with a guy unless he knows me and likes me as a person. This man didn't even know me. He just liked what he saw. (I'm 38-25-36.)

I had coffee with him a few times, and he's still trying to talk me into going to bed with him. He's a very persuasive talker. I can't come up with a really good reason why I don't want to give in, and I'm afraid I'll weaken. Can you help me? He calls me . . .

DOLLY NO. 2

DEAR DOLLY: Your judgment is sound. Use the same words with him that you used in your letter to me. Decline the coffee dates and tell him if he doesn't quit hassling you, you will report him to the college dean. That should cool him off.

DEAR ABBY: Besides having a great personality, my 24-year-old daughter is exceptionally beautiful and has always had a figure like a beauty contest winner.

She has dated many men, but now she is engaged to marry a great guy. He's a big man, 6 foot 6, and weighs 240. He loves to eat. The problem is that he is constantly encouraging my daughter to eat. He always brings her chocolates, which she rarely ate before, and together they can consume a 2-pound box in one evening!

Needless to say, my daughter is losing her beautiful figure fast. She has gained 31 pounds since her engagement three months ago! For a girl who has always been proud of her figure, it doesn't seem to bother her much, but it's upsetting me. I hate to see her let herself go and get really fat now that she's got her man. I'm desperate for some advice on what I should say or do.

N.Y. MOM

DEAR MOM: You shouldn't say or do anything. She's a big girl now, and if she chooses to let herself go, much as you hate to see it, Mom, hold your tongue.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 16-year-old girl who loves to talk on the phone. Unfortunately, we have only one phone in our house and it's in the kitchen. Out of consideration to other members of my family, I limit my calls to only an hour, but I'm constantly being told to get off the phone.

Abby, I want a phone of my own. I can earn enough money to have one installed and pay the monthly bills, but my parents won't hear of it.

I promised I wouldn't talk at unreasonable hours or neglect my studies, but they still won't hear of it. I've begged and begged, but it hasn't done any good. Why do you think they refuse to let me have my own phone, and how can I convince my parents to change their minds?

MOTOR MOUTH

DEAR MOTOR MOUTH: Quit nagging; it's immature. Your parents probably fear that if you have your own phone you will be spending too much time on it. (Anyone who thinks "only an hour" isn't much could easily talk for two hours, given the chance.)

When you can prove that you aren't addicted to the phone, your folks may let you have your own. And not until.

Fish Story Has Ring To It

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — This fish story has quite a ring to it.

Joseph M. Cross Jr. of Newport News lost his $400 University of Virginia class ring while sailing in Hampton Roads a year and a half ago.

"A storm came up," Cross recounted Wednesday. "The boom swung over and I reached up to stop it. My ring went flying off....I could see the little bubbles come up as it sank in the middle of the channel."

Cross, a 1969 architecture graduate, said the ring fell into about 30 feet of water and about 142 miles from here. He though it was lost forever.

Now here comes the catch.

Cross has his ring back. He said it apparently was swallowed by a fish that ended up at a fish market here.

About two weeks ago, Coleman Maddox was talking to a friend behind a restaurant next to the market. Seeing a reflection, Maddox picked up the ring, recognized its value and starting looking for the owner.

El Paso...

Staff Leads War On Drugs Without Leaving Office

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Arthur Fluhr and his staff of 120 are leading the fight in the war against drugs without leaving their quiet El Paso office.

Fluhr is the director of the El Paso Intelligence Center, or EPIC, the high-technology information center for the federal government's anti-drug efforts. EPIC is the "brains" of the operation, processing mountains of intelligence gathered by law enforcement officials and the electronic eyes and ears of the government.

"We're the one point that a law enforcement officer can call and get all the information possible," Fluhr said. "The idea of the program is to intercept the drugs before they come into this country and we've had some success at it."

In 1981, EPIC's actions resulted in the seizure of 460 ships loaded with more than 4 million pounds of marijuana and nearly 49,000 pounds of hashish. The agency also helped law enforcement authorities capture airplanes loaded with drugs and individuals trying to smuggle drugs through East Coast airports.

"It's taken us years to build the data base we have," Fluhr said. "It's the best that exists in the world."

EPIC's resources soon will be growing. President Reagan recently signed into law a bill that will allow the military to give EPIC information on smuggling suspects that its ships and planes spot while on maneuvers.

Attorney General William French Smith, in announcing the new program, said it is "exceptionally important and promising." Fluhr doubts whether the military can take enough time from its main mission of national defense to provide a lot of information, but he says every tidbit helps battle the smugglers.

EPIC was founded in 1974 as the Southwest Border Intelligence Service by the Drug Enforcement Administration and the Immigration and Naturalization Service. Its goal was to halt trafficking of drugs, guns and aliens across the Mexican border.

"In 1976 and 1977, when the problem with Mexico kind of wound down, we became an international organization with narcotics again the No. 1 concern," Fluhr said.

The concentration moved from Mexico to the Caribbean, the shipping lane for marijuana and cocaine shipped from Colombia and Jamaica, Fluhr said.

EPIC grew to include nine agencies — the DEA, INS, U.S. Customs, the Coast Guard, Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, the Internal Revenue Service, the U.S. Marshals service and the FBI.

"You don't think that's a hell of a management job?" laughed Fluhr, a DEA agent who has headed EPIC since 1976. "It's really not that bad. What makes it work is the people assigned here by the administrators and commissioners of the nine agencies are really the cream of the crop."

The elite force also has access to information from the Federal Aviation Administration, the National Security Agency and, now, the armed forces.

EPIC also has agreements with state law enforcement officials in 45 states to exchange information both directions.

Now, a local law enforcement official with information about a smuggling suspect can call EPIC toll-free 24 hours a day and get all of the data on that suspect from EPIC's computer and document files. If EPIC knows that someone in another state is working on a related case, they will get the officers in touch with one another so they can pool their efforts.

"When you sit back here with all of the information, sometimes you can see a pattern developing," Fluhr said. "If you're assigned to a particular area, you're parochial in nature. It's really hard to see the big picture. That's where we come in."

The first year Fluhr directed EPIC, law enforcement officers made 14,000 requests for information. In 1981, EPIC handled 196,000 queries.

Fluhr said that when law enforcement officers call about a suspect, EPIC has the information they need about 35 percent of the time.

"If you call on a vessel or an aircraft, it's probably way up around 70 percent," he said.

Knowledge about EPIC's activities during its seven-year existence generally has been limited to the law enforcement community, but Fluhr said congressional attention has made the agency more noticeable recently.

"I guess the thing that's put us on the map was the Posse Commitatus Act (allowing military participation)," he said. "Congress is extremely interested in this. We've been selling them that EPIC is something more than a telephone booth in El Paso."

Far from a phone booth, the strategy rooms at the center resemble a scene from "Dr. Strangelove."

The walls are covered by giant maps that bear blinking lights to show the movements of drug smuggling ships and airplanes. Chalkboards on the walls carry the information on suspected aircraft, including what kind of drugs they are carrying and their destinations.

Virtually every desk holds a computer terminal to give agents access to the DEA's Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs Information System, FAA flight plans and aircraft identification and computer data on hundreds of thousands of suspects.

The information from every query that is called into EPIC by law enforcement officers is fed into the computers, producing an ever-growing data base.

EPIC also has access to intelligence gathered by the government's electronic surveillance, ranging from satellite spying to intercepting smuggler's radio messages.

By analyzing the data, EPIC is able to launch strikes against smugglers by mobilizing Coast Guard cutters, Customs aircraft and DEA agents at home and abroad.

"We don't want EPIC to be in the position where we tell anybody what to do," Fluhr said. "Our reputation has grown to the point where if EPIC calls a law enforcement agency with tactical information, they act on it."

EPIC's operation costs the taxpayers $1.4 million a year, but Fluhr said the expense for the high-technology center is necessary because smugglers are more sophisticated than they've ever been.

"Now, you've got to have the cooperation of the whole law enforcement community to catch these people," he said.

VIRGEL FLEMING

ARVIS CAREY

Two From Texaco Plan Retirement

Upcoming retirement of two veteran employees from the Producing West U. S., Midland Division of Texaco, Inc., in Snyder has been announced by John M. Weaver, district manager at Midland.

Arvis L. Carey, who has completed 33 years with Texaco, will retire Feb. 1, and Virgel L. Fleming, who has completed 40 years of service will retire March 1.

Carey is a native of Grove, Okla., and attended Borger High School. He joined Texaco at Electra in 1949 as a roustabout. He became head operator at Snyder in 1960.

Mr. and Mrs. Carey, who live at 119 Browning St., have two children. Mrs. Jan Watson of Abilene and Scott Carey of Fort Stockton.

Fleming is a native of Konawa, Okla., and attended high school in Padgett, Tex. He joined Texaco in Snyder as a roustabout and later served as a pumper at Lamesa. He became a pumper at Snyder in 1959.

Mr. and Mrs. Fleming live at 3010 El Paso Ave., and they have two sons, Ronald G. Fleming of Lubbock and Jerry Fleming of Hurst.

Express Mail Can Now Be Forwarded

Express mail can now be forwarded, Dan Foreman officer-in-charge of the Snyder Post Office, has announced. And, there is no extra charge to the mailer, Foreman added.

In the past, express mail which was undeliverable as addressed could be forwarded locally, but it could not be forwarded to another post office. In most cases, this would preclude express mail from being sent from one city or town to the next.

If it was unclaimed or could not be delivered as addressed, it was returned to the sender at no additional charge.

"Some people never realized that their express mail could not be forwarded until it was returned to them," said Foreman. "This change will eliminate that confusion."

Foreman also said that, while refunds of express mail postage will be made if the Postal Service does not meet the service guarantees for delivery to the original address, postage will not be refunded if forwarding or return service is provided.

In addition to the free forwarding, Foreman said express mail users also can now purchase address correction service. The fee for this service is 25 cents for each address correction or notification of reason for non-delivery, provided the correct address is known to the Postal Service.

"Free forwarding and address correction service for express mail are just two of the many things we are doing to improve service for customers," Foreman said.

Controllers Computer Out 10 Hours Thursday

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The regional air traffic control computer in Fort Worth was out of service for more than 10 hours Thursday, The Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported today.

In a copyright story, the newspaper said it was the first major outage in 18 months for the regional system once cited as worst in the nation.

The outage at the Fort Worth Air Route Traffic Control Center coincided with an announcement by Federal Aviation administrator J. Lynn Helms of a $10 billion plan to modernize the nation's computer control system.

The failure caused delays of up to an hour for planes taking off from Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport and also delayed traffic across the region controlled from Fort Worth, center chief Ed Johnson said Friday.

The outage also caused "a certain period of confusion" while controllers waited to find out whether the computer would be brought back up and whille they switched to a backup control system, said one controller who was on duty.

SWAMP CREATION—Clyde Connell, one of the 13 artists whose works are included in the Works by Women exhibit coming to the Scurry County Museum on Feb. 2, fashioned this piece from the wood, rattan and rocks of the swamp. Born on a plantation near Shreveport in 1901, Ms. Connell is a leading artist in the translation of the Deep South culture into contemporary visual terms. She has titled this work "Vine Habitat."

Opening Tuesday...

Museum Prepares For Women's Art Exhibit

Art work by women artists in America will be seen in the Gihon Foundation's Works by Women exhibit opening Tuesday in the Scurry County Museum at Western Texas College.

The museum will be closed today and Monday so final preparations can be made for the Tuesday opening. A preview party for members of the Museum Association is planned from 6:30 p. m. to 8 p. m. Monday evening and persons wishing to join the association are invited to pay their memberships at that time.

The Gihon Foundation was established in Dallas in 1978 by Bette Graham. Its purpose is to provide opportunities and resources to enable women to realize their full potential, with the current focus on furthering the potential of women through utilization pf the visual arts.

Like any minority, women artists have gone through a series of developmental stages, the foundation points out. At first, they were a rather unknown quantity, succeeding primarily by mimicing men's art, or by sticking to less "pure" artistic outlets like portraiture and folk art.

Beginning about 1970, however, there was a fierce outburst of discontent over this diminished status. Today, women artists are moving toward a new stage of development. Growing confidence in their right to produce as women has allowed them freedom to express themselves as individuals as well as women.

The works in the Gihon show reflect this newfound confidence, with an intrinsic value apart from the fact that they were created by women. Any of them deserves to be exhibited in a respectable museum without carrying the tag "made by women."

Georgia O'Keefe of Taos, N. M., is the best known of the artists whose works will be shown here. Artists with roots in this area include Nancy Chambers of Dallas, who was born in Midland in 1952; Dorothy Hood of Houston, who was born in Bryan in 1910, and Mary McCleary, a native of Houston.

Other artists whose works are included are Lynda Benglis, Mary Cassatt, Clyde Connell, Janet Fish, Hermine Ford, Helen Frankenthaler, Nancy Graves, Gael Stack and Dee Wolff.

The Scurry County Museum has scheduled a showing of "The Golden Age of Painting" from the Sarah Campbell Blaffer Foundation in April and the "Crossroads of the Empire" map exhibit from the Amon Carter Museum in June and July.

The Scurry County Museum and the Diamond M Museum will host a Texas Historical Commission workshop on Feb. 6.

Five States File Court Suit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A suit seeking to overturn congressional approval of a controversial plan to help finance the $43 billion Alaska natural gas pipeline has been filed by five states and 24 members of Congress.

The challenge filed Thursday in the U.S. Court of Appeals alleges that a technical provision in federal law was violated by a House vote approving the plan, which would allow consumers to be billed for pipeline costs before it is completed.

Joining in the action were six senators, 18 representatives, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio, Rhode Island and several public interest and consumer organizations.

John G. McMillian, chairman of the Northwest Alaskan Pipeline Co., said the suit "appears to be politically motivated and totally without foundation or merit."

WTC, Tuesday...

Hudson To Appear Here

Ron Hudson, a classical guitarist, will be entertaining students at Western Texas College in a program at 11 a.m. Tuesday in the Fine Arts Theatre.

Hudson's programs are said to include something for just about all musical tastes. Although he has been steeped in the techniques of the Spanish classical guitar, he applies these techniques not only to the music of Spain but also to a far-ranging repertoire.

In addition to the selections of many Hispanic lands, Hudson interprets the works of the great master J. S. Bach and of notable contemporaries like Paul Simon and Mason Williams.

He also has written a number of original compositions. One of his songs tells of giant tarantulas invading a small village in Guatemala where he was raised. While performing this piece, he will be sharing the stage with this unusual spider.

RON HUDSON

Besides the guitar, Hudson will be playing an armadillo, a popular instrument from South America. On this current tour of college campuses, he will be premiering Bach's Brandenburg concerto No. 3, which he recently transcribed for the guitar.

Hudson has several LP albums to his credit, the latest being "Solo" on the Maya label. His appearance at WTC is sponsored by the entertainment committee of the Student Senate.

Dozier Begins Week Of Debriefing

VICENZA, Italy (AP) — U.S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier today began briefing Italian and American authorities on his captivity and has already provided "valuable information" about the Red Brigades terrorists who held him for 42 days.

But as Italy toasted the 10 police commandos who rescued Dozier without firing a shot, and trumpeted a major blow against the Red Brigades, an anonymous caller claiming to speak for the terrorists warned of revenge.

"We will replace the comrades arrested at Padua, and nothing will remain unpunished," the male caller told the Italian newspaper Il Mattino di Padova. The call was being investigated, police said.

"We can't delude ourselves. Terrorism isn't finished," said a top investigator in the Dozier case, who requested anonymity.

Crack police wearing masks to conceal their identities burst into a Padua apartment Thursday and freed Dozier as a terrorist held a gun to his head.

Police identified the five captors arrested in the apartment as Emanuela Frascella, 20, the daughter of a prominent Padua physician; Giovanni Ciucci, 22, a former railroad worker from Pisa; Antonio Savasta and Emilia Libera, both 27, and long sought as members of the Rome "column" of the Red Brigades, and Cesare De Lenardo, 22, of Udine.

Verona's police chief, Pasquale Zappone, said the guerrillas grew lax toward the end of Dozier's ordeal, not even bothering to hide their faces from their hostage because they were certain he would never live to identify them.

"For the first few days...he was either blindfolded, or they put hoods over their heads. Later, however, they stopped using any precautions, a sign that the death sentence had already been pronounced," Zappone said.

Stapling not a miracle cure

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have an obese friend who is contemplating a stomach-stapling operation for weight reduction. She is 20 years old and has a lifetime history of obesity. She has fasted to the point of anorexia as a teen-ager. She is desperate to lose weight. She believes this operation will be the answer to her weight problem. She says they told her she could eat anything she wanted and wouldn't have to watch what she ate.

Is this true? I can't convince her this operation is not a miracle cure. I have suggested, at the risk of our friendship, that she see a psychologist before doing anything so drastic.

She has been quoted an $8,000 fee for the operation. I'm skeptical as I believe unless one's diet and exercise habits are changed nothing will keep a person from regaining any weight loss.

DEAR READER — You are a good friend. And I hope your efforts will help.

Unless you do something that induces diarrhea, so you don't absorb the calories you swallow, or develop diabetes to lose sugar calories through the urine, it is quite true that fat storage is dependent upon the calories you consume and the calories your body uses.

The stapling operation converts the top of the stomach into a storage pouch with a small hole to enter the lower stomach below the line of staples. In effect it decreases the size of the stomach and it cannot comfortably store as much food. If a person eats more than the pouch will hold he will be very uncomfortable. The results, if any, that are induced by such a procedure depend once again on the fundamental principle of calories in equal calories used plus calories stored as fat. It is just a mechanical way of inducing a person to consume fewer calories.

Of course, such a person can drink high calorie liquids that pass right through the pouch and still consume too many calories. I agree that your friend needs professional counseling and a regular long-term project to help her control her weight.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet, which is a balanced diet a person can follow. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My niece went to the doctor for a pre-marriage physical and was given a Pap test. She happens to be pregnant and the doctor knew this. Will this harm the baby in any way? I was told it's a law you have to have a Pap test before you get married. Is this true?

DEAR READER — No; the Pap test will not have any effect on your niece's pregnancy. A Pap test merely swabs the lining of the vagina and cervix to obtain cells that have been shed. The cells are examined under a microscope to see if they are normal. Until the time of delivery the cervix is closed with a mucus plug and the Pap test doesn't involve passing anything into the closed uterus or beyond the surface of the cervix.

Pap tests are recommended when a girl becomes sexually active. Usually three Pap tests form a good base line for future examinations.

I don't know what the law is in your state. State laws vary. But it is a good idea to have those base line examinations.

Abilene Star Soars...

Olson Vaults 18-8-¾ Indoors

TORONTO (AP) - Veteran high jumper Dwight Stones told Bill Olson to go for it all, and the rising star among pole vaulters took it to heart.

Olson, 23, of Abilene, Texas, became the first pole vaulter in the world to reach 18 feet, 8¾ inches indoors, electrifying more than 12,000 spectators at the Toronto Star-Maple Leaf Games Friday night.

And he came within a fraction of an inch of successfully vaulting 19-0¼. Only three pole vaulters in the world have ever completed such a vault - none indoors.

"I should have had it," Olson said. "I got a little overanxious.

"I was completely over the bar and at a height like that you tend to be a little jerky and that's exactly what I did," he added. "I jerked my arms back and it pushed my chest into the bar, knocking it off.

"It was a good jump. It felt smooth all the way. I think I'll get it at Dallas (in Saturday's Dallas Times Herald meet)."

His performance pushed into the background another world-best performance by Renaldo Nehemiah in the men's 50-yard hurdles.

Nehemiah, the first hurdler to crack the six-second barrier in the event here last year, lowered his world standard to 5.92 seconds from 5.98, with rival Greg Foster second in 5.99.

Those were the only two indoor world bests recorded at the 20th annual meet.

"When the atmosphere is like that, that's the kind of things that sets up records," Olson said. "Everyone was out here walking around, kind of cocky and everything, and everyone was saying 'Oh, I'm going to start high.'

So I said 'Hey, I'll start on 18 feet, maybe that'll physche them out.'"

And that's what he did, thanks in part to Stones.

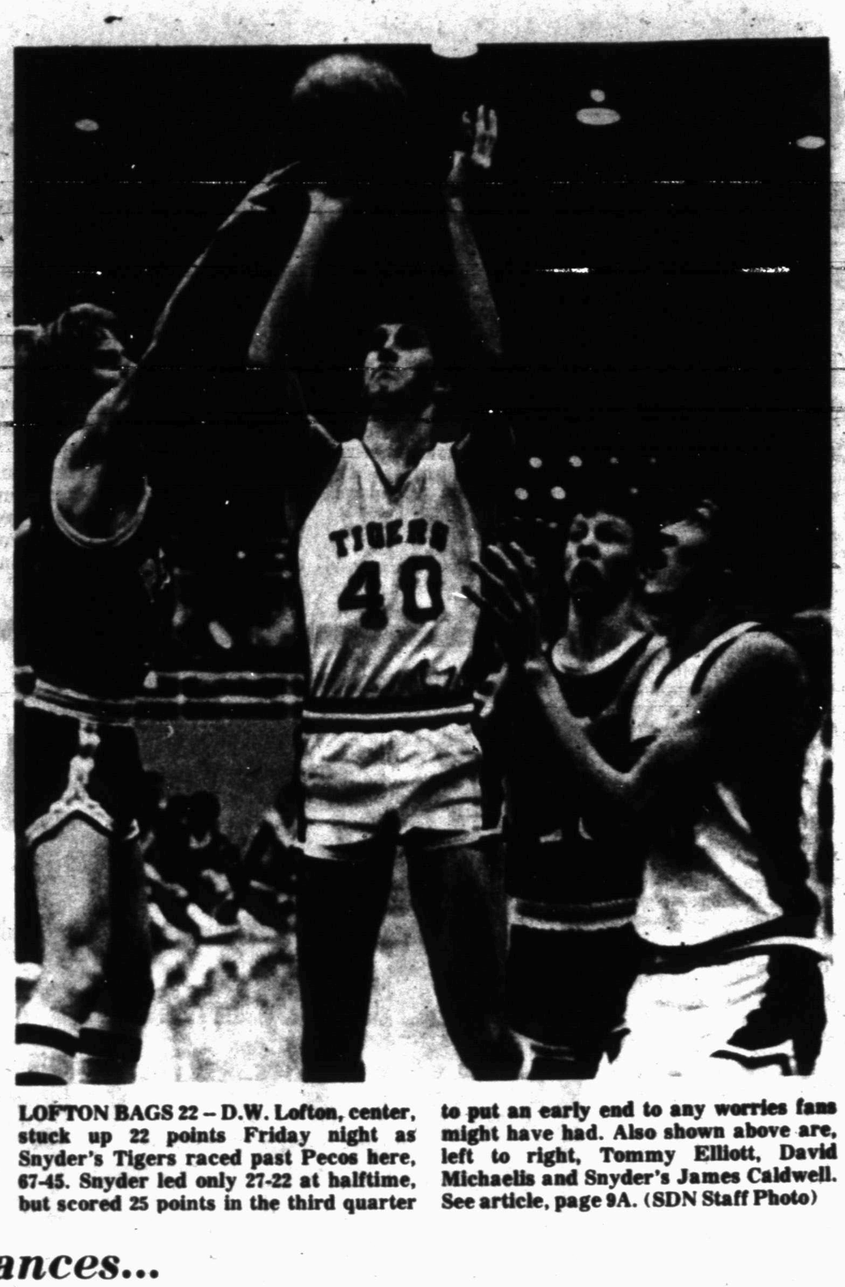
"He was telling me he wishes he had a lot of his chances back when he was jumping well when he broke a record and he would stop," Olson said. "In essence, he was telling me I should keep jumping while I was jumping well."

Stones won the men's high jump at 7-feet, 4½ inches, a meet record, after missing three tries at 7-5¾.

Nehemiah won despite a nagging injury to his left ankle, hurt last Friday while participating in the TV Superstars competition.

In an upset, Evelyn Ashford of the Medalists Track Club in Los Angeles, finished third in the women's 50-yard dash behind Jeanette Bolden of Wilt's AC in Los Angeles and Angela Bailey of Toronto.

Bolden's time was 5.80 seconds to 5.85 for Bailey.



LOFTON BAGS 22 – D.W. Lofton, center, stuck up 22 points Friday night as Snyder's Tigers raced past Pecos here, 67-45. Snyder led only 27-22 at halftime, but scored 25 points in the third quarter to put an early end to any worries fans might have had. Also shown above are, left to right, Tommy Elliott, David Michaelis and Snyder's James Caldwell. See article, page 9A. (SDN Staff Photo)

UCLA Upsets Beavers; Arkansas Tops Rice

by The Associated Press

You've got to hand it to UCLA.

Oregon State Coach Ralph Miller said that's just what his Beavers did Friday night.

"The Bruins were better this evening," said Miller after his eighth-ranked basketball team was upset 74-68 at Pauley Pavilion. "I haven't seen a team this season that we can't beat on any given night. But it was our poorest rebounding job of the year - we just gave it to them."

The Bruins not only beat Oregon State on the boards, 29-24, but at the foul line, making 16 free throws in 24 attempts to the Beavers' six foul shots in just seven tries.

"Up until the last four minutes we played as well as we could," said UCLA Coach Larry Farmer. "It was a good feeling to hear the final buzzer go off. They came back like gangbusters. They never quit."

UCLA's senior forward Mike Sanders erupted for a career-high 29 points, 19 of them in the second half when the Bruins needed them to hold off the charging Beavers. Kenny Fields added 25 points and grabbed a game-high eight rebounds for the Bruins, who rolled to their fifth straight victory and at the same time stopped Oregon State's eight-game winning streak.

Sanders, who has had recent scoring problems, didn't consider his performance against the Beavers the end of a drought.

"I don't think it was a situation where I've been in a slump," he said. "Teams have been double and triple-teaming me since conference play began and that left Kenny Fields open. They mostly played me one-on-one tonight. I can work to get open easier against one person than two or three."

Charlie Sitton led Oregon State with 22 points before fouling out in the final seconds.

In the only other game involving a ranked team, No. 12 Arkansas defeated Rice 60-54.

The Top Twenty

Arkansas relied on the scoring of Darrell Walker and Scott Hastings for a come-from-behind victory over Rice in a Southwest Conference game. Walker, a junior guard, scored only four field goals but hurt the Owls at the free throw line when he hit 9 of 11 shots. Hastings, a senior center, was 7-of-10 from the floor and hit two of his four free throws.

Sideline Glances...

'Coach' Shipp Sets Sail

By BILL McCLELLAN

I wasn't at home evenings and couldn't ever reach him by day but I knew if I put in the photo of him wearing his beard Winfred Shipp would find me fast. Vanity gets 'em every time.

WINFRED SHIPP

Seriously Shipp, I liked the beard. It kinda goes with that extra touch you used to put in athletics around here. A homey, kind of Good Ole Boy look. You should consider growing it again.

Sure enough, he showed up Saturday morning, grinning like a possum and just as earthy as ever. I was late, but he didn't seem to mind much. We had set up the appointment by phone the evening before.

"What in the world is that in the paper?" Those were his first words. I could tell he wasn't upset, but I was glad we were conversing through pieces of plastic over several miles of wire.

"That's you, Coach," I said. "That's you looking your best."

Well, his wife might not agree. But I still liked the beard.

Anyway, to get off the fuzz and down to the peach, lets share a few moments with Shipp before he moves along.

For a quick background reference, Shipp coached Snyder varsity track for five years here, up until the coaching change recently. He came here 10 seasons ago (not seven) after stints in Hawkins, Baird and Mexia and hired on as a ninth grade football coach, among other things. He moved up to junior varsity football coach and then took over the varsity track program.

Shipp produced two district championship teams, 1979 and 1980, and sent five different kids to the state meet, three of them twice. Probably his best year was in 1980, when Dale Jenkins and Brad Richardson took first places in the pole vault and high jump respectively, and Thomas Selmon placed second in the long jump. He also sent Ricky Rice to state in the pole vault one year, and Randy Courtney in the high jump another.

His biggest disappointment was in 1981, the year Snyder might have had a shot at the state title. Shipp was licking his chops a couple of years earlier when it took two hands to count all the potential state qualifiers he had. But two of the kids moved away and another was declared ineligible because of a mixup in courses. Another was ineligible because of grades, and, well.... things just didn't pan out.

The recent coaching change moved Shipp out of junior varsity football and the varsity track program to ninth grade football. He was also to assist Albert Lewis this season with the baseball team. But he got a job offer early last week he couldn't refuse.

"I felt like I couldn't turn the opportunity down," he said Saturday morning. "I've been coaching for 18 years and this was a chance to do something different and stay in Snyder. I wanted to stay here. I've made my home here and I like it here," said the newest sales engineer for Champion Chemical.

"I've enjoyed Snyder and I've enjoyed associating with the people I worked with. I've had a lot of close relations with the kids."

Shipp knows kids. In addition to his success in the track program, he can cite a three-year span when his junior varsity football teams lost only one game a season.

"I think I've been able to get a lot out of the kids," he said. "Success isn't knowing a lot of X's and 0's. It's getting the best out of the kids you have. To do that, you have to have fun. The kids have to have fun. You can ask the kids and they'll tell you we worked hard. I wore 'em out sometimes. But we'd always have some fun sometime during workouts. The kids aren't going to keep coming out if they're not having fun doing it."

Will he ever go back into coaching?

"I've had a lot of chances to," he said. "But I'm happy here in Snyder and I want to give this (the new job) a try. Whether or not I'll ever coach again is yet to be seen."

Meanwhile, Shipp won't be out of athletics entirely. As secretary for the Snyder Basketball Officials Association and associate secretary of the Permian Basin Chapter, he'll still be involved. And, he's pondering calling some high school baseball games, and maybe football, too.

We'll miss you, Coach. Say, do you think Champion would maybe let you grow that beard back?

Pros Motivated To Win - Shula

HONOLULU (AP) - Although the results of Sunday's Pro Bowl won't show up in any standings, Coach Don Shula believes the players are highly motivated to win.

"The key to winning a game like this is pride, and these guys wouldn't be here if they didn't have pride," said Shula, the Miami Dolphins' coach who is at the helm of the American Conference squad.

"This is my third time coaching the Pro Bowl and it's a joy to work with these talented players," continued Shula, who guided the winning team in the 1965 and 1968 National Football League Pro Bowls, then aligned by East and West. "You find they want to work and they want to win."

"These guys know what to do," said Tampa Bay Coach John McKay, whose National Conference assignment is his first in the Pro Bowl. "All you have to do is work with them a little and turn them loose."

The nationally televised game, set for a 4 p.m. EST

WTC Cagers Go Against Howard College Monday

BIG SPRING – The second of two annual rivalries between Western Texas College and Howard County College takes place here Monday night in Dorothy Garrett Coliseum and as usual, the outcome could have a key bearing on the Western JC Athletic Conference standings.

Western Texas' men and women each hold a 1-0 record over Howard in conference play this season. In games at Snyder back on Nov. 24 and Dec. 3 respectively, Western's Westerners defeated Howard College men 90-82, and its Dusters defeated HCC women 70-63.

Monday's outcomes however, could mean the difference between a bench or a regional trip for WTC's men, and an also-ran or first-place finish for the women.

Men's Game

Howard College's Hawks, 16-6 for the season and 6-4 in conference play after losing to Frank Phillips last week, stand in the way of a turnaround season for the Westerners.

"The game at Howard could make us or break us the second half of the season," said Coach Larry Dunaway, whose Westerners broke a five-game losing streak by defeating NMMI 95-88 on Thursday. Western is 3-7 in the conference race, but is still in the running for a regional tournament berth. The Westerners need a second straight victory Monday to keep up with the rest of the pack in WJCAC's "second-season".

Women's Game

Though both women's teams still have five conference games remaining after Monday, a loss for WTC would dampen the Dusters' chances for a conference title. Howard, a winner over Frank Phillips last week, leads the loop with a 6-1 record. The Dusters are 4-2 in conference play and could tie with the Hawk Queens for the lead with a victory here.

Howard is 17-6 for the campaign, while Coach Joe Cushing's Dusters were 17-4 heading into Saturday's non-conference game with Sul Ross University. The Dusters were decisive favorites in that one.

Felines Come Up Short To Scrappy Eaglettes

PECOS – Snyder overcame a 10-2 deficit here Friday night, but wasn't able to do the trick again late in the game and fell to Pecos' Lady Eagles 46-37 in District 2-AAAA play.

The Felines, now 10-12 for the season and 3-2 in second round district play, will travel to Sweetwater Tuesday for their next game. Pecos' record goes to 8-12 and 2-2 with the win.

Pecos jumped out to a 10-2 lead and outscored Snyder 12-11 over the next eight minutes for a 22-13 halftime lead.

Snyder countered in the third quarter, 16-6 to take a 29-28 lead, but Pecos raced away with the fourth quarter, 18-8.

Pam Perceval led the Felines with 12 points and 10 rebounds, while Michelle Townsel added 11 of each. LaDonna Halford, who fouled out of the game along with Townsel, scored 7 points and Carmen Rios added 4. Brenda Anderson was the only other Snyder athlete to score. She had 3 points.

Pecos got three girls in double figures. Crumnow and Cochran had 12 points apiece while Jenkins scored 10.

The Lady Eagles outscored Snyder in field goals, 18 to 12.

In other play here Friday, Snyder junior varsity got six overtime points to defeat Pecos 50-44.

After trailing 21-19 at the half, Snyder came away with 19 third quarter points and a 38-30 lead. But Pecos handled the visitors 14-6 in the fourth period to tie the game at 44-all. Snyder then stuck up six overtime points while holding the Eagles to none.

Carie Housden scored 15 points for Snyder and Wendy Lunsford and Theresa Ashworth added 8 apiece as nine Cats put points on the board. Penny Wolfe led in rebounding with 10.

start, is expected to draw a sellout crowd of some 50,000 to Aloha Stadium. It will match the two Super Bowl quarterbacks, San Francisco's Joe Montana and Cincinnati's Ken Anderson.

Montana, in the Pro Bowl for the first time, led the 49ers to a 26-21 victory over the Bengals in last Sunday's Super Bowl.

Anderson has played in two previous Pro Bowls, the last in 1977 when he threw two touchdown passes in the AFC victory.

The NFC has dominated the series in recent years, having won the last four all-star meetings and holding a 7-4 edge since the present AFC-NFC format was adopted.

Lining up with Montana in the NFC starting backfield will be running backs Tony Dorsett of Dallas and Detroit's Billy Sims. Among the reserves on the 40-man squad is New Orleans rookie George Rogers, who led the league in rushing this season.

Joining Anderson, the NFL's top passer during the 1981 campaign, in the AFC backfield will be Houston's Earl Campbell and Kansas City rookie Joe Delaney.

The AFC defensive unit will include Pittsburgh linebacker Jack Lambert, who'll be playing in his seventh Pro Bowl, and Oakland's Ted Hendricks, in the all-star contest for the sixth time.

The NFC defensive starters include two rookies - San Francisco's Ronnie Lott at safety and the New York Giants' Lawrence Taylor at linebacker.

Break It Open In Third...

Tigers Run Past Pecos, 67-45

Snyder's Tigers broke open a close ballgame in the third quarter here Friday night to race past the Eagles of Pecos 67-45 and snap a three-game losing streak.

The victory was Snyder's 19th on the season, giving first-year coach Larry Scott an opportunity to break into the magic 20-game range before the home folks when the Tigers entertain Sweetwater on Tuesday.

The difference in the game came early in the third period when Snyder brought out a man-to-man defense and Pecos began to tire. The out-manned Eagles had earlier overcome an 8-0 Tiger lead to go in front 10-8. Snyder led 12-11 after the first quarter and 27-22 at halftime.

D.W. Lofton, Snyder's man on the receiving end of a fast break, popped the nets for 11-third quarter points as the hosts quickly shot out to a 31-22 lead in the second half. With 4:59 left to go in the period the 6-1 senior executed a three-point play to put Snyder up by 13, 38-25.

From that point on, the outcome was certain. Scott pulled most of his starters with 1:40 left in the quarter and only returned them to the lineup for about two minutes of the fourth period.

"We wore them down by pressing most of the first half and then we changed to a man defense and they had trouble keeping up," Scott said. "And, we put a stop to their fast break. That was how they were getting most of their points in the first half.

"Our press offense really came around and did a good job for us," added the coach, who said Snyder might not have come to play in the early moments.

"It started out we scored the first eight points, then they jumped out on us and got ahead. I guess we were thinking we weren't going to have to play very hard, but we realized it wasn't going to be a free ride," he said.

Snyder outscored the visitors 25-15 in the third quarter to take a 52-37 lead, then locked down the victory with a defensive effort which allowed Pecos only eight-fourth quarter points.

Lofton, who played only about 24 minutes of the 32-minute game, scored 22 points. James Caldwell also hit double-digits, scoring all of his 14 in the first three quarters. Keith Wallace and John Wilson added 7 points apiece while David Rios and Quent Gilbert popped for 6 apiece. Brad Robertson and Mark Shaw had 3 and 2 points respectively.

Pecos was led by hot-handed Efren Valeriano, a 5-8 guard who bagged eight in the second and third quarters enroute to a 22-point night. David Michaelis, 6-5, scored 8 points and Mike Hall had 6.

Clifford Gordon had 9 for Pecos while Pepe Chacon and Sammy Contreras had 8 apiece.

Snyder ran its record to 19-7 for the season and 1-2 in second-half district play with the win. Pecos fell to 11-12 and 1-1.

In earlier play, Snyder junior varsity junked a close, 34-32 third quarter score by out-gunning the visitors 17-6 in the final period. The 51-38 victory was aided by 14 points from David Miller, 10 from Trey McWilliams, 8 from Whit Parks and 6 each from Don Johnson and Casey Peterson. Two other Cats lit the scoreboard as 10 played in the game.

Ecuador's President Forms Majority Coalition

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — President Osvaldo Hurtado's Popular Democracy Party has formed a new majority coalition with the populist Concentration of Popular Forces following a split earlier this week with Vice President Leon Roldos and his party.

Roldos, sided with leaders of the armed forces who accused Hurtado of planning to accept the 1941 Rio de Janeiro Protocol establishing the border between Ecuador and Peru.

Food Program Available For Needy

The Texas Dept. of Human Resources has announced the availability of the Summer Food Services Program for Children to eligible organizations during the summer months. Purpose of the program is to provide food service to children from needy areas during periods when schools are closed for vacation.

Service institutions eligible to sponsor a summer food program are public or non-profit private school food authorities; public or non-profit residential camps, and units of local, municipal or county government.

Those interested may call 512-835-0[illegible], extension 2241 by March 12, or they may write Gene Montag, Chil Nutrition Programs, Texas Department of Human Resources, Food Services Division, 520-A, P. O. Box 2960, Austin 78769.

Deadline Is February 12

Anyone wishing to oppose the Santa Fe Railway's request to close freight stations in a number of West Texas cities and towns, including Snyder, must complete a form and submit it to the Railroad Commission of Texas and a copy to Santa Fe by Feb. 12. The Railroad Commission advised that forms had been mailed to shippers in the areas affected.

Information concerning the forms may be obtained by calling Jack Scivicque at 512-445-1356.

Santa Fe last fall announced its intention to centralize its freight agency operations for a big area of the South Plains in Lubbock. It will result in closing and dismantling of depots in the cities and townsaffected.

On the list are Anton-Shallowater, Brownfield, Lamesa, Levelland, Littlefield, Lorenzo-Ralls-Crosbyton, Muleshoe, Seagraves, Slaton, Snyder, Sudan and Tahoka.

OBITUARIES

Alonzo Infant

Graveside rites were held at 2 p. m. Saturday in Snyder Cemetery for the newborn infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Alonzo. The child died at 8:35 a. m. Saturday in Cogdell Memorial Hospital. Fr. Thomas Jordan, pastor of Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church, officiated, and burial was under direction of Bell-Seale Funeral Home.

Surviving are the parents; two brothers, Thomas Alonzo Jr. and Jesse Alonzo; and a twin sister.

Covered Dish Supper Set At Senior Center

The Senior Center has scheduled a covered dish supper and games night starting at 6 p. m. Thursday.

All county residents 60 years of age and older are invited to Thursday's meal and to participate in the varied activities at the center each weekday.

Senior citizens will begin voting for the Valentine King and Queen on Friday. Balloting will continue through Feb. 11, with the crowning of new royalty on Feb. 12.

The center opens at 8:30 a. m. each weekday and remains open through 4:30 p. m. Senior citizens who need transportation to the center or to take care of business downtown are invited to call the office at 573-4035. A nutritious meal is served in the center at noon Monday through Friday and there is a home-delivered meal program for senior citizens unable to prepare their own meals or go to the center.

SECTION B SUN., JAN. 31, 1982

Martin, Zeck Married In Ohio

Doris Kay Martin became the bride of Mark V. Zeck on Jan. 9 at two in the afternoon at Pleasant View Mennonite Church in N. Lawrence, Ohio. Rev. Paul Johansson and Dean Martin of Elim Bible Institute and Ken Stoltzfus of Living Word Fellowship officiated the double ring ceremony.

The bride's parents are Glen and Betty Martin of Dalton, Ohio. The groom is the son of Martha Schiebel and Ted Zeck of Snyder and the grandson of Mrs. Frank C. Whistler of Snyder and Mr. and Mrs. I. V. Zeck of Waldron, Ark.

The altar was decorated with two sets of globed candles with ivy entwined and two Boston ferns. The altar table held communion emblems, an open Bible, and a floral arrangement. Family pews were marked with white bows.

George Odongo, pianist, of Kenya, East Africa presented a musical prelude. Following the exchange of vows, Janis Martin played the guitar and sang a song she had composed for the couple. Communion was taken and she sang and played "The Lord's Prayer" after which prayers were said for the bride and groom by the three pastors.

The bride's parents gave her in marriage. She wore her mother's 29-year-old white satin wedding gown and a teardrop diamond necklace which belonged to the groom's mother. The dress was scalloped at the waist with a long full skirt and the bodice and pointed sleeves were fastened with white satin covered buttons. A fingertip length veil fell from a band of white silk flowers and she carried a Colonial bouquet of white roses, baby's breath, baker fern, cranberry tinted pompoms, and daisies.

Carolyn Metzler of Lancaster, Pa. served as maid of honor and Nancy Wagner of Lima, N.Y. was bridesmaid. Miss Metzler wore a cranberry qiana knit street length dress and Ms. Wagner wore dusty rose.

Paul Zeck of Snyder served his brother as best man. Groomsman was David Martin of Crothersville, Indiana, brother of the bride.

Guests were seated by Jim and Dan Martin, brothers of the bride, John Ressler, and Stan Sutter.

Wilma Ressler registered guests in the bride's book.

Approximately 150 guests attended the reception buffet held in the fellowship hall of the church following the ceremony.

The groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Zeck and Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Schiebel, hosted the rehearsal dinner at Zuerchers Restaurant.

Guests were from Pennsylvania; Texas; Michican; Indiana; Georgia; Kenya, East Africa; Ontario, Canada; New York; and Massachusetts. Those attending from Snyder were the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Schiebel and Mr. and Mrs. Ted Zeck, and his brother and sister-in-law, Paul and Pam Zeck, and their daughter, Julie.

Following a wedding trip to Western Pennsylvania and the Allegheny Mountains, the couple is currently visiting in Snyder. They will reside in Baton Rouge, La.

The bride attended Timken Mercy Hospital School of Practical Nursing and holds a three-year diploma from the Elim Bible Institute.

The groom is a graduate of Snyder High School and attended Texas A&M where he studied chemical engineering. He also attended Elim Bible Institute.

The boundary between Alaska and Canada was settled in 1903 by a 3-to-2 vote of an international commission.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Today's hand is an example of a play called an "entry squeeze." This play was described by Geza Ottlik in a 1967 article in the "Bridge World" magazine.

Hearts are lead and continued. South wins the third lead and plays his ace and queen of clubs. West discards the deuce of diamonds.

South had hoped to get to dummy twice with clubs, but East's nine-eight spoiled this plan. How can South get this extra entry to dummy?

The answer is that he simply leads his fourth heart and gives West a trick. A diamond is discarded from dummy and East finds himself in real trouble. East marks South with every missing high card and clearly can't afford to unguard his queen of spades. It seems silly to chuck either the jack or 10 of diamonds so East jettisons one of those apparently worthless clubs.

Now South is able to lead his jack of clubs and overtake with dummy's king in order to lead a diamond.

East plays his 10 or jack and South wins the trick with his king. The squeeze has provided the seven of clubs as a second entry to dummy to lead a second diamond and establish South's ninth trick for him.

MR. AND MRS. PHILLIP WADE VON ROEDER

Reception Honors Couple

Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Wade von Roeder were honored at a reception at 3 p.m. on Jan. 3 in the fellowship hall of First Baptist Church in Skellytown.

Suzanne Gail Fritzemeyer and Phillip von Roeder were married Dec. 25 in Coulter Road Baptist Church in Amarillo.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wayne Fritzemeyer of Skellytown. She is a 1981 graduate of West Texas State University with a bachelor's degree in business administration and certification in legal assistant training. She is joining the firm of Harris, Harris, Childers and Monroe in Kerville.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Boren Jr. of Snyder. He is a 1980 graduate of West Texas State University where he received a bachelor's degree in science and nursing. He is employed by Hill County Memorial Hospital in Fredericksburg.

The couple is at home at 517 St. Geralda St. in Fredericksburg.

World's Largest Transparency

NEW YORK (AP) — More viewers have seen Michelangelo's painting of the Sistine Chapel here in New York in one day than pilgrims to the Vatican see in a week.

More than 352,000 visitors and commuters, who pass daily through the world's largest railroad terminal, got a chance to see a large transparency of Michelangelo's fresco which Eastman Kodak Co. used as its traditional Christmas Colorama. It took photographer Taskachi Okamura six months to make the picture.

The large transparency magnifies the 16th-century painting with such clarity that commuters on the floor of the terminal actually saw more detail than visitors to the Vatican City shrine, according to Kodak. The colorama measured 60 feet wide and 18 feet high, making it the world's largest color transparency.

"The Calling" Is Daytime Reading

THE CALLING. By Bob Randall. Simon & Schuster. 206 Pages. $12.95.

Bob Randall's "The Calling" is certainly a scary book, one some people might prefer to read only during the day — when there is light — and when someone else is close by.

Susan Reed is a commercial artist, her dream of becoming a "genuine" artist having dissolved in domesticity. She loves her husband, Lou, her young daughter, Andrea, her dog, Sweet William, and her friend and co-worker, Tara. While not totally satisfying, her job suffices and her life in New York City seems normal, content and reasonable.

Until the phones start ringing.

And no one is at the other end, except the Silence, the piercing, powerful Silence that haunts and follows Susan. Sidewalk phones shrill angrily at her, cut cords can't stop the continuing shrieks. And every time, at the other end of the receiver, nothing.

No one understands, least of all Susan, who distrusts her sanity and her future. When the ringing Silence starts to swallow those she loves, she flees. But the ringing — and its Silence — follows, soon replacing the Silence by hideously spewing the voices of the dead.

Susan has been chosen for a persuasion of evil which leaves her with one last painful choice: to stop running and remain on the line until the Silence and the voices are done with her.

Randall is direct, crisp and thoroughly harrowing in the telling of his supernatural tale. Susan's terror is vivid; so much so that, once you've finished, you may pause before answering the telephone. M.R.Aig AssociatedPress

Secretary Of State...

Controversy Often Accompanies Alexander Haig

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alexander Meigs Haig Jr., whose mandate was to be the vicar of American foreign policy, considers his signal accomplishment something considerably more humble: "I survived."

Much of his first year was touch and go, "Dicey," to use one of his favorite words.

With the new year, maybe, just maybe, the secretary of state has seen the last of the White House guerrilla fighter he thinks tried to undermine him. That would be a relief for Haig, who at times has seemed to worry more about his relations with the White House than about American relations abroad.

As the nation's top diplomat, Haig has revived a form of brinkmanship rhetorically, and he has found a short route to the center of controversy. He makes clear he likes it there.

And he has introduced Haigspeak into the English language, a way of communicating in which verbs become nouns and nouns become verbs. It headspins. It is bureaucratese amoking.

"I want to caveat that," he'll say. "Let me context that for you."

Poland to Alexander Haig has been one of a number of watchpots. China he calls a demographic asset. He thinks terrorism is hemorrhaging.

This is the public Al Haig, the one who tries to stare down a congressman who asks a question he doesn't like, who outraged church leaders by suggesting that three American Catholic nuns and a fourth churchwoman killed by security forces in El Salvador may have tried to run a military roadblock.

This is the square-jawed Haig who looks and acts tough, who talks as if he had an MX missile in his pocket ready for use against Khadafy, Castro, or anyone else who crosses him.

There is also a Haig of calm, reasoned diplomacy: the Haig who apparently held a secret meeting with Cuba's vice president in Mexico City in late November at a time of mounting unpleasantness with the Communist island government.

The tough Haig goes to the edge of conflict, then gives way to the diplomatic Haig.

When the crisis is really serious, as it was in Poland, this Haig cautioned against harsh rhetoric to avoid aggravating matters.

This Haig relaxes easily. He was in Brussels at a NATO conference and preparing to go to six other countries when the Polish government declared martial law. Crisply, Haig canceled the rest of his trip, made plans to come home — and went out to play tennis first.

A lot of Haig's bluster, aides say, is calculated. For instance, in his statements about Nicaragua he felt he could induce its government to think twice about aiding guerrillas in San Salvador by hinting at reprisals. "He likes to keep them guessing," as one aide put it.

Controversy is Haig's frequent companion; he makes news. During Watergate he acted as a buffer between a hostile world and Richard Nixon, Haig insisted in court that "a sinister force" was responsible for the 18½-minute erasure of a crucial Nixon tape.

More recently, his public complaint that a high White House official was conducting a "guerrilla campaign" against him drew skepticism even from President Reagan. Haig never identified the guerrilla, but all of Washington seized on one man: National Security Adviser Richard Allen, finally ousted by Reagan.

Haig's relationship with Allen was nothing less than open warfare. Things got so unruly that finally Reagan summoned both men and told them to cut it out.

When a Reagan confidant, William Clark, was named to the No. 2 position at State, some observers thought it was done in part to keep an eye on the volatile-tempered Haig. Clark and Haig got on famously, however, and Clark reportedly ran occasional interference for the secretary at the White House.

This month, Clark replaced Allen as national security adviser. A Reagan political lieutenant said that while the Haig-Allen feuding was not the primary reason for Allen's ouster, "had there been working relations all along, it would have taken away one of the problems."

Whether it's on the tennis court, in international confrontations, or debating in the White House inner circle, the 57-year-old Haig drives himself hard, despite a triple-bypass open heart surgery in 1980. So much so, in fact, that aides worried about his health on an eight-day, nine-nation tour of the Middle East and Europe in April.

When aides displease him, Haig yells. Loud. He may or may not apologize later, but the hired help knows when Haig has forgiven. "You can just tell when he's not mad any more — he'll wink or something," says one.

A single [illegible] isn't necessarily fatal for a Haig aide, but once the secretary decides a person can't meet his demands, Haig works around him.

Take Undersecretary of State Meyer Rashish, whose approach to preparing briefing books and background materials for international conferences were graded inadequate by Haig. Rashish still has his title, but Assistant Secretary Robert Hormats has the work.

After spending most of his career in the military, Haig is used to giving orders and having them obeyed. When he makes a decision, he expects it to be carried out. Quickly.

Fondas Star In Movie Together For 1st Time

NEW YORK (AP) — "Movies should help people confront reality, not escape from it," says Jane Fonda, "and that's the criteria with which I now choose my films."

In the Hollywood system of making movies that make money, "confronting reality" used to translate into "message movies" and that often was met with the old adage, "If you want to send a message, use Western Union."

But, Jane Fonda's production company, I.P.C. Pictures, run by her producer partner Bruce Gilbert, has tried to prove that realistic movies with a message can turn a mighty fine profit, too.

I.P.C.'s first three films, "Coming Home," which dealt with the Vietnam War, "The China Syndrome," about the safety of nuclear plants, and "Nine to Five," about sex discrimination in the office, have all been substantial moneymakers.

I.P.C.'s latest releases, "Rollover" and "On Golden Pond," are doing respectable business.

According to Ms. Fonda, "On Golden Pond" is a gift to her ailing father, actor Henry Fonda, who has been hospitalized, unable to attend the premiere of the first film he ever made with his daughter.

"I was very nervous about working with my father," says Ms. Fonda. "I wanted so much to be up to his expectations.

"Watching myself was funny," she adds. "It was like I hadn't worked for 23 years, didn't have two Academy Awards. I was just an apprentice actress who was scared to death."

Although there were several differences between the characters in the film and in real life, there was enough similarity in the emotions to gave the film what director Mark Rydell called a "magical" quality.

"Jane wanted to use the film as a way to engage her father with whom she felt some distance," says Rydell. "The tensions of 40 years of alienation caused so much anxiety in Jane that she would throw up before some of the scenes."

For the 44-year-old actress, it was also an opportunity to learn something from her father about the acting craft.

"Sometimes my dad doesn't look like he's acting," she recalls. "He seems so natural. Watching him work, I realized the tremendous unconscious technique he has. It transcends acting. It's very pure.

"I also learned how to be humble," she adds. "Dad doesn't behave like a movie star on the set. He never makes any demands. He waits in line for his food like anyone else. He knows his lines. He's on time. It was a lesson to watch."

Whereas "On Golden Pond" was a labor of love, Ms. Fonda's other current film, "Rollover," about America's dependency on Arab petro-dollars, was motivated by a different kind of anxiety.

"With 'Rollover,' I wanted people to be deeply disturbed," she says. "It's a cautionary movie. I would hope it would stagger and grip the throat of everyone in this country that cherishes the concept of democracy."

While making "Rollover," Ms. Fonda managed to find time to write her first book, "Jane Fonda's Workout Book."

"It's a philosophy of health," she notes, "sort of an autobiographical journey of one person's body."

She says most other health books never include a vital component to healthy living, the relationship to the environment.

"You can eat well, and excercise every day, take vitamins and feel just great," she says, "but it's empty, hollow self-righteousness unless the air we breath, the water we drink, the food we eat and the place we work is also healthful. That will zap you even if everything else is right."

Although she was born in New York City, Ms. Fonda spent her early years in California with her younger brother Peter. When she was 10, the family returned to New York where her father was to star in "Mr. Roberts" on Broadway.

She made her acting debut in summer stock theater after high school. After two years at Vassar, she traveled to Paris to study painting, then came back to New York. Her curiosity about performing was re-ignited when she joined Lee Strasberg's Actors' Studio.

"My problem," says Ms. Fonda, "was not knowing what my dream was. Once I knew what my dream was, I could afford to follow it."

Snyder Nat'l Promotes 1

All officers of Snyder National Bank were re-elected at a meeting of the bank's board of directors, Roger B. Mize, president, reported.

The board also approved one promotion. Claudia Sanchez, who is in charge of the bank's proof department, was named an assistant cashier.

Snyder National Bank's annual stockholders' meeting is set for Feb. 16.

poland's scapegoat

When the lights of freedom were smashed in Poland and the troops moved in darkness to arrest Solidarity leaders, the anonymous posters, radio broadcasts and newspaper reports began appearing. In many forms, they explained the situation to the Poles. Why did the military have to take over? they asked.

Because the Jews betrayed the trade union movement and led the Polish workers down the wrong road.

Why are there shortages of food in Poland?

Because the Jews are hoarding supplies.

Why does Poland have to rely on the Soviet Union?

Because the International Zionist conspiracy wants to bring "the death of Poland."

There are 6,000 Jews in Poland. Although they could in no way threaten the government, they are a convenient and historic scapegoat. Before World War II, the Polish Jewish community numbered 3½ million. The majority of the Jewish survivors of the Holocaust left Poland after the war rather than face continuing anti-Semitism.

The previous Polish Communist government spoke out against anti-Semitic campaigns by the Grunwald Union, a nationalistic, anti-Zionist organization. But the new military government of Gen. Jaruzelski is apparently encouraging anti-Semitic attacks in the media, which is under strict government control.

When the American Jewish Committee tried to bring anti-Semitism to the Polish government's attention, the embassy refused to accept documentary materials. Later, embassy officials said they knew nothing of the anti-Semitic campaign but would inform the central government of Jewish apprehensions. We join in their call for Jaruzelski to make an "immediate public rejection of irresponsible and dangerous anti-Semitic actions."

To their credit, the Poles responded to the anti-Semitic campaign by ripping posters from walls. They correctly hold Gen. Jaeuzelski and the Soviets responsible for Poland's troubles.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Faith is what enables her to believe that hip-hugging jeans are flattering."

Billy Clayton, Texas speaker of the house and often embattled politician, has decided to stay at home.

For years there has been speculation that Billy would run for some statewide office. There was often speculation that Clayton would be in the thick of the next governor's race.

Even though found innocent, Clayton was a victim of the Brilab investigation, and he decided to test the political waters with a run for the state land commissoners job.

We suspect that his decision to say in West Texas had to do with the fact that folks may not remember that he was found innocent, they just remember that he was on trial.

Nevertheless, we suspect that Clayton will indeed enjoy his stay on the farm in Springlake.

We wish several hundred more elected officials would decide to stay home.

The congress went back into session last week, and we always stay tense when the boys are back in Washington. We haven't learned to live with all the present laws, much less think we can endure the thousand of new bills that will be passed this session.

We're still not over the shock of a recent fringe benefit that Congress voted itself recently.

Those of you digging out all those receipts for income tax preparation were likely incensed to learn that members of Congress can claim a $75 per day tax deduction without showing any proof.

Retroactive to 1981, a Senate or House member may write off $75 per day for expenses of living in Washington.

Tax experts say it is possible for some lawmakers to escape paying taxes altogether. Most likely, lawmakers will continue to pay some taxes, but the extraordinary benefit will result in a typical tax savings of around $20,000 per year. That is one-third of their $60,662 annual salary.

If a member wants to substantiate a higher deduction, he can, and the new provision could be worth several times the $20,000 per year.

Prior to the new rule, members of Congress were limited to a $3,000 per year deduction for expenses of living in Washington while maintaining a residence back home.

The action results in a pay raise without it actually being a pay raise. The $75 daily deduction is good even if the member is out of Washington. The deduction is allowed even when Congress is not in session.

We're all for Congressmen and Senators having to live under the burdens of their own legislation.

Must Take Driving Class

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Mark White says all judges must permit misdemeanor traffic offenders to take a defensive driving course instead of facing trial and paying a fine.

White issued the opinion Tuesday in response to questions from Guadalupe County Attorney Elizabeth Jandt, Lubbock County District Attorney John Montford and Maurice Pippkin, director of the State Commission on Judicial Conduct.

In addition to ruling that all misdemeanor traffic offenders have the right to take the defensive driving course, White said:

—The defendant must opt for the course before his trial begins. Once the trial starts he or she forfeits that right.

—Judges cannot require defendants to enter a plea before allowing the defendants to take the course.

—Judges cannot require defendants to prove the course he or she intends to take has been approved by the Department of Public Safety.

—Judges cannot require a notarized statement that the defendant has not taken a similar course within two years.

—Courts may prosecute defendants who do not complete the course.

—Judges are not permitted to require a defendant to appear in court with written evidence of completion of the course.

Doggett Files For Reelection

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, filed for re-election Tuesday by submitting petitions with the signatures of more than 1,200 voters.

Doggett had the option of paying a $750 filing fee or submitting petitions with the signatures of at least 500 people. "I have always preferred to go the petition route," said Doggett. "It just seems more democratic."

letter to the editor

I saw a question in the Ask Us Box on the front page of the Jan. 24 edition of The Snyder Daily News. The question was, "Can anything be done about dogs around 30th and Ave. I that have young children afraid to walk to school?

This question hit close to home with me. Children on the way to and from school do awful things to our dogs and damage to our property. No one much seems to care what these children do. These aren't our children, so we can't make them stop and go on. You try to tell them to quit and get on home and they just get ugly with you and the first thing you know they are using foul language at you. I can't even say I'm going to tell your parents because I don't know who these children's parents are. The children themselves sure aren't going to tell you their names or their parents' names. If one of these children should get hurt on our property, or bit by one of our dogs, we would be left wide open to the possibility of a lawsuit. We can't stand guard over our dogs day and night.

We keep our dogs inside a fence. When a stray dog shows up, I call the animal officer. What do you do when a child shows up hanging on your fence picking at your dogs? The children hang on the fence and soon it's pulled off the post and has to be reworked. When peaches are in season, the children open the gate to a neighbor's yard, go in and take peaches to throw at the dogs. Children also throw rocks and even bricks. Young boys stand on the fence and wet on our dogs. Some teenagers I catch sticking hot matches to dogs' noses or burning them with hot cigarettes. There are boys who bring their dogs from home and sic them on our dogs. It's not a pretty sight seeing two dogs going at one another through a fence.

It's clear that we have a problem here. Who started it? The children or the dogs? It would be hard to say. Some of the problem might be handled by some civic-minded group sponsoring some form of training class to help us train our dogs to behave better. As for the children, parents might also try to train their children to behave better.

Man and dogs have lived on this earth together for years. When things get out of hand like it has in this case, it is then that we hear such questions being asked, "Can anything be done about dogs around 30th and Ave. I that have young children afraid to walk to school?"

There's a special place in heaven for women who clip coupons when there is no expiration date on their premium, the redemption store is next door to wherever they are and there is no one in line behind them parked in a fire lane.

For years, the woman who has clipped coupons has been much-maligned. Lord knows, I've had a few impure thoughts about them as I've stood behind them while they bring forth clippings from the linings of their handbags and suffer anxiety attacks while the cashier checks their eligibility.

I've seen them all. The woman who took so long to find the coupon that saved her ten cents on a No. 2 can of whole tomatoes that the toddler in her basket ate $3 worth of candy and breath mints.

The woman who put her groceries aside and drove three miles home and back to get the coupon that saved 12 cents on her next bottle of aspirin.

And the woman who bought three cans of cat food at a savings of 45 cents...and didn't own a cat.

Now, I'm one of those women, and I'm here to tell you saving money through coupons and limited offers is not exactly a day at the beach. You have to work for it but the money I saved is worth it.

In one month alone, I saved $200 by clipping a rebate coupon for a used car from a dealer who was red-faced because he was overstocked.

Then I squirreled away $125 by buying six national magazines for five years at the publishers's price just by placing a special stamp over my order.

I pocketed $48 on a set of llama-farming encyclopedias at the supermarket by presenting an ad each week. By sawing through coffee cans, puncturing cereal boxes and soaking labels off various cans, I was able to save $150 from the original price of the product by sending in my proof of purchase.

I saved $5 on a haircut, $1.50 on a car wash, $60 on a health-spa membership and got a discount from a travel bureau of $200 by vacationing in Montana in the winter.

I was so filthy rich from coupons, I opened an account at the bank which gave me a free calculator for giving them my money for a year.

My husband figured out my assets and subtracted the cost of postage, gas and my analyst. He said I'll have to win the Reader's Digest Sweepstakes to break even.

It makes you wonder why manufacturers don't just lower the price of the item in the first place. If I send a coupon, I'm sure they'll send back an answer.

Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Others will have a difficult time today trying to withhold information from you that you should know about. Ask probing questions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Have a hopeful outlook today regarding matters affecting your material well-being, but don't push for things where you sense the timing is wrong.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You can be extremely determined once you focus on a specific goal. Today this quality will be accentuated, so use it for a worthy venture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A valuable lesson can be learned today by observing how someone you admire conducts himself in a sticky situation. File it away for future use.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Try to be a good listener today. A friend could supply you with information about something that is going to occur. This might be profitable to you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You are likely to perform better today if you can act independently. However, in the process you're still apt to pick up a supporter who may help you slightly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Ideas you get today that you think might help your career are best kept to yourself until you have a chance to see whether they really work.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Try to distinguish today between being protective and possessive regarding the one you love. Keeping too tight a rein on the one you care for spells problems.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Skirt volatile issues today that could cause friction between you and your mate. If he or she raises one, change the subject to something more pleasant.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There are a few tasks that you know require attention today, but you might not get around to them until someone prods you into action.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're the type who usually thinks your moves through carefully, but today you could be more impulsive than cautious, especially in money matters.

February 1, 1982

This coming year you should be able to bring to fruition two situations which you have already begun, but which thus far have gone unrewarded. Stick with ventures in which you believe.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Allow adequate time to take care of important matters today. That which you leave to the last minute could end up in a frustrating jumble. Predictions of what's in store for you in each season following your birth date and where your luck and opportunities lie are in your new Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your possibilities look good today, provided you don't lapse into negative thinking, and begin to see yourself as the underdog instead of the victor.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be careful today if you have any financial transactions with friends that a misunderstanding doesn't arise over who owes what to whom.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Unless you are extremely tactful, dealings with authority figures could get off on a wrong tangent today. Be mindful of what you say.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Avoid an associate today who has a domineering personality and who tries to impose his ideas on others. You won't appreciate being told what to do.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Make it a point today not to pry into the confidential affairs of others. Even if your curiosity gets the better of you, don't ask probing questions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Persons not in accord with your way of doing things could cause problems for you today if they feel your behavior is too demanding.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Keep a close eye on co-workers today. One might make a mistake which could slow productivity for both of you. Be ready to jump in and assist.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you are operating in an unfamiliar area today, don't take any impulsive actions. Your tendency to gamble on what you know little about could cause you grief.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you have a difficult decision to make today, don't let yourself be pressured into acting against your better judgment. Think for yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You may find it easier today to tell others what they should do, rather than to roll up your sleeves and lend a helping hand. Be a contributor.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Continue to be extremely careful in financial and commercial matters again today. You could make little mistakes which would add up.

Important Changes Have Been Made In Tax Laws

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the first in a series of five articles written to help taxpayers prepare their 1981 income tax returns. This article highlights important changes in the law.

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite passage last August of the largest tax cut in history, the tax form most Americans must file by April 15 is little changed from a year ago.

Most of the tax reductions authorized under the new law are taking effect this year, meaning they won't show up on tax returns until next year.

But some changes will be noticed in the filing of 1981 returns. Among them:

—The first stage of the individual tax reduction, which went into effect Oct. 1, already has been figured into the tax tables that most people use to compute their liability. Those using the tax schedules — mainly persons with taxable incomes above $50,000 — will have to make a separate calcuation to account for the tax cut.

—There is now only one set of tax tables, rather than separate ones for single persons, couples filing jointly, couples filing separately, and heads of household. This change requires the taxpayer to subtract from income $1,000 for each exemption in order to determine how much income is subject to tax.

—A single person will be allowed to exempt from tax up to $200 in certain interest and dividends earned last year. A couple is allowed a $400 exemption. For 1981 only, this replaces a $100 exemption ($200 for joint returns) for dividends only.

—An investor in the new taxfree "All Savers" certificate who elected to have interest paid monthly may claim a special exemption, starting with this return, for that interest. But most persons who buy the new one-year investment will collect the interest in one lump sum at the end of a 12-month period starting after Sept. 30, 1982, and won't have to calcuate the exemption until 1982 or 1983 returns are filed.

—If you want to file the simpler, shorter Form 1040A but could not in the past because total income exceeded $20,000 ($40,000 for a joint return) or your interest or dividends exceeded $400, you're in luck. You now may file 1040A so long as total income after exemptions and deductions is less than $50,000 for a single or joint return.

—There are two new lines (16a and 16b) on Form 1040 for listing pension income that is only partially taxable. In the past, receipt of such income required the filing of an extra form. Fully taxable pensions are listed on Line 15. Social Security pensions aren't taxable at all and are not listed as income.

—A new provision allows a deduction for up to $1,500 of expenses involved in adoption of certain children, especially identified as "hard to place."

—A person 55 or older who sold his or her principal home after July 20, 1981, may exempt up to $125,000 of the profit from taxes. The old exemption was $100,000.

— Regardless of age, a person who sells his or her principal home after last July 20 now has 24 months, instead of 18 months, to invest the money in another house and avoid immediate taxation on the profit.

You'll have to wait until you file your 1982 return to take full advantage of some other changes in the law, including a more generous credit for childcare expenses, liberalized tax treatment of Individual Retirement Accounts, and a special new deduction for working couples whose taxes have been increased by the "marriage penalty."

Chinese Love Beauty

BEIJING (AP) — Curious comings and goings are reported at No. 65 Soochow sidestreet. Young men and women tiptoe in with a bandage on one eye and tiptoe out smiling with a bandage on the other.

Sleek, chauffeur-driven cars deliver stealthy, bandaged passengers.

On the door is an old bronze plaque: Dr. Fu Nong Yu.

Dr. Fu is the only private plastic surgeon in Peking who performs "eye jobs" — cosmetic surgery to create folded or "double" eyelids, considered a mark of wide-eyed beauty. He operates on one eye at a time so the patient can still bicycle home. The operation takes about an hour.

Most northern Chinese are born without double eyelids and Fu takes a few stitches to remove the epicanthal fold in the upper eyelid that is typical of Asians.

"The eyes are the windows of the soul and I am not afraid any more to admit I want to look more beautiful," says Jia Xiaogu, a bus conductor proudly batting her double eyelids. Her operation was so successful that she took two of her girlfriends to have their eyes widened.

"All my neighbors say my eyes look larger and I am prettier now," she says with a giggle. "And my boyfriend also approves."

Cosmetic surgery was once prohibited and condemned as bourgeois Western decadence. Today, however, the simple operations are increasingly popular and are part of a renaissance of vanity and self-expression in once dreary, uniform China.

In a recent 10-month period, Fu performed more than 150 double-eyelid operations, costing the equivalent of $18 each.

His clientele includes factory workers, actors, actresses, sons and daughters of high party, government and army officials, and some bureaucrats themselves.

Fu, 58, a graduate of Sichuan Medical College, lives and works in a single 6-by-14-foot room with his wife-assistant who wears a long, black traditional Chinese dress.

He works under new regulations that permit private medical practice and private enterprise, once banned as capitalist.

Fu paid about $1.20 for a 10-year license from the city health department. He earns the equivalent of $200 a month, tax free, a salary matched only by the highest Communist officials.

He shows his new patients an album of before-and-after pictures of satisfied patients, many good looking but born with the single eyelid and narrower eyes.

He also displays a glossy color photograph of actress Sophia Loren with large, seductive eyes.

"But I generally don't recommend those European-American eyelids for Oriental faces," Fu says. He recommends a simple double eyelid which enlarges the eye with a few stitches.

A few patients, especially party and government cadres, also want the esthetically pleasing double eyelids. But they want their eyes narrowed to appear more mysterious or inconspicuous.

Eye surgery is part of the rush to beauty in China today. Plastic surgeons also perform nose surgery, pierce ears and create dimples.

Fu performed cosmetic surgery for years — until he was denounced during the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution. He and his wife sold their possessions, clothing, even his pocket watch to buy food.

Now he has all the business he can handle. "People come to me because I do a better job than public hospitals which charge about $60 for double eyelids," he says.

Fu says young people complain they can't find dates because they don't have beautiful eyes. Matchmaking services say some clients demand double eyelids in their marriage partners.

Collect Ton Of Supplies

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas teachers have collected more than a ton of materials for 25 teachers who lost their teaching supplies when the Elgin Elementary School burned on Dec. 16.

The Texas State Teachers Association said the teaching materials were worth $3,000.

Robin Matthews, president of the Central Texas chapter of TSTA, said he also had collected $200 in cash to help the Elgin teachers buy file boxes and other items not collected.

He said 10 TSTA affiliates in eight Central Texas counties had participated in the collection drive.

The materials will be delivered to the Elgin teachers Wednesday.

In conventional pictures and descriptions of battles and other death scenes, persons fatally shot are portrayed as falling backward. However, a person who dies suddenly while standing, whether from bullets, heart failure or other causes, almost invariably falls forward. The same is true of a person who faints while standing. It is a natural tendency for a person to fall forward.

BEWARE OF "BARGAIN" PLANTS

The planting season is almost upon us and the nursery ads are already expounding on the bargains that can be obtained. Most people like bargains, or think they do. Before rushing off to the store with the bargan ad in your hand, stop a moment to consider what is meant by a bargain.

A bargain is only a bargain if you get something that gives enough personal satisfaction to make you feel it is worth the money needed to purchase it. Therefore, a cut-rate or special bargain may be a very unwise purchase for the unsuspecting buyer.

Good bargains do exist within the retail nusery trade, but how does one know if he is buying a bargain? The first rule in buying nursery stock is to always buy quality. Quality is the prime consideration of any bargain. Unless the nurseryman has been quality-conscious throughout his entire operation, the plant may not be a bargain at any price.

By the time you have planted it, the initial cost of the plant may be only a fraction of the cost of the material and labor needed to do the job properly. You will probably have to purchase peat moss or other organic matter to prepare the back fill. Topsoil, fertilizer, tools, tree wrap and pruning equipment may also be needed if you don't have them on hand. Keeping this in mind, if a plant fails to grow and flourish, much less survive because of poor production and harvesting techniques or improper handling before you bought it, it is no bargain even if it was given to you. You would actually be losing money.

Quality in Nursery stock is very difficult to define. The best way to be assured of good quality plant materials is to always deal with a local established and reputable nurseryman who takes pride in providing good merchandise.

To help identify a bargain the next time you are in the market for nursery stock, ask yourself the following questions:

1. Can you recognize quality nursery stock? If not, does the firm have a good reputation for quality?

2. Are the plants tagged and identifiable with specific variety names?

3. Are the salespeople able and willing to offer opinions on what plants might best fill your needs in the landscaping?

4. Do you have a varied choice of sizes, colors and shapes from which to choose?

5. What type of guarantee is mentioned, and is the salesman willing to discuss any inquiries you have about guarantees?

6. Most important of all, does it fit into your landscape plan, or are you buying it because the price is cheap?

If you can give yourself a satisfactory answer to each of these questions, in all likelihood you have bargain.

Redistricting Hearing Slated

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A federal judge has scheduled a Feb. 19 hearing in Del Rio on the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund's request for court-ordered redistricting of commissioners court precincts in Uvalde County.

U.S. District Judge Fred Shannon Thursday also extended until March 15 the filing deadlines for commissioner and peace justice candidates in Uvalde County to allow officials time to draw up a new redistricting plan.

MALDEF has asked the federal court to order an interim redistricting plan that will allow primary elections to take place on May 1 when other primaries are scheduled.

Elections for Uvalde County commissioners have not been held since 1978. The 1980 election for commissioners was suspended in 1979 by U.S. District Judge D.W. Suttle after MALDEF filed suit, claiming the 1973 redistricting of commissioners' precincts discriminated against Mexican-Americans.

The Justice Department's Civil Rights Division Jan. 22 rejected a redistricting plan submitted by Uvalde county commissioners court for approval as required by the Voting Rights Act.

Shannon Thursday denied MALDEF attorney Jose Garza's application for a temporary restraining oder preventing implementation of the rejected plan after Uvalde County officials said they were not putting the plan into effect.

New Wing Brings Together Work

NEW YORK (AP) — The Metropolitan Museum of Art next week opens its new, $18-million wing housing a vast and varied collection of primitive art.

The new Michael C. Rockefeller wing, 42,000 square feet of space filled with the art of Africa, the Pacific islands and Pre-Columbian and Native America, brings under one roof the collection of the former Museum of Primitive Art and a smaller number of works the Metropolitan already owned, 7,000 objects in all.

In a sense, this permanent structural addition to one of the world's great repositories of art, the foremost in America, symbolizes the acceptance of primitive art as being on an equal footing with other great art.

In fact, no one at the Metropolitan wants to call it primitive any more. The emphasis is on "art as art," and "primitive" is just part of the vernacular of the art historians, a convenient label.

In an elegant series of galleries, some modestly sized and low-ceilinged, the largest soaring up like a great glass cathedral out of the museum's original building, is a splendid selection of art works that not so long ago were thought to belong in natural history museums set amid simulated "native" decor.

Nelson A. Rockefeller, for one, thought differently. He had grown up with an enlightened appreciation of the esthetic value of primitive art. By the 1950s his own collection had grown so large that the decision was made to create a museum for it, the Museum of Primitive Art, the first such institution totally devoted to primitive art.

The formation of that museum in 1954 was a large stride forward in gaining wider recognition for this tradition. The Metropolitan Museum formed its own Department of Primitive Art in 1969, and Rockefeller pledged the Museum of Primitive Art's collection to the Metropolitan in the same year.

The collection's final home distances it from its previous association with specialized fields, and even avoids the use of the word primitive. The new wing is named for Michael C. Rockefeller, the son of Nelson Rockefeller who died while on a collecting expedition in New Guinea.

Michael Rockefeller inherited his father's love of art and special interest in primitive art. In 1959 he became a trustee of the Museum of Primitive Art. In 1961, less than a year after his graduation from Harvard, he'd gone to work as sound man and still photographer for a documentary film unit making a film of the life and culture of the Asmat people of New Guinea.

Later in 1961 he returned to New Guinea to collect Asmat art for the New York museum. A canoe in which he was traveling overturned, and he and a companion were swept out to sea. Michael decided to try to swim to shore through the shark-infested waters. He was never found.

More than 1,500 works are out on display in the new wing. They include sculptures of wood, stone, terra cotta, precious and semiprecious stones, a treasury of gold and silver, and textiles. They come from a rich diversity of cultural traditions, spanning 3,000 years, three continents and many islands.
