Spring board

How's that? Xs

Q. Why have large Xs been painted on Scurry and Lancaster streets?
A. The Xs were used as coordinate points for recent aerial photographs taken by the state's Department of Highways and Public Transportation, said David Elmore, an engineering technician with the department. The photographs are part of survey information being gathered by the state's highway department in its proposal to widen Gregg Street by six feet on each side, Elmore said.

Ferrets' trouble worries experts

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — State wildlife officials are having little luck convincing 17 black-footed ferrets to produce little ferrets.

"We haven't given up, but it's frustrating as can be and getting worrisome," said Tom Thorne of the Wyoming Game and Fish Department's Sybil Canyon research facility. "We haven't had a female yet that we can identify as being in heat or a male that has wanted to breed."

The department has provided the animals with bigger cages and is working with two on-site experts and leading authorities in small animal reproduction in its second attempt to breed the endangered animals in captivity.

Biologists believe the animals breed in February or March each year, but Thorne said Thursday none of the 11 females or six males has displayed any mating behavior during seven weeks of pairing.

The 17 ferrets, along with an adult male ferret quarantined in Laramie, were removed from the only known North American colony of the animals near Meeteetse. The colony, believed devastated by an outbreak of canine distemper, was not large enough to survive, officials said.

Pared budget staring at council

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

City Councilmen are expected to approve the revised 1986-87 budget at a 6:30 p.m. Tuesday meeting at the Airpark meeting room.

Councilmen and city officials met Monday to review the revised budget plan, presented by city staff.

Reduction of capital expenses and deferred paybacks to the revolving capital fund are the primary changes in the city's general fund, City Manager Mack Wofford has said.

The fund, originally set at $6.7 million, has been reduced by $102,440, he said.

Capital expense items have been reduced in most departments, with the largest reduction in delaying purchase of two police cars, projected at $22,800.

Delayed payments to the revolving capital fund involve $100,000 for street sealcoating, $2,000 for municipal court building repairs, and $7,450 for a new City Hall telephone system, he said.

The revolving capital fund was established to fund major capital projects. Approximately $200,000 is left in the fund, Wofford said.

In addition to the budget discussion, the Council is to address bids for the sale of bowling pinsetters and equipment, and for construction of a runway at the Airport.

Specifications and authorization to advertise for bids for water treatment plant improvements will be considered.

Public Works Director Tom Decell said that because of budget constraints, he has reduced the amount of work proposed for the Phase I improvements, which include relocation of chlorination equipment and replacement of various filters.

Specifications and authorization to advertise for bids for Municipal Auditorium stage curtains also appear on Council agenda. The auditorium is undergoing interior restoration in Phase III of its renovation.

The Council has been asked to consider granting a livestock permit to Gene and Naomi Rushing, 100 Cottonwood St., who wish to keep goats, rabbits and chickens; and to grant a clear zone easement at the Airpark.

Prison Faculty Wives are scheduled to present a check for repairs to Dora Roberts Community Center.

The Council is to consider the Parks and Recreation Board's recommendation to name the enlarged Comanche Trail Park softball field Cotton Mize Park.

Scheduled in addition are second and final readings on an ordinance appointing election judges and a resolution authorizing an agreement with Freese & Nichols for engineering services in support of Comanche Lake Dam repairs.

Michelle Alexander's agenda is busy these days, meeting leaders during an overseas trip that will end April 15. The trip came about as the result of her winning entry in a Children as Teachers of Peace Foundation. The daughter of former Big Spring resident Dr. Gerald Alexander, she is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. R.J. Alexander, Big Spring.

Turner attacked by women

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

Alleging "leftist" views of WTBS owner Ted Turner, members of the Big Spring Republican Women's Club are attempting to dissuade viewers from watching the Turner Broadcasting station.

An advertisement denouncing Turner on page 8A of today's Big Spring Herald is pertinent said Polly Mays, a member of the local organization, because it reflects the attitudes of an important national media figure.

"He (Turner) has been flying under false colors and people ought to know where he's standing," said Mary Joy Cowper, also a member of the Republican organization.

Today's advertisement duplicates a full page advertisement of the March 27 issue of the National Review magazine.

Space for the local advertisement cost $208.50 and Republican Women's Club funds, raised through flag sales, were used to purchase the space, Mays added.

Cowper said she obtained verbal permission from the National Conservative Foundation to duplicate the advertisement.

The advertisement was brought to Mays' attention by Cowper, Mays said.

"Some of us took it on ourselves to see that it was run here. We are Republican women in Big Spring," Mays said.

Betty Wrinkle, a member of the local organization, said she wouldn't have taken action to see the advertisement was run.

"I kind of like him (Turner). He's the kind of guy who likes to say controversial things," Wrinkle said.

"The ad is thought-provoking," she said, adding "I don't think it's going to hurt his station."

Attempts to reach organization president Jane Thomas Saturday were unsuccessful.

"We're sort of astounded about a man who has made money the American way and here he is liking the Russians and not

Big Sandy residents lose front row seats to history

By MICHELLE LOCKE
Associated Press Writer

BIG SANDY (AP) — Upshur County residents had front-row seats for last summer's two-day manhunt for capital murder suspect Jerry Walter McFadden, but most won't have the same vantage point at his trial.

Because of a change of venue, McFadden, who calls himself "Animal," will be tried about 200 miles away in Bell County, meaning few residents from here will be able to attend.

But the hue and cry raised over his escape last summer can still be heard in a heightened awareness of crime and calls for a tougher criminal justice system, residents of this small East Texas town said.

At the Swanner auto parts store, the manhunt is still a much-discussed topic.

Janie Swanner said she would like to attend the trial in Belton, but will have to settle for reading news accounts. "We'd have to close up the business," she said.

"He was within 2 1/2 blocks of my place," said customer John Cole, who is also vice president of the Big Sandy Chamber of Commerce.

Cole said the manhunt brought an unpleasant burst of notoriety to the quiet town of about 1,200 people. "We wanted to be on the map but we didn't want that kind of publicity," he said.

The case also has put a strain on the county's resources. Prosecutors say trying McFadden is expected to cost more than $1 million, which amounts to about 25 percent of the county's budget.

Upshur County commissioners voted last week to ask state District Judge F.L. Garrison to postpone the trial until they find a way to come up with the money.

"This is something that's not in the budget. We just don't have that kind of surplus," said County Judge Everett Dean.

"I think the state should help," Dean said. "My thinking is we need some state legislation that the state would cover any costs in a capital murder trial. There's not that many of them, but they're all expensive."

McFadden, 38, is scheduled to be tried March 30 in connection with the strangulation death of Suzanne Harrison, 18, of Hawkins.

Paroled in 1985 after serving five years of a 15-year sentence for aggravated sexual assault, McFadden was convicted again and given a life sentence for an aggravated robbery that occurred at Lake Hawkins on the same day Miss Harrison and two companions were on an outing at the lake. Miss Harrison's companions also were found dead.

McFadden escaped from the Upshur County Jail July 9 by overpowering a guard and taking a female deputy hostage.

More than 200 lawmen descended on the area with dogs, helicopters and horses, and troops of journalists arrived to chronicle the activity.

Ellis Stewart's print shop, which boasted a coffee percolator and two phones, became unofficial headquarters for the reporters encamped there.

The manhunt ended with no one harmed. Deputy Rosalie Williams, the hostage, escaped about 16 hours after her abduction. McFadden surrendered to officers the next day.

Following the manhunt, Police Chief Richard Lingle said several residents joined a victims' rights group called "We the People" to demand tougher parole

Prayer effort to boost oil field spirits

ODESSA (AP) — A new event intended to boost sagging spirits in the Texas oil patch begins this weekend with churches offering prayers for the depressed industry.

Energy Appreciation Week started with plans for a fund-raising and membership drive by the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, but the organization instead decided to expand its efforts to spark optimism where it is badly needed, PBPA President Charles Perry said.

"I would hope we would get a more optimistic attitude in the industry," Perry said Friday. Bernard Washington, 24, an unemployed Odessa who has been unable to find steady work since he lost his job three years ago as a helper in a metal shop, said a week devoted to appreciation of the energy industry "might help them a little, give them some hope."

But he said it would raise spirits more if com-ppanies would "give people work for a week or two."

Pauline Carter, 26, said her husband, a roughneck, had been laid off for two months and just got back to work.

"It's worth trying," she said of the planned event. "They need some kind of hope in their future."

Perry said more hope might mean more activity and more jobs.

"I think everything has been so bad that even if something looked good they wouldn't try it," Perry said, adding that some promising signs are starting to show in the oil industry.

"Everybody didn't think OPEC would stay together," he said, but the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has stalled production, firming prices in the $18- to $19-per-barrel range.

And the natural gas "bubble" is deflating, he said — "One cold winter and we'll have a gas shortage."

Prices paid for reserves are climbing, after falling as low as $5 a barrel in mid-1986, with prices now at about $6.45 a barrel, Perry noted.

He said events of the seven days will include a luncheon with a speech by independent oilman Robert O. Anderson of Roswell, N.M., Tuesday, followed by a seminar on perspectives of the worldwide petroleum industry by Arlen L. Edgar, a petroleum engineer and consultant.

Other events include a seminar on trends in the natural gas pipeline industry, a speech by Texas Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace and a Saturday "Blow Out" celebration with bands, cook-offs and exhibits.

Bentsen: Formula won't work

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cheapening the dollar and pushing U.S. trading partners to spend more at home will not solve the country's growing trade deficit, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said Saturday.

But the Texas Democrat said that lowering the dollar and urging greater industrial production abroad are the primary tools the Reagan Administration is relying on to cut the $170 billion U.S. trade deficit.

"There are those people — the administration for example — that say that all you have to do on trade to take care of the balance is to do something about the exchange rates between the yen and the dollar and the mark and the pound and the franc," Bentsen said.

"Well, I have a new study from the Library of Congress that shows that just doesn't do it."

The study concluded that a 15 percent further devaluation of the dollar during 1987-1989 would reduce the trade balance by $22.4 billion. In addition, a 2 percent acceleration in industrial production in Europe, Canada and Japan would reduce the deficit by only $8 billion during that time, the study states.

"What it really says to us is that we have to expand world trade and that means take down all these trade barriers to our products going into those countries," Bentsen said. "If they have full access to our markets we should have full access to their markets."

Treasury Secretary Jim Baker, however, said in an interview last month that lower interest rates and a declining inflation rate, rather than a cheapened dollar, will chop $40 billion from this year's trade deficit.

Baker denied the administration was trying to push down the value of the dollar. At the same time he acknowledged that even if it were trying to talk down the dollar, he couldn't say so publicly.

He added that a weaker dollar, which theoretically should make imports more expensive while making American products more competitive on overseas markets, will not solve the problem of the trade deficit.

from 29 nations received awards November 1985 in San Francisco. Jihan Sadat, wife of assassinated President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, presented Michelle's award.

During that visit, Michelle showed her game board to children from other countries, which prompted a change.

A European child asked her why she had placed the United States in the middle of the world. It caused Michelle and her mother modify the game board.

Roberta Alexander, Michelle's mother, said they have received about 2,500 requests for the game, mainly from schools in the United States and other countries.

Michelle departed on an international tour March 15, her birthday, and visited Norway that day. She plans to visit India, Japan, Hong Kong, Thailand, Denmark and England, Alexander said.

She and other peace contest winners have a meeting planned with Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, and may meet Chinese leaders and Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone.

She carries with her greetings from her fifth-grade class and invitations to become pen pals. Classmates specified in which countries they wanted Michelle to drop their notes.

Her month-long trip, organized by the Children as Teachers of Peace Foundation, will require her to catch up with schoolwork on her return. She worked ahead of her class to allow the trip.

She said she heard that Gorbachev offered to stop making bombs if President Reagan would do the same.

"That sounds like a good thing," she said.

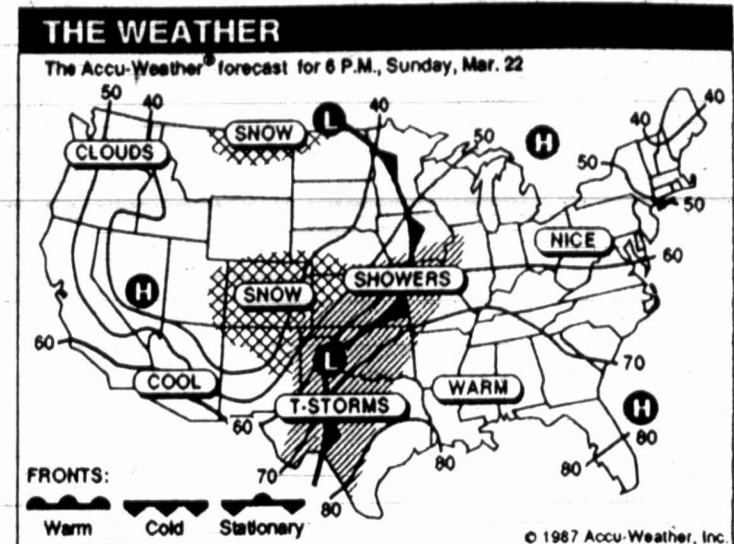

Michelle reminds adults that she is only a child and can't solve war alone. Nor does she think her game will do the trick by itself.

West Texas - Thunderstorms ending from the west Sunday, with lower temperatures through Monday and very windy on Monday except in the far west. Highs Sunday 60s except 70s Concho Valley and Big Bend. Lows Sunday night 30s except 40s Concho Valley and Big Bend. Highs Monday near 50 north with 60s elsewhere except near 80 along the Rio Grande.

State

A cool front lingered across Texas Saturday, touching off scattered thunderstorms southwest and west of Wichita Falls, and the National Weather Service posted a severe thunderstorm warning for 17 counties.

The weather service said marble to golf ball size hail fell in Knox City in Knox County.

The stationary cool front extended from the Red River east of Wichita Falls, southwest into the lower Pecos Valley and northwest to Del Rio.

The thunderstorm watch was posted Saturday night for the northwestern, southwestern and north central parts of the state. The watch extended from San Angelo to Midland, northeast to Childress and Wichita Falls into southwest Oklahoma.

Clouds covered South Texas and the lower Rio Grande Valley. It was partly cloudy elsewhere, except for clear skies in the extreme northeast part of far West Texas.

Late afternoon temperatures behind the cool front were in the 60s and 70s, while readings southeast of the front warmed into the 70s and 80s. Extremes ranged from 60 degrees at Dalhart in the northwest Panhandle to 81 degrees at Killeen, Lufkin and Temple.

Southeast breezes at 10 to 20 mph prevailed across most of Texas, but northerly winds blew along the northeast part of the cool front. The far west had southwest winds gusting to near 30 mph.

requirements. "We are very stirred up, I'd say, about criminals being let loose," said Stewart, the print shop owner.

Lingle stirred up some controversy when he designed posters and T-shirt transfers that read, "I survived the Big Sandy manhunt" and "Texas Largest — The Big Sandy Manhunt." But he says most of the response was positive.

The police chief hopes to use vacation time to attend at least part of the trial to watch the conclusion of the biggest case in his career.

Special prosecutor Stephen Tokoly said he will seek a capital murder conviction, but declined to comment further on his trial plans.

McFadden's court-appointed attorney, Vernard Solomon of Marshall, said he's looking forward to the trial because he doesn't believe the state has a strong case.

"It appears to be a case of being in the wrong place at the wrong time," Solomon said.

Glyndia Lane, Miss Harrison's aunt, said most of the family will attend the trial in Belton. As one of the organizers of "We the People," Mrs. Lane said the biggest impact of the manhunt has been increased interest in the group.

But she said the events of last summer have a personal impact, too.

"You don't lay down at night without thinking about it and you don't wake up in the morning without thinking about it," she said. "You think that you're OK one day and the next day it's a rocky road again."

"It's rude, propaganda and silly. It's ridiculous," Perkins said of the advertisement.

Effort nets 31 drug suspects

TEXARKANA (AP) — Authorities have apprehended 31 drug suspects named in 88 sealed indictments and will continue the search Monday, police said Saturday.

Officers found seven of the 58 suspects on the job at the International Paper Co. plant in Domino and marched them out in handcuffs Friday afternoon, Cass County Sheriff Paul Boone said.

He said his officers will resume the search Monday for the remaining 27 suspects named in the indictments handed down by a grand jury last week.

"I just don't have the men to keep it going this weekend," Boone said. "If a few want to come in and surrender, we'll take them, but we're not out looking for them this weekend."

An undercover officer had secured a job at the paper mill during the investigation.

Missiles for radar posts

NEW YORK — The Soviet Union has installed two listening stations in Iran to monitor activity in the Persian Gulf, the Gulf states and Pakistan and gave 200 missiles to Iran in exchange, according to a report broadcast Friday.

ABC News, citing two unnamed sources, reported that the listening stations, equipped with special antennas and radar, had been installed in the past several months.

The stations, used to monitor military movement and communications, are similar to those installed by the U.S. in Iran but abandoned with the fall of the shah, ABC said.

The report said one listening station was 120 miles south of the city of Shiraz, aimed at the Persian Gulf, and was staffed by 25 Soviet technicians. The second station was in mountains near the Pakistan border, the report said.

Not like father, like son

ST. PAUL, Minn. — A man arrested while serving on a jury turned out to be the wrong man, authorities discovered after he spent the night in jail. The man they really wanted was his father.

George Alexander Swystun, 19, was listening to the prosecutor's final argument in a burglary trial in Ramsey County District Court on Thursday when Judge Donald Gross interrupted the proceedings.

The judge had been told that two sheriff's deputies were on the way to the courtroom to pick up Swystun for failing to show up for a December hearing on a disorderly conduct charge.

"They fingerprinted me and threw me in jail," Swystun said following his release Friday. "I didn't know what was going on. I felt pretty embarrassed about the whole thing."

Burglary turns deadly

LA CROSSE, Wis. — An elderly woman, her son and his girlfriend found shot to death at the woman's home were apparently killed by a burglar, police said Saturday.

Lt. James Schleifer said he believed the home of Lila Bush, 73, was randomly chosen and that the slayings were not premeditated.

"It started out as a burglary from appearances and became a robbery," he said. "The homicide was secondary."

The bodies of Mrs. Bush, her son Kenneth K. Bush Jr., 32, and his girlfriend, Debra K. Reget, 35, were found Friday morning by a family member, police said. An undetermined amount of money was stolen from the home, police said.

The assailant entered the home apparently sometime Thursday evening or early Friday morning by forcing a basement window, Schleifer said.

Bitter battle

The fight over apartheid

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — While most South Africans watch from the sidelines, the white minority is waging a bitter election campaign over the future of apartheid.

All sides agree that President P.W. Botha's National Party will retain power comfortably after the May 6 voting for Parliament's dominant white chamber.

But polls suggest that the party's share of votes could drop sharply from the last white election in 1981, and that an alliance of pro-reform candidates could do well enough to force a significant realignment of white political forces.

None of the candidates, however, endorses the demands of black militants, made during more than two years of anti-apartheid unrest, for a one-man, one-vote system. Some black leaders say this makes the election irrelevant to any eventual solution.

Botha, 71 and believed to be contemplating retirement, called the election in January.

At the time, the Nationalists appeared to be in a strong position to defeat far-right parties who opposed even modest concessions to blacks. Soldiers and police, with state-of-emergency powers, had imposed calm in most black townships, reform moves appeared stalled and most whites joined in angrily rejecting foreign pressure to move faster.

Since then, the National Party has been jolted by an unprecedented series of high-level defections. It is the most serious challenge since the party of Dutch-descended Afrikaners won power in 1948, institutionalized long-standing practices of racial segregation and consolidated Afrikaner dominance for the first time since whites arrived in southern Africa in 1652.

Those quitting the party said they no longer believed the government was committed to genuine reform that would give blacks a significant national voice.

Three of the defectors — former Ambassador to Britain Denis Worrall, Parliament member Wynand Malan and businesswoman Esther Lategan — have formed an alliance and are running as independents against Nationalist President P.W. Botha, right, was awarded freedom of the city by the mayor of Boksburg, left, when he attended celebrations Saturday to mark the city's centennial. During his speech, Botha announced that the first Friday in May would henceforth be a public holiday called Workers Day. The black labor movement has for several years demanded that May 1, international labor day, be declared a paid holiday.

candidates. Their cause is supported by a group of dissident intellectuals from the University of Stellenbosch, the seat of Afrikaner learning.

The Nationalists have allowed more racial mixing in public places, marriages across the color line and freer movement of black workers and businesses to white cities. But they balk at scrapping laws compelling individuals to be registered in racial groups and mandating segregated residential areas — among the major under-innings of apartheid.

Whites to the left of the government say the remaining apartheid laws must go. But they agree with the Nationalists that any power-sharing arrangement with blacks should preserve whites' cultural and political rights.

Worrall, who quit his post in London in January, is challenging Constitutional Development Minister Chris Heunis, a possible successor to Botha and a principal architect of Nationalist policy.

Gas haunting Cameroon

YAOUNDE, Cameroon — An international scientific conference on the release of gas from Lake Nios that killed 1,746 people last August split on the causes of the disaster, but agreed that evacuees should not yet return to their villages.

Scientists met in Yaounde from Monday to Friday last week to discuss the catastrophe that struck Aug. 21 in northwestern Cameroon.

They agreed that about 9 p.m. on that day, an immense cloud of gas, mostly carbon dioxide, rose from the lake and spread through valleys up to 15 miles away.

Many residents of Nios, Souboun, Cha and Fang were asleep and died in their beds. Others died trying to flee. An additional 696 people were hospitalized and about 4,000 were evacuated.

Strikes hit schools, care

LUSAKA, Zambi — Missionaries, student nurses and other volunteers staffed state-run hospitals and clinics Saturday as nurses continued a strike for higher pay and compensation for caring for AIDS patients.

The Daily Mail newspaper said 40 children died because of lack of medical care due to the strike, but gave no details.

The strike, in its fourth day, followed a walkout by teachers from most government schools last month. The 38,000 teachers, who earn an average of $55 a month, are demanding 50 percent pay increases to counter inflation estimated at 600 percent annually.

Most primary and secondary schools have been closed by the strike. The government has offered unspecified salary increases and urged both teachers and nurses to return to work and negotiate through their union.

Threat stops Soviets

BUDAPEST, Hungary — A bomb scare forced a Soviet jetliner carrying 113 passengers and a crew of 11 to make an emergency landing in Budapest, state radio said Saturday.

The official MTI news agency had said the Aeroflot IL-62 made the unscheduled landing Friday after the pilot asked for clearance because of "suspicious" circumstances.

It made no mention of a bomb but said the passengers and crew were evacuated and a police search of the jetliner did not find anything unusual.

The brief state radio report did not say if the bomb scare was caused by a telephoned threat or give any further details.

MTI said the plane was on a flight from Rome to Moscow and departed for Moscow with the passengers and crew late Friday after remaining at the Budapest airport for more than six hours.

Texas must halt bonds rate drop

The degrading of Texas bonds — from triple-A to double-A — by Moody's Investors Service should shock the state Legislature into action.

The house, which is responsible for initiating tax bills, should begin immediately to overhaul the tax system.

House members should proceed along the lines recommended by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and State Comptroller Bob Bullock — to provide the revenues necessary to keep state services at acceptable levels and restore confidence in the state's ability to pay its bills.

So far, the House has taken only a half-step forward.

Covering in the face of a veto threat from Gov. Bill Clements, it has passed a measure to make permanent the temporary increases in sales and gasoline taxes approved in last year's special session.

That will raise about $2.9 billion during the 1988-89 biennium, which is all Gov. Clements says he is willing to approve. But is it enough?

We don't think so. And obviously neither does Moody's Investors Service.

"That $2.9 billion is not as much money as it sounds like when you consider the magnitude of the (state's) financial difficulties," said Claire Cohen, Moody's vice president in charge of state ratings.

The rating drop by Moody's follows similar action by the country's other major rating firm — Standard and Poor's.

Although a double-A rating is quite good, the drop will cost the state and many local entities millions of additional dollars in interest over the life of long-term bonds. Those local entities include school districts, which depend on the state's credit rating to finance long-term projects.

The reality is that the state has not addressed its deficit, which will reach almost $5 billion for the next two-year budget period if nothing is done. And making the temporary tax increases permanent does nothing for the current $1 billion shortage.

How will that affect services?

Among other things, Mr. Hobby says it will mean a $1 billion cut in educational funds.

In addition, the Department of Corrections, Department of Public Safety and other law-enforcement units will suffer severe cuts at a time when crime is soaring.

The answer to more revenues lies in broadening the sales-tax base to cover services, the fastest growing sector of the economy, and changing the franchise tax on business to make it more equitable and more of an incentive for development.

The Legislature needs to take those actions soon, too — before the rating services drop the state's bonds rating even further.

Military must be more accountable

Perhaps the secrecy and unaccountability of the U.S. military has gone a bit too far.

That's the observation we had this past week as a result of a comment made on the investigation into an Air Force jet crash that killed seven members of the elite Thunderhawks demonstration team.

The plane, a four-engine KC-135 tanker, crashed nine days ago at Fairchild Air Force Base, Spokane, Wash.

While flags were flying at half-staff and friends and family were in mourning for the victims, a 13-member panel was beginning its investigation into the cause of the fiery tragedy.

When the Associated Press reporter asked about the investigation, he was told, "We don't know what the cause is at this point, and when we do, we're not going to tell you. The cause will never be released."

Why?

Why don't the taxpayers have a right to know — if not in specific terms, at least in general terms?

Certainly taxpayers have a right to know if the cause resulted from human error or malfunctioning equipment. Or if drugs or alcohol were involved — particularly after drug tests were ordered for mechanics who serviced the tanker.

After all, whose money paid for that plane? And the air base where it was stationed? And whose money is paying the wages of those who work at the base and the members of the investigation team?

Isn't the Air Force's money or the Pentagon's money. It's our money that was collected from federal taxes.

We can foresee or understand reasons why the Air Force should be allowed to withhold the details of a particular crash cause. In some cases secrecy may be well justified. But we question the need and advisability of having a blanket policy against any accountability or report on crash causes.

To say that the cause will never be released — when the investigation is just beginning and a need for secrecy has not yet been established — is as flippant as the tone in which the answer was given to the reporter.

When military brass can take that kind of attitude, it sets the stage for all sorts of abuse. No wonder we hear stories about such events as the military buying $10 wrenches for $300 apiece. That indicates a lack of accountability as well.

The brass needs to be just as accountable to the public as junior officers are to the brass.

MAJOR REFORMS OF THE NEW SOVIET OPENNESS:

ESTABLISH NEW TIES

Crash and statistics alter attitude toward seat belts

By DARRELL BERKHEIMER

In the past two years, my attitude toward the mandatory vehicle seat belt law has changed somewhat.

Eighteen months ago I considered the law an infringement on my freedom of choice. And, to a great extent, I still think it is.

I know it's wise to wear a seat belt. I just didn't like being forced to do it. But had I not been forced, I might not have acquired the habit of doing it.

I also know it's unwise to smoke or drink alcohol, to use too much salt, to drink too much coffee or soda, and to spend too much time in the hot summer sun when dressed only in a bathing suit.

Still, I might do those things on occasion.

But because I might do something bad for myself, does that mean we need a law against each of those things — to protect us from our own choices?

I agree that the government should require the installation of seat belts in autos so we have the option of using them. And I agree with legislation requiring safety seats and belts for little ones incapable of making the right choices for themselves.

But don't we need to take responsibility for ourselves and our own actions? Aren't we allowing government to go too far in taking over our responsibilities?

All parents know that we must try to educate our children against doing what may hurt them. We come to realize, however, that our children, as they grow older, must be allowed to make their own choices and learn from their mistakes.

Government should legislate against safety hazards in schools, factories and other public places. But it's wrong when the long arm of bureaucracy reaches into our private automobiles or homes — unless what we do in them poses a grave threat to others.

My failure to wear a seat belt, however, does no harm to anyone else but me.

Berky's babblings

My concern, then, is over what might come next.

Will new laws ration use of salt, sugar and artificial sweeteners?

Will we have a law prescribing the placement of non-slip doormats and mats in the bottom of our showers and tubs? And the establishment of a bureaucracy of inspectors to come into our homes and check?

It's evident, of course, that making the wrong choices in many instances can shorten our lives or foster injuries. But does that mean we must have a law in each case to save us from ourselves?

These possibilities basically point to a fundamental misunderstanding about government's role in taking care of its citizens.

The government's job is to present educational reports on the dangers in life. But it isn't the government's job to protect us from ourselves when we choose to ignore those dangers.

If a 30-year dosage of an artificial sweetener kills two monkeys, and a government study determines that continued use of that sweetener may be hazardous to our health, the government has done its job by warning of the potential danger.

The choice, however, should be ours — particularly if the continued use of sugar is more dangerous to someone than the artificial sweetener.

Each time something is mandatory or prohibited, we lose more freedom in our lives. And often we lose more taxpayers' dollars to the bureaucracies established to administer such legislation.

Government has an obligation to identify the hazards and warn us about them, but it has no right to take away our right to be foolish or to live dangerously — as long as what we do causes no injuries or danger to others.

That's the philosophy I've had ever since the seat belt law was proposed. And it sounds pretty good, doesn't it?

But that seat belt argument has a major flaw in it — as indicated by recent traffic statistics. The statistics indicate that the seat belt law has reduced both traffic deaths and the numbers of severe highway injuries.

Those statistics mean that others are affected by our failure to wear seat belts — because higher death and severe injury rates yield higher insurance premiums for all. Eighteen months ago I called for repeal of the seat belt law. Now I'm not so sure.

Since then, however, another seat belts issue has developed. Should they be required in school buses?

On that issue, I'm no longer an unbiased observer. My daughter was on the school bus involved in the accident in Big Spring Wednesday morning.

She said the bus driver had little choice in the accident. She said a car darted in front of the bus, forcing a quick stop that resulted in another auto hitting the rear of the bus.

First the students were thrown forward by the quick stop, then backward as a result of the hit from behind.

After hearing how the students were thrown around as a result of the relatively minor accident, I no longer have any doubts about the issue. I'm now very definitely in favor of seat belts on school buses.

Besides, are our school children mature enough to make that choice for themselves?

Iran stirs Cabinet battle

By JACK ANDERSON and JOSEPH SPEAR

WASHINGTON — Commerce Department officials apparently haven't been reading the newspapers lately. They want to license the sale of sensitive high-technology equipment to Iran.

The Pentagon, its antenna tuned to the public's distaste for the secret sale of arms to Iran, has been trying to kill the proposed sale of sophisticated computers and telecommunications equipment to the regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. Defense Department officials had hoped to bury the whole idea before it became public and embarrassed the Reagan administration.

The four proposed sales that Commerce officials are promoting involve only a little more than $1 million. But they would give aid and comfort to a government that has done everything it could to humiliate the United States, which it refers to as "the great Satan."

The deal that infuriates Pentagon officials the most is the proposed sale of a computer to the Islamic News Agency, the source of Tehran's most virulent anti-American propaganda.

We should send them a mimeograph machine, maybe, but no computers," a Pentagon official quipped to our associate Lucette

Jack Anderson

Lagnado.

The Pentagon also objects to Commerce's proposed approval of a license to sell equipment to Tehran's electric utility, which presumably would help prevent the power failures that repeatedly plague the Iranian capital.

The two other proposed sales that Commerce wants approved are telecommunications equipment for the Iranian phone company and computers for a university that uses American-made units.

Commerce granted export licenses for all four equipment systems last December, and forwarded them to the Pentagon, which promptly vetoed the licenses on national security grounds.

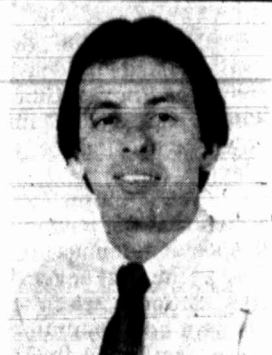

When informed of this, Commerce in effect replied that none of the items has a military application, and suggested that the Pentagon mind its own business.

Since then, the argument has been crackling back and forth between the two agencies. The Pentagon's view is that Commerce's interpretation of the Export Administration Act is too narrow, and that technically non-military items should be embargoed if they contribute to the smooth functioning of a government that is hostile to the United States.

Commerce officials argue that the Pentagon is overstepping its authority by invoking national security in a situation that doesn't involve merchandise that can be used militarily. As support for their position, they cite President Reagan's recommendation in his State of the Union message that the high-tech export policy be reviewed.

This is just the latest battle in a long bureaucratic war between Commerce, which traditionally wants to encourage U.S. exports, and the Pentagon, which wants to retain its veto power over exports it considers dangerous to U.S. security.

Hispanics also need AIDS data

By JESSE TREVINO

Hispanics are no less immune to the threat of AIDS than anyone else. But a special void needs to be filled by state officials and Hispanics themselves so that this disease does not find a special niche in the Hispanic community.

This matter is of serious consequence. If a significant segment of the population in Texas is without adequate information, then the state may have a significant health problem with that segment in the future.

My beef at the moment is with the mere trickle of information coming from Spanish language radio and television on the subject. To be fair to those stations and to readers, I have not surveyed every Spanish-language U.S. radio and television station.

Nevertheless, I am concerned that a significant minority within the Hispanic population may not know the circumstances of this modern-day scourge.

The lack of basic information on health and sanitary standards in some segments of the Hispanic community already make the incidences of some communicable diseases greater among Hispanics than the rest of the population.

AIDS could be especially tragic for Hispanics since nearly half of the Hispanic population is about 19 years old — just as they may be sexually active.

The lack of information on Spanish-language media can be understood, if not totally excused, because of a powerful, seemingly insoluble phenomenon within the Hispanic community.

The phenomenon is rooted in a deep conservatism that in itself is not necessarily bad — until it becomes wholly counterproductive, yielding a fundamentalist almost puritanical threat.

I remember when, in 1980, as a young reporter in Corpus Christi, I was astounded by a brouhaha that occurred concerning a program on the Spanish-language television station. The program was no more sexually explicit than anything else seen on any of the other networks.

Seven years later, Spanish-language television stations across the country continue to pull or not show programs that might offend viewers.

That's fine. A public can — and should — rebel against tasteless television. But should that prevent Spanish-language media from reporting fully the AIDS story?

I believe the answer lies, in part, in a Hispanic sense of insecurity concerning sexuality, or at least explicit sexuality.

I marvel at how conservative the Hispanic really is. There is a great discrepancy between the values, for example, of the politically active Hispanic cadres of the Democratic party and the community they purportedly represent.

That kind of discrepancy has given rise to the mythology surrounding the closeness of the Hispanic family. That has always been a mysterious assertion to me, since Hispanics reflect the same mobility as other Americans; their divorce rate approaches the national average and their generational gap — widened by language and culture — makes any generational gap among Anglos pale in comparison.

When many Hispanics still dream of returning to lost fatherlands, when Hispanics enforce family closeness by parental authority more than emotional attachment, when Hispanics reveal fragile and frail insecurities about such common questions and issues as homosexuality, it is easy to see why they would not want to know about it.

Consequently, I doubt if Hispanic viewers will see very many informationally-related stories about AIDS, condom commercials or any discussion on the issues of the day such as surrogate motherhood or testtube babies.

A later column will deal with the influence of the Catholic Church on this matter.

Jesse Trevino writes on Hispanic social and political issues.

Floridian pledges final $1.3 million

By GIL BROYLES
Associated Press Writer

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Oral Roberts, facing what he calls a deadline from God to raise $8 million by March 31 or die, said he planned to fast and pray for the remaining money, but a Florida man says he'll donate the final $1.3 million.

Jerry Collins, who owns two greyhound racing tracks, signed a personal check to Roberts on Saturday morning at his office at the Sanford-Orlando Kennel Club, said publicist Phil Denis.

"He saw a story in the Orlando Sentinel this morning out of Tulsa saying Roberts was $1.3 million short of his goal and he was going to retreat to a prayer tower and fast until he raised the money," Denis said. "He was touched by it. He gave me one of his personal checks and said to make it out for $1.3 million."

The track publicist said he spoke with Oral Roberts' son, Richard, Saturday afternoon.

"Richard said he will be flying in first thing tomorrow," Denis said. "We've set up a luncheon meeting to actually hand over the check."

"I don't think religion enters into this," he said. "It's the education thing."

Collins, of Sarasota, was away from his office

ORAL ROBERTS
... to the tower

and unavailable for comment Saturday, Denis said.

He has given money in the past for educational causes. Several years ago, he bought the Clyde Beatty-Cole Brothers Circus and donated it to Florida State University. Recently he helped New College, an alternative school in Sarasota, pay for a $1 million new library.

No one from Roberts' organization could immediately be reached for comment on Collins' donation. Telephone calls Saturday afternoon to Roberts spokeswoman Jan Dargatz were answered by a recording that said the evangelist would have no comment on the situation until April 1.

Earlier Saturday, university officials prepared to close the gleaming 200-foot tower to the public and promised to keep the media away from the 69-year-old Roberts during what is expected to be a weeklong series of visits to the tower.

The pioneer television evangelist has been at the center of controversy since he said on his national television program Jan. 4 that God told him his life would end at the close of March if the money for medical missionary scholarships is not raised by then. At that time, he said he was $4.5 million from the goal.

Texans hope pope's image of shepherd and teacher

DALLAS (AP) — Catholic bishops in Texas say they hope that Pope John Paul II will project the image of a loving shepherd as well as that of disciplinarian and teacher when he visits the United States.

Bishops from nine cities on the tour, which includes San Antonio, are meeting with the Pope and other Vatican officials this week to discuss the visit.

The meeting follows the March 10 document issued by the Vatican condemning most forms of scientific intervention in human reproduction and the crackdown last year on Seattle Archbishop Raymond Hunthausen and theologian Charles Curran for liberal teachings.

Archbishop Patrick Flores, the San Antonio-based spiritual leader of Texas Catholics, is among those meeting in Rome.

Some Texas bishops said the pope has had an image of a disciplinarian and teacher in recent months and they hope that he will project the compassionate side of his papacy during his visit in September.

"The church has many faces," said Bishop Leroy Matthiesen of Amarillo, "and right now it's choosing to present a face of a very authoritative teacher. We need that. But that's not the only face of the church."

Matthiesen noted that John Paul reached out to children and people in wheelchairs during his 1979 visit to the United States. He said this visit also needs to project the nurturing aspect of the church.

Bishop Michael Sheehan of the Lubbock Diocese agreed that there are problems in the American church, but said the church is still doing well.

He said he is glad the pope speaks out on the importance of moral values.

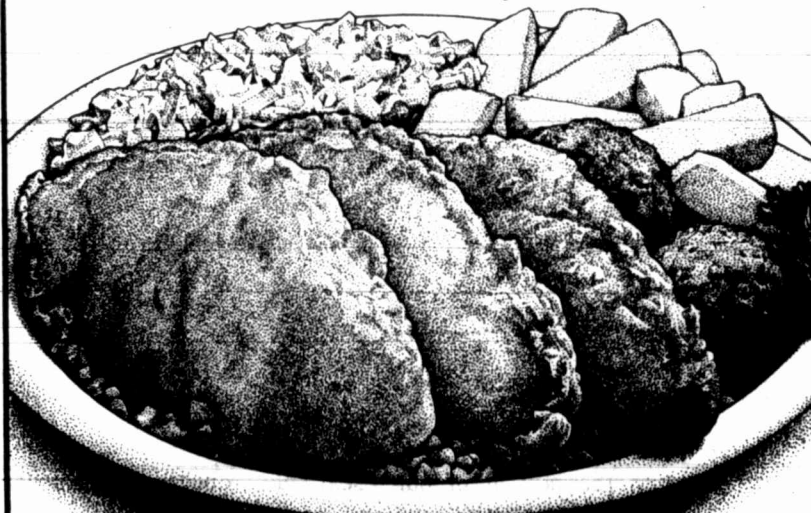

"But we must be encouraged and affirmed, as well as taught," Sheehan said. "There's a good balance that needs to be maintained."

Teen's death suit settled

SAN ANTONIO — A federal judge has approved an out-of-court settlement under which the city of Devine will pay $100,000 to the family of a Medina County teen-ager shot to death by lawmen there three years ago.

In a hearing Friday, Chief U.S. District Judge William Sessions heard testimony from the family of Rogelio Lopez Jr., killed in 1984 after a high-speed chase by Medina County sheriff's deputies and police officers from Devine and Hondo.

Devine officials agreed to pay $100,000 that will be divided between Lopez's wife, his 2-year-old son and his parents.

The Medina County town was one of three defendants named in a civil rights suit filed in April 1985 by Lopez's family.

Lopez, 17, was shot in his back by a Medina County deputy sheriff after a high-speed chase through rural Medina County. The chase ended after the tires on the stolen pickup Lopez was driving were shot out.

Officers at the time claimed Lopez threatened them with a pair of scissors.

The city of Hondo agreed to a $20,000 out-of-court settlement in December, 1980 city attorney Hugh Meyer said.

No agreement has yet been reached with the Medina County sheriff's department, former Sheriff Donald Campsey and Deputy Sheriff Richard Wells, who was identified as having fired the fatal shot.

Dispute halts nuke talks

AUSTIN (AP) — Scheduled talks on a possible settlement of the city's lawsuit against a Houston utility over the South Texas Nuclear Project have been postponed because of disagreement on key issues.

Houston, Lighting and Power Co. and city officials were scheduled to meet in closed session on Sunday and Monday, but the meetings were postponed indefinitely on Friday.

Mother still childless despite court's ruling

HOUSTON (AP) — A year-old boy at the center of a bitter custody battle was not turned over to his natural mother despite an appeals court ruling in her favor.

The mother, Tina Outlaw Perez, said she was angry but not surprised her son was not delivered Friday night for a court-ordered weekend visit.

"Well I guess I was more or less prepared for it. It's just like history repeating itself all over again," Mrs. Perez said.

She lost a bitter custody battle over her son, Josiah Outlaw, last year in a Houston family court. Under that ruling, Harold and Pam Williamson of Denton gained control of the boy.

Mrs. Perez lived with the couple during her pregnancy in 1982. She maintained she was sedated after giving birth and did not remember agreeing to give up the child.

The Williamsons have contended they raised the child ever since Mrs. Perez gave him up and the child should continue living with them. But an appeals court reversed the jury's decision this week, apparently clearing the way for Mrs. Perez to regain custody.

The Williamsons were scheduled to turn the boy over to Mrs. Perez for a weekend visit — part of the terms of the original family court ruling.

Mrs. Perez said she had hoped the transfer would occur normally so she could retain custody of her son, but the couple didn't show up.

"We're going to take whatever legal actions are available in proceeding with the courts and taking criminal action against those who are responsible," said Marian Rosen, Mrs. Perez' attorney.

NASA telephone bills skyrocket

HOUSTON (AP) — About $3,000 worth of unauthorized phone calls to telephone services using the 900 area code and 976 prefix were made at the Johnson Space Center earlier this year, a NASA spokesman said.

Officials at the space center are conferring with telephone company representatives in an effort to have the charges reduced, said Doug Ward, a National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman.

He said the phone system has been reprogrammed to block the toll calls.

"We have not been able to tie the calls to any individual, but if we identify them we do expect disciplinary action to be taken," Ward said.

The unauthorized calls were made between December and March, he said.

Prison ease suggested

HUNTSVILLE — The Texas prison system, closed eight times this year because of overcrowding, should get some relief soon, a prison official said.

Meanwhile, state officials have declined to trigger emergency declarations that would have speeded paroles and enabled the Texas Department of Corrections to accept convicts for longer periods. The prison system has been operating under an open-shut cycle of being open two days and closed five.

"There's a whole series of things that hopefully will come together in the near future to help get us out of this cycle," John Byrd, executive director of the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles, said Friday.

He said the overcrowded conditions will ease between now and the end of this fiscal year with the addition of 300 beds to the prison's legal capacity and the budgeting of $4 million to develop another 1,000 pre-release transfer beds, which should be available by Aug. 31.

Dallas man free on bond

DALLAS — Dallas Park and Recreation Director Jack W. Robinson was free after posting $400 in bonds on misdemeanor charges of evading arrest and indecent exposure.

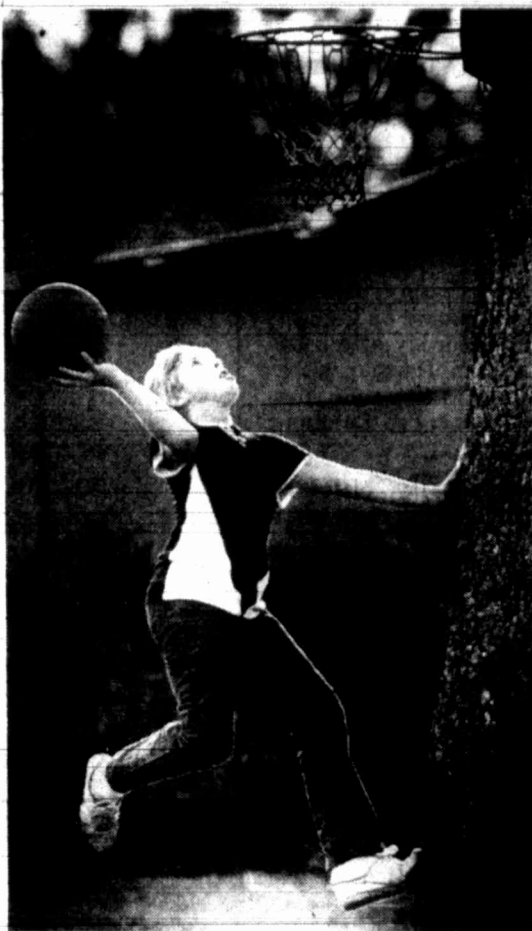

Robinson, 55, posted bond at Lew Sterrett Justice Center on Friday, said Dallas County Sheriff's Department spokesman Jim Ewell.

The director appeared voluntarily after warrants were issued Friday morning. He was indicted Tuesday by a Dallas County grand jury.

An initial appearance before Judge Randall Isenberg has been set for April 3.

The charges stem from an police officer's report that he saw two men in a park restroom with their pants loosened. The officer reported the men fled.

Robinson has denied the charges, saying he was elsewhere at the time of the alleged incident.

Wills

Impact could be dramatic

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Returning a verdict that could dramatically change how wills are administered in Texas, a probate court jury sided with a San Antonio widow who sued the executors of her husband's $34 million estate for negligence.

Although exact damages have not been tabulated, it is estimated Emma Elizabeth Willeford, 57, widow of San Antonio developer B.R. Willeford, will recover between $14 million and $20 million if the jury's findings are upheld.

The jury found negligence on the part of the San Antonio law firm that drew up the will, provided one of the executors and acted as attorney for the estate, Austin attorney Frank Ikard said.

Lawyers said the case's most significant feature was a ruling by Probate Judge Keith Burris that an exculpatory clause, standard in Texas wills to shield executors from liability, does not provide legal protection.

"This is the first case where a judge has said that an exculpatory clause is just not valid to protect the executor of a will from being sued for charges of liability," Ikard said.

Ikard's assessment was confirmed by an opponent in the case.

"If the judge is correct, potentially this will wreak havoc on the practice of probate law," said Ralph Langley, a member of Foster, Lewis, Langley, Gardner and Banack, the law firm sued by Willeford.

"Nobody is going to serve — banks, trust companies or individuals. Would you, if every time you made a move, sold a property or collected a debt, you knew you might be sued for negligence?" Langley asked.

A judgment will not be entered until Burris rules on the verdict that was returned Friday. He has authority to accept it, modify it or throw it out and set a different judgment.

The case, filed in 1985, pitted Mrs. Willeford against one of San Antonio's most respected law firms and the two executors of her husband's estate, Jim Willingham, who practices with Langley's firm, and David Bynum, one of her husband's ex-partners.

In finding for Mrs. Willeford on all points, the jury determined the defendants had been negligent in how they drafted the will, selected its executors and administered the estate.

Central to Mrs. Willeford's case were allegations of conflicts of interest among the defendants. The law firm, for example, was accused not only of drafting the will and then acting as attorney for the estate but also of naming one of its members as an executor.

Farm loan rates will be reduced

AUSTIN (AP) — Interest rates on long-term farm and ranch related loans will be reduced in June, the Federal Land Bank announced.

Don Rogge, president of the Federal Land Bank of Texas announced the rate change Friday at the bank's annual meeting of 500 delegates representing 100,000 Texas farmers and ranchers.

New variable rates will be 10.25 percent on farm and ranch loans and 10.50 percent on rural residence loans and farm related business loans, Rogge said.

Rogge also announced a new loan program the Federal Land Bank hopes to start in the next 60 days. The program would offer lower interest rates for loans to buy rural real estate.

The Federal land bank makes loans for 35-year terms. The new program would provide a fixed rate for the first 10 years of the loan, the land bank said in a news release.

WOULD YOU BELIEVE... TED TURNER?

THAT'S RIGHT! The same man who in 1985 postured himself as a "family values" conservative when he sided with Senator Jesse Helms in an attempt to buy CBS. At the time, Turner called the networks "the greatest enemies America has ever had," because they "are constantly tearing down everything that has made this country great." When the attempt failed, his political position changed. He dropped his conservative facade and made a complete ideological turnaround to gain new political power. Ted Turner became a one man crusader for "peace" on Soviet terms.

Now, Turner is continuing his new quest for power. In response to ABC's mini-series "Amerika," which depicted life in the United States after a Soviet takeover, he ordered his WTBS cable station to air six hours of pro-Communist propaganda films, one even produced by the Soviet Union!

HOW LEFTIST IS TED TURNER?

In his own words:

- "I expected Castro to be some horrible person, but he was a great guy."
- "I found [the Communist] leaders very reasonable."
- "I happen to love everybody. Like Jesus, I've made my peace with the Soviets. They're not my enemies."
- "I have come to the conclusion from studying it from a global circumstance that we are the greatest problem in the world."
- "He's [President Reagan] picking a fight with one nation of 2 million people in Nicaragua, less people than there are in Atlanta."
- "[The Reagan Administration is] probably the worst administration in the history of this country."

If you are a cable subscriber, next time you consider watching WTBS remember these comments by Ted Turner. Then tune him out.

THE TIME HAS COME FOR AN ALTERNATIVE

...Future Plans

There are a number of senior citizens in Big Spring and its surrounding communities that we at St. Mary's Episcopal Retirement Homes, Inc. have not been able to help because they did not meet the requirements of being able to live independently. Perhaps they needed help with housekeeping, or meal preparation, or transportation, or in remembering when to take their medication. The only other choice for many of these people is a nursing home where they often pay for services they do not need and live in an institutional environment which they do not like. But do they really belong in a nursing home? We think not. The time has come for a dignified alternative for those persons that need some assistance in the activities of daily living but do not require nursing care.

A Little Luxury. A Lot of Love.

Imagine a deluxe, private studio or a two-room suite with a full private bath, individual climate control, luxurious carpeting and an emergency call system, personalized with some of one's own treasured furnishings. Add to that the following basic services:

Superb restaurant-style dining three times daily in an elegantly appointed dining room;

Weekly housekeeping service and linen changes (resident's own linens);

All utilities (including Cable TV) except telephone;

Transportation to shopping, banks and churches;

Planned leisure-time activities;

Assistance in the self-administration of prescription medications;

Periodic measurement of pulse, blood pressure and temperature; and Availability of a Licensed Vocational Nurse on duty 24 hours a day, just in case.

Imagine all of the above for one affordable monthly fee with no initial investment or entrance fees.

Tailor-Made Range of Services

Need a little more help? No problem. Choose from a variety of optional services at reasonable rates that will give you just what you're looking for. Services such as:

Daily bed making;

Personal laundry weekly;

Housekeeping services and linen changes twice weekly;

Assistance with bathing, dressing and personal care;

Services of a Personal Shopper weekly;

Escort service to and from the dining room;

Temporary meal delivery service; and Special transportation

"Feels Like Home", But Better!

Imagine all this without long, "sterile" hallways, glaring surfaces, cold fluorescent lighting and lots of white uniforms. Instead, picture just the right combination of your own home's atmosphere and that of finer hotels. You're picturing Canterbury West!

Dignity. Comfort. Security.

This is our latest dream ... to provide a range of services that will maximize the independence and dignity of those who need some assistance, but do not need nursing care ... to do such in luxurious, homelike surroundings ... to offer the comfort of friends and the security of supervision by a caring, dedicated staff ... to postpone or, in some cases, eliminate the guilt or fear of having to make the "nursing home decision."

Let Us Know

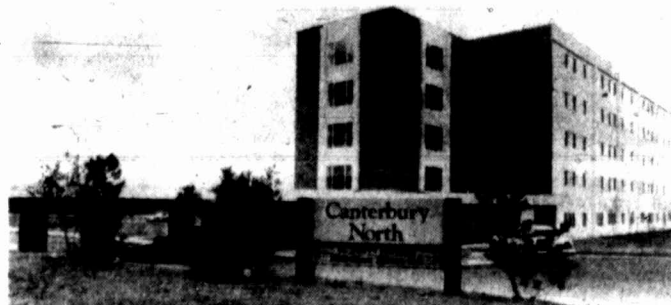

If these accommodations sound like the answer to your prayers, or those of someone you love, it is important that we hear from you. Please take the time to complete the information on the clip-out form and mail it to us as soon as possible.

Past Accomplishments...

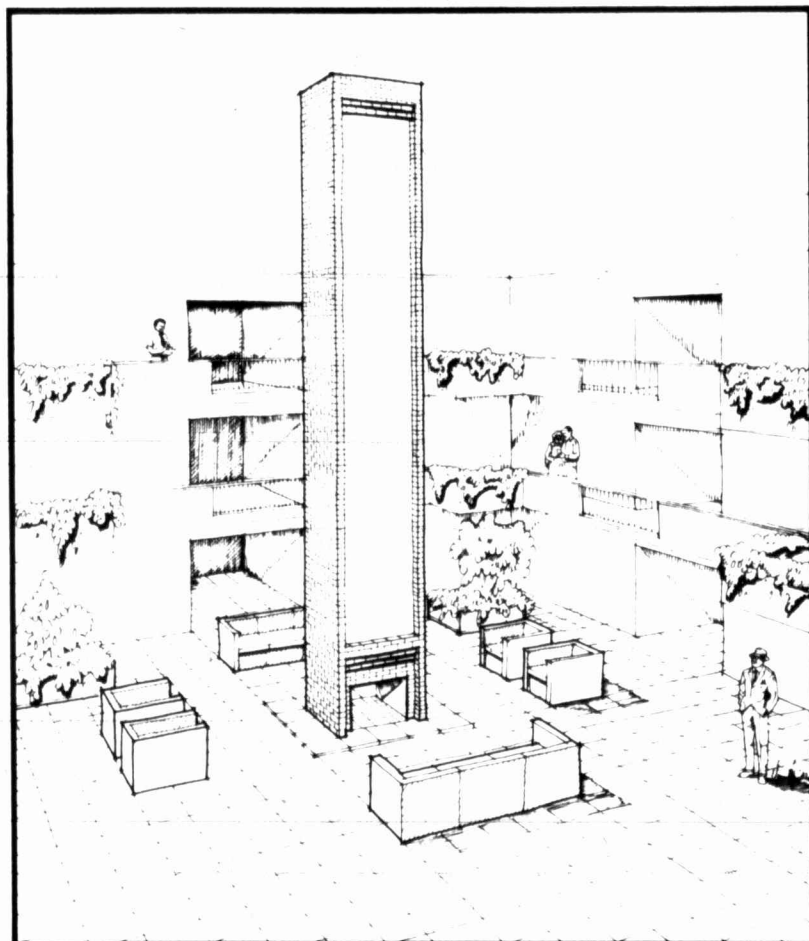

St. Mary's Episcopal Retirement Homes, Inc. is a non-profit corporation that was formed in 1976 as a community ministry of St. Mary's Episcopal Church of Big Spring. The two buildings, containing a total of 179 apartments, have maintained an occupancy rate of 100%. Through more than seven years of actual operations, St. Mary's Episcopal Retirement Homes, Inc. has earned a solid reputation for its care and concern for older adults.

Legal, unalterable visa means doctor is out

FAIRFIELD (AP) — Residents are rallying behind the town's Chilean-born surgeon who has been unable to qualify for amnesty because he entered the country on a legal, but unalterable, visa.

A group of people led by pharmacist Bill Daniel and backed by Mayor Monte Cole says the town needs Dr. Oscar Raul Espinoza of Chile. Efforts to keep the town of 3,500 people's only surgeon have included a petition drive and vigorous lobbying of federal officials.

Fairfield is about 90 miles south of Dallas on I-45.

"We've done all I know what to do," Cole said. "People here just find it ridiculous that illegal aliens can stay and our doctor must go. He is such a valuable asset to the community and he is being forced to leave."

Espinoza does not qualify for amnesty under the new immigration rules because in 1977 he arrived legally on an unalterable, two-year student visa to study advanced surgical techniques at Baylor University Medical School in Dallas.

"I don't think it's fair," Espinoza said. "If I was in the country illegally, I would have the amnesty right now. You give amnesty for one group and you don't get a slight loosening of the rules for the other. But that's the way it is."

U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials say Freestone County's need is not a good enough reason to change his legal status.

Fairfield has six doctors, but they serve a wide rural area. Espinoza, the town's only physician fluent in Spanish, serves Hispanic patients from as far as Corsicana, 40 miles away.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen has introduced legislation specifically aimed at securing permanent residence status for Espinoza and his family. The bill failed in 1981 and in 1985. Bentsen reintroduced the bill Tuesday, but Espinoza said he doesn't expect it to be successful.

He has put his house up for sale and plans to move to Santiago, Chile by the end of the year.

Report says base brass are wasteful

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A team that investigated Kelly Air Force Base plans to present a highly critical report next week, accusing base officials of wasting millions in government dollars, the San Antonio Light reported Saturday.

"We're going to lay this out for (Defense Secretary Caspar) Weinberger," an unnamed source told the newspaper in a telephone interview from Washington.

The investigative team was made up of congressional staffers and Pentagon financial management officials who studied reports that base officials may have wasted up to $15 million in awarding about $85 million in contracts to provide spare parts for the C-5B cargo plane.

The newspaper's source, who asked not to be identified, said Kelly officials admitted there may be some problems with the way contracts were awarded and said they would look into it.

"They did a marginal mea culpa," the source said. "They admit they may have screwed up."

Kelly spokeswoman Phebe Brown would say only that base officials cooperated with officials when they visited the base Thursday.

"We answered their questions and explained the rationale for our decisions," Ms. Brown said in a prepared statement.

The team was investigating reports that Kelly officials violated Pentagon procedures by awarding the spare parts contract to Lockheed Corp., the prime contractor for the giant cargo plane.

Recent Pentagon initiatives require that government purchasers go right to the subcontractors that manufacture the spare parts, rather than going through a prime contractor.

Prime contractors, acting as middlemen, will generally mark up the price of the parts.

The six-person delegation that visited the base Thursday consisted of staff members of the House Energy and Commerce Committee and Pentagon officials.

Dividing the pie is topic

MIAMI (AP) — Financial officials from 44 nations Saturday began discussing a proposal that critics say would give the United States veto power over how billions of dollars in loans to Latin America will be divided.

Saturday's committee sessions were a prelude of the opening session Monday of the 28th annual meeting of the Inter-American Development Bank, which is expected to draw 3,000 people.

Many of the sessions Saturday concerned a proposal by the United States to exclude debtors from decisions on loans granted by the bank, which channels about $3 billion a year in loans throughout Latin America and the Caribbean.

The loans help support small and medium-scale projects affecting environment, energy, agriculture, transportation and health.

U.S. Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III is expected to speak on the Latin American debt problem and the Reagan administration plan for economic growth in the region, which he wrote.

U.S. officials want to stop the practice of allowing debtor nations to help decide how the loans will be used.

"The people who put up most of the funds of the bank feel that they should have a greater say in how those funds are spent," said Michael F. Curtin, executive vice president of the bank and a U.S. Treasury appointee.

However, many U.S. allies have said they don't support the Reagan administration's proposal.

Balloon disaster kills one

SUMMIT PARK, Utah (AP) — A hot air balloon collided with electrical wires Saturday and its gondola plunged 50 feet to the ground, killing one person and injuring eight, authorities said.

The balloon, owned by Balloon the Rockies Inc., apparently lost altitude for unknown reasons about 11 a.m. and blew into the high wires about one mile east of this town in the Wasatch Mountains, the Summit County sheriff's department said.

"Apparently, they got into some electrical wiring and somehow detached the basket, which fell to the ground," said sheriff's dispatcher Christy Moore.

The injured were evacuated by air medical helicopters to several area hospitals, Moore said. A woman was in critical condition with head and internal injuries, and the other seven victims had less severe injuries, according to hospital spokesmen.

The dead man's identity was withheld pending notification of relatives.

The accident triggered scattered power outages in Summit Park, 20 miles east of Salt Lake City, and nearby Park City, but electrical service was restored by early afternoon, authorities said.

A man answering the telephone at Balloon the Rockies, located in Park City, confirmed the excursion balloon was one of the company's.

Tar Heels' bid

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Jim Boeheim, maintaining he had no monkey on his back, finally is going to the NCAA Final Four as head coach of the Syracuse Orangemen.

Boeheim, in his 11th season as at Syracuse, guided the 10th-ranked Orangemen past No. 2 North Carolina 79-75 Saturday for the East Regional title and a trip to New Orleans.

"Making the Final Four is why everybody is in this," said Boeheim, who was part of the last Syracuse Final Four team in 1975 as an assistant coach. "I'm not a better coach than I was yesterday."

It was Boeheim's way of saying he doesn't think he or his program has gotten enough respect through the years.

Syracuse, which has a reputation of blowing big games, had to shake off second-half North Carolina rallies. The triumph brought the Orangemen's record to 30-6 and a spot in the national semifinals against Providence, a team Syracuse beat twice during the Big East Conference regular season.

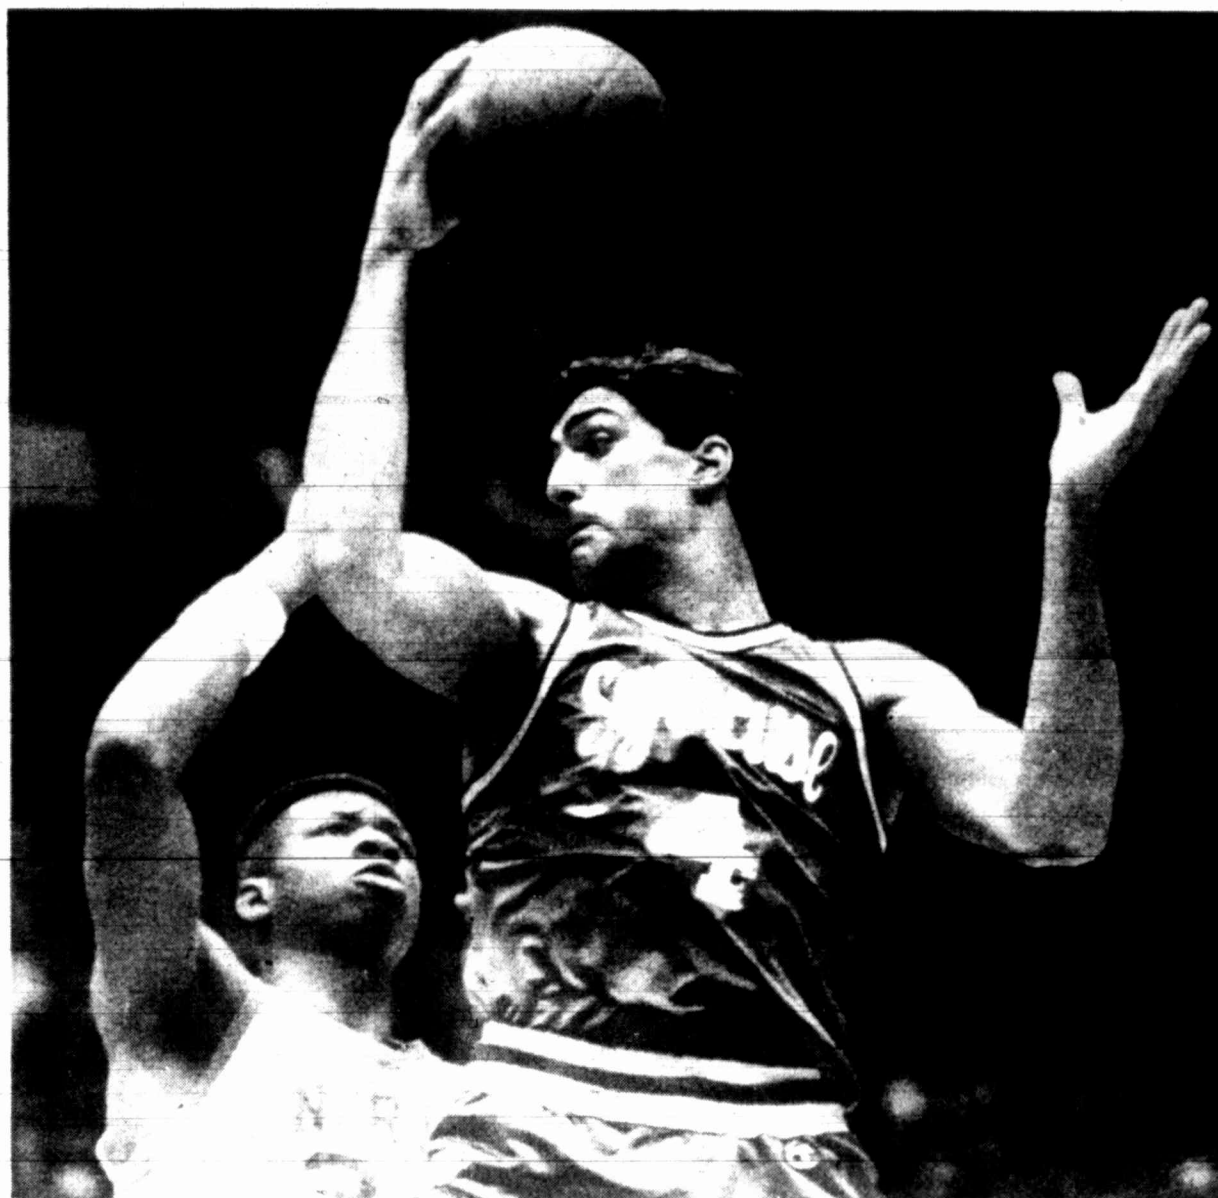

"I thought the first half was the best we've ever rebounded," Boeheim said, referring to the 29-12 advantage. "After the Big East tournament (including a championship game loss to Georgetown), I said we had to rebound better and shoot free throws better, but we regressed on the free throws."

Overall, Syracuse outrebounded North Carolina 43-32 as 6-foot-9 freshman Derrick Coleman grabbed 14 rebounds and Rony Seikaly 11.

Seikaly, a 6-10 junior center who had been mostly a disappointment to Boeheim until this season, was named the tourney's outstanding player.

Seikaly, who scored 33 points in a regional semifinal victory over Florida, hit 11-of-15 shots from the field and scored 26 points against North Carolina.

North Carolina's Dean Smith, who has coached the Tar Heels to regional titles 10 times in the past 21 years, said, "Rony Seikaly was tough to handle inside and Coleman really hurt us on the backboards. I thought we'd come back to win, but we ran out of time."

Kenny Smith, the senior All-America guard, led the North Carolina rally, scoring 20 of his 25 points in the second half.

Dean Smith added, "This was a great North Carolina basketball team — one of the finest we've ever had."

The Orangemen, the No. 2 seed in the East behind North Carolina, never trailed and extended a 40-31 halftime margin to 53-38 with 15:41 to go.

But the Tar Heels put on a 16-4 run, including 11 straight points, cutting the deficit to 57-54.

Again, Syracuse took charge, with Seikaly working inside. A field goal by Seikaly gave the Orangemen a 70-61 lead with 6:02 remaining.

Smith hit a three-point play and then a 3-point goal with 2:01 remaining, reducing Syracuse's lead to 76-73.

After Syracuse's Sherman Douglas and Derrick Coleman each missed free throws on one-and-one situations, Greg Monroe made two free throws for a 78-73 lead. Smith scored unmolested with 13 seconds left, making it 78-75.

After Douglas hit one free throw, Smith missed a 3-pointer with four seconds left.

Smith finished with 25 points, 20 in the second half.

Providence again divine

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Providence proved it had more than the 3-point bomb in its arsenal Saturday, using a strong inside game to beat Big East Conference rival Georgetown, the nation's fourth-ranked team, 88-73, and advance to college basketball's Final Four.

The Friars, who had lived by the 3-point basket in winning three earlier tournament games, hit only five of nine attempts from long range Saturday, four by substitute Darryl Wright, who had a career-high 20 points.

"That weapon was not going to be available to us today," Providence Coach Rick Pitino said. "We only had one day to prepare, to change our entire philosophy in order to win."

"I told them that 90 percent of the time this team has to play a certain way, but today we have to change."

The Hoyas' defense had been designed to take away the 3-point shot in three earlier meetings between the teams this season, two of which were won by Georgetown.

Wright scored 11 points in a 28-11 burst late in the first half that helped the Friars build a 15-point halftime lead against a team that had thrived on comebacks this season.

"I wrote on the board at halftime, 'They're the best comeback team in America,'" Pitino said.

"We were playing on a lot of emotion," said Wright, who had averaged only 5.9 points per game and had scored only 13 in the three previous games against the Hoyas.

"Everybody was trying to get to New Orleans," he said of the site of the Final Four next Saturday.

"I think we saw Providence one time too many," Georgetown Coach John Thompson said. "They played with the kind of intensity that I'd expect."

"We never got into the kind of flow we'd like to have gotten into, and I've always said, when a team doesn't play well offensively, I always attribute it to the opponents' defense," Thompson added.

The Friars, 25-8, built an 18-point second half lead over the Big East champions, and refused to give in to the Hoyas' relentless defensive pressure in claiming the championship in the NCAA Southeast Regional tournament.

Guard Billy Donovan, who had led the Friars to their three earlier tournament victories, served as a decoy for most of the game, taking only five field goal attempts.

Donovan still matched Wright's 20 points, 16 at the free throw line on 18 attempts.

The setbac snapped a 14-game winning streak for the Hoyas, who finished 29-5 and failed to reach the Final Four for the fourth time in six years.

Providence will go to New Orleans for a national semifinal game against Syracuse, the champion of the East Regional. Tenth-ranked Syracuse, also of the Big East Conference, defeated No. 2 North Carolina 79-75 in the East Regional title game Saturday.

The Friars, who beat No. 9 Alabama 103-82 Thursday night, broke a 26-26 on a steal by Carlton Screen, who drove between two defenders for a layup with 6:52 left in the first half.

That put the Friars ahead to stay, starting the 28-11 run that produced a 54-37 halftime lead. Screen contributed nine points in the run.

All-American Reggie Williams scored 25 points for the Hoyas.

Steve Wright, another reserve who played a key role, scored 12 points for the Friars, including 10 in a row in the first half, and David Kipper had 11.

Mark Tillmon was the only other Hoya in double figures with 10.

The Hoyas had beaten Providence in two of three previous meetings this season, including an 84-66 decision in the semifinals of the Big East tournament two weeks ago.

Providence was seeded No. 6 in the Southeast region. Georgetown was seeded first and the Friars' Thursday night victim, Alabama, was seeded second.

It was only the fifth victory for the Friars in the 21-game series between the teams.

Optimist track a home team treat

It wasn't what you'd call a surprise, but the home teams played tough to beat in Saturday's Optimist Club Relays at Steer field.

The Goliad boys and girls and the Runnels' girls won the team competitions, and the Runnels' boys finished second.

The Goliad A team scored 181 points to way outdistance second place Andrews, which finished with 115 points.

"We had a lot of competition from Andrews," said Goliad coach E.C. Roberson. "They've got a lot of quality athletes."

"But we've got one of the best groups of athletes ever at Goliad. We really had a lot of outstanding performances from everybody. They're just a solid group of athletes — they have been all year in every sport they competed in."

"They've been in a weight program since 6th grade, and it shows," Roberson said.

Winners for the Goliad 7th graders included: Jonathan Downey in the pole vault; Travis Sinclair in the 100 meter dash; Mike Ramirez in the discus; Kevin Rodgers in the shot put; and the 1600 meter and 400 meter relay teams.

Castro then ended the game with an RBI single to center, scoring Camarillo. The ten-run rule was then put into effect, and the game was called.

Howard starter Hutchinson picked up the win to increase his record to 4-1. Downey took the loss for MCC.

SECOND GAME

MCC 5, Howard 2

Highlander pitcher Downey redeemed himself in the nightcap, throwing two and two-thirds innings of no-hit ball in relief to pick up the win.

Ernesto Castro, whose record is now 2-3, suffered the loss for Howard.

The wheels came off for the Hawks page 2B

The Goliad girls were even more dominant than the boys. They scored 224 points to almost double second place Snyder's 117 total. They won an amazing nine of the 14 events.

The winners were: Karma Morrow in the discus; Belinda Banks in the long jump; Kristen Payer in the shot put; Brooke Arrick in the high jump; Amber Grisham in the 100 meters; Lakisha Lang in the 400 meters; Amie Walters in the 1600 meters; and th 1600 and 800 meter relay teams.

The Runnels 8th grade girls provided more evidence that the future of Big Spring High girls' track in bright indeed. Their 202 points was 77 more than second place Andrews.

Winners included Marta Matthews in the triple jump and 100 meters and Pam Gill in the shot put.

For the Runnels boys, Neal Mayfield won three events and LeMont JoJola won two events. Mayfield won the 100 and 200 meter dashes and the high jump; JoJola won the 300 meter low hurdles and the 100 meter high hurdles.

For complete results, see Scoreboard, page 3B.

Tracksters win in Snyder

SNYDER — Mario and Ben Gonzales swapped first and second positions in the 3200 and 1600 meter runs, with Mario winning the 3200 and Ben the 1600. Each finished second in the other.

Their performances were one of the many reasons the Big Spring Steers finished first in the 10 team Canyon Reef Relays Saturday in Snyder.

Big Spring scored 156 points, far outdistancing second place Dumbor, which had 93. In addition, Big Spring beat second place Levelland 48-20 to win the field events as well.

The Lady Steers finished sixth, with 54 points. First place Borger had 107 points.

Phillip Matthews won the long jump, and finished second in the 200 meter dash. Brian Mayfield set a meet record in the high jump with a 6'9 effort. He also was third in the long jump and third in the 110 meter high hurdles.

Other Steers' winners included Sean Jackson won the 800 meter run and a second place finish for Dickie Kelley in the shot put.

For complete results, see Scoreboard, page 3B.

Sleeping bats spell Steers' loss

LUBBOCK — The Big Spring Steers managed just two singles, and lost 5-0 to Lubbock High Saturday.

Chad Wash and Charlie Ogle hit the singles, but the rest of the team had tough luck, as Lubbock pitcher David Garza struck out 10 Steers.

Aaron Allen, who struck out six batters, went five innings and took the loss.

Both teams made two errors. Lubbock had four hits, and scored two runs in the first and three in the 5th.

The Steers dropped to 4-8. Their next game is at 4 p.m. Tuesday against Lubbock Monterey.

Tricky maneuver aids Hawks' split

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

The Howard College baseball Hawks combined strong pitching and timely hitting to defeat McClennan C.C. 12-2 in the first game of a double-header at Jack Barber Field Saturday.

McClennan came back to win the nightcap 5-2.

With the split, Howard took the weekend series two games to one and climbed to within one game of conference-leading McClennan in the standings.

FIRST GAME

Howard 12, MCC 2

The Hawks' Murderer's Row combination of Randy Deal and Juan Rodriguez had an off day Saturday, but Howard prevailed behind the pitching combo of Mark Hutchinson and Ted Hebert, with not a little help from McClennan errors.

Hutchinson and Hebert held the Highlanders to just two runs on five hits, while the Hawks took advantage of eight McClennan errors in cruising to the easy win.

Hawks' head coach Bill Griffin even used a little bit of subterfuge in this game.

Coach Griffin had noticed Friday that two MCC players carefully watched Howard starter Howard Landry go through his warm-ups. After taking stock of Landry's pitching inventory, the Highlanders relayed this information to their teammates.

To prevent a re-occurrence of this, Griffin hid starter Hutchinson behind a maintenance building, while another pitcher warmed up in full view of the Highlanders.

Whether or not this helped confuse MCC is debatable, but the Highlanders were definitely error-prone from start to finish in the first game.

McClennan's charity began in the first inning. Ernesto Castro walked to open the Hawk's half of the inning, then Jeff Shults hit a looping fly ball that MCC left fielder David Degelia misplayed for a two-base error.

With runners on second and third, Chad Baker hit a deep fly to right field that was dropped by Highlander Tony Baldwin. Castro and Shults scored on the play, and the rout was on.

After scoring twice more in the second, Howard struck for four runs in each of the last two innings.

In the fifth, with Shults and Baker on base, Rodriguez punched a single into left field for one run. Joel Chimelis then stepped up and rapped a one-bagger to center, scoring Baker.

Hawks' third baseman Frank Medina followed with a ground-rule double to right field that scored Rodriguez. After Thad Weber walked, MCC reliever Mike Essex gave up a bases-loaded walk to Castro, forcing in Chimelis.

In the sixth inning, Baker and 35 left Johnson dunked for a 69-64 advantage, and Midland's Todd Duncan did the incredible — he nailed a 3-pointer and was fouled, for a four point play.

Midland finished the season at 32-4. Southern Idaho finished at 37-1. Last year they were fourth in this tournament.

According to the Hutchinson sports writer, Midland attempted just one foul shot the whole night. Duncan was one for one from the line, and the Golden Eagles were six for 11.

From the field, Midland made 31 of 63 attempts; the Golden Eagles made 30 of 52 attempts.

MIDLAND (68) — Minor 9-0-20; Stanwood 6-9-12; Duncan 4-1-11; Smith 5-0-10; Nix 4-0-8; Henry 3-0-7. Totals: 31-1-68.

SOUTHERN IDAHO (69) — Newman 6-1-13; Jackson 5-1-13; Drewnick 5-2-12; Johnson 5-2-12; Gomes 4-0-9; Reynolds 4-0-8; Wirsky 1-0-2. Totals: 30-6-69. At the half: SI 40, Midland 34.

HUTCHINSON, Kan. — Southern Idaho's Joe Johnson blocked a 19-foot jumper by Lincoln Minor and gave the Golden Eagles their second junior college national championship.

Southern Idaho had led 65-52 with 7:45 remaining, when the Chaps rallied furiously for a 22-2 run. With CINCINNATI (AP) — Unranked Louisiana State finds itself in some fancy company among the survivors in the NCAA Tournament, teams with all sorts of high rankings and high seedings in the tournament. Yet, it has a distinction that none of them could claim.

"We're the only repeater in the final eight," Tigers guard Anthony Wilson.

Wilson, who played a key role in the latest advance when he scored 17 points Friday night in a 63-58 victory over No. 5 DePaul in the Midwest Regional semifinal, said his team was not awed by the company it is keeping.

"We are looking forward to playing Indiana. We have just as much right to be here."

Indiana, ranked third nationally and top-seeded in the region, used an 88-82 victory over No. 17 Duke to advance to Sunday's Regional championship game, 1:57 p.m. EST, at Riverfront Coliseum.

Indiana and 10th-seeded Louisiana State, the lowest remaining seed in the tournament, have met only three times, all in the NCAA tournament, and the Hoosiers have won each meeting, the last a 67-49 victory in the 1981 Final Four.

The winner of Sunday's game gets a berth to this year's Final Four in New Orleans against the winner of the West Regional.

The trip to New Orleans would be short for Louisiana State — 90 miles — but one it wants very much.

"We would like to end our careers in Louisiana where they Indiana coach Bobby Knight provides words of encouragement to All-American guard Steve Alford earlier this season. Today, Indiana plays LSU for a spot in the Final Four.

started," Wilson, one of four Tigers from last year's team, said. "That would be phenomenal."

Indiana has a local Final Four connection as well, as starting guard Keith Smart is a resident of Baton Rouge.

"We have played against each other at the Police Academy on Saturday mornings," Wilson said of Smart, who scored 21 points against Duke. "He went to McKinley High School, which is two blocks from our campus. It's going to be fun."

Or will it?

"Their backcourt plays honest and tough," Wilson said. "(Steve) Alford is perpetual motion. He's a smart, heady player. Smart is a great athlete who can penetrate, dish or hit the jumper. We'll have to play them straight up because you can't focus to a weakness. They are excellent fundamental players."

Anthony Wilson leads the Tigers with a 16.7 average, while Nikita Wilson, high scorer against DePaul with 24 points, has a 15.4 average. Nikita Wilson did not play for Tigers in their final 20 games last year because of academic problems.

"The opportunity to participate this year is what gets me motivated," Nikita Wilson said. "This is my last time around and since I didn't participate last year I'll play harder to get to the Final Four."

Indiana's seniors were members of the last Hoosier team to reach the round of eight, falling to Virginia 50-48 in 1984.

"Reaching the Final Four has been on the seniors' minds since our freshman year," Alford, an All-American who had 18 points and five assists against Duke, said. "We realized that year that it takes 80 minutes to reach the Final Four. We have 40 behind us and 40 to play. We'll have to play basketball as well as we can to reach New Orleans."

Louisiana State's defense was able to stop DePaul's scoring tandem of Rod Strickland and Dallas Comegys.

"They do a good job of changing defenses and making adjustments during the game," Indiana Coach Bob Knight said. "The strength of their defense is to adjust to different offensive schemes."

Alford, who made just six of 16 shots from the field against Duke, knows what he has to do to improve his chances of scoring against the Tigers.

There'll be runnin' and gunnin' in the West

SEATTLE (AP) — Top-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas and No. 6 Iowa, two teams that mirror each other with pressure defense and utempo running games, play Sunday, with the winner advancing to the NCAA Final Four.

UNLV, which has won its last 20 games by 10 points or more, will throw its stifling pressure defense at a team that plays much the same style. The game at the Kingdome is scheduled to start at 1:03 PST as UNLV Coach Jerry Tarkanian tries to get his 36-1 Runnin' Rebels to the Final Four for the first time in 10 years.

"I don't think anyone in the country can put the kind of pressure on that UNLV can," Iowa forward Al Lorenzen said. "But we face that kind of pressure every day in practice. They play the same aggressive game we do."

Iowa, 30-4 in Coach Tom Davis' first year at the school, has utilized a zone press and nine-player depth to wear down most opponents. The Hawkeyes, however, have been forced to come from behind in their last two tournament games, including Friday's 93-91 win over Oklahoma on a 3-point shot by Kevin Gamble with three seconds left.

"The players they have are similar to our second team," UNLV senior guard Mark Wade. "We'll be able to match up with them and we'll be able to run on them."

UNLV has breezed through the NCAA tournament much the way it romped through a regular season marred only by a controversial one-point loss to Oklahoma. A victory Sunday would give UNLV 37 wins on the season, tying the record set by Duke last year.

Iowa hopes to stop a 21-game UNLV winning streak by utilizing its zone press and running with the ball, something UNLV employs effectively but seldom sees in its opponents.

"I don't think we've been pressed since 1977," said Tarkanian. "No one presses us because we're the Runnin' Rebels and they think we're the ones who should do the pressing."

Davis, like Tarkanian, sees the matchup as a non-stop running game featuring teams that both have deep benches. The two coaches give Iowa the edge in rebounding, but UNLV the advantage on 3-point shooting.

"It will come down to shooting percentages, defensive execution and rebounding," predicted Davis. "I think when you get down to the final 16 or final eight that everyone has talent and deep talent and has all the dimensions inside and out. So it really does come down to something like a half-court offense or hitting free throws."

"I've said all along you have to be lucky and get the bounces to reach the Final Four," agreed Tarkanian. "It could come down to that."

UNLV had a horrendous night from behind the 3-point line Friday in a 92-78 win over Wyoming. The Runnin' Rebels hit only four of 23 shots from behind the line.

"We haven't shot it (the 3-point shot) well this tournament," Tarkanian said. "We can shoot the ball from there, we just have to get hot."

Even without the outside shooting, UNLV has coasted to wins over Idaho State, Kansas State and Wyoming to reach the West Regional final. The Runnin' Rebel man-to-man pressure defense has carried much of the load, creating turnovers that UNLV has parlayed into scoring opportunities.

"Our defense has carried it a lot," said Tarkanian, who plans to continue the full court man-to-man pressure for 40 minutes against Iowa.

"I've never seen anyone press them like we're going to press them," UNLV forward Eldridge Hudson said.

Iowa also will have to contend with 6-foot-9 Armon Gilliam, who leads the Rebels in scoring and had 13 rebounds to go with a career-high 38 points against Wyoming.

"He's an awesome athlete and you're not going to shut him down," said Iowa's 7-foot Brad Lohaus. "You just hope the rest of their team has an off night."

"It's pitting strength against strength," said Lorenzen.

HAWKS

Hawks in the fifth inning. Leading 2-1, Castro gave up a single to MCC left fielder Baldwin, then followed that by hitting Pat Listach, putting two runners on with none out. Two wild pitches later found the Highlander runners on second and third.

MCC center fielder Ricky Candelari scored Baldwin on a sacrifice fly, and David Degalia sacrificed Listach home as well.

McClennan scored two more runs in the sixth to seal the victory. With the win, McClennan raised its region mark to 7-2, with the Hawks one game back at 6-3.

Howard's next game is Tuesday against Lubbock Christian College at Lubbock. Game time is 12:30 p.m.

LULAC President Raul Marquez and Pat Deanda, member, have a dance, games and lots of festivities to raise money to provide scholarships for three local students.

LULAC

An organization for giving

By CARLEEN EVERETT
Lifestyle Editor

Providing scholarships is the first priority of LULAC — the League of Latin American Citizens.

"Studies have shown that Hispanics have the highest dropout rate of all ethnic groups. LULAC thought we needed an incentive geared toward Hispanics to encourage them to go to school," says Pat Deanda, past president and member of the local LULAC organization.

The focus has changed in the 58 years since the scholarship program was initiated.

"Across the board, people are experiencing what we are. We're going cross-section this year. There are as many poor whites and blacks as there are Hispanics who need help in getting an education," Deanda said.

This year, LULAC will donate three $1,000 scholarships, specifically to a white, black and hispanic student.

Three areas of criteria are considered in awarding a LULAC scholarship: passing grades, financial need and a 50-word essay explaining the reason for needing the scholarship.

The nation's oldest and largest Hispanic organization, LULAC is a non-profit organization.

The local group hosts two annual events that provide funding for the scholarships — the "Cinco de Mayo" and "16 de Septiembre" celebrations.

Both of the festivities feature a dance, games, bands and "lots of fun," says Raul Marquez, LULAC's president.

This year's Cinco de Mayo celebration is already in the planning stages, Marquez said.

Some of the activities will include Charro's horsemen, Mexican-American music, a pinata for the children, a washer tournament, a low rider car show, low rider bicycle show for the children and a contest for the best Mexican dressed couple.

The club also has another goal.

"We want to promote parity in education, housing and politics," Deanda said.

In June 1980, the local LULAC was organized and they immediately filed a lawsuit against the city, the school and the college for the single member district, she explained.

The action was successful and Big Spring has four districts that are voted on at large and three that are single member district.

The reason for pursuing the change, Marquez explained, was the fact that Hispanics never had proper representation.

"Four years ago, we got our first person to represent this part of the community (the North side). Now we get our share of the city money. We feel now that we're a part of the community."

"We've made some progress," said Chon Marquez, treasurer of the club. "I'm glad things have really changed. Now the younger generation looks at each other as a whole. We shouldn't live in the past anymore."

"People think we're a radical organization. We're a civil rights organization and will protect the civil rights of anyone," Deanda said.

Locally, the group has initiated the voter registration drives, given Christmas food baskets and provided funds to the needy to help with funeral expenses, she explained.

Former Cover Girl making comeback after life on street

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ivy Nicholson had only her cheekbones and a dog-eared portfolio from the '50s to hint that this bag lady from the city's seedy Tenderloin District was once a Vogue model.

She camped outside the door of a photographer's studio with "Models Wanted" painted on its window. Looking pale and ragged, the former fashion model embarked on an ambitious task — persuading Martin Ryter that she really was the sophisticated woman in the faded prints.

She also tried to show him that, out of her rags and in the right light, she still had star potential.

It worked.

"At first I didn't believe her. Then I took the time to look at her and it was obvious the bone structure is still good," said Ryter, the photographer.

In a fairy tale turn of events, Nicholson no longer is one of hundreds of homeless people wandering the city's streets. She's getting ready to return to modeling.

She even hopes to sell her tumultuous life story for the screen. Ryter said negotiations are under way with major studios for the rights.

In a recent interview, she acknowledged the obvious — that she's been down on her luck — but she is sure she can stage a comeback. If that happens, Nicholson said she will share her wealth and post a placard on her home proclaiming: "Only wines, loiterers, pets. No quarrels. Fun."

Chain-smoking Winstons to the filters and talking about sleeping with the derelicts in Golden Gate Park, the one-time cover girl talked about her memories and dreams.

Nicholson, now 53, said she grew up in a marginal New York City neighborhood. With the help of a millionaire she met after finishing second in a pageant, the Miss Roller Skate contest, she went on to grace the covers of such high-fashion magazines as Elle and Vogue. She hobnobbed with the swells and married a French count.

"I have many friends in the jet set," she said.

One friend from the past, actor Anthony Perkins, said in People magazine recently that Nicholson was "very volatile," adding that friends advised him to "arm myself with a pistol ... because of Ivy's unrestrained temper."

"I still don't like that quote, but he'll change his mind eventually," Nicholson said.

Another former friend, the socialite Baby Jane Holzer, was quoted as calling her a "little crazy" and a "pretty misguided missile."

Nicholson acknowledged an unsettled life. She decided to drop out of high school at age 15.

Her wealthy benefactor, whom she met in Florida, took her to Europe and her modeling career took off, Nicholson said. She married the count but they divorced. She met Perkins and became despondent because he reminded her of a high school flame who she said shot himself. She slashed her wrists and was hospitalized.

The incident was reported in the London Daily Mail, which quoted her as saying, "I am obsessed."

Another article in her portfolio carried the headline, "Tangling With Ivy," and called her a "lovable eccentric."

As modeling jobs tapered off, Nicholson said she turned to portrait painting and photography. Later, she went home to New York and for several years worked in films with Andy Warhol, she said. Then she returned to Paris, staying until about a year ago.

Nicholson followed the advice of a fortune teller who suggested she leave for a sunnier climate. She ended up in San Francisco.

What money she had went to a few luxuries — a jazz club, Chinese food — but mostly to her bill for a hotel room where she said she called about jobs until she was broke.

No one hired her. Nobody knew who she was, she explained.

Soon she found herself on city assistance, shuffling between homeless shelters and welfare hotels, sometimes sleeping in Golden Gate Park or in an old Chrysler she has since sold.

"Before I knew about GA (general assistance) there were moments when I slept on the street, the actual street," she recalled.

"We eat in all the free churches," she said, referring to herself and her 21-year-old twin son and daughter, who live with her.

Meanwhile, the publicity in People and elsewhere has paid off.

An agent has set up Nicholson and her twins in an apartment and stocked the refrigerator. She has lined up some catalogue modeling, and a wealthy benefactor has outfitted her with a new wardrobe.

As for the biographical film, her agent, Lisle Taae, said negotiations were proceeding and a deal could be signed in Hollywood soon.

"I think people are waking up to how beautiful 50-year-old women can be," said Nicholson, crediting stars such as Elizabeth Taylor and Joan Collins.

"Of course, those women have a bit more money than I do, so that helps," she said. "But I will have money. I will. I will."

"She's definitely not on the street any more," said Ryter. "Things are definitely looking up."

Mascot cat has more toes than legendary Sasquatch

COPPERAS COVE (AP) — Bigfoot, mascot of the Copperas Cove Animal Shelter, spends much of his day licking his 26 toes and dining on an occasional prepackaged sausage stick.

Not to be confused with the legendary monster of the same name, also known as "Sasquatch" to those of Canadian origin, this Bigfoot has yellow fur, walks on all fours.

Hardly a legendary monster, the Texas Bigfoot is a friendly yellow cat adopted by the animal control crew after he was not claimed, said animal control officer Cathy Groothoff.

He got his name after it was discovered he has seven toes on each of his front paws and six on each of his hind feet, a congenital defect. Cats usually have four toes and a dewclaw on each foot.

Bigfoot is apparently not interested in publicity.

During an interview at the animal facility, while Ms. Groothoff explained some of his idiosyncrasies, the yellow cat settled into a file basket at the shelter office and contentedly began eating police records.

Ms. Groothoff immediately extricated the files from the cat's grasp and refilled them in a safe place. Bigfoot curled up and fell asleep in the empty basket.

She explained that police records are not Bigfoot's normal fare.

"He just loves to sit on paper work," she said. "He's just making sure we do it right."

Ms. Groothoff said that, sometimes when she works on weekends, the cat shares meals with her — sometimes chile cheese dogs, prepackaged sausage sticks, and an occasional apple Danish for breakfast.

In a pinch, he'll also eat cat food. She said Bigfoot demonstrates the normal cat-like traits at mealtime, including playing with his prey before eating it.

The last time he had an apple Danish for breakfast, she said, he batted it around on the desk top before finally devouring it.

Shelter employee Clint Kaetzel said Bigfoot is slightly lazy. "He wouldn't eat if we didn't feed him," he said.

Ms. Groothoff defended the mascot, claiming he is just "laid back."

Bigfoot declined to be interviewed, but it is obvious from his demeanor and attitude that he has a mission and a purpose at the shelter.

Apparently he feels he earns his keep, being constantly on call in case his services are needed as a mouser. His most important duties at the shelter, though, are that of a conversation piece — sort of a "knickknack with claws."

Ms. Groothoff said Bigfoot, a very sociable creature, spends his evenings visiting the "inmates" at the shelter, sometimes just standing in front of selected dog cages, swishing his tail back and forth while the inhabitants bark at him.

He also spends time visiting the cat cages at the shelter, probably swapping hints with the other cats on the best ways to go about stalking things and maybe telling a few dog jokes on the side.

Bigfoot, although not always clumsy, occasionally has his moments. Ms. Groothoff said one day he was lying on a table, just licking his toes. Apparently, with so many toes to choose from, he got a little too enthusiastic and rolled over backwards onto the floor.

Kaetzel said the cat was brought to the animal control facility after a woman found him and called to have him picked up.

He was suffering from what was later determined to be ingrown claws. The shelter employees took care of his medical needs and grew attached to him. When no one claimed him, they decided to adopt him.

Kaetzel said Bigfoot is probably there for keeps. "I guess he knows when he's got it made," Kaetzel said.

He added that Bigfoot is not without aspirations for the future. "His dream now is for the lid to be left off the food barrel some night," Kaetzel said.

Snake is in her attic, terror is in her heart

DEAR ABBY: Help, please. I have a snake in my attic. I found its skin in front of my door three years ago. I measured it, and it was six feet long then. I took it to the vet to have it identified, and he confirmed that it was a black snake and said, "You're lucky it wasn't in your bed." He had no idea how to exterminate it. I know it's still there because I keep finding the waste droppings, which I had identified at the local pet shop. I have contacted the local exterminator, but to no avail. I have always been extremely terrified of snakes.

It will soon be spring again, and I can't go through another summer under such stress. I don't need to hear how "harmless" this slithering black creature is since I have been to the emergency room of our hospital several times with a rapid heartbeat and chest pains brought on by stress.

If any of your readers can offer any suggestions, I would appreciate it.

SNAKE-A-PHOBIC
DEAR SNAKE-A-PHOBIC: You speak of consulting an exterminator. Why kill it? According to Dr. Mary Isaacs of Encino, Calif., who is a reptile expert, it is probably a king or gopher snake and is not poisonous. Better to be instructed on how to remove it from your home and let it live somewhere where you will not feel threatened. Call your local Humane Society or Animal Protective League. Either will be able to locate the snake, contain it, and remove it to a place that will be better for you as well as the snake — who is probably as terrified of you as you are of it.

DEAR ABBY: In the fall of 1985 we loaned our daughter $10,000 to replace a car she totaled. She agreed to make monthly payments to us over the next five years. She made three payments, then we received a letter from her saying she didn't want to ever see or hear from us again! Furthermore, we were not to write or phone our two grandsons, ages 8 and 12. In the past, these grandchildren have visited us every summer and during the Christmas holidays. (We live in different states.) Our daughter is divorced, and we now have absolutely no communication with her. Our gifts have been returned, and our letters go unanswered. We miss our grandchildren very much. Do we, as grandparents, have any rights to see them? We want to put our family back in order.

Although we are disappointed that our daughter has stopped her loan payments, we would be willing to forgive the loan if we could see our grandchildren. Please help us.

HEARTBROKEN GRANDPARENTS

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: Something is drastically wrong here. Consult your lawyer. Perhaps you can get to your daughter through her attorney or your clergyman. Don't give up. You don't say where you or your daughter live, but in some states grandparents have a legal right to see their grandchildren.

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Dr. Donohue

Young or old getting fit is worth it

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I read your articles about physical exercise just out of a curiosity I have about the subject. Personally, at 61 years of age I know I haven't the body I had 20 or 30 years ago.

I'm willing, if not able to give conditioning a try. But when I look at my 61-year-old body in my bathroom mirror, I despair and figure what's the use? Is it worthwhile for a man my age to go to all the trouble? — A.M.

I'm not going to say you can repeal the laws of aging. No one can have the body of a 20-year-old at 61. But would you settle for 50, maybe even 40? I've seen it happen time and time again. All you must do to banish your despair is to visit the assembly points for one of the many runs staged in your community this spring. You'll see more than just a sprinkling of men your age and older signing up for it.

It's true there is an estimated 1 percent decline in endurance each year past age 20. That's what the experts say. But we don't know just how much of that results from the inactivity usually associated with aging. And even if it is a natural decline, we know that it's three times greater in the inactive than in those who keep themselves fit through exercise.

By training, we increase our capacity. Look to the example of Carlos Lopes. At age 38, he won the Olympic marathon. It's not supposed to happen, but he did it by acquiring the endurance that negated the supposed 1 percent annual decline.

If your health is pronounced good by your doctor, age will be no deterrent to starting a conditioning program. Fully a third of all the mail I get on fitness is from older readers, so you are not alone. I'm sending you a copy of "Introduction to Fitness," which discusses various programs. Other readers may order by writing me in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and $1.50.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Maybe this is a first for you. I'm a nun who is doing some weights. Everyone's interested in my progress. I am not expecting too much. I have been able to lift much heavier weights than at the beginning and was also expecting to see my muscles grow, not that I need that. But my arm muscles look about the same. How come? We're all puzzled. — M.

You cannot measure a muscle's ability to work by its size. That's only one factor. The rest has to do with the nervous system and coordination of muscle fibers.

When you ask a muscle to work, nerves send signals to its fibers. In a sedentary person, not all of that muscle's fibers are awake, so only a relative handful get the message. With training more and more of them get into the act. That's called recruitment, which is an important part of gaining strength. This is why you are lifting more with imperceptible gains in muscle size.

Now, another aspect is teaching the muscle fibers to act synchronously. When you give them a new job, they're awkward at first. With time and training, they learn to cooperate. Again, you add lifting ability.

Maybe this is the level of your training now. In time, you are bound to see some increase in muscle size. It need not be great, and usually isn't in a female. Then it's just a matter of continuing to teach those new fibers how to work with the others for further strength of the whole muscle. See you at the next Olympic trials.

How to get rid of leg cramps and foot pains? The answer may be simple — write to Dr. Donohue, in care of the Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611, for a copy of the booklet, "How to Stop Leg Cramps and Foot Pains." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and $1.00.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.
