Solon Voices Hope For Hostages

Idahoan Confers With Envoys; Carter Warns Against Harm

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iranian officials let Congressman George Hansen into the Foreign Ministry on Friday to see the American charge d'affaires and two other senior U.S. envoys held there. Hansen, who said the captives appeared tired but well, also was trying to visit the 49 hostages in the occupied embassy.

The Idaho Republican said he had proposed a U.S. congressional inquiry into allegations against the shah, and is convinced after talking to Acting Foreign Minister Abolhassan Bani Sadr and others that the U.S.-Iranian crisis could be resolved "by dialogue and initiatives."

Iran announced it will not pay some $15 billion in foreign debts it said were run up by the regime of deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. The hostages have been threatened with death if he is not returned from the United States for trial.

Irish statesman Sean MacBride, 75, here at Iran's invitation to try to break the deadlock with the United States over the hostages held by Iranian militants, said he was encouraged after conferring with Bani Sadr. "It's going to be very difficult to resolve this but I think it is not impossible," he said.

Carter Issues Warning

President Carter summoned his top foreign policy aides to Camp David, Md., to plan new tactics, and warned of "extremely grave" retaliation if the hostages are harmed.

About 20 American and British residents of Tehran surprised Iranians by marching to demand the shah's extradition. "Having lived here through the revolution, we know him to be a murderer," a group statement said. "Not all of them supported the hostage taking, however."

A secret document obtained by The Associated Press suggested the United States planned to grant the shah permanent residence as early as last summer. The document was sent last August by a State Department official to Charge d'Affaires L. Bruce Laingen.

Violent Uprising Rejected

Revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has called on all Moslems and American blacks to join its struggle against the United States, but in Atlanta, Southern Christian Leadership president the Rev. Joseph Lowery rejected the violent uprising.

Hansen said Laingen, embassy political officer Victor Tomseh and security chief Michael Holland were "concerned and tired, but well." They have been detained at the ministry since the Nov. 4 embassy takeover.

Laingen and Holland were visiting the Foreign Ministry when students stormed the embassy. It was unclear how Tomseh came to join them.

Hansen, the first American to visit the three, told a news conference he still expects to see the 49 other hostages in the embassy.

Hansen said Bani Sadr and several other members of the ruling Revolutionary Council considered a congressional inquiry a "good idea."

"There were no deals, no negotiations," with the Iranians, Hansen said, "but I'm convinced this situation can be resolved by dialogue and initiatives."

Bani Sadr told a crowd at a prayer meeting on the Moslem sabbath that Iran would not pay the foreign debts incurred by the ousted shah.

Most of the debts, estimated by Bani Sadr at $15 billion, were believed to be with U.S. banks. The figure caused confusion among U.S. bankers, who said they believed the Iranian debt was much lower.

New York bankers said they believed the Iranian assets

THE ABRUPT HALT Friday in the training of Iranian student pilots in the United States was ordered by the Pentagon to prevent any retaliation against the U.S. while the trainees were flying sophisticated American jets, informed sources told The Avalanche-Journal.

Training of the pilots, including those in naval navigator schools here, was canceled indefinitely, the Pentagon announced Friday. Classroom instruction for the Iranian student pilots, however, will continue.

Spokesmen at Reese Air Force Base, where three Iranians are training, and at Randolph Air Force Base in San Antonio would not comment on the reason for the training halt, but sources said such instruction is potentially hazardous because of the high-powered planes used for pilot training.

Members of Congress voiced their concern about use of the training planes by the Iranians to the Defense Department last week. The congressmen "stressed the possiblity that if those students were supporting (Ayatollah Ruhollah) Khomeini in such high-powered planes, all sorts of things could happens," a government spokesman said.

Apparently government officials are concerned the Iranian student pilots might either reroute their aircraft back to Iran to support Khomeini or might use the planes for retaliatory action against the United States, sources said.

Maj. Bob Brus, public information officer at Reese, said the three Iranian students training in T-37 aircraft at Reese always are accompanied by instructors at this stage of their training. The three student pilots arrived just last month.

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance said Friday he believes the grounding of the Iranian student pilots was the result of pressure from

Consulates Of U.S., Soviets Stoned By Moslems In India

CALCUTTA, India (AP) — One thousand angry Moslems, egged on by politicians who accused the United States of masterminding the takeover of the Great Mosque of Mecca, stoned the U.S. Consulate and burned President Carter in effigy Friday. The mob later attacked the Soviet consulate.

At least eight policemen were hurt, but there were no casualties to foreigners or diplomats.

Police used clubs and tear gas to keep the crowd more than 50 yards from the white brick U.S. mission. The crowd set fire to vehicles outside the consulate, then rampaged through downtown Calcutta, attacking the nearby Soviet facility, looting shops and burning buses and streetcars.

In a separate incident in the southern Indian city of Hyderabad, at least 12 persons suffered bullet, stab or rock wounds during fighting between Hindus and Moslems. The United News of India said fighting erupted after Hindu shopkeepers refused to draw their shutters in support of a Moslem protest of the mosque seizure. Police were ordered to shoot anyone looting or setting fires and a 30-hour curfew was imposed, the agency reported.

In New Delhi, the U.S. Embassy and American Center were closed without notice. Officials said the unannounced holiday was ordered as a precaution.

All was quiet near the embassies of New Delhi but in the adjacent Old City of Delhi, Moslems gathered for special prayers, burned an effigy that was labeled "anti-Islamic forces," and protested "terrorism at the shrine" in Mecca.

Saudi Arabian officials said they had restored complete control at Mecca's Great Mosque and its Kaaba shrine, the holiest site in Islam. They promised harsh justice for some 200 gunmen who occupied the mosque Tuesday, identifying them as religious "fanatics" not aligned to a foreign nation.

Iranian Revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has said the United States might be responsible for the takover and expressed "joy" at the anti-American violence sweeping the Islamic world this week.

Air Training Halted Indefinitely

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown on Friday ordered an indefinite halt to flight training of Iranian military students in the United States.

The action affects 236 of the 260 Iranian military personnel in the United States, including 213 taking pilot-navigator training at U.S. Air Force bases and 23 student pilots at Naval stations.

The remainder of the Iranian military personnel are being trained as ground technicians and in other non-flying specialities. This training will continue, defense officials said.

"The flying portion of the Iranian military student training program is suspended indefinitely on orders from Secretary Brown," the Pentagon said in response to questions.

Defense spokesman Thomas Ross did not say why non-flying training of Iranian military students was allowed to continue.

But other defense officials indicated the reason was, as one put it, "we don't want to go all the way" at this time.

The move is the latest in a series of actions by the Carter administration in reponse to the continued captivity of American hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

The current total of 260 Iranian military students is 13 fewer than was last reported about two weeks ago. Defense officials said the 13 have finished their training and are free to return to Iran.

They said that seven of them have bought airline tickets to London but were uncertain about the whereabouts of the other six.

All Iranian military personnel now in U.S. training arrived in the United States before the shah of Iran was deposed last winter.

The number of Iranian military trainees is only a fraction of what it was when the shah was this country's leading buyer of arms. In 1976, for example, there were 2,300 Iranian air force and navy students at U.S. bases.

The indefinite halt affects 116 Iranians at five Texas bases — 63 at Laughlin Air Force Base, Del Rio; 46 at Sheppard Air Force Base, Wichita Falls; 3 at Reese Air Force Base, Lubbock; 1 at Kelly Air Force Base, San Antonio; and 3 at the Corpus Christi Naval Air Station.

"The standdown was a decision made here at the Air Training Command. The commander felt it was a prudent decision at this time," said Lt. Col. Dave Shea, director of public affairs for the Air Training Command, headquartered at Randolph Air Force Base at San Antonio.

"It was made in view of a number of things, not the least of which was the international situation in Iran," Shea added.

Lt. Col. Tom Maple, the command's deputy director of public affairs, added: "Academic training will continue. It's only the flying portion that is affected."

The order from Brown late Friday morning followed media inquiries at the Pentagon regarding the action that had been directed by Gen. B.L. Davis, commander of the U.S. Air Training Command.

Brown's order superseding Davis' directive expanded the order to U.S. Naval facilities at Pensacola, Fla., Corpus Christi, Monterrey, Calif., and Jacksonville, Fla. Like Davis' order, the ban covered flight operations only.

"We will continue to have academic training and instrument flight simulators that are used to duplicate the sensations of flying T-37 and T-38 jets," Shea said.

U.S. Sen. John Tower, ranking Republican on the Senate Armed Services Committee, hailed the move and favored making it permanent.

"It seems the prudent thing to do. I had urged the administration to discontinue this training because these people are being trained in pretty sophisticated systems," the Texas senator said.

Suspect Sought In Lubbockite's Death After Club Altercation

LUBBOCK POLICE were seeking a suspect Friday in connection with the death of Raymond Padilla, 22, who died Friday morning, becoming the city's 29th homicide victim this year.

Padilla, whose address had been listed as 2910 Ave. H, Apt. 1, and 3116 Cornell St., was pronounced dead at 1:30 a.m. at Health Sciences Center Hospital by Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy, who ruled the death a homicide.

LeCroy ordered an autopsy, which was to have been performed Friday at St. Mary's Hospital.

Padilla was found unconscious about 7:30 a.m. Wednesday in the 2700 block of Texas Avenue. He was lying on his back just off the street.

Padilla never regained consciousness. He appeared to have suffered a severe blow to left side of his face.

Homicide detectives said Friday they were looking for a man who was seen fighting with Padilla outside an East Lubbock nightclub early Wednesday.

The suspect was described as a short, muscular Mexican-American in his mid-50s. The man reportedly had been in a fight with Padilla several weeks ago at another Lubbock club.

Police were told Padilla and his brother were at a club at 29th Street and Ave. H about 1 a.m. Wednesday. The suspect also reportedly was present.

Witnesses told police the victim and the suspect had been arguing inside the club, and the suspect challenged Padilla to go outside and fight.

Padilla's brother reportedly told police the two men began fighting outside the club. He said he went back inside to get help and that when he returned both men were gone.

Funeral services for Padilla are pending with Rix Funeral Directors.

Born in Tucumcari, Padilla had lived in Lubbock two years, moving here from Amarillo. He was employed as a construction worker and was a Catholic.

Survivors include a son, Raymond R. Padilla Jr., of Amarillo; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A.C. Padilla of Clayton, N.M.; his grandparents, Jose Lino Padilla of Clayton and Julia Pacheco of Ocate, N.M.; four brothers, Joe of Amarillo, Johnny of Fort Worth, Adolph of Mountainair, N.M., and Ernest of Lubbock; six sisters, Sadie Apodaca of Lubbock, Rose Perez of Boise City, Okla., Helen Abeyta of Friona, Julia Padilla of Garden City, Kan., and Mary Jean Padilla and Gloria Ann Padilla, both of Clayton, N.M.

Mild Days In Store During Weekend

COOL NIGHTS, little wind and mild days are expected this weekend in the South Plains-Panhandle area.

Partly cloudy skies will prevail today, but the National Weather Service expects blue skies to return Sunday. High temperatures both today and Sunday are expected to be in the middle 50s, with a low tonight in the mid-20s.

Cloudiness moved into the region late Friday afternoon in response to a developing upper atmospheric disturbance in New Mexico which brought snow to the Grants-Farmington area.

Department Stores Swamped As Christmas Season Begins

By The Associated Press

Americans packed stores and shopping malls Friday, the traditional opening of the Christmas shopping season, cheering worried merchants who reported heavy sales of electronic games, sportswear, jewelry and other popular gifts.

"The crowd is big," said Reeves Wetherill, a spokesman for the large Philadelphia department store John Wanamaker's. "We're having trouble on the street floor getting people into the elevators there are so many."

Electronic toys and games again were at the top of many shopping lists, particularly beeping and blipping devices with sports themes, said John O'Donnell, executive vice president of Milton Bradley.

But traditional toys like dolls, electric trains and blocks seem to be holding their own, retailers report.

In Boston, shoppers lined up outside Filene's department store, waiting for the bargain basement to open at 8:30 a.m.

"The place has been mobbed. It's a madhouse," said spokeswoman Babs Gorman. "Thousands have poured into the basement just this morning."

Parking lots at two of Atlanta's largest shopping malls were full by 10 a.m. Friday, said Anne Berg, public relations director for Rich's Department stores. "This is the biggest sale weekend of the year."

At Macy's in New York, which bills itself as the world's largest store, employees on the toy floor said they were too busy to talk. But Julie Mondanaro, who was dressed as an elf, said Macy's expected 250,000 to 300,000 children to talk to Santa by Christmas. By noon children and parents were standing in line for 30 minutes for the interview with St. Nick.

The Christmas shopping season is crucial to the nation's retailers. Despite the brisk start Friday, many merchants have been apprehensive about this year's sales because of the economy. Retail sales figures for October fell 1.7 percent from the previous month's level, according to government figures. Citibank, the nation's second largestcommercia bank, estimates the total volume of sales last month, not counting autos, was off about 1 percent, with clothing sales down a steep 4 percent.

Stores in some regions, including New York and the West Coast, will have strong selling seasons, the bank projected. But for the country as a whole, it concludes that inflation and lagging increases in income will make holiday shoppers feel more impoverished this year.

"Things are more expensive than last year," said shopper Loretta Froho, of Brooklyn, N.Y. "Everything you touch, you can't buy."

New York City resident Tony Vreen, 27, usually a last-minute shopper, said, "with inflation and all, I figured I'd shop early this year while I can still afford it."

Some stores have been more aggressive than usual in trying to persuade shoppers to spend. At Peninsula Center, a shopping complex in Rolling Hills Estates, Calif., Santa arrived last Saturday in a sleigh pulled by Shetland ponies. It confused 2½-year-old Josiah Ambrose, who said he was given a stocking full of candy after "I said to Santa: 'Trick or Treat'."

Rule-Abiding Santas Begin Annual Drive

NEW YORK (UPI) — Don't eat garlic, don't drink and don't overdo the ho, ho, hos.

With that sage advice, 32 redjacketed Kris Kringles — some with matching red noses — Picked up their bells, pulled on their beards and kicked off the Volunteers of America's 84th annual Christmas fund drive.

Up Broadway they marched, through crowds of over-dressed tourists in Times Square, past groups of giggling children, around a derelict sprawled next to a Kosher hot dog vendor, and into the streets surrounding Times Square to man their posts.

"It's getting hot under this stuff," said Hugh Williams, a Bowery Mission resident and a first-tie Santa, who struggled unsuccesfully with a puffy mustache that wouldn't stay on and an extra pair of pants that slipped below his waist, giving him a pouch instead of a paunc.

"Certainly don't want to make a career out of this," he said before tryingout his first "Merry Christmas" of the year.

"Think you'll stick to the rules?" another Santa was asked as apple-cheeked Nora Wedick 4, of Sparta, N.J., and her 2-year-old brother, Hugh, took turns ringing his bell.

"I got a little problem with one of them rules," he replied, "and it ain't the one about not eating garlic."

Jim Coleman, a beefy veteran of 18 yars as a Santa, had some advice for the novices:

"Don't promise the kid anything, you get in trouble that way.

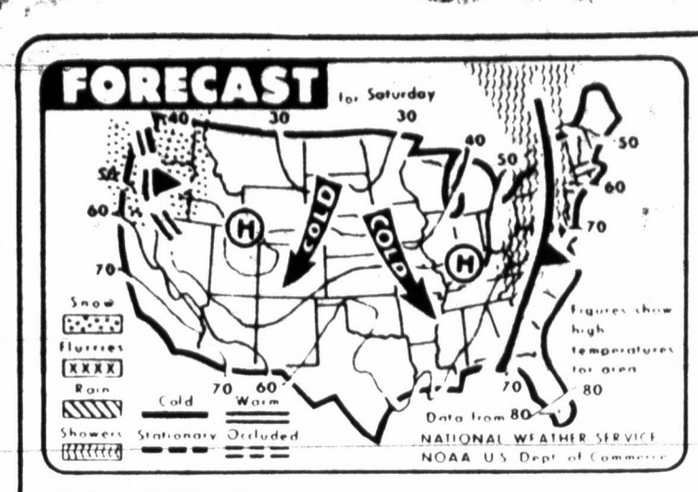

"I had a little boy one year who wanted a bike and I told him he'll get it. He came back the next year, asked me if I was he real Santa Claus.

"I said, 'Yes.' He said, 'Are you sure, cause last year I had a fake and he didn't deliver my bike.'

"I had to tell him something, so I Said Santa had sled trouble. This year if I see him again, I'll tell him Santa got stuck in a gas line."

Ben, a second-year Santa with green-tinted prescription glasses, said he stopped dieting a month ago so he could fill out his outfit like a "picture-book Claus."

He pulled on a swatch of excess cloth and said, "I guess I didn't fill out the way I wanted." After a moment, he added, "It's the spirit that counts, right?"

Shootout Victims Listed As Critical

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — Three shooting victims remained in critical condition Friday, recovering from a gang shootout during a Thanksgiving Day football game that left 19 persons injured.

Two warring motorcycle gangs, Wheels of Soul and the Ghetto Riders, entered Woodrow Wilson High School's field during the traditional Thanksgiving Day game against cross-town rival Camden High.

In the third quarter, the gangs fired at least 20 shots, injuring eight persons, including a 2-year-old baby, police said. The others were injured as the crowd of 5,000 ran for safety.

More than 50 police officers were at the field when the shooting occurred, stationed there earlier because of fights at prior games. Although officers fired some shots, authorities said they did not know if anyone had been injured by police fire.

Jessie Biddle, 32, Willie Wilson, 25, and Jessie Maske, 30, all of Camden, were in critical condition at Our Lady of Lourdes Hospital. Five others were in area hospitals Friday in satisfactory condition.

Police were holding 44 persons for bail hearings on Monday. All were charged with aggravated assault, and some also face weapons and drugs charges, police said. Names of the gang members charged in the incident were not released.

Lt. William Banks said the Wheels of Soul gang has been in the area for the past seven years, but moved from Camden in 1977 to another South Jersey location, which he declined to disclose. The Ghetto Riders, an offshoot of the Wheels, remained in Camden.

"The football game was fine," said Michael Bouknight, a 16-year-old junior at Woodrow Wilson High School. "It was a good clean game and then this all happened."

"It wasn't anything between the students," Bouknight said. "It was all between grown-ups." He said 75 to 100 people crowded into his home just across the street for shelter after the shooting. "You couldn't refuse them," he said.

Members of the school band and color guard, visiting the field Friday, pointed to broken beer bottles and pints of whiskey scattered on the field as evidence that outsiders had caused the trouble.

Senior Larry Jordan said he believed the incident might spell the end of the traditional Thanksgiving football rivalry. School officials were expected to announce on Monday whether the game, which never was completed, would be rescheduled.

Earthquake Strikes Western Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A strong 90-second earthquake shook mountainous western Colombia Friday night, killing at least seven persons, injuring dozens and destroying many buildings, authorities reported.

Three of the dead were reported in Pereira, a city of about 250,000 located 100 miles west of Bogota. Pereira police said the victims were crushed when their houses collapsed.

In Armenia, 20 miles south of Pereira, police said one woman was known dead in the rubble of her home and 15 persons were hospitalized.

Damage and casualties were reportd in a belt of cities along the western slopes of the Andes Mountains, including Cali, Manizales and Medillin. They are west or southwest of Bogota and 50 to 100 miles east of the Pacific Coast.

In Bogota, the capital with a population of 5 million, hundreds of persons ran into the street in panic as buildings rocked and walls cracked. There was a brief power failure.

Police reported the tremor toppled a radio transmission tower at Manizales north of Pereira.

The Geophysical Institute of the Andes said it was believed the quake centered off the coast in the Pacific between Colombia and Panama. But the National Earthquake Center in Golden, Colo., reported seismographs indicated the quake's epicenter was 150 miles southwest of Bogota in the mountains. The U.S. scientists said the quake struck at 5:40 p.m. CST and measured 6.4 on the Richter scale.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

The average black rhinoceros is 4½ to 5½ feet tall and weighs one to two tons. In short bursts, it can run 30 mph.

Men Plead Innocent To Oklahoma Slayings

Innocent pleas were entered Friday for two men accused of killing an Okarche, Okla., preacher and his wife. Texas authorities were en route to Wyoming to question a 19-year-old associate of the pair about their involvement in another double slaying in Lumberton, Texas.

Glen Burton Ake, 24, and Steven Keith Hatch, 26, both of Enid, Okla., had not retained attorneys and the court in El Reno entered innocent pleas for them in Canadian County District Court. A preliminary hearing was set for Dec. 17.

They are charged with two counts of first-degree murder and two counts of shooting with intent to kill for the Oct. 15 slayings of the Rev. Richard B. Douglass and his wife, Marilyn, of Okarche and the wounding of the couple's two teen-age children.

Ake, Hatch and Virginia Keefe, 19, who is jailed in Rawlins, Wyo., also are charged with capital murder in Kountze, Texas, for the slayings of Yerby Land III, 27, and Randall Dale Kokenes, 35, on Nov. 4 in Land's home in Lumberton. The victims were found bound, hooded and shot once each in the back with a shotgun.

Canadian County Assistant District Attorney Stan Chapman said Ms. Keefe would be questioned about the slayings of the preacher and his wife but she has not been charged in those killings.

"We have not talked with her but we want to see what she has to say," Chapman said. "It depends on what she has to tell us from what Ake and Hatch told her. I think she hooked up with them in Wyoming and they confessed to her."

The assistant D.A. said Ms. Keefe probably will be called as a witness for the state in the preliminary hearing.

At Friday's arraignment, Taylor set bond for Hatch and Ake at $200,000 on shooting with intent to kill charges but denied bond on the murder charges.

Hatch and Ake were captured in Craig, Colo., Tuesday, driving Land's car, after a chase that started at a bar in Baggs, Wyo., when police were investigating a disturbance. Ms. Keefe was arrested at the bar.

Ake and Hatch fled to Craig, where they were captured after holding a rancher hostage. Ten weapons and several rounds of ammunition were found.

Early-Morning Fire Claims Five Lives

WENDELL, Idaho (AP) — An early-morning fire gutted a home west of here Friday, killing four brothers and sisters and their 15-month-old niece, said Gooding County Seriff Ear Brown.

Fire broke out at the Angus Twitchell home about 1:30 a.m., Brown said. Both he and his wife were away working. The children were being tended by an older daughter, Diane Rasmussen, 20, who lost her baby in the blaze, said Brown.

Brown said the victims of the fire were Nadine Twitchell, 13, Becky, 12, Linda, 10, Chrissy, 7, and Tasha Rasmussen, 15 months.

Mrs. Rasmussen escaped the fire, as did her brother Roger Twitchell, 15, and 17-year-old sister, Laurie.

Official Claims Amarillo Man's Death Accidental

ENID, Okla. (AP) — Authorities are continuing to probe the mysterious death of a security guard at Enid Memorial Hospital but the police chief said Friday that signs point to accidental death.

Malcomb Jackson, 20, of Amarillo, a junior at Phillips University, was found dying on an operating table with a mask over his face and an anesthesia machine pumping nitrous oxide into his body.

His body was taken to the medical examiner's office in Oklahoma City for an autopsy. A report is expected Monday.

"The investigation is pending," Police Chief Robert E. Miller said. "It appears to be accidental. We won't know for certain if foul play was involved until we see the autopsy report."

Security officer Bill Arnold found Jackson about 4:30 a.m. Thursday after he was summoned to the hospital with a report that Jackson was missing.

"He was lying face down with a plastic mask over his nose and mouth and the machine was going full blast," Arnold said.

Arnold said he was called to the hospital when another security guard reported Jackson missing about 2:30 a.m.

"The guard though Malcomb had curled up somehwere and gone to sleep," Arnold said. "I searched in the linen closets, then finally someone suggested I look in the operating room and I found him."

The operating rooms are kept locked and Arnold said he was not certain whether Jackson had a key to the room where he was found.

Official said Jackson had worked at the hospital for about two years while attending classes at Phillips. He was secretary of the Student Senate and a resident assistant in one of the dormitories.

Carmen Jackson, a sister and a sophomore at Phillips, said her brother had told her "people were messing with him" at the hospital. "They just kept playing pranks on him, but Malcomb said he wasn't going to pay any attention to it," she said.

AN EDITORIAL:

King Avenue--Bad Precedent

IN MAKING an issue out of their request that Quirt Avenue be renamed in honor of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., supporters of the name change have taken one more step in a campaign of racial divisiveness and confrontation.

It is regrettable that they would seek to drive a wedge between the races rather than concentrate their efforts on constructive programs.

The City Council, which is giving the street name matter far more attention than it deserves, appears divided on how it will resolve the matter at its Nov. 29 meeting.

East Lubbock itself is not so united on the issue as its racial activists would like the City Council to believe.

THERE IS ONLY one basis on which the Council could agree to change the name of Quirt Avenue to King Avenue, that being as an act of appeasement to the black minority.

It is poor public policy to make decisions based on race or to grant special favors to any group which is motivated by race to register its requests or demands.

A citywide policy against naming streets in honor of individuals cannot legitimately be abrogated because any group—white, brown or black—has a hero it wants to recognize.

King himself is revered by many, especially by blacks, as an outstanding civil rights leader but he is no more qualified for special honor in Lubbock than are a score of military, political and folk heroes of whatever races. Or for that matter, some local citizens, including blacks and browns.

Moreover, in cities such as Austin where major arteries have been named in honor of the slain activist that fact continues to be a racial irritation festering beneath the surface and being counterproductive of economic progress for Negroes.

A MEMBER OF the Human Relations Commission, which endorsed the request that the main artery to the city from Lubbock International Airport be renamed for King, inadvertently put the issue into focus.

Bill Crouch said the request is a test case for determining whether the at-large City Council will grant a "reasonable proposal or if we've got to have Council members elected by districts and get a minority on there so we'll have someone to talk to."

This implies that the HRC sees both itself and minority representation on the City Council not as constructive forces for citywide cooperation but as vehicles for competitive confrontation of the races.

Lubbock's blacks are not well served by creating divisive confrontations on matters of symbolism or street names. They would benefit, instead, from a closer working relationship among the races on matters of substance.

AN EDITORIAL:

Mentally Ill 'Free' To Founder

A PREDICTABLE consequence of well-meaning but ill-advised social activism by such groups as the American Civil Liberties Union can be seen in New York City today.

Ten years ago, New York decided that the mentally ill have a right to live outside of institutional settings which, of course, always are pictured as being inhumane and prison-like.

During the last four years alone, the state's psychiatric hospitals have released 83,659 adult patients "to the community."

The result? Unable to care for themselves properly, thousands are living in flophouses, hallways, anywhere they can find shelter from the elements.

"THERE ARE TOO many people out that should be in (the institutions)," Marie Famous, a worker at one men's shelter, said in a copyrighted story by the New York Times News Service.

"If you can't take care of yourself, why do they let them out?," she asks. "We can't force men to take a shower, a bath. It's very nice to say institutions are inhumane, freedom this and that, but there's no such thing as freedom. It's a society. We all depend on each other for one thing or another."

But the ACLU continues to argue that the mentally ill have a right to so-called freedom unless they pose an immediate danger to themselves or others.

This ignores the longer-term harm they can do themselves by failing to have their prescriptions for tranquilizers filled, by neglecting personal hygeine, by being alone and neglected, unable to earn a living and an easy prey for toughs and junkies in the big cities.

THE PHILOSOPHY that the mentally ill, the mentally retarded and the juvenile delinquent should be released to community-based programs whenever possible sounds great to the theorist.

In practice, though, even the best-run programs are inadequate for many of those who are dumped onto the streets in order to make the statistics look good.

Supervision too often breaks down in the bureaucracy, which after a time may come to view the clients as existing for the bureaucracy's benefit rather than vice versa.

Institutionalization is not for all who have been put there in the past, but neither is deinstitutionalization for all who've been released.

ART BUCHWALD:

Tough Press Questions Demand Flimsy Replies

WASHINGTON—The most important position in any large corporation is that of company spokesman. He is the person put out front when the corporation is accused of some misdeed or violation of the law.

My friend, Prof. Heinrich Applebaum, who teaches a course in corporate spokesmanship at the Stonewall School of Business, let me attend one of his classes the other day.

There were three dummy television cameras in the room to simulate an actual press conference.

Applebaum said, "All right, Bensinger. You will play the spokesman for the Windfall Oil Co. Marx, Rogers and Clurman will be the reporters from the networks.

"THE DEPARTMENT of Energy has just released a report that Windfall has bilked its customers out of $1 billion. Start the questions."

"Mr. Bensinger, the DOE says that you overcharged your customers by $1 billion. What do you say to that?"

Bensinger wet this lips. "It's a dirty, contemptible lie."

Applebaum broke in: "No, Bensinger, a company spokesman must keep his cool under media questioning. Your response should be, 'We don't wish to comment on the matter until we've read the charges.'"

"Yes, sir," Bensinger said.

Applebaum said, "That may not get you off the hook, but it's a good start. Marx, throw a tough question at him."

"Since 1974 you've overcharged the public $5 billion," Marx said. "Do you intend to return any of that money to your customers?"

BENSINGER ANSWERED, "These are political charges made by a vindictive administration whose one aim is to get a large tax on all oil profits."

"Very good, Bensinger," said Applebaum. "How did you come up with that one?"

"I saw it on the Cronkite show last night."

"Push him hard, Rogers," Applebaum yelled. "Mr. Bensinger, you took an ad in the newspapers last week explaining that Windfall was only making half a cent on a gallon of gasoline, yet your profits were up by 234 percent. How did you make all the money?"

Bensinger looked puzzled. "I didn't understand the question."

Applebaum yelled, "That's not good enough! The cameras will close in on your face and everyone will know you're lying. Does anyone know what Bensinger should say?"

The class was silent.

APPLEBAUM SAID, "You should say your gas stations made most of their profits from Coke machines. Also that you raised the cost of going to the washroom from 10 to 15 cents, which is keeping within the price guidelines."

"Will they really buy that one, Professor?"

"They will if you say it with authority. And one more thing, Bensinger, watch what you're doing with your hands. TV cameramen always like to shoot an oil spokesman's hands when he's answering a question.

"It's a dead giveaway that you're trying to cover something up. Clurman, it's your turn."

"Mr. Bensinger, the people think the oil companies are ripping them off. The report from the DOE seems to confirm this. How can you establish your credibility?"

"YOU'VE SEEN our TV commercials. It's up to the public to decide whether they want to believe Bob Hope or some flunky who works for the government."

"Bravo," said Applebaum. "I'm giving you a B-. I might have given you an A if you weren't perspiring so much. Remember this: A spokesman for a large corporation must never sweat on television."

The professor continued, "All right, class, your assignment for tomorrow is to prepare a statement for the Foul Chemical Co., defending itself against charges by Mike Wallace on '60 Minutes' that it dumped nerve gas into the Central Park Reservoir, which caused everybody in New York City to stop brushing their teeth."

GEORGE WILL:

The Case In 'Point'

WASHINGTON—Not long ago, an official inquiry solemnly found that the U.S. Military Academy's shortcomings include an inadequate sense of humor.

This finding occasioned some—it must be admitted rather strained—jocularity at West Point. Now come reports that fun there still is not what it should be.

Female cadets have been pressured to kill chickens by biting the chickens' necks; cadets dressed in Ku Klux Klan garb have held mock trials.

It is a pity West Point often makes news with episodes that illuminate neither the virtues of its cadets nor the important questions about its mission.

When I was there this fall it was grand to hear, as the cadets assembled for dinner, soprano voices in the football pep rally: "Napalm North Carolina!"

The appearance of skirts in the long gray line has produced some problems, and some unintended hilarity.

(This is the accepted description of a new disciplinary problem: Cadet X is guilty of "gross error of judgment; i.e., having a female cadet in bed in his room after taps and engaging in acts of affection prejudicial to the good order and discipline of the Corps of Cadets.")

But as in the past, there are deeper questions about what should be considered the good order of the corps.

Located at one of America's most beautiful spots, on a bluff overlooking the Hudson, West Point is a national shrine that stirs anyone not altogether dead to the promptings of patriotism.

And in the 19th century, it was a great nation-building institution.

THE MILITARY made many of the maps, roads and bridges that the wagon trains used. Military forts were part of the infra-structure necessary for the pursuit of our "Manifest Destiny."

Many engineers trained by the Army later staffed the private sector. Indeed, the contributions of officers produced in West Point's first 100 years were as much technical as military.

Today, as always, officers must be capable of handling combat. But officers in a modern Army must have many skills unrelated to the discipline of combat, or the technical, engineering curriculum that has been so central at West Point.

Such subjects as U.S. and Soviet strategic doctrine, and the policy planning process, should be at the center of the education of those officers who will engage in close combat in the corridors of the Pentagon and Congress.

MEN AS different as Thomas Jefferson, one of nature's aristocrats, and Andrew Jackson, one of nature's rabble-rousers, shared a hostility toward military academies, which they feared would be nurseries of a dangerously militaristic elite.

My limited exposure to first-year cadets convinced me that Jefferson and Jackson can rest easy.

When asked why they chose West Point, the cadets' responses tended to emphasize the matter-of-fact: a free education for a useful career.

The spirit of the age has done its dirty work, so they are bashful about saying what is obviously, splendidly true of most of them: They are moved by patriotic as well as personal considerations.

THEY SEEM terribly young, these late-teens who have plumbed for a life so rigorous and so thoroughly against the grain of America's current culture. But it is at least arguable that officers should be made young:

Induce the reflexes as soon as possible, because the more a person must unlearn, the harder it is. The rule for an aspiring officer must be: You can do more than you think you can, and had better.

Military academies aim not just at endowing their students with particular skills, but also at changing in fundamental ways those who enroll.

IN MODERN society comfort is high, freedom is virtually boundless, and pain is, if not abolished, at least on the agenda for abolition.

Military academies must fish young people from this milieu and reverse society's process of atomizing individuals.

De-atomization must involve instilling in them the traits made necessary by the timeless fact of life that Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr. expressed with characteristic concision: "Every society rests on the death of men."

Today this nation flinches from that fact, as from most unpleasant truths, but that does not make it less true. This is a good moment to remember the Marine recruiting slogan: No one wants to fight, but someone had better know how.

DONALD F. GRAFF

Win By Losing

WASHINGTON—The Treasury dipped into its gold hoard the other day, selling 1,250,000 ounces to the highest bidders.

The sale brought an average of $372.30 an ounce, improving the nation's cash balance by almost half a billion dollars.

Good deal? Not when you consider that the price per ounce was down more than $5 and the total take some $6 million from the last such public sale, in September.

Bad deal? Not from the Treasury point of view. A drop in the price of gold is precisely the purpose of the new strategy, inaugurated with this sale, of keeping the quantity of gold to be sold and the date secret almost to the day of the auction.

IT IS AN attempt to take some of the heat out of the gold market by keeping dealers and particularly speculators uncertain as to the monthly supply.

The price drop this time out suggests the Treasury is playing its cards right in this latest maneuver to support the dollar by making gold a less attractive alternative.

But then, that's what was being said less than a year ago when a package including massive borrowing abroad and Treasury loans floated in strong-currency countries eased speculative pressures and boosted the dollar's value on the exchange markets for a time.

But that lasted only until the next round of increases in oil prices. And that, of course, is the tip-off as to what kind of a game this currency stabilization effort really is.

Oil, not gold, is trump. And unfortunately, the exporting cartel still holds all the high cards.

★

IF THERE have been any lingering doubts as to the willingness of People's China to go all the way in its modernization drive, they should now have been dispelled by Peking.

The Chinese are catching up with the West in inflation.

Peking has announced the first major price increases in the three decades of the Communist regime's existence, and they are of an order to make Western consumers feel they may not have it so bad after all.

Affected are basic foodstuffs with most meats, fish and dairy items going up by more than 30 percent.

PEKING'S MULTIPLE purpose appears to be to increase the income of China's vast rural population and close the city-country gap in living standards, to sop up some excess purchasing power in the urban population and to spur industrial productivity by providing cash incentives for harder work and higher output.

The Chinese, in good Marxist tradition, have maintained that inflation is a capitalist evil to which their economy is not prey.

The official line on the price-subsidy package is that it is evidence of the country's rising standard of living.

Which suggests that they are catching up in yet another area of Western expertise—labelling an unpleasant development something other than what it really is.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Bids Out Of Sight

DALLAS—It's a good thing the economic bloodhounds are sniffing around unemployment lines for the long-lost recession, because they'll never find it in the auction galleries.

There it's happy-days-are-here-again and "Do I hear $1,000,000?"

If it's Sotheby Parke Bernet's or Christie's, he does. Business is so hot in those auction houses that even the gentlemen with the gavels, long accustomed to pulse-racing bids, are blinking in disbelief.

In New York alone, in the past few weeks, millions and millions of dollars have changed hands with a discreet flick of a pencil (14K, of course) or sight-unseen signals over a trans-Atlantic telephone line.

One two-day auction of precious gems set a world record of $8.6 million, topping the previous high of $7.9 million at a Swiss auction in 1977.

AND THE ESTATE of Nelson Rockefeller, which was already way up there, is now $665,000 richer after the sale of an emerald-and-diamond ring, bracelet and necklace.

Would you believe $975,000 for a diamond ring? You'd better. That's what a 22.3-carat emerald-cut diamond went for, the third highest price ever paid for a white diamond at auction.

And the all-time record for a white diamond per carat—$58,000—was set when a 7.45-carat ring from Henry Winston was knocked down at $440,000.

It's all on account of inflation, of course. But what's so scary (outside of contemplating how anybody ever manages to scrape together $975,000 in the first place) is that the folks who are laying out this kind of dough actually expect prices to go even higher.

"EVERYONE IS astounded at these prices," one jewel specialist said. "This should squelch any rumors that gems have peaked. I had $1.2 million worth of bids from a Middle East client, and I couldn't get one thing for him."

Crowds in the galleries are standing-room only at the big auctions and they don't sit on their wallets, either. Some bids totally disregard pre-sale estimates of what an item is worth.

An 11.5-carat ruby ring sizzled offers up to $310,000 before a private collector got it. The auctioneer said he would have been happy with $250,000.

A pair of dangling diamond earrings, signed by Cartier, went for $300,000. They had been expected to bring $70,000, tops.

And speaking of earrings, there were the 14-ounce pearl drops mounted in diamonds that were snapped up by a private collector (the galleries never tell you their names) for a mere $230,000.

BUT THESE little baubles have a history. They were a gift to Queen Henrietta Marie of England at the time of her marriage to Charles I in 1625. Henrietta (no sentimentalist, she) later sold them to her nephew, Louis XIV.

It seems Louis, a gay dog if ever there was one, had his eye on an Italian cutie named Maria Mancini, and he figured the sparklers were just the thing to buy his way into her boudoir. The earrings made it, but no Louis.

And, just to give you an idea of how crazy the world is getting, the last time these trinkets were up for auction—it was only 10 years ago—they sold for $65,000.

It's not just rubies and diamonds that are setting records; prices are equally wild for emeralds, sapphires and jade. A cabochon jade ring went for $110,000, although the pre-sale estimate was only $15,000. And a 117-bead jade necklace brought $190,000.

AS FOR art, well, if you don't already have all the Rembrandts you can use, forget it. Even Diego Riveras are going for $130,000 now.

Then, of course, there's that anonymous collector who phoned in (collect, do you suppose?) a $2.5 million bid for Frederic Church's long-lost 19th Century painting of icebergs, thereby setting a new record for an American artist.

It was also the third highest auction sale for anybody, right behind a Velasquez ($5,544,000) and a Titian ($4,065,000).

Be not of faint pocketbook, though. There's still room for the peasant trade in stamps and coins; but you'll have to hurry.

In England, a silver penny struck during the reign of King Stephen in 1146—and worth about two cents at the then current rate of exchange—was just auctioned off for $21,000. (All that history, y'see.)

THREE ONE-cent Benjamin Franklin stamps, valued by Sotheby's at maybe $75,000, just went for a record $240,000.

And a collection of 3,000 early U. S. postal covers sold recently for $10 million, three times the old record of $3.5 million. Maybe the new owner, a dealer, will sell you a single teeny cover for a couple of hundred thou.

Personally, I'd rather invest my loose change in Sotheby and Christie stock. Any firm collecting rocketing commissions on these kinds of prices is my kind of inflation hedge.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

HOW WOULD you like a bright red typewriter? That's the color the majority of 1,500 secretaries told pollsters they would prefer. A red machine might tend to counter-balance the gray labor, they said, or words to that effect.

You know how elephants go down steep hills? They slide on their midsections.

Everybody knows that cartoon hero Popeye. But who knows his last name?

Sheep like chocolate.

Am asked what it costs to manufacture those throwaway bottles. Almost 8 cents each.

Chemists who work in laboratories say their experiments should never be conducted while sitting down.

It's not in the hot bright sunshine that the tree grows most vigorously, but rather under cool cloudy skies.

Q. What's the most widely manufactured product?
A. Soft drinks.

Q. How many millionaires in the U.S. Senate?
A. At least 24 and maybe up to 40.

Mob Demands Turnover Of British Ambassador

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — A roaring mob besieged the British embassy for the second day Friday, demanding the British turn the ambassador over to them, and London recalled the envoy.

The Foreign Office in London announced that the ambassador, Sir Leonard Allinson, was returning to London for an indefinite period "to review recent developments affecting British-Zambian relations." It did not say where Allinson was, what arrangements had been made to get him home or if other embassy employees also would be leaving.

University of Zambia students, furious over the ambassador's denial of British responsibility in Zimbabwe-Rhodesian raids, scaled steel fences around the embassy, smashed windows and pelted the royal coat of arms with rocks. The crowd tore up the grounds, but no injuries were reported.

Organizers with loudspeakers egged on the demonstrators with shouts of "Britons Go Home!" "White Pigs!" and "We Demand the British Ambassador now!"

About 50 protesters lowered the Union Jack in a similar demonstration Thursday and chanted anti-British slogans. The flag was not raised Friday.

President Kenneth Kaunda on Tuesday claimed Britain was responsible for the death and the destruction brought by Zimbabwe-Rhodesian raids since Oct. 12. Shortly afterward, Allinson denied the British were to blame. Zambia is the object of attacks because it shelters some of the black nationalist guerrillas fighting the Zimbabwe-Rhodesian government.

The president accused Allinson of "diplomatic misconduct" for immediately rejecting Zambia's claim instead of forwarding Kaunda's demans for compensation to London. Britain was the colonial power in Rhodesia before the colony's 1965 breakaway and now is involved in its transtion to frmal indepndnce.

Kaunda told an estimated 2,000 youths at the State House after Friday's demonstration that Allinson was "completely irrelevant," but advised them to leave the matter "in the hands of your party and government to handle."

"What you have done yesterday and this morning should show the British government that that man (Allinson) can't operate here anymore," Kaunda said.

It was not immediately known if the youths involved in Thursday's demonstration — identified as militants of the ruling United National Independence Party — were involved in Friday's protest.

The demonstrators jeered as they passed Allison's residence, but caused no damage. Allison's title as ambassador here is high commissioner.

Landlocked Zambia has begun to suffer the effects of the Zimbabwe-Rhodesian raids that have destroyed 12 bridges and severly reduced its imports. Three bakeries at Ndola in the northern copper area were forced to close down because no flour was available.

Zambia now is completely dependent on its southern route to South African and Mozambican ports for the export of its valuable copper and import of commodities. Zimbabwe-Rhodesia has refused to allow the important staple of corn to pass to Zambia on its rail lines.

Zimbabwe Rhodesia routinely bombed bases of Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African Peoples Union during its seven-year guerrilla war, but it is only in the last two months that the Salisbury government began striking Zambian targets.

Kaunda this week ordered a full mobilization of his army to defend Zambia against future raids, and called on other countries to supply funds and equipment, which are in short supply.

The Zambian students repeated their earlier demands for nationalization of British firms, as well as the conglomerate London Rhodesia Company, and prosecution of Lonrho chief executive Roland Rowland for what they termed the "exploitation of the Zambian people." They also called for confiscation of white farms.

Treasury Secretary Visits Middle East

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Treasury Secretary G. William Miller began a six-day visit to the Middle East on Friday, prepared to ask Saudi Arabia to maintain high levels of oil production in exchange for a U.S. commitment to cut fuel consumption.

En route to Riyahd, Miller told reporters the plan could lead the Carter administration to seek mandatory conservation measures, such as gasoline rationing, an increased gasoline tax and lighting and heating controls.

At the behest of Western oil-consuming nations, the Saudis earlier this year increased their production from 8.5 million to 9.5 million barrels a day. This was done mainly to help the importing nations cope with shortages brought about by the Iranian revolution.

The Saudis already have indicated that the 9.5-million daily oil production level would be maintained in 1980.

"Saudi Arabia has been very responsible in keeping order in the oil system," Miller said earlier during a stopover in London.

Saudi Finance Minister Muhammad Abalkhil greeted Miller at the airport here upon his arrival with a 21-member U.S. delegation that also included his wife, Ariadne.

Security for Miller's visit was tightened in the wake of the recent incident at Mecca in which armed men invaded the Grand Mosque, Islam's holiest shrine. Saudi security forces were much in evidence at airport welcoming ceremonies.

Sources told U.S. reporters Friday night that the Saudis also had increased security around the U.S. Embassy at Jiddah and U.S. diplomatic facilities in Riyadh, a city of 750,000.

Informed sources said the trouble in Mecca apparently had not yet ended as Miller's visit began.

Saudi government officials had said the mosque invasion was under control, though some invaders still had not been captured. The sources said an undetermined number of invaders still occupied positions on the second floor of the sprawling mosque, which is three times the size of Yankee Stadium.

The sources said Saudi forces were hesitant to undertake a final assault on these invaders for fear of damaging the mosque. The sources said the hostages that the invaders once held were all now free.

The trouble was limited to Mecca and there were no reports of incidents elsewhere in the country.

The sources said the Saudis were giving few details about the fighting at the mosque and were unable to say how many people had been killed or how many hostages had been taken, although one source said estimates of the invaders numbered between 50 and 150 and estimates of the hostages ranged as high as 1,000 at one point.

The sources said the invaders apparently were Saudi members of a Moslem minority called the Shi'ites, the same Moslem faction that now controls the government in Iran. But it was thought that the invaders of the mosque at Mecca were all Saudis from the eastern part of the country.

While some consideration had been given to canceling Miller's visit, sources said the Saudis were very anxious that it be held as scheduled.

Miller is to meet with Crown Prince Fahd, considered the most powerful figure in the Saudi government, on Saturday. But some other meetings with Saudi officials, including the foreign minister, were canceled, apparently because they were busy with the Mecca disturbance.

The informed sources said the Saudis were embarrassed by what had happened at Mecca because such disturbances were almost unheard of in their country.

They said a U.S. embassy plane flew over Mecca on Thursday but was unable to see anything unusual. Non-Moslems are prohibited from visiting the city.

Search Underway For Man After Beatings Of Women

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Authorities were searching for a man who abducted two elderly women on their way home from church, stabbed and beat them and left one dead.

"He just kept beating on her and beating on her and beating on her," said Beaulah Williams, who escaped and called for help Wednesday night. She was treated at a hospital and released.

The nude body of 69-year-old Aretha Walker was found Thursday in a field behind the Rock Island Elementary School, police said. The cause of death was not immediately known.

Miss Williams said she had stopped her car in front of Ms. Walker's home late Wednesday after giving her a ride from a Bible study class when the man forced his way into the car and attacked.

Mideast News Delegates Clash Over Peace Pact

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Delegates from Egypt and other Arab nations clashed over the Egyptian-Israeli peace pact and Palestinian rights at Friday's session of the non-aligned news agency pool conference.

But delegates avoided a showdown over the divisive issue of suspending Egypt's Middle East News Agency from the pool.

Instead, they submitted the question of MENA's membership to a ministerial conference of the non-aligned movement that is to meet in 1981 in New Delhi.

Delegates representing news agencies and governments in 54 non-aligned countries are attending the conference that opened Thursday and ends Saturday. Conference chairman D.R. Mankekar of India told the opening session that the non-aligned news pool distributes 40,000 words daily and its problem of telecommunications "is nearing solution, with the installation of a network of satellite circuits."

He repeated the accusation that the West's major international news agencies are biased in their reporting about developing countries.

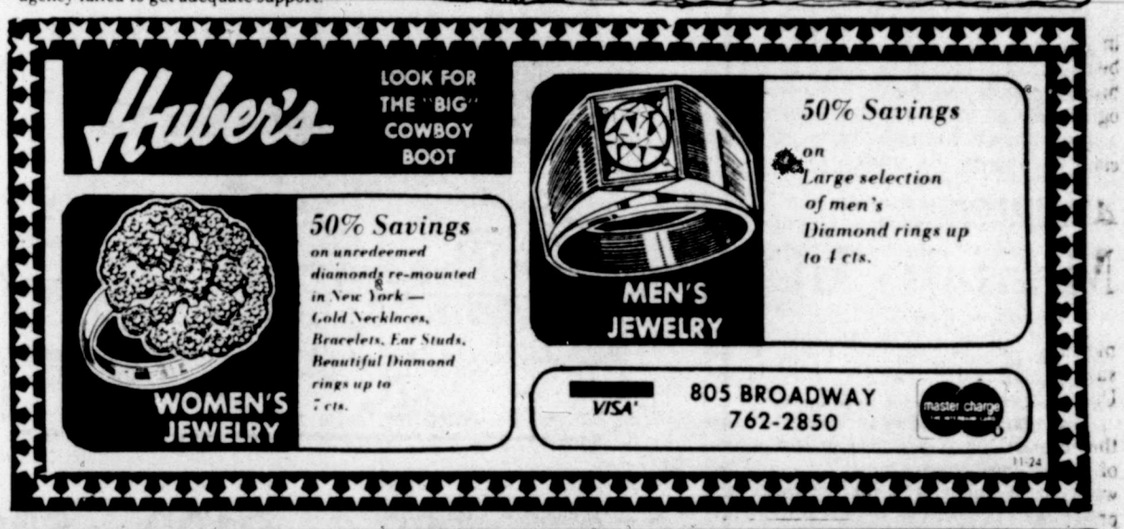

Egypt and its peace agreement with Israel came under attack from Ziad Abdel Fattah, director of the Palestinian Liberation Organization's WAFA news agency, and Saber Falhout, director of the Syrian news agency SANA. Fattah called Egypt a traitor to the Arab cause and Falhout said MENA was an instrument of American imperialism in cooperation with Israel.

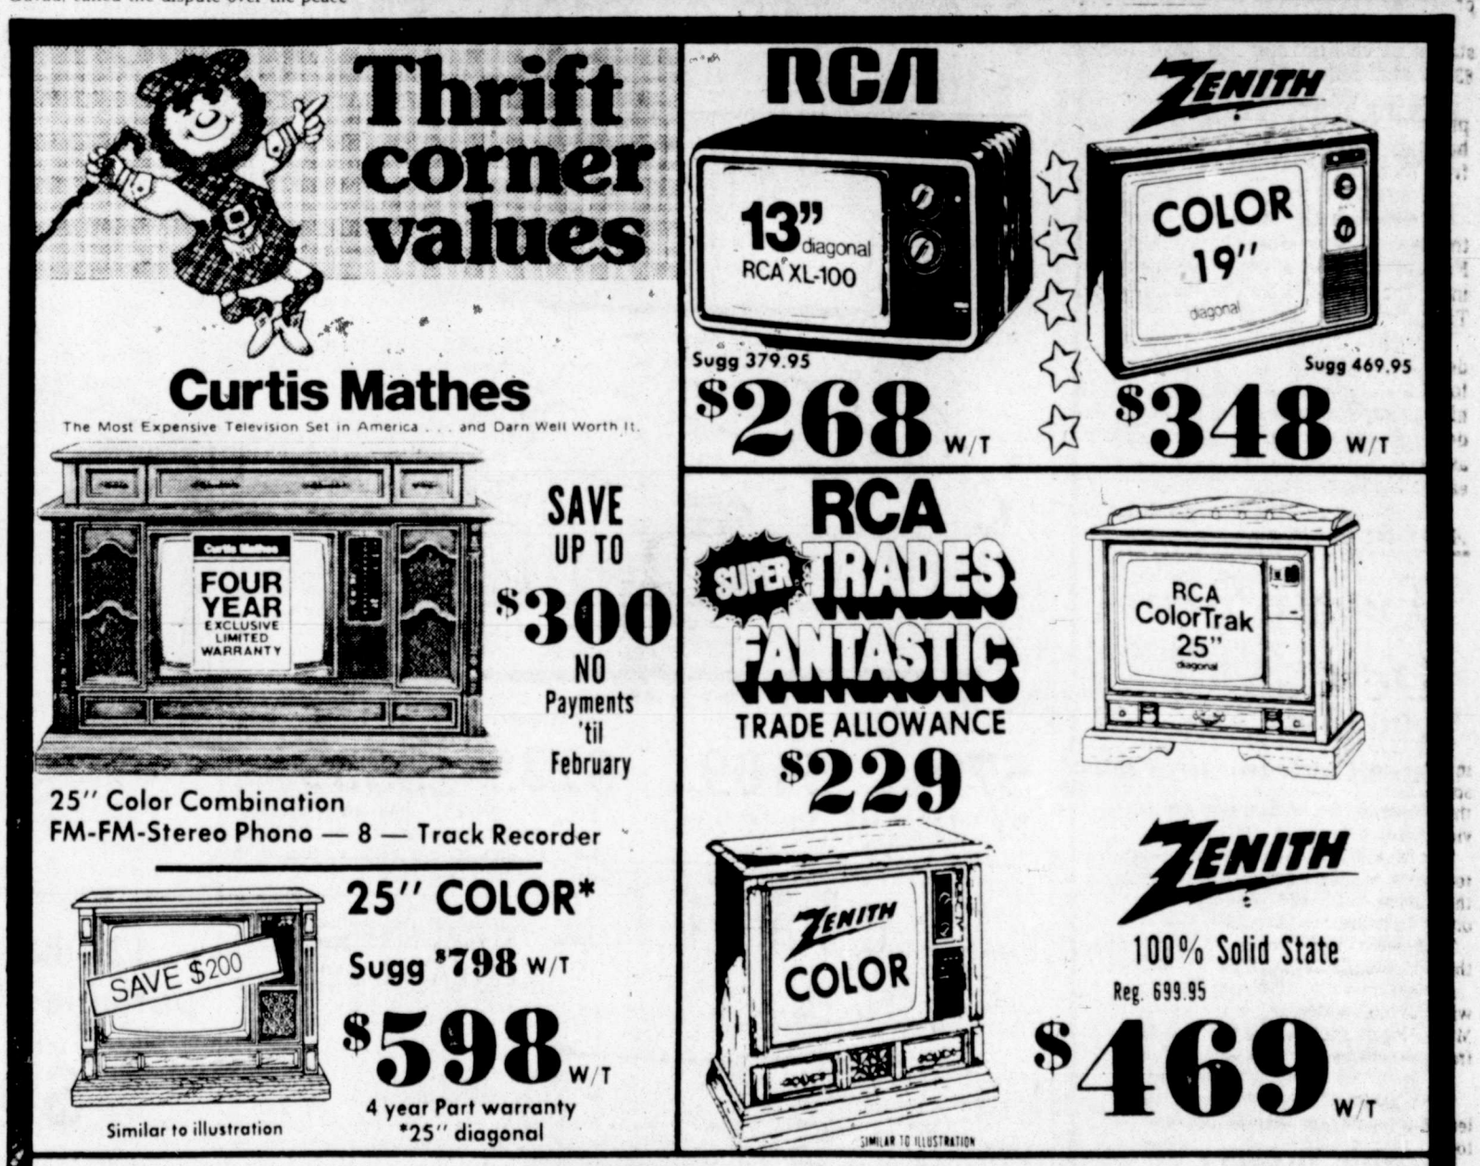

MENA's representative, Mohammad Gavad, called the dispute over the peace pact "a temporary disagreement in the Arab world" and said the conference should serve as a meeting of professional journalists and not a political gathering.

He said Fattah used "very dangerous words" in speaking of treason and challenged the PLO and other critics to produce any MENA dispatch that violated non-aligned principles. "There exists a conspiracy to sabotage this conference," Gavad declared.

Among those supporting the PLO stand were speakers from Libya, Iraq, Afghanistan, Ethiopia and Malta, but their efforts to suspend the Egyptian agency failed to get adequate support.

County Prosecutor Found Guilty Of Embezzling U.S. Money

DETROIT (AP) — Prosecutor Robert F. Leonard, Genesee County's top law enforcement official for the past 16 years, was found guilty Friday of embezzling federal revenue-sharing money.

Under state law, Leonard's office became vacant as soon as the federal jury of six men and six women returned the verdict after five days of deliberation.

Leonard, a former president of the National District Attorneys Association, said he would appeal the conviction.

Chief Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard A. Rossman alleged during the six-week trial the county prosecutor embezzled more than $100,000 between January 1973 and mid-1976. The fund was supposed to have been used to pay informants in organized crime and narcotics cases.

Leonard, 48, funneled some of the money to California to help pay for a $157,000 home on the Monterey Peninsula, federal prosecutors alleged.

There was testimony that $231,585 was withdrawn from the fund between Jan. 1, 1973 and Sept. 10, 1976, but that only $15,483.15 was accounted for.

Leonard, who pleaded innocent, faces a maximum of 28 years in prison and a $35,000 fine, according to the U.S. attorney's office. No sentencing date was set.

A federal grand jury indicted Leonard on March 7 on six counts — two counts of embezzling federal funds, one count of attempting to conceal the embezzlement, two counts of carrying stolen money across state lines and one count of filing a false statement on an income tax return.

The jury convicted him of four of the six, including the tax charge, concealment and single counts of embezzlement and transporting stolen money.

The jury found the county prosecutor guilty of stealing $34,000 in federal revenue sharing money on July 20, 1976. Leonard's sister, Barbara Ann Buckner, testified at the trial that Leonard gave her $43,000 in cash the same day — July 20 — as a loan to help her family buy a home in California. She told the jurors she converted the money to cashiers' checks and returned them to her brother.

The jury also found Leonard guilty of carrying $33,500 of the embezzled money to California nine days after he stole it from the crime-fighting fund.

Leonard, who became Genesee County prosecutor in 1963, was found innocent of embezzling $5,000 on Sept. 24, 1974 and innocent of transporting $13,700 to Florida to help pay for a condominium purchased in the name of his mother, Helen.

Assistant Attorney General Stanley Steinborn said Genesee County judges will meet and appoint a successor who will complete Leonard's term in office. The Michigan law regarding the vacancy in Leonard's office applies to top county officials, including prosecutors, who are convicted of "infamous crimes."

Lawsuit Filed To Help Save Arctic Whales

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservationists, concerned that oil wells in the arctic pack ice could jeopardize the existence of the bowhead whale, asked the U.S. District Court here Friday to block next month's sale of drilling rights in the waters off Alaska's North Slope.

The lawsuit, filed by nine conservation organizations, asks the court to stop the Dec. 11 sale of oil and gas drilling rights in the frigid waters of the Beaufort Sea.

Alaska Eskimos filed suit on Wednesday to block the sale of leases in the deep waters beyond the Barrier Islands off the Alaskan coast. The conservationists' suit goes beyond that, seeking to halt the entire sale.

At stake are more than 514,000 acres of submerged terrain that in winter lies beneath the arctic icecap.

Geologists say the area could contain up to 1.25 billion barrels of oil and 3.125 trillion cubic feet of natural gas. Those estimates would make it the biggest oil bonanza since Prudhoe Bay.

But the area also is considered critical habitat for the bowhead whale, an endangered species that serves as a food source for the Eskimos of the North Slope. Conservationists argue the oil industry does not have the technology to drill in such a hostile environment safely.

Dave Burwell, a staff attorney for the National Wildlife Federation, said the conservationist suit contends that the Interior Department violated the Endangered Species Act by failing to determine if drilling in the area would harm the bowhead before making an "irrevocable commitment of resources" to the oil companies.

The suit asks for an injunction against Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus and Richard Frank, administrator of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, prohibiting the sale.

Texas Man Among Seven Pardoned

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI) — A Texas man was among seven convicts pardoned by Lt. Gov. Thelma Stovall, who said Friday she issued the pardons because she feared she wouldn't have another opportunity to issue the pardons as acting governor.

Walter Eugene Meredith was paroled to Fort Worth on Nov. 16, after serving a 10-year prison term for a robbery committed in 1956 when he was 16 years old.

While Mrs. Stovall pardoned him, she said Gov. Julian Carroll already had restored his citizenship rights.

Mrs. Stovall said she acted because she feared Gov. Carroll — whose term ends Dec. 11 — wouldn't leave Kentucky again before his term ended, thus barring her from serving as acting governor and using the power to pardon.

Carroll wasn't immediately available to respond to Mrs. Stovall's comments.

Mobil Home Fire Cause Undetermined

Woodrow fire department officials late Friday had not determined the cause of a Thursday evening blaze that destoyed a mobile home located about two miles north and a half-mile mile east of the instersection of FM 1585 and South University Avenue.

Although the Joe Don James family was home when the fire erupted, no injuries were reported.

Woodrow Fire Chief J.C. Dunn said four units from the Woodrow and Slaton fire departments were dispatched to the fire, which was reported at 6:10 p.m., and had it under control in 30 minutes.

Murder Suspect Booked Into Jail

Murder suspect Joseph Michael DePauw, 28, was booked into the Lubbock County Jail about 9:30 p.m. Wednesday after a brief layover in Denver because of a snowstorm.

DePauw, charged with the Oct. 5 murder of Lubbock business owner Oland Kenneth Anderson, 63, surrendered to FBI agents in San Jose, Calif., Nov. 11, ending a month-long search for the suspect.

Anderson's body was found sprawled inside his business at Neon Speciality Co. at 2402 Ave. J. DePauw was charged with his murder three days later, and Justice of the Peace Charles Smith set his bond at $100,000.

DePauw remained in the county jail late Thursday.

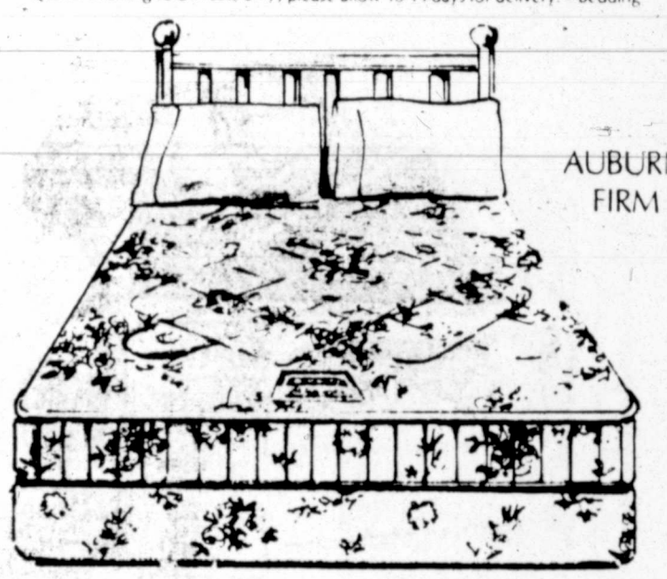

Lubbock County sheriff's deputy Ernest Rector was to arrive here with the suspect Tuesday, but they were delayed a day because of a heavy snowstorm in Denver.

Second Suspect Charged For Abduction, Rape

DETROIT (AP) — A second 15-year-old boy has been charged with two counts of first-degree criminal sexual conduct for last August's abduction and rape of a woman who was "sold" to a group of teen-agers for $10, authorities say.

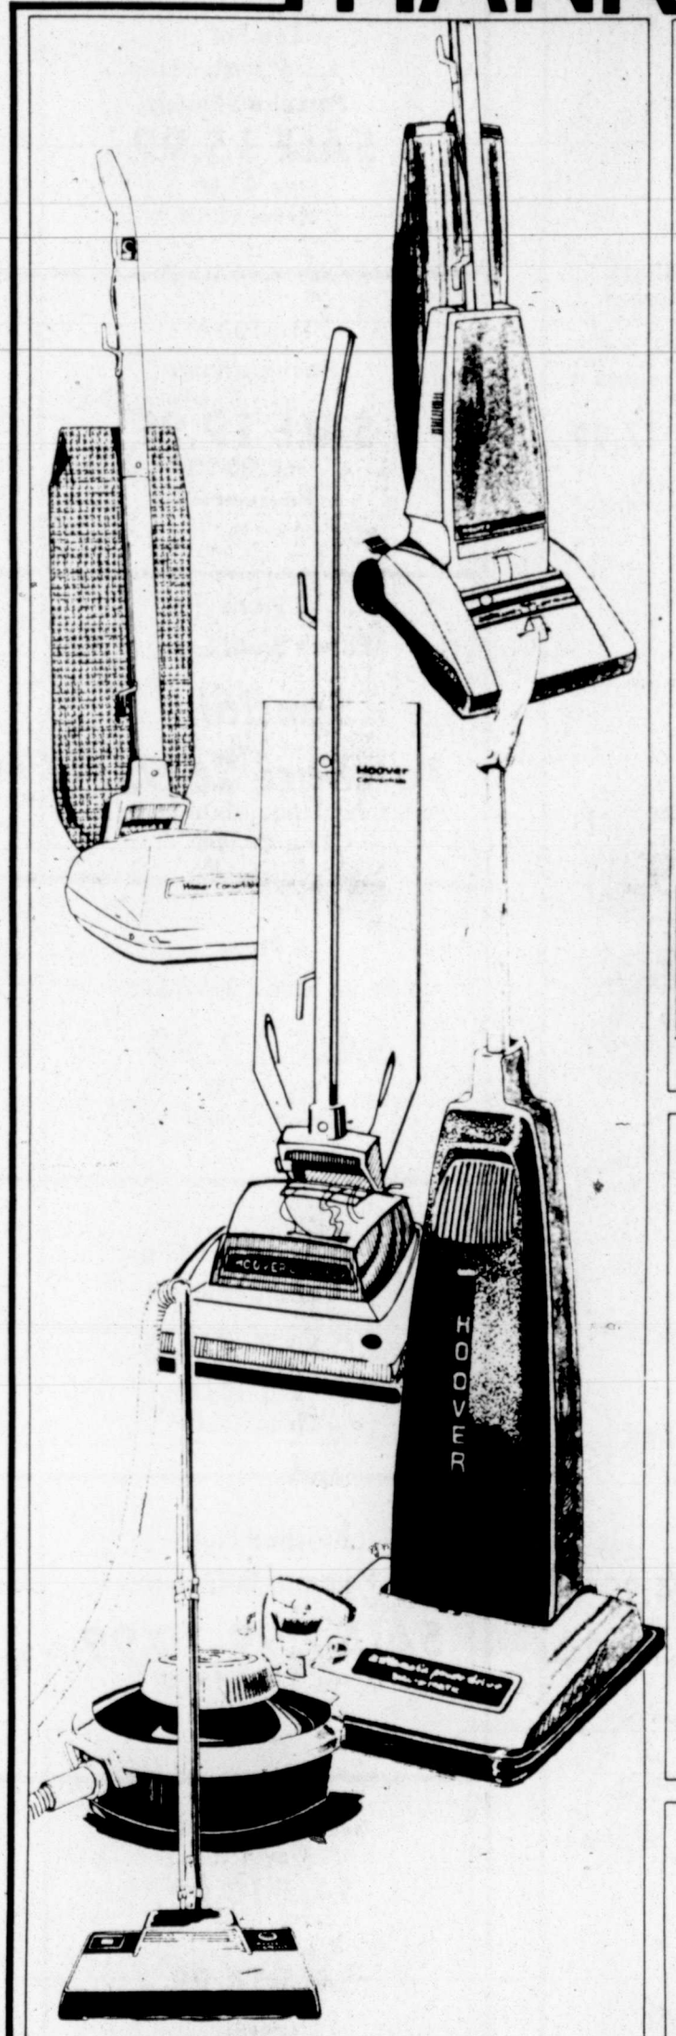

The youth was arraigned Thursday before visiting Recorder's Court Judge William Sutherland, who ordered him held in Wayne County jail in lieu of $10,000 bond until a preliminary examination Nov. 29.

Police said the 26-year-old woman was abducted and raped Aug. 3 when a man robbed her, raped her and then took her to a house where he sold her to a group of teen-age boys for $10.

Soviet Foreign Minister Discusses NATO Deploy

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko said Friday a decision by NATO to deploy medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe would destroy the basis for future negotiations on such weapons.

Gromyko, in a rare press conference after two days of talks here, also said he hoped Washington and Tehran would find a solution to the problem surrounding the taking of U.S. diplomats hostage.

"However, I would express the hope that both sides would show strong restraint," he added, "without emotions running out of control."

Gromyko noted some politicians in the West, including Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, want NATO to agree formally on deploying the U.S. missiles before the alliance enters negotiations with the Soviets.

"We have said openly that this precondition will take away the entire basis for negotiations," Gromyko said. "This position will destroy the basis for negotiations."

The United States and its NATO allies will decide in Brussels next month whether to build and deploy 572 Cruise and Pershing II missiles, capable for the first time of striking targets in the Soviet Union with nuclear warheads.

NATO officials claim the U.S. Missiles are essential to counter Soviet strength and restore the military balance on the continent.

Some Western politicians, most notably in the Netherlands, propose that the alliance decide for now only on construction of the missiles and postpone a decision on deployment until negotiations with Moscow can begin.

Gromyko repeated an offer by Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, delivered Oct. 6 In East Berlin, to begin negotiations immediately if NATO will foresake the missiles.

"I have demonstrated anew this readiness for negotiations during my talks here in Bonn," he said.

Gromyko sought to refute claims by the West the Soviets themselves were responsible for escalating the arms race by deploying multiple warhead SS-20 missiles which can reach all European capitals.

"We say to that, it is true that the NATO countries have already modernized their weapons many times," he said. If the West believes the Soviet missiles have upset the balance of power, "they should sit down at the conference table."

Explosion Kills Brothers Near New Mexico Town

SOCORRO, N.M. (AP) — Two brothers have been killed in an explosion in a pickup truck north of here, authorities say. The victims have been identified as Darrel McDonnel, 23, and Buck McDonnel, 25.

State police Officer David Chavez said it had not been determined whether Thursday's blast about 60 miles south of Albuquerque was a gas explosion or caused by dynamite.

"They went outside of the house, their mother said, to get some rifles from the truck and opened the doors to the truck and it blew up," Chavez said.

To treat mild sunburn, take short, cool baths. Application of wet compresses also relieves pain by drawing heat out of the burn.

Researchers Continuing Battle With Deadly Ant

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — In the 40 years or so that the fire ant jumped ship in this port city it has become the scourge of farmers from Texas to the Carolinas because its sting can kill humans and livestock.

Now, in the wake of an environmental ban on mirex, a poison that had been widely used to combat the insect, experts are looking for a biological weapon. Two of the best possibilities could be to eliminate the queen's sex appeal or to find a disease that would decimate ant colonies.

"We have three people right now down in Brazil looking for biological control agents and diseases of ants," said Cliff Lofgren, a U.S. Department of Agriculture researcher at Gainesville, Fla.

Lofgren, respected in research circles as "Mr. Fire Ant," said attempts also are under way to isolate the queen ant's sex attractor. However, it is not yet known if such action would deter the sturdy worker ants.

The troublesome ants began crawling up political stumps last year when the Environmental Protection Agency outlawed the use of mirex.

EPA has recently approved testing of a possible substitute for mirex called AC 217,300. It is made by American Cyanamid Co., headquartered in Princeton, N.J. Aerial spraying of 110,000 acres in the Southeast is expected to go on for one year.

Mirex, first used against the imported fire ant in 1962, became a target of environmental groups in the early 1970's. The USDA Suspended its fire ant control program based on mirex in June 1975, and the EPA cancelled all registrations for use of the material as of Dec. 31, 1977.

Mrs. Sandra Lollis of rural Vidalia, Ga., anxiously awaits a new product to stomp out fire ants. She's waged a private war against fire ants since discovering that her 5-year-old son, Michael, could be killed by them.

"They hunt him down," she said, adding that he'd been stung an "uncountable number of times."

Mrs. Lollis said the government sprayed around their house trailer. But the ants are back and the Lollis family is planning to move next month to mountainous Tennessee to escape them.

"Michael starts to school next fall and he couldnt go to school here," said Mrs. Lollis. "The ant mounds here are bigger than dishpans."

Fire ants have been blamed for many deaths. A 25-year-old Vidalia man, Ronald Seaburn, was stung on the foot by a fire ant Sept. 13, 1978. He died as a result, according to hospital records.

And Bill Williams of the North Carolina health department said 64-year-old Roberta Nye also died from ant stings last April. She was watching her husband dig wild azaleas on a roadside near Shallotte, N.C. and didn't know she was being attacked.

"It's amazing how well organized they are," said Lofgren. "They work toward one goal: Survival of the colony."

There are two species of imported fire ants, commonly distinguished by their colors, black and red. They became a problem in the Southeast after entering the country from South America at Mobile some 40 to 60 years ago.

Since their entry, they have spread over nine states, from Texas to North Carolina.

It's kind of a mystery how the ant got into the country, Lofgren said. He explained that they spread around the Alabama coast because there's so much nursery stock in the area.

"A survey in the 1950's done on nurseries over the Southeast detected fire ants everywhere," Lofgren said.

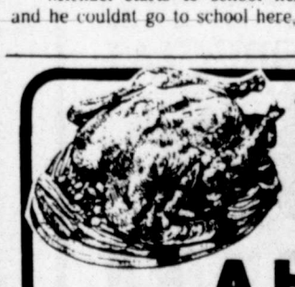

Mexico Tries Solar Energy

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Despite its oil reserves, Mexico is developing solar energy because the world's oil reserves will be depleted in 20 years at the current rate of consumption, an official says.

Leopoldo Gonzalez Saenz, Deputy Mnister of Human Settlements and Public Works said this week that nations need to "take radical measures to rationalize oil consumption and substitute other energy resources for oil, or confront a catastrophe."

He said solar energy is the best option.

"Even though Mexco is one of the few self-sufficient oil producing countries, we are conscious of the need to investigate and develop technologies for using other sources of energy," he said.

Foam Added To Firefighter's Efforts

GALVESTON (UPI) — Firefighters trying to control a 22-day-old oil tanker fire Friday pumped chemical foam into the No. 5 compartment of the wrecked ship whose spilled cargo has splotched 150 miles of Gulf of Mexico beaches.

Jack Warfield of Burmah Oil Tankers Ltd., owner of the 772foot Burmah Agate which on Nov. 1 collided 5 miles offshore with the freighter Mimosa, said firefighters remained unable to launch a final push to kill the blaze.

"To do a full final, or attempted final, foam job, we'd probably have to put upwards of 30 people on board," Warfield said. "The assessment is that there's still too great a risk of explosion at this point, the fire being too hot."

Warfield said estimates of the loss and the cost of firefighting and pollution cleanup paid by the company were incomplete, but he said it was "logical" to estimate more than half the Agate's 16 million gallon cargo burned or spilled.

Cleanup crews using rakes, shovels and vaccuum trucks worked public beaches from Galveston to Freeport, 50 miles to the southwest, which had been hard hit by washups of the spilled crude intended for Houston refineries.

Coast Guard spokesman Ray Baker said winds that had blown out of the south and southeast for six straight days, defying the autumn season and staining beaches with heavy washups of spilled oil, shifted to northerly again Friday.

Winds out of the north help keep the spill away from shore, reducing the risk of pollution.

So far, Baker said there had been no major pollution of wildlife rich bays. Environmental experts say the hard-packed beaches suffer less harm and can be cleaned more easily.

Warfield said foam was pumped into No. 5 tank because it was burning next to 12 forward tanks firefighters believed have remained in tact. As many as 18 other compartments may have been damaged by the collision, explosions and fire.

"The strategy is to contain and hopefully eliminate the fire aft ... so the forward tanks, when the ship cools, can be lightened. That's bringing barges alongside and taking the oil off," Warfield said.

He said the forward tanks firefighters were trying to save contained more than 5 million gallons of oil.

The vessel, anchored in 40 feet of water, has buckled across its middle and the center has sagged and possibly come to rest on the bottom, Coast Guard spokesmen said. They said it was not expected to break in half.

Thirty-two crewmen died in the collision. Twenty-nine were rescued. All were from Taiwan.

OIL USE UP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumption of petroleum in Latin America rose an estimated 6.8 percent in 1978, according to the annual report of the Inter-American Development Bank. The report said Mexico and Brazil had increased their consumption by 10.8 and 9.7 percent, respectively, and the Central American countries as a group were up 6 percent.

Saudi Arabian Troops Control Sacred Mosque

JEDDAH, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — Saudi Arabia said its troops Friday wrested "total control" of the sacred mosque at Mecca from armed Moslem "deviants" but travelers reported some holdouts in a second floor corner of Islam's holiest shrine.

Travelers reaching Jeddah said an unknown number of prominent Saudis were still held hostage and there were many casualties in the mosque courtyard when Saudi security forces launched an all-out assault Friday morning.

The mosque minarets were pock-marked by small arms fire and the outer wall may have been damaged by mortar shells, they said.

"Security forces are in total control now of the entire mosque," Information Minister Dr. Muhammed Abdu Yamani said in a statement broadcast by the state-run Riyadh radio at 2:30 p.m. (5:30 a.m. CST).

"Security forces were arresting remnants of the clique whic carried out a criminal and ugly action in the most sacred place in the world," Yamani sai.

U.S. diplomatic sources, however, said they were told by Saudi officials of "isolated pockets of resistance" inside the labyrinthian mosue, which provides thousands of potential hiding places. The source said no hostages were still held.

The remaining gunmen were rported holed up in a corner on the second floor of the huge mosque toward which the world's 700 million Moslem pray five times a day.

The gunmen captured in the bloody siege — which aroused the fury of the Moslem world over the desecration of their holiest shrine —faced execution by beheading with a sword under Islamic law.

Dplomatic sources said a curfew was declared at Medina as well as Mecca and at Taif, the summer residence of King Khalid. There were unconfirmed reports of disturbances at Taif coinciding with the takeover of the mosque at dawn prayers Tuesday morning.

Western diplomatic sources in Jedah said shooting could be heard in Mecca Friday morning as the audi troops surrounding the huge, white-stone shrine exchanged fire with some of the gunmen holed up in the mosque's towering minarets and upper stories.

No final casualty figures had been released but the totals were expected to be far higher than those given earlier by Saudi Foreign Minister Saud al Fisal who said two persons had been killed and eight wounded.

Pilgrims returning to Cairo fom Mecca Thursday said there was a "horrible massacre of Saudi security forces" aad "a large number of worshippers were also killed or wounded."

TRAVELING ZOO

TORONTO (AP) — The Metropolitan Toronto Zoo may go on the road next year. Director Tommy Thompson says a soft-drink delivery truck may be converted into a zoomobile to carry small Canadian animals to schools, shopping centers and trade shows. "We'd have frogs and snakes and groundhogs — nothing terribly large," Thompson says. "We might get a bit exotic and have a wombat." That's an Australian animal resembling a small bear.

Mysterious, Beautiful Actress Dies Of Stroke

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Merle Oberon, whose classical beauty helped sustain her career as a vulnerable yet mysterious character on the screen, died Friday at Cedars Sinai Medical Center.

She suffered a stroke late Thursday at her Malibu home, and was taken by private ambulance to the medical center.

She died at 3 p.m. with her fourth husband, Dutch actor Robert Wolders, at her side, along with her children, Bruno Pagliai Jr. and Francesca Pagliai Bravo, said hospital spokesman Larry Baum.

Her family gave her age as 62, Baum said, but authoritative movie reference books give ages variously at 60 and 68. She had said in past interviews that she gave false ages over the years.

With a striking beauty that stunned even leading men like Douglas Fairbanks, Miss Oberon parlayed her looks and reputation as a cosmopolitan into a 40-year film career.

Her reputation for living well at a variety of spacious homes attracted as many admirers as her movies.

She most enjoyed her "marble castle" 20 steps above the ocean near Acapulco, Mexico. Invitations to the secluded home, visible only from the sea, became a sought-after treasure for jet-setters.

"We live outdoors there, in the brilliance of the sky and water" she said in 1969 when she was married to her third husband, millionaire industrialist Bruno Pagliai Sr.

Guests included such names as Noel Coward, Clare Booth Luce, Baron Guy de Rothschild and the Bing Crosbys.

Besides the Acapulco home, there were two other estates in Mexico and a Beverly Hills mansion — each richly decorated with an eclectic taste that made the homes frequent subjects of decorating and art magazines.

She also owned homes in Malibu, 40 miles north of Los Angeles, when she first moved to Hollywood in the '30s and years later after her arriage t Wolders.

The intenational beauty was born Estelle O'Brien Merle Thompson on the island of Tasmania near Australia. Her father, a British Army officer, died in a shooting accident three months before she was born.

At age 6, Miss Oberon went to Bombay to visit her godmother, but stayed there for two years before moving to Calcutta to stay with her uncle.

As a young girl, she said she was taken with the film "Dark Angel," starring Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky. Years later, she would star in the remake.

When her uncle took her to England in 1928, she pleaded to stay. He finally relented, leaving her about $100 spending money and a steamer ticket for a return to Calcutta. She spent the $100 on clothes in three days and cashed the steamer ticket to buy a rabbit fur coat.

Miss Oberon said people encouraged her to get into movies. "I think it was because I had unusual coloring for England — white skin, dark hair and slanted eyes," she said.

Her first film audition at a cafe was a flop, but the owner hired her as a dance hostess. Miss Oberon managed to grab a few bit parts when she was spotted at London's Wemberly Studios by Hungarian director Sir Alexander Korda, who eventually married her.

Her first film was "Service for Ladies" in 1932. But she achieved fame that same year with her brief but stirring portrayal as Anne Boleyn opposite Charles Laughton in "The Private Life of Henry VIII," produced by Korda.

Her beauty allured Fairbanks to ask for her as a leading lady in the 1934 movie "The Private Lives of Don Juan."

Miss Oberon and Korda were divorced in 1945, and she married cinematographer Lucien Ballard.

Other films included "The Scarlet Pimpernel" with Leslie Howard in 1934, "Wuthering Heights" in 1939, "Dark Waters" and "The Dodger" in 1941, "A Sog to Remember" in 1945, "Desiree" in 1954, "The Oscar" in 1966, "Hotel" in 1967 and "Interval" in 1973.

Wolders was her co-star in "Interval." She married him when her divorce from Pagliai became final.

She also starred in a 1956 television series, "Assignment Foreign Legion."

A memorial service for the actress will be held at All Saints Episcopal Church in Beverly Hills on Wednesday at 3 p.m., Baum said. He added that her burial would be private.

Baum said the family requested that in lieu of flowers, friends should make donations to the Motion Picture Relief Home in Woodland Hills.

MERLE OBERON

Committee To Study Paraquat Spraying

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control will hold hearings Thurday questioning a federal finding that marijuana sprayed with paraquat can cause serious harm to marijuana smokers.

The committee chairman, Rep. Lester L. Wolff, D-N.Y., said in announcing the hearings that "new evidence furnished to the committee found that residues of paraquat sprayed on marijuana would not be sufficient to cause toxic effects to the marijuana user."

Wolff said the evidence was in a report issued last July by the United Nations Narcotics Laboratory.

For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

New Mexico Court Rules Against 'Money Marriage'

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — The New Mexico Supreme Court has concluded that a man's alleged agreement to marry a terminally ill woman if he was named sole heir of her estate violated a public policy of marrying for money.

"It is the policy of this state to foster and protect the marriage institution," the court said in discussing the case. "It is not the policy of the state to encourage spouses to marriage for money."

In a ruling written by Chief Justice Dan Sosa Jr., the court rejected the claim of Robert W. Lord that he was entitled to the estate of his late wife, Bernice Jarrott Lord, because of an oral agreement they had reached prior to their marriage in November 1974.

Sosa said the late Mrs. Lord, 64, lived on a ranch outside Santa Fe and was suffering from squamous cell cancer. Lord contended that in October 1974, she agreed to will her entire estate to him if he would marry her and "take care of her like a husband would" until her death. Lord said he agreed and the couple was married Nov. 21, 1974.

But when she died in 1977, Mrs. Lord's will left $10,000 to Lord but the balance of the estate went to Sue Clair Hughes, her sister. It was later determined that the will had been executed the day after her marriage to Lord.

Sosa noted the district court had ruled that the oral agreement was void and unenforceable because it violated the state fraud statute and was "against public policy."

Black Leaders Reject Request To Support Iran's Revolution

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

For the most part, American civil rights leaders on Friday rejected a plea by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini for an uprising by American blacks in support of Iran's Islamic revolution.

One called Khomeini "a religious fanatic in his dotage."

Elsewhere on the home front, dart boards featuring a picture of the Ayatollah were selling fast.

And Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Armed Forces Committee, urged the United States to adopt a rigid policy of protecting Americans if host nations do not.

With 49 Americans being held hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, Khomeini called on all Moslems and American blacks to rise an "join us in this struggle between the infidel and Islam."

Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, responded, "If the ayatollah is serious about a struggle against oppression and injustice, then he must understand that our struggle is committed to an end to violence in the world and our methods embrace non-violent techniques."

Before there can be a dialogue between Khomeini and American blacks on such a struggle, Lowery said, "the first thing he must do is free the hostages."

Georgia state Sen. Julian Bond said Khomeini is a "religious fanatic in his dotage, who has no understanding of what this country or American blacks are about."

Jesse Jackson, director of Operation PUSH in Chicago, said he disagrees with the terrorist tactics of the Iranian students holding the Americans hostage. But he said he thinks the U.S. should encourage exiled Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, undergoing cancer treatment at a New York hospital, to "get out of the country."

"We would not allow this to be a sanctuary for Hitler because the response of Jewish leaders and human rights leaders would be predictable," Jackson said.

The San Diego Evening Tribune on Friday published a poster drawing of Khomeini, saying bigger copies are being distributed by a local firm called "Up Your Image." Above the picture are the words "Dart Board" and below it, "Stick a Hola in the Ayatollah."

In Cleveland, the Celebrity Marketing Inc. of Cleveland says it's also been doing a booming business in Khomeini dart boards.

Budd Margolis, a free-lance photographer who is co-owner of the enterprise, aid that in the last two weeks 5,000 of the dart boards have been sold at $5 each, with a $6 price on West Coast sales. "They just really want to stick it to him," he said.

Flag stores in several cities have reported brisk sales of Iranian flags intended for burning.

In Oklahoma city, immigration officials say Iranians hoping to remain in the United States are attempting to be adopted by U.S. citizens, but it won't work.

"They come in here all the time saying, 'Hey, I have an American daddy,'" said James M. Young, officer in charge of the Oklahoma City Immigration and Naturalization Service office. "I tell them that's wonderful, and they can write to him from over there."

In the meantime, Lowery said he was prepared to go to Iran to seek the release of the remaining hostages "if it would serve a useful purpose and if there's any indication that the ayatollah is open to negotiations about releasing the hostages."

In other developments:

•Bus lines in Hudson County, New Jersey, were being told to rid themselves of Iranian drivers. James LaFante, president of the Hudson County Bus Owners Association, said six Iranian drivers already have been fired.

•The Ames, Iowa, Human Relations Commission has told the owner of the Red Barn Supper Club that his sign saying Iranians are not welcome is a civil rights violation. The owner, Bruce Russell, argues that the sign is not discriminatory because it does not tell Iranians that they are not allowed, just that they are not welcome.

•An Iranian student, Freydown Aslemand of Hagerstown, Md., turned back at the Canadian border at Niagra Falls while trying to leave the United States, has been ordered to leave U.S. territory within 30 days because his visa has run out.

•An anti-Iranian rally to be staged in Sunday in Huntington, W.Va., is expected to draw thousands, according to the sponsors, the Huntington District Labor Council, AFL-CIO.

BLACK RHINOCEROS

The populations of the black rhinoceros, Kenya's only native rhinoceros, has dropped from 15,000 in 1969 to an estimated 1,500 today. Most have died at the hands of poachers, who covet the animal's horns. In the past few years thousands of rhinos in Kenya have been killed so their horns could be exported, although it is illegal.

Graffiti Reflecting Rage Against Iran

By United Press International

Tall, blood-red letters Friday expressed growing American rage against Iran and its ayatollah. The father of a young hostage held by the religious leader's followers urged a tough U.S. stand against the Moslem militants.

"Khomeini must die," a spray-painted slogan on a Chicago elevated train trestle said.

The vengeful graffiti — in yard-high letters was the harshest seen so far in a growing display of grassroots outrage over the seizure of the U.S. embassy in Tehran and the taking of American hostages.

Fire ripped an Islamic organization's building in Chicago's suburbs Thursday and police theorized the fire may have been set in retaliation for the embassy takeover in Iran.

But the building was that of an Albanian Islamic Organization. Authorities theorized the fire may have been set — by someone who confused Albanians with Iranians.

In Detroit, Joseph Subic Sr., exhorted President Carter to stand tough against the Moslem fanatics that hold his son hostage.

Subic, 52, confirmed the voice broadcast by the RKO Network asking the United States to give in to Iranian students' demands was that of his 23-year-old son, Joseph Jr.

But, he said, the United States must remain strong in any negotiations. He exhorted President Carter not to yield to the students' demand that the deposed shah of Iran, hospitalized in New York for treatment of cancer, be returned to his homeland for trial.

"What Iran has done is wrong," Subic said. "I am really worried about my son. I don't want to do anything to harm him. But we cannot return the shah or give in to any demands.

"I feel strongly about that, and I feel my son does, too."

But he said the anger of Americans should not be vented on Iranian students in America.

"If they're here illegally, if they're breaking the law, they should be shipped out," Subic said. "But only those who are illegal."

The families of 13 hostages freed from the U.S. embassy in Iran rejoiced during an emotional Thanksgiving reunion Thursday but their thoughts were with the other 49 hostages still held.

The freed hostages had decided and announced in Germany before they left they would not talk bout their ordeal until the 49 others are released. All observed that decision and politely turned aside questions at the airport.

The only remark made by any of them came from Marine Cpl. Westley Williams, 22, Albany, N.Y., who seemed on the verge of tears when he said:

"I feel bad about leaving them behind."

Freed Hostage Stays Mum About Embassy Ordeal

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Marine Sgt. Ladell Maples, one of the 13 American hostages freed from the U.S. embassy in Tehran, arrived Friday afternoon in Memphis on the last leg of a trip home to Earle, Ark., but would say little about his ordeal.

Maples, 23, was among the first three hostages freed by the Iranian students who took over the embassy on Nov. 4. He was freed this week.

Wearing a tan, three-piece suit and an open collar, Maples stepped off the Braniff International flight to the applause of a crowd of about 50 persons, including relatives and neighbors.

"Great, I feel just great," Maples said to reporters who formed a tight circle about him. But he said "no comment" when asked to discuss the ordeal of being a captive in the embassy.

"I'll just try to enjoy myself," Maples said as he was pressed for answers. Then he turned abruptly and said, "Let us get out of here."

Locking arms with his mother and father, who accompanied him on the flight from the Washington area, Maples walked down the main concourse of the Memphis airport toward the lobby, drawing stares.

He appeared to relax as he neared the lobby, bending to lift an 8-year-old neighbor, Jessalyn Jones, to his shoulder; then he embraced his sister, Claudia Maples, lifting her from the floor.

Guided through the crowd by Marine Chief Warrant Officer Pat Hardy, the Maples made their way to the baggage area with reporters still in tow.

Hardy, wearing the blue dress uniform of the Marines, was the escort for the Maples on the trip home. Hardy said he thought Maples would take 30 dys off, then report to the Marine base at Quantico, Va., to receive his next assignment.

With many of the reporters trailing off to interview relatives and neighbors, Maples left the baggage area to a waiting Marine staff car, which was parked in the taxi zone.

With reporters again closing in, Maples gave a last wave, took a seat beside his mother in the back of the car.

The car headed for Earle, with a caravan of reporters following.

The biggest block of cheese ever made was a 17-ton cheddar. It was produced by Wisconsin cheese makers and shown at the 1964 New York World's Fair. It used 170,000 quarts of milk — 43 years' worth from the average cow.

Victim's Mother Urges Support For Handling Of Iran Crisis

SELDEN, N.Y. (UPI) — The widowed mother of a Marine killed when a mob stormed a U.S. embassy in Pakistan appealed Friday for "no more bloodshed" and urged Americans to support President Carter's handling of the Iranian crisis.

Ashen-faced and choking back tears, Georgene Crowley told a news conference: "I just don't want any more bloodshed. Please, no more bloodshed."

Wth her six remaining children at her side, she added: "I know it's vey hard, but please stand by the president."

Mrs. Crowley's 20-year-old son, Steven, was killed Wednesday when he was caught in a crossfire between a Pakistani mob that stormed the U.S. Embassy in Islamabad and Marines who were defending it.

The attack came during a rash of Moslem violence against U.S. diplomaticposts that followed the takeover of the U.S. embassy in Tehran.

In the backyard of her modest, plit-level home on Long Island, Mrs. Crowley told reporters she didn't harbor any bitterness against the Pakistanis.

But she said: "I just don't see why this country should be pushed around any more."

The 49-year-old woman, whose husband died two years ago, said she had spoken to the president Wednesdayand he told her she coud be proud of her son.

"He was a good Marine. He was a good son," she said, choking back tears.

"He wanted to be a Marine since he was 2 years old and we didn't stand in his way," she added.

Sgt. Frank Grotschel, one of two Marines stationed at the Crowley home, said Steven's body, which is now in Karachi, would probably be returned to the United States Monday or Tuesday.

Mrs. Crowley has six other children, who range in age from 6 to 24. Her youngest son, William, said he wants to become a marine.

The world's oldest instrument probably is the flute, originally made from bamboo or some other hollow wood.

Santa-Clad Skydiver Jerked Out Of Plane

BEAUMONT (AP) — It's back to reindeer and sleigh for Santa Claus in this Southeast Texas city.

Carl Neukrich, in red suit and white beard, was suppose to skydive over a shopping mall Friday to the delight of all the toddlers watching below.

But Neukrich apparently stood too close to an open door of the plane and the wind caught the smaller of two parachutes he wore and jerked him out.

Santa hit the plane's stabilizer on the back wing, then fell earthward, floating to a landing in a mud puddle three miles from Parkdale Mall.

An ambulance took Neukirch to a hospital, where his pride was reported hurt more than he was.

Khomeini-Russia Link Charged In Memoirs

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Soviet penetrated the Shiite Moslem sect as early as the 1950s and the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini was a Russian agent at that time, according to a Polish army counter intelligence chief who defected to the West in 1960.

The charge against the Iranian revolutionary leader was made Friday in an announcement by a California law firm negotiating with Bantam Books for publication of the memoirs of the former Polish espionage chief, Col. Michael M. Goleniewski.

Attorney Howard Lipton, speaking for the firm, said the memoirs were expected to be published in about six months.

Lipton said Goleniewski learned of Khomeini's activities on behalf of Russia when the colonel was deputy chief and vice director of Polish army counter intelligence from 1953 to 1956.

David Aldrich, a former senior editor of Look magazine who is editing Goleniewski's book, said the colonel informed the CIA of Khomeini's espionage role when he was debriefed by the staff of then director of counter intelligence James Angleton at the agency's headquarters in Langley, Va.

Adrich said Goleniewski told the CIA that Khomeini was the most important of five top Russian agents in Iran and that he reported to a high Iraqi government official, who in turn passed information to the Russian KGB through its agents in Warsaw, where Goleniewski was headquartered.

Goleniewski transmitted some 8,000 secret documents on microfilm to U.S. intelligence from 1958through 1960, when he defected to West Germany, according to Aldrich and other sources. He was brought from there to Virginia where he was debriefed over a period of three years and was given asylum. He is now living in New York.

Aldrich said the colonel provided the CIAwith a Soviet scenario for infiltrating the Shiite Moslem sect, which was troublesome to Stalin and succeeding regimes. About one fifth of the Soviet population traditionally belonged to the Shi'a and Sunni Mslem sects.

Aldrich said events in the Middle East, including those of the past few days, have followed the scenario closely and that Goleniewski has warned of Shiite Mslem uprisings throughout the oil-rich Persian Gulf states.

Among the espionage cases known to have been documented by Goleniewski were those of Gordon Lonsdale, George Blake, John Vassal and several other top British Soviet agents, Swedish Colonel Wennerstrom and Israel's Colonel Beer.

After taking up residence in the United States, Goleniewski stunned CIA officials by asserting that he was born Grand Duke Alexei of Russia, the only son and heir of Czar Nicholas II.

This claim has never been officially accepted by the U.S. Government or by any surviving members of the imperial Romanoff family. The Czar, his empress and their five cildren are believd to have been execued by Russian Bolsheviks in Siberia in 1918, but there has been considerable evidence put forward in recent years that the execution was faked.

Lipton, of the firm of Kaplan, Livingston, Goodwon, Berkowtz and Selvin in Beverly Hills, said Goleniewski's book "will recount for the first time the true story of the escape of the Romanoff family from Russia into the underground of Poland."

Hostage Comes Home To Hero's Welcome

CAMBRIDGE SPRINGS, Pa. (AP) — Kathy Gross, international traveler, came home Friday to a hero's welcome in a small town where you can still park free on Main Street and the folks are friendly to outsiders.

"Welcome Home, Kathy," read multicolored signs over the main highway at both ends of town.

Miss Gross, 22, was one of the 13 hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Iran to be released this week after more than two weeks of confinement.

She flew from Washington to Erie for Thanksgiving with relatives. She and her parents, Robert and May Gross, headed back to this town of 2,500 people on Friday for a reception and parade.

The joy of the return was diminished, however, by the hospitalization of Kathy's mother, who was taken to Saint Vincent Health Center in Erie early Friday for what her son, Danny, described as "a minor operation." A hospital spokeswoman declined to give the reason for the operation.

KATHY GROSS... Tears of joy.

Danny Gross, 20, said his mother became ill Thursday after the family returned to Erie. He said Kathy, their brothers and sister and possibly their father would still be on hand for the parade and reception.

"This town is like one, big family," said Deputy Mayor Richard Mitchell, who was in charge of the affair because Mayor Stanley Fedorek was away for the holidays.

"Everybody knows their next-door neighbor around here, and we've all been real concerned," Mitchell said.

"We didn't know her real well, but we know her folks," said the manager of a local variety store that sported the three big words of the day on its windows: "Welcome Home, Kathy."

"It's good to have you people in town," he added to a reporter.

The parade gathered Friday afternoon behind the high school Ms. Gross attended. The entourage included a pair of fire engines, an ambulance and a police car, plus some other vehicles to carry the Grosses and other dignitaries.

Mitchell said the parade was to make its way through the town to Alliance College for an official greeting and a reception, including a presentation by Mitchell of a bouquet of roses.

Not in the parade was the local high school band, whose director has been ill.

Not all of the preparations went smoothly. An irate resident showed up at the borough building to complain that one of the welcome banners was braced in a stiff breeze by guy wires that were pulling siding off his house.

"I can't believe this is happening in our little town," said the borough secretary after she had handled the problem.

Mitchell said he hoped the reception would break up promptly at 7 p.m.

"This is going to be tiring for her," he said. "I think she'll need to sit down and relax. She's holding up real well, but when she has a chance to sit down, all this may hit her harder."

Poet Robert Burns died at age 37 in 1796.

Diplomat Rebutts Blindfolding Reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iran's top diplomat in the United States said Friday he has been assured that Americans held at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran are not being blindfolded.

But Ali A. Agah said nothing about the captives having been bound, as reported by those set free this week.

"I am hoping their safe release will be accomplished soon," Agah, charge d'affaires at the Iranian Embassy here, said in a letter sent to the Washington Star.

"However, until then, let us not create any more anxiety which could jeopardize our common objective by causing undesirable backlash," Agah added in the letter published Friday.

The brief letter began with a statement that Agah shares anxiety for the safety of the Americans in the embassy. The safety of all Americans in Iran "concerns me very deeply," he said.

Agah added that Iranian students at the embassy compound, independent observers and Iranian government officials have all assured him the hostages "are safe and have not been physically harmed."

In a reference to the shah, undergoing treatment for cancer in a New York hospital, Agah said:

"Let us hope that the 'sick man' who transmits sickness wherever he goes will make his departure from America without causing harm to innocent people."

The letter ended with a renewed appeal for "patience, calm and courage" which Agah said "you have so far demonstrated."

Father Of Hostage Says U.S. Officials Should Not Give In

DETROIT (UPI) — The father of the embassy hostage whose Thanksgiving broadast asked the United States to extradite the deposed Shah of Iran says American officials should not give in to the demands of the Iranian students.

Joseph Subic Sr., 52, a machinist, said Friday he is sure his son, Joseph Subic Jr., 23, agrees with him despite what he said in the taped message broadcast by the RKO Network Thursday.

"What Iran has done is wrong," Subic said. "I am really worried about my son. I don't want to do anything to harm him, but we cannot return the shah or give in to any demands.

"I feel strongly about that, and I feel my son does, too."

Subic said he and his wife, Helen, spent a tense Thanksgiving Day with relatives. He described his wife as "understandably very upset."

"I'm still hopeful," he said. "I hope something can be settled. But the waiting has been hard, really hard on us."

Subic said Americans shoud not vent their anger over the hostage crisis on Iranian students in the United States.

"If they're here illegally — if they're breaking the law — they should be shipped out," he said. "But only those who are illegal."

Subic said he has been in contact with the State Department and is satisfied wih the way officials are handling the crisis, although he never was given official confirmation his son is a hostage.

"But I knew," Subic said. "A father must know where his son is, especially a good son."

He declined to give specific information about his son, saying he did not want to jeopardize the hostages' lives or any ongoing negotiations.

Sbic said he was notified about 3 p.m. (CST) Thursday by the RKO network of the interview with the Moslem students in which the tape of his son was played. He said he confirmed it was his son's vice.

The younger Subic, speaking in an impassive monotone, read a one-minute statement in which he said he was speaking for all the hostages. He wished his parents well and said the hostages were being treated fairly and were in good sprits.

The statement said the hostaes hoped the U.S. overnment "will concede to the demands of the people of Iran ... then we will be set free."

The first U.S. rocket with an atomic warhead was tested over the Nevada desert in 1957.

Suspects In Robbery Sought By Police

Lubbock police Friday were seeking two suspects in an armed robbery in which a man reportedly was shot in the leg.

The incident occurred at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at 100 Ave. P, police reports indicate.

Lupe Guitron and Reynaldo Guitron of Lubbock told police the robbery occurred after the pair and the two suspects helped start the car of a stranded motorist.

The pair said they had stopped to help the motorist when they saw a car in a ditch near Avenue P. While at the scene, the two suspects drove up, also apparently to aid the unidentified motorist.

After the stranded car was gone, the Guitrons told police the other two men drew guns and demanded their money. When they did not comply, one of the suspects fired a shot, striking the shoe of Reynaldo Guitron.

Lupe Guitron then attempted to grab the suspect's gun, and the suspect fired again, striking him in the leg. Apparently the wound did not require medical attention.

The suspects then fled with the pair's wallets. A .22 caliber bullet was recovered from Reynaldo Guitron's shoe, police said.

A color television set valued at $344 was stolen from the home of Connie Lee Sampson of 6517 Ave. T between midnight Wednesday and 1 p.m. Thursday, police said. The front door apparently had been pried open.

Four chrome wheel covers valued at $350 were stolen from a car belonging to Fray H. Smith of 4400 University. The theft occurred between 2 a.m. and 9:30 a.m. Friday, police reports indicate.

A 21-year-old security guard said two men came to his apartment about 11 p.m. Thursday, beat him and threatened to return if he ever turned in anyone to the police again.

Roy Flores Ortaga of 1000 E. 28th St., Apt. 106, quoted one of the men as telling him, "This is what you get when you turn my son in."

Ortaga said he believed his assailants were the father and brother of several juveniles he had turned over to Lubbock police Sunday night for stealing two pickup trucks and burglarizing several other vehicles.

Reports indicate the victim picked up a .45-caliber pistol and flashlight after he looked out his window and saw one of the men wearing a green ski mask.

Ortaga said that when he opened the the flashlight and pistol out of his hands. The victim reportedly was knocked to the ground and beaten.

He said the attackers threatened worse consequences if he ever turned in anyone to police again. Ortaga was not seriously injured in the assault, according to police.

Ortaga said the men fled on foot, apparently taking his pistol with them.

He described one of the suspects as a short, thin, young Mexican-American, wearing a green ski mask and blue pants. His companion also was described as a Mexican-American, between 26 and 35, tall, heavy and wearing dark clothing.

In other activity, Cody T. Mitchell, 17, of 1313 61st St. told police he was robbed of a cigarette lighter and $23 in cash and change shortly after 2 a.m. Friday in the 5800-block of Avenue P.

Mitchell said he was walking south on Avenue P when two males drove up, jumped out of their vehicle and attacked him. He said one of the assailants was armed with a stick and that the other struck him several times with his fist.

Reports state one of the men held Mitchell on the ground with one hand behind his back while his companion took the loot out of the teen-ager's pants pocket. The bandits then drove away, police were told.

The robbers were described as Mexican-Americans driving a dark, two-door vehicle.

A 27-year-old Lubbock man was booked into the county jail on suspicion of criminal trespassing after he allegedly refused to leave his mother's house about 5:25 a.m. today after arguing about a car.

The man was arrested after he refused to obey officers' orders to leave the residence.

Pedro R. Delarosa of 4105 Mesa Road told police he lost about $960 in stereo equipment and a CB radio when his house was burglarized between 8 p.m. Wednesday and 9:30 p.m. Thursday.

About $2,000 in property, including a large quantity of firearms, was the reported loot taken in a break-in at Larry Philip Martin's 301 39th St. residence between 9:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. Thursday.

Phillip Morrow of 2817 74th Place said a house he owns at 3708 Elgin Avenue was burglarized Thursday and $600 in property stolen, including a guitar and shotgun.

Federal Appeals Court Awards $22,604 To NAACP Lawyers

CINCINNATI (UPI) — A Federal appeals court Friday awarded $22,604 to NAACP lawyers for a small part of their legal work in the Memphis, Tenn., school desegregation case.

But the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ordered the federal district court in Memphis to recalculate payment for most of the NAACP legal work in the case that spanned nearly two decades.

For the bulk of the work, the NAACP had asked $988,870 but the district court awarded only $28,600. The appellate court said there had not been an "adequate evidentiary hearing" on the matter and sent it back to the lower court for further procedings and a complete recalculation of the award.

As for payment for a smaller part of the case, the appellate court said it had enough information to re-set that award. The NAACP had asked $43,213, but was awarded only a small fraction of it by the federal district court. The appellate court decided $22,604 was appropriate.

Part of that $22,604 included paying one NAACP attorney at the rate of $137.50 an hour for 30 hours of trial work.

That prompted an outcry from Appellate Judge Paul C. Weick, who dissented from majority judges John W. Peck and Anthony J. Celebrezze.

"An allowance of $135 or more an hour for trial work in these cases is grossly excessive," complained Weick. Weick also pointed out, "It seems that in these cases it has not even been considered that the funds out of which the allowance are to be paid have been exacted from local taxpayers for the needed and ever increasing expenses of the operation of the public schools.

"School desegregation cases are not the type of cases where plantiff's lawyers should reap a huge harvest," added Weick. "Nor should it be necessary for the plaintiffs in each case to be represented by a flock of lawyers. We should remember the old dage hat too many cooks spoil the soup."

Weick also warned that awarding high fees in the Memphis case could be precedent-setting in similar cases throughout the four states in the 6th Circuit's jurisdiction — Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky and Tennessee.

"Whatever we establish as the law of this circuit may control or have a bearing on the allowance of attorneys fees, costs and expenses in a multitude of other school desegregation cases in Cleveland, Lorain, Akron, Youngstown, Columbus, Dayton, Cincinnati, Louisville and elsewhere," said Weick.

Musician's Father Dies

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Funeral services were held Friday for Peter Dewey Fountain Sr., father of jazz clarinetist Pete Fountain.

The elder Fountain, known as "Pops" and "Red" to patrons of Bozo's oyster restaurant in the French Quarter claimed to be the oldest oyster shucker in the city.

Fountain, 77, died Wednesday.

He retired about 10 years ago after working 35 years as a truck driver for the Dixie Brewing Co. and continued working as a "volunteer" oyster shucker at Bozo's.

"If a person does not keep active after retirement, the rocking chair will get you," he once said in an interview.

He called his son a "100 percent nice boy," but claimed to have little in common with him.

"I like to get up at dawn and go fishing," the elder Fountain once said. "That's about the time Pete usually goes to bed."

He is survived by his son, a daughter, three sisters, six grandchildren and three greatgrandchildren.

According to legend, the blue batchelor button flower could foretell a happy marriage. The flower was picked early in the morning and was not looked at for 24 hours. If it was still fresh and 'true blue' it meant a man had chosen the right wife. If it withered, the wedding plans had to be given up.

Auto Theft Fastest Growing Crime

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 15-month investigation shows car theft has become the province of organized crime more than of teen-age hoodlums, and a Senate panel will open hearings Tuesday on the subject.

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., who will conduct the hearings by the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, called auto theft "the fastest growing crime in America ... a $4 billion-a-year industry."

Pravda Reports 1979 Good For Communists

MOSCOW (UPI) — In terms of Communist influence throughout the world, 1979 was a very good year, the newspaper Pravda said Friday.

The daily organ of the Soviet Communist Party pointed to events in Suth-east Asia, Arica and the Middle East s evidence of "irreconcilable contradictions between developing countries and imperialist powers."

In a lengthy front-page editorial that amounted to a year-end review of world affairs, Pravda said: "The events of this year have shown once again that the mighty alliance of the three main revolutionary forces of the present — world socialism, the international working class, and the national liberation movement, is being strengthened, scoring new victories over the forces of imperialism and reaction."

On Thursday, the Soviet army newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda said the fall of Anastasio Somoza's dictatorship in Nicaragua was a milestone in the liberation of Latin America.

Pavda's editorial said the summit of nonaligned nations in Havana this year "demonstrated the growing significance of cooperation and mutual assistance of developing countries and the socialist community in the general anti-imperialist struggle."

The article accused the United States and China of using a "guise of charity" for millions of starving people in Cambodia as a means of "trying once again to interfere with internal affairs of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea (Cambodia)".

It also condemned the intensified guerrilla warfare in Zimbabwe Rhodesia and South Africa and said Western powers were trying to prevent legitimate governments from taking power in those countries.

Finally, the Pravda editorial referred to the Camp David agreement between Egypt and Israel, which "did not bring peace to that long suffering region bt created serious obstacles to a fair settlement of the Middle East crisis."

"Life itself, the vital interests of the peoples, call for intensification of anti-imperialist struggle, for further consolidation of the alliance of all revolutionary democratic forces," Pravda concluded.

Scientists Conclude Gravity Escape No Way To Stay Thin

MOSCOW (UPI) — Scientists have concluded that escaping the Earth's gravity is neither an effective contraceptive nor a way to stay thin, the Tass news agency reported Friday.

The observations were made after researchers studied rats who took part in the flight of Cosmos-1129, a joint Soviet-American biological satellite that was launched Sept. 25 and returned to Earth Oct. 14.

"Specialists established that animals in orbit were gaining weight as much as other animals of the species in the control group on the ground," Tass said.

"Weightlessness and lack of gravity are no obstacle to the development of embryos either," the report said. "This important conclusion was made by scientists on the basis of the data of checks on animals during the flight and after the flight."

The biosatellite was a multinational attempt to determine the effects of weightlessness on living organisms.

"The daily rhythm of biological processes in rats in orbit corresponded to the rhythm of biological processes of these animals on Earth," the Tass dispatch said.

Cosmos-1129 was the first attempt to breed rats in space. Previously only fruitflies have been conceived outside the Earth's gravity, and they developed normally.

The satellite transported 38 rats into space, but only six females were allowed access to two males during the flight.

Scientists plan to examine the offspring throughout their lives to see if conception in weightless conditions has any long-range effects.

The Cosmos-129 mission was the third Soviet-American project to test the effect of weightlessness on the normal functioning of animals.

The scientists also reported that plants and flowers placed abroad the ship flowered and bloomed normally.

"It was established that weightlessness has no negative effect on the forming of flower and seeds," Tass said.

The article said the observations of the animals and plants was continuing.

Japanese Gangster Attempts Hijacking

TOKYO (UPI) — A Japnese gangster armed only with a can opener hijacked a Japan Air Lines DC10 jetliner carrying 356 people Friday and ordered it flown to the Soviet Union or Hong Kong but was overpowered by the pilot and several passengers.

The hijacker, Kazumi Nomura, 25, was captured while the plane sat on the ground at Tokyo's international airport at Narita, being refueled. He was identified by police as a member of the Yakuza (organized crimesyndicate) based in Osaka.

Police officials said Nomura, wielding the can opener seized a sewardess near the cockpit shortly after the plane took off on a domestic flight from Osaka. He forced the pilot to radio word of the hijacking to ground stations.

Pilot Toshiyuki Nishihito suffered bruises on his right hand and right foot wrestling with Nomura and was later taken to a hospital for treatment. But there were no injuries among the passengers, who included 24 children.

JAL crew members told reporters Nomura demanded the jet be flown to either the Soviet Union or Hong Kong "He was emotionally charged," one crew member said.

At one point, according to crew members, Nomura threatened to kill the plane's second officer, Hideto Ueno, unless the JAL jet completed refueling "within 10 minutes" for an overseas trip.

The hijacker refused to disclose any motive for the hijacking, according to a police investigator who questioned him.

Talk is cheaper than you think.

How to save up to 60% on Long Distance.

If you're one of those who thinks a Long Distance call is a luxury, read on.

The trick to saving money while keeping in touch with family or friends is knowing when to call, and calling One-Plus.

Call between 11pm and 8am.

Before you groan about how you can't stay up late or see straight in the morning, think about it.

You'll be saving up to 60%! If you're a night person, you probably don't start counting sheep until after 11 pm anyway. And if you've got friends and family to call out west, it'll be a perfectly civilized 9 or 10 pm when their phone rings. If you like to see the sun rise, and you know folks back east, it'll be an hour later on their end.

Call out of state anytime before 8 am and you can talk all day if you want and still save 60%. In-state calls are also greatly reduced. Just remember to dial One-Plus.

Even on weeknights, save up to 35%.

Sometimes you can't wait for the weekend. Or you don't want to. But you can still save plenty Sunday through Friday from 5 pm to 11 pm. Think about what a bargain it is to call someone 1900 miles away, talk it up for ten minutes, and only run a tab of about $2.00. There's just no other way to get close to a faraway friend or relative so quickly, so cheaply.

On weekdays it's still a bargain.

Here's a surprise. From 8 am to 5 pm, a Long Distance chat still doesn't cost very much. A five minute call out of state, to anywhere in the continental U.S. is only about $2.50 when you dial One-Plus. Think of how good the sound of your voice would be to a friend (not to mention your mother!) right in the middle of the day!

Reach out on the weekend and save up to 60%.

Now this is a stroke of good luck; a really cheap Long Distance phone call just when you may want it most. Call any time between 11 pm Friday and 5 pm Sunday and really save. For instance, dial One-Plus and you can make a ten-minute call to Atlanta for only $1.55. That's almost worth making a new friend in Atlanta for.

Dial One-Plus and watch the savings add up.

Even if you're not a regular do-it-yourselfer, do-it-yourself when you call Long Distance. The savings are significant when you dial "one" plus the area code plus the phone number, instead of having the Operator do it. It's also faster. If you don't know the area code you need, just look in the front of your Telephone Directory. (Also check your telephone directory for exact discounts and conditions on out-of-state and in-state calls.)

Take advantage of the Holiday discount and celebrate.

Along with the flag-waving, fetes and parades, pick up the phone and call Long Distance. Our regular evening discount rates apply all day on Christmas, New Year's Day, Labor Day, July 4th and Thanksgiving. If the holiday falls on a weekend, you get the lower rate. Isn't this the perfect time to ring up friends and family?

Reach out.

Solon Confident Solution Possible In Iran Crisis

Idaho Republican Visits Captive Envoys

seized under President Carter's orders last week were more than sufficient to liquidate the entire foreign debt.

MacBride, who has won both the Nobel and Lenin peace prizes, said the United States could ease the situation considerably by letting its courts decide whether the shah should be returned here to face trial on charges of mass murder and embezzlement.

Referring to U.S. Central Intelligence Agency support for the shah's regime, MacBride said the United States also should declare that it will conduct no covert operations here.

MacBride, former director of the London-based human rights organization Amnesty International, said the shah's secret police for years committed atrocities against dissident students.

"It is no good talking to the students at the embassy about illegality under international law. They would tell you it didn't apply to them" when the shah was in power, he said.

At Camp David, Carter declared through his chief spokesman:

"The last American hostage is just as important to the United States as the first. The consequences of harm to any single hostage will be extremely grave."

The administration had said earlier that it hopes to end the standoff peacefully but has "other remedies" available in the effort to end the U.S.-Iranian crisis, triggered by the Nov. 4 embassy takeover.

Informed sources indicated Friday morning that force would not be used against Iran to stop a trial of the hostages as spies, as some Iranian officials apparently felt the statement about "other remedies" indicated.

But the sources, declining to be identified publicly, said later that the administration has made no final decision about the use of force in such a situation.

These sources said the administration still hopes to work out a solution in which Iran would release the hostages in exchange for some type of forum, perhaps at the United Nations, to air its grievances against the deposed shah.

In relaying the president's handwritten warning of Friday, press secretary Jody Powell told reporters the United States remains firm in its refusal to extradite the shah to his homeland.

Militant Islamic followers of Khomeini have been demanding return of the shah, who has been receiving treatment for cancer in a New York hospital.

Carter's warning to Khomeini came one day after the return to the United States of 13 black and women hostages who had been freed by Iran in the name of Islamic mercy. It was accompanied by a Pentagon order halting all flight training by Iranian personnel in the United States.

Powell told reporters the Camp David session was "a meeting to review the situation" in Iran. He gave no details of the discussion, which lasted more than two hours.

But in response to questions, Powell reiterated the administration's position that the shah " ... was allowed to come here for humanitarian reasons to receive medical treatment. That treatment will not be interrupted."

Powell said he saw little new Khomeini's statement of Thursday, in which the revolutionary leader warned that militants occupying the embassy would kill their hostages and blow up the building if the United States attacks Iran.

Although it was the first time Khomeini himself had voiced such a threat, Powell noted that the militants had said the same thing earlier. "It really makes no difference who says it or how many times it is said," he said.

In his broadcast to the Iranian people, Khomeini had said: "The Americans cannot harm us. If Iran is damaged, it means the damage of Moslem countries ... This is a war between the Moslems and the pagans."

Ali Agah, Iran's top diplomat in the United States, said, however, he shares Americans' anxiety about the hostages.

"Their well-being and that of all other Americans presently living in Iran concerns me very deeply," Agah said in a letter Friday to the Washington Star.

"I am hoping that their safe release will be accomplished soon," he said. "However, until then, let us not create any more anxiety which could jeopardize our common objective by causing undesirable backlash."

Referring to the shah, Agah said he prays that 'the sick man who transmits sickness wherever he goes will make his departure from America without causing harm to innocent people."

Iran's acting foreign ministry supervisor, Bani Sadr, said that the climate would "change for the better" if an international tribunal agreed to investigate the crimes Iran says the shah committed. He commented in an interview on the "MacNeil-Lehrer Report" televised by the Public Broadcasting Service.

But Bani Sadr said, Iran still insists that the United States agree to return the shah to Iran for a trial.

Flight Study Of Iranians Suspended

legislators Hance last week cosponsored a resolution in the House calling for the termination of such instruction and also wrote to Defense Secretary Brown requesting action be taken in the matter. U.S. Sen. John Tower also wrote the Defense Department with a similar request.

The Defense Department then said serious consideration had been given to the requests but no action would be taken at that time. But Hance said Friday the department "notified us this was a serious consideration as early as Tuesday."

Tower Friday praised the move, saying it should be a permanent cancellation.

"It seems the prudent thing to do. I had urged the administration to discontinue this training because these people are being trained in pretty sophisticated systems," Tower said.

About 275 Iranians are training at U.S. naval and air force bases under contracts initiated by the shah. Following the collapse of the shah's government, the Khomeini-led government continued the agreements with the stipulation that no more Iranians, other than those under the original contracts, would be trained in this country.

Holiday Weekend Deaths Mounting

By The Associated Press

Traffic deaths mounted midway into the Thanksgiving holiday weekend as travel was hindered Friday by rain and snow in many areas of the nation.

By late Friday night, 164 persons had died in traffic-related accidents.

Travel advisories were issued in parts of the northwestern quarter of the nation, and there was rain in stretches of the south-central Midwestern states.

The National Safety Council estimated that 500 to 600 persons might be killed in traffic accidents between 6 p.m Wednesday and midnight Sunday.

The traffic death toll last Thanksgiving weekend was 508. The worst toll for the four-day holiday was in 1968, when 764 persons died.

Automotive School Slated To Begin Here Monday Night

An advanced course in curburetors and emission control systems will be conducted here next week as part of a continuing series of short courses made available by the Texas State Technical Institute.

The 12-hour course — in four three-hour segments Monday through Thursday — will be conducted at National Distributing Co., 1012 17th St. Instructor will be Calvin W. Williamson.

Designed for journeyman mechanics, the course will offer up to date information on smog and automotive pollutants, carburetors for engines employing emissions control, precombustion systems, combustion systems and post-combustion systems.

A fee of $20 is charged to cover tuition and cost of materials. Persons interested may contact Jim Lindsey at National Distributing Co. or telephone him at 744-1215 to reserve a place in the class.

Iran's Military Forces 'Weak'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iran's armed forces have deteriorated seriously since the revolution and would be ineffective against a major military opponent, U.S. miltary analsts asserted Friday.

They said that discipline in the ranks has evaporated, senior commanders were virtually wiped out or fled the country, the military supply system is a shambles and much of the expensive weaponry bought before the revolution is inoperable because of neglect.

The U.S. military officials, declining to be identified publicly, dismissed as bluster an order by the commander of Iran's navy putting his ships on full alert to counter an American naval buildup in the Indian Ocean.

"The Iranian navy is a joke," one senior official said.

Sources said the 11-warship navy broke down in the Persian Gulf during recent exercises.

At best, that navy is tiny compared with the U.S. Navy. The Iranian fleet includes only four frigates, three destroyers and four small corvettes.

Before his fall, the Shah of Iran had ordered four powerful modern destroyers similar to those in the U.S. Navy. But that order was canceled, along with about $12 billion in other advanced military hardware ordered by the shah.

The Iranian army numbers about 150,000 men, mostly conscripts.

Iran's air force owns about 460 planes but many of these are said to be disabled because of failure by Iranian technicians to maintain them and because of a lack of readily available spare parts.

"It is not an effective military force, except possibly against some tribesmen," said one official.

The army and air force were said to have virtually disintegrated during last winter's chaos which led to the overthrow of the shah and the emergence of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

As things stand now, analysts said, Iranian officers are unable to enforce discipline in the ranks.

U.S. intelligence sources said religious commissars now dominate in the military forces. They said command decisions often are made by committees of enlisted men.

"The army is a rabble," said an intelligence analyst who reported that the desertion rate is high.

In the air force, which numbers 60,000 to 70,000 men, a group of non-commissioned officers called Homaphars are calling the shots. This group was heavily influenced by the militant Moslem followers of Khomeini in the period leading up to the revolution, the analysts said.

Many of Iran's U.S.-supplied F-14 and F-4 fighter planes cannot fly because these technicians have neglected to maintain them, they said.

Some Defense Department sources disputed reports that the Iranians are short of spare parts.

"They've got a lot of spare parts scattered around in warehouses, but they can't find them," a senior official said in describing the supply system as a mess.

Before the shah was ousted, he had started automating the supply system, but this ground to a halt during the revolution, officials said.

They stressed that the departure of American military and contractor technicians also has helped cripple the maintenance of expensive and sophisticated hardware.

Some Iranian air force planes have been active recently, officials said, noting that several Iranian air force F-4 fighters shadowed U.S. destroyers recently in the Persian Gulf.

A fundamental flaw in the Iranian military, U.S. officials said, is the lack of experienced and highly trained senior officers.

They said most of the army and air force generals who were trained by the United States either were shot or have left the country, and that few top-quality commanders are left.

American Embassy Evacuees Flown Home From Pakistan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 390 Americans arrived here from Pakistan Friday night, ordered home by the State Department after the Moslem attack on the U.S. Embassy at Islamabad two days ago.

Looking pale and exhausted after a 24-hour flight aboard a Pan American World Airways jumbo jet, the group was greeted at Dulles International Airport by Undersecretary of State David Newsom and hundreds of friends and family members.

In their haste to join the waiting friends and relatives, the passengers rushed past waiting reporters without pausing to comment on their ordeal.

Left behind in Pakistan were two U.S. servicemen who were killed in Wednesday's assault.

Their bodies will be flown to the United States on Sunday or Monday, State Department officials said.

Emotional Scene

It was an emotional scene at the airport as the returning Americans anxiously sought out their loved ones from the waiting crowd in the customs area.

Newsom boarded the plane just after it landed to speak privately with those who returned.

In his prepared remarks which were to be delivered aboard the plane, Newsom avoided any reference to the swelling controversy over the Pakistani Army's slow response in evacuating the scores of Americans trapped by the Islamic mob at the embassy compund.

"I want to welcome you home," Newsom said. "Many of you have been through a frightening and difficult experience."

Newsom said the administration is conscious of the material and emotional problems which the group is undergoing as a result of the evacuation.

"Deal With Problems"

"We intend to deal with those problems energetically and sympathetically," he said. "We will make every effort to take care of your needs here in Washington and then onward for those going on to other destinations."

Children carried teddy bears and parents lugged infants and pets aboard the chartered jet at Islamabad.

Meanwhile, anti-American violence flared again Friay as Moslems in Calcutta, India burned an effigy of President Carter and stoned the U.S. Embassy. They were encouraged by politicians who accused the United States of masterminding the takeover of the Great Mosque in Saudi Arabia this week.

Iranian revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, whose militants hold 49 U. S. hostasges in the embassy in Tehran, has expressed "joy" at the anti-American rioting in Moslem cities during the last three days.

Tight Security

Pakistani authorities clamped tight security on the airport in their capital city and a reporter was chased off when he tried to question evacuees.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur W. Hummel Jr. cautioned them against publicly criticizing Pakistani handling of the riot, saying they might jepardize the 49 American hostages in Tehran and the 65 embassy employees who stayed in Islamabad.

One of those boarding the plane, asked what could be criticized, told The Associated Press: "The five-hour wait for the Pakistan army.

U.S. officials said they are waiting for the Pakistani government to investigate the length of time it took for troops to rescue embassy employees and said they were not anxious to confront Islamabad with a formal complaint.

"Immediate Notice"

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter told reporters in Washington that Pakistani authorities "took immediate and sympathetic notice" of the attack.

Other evacuees were critical of the decision to evacuate U.S. citizens from Pakistan.

"Isn't it a farce?" the wife of one U.S. official asked. "It's all quite unnecessary."

Among the six people who died in the riot were Marine Cpl. Steven Crowley, of Long Island, N.Y., and Army Chief Warrant Officer Bryan Ellis, of Spring Lake, N.C.

The 310 people who boarded the plane in Islamabad included families from U.S. missions in Lahore and Peshawar and about 40 American civilians, most of them families of schoolteachers, who are not employed by the government. Forty more dependents and nonessesential employees got on board the plane in Karachi, Pakistan's largest city.

Moslem militants who sacked the embassy said they thought the United States was responsible for the occupation of Islam's holiest site, the Great Mosque of Mecca and its Kaaba shrine on Tuesday. Saudi officials said the gunmen who took over the mosque were religious "fanatics" not aligned with any nation.

Mobs of militants, acting on the same rumor, attacked U.S. diplomatic missions Thursday in Turkey, Bangladesh and the Vale of Kashmir in India. No casualties were reported in Thursday's rioting.

Witnesses of the Islamabad riot said Pakistani troops did not move to control the mob until five hours after the incident began.

Rich Kids Spend More For Booze, Drugs

GROSSE POINTE, Mich. (AP) — The average student at Grosse Pointe South High School spends $4,388.52 a year and shells out almost four times as much for booze and drugs as for lunch, a survey indicates.

The expenses range from about $9 a month for hair care to more than $80 a month for alcohol and drugs, the survey of 200 of the 2,080 students at the suburban Detroit school indicated.

Overall, the survey conducted by advanced journalism students showed that if the average spent by each student were multiplied by the school's total enrollment, the teen-agers spend some $10.6 million.

That estimate of annual spending compares with a $4 million figure from a poll taken four years ago.

However, Bob Button, adviser to South's two advanced journalism classes, said students surveyed reported their average annual income is only $2,185.32, which indicates they are receiving considerable assistance from their parents or others in paying for their purchases.

Button says many of the students' expenditures — such as sports equipment, club memberships and grooming aids — could have been paid for with money from their parents.

"I guess that when we asked their income they were more aware of the money that actually goes through their hands than the money which is spent for them but which they don't handle," Button said.

Some of the average monthly expenses among the 200 teen-agers included $46.29 for clothes, $21.12 for lunches, $5.24 for car payments, $18.87 for gas and oil, $15.65 for music and music training, $21.60 for sports equipment, $9.82 for parties, $37.60 for cigarettes and $80.84 for alcohol, marijuana and other drugs.

According to government figures, the median family income for the state of Michigan is over $20,000 a year, and the figure for Grosse Pointe is considerably higher. Grosse Pointe, home of many auto executives, is one of the nation's wealthiest suburbs.

According to the survey, the average South student receives $11.73 a month as allowance. $104.45 from jobs, $28.80 from parents for special needs, $11.39 from gifts, $10.96 from credit cards and $14.78 from miscellaneous sources.

Iranian Ship Stirs Dispute

SAINT JOHN, New Brunswick (AP) — An Iranian freighter anchored here for more than a week is caught in the middle of the U.S.-Iranian hostage dispute, and no one is sure when the ship will leave or where it will go next.

The problem is this: the 6,460-ton Arya Shad carries 200 tons of foodstuffs and machinery loaded by U.S. firms. Its agents say American authorities want the cargo returned.

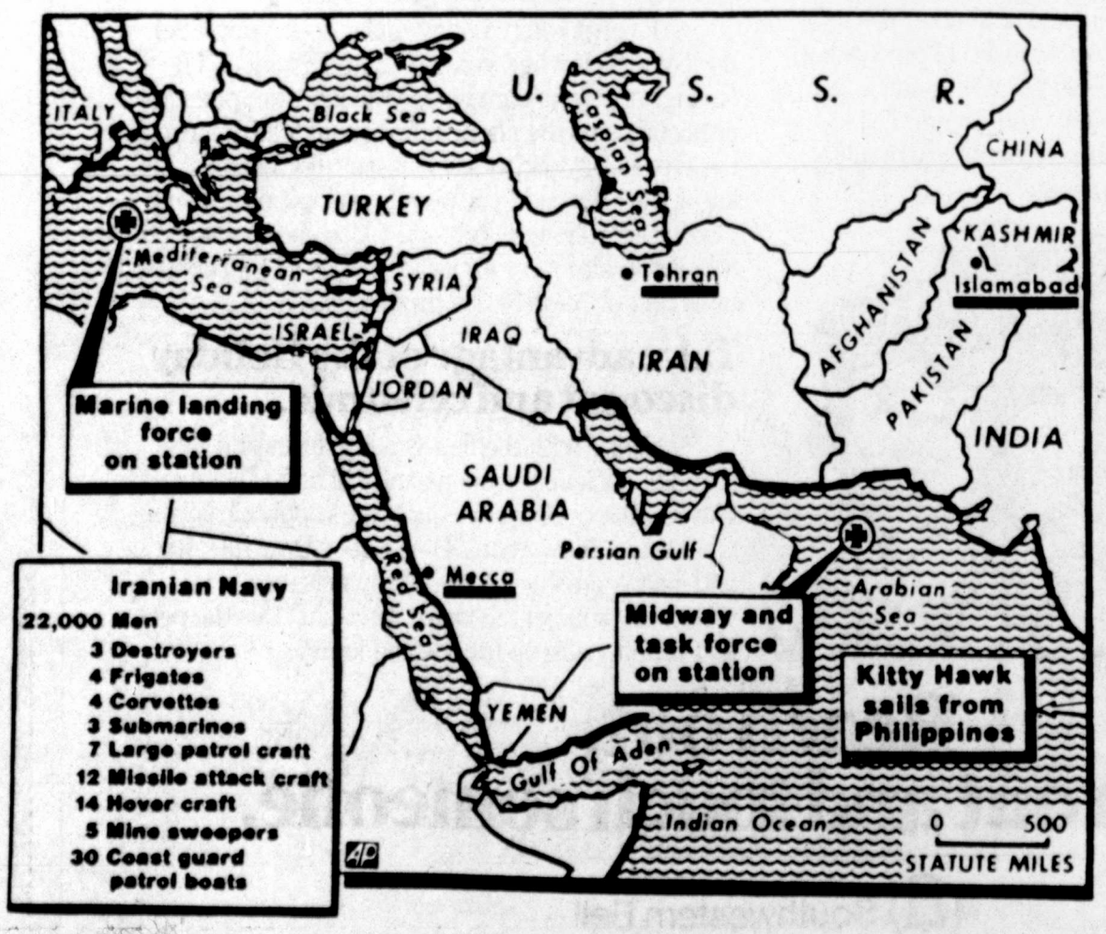

A spokesman for the ship's agent here, March Shipping Ltd., said he has received telephone calls from shippers in the United States demanding the cargo, but did not know whether the ship could be seized and brought into port. It is now about four miles offshore.

The owners are expected to make a decision about the ship's future early next week. The Arya Shad is a general cargo ship owned by Arya National Shipping Lines of Bandar Abbas, Iran.

March Shipping, which has been local agent for Arya Lines for many years, will not handle the Arya Shad, except to protect lives, until it receives money in advance from the Iranian owners, said Colin Leach, the local shipping agent.

Iranian authorities said Friday they would not pay the country's foreign debts, which include a $500 million loan from a syndicate involving the Toronto-Dominion Bank.

The freighter left New York ahead of schedule last week because of anti-Iranian feeling in the United States and arrived off Saint John on Nov. 16.

Prime Rate May Fall After Drop In Loans

NEW YORK (AP) — Loan demand at large New York banks dropped sharply this week, the Federal Reserve said Friday in a report that raised analyst hopes the prime rate will begin to drop next week from the record 15¾ percent now charged.

The Federal Reserve said commercial and industrial loans at major New York banks fell $364 million in the week ended Wednesday, the largest one-week decline since January.

In addition, the report showed that interest rates paid by banks on large certificates of deposits declined for the second straight week, to 14.06 percent from 14.24 percent the previous week.

The rate on such certificates declined further Friday, to 13.70 percent, and Robert Sinch, an economist with Bear Stearns & Co., said that if the rate stays below 14 percent Citibank can be expected to reduce the prime rate next Friday. Citibank is the only major bank that publishes its prime rate formula, which is tied to the rate on certificates of deposit.

The prime rate is charged by banks on loans to their most credit-worthy corporate customers. It has risen rapidly in recent weeks after standing at 11¾ percent in late August.

The Federal Reserve report said the nation's basic money supply, called M1 and including cash and funds in checking accounts, fell $1 billion in the week ending Nov. 14 to a seasonally-adjusted average of $378.5 billion. The total for the week ended Nov. 7 was revised upward by $300 million.

The broader measure of money, known as M2 and also including most funds in savings accounts, rose $1.1 billion to an average of $943.5 billion. The M2 total for the previous week was revised downward by $200 million.

Sinch noted that the M1 figure was well below its $380.5 billion peak of Oct. 10, showing the Federal Reserve that "there's been no growth over the entire period," he said.

"The Fed should be quite satisfied by the decline of $1 billion," said another economist, David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. "It looks now as if the month of November will come out comfortably within the Fed's target ranges."

The Federal Reserve sharply tightened credit on Oct. 6 in an effort to hold down the money supply and fight inflation. The action drove up short-term interest rates but many of the rates have begun to come down in the last two weeks as the demand for credit has apparently eased.

Further evidence of the decline in credit demand was provided in a separate Fed report showing commercial and industrial loans at large U.S. banks declined $515 million to $144.63 billion in the week ended Nov. 14. That figure includes all banks with assets over $1 billion but represents numbers for the week before the New York City figures.

In a related development, the Federal Reserve released the minutes of an Oct. 22 telephone meeting of its policy-setting Open Market Committee. The minutes showed there was no change in the policy announced Oct. 6, a fact that had already been revealed in congressional testimony.

Other monetary indicators for the week ended Wednesday included:

•Member bank borrowings from the Federal Reserve System averaged $1.714 billion, down from $1.725 billion. The Fed increased its holdings of government securities by $1.667 billion.

•Federal funds, the interest rate on short-term loans of uncomitted reserve funds among banks, averaged 13.10 percent, down from 13.30 percent the previous week.

•The three-month Treasury bill rate averaged 11.87 percent, down from 12.11 percent.

•The Federal Reserve Bank of New York reported commercial and industrial loans at major New York City banks fell $364 million in the week ended Wednesday, compared with a revised drop of $27 million a week before and a drop of $170 million a year ago.

•Net borrowed reserves totaled $1.465 billion, up from $1.464 billion a week earlier.

•The Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis reported that data on the monetary base — the seasonally-adjusted total of member bank reserves held at Federal Reserve banks and cash in bank vaults and in circulation — was not immediately available.

Iranian Imports Now Put On Cash Basis

NEW YORK (AP) — Iran's decision to renounce its foreign debt was described as unprecedented by bankers Friday, but they said they believed the Iranian assets seized under President Carter's orders last week were more than enough to pay off the loans.

Iran's acting foreign minister, Abolhassah Bani Sadr, said in Tehran that Iran would not pay its foreign debts because they were incurred by the regime of the deposed shah.

Bani Sadr estimated the total of the debts at $15 billion, a figure that surprised American bankers, who estimated the total foreign debt at no more than $8 billion.

With the Federal Reserve estimating the total assets seized last week at about $8 billion, bankers expressed confidence they would not lose money.

"This will take an awful lot of legal work, in Europe especially, but basically the assets are there," said one banker, who asked not to be quoted by name.

"On a world-wide basis, the Iranian assets are about equal to their liabilities," said G.A. Costanzo, vice chairman of Citibank of New York. "When all of this works out, there should be enough for all creditors."

By repudiating its debts, Costanzo said, Iran has made it easier for creditors "to attach assets wherever they can find them. Some goods that are being shipped to Iran, that were on a credit basis, will be diverted. It puts all Iranian imports on a cash basis from here on out."

Some governments have repudiated debts incurred by their predecessors, notably the Soviet Union and China, but never in as large an amount as Iran. "It's absolutely unprecedented," said another banker, who also asked not to be named.

The Iranian action was apparently prompted by Chase Manhattan Bank, which declared a $500 million loan to Iran to be in default on Nov. 17. The action was taken because the Iranians were unable to make a $4 million interest payment due Nov. 15, the day after Carter froze the assets.

Under most international loan agreements, banks can declare all loans in default if the borrower defaults on any loan. Thus the Chase Manhattan declaration cleared the way for a round of demands for immediate payment from Iran.

Iran's central bank bitterly denounced Chase Manhattan in a statement released before Bani Sadr's announcement.

The central bank said it had "effectively paid the due interest, well in advance."

"The Chase Manhattan Bank is playing a dangerous game in telling lies and spreading deceitful rumors within the international banking system," said the central bank statement, as reported by the Iranian Pars news agency.

Chase Manhattan Vice President Fraser P. Seitel confirmed that Iran, on Nov. 5, directed Chase Manhattan to transfer funds out of an Iranian account on Nov. 15, in order to pay the interest.

But he said Chase had been unable to do so because of the order to freeze assets on Nov. 14, and that the loan was therefore declared to be in default after Chase consulted the other banks involved in the syndicated loan to Iran.

"We acted within our responsibilities," he said. "From the bank's point of view, this was a violation of the loan agreement."

One banker suggested Bani Sadr might have wrongly thought Iran's foreign reserves, estimated at about $10 billion, were a debt rather than an asset, and added them to the actual debt, which that banker estimated at $5 billion to $6 billion.

"That's the only way we can figure out the $15 billion figure," he said.

Others thought the debt might be higher, but still below the amount of assets frozen. "Our people think the debt is $6 billion to $8 billion to all Western banks," said a spokesman for another major bank, who asked not to be named.

The largest and most valuable diamond ever found is the Cullinan I, mined in South Africa in 1902. In the rough it weighed 3,106 carats or about one and one-third pounds before being cut into nine large stones and 96 smaller ones.

Dollar Rising Against Most Major Currencies

NEW YORK (AP) -The dollar rose against most major currencies in European and domestic markets Friday. There was little evident reaction to an Iranian statement that the country would not repay foreign debts which one Iranian official estimated totaled $15 billion.

A New York dealer described the currency market as "practically asleep" on the day after Thanksgiving with very few corporate customers and little in the way of news developments to spur professional traders.

West German dealers claimed that the market was gradually getting used to bad news from Iran.

Gold prices fell slightly from the previous day in major European markets but rose a bit in New York from Wednesday's close.

In Europe, dealers said bullion trading was fairly quiet because of a lack of developments in the troubled Middle East. "Most traders now are just awaiting fresh events," a London dealer said.

Gold ended the day at $392.75 a troy ounce in Zurich, down from $394.50 Thursday, and $392.50 dollars in London, down from $393.00 dollars.

In New York, gold was quoted at $393 by Republic National Bank, up from $392.50 on Wednesday.

On the New York Commodity Exchange, the price of a December gold futures contract was $394.60, up 40 cents from Wednesday.

In London, the dollar continued to look good. The British pound fell to $2.1595 against Thursday's $2.1700. In New York, the pound finished at $2.1650 Friday and $2.1765 Wednesday. U.S. markets were closed Thursday for the Thanksgiving holiday.

The dollar also closed higher against the Swiss franc and French franc and was unchanged against the West German mark in European markets.

In Tokyo, where the dollar finished Thursday at a high for the year of 248.375 yen, the market was closed for a holiday.

In New York, as of 4 p.m., the dollar traded at 249.05 yen Friday, up from 248.12 Wednesday. Other dollar rates Friday compared with Wednesday were: 1.7585 West German marks, up from 1.7568; 4.1338 French francs up from 4.1215; 1.6505 Swiss francs up from 1.6450; 1.1756 Canadian dollars down from 1.1759.

Late rates for the dollar in Europe Friday, compared with Thursday: Zurich — 1.6530 Swiss francs, up from 1.6505; Frankfurt — 1.7610 West German marks, unchanged; Paris — 4.1350 French francs, up from 4.1300; Milan — 822.85 Italian lire, up from 822.15.

Hand Gun Recoil Blamed For Davis' Flesh Wound

FORT WORTH (AP) — Police said Friday Priscilla Davis' flesh wound on her hand was probably caused by the recoil of the handgun and not the bullet as previously thought.

The blonde millionairess, former wife of industrialist Cullen Davis, is hospitalized after undergoing plastic surgery Thursday to repair damage to her left forefinger.

Police Capt. Jack Bicknell said the recoil of the powerful .357-calier Magnum apparently tore out the chunk of flesh while the bullet struck the door panel and the force shattered the window.

Police had said Thursday the shooting was accidental.

Assistant District Attorney Jack Strickland and Strickland's girl friend, Barbara Burke, were in the back seat of Mrs. Davis' Lincoln Continental limousine with her at the time of the incident, which occurred between 9:30 and 10 a.m.

Strickland said Mrs. Davis, 39, was accompanying them to visit Strickland's parents in San Antonio for Thanksgiving.

"I was unloading my gun, and it went off accidentally," Mrs. Davis later said.

The second wife of millionaire trial figure Davis was known to carry a .357-caliber Magnum in her purse since a 1976 shooting spree at the $6 million Davis mansion in Fort Worth. Her daughter and lover were killed, and she and one other person were wounded.

Davis, 46, from whom she was estranged at the time, was tried and acquitted of one of the killings. The related charges were dismissed two weeks ago after Davis was acquitted in Fort Worth on a murder solicitation charge.

Strickland was the chief prosecutor in the most recent case.

Electronic Game Shortage Predicted

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Electronic games and toys that challenge players with beeps and blips may be in short supply for the holidays this year, according to manufacturers who say they simply cannot get enough silicon chips to meet the demand.

"The marketplace is eating up everything that goes out," said Jack Fox of Mattel Toys of Hawthorne, Calif. "We're selling all we can make."

Fox said the auto industry is partly responsible for the problem. The manufacturers are putting an increasing number of electronic devices into today's cars and Fox said they are "siphoning off almost 50 percent of the chips made in this country."

The tiny chips contain the programming that makes electronic gadgets work. The development of the chips made it possible to build smaller and cheaper computers and helped spread electronics from industry to everyday life.

The toy manufacturers said it is too early to tell the extent of the shortage. They stressed that the electronic items are still available at retailers; the sellout, so far at least, is at the wholesale level only. Last year, some products were in such demand that retailers resorted to issuing rain checks — promising delivery after Christmas.

Advertising Age, a trade publication, quoted James J. Shea Jr., chairman and president of Milton Bradley Co. of Springfield, Mass., as predicting that the electronic toys and games market would hit half a billion dollars this year. That is more than 10 times the size of the market in 1977, when the electronic items were introduced.

John O'Donnell, executive vice president of Milton Bradley, said the company currently is finding "that our basic game business is very strong ... as well as our electronics ... Consumers are relating to some tried and true old timers."

Like Fox, O'Donnell said there is a shortage of chips. "We have not been able to deliver everything we could have," he said.

O'Donnell said prices set by retailers for Milton Bradley electronic games range from under $15 to $30 and above. "We have not seen a resistance to price," he said. "Because of the shortage, people are buying at all price ranges."

Fox said Mattel's most popular electronic items are the ones with a sports theme. "People look for something that challenges them, but it has to have some familiarity," he said.

Traditional items, meanwhile, have not been forgotten. The Toy Manufacturers of America said that while electronics are "very much in the forefront," regular dolls, electric trains and blocks also are popular.

At Mattel, Fox said, "Barbie is just about a sellout." Also in demand, he said, are mechanical dolls — "Toys doing things based on the old gears and springs." Fox said the important thing is the "pure fun aspect. If it's not fun, we don't want to make it."

Fun at Kenner Products of Cincinnati, a division of General Mills, means "Star Wars." Company spokesman John Beck said the line of toys associated with the movie could account for up to 40 percent of the company's business this year.

Beck said adults as well as children are collecting "Star Wars" action figures. Last year, the company sold 25 million of the dolls and Beck said it could sell even more this year.

Grown-ups also are helping to make "Miss Piggy" a big hit, said Carol Blackly of Fisher-Price of East Aurora, N.Y. The combined puppet-doll Muppet figure is designed for children 3 years and up. "But we've found there's a whole adult fan group," said Miss Blackly. "Last I heard, she ("Miss Piggy") was sold out to the trade."

What makes a toy a success? "We're a contemporary company, but we incorporate into all of our products timeless values (plus) some quality of whimsy or fun," Miss Blackly said.

SHORT SUPPLY — Electronic games and toys may be in short supply this holiday season because manufacturers cannot get enough silicon chips to meet demand. One reason for the shortage is the increased number of chips being used in today's automobiles. (AP Laserphoto)

Ice, Not Red Tape, Enemy Of Oil Companies In Alaskan Sea

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The greatest foe facing the oil companies that want to drill in the Beaufort Sea is not the environmentalists, not the Eskimos, not the politicians.

It is the ice — the shifting, grinding polar ice that can crush an oil rig in seconds.

Opponents of the scheduled Dec. 11 sale of oil leases for 514,191 acres of arctic waters are using the ice as an ally in their battle.

They say the oil companies lack the technology to deal with the ice and severe weather conditions, and they worry about oil spills in the fragile arctic environment.

The oil companies reply that their technology is indeed equal to the challenge, in the form of gravel islands — huge piles of rocks and gravel that will support the rigs and fend off the treacherous ice.

The issue of the oil leases is in court. The North Slope Borough, which represents the Eskimos of Alaska's northern rim, filed suit in Washington on Wednesday seeking to limit the number of leases offerred in deep water. Several villages in the area would preter to halt the sale entirely.

The Eskimos are particularly concerned that offshore drilling might disturb migratory patterns of whales, a diet mainstay for them.

Permission for the joint federal-state Beaufort Sea lease sale, to be held in Fairbanks, was given only after years of debate on the environmental risks.

Alaska Gov. Jay Hammond and Secretary of the Interior Cecil Andrus worked out a compromise for drilling, initially permitting rigs only in water up to 39 feet deep.

Exploration in deeper waters would be postponed at least two years, while the oil companies show the gravel islands can withsand the oslaught of the ice pack at greater depths.

Some of the tracts to be offered are in water 60 feet deep. Exxon Co. USA says it already has designed an artificial island that can be used safely in waters up to 30 feet deep and is working on a design for 39 feet of water.

The Beaufort Sea is choked with ice most of the year. During the dark, frigid winter months it is covered with a highly pressurized, slow-moving ice sheet as much as 15 feet thick.

Exxon engineers say their gravel islands can ward off the ice.

The islands, to be made of gravel taken from the North Slope, will be set up in spots the oil companies feel are likely to yield oil. The rigs will be built on top of the islands and drill through them to the oil they hope is pooled beneath the ocean floor.

Two types of islands are being designed, said Exxon engineer J.S. Templeton II. The exploration island will have a working surface about 400 feet in diameter and a life expectancy of up to two years.

The exploration island, expected to cost $8 million to $12 million, will have devices to monitor the pressure of surrounding ice and to alert workers when ice threatens the island, engineers say.

"It will have a rough sandbag beach slope to resist sliding, a steep bluff to cause jamming, a berm to trigger pileups and a buffer zone to accommodate override," Templeton said of the exploration island.

If oil is found, the oil rig will be removed and a bigger, stronger production island built over the successful well or wells.

This island will cost from $20 million to $40 million and is designed to protect drilling operations without backup monitoring devices. It will be bigger, in mass and in height. It is designed to withstand the worst possible ice storm during its 30-year life span.

"We see no evidence to suggest the possibility that the entire production island could be overridden in a single ice movement so that there would beno place o go," said Exxon engineer Hans O. Jahns.

He said the worst possible scenario would involve shutting down and evacuating operations on one side of the island.

"But with proper engineering, we will be able to prevent ice override from causing damage to critical production facilities," Jahns said.

Eskimos have testified they have seen the ice in the Beaufort Sea buckle and bunch and rear up into 70-foot ridges in seconds. They say such ice could topple a steel drilling rig almost as quickly.

"We have worried about that in the design of the island," said Fred Hudspeth, engineering manager for Exxon's Alaska operations. "But the (ice) ridges have keels that would tend to ground before they posed a threat to the island. The ice would then serve as resistance to other ice moving into the island."

Jahns said the ridges could erode the islands' underwater slopes but would not reduce the overall strength of the islands.

Critics remain skeptical.

"We're saying that if they are so confident, let them put one of these structures out in the deeper water," said Jon Buchholdt of the North Slope Borough. "We want to see how these structures they say are so impervious to ice override work."

Athletic Facility May Have To Include Girls In Name

BOSTON (AP) — If a suit before the state Supreme Court succeeds, the Arlington Boys' Club may have to change its name to the Arlington Boys' and Girls' Club.

The Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts filed the suit this week seeking equal access to the club for females. It acted on behalf of the Arlington Committee to Promote Equal Opportunity for Girls and Women.

The Boys' Club is the only athletic facility in town with an indoor swimming pool. Boys from Arlington and neighboring communities can use it four days a week while girls, from Arlington only, can use it two days.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR FOLKS:

I'm always wracking my brain trying to think of something unusual for a gift for those occasions when a small remembrance is in order. Sometimes it's a toughie, isn't it?

Finally I decided to have prints made of a couple of my favorite snapshots so's I could use 'em to decorate matchbook covers.

I cut the snapshots to fit the covers and either glued or stapled them on.

If you try this project, it's best if you practice by cutting and gluing pieces of paper to the matchbook covers first. Don't want to spoil a good snapshot, now do you?

If you decide to use glue, be dang sure it is the nonflammable type.

You could ask friends for negatives of their favorite snapshots and make custom-designed matchbook covers especially for them. Or you could use snapshots taken especially with a matchbook memento in mind at a birthday party, shower, anniversary bash, or a wedding!!

Wouldn't a very special young bride and groom love to see their picture on match covers!

What a thoughtful surprise! — Heloise

LETTER OF LOVE

DEAR HELOISE

You're terrific! Love those hints!

Ages ago you gave us a formula for stains — one half cup bleach, one half cup dishwasher detergent and one half cup water. I can't tell you how often I use this.

I soaked my son's white summer socks and slacks in your magic formula and the dirt, grease and grass stains came out. Also my husband's stained hankies for a day or two and they're like new.

I used it for my children's 27-year-old christening clothes and they are white and beautiful again.

I keep a plastic bucket filled with this solution standing on the ready in the basement. When plastic cups or anything plastic gets stained (especially tea stains) I dump them in the bucket overnight, or for a day or two, depending on the stain, and they come clean-clean-clean!

I've raved about this to everyone. When they ask for my secret, I write it out and say "It's from Heloise." With love — Tessy Perna

DEAR HELOISE:

I always read and enjoy your helpful hints. Here's my Mother's for anyone who needs to spot-clean stuffed animals: Use cream of tartar.

I have used it for years to remove stains and soil on other things but never thought of using it on stuffed animals.

Just sprinkle it on, rub in, then vacuum or brush out. Excellent results! — Mary L. Sharp

DEAR HELOISE:

Someone asked you why baby blankets are such a long rectangular shape. I don't claim to know much, but I have noticed that not all of them are rectangular. Some are square.

I use the square ones to wrap my little one in, the rectangular ones when I nurse him.

A rectangular blanket usually is just the right length to go from my shoulder to my lap and cover the baby so I can nurse him discreetly in public.

They are usually a lightweight fabric so he doesn't get all hot and sweaty and they're more colorful than receiving blankets. — Mary

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is a good hint for anyone who has some old dishes that have turned brown with age. I became owner of just such a set.

I bought the cheapest bleach I could find, put the dishes in a large plastic pan mixed a half cup bleach with one gallon water and poured this over the dishes. I let 'em sit a couple of days, turning them regularly. They came out just like new. — Elsie

To Your Good Health

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Two weeks ago my 16-year-old son suddenly got excruciating pain in his right testicle. He vomited and was pale from the pain. In the emergency room a urologist was called in. Dye X-rays showed no kidney stones. They suspected a kink had developed in his epididymis and that this caused inflamation.

He was put on antibiotics. Shouldn't further tests be made? I am concerned about the extent and length of the pain and swelling, though it does seem to have subsided some. Should I be patient or press for further diagnosis? I am anxious. — Mrs. M.E.

The epididymis is a tiny structure that sits atop the testicle in the scrotal sac. It is the semen-carrying duct, actually. Inflammation of it gives rise to one of those long medical terms — "epididymitis." It also gives rise to severe pain in the testicle area and excruciating would be the word for it.

The swelling may be sudden, as in your son's case, and there may be a sharp temperature rise (up to 104). If injury didn't cause it, about the only other cause of such sudden onset would be a twisting (torsion) of the testicle. You seem concerned about the posibility of tumors. That would not cause acute pain.

Acute epididymitis takes a week or two to subside, but it may be a month before all the swelling goes down. Surely, if it persists beyond that time, or if pain is not subsiding, you should check with your doctor again.

I suspect that by the time you read this you will have your answers.

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have sugar diabetes, which is controlled with Diabinese. My urine self-analysis tests always are negative. My doctor orders a blood-sugar test every three months. He does not tell me what it says, except that it is satisfactory. These tests are costly, and transportation costs, etc., add to it. Are the tests needed so often? Your opinion would be appreciated. — E.J.B.

Every three months is not an excessive number of times to have the blood sugar tested. The medicine you are using for control is the oral type (not insulin) and often it takes much time to determine if that kind of control is going to be effective.

You should be able to talk this over with your doctor. He might agree to testing every four months. In the course of a year that would cut your costs by 25 percent. I hope my arithmetic is correct.

Another point: The frequency of testing may be greater in the early stages of control. See the booklet, "Diabetes — The Sneaky Disease." For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: When I had my prostate surgery I was told I would still be able to have children. I understand there is a way of washing the bladder and getting the semen that way, and that my wife could be artifically inseminated with it. How often do men who have had a prostate operation succeed in becoming fathers? Is it really as easy as rolling off a log? — L.E.

After an operation on the prostate gland the ejaculate often passes backward up into the urinary bladder instead of forward through the penis. That would make a man infertile, but still able to have an erection.

There is a technique in which the man's bladder is washed after intercourse. The washing is collected and put in a centrifuge. As the material is whirled around, the sperm is separated from the rest of the fluid. The collected sperm can then be introduced into the female genital tract.

I cannot find the precise "success rate" for this procedure. Perhaps a urologist will let me know. It doesn't sound to me quite as easy as "rolling off a log."

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am a 62-year-old male blessed with a rather prominent nose. Lately, I have noticed that the tip is getting progressively larger. Is this a normal occurrence? Or is there treatment for it? Is plastic surgery feasible? — E.J.K.

The tip of the nose can enlarge due to a condition called "rhinophyma" (swelling of oil glands and congestion of tissue). The skin becomes somewhat violaceous (violet colored), a splendid little medical adjective, don't you agree? Plastic surgery is feasible, whatever the cause.

Do you often have a "stomach ache?" If so, your stomach may not be the real trouble spot. The booklet, "Stomach and Other Abdominal Pains: A Checklist," tells you why. For a copy, write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

South looked at dummy and made that dread remark, "Partner, we probably didn't bid enough."

Then South won that first trick with his nine of hearts and led his jack of clubs. West showed out whereupon South went into a state of almost complete shock. The silence could have been cut with a knife.

Finally, he said, "Maybe we bid too much." Then he found a safety play to insure his contract as long as West hadn't led fifth best from a six-card suit.

South put dummy's king of clubs and led a heart. West said "thank you" — it was a talkative and reasonably polite game — and cashed four heart tricks. Somewhere along the line, South discarded a club from his hand and once West had finished with his hearts, South claimed the balance of the tricks.

"Did you have to lead that fourth round of hearts?" asked East. "Maybe you should not have cashed one extra heart trick."

"I could do nothing," replied West. "If I shifted immediately South would win the shift and lead another heart. Then he would win the next trick, lead his ten of clubs and let you in. You would not have a heart left and he would make the rest of the tricks."

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Your suggestion to the grandma on Social Security wasn't very practical. In fact, it was dumb. The poor woman wanted to know how she could remember each of her 36 grandchildren at Christmas time on her limited income. You suggested that she bake them cookies.

Apparently you haven't done much grocery shopping lately. Do you know what a pound of butter costs? Have you priced chocolate chips and walnuts? Can you even guess what milk and eggs run into? I can tell you that 36 batches of cookies, plus the mailing, would add up to quite a sum. This isn't even taking into account the energy required to bake, box and mail the stuff.

I have a better idea and it wouldn't cost more than a stamp for the out-of-towners and a few hours of time for those in town.

Grandma could "hold forth" at a gathering for the kids in the same age group (in-towners, of course). The event could be held at her daughter's or son's house. They could call it "Grandma's Christmas gift." (Daughter or daughter-in-law could prepare hot cocoa and make the cookies.)

Gram could tell wonderful stories about how she grew up — what life was like 60 years ago — what school was like, how kids dressed, how much things cost, what they did for entertainment. She could relate stories about their own parents. (They'd love it!) A family album would surely provide a lot of laughs. It could be a terrific afternoon. The kids would not only enjoy it, but they would learn from it.

Gram could then write letters to the out-of-town grandchildren and report on how the get-togethers went. That could be their Christmas "gift."

Please print this, Ann. It's a good example of how imagination can substitute for money and produce a more soul-satisfying present. — Green Bay, Wisc.

Dear Green (or perhaps I'M the green one): Your suggestion is far more practical and substantive than mine. You are right — I haven't done much grocery shopping lately and must plead ignorance on that score. As for the energy output required to bake, pack and mail cookies for 36 kids, well — I plead insanity.

Dear Ann Landers: Will you set us straight on two matters of etiquette? First: Is it proper to wear white tie and tails whenever a tuxedo is required? My friend says white tie and tails are appropriate only for affairs of state and the opening of the opera and Dracula movies.

Second: Is it correct to raise a pinky while drinking from a coffee or tea cup? — Buzz And Roddy

Dear B. and R.: No, it is not proper to wear white tie and tails whenever a tuxedo is required. On many occasions, such as an intimate black-tie dinner, a person in tails would look ludicrous.

The outstretched pinky while drinking from a tea or coffee cup is neither correct nor incorrect, but it brought back some wonderful memories. My dear mother had a severed tendon in her little finger. Consequently, she could not bend that finger. When she drank tea or coffee, her pinky was always extended. Some of my young cousins thought it looked very elegant and imitated her. To this day, whenever I see an extended pinky I wonder if that person has an injured finger, or, is she imitating my mother?

'Quadrophenia' Rates High With Film Critic

NEW RELEASE

QUADROPHENIA (R) — Phil Daniels, Leslie Ash. (Drama) Teen alienation in mid-60s British mod garb, but a good treatment of an old and troubling theme. Taking its cue from a powerful concept and score by the Who, the film portrays a youth wrestling with his sense of identity. Cast and crew of relative unknowns turn in a movie which is exciting, turbulent, yet touching. GRADE: A-minus

GENERAL RELEASE

APOCALYPSE NOW (R) — Martin Sheen, Marlon Brando, Robert Duvall. (Drama) This is Francis Coppola's long-awaited and very expensive epic — and worth the wait and the cost. It is a study of the madness of war, and Coppola has created a procession of insane images of Vietnam and that terrible war to make his point. It is long and flawed, but must be rated an American classic. GRADE: A-plus

AVALANCHE EXPRESS (PG) — Lee Marvin, Robert Shaw, Linda Evans. (Spy thriller) A confusing mess about (perhaps) a defecting Russian leader who is placed on a train (why?) and the attempts of the bad guys to stop the train. Some exciting moments, but mostly a lot of shooting and dreadful acting and lines that are silly. GRADE: C-minus

BREAKING AWAY (PG) — Dennis Christopher, Dennis Quaid, Daniel Stern, Jackie Earle Haley. (Romantic comedy) This American film is the kind of thing the French do so well: warm, funny, a little romantic, tied up just right. It's set in Bloomington, Ind., a college town, the summer the local boys finally realize they don't mind being "townies." Briefly, it's the "Rocky" of bicycle racing — but so much better. A fine job by these four young actors. GRADE: A

LUNA (R) — Jill Clayburgh, Matthew Barry. (Drama) This is the story of a sensuous widow, an opera star, who becomes physically involved with her adolescent son. The acting is excellent — Clayburgh shatters her "nice girl" mold — but the film moves fitfully and is too long. Ads discreetly warn that parts of the film may be too intense for some viewers. It's true, incest is uncomfortable viewing. GRADE: B

METEOR (PG) — Sean Connery, Natalie Wood, Brian Keith. (Adventure). This is the latest disaster fnovie, and the problem now is a huge chunk of meteor, zooming towards us and there's no way to stop it. But wait! Maybe the Russian and American scientists, working together, can blast it out of the sky. Good special effects and some exciting moments — as well as some pretty dumb ones. GRADE: B

NATURAL ENEMIES (R) — Hal Holbrook. (Drama) Intended to be a profound portrait of the last day of a man who plans to kill his wife (because she is frigid) his three kids (because they watch too much TV), and himself (because he finds his job unfulfilling). We learn nothing about the kind of man who would commit such an act, as Holbrook pontificates about the meaninglessness of life, except that he doesn't need a gun — he could bore them all to death. GRADE: F

ROSE, THE (R) — Bette Midler, Alan Bates, Frederic Forrest. (Drama with music) This story of the tragic decline of a Janis Joplin-like singer is ugly and unpleasant, but tremendously effective and moving. Midler's performance is truly outstanding, and you'll find yourself aching with her, as booze, drugs and men destroy her. Caution: Gutter language. GRADE A

RUNNER STUMBLES, THE (PG) — Dick Van Dyke, Kathleen Quinlan, Maureen Stapleton. (Drama) Producer-director Stanley Kramer always aims high, and does so again with this film version of a play about a priest, a nun, a romance (after a fashion) and a murder. The trouble is it sounds more exciting than it is, and the film is is very slow going. The runner may stumble, but the film falls down. GRADE: B-minus

10 (R) — Julie Andrews, Dudley Moore, Bo Derek. (Romantic comedy). You've heard about guys who rate girls on a scale of one to 10? Well, this is about a girl who is a 10, and how that assessment mightily affects a songwriter, as well as the girl and her new bridegroom. Nothing weighty here, just good clean fun — and some of it isn't so clean. GRADE: B-plus

YANKS (R) — Richard Gere, Vanessa Redgrave, William Devane, Lisa Eichorn. (Drama) Story of American GIs stationed in a small English village in 1942 and of the local women they become involved with. Slow, richly textured and splendid to look at, but the romances ultimately sink into a state of fuzzy dispassion. So does the movie. Caution: Some strong subject matter, language. GRADE: B

(Film grading: A — superb; B — good; C — average; D — poor; F — awful)

Escape Story To Be Made Into Movie

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Eight East Germans who recently made a daring balloon escape across the East-West border, huddled on a platform beneath a homemade hot-air balloon, are reliving their experience for Hollywood screenwriters.

The balloonists, two electricians and their wives and sons, were the first refugees known to have used a balloon to cross the heavily fortified East German border.

When West German police, checking reports of a UFO, found the balloonists in a small Bavarian town, they were hailed as heroes.

Offers of clothing and money poured in. And Walt Disney Productions invited the two families to visit Hollywood this week and talk about their escape with Disney screenwriters and producers. The two families plan to return to West Germany on Sunday.

Tom Wilhite, a spokesman for Disney, said Friday that the company had purchased worldwide screen rights for the story from the families and planned to begin filming the adventure next summer in Europe.

The escapees are Gunter and Petra Wetzel, both 24; their sons Peter, 5, and Andreas, 2; Peter Strelzyk, 37; his wife, Doris, 34; and their two sons, Frank, 15, and Andreas, 11.

"They knew who the Disney characters were because they had lived close enough to the border to receive West German television," associate Disney producer Mark Stirdivant said.

"We are happy about the movie," Strelzyk said. "It will show the world what life in a communist country is like."

In 1977, Wetzel and Strelzyk, both East German electricians, decided to begin planning their escape. After ruling out the possibility of crossing the border on foot or stealing an airplane, the two hit upon the idea of building a balloon and drifting across the border at night.

Without instruction manuals, the men began to work in their attics and cellars. "We were always in danger, and had to be very careful about both buying the material and building the balloons," Wetzel said through translator Ursula Myer.

Strelzyk added, "We worked each weekend and each day a little bit. It was a two-year project."

The families drove to neighboring towns to assemble the nylon, taffeta, pillow ticking, pipes and valves that became the bodies and gas burners of three balloons, the first of which never got off the ground.

Wetzel told Strelzyk that if the Strelzyks tried alone in a bigger balloon, perhaps they would succeed. The Strelzyks determined to make their attempt last July in the second balloon.

"But the balloon got caught in a cloud cover," Strelzyk said. "The material absorbed moisture, the balloon grew heavy and it came down 200 meters short of the border."

The family had to pass through a minefield and walk more than six miles to where they had left their car. They were not spotted, but the balloon was found and the two men said they believed they would soon be discovered if they did not escape.

By Sept. 16, however, they had built a third balloon, measuring 90 feet high and 70 feet across. Stirdivant said it was the biggest hot air balloon ever built in Europe.

"The weather was perfect," Wetzel recalled, "but we had had no time to test the balloon."

Leaving their homes at night, about 19 miles from the border, the families drove about 13 miles, inflated their balloon and began the 28-minute flight to freedom.

MYSTERIOUS STREET BULGE — Two Los Angeles street maintenance workers inspect a bulge Friday in the center of Wilshire Blvd. adjacent to the famed LaBrea Tar Pits. A truck load of sand has been dumped on the heavy tar oozing through the pavement. Oozing, Sticky Tar Blob Blocks Traffic On Los Angeles Street

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Wilshire Boulevard struck oil Friday when a large blob of natural tar rose up and broke the surface of the road near the famed La Brea Tar Pits, blocking one lane during the morning rush hour, authorities said.

"It's not unusual. This sort of thing happens near the La Brea Tar Pits," where the bones of many prehistoric animals are preserved, district city engineer Joe Russell said.

Russell said a street maintenance crew was dispatched to the spot where the lump was oozing and put sand over the oily tar while police directed traffic around the 4-foot-wide lump, which rose nearly a foot above the level of the pavement.

Probably next week the street maintenance crew will do more extensive work on the bump, he said. They will build a trench to collect the tar for long periods and then the trench will be drained periodically, said Russell.

The tar pits are bubblig all the time, said Russell. They are not hot; it is a buildup of gas that sometimes will put extra pressure in a certain area, he said. This time the pavement swelled up, he added.

There already are other trenches in that area, said Russell.

"The geologist tells me this one (lump) is longer and slow moving, so some coarse base material would give us all the storage we would need for a couple of years," Russell said.

Tar is plainly visible bubbling in several ponds at Hancock Park in West Los Angeles, where the pits are located. The park is also the site of the George C. Page Museum, where paleontologists have catalogued the bones of thousands of ancient animals, including saber-toothed tigers, mammoths, wolves and giant sloths.

Information Center Offering Booklets Concerning Energy

WASHINGTON (AP)—Energy, energy, energy. It's become a constant refrain that we feel acutely in the wallet, particularly as winter gets under way.

Various government agencies have been studying means of saving energy for years and they have produced a wide variety of helpful suggestions.

Most of these ideas are included in various books and pamphlets available from the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo., 81009. Here are some:

• "The Energy-Wise Home Buyer," describes a dozen energy features to look for in a home along with charts and checklists for determining your needs. $2, item number 100G.

• "Fireplaces and Chimneys," tells how to select materials, describes construction and maintenance. $1, item number 046G.

• "Firewood for Your Fireplace," discusses the burning character of various woods, where and how to buy firewood and tips on fireplace safety: 60 cents, item number 047G.

• "Home Heating," tells about the installation, maintenance and costs of operating the most common heating systems. $1.10, item number 048G.

Silent Movie Actress Defeats County Petition

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former silent movie actress has won the right to manage her own affairs, defeating an attempt by the county on Friday to appoint a guardian for her property.

Los Angeles County had filed a conservatorship petition after an inspection in September showed that her Hollywood home was in filthy condition.

But Mary MacLaren, 79, had argued that responsibility for the house was not hers, because of a dispute over ownership.

Superior Court Judge Pro-tem Franklin E. Dana said: "After listening to you, I believe you understand your problem, and I don't think you need a conservator."

"God bless you, your honor," replied the retired actress.

Her lawyer, Larry Bryant, said Miss MacLaren holds legal title to the house, but equity, or monetary, title is held by James Griffis, bishop of the Evangelical Castle Church of Jesus Christ Apostolic. Miss MacLaren said she had been threatened with death if she didn't abandon the house to him.

Griffis has consistently refused to comment on the matter.

"I want to keep my home," she said. Bryant said he will challenge the disputed ownership of the residence.

Miss MacLaren has shared the screen with such leading men as Douglas Fairbanks Sr. and Rudolph Valentino. She said she played the queen in the original "Three Musketeers" with Fairbanks in 1921.

At the peak of her career, she was famed for wearing some of the finest fashions of silent films in the '20s. Her first appearance as an entertainer was in 1915 in an Al Jolson stage show called "Dancing Around."

The ownership of her home has been in dispute since last January, when Griffis took over the house and converted it into a rescue mission, restricting Miss MacLaren to two rooms of the house that she purchased with her mother more than 60 years ago.

She testified that the front door is nailed shut and that she must use a side door to reach her rooms, which she shares with a dozen dogs and cats.

Judge Dismisses Charge Against Self

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — Catawba County District Court Judge Bill J. Martin, censured last year by the state's highest court, has dismissed a traffic charge against himself.

An official of the state court system called the dismissal of the stop-sign violation an unthinkable act and said he would investigate the incident.

"That's the damndest thing I ever heard of. For a judge to have anything to do with a case involving himself is unheard of," said Bert M. Montague, director of the administrative office of the courts.

Martin, whohad been chared with a stop-sign violation, dismissed the charge on Monday in his own court on a motion by assistant district attorney Thomas N. Hannah.

Montague, who said he learned of the case on Friday, said he would report the case to the state Judicial Standards Commission if Martin's action amounts to a violation of the state's code of conduct for judges.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's not out of any particular determination to destroy an image as the Pollyanna of pop music, but Pablo Cruise is taking a look at the down side of life on the group's new album.

"In contrast to, say, 'Place in the Sun' and 'Worlds Away,' where the lyrics are really positive and optimistic, I think there's more of an emotional statement in 'Part of the Game,'" says Cory Lerios, keyboard player-vocalist for the San Francisco-based ensemble.

"We've always been contemplative," he adds. "Some people may have thought that we never thought of anything bad in the world or felt anything bad in the world."

This is probably true. In six years and four albums, Pablo Cruise has attracted quite a few fans with a rock sound that could best be described as, well, unrelentingly upbeat.

Like the band's music and even its name, album packages and song titles reeked of sunshine, surf and the California good life: "Ocean Breeze," "Island Woman," "A Place in the Sun." Band members Lerios, Dave Jenkins, Steve Price and Bruce Day look like they never spent a day sick in bed in their life.

Lerios — a dark, compact and somewhat low-key individual — says the whole carefree, outdoorsy image wasn't planned; it just happened. In fact, Lerios and Price, high school friends, were planning business careers when they started jamming together — Lerios at the piano and Price on the drums.

The business careers were dropped after a few terms at college, when guitarist Jenkins, Lerios and Price joined a San Francisco band called Stoneground. Later they teamed up with It's a Beautiful Day bass player Bud Cockrell and Pablo Cruise was born in the summer of 1973.

The band got some of its earliest exposure through television. Music directors for sports programs lapped up the bright, active sound; at one time or another Pablo Cruise selections have been played on CBS' "Sports Spectacular," NBC's "Sports World," ABC's "Wide World of Sports," "Monday Night Football," "Celebrity Superstars" and "Super Star Competition."

One selection off "Lifeline," the band's second album, "Zero to Sixty in Five," was used for a surfing documentary, "Free Ride."

"I think it (the television exposure) has rounded out our career a lot," Lerios says. "It's made a lot of fans out of people who watch Olympiad sports programs — a lot of skiiers and surfers and people like that."

He adds that the surfing documentary almost singlehandedly created the band's Japan market. And, he says, the television exposure probably led to increased radio airplay; program directors also watch sports shows.

In any case, the band's third album, "A Place in the Sun," was showcased extensively on both AM and FM radio. It sold more than half a million copies to be certified gold and yielded two hit singles, the title cut and "Watcha Gonna Do."

And the fourth album, "Worlds Away" — on which Cockrell was replaced by Day — proved the band's success was no fluke by going double platinum (sales of more than two million).

So why the move away from the approach which has proved so successful?

"We don't sit and preconceive," says Lerios. "With Allee Willis writing a lot of the lyrics, that has something to do with it. In the past, David Jenkins and myself had written all of the songs."

The band has just started playing the new material for audiences across the country, and, Lerios says, "The new stuff is going over really well. The album is just getting out, but the single, 'I Want You Tonight,' is doing well too.

"There is a lot of up stuff on the album," he points out. "It's not really that it's down. It's just an extension of all those up feelings turned around a bit."

Athletes Change Into Actors For Movie

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — How does a movie director train pro basketball players to do their on-court stuff to the rhythm of a musical score?

"It wasn't hard," said Gilbert Moses, director of the Lorimar-United Artists release "The Fish That Saved Pittsburgh."

"Basketball players are the most coordinated of all athletes. They must use their peripheral vision to keep track of the positions of their opponents and their own players. They must be able to leap off the ground and while in the air, use either hand to sink the ball and thus conquer the adversary."

Moses' charges included Julius Erving, who stars in the film, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who plays a featured role, plus Alfred Beard Jr., Darrell Brown, Ron Carter, Don Chaney, Leon Douglas, Connie Hawkins, Chris Ford, many more.

The director prepared himself with three months of choreographing in collaboration with Jerry Tarkanian, basketball coach at the University of Nevada at Las Vegas. For two weeks before shooting, Moses rehearsed the players to perform to the pre-recorded music, which he had choreopgraphed "down to the millisecond."

The action was fairly easy, said Moses. A greater challenge was inducing the pro stars to act.

"All their lives they have been trained to control their emotion, to maintain a stoic calm so they can psyche out the other players," he observed. "That's not very good training for being an actor."

Erving, the fabulous "Dr. J" of the Philadelphia 76ers, had to carry the heaviest acting load, and Moses prepared him with three months' training in a technique called "Freeing the Natural Voice." The lessons seemed so easy that Erving asked, "Is this all there is to acting?"

"You're just beginning," the director-coach replied. "I'm being too lenient with you."

"The Fish That Saved Pittsburgh" might sound like a religious drama or a sea adventure, but it's about a basketball story about "a million-dollar bonus baby whose hapless team is in a severe slump until astrology and a 12-year-old boy take a hand and lead them to a dazzling championship playoff." Among the non-athletes in the cast: Jonathan Winters, Stockard Channing, Flip Wilson, Marv Albert and Michael V. Gazzo. Albert broadcasts New York Knick games on radio.

Moses shot the film in Pittsburgh during the summer of 1978, using the Civic Arena for the basketball sequences. Production ran overtime to 48 days, boosting the budget from $4 million to $6 million. "The film just grew," explained the director. "Lorimar had faith in it all along."

For Moses, 37, "The Fish" marks another milestone in a career that has not been easy. The uphill road is difficult for any director. There are additional hazards if the director is black.

One of seven children of a Cleveland truck driver, Moses proved early that he was a gifted student, won a scholarship to Oberlin College, studied at the Sorbonne and then plunged into the civil rights movement in the 1960s. He became co-founder and artistic director of the Free Southern Theater of Jackson, Miss., went on to theater in Chicago and New York.

"I was extremely involved in 'The Wiz' for a year and a half, working on the realization of the project," he said. He left the show a month before the Broadway opening.

His stage work brought the chance to direct the Zanuck-Brown film, "Willie Dynamite." Said Moses: "It was a critical success, though not at the box office. Universal tried to sell it as a grade-B exploitation movie at a time when there was an uproar against black exploitation films."

"Willie Dynamite" led to "Roots," for which Moses directed the sixth and seventh (Chicken George) chapters. From that came "The Fish That Saved Pittsburgh."

"Being a director and black is still not easy," he admitted. "Even though I have awards in three areas (off-Broadway, on-Broadway and TV) I still have to prove what I'm doing."

Criminal Hall Of Famer Still Remains At Large

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — D.B. Cooper, who made America's criminal hall of fame when he pulled off the world's first aerial hijack for ransom and escaped by parachuting with the money, remains at large eight years after his daring deed.

A man using the name Cooper, whose first name turned out to be Dan, boarded a Northwest Orient Airlines Boeing 727 bound for Seattle on a cold and rainy night in Portland on Thanksgiving eve, 1971.

A few moments after takeoff he advised a stewardess he had a bomb in his briefcase and would blow up the plane if his demands were not met.

He ordered the crew to have $200,000 in $20 bills and three parachutes waiting for him in Seattle. They were delivered on landing. He then ordered the crew to fly the tri-jet, which had a rear door that opened below the tail, to Reno, Nev.

En route, he buckled on a parachute, ordered the crew to slow the airliner to about 200 mph and had a stewardess open the rear door. Out he went with the money, never to be heard from again. No trace of him or the money ever has been found.

FBI agent Ralph Himmelsbach was on duty the night of the hijack, and he's been chasing Cooper ever since, putting in thousands of hours checking out every lead and pursuing some of his own notions.

After eight years, Himmelsbach is just as enthusiastic in his pursuit as that first night.

"It hasn't been frustrating," he said. "It has been fascinating, interesting every step of the way."

Himmelsbach said he believes Cooper is dead, possibly with the money at the bottom of Lake Merwin in a southwest Washington wilderness area about 30 miles north of Portland.

But, whether Cooper is dead or alive, Himmelsbach says the FBI s dedicated to checking out every tip, every clue.

There have been clues, but most of them have proved to be false or phony, such as "discovery" of a parachute, with rusty buckles, found a week ago in the suspected Cooper drop area. So was a pair of pants, believed worn by Cooper, found hanging from a tree limb a few years back.

Himmelsbach, who welcomes all public help in solving the case, says the FBI has withheld a few of the intricate details of the hijacking, and that gives agents a "little edge" in eliminating the phonies, who either attempt to pin the crime on someone they know or claim they did the skyjacking themselves.

The veteran FBI agent is working his last Thanksgiving anniversary of the search for Cooper, because mandatory retirement from the FBI comes his way next Sept. 30.

"But, I won't retire frustrated if the case isn't solvd by then," he said. "It's been too interesting, too fascinating."

Sources Indicate Soviet Premier's Health May Be Failing

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, who has not been seen in public for 37 days, is ill, Soviet and East European sources say.

The next indication of how sick the 75-year-old permier is could come on Wednesday when the Supreme Soviet, the national parliament, meets to discuss a new economic plan for 1980.

Kosygin has been a guiding force behind the Soviet economy and his failure to appear at the Supreme Soviet would be highly unusual.

Serious questions about Kosygin's health arose after he failed to appear during ceremonies Nov. 6-7 marking the 62nd anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution.

Officially, nothing has been said about Kosygin's disappearence after he saw Syrian President Hafez Assad off at an airport ceremony Oct. 27.

Some Soviets and East Europeans say Kosygin is suffering a circulatory problem. Others say he has an illness related to the liver.

SEARCHING FOR SMOKE — Lubbock fireman Dwayne Davis searches for the source of smoke Friday morning after a fire damaged all eight units of an apartment complex under construction in the 1900 block of Raleigh Avenue. Capt. George Whitworth of the Lubbock Fire Department said the blaze apparently started in one wall of the structure and quickly spread throughout the building. No injuries were reported. Runner Turns 'Care Package' Into Health Food Corporation

NEW YORK (AP) — When Dennis Reina spoke the other day to the Chamber of Commerce in Valhalla, N.Y., he wore a jacket, tie and ... running shoes.

And though Reina says he runs six to eight miles a day, he wasn't there to sell running. Rather, he was there to sell his mother. Or more precisely, Mother's Nutters, a high-protein energy bar he says will be munched this winter by some members of the U.S. Olympic team.

Reina, at 29, is president of Mother's Nutters, Inc. And he's making a career out of something his mother included in a holiday package to him a couple years ago.

"It all started about two years ago," he says, "when my mother sent me up a Christmas care package." In that package delivered to Reina in snowy Vermont was a concoction cooked up by Loretta Reina to give her son some quick energy on the ski slopes. He was there for the winter as a ski instructor.

The bar was made of peanut butter, honey, oats, raisins and sunflower seeds, along with a healthy portion of yeast with Vitamin-B complex. And it was all-natural, with no sugar or preservatives added.

After eating a few bars, Reina says he got the idea of going commercial. Dubbing his product Mother's Nutters — "I named it after my mother" — he started selling the bars to stores that serve skiers, runners and other outdoors-types.

Last year, Mother's Nutters went along on an expedition up Alaska's Mt. McKinley, Reina says, and several bars were was aboard for a trip to Baffin Island in the Arctic in the summer.

Reina says some runners in last spring's Boston Marathon nibbled on Mother's Nutters bars to maintain stamina, and he says the bars will be a source of quick energy for some members of the U.S. biathlon team at the 1980 Winter Olympics in Lake Placid, N.Y.

Reina notes his non-candy bar fits right in with the natural foods theme adopted by Lake Placid's concessionaires. He says visitors to the games will find Mother's Nutters packed in box lunches being prepared for spectators.

Reina says Mother's Nutters bars taste goodn too, adding that's an essential part of his health food philosophy: "It doesn't have to taste like a health food bar to be one."

That philosophy can be bent a bit to include Dennis Reina himself — you don't have to look like a businessman to be one. He was a marketing major at the University of Maryland 10 years ago, but says he never planned to use that training.

"I went to school in the heyday of the revolution," Reina says. "The last thing I wanted was a 9-to-5 job for soe big coporation." So he got a van and headed for California.

He got there, barely. The van broke down in Yosemite National Park, and a two-week job in the park's ski lodge lasted four years. Soon after he moved back to the slopes of Vermont, the idea was born for Mother's Nutters. And now the man who couldn't fathom working for "some corporation" is president of his own.

No Trouble Expected For Rallies

VINELAND, N.J. (AP) — Mayor Patrick R. Fiorilli says he expects no trouble Saturday when the Ku Klux Klan and a group of public and religious leaders hold separate rallies in this quiet South Jersey city.

The mayor predicted Friday that several thousand people would attend his "Brotherhood Prayer Rally" from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. in the football stadium of Landis Junior High School and that only a handful would go to the Klan's rally, which is being held at the same time in Landis Park.

Fiorilli said police would patrol both rallies to prevent the kind of scattered violence that marked a Klan rally in Barnegat last August in which 19 Klansman held a brief demonstration on the front lawn of one of their members.

Fiorilli said he and Klan leader Edwin Reynolds, 23, of nearby Millville, exchanged pleasantries Friday when they met coming out of a local bookstore. Reynolds and a few others have been distributing flyers about the rally in Vineland and Milliville, he said.

"He asked me if I was all set and I asked him if he was all set. We both said yes and that was about it," Fiorilli said.

The mayor personally rented the stadium as a counter-demonstration to the planned Klan rally. He said the prayer meeting has the strong support of all clergymen in this Cumberland County community.

Fiorilli said he would station volunteers around Landis Park to ask the curious to ignore the Klan rally and attend the prayer service several blocks away.

The mayor said nine political activist groups, which he would not identify, had contacted him about comingto Vinelad to stage anti-Klan demonstrations. He said the groups had agreed not to confront the Klan.

"They understand what we're doing and they agree with it," Fiorilli said.

Ex-Politburo Member Irked

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — An 84-year-old former Politburo member rose during Friday's closing session of the Romanian Communist Party Congress to make a rare complaint about President Nicolae Ceausescu's stewardship of the nation's affairs.

Witnesses said Constantin Pirvulescu, now a member of the commission that controls party financial affairs, charged that what he called the Romania's failures were glossed over in the five-day congress and Ceausescu was using it to advance his own interests.

It was believed the first time in 15 years that Ceausescu — who is both president and party chief — was openly criticized at a party congress. The nation's former foreign minister, George Macovescu, said the criticism amounted to treachery.

Ceausescu gave Pirvulescu the floor after he complained of not being allowed to speak, witnesses said.

Delegates attending the congress shouted protests as Pirvulescu spoke.

Later, officials revoked Pirvulescu's authorization to attend the congress, and Ceausescu was declared unanimously re-elected to the chants and cheers of the 2,667 other delegates.

A Romanian press official said he had no knowledge of the incident, but another offficial told foreign newsmen, "Some foreign power is behind this." The official said Pirvulescu was a hardliner with closer ties to the Soviet Union than the Romanian party early in his career.

In a veiled reference to the postwar years of Soviet domination, the state news agency, Agerpress, said Pirvulescu was "probably longing for the time when the fate of the party and of the people was not to be decided here, but elsewhere."

Romania is a member of the Warsaw Pact alliance, but does not always go along with its decisions and follows an independent line in foreign and economic policy.

The incident Friday came as Romanian officials organized a major demonstration in support of Ceausescu in the giant square in front of Romania's former royal palace.

Ceausescu portraits were passed out of trucks to groups of people organized to come to the square for the end of the congress, being held in a hall behind the palace.

Ceausescu said there, "We will do everything for the triumph of the policy of national independence and peace. Our socialist system will be humane, but we will be unrelenting with our enemies."

Volcker Warns Banks Might Leave Reserve

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker cautions that nearly 300 banks probably will leave the Federal Reserve System if Congress fails to ease membership terms.

Volcker called for passage of legislation that would loosen those terms, primarily by reducing the amount of reserves that member banks must keep on deposit with the system. In a letter released this week, Volcker said abandonment of the system by hundreds of banks would have the "serious and insidious" effect of undermining the board's control over the nation's money supply.

One Man Killed, Two Others Injured In Collision In Dimmitt

A-J Correspondent

DIMMITT — A 28-year Dimmitt labor camp resident was killed and two other camp residents were critically injured Friday when their pickup truck collided with a Fort Worth and Denver Railroad train in the southeast portion of this Panhandle town.

Juan Suchil, 28, was pronounced dead at the scene of the 7 p.m. collision that occurred at the intersection of the Fort Worth and Denver railroad tracks and Mill Road. Jose Luis Lopez, 20, and Irineo Sanchez, 18, were taken to Central Plains Hospital in Dimmitt and then transported to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, where they were listed late Friday in critical condition.

The three men were traveling south on a paved county road when they collided with the rear of the train, which was backing up. The impact pushed the truck 114 feet before the train stopped.

Dimmitt Justice of the Peace Marshall Young is witholding a ruling on the fatality.

According to Department of Public Safety Trooper Dyrle Maples, Suchil, the driver of the truck, was trapped for almost 40 minutes in the crushed vehicle. Lopez was trapped for about 20 minutes until rescue workers could free him.

Lubbock Man Burned While Trying To Save Daughter

A Lubbock man who thought his daughter was trapped inside their burning home was in satisfactory condition late Friday at Health Sciences Center Hospital with burns he received when he tried to re-enter the flaming structure.

Juan Valsalduva of 2913 Cornell St. suffered burns over 12 percent of his body trying to save his daughter who already had escaped the gutted structure.

Lubbock Assistant Fire Marshal John Anthony said the fire, which reportedly was caused by electrical short in a cord strung underneath a bed and hung outside a south window, caused more than $1,000 damage to the house.

Reports indicate the fire erupted about 2:40 a.m. Friday and the house was totally engulfed by flames when firemen arrived.

A fire department dispatcher said the blaze was under control 15 minutes after firemen arrived.

Officials Probing Poisoning At Prison

EL RENO, Okla. (AP) — Health officials said Friday they were investigating the outbreak of a food poisoning-like illness that hit 53 prisoners at the federal institution here after Thanksgiving dinner.

A spokesman for the El Reno Federal Correctional Institution said today that the inmates became ill after the Thursday meal. He said none of the other approximately 850 inmates or the 60 employees who ate the same meal showed any of the symptoms.

He said the inmates reported sick between 3 p.m. and 6 p.m., showing symptoms of vomiting, nausea and diarrhea. "It hit quick and was over quick," he said.

The institution served a choice of turkey or ham, potatotes, corn, asparagus, dressing, mincemeat or cherry tart, fruit and either coffee or soft drinks.

The spokesman said samples of all of the food served were being sent to the state Health Department for study.

He added that the prisoners who became ill were not all from the same housing area, but were from throughout the institution.

The Well-Rounded Life

There are times we want to paint, and times we want to study. Who says a fellow can't wear his work clothes while enriching his mind? And relax with his shoes off, too!

Indeed all of us need to be cultivating the well-rounded life. We need to make provision in our busy weeks for work and play and learning and worship.

Much of the pressure under which we live may not be so much the result of life's unreasonable demands upon us as the result of our inadequate preparation for meeting life's demands.

Time spent with God . . . learning of His purposes, His power and His love . . . is one of the essentials for the well-rounded life. And while custom has long prompted folks to express reverence by donning their best clothes, in the church today the important thing is not what you wear — but that you're there.

Ad Agency Defends Campaign

CHICAGO (AP) — Such items as recipe folders and shopping bags were part of a $1.08 million advertising campaign by former Mayor Michael Bilandic in his unsuccessful bid for re-election last February, according to the agency that handled the account.

BILANDIC

The firm — Weber, Cohn and Riley — released a breakdown Wednesday "to show that none of the $1 million we spent on Bilandic's behalf is unaccounted for, as has been charged in published reports," said James V. Riley, president.

Riley said the agency had invoices and canceled checks to document the expenditures. The records also will be made available to the State Board of Elections.

According to Riley, the firm's billings include a 15 percent commission fee for placing the advertisements and a 17 percent markup on other items.

The other expenses included $426,862 for media advertisements; about $191,000 for production costs; $469,575 for nonmedia advertising — shopping bags, street guides and recipe folders — and an additional $36,000 on election day.

Don Rose, media director for Mayor Jane Byrne's primary campaign, said she spent $81,000 in her successful campaign.

Mailer elated after "Song"

Norman Mailer recently told talk show host Dick Cavett that he suffers from "post-writing" depression.

"After a book is written," Mailer said, "I get the feeling the bottom has fallen out of everything and my insides are empty. My nine children lived through the post-book depression. I have a sense that I will never work again. But not with 'Executioner's Song' (his latest). It was a huge labor and I take great pride in it.

"I felt a rediscovery of my own country — I can't think of anything more pompous — a discovery of the American character."

Norman Mailer

Mailer also confided that "I always wanted to write a western, a cowboy's novel."

Cat Adopted By Police

NEWPORT, Ky. (AP) — Corporal Fuzz hasn't made any arrests yet, but he does have a collar.

Corporal Fuzz is a big, gray striped alley cat who's been adopted by the Newport Police Department.

Police officers, who celebrated their mascot's year on the force this week, swear that Corporal Fuzz is almost human to the point of wearing a badge on his collar and walking his own beat.

At a party held Tuesday, Fuzz was presented with a cake decorated with a cat and mouse. Gifts included several toys and a bag of catnip.

"You think of hard-boiled cops, but they're like putty in his paw. He's got us wrapped around his paw," said Lt. Jim Bogart.

Bogart said it was around Nov. 21, 1978, when a scrawny, half grown cat wandered into police headquarters.

After it appeared Fuzz was going to stay, police made sure he got the best of medical attention.

Since then, Bogart said the cat has been "eating like a horse" and "sleeping anywhere he likes."

One of Fuzz's usual perches is a window sill, where he surveys the station yard. A dog came into the yard recently and Fuzz roared out of the door to send the animal fleeing.

'Dead' Woman Fights Taxes

MONTVILLE, Conn. (AP) — Alice E. Blattler says that if the town registrar is right and she is dead, then she shouldn't have to pay taxes.

But the tax collector maintains she is still alive on their books.

Mrs. Blattler, 50, says election officials refused to let her vote on Nov. 6 because their records showed she was dead. Town Registrar Helen Pastore said "a simple mistake was made somewhere."

Since the registrar maintains that she will remain listed as deceased until she presents herself before town officials, Mrs. Blattler has decided she shouldn't have to pay her taxes.

"I do not see how someone who is not alive can continue paying taxes, sewer bills and other charges that the town wishes to collect," she said in a letter to the registrar.

"For this reason, I do not feel that I should have to prove my existence and, therefore, I will not accept any further bills from the town of Montville."

Tax Collector Nancy Saunders said that if Mrs. Blattler failed to pay her taxes, she will be treated the same as other delinquent taxpayers.

"She won't be able to register her car and we might put a lien on her property," Ms. Saunders said. "She's still alive on our books."

Turkeys Join Holiday Meal

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — When the Schmachers sid they were having turkeys for Thanksgiving, they didn't men the same thing as the rest of us.

Phil and Fred, the turkeys — joined the family at the table for meat loaf.

Mary and George Schumacher, of Selkirk near Albany, had bought a pair of baby turkeys six months ago, intending to fatten them up for the Thanksgiving centerpiece.

"We planned to eat them up until a week ago. We even had three people volunteer to butcher them," said Mrs. Schumacher, "but we just couldn't do it.

"We've gotten so fond of them, they're pets, and none of us had the heart to eat turkey for Thanksgiving."

So Phil and Fred, who kept their original names even after they began laying eggs, spent most of Thanksgiving day running around the yard with the other family pets — six ducks, a goose, five chickens, two rabbits, two dogs and a cat.

Mrs. Schumacher said the family enjoyed its holiday meatloaf, which included a goose egg. The turkeys, equipped with napkins around their necks, probably gave thanks.

Interpreter Mimes Opera

MIAMI (AP) — For a frustrated actress, it was a rare opportunity.

As members of the Greater Miami Opera performed "The Wandering Scholar," Renee FaliTz shared the spotlight and performed with them. But, unlike the Other actors and actresses, she never spoke.

Miss Falitz is an interpreter for the deaf, and her job during the recent performance was to mime and sign the opera.

Although she interprets for the deaf daily at Miami-Dade Community College, miming the opera was a job she relished.

"Interpretation of music is the most beautiful and creative kind of interpretation there is," says the 25-year-old Fort Lauderdale resident.

"It is difficult, because you must prepare youself for it and familiarize yourself with the plot and the characters," she explains. "And, since you are on stage and too far from the audience for finger spelling, you must sign a concept for some words."

In "The Wandering Scholar," Miss Falitz used the letter A as the sign for both Allison, the chief character, and the concept Allison represents, a loose woman.

The letter L also had a double meaning, standing both for Allison's oblivious husband, Louis, and for what he represents in the opera — stupidity.

Rookies Turn Into Turkeys

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — Several of rookies on the Buffalo Bills football team must have had red faces as they sat down for Thanksgiving dinner.

As many as 11 rookie players on the Bills fell victim Thursday to what has become an annual "turkey day" joke by the team's veteran players.

A note on the bulletin board in the Blls' locker room Wednesday promised "free turkeys for Thanksgiving Day" for all players. All the player had to do was to go to a specified store and pick up the bird.

The problem — or the joke — was that there were no free turkeys.

In past years, the specified place for the birds was nonexistent. This year, however, the address was that of a butcher shop, and the butcher was in on the sham.

Players who came to the store to pick up turkeys were handed a less-than-complimentary letter in which their veteran teammates told them who the real turkeys were.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The guests on this Sunday's network news interview programs will be:

•Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., "Issues and Answers," ABC.

•Lane Kirkland, president of the AFL-CIO, "Face the Nation," CBS.

•George Ball, former diplomat and Middle East expert, "Meet the Press," NBC.

Former Spy Resigns Post

LONDON (AP) -Anthony Blunt, the art historian and former Soviet spy, resigned Friday from the coveted post of honorary fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge University.

Blunt's resignation was unanimously accepted at a meeting of the college council, a spokesman said. "We will be making no further comment about the meeting."

Blunt had been an honorary fellow of Trinity since 1967.

His resignation followed newspaper reports that Sir Alan Hodgkin, the college master, was proposing a council meeting to withdraw Blunt's fellowship.

Liza Minnelli To Marry

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Actress Liza Minnelli has announced her intention to marry Mark Gero, who stage managed her Broadway show "The Act" and her current concert tour.

Allen Burry, Ms. Minnelli's press agent, said Friday the couple announced their engagement at a Thanksgiving Day party she hosted for the cast and crew of the road show, which is appearing through the weekend at the New Orleans Theatre of Performing Arts.

"The time and place have to be fixed," Burry said. "There is no date yet."

It would be the third marriage for Ms. Minnelli, the daughter of Judy Garland and director Vincente Minnelli, and the first for Gero. She previously was married to Australian singer-composer Peter Allen and producer Jack Haley Jr., son of the late Jack Haley, who played the Tin Man with Miss Garland in "The Wizard of Oz."

Burry said the couple met 1 1/2 Years ago when he was stage manager for "The Act," for which she won a Tony as best musical actress. Both live in New York.

Youngster Gives Money

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A Des Moines youngster sent Gov. Robert Ray the $50 his parents had given him to buy a Christmas present as a donation to "Iowa SHARES," an effort to help starving Cambodians.

GOV. RAY

Eric Sharp, 9, a fourth grader, included a brief letter saying, "Please take my Christmas money of $50 and send it to the Cambodians. I think they deserve a Christmas, too. P.S. May God bless you."

The governor Friday morning quickly called a news conference to introduce Eric to the media. He said the boy was an incentive to all.

Ray announced the Iowa SHARES campaign on Wednesday. The goal is to raise some $110,000 from Iowans to buy food and other supplies for the starving Cambodians.

COOKING UP A STORM — Clifton Carter demonstrates his new snow-melting machine in his South Side factory. The 41-year-old father of six got the idea while repairing a tar-melting machine. Carter says his machine, a coil-heating chamber filled with boiling water and fueled by propane gas, can beat any blizzard Mother Nature can concoct. (AP Laserphoto)

Monument Eyed As Park

MIAMI (AP) — Florida congressmen have filed legislation to convert the Biscayne National Monument, a stretch of mangrove-dotted keys and sparkling water, into a national park.

The bills also propose increasing the 104,000-acre monument in south Biscayne Bay by 55,000 acres to protect more of the area's marine life.

About 45,000 acres of the additional land now belong to the state, and the title would be given to the federal government. The remaining private property would be purchased by the U.S. government at an estimated cost of $8 million to $10 million.

U.S. Reps. Dante Fascell, Claude Pepper and William Lehman have introduced a bill in the House, and U.S. Sens. Richard Stone and Lawton Chiles proposed a similar measure in the Senate.

A new designation would also give visitors a better idea of what the area contains, said Barbara Burris, Fascell's press secretary. "When people hear national monument, they expect some type of structure sticking out in the middle of the bay.

"A park has natural trails and can be used for hiking, backpacking, cycling, and it's more attractive," she said.

Within the monument, which stretches from Homestead to the upper Keys, are stands of mangroves that shelter marine life in their tangled roots. Surrounding the area is some of South Florida's clearest water.

Last June, the state Legislature declared the monument a sanctuary for crawfish, making it illegal to catch or harm the creatures.

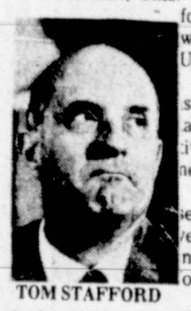

Local conservation groups, which have urged protection of the area since it was designated a national monument 10 years ago, applauded the proposals.

"That's the best thing that could happen," said William Lazarus, spokesman for the Izaak Walton League. "This is the only area of its kind in the United States, and we should protect it."

The proposed expansion, Burris said, would take the property line east through the bay up to the Bill Baggs Cape Florida State Park on Key Biscayne.

Ex-Astronaut Urged To Run

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Former astronaut Tom Stafford is back in Oklahoma, but those who think he came back to run for the U.S. Senate next year are mistaken.

TOM STAFFORD

"Henry Bellmon told me that now is the time," Stafford said with a laugh, "but right now my main objective is to get established in the business community in Oklahoma."

Bellmon, Oklahoma's senior U.S. senator, is retiring from office next year, and many Republicans, Bellmon included, have urged Stafford to run for the job.

But Stafford, a native of Weatherford, says the chances are almost nil for the 1980 race, and not much better for future races.

"Politics is at the very bottom of my priorities right now," he said from his new home in Norman. "There is no way I can see that changing by next year."

Symphony vs. coughers

If there's anything that irritates, unnerves and infuriates stage performers and musicians it's coughing in the audience. The coughing problem obviously worsens when the common cold season sets in. But this year the Baltimore Symphony is doing something about it.

John V. Brain, a symphony official, reports that arrangements have been made with a cough-drop manufacturer for a donation of 28,000 cough-suppressant lozenges, which will be given to members of the audience.

"It is believed that they (the audience) will be so awed by the campaign," Brain remarked, "that not only will the winter of 1979 be marred by nary a croak, but the program rustlers, purse-droppers, crinklers and whisperers will also be cowed into silence. Amid the heavy vapors of menthol and eucalyptus, you'll be able to hear a pin drop."

McDonald's Raising Prices

CHICAGO (AP) — McDonald's Corp., which announced cut hamburger and cheeseburger prices last summer, has quietly raised prices on nearly all other products.

In August, McDonald's used a national advertising campaign to announce that it was lowering by a nickel, or about 10 percent, the prices on its two staples. On Nov. 16, the restaurant chain raised prices by 2 to 11 cents, which is a 5-percent to 11-percent increase.

The increases went into effect in all company-owned stores, about one-third of the 4,712 McDonald's restaurants in the country.

The price of hamburgers was not changed. The highest increases were in coffee and pie prices, which were raised 14 percent to 20 percent, and drinks, french fries and milk, which showed 5-percent to 10-percent increases.

"It is certainly safe to say these price increases are considerably more dramatic than the price cuts they posted this summer," said Robert L. Emerson, a stock analyst who watches fast-food companies for Salomon Brothers, New York.

"With hamburgers and cheeseburgers, they lowered prices 10 percent on products that account for 11 percent of sales. So the effect was only a 1-percent decline in overall prices. This (increase) is much larger."

In August, McDonald's said the cost of beef prices was down so it could afford to pass the savings on to its customers. Now, the company said, prices are being increased because of the rise in the cost of raw food products.

Victor Borge is not only a consummate entertainer, but, in his own words, "a pretty good cook." His recipe for rock Cornish hens is included in a new cookbook entitled "Harmony in the Kitchen" (McAfee, $8.95), compiled and edited by Maida Glancy and Ettore Stratta. Recipes have been contributed by Paul Anka, Perry Como, Dolly Parton, Marvin Hamlisch and other show business personalities.

But Borge's recipe includes some rather unusual cooking instructions. He instructs the reader to sear hens in butter until golden brown — 10 to 12 minutes. But, he writes, "If a clock is not available, play the 'Minute Waltz' 10 or 12 times."

Tech Professor To Repeat South Pole Flight

Dr. Grover E. Murray, former president of Texas Tech University and now University Professor, will be among the scientists and other dignitaries who will repeat on Nov. 29 the first flight over the South Pole, accomplished 50 years ago by Adm. Richard E. Byrd.

The National Science Foundation sponsored expedition will leave Christchurch, New Zealand on Monday for the main U.S. Antarctic station at McMurdo. Weather permitting, the group will join a regularly scheduled research flight for the Nov. 29 trip to the South Pole.

The party will land at the South Pole — a feat impossible for the Byrd expedition in a Tri-motor Ford — and a ceremony commemorating the 1929 flight will be conducted.

Murray will be traveling as vice chairman of the National Science Board which directs NSF activities. Dr. Norman Hackerman, president of Rice University and chairman of the National Science Board, will be present.

With them will be Adm. Byrd's grandson, Robert Breyer of California, and a nephew, Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr. of Virginia, representatives of the U.S. State Department, the NSF and the Navy. The expedition will return to McMurdo on the same day, arriving back in New Zealand about Dec. 1.

With Byrd on the first flight over the pole were Bernt Balchen, pilot, Harold June, who attended to fuel tanks, lines and photography, and Capt. Ashley McKinley. On that 18-hour flight the crew had to jettison 45 days of rations over Livingston Glacier to give the plane sufficient lift to fly over the mountains encountered.

Murray is a geologist and recently was elected president of the American Geological Institute. He is past president of the Association of Professional Geological Scientists, the American Association of petroleum Geologists and the Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists.

He said that, while he has a special interest in geological research in the Antarctic, he has had a continuing interest in all of the scientific research conducted on that continent, much of it with NSF support.

The trip will mark Murray's fifth to the Antarctic.

Expedition Led To Antarctic Exploration

SOUTH POLE, Antartica (UPI) — Richard E. Byrd and three colleagues flew over the South Pole for the first time 50 years ago this week by navigating a Ford Trimotor 1,600 miles over the trackless desolation of Antarctic ice, snow and mountains.

Today, large turboprop LC 130 ski planes fly regularly during the spring and summer between the United States' main Antarctic base at McMurdo Sound and the Amundsen-Scott research station 837 miles away.

Sixty people now live under the 52-foot-high aluminum geodesic dome that forms the core of the South Pole base. By March, when summer ends, the Pole's population will drop to 17 — 16 men and one woman, 22year-old physicist Martha Kanen of New Providence, N.J.

The South Pole is one of the coldest and driest spots on earth. During the summer, temperatures range between 20 degrees below zero Fahrenheit and minus 50. In the winter, the mercury can go below minus 100.

"Great God, what an awful place this is," wrote British explorer Robert F. Scott when he and four colleagues reached the Pole on Jan. 18, 1912, only to find that Norwegian Roald Amundsen and four others had been there 35 days earlier. Scott and his men died when they ran out of food and fuel on their way back to McMurdo.

The Suth Pole was not seen again until Byrd flew over it. There then was a hiatus of 37 years before a Navy advance party landed there to build the first permanent South Pole station.

That station is now being crushed under 40 feet of snow and ice. The new Amundsen Scott station opened in 1975 and it already is flanked by drifts of hard-packed snow.

Like America's other Antarctic research stations, the South Pole base is sponsored by the National Science Foundation and supported by the Navy's Operation Deep Freeze.

By flying to the South Pole and back 50 years ago, Byrd opened a new era of Antarctic exploration.

Ta flight will be commemorated Thursday when an LC-130 traces the route Byrd and his men took from the Ross ice shelf to the Pole. Among those expected to be aboard the transport are Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Jr., nd-Va., a nephew of the avator, and Dr. Laurence Guld, chief scientist on Byrd's first expedition in 1928.

Weak Effects Noted In Divorce Study

By the EDITORS Of PSYCHOLOGY TODAY

In a community where divorce is not a stigma, a parental breakup need not, by itself, have negative emotional effects on preschool children!

Yet, according to a recent study in Boulder, Colo., even a divorce that is well-accepted can make children more susceptible to emotional problems if it hits them in combination with other stresses.

Boulder is a university town that seems to attract the divorce-prone. It has 60 percent as many divorces as martiages, a ratio 50 percent higher than the national average. Still, no one was more surprised by the weak effect divorce itself had on children than the researchers, psychologist William Hodges and his colleagues, Ralph Wechsler and Constance Ballantine, at the University of Colorado in Boulder.

According to not only common assumption but previous studies, a divorce is enough to produce lasting emotional upset and adjustment problems, particularly in children under 7, who are the ones most likely to experience divorce in the United States.

Many of the earlier studies, however, lacked control groups that would have shown whether the problems of children in intact families occur just as often as problems of children in divorced ones. One study that did have a good control group took place primarily in Virginia, where divorce is neither as common nor as socially accepted as it is in Boulder.

The latest study took 52 children close to the age of 4 from five Boulder preschools and day-care centers. Twenty-six of them had parents who had separated anywhere from five months to four years earlier. Another 26 children served as a control group.

The researchers asked teachers, mothers and independent observers to note carefully the extent of the children's anxiety. They also noted such behavior as aggression, withdrawal, dependency, cooperation and paying attention.

Their report showed few differences between children from separated and intact families. Divorced mothers found their children slightly less cooperative, but very few reported strong negative behavior. Boulder children, the researchers speculate, may experience divorce as less of a "deprivation" than children elsewhere because among their peers, divorce is such a common event.

Yet the study does not mean the U.S. is headed toward such fluid families that divorce will have no more impact on a child than, say, losing a tooth. In general, the effects of stressful or traumatic events have been shown to be cumulative for children as well as for adults. Sure enough, when children in Colorado had gone through a divorce, other stressful family conditions, such as financial strain or frequent moves, were linked to maladjustment, anxious depression and aggression. The same situations had no measurable effect on children from intact homes.

Divorced families are more prone than intact ones to moving and decreases in their economic status. Hence the researchers say that despite their optimistic finding about the weak effects of a well-accepted divorce by itself, most children of divorce will still need extra care to help them cope.

Furor Caused By Washington Portraits

BOSTON (UPI) — More than a centuy ago school children inspired by an Oliver Wendell Holmes poem saved their pennies and helped rescue the historic frigate Old Ironsides from the scrap heap.

Today, a few miles from where the USS Constitution is berthed, public sentiment has been turned toward two historic and valuable paintings of George and Martha Washington.

The paintings by Gilbert Stuart are hanging in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, but their owners are threatening to remove them from Boston and sell them to the Smithsonian Institution's Natonal Portrait Gallery in Washington.

The attempt to sell the paintings has aroused a furor among some circles in Boston, and a committee called The Washingtons Belong In Boston was formed several months ago to raise $5 million.

The committee has until Dec. 31 to raise the money. To date it has raised about $1 million.

The school children of the 19th century had Holmes' "Old Ironsides" to inspire them to save the frigate. The youngsters of old worried that

"The meteor of the ocean air
"Shall sweep the clouds no more!"
and that
'The harpies of the shore shall pluck
"The Eagle of the Sea!"

Today, the public is being egged on to save George and Martha by the one liners of Bob Hope and help from other famous personalities.

The Stuart paintings have been in Boston since 1806. They have been owned by the Boston Athenaeum since 1831. The Athenaeum, a 172-year-old private library, bought the portraits for $1,500 and says it is now forced to sell them to raise money to meet growing operating costs.

The museum has had the paintings on loan from the Athenaeum since 1876.

Hope and other personalities have made television commercials to raise funds for the cause.

"I think it would be the best Christmas present to the people of Boston if the paintings remained here," said Lisa Scmid, spokeswoman for The Washingtons Belong In Boston campaign.

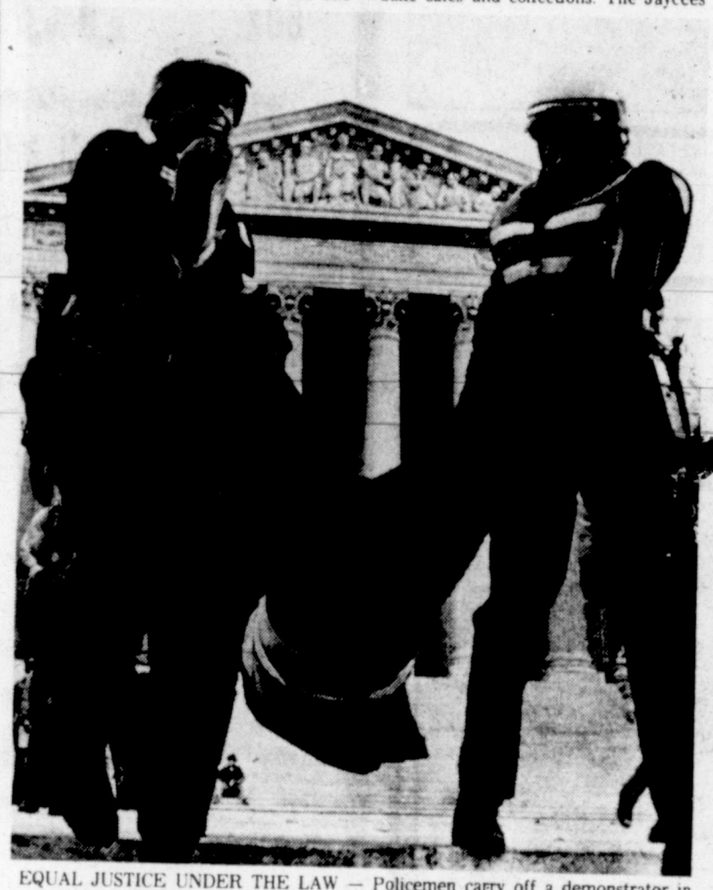

Miss Schmid said there is "groundswell support for the campaign." People are responding because it is part of their heritage that is at stake, she said.

"We have raised $12,500 in three weeks. People really care about George and Martha. They are the home town team," she said.

"The paintings mean a lot to the average guy. People identify with the founding father. Kids identify with the picture of George Washington because it is the same one on the dollar bill. People are aware of what's going on and they want them to stay here," Ms. Schmid said.

Elementary schools are active with bake sales and collections. The Jaycees have made the cause into a statewide project. And ad agencies and radio stations are donating time and space.

"Rcently a guy came in off the street and wrote out a check for $17,000," she said. "We are doing very well and are sure we can reach the deadline. We are determined to keep them here."

Documents Released By Court Reveal Plot Against Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Church of Scientology plotted o send a writer who criticized the church either to jail or a mental institution, according to court documents released Friday.

A church file dated April 1, 1976, described a plot called "Operation Freakout" that was directed at Paulette Cooper, who in 1971 wrote a book entitled "The Scandal of Scientology."

Church documents said the purpose of "Freakout" was to "get P.C. incarcerated in a mental institution or jail, or at least to hit her so hrd that she drops her attacks."

Some documents mentioned specific plots in which the churchplanned to make bomb threats in Miss Cooper's name.

Miss Cooper, in an interview, contended one bomb threat sent by the church on her stationary resulted in her indictment by a federal grand jury. She said charges were later dropped.

The documents were among thousands of pages of records seized by the FBI from the church's Los Angeles office in 1977.Some of the documents were used to pepare a ciminal case against nine church officials who were convicted Oct. 26 of plotting to steal government records about the church.

U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey, who convicted the churcl members, then ordered most of the documents that were seized to be released publicly.

Miss Cooper said in an interview she was harassed by the Scientologists in numerous ways: by 14 libel suits against her and her publisher, death threats, obscene phone calls, and phony letters about her sexual behavior.

Church spokesman Dennis McKenna, responding to the release of documents about Miss Cooper, claimed that the writer was "covertly working with the FBI and other federal agencies" to harm the church. He said shehad special access to government files on Scientology, files that governmentagencies refused to turn over to the church.

Miss Cooper said her worst experience since the book was published was her indictment by a federal grand jury in New York in May 1973. Shewas accused of sending a bomb threat to the church and of perjury for allegedly lying about the incident.

It took her more than two years to convince prosecutors that the theat — written on stationary stolen from her apartment — was sent by the church.

A few days after the indictment, a church document shows, a Scientologist who befriended Miss Cooper wrote his headquarters: "We have Mrs. Lovely (a church code name for Miss Cooper) in a very perplexing situation."

Miss Cooper said in the interview she believes her stationary was stoln by a Scientology agent who visited her apartment posing as a representatie of the United Farm Workers union.

Family Still Thankful Despite Many Problems

OCONOMOWOC, Wis. (UPI) — Money has been tight and there have been problems but Ken and Phyl Stiemke say they had a lot to be thankful for this Thanksgiving: they didn't have to eat their pet turkey or their watchdog goose.

Most of the animals they were raising to make ends meet had to be destroyed because of a zoning ruling, the transmission on their van went out and had to be fixed and one of their 12 children broke a leg.

"But we've got an awful lot and we know it," Mrs. Stiemke said recently. "If the only problem we ever have is we're short on a little money, then we're really fortunate."

She admits there will have to be a lot more scrimping in the future to feed the children.

"There are some aisles in the grocery store we don't even bother to go down," she said.

For the past 16 years, the family had been raising ducks, chickens, geese and goats on their 1.5-acre backyard, using the meat, milk and eggs to feed the children.

Last summer a neighbor complained and the Waukesha County Park and Planning Commission told the tiemkes to get rid of their animals or be taken to court.

Mrs. Stiemke said they now drink powdered milk because they had to sell their goats.

The Stiemke's were able to fatten up the chickens and the ducks and slaughter and freeze them for the winter. But, late last month, just a week after the birds were slaughtered, the freezer broke.

All the ducks and chickens and some of the fruits and vegetables from the family garden spoiled and had to be thrown out, she said.

At about the same time, their 7-year-old daughter broke her leg, the transmission went out on the van and the Park and Planning Commission sent the family a summons giving them 20 days to satisfy the county's order to get rid of the animals or go to court.

Mrs. Stiemke said she called the commission and reported the progress.

"We really did make an attempt," she said noting all that is left are a couple of ducks, Mamboo the watchdog goose, "Turkey," the pet gobbler that escaped the Thanksgiving dinner table, one hen and a couple rabbits.

The neighbor Mrs. Stiemke described as a "pickle" and the Park and Planning Commission may finally be satisfied, but that still did not solve the dilemma of replacing the spoiled poultry and providing meat for the Thanksgiving table without doing in "Turkey."

So a friend stepped in.

"He heard about our predicament and offered to buy us a turkey. We decided to invite him along," Mrs. Stiemke said.

Brazilian Corner On Juice Market May Be Declining

BEBEDOURO, Brazil (AP) — Brazil, renowned as the world's largest coffee grower, also is squeezing big profits from its dominance of the world orange juice market.

But the juice boom may be about to sour.

Brazil supplies 80 percent of the world's exported orange juice, trade that in 1978 was worth about $330 million. Last year, 44 percent, or about $145 million worth, was sold to the United States.

Brazilians have been riding soaring prices for orange juice concentrate since frost hit Florida groves in 1977. But Florida, which supplies most of the United States' oranges, is recovering — just when Brazil itself expects a bumper crop and is increasing capacity to process the fruit.

The international market is threatened with overproduction and plunging prices.

Brazil started its move towards dominating the international orange juice market in the mid 1960s when it began to exploit its natural advantages. "Brazil has cheap land and labor, besides excellent soil and climatic conditions," explained Walter Stamato, industrial director of Frutesp, a major orange juice processor.

Some have made fortunes with this development. One is Reinaldo Hauck, who worked as a shoeshine boy until he was 14. Now 41, he owns 18,000 acres of orange groves.

"I bought my first farm with tip money I made as a waiter," Hauck said. He planted orange trees, and when they began to produce, "I just bought more land."

But sitting beside the pool of his modern mansion here in Bebedouro, a thriving town in the heart of Southeastern Brazil's orange country, Hauck says: "I could never do it again. The big companies get everything now."

Four companies dominate Brazil's processing industry. They buy the farmers' oranges, squeeze them and convert the juice into concentrate. In the consuming markets, water is usually added to reconstitute the juice before it is sold.

Brazilian processors have done very well since the 1977 Florida frost. The average price of their juice exports rose from $481 a metric ton in 1976 to $1,000 a ton now for imported juice in Tampa, Fla. That's before U.S. import taxes are added. They raise the price to $1,600.

No Risks Shown For Influenza Vaccine

ATLANTA (AP) — A study of influenza vaccine used in the 1978-79 flu season shows no significant excess risk of Guillain-Barre Syndrome, which was associated with the 1976 swine flu immunization program, the Center for Disease Control said Friday.

The CDC has been monitoring the association between flu vaccines and Guillain-Barre, which can cause paralysis and death, since the swine flu vaccine was linked with the ailment more than three years ago.

"There is no significant excess risk associated with the 1978-79 vaccine as compared with the 1976-77 (swine flue) vaccine," said Dr. Eugene Hurwitz, an epidemiologist who compiled the latest data.

According to the CDC, the study suggests that immunization with the 1978-79 influenza vaccine did not increase a person's risk of getting Guillain-Barre.

Hurwitiz said data from this year's vaccine still is being compiled and no preliminary conclusions are available.

Although the administration of this year's vaccine has been under way for several weeks, no influenza outbreaks have been reported in this country.

The predominant influenza strain in the United States last year was A-Brazil. The incidence of flu generally was light and those over 25 were not affected, presumably because of previous infection with related strains in the 1950s, the CDC said.

Guillain-Barre Syndrome is characterized by paralysis that usually is reversible. However, its death rate is about 5 percent.

Before the 1976 swine flu vaccination program: no association between Guillain-Barre and influenza vaccination was recognized. That year, however, Guillain-Barre appeared in excess among persons who had received the swine flue vaccine.

'We Speak The Word That Arthritis Be Healed, That Cysts Be Taken Away'

'Word Of God' Big Business For Network

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (UPI) — "God performs miracles," intoned the Rev. Pat Robertson, his voice and image transmitted worldwide via twin satellite earth dishes beamed towards the heavens.

"We declare with you, God, nothing is impossible," Robertson continued, preaching before six cameras at the television station he built from a dilapidated studio into a $100 million empire.

"We speak the word that arthritis be healed, that cysts be taken away," he pleaded, his voice contorted, the studio audience mesmerized. "Thank you, Jesus. Thank you, Jesus."

Robertson is founder and president of the 18-year-old Christian Broadcasting Network and superstar of the mushrooming industry known as the "Electric Church."

Plugging religion into radio and television airwaves, the industry claims a weekly audience of 130 million people — exceeding the estimated number of regular church-goers — and about $1 billion a year in contributions.

Despite legions of faithful followers, these electronic evangelists have also drawn scores of critics, creating a less-than-holy debate on their worth and mission.

Supporters maintain the Electric Church beams the Bible into living rooms, recruits new followers of Christ and provides a wholesome alternative to the sex and violence on commercial TV.

Opponents complain they drain money and members from mainline churches, provide entertainment instead of the gospel and offer an easytype religion lacking needed fellowship.

There have also been complaints that some TV and radio preachers are more interested in the dollar than the Deity and are motivated only by a quest for fame and fortune. Little evidence has surfaced to support suspicions of corruption, suspicions electric church supporters attribute to jealousy.

The Baptist General Association of Virginia recently adopted a resolution critical of the electric church. It called for financial disclosure of all members and deplored electronic ministers using the airwaves "to enhance or advance some particular political position, economic policy or social theory."

The Association said, "We now call upon the parachurch organizations to declare publicly that they are accountable to their constituencies from whom they solict and receive contributions no less than they are accountable to Almighty God."

The Rev. William Lumpkin of Norfolk, Va., a member of the Association said, "There's no open warfare between the church and these organizations, but there's sensitivity to the dangers of them."

The 40-million member National Council of Churches of Christ plans to hold a conference on the electric church in mid-February to discuss its impact on religion and how the traditional church should respond.

The Rev. William Fore, NCCC's assistant general secretary for communications, has already made it clear he is concerned about electronic evangelists.

"What worries me about all this activity is not the financial success or the big business aspects of this evangelism," he said. "What worries me is whether this electronic church is in fact pulling people away from the local church."

"Sour grapes — that's what most of these complaints are all about," said Dr. Ben Armstrong, executive director of the National Religious Broadcasters, a trade association of 900 TV and radio preachers and producers.

"They can't accept the fact that we are so successful, so they try to downgrade us," said Armstrong, a Presbyterian pastor who defines the Electric Church "as simply a religious outreach into the media."

He said, "My feeling is that these people who criticize it should join it. It would help them do better and improve membership at their churches."

Dr. Martin E. Marty, a nationally respected religious authority and a theology professor at the University of Chicago, is afraid the Electric Church may short-circuit regular churches.

"The Electric Church is supported by people who are attracted to a relgious leader, send in weekly or monthly checks and pray for the cause," he wrote in a recent article in Lutheran Standard.

"But beyond this, the Electric Church is fostering in our midst a completely private 'invisible religion,'" he wrote. "This 'invisible religion' is, or ought to be, the most feared contemporary rival to church religion — and church religion is the only faith he New Testament knows."

> "What worries me about all this activity is not the financial success or the big business aspects of this evangelism. What worries me is whether this electronic church is in fact pulling people away from the local church."

Robertson, who has heard plenty such gripes, said, "No matter what you do, you are going to have critics."

He added, "This isn't our network, this is Christ's.

"We don't compete with the local churches, we work with them," he said, noting CBN Referred more than 32,000 callers and viewers to local churches nationwide last year.

"Our job is to make people see Jesus Christ," he said. "If they see us, we have failed."

Yet it not a black-and-white question. Marty concedes there may be a few pluses to the Electric Church, such taking religion to shut-ins. Robertson concedes there may be some less-than-scrupulous electronic preachers.

"We rejoice that Jesus is using some, yet we deplore instances when broadcasters are misusing God's gifts," he said.

Founded in 1961, CBN was the first and remains the largest of the nation's three religious networks. It is considered the most innovative and technically advanced.

But the other two — the 5year-old PTL Television Network based in Charlotte, N.C., And the 6-year-old Trinity Broadcasting Network in Tustin, Calif. — are gaining ground.

CBN's programs are carried by 150 radio stations, 130 commercial TV stations, 4,000 cable television systems and are beamed into Canada as well as 24 other foreign countries in Central and South America, Africa and the Far East.

PTL — whose president, Jim Bakker, formerly worked with CBN —has grown from a single station to a world presence. PTL programs are carried by 200 commercial and 3,000 cable stations and transmitted to 15 Latin American nations.

The Trinity network's programs are carried on UHF Stations the network owns in Phoenix and Los Angeles, plus 250 cable stations and 20 commercial stations. Programs are beamed into 13 foreign countries in Europe, South America and the Far East.

Although billed as networks, they are not such in the terms of the three major commercial networks — ABC, NBC and CBS — because they don't have nearly as many affiliates.

Instead, the three religious networks offer their programs free to cable systems, sell them to independent commercial stations and broadcast them on their own handful of owned-andoperated stations.

There are now more than 1,100 radio stations and about 35 TV stations devoted nearly entirely to religious broadcasting.

Such radio stations are opening at a rate of one a week and TV stations are emerging at a pace of one a month. Just a decade ago, there total number was less than 400.

Industry officials estimate about $500 million was spent last year for purchasing time for religious broadcasts on TV And radio.

A large percentage of that was paid by the three religious networks and the industry's galaxy of other stars, including:

•The Rev. Billy Graham, whose weekly radio program, "Hour of Decision," is carried by 1,000 stations.

•The Rev. Jerry Falwell of Lynchburg, Va., whose weekly TV program, "Old Time Gospel" is seen on 320 stations.

•The Rev. Robert Schuller of Garden Grove, Calif., whose "Hour of Power," is telecast on more than 200 stations.

•The Rev. Oral Roberts of Tulsa, Okla., who appears on weekly half-hour telecasts of sermon and song on about 350 stations.

It is estimated about 115 million persons listen to at least one religious radio show and about 40 million watch at least one religious TV show each week.

Overall, it is estimated about 47 percent of the nation's population are regular members of the Electric Church's audience, compared to 42 percent of the population going to traditional churches regularly.

Mainstream religion has long used television and radio, but most of their programs on commercial television have been confined to low-rated Sunday morning time slots.

Even though some programs departed from Sunday morning broadcasts, as Bishop Fulton J. Sheen did in the 1950s, most failed to depart from somber religious teaching.

"They were just talking heads — rather dull," said NRB executive director Armstrong. "We have programs with good music and choreography and I see nothing wrong with that."

The new-breed religious broadcasters have made a determined effort to bring glitter and sparkle to their productions.

They have spiced up shows with flashy choirs, prayer sessions seeking miraculous healing and telephone banks ready to give counseling and accept donations.

Many have adopted talk shows similar in format to Johnny Carson's "Tonight." Most interviews are with bornagain celebrities, ranging from actors to quarterbacks.

"If Johnny Carson can have a program where he can talk about free love, we can have a program to talk about the Word of God," said PTL president Bakker. "We are basically giving the people an alternative."

A Charlotte radio station has poked fun at PTL with a satirical program called "Pass the Loot Club" featuring a greedy minister named Bill Taker.

Bakker isn't amused and denies his operation has committed any wrongdoing.

PTL is currently involved in a scrap with the Federal Communications Commission, which is investigating a complaint PTL solicited contributions for foreign mission projects but actually spent the money for other purposes.

An FCC official said the commission is examining a handful of small stations for similar complaints, but that he knew of no previous convictions of any of the industry's more than 1,300 radio and TV Religious outlets.

Despite the Electric Church's clean FCC record, there is continued skepticism over whether some evangelists are more interested preaching the gospel or getting rich.

Critics complain about highpressure fund-raising tactics, many of which are linked with the suggestion God will bless and heal those who contribute.

Although not illegal, critics question the morality of seeking contributions in such a manner, particularly from elderly couples on fixed incomes.

NRB executive director Armstrong is well aware of the criticism, but says fraud in the industry is sparse.

"There are a few, but I'd say less than 1 percent," he said. "They have different motives — ego, money instead of religion. But for the most part, the Electric Church has ministers interested in spreading the word."

In an effort to improve the industry's image, the NRB has adopted standards for its members, including complete financial disclosure, full cooperation with the CC and dignified fund-raising efforts.

CBN's Robertson, an NRB Member, bared CNB's 1978 finances earlier this year.

He reported his salary at $50,000, contributions of $37 million, broadcast sales of $8.5 million, operating expenses of $43.6 million and net assets of $100 million.

In October, CBN moved into a new headquarters, a $21million television center situated on a 380-acre, tree-lined site in Virginia Beach, Va. — Nearly all of it paid for with contributions from viewers.

The backbone of CBN's fundraising efforts are 600,000 individual contributors, about half of whom pledge at least $10 a month to the "700 Club" — a 90-minute daily TV Rogram hosted by Robertson.

Last year, CBN opened its own communication graduate school, CBN University, and started a commercial subsidiary, CBN Continential Broadcating Network, which oversees four owned-and-operated UHF stations in Dallas, Boston, Atlanta and Portsmouth, Va.

Through CBN Continental, Robertson hopes to eventually compete against the nation's major commercial networks by producing his own movies, game shows, soap operas and newscasts.

CBN hails as a major portion of its operation the 10,000 volunteers it has at 85 centers across the country and overseas. They offer counseling and prayer and refer persons to local churches.

Robertson, 49, is the son of former U.S. Sen. A. Wllis Robertson of Virginia, a graduate of Yale Law School and an ordained minister.

As television evangelist, he projects an image that is earthy but not hokey, professional but not slick. Even Electric Church critics concede he is among the industry's most sincere and upright preachers.

He began CBN 18 years ago as a born-again Christian who a few years earlier quit his job as a partner of an electronics firm to enter a seminary.

In 1960, he left a ghetto ministry in New York, saying Jesus had directed him to open a television station.

With just $70 in his pocket, he drove himself and family to nearby Portsmouth, Va., and agreed to purchase an old UHF Station cluttered with beer cans and broken glass for $37,500.

Paying off a $10,000 loan just minutes before air time, CBN Broadcast its initial show with rundown equipment on Oct. 1, 1961, becoming the nation's first religious television station.

"We've come a long way," said Robertson, who maintains CBN has the world's finest broadcastng equipment.

Art Conservator Saves Nation's Ailing Statues

NEW YORK (UPI) — Everybody knows air pollution is bad for people. But it's also devastating to America's patrimony of statues in bronze and other metals.

Up in Central Park, art conservator Phoebe Dent Weil has just demonstrated how ailing statues, many of them erected in the Victorian era, can be saved. Thanks to her technique of blasting bronze with minute glass beads and coating the restored surface with acrylic resin, sculptor John Quincy Adam Ward's statue, "The Pilgrim," was gleaming like new in time for Thanksgiving.

Mrs. Weil and several associates from the inter-disciplinary Center of Archeometry at St. Louis's Washington University have already preserved all of St. Louis' outdoor sculpture and now she is working on New York's. Earlier this year she completed the famous statue of George Washington on the steps of Federal Hall and the statue of Alexander Hamilton at his home, The Grange, in upper Manhattan.

"Except for these and Ward's pilgrim, there isn't a statue in New York in good shape, and that goes for almost every statue in this country," said Mrs. Weil, doffing her mask, goggles and protective hood during a coffee break from her Central Park labors.

"For some reason, people think the air is getting better in this country, but actually it's getting worse. It may seem to improve locllly, as it has in New York, but large sulphur clouds are spreading into the country. Experts say current sulphur dioxide levels will double by the year 2000.

"The problem of conserving the nation's statues is serious now and will be worse in the future."

Mrs. Weil said the best known example of statue deterioration is the damage industrial pollution has done since 1960 to four, 2,000-year-old horses which adorn St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice. But pollution also damages contemporary sculpture displayed in civic centers, museum gardens and sculpture parks, she added.

The first big job of conservation the Memphis-born Mrs. Weil undertook seven years ago was the modern, 19-statue fountain by Carl Milles opposite the St. Louis railroad terminal. As an example of important contemporary sculptures that have suffered serious pitting from pollution, she mentioned a Henry Moore at New York's Museum of Modern Art and a Louise Nevelson at Princeton University.

Work on the Milles fountain perfected many of the techniques which Mrs. Weil and her co-workers now use, such as detection of pollution coating on bronzes by means of scanning electron microscopes. If the crust appears to be insoluble except by chemicals that would erode the statue, it is shattered by the glass bead technique which was originally devised to clean jet airplane engines.

The glass beads, smaller than grains of salt, remove none of the metal and are beneficial in sealing porosity and cracks. After a statue is "glass peened" by bmbarding it with 50 to 100 pounds of beads under high pressure, the metal surface is so compacted that it is more immune to pollution damage than it was originally.

A new patina is applied to the compacted surface an a coating of Incralac containing corrosion inhibitors completes the conservation process, which should last about three years before another coat of the resin is needed. Mrs Weil recommends that the conservation work be checked yearly.

"It takes three of us about a week to complete a large sculpture and with travel expenses that could cost from $5,000 to $7,000," said the conservator, who has worked all over the country. "Often the money for conservation comes from private donor and corporations and there are state and federal funds going into such projects. There is a growing awareness of the strong symbolic value of our public statuary, in addition to artistic value."

Mrs. Weil said a widespread misapprehension that the green copper sulphate encrustation that forms on bronze is protective is one of the greatest blocks conservators must over-come.

"People think the green is handsome and attractive and feel it should be left alone," she observed. "But the green that appeared on ancient bronzes was a green of a different kind — a soft, natural weathering. The green we get since the industrial revolution, especially on statues in urban settings, is destructive, harboring sulphur compounds and moisture. Underneath there is pitting and corrosion which finally leads to perforation of the metal."

Mrs. Weil, whose husband teaches art history at Washington University, started her unusual career with the late George Stout, a pioneer conservationist at Boston's Isabella Steward Gardiner Museum. She received a graduate degree in conservation and art history at Nw York University, then went to Brussels on a Fulbright scholarship to the Royal Institute for Artistic Patrimony to perfect her knowledge of restoring metal, stone and wood.

Grandma Gets Out Of House, Onto Horse To See America

By RICK BOLTON

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (NEA) — "People are afraid to get out of their house, but there's nothing to be afraid of out there."

So says Jeannine Hall, a grandmother who set out to see America the old-fashioned way. By horse.

IN AMERICA

She is on the last leg of a four-year journey from California to Main and back again.

Saddled atop her old horse Rosie, Mrs. Hall steers a steady course along country roads, past bright plastic signs advertising gasoline for sale.

Every 20 miles or so, she stops to make camp. If she's lucky, camp is near a small town where she finds her favorite kind of people.

"The old ones tell me what it used to be, the young ones tell me what it will be and the middle ones tell me what it is," she commended during a recent stop in Idaho Falls.

Although soaring gasoline prices mean nothing to Mrs. Hall, she does worry about finding enough water and food for Rosie, who carries her passenger and 140 pounds of gear. Wyoming was the toughest state, Mrs. Hall says, because no one would sell her grain for Rosie.

Police tend to ignore her, she continues, while young men often hoot out the windows of their vehicles. And she goes months without sleeping in a real bed.

For the most part, though, the road has been good to her.

"It's been damn nice," she says. "It's like opening a new book every day."

Mrs. Hall sits snugly amid her packs on a 14-year-old Rosie, chaps and cowboy boots pressed close against the horse's sides, a long-haired Chihuahua on her lap. On her hands are turquoise and silver rings, reminders of her home in the West.

Mrs. Hall started her trip in May 1976 from Watsonville, Calif. She says she handled the toughest leg of her journey first.

A pool player though not a hustler, she won the hearts of a railroad section crew in a bar at the edge of the desert. The crew sketched her a map of the watering holes along the railroad tracks.

"I followed the Santa Fe Railroad across the desert," she says. "I figured, 'If I make it through the Mojave Desert, I can make it anywhere.'"

So far, she has.

From the Southwest through the Southern plains, into the Deep South, up the Appalachian Mountains and finally into New England, she and Rosie traveled across the United States.

After 15 months that included a stay in Tennessee, she reached her destination of Lewiston, Maine, where her brothers, sisters and their children greeted her.

"I just went back to visit," she says. "I hadn't been back for 18 years. They all thought I was bananas, but I'm a wise banana."

Wise — and, at age 45, in a position to follow her free spirit onto the open road. Her husband died nine years ago, and her two daughters left home when they reached 18.

Mrs. Hall sets an unhurried pace, but she gets where she is going. She usually rides for three days, then rests for two, mostly camping beside two-lane highways, occasionally resting at campgrounds.

"It's hard to tell you where I went because I can't read English," she explains (She grew up in a French immigrant family in Maine where everyone spoke French.) She handles maps well enough to distinguish small towns and small roads from big ones.

Mrs. Hall manages to live on $1,500 a year, eating only one meal a day. She takes odd jobs along the way to earn food for herself and Rosie.

"I've killed chickens, done roofing, put up ceilings and sloppped hogs," she says.

Her hat is adorned with trinkets that spark memories of a person here, a place there. Not much space is left for the additional souvenirs she will collect while finishing her journey.

"When I'm old and gray and I look at this hat," she says, "I bet I'll have a grin from ear to ear."

TIRED BUT DETERMINED — Jeannine Hall is completing the last leg of a four-year journey by horse across the United States and back. "It's been damn nice," says the grandmother of her trip. "It's like opening a new book every day." (NEA photo by Don Skitt)

'Mathophobia' Blamed For Career Detours

PHILADELPHIA UPI — A Temple University professor says mathematics scares some people so much that they detour their lives around it.

Jane Paalborg, assistant professor of elementary education, says math anxiety — which she has dubbed "mathophobia" — forces many people to seek careers they really don't want.

"So many people I know have gone into jobs by default, saying, "Well, at least I don't have to use too much math," Mrs. Paalborg said. "Many teachers go into elementary school work because they fear other majors might make a heavier demand on their quantitative skills.

If you're going to spend your life at a job, you certainly don't want to go into something by default. You want to get something you will do very well in and are interested in."

Mrs. Paalborg's colleagues, Beth Ricciardi, a Temple math instructor, and Marion Willis, a university counselor, are currently conducting a clinic to help persons overcome the handicap.

Mrs. Paalborg said most disabilities so far have been noticed in women and minority men. But she noted that,

"If you're going to spend your life at a job, you certainly don't want to go into something by default. You want to get something you will do very well in and are interested in."

Mrs. Paalborg's colleagues, Beth Ricciardi, a Temple math instructor, and Marion Willis, a university counselor, are currently conducting a clinic to help persons overcome the handicap.

Mrs. Paalborg said most disabilities so far have been noticed in women and minority men. But she noted that, "An awful lot of people suffer from it. They don't want to admit it. It's a silent suffering because of the masculine ethic.

"Initially, people come into the clinic because they realize they are deficient in some math skills and their attitude is connected with this lack of achievement.

"The counselor speaks about the inter-relationships between attitude and beliefs and behavior. If you don't like math and feel you can't do it, you believe you can't do it, and it's a selffulfilling prophecy.

Once that barrier is broken, the math experts take it from there to reinforce competency, basic skills and problem-solving techniques.

"We try, at the same time, to build up an appreciation of mathematic in everyday life by looking at it through literature, art and nature," she said.

Mrs. Paalborg also uses newspapers to illustrate the wide use of numbers in everyday life. The class conducts "treasure hunts," searching for fractions, percentages and the biggest and smallest prime numbers.

She said the turnabout in attitude is remarkable, and some of the students have moved on to advanced math.

MINISTER ARRIVES

WASHINGTON (AP)-South Africa's Minister of Mines arrives here today for a weeklong visit to discuss U.S. questions about the reserves and supplies of that country's strategic minerals. Mr. F. W. de Klerk will meet with U.S. government officials in Washington and businessmen in New York.

Trucker Slows Rig, Jumps Into River

NEW YORK (AP) A truck driver from Long Island slowed his rig in the middle of the George Washington Bridge on Thanksgiving Day, hopped out and jumped into the Hudson River 300 feet below, authorities say.

The moving truck was halted by a police officer who was on duty on the bridge. He ran to the truck, jumped into the cab and slammed on the brakes, halting the truck without damage.

The incident, which occurred around 12:30 p.m. on Thursday, did not affect traffic on the bridge.

Police identified the truck driver as Donald Trollinger, 39, of 47 Adams St., Farmingdale, N.Y.

A spokesman for the Port Authority said the U.S. Coast Guard searched in vain for the man. He said it could be days before the body surfaces.

The truck was owned by Fairchild Industries, of Farmingdale.

Small Kansas Town Celebrates Thanksgiving In Special Way

ULYSSES, Kan. (AP) — In the 1930s, the wind came swirling across the plains like an enraged dervish and swept this land's rich topsoil all the way to the rooftops of New York City.

Grant County farmers wept and shook their fists at the cloudless skies.

Then they looked down instead of up for the life-giving moisture that would make their crops grow. They bored deep into the land that stretches without ripple to the horizon. They mortgaged their homes and their cows to buy pumps and pipe, miles and miles of pipe.

They found sweet water and the land bloomed.

Yesterday Ulysses was the heart of America's Dust Bowl. Today it is the heart of America's fruited plains.

The people of Grant County have long memories, so every year they give thanks to God and each other for their rich harvest.

It is a most unusual sort of Thanksgiving, by anyone's standards.

On a Tuesday in late September at least 1,500 people sit down to dinner together. Everything they eat is grown with their own hands. Only the coffee comes from the great beyond, and it is brewed with the nectar that started it all — local water.

The feast climaxes a year-long effort by 700 volunteers. It is held here because Ulysses is the only incorporated town in the county.

Hunkered down in the southwest corner of Kansas where the wind gathers speed on its sweep from the Rockies to the Mississippi, 7,000 people live about 50 miles from the Oklahoma and Colorado borders.

Two federal highways bisect the web of gravel roads leading into Ulysses, founded by homesteaders in June 1885. The nearest big towns, Liberal and Garden City, are 60 miles away. Big means populations of 15,000 and 19,000, respectively.

The annual Home Products Dinner has its roots in homestead days when families gathered in mid-August every year for a pioneer picnic. Many of the revelers were immigrants, taming the prairie with curses and prayers in accents from France, Germany, England, Norway and Russia.

The rare merrymaking brought a respite in the backbreaking work of civilizing a wild place. It gave the lonely settlers something to look forward to in a year of relentless labor.

In 1932 the picnics ended, choked by the swirling dust. The Depression brought new troubles and killed off old traditions.

But in 1941 state legislator Will Christian brought 12 colleagues and the lieutenant governor home to Ulysses for one of his wife Nora's hearty meals. As the politicians dined, Christian told them every dish on the table had come from the land they saw around them.

Memory of that dinner lingered in the minds of Ulysses' townfolks. In 1963 a civic committee put on the first Home Products Dinner. 450 people attended, and more come every year.

Chairman of the committee this year was Eldon Dirks, a certified public accountant with offices on Main Street.

"I started preparing for this year as we were clearing away the paper plates last year," said Dirks. "We have a thick guidebook that's been passed down on how to organize, assign chores, solicit contributions of food and help."

The Pilgrims would recognize some of the dishes on the lavish menu.

There is corn on the cob, 200 pounds of it; 250 pounds of candied squash, 70 pounds of baked pinto beans, 300 pounds of scalloped potatoes, 70 pounds of cantaloupe, dozens of heads of lettuce for salad and cabbage for cole slaw, 750 pounds of beef, four bushels of tomatoes for barbeque sauce — and caramel popcorn balls for dessert.

Thirteen donors provided the meat this year.

"We start out at 3 a.m. It's all wrapped up in foil, and the oak fire is hot and smoking in the new pit we built behind the civic center," said Dirks. "Last year we cooked it 25 hours, but every year we learn something. This time it was only for 14 hours."

More than 300 senior citizens were served first in a food line that stretched all the way around the new center. The Rainbow Girls poured water, the Ulysses Ladies Golf Association helped serve the food. Knights of Columbus and Masons ushered. Boy Scouts directed parking, and Girl Scouts wrapped plastic forks in napkins.

The whole hungry crowd was served buffet style in 45 minutes. Each paid $2.50, most of which goes for scholarships. There also was a speaker, and Grant Countians had chosen someone to make them laugh.

In 1974, Turkish troops began landing on Cyprus after bombing Greek-held strongholds on the island.

Grandmother Charged With Shooting Grandson

FREMONT, Neb. (AP) — A 67-year-old grandmother has been charged with shooting her grandson after they quarreled while she was fixing Thanksgiving dinner in her kitchen, authorities said Friday.

The grandson, William Cookman, 17, was listed in satisfactory condition at Dodge Memorial Hospital, recovering from a shotgun wound in his right hip.

The grandmother, May Hurley, 67, was arrested on suspicion of second-degree assault. She remained free on personal recognizance because, said Detective Steven Tellatin, he didn't "have the heart" to jail her while she was preparing Thanksgiving dinner for her family.

Police Officer Richard Meyer said he was called to the Hurley house Thursday morning by a neighbor. He found young Cookman lying on the kitchen floor.

Meyer said the 12-gauge shotgun allegedly used in the shooting was recovered from the neighbor's house where it had been taken to avoid further trouble.

Tellatin said there apparently was an ongoing argument between Cookman and his grandmother, and the shoooting appeared to be related to the dispute. Tellatin would not say what the argument was about.

Former Salesman Climbs To Top Rung Of Corporate Ladder

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — In 1946, Robert P. Straetz was a 25-year-old salesman for Homelite, traveling Midwestern backroads in a red pickup truck and jumping into mudholes to demonstrate company water pumps.

Twenty-three years later, Homelite is part of the giant Textron Inc. conglomerate and Straetz has worked his way to the top. He will become chairman of the giant conglomerate Jan. 1.

"Many of my friends went into management-training programs at GE and other companies after the war, but I've never regretted my route," Straetz, 58, said in a recent interview at the company's corporate headquarters here.

His election as chairman and chief executive officer of Textron follows the company's tradition of elevating its president and chief operating officer to the top corporate post.

Textron, which began in 1928 as an orthodox New England textile firm, started to diversify in 1953, and is generally regarded as the first of the modern conglomerates.

Last year it had $3.2 billion in sales from its 26 divisions, which include Homelite chain saws, Speidel watch bands, Talon zippers, Jacobson mowers and Bell helicopters.

Straetz developed a reputation as a quiet but very determined person as he moved up the Homelite corporate ladder. He became vice president for sales in 1960 and president in 1969. He joined Textron's corporate office as a group vice president in 1974 after posting a 103 percent increase in Homelite sales in five years.

He should have an easier time in the top corporate office than Textron's current chairman, Joseph B. Collinson, who turns 65 in December.

Collinson became chairman in March 1978 after G. William Miller went to Washington to become chairman of the Federal Reserve Board and then Secretary of the Treasury.

Collinson has spent much of his time defending Textron against a series of federal investigations into alleged payoffs to foreign officials to obtain contracts for its Bell Helicopter division.

Textron pleaded guilty in July to currency violations linked to an alleged payoff to a Dominican Republic official in return for a helicopter contract. It agreed to pay a $100,000 criminal fine and a civil penalty of $31,670 in return for the Justice Department dropping its investigation into other alleged overseas payoffs.

The Securities and Exchange Commission also is probing alleged falsification of Textron helicopter sales records. Straetz said the probe should be concluded before he assumes office in January.

The guilty plea came about a year after Miller, then Textron chairman, told a Senate hearing on his confirmation, "I know my company didn't bribe anybody."

And Straetz said the firm has taken steps to prevent any possible future wrongdoing.

"We've put everthing int place that we humanly know how to do to try to prevent (such payoffs)," he said. "We're very sorry that that happened. It was a suprise to us. In no way do we condone it. In fact, you're disppointed when things like that happen."

Straetz disassociated himself from statements by Collinson and more recently by Textron founder Royal Little that federal laws against foreign payoffs put American businessmen at a disadvantage with overseas competitors.

"In no way does he (Collinson) condone bribery," Straetz said. "He, in effect, is saying that the United States has decided to operate unilaterally that way...Nobody else in the world operates under these ground rules. Whether that's hurt business or not, I can't comment on."

Textron has slowed its pace of acquiring new companies, adding only Jacobson in the last 18 months and deciding against bidding for the Jacuzzi whirlpool company. Straetz concedes it may be glamorous to keep adding companies, but he feels there's more profit to be made in strengthening existing holdings.

NEW TOP TWO — On Jan. 1, 1980, these men will be running Textron Inc., a Providence based conglomerate. Beverly F. Dolan, top, has been named president and chief operating officer, and Robert P. Straetz has been named chairman and chief executive officer. (AP Laserphoto)

New Facility To Replace Beverly Hills Supper Club

SOUTHGATE, Ky. (AP) — A high-rise hotel-restaurant-convention center and entertainment facility is being proposed for the site of the Beverly Hills Supper Club, officials here report.

A fire destroyed the club in May 1977, killing 165 persons.

The $30 million facility would be built in stages to include a restaurant, 700-room hotel and 2,500-seat showroom.

The site is owned by the Schilling family, operators of the Beverly Hills Supper Club. An unnamed corporation said it may buy the land for $1.2 million, Mayor Ken Paul told Southgate City Council Wednesday night.

Texaco Records Third Large Natural Gas Find

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Texaco Inc. said Friday it has struck still more natural gas in the Baltimore Canyon Trough, its third gas discovery in the same well and the biggest so far off the mid-Atlantic coast.

Texaco said its leased semi-submersible rig Ocean Victory made the Baltimore Canyon's fifth gas strike about 105 miles east of Atlantic City.

All the gas strikes, four by a group of oil companies led by Texaco and one by a Tenneco-led group, have been made in three wells drilled within a 1.5-mile radius of each other in about 445 feet of water. The latest Texaco well is just inside a tract leased by Tenneco.

One oil strike and 16 dry holes have been reported in 20 months of exploratory drilling off the New Jersey and Delaware coasts.

Government and oil industry officials said the latest strike offers encouragement that mid-Atlantic gas might one day be piped ashore to the energy-hungry Northeast. They cautioned, however, that not enough gas has been found to make commercial production possible.

"It's just a matter of time before somebody proves a (gas) field out there," said Frank Basile, manager of the Interior Department's New York Outer Continental Shelf office. "The Texaco and Tenneco groups seem a little closer than anyone else."

"We have not stated whether this means we do or do not have a commercial field," said Texaco spokesman Gordon Hamilton.

Hamilton said the Ocean Victory will be moved about two miles northeast, less than a mile from Texaco's first strike last year, to determine the size of the gas reservoirs.

Texaco said its latest discovery was made "below 12,700 feet" in its 15,699-foot hole. The company said the gas flowed at a rate of 18.9 million cubic feet a day, the best flow of the five gas strikes.

On Nov. 12, Texaco announced that it had struck gas that flowed at a rate of 14.2 million cubic feet a day from a zone "below 13,000 feet."

On Oct. 22, the company said it had discovered gas between 15,500 feet and the bottom of the well. It said that gas flowed at a rate of 5.5 million cubic feet a day and included oil condensate, a natural byproduct of deep gas finds, at a rate of 18.2 barrels a day.

The latest Texaco strike is 1.5 miles south-southeast of another Texaco hole where gas was found in August 1978. It is also 1.1 miles northeast of a discovery of gas and oil in a single Tenneco well in May and June.

All five gas strikes have been reported at levels of about 12,500 feet or deeper. Together, the strikes flow at a rate of 58.1 million cubic feet a day.

Oil industry officials estimate that to justify commercial production in the Baltimore Canyon area they must find enough gas to provide a flow of at least 200 million cubic feet a day.

Texaco and Tenneco officials have refused to say whether they believe their efforts have tapped the same gas reservoir. However, industry and government geologists say privately that they think the gas strikes are from separate pockets.

Texaco holds a 31.5 percent interest in its effort, which also includes Getty Oil Co., Sun Oil Co., Allied Chemical Corp., Transco Companies Inc. and Freeport Minerals Co. The Tenneco group also includes R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. and Sun Oil Co.

Texaco is the only firm now working off the mid-Atlantic coast. Seven oil companies have given up on the area, at least temporarily.

Murphy Oil Co. of Arkansas plans to begin its first exploratory well in mid-December about 30 miles southwest of Texaco. Exxon, which drilled four dry holes in the area last year, is expected to return sometime next year.

The U.S. Geological Survey recently estimated there may be about 4.1 trillion cubic feet of recoverable gas and about 600 million barrels of recoverable oil in the mid-Atlantic.

The latest estimates, which have been revised downward in recent years, would mean that the area could supply all of the nation's gas neds for only about two months and all of its oil needs for about 30 days.

Backlash By Oil Countries Feared

WASHINGTON (AP) — By U.S. estimates, nearly half the world's oil production comes from nations thay share the dominant religion of Iran — Islam, the faith of the prophet Mohammed.

U.S. analysts do not expect other Islamic nations to embrace Iran's call for an anti-American crusade, but they fear the Iranian crisis may exacerbate Middle Eastern instabilities and eventually jeopardize the U.S. oil supply — and that of the rest of the world.

Indeed, the dependence of the United States on foreign petroleum is the main cause of American vulnerability to Middle Eastern turmoil. Together, Islamic oil-exporting nations provide more than one-quarter of the United States' total petroleum supply.

In July, the most recent month with Energy Department figures available, Iran alone provided 3.5 percent to 4 percent of U.S. oil needs.

Instability in Iran and elsewhere in the Middle East threatens this supply. On Friday, en route to high-level meetings with officials of Saudi Arabia, Treasury Secretary William Miller said the United States may adopt mandatory fuel conservation measures next year. This would provide some protection against uncertain fuel supplies.

The crisis in Iran, and subsequent turmoil in Pakistan and Saudi Arabia — the western world's largest single supplier of foreign fuel — has sent economic shivers through the western world.

And on Thursday, Iran's revolutionary leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, issued a call to other Islamic leaders to join his anti-American crusade that already has resulted in a halt of oil shipments from Iran to the United States.

"I call on all Moslem nations, all Moslems, all Moslem armies, all Islamic security forces and all Moslem countries' presidents to co-operate with our nation," Khomeini said. "This is not a struggle between us and America. It is between Islam and the infidel."

And while U.S. experts do not expect other Islamic nations to join Khomeini's call, they know well the uses of oil in power struggles.

In 1973, Arab members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries banded together to cut off their oil shipments to the United States and other nations which supported Israel.

While the embargo demonstrated the use of oil as an economic weapon, it also demonstrated that Islamic nations do not necessarily act in unison. In fact, Iran, then ruled by Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, continued to ship oil to the United States.

So did Indonesia and Nigeria, nations with large Islamic populations which, like Iran, are not racially Arabic.

Thus far, there is no unified anti-American thrust among Islamic states. While Iran tried to blame the United States and Israel for the attack on a Moslem shrine in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, the Saudis themselves blame a renegade Islamic faction.

But if U.S. military retaliation in Iran, or any other incident, were to touch off a wave of Islamic reaction, the impact on U.S. oil supplies could become substantial; and a widespread reduction of oil production could hurt Europe and Japan even more, since their economies depend heavily on imported oil.

Against that background, the Energy Department's figures indicate what a wave of oil embargoes could mean: Iran alone produced almost 6 percent of the world's oil, which could conceivably be disrupted by U.S. ilitary ation, blockade, or strikes or counter-revolutionary sabotage within Iran itself.

Saudi Arabia produces more than 15 percent of the world's oil, and the other Arab members of OPEC produce another 18 percent.

Together, Iran and the Arab OPEC nations accounted for some 39.4 percent of the world's oil and almost 19 percent of the United States' supply in July.

IRA Terrorist Convicted Of Murder

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — The Special Criminal Court sentenced an alleged Irish Republican Army terrorist Friday to life in prison for the bomb-murder of Lord Louis Mountbatten.

A companion was acquitted of the crime, but ordered to stand trial on charges of belonging to the IRA's outlawed Provisional wing, which claimed responsibility for the assassination.

The chief judge said 31-year-old Thomas McMahon, who police say is an IRA explosives expert, was convicted because investigators found traces of nitroglycerine on his hands and flakes of green paint from Mountbatten's boat on his clothes.

Mountbatten, a cousin of Britain's Queen Elizabeth II, was killed by a powerful bomb that blew his boat to pieces Aug. 27. McMahon and co-defendant Francis McGirl, 24, denied at the start of the three-week trial that they killed the 79-year-old Mountbatten, one of Britain's best-loved World War II heroes.

The three judges acquitted McGirl of planting the bomb, but ordered him to trial Jan. 21 for membership in the outlawed IRA's Provisional wing.

Presiding Judge Ian Hamilton refused to allow McMahon to appeal the "life sentence of penal servitude," upholding the procedure of the special court that deals with terrorist offenses. A life sentence here normally means at least 20 years behind bars.

McMahon, whom police believe was trained in Libya by Palestinian guerrillas, saluted defiantly as he was taken to the maximum security Portlaoise prison. He has never admitted being a member of the IRA.

McGirl, a member of a staunchly pro-IRA family, was released on bail of 1,000 pounds — $2,170. His uncle has been imprisoned on terrorist charges.

Police accused McMahon and McGirl of planting a nitroglycerine bomb aboard Mountbatten's 27-foot lobster boat, the Shadow V, which was moored at Mullaghmore, a fishing village on the northwest coast of the Irish republic.

McMahon and McGirl were arrested by chance at a police roadblock several hours before the bomb exploded aboard Mountbatten's boat. Police sid the tw left the bomb to be detonated by other IRA men.

Authorities said they are still hunting for at least five other guerrillas that played roles in the assassination. "We're confident more arrests will be made in this case soon," said one police source.

The Mountbatten slaying was the most spectacular attack the Provisionals have staged since the Northern Ireland conflict erupted in August, 1969. The blast killed three other people on the boat, including Mountbatten's 15-year-old grandson.

Eighteen British soldiers were killed in a bomb ambush on the border the same day — reinforcing the horror felt in Ireland and Britain over the Mountbatten assassination.

The almost exclusively Roman Catholic IRA is fighting to end British rule in Protestant-dominated Northern Ireland and reunite the province with the Irish Republic, which is 97 percent Catholic.

CLEARED — Francis McGirl, 24 leaves Dublin's Anti-Terrorist Special Criminal Court Friday, after he was cleared of murdering Earl Mountbatten of Burma. McGirl was remanded on bail to appear at the same court in January to stand trial on an outstanding charge, alleging membership of an illegal organization. (AP Laserphoto)

Bolivian Army Commander Ordered To Step Down, Major Crisis Results

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — President Lidia Gueiler ordered Bolivia's army commander to step down Friday. He refused, threatened revolt and placed his troops on alert at armed forces headquarters two miles from the presidential palace.

Gen. Luis Garcia Meza's action brought a major crisis to Mrs. Gueiler's civilian government, installed last week to replace a 16-day military dictatorship.

Garcia Meza, accompanied by about 80 officers in combat uniforms, told reporters at his headquarters the government "has failed to keep its word. I will remain in command of the army until the agreements that we reached with the government are carried out."

He did not give details of the agreement, and said he would accept other changes ordered in the army high command.

Mrs. Gueiler, Bolivia's first woman president, said she would invoke "sanctions stipulated by the military penal code," which provides for the arrest and retirement of rebellious officers.

About 15 tanks and armored personnel carriers were at the headquarters, giving Garcia Meza armored muscle in the military's latest power struggle with civilian authority.

Military witnesses said the tanks came from the elite Tarapaca Regiment, based 12 miles outside La Paz, and indicated the regiment's support of the rebels.

The Tarapaca Regiment was the main backer of Col. Alberto Natusch Busch, who overthrew the civilian government of President Walter Guevara Nov. 1. Natusch resigned Nov. 16 after his coup failed to gain popular support and following days of negotiations in the Bolivian Congress. The Congress elected Mrs. Gueiler as interim president to serve until elections scheduled for May 4.

More than 200 persons were killed in street clashes during the 16 days Natusch ruled as self-proclaimed president. Guevara had been inaugurated president in August, ending a decade of military rule. Congress made him interim president after national elections in July failed to give any of eight candidates a majority.

Bolivia has had more than 200 changes of government in 154 years of independence from Spain. There have been three military coups and six presidents in the last 17 months.

Prompting the latest showdown was an order issued Friday by Mrs. Gueiler naming a new military high command, with Gen. Rene Villarroe to replace Garcia Meza. The air force commander, Gen. Jaime Nino de Guzman, was the only top officer to retain his job.

The president's council of ministers had ordered the armed forces shakeup following an all-night meeting.

Mrs. Gueiler's warning of sanctions against the rebels also demanded that Garcia Meza and his backers "depoliticize immediately."

"I urge the armed forces to look for a definitive unity with the people, to respect the laws and the constitution," said the president.

Mrs. Gueiler, an accountant by profession and veteran congresswoman, had announced the command changes with a lecture to the armed forces.

"In the last year, unfortunately, politicization has corroded the armed forces," she said. "This is the major pitfall which the (military) chiefs and officers ought to overcome.

"The constitutional government desires that the armed forces retrieve the prestige they have lost. The military commands many times have utilized their power against the people. From here on out, the constitution ought to be a fundamental principle for the armed forces, not a postscript.

"I commit my life to the respect for the constitution, the laws and democracy."

Family, Pickup Complete Trip From Alaska To South America

CORRALES, N.M. (UPI) — A Corrales woman reported Friday her husband and son had completed their 19,552-mile trip from the northern end of the Alaska pipeline to the southernmost tip of South America in a 50-year-old Model A Ford pickup truck.

Bill Klenck, 55, and son Angelo, 16, left home June 6 and traveled north, reaching Prudhoe Bay on the Alaska Pipeline Highway two weeks later. Then they headed south and reached their goal in South American, Ushuaia on the Beagle Strait of Tierra del Fuego, Argentina, Nov. 7.

Mrs. Klenck said Friday her husband and son called two days later from Rio Grande, Argentina, to report they had reached their goal.

She was waiting to hear from her husband and son again as soon as they reached Buenos Aires, where they hope to be able to catch a boat and return to the United States.

"I have been anxiously expecting a call since last Friday," she said. "But there hasn't been any word. I especially thought they would call Thanksgiving day."

The truck, a Model A pickup that had been converted with a camper shell, averaged 22.4 miles per gallon throughout the trip.

Klenck's daughter, Jane 13, said the truck never experienced any major breakdowns on the trip.

"They were having some vibration problems earlier, but they reached their goal okay," she said.

She said her father "sounded a little tired and I know they want to get back home."

"They hope they can make it back by Christmas," she said.

The trip turned out to be much longer than they had originally anticipated. Mrs. Klenck said they had estimated the route would be 12,000 miles. It turned out to be almost 6,000 miles longer.

But they were able to make the trip six weeks faster because they got homesick and advanced their schedule, Mrs. Klenck said.

Klenck plans to write a book about the experience.

Funeral Industry Regulation Blocked

WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Nov. 8 through Nov. 14.

HOUSE

MARTIN LUTHER KING — The House rejected a bill making Martin Luther King's birthday, Jan. 15, a national holiday. The vote was 252 for and 133 against — short of the two-thirds majority required for passage by the short-cut parliamentary procedure under which the bill was brought to the floor.

The bill (HR 5461) may return to the floor under procedures which require only a simple majority for passage. The Senate has not acted on the bill.

Rep. Robert Garcia, D—N.Y., a supporter, said the new holiday would be "an apropriate testimonial to an extraordinary individual who dedicated his life to the cause of human rights."

Rep. Gene Taylor, R-Mo., an opponent, said Americans have great respect for King, but that "there is a more appropriate way to honor him than through the costly method of creating another legal public holiday."

Members voting "yea" favored making Martin Luther King's birthday a national holiday.

Reps. Phil Gram, D-6, Bob Eckhardt, D-8, Jack Brooks, D-9, Jake Pickle, D-10, James Wright, D-12, Jack Hightower, D-13, Joe Wyatt, D-14, Mickey Leland, D-18, Kent Hance, D-19, Henry Gonzalez, D-20, Abraham Kazen, D-23, and Martin Frost, D-24, voted "yea."

Reps. Samuel Hall, D-1, James Collins, R-3, Ray Roberts, D-4, Bill Archer, R-7, J. Marvin Leath, D-11, Kika de la Garza, D-15, Richard White, D-16, Charles Stenholm, D-17, Tom Loeffler, R-21, Ron Paul, R-22, Manuel Lujan, R-1, and Harold Runnels, D-2, voted "nay."

Reps. Charles Wilson, D-2, and Jim Mattox, D-5, did not vote.

REGULATING MORTICIANS — The House voted, 223 for and 147 against, to block proposed Federal Trade Commission (FTC) regulation of the funeral industry. The vote came during debate on an FTC bill (HR 2313) headed for final passage and the Senate. The FTC had wanted to compel funeral homes to provide more complete consumer information, such as a more detailed explanation of prices.

Rep. Marty Russo, D-Ill., a supporter of exempting the funeral industry from FTC regulation, said: "If ever there was a classic case of the federal bureaucracy entering an industry truly local in nature, and proceeding on the basis of little evidence of abuse, this is it."

Rep. Norman Dicks, D-Wash., an advocate of regulating morticians, said "here is our chance to cut the cost of funerals drastically and allow consumers — your constituents — to buy what they can afford rather than what a funeral directors things they should afford."

Members voting "yea" wanted to prohibit FTC regulation of the funeral industry.

Hall, Wilson, Collins, Mattox, Gramm, Brooks, Pickle, Leath, Wright, Hightower, Wyatt, White, Stenholm, Hance, Gonzalez, Loeffler, Paul, Kazen, Frost and Lujan voted "yea."

Eckhardt and Leland voted "nay."

Runnels did not vote.

PUBLIC WORKS — The House rejected, 148 for and 250 against, an attempt to kill a proposed $2 billion public works fund to be channeled to local governments in times of high unemployment. The standby fund, an addition to existing economic aid programs, would be released in unemployment nationally stays" above 6.5 per cent for three months. An estimated 90 per of the country would benefit from the fund. The vote came during debate on an Economic Development Administration bill (HR 2063) later passed and sent to conference with the Senate.

Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., who supported killing the special public works fund, said the effect of the program would be "not to cure unemployment but to exacerbate inflation."

Rep. Robert Roe, D—N.J., an opponent, said: "We should not be reacting to catastrophe, we should be prepared . . . and ready to go on contingency planning."

Members voting "nay" favored the standby public works program.

Hall, Collins, Roberts, Mattox, Gramm, Archer, Brooks, Hightower, Wyatt, Stenholm, Hance, Loeffler, and Runnels voted "yea."

Wilson, Eckhardt, Pickle, Leath, Wright, White, Leland, Gonzalez, Kazen, Frost and Lujan voted "nay."

de la Garza did not vote.

SENATE

AIR CONDITIONING SUBSIDY — By a vote of 27 for and 68 against, the Senate rejected an amendment to prevent the poor from receiving federal subsidies for air conditioning bills. The assistance would go only to those with a doctor's certification of their need for air conditioning. It was offered to a bill (S 1724) providing aid to the poor for heating and cooling their homes. The measure was headed for final passage and the House.

Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., who supported the amendment, said taxpayers "will be rightfully outraged by an assistance progbram which provides air conditioning aid."

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Cal., an opponent, said the Senate should not help a poor or elderly person survive the winter "but do nothing about a threat to his or her life in summer."

Senators voting "yea" opposed helping the poor pay for air conditioning.

Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D, John Tower, R, Pete Domenici, R, and Harrison Schmitt, R, voted "nay."

OIL RESERVES — By a vote of 36 for and 53 against,d the Senate refused to kill an amendment dealing with government's storage of petroleum in Louisiana and Texas salt caverns. The caverns have capacity to hold 248 million barrels to keep the nation running in the event of world crisis. President Carter has stopped storage, at least temporarily, at 92 million barrels, citing the reserve's impact on world market prices and supply levels.

The amendment preserved by this vote would require the President to resume filling the caverns at the rate of 100,000 barrels daily. The provision was included in S 932, the synthetic fuel bill later passed and sent to the House.

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., a supporter of killing the amendment, said: "I support the strategic petroleum reserves as strongly as anyone in this body, but to require under these inflexible conditions the President to proceed — notwithstanding anything else — to fill up that reserve I think is wrong."

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kans., an opponent, said that by suspending purchases for the reserve the President has "put us in a dangerous state of dependence and vulnerability to another oil embargo, as the current events in Iran have shown."

Senators voting "nay" favored filling the strategic petroleum reserve at the risk of upsetting the international oil market.

Bentsen, Tower, Domenici and Schmitt voted "nay."

MX MISSILE — The Senate rejected, 11 for and 77 against, an amendment to delete $670 million for development of the MX missile system. The money is contained in a defense appropriations bill (HR 5359) later passed and sent to conference with the House. MX missiles are to be land-based. To elude Soviet targeting, they will be continually moved via underground racetracks to various launching sites.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R—Ore., a supporter, said the MX system eventually will prove to be "a Maginot Line" costing tens of billions, and that a better defense system would be to put Minuteman III missiles "into a shallow underground water submarine basing mode to patrol the coastal waters of the U.S."

Sen. Paul Lexalt, R-Nev., an opponent, said the MX system "provides the kind of firepower and accuracy which will be necessary to be an effective counterweight to Soviet power."

Senators voting "nay" favored development of the MX missile system.

Bentsen, Tower, Domenici and Schmitt voted "nay."

Chrysler's New Process Gear Division Still Making Money

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The rest of Chrysler Corp. may be struggling for survival, but business is booming at the automaker's New Process Gear Division in this upper New York city.

About the only impact the present slump in the auto industry has had here has been a loss of overtime for the 3,400 workers. And even if Chrsyler follows Packard and Studebaker into oblivion, there is no fear New Process Gear would go out of business.

The recent shift to front-wheel drive and four-wheel drive vehicles in the auto industry has kept the New Process Gear plant a busy place, where Chrysler is financing a $180 million expansion.

The plant manufactures manual truck transmissions, transfer cases used in four-wheel drive trucks as well as transaxles for front-wheel drive vehicles. Although a division of Chrsyler, most of the work at New Process Gear is for the other automakers, especially Ford.

"What is unique about New Process Gear is that, as a captive plant in a large corporation, more than half its sales historically have been outside the corporation. Because of that, we have a broad base of business," said C. Eugene Brady, manager of the plant.

Recently, only 20 percent of the work done at New Process Gear has been for the parent company, as the plant has received new contracts for work on Jeeps and Chevroletsn Brady said Tuesday.

CHAIN COLLISION — Rescue workers give first-aid to one of the half-dozen persons hurt Friday morning in a 24-vehicle chain collision on foggy eastbound Interstate 95 outside West Haven, Conn. State police said the station wagon burning beside highway apparently triggered first collision, fog then contributed to the crashes that followed. (AP Laserphoto)

Message To Washington

MESSAGE — Early this year I sent a check for a one year subscription to a quarterly poetry magazine that I wanted to use in teaching my senior high school English classes. The check later cleared my bank, with the company's endorsement, but I have not yet received a copy of the magazine. I have written to the publisher several times, but have heard nothing back. Could you please check on this? I would sure like to get the magazine before the current school year is over. W.A. — Denton

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — The U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs, at my request, contact the company that publishes your magazine and I understand that you have now received this month's edition as well as back issues. Company officials explained that printing errors held up the mailings. They stressed that they are a very small magazine relying entirely on volunteers and apologized for any inconvenience.

MESSAGE — I have been a Civil Service employee for almost four years. My wife works for an oil company and was recently transferred to Corpus Christi, so I requested a transfer too. I was told that there weren't many jobs available at my agency in that area, but I accpeted a part-time Civil Service job with the understanding that they would try to find something equal to my previous job. Well, that was six months ago and I have been stuck all this time in a temporary job. It doesn't challenge me at all, to say nothing of the reduced income. Any suggestion? G.S. — Corpus Christ.

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — Because a hiring freeze is in effect at the agency where you work, only positions considered critical to the agency's operation are presently being filled. I have been advised that you are well qualified for a mechanical position that is considered "critical," but no vacancies exist. If a vacancy occurs you are sure to be considered, since you are on the "best qualified" list. Hang in there and, hopefully, something will open up in the near future.

Do you have a problem with government? MESSAGE TO WASHINGTON cuts through the red tape to get answers to your questions about Social Security, veterans benefits, immigration matters and other problems you may have run into in your dealings with the Federal Government in Washington. Write MESSAGE TO WASHINGTON, c/o Senator Lloyd Bentsen, U.S. Senate, Washinton, D.C. 20510. Inquiries to MESSAGE TO WASHINGTON are sometimes edited before publication but the intent and substance of the inquiries are maintained.

Raider Upset Bid Falls Short 14-10

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor

HOUSTON — James Hadnot closed out his collegiate football career with a brilliant individual performance and even managed to score his first and only touchdown of the 1979 season Friday. But for the snake-bitten Texas Tech Red Raiders, it just wasn't enough.

Hadnot, Tech's senior fullback, rushed 21 times for 199 yards including a 61-yard touchdown gallop early in the third quarter. But the ninth-ranked and once-beaten Houston Cougars remained in the running for a share of the Southwest Conference championship and a place in the Cotton Bowl by rebounding from a 10-0 third-period deficit and posting a hard-fought 14-10 victory over the Red and Black in front of an Astrodome crowd of 25,637 and a national television audience.

A 14-yard option run by junior running back Terald Clark and a 72-yard broken field jaunt by reserve quarterback Terry Elston — the longest run from scrimmage allowed by Tech this season — erased a 10-0 Red Raider lead and gave the Cougars their ninth win in 10 tries.

In the process of rolling up the sixth-best rushing game in Tech history, Hadnot became the school's all-time leading rusher with 2,794 yards, broke his own single-season rushing mark of 1,369 yards by two steps (1,371), established a new conference season carries record of 273, and moved ahead of Jim Swink and Alvin Maxson into ninth place on the SWC career rushing list.

"James is very deserving of everything he has achieved," Tech mentor Rex Dockery said of his standout fullback. "I was just glad to see him finally score."

A Bill Adams field goal lifted the Red Raiders to a 3-0 halftime lead and Hadnot and his offensive teammates didn't waste much time increasing that lead once the second half got under way.

On the third play of the third quarter, Hadnot took a pitch from freshman quarterback Jim Hart, blasted past the line of scrimmage and used a great down-field block by senior split end Howie Lewis to go the distance for his first six-pointer of the season.

"It was the crazy option," Hadnot admitted. "We used misdirection to get them (the Cougar defenders) going the wrong way and then we came back to the right. The cornerback blitzed and once I got around the corner I thought I could go all the way. I saw only one guy had a chance to get me and Howie made a great block at about the 15 to free me."

Hadnot wasn't the only Red Raider setting records. When Adams booted the extra point following the scoring run he became the all-time leading scorer for Tech with 195 points. Bobby Cavazos had held the record since 1953 with 194 points.

Adams' first-quarter field goal was his 17th of the 1979 season and established a new mark for three-pointers in a single campaign.

Two big plays hurt Tech following Hadnot's touchdown and allowed the Cougars to come back and pull ahead of their guests.

Plainsmen Rally To Playoff Win

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

James Odom never threatened bodily harm against the Monterey Plainsmen during the halftime break. Thumbscrews never entered the picture. And those old reliable cliches went the way of used athletic tape. "The Gipper" was never tossed into the converstion, even under Odom's breath.

So what was left to ignite the Plainsmen to victory? Honesty, says Odom, what else?

"I just told them if they didn't go out there and get after it," explained Odom, "then they only had 24 minutes of football left this year."

Okay, so he's no Pat O'Brien.

But what the Monterey head man said must have sunk in as Monterey, trailing 7-3 at the break, exploded for three second-half touchdowns — all by runningback Willie Johnson — to defeat Amarillo 23-7 at Lowrey Field in a Class AAAA bi-district football game Friday night. Now, the Plainsmen meet El Paso Coronado in a Region I contest Saturday at 2 p.m. in Jones Stadium.

"I don't know what was wrong in the first half," continued Odom. "We just didn't get after it the way I thought we would. I can't explain it."

Also scratching his head was Johnson who had only 58 yards in the opening two stanzas but finished the game with 215 yards on 32 carries. (He is one yard short of the 1,600-yard barrier.)

"We've had a hard time getting fired up lately," said the senior tailback. "And I don't know why, either. I know I didn't play that well in the first half. I just wasn't running at all. I was just faking a lot then falling down. But in the second half I ran with a lot more authority. I didn't want to go down."

Johnson proved that statement true on his first TD of the third quarter. On the seven-yard burst, Johnson was hit once in the backfield and twice on the two-yard line. But instead of going down, Johnson continued to keep his legs churning. His second effort paid off, too.

"I just said to myself 'Ugh-ugh, you're not going down," said Johnson. "I was going to score that touchdown. They weren't about to stop me."

The score plus Darron White's PAT kick gave the Plainsmen their first lead of the game, 10-7.

Monterey continued to roll on its next possession, too. Well, sort of. Amarillo forced Monterey to kick from the MHS 45 on its next possession. But Kris Roberts was unable to handle Dwayne Smith's extremely high spiral.

Lions Maul Kress 35-8 In Bi-District Win

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

PLAINVIEW — New Deal's only resemblence with the Green Bay Packers may be their green and gold uniforms, but don't tell Kress that.

The Lions manhandled the Kangaroos 35-8 Friday night to win a Class A bi-district championship and advance to the regional round against Stratford.

New Deal was just too much for the Kangaroos. The Lions had eight players who weigh more than 190 pounds and six who top 200. Kress' biggest man weighs 195 pounds. The next biggest is 180.

And that was about the difference in the game, as New Deal simply overpowered the Roos, outgaining them 345 to 187 in total offense. In the first three quarters, before New Deal flooded the field with reserves, the Lions outgained Kress 331 to 69.

Asked the difference in the game, Kress coach Al Mitts shook his head and said, "They were too much. They were just too strong, too strong.

"Of course our fumbles didn't help us at all either. But they're a real fine ball club, they're real aggressive, they execute real well and we wish them all the good luck in the world."

Luck was not something New Deal needed a great deal of in the bi-district game. And it was also something they didn't get much of. The Lions were whistled nine times for 111 yards in penalties and gave up four fumbles.

But their varied, solid running attack was just too much for the Kangaroos to handle. Martin Adams led the New Deal running attack with 87 yards on only 10 carries. Typical for the Lions, two other backs were close behind him. Billy Thiel got 74 yards on five carries and scored twice and Tony Howell got 71 yards on nine carries. Another back, 220-pound fullback L.K. Bradley, had 35 yards on only four carries and scored once.

Kress' Eddy 'Magic' Johnson found the going rough as he gained only 100 yards on 23 carries. More frustrated was Kress quarterback Glenn Earl Terrell. One of the South Plains' leading Class A passers, Terrell completed only two of 14 passes and had one intercepted.

The game didn't look like a runaway at first. In fact, at the end of the first half, New Deal led only 14-0.

But the Lions held an awesome statistical advantage, outgaining the Kangaroos 200 yards to 44. The difference was mistakes. In that first half, New Deal gave the ball away once on a fumble that stopped a 14-play drive and committed six penalties for 66 yards.

The score didn't remain narrow for long, though. New Deal scored on its last three possessions of the third quarter to put the game on ice.

The first two drives belonged to Billy Thiel. The 150-pound senior carried three times for 52 yards and scored two touchdowns in a three-minute span.

The first touchdown was set up when, after Martin Adams picked up a first down on a pair of 8-yard carries, Thiel used his exceptional balance and picked through the Kress defense for a 31-yard gain and a first down at the Kangaroo 13. Once during the run it appeared he had his feet knocked out from under him, but he put his hand to the turf and restored his balance and gained another 10 yards. From the 13, he sliced outside of guard, then cut back to the middle, finding the running clear and scoring the touchdown.

Seemingly flustered, the Kangaroos committed two costly errors in a short time. First, Johnson couldn't find the handle on the kickoff and chased it all the way back to the Kress 3 before he gave up and dove on the ball. Two plays later, the Kangaroos gave the ball up on a mishandled snap from center and New Deal had a first down at the 8.

Thiel ran the same play he scored on before with the same result, and with 5:36 remaining in the third quarter, New Deal held a commanding 28-0 lead. They weren't done yet. After Terrell misfired on three straight passes, Kress punted the ball back and New Deal had a first down on their own 41.

Running mainly substitutes, the Lions drove to the Kress 27 in six plays. From there, big Bradley took over, powering for 22 yards on one play and then diving over from the 5 on the next.

On the touchdown, Bradley smashed through the line of scrimmage and drove a Kress linebacker backward 4 yards into the end zone.

"We looked kind of ragged," said New Deal coach B.J. Smith. "We had a lot of penalties. But the boys put out a super effort. In think we have been just too fired up tonight."

Nobody needs to ell the Kangaroos that.

Bears' Phipps Gets Nosegear

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Bears quarterback Mike Phipps will be outfitted with a special nose guard and will play in the Bears' Dec. 2 game against Tampa despite a broken nose, the National Football League club says.

Phipps' nose was broken in the Bears' 20-0 loss to the Detroit Lions Thursday, the team said Friday.

COLLINS FEET SORE

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Doug Collins, starting guard for the Philadelphia 76'ers, will sit out the next two games, according to a spokesman for the National Basketball Association team. Collins has been sidelined for three games this season because of continuing problems with inflamed tendons in his feet. He is receiving ice treatment and taking anti-inflammatory medication at the University of Pennsylvania Sports Medicine Center, said Sixers' spokesman Bruce Bryde.

Clovis Blanks Bulldogs 34-0

CLOVIS, N.M. (Special) — Gene Shelton rushed for 102 yards on 17 carries and scored one touchdown to lead the Clovis Wildcats to an easy 34-0 win over the Albuquerque High Bulldogs Friday night in a quarterfinal contest in New Mexico schoolboy football contest.

Clovis, which seored in every period, got on the board early in the first quarter on a 5-yard run by Stan Michael. In the second quarter Troy Smotherman scored from 18 yards out. James Pacheco and J.R. Houston scored on 8 and 11-yard gallops, respectively in the third period. Shelton tallied a TD in the final period.

In all, Clovis rushed for 385 yards and picked up only 17 yards passing.

PERRYTON OUTLASTS DIMMITT

Mark Buck scored 12 points to lead Perryton to a 49-42 victory over Dimmitt in Dimmitt Friday night. Gary Naylor of Dimmitt led all scorers with 13 points. Dimmitt's record drops to 0-2. Perryton also won the junior varsity game, 48-43.

Mules Stack Idalou In Second Half Lift

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

PLAINVIEW — You can quit holding your breath: history didn't repeat itself Friday afternoon.

Muleshoe used a 20-point third quarter surge to defeat Idalou for a Class AA bi-district championship 27-13.

That makes the second year in a row the Mules have defeated the Wildcats, but this year was a completely different situation.

Last year, Idalou downed its District 3-AA counterpart 21-14 in regular-season play and then turned around and lost in the bi-district round 21-13.

When Muleshoe beat the 'Cats 21-15 in the regular season this year, everyone waited to see whether the bi-district jinx would hold.

The wait is over — it didn't.

Trailing 13-7 at the start of the second half, Muleshoe used runs of 16 and 48 yards by 150-pound running back Zeke Pecina to drive to the IHS 10-yard line. Charles Walker shrugged through the line on a dive play and covered the remaining distance for a MHS touchdown, capping a five-play, 63-yard drive.

Sam Whalin's extra point kick gave the Mules a narrow lead for the first time in the game, 14-13.

The tired-up Mule defense halted Idalou on its next set of downs. When a Wildcat punt hit and bounced 15 yards the wrong ways the Mule offense was ready to go again.

On first down from the Cat 40, Pecina broke a picture-perfect sweep for a touchdown. Split end Kim Hawkins cut down the only clear defender after Pecina turned the corner, giving the speedster a wide-open sideline. Whalin's kick missed this time, setting up a possible tie as the Mules led 20-13.

But the MHS defense would have none of that. Again it stopped Idalou cold. Whalin made the first big play, jamming Cat back Ruben Reyes for no gain on third-and-one from the IHS 29-yard line. Then, on fourth-and-one, IHS head coach Tom Ritchey gambled, sending quarterback Brad DeBusk into the line on a keeper.

The Mule line seemed to give but surged back, stopping DeBusk inches short of the crucial first down.

Seven plays later it was all over.

Starting at the IHS 30-yard line, Pecina gained a first down on a third-and-two carry to the 20. But it looked like the Mules had hit a road block on the next play as guard Benny Pena jumped offside. He made up for the error on the next play, though, pulling to lead flanker Jim Norman on a reverse. Pena made not one, but two, two lead blocks on the 12-yard gain.

On second-and-three, Pecina ran up the middle for the first down. Then, following Pena again, Norman scored on another reverse from nine-yards out, putting the Mules head 27-13, following Whalin's PAT boot.

The Mules held tight through the fourth quarter as the defense let Idalou closer to the goal line at the MHS 42. And the Mule offense held the ball for eight of the 12 minutes in the final period.

Muleshoe's domination of the game showed in the statistics. Idalou gained only 178 yards total offense, just 56 in the second half.

Muleshoe wound up with 299 yards, getting 174 yards of it in the second half.

Leading the Mule offense, of course, was Pecina who carried 24 times for 194 yards.

"They just beat us," commented Ritchey. "Those two long runs in the third quarter were the difference. We had Pecina behind the line both times. But they were just a better ball team."

Not in the first half. Muleshoe wasn't.

The Mules took the opening kickoff and promptly ran up a fourth-and-15 situation from the 15. A 20-yard punt gave IHS a first down at the MHS 35-yard line. And the Cats went quickly to work.

Idalou drove machine-like down the field, picking up the required yardage in three and four step clips. Faced with a third-and-seven from the MHS 9, DeBusk found end Dennis Green open across the middle for a first down at the MHS 1. DeBusk scored from there and Alan Emery's kick gave Idalou a 7-0 lead with 6:01 left in the opening stanza.

Undeterred, Muleshoe marched right back down the field, taking 15 plays to drive 66 yards for an answering touchdown. Pecina scored on a three-yard run and Whalin's PAT tied the score at 7-all with 7:15 remaining before the halftime break.

Idalou turned loose its offense next, driving from its own 31 to a first down at the Mule 10. Reyes picked up that first down on a 43-yard off-tackle run.

Emery gained five yards on two plays, but on third and goal from the five he was stopped for no gain by Terry Burton. On fourth down, quarterback DeBusk dropped back to pass but was hit solidly by Norman as he released the ball and it sailed harmlessly out of the end zone.

Muleshoe's reprieve didn't last long. Quarterback Mike Northcutt carried the ball three straight times, gaining only four yards. On fourth down, the Mule punter retrieved a high snap but the end-over-end kick sailed over 15 yards to the IHS 24.

The Wildcats were not to be refused this time as DeBusk found end Green for a 16-yard TD pass.

Seagraves Knocks McCamey Out Of Playoffs 21-0

By CHUCK McDANIEL
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

ANDREWS — The way Seagraves coach Jim Eddins explained it — the McCamey Badgers were so worried about the Eagles' outside attack that it opened things wide open up the middle.

And when things did open up — up the middle — fullback Davis Morgan single handedly destroyed the McCamey team. Morgan popped loose for two long jaunts and scored 15 of the Eagles' points to lead Seagraves to a 21-0 bi-district victory here Friday night.

Seagraves, District 5-A champions, will now advance to regional play, while McCamey of District 6-A will have plenty of time to think about No. 47 (Morgan).

"Their defense wasn't going to give us anything wide," explained Eddins, "so when he (Morgan) broke loose there just wasn't anybody to stop him.

"Our guard and center did a real good job of clearing things out for him."

And once he got clear, Morgan was ferocious. The 175-pound senior rushed for exactly 200 yards on 20 carres, scored two TDs and kicked all three PATs for Seagraves.

Morgan's first run came on the second play from scrimmage in the game as he burst 78 yards right up the gut of the MHS defense to give Seagraves a lead it never relinquished. And he added an insurance touchdown early in the fourth quarter on a 47-yard jaunt to put the game on ice.

The rest of the time, the spotlight belonged to the Seagraves defense.

The Eagle defenders yielded only 102 total yards to McCamey, a mere 23 in the second half — to pick up the shutout. Actually, the Badgers never really threatened.

"I was real pleased with the defense," Eddins said. "This is the first real option team we've faced all year. The kids just did a super job."

Leading 14-0 at the half, Seagraves got conservative after that and Eddins' team did not attempt a single pass in the second half.

"We would have thrown more," he explained, "but we were ahead. I told the kids we needed a touchdown in the third period, but we didn't get it. They just controlled the ball."

Actually, Seagraves didn't really need a touchdown in the third period, especially the way the defense was controlling the game.

Seagraves wasted little time in putting points on the board as Morgan made his 78-yard scoring run with exactly 20 seconds gone in the game. The Badger defenders appeared to have Davis bottled up at the line of scrimmage, but he shook loose from a couple of would-be tacklers and outraced everybody else to the end zone.

Davis added the PAT, but his first half heroics didn't stop there. The big senior wound up the opening half with 117 yards on 9 carries.

Halfback Ronnie Griffin, who gained over 1,200 yards going into the contest, picked up another 61 yards in the first half for the Eagles. But the only other score in the opening half didn't come on the ground, but rather through the airways — a route the Eagles rarely used.

Eagle quarterback Dale Welch hooked up with Scotty Middleton on a 42-yard pass early in the second period for Seagraves' second touchdown of the night. Middleton caught Welch's bomb on the dead run, then shucked off the would-be tackler at the 11 and went in standing up for the score, with 8:14 left in the half.

The Eagles threatened twice more in the first half, but were stymied first by a holding penalty and then by a fumble at the MHS 40. The Seagraves defenders were never threatened by McCamey in the opening half.

Griffin ended the night with 94 yards on 19 carries for the Eagles.

"(Coach Larry) Nabors did a real good job with his kids this year," said Eddins. "But I was just real pleased with our effort. We don't care who we play now."

Johnson Leads Monterey Past Amarillo

Dale Pinkston hopped on the lose ball at the AHS 13 and three plays later Johnson scored again — this time from three-yards out. White's kick was off the mark, but Monterey still owned a 16-7 lead with 2:31 left in the third period.

For all practical purposes that was the game as the Amarillo offense was almost shut down completely by the Monterey defenders. Amarillo, which had rolled up 115 yards on the ground in the first half, was held to only 25 yards rushing during the final two periods.

"We were confused a little at first by the way they were blocking," explained Odom. "But after we figured out what they were doing we were able to stop them. The defense really came on strong in the second half after that."

Really, Monterey's only lapse of the night came with 58 seconds left in the first period. That's when Amarillo's 1,000-yard runningback Mark Mathiasmeier broke three or four arm tackles and rambled 55 yards for the Sandies' only TD.

There was nothing fancy about the play. Mathiasmeier simply took a handoff from quarterback Jeff Lamb, broke through the Monterey line, cut back to his left and then high-tailed it down the left sideline untouched. Kyle Eddleman added the PAT, giving AHS a 7-0 lead.

White put Monterey on the scoreboard with 2:11 remaining before halftime with a 31-yard field goal, cutting the Sandie lead to four points, 7-3.

Monterey appeared ready to go in for its first after moving down to the Amarillo 16. But Johnson lost four yards on the next play and the Plainsmen could never get any momentum going again. Two plays later, Odom called on the bare-footed White who responded by side-winding a picture-perfect kick.

"That was important to us," commented Odom about White's field goal. "We needed some points."

Early in the fourth-period Monterey added what-would-be its final score on a marvelous 63-step burst by Johnson. Johnson had started to his left after taking a pitchout from quarterback Kent Potts, but after being bottled up, Johnson reversed his field and took out for the far sideline. After finding some daylight, he outran Mark Kemp to the flag.

Kemp's only hope of catching Johnson was with a lariat.

About all Monterey did wrong in the second half was hold — a lot. The MHS line was flagged three times late in the game for the no-no. And one of those times came on Monterey's first play from the AHS 11 following Mac Tatum's recovery of a Ty Richmond fumble.

But by that time it just didn't matter.

Wheeler Slips By Patriots 14-13

MEMPHIS (Special) — District 1-B champion Wheeler remained unbeaten and alive in the playoffs here Friday night by downing Valley 14-13 in a Class B bi-district matchup.

The running attack paved the way for both teams as Wheeler rushed for 224 yards to Valley's 202.

Wheeler now advances to the regional round against the winner of the Sterling City-Grandfalls Royalty clash.

Neither team could mount a scoring drive in the first quarter, but Wheeler broke on top in the second stanza on a 30-yard scoring sprint by Mike Evans. Evans tacked on the PAT as well.

But Valley, champions of District 2-B, came right back to tie it before the half on a 70-yard sprint by Mike Dowd and Dowd's PAT boot.

In the third quarter, Wheeler's Willie Valencia scooted 13 yards to score and Evans' PAT kick boosted Wheeler to a 14-7 lead.

But again, the Patriots bounced back as James McNeary scampered 62 yards to paydirt.

But the conversion attempt spelled doom for the Patriots as Dowd's PAT try missed the mark.

Wheeler then played ball control for the remainder of the game as Valley had the ball for only five plays in the fourth quarter and could not muster any kind of a scoring drive.

Wheeler advanced to the state finals a year ago, losing to Union Hill 14-7.

McNeary was the top rusher for Valley with 112 yards on 13 carries, while Valencia led Wheeler with 70 yards on 21 carries.

Stamford Takes Playoff Win Over Tigers 30-22

SNYDER (Special) — Paul Gardner scored on an 84-yard run in the first quarter and Mike Gomez added touchdowns on a 26-yard pass from quarterback Steve Cox and a 27-yard interception return Friday night to lead Stamford to a 30-22 victory over the Slaton Tigers in Class AA bi-district action.

Gardner's TD gave Stamford a 7-0 lead, but the Tigers came right back on a 58-yard scoring pass from quarterback Kevin Johnston to Charles Phenix to knot the score at 7-7.

Vince Rosenquist added a 38-yard field goal and Gomez hauled in his scoring pass from Cox before the first quarter ended to give Stamford a 16-7 lead.

Jesse Titus tied the score at 16-16 with a 22-yard field goal in the second quarter and a 3-yard TD bolt in the opening minutes of the third period.

Cox broke the tie by going over from one yard out late in the third period and Gomez wrapped up the victory with his interception return for six.

Controversial Call Spelled Doom For Texas Tech

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor

HOUSTON — Texas Tech's 1979 football season ended Friday afternoon in the Astrodome as it began some 13 weeks ago in Jones Stadium — with a disheartening loss.

And in many ways, Friday's 14-10 setback to Houston was similar to the 21-7 defeat the Red Raiders suffered at the hands of Southern California the opening weekend of the year.

As Tech head coach Rex Dockery would say, his players laid it all on the line against the Cougars. The same way they did against the Trojans, the Aggies, the Razorbacks and the Longhorns. The Red Raiders took the fight to the heavily favored Cougars and dished out more physical punishment than Houston football fans had seen since the last Steelers-Oilers war.

"Just as in life, you always try to come back from adversity and that is what we tried to do today," Dockery offered. "We exhibited that trait all year, even though it has been a sad and disappointing season.

"I can't fault our players for their attitude or effort. We have great seniors on this team and they really meant a lot to the whole coaching staff."

As in the Southern Cal contest, a controversial call by an official seemed to open the door for the Cougars. Against the Trojans a roughing the passer penalty wiped out a Tech interception that would have given the Red Raiders the football deep inside enemy territory.

Friday, a pass interference call nullified another Tech interception. The Red Raiders would have had the ball near the Cougar 30 yard line and in front 10-0. But as has been the case much of the year, Tech couldn't buy a break.

The Cougars had the football on their 26 yard mark and faced a third down and seven situation. Reserve quarterback Terry Elston dropped back to pass and spotted flanker Lonell Phea breaking across the middle of the field on a short post pattern.

As Elston released the ball, Tech strong safety Tate Randle, who positioned himself directly behind Phea, made his move. Just as the football arrived, Randle stuck Phea hard in the back. The ball bounced up in the air and senior cornerback Willie Stephens came down with what appeared to be his second interception of the afternoon.

It wasn't in the cards for the Red Raiders, though. Randle was flagged for interfering with Phea. Instead of Tech having a first down in Houston territory, the Cougars had a first down on their 46. Six plays later, Terald Clark went 14 yards for Houston's first score to begin the comeback rally.

"I couldn't believe they (the officials) made that call," said Stephens shaking his head. "That was an interception, no doubt about it. Tate hit the receiver just after the ball got there. That play turned everything around."

"I don't think it was interference," Randle added, obviously disappointed. "That was the turning point. It really changed the momentum because we were ahead 10-0 and would have had the ball at midfield."

"We felt it was a good play on Tate's part," Dockery stated. "It was a big play regardless of the call because it took an interception away from us. It was a big factor in the game."

The entire Tech secondary played a fantastic game. Randle, Stephens, Larry Flowers and Ted Watts were constantly knocking the Thanksgiving stuffing out of Houston's backs and receivers.

Cougars Roar Back To Defeat Raiders

Maury Buford midway through the third stanza. Buford booted the football from his 39 yard line and Houston return man (and starting flanker) Lonell Phea was smothered by Raider defenders as he tried to field the ball at the Cougar 18. The ball rolled toward the Houston end zone with a group of Raiders in hot pursuit.

Two Cougars managed to catch up with the elusive pigskin as it neared the goal line and a mad scramble ensued. It appeared that one of the Houston players recovered the ball, but inside the Cougar end zone. That would have been a safety (two points and Tech would have gotten the ball back via a free kick).

But the officials ruled that reserve player Earl Chumchal recovered the ball at the Houston one foot line. The Cougars moved from the one to their 27, where they were forced to surrender the ball to Tech.

Tech couldn't move in three tries and punted back to the Cougars. Houston took over at its 23. On third and seven from the 26, Elston, who had replaced starter Delrick Brown late in the second quarter, rifled a pass in the direction of his flanker, Phea, who ran a short post pattern.

Tech strong safety Tate Randle drilled Phea from behind just as the ball arrived and Willie Stephens snatched up the floating ball for an interception. But Randle's hit was ruled interference and the Cougars had a first and 10 at their 46.

Six plays later Clark took a pitch from Elston, turned the corner and outraced several Red Raiders 14 yards to paydirt. Kenny Hatfield tacked on the extra point and with 44 seconds remaining in the third period, the Cougars had closed the gap 10-7.

It was Elston, a junior from Oxford, Ala., who made it curtains for the Raiders on Houston's very next possession. On third and two from the Houston 28, Elston faked a handoff inside, hustled down the line of scrimmage and turned upfield and down the Tech sideline. He picked up a block around midfield from guard Jack Faniel, cut back to his left and easily won a footrace with the Tech defense to the end zone.

"Coach Yeoman (Houston head coach Bill) told me I would be playing, so I was ready," Elston admitted. "I went down the line and it opened up and I ran for daylight."

Three times in the first half the emotionally charged Red Raider defense stopped the conference's best running attack on fourth down and short yardage situations.

The first time came during Houston's second possession. Between the running of Clark and fullback John Newhouse, the Cougars drove from their 20 to the Red Raider 37, where the Coogs faced fourth down and two yards for a first.

Yeoman passed up the field goal attempt and took a gamble. But Tech's defense wasn't in the mood to play games. Clark took a pitch from Brown and headed around his right flank. Clark hadn't gone far when senior cornerback Willie Stephens wrapped him up and put his nose into the Astroturf for a four-yard loss.

Tech took over at its 41 and behind the running of Hadnot moved into position for Adams to put the only points on the scoreboard in the opening half.

Hadnot carried twice for 47 yards, and on his second run of 34 yards became Tech's career rushing king. Hadnot had 2,655 yards following his sprint through the middle of the Houston defense and that figure surpassed Larry Isaac's old mark of 2,533.

Mats, Ector Display Pre-Game Equality

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

ODESSA — Estacado coach Louis Kelley says that the Ector Eagles match up better with his Matadors than any team he's faced all year.

And Ector coach Ralph Johnson is in complete agreement. Both schools boast exceptional speed in the skill positions on both offense and defense.

So now the race is on — the gun goes off at 2 p.m. here today at Barrett Stadium when the Matadors and the Eagles square off for the first round of post-season action.

Both Estacado and Ector bring 9-1 records into the contest that has to be rated almost a toss-up.

"They're right with us in speed," says Kelley, of the Matadors. "They might even be faster than us. So we're going to have to fight fire with fire."

The hardest fire for the Mats to put out will be the one generated by running back James Ricks — who was the District 2-AAA rushing leader with 1,086 yards. Not only is Ricks fast, but he's powerful.

"Ricks is truly an exceptional running back," says Kelley. "He's got good speed and he's strong. If you try to tackle him around the waist or legs, he's going to drag you five or ten yards.

"We've got to shut him down."

Kelley also pointed to the play of Ector quarterback Bruce McCowan. Although he stands only 5-3, McCowan is a dangerous runner and an adequate passer. For the year, he's connected on 23 of 60 passes for 361 yards and five TDs.

And McCowan threw only four interceptions all year — the best in District 2-AAA.

"Their quarterback is dangerous on the option," explained Kelley. "Ector likes to run out of the veer a lot and he (McCowan) can hurt you on it — we'd rather see him pitch the ball than keep it."

Estacado Lineup

OFFENSE

QB — Jerry Gray. TB — Kelvin White. FB — Alvin Davis. WB — Preston Davis. SE — Kenneth Cade. TE — James Rose. C — Leonard Chatham. G — Greg Evans, Edward Evans. T -Melvin Byrd, Jim Malone.

DEFENSE

MLB — Stacy Burrell. OLB — Kenneth Davis, Steve McGraw. DE — Alvin Majors, David Johnson. DT — James Rose, James Ellis. CB — Preston Davis, George Irvin. S — Kenneth Cade, Anthony McGraw.

The Eagles have been averaging 264.4 yards of offense per game and holding the opposition to 201.9. While those are good statistics, they hardly match up with those the Matadors have maintained through 10 games.

Estacado is ripping off 310.7 yards an outing while allowing the opposition 134.3. The only common opponent of the two teams is Lubbock High. Estacado crushed the Westerners 32-0 while Ector had to hang on to take a narrow 10-7 win from LHS.

But according to Kelley, that doesn't mean much.

"Ector might have been taking Lubbock High a little lightly," he cautioned. "And Lubbock didn't play that well against us and I think they played exceptionally against Ector."

Except for the Lubbock High game, most of Ector's victories were blowouts — and Kelley says that might explain their misleading statistics.

"I watched them play Monahans," said Kelley, "and even though the final score was 20-10, that was no indication of the game. It was over by halftime."

And when they've had to, Ector's Eagles have done the job. The Odessa defensive unit has not allowed a single point in the first quarter all year.

The key to that Ector defense has been the play of linebackers Raymond Morris and Ed Williams. Morris, the middle linebacker, and Williams are both highly sought-after college prospects.

Morris leads the teams in tackles and was an all-state performer as a junior. In the defensive secondary is William Joe and D.D. Atkins. Joe has returned three punts for touchdowns this year.

Kelley has plenty of respect for the Ector linebackers, but he's plenty proud of his own — thank you.

"They've got some exceptional linebackers," admitted Kelley. "But I wouldn't trade theirs for ours," he added. "Our linebackers have done an exceptional job for us all year.

"These are two even teams," summed up Kelley. "So you're not going to see anything fancy. Just good, gut football."

"Estacado is a good team," said Ector's Johnson. "But I think we are also a good team."

'Cats Down Stubborn Wolves 19-7

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

CANYON — The Childress Bobcats, ranked No. 1 in the state in Class AA, drove 99 yards for a second half touchdown that catapulted them to a tough 19-7 bi-district win over the stubborn Dalhart Golden Wolves here Friday.

The field-length drive, capped by a 13-yard scoring pass from blue chip quarterback Perry Morren to end Wade Anglin, came with 11:50 remaining in the game and put Childress ahead for the first time. A controversial roughing the kicker penalty on a 28-yard Bobcat field goal attempt gave Childress an automatic first down at the Wolf 13, and Morren hit Anglin on the very next play.

The Wolves, 6-3-1 coming into the game, opened the scoring in the first quarter on a 4-yard burst by halfback Greg Field after quarterback Zurick Labrier gained 39 yards on two runs. Louis Gallegos added the extra point that gave the Wolves a 7-0 lead.

The Bobcats, 11-0, countered quickly with a 68-yard scoring drive that took nine plays and was highlighted by a 35-yard strike from Morren to Clifton Cornish after Morren escaped from an almost certain sack. Morren bulled in from the 1, but the Bobcat extra point failed, and the Wolves led 7-6 at the half.

Morren, who came into the game as the third leading passer in Texas high school history, hit 9 of 19 passes for 133 yards as Childress gained 22 first downs to 9 for the Wolves.

The Bobcats will meet Muleshoe in a AA regional game next week.

Hearing For Morton Delayed By Storm

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — A hearing for Denver Broncos quarterback Craig Morton, who is charged with drunk driving and running a stop sign, has been postponed because of a savage storm that buried northeast Colorado.

Morton was scheduled for a plea hearing in the Larimer County Courthouse on Tuesday, but the courthouse was closed as what has been described as the worst November storm in Colorado history roared out of the Rocky Mountains across the state's eastern plains.

Prosecutors said Morton's hearing has not been rescheduled but added his attorneys asked for a trial sometime in January.

Morton was cited in late July while the Broncos were in training at the Colorado State University campus here. A campus police officer saw a vehicle weaving on a street near CSU and stopped the driver in a campus parking lot.

Idaho Coach Hake Expected To Resign

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Idaho State football Coach Leo "Bud" Hake plans to resign today after winless ISU's final game of the season against Texas-Arlington, a Boise radio station said Friday.

KBOI said a "reliable source" in the school's administration said Hake agreed three weeks ago to resign after the final game of the season.

Nebraska, OU Again Billed As 'Game Of Century'

By The Associated Press

"Game of the Century" was getting to be kind of a trite phrase back in 1971 so Don Bryant, Nebraska's sports information director, and John Keith, then Oklahoma publisict, came up with the term "Shootout" before their teams waged war for national honors that year.

"Shootout No.1" turned out to be a "Game of the Century" and "Shootout No.10" comes up Saturday in Norman, Okla. Nebraska captured "Shootout No.1", that memorable 35-31 slugfest, but Oklahoma has won seven of the last eight, including last season's 31-24 Orange Bowl rematch after Nebraska won the regular-season clash 17-14.

Third-ranked Nebraska, which has a 97-18-4 record since 1970, comes in at 10-0 while eighth-ranked Oklahoma is 9-1. The winner gets to represent the Big Eight against Florida State in the Orange Bowl, while the loser goes to the Cotton Bowl.

"It will surprise me if it's 35-31, if there's that much scoring," says Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne. "We have a better defensive team than we had when we played Oklahoma last year. I think we have the best defensive team with which to play Oklahoma since the national championship team of 1971. And you've got to have good defense to play them. You can't go up and down the field and get in a scoring match with Oklahoma and hope to win."

As the regular season winds down, eight members of The Associated Press Top Twenty have either finished their schedules or close out next week. Top-rated Alabama is idle, but will go to the Sugar Bowl if it beats or ties Auburn next week or if Georgia loses to Georgia Tech on Saturday. The Bulldogs, only 5-5, but 5-1 in the Southeastern Conference, have said they will not accept a bid with an overall losing record.

Runner-up Ohio State, 11-0, is Rose Bowl-bound, but fourth-ranked Southern California must win or tie against UCLA on Saturday to get the host spot. A Southern Cal loss yanks Washington out of the Sun Bowl and into the Rose with the Trojans probably going to the Fiesta Bowl.

Elsewhere, No.17 Baylor visits No.6 Texas, No.7 Arkansas entertains Southern Methodist in Little Rock, No.10 Brigham Young visits San Diego State, No.19 South Carolina hosts No.13 Clemson and Louisiana State is at Tulane in Charlie McClendon's last regular-season game as LSU coach.

An Arkansas victory over SMU would (1) enable the Razorbacks to clinch no worse than a tie for SWC honors and (2) eliminate Texas from the Cotton Bowl race. But, if Texas loses either of its remaining games to Baylor or Texas A&M, Houston would wind up in the Cotton Bowl provided the Cougars' don't stumble vs. either Texas Tech or Rice, which have a combined 4-14-2 record.

Southern Cal, which has an 18-game unbeaten streak, defeated Washington 24-17 two weeks ago and apparently clinched a Rose Bowl berth. But the Huskies were given new life when their loss to Arizona Stata was declared a forfeit and a victory by the Pacific-10 Conference.

So now, says Coach John Robinson, the Trojans, "have one big goal — to beat UCLA and go to the Rose Bowl."

And USC has had great success in beating UCLA of late, especially when chasing a Rose Bowl bid. In games where USC had to defeat UCLA to go to the Rose Bowl, the Trojans have won seven straight times.

Seminoles Skin Gators

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Florida State players mostly had great praise for winless Florida, but one, nose guard Ron Simmons, said the Gators played dirty Friday in their effort to upset the fifth-ranked Seminoles.

Simmons, again a mainstay in the FSU defense, led the Orange Bowl-bound Seminoles to a 27-16 victory over their arch-rivals.

"They took so many cheap shots, we couldn't count them all," said the massive lineman. "However, I'm really not surprised, because it happens every time we come down here.

"The only thing we could do was calm them down on the field," he said.

Simmons said the way the Gators played only increased his motivation.

"Each cheap shot just made me madder," he said. "Every time they piled on, it got me fired up.

"Every time we come down here, it's the same thing — we expect it from the fans, they throw oranges and all — but the team's play is what made me mad."

Woodham's counterpart, Jimmy Jordan, said, "They didn't have anything to lose. They were playing in front of their home crowd, they were fired up, and they gave us some kind of game."

FSU defensive tackle Walter Carter came up with a key interception in the fourth quarter at the Gator 10. Television replays seem to show Ochab's pass bounced to Carter.

"I don't know whether it bounced or not," Carter said. "All I know is I wind up with the ball. I think it was about three or four inches off the ground when I caught it, but I'm not sure."

Stock Mart Sees Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — Aerospace and coal issues led the way as the stock market chalked up a moderate gain Friday.

Trading dropped off to its slowest pace in 2½ weeks, with many investors taking a four-day Thanksgiving weekend.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 4.35 to 811.77, reducing its loss for the week to 3.93 points.

New York Stock Exchange volume came to 23.30 million shares, down from 37.02 million Wednesday and the lightest total since a 20.47 million-share day on Nov. 5.

In the aerospace-defense group, McDonnell Douglas was up 2 at 31¼. Litton gained 1¾ to 37⅝; General Dynamics 2⅝ to 52¼; Northrop 1¼ to 38, and E-Systems 2⅛ to 33⅛.

Analysts said they knew of no development other than the recent tension in Iran, Pakistan, and Saudi Arabia to account for their showing.

"The general international situation has definitely gotten portfolio managers more interested in these stocks," said one trader.

Among the coal-mining issues, Pittston was up 1⅛ at 24⅝; Eastern Gas & Fuel rose 1 to 20¼, and National Mine Service went up 1 to 12¼.

Macmillan led the active list, down 3¼ at 13½ on turnover of more than 500,000 shares. On Wednesday American Broadcasting broke off acquisition talks with the publishing concern.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

A SOMEWHAT MIXED RECEPTION greeted the opening of trading on a revised cotton contract last week on the Hong Kong Commodity Exchange.

Some traders were bullish about the opening session's 148-lot turnover but others commented that "it could have been better."

The new contract now has been revised to 50,000 pounds net weight (100-bale lots of 480 pounds per bale), U. S. origin, and deliverable in Galveston under U. S. Department of Agriculture certification. The old contract was deliverable in Liverpool, ex-Hong Kong warehouse.

Trading in the new contract is in U. S. cents, with a three-cent limit up or down from the previous price, on strict low middling 1-inch, American-grown white cotton.

Revision of the cotton contract, coupled with the opening of a soybean contract, had been expected in some international circles to bring new life into the Hong Kong futures market.

BUT FOLLOWING THE FIRST THINLY TRADED session some tra ders were inclined to believe that "it could have been better under the circumstances."

The revised contract was a response to "dwindling interest" in the old contract, which was established at the opening of the exchange in May 1977, a spokesman said.

John Wilson of the Hong Kong exchange said in a message received by the Texas trade last week:

"Our new cotton futures contract which started trading Tuesday (Nov. 13) will need support from leading international merchants to get it going. So far only a few local firms are trading and volume is small.

"The new contract has been designed particularly to meet the needs of U. S. cotton interests trading in 1-inch staple American cotton and could provide an excellent medium for pricing hedging and arbitrage once we have good liquidity and open position."

Wilson said the market probably is not yet able to handle large orders and added that price differentials against New York futures "are not yet correct." At the close one day last week, Hong Kong was around seven cents cheaper than New York for most positions.

"However, the market can only be started with small beginnings," Wilson said, "and must be nurtured and encouraged by all concerned parties if it is to succeed and provide its destined services."

TRANSPORTATION SECRETARY Neil Goldschmidt says the U. S. transportation system may not be able to handle the shipment of goods to port in the 1980s without major improvements.

"The fact is that, today, our agricultural exports are paying our oil import bill," he told a press club luncheon in Washington. "And, in the future, vigorously expanded exports will be needed, not to offset oil imports, but to reassert our interest in the world market."

Noting that in many port cities, truck, rail and port planning has not been developed together, he said: "My preliminary review indicates that, without prompt action, we may not have the system we need."

Goldschmidt, one of President Carter's newest cabinet members, said he is launching two major programs to help solve the problem:

— Regional transportation planning will be required to look at the movement of goods, not just people, with emphasis on the link between rail and highways, especially in port communities.

— A joint study with the Commerce Department will look into the particular problems of transportation of goods in port cities.

"Next to decreasing our reliance on imported oil, improving our nation's performance in world trade is the surest path I know to achieve our gols of stabilizing the dollar and increasing job opportunities for Americans," he said.

COTTON FUTURES CLOSED WEAK in nearbys Friday as nervous speculative liquidation in spot December prior to first delivery notices Monday put pressure on other delivery months.

December lost 123 points to close at 67.75 cents, March dropped 77 points to settle at 69.94, and May declined 57 points to finish at 71.85.

Floor brokers said volume was light, with most local traders absent.

The USDA reported after the close that U. S. cotton export sales remained large in the week ended Nov. 11. New sales for 1979-80 delivery totaled 213,500 running bales, bringing the total export commitment — shipments plus outstanding sales — to 6,477,600 running bales.

China made the largest purchase, taking 94,500 running bales, and lesser amounts were sold to Taiwan, Japan, Greece, Hong Kong and the European Economic Community.

Exports slipped with only 107,600 running bales shipped, 84 percent of which was headed to Asia with 10 percent to Europe. Shipments for the season totaled 1,461,900 running bales, compared with 1,294,400 a year earlier.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures drifted lower in quiet, holiday-like conditions Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Some light commercial selling early in the session helped establish a moderately negative tone. Many traders were absent from the floor on a four-day holiday weekend and U.S. cash markets were quiet amid light cash sales of grain.

Soybean cash bids were reported steady to lower. Confirmation of trade reports that the Soviet Union has bought significant amounts of U.S. soybean meal for the first time was viewed as a long-term supporting factor because it signifies the opening of a new market for meal. But the news had little effect on prices because it was regarded as business already done.

At the close, soybeans were ½ to 4 cents lower, January $6.89; wheat was 1¼ to 4 cents lower, December $4.37¼; corn was ¼ to 3 cents lower, December $2.76½; and oats were ½ to ¾ cent lower, December $1.48½.

Hog Futures Close Lower

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Hog futures closed 5 to 85 points lower with August under the most pressure after falling 105 points Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Selling spilled over from other meat pits and followed mostly lower cash hogs despite sharply reduced arrivals, some of which were attributed to heavy snow in the west.

Traders also noted profit taking after Wednesday's advances to the highest levels since March. The premium of futures to cash and the possibility of heavy deliveries were additional selling factors.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up 1 cent at 82 to 89 cents a pound, f.o.b. river, the highest since March. The six markets expect 36,500 head Monday.

Cash hogs were off $1 to up 50 cents, with the best top at $40.75 at Joliet. Slaughter totaled 339,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 52 to 67 points lower led by February after March lost 105 points. The market was on the defensive from the start.

The turnaround from Wednesday's limit gains and season's highs was traced to profit taking. Some contraction was indicated after seven-month peaks with weakness in other pits also a factor along with lower cash hogs on light runs.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up 1 cent at 36 to 47 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

Feeder cattle futures closed 2 to 62 points lower on 1,203 cars. March was the weakest after slipping 87 points, with only January briefly higher by 5 points.

Selling spilled over from the live cattle pit and also was traced to profit taking after sharp advances Wednesday. Cash feeder cattle market news was lacking due to snow and cold in the Midwest.

Deliveries total 340 thus far. The six markets expect 1,00 head Monday. Cash feeder cattle markets were unavailable. Slaughter totaled 115,000 head.

Conference Attracting More Bankers

The 1979 Bankers' Agricultural Credit Conference Dec. 7-8 at Texas Tech University appears to be attracting more bankers from a broader geographic area than previous years, according to the coordinator, Dr. J. Wayland Bennett.

Bennett said the conference usually attracts bankers from the immediate region, but pre-registrants for the 1979 meeting come from "a much broader area than ever before."

High interest rates, the usury limit in Texas and the increased pressure on the cost-price squeeze are questions of particular interest this year, he said.

"Disaster loan effects on 1980 financing is of particular interest to a great many bankers," he said, "as well as the significance of Small Business Administration (SBA) and Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) farm financing. These are participation loans with banks, and the 1980 conference will include discussions on these topics."

Bennett is associate dean of the Texas Tech College of Agricultural Sciences and a member of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas board of directors.

He said U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of the Lubbock will be the banquet speaker for the conference Friday, Dec.7. Registration will begin at 6 p.m. Dec. 7 in the Texas Tech University Center. For latecomers to the conference, registration will continue on Dec. 8, starting at 7:30 a.m. in the University Center Courtyard.

Lead speaker on Dec. 8 be Jim Winningham, president of the Arthur (Ill.) State Bank, speaking on "Your Bank — Your Community." Winningham's bank is in a commercial farming area.

Other bankers participating will be John Wright, chairman of the board, First State Bank, Abilene; Gene Adams, president, First National Bank, Seymour; Norman Wright, president, City National Bank, Plainview, and Lowell Smith Jr., chairman of the board, First State Bank, Rio Vista.

Texas Tech faculty members who will discuss the general economic outlook for 1980 will include Dr. Gene A. Mathia, chairman, department of agricultural economics, and members of his faculty, Horn Prof. Willard F. Williams and Drs. Calvin Brints, Billy G. Freeman and Rex P. Kennedy. The agricultural economists also will present estimated cost of production budgets for 1980 for each of the major crops in the area.

Bennett said SBA and FmHA representatives are expected to attend and answer questions regarding their agencies' participation in farm financing.

Weevil Infestations Termed 'Light'

VERNON (Special) — Boll weevil infestations in the 21 counties of Extension District 3 have been light during the past three years, according to Emory P. Boring, area entomologist.

Infestations during the 1979 growing season were very light, he said, and damaging boll weevil infestations were found only in a few fields, most of which were early planted fields near favorable overwintering habitat.

"During late October it was still difficult to find boll weevils in most fields," he said. "However, large numbers of boll weevils could be found in fields that were near the 'hot spot' fields or fields which were planted early near favorable overwintering habitat.

"With the very light boll weevil infestation throughout the area, cotton was able to mature bolls to the top of the plants. Often by the end of September, boll weevil damage can be found in almost all fields," he added.

A dry, cold winter in 1977 followed by the cold, wet winter of 1978 and drought conditions during the 1978 growing season are factors which contributed greatly to the reduced number of boll weevils during the past growing season, the entomologist noted.

The uniform planting date in each of the major cotton producing counties in District 3 was also a major factor in reducing boll weevil numbers during the growing season, he said.

"The uniform planting date and the wet cold weather conditions during the spring of 1979 delayed planting in most cases until early June, " he explained. "Therefore, June planted cotton did not begin to produce squares until the second week in July and by then, most of the boll weevils that had emerged were dead."

Boll weevil populations remained low throughout the summer, he said, and populations were low in most of the fields right up until the time of the first killing frost.

"Late in the growing season, boll weevil populations did build up in isolated areas in Knox, Stonewall and Kent counties," Boring said. "Even in these counties, populations were limited to fields and parts of fields that continued to produce squares and small bolls."

In 1980, producers will again have an opportunity to greatly reduce the numbers of overwintered boll weevils. Participation by most producers in the uniform planting date will again result in survival of very few boll weevils to infest cotton, the scientist said.

But early planting of cotton in areas near favorable overwintering habitat will result in increased boll weevil infestations, he noted.

Officer Praised For Halting Rig

NEW YORK (UPI) — A police lieutenant who hopped onto a driverless tractor-trailer and brought it to a screeching halt was credited today with saving the lives of holiday motorists on the George Washington Bridge.

"He had all sorts of fancy buttons in there," L. Charles Lekowski said after the incident. "I didn't know what they were for, so anything that was pushed in I pulled out and anything that was out I pushed in." The sudden braking left 15-foot skid marks on the road.

Police said the driver of the truck had left the vehicle and jumped off the bridge about 12:20 p.m. Thursday. His body still had not been recovered today from the Hudson River.

Lekowski said a motorist told him he saw the truck rumble down the bridge without a driver behind the wheel and that several people reported seeing the driver jump into the water.

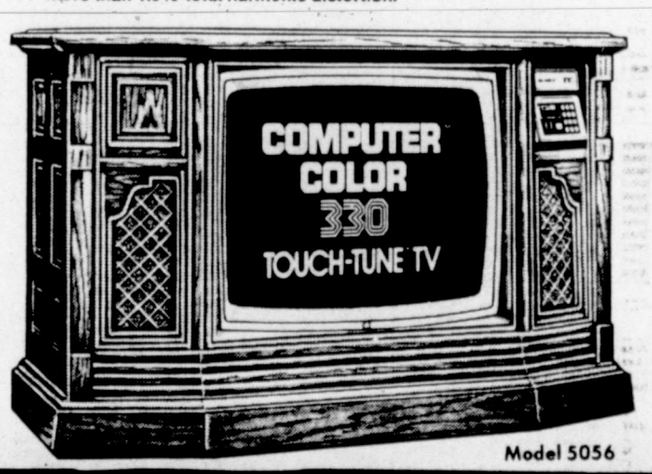

Jumping into his patrol car and swerving through traffic in the lanes alongside the truck, Lakowski got about 20 feet in front of the rig, left his car and — as the truck passed at about 15 miles an hour — "I put my right foot on the door step and my left arm around the windshield and just held on," Lekowski said.

A spokesman for the Port Authority, which operates the bridge, said he didn't "want to think what could have happened if he didn't stop it."

Carlen Demands Quality Effort Against Clemson

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The Clemson-South Carolina football game, always a good one, may have never been better than now. Both teams are nationally ranked, Clemson as No. 13 and the Gamecocks No. 19.

If the Tigers win, they may knock South Carolina out of the rankings, and if the Gamecocks win, they'll probably move up and Clemson will drop.

Both teams already have bowl bids. Clemson, 8-2, is going to the Peach Bowl in Atlanta, already a sellout, while South Carolina, 7-3, is headed for the Hall of Fame Bowl in Birmingham, Ala.

But given the rivalry between them, Saturday's matchup may be the biggest game of the year.

Clemson Coach Danny Ford narrows the contest to the basics. "If we block and tackle better than Carolina, then we'll whip their fannies; if Carolina blocks and tackles better than us, then they'll whip our fannies," he says. "It should be quite a challenge."

Ford, an offensive lineman for Alabama in the late 1960s, is no stranger to big games.

"If you get keyed up too soon, you can lose it," he said. "...You've got to try to keep on an even keel until 1:30 Saturday and then turn it loose."

South Carolina features an offense that slaps the football down the throat of the defense, using the power running of the nation's No. 2 running back, George Rogers. Clemson has the No. 9 defense, allowing opponents 236 yards per game.

Gamecock Coach Jim Carlen says his team will "have to play our best game since we've been at Carolina to have a chance to win."

He agrees with Ford that execution, mistakes and emotions will play a big part in the game. "And it's going to be hard not to make mistakes with the emotions there," he added.

Taylor Gripes About Bench Role

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Billy Taylor won't be the starting halfback for the New York Giants when they play the Washington Redskins Sunday. That's something he's come to expect but can't accept.

Taylor is listed as the second-team halfback behind steady but unspectacular Doug Kotar, the team's leading rusher with 478 yards. Taylor's 148 yards against Tampa Bay seven weeks ago accounts for more than a third of his season output of 368 yards. His 68 yards against the Cowboys was the second best day by a Giants runner this season.

He indicated to a reporter Wednesday the reason he might not be playing is that Giants Coach Ray Perkins "doesn't like me."

Friday, Perkins responded to that charge.

"My first reaction is he's wrong, but that's really not important. Whether I like him or he likes me is not the important thing," Perkins said. "The most important thing is for each individual to work for consistency and play at a top level."

Asked why Taylor has apparently found his way into his doghouse and been benched, Perkins said, "I don't care to tell you."

"I'm trying to stay cool," Taylor said, "trying to maintain a good attitude. I don't say anything derogatory about anybody. It's just that I think I can help more than I'm helping."

Clemson Gridder Arrested

ANDERSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson's starting defensive left end, Bob Goldberg, and two other men were arrested on drug charges after Anderson County sheriff's deputies found what appeared to be illegal drugs in their car, authorities said Friday.

Goldberg, another Clemson student, Bobby Alan Wilson, and a non-student, Mark T. Snipes, were arrested Thursday night as they left Snipes' residence, which had been under surveillance, according to a county narcotics officer.

The officer, Jim Callahan, said that each suspect was carrying a small bag of marijuana when arrested and that 290 drug capsules, a pharmaceutical scale and other drug paraphernalia were found in Wilson's car.

Head football Coach Danny Ford and Athletic Director H.C. McLellan could not be reached for comment Friday night.

Cougars Rooting For Bears In Baylor-UT Match

By The Associated Press

The Houston Cougars will be rooting for Southwest Conference rival Baylor Saturday in the Bears' attempt to do something they haven't done in 28 years — beat the University of Texas in Austin.

A Baylor victory over the 11-point-favored Longhorns would give Houston a crack at breaking a three-way tie and winning the SWC football title outright.

But for a time Friday, Houston teetered on the brink of dropping out of the SWC crown picture. Late in the third period the ninth-ranked Cougars trailed Texas Tech, 10-0. Suddenly, Houston came alive.

"We finally realized we can still be the Southwest Conference champs," said Terald Clark, who rushed for a career-high 167 yards and one touchdown as Houston came back to win, 14-10. "We got down at the end to do the job."

Houston still has one game to play — against last-place Rice, which has yet to post an SWC win. Cougars Coach Bill Yeoman set the stage for Saturday's big game in Austin.

"If we beat Rice and Texas loses, then we go to the Cotton Bowl," Yeoman said. "We've got to make sure we take care of our end, which we almost didn't do today."

Despite Baylor's 11-point underdog status, the Bears were guaranteed a Peach Bowl berth regardless of how Saturday's game turns out.

But linebacker Doak Fields said, "I'm not even thinking about going to the Peach Bowl right now. The only thing on my mind is beating the Longhorns. We beat them last year and I think we'll beat them Saturday. We particularly want to beat them on their home field."

Baylor bombed the Longhorns 38-14 last year in Waco. Only twice in the series between the two schools which dates back to 1901 have the Bears beaten Texas two years in a row.

Baylor is set for a Peach Bowl meeting Dec. 31 with powerful Clemson of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Arkansas, Texas and Houston all have only one loss in SWC play, and if all win their remaining games, Arkansas will go to the Cotton Bowl against the Big Eight runnerup, since the Longhorns and Cougars have been to the Jan. 1 classic in Dallas since the Razorbacks.

Texas would go to the Sugar Bowl against the Southeastern Conference champion and Houston would go to the Sun Bowl against Washington, provided Washington doesn't go to the Rose Bowl.

In other action Saturday, Arkansas plays Southern Methodist Saturday night in Little Rock and Texas Christian hosts Texas A&M.

Either Texas or Arkansas will be in the Sugar Bowl depending on how the cards fall in the SWC. But if Arkansas stumbles to SMU, Texas would have the edge on the Cotton Bowl host berth, since the Longhorns beat Houston, the team with which it would tie for the conference title.

Hawks Trade Terry Furlow

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Hawks of the National Basketball Association announced Friday that guard Terry Furlow has been traded to the Utah Jazz and free agent center Sam Pellom signed to a multi-year contract.

The Jazz will return to Atlanta its 1981 second-round draft choice, which had gone to Utah earlier when the Hawks acquired Ron Lee. The Furlow deal also gives the Hawks a second round draft pick from the Jazz in 1982.

Furlow, acquired last season in a trade that sent rookie Butch Lee to Cleveland, averaged 9.9 points in 29 regular season games for Atlanta and had a 15.1 scoring average during the 1979 playoffs.

Furlow was averaging 8.4 points per game in 21 appearances with Atlanta this season.

In order to make room on their roster for Furlow, the Jazz waived guard Andre Wakefield. Jazz General Manager Frank Layden said Furlow was expected to join the Jazz Sunday or Monday.

BoSox Sweeten Pot To Meet Lockwood's Terms

BOSTON (AP) — Skip Lockwood, a relief pitcher who played out his option while nursing a sore arm with the New York Mets this year, has agreed to terms with the Boston Red Sox.

"Skip's agent, Dick Moss, and I came to a monetary agreement near midnight Wednesday and we've been on the phone all (Friday) afternoon working out the details today," Red Sox General Manager Haywood Sullivan told The Associated Press.

"We didn't plan to announce anything, but the news has leaked," Sullivan said. "Actually, we were trying to protect Skip, because everything hinges on his passing a physical examination. We're trying to set that up for Monday and he'll be here Tuesday for our news luncheon."

Sullivan declined to disclose terms. However, it was believed the Red Sox upped their original offer of $600,000 for four years, possibly giving Lockwood another $100,000 as a bonus for signing.

Lockwood, a former Greater Boston schoolboy sensation, had a 2-5 record and nine saves with the lowly Mets this year before being sidelined by arm trouble in June. The 33-year-old reliever finished 22 of the 27 games he pitched.
