WASHINGTON — The government is dunning hundreds of hospitals in seven states for more than $9 million in outpatient tests performed on Medicare patients later admitted to the hospital. Teachers go beyond detention, haul violent students into court

By Mark R. Cheligren
Associated Press

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Throughout the 1993-94 school year, Andy Bray disrupted Fran Cook's Spanish class. She met with Bray's mother, she met with school administrators, she struggled to end his defiance.

The next year, he was gone — no longer in her class — but not forgotten.

Bray gave a note to his "disciples" in Cook's class, suggesting that they be disruptive and "speak each day about different methods of murder."

When school officials in the Cincinnati suburb of Alexandria, Ky., gave the boy only a 40-minute detention, Cook went to court. She got a restraining order and filed a charge of terroristic threatening in juvenile court.

Eventually, she sued. Last month, the 18-year-old Bray was ordered to pay $8,700 for Cook's emotional distress and medical bills. The jury also slapped him with punitive damages of $25,000, declar-

NATO relaxes Serb deadline

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Western officials said Sunday the Bosnian Serbs were pulling their big guns away from Sarajevo, and gave the rebels another 72-hour reprieve from the threat of devastating air attacks.

At the same time, the Serbs were trying to fight off an advance by government troops in western Bosnia. Thousands of refugees fleeing the fighting choked the roads leading to the Serb stronghold of Banja Luka.

Two Bosnian Serb soldiers wave the traditional three-fingered salute while headed away from Sarajevo Sunday.

International mediators were trying to incorporate the shifting battle lines into their plans. They said the government's advance on Banja Luka could draw Serbia, the major power in the region, into the fighting.

"The next few days and hours may determine the fate of the war," said U.S. envoy Richard Holbrooke.

In a statement issued in Zagreb, Croatia, the U.N. and NATO commanders said they had postponed a deadline of 10 p.m. (3 p.m. CDT) Sunday because the Serbs were showing "initial compliance" with demands to pull artillery and other heavy weapons back at least 12 1/2 miles from Sarajevo.

"Therefore, we agreed that the suspension of the airstrikes be extended for an additional 72 hours," said a statement by NATO commander Adm. Leighton Smith and U.N. commander Lt. Gen. Bernard Janvier of France.

The new deadline expires at 10 p.m. (3 p.m. CDT) on Wednesday.

"It is our common judgment that the Bosnian Serbs have shown a substantial start towards withdrawing their heavy weapons beyond the limits of the exclusion zone," said the statement.

It didn't say how many weapons the Serbs withdrew by Sunday night, but Bosnian government radio put the figure at about 150. The Serbs were thought to have had around 300 heavy weapons in place. At midnight Saturday, the Serbs had removed 71, according to the United Nations.

"The additional 72 hours will permit the Bosnian Serbs to completely relocate their heavy weapons beyond the limits of the Sarajevo TEZ (total exclusion

Family friend leads authorities to body of missing 12-year-old

CONROE (AP) — A former Beaumont police officer, charged with kidnapping his close friend's son in a scheme to erase mounting debts, directed police Sunday to the 12-year-old's body 250 miles away.

The remains of Samuel McKay Everett — discarded off Interstate 10 between Lafayette and Baton Rouge, La. — were found at 1:15 a.m. in high weeds near the Atchafalaya Basin in Iberville Parish, authorities said.

"We regret to say that McKay's body was recovered this morning," Montgomery County Sheriff Guy Williams said, ending a search that began Tuesday night.

Hilton Lewis Crawford, the family friend charged with aggravated kidnapping, told authorities where to find the body of the boy — who called him "Uncle Hilty" — during an informal visit by Williams to the suspect's cell on Saturday night.

While Pat Buchanan is considered a long shot to capture the GOP presidential nomination, his ideas are making their way into the speeches of his rivals.

Suddenly in style, Buchanan themes echo from GOP rivals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pat Buchanan thought he heard an echo when GOP presidential rival Bob Dole endorsed English as the nation's official language and attacked proposed standards for teaching history.

"Right out of our speeches," said Buchanan.

It was deja vu when Dole criticized "liberal academic elites" for taking umbrage at President Truman's use of the atom bomb.

Likewise when California Gov. Pete Wilson came down on affirmative action and immigration, and when Sen. Dick Lugar of Indiana promoted a national sales tax.

"Been there, done that" could be Buchanan's campaign theme. While the conservative commentator is considered a long shot to capture the Republican presidential nomination, ideas he has long espoused are making their way into the campaign speeches of his GOP rivals.

Greenbacks get face lift to thwart counterfeiters

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — American currency is about to get a face lift, a high-tech overhaul to thwart counterfeiters that will have holders of greenbacks seeing double.

Two portraits of an American historical figure will be on each bill, but you'll have to hold the bill up to the light to see one of them.

It will be the first distinct new look for U.S. paper money in 66 years, a redesign that some experts consider long overdue given the troublemaking possibilities from foreign counterfeiters.

The changeover will begin early next year with the $100 bill, a favorite of forgers. Existing bills will remain in circulation.

High pressure spread across the Central Plains, providing lower temperatures and clear to partly cloudy skies. Temperatures were in the 50s in much of the Northern Plains and Upper Midwest.

Further to the west, showers and thunderstorms were widespread, with the most intense along the Utah-Nevada line.

At midday, the high in the Lower 48 states was 93 degrees at Nellis Air Force Base in Nevada and Cameron, La. The low was 29 degrees in Silver Bay, Minn., and Truckee, Calif.

Hurricane Marilyn weakened slightly and was hundreds of miles from Bermuda after tearing through the U.S. Virgin Islands and eastern Puerto Rico on Saturday, blowing apart homes, tossing parked airplanes into the air and killing at least four people.

HAUL: Teachers increasingly are going to court

ing his conduct "clearly exceeded the bounds of common decency."

The Bray case is not unique. Around the country, teachers are heading to the courtroom to gain some discipline in the classroom.

The old way of handling troublemakers was to haul them outside for a paddling, keep them after school or suspend them. The new way is to haul them into court — to file a lawsuit or press criminal charges.

August Steinhilber, general counsel to the National School Boards Association, said it is a phenomenon he has noticed just in the last six months.

"I think part of it is using the courts the other way," said Steinhilber.

In the past, parents and students have been quick to go to court to block disciplinary actions, Steinhilber said. "It wouldn't surprise me to see a few more of these where the teacher is saying, 'Two can play this game.' "

Jerry Painter of the Washington Education Association said teachers use restraining orders or the threat of them as leverage against school districts and parents.

"I think what you're seeing is a real frustration from a rising level of violence," Painter said. "You're seeing teachers where they finally throw their hands up in the air and say, 'I've got to have control.' "

Painter said about a dozen teachers in his state asked him about restraining orders last year, and four or five were actually obtained.

Sometimes the threat of court action was enough to get a student to agree to alcohol or drug treatment, anger therapy or just "to stay out of their class and stay out of their face," Painter said.

Deborah Sanville did more than threaten action: She filed an assault charge against one of her students in Fairfax County, Va. He pleaded guilty in June to a reduced charge, accepted a 30-day suspended sentence, a $100 fine and enrolled in an anger-control program.

"I'm tired of not having any rights," said Sanville, who teaches at Hayfield Secondary School. "Students have rights. Parents have rights. And yet an 18-year-old man can assault me in my workplace and where are my rights? That's a frightening situation.

"If this had happened in a mall and I pressed charges against this young man, everybody would say, 'well, of course,' " Sanville said.

"In the best of all worlds," said Steinhilber, teachers "shouldn't have to do this."

Yet they do, and Janet Bass, spokeswoman for the American Federation of Teachers, said it is because traditional methods of punishment and discipline have failed. The teachers' union is starting a nationwide campaign to advocate a code of conduct and academic standards for each school district.

Schools may have disciplinary codes, "but do they enforce?" Bass asked. "One child can ruin the education of all the other students in the classroom."

She said alternative classrooms, staffed by specially trained teachers, should be available for troubled and disruptive students.

Sanville said today's students are a different breed. "They have no fear. It's sad."

Meanwhile, she said, parents are losing control, school administrators fear community backlash and the teacher is left in the breach.

"Every year, it seems like we have less ways to deal with what goes on in the classroom," said Cook.

She has been a teacher for 25 years, but no more — she has retired from her job at Campbell County High School to avoid further confrontations. She says she will use the money she won in her suit to set up a trust fund for teachers who are threatened or harassed.

Sanville, meanwhile, has no intention of quitting. This fall, Sanville is starting her eighth year as a teacher; she brings with her the reputation of a teacher who will not accept misbehavior, and will go to court if necessary.

"Then the kids know you're serious," she said. "I'm sure they'll be a little more careful around me this year."

RELAXES: NATO gives Serbs a 72-hour reprieve zone)," the statement said.

(From 1A)

Smith and Janvier noted that the Serbs had allowed Sarajevo airport to resume operations and that roads into the city had reopened for use by the United Nations and aid agencies.

They indicated one of their next steps would be to bring together Serb and Bosnian government commanders to discuss a cease-fire around Sarajevo.

The NATO and U.N. commanders warned that if the Serbs didn't keep their promise, or attacked within the zone around Sarajevo, airstrikes would resume.

The commander of Serb troops around Sarajevo, Gen. Dragomir Milosevic, said that by 6:30 p.m. (12:30 p.m. EDT), half of the weapons had been removed, and the rest would be pulled out by Wednesday night.

In Western Bosnia, Serb forces that once seemed invincible melted away before an offensive by troops of the Muslim-led government.

Bosnian Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic wouldn't say how far government forces might go. But he said he believed that for the first time in the 3 1/2-year-old war, they were in control of the situation.

AP reporter Jovana Gec, on a tour organized by Bosnian Serb officials, saw about 60 pieces of heavy weaponry near the edge of the 12 1/2-mile zone, heading away from Sarajevo.

The convoys — one heading south and one heading west — included tanks, howitzers, mortars, multibarrel rocket launchers, anti-aircraft guns and ammunition.

"I feel like crying," a Bosnian Serb soldier yelled from atop a departing tank.

Bosnian Serb leaders resisted previous demands to pull about 300 heavy weapons out of the zone, preferring instead to hunker down under a NATO bombing campaign.

Holbrooke made a deal with President Slobodan Milosevic of Serbia, who has been negotiating for the Bosnian Serbs, to withdraw only certain large-caliber weapons. That angered the Bosnian government.

Terms reported Friday included only mortars bigger than 82 mm and artillery bigger than 100 mm. Previously, the United Nations and NATO insisted on withdrawal of all guns over 12.7 mm.

But U.N. spokesman Lt. Col. Chris Vernon said Sunday that the Serbs had been told that they must remove 82-mm mortars and 100-mm artillery as well.

It was not immediately clear how many additional weapons would have to go, but the 82-mm mortar has been one of the Serbs' most frequently used weapons against Sarajevo.

Holbrooke travelled from Belgrade, where he talked for seven hours with Milosevic, to Zagreb, Croatia, where he met President Franjo Tudjman, and then on to Sarajevo via the newly reopened airport.

After brief talks, he headed back to Belgrade for more meetings with Milosevic. He said he would be returning to Washington after a meeting Tuesday between Tudjman and Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic in Zagreb.

One diplomatic source said the Tudjman-Izetbegovic meeting was organized because of concern that battlefield success might ruin the anti-Serb alliance forged by the two sides.

U.N. sources said peace mediators were worried about whether the Bosnian army would attack Banja Luka, now choked with tens of thousands of Serb refugees. One U.N. source said the mediators also were afraid Milosevic would throw the Yugoslav army into the fray if that happened.

In a startling assault during the past week, the Croats and Bosnian government seized a string of Serb-held towns, closing to within about 25 miles of Banja Luka. The government army claims it and the Croats have taken about 1,600 square miles of territory in recent weeks.

Behind the front lines, an enormous refugee drama was unfolding.

The roads leading into Banja Luka were choked with people Sunday, said Gonzalo Vargas Llosa, a U.N. High Commissionr for Refugees spokesman in Zagreb, Croatia.

Bosnian Serb officials said Saturday that 100,000 refugees were in or near Banja Luka. Pierre Krahenbuhl, a Red Cross official, said about 60,000 were in or close to Banja Luka.

A U.S. peace initiative tentatively accepted by the warring parties, would give a confederation of Bosnian Muslims and Croats 51 percent of Bosnia and the Serbs 49 percent.

The rebels held nearly 70 percent of Bosnia just several months ago but now hold about 55 percent. That could make agreement on the 51-49 formula easier, but important differences remain on who would receive what.

FRIEND: Police find body of missing Conroe boy

(From 1A)

The sheriff said the encounter that spurred the suspect to "get this off my chest" turned out to be the break in the case, which began with the disappearance of the Everetts' only child from his upscale Conroe home.

After being allowed to speak to his attorney and his wife Connie, who police believe knew nothing of her husband's kidnapping plan, Crawford told authorities where McKay's body could be found.

The 56-year-old security guard did not, however, confess to the killing or kidnapping, they said.

Neither Williams nor FBI agents from Houston would say how McKay was killed or what led them to suspect him. But Williams said he believes the boy was dead less than 24 hours after he was abducted while home alone.

No murder charges were filed Sunday as county and federal prosecutors met to discuss the best way to pursue a homicide charge.

Authorities believe McKay was kidnapped about 8:30 p.m. Tuesday, while his parents, Paulette and Carl Everett, attended an Amway meeting. She sells Amway products and he is a local builder. Court documents show investigators were told Crawford had telephoned Mrs. Everett at home to determine whether she planned to attend.

Hours after McKay's abduction, his family received a call demanding a ransom of $500,000 in $100 bills, police said.

The woman suspected of making that call, Irene Flores, 52, was arrested Saturday at her Houston home. She once worked for Crawford at a security company he used to own. She has been charged with aggravated kidnapping and also could face a murder charge, authorities said.

Records at a Beaumont motel show Crawford checked into a room at 4:30 a.m. Wednesday.

On Friday, Crawford was arrested and his vehicle impounded. Sometime last week he had the trunk carpet replaced, telling the auto repair shop that he had gotten water in the trunk.

Last May, Crawford, who was employed as an unarmed security guard with Security Guard Services Inc. of Houston, and his wife filed for bankruptcy protection.

Both Crawford, who served a three-year stint with the Beaumont Police Department in the early 1960s, and Ms. Flores remained in the Montgomery County Jail Sunday without bond.

Authorities do not believe that the failure to pay the ransom led to the boy's death.

"I don't think that had anything to do with it," Williams said.

McKay's family was notified of the death around 3:30 a.m., said Montgomery County District Attorney Daniel Rice.

"Carl and Paulette Everett are deeply grieved," said Mike Mayes, the family's attorney, reading from a prepared statement. "Their hopes and dreams that they built in their family and in their son are no more.

"They are in the process of absorbing their tremendous loss and coming to grips with this tragic reality."

THEMES: 'Right out of our speeches,' Buchanan says

exasperated because it's copyright violation," Buchanan said in an interview. "But it is heartening because what it means is we're winning the battle for the heart and soul of the Republican Party."

Buchanan contends his agenda is helping shape the 1996 campaign, just as he pushed President Bush to the right in 1992, when his run for the GOP nomination helped legitimize attacks on the president from within the party.

Now in his second run for the nomination, Buchanan has remained a solid contender among the pack of candidates vying to catch up with front-runner Dole. He has stayed competitive with Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, his rival for the conservative mantle, even though Gramm's treasury is six times his own.

Nonetheless, Buchanan skeptics abound in Republican circles.

Many say he is too extreme, taking issues well beyond what other candidates advocate. For example, Buchanan has proposed erecting a fence along the U.S.-Mexico border and halting all immigration for five years.

"He manages to rile even his allies," said conservative leader Paul Weyrich.

Still, Buchanan is credited with consistency at a time when Dole, the Senate majority leader, is trying to live down his reputation as a legislative compromiser and Wilson is having to explain broken promises and policy reversals.

Buchanan's staunch anti-abortion stance makes him a crowd-pleaser at evangelical gatherings like the recent Christian Coalition convention.

And armed with an endorsement from the conservative Union Leader newspaper in New Hampshire, Buchanan says he is ready for a head-to-head battle with Dole in the leadoff primary state.

Yet deep opposition to Buchanan persists even among Republicans who don't disagree with his central themes.

"Buchanan makes little effort to hide the ugly undertones of his ideology," writes former Bush domestic adviser James Pinkerton, calling some of Buchanan's language and imagery reminiscent of Nazi Germany.

"The problem with Pat Buchanan is not the message but the messenger," said Republican pollster Ed Goeas.

Buchanan is seen as "mean-spirited and almost the stereotypical angry white male," Goeas said. "Dole presented the same issues, but there wasn't an anger about it."

GOP strategist William Kristol, publisher of a new conservative magazine, credits Buchanan for speaking to Americans' concerns even when it is not politically correct. He cautions, though, that "Americans want a strong message but they also want a reassuring and optimistic tone. ... Buchanan's music is downbeat and even a little bit scary."

In any event, even with wobbly campaign finances, Buchanan has hit his stride this year as a campaigner. He demonstrates "the importance of knowing what you think and having a clear, coherent message," Kristol said.

FACE: U.S. currency is about to get a high-tech overhaul

(From 1A)

tary John Hawke Jr. "As technology develops the potential for more sophisticated counterfeiting, it gives us increasing cause for concern."

The most visible change will be to shift portraits off center.

An enlarged portrait of Benjamin Franklin will be moved to the left on the $100 bill, making room for a new watermark engraving. The watermark portrait, visible when the bill is held up to the light, is one of several new security features.

Officials said the watermark is extremely difficult to duplicate.

Eventually, there will be similar redesigns for the portraits on nearly all smaller denominations — Ulysses S. Grant on the $50 bill, Andrew Jackson on the $20, Alexander Hamilton on the $10, Abraham Lincoln on the $5, and, of course, George Washington on the $1.

The exception could be the $2 bill, which bears the likeness of Thomas Jefferson. No decision has been made on whether to alter the largely commemorative bill.

Treasurer Mary Ellen Withrow has said borders on the new bills will be simplified, with geometric designs replaced by an assortment of lines and dots that are intended to foil counterfeiters.

Also, color-shifting ink will be used so that the greenback will take on a different hue when viewed from an angle. And government printers may use computer-designed patterns that are made to turn wavy when copied improperly.

The redesign presents an opportunity for modernizing the currency. The $10 bill, for example, has on its reverse side a 1920s-era car in front of the Treasury building. But no one has said whether it will be replaced by a newer model automobile.

About $390 billion in U.S. paper currency is in circulation, some two-thirds in foreign countries.

The Secret Service has said there may be three times as much counterfeiting conducted abroad as in the United States. There have been reports, questioned by the Clinton administration, that Iran is distributing counterfeit bills through Lebanon.

Robert Leuver, a former director of the U.S. Bureau of Engraving and Printing, doubts anti-counterfeiting measures will work as long as old-style bills remain in circulation.

"If they exist as legal tender, people can counterfeit them," he said. "You copy whatever is easy to counterfeit."

U.S. officials decided not to recall old bills because it could disrupt foreign economies. Foreigners tend to be reluctant to turn in old bills, fearing tax consequences and currency devaluation.

A leading example is Russia, believed to have the largest supply of dollars anywhere outside the United States. Despite assurances from U.S. officials, Russians fear redesigned bills will mean a recall of greenbacks.

Last month, the newspaper Izvestia warned that criminal gangs might try to dump their counterfeits of existing bank notes in anticipation of the new ones. Dollars are the main financial refuge for inflation-weary Russians.

The last major change in U.S. currency was in 1929 when bills were reduced in size and given a uniform look. Congress added the words "In God We Trust" in 1957.

Hospitals must pay for Medicare outpatients' tests

■ The repayment is part of a crackdown by the Department of Justice and the Office of the Inpector General of the Department of Health and Human Services.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is dunning hundreds of hospitals in seven states for more than $9 million in outpatient tests performed on Medicare patients who were later admitted.

Nearly 4,000 other hospitals nationwide will get similar notices over the next 18 months demanding they pay back $100 million for X-rays and tests performed within 72 hours of a hospital admission.

Senior citizens are also due money back if the hospitals charged them deductibles or a 20 percent share of the outpatient tests.

Medicare pays flat rates for hospital stays pegged to the patient's diagnosis. The rates include any hospital outpatient tests or services performed in the three days before admission.

The crackdown is part of a joint project by the Department of Justice and the Office of the Inspector General of the Department of Health and Human Services. Computers were used to match Medicare outpatient payments with hospital bills going back to 1983.

The problem has persisted despite repeated audits.

Hospitals in western Pennsylvania were the first to feel the heat from the joint agency effort to stop the overpayments.

This summer, government lawyers reached a model settlement with the Hospital Council of Western Pennsylvania and lawyers for other hospitals in the state.

In July, 145 Pennsylvania hospitals were sent letters asking them to sign an agreement and repay $3.4 million, including interest and penalties.

Now the government has calculated how much is owed by 731 other hospitals in Florida, Missouri, Mississippi, Louisiana, Indiana, Virginia and West Virginia.

Those hospitals will get letters by Sept. 30 asking them to repay $9.4 million, sign the agreement and establish controls to prevent the billing mistakes from happening again.

Similar notices are expected to go out to nearly 3,800 other hospitals nationwide by early 1997, with the government expecting to recover $100 million.

"There was nothing sinister about this," said Seymour Schafer, the attorney for the Hospital Council of Western Pennsylvania. "When you take the volume of claims that are made, there are going to be mistakes."

People "generally don't walk in to the hospital with a sign on them that says, 'I'm coming back in two days,'" he said.

But the inspector general's office says many of these tests were part of hospital's pre-admission routine.

The inspector general has urged that tests performed within a week of admission be covered under Medicare's payment for the hospital stay. But the Health Care Financing Administration, which runs Medicare, has said that is pushing it too far.

The club the government is using to get the hospitals to pay up is the threat of far stiffer penalties — starting at $5,000 for each false bill — under the Federal False Claims Act.

Under that statute, the 731 hospitals could face fines of up to $662 million, Inspector General June Gibbs Brown said in a memo.

The project team "anticipates that the vast majority of hospitals will opt" to settle, Brown said.

For many hospitals, it will be cheaper to settle than to fight the government's demands in court, said Schafer.

The inspector general has issued four reports on the problem since 1988 and is currently conducting a fifth audit. Its last report said 4,660 of the nation's 5,200 hospitals had improperly billed Medicare for outpatient services.

The audits have also found that some hospitals reported discharging some patients who they actually transferred to another facility. The hospitals may be asked to pay money back on that score, too.

Brown's memo did not name any hospitals, but she said they include: 185 Florida hospitals that will be asked to pay $3.9 million; 125 in Missouri, $655,000; 83 in Mississippi, $274,000; 86 in Louisiana, $1.1 million; 113 in Indiana, $2.3 million; 91 in Virginia, $904,000, and 48 in West Virginia, $343,000.

Clogged sewer causes problems for astronauts

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A clogged shuttle sewer had Endeavour's astronauts "working like dogs" Sunday as their trouble-filled mission drew to a smelly close.

Instead of relaxing and taking their time packing for today's trip home, the astronauts found themselves draining urine and other waste water from a storage tank into a smaller emergency container.

"The phrase 'working like dogs' has taken on an entirely new meaning for us," space shuttle commander David Walker said.

Long before their flight began 11 days ago, Endeavour's five astronauts nicknamed themselves the Dog Crew to relieve the tension and have some fun. It's a good thing: They had to contend with numerous equipment problems in orbit, most notably a pair of balky science satellites.

Even if your expensive tastes make a redecorating project a costly proposition, the results will be worth it. Although romance is exhilarating, a long-term relationship may continue to elude you. You are often attracted to those who are not ready to settle down.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: country singer Charley Pride, actress Holly Robinson, baseball player Ryne Sandberg, legendary actress Greta Garbo.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You cannot afford to take anyone or anything for granted now. Exercise greater caution in financial matters. Someone new enters the romantic sweepstakes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A new hobby encourages you to express yourself creatively. Remember, a project does not always have to make money in order to make sense. Be careful not to give away company secrets during "pillow talk."

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q J 5 ♡10 5 ◇A K 6 ♣Q 10 9 7 3

The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♠	Pass	1♠	Pass

What do you bid now?

A. - If you are among those who believe that you must have four-card support to raise partner's major-suit response, what an awful problem you face. You must either bid one no trump without a heart stopper or rebid a shabby five-card minor. Raise to two spades.

Q. 2 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠A 9 8 7 3 ♡K 9 4 2 ◇A K ♣A 10

The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♠	Pass	2♣	Pass
2♡	Pass	3♣	Pass

What do you bid now?

A. - Partner's auction has shown a minimum two-over-one response with a good club suit — North is insisting on playing in his suit even though you have already shown nine cards in two other suits and could very well be void in clubs. We like the bid found by Bill Root at the table — a leap to six clubs.

Q. 3 - Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A J 9 5 ♡A K J 7 6 ◇Void ♣A K J 4

What is your opening bid?

A. - While you have only a four-loser hand, it won't play all that well if partner's values and length are concentrated in diamonds. To afford you the maximum room for exploration, open one heart, planning to jump in clubs at your next turn.

Q. 4 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠8 7 2 ♡K Q J 7 6 3 ◇K 5 2 ♣7

The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
2♡*	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3♡	Pass	3♠	Pass

* weak  forcing

What do you bid now?

A. - What are your methods? If you play that two no trump is the only force after a weak two-bid, then partner's spade bid is natural and forcing and you should raise spades. If you play that a new suit would be forcing, partner's three spades is a cue-bid and, since you've shown a minimum weak two-bid, you should now cooperate by bidding your cheapest control, in this case, your singleton club. Bid four clubs.

Q. 5 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠8 5 2 ♡9 5 ◇8 3 ♣A Q 10 9 6 5

Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?

A. - Throw your point-count book out the window. Your hand rates to deliver five or six tricks for partner — considerably more than a random 10 points. Jump to three no trump.

Q. 6 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠K 10 3 ♡Q J 5 ◇A Q 8 ♣Q 6 5 2

The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♠	Pass	1♡	1♠

What action do you take?

A. - While we have no objection to raising partner's major-suit response with three-card support, don't make a habit of it when a reasonable alternative is available. Here you have a sound opening bid, improved by your fit for partner, but a square hand — no ruffing value. We think a one-no-trump rebid is more descriptive.

Don't look for Charles' reported lover at Queen Mother's homes

LONDON — Don't look for Camilla Parker Bowles at the Queen Mother's digs anytime soon.

Prince Charles' grandmother has twice refused his requests to bring his reported lover to official functions at her residences, according to Sunday Express, which quoted an unidentified senior royal adviser.

The Queen Mother doesn't object to Mrs. Parker Bowles personally but wants to prevent Charles from divorcing Princess Diana while he is heir to the throne, the newspaper said.

Charles reportedly wants to ease Mrs. Parker Bowles, who's divorced, into public life and eventually marry her.

"The British people would never accept a divorced king and queen. It would divide the country," the adviser quoted the 95-year-old Queen Mother as saying.

LONDON — The Duchess of York still loves her royal man and he "wants me back," a newspaper reported Sunday.

The Duchess of York still loves her royal man, reports say.

The former Sarah Ferguson and her two daughters may move back to the estate where Prince Andrew lives, but in a separate house, the News of the World said.

"He wants me back. I love him and we both love the girls," the newspaper quoted her as telling unidentified friends. "I don't know what's stopping us."

She and Andrew have picked out part of Sunninghill Park estate for a house for her and their daughters, Princess Beatrice, 7, and Princess Eugenie, 5, the paper said.

The couple has been separated since 1992 and the duchess was forced to move out of a house she was renting last year when the landlords opted to sell it. The two have been seen in public with increasing frequency.

SALT LAKE CITY — Gwendolyn Brooks likes the word "black" with a capital "B."

Blacks have fought hard over the years to get the labels of black, "colored" and "Negro" in the upper case, but the print media won't accept it, the Pulitzer Prize-winning poet said Friday at a luncheon.

"The tiredness of the black spirit has noted this, and with glee has noted also that 'African-American' comes all capitalized," she said, "and that white people, although much amused by this entire little fray, seem disposed to accept it ..."

Newspapers and magazines "still refuse to honor the notion of respectable and respected identity and insist on spelling 'blacks' with a little 'b,'" said Brooks, who won the 1950 poetry Pulitzer for "Annie Allen."

MINNEAPOLIS — Radio talk-show host Barbara Carlson has embarrassed her ex-husband, Gov. Arne Carlson, before by talking about their failed marriage on the air.

Now she's planning a tell-all book, and the governor is warning that he won't tolerate any "defamatory material."

The book, "This Broad's Life," is scheduled for release next summer. She chronicles her years of alcohol abuse and her dozen years of marriage to Carlson.

"Part of this book deals with my life and drinking, and the governor is part of that," Ms. Carlson said. "There are some things that are very painful in the book."

Carlson said in the letter to his ex: "I will not tolerate any invasion of my privacy nor condone any defamatory material or exaggerations that may be contained in the book."

Her response: "I am not giving him veto power over the story of my life."

RADNOR, Pa. — There's no turning back for the cast of "Friends."

Jennifer Aniston says the attention can be unnerving.

Jennifer Aniston, who plays Rachel, said the attention brought on by the show's wildly successful first season can be unnerving.

"This is when I say, 'Jesus, I just want my life back.' But I know it's too late,'" she told TV Guide in its Sept. 23 issue.

David Schwimmer, who plays Ross, fears typecasting.

"Each of us likes to believe that we will have careers beyond this," he said. "But when a series starts getting into things like a hit record and a music video and mugs and T-shirts ... well, I don't want to be known as Ross when I'm 60."

Bombing of Bosnia should be limited

NATO's bombing campaign in Bosnia has two legitimate and narrow purposes — to get the deadly Bosnian Serb siege guns pulled back from Sarajevo and to encourage all sides to negotiate seriously about a compromise peace.

President Clinton should resist pressure to terminate the bombing before it achieves those goals, but he must also avoid the temptation to escalate the attacks into a open-ended NATO intervention. Sen. John McCain has rightly warned of the dangers of "mission creep," namely the imperceptible passage from limited intervention to extensive NATO involvement in Bosnia's war.

These may seem exacting, even picky distinctions, but they are important in guiding America's response. Experience has shown that this protracted and complicated conflict can overwhelm good intentions. The situation demands precise policy decisions and the kind of careful, patient diplomacy that the Clinton administration has used of late.

The bombing has now entered its third week with few signs of the Serb guns being withdrawn. Targets are being hit far from Sarajevo, cruise missiles have been brought into action and Washington is talking about committing stealth bombers to the attack. Muslim and Croat armies have begun to take military advantage of NATO's bombs. Meanwhile, Serbia's main ally, Russia, has been complaining loudly, and even some NATO countries are growing increasingly uneasy.

Until now, much of the NATO operation, including last weekend's cruise missile attack, has been targeted on the Serbs integrated air defense system throughout Bosnia. That was the right place to start, not only to minimize the risk to air crews, but also to clear the way for low-flying follow-up attacks aimed directly at the siege guns around Sarajevo. Keeping those defenses inoperative will require repeat sorties, but now it is time to shift the main focus to the Sarajevo guns themselves.

International efforts to end the war rest principally with the negotiations being coordinated by Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke. His efforts need to be based, as far as possible, on leading each group to see its own enlightened self-interest in compromise, rather than bullying concessions by military threats or buying them with lavish promises of American aid. Any such aid would have to be approved by a Congress that has been unremittingly hostile to most forms of foreign assistance.

Holbrooke himself has said repeatedly that NATO's bombing campaign is neither related to nor necessary for his diplomatic mission. But the bombs have probably softened the Serbs' negotiating stance and have surely given the Muslim's greater confidence in the trustworthiness of international commitments.

As these benefits are realized, NATO's bombing campaign needs to be focused as tightly as possible on Sarajevo. Clinton will face increasing pressure to end or escalate the bombing. The best course is to pursue limited bombing for now to keep Sarajevo safe and the negotiations on track.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish "open" letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Clinton can see web between politics, policy

WASHINGTON — After spending a relaxing evening watching a movie in the White House theater last month, several members of the Clinton Cabinet lingered to pan the performance of the Republican-controlled Congress.

Anderson

Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt bemoaned a recent House vote that gutted the Environmental Protection Agency's authority to enforce clean air and water regulations. That's when U.S. trade representative and Clinton confidant Mickey Kantor jumped in with a political observation:

"Bruce, you've got it all wrong. That's the best thing that ever happened to us. We've got to keep losing ones like that so we can use it (in next year's election)." Kantor, Commerce Secretary Ron Brown and Clinton himself are unique for their ability to see a seamless web between politics and policy. In that sense, the effort now under way by Republicans to open up Alaska's Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to oil and gas drilling could be a political geyser for Democrats.

Until recently, there's been a bipartisan consensus that some wildlife and natural beauties cannot be assigned a dollar value. In 1959, the Eisenhower administration called the refuge area "One of the most magnificent wildlife and wilderness areas in North America... a wilderness experience not duplicated elsewhere." Now some Republicans want to transform this part of our national heritage and even rename it from the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to the "Arctic Oil Reserve."

Although this is a GOP payoff to the oil industry, White House officials are strategizing over how to reap political dividends. The handling of the issue is one of the subplots behind the looming train wreck — the shutting down of government — if the president and Congress can't pass a budget before the Oct. 1 start of the fiscal year.

The government has shut down nine times in the past 14 years because Congress and the president were stalemated over spending plans. Clinton administration officials note that the first time was in 1981, when President Reagan stood his ground, defined his presidency and soared in the polls.

Congressional Republicans threw down the gauntlet earlier this year by counting an assumed $1.4 billion in revenue from projected refuge oil lease sales as part of their balanced budget plan. As a result, Congress is faced with the fait accompli of drilling as part of the budget reconciliation process or with finding the money elsewhere.

The question being hotly debated at the White House is whether the refuge issue might resonate enough with the electorate to justify a presidential veto, even if it risks a train wreck. Some of Clinton's political advisers, who have awakened belatedly to the grassroots appeal of environmentalism, believe it could be a big political plus. They are pitted against other advisers, who argue that Clinton should save his fire for a showdown over Medicaid and Medicare.

"The usual ranks are shattered all over the place (on the Arctic refuge)," one senior administration official told us. "During the past two years, when there's been an environmental issue, Babbitt loses with the political people in the White House. Now they don't see (Babbitt) as typhoid Mary every time he walks into the place."

FEUD OF THE WEEK — When Ross Perot recently called Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., he was looking for an apology, if not a retraction. Instead, Perot received what he might call a world-class tongue lashing from a senator who isn't scared by the billionaire bully.

McCain, who spent 5-1/2 years in the infamous Hanoi Hilton as a POW, defended the Clinton administration's decision to normalize diplomatic relations with Vietnam. He has also debunked conspiracy theories propounded by Perot and others that the U.S. government is covering up evidence of American MIAs still being held in captivity.

Perot's angry call was prompted by a Newsweek story in which McCain was asked about Perot's claims of live POWs. "He's nuttier than a fruitcake — and that's on the record," McCain snapped.

Perot spent the first several minutes of his conversation with McCain reminding him of everything he did to provide aid and comfort to POW families during the war. After thanking Perot, McCain laid it on the line: "When you run around saying there are guys in prison and we can spring them for billions of dollars, that's just nutty. I'm sorry, but I think it's nutty."

Good hit men are hard to find for murder jobs

Many years ago, there was an unusual murder case in Chicago. Male body parts began turning up in different locations on the Northwest Side. A foot here, a thigh there and so on.

Finally, a hand was found and the fingerprints were traced to a man who was no longer seen around his neighborhood.

Royko

The police questioned his wife, a small, quiet, middle-aged Polish immigrant.

She soon confessed and told the story. Her husband had been a cruel man who drank heavily and regularly beat her.

After years of being punched around by the lout, she couldnt take it anymore. So one day, she defended herself by whacking him on the head with her electric iron. He fell dead.

Fearing that the law would not understand her predicament, she decided to get rid of the body. But her husband was a big, heavy man and she couldn't lift him, much less carry him to a suitable hiding place.

So she sawed him into lighter, more manageable parts, wrapped them in wax paper, put them in her shopping bag, and carried them to distant garbage cans and ash bins.

But during her trial, the prosecutor was convinced that she had an accomplice. And he hammered at that point, finally asking her:

"Didn't you have someone help you do this?"

And with a genuinely puzzled expression, she said: "Where do you find that kind of help?"

That was a good question then, and it is a good question today. That particular kind of help is hard to find.

If you are a regular newspaper reader, you have probably noticed a certain type of crime story that appears with strange regularity.

A woman will decide that for one reason or another she is no longer content with her marriage. Or she and her husband have split up but can't agree on the terms of the divorce.

So she decides that bumping him off is the best way to resolve the problem.

The question is, how to do it? The answer is get help. So she shops around for a hit man.

Then we open the paper and read about how she has been arrested after offering money to some guy who turns out to be an undercover cop.

It is amazing how many suburban undercover cops seem to spend their time waiting for a disgruntled woman to offer them money to do a murder.

Last year, it was a woman doctor who wanted her husband, also a doctor, knocked off.

She finally got a guy to accept the job. He promptly informed her that he was really a Naperville (Ill.) cop and that she was under arrest.

Before that, there was the St. Charles (Ill.) woman who wanted her businessman husband done away with. Her "hit man" also turned out to be an undercover cop.

The same thing happened to a woman in Wisconsin who decided that her husband was worth more dead — $220,000 in insurance money — than alive. Another undercover cop spoiled her plan.

There was a slightly different twist to the case of an Elgin (Ill.) woman. She wanted her married boyfriend murdered because he had dumped her and returned to his wife.

Who did she hire for the hit? An undercover sheriff's deputy.

A woman in Chicago's Lakeview neighborhood got tired of being knocked about by her abusive husband, so she put out the word that she wanted him knocked off.

The "hit man" was an undercover state police investigator.

There was the Bolingbrook (Ill.) woman who decided she would be a lot happier with her husband's insurance money than with the husband.

She retained the services of — what else? — an undercover cop.

And you might remember the woman from Chicago's Bridgeview area who said her husband regularly thumped her. To put an end to the abuse, she sought out a hired killer.

But when the agreement was reached, he revealed himself as an undercover Bridgeview cop, and she went to jail.

All of these cases have happened in the last five years. It's becoming so common that I suspect every suburb has at least one cop who does nothing but hang around the local bars posing as a ne'r-do-well and waiting for an unhappy female to offer him a few thou to bump off her spouse.

And it makes one wonder if women really deserve their reputation as smart, careful shoppers, always finding quality at bargain prices.

Or is it simply another sign of the modern need for instant gratification — an unwillingness to take the time needed to feed him high-sodium, cholesterol-rich foods and let Mother Nature do the job.

So it appears that the Polish lady's question is still relevant: "Where do you find that kind of help?"

You just can't. So my advice to women who might be thinking along those lines is to heed the words of a soft-hearted lawyer who once said:

"You got to give divorce a chance."

Gary Ott has great outlook on life

One of the most enjoyable things about your newspaper is the column that comes out twice a week that is written by Gary Ott. I think he has a great outlook on life and it shows in how he writes his column. I've been reading his column religiously for years. In fact I save them and read them over. I think the paper has a great asset in him and his writing.

Officer provides sense of safety

Recently two children from Greathouse Elementary decided to wreck havoc against our daughter and our house. A call made to the police was answered, but resulted in no action. On the second day with a threat against our daughter's life and more havoc on our house, I called the police back and within week's end all was well.

I felt safe and secure. Officer Glenn sat in front of our house to make sure our kids got home OK. Officer Glenn brought the problems to the attention of the school and parents with results which we had not received. Thank you, Officer Glenn. You are to be commended for your assistance and hard work.

Americans should rethink Dole support

I think that all Americans should rethink any support they want to give Bob Dole in his campaign for the Republican nomination for president. He hasn't been very conservative when it comes right down to the everyday concerns of most people. He seems to be business-as-usual in any matter that has come up in the Senate and that is part of the problem with the government today. There is too much government and not enough personal responsibility. Dole wouldn't support the Republicans in the House with what the Contract With America wanted to do to lessen the government's intrusion and micromanaging.

He is still in favor of the "Don't Worry — Be happy — Congress knows best" method of governance. The problem we have now is that for too long we, the people, have been content to sit back and not worry too much with what has been going on inside the Beltway. We have abrogated our responsibility in the governing of this country. We have been of the mind of "let George do it," we're too busy to worry with it. Well, we are being bitten by what we "let George do." I think it's time we took back the "government of the people, by the people, and for the people." We need to get more involved with what is going on in "our" government.

It troubles me very much when I see such long-time Clinton backers as Jackson Stephens and Don Tyson abandoning the man they worked so hard to set up in power. They did this expecting to benefit from favors done for him and, if the truth be known, have probably benefited greatly. These very same men are now trying to hitch themselves to Bob Dole. Jackson Stephens is Bob Dole's campaign finance manager. This sort of looks like rats abandoning a sinking ship. If Stephens and Tyson are willing to support Dole it looks as if there is not a lot of difference between him and Clinton. They are probably looking to influence Dole as they used to influence Clinton. Clinton and his shenanigans have brought a lot of sunshine on what was done in Arkansas during the '70s, '80s and early '90s. We just can't afford to let Clinton and his ilk continue to try to socialize this country.

Residents of U.S. Virgin Islands face primitive conditions after Marilyn CHARLOTTE AMALIE, U.S. Virgin Islands (AP) — The yachts that used to be in the marina are on the highway. The red roofs of houses are strewn on the ground. The duty-free shops where tourists used to look for bargains are filled with looters.

Hurricane Marilyn has moved on from St. Thomas, but the Caribbean island that it left behind was a changed place Sunday.

Electricity, water and phones were out. Air traffic controllers, the windows of their tower blown out by 100-mph winds, used binoculars and radios to guide in relief flights. A quarter of the houses on the island were destroyed, and nearly all the others damaged.

In Charlotte Amalie, capital of the U.S. Virgin Islands, hundreds of people looted stores at a waterfront shopping center. No policemen were in sight.

"These are all odd shoes, man," said a young man at a Foot Locker store. "I can't find something that fits."

The hurricane, the fourth to hit the Caribbean in as many weeks, tore through the Virgin Islands and eastern Puerto Rico on Saturday, blowing apart homes, tossing parked airplanes into the air and killing as many as nine people.

Six people were killed on St. Thomas, home to 51,000 people. On St. Croix, the most populous of the Virgin Islands with 55,000 people, two people died. One person was killed in Puerto Rico.

President Clinton declared the U.S. Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico disaster areas, making them eligible for federal emergency aid.

Seven military transport planes landed Sunday on St. Thomas with the first relief supplies for island residents — plastic sheeting, water, telephone equipment, emergency medical supplies.

Pontiff speaks for peace while at Mass in S. Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Pope John Paul II urged Africa and the world on Sunday to follow South Africa in rejecting violence and hatred to work for peace and reconciliation.

"A new dawn has risen," the pope said in opening an outdoor Mass attended by about 100,000 people, including Nelson Mandela, the nation's first black president. "Become what you want to be, the rainbow people of God."

On his first official visit to South Africa, the pope continued his celebration of the end of apartheid last year.

"The whole church is comforted and people everywhere rejoice in the change that has come about in South Africa during the last few years," John Paul said in his homily on a sun-drenched southern African morning at a Johannesburg horse track.

"Seeing what is happening here, men and women of good will hope that in other parts of this continent too, and throughout the world, violence will give way to dialogue and agreement, and the lives of innocent men, women and children will no longer be in danger for reasons which, more often than not, they neither share nor understand," he said.

Repeating a central theme of his six-day trip that began in Cameroon and ends in Kenya, the pope called for the world to focus attention on easing the suffering of Africans. For the first time on the trip, he singled out problems in specific countries such as Rwanda, Burundi, Sudan, Algeria "and until recently in the republic of South Africa because of apartheid."

"The time of ideological contrasts is over," John Paul said, referring to Cold War proxy battles that ravaged the continent for decades.

House GOP to introduce anti-lobbying legislation

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — House Republican leaders, under pressure from their own freshmen, caustic Democrats and loyal senior Republicans, have decided to bring anti-lobbying measures to the floor in the next few weeks, abandoning their plan to wait until next year.

They plan to take up the bill the Senate passed in July, which would require the registration of thousands of lobbyists who now escape the loose restraints in the current law.

They also expect to duplicate the Senate's gift ban, which imposes a limit of $100 in gifts and meals to legislators or their aides from any person in a single year.

Rep. Christopher Shays, R-Conn., who has been his party's leading advocate of limits on lobbyists, said last week that Speaker Newt Gingrich and Rep. Dick Armey of Texas, the majority leader, had been persuaded to go ahead with the bill.

Action this year would enable the new rules to take effect Jan. 1, while a delay could postpone them until 1997, as far as the House is concerned. .

"I have spoken with Newt," Shays said. "I have spoken with Dick Armey, and they all agree this can be a plus. In the next two months, it will be done." A spokesman for Gingrich confirmed that account, saying the speaker had told Shays the bill could come up, but only after the House deals with Medicare.

While the accelerated schedule bears no relation to the publication of Sen. Bob Packwood's diaries, which revealed in painful detail the excesses of his ties to lobbyists, the national attention given them will make an already easy vote for more restrictions even easier for House members to cast.

The Senate gift ban will take effect as a rule Jan. 1, 1996; the new lobbying restrictions were passed in the form of a bill that requires House approval.

Last year the House passed a single measure including lobbying registration and a gift ban. But the legislation was killed last fall in the Senate by Republicans who sought to deny Democrats the credit for a reform measure just before the election.

This year, once the measures were forced to the Senate floor by Democratic filibuster threats, they passed overwhelmingly.

Adding limits to lobbying has not been a high priority for House Republicans. Gingrich said Sept. 6, "I think we'll get to lobbying and gift reform early next year."

But last week the leaders convinced Rep. Nancy L. Johnson, R-Conn., to have the Ethics Committee consider the gift ban. She and the other committee members were studying material on it during the weekend and plan to discuss the question this week. "I am pleased they want our input," she said on Friday. "My sense is they are moving." But she said the committee did not have time to hold extensive hearings on the subject.

Rep. Charles T. Canady, R-Fla., who heads the Judiciary Subcommittee on the Constitution, said after a hearing on the Senate measures earlier this month that he believed there was no need for his subcommittee to write a bill because there was general agreement that the Senate had done a good job.

"I think we can take the Senate bill and pass it under suspension," he said. When the House considers noncontroversial bills under suspension of the rules, only 40 minutes of debate are allowed and a two-thirds vote is required.

Canady also wrote to Gingrich on Wednesday, urging him to bring the issues up "as soon as is practicable."

Canady wrote: "The Democrats demonstrated time and time again that they were unable effectively to deal with the important issues of lobbying and gift reform. The Republican majority now has the opportunity to continue with the agenda of reform which we have pursued under your leadership throughout this Congress. By moving forward with lobbying and gift reform we will once more demonstrate to the American people that things really have changed in Washington."

There is no question that both the new registration requirements and a rule limiting gifts for members and aides will pass easily if they come to the floor, as the two 98-0 votes in the Senate demonstrated.

HUMOR ON THE SIDE

Late Night Lines

"Yesterday, ladies and gentlemen, Senator Bob Packwood resigned. He wrote in his diary that he had sex with 22 different staff members. Good god, I'm lucky if I can get a cup of coffee."

"More trouble for the Clinton administration with White House aide George Stephanopoulous. He drives into a parked car. Backing up, he drives into it again. So now he realizes he's in some sort of trouble. He scrambles around the glove compartment. He has some breath mints; and a cop is watching this whole thing. So finally they arrested him and charged him with impersonating a Kennedy."

"Yesterday, our old friend, Joey Buttafuocco, was found guilty of violating his probation by soliciting sex in Los Angeles from an undercover police officer. This means he may serve three years in prison, or six months apologizing on talk shows with a fake British accent."

"Newt Gingrich said he may not run for President if Colin Powell gets into the race. And I think I speak for most Americans when I say Colin, how much will it take to get the campaign off the ground?"

"I think they have completely lost control of the O.J. Simpson trial. Every time Johnnie Cochran enters the courtroom, he makes the bailiff play the theme from 'Shaft.'"

"It's day four of Charlie Sheen's honeymoon. That means so far he's saved himself about $8,500."

"First Lady Hillary Clinton addressed the U.N.'s 4th Annual World Women's Conference in Bejing. I think the topic of her speech was, 'How to get the remote control back from your husband.'"

"Tell you what let's do. Let's get the 20 biggest people here in this audience, and we'll just go beat the crap out of the New York Jets."

"Did you folks hear about the big Rock 'n Roll Hall of Fame in Cleveland? To kick off the opening, they had a huge concert over the weekend. The concert itself was unbelievable. Bob Dylan actually showed up and performed with an interpreter."

— Letterman

"Last week in Buffalo, police arrested a man who overpowered a 7-11 employee, put on the guy's uniform and then robbed the customers as they came into the store. Police said they first got suspicious that something was going on when they noticed that the guy spoke perfect English and was able to break a 20."

"I guess now O.J.'s defense team wants Fuhrman charged with perjury for lying in court. Is that a good idea? You start arresting people for lying in court, and I think his defense team is pretty much looking at the death penalty right about now."

— Jay Leno

"Yesterday Saddam Hussein was unanimously renominated for the presidency of Iraq ... Apparently his opponents dropped out of the race after he had them killed."

"At an auction yesterday, Lorena Bobbitt's car was sold for $8,500 ... It's in good condition except that the antenna's been snapped off."

"Bob Packwood resigned yesterday ... He handed in a pink slip along with two bras and a teddy."

Desperately seeking Kathleen

Man hunts high and low for Beaumont woman he met on airplane

Associated Press

BEAUMONT — If you read this, Kathleen, Tom Richter is looking for you.

The Humble resident met the mysterious, 20-something Kathleen at the gate before boarding an Aug. 7 Continental Airlines flight from Los Angeles to Houston. But circumstances conspired against Richter as he tried to locate her once the plane landed at Houston Intercontinental Airport.

Sitting in the last seat of the last row, Richter couldn't get to the baggage claim quickly enough to tell her he'd like to take her out to dinner.

Richter, 42, was devastated when he saw that Kathleen had left the airport for her home in Beaumont.

So, Richter decided to place an ad in the Beaumont Enterprise. Under the personals column, he wrote: "Looking for Kathleen. Met at Los Angeles International Airport to Houston Intercontinental on August 7th. Please call, Tom at ..."

"Man, I took a lot of ribbing from my co-workers and my employees," he said, adding they told him they couldn't believe he would spend "that kind of money in the paper for some girl you don't even know."

"At first I gave up on it. I figured it's not going to happen," he says about finding Kathleen. "But then I said to myself that I couldn't give up that easily."

Richter, at 6 feet 2 inches and strongly resembling movie actor Tom Berenger, hardly is desperate when it comes to dating, but he admits to being desperate about finding Kathleen.

"I meet a girl like her," he said, "maybe once every 10 years."

Ona Burns, right, plays piano with Alex Haroz at Trinity Towers.

The keys of life

87-year-old piano teacher spreads her gift of music with young, old alike.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Music, it has been said, is like praying without words, and Midland senior citizen Ona Burns regularly uses her extensive musical talents in devotion to God and man.

Ms. Burns, 87, keeps very busy turning her life-long love of piano into the gift of music for senior citizens all around Midland.

Ms. Burns volunteers her talent at Trinity Towers, Terrace Gardens, Terrace West, Manor Park and Shepherd Adult Day Care.

She also teaches beginning classical piano for seniors and other adults at Midland College.

Thank You Note ...

Returning to our Missouri home while on vacation recently, my family was just getting to the east side of Midland when we spotted a county deputy sheriff's car sitting alongside the highway. As any other motorist, the first thing I did was gawk at my speedometer, and then consoled myself that we were below the allowed speed limit.

We looked in our rearview mirrors and realized, now it's time to panic. Now, we have two burly Texas deputies on our tail, with flashing red lights! We pulled to the shoulder of the interstate, a position where I am not accustomed to being the "front vehicle," as I am a deputy sheriff myself.

When the deputy approached, we were greeted by maybe the most polite officer I have ever met, except for maybe myself. He explained that every summer, Midland has a public relations program called "Hold Up" by a group named the "M-Squad." We were offered an all-expense paid night's stay in a motel, a tank of gas, an evening meal, and entertainment, all courtesy of the citizens of Midland, by Heather Pregger and Diane Roderick. Had I not just told Marta I needed to stop after 12 hours on the wheel and 23 or more hours to home where I had to go straight to work, without rest. Thank you God, Deputy John McDaniel, and Midland, Texas.

We were graciously accepted by Joann Farris at the Holiday Inn, and a large delegation of fine folk: Peggy Thorsen, Dolores Higginbotham, Bill Moler, Miriam (Mim) Jones, Bob Price, Dell Hoover, Tami Wade, Diane Faulkner, Phyllis Gonzales, Nancy Getz, Gail Sussik, Anne Bechner, Clausen and Nancy Pipkin, and newspaper photographer Joe D. Williams, all of whom smothered us with brochures, certificates, welcomes, smiles, handshakes and very interesting tidbits of history. We were chauffered in a stretch limousine by Clausen and Nancy Pipken, and fed to pure, enjoyable misery by Carlos Chavez at Caramba's Spanish Inn. Having been given several choices of entertainment by Heather, Diane and Peggy Thorsen, I could not decide what we wanted to do most, and as we drove past this large group of people at the (Centennial) plaza area where different people were playing downhome bluegrass music — what I know as "a good ol' boy, jam session" — I informed the driver, "This is fine for us."

Oh! but I didn't see all the children on roller blades! Need I say who did? Alicia, our daughter, lit up like the proverbial light bulb, and was all over our two hostesses like a flea on a new puppy. We were absolutely ecstatic and humbly embarrassed (with pleasure) when two radio announcers, Robert Hallmark and Dick Baze from KCRS, and Mayor Bobby Burns pulled us in front of the town gathering and introduced us to the public, who extended the most exciting welcome.

Deputy McDaniel went far out of his way and came to our motel room for a lengthy personal visit, at my insistence and our pleasure, until we retired for the night.

Sadly enough, we awoke the next morning and the dream was over, but the memories will never be gone nor forgotten. For one night, on July 13, 1995, weary strangers on a journey were taken in by the townspeople in an area that truly knows no stranger, with open hands and hearts, given a show of love and all that is theirs for the asking.

Thank you Midland, Texas, from our hearts, for the best part of our entire vacation.

Country crooners turn to Christian themes

By Shirley Jinkins
N.Y. Times News Service

Country music. Must mean songs about cheatin' and drinkin', right?

Hardly. These days many country voices are singing about meetin' and prayin', as part of a rapidly growing format called "positive country," or "Christian country."

Who are these crooners for Christ? Some, like Susie Luchsinger, sister of Reba McEntire, are Christian-genre vocalists who can now freely exercise their country leanings.

Others, like Marty Raybon of the group Shenandoah, are doing Christian projects as a sideline to their mainstream country careers.

Still others are local musicians who find a foothold in an industry that hasn't become too intimidating.

The Christian music business as a whole has become a billion-dollar industry, and Christian country is a growing piece of it. There's even a Christian Country Music Association and magazine. But it's still far from mainstream — you can find Christian

Guys always getting blame for not listening

I had just pulled the car up to the gas pump when someone behind me honked. She was sitting in a late model minivan, sticking her head out the window, asking me if I could please pull up a little more so the gasoline hose would reach to her tank.

Patterson

Not a problem, I assured the woman, whom I had never seen before. She continued talking, saying something about how she doesn't often pump gas (of course she doesn't; pumping gas is one of those guy jobs. I think it's even in the Bible — men are supposed to be the official gas pumpers in the family).

Anyway, the woman was frantically searching for something in her purse. She poked her head back out the window and said, "Well, after all that, I can't find my credit card, so I guess I can't get gas."

I smiled politely.

Then, she stuck her head back out the window and said, "If my husband had been listening to me and put gas in like he was supposed to yesterday, this wouldn't be happening."

I smiled politely.

Then I got to thinking: Here's another case of a woman blaming something on a man just because he hasn't heard what she's said.

How many times do we have to go through this? It's not that we don't hear you, it's just that we were born with the unique ability to practice what I like to call selective listening.

Women refer to selective listening as male ignorance, or worse; we men like to call it tuning you out.

Nevertheless, as expert as we are at picking and choosing what we do and don't listen to, I have yet to find much use for selective listening.

Oh sure, it comes in handy when we're watching something important on television, but it always seems to come back to bite us in the backside later on.

For instance, if your wife one day tells you she's pregnant, but she waits until the ninth inning of an important game to tell you, your response to her big news is likely to be, "Last time I saw it, it was on top of the refrigerator."

Then, five months later, your wife may be walking around the house complaining about everything, and you my wonder what her problem is. Why is she in such a bad mood lately? Why has she been throwing up all the time? Why does it seem like she's put on some weight? (Of course, you have to wonder these things to yourself — you should never, ever ask your wife questions about her weight. Not now, not ever.)

Then, a few months after that, you may come home to find a small infant asleep in a crib you don't remember telling your wife she could buy.

If this happens, and you do find a baby in your home and don't know how it got there, don't say, "So, who are we babysitting for today?" This will make you look dumb. Instead, just say the baby's cute, and if he sticks around for any length of time, it may dawn on you that at some point a few months ago, you may not have been listening when you should've been.

Women, I think I can speak for guys most everywhere when I say that all of us are guilty of practicing the art of selective listening from time to time.

Why do we do it? Why do we not give you the courtesy of listening when you talk? Why do we hear some things and not others? Well, I think I can speak for guys most everywhere when I say, "Beats me."

DAVE BARRY

Listen up, teens: Be like the president and don't inhale

As a ranking national opinion-maker (currently in 1,539th place, between Tony Danza and Lamar Alexander), I would like to do my part for President Clinton's campaign to get teen-agers to stop smoking cigarettes. Ready? Here goes:

Barry

YOU TEEN-AGERS STOP SMOKING CIGARETTES RIGHT NOW!!

There! Did that do the trick?

I didn't think so. Your modern teen-ager is not about to listen to advice from an old person, defined as "a person who remembers when there was no Velcro."

I can understand this. I was a young person once, shortly after the polar ice caps retreated, and I distinctly recall believing that virtually all adults were clueless goobers. Exhibit A was: their hats. If you young people look at photographs taken 35 or 40 years ago, you will note that the adults, no matter how nice the weather is, are wearing major formal headgear — for the men, the serious Mr. Businessman model, the kind of hat that makes everybody who puts one on, including Boy George, look like the late Fred MacMurray; for the women, all kinds of comical, ottoman-sized fashion contraptions, sometimes festooned with enough artificial fruits and vegetables to support an artificial family of four.

We young people were not inclined to take advice from people who voluntarily looked like that. So we tended to disregard their rules, of which there were many. For example, in those days there was a rule that you absolutely had to wait for one full hour after eating before you could go swimming, because otherwise you would get a cramp and drown. This rule was strictly enforced by wristwatch-wearing moms. Apparently there was a required course in Mother School wherein leading medical authorities showed, with diagrams, that if a person were to eat a single saltine cracker, and then wait only 59 minutes before going into the water, this person would instantly cramp up and drown, even if the water were only ankle deep.

Naturally we young people broke this rule every chance we got. I will reveal here, for the first time, that on one occasion, when I was approximately 9, Neil Thompson and I ate hot dogs UNDERWATER. We survived, and we realized, as most young people realize, that we were invulnerable.

Of course, grown-ups in those days told us that we shouldn't smoke. But it was hard to take them seriously, since most of THEM smoked. Also, cigarettes were advertised on television, in commercials that stressed the amazing scientific advances that had been incorporated into modern cigarettes. For example, Parliament cigarettes had a commercial wherein perky singers informed the public that:

"Every Parliament gives you ... EXTRA MARGIN!

The filter's recessed and made to stay
A neat, clean, quarter-inch away!"

Think of it! A recessed filter! No WAY you could get cancer from a cigarette like that!

My first cigarette was a Kent (With the Micronite filter! Whatever Micronite was!). Louie Rotando gave it to me one night the summer I turned 15. Words cannot describe how cool and mature I felt, inhaling the smoke, then exhaling it through my nose, then inhaling, then exhaling, then — in a major display of mature coolness — lying down in the dirt and retching until dawn.

That was my body's way of telling me that it personally did not care for cigarettes. But I did not listen to my body: I was determined to become a smoker. My reasoning was the same then as it is for teen-agers today:

ARGUMENTS AGAINST SMOKING: It's a repulsive addiction that slowly but surely turns you into a gasping, gray-skinned, tumor-ridden invalid, hacking up brownish gobs of toxic waste from your one remaining lung.

ARGUMENTS FOR SMOKING: Other teen-agers are doing it.

Case closed! Let's light up! That's what I did, and I eventually reached the point where not only could I tolerate cigarettes, but I actually needed them so badly that if I ran out of my own, late at night in the newspaper office, I would root around in the wastebaskets and smoke stale, stinking, spit-stained butts discarded by people I didn't even like.

Of course you young smokers starting out today have years to go before you reach that level of coolness and maturity. Meanwhile, I'm sure you don't want to hear any lectures from the likes of me or President Clinton. So I'm going to just shut up now, although I imagine the president will keep pushing his anti-teen-smoking crusade until Congress passes another one of those high-impact, can't-miss federal programs. Then he can light up another one of his victory cigars. But don't worry: He won't inhale.

You might be a redneck if ...

By Celia Rivenbark
N.Y. Times News Service

A few minutes after offering to help two women stranded in the middle of a busy intersection with a crying baby and a broken-down Chevy, I started hearing the voice of comedian Jeff Foxworthy over and over in my brain.

"You might be a redneck if ..." Foxworthy begins, and audiences know they're in for a treat.

Of course, there have been times when Foxworthy's words have hit a little too close to home. Like when he says "You might be a redneck if you have to recrank your car at every intersection."

OK, so what's his point?

A lot of folks equate redneck with bigot, but this is way off the mark. So is assuming that all rednecks are Southerners. Rednecks are everywhere in this great land. As Foxworthy would say, you can recognize them 'cause they're the ones who dress up the young'uns to go to the Kmart — and they always say "the" Kmart out of respect — and I'd add that redneck women feed their babies from bottles filled with Mountain Dew.

But back to my story, which by the way, is true.

"Wanna use my phone to call somebody?" I hollered to the women.

The one with the Foxy Lady T-shirt, said "yeah" and walked over.

Her end of the conversation was brief: "It died again. Naw. Yep. Naw. We used the money for oil to buy cigarettes. Huh? Well, 'cause we didn't have any, you mo-ron."

You might be a redneck if ...

She hung up and we agreed that I'd take her to her boyfriend's house, a mile away.

"He knows a lot about cars," she said.

We pulled into the driveway and she chose this moment to say: "Well, actually, this is his girlfriend's house."

Huh-oh.

She tried to knock on the door but there was a doberman on a 2-foot chain and slobbering worse than Ol' Yeller standing guard.

You might be ...

"So, where is he?" I asked from the safety of the car.

"Well. He could be back in jail. I mean after I swore out them warrants on him and all."

How did I end up in the middle of a Ricki Lake show? Something told me she was going to call him her "old man" in a minute.

"Do you mean we're at the home of your boyfriend's new girlfriend and her psychotic doberman and you think a man you had thrown in jail for stealing your beer money is going to help you fix your girlfriend's broken-down car?"

"Yep."

"You know," she says, suddenly brightening, "when we drove up, I could've swore I saw them walking toward that service station across the highway. Wait here, and I'll go inside and get him."

Two minutes later, she jumps into my car, slams the door and folds her arms across her chest.

"What happened?"

"He said the baby ain't his."

Oh, Lord.

Forget Ricki. We've gone straight to Jerry Springer.

"I thought you were going to just ask him to help you get the car started."

Now about this time, the object of her desire, a stringy, tattooed, shirtless guy lurched out of the store, grinned drunkenly and made an obscene gesture in our direction.

My own redneck instincts kick in, and I got a wheel leaving the parking lot.

It was a good one, too.

"Let's go the the sheriff's department," she said. "I think I wanna take out some more warrants on him."

"Oh, let's not."

On the way back to the car (where, fortunately, her friend had gotten help) she prattled about warrant this and child support that and how she sure could use a cigarette. I couldn't hear her anymore. Jeff Foxworthy had crawled into my brain and was shouting reminders of ways to tell if you might be a redneck ... your mama keeps a spit cup on the ironing board ... you view duct tape as a long-term investment ... a man lights your cigarette and you show him your bra ... the kids are going hungry tonight because you just had to have those Yosemite Sam mud flaps ..."

The guy's a genius.

Laugh your way to the top: Survey says a good sense of humor can take you far

MENLO PARK, Calif. — Apparently, climbing the corporate ladder is a laughing matter, according to top executives in a new survey. More than 90 percent of respondents said they believe a good sense of humor is key for advancement.

The survey was developed by Accountemps, the world's largest temporary staffing service for accounting, finance and bookkeeping. It was conducted by an independent research firm, which polled 150 executives from the nation's 1,000 largest companies.

Executives were asked, "How important is a good sense of humor in reaching senior management levels?" Their responses:

Very important 45%
Somewhat important 46%
Not very important 6%
Not at all important 2%
Not sure/don't know 1%

"A good sense of humor helps build personal rapport and a greater spirit of cooperation," said Max Messmer, chairman of Accountemps. "When the pressure mounts and deadlines loom, humor helps diffuse tension. Individuals with a healthy sense of humor tend to work well with others — a critical management skill."

Messmer does not advise taking notes during slapstick comedies, however. "A sense of humor must be appropriate for the professional setting of an office. Low key and understated humor works best. Practical jokes and wisecracks won't take you very far, and will only harm your chances for career advancement."

Accountemps has more than 175 offices in the United States, Canada and Europe.

COUNTRY: Younger artists changing music

(From 1B)

country mostly in Christian bookstores, on Christian music radio stations and sometimes on Sunday-morning mainstream-country radio shows.

That may change, as more and more Christian stars turn to country and more country stars turn to the Gospel.

Luchsinger, her rodeo-cowboy husband, Paul, and their three children travel the rodeo circuit with their own music-and-gospel ministry. They were drawn to their Psalms Ministry, Luchsinger says, after weathering a very bad personal period in the mid-'80s.

"We knew our marriage was falling apart, and we couldn't cope with it," she said. "God showed me and Paul the way. He just began to bring counselors in our path."

Now, they try to counsel others with a need, she said.

"I don't consider myself an entertainer, but I sure like to see people laugh, cry and have fun," she said. "That's a downfall of Christian people sometimes, we're so serious."

Luchsinger, who first performed with Reba and their brother, Pake, as The Singing McEntires, went on the road with her sister for a couple of years in the early '80s simply as a job, having no starry ambitions of her own.

"I was OK as long as I was singing harmony," she said of her own stage presence, adding that she used to stutter and lisp. "I'm sure a lot of people thought, 'Reckon she can do this?'" when she began her Christian music career, she said.

Luchsinger's latest album, on the Integrity label, is "Real Love." Produced by Paul Overstreet, it's the Christian label's first country release.

For a while, Luchsinger said, the only Christian music being written was set to a light pop beat. Country was considered less than holy — after all, people danced to it.

"A lot (of songs) were Southern gospel, but that really wasn't me," Luchsinger said. "I was very grateful when Christian country stations started springing up. I've even been able to release a couple of singles to country radio. It's been really neat to realize how deep my country roots are."

Now five years into the Christian-country music fusion, younger artists are changing country.

"Country has gotten so clean, it's amazing," she said. "And boy, what a great thing to happen."

Raybon has just released his first self-titled solo album, a Christian country record that's been a four-year dream.

"I had been part of a gospel album with my two brothers back in 1979, when we played bluegrass music," he said during a record release party in Arlington, Texas, recently. "It's always been a style of music I'd always cared for, but within the last four years of coming to know Christ as lord and savior, it's become a very deep love of mine."

Though Raybon said he was "raised in and around the church, I was pretty rebellious. I was kinda like the prodigal son."

Raybon said his religious convictions don't conflict with his secular country career as a part of Shenandoah.UNDATED: of Shenandoah.

"We're Christians that sing country music," he said of Shenandoah. "It's just that we try to be bold about our witnessing. But we don't stand before people and brow-beat them."

Actually, Raybon said, the original gospel project was conceived as a group effort, but the other members of Shenandoah urged him to go ahead and proceed alone.

"There were things I felt like the Lord wanted me to say. The reason why I wanted to do this album more than anything was to be a seed to those who are lost," he said. "I wanted it to be the mainstay of the ministry that I'm in; and that is to hopefully win souls."

The solo album shouldn't be taken as a sign of anything to come, Raybon said. "I'm not planning on leaving the group Shenandoah. Where God has placed me, I feel that's my calling," he said. "We get a chance to go to a lot of places where folks would never darken the doorstep of a church."

Raybon's release will be marketed all over the Christian music spectrum, he said. "Wherever it fits, fine," he said. "'Daddy Talks to Jesus' will go to positive Christian country, 'Get Up in Jesus' Name' to Southern Gospel, and then 'The Peace of Loving You' to adult contemporary gospel."

The market's vibrancy gives new hope to two Dallas-Fort Worth Christian musicians. Maxine Sparks and her partner, Shirley Hayes, form a duo called Heart & Soul. They also operate a hair salon in Keller.

"We're more of a Christian country, and kind of soft country," Sparks said. "Christian music is just on an upswing by the beaucoups."

They're members of the Southern Gospel Association and the Christian Country Music Association. In fact, they're up for Duo of the Year, alongside Roy Rogers and Dale Evans, in the group's fall awards show.

"Is that not classic?" Sparks said with a laugh.

She explains the whole trend with an eye toward the audience.

"People are wanting to get back to some values," she said. "This running rampant isn't cutting it."

The duo has been singing together for five years. Recently they recorded their second album for the independent Circuit Rider label out of Mississippi.

"We don't do this because of some kind of ego trip or expectation of monetary gain," she said. The costs of touring and putting out product are extreme, she added. "But you get it back so many other ways."

PIANO: Even very ill respond to music

(From 1B)

Ms. Burns was inducted into the National Guild of Piano Teachers Hall of Fame in 1967 because of the musical accomplishments of many of her students. She also has been honored by the state of Texas and former Gov. Ann Richards for her service to the community.

After a lifetime of musical accomplishments, Ms. Burns uses her skill to transport her fellow senior citizens to other eras. "Music brings back happy memories," she said.

As a universal language, her music is well received, even by those less-fortunate audience members. "Even the worst Alzheimer's patients respond to music," she said.

And as something that she does well, music provides an avenue for Ms. Burns' dedication to others.

"I've been fortunate. I have good health," she said. "People don't have to just sit down and do nothing in those (later) years."

Although she has been living in Midland for the past eight years, Ms. Burns graduated from high school in Brownwood and taught piano at Howard Payne University for many years.

She has numerous grandchildren and great-grandchildren and recently returned from London, where she met her newest great-grandchild.

'I've been fortunate. I have good health. People don't have to just sit down and do nothing in those later years.'
— Ona Burns

Apart from her family, however, her passion is music. "That's what I live for," she said.

Ms. Burns especially likes teaching piano and playing music for older Midlanders.

"Sometimes it's real sad being old," she said.

"I made up my mind to live every day of my life the best that I can and be happy about it," said Ms. Burns, who lives at Trinity Towers.

One of her fans asked to hear an old song that her mother sang as she rocked her to sleep as a child. "It took me six weeks to find that song, and now I play it for her every day," Ms. Burns said.

For the younger people in her audience, Ms. Burns also keeps up with a few contemporary favorites. "I also play Willie Nelson... I have to because I taught young people," she said.

DEAR ABBY

Flash photographs capture wedding memories

By Abigail Van Buren

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: What are your feelings regarding the use of flash photography by professional photographers during a church ceremony?

Last week, I encountered a woman minister who flatly refused to permit flash photos in HER church. She insisted that it would disrupt the service.

Abby, I fully understand that a wedding should not become a circus because of guests getting up and taking pictures; however, I see no harm in one professional photographer capturing those priceless moments on film. Flash photographs are necessary to accomplish this.

The timing is thrown off for everyone, especially the caterers, if they have to wait for the wedding pictures to be taken after the ceremony. It becomes a nightmare to keep the food hot without it drying out. We are looking at 20 to 30 minutes even when things go smoothly.

The guests grow impatient and anxious to get to the reception to eat and socialize. Young children are difficult to work with when trying to re-create the wedding.

The most important factor is the loss of genuine emotions, which can't be re-created — especially in an empty church.

I don't think it's asking too much to allow flash photos of the most memorable day of the couple's lives.

My advice to couples planning a formal church wedding: Ask if flash photos will be permitted during the ceremony. If they are not, either find another church, or elope.

The clergyman should have enough generosity of spirit to want to make your wedding day one to cherish forever. What better way than photos in your wedding album to show your children and grandchildren? — "FLASH" IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

DEAR FLASH: The atmosphere in a house of worship should be authentic and natural. If photographs can be taken so that the subjects and wedding guests are not aware of it, fine. Otherwise, I agree with the minister.

DEAR ABBY: The "Cool Lady in Fort Worth," who criticized your answer about mowing lawns in the morning after 10 a.m. vs. before 9:30 a.m. because of the heat, had a point. However, she should take some heat for her solution. She said your reply "didn't have much thought to it." I don't believe she thought her answer completely through, either.

I, too, would prefer to cut my lawn before 9:30 in the morning. But I do the mowing in the late afternoon or early evening. My reason: When grass is cut, it goes into shock. If it's cut in the evening, it doesn't have to go through the heat of the day in a wounded condition. It can recover in the cool of the night.

Besides having a lush and healthy lawn, I have a healthy relationship with my neighbors, because they are not disturbed. — COOL-THINKING NEIGHBOR IN ESCONDIDO, CALIF.

DEAR NEIGHBOR: Thank you for another good suggestion. The heat I took for my answer rivals that endured by a lawn cut at high noon.

Rare amoeba disease claims sixth victim this year

DALLAS (AP) — A 6-year-old Euless girl is the latest victim of a rare type of amoeba that lives in stagnant water and, after entering the body, attacks the brain, killing its victim within days.

The death of Karli Parks is the sixth case of primary amebic meningoencephalitis reported in Texas this year, said Dale Dingley, chief parasitologist for the state health department.

"Before this year, there were never more than two annually," he said. "I don't know what that reflects."

Only 18 cases have been reported in the last 22 years, state officials said. The disease is so rare that it poses little danger to lakegoers, they said.

Karli, who vacationed Labor Day weekend with family and friends at Possum Kingdom Lake near Mineral Wells, died Tuesday at Children's Medical Center in Dallas.

E.G. White-Swift, spokesman for the Brazos River Authority, which operates Possum Kingdom, said Karli's death is the first reported incident at the lake.

The river authority frequently collects water samples for analysis, White-Swift said. But it is difficult to test for the amoeba because it is microscopic, he said.

The organization is aware of the organism's potential to show up in the lake, he said.

Dingley said the number of cases of PAM is small compared with the thousands of people who swim in state lakes.

"It's still a tragedy for the family involved, but from the standpoint of, 'Is it an epidemic?' No, it's not an epidemic," he said.

The main cause of PAM is a microscopic organism that can be found everywhere, Dingley said, adding that it becomes a problem when fresh water is warmer and there is stagnation or slow-moving conditions. It feeds on bacteria, and when the temperature rises, the bacteria multiplies, he said.

The girl's uncle, Steve Clabaugh, said his family had never heard of the amoeba, making his niece's death even more tragic.

"It was just a typical day at the lake," Clabaugh said. "We do it about every weekend. Possum Kingdom was the last place we would expect that to happen."

'Before this year, there were never more than two (cases reported) annually. I don't know what that reflects.'

— Dale Dingley, chief parasitologist for the state health department

He said they went camping Sept. 2, 3 and 4 near where the Brazos River feeds into Possum Kingdom. Karli felt fine when they left the lake, he said. But later in the week, she began to complain that she wasn't feeling well.

Karli was diagnosed with stomach flu Sept. 9, but, again, she began to get worse. Doctors at a Euless hospital identified PAM and transferred her to the Dallas hospital, where she died.

Dingley said the amoeba enters the body through the nose and makes its way up the nasal cavity and into the brain.

"There it multiplies unchecked and usually destroys the brain and results in death within nine to 10 days," he said.

Instructor finds inner-city work most rewarding

By Stefani G. Kopenec
Associated Press

DALLAS — Jacques d'Amboise has danced on stage and screen and literally around the world, but he finds his work in the inner-city the most rewarding.

Since its founding by D'Amboise in 1976, the National Dance Institute has brought the arts to almost half a million children, mostly ones from poor, urban families.

"It is the most rewarding (work), and it's not by volume," said d'Amboise, who will receive one of this year's Kennedy Center Honors for a lifetime contribution to the arts and founding the NDI. "One child that has a success makes the entire program worthwhile."

The 61-year-old New Yorker brought his talents to Dallas over the weekend in advance of an Oct. 7 performance celebrating the 20th anniversary of Anita N. Martinez Ballet Folklorico Incorporated. NDI and the ballet folklorico are collaborating on an opening number featuring up to 100 youngsters.

Phillips was warned

LINCOLN, Neb. — Star tailback Lawrence Phillips was warned by coach Tom Osborne to stay away from a University of Nebraska basketball player a few weeks before he allegedly attacked her, the Omaha World-Herald reported Sunday.

"I did tell Lawrence that if there was any trouble that he would be removed from the team," Osborne told the newspaper. He was not immediately available for comment Sunday.

Phillips, considered a Heisman Trophy contender after rushing for 359 yards and seven touchdowns in two games for the second-ranked Cornhuskers, was suspended Sept. 10 after his arrest for allegedly assaulting Kate McEwen, a 19-year-old sophomore. He has pleaded innocent to misdemeanor charges of assault, trespassing and destruction of property.

Stars win opener

DALLAS — Bob Bassen scored two goals in his Dallas debut and Mike Modano also scored twice to give the Stars a 7-3 victory over the Anaheim Mighty Ducks on Sunday in the preseason opener for both teams.

Bassen, signed as a free agent in July after playing for Quebec last season, snapped a 1-1 tie with a power-play goal at 10:40 of the second period.

Modano, coming back from an ankle injury that forced him to miss the final 14 games of last season and the playoffs, notched his second of the game at 14:46 and Bassen scored his second 20 seconds later.

Dallas sputters, beats Viks in OT

■ Dallas' offense struggles but Emmitt Smith comes through with a touchdown sprint in overtime.

By Ron Lesko
AP Sports Writer

MINNEAPOLIS — The Dallas Cowboys were good enough to win Sunday night. That just isn't good enough anymore.

After Emmitt Smith's 31-yard touchdown run in overtime game them a 23-17 victory over the Minnesota Vikings, the Cowboys blasted themselves for an effort that often was bumbling and in the end was barely enough to remain unbeaten.

"That performance out there was completely unacceptable," quarterback Troy Aikman said. "We're too talented a football team not to go out and perform better than we did.

"We know we're probably going to be favored in the rest of our games, and we probably should win each game. ... But if we start playing up and down like we did last year, we're going to run into a lot of problems."

After rolling in their first two games, that's exactly what happened to Dallas (3-0) on Sunday night.

The Cowboys are considered the favorites to go to the Super Bowl — especially after signing Deion Sanders to join them later in the season. But they missed easy kicks. They made critical turnovers. They committed untimely penalties. They gave up the tying touchdown, an 8-yard pass from Warren Moon to Cris Carter, with 30 seconds left in regulation.

And they still won.

"It was like 'Friday the 13th' or 'Halloween,' " said Smith, who gained 150 yards on 20 carries. "We did all the things we could to lose, but we have the poise to overcome it."

Although Smith scored two touchdowns and ran for 150 yards, he fumbled for the first time in 34 games, setting up Minnesota (1-2) for its first touchdown. That score, a 3-yard pass from Moon to Jake Reed for a 10-6 lead early in the second quarter, looked for much of the night like it would stand up.

Roy Barker and John Randle sacked Aikman once each after Dallas came into the game as the only team in the league not to have allowed a sack in the first two weeks.

Aikman finished 24-of-38 for 246 yards, while Moon was 22-of-38 for 185 yards. Neither was intercepted.

Chris Boniol missed the extra point after Dallas opened the scoring on Aikman's 19-yard pass to Michael Irvin in the first quarter, and Boniol was wide right on a 20-yard field goal attempt following a 45-yard run by Smith in the third quarter.

"We can sack them 100 times or have 100 interceptions, but if you don't win, you don't win," Minnesota safety Charles Mincy said. "There's no big victory in playing Dallas close."

After he was held to 27 yards in the first half, Smith came on after halftime to top 100 yards for the third game in a row, only the second time he has done that during the regular season.

Moore too much for Oilers in Brown win

HOUSTON — About the only thing that made the Cleveland Browns happy was, they left town with a victory.

Stevon Moore carried the day with three first-half interceptions, and Vinny Testaverde threw a 35-yard touchdown pass to Michael Jackson with 9: 17 to play, leading Cleveland to a 14-7 victory over the Houston Oilers Sunday.

"I thought we got outplayed, but the bottom line is what's on the scoreboard," Browns defensive end Rob Burnett said. "Defense, that's the strength of our team. We've got big shoulders, we can handle it."

Moore picked off three passes from backup quarterback Will Furrer in the first half, helping the Browns to a 7-0 lead on Testaverde's 15-yard touchdown pass to Keenan McCardell.

Moore set up that touchdown with an 8-yard interception to the Oilers 28. His first interception stopped a drive at the Browns 22, and he also grabbed a deflected pass for an interception at the Cleveland 1.

"We got out with a win," Cleveland coach Bill Belichick said.

The Oilers (1-2) tied it with Furrer's 4-yard touchdown pass to Haywood Jeffires, who made a leaping catch with defender Don Griffin hanging on his waist with 2: 43 gone in the fourth quarter.

Senior Women open tourney at Ranchland

■ Some of the best senior women players in West Texas golf compete this week in Midland.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Sports Writer

For only the second time since its inception in Odessa in 1978, the Senior Women's West Texas Golf Association Amateur Championship is being hosted by a Midland golf course.

Ranchland Hills Country Club is the site of the 17th annual match-play tournament pitting the 72 best senior (50-plus) women golfers in West Texas. Qualifying for the championship flight (18 and under handicaps) is today at 9 a.m.

The actual tournament begins on Tuesday with match play beginning at 8: 30 a.m. Rounds on Wednesday and Thursday, the final, also begin at 8: 30 a.m. An awards luncheon is scheduled for 1: 30 p.m. on Thursday.

Five years after Midland hosted its first tournament — it was held at Green Tree Country Club in 1990 — Andrews' native LaNell Guelker is poised to win a sixth-straight title.

Guelker won her first title at Green Tree and has since won titles at San Angelo Country Club in 1991, Holiday Hills Country Club in Mineral Wells in 1992, her own Andrews Country Club in 1993 and an unprecedented

Sanders' fumble lifts Cardinals

The Cardianls' Lorenzo Lynch rips the ball away from Detroit running back Barry Sanders Sunday in a move that led to Arizona's first win.

The Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — It simply doesn't happen. Barry Sanders does not fumble. Yet, he did, and it cost the Detroit Lions a game they couldn't afford to lose.

Sanders's first fumble in three seasons set up Arizona's final scoring drive, and the Cardinals rallied from 11 points back to beat the Detroit Lions 20-17 Sunday.

Sanders had carried the ball 803 times without a mistake. He had not fumbled since Dec. 6, 1992, in a game against the Green Bay Packers at Milwaukee.

■ NFL Roundup

"When I run, I expect to hang onto the ball," Sanders said in the shockingly silent Detroit dressing room. "Those things are going to happen, interceptions, fumbles. I definitely could have picked a better time, but I don't always make those decisions."

Dave Krieg passed to Anthony Edwards with 2: 31 remaining for the go-ahead score. The second fumble by Sanders ended the Lions' last chance.

"I was so happy every time we tackled him that the fumbles were just a bonus," said Cardinals coach Buddy Ryan, who dodged his second straight 0-3 start. "Tackling that kid is like trying to tackle a runaway balloon."

Gordon doesn't show pressure in MBNA 500 win

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

DOVER, Del. — Jeff Gordon says he's content to take whatever comes his way on the racetrack.

That's easy to say when you're leading the season points competition by a wide margin and riding a string of 12 straight top-10 finishes.

The 24-year-old wunderkind, showing absolutely no signs that he feels any pressure in the midst of his first Winston Cup championship battle, led 400 of 500 laps, including the final 198, on the way to an easy victory Sunday in the MBNA 500 at Dover Downs International Speedway.

Gordon's only challenge in the race on the one-mile concrete oval came from Bobby Hamilton, who came up short by 2.34 seconds — about 10 car-lengths — but did give car owner Richard Petty the team's best finish since Petty himself drove to a second place in 1987.

"We're content with whatever we get," Gordon said after delivering his series-leading seventh victory of the season and ninth of his budding stock car career. "We

NFL: 49ers start slow, finish fast in 28-3 win over New England

(From 1C)

rivals, the Oakland Raiders.

James Hasty returned an interception 64 yards for a touchdown 4:27 into overtime to lift the Chiefs to a 23-17 victory Sunday.

"We've raised the ticket prices, people have to get their money's worth," Chiefs coach Marty Schottenheimer said a week after his team scored twice in the final minutes last week to tie the Giants before winning in OT.

"But I don't know if I can take 20 games at this pace."

The Raiders (2-1) led 17-7 entering the fourth period, but suddenly fell apart, losing for the eighth straight time at Arrowhead Stadium and the 11th time in their last 12 games with the Chiefs.

49ers 28, Patriots 3

SAN FRANCISCO — Steve Young turned his duel with Drew Bledsoe into a one-sided affair with plenty of help from his defense.

Young threw three touchdown passes and ran for another score as San Francisco dominated New England and left Bledsoe still looking for his first TD pass of the season.

Bledsoe was sacked four times and missed a series in the first half with a sore left shoulder after being hit by linebacker Ken Norton while throwing. He also fumbled after being sacked by Lee Woodall and was intercepted twice by Merton Hanks, ending second-half drives that had advanced to at least the San Francisco 25.

Woodall came up with a third interception of Bledsoe with just under eight minutes remaining, setting up Young's 3-yard touchdown pass to Derek Loville with 5:33 remaining.

Broncos 38, Redskins 31

DENVER — The king of comebacks did it again Sunday.

John Elway threw a 43-yard touchdown pass to rookie Rod Smith on the final play of the game and gave Denver a victory over stunned Washington.

With the game about ready to go into overtime tied 31-31, Elway took the snap on a fourth down with 6 seconds left. He dropped back, then stepped up to avoid the rush and found Smith at the goal line. He leaped and beat the Redskins' Darrell Green to the ball.

The 35-year-old Elway now has his the 35th fourth-quarter comeback of his career.

Brian Mitchell's kick returns and Gus Frerotte's three TD passes pulled the Redskins (1-2) into a tie, but the Broncos went 80 yards in eight plays in the final 67 seconds to steal the game.

Chargers 27, Eagles 21

PHILADELPHIA — Junior Seau and Andre Coleman proved to be the problem for Philadelphia, not Randall Cunningham.

Seau scored on a 29-yard fumble return and Coleman returned a punt 88 yards for a score as San Diego rallied from a 14-0 deficit with a 17-point explosion in a 3:11 span for a victory over the Eagles.

The big plays by the Chargers (2-1), which came at the end of the second period and the start of the third, turned the game around and gave the Chargers control with a 24-14 lead.

Cunningham, benched last week amid trade rumors, played well enough to keep his job, completing 23 of 40 for 196 yards and three touchdowns. He did leave the game for one play after being sacked by Shawn Lee in the third quarter.

Bills 20, Colts 14

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Jim Kelly bounced back from the worst game of his career and directed Buffalo on two first-half touchdown drives as the Bills held off Indianapolis.

Kelly, directing the no-huddle offense, completed 19 of 35 passes for 201 yards and surpassed 30,000 career passing yards with a 15-yard completion to tight end Lonnie Johnson in the third quarter. Last week, he completed a career-low four passes in a victory over Carolina.

With the score tied 14-all, Steve Christie's 35-yard field goal with 7:10 left in the third quarter gave the Bills the lead. Christie added a 38-yarder with 4:27 left after a penalty wiped out a previous miss.

Rams 31, Panthers 10

CLEMSON, S.C. — The coming-out party for one of the NFL's new teams turned into another celebration for the league's youngest team.

St. Louis spoiled Carolina's inaugural home game by forcing seven Panther turnovers and turning four of those into 24 points.

A crowd of 54,060 watched the game in the 76,000-seat Memorial Stadium on the campus of Clemson University, about 145 miles from Charlotte.

The Rams are 3-0 for the first time since 1989, which also was the last year the franchise made the playoffs. NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue saw the expansion Panthers fall to 0-3.

Falcons 27, Saints 24, OT

NEW ORLEANS — Morten Andersen kicked the winning field goal at the Superdome, just as he had done so many times in the past. This time, however, his 21-yarder gave Atlanta an overtime victory against New Orleans.

Andersen, who now has 22 game-winning field goals in his career, made the winning kick eight times for the Saints (0-3) against the Falcons before jumping to the NFC West rival prior to training camp in a salary dispute.

Atlanta (2-1) set up the overtime when another former Saint, Craig Heyward, pounded in for an 8-yard touchdown in the fourth quarter and Jeff George hit Terance Mathis in the end zone for the two-point conversion to tie it at 24.

George was sacked seven times, including once when he had to be helped from the field in the fourth quarter. He completed 26 of 39 for 286 yards and two touchdowns and was intercepted twice.

Packers 14, Giants 6

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Brett Favre was good enough in the first half, and that's all he and Green Bay needed against New York.

Favre threw touchdown passes to Mark Ingram and Robert Brooks and the Packers' defense made it stand up Sunday in a 14-6 victory over the winless Giants. The loss marked the first time coach Dan Reeves has started a season 0-3.

Even though Favre was shut down in the second half, the Giants' bumbling offense rarely threatened, although they had a chance at the end. Dave Brown brought the Giants to the Packers' 22, but Mike Prior's interception with 15 seconds left sealed the victory for Green Bay (2-1).

Favre finished 14 of 25 for 141 yards and no interceptions.

New York failed to cash in on several big breaks in the fourth quarter and Reeves lost a gamble by calling an onsides kick with 3:16 and all three timeouts remaining.

Jets 27, Jaguars 10

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — They promised everyone they were the new New York Jets. On Sunday, it was the newcomers, with a lot of help from Boomer Esiason, who led the Jets to a rout of Jacksonville.

After being blown out in their opener and blowing a big lead last week, the Jets (1-2) found someone they could handle for 60 minutes in the expansion Jaguars (0-3).

The victory snapped New York's seven-game losing streak, dating to last season and ended coach Rich Kotite's nine-game slide, also dating to 1994, when he coached the Philadelphia Eagles.

Esiason found rookie Wayne Chrebet for a touchdown on the first drive of the game, then connected with rookie Kyle Brady for another score on their opening series of the second half.

Bears 25, Buccaneers 6

TAMPA, Fla. — "A New Day in Tampa Bay" looked a lot like the old.

Chicago ruined the Buccaneers' home opener under new management, intercepting two passes and blocking a punt within a two-minute span of the third quarter to pull away to a victory.

Jeremy Lincoln returned one of the interceptions 32 yards to set up Robert Green's 7-yard touchdown run. Anthony Marshall blocked Reggie Roby's punt four plays later, picked up the ball and ran 11 yards for a TD that broke open the game slightly three minutes into the second half.

Chicago (2-0), which led 9-3 at halftime, has outscored opponents 50-6 in the third and fourth quarters of its three games. The Bears had four interceptions and sacked Trent Dilfer twice before Tampa Bay coach Sam Wyche benched the second-year pro with 10 minutes remaining.

Seahawks 24, Bengals 21

SEATTLE — Seattle found some offense and finally gave Dennis Erickson his first NFL victory.

Held to a pair of touchdowns in their first two games, the Seahawks used Rick Mirer's passing and Chris Warren's running to defeat the previously unbeaten Bengals.

The Seahawks had 406 yards on offense, their highest total since they had 490 on Dec. 18, 1988, in a 43-37 win over the Los Angeles Raiders.

Seattle hung on to win when Doug Pelfrey missed a 49-yard field goal in the closing minutes.

Mirer, who had the AFC's second-worst quarterback rating of 49.8 in Seattle's 0-2 start, completed 21 of 30 passes for 279 yards and two touchdowns with one interception.

OILERS: Furrer booed in first half of Houston loss

(From 1C)

Testaverde, who hit only 2-of-11 first half passes, needed only three minutes to give the lead back to the Browns.

He set up the score with a 29-yard pass to Keenan McCardell to the Oilers 36 and finished the game hitting 10 of 23 passes for 147 yards and two touchdowns.

Furrer, making his second NFL start, was booed in the first half but wound up completing 22 of 41 passes for 258 yards and four interceptions as a replacement for starter Chris Chandler, sidelined with a bruised left shoulder.

"The interceptions were a hard problem," Furrer said. "But today, like other games, it seems to be one one play or one series we'll have one guy break down, the quarterback, a guard or receiver.

"It's easy for you guys to get frustrated for us saying we're close, but we see the tape and we know."

The Browns (2-1) came into the game hoping to victimize Houston's ailing defense that played without starting middle linebacker Al Smith and free safety Marcus Robertson.

Instead, Moore picked on Furrer.

"They say sometimes things come in bunches," Moore said. "The interceptions were great hustle plays on my part. That's what the defense is supposed to do, get points off turnovers."

The Browns used Moore's second interception of the game to set up Testaverde's 15-yard touchdown pass to McCardell, who got behind safety Chuck Cecil and cornerback Cris Dishman in the end zone with 1:41 gone in the second quarter.

Moore's third theft was the most spectacular. Griffin deflected the ball away from receiver Chris Sanders, and Moore grabbed it at the Browns 1-yard line with 8:55 to go in the half.

Linebacker Mike Caldwell got the fourth pick, ending the first half as Furrer threw into a crowd at the Browns' goal line.

Oilers coach Jeff Fisher said he made a game-time decision to start Furrer instead of Chandler.

"We felt a 100 percent Furrer was better than a banged up Chandler," Fisher said. "He did good job of moving our team. He threw the interceptions but thought he did the good job executing."

GOLF: Robinson likes Guelker's chances

(From 1C)

fifth last year in Fort Stockton.

SWWTGA President Mary Robinson, who makes her home at Ranchland, said Guelker is probably the favorite to again take the title.

"She just won this tournament we had out here today," said Robinson on Thursday after Guelker won the Winnie Van Landingham tournament at RHCC by 10 strokes.

Guelker, while not the only multiple winner of the tournament, certainly leads the list. Ruby Holmes of Amarillo's Tascosa Country Club has won four titles including the inaugural in 1979. She also won in 1981, 1983 and 1987.

Behind Holmes is Tascosa member Jimmie Smith, who must have put up a great battle with Holmes in the early days of the event. Smith won the 1980 and 1982 titles, alternating with Holmes.

Nancy Swann of Odessa Country Club was the first other than Holmes or Smith to win a title when she won in 1984. Betty Brack of Granbury won the 1985 title while Juanita Jones of Amarillo Country Club was the winner in 1986.

Jean Abbott of the Sunset Country Club in Sunset won the 1988 title while Odessa Country Club's Luisa Searls was the last winner in 1989 before Guelker began her streak.

Golfers from 25 members clubs ranging from Amarillo, Granbury, Wichita Falls and Fort Stockton submitted entries.

"We had 109 entries and we have a field of 72 so 37 didn't get in," said Robinson, who had the highest gross score of RHCC members playing in Thursday's tournament. "We still have 30 on the waiting list."

Next year the tournament will be in Pampa before coming back to the Permian Basin for the 1997 tournament hosted by The Club at Mission Dorado, the site of the Nike Permian Basin Open professional tournament.

SMITH: Cowboys keep miscues coming in overtime win

(From 1C)

His 2-yard dive and Aikman's conversion pass to Jay Novacek — Dallas' first 2-point conversion since the rule was instated last year — put Dallas up 17-10 with 9:57 left in the fourth quarter.

But Dallas kept the miscues coming.

Aikman fumbled a snap with 7:05 left in regulation, but consecutive sacks by Charles Haley — he had two for the second game in a row — and Leon Lett forced Minnesota to punt. The Vikings got the ball back, though, and this time the Dallas defense couldn't preserve the lead.

Moon threw passes of 21 and 24 yards to Reed to set up his TD pass to a diving Carter with 30 seconds to play to send the game to overtime.

But the Cowboys won the toss and needed just five plays to win the game.

Smith broke through a huge hole on the left side and outran Mincy to the end zone marker just 2:26 into overtime.

"We got beat by probablility, I guess," said Minnesota running back Robert Smith, referring to the overtime coin flip. "I thought we had some momentum at the end when we scored, but it wasn't quite enough."

GORDON: Hendrick team has dominated 1995 season

just go out there and do the best we can do every week."

That's probably understating the case since Gordon's Hendrick Motorsports team has thoroughly dominated the 1995 season, building a 309-point lead over seven-time Winston Cup champion Dale Earnhardt with six races remaining.

"We're not going to get into all that stuff about points," Gordon said with a grin. "There's a lot of races left and anything can happen. We'll just have to wait until November and see how the points stack up."

Noting that he put a little more distance between himself and Earnhardt in the title fight, Gordon said, "That's what it takes to win championships, having cars that finish races, and these suckers just keep running."

Earnhardt, who came into the 25th event of the 31-race season trailing Gordon by 279 points, finished fifth, but lost another 30 points.

"I hate to see Gordon win another one, but he's strong this year and he's got everything going his way," Earnhardt said.

Rusty Wallace, who had to start from the back of the field after wrecking his primary car Saturday in practice, drove his backup Ford Thunderbird to third place, followed by the Chevys of Joe Nemechek, Earnhardt and Sterling Marlin, the only other drivers on the lead lap.

Gordon averaged 127.740 mph, the second-fastest race in Dover history, and added $74,655 to his more than $2 million in season earnings.

People Meeting People ads are available to single adults 18 years of age and over seeking personal relationships with other singles. In addition, there are other categories for people who might be looking for a sports partner, a theatre partner, or someone to share a common interest. The Publisher reserves the right to edit an ad and monitor or reject any greeting. Ads that are offensive or in poor taste will not be accepted. No one may leave a last name, telephone number or address in a print ad or greeting. Responses are not monitored by the Publisher and screening of responses is solely the responsibility of the advertiser. People who place or respond to ads in People Meeting People do so at their own risk and are encouraged to take precautions before arranging a face-to-face meeting. It is strongly recommended for your safety that you conduct initial meetings in public areas or in a small group setting. The Publisher, and its affiliates, does not investigate and takes no responsibility for claims made in advertisements, replies or recorded messages, and specifically decline all liability for any actions of advertisers or respondents.

The Midland office of Smith Barney will present "Estate Planning and Estate Preservation" on Wednesday from 7 to 9:30 p.m. at the Plaza Club.

Who needs a degree?

Canadian Business magazine notes in its September issue that some of the business world's most successful people never graduated from college, including Microsoft Corp. Chairman Bill Gates and Seagram Co. Ltd. Chairman Edgar Bronfman Jr. The Bank of Montreal's CEO, Matthew Barrett, and Alan Taylor, who quit as chairman of the Royal Bank of Canada earlier this year, never went past high school. But Taylor told the magazine young people shouldn't expect to go that far on so little education today. At big companies, "you are immediately up against people who have MBAs or other degrees. That is competition I didn't have," he said.

Car shopping

Buying a car is a serious business to most men, finds the market research firm J.D. Power in a survey for Men's Health magazine. Forty-eight percent of the survey respondents said they spent between three weeks and three months just thinking about a new vehicle before they even set foot in a dealer's showroom. Another 26 percent spent three months or more pondering their move. By the time they make it to the dealership, 41 percent decided on the make of the vehicle. And 80 percent said they test-drove the car they bought.

On-job juggling

The days when office workers answered to one boss are disappearing. Administrative assistants today are working for an average of four executives, finds OfficeTeam, an employment concern. A survey of human resource managers commissioned by OfficeTeam found that a big reason why administrative assistants are serving so many bosses at once is that technology now allows managers to do work that their support staff did in the past, such as typing business correspondences. Moreover, "technology has made administrative assistants much more efficient in their jobs — and the increased productivity is enabling them to support more managers and take on more varied duties," said OfficeTeam Executive Director Andrew Denka.

Employers offer legal help as benefits option

By Rachel Beck
AP Business Writer

85 million are covered through an employer-sponsored legal package; some companies cover entire work force at no charge.

NEW YORK — Shirley Paslay walked out on her husband in 1987 and thought she would never look back. But years later, after finding happiness in a new marriage, she was still battling her former mate in court over the custody of their three children.

It could have been incredibly expensive, but Paslay found help through a legal services plan offered in her AT&T employee benefits package. At no cost to her, Paslay had access to full range of legal options, including a lawyer to handle her case.

"I felt more confident and secure that I had a lawyer in this situation, and the fact that I did gave me some leverage with my ex," the AT&T sales representative said.

Just as health maintenance organizations, or HMOs, became a part of corporate America over the past decade, company-offered legal plans are gaining popularity as employee benefits.

Eighty-five million people, including covered spouses and dependents, are eligible for such legal services, up from 15 million in 1985, according to the National Resource Center for Consumers of Legal Services in Gloucester, Va.

Some companies automatically cover their entire work force at no charge, often as part of a union bargaining agreement. While each group plan varies, many include toll-free hotlines that give employees 24-hour access to legal advice, as well as a specified number of visits to a lawyer free of charge. They might also get discounts on fees.

Other employers offer legal care as an option on their "cafeteria plans," a list of benefits which workers choose from depending on their personal needs. The company or the individual usually pays a monthly fee of about $8 to $20 for this service, better known as prepaid legal care.

"Our employees get a certain amount of money each year, based on years of service, that they can put towards their benefits plan," said Linda Ulrey, a spokeswoman for Cincinnati-based Procter & Gamble Co. "We offer a list of options — including dependent care, vision care and elder care — and about one in 10 of our employees go for the legal care option annually."

Pepsico Inc., The Washington Post Co. and Microsoft Corp. are among the other big companies that offer prepaid legal care as an employee option.

"Prepaid legal care is easy for employers to administer, and their employees like it because of the protection it gives them," said Alec Schwartz, executive director of the American Prepaid Legal Services Institute, an affiliate of the American Bar Association. "That's why the prepaid sector is really growing right

As head of PC Connection, Patricia Gallup has proven her worth as computer magnate and visionary.

Computer visionary makes millions

Patricia Gallup has taken a company worth $233,000 in 1982 and turned it into a $300 million operation today

By Hillary Chura
AP Business Writer

MILFORD, N.H. — Even when she takes time off, Patricia Gallup produces.

As co-founder and chief executive of one of the nation's largest technology mail-order companies, PC Connection, Gallup dislikes down time. When she finally eased up and did a little Irish folk dancing five years ago, she met the man she would marry.

But wedding vows this summer didn't dampen Gallup's enthusiasm for work. She and her husband honeymooned at a company dinner in Ohio.

"I work all the time. That's a sacrifice. I'm not complaining, but you have to make choices, and that is the choice I made," she said. "I don't like to have a lot of free time."

Even PC Connection's foundation was laid when Gallup was supposed to be taking it easy.

In 1982, she met David Hall while hiking the Appalachian Trail. She joined his family's audio business in Marlow. They anticipated the personal computer boom and soon started selling software and eventually hardware.

They did not want to move from rural Marlow, population 655, but Government: Impossible assignment?

By John Cunniff
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — The issue of government spending and how to restrain it may not just concern cutting the old but avoiding the new.

That much is well understood and widely approved, if you can judge by the popular commentary about getting government off the taxpayer's back, and by congressional rhetoric, which is filled with promises to do so.

The problem, however, is translating approval and understanding into legislative action.

At that point, opportunities for restraint seem to evaporate like steam from a kettle, while obstacles condense into impenetrable clouds that confuse the issues and thwart those good intentions

Government, one sometimes is inclined to conclude, must grow in order to show it is governing. The evidence seems to lead to that conclusion.

Once begun, for example, initiatives beget more. Regulations sire regulations. Laws expand through interpretation and efforts to clarify. Bureaucrats seek to protect their turf by adding more.

Such growth usually seems reasonable at the time, as in the proposal by Secretary of Labor Robert Reich to "target" private pension fund investments toward public goals rather than the presumably limited goals of the savers.

As Reich explains it, "economically targeted investments," or ETIs, would benefit not only the workers who amassed the funds, but would have "ancillary" or "collateral" benefits for the economy as a whole.

Such targeting, Reich explained, would not subordinate profit to social concerns, but instead confer additional, more widespread benefits on society. Investment decisions, he said, would remain the right of fund officials.

The proposal has provoked as many questions as reasons for protest. One example suggests the rest: Who will decide what is economically worthwhile vs. what is socially or financially responsible?

The fact is, laws now require that trustees of pension funds, as well as other fiduciaries, act prudently in their investments so that the best interests of the beneficiaries are served.

To believe that the already risky job of investing for safety and profit would not be made more risky by adding broader requirements is to ignore the realities. Multiple goals can evolve into conflicting, offsetting results.

For home businesses, software is deductible

By Pamela Yip
N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — If you've been having fits trying to get through the glitches in Microsoft's superhyped Windows 95 software, there's good news and more bad news.

The good news is that if you are self-employed and mainly use your computer for your business, the cost of Windows 95 is tax deductible.

The bad news is that excludes many people who don't have their own business, and it's not much of a deduction. And even this small deduction requires some long-winded explanations of the rules.

The fine print in the tax law requires you to depreciate computer software over 36 months. But the Internal Revenue Service isn't likely to challenge you if you expense the cost of Windows 95, which generally retails for about $89.

"IRS guidelines typically require taxpayers to amortize software over three years, but the record-keeping for that is probably more of a hassle than just expensing it," said Paul Mueller, a partner at Mann Frankfort Stein & Lipp in Houston, an accounting firm. "But in view of (Windows 95's) relatively minor costs, most tax practitioners (feel) that you can expense it."

Taking a $30-a-year deduction over three years even strikes IRS officials as too much trouble.

"Hell, no, it's just too small," said Steve Yost, spokesman for the IRS in Houston. "That would be akin to filling out a loan application at your neighborhood bank to buy a TV dinner."

This approach of expensing costs still may be the way to go even if you bought a suite of software programs costing $500.

"The IRS probably won't challenge you on that," Yost said. It's not just the dollar figure that the IRS would be interested in. The big question is, is your computer expense a lot higher than average for similar businesses?

The major reason you depreciate costs is to spread your tax bills out over several years, especially if your new busi-

It's been a long losing streak for inflation investments

By Chet Currier
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — The 1990s, like the 1980s before them, are turning out to be hard times for fans of inflation-hedge investments.

While stocks, bonds and mutual funds are booming, the performance of these alternatives — ranging from gold and silver to real estate and collectibles — has been spotty at best.

Considering for how many years now they have been chalking up disappointments, it's no wonder if their boosters' patience is starting to run out.

Through the first seven months of this year, for instance, mutual funds that invest in precious metals stocks struggled to a total return of 4.64 percent, according to Morningstar Inc. in Chicago.

That represented less than one-eighth of the gains racked up by technology stock funds, which returned 39.73 percent.

Over the first half of the '90s, reports the investment firm of Salomon Bros. Inc., stocks and bonds each produced average annual returns of better than 11 percent, while housing returned 2.5 percent and gold 1.1 percent.

After the 1970s, when inflation frequently hit double-digit annual rates, the rationale for investing in precious metals or land or antiques or baseball cards seemed to be firmly established.

The U.S. government, like a lot of other governments past and present, was demonstrating consistently that it was unable to live within its fiscal means, and would keep debasing the currency by printing more dollars to cover its debts.

Accordingly, investors wanted to own things that would hold their value by increasing in price as the purchasing power of a dollar declined. One study illustrated this point by now."

LEGAL: Group plans popular with lawyers

About 10 companies provide the legal care for the nation's corporations. In many cases, these providers developed as outgrowths of insurance companies or law firms.

While each provider has its own method of administering its services, most generally mimic the way HMOs are run. Participants have access to the legal services provided by a network of lawyers. Real estate closings, divorces, custody battles, wills and estates are all covered, while legal action against the employer and criminal defense are not.

"Each customer will use the service for something different in their lives, but on an average, anyone who is signed up will use the plan 1.3 times a year," said Steven Leaman, senior vice president of marketing for Hyatt Legal Plans Inc. in Cleveland. "Things are coming up all the time, and people like it because they are covered."

Hyatt, one of the largest providers in the nation, has seen its business grow about 20 percent each year, with over 1 million people currently under its plan, Leaman said.

Others, too, report a growth spurt since the start of the 1990s, as more companies broadened their benefits packages. Prudential LegalCare, a unit of Newark, N.J.-based Prudential Insurance Co. of America and Midwest Legal Services, based in Des Moines, Iowa, said demand for their services has recently increased.

"Many employers are looking to enhance their plans and they see that this is an easy thing to install in their benefits packages," said Todd Ruopp, marketing manager at Midwest.

As the market widens, more lawyers are being recruited to join legal services networks. An estimated 20,000 to 22,000 attorneys currently participate in some type of program, Schwartz said.

Ronald Glantz, a lawyer in Plantation, Fla., joined a legal services network in 1983, mostly for the referrals. Today, Glantz is the managing partner of Glantz & Glantz P.A., a firm that specializes in prepaid legal care. It has two Florida offices and eight attorneys serving 13,000 eligible clients.

"This whole concept is riding on the fact that people can't normally afford an attorney, especially at the cost of $200-$250 a hour," he said. "But these programs let clients call up and run something by us. It's in the client's best interest to use preventive care."

Unlike doctors, who balked at the transition to managed health care, lawyers generally have been open to group legal plans. Such services guarantee a steady income in the highly competitive legal marketplace.

"It's a good deal for the lawyers, mainly because it is a fixed income that they can depend on," said L.O. Buzz Heidtke, president of Heidtke & Co. investment brokers in Nashville. "It also can get a network new clients that they would have never gotten otherwise."

Attorney Martin Cowen, who is part of Prudential's legal network, believes that such programs also alleviate the fears many people have about using a lawyer.

"Eighty percent of the population has had no dealings with a lawyer," said Cowen, a partner at Slavitt, Fish & Cowen in Newark, N.J. These plans "look to involve people with lawyers" and give them access to an attorney at a nominal cost.

And as more people become comfortable with lawyers, the legal profession will see some much needed income growth, he said.

Still, there is a long way to go before most of the country has access to such legal services through their jobs.

According to a 1994 survey of 489 companies nationwide by Hewitt Associates, a benefits consulting firm based in Lincolnshire, Ill., only 4 percent of employers offered employee legal care last year. That number is expected to reach 10 percent within three years.

Prepaid Legal Services Inc. has capitalized on the slow corporate growth by marketing its legal plan to individual clients.

"Two-thirds of all of our enrollees are individuals," said Harland Stonecipher, chairman and chief executive officer of the Ada, Okla.-based company. "We are finding a lot of success in that because people like the security of knowing they have a lawyer."

This idea of having a lawyer on hand "in case" is attracting more and more people to sign up for legal care programs.

"It was easy and I didn't have to worry," said Debra Andersen, who used her plan to close on a new home in Austin, Texas. "That made it worth it to me."

INFLATION: Rates have further discouraged gold

(From 4C)

showing that the price of a troy ounce of gold kept pretty good pace with the price tag on a good-quality business suit, through all the ups and downs of the consumer price index.

Well, Uncle Sam has consistently run budget deficits ever since then. Yet inflation has subsided dramatically, under the pressure of a combination of forces in the economy, the bond market and the monetary policies of the Federal Reserve Board.

One key development was a change in interest rates, which rose through the '70s but stayed relatively low in comparison to the inflation rate.

With the arrival of the '80s, interest rates began a long-term decline, but were relatively high in comparison to inflation.

"This set of conditions is tailor-made for stocks, bonds and even short-term money market investments," says Gary Schlossberg, senior economist at Wells Fargo Bank in San Francisco.

Meanwhile, he adds, "disinflation has hurt tangible investments by eliminating the need for an inflation hedge. High inflation has been the missing ingredient for a big rally in gold prices during the frequent bouts of currency turbulence in the past few years.

"Relatively high interest rates, compared to inflation, have further discouraged gold and other tangible investments by raising the cost of borrowing to stockpile or speculate in commodities."

Right now, it's clearly easier to make a case for something like gold as an underpriced investment than it is for stocks or bonds, which look precariously high to many observers.

But the impulse to hunt for bargains in tangibles has gone unrewarded time after time over the past 15 years. Schlossberg says it is important to note that there is no sign of a change in the conditions that have favored financial investments.

"The Fed appears intent on preventing a buildup of price pressures by keeping interest rates high relative to inflation," he says. "Until the economic environment changes, in response to more accommodative policies or a shock to the system, financial assets are likely to lead the pack."

SOFTWARE: Deductions are benefit of self-employment

(From 4C)

ness is still struggling to turn a profit.

"You will probably have less income in the early years and so to maximize your tax benefits, (you depreciate costs) as opposed to trying to take it all in one year," Yost said.

These deductions are among the benefits of being your own boss.

If you work for a company, you may deduct the cost of software you bought only if it's required to perform your job and if your employer didn't reimburse you for it. You enter those expenses under "Un-reimbursed employee expenses (line 20)" on Schedule A for itemized deductions that you attach to the 1040 tax form.

But make sure you have enough deductions to itemize; otherwise, you're better off taking the standard deduction.

You'd be better off taking the standard deduction if that amount is more than the total of your allowable itemized deductions.

A self-employed person, however, can add the cost of Windows 95 to his expenses on IRS Schedule C, "Profit or Loss From Business," for sole proprietorships.

"It allows you to list all the business expenses you've incurred that are deductible," Yost said.

That includes long-distance charges on calls you've made to Microsoft for help on getting Windows 95 to work properly and the cost of buying one of the many books that tells you how to work Windows 95. You also list those costs on Schedule C.

But employees of companies would put those costs on Schedule A.

As with all tax breaks you take, maintain good records in case the IRS challenges you. Deductions have got to reflect the percentage of time the computer is used for business and pleasure, Yost said. "You've got to pretty much say, 'I spent 75 percent of the time doing business stuff on this computer. The other 25 percent is personal.'"

While percentage of business use is an intangible thing to prove, there are ways to come close to it.

For instance, keep a log of when you sign on to use your software for business.

"Make sure any type of file and work you're doing is all related to your business," said Marty Bush, a tax attorney and head of the content development team at CCH Inc. in Riverwoods, Ill., which provides tax and legal information to businesses and professionals.

Or keep a business contract you have with a client that spells out what your client is paying you and for what services.

GALLUP: Mail-order helped business first expand

(From 4C)

they knew the town, a two-hour drive from Boston, could not support a computer store.

So Gallup and Hall opened a mail-order company to sell other people's products.

They invested $8,000, took out a two-by-three inch advertisement in a computer magazine called Byte and waited. The telephone started ringing three days after the magazine came out and hasn't stopped.

Sales blossomed from $233,000 in 1982 to $300 million today. PC Connection takes orders as late as 3 a.m. for delivery by noon.

"We wanted to offer the convenience of a computer store that was just around the corner to everybody in the United States," Gallup said.

The company is one of New Hampshire's largest private employers, with 750 workers.

Gallup and Hall each own half of PC Connection. She would not discuss their net worth, but noted distributors receive marginal profit on computers and software. She said the company reinvests extra revenue.

But money is not why Gallup is in the business. She relishes participating in a technology that will make workers more productive and "change the way people think and do business."

The daughter of a union organizer, Gallup does not like corporate hierarchy and knew the names of all her employees until the payroll topped 450. PC Connection built homes during the 1980s real estate boom and sold them to its workers at cost. The company donates 1 percent of its profits to local charities, such as baseball teams and the United Way, and it gave the Marlow area money for an ambulance.

Gallup measures her words. She hesitates about discussing her personal life, and when asked about it, speaks in terms of her company — waking at 3 a.m. with ideas that keep her up, as well as failing to remember the last time she spent a whole week not working or thinking about it.

She said she does not regret working so much or that she didn't marry until this summer at age 41. The newlyweds honeymooned sea kayaking in Maine and then flew to a company dinner in Wilmington, Ohio, where the company has a shipping operation that relies on Airborne Express.

Duty and responsibility long have been with Gallup. As a child, she baby-sat to help with family expenses.

Texas Tech's Byron Hanspard runs around Missouri linebacker Darryl Chatman (43) Saturday night. The Red Raiders got an early look at Big 12 competition with a 41-14 win.

Tech welcomes Big Eight punching bag

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Tech was the first Southwest Conference team to get a taste of one of its future Big 12 mates, and it welcomed traditional Big Eight punching bag Missouri with open arms.

■ SWC Notebook

"This is no time for us to become divided as a football team," Missouri coach Larry Smith said. "We can't feel sorry for ourselves."

Last year, the Red Raiders weren't so lucky with another future league rival — Nebraska beat them 42-16.

The Raiders' first-ever game against a current Big Eight team was in 1933, when Tech dropped Kansas 6-0 in the last game of the season. Overall, Tech enjoys a 22-13-3 record against what will become their new conference foes. They hadn't played Missouri until this season.

The Aggies, who stayed at No. 3, face off against fellow national power No. 7 Colorado on Saturday in the first-ever meeting between the schools. Over history, Texas A&M has played each of the other seven teams, posting a 25-20 mark against them.

The Longhorns, who moved up two spots to No. 13, will continue their yearly border battle with Oklahoma, as they've done 89 times before. They're 52-33-4 against the Sooners and 80-48-4 against all of the Big Eight teams.

The only schools from the looming Big 12 Conference that Baylor will play this season are the same ones they've been butting heads with since the Bears began playing SWC football in 1915.

Baylor is 18-17 against the Big Eight. The Bears defeated Oklahoma State 14-10 last year.

In the new Big 12 scheme, the Texas schools will align with Oklahoma and Oklahoma State — original SWC members when the league was formed in 1915 at the Oriental Hotel in Dallas — in the southern tier of the new league.

The six schools will play one another each year and play four of the other six each season. The champions of each division will meet at a site to be determined this season for the conference championship.

NEXT WEEK'S SCHEDULE:

—BAYLOR at NORTH CAROLINA STATE: Bears to sift through Wolfpack pieces left by Florida State.

—HOUSTON at KANSAS: Cougars continue quest for season's first victory.

—RICE at LOUISIANA STATE: Owls risk perfect record against former power.

—SOUTHERN METHODIST at WISCONSIN: Which Mustangs will show up in Madison? The ones that beat Arkansas or the ones that Navy torpedoed.

—TEXAS at NOTRE DAME: Storied teams have clashed in three Cotton Bowls in their history. The Fighting Irish are 2-1.

—TEXAS A&M at COLORADO: Sneak preview of possible Big 12 Championship tilts of the future.

—TEXAS CHRISTIAN at VANDERBILT: Horned Frogs will have plenty of rest to restart offense against porous Commodores.

—IDLE: Texas Tech.

Texas gets seventh win in eight games

The Associated Press

DETROIT — Roger Pavlik, pitching on three days' rest, struck out a season-high 12 and combined on a three-hitter as the Texas Rangers beat the Detroit Tigers 5-0 Sunday, their seventh win in eight games.

Will Clark and Ivan Rodriguez drove in two runs each for the Rangers, who began the game two games behind Seattle in the AL wild card race.

Pavlik (9-9) moved up a day to replace Bob Tewskbury, who was scratched Friday because of a sore hamstring. Pavlik allowed three hits in seven innings and struck out two before Roger McDowell finished with perfect relief.

Chris Gomez and Tony Clark struck out three times each against Pavlik, whose career high is 13 against Seattle in 1993.

White Sox 2, Mariners 1

CHICAGO — Seattle wasted a chance to increase its lead in AL wild card race, losing to Chicago when rookie Lyle Mouton hit a tiebreaking homer in the seventh.

■ AL Roundup

Seattle, which had won four straight, remained one game ahead of the New York Yankees in the wild card race.

Red Sox 9, Indians 6

CLEVELAND — Boston blew a five-run lead but then capitalized on Alvaro Espinoza's double error for two runs in the eighth inning, beating Cleveland.

The victory, coupled with the New York Yankees' 2-0 loss at Baltimore, lowered Boston's magic number for clinching the AL East to two.

Orioles 2, Yankees 0

BALTIMORE — Kevin Brown allowed four hits in 8 1-3 innings and Jesse Orosco escaped a bases-loaded jam in the ninth as Baltimore slowed New York's playoff drive.

The Yankees began the day one game behind front-running Seattle in the AL wild-card chase.

Blue Jays 5, Brewers 0

TORONTO — Al Leiter pitched a six-hitter and struck out 10 as Toronto beat Milwaukee and sent the Brewers to their 15th loss in 19 games.

Leiter (11-9), who walked two, set a personal high for victories in a season. The victory was Toronto's second straight following a seven-game losing streak and completed a 3-7 homestead.

Athletics 4, Twins 1

OAKLAND, Calif. — Todd Van Poppel pitched the first complete game of his career and Mark McGwire hit his 33rd homer of the season as Oakland beat Minnesota, sending the Twins to their fifth straight loss.

Van Poppel (4-7) pitched a six-hitter, struck out five and walked none as Oakland won its third straight.

Royals 10, Angels 8

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Joe Vitiello homered twice and drove in five runs as Kansas City beat the Angels for their first sweep at California since September 1981.

With their fourth straight victory, the Royals moved within one game of Seattle in the AL wild-card race.

Drabek comes back to hurl Astros to win

The Associated Press

MONTREAL — Doug Drabek came off a suspension Sunday and pitched seven strong innings to lead the Houston Astros to a 5-3 victory over the Montreal Expos and a sweep of the three-game series.

Houston finished 6-3 on a nine-game road trip and stayed in second place in the wild card standings, 1 1/2 games behind Los Angeles.

Drabek (10-8), who sat out five games for hitting Cincinnati's Benito Santiago with a pitch on Sept. 5, gave up three runs on six hits and struck out five for his third straight victory.

Mike Henneman pitched the ninth for his sixth save, sending Montreal to its 10th loss in 13 games. The Astros have won 11 of their last 18 games after losing a club-record 11 straight.

The Astros batted around in the fourth against Pedro Martinez (13-9), a rally highlighted by Ricky Gutierrez's two-run single, to take a 4-1 lead.

Mets 8, Phillies 2

NEW YORK — Rico Brogna hit two more home runs, including his first career grand slam, as New York finished a three-game sweep with an victory over Philadelphia.

Brogna, who has hit five home runs in his last six games, had a career-high five RBIs and upped his team-leading totals to 22 homers and 68 RBIs.

Jeff Kent contributed a two-run homer, his 19th, as the Mets extended their winning streak to five and dealt Philadelphia another setback in its quest for the wild card spot.

The Phillies, who lost their first series at Shea Stadium since July, 1991, have dropped six straight to the Mets and seven of their last 11 overall.

Dodgers 8, Cardinals 0

ST. LOUIS — Ismael Valdez pitched a two-hitter and struck out nine and Mike Piazza hit his 30th homer as Los Angeles blanked St. Louis.

Valdez (12-11) faced only 29 hitters — two above the minimum — as he stopped his four-game losing streak. Los Angeles, which began the day two games behind first-place Colorado in the NL West, stayed 1 1/2 games ahead of Houston in the wild card race.

Eric Karros also homered for Los Angeles, his 29th of the season, and Delino DeShields matched his career high with three stolen bases. Roberto Kelly and Tim Wallach drove in two runs each.

Pirates 5, Giants 4

PITTSBURGH — Barry Bonds ended a terrible day by flying out with the bases loaded in the ninth inning to end the game as San Francisco lost for the fifth time in six games.

Bonds also struck out twice, grounded into a double play, was caught stealing and misplayed a fly ball into a triple. He finished the series 2-for-13.

San Francisco trailed 5-3 entering the ninth, but Pittsburgh closer Dan Miceli allowed a one-out single to Royce Clayton, an RBI pinch-double to Mark Leonard and a walk to J.R. Phillips.

Dan Plesac then relieved and allowed an infield single to Deion Sanders that loaded the bases, but John Patterson looked at a called third strike and Bonds flied out to left on a full count. He had been 4-for-10 in his career against Plesac.

Padres 11, Cubs 3

SAN DIEGO — Ken Caminiti became the first player in NL history to homer from both sides of the plate in consecutive games, and Fernando Valenzuela also homered as San Diego made it two straight routs of Chicago.

The Padres hit five home runs to tie a club record. They've done it four times, most recently Aug. 24, 1993 against St. Louis.

Marlins 17, Rockies 0

DENVER — Gary Sheffield went 5-for-5 and drove in four runs as Florida routed Colorado, reducing the Rockies' lead in the NL West to one game.

The Marlins set a team record for runs, tied a team record with four homers and handed the Rockies only their second shutout loss of the season at Coors Field.

Colorado finishes the year with 14 games against NL West opponents, including three against second-place Los Angeles in the final week.

Braves 4, Reds 1

CINCINNATI — Tom Glavine improved to 13-1 career at Riverfront Stadium and capped a weekend of dominant pitching as Atlanta swept Cincinnati.

Glavine (15-6) scattered four hits over seven innings and struck out eight to help the NL East champions improve the league's best record to 84-48. Mike Mordecai and Mark Lemke homered in the Braves' fourth straight win.

Sutton ends drought with 61

The Associated Press

ENDICOTT, N.Y. — After nearly nine years on tour without a victory, Hal Sutton said it may take some time for him appreciate the end of the drought.

"I don't know how I feel right now. It's been a long time coming. I'm elated but I can't believe it's here," said Sutton, who shot a course-record 61 Sunday to rally from five strokes back and win the $1 million B.C. Open by a stroke over Jim McGovern.

"I'm humbled by it. I've had to persevere pretty hard," said Sutton, the winner of the 1983 Tournament Players Championship and the 1983 PGA Championship among his nine career titles.

Sutton's last win was the 1986 Memorial, although he has had some near misses. He collected eight runner-up finishes between victories, two last year.

In April, he tied for second at the Houston Open. He finished fourth last week at the Bell Canadian Open, but had missed the cut in six of his seven previous tournaments.

Brickyard Seniors

INDIANAPOLIS — Simon Hobday capped a 4-under-par 68 with a 3-foot bogey putt to win the Brickyard Crossing Championship senior event by one stroke and avoid a six-way playoff.

The 55-year-old South African's only bogey in the final round came on the closing par-4 when he hit into a bunker on his second shot, hit a bad shot to the fringe and left his first putt short. His final putt gave him a 12-under 204 total as he became the 20th different champion on the Senior PGA Tour this year.

Hobday won the $112,500 first prize and avoided a senior tour record for players in a playoff by two.

LPGA Safeco Classic

KENT, Wash. — Patty Sheehan won the LPGA Safeco Classic for the third time, the 34th victory in her 16-year career, holding off a final-round challenge from rookie Emilee Klein on Sunday.

Sheehan, who had already announced that this would be her final tournament of the year, shot a 1-under-par 71 for a 14-under 274 total that was two strokes better than Klein, whose 67 made her runner-up for the second time in a row.
