1—Steam Shovel and Crew in Culebra Cut. 2—One of the Great Emergency Dams Devised to Protect the Locks.

Colon, C. Z.—What of the men who have done the actual digging of the Panama canal? Who are they, whence have they come, how do they live?

We all have read a lot about Colonel Goethals, Colonel Sibert, Colonel Gaillard, Colonel Hodges, Colonel Gorgas and a few others of the men who hold the "big jobs." We know that their immediate subordinates are skillful, energetic young engineers and doctors from the states. But what do we know about the men who handle the pick and shovel, who run the steam drills, who load the borings with dynamite, who help to fill up and empty the interminable dirt trains?

With the very beginning of the French attempt to dig the canal the labor problem bobbed up as serious, especially in view of the horribly insanitary conditions on the isthmus. White laborers succumbed rapidly to yellow fever and malaria and it was found that only negroes could withstand even fairly well the diseases and the climate.

When Uncle Sam took hold of the big job he had the benefit of the experience of the French in this as in other respects, and though he tried a few experiments in the labor field on his own account, it was soon determined that the actual digging could be done best by negroes. Now there are two islands in the West Indies, both British possessions, which are overflowing with workmen—Jamaica and Barbados. To these islands agents were sent, and soon the colored men began to arrive on the isthmus, shipload after shipload. Many of them brought their wives and children and have become a part of the permanent population of Panama.

One other source of labor was drawn upon largely, the north of Spain. There the agents of the commission found a race of men hardy, eager for work and more intelligent than the negroes. A large number of them were brought over, and though for a time they were troublesome by reason of their disposition to engage in bloody quarrels among themselves, after several had been locked up by the Zone police they learned to behave more like civilized beings. These Spaniards do not mix with the negroes, either in work or socially. They have their own camps and messes. The stewards and cooks at these messes are Europeans and the Spaniards get better meals than the negroes. The food is adapted to their national taste and they receive wine several times a week. For this they pay 40 cents a day—10 cents more than the colored men pay. The Spaniards are considered the best common workmen in the zone.

The day laborer on the canal, as a general thing, uses the pick and shovel and does work that calls for no especial skill. But this is not true of all of them. There is a higher grade in which the men do such work as the riveting on the great lock gates and the operating of the busy batteries of steam and compressed air drills that bore the holes for the dynamite blasting. Many negroes who have been on the job for years have graduated up to these better positions.

Above them are the bosses of gangs, the conductors of dirt trains, the foremen of dynamite crews, men who hold similar jobs, and they are almost invariably white men because such positions require more independence, reliability and intelligence. Up another grade and you come to the superintending, drafting and designing engineers. These are men from the states with technical education, initiative and often great inventive genius. To the latter are due a number of most ingenious machines designed to cope with new conditions and to expedite the work.

The negro laborer from Jamaica or Barbados is a joy forever. He is inordinately proud of his British citizenship, and with some reason, for the British government looks carefully after his welfare in such a case as this, the terms of his contract being supervised, his health guarded and his return, if he desires, to return, provided for. The Jamaicans are the more intelligent of the two classes, and often have considerable education. The best of them have found positions as clerks, stewards and the like. The Barbadians are in the main densely ignorant, but they are a happy lot and as they stream away from the canal to their quarters in the evening they sing, frolic and play practical jokes as though they had not just completed a day of back-breaking labor. They receive an average of $30 a month, their meals cost them 30 cents a day and their living quarters almost nothing unless they prefer to rent rooms from outsiders. Then they get the worst of it, for rentals for ordinary rooms, without furniture and conveniences, are exorbitant. The tracks for laborers provided by the commission are fitted with several tiers of bunks made of canvas slung on iron frames. At regular intervals these are taken down and boiled, and such other sanitary measures as are necessary are carried out with regularity and precision.

If the laborer is injured or falls ill, there is a dispensary and a doctor close at hand, and if the case is at all serious the patient is sent to the hospital at Ancon or Colon. There he receives free as skillful treatment as money could buy, and there he is kept until he recovers or dies.

There is intense rivalry between the Jamaican and the "Bajan," for each believes firmly that his island is bigger and better than the other's, and, incidentally, both believe that both Jamaica and Barbados are larger than Cuba. Their looks of dismay when shown a map of the West Indies are comical to behold.

Two things these negroes are extremely fond of—religion and rum. And both are rather disastrous to many of them. The insane asylum whose buildings straggle up one slope of Ancon hill is full of them, and according to the doctors most of them have been brought there by either rum or religion. Every evening in the streets of Panama may be encountered large groups of negroes, listening to the exhortations of some leader, often a woman, and singing with fervor the hymns she intones for them. On other corners are detachments of the Salvation Army, working with equal enthusiasm. And in the living quarters and the hospitals groups will surround some amateur pastor who preaches to them and prays for them. In these ways, when they are not drinking, the negroes spend much of their leisure time, and as they are impressionable and excitable and ignorant, the results are not always good.

Pay day in the zone furnishes some interesting scenes. The pay car traverses the railway and at each labor camp or town a long line of negroes files through it. Each man must present his pay check and identification tag with one hand and in the other hold his hat or cap. Into the latter the cashier shoves the silver coins that make up the workman's monthly stipend. The process is extraordinarily rapid, as it must be for there are many thousands of laborers to be paid.

Up near the summit of Ancon hill is a large patch of ground where no vegetation ever grows. According to the legend, an Indian maiden sat there centuries ago and wept bitterly for the fate of her countrymen whom she could see far below toiling under the lashes of the cruel Spaniards. Her salt tears flowed down the hillside and so impregnated the soil that henceforth no vegetation could exist there. If any maiden from Jamaica or Barbados ever sits up there, she need not weep over the lot of her fellow-islanders. Indeed, her smiles at their happy condition might well restore that bit of land to its pristine fertility. Her husband, father or brother is earning more than he ever did before, is living better, and when he returns to his island home may have saved up enough to loaf for a long time under the shade of the sheltering palm.

So the real diggers of the canal, though unhonored and unsung, are well paid, well fed and well housed. In their degree they are as fortunate as any others who have found employment in the zone.

In every election held under the new law to vote on prohibiting the operation of the pool hall, the vote has been decidedly against the pool hall.

The Bonham Favorite thinks the world is full of people who spend too much time polishing their finger nails when it could be better spent polishing their manners.

Arkansas school fund appropriation for the ensuing year is placed at $1.95 per capita of scholastic population as against $7 for Texas. Hurrah, for the Lone Star State!

A fake blind man couldn't resist the temptation to gaze at a slit skirt and a Kansas City judge sent him to the workhouse for 100 days. Anyway, that saves the slit skirt from a shut-out—Houston Post.

"Be cheerful when you eat," admonishes the doctors, "and you will be able to enjoy anything." The man who tackles a railway sandwich ought to approach it screaming with laughter.

An insight to the results of war by those who have not experienced it can be gained by reading an advertisement from one of the Balkan states who wants bids for supplying three thousand artificial legs.

Men like Caminetti and Diggs, who spit upon their marriage vows and deliberately pull down the moral standards of young women to their own degraded depths are much more dangerous to good government than red handed murderers.

Now plant wheat for winter grazing. The scarcity of feed throughout the southwest will make all feed stuffs high, and what you can save by planting and grazing wheat can be disposed of at a good price next spring when you find out how much you can spare.

Samples of feterita brought in shows the heads to be well matured, and this year being dryer than usual this grain has possibly done better than kafir or maize. For dry years it seems that feterita may be better than kafir or maize, but ordinarily we think the latter two crops hard to beat.

School has started, and let all co-operate so that when the present term shall have been brought to a close everyone can truthfully say the faculty has given us the best term of school Wellington has ever had. The teachers alone can not make it so, neither the superintendent, nor the parents, but with the united efforts and co-operation of them all, only, can it be brought about.

The United States cannot, in accordance with its ideas of morals, recognize the red-handed assassin Huerta as head of the Mexican government, and has exacted a promise from him that he will resign and will not be a candidate. Then, if Madero and Saurez, president and vice-president of Mexico, were murdered rather than accidentally killed while being carried through the city under military guard, and Felix Diaz knew as much of the plot as Huerta, he is likewise as guilty.

H. D. Creath, of the City National Bank, attended a special meeting of the Texas Bankers Association at Dallas this week. The purpose of the meeting was to formulate a protest against certain features of the Owens-Glass currency bill now before congress. Two hundred members were present at the Dallas meeting, representing every part of the state. The Texas members it seems will support recommendations outlined by the national bankers in conference at Chicago.

Oze Ark on Preachers.

People do not treat the preachers half way right, I've been thinking. In the first place they do not contract to pay enough. When they sign the subscription sheet and see the figures marked down before them, their intellectool foreheads wrinkle up like Sears-Roebuck's tar roofing in the summer time. They shake their heads like a mule with a fly in his ear and groan like a 50 cent chair when a 300-pound woman plumps down there in. They jab their pens at the paper as if they were giggling flies, and remark that it looks funny that they are expected to pay the preacher's whole salary. (Their actual subscription is probably two bits a month, with a prayer for a prosperous year for the ladies' aid thrown in.)

But that ain't all. They pay the money grudgingly as a turtle turns loose of a good toehold. They worry the poor church officers into geminy fits hot-footing it after them. And when the year is ended they are likely to be in the hole for a big part of what they promised to produce, and the good women of the church have to go out among the minions of Caesar for the balance.

Then look at the preacher's side lines. It often happens that some love sick swain from the tall timbers or probably town sport with billard chalk on his fingers and nary a jingle in his jeans drops in at the preacher's home as unexpected as your grandma's Aunt Lou's forty six cousin on wash day, and the dinner not on. Rube has ten yards of 6-cent dress goods swinging on his left arm, blushing like a yellow pomegranate in a patch of sweet corn and answering to the name of Mary Jane.

Rube tells the preacher that they want to get married. Everything seems all right, so the preacher straightens his necktie and fires away. Then the pair sit around for three mortal hours, as stiff and embarrassed as a bald-headed bachelor with somebody's twins on his knees. They prepare to vamoose. The Rube calls the preacher aside to give him a five or ten dollar bill—no, that's all a dream. What Rube really does is shove a silver dollar into the preachers palm and says he will give him another dollar when Champ Clark gets to be President. Or what is more likely, he gives the preacher nothing at all, but waves a merry so-long over his shoulder, winks his off eye knowingly and remarks, "I'll see you later," or something equally difficult to buy prunes with under our present

Premiums for Collingsworth

Panhandle State Fair at Amarillo. Mr. Zimmerman further states that in the fortyodd counties that he has visiter in the interest of the Panhandle Fair, the crops in Collingsworth county beats them all, and he is of the opinion that the premiums that this county ought to take in the Fair at Amarillo should more than amount to the expense incident thereto.

It is hardly worth while here to mention the manifold benefits from an advertising standpoint that an exhibit at these two fairs should be to Collingsworth. It now behooves us to get busy. The affair in only five weeks off and time is fleeting. If we are going to do anything arrangements should be made at once and application for entry be made.

In the absence of a commercial, who will take the initiative in this movement?

And that ain't all. It's hard to have to say it, but there's funerals. I've known people who didn't pay any preacher at all, who belonged to a church that didn't have a pastor, send for a preacher to say yours truly over their dead folks and make the preacher hire a rig at his own expense and travel five hours over road as rough as a cattle guard, paved with sawbucks, as it were, to reach them; and then never say cat—not even kitten.

After the funeral kind-hearted neighbors feed the preacher, after which he jogs along home singing the gentle refrain, "Man wants but little here below—and that's just what he gets." And when he arrives home he pays the livery man for his rig, and that night tells his wife that she'll have to wait until next jувember to get that new dress, and she says, sweetlike and full of understanding, "All right, the old one's good enough anyway." But the poor woman chokes up a little.—(Thomas Fitz in Piedmont, Mo., Banner.)

The Wellington Leader:

Dear Friends I have been delayed in giving you this letter by sickness, our baby being sick of Typhoid fever and is slightly better at this writing.

We have had three local rains since the first of August which last month enrou to Roy and other points south west and south of here.

We are pretty dry just now and crops are ripening very fast and expecting frost by the 25 inst. so every body is busy putting up feed now.

Mr. W. B. Kirby of Clarendon, Texas, and expostmaster of Wellington, Texas, spent last night and this morning with this scribe and narrated some of the main points of interest on his trip to Colorado which were very interesting, and expressed himself as being very much pleased with this part of the country.

Wishing all health and prosperity.

Geo. W. Lee returned today from an extended visit to his old home in Alabama.

Mr. Virgil Andrews and Miss Alice May Bowen, two popular young people of Wellington were married at the home of brides parents on Wednesday evening, Rev. R. S. Garrison officiating. The Leader wishes their numerous friends wishing them a long and happy married life.

Marriage license have been issued to W. N. Davis and Miss Eva Parker of Dodsonville.

Miss Eva O'Neil left this week for Jackson, Tennessee, where she goes to enter the Memphis Conference Female Institute. She was accompanied as far as Fort Worth by her brother, Lee O'Neil, at which place she will join Miss Maud Mann of San Antonio who was her teacher last year. Miss Mann will be directress of the department of music in the College, and we can but feel that Miss Eva is indeed fortunate to have so won the regard and high esteem of her teacher, to the extent that special inducements were offered by the Institute, and by Miss Mann to have her become a pupil in the school. To have the privilege of association with one of such efficiency and intelligence as Miss Mann, as well as superior personal qualifications is a position to be coveted. In addition to the course she will take to fit herself as teacher of German and Latin, she expects to complete her music under Miss Mann who is eminently fitted for teaching, having been a pupil during 1910-11 of, Thuel Bwnham and Madeline Presser in Paris, France, Leschetiz Ky. Method, also pupil of Rudolph Gang, Berlin, Germany, as well as Beethoven Conservatory and Goetz Conservatory.
