Hope fading for girl shot by 'Son of Sam'

By JACKIE STONE

NEW YORK (AP) — The killer who calls himself "Son of Sam" marked his first year of terror by pumping slugs into his 12th and 13th victims as they sat in a parked car watching the full moon over New York harbor. One of his victims was near death today.

He struck in Brooklyn, turf untouched in previous forays into Queens and the Bronx and unguarded by the beefed-up police patrols in those boroughs.

Stacy Moskowitz and Robert Violante, both 20-year-old Brooklynites, spent their first date Saturday night seeing a movie, dancing at a popular neighborhood discotheque and walking hand-in-hand in the moonlight.

The date ended Sunday morning with the pair in critical condition at Kings County Hospital, both shot in the head.

Hospital officials said today they were "very pessimistic" that Miss Moskowitz would survive. She was grazed by one shot, but severely wounded by a second that slammed into the base of her skull, shattered bone and lodged in her neck. She underwent eight hours of surgery Sunday morning and, late Sunday evening, was returned to the operating room for an additional 30 minutes to drain fluid from her nasal cavity.

Her brain continued to swell today, and Ira Clark, assistant hospital administrator, said, "Everything known to neurosurgeons has been done in an attempt to save her."

Violante's condition was improved today. Clark said he was "alert, lucid, stable and talking," and had spent some time with his parents this morning.

The bullet which struck Violante entered the left temple, "completely shattered" the left eye and exited above the right eyebrow. His left eye was removed and Clark said that while the right eye could distinguish lightness from dark, it would be some time before doctors knew how much — if any — sight he would retain.

Police reported they were swamped with calls today regarding the case. "Everybody knows the killer," a police spokesman said.

Police said several prime suspects had been under surveillance this weekend but that all were accounted for when the Brooklyn shooting occurred.

"It's like looking for a needle in a haystack," a police official said, "except when you look through a haystack, you know what the needle looks like."

"We had 2,000 cops out looking for Sam this weekend," a member of the special task force investigating the shootings said.

Mayor Abraham Beame ordered the assignment of 100 more policemen to the 70-man task force and promised Police Commissioner Michael Codd, "If you need still more men you'll have them."

Dibrell wishes information had come sooner

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — A man who investigated rumors of voting fraud in a 1948 election that launched Lyndon Johnson toward the Presidency says he wishes he could have had 29 years ago information revealed Sunday about vote tampering.

San Antonio lawyer T. Kellis Dibrell referred to an exclusive interview of former Jim Wells County election judge Luis Salas by The Associated Press. In the interview, published Sunday, Salas, 76, said he had increased the total votes for Johnson by about 200 in one ballot box.

"Luis Salas has finally confirmed what we knew all along," Dibrell said. "But we had some clues at the time there was going to be election cheating by the Johnson forces. We would have given anything to have this information 29 years ago."

Salas' statement concerned Box 13, which produced enough votes for Johnson to win the Democratic Party primary runoff for the U.S. Senate over Coke Stevenson, three-time Texas governor. The final tally gave Johnson an 87-vote margin out of almost 1 million ballots cast.

Salas said his orders to certify the bogus ballots came from South Texas political kingpin George Parr during a meeting in Alice attended by Johnson. Parr committed suicide in 1975.

However, unlike Dibrell, Mary Rather, who served off and on as Johnson's secretary from 1941 until his death in 1973, remains convinced her late boss knew nothing of the meeting.

"I know he wasn't in Alice," she said. "I have a very vivid recollection of that election and the days after. I'm positive he hardly left his residence where he and Mrs. Johnson lived. I was there constantly those days."

Dibrell said he always believed Johnson knew the votes were going to be changed. He said he had worked for Stevenson in Austin while attending law school and decided to help in Stevenson's 1948 election campaign.

"I had spent the last few months of a seven-year FBI carreer in Laredo and I had some idea of political problems in South Texas at that time," he said. "One of the Stevenson supporters called us from the Panhandle and said a person from the LBJ office had erroneously phoned him. He said the LBJ office thought he was a Johnson man and asked him if he would alter some election returns if necessary."

"That gave Coke a pretty good clue

Nuclear protest leaves one dead, many injured

FAVERGES, France (AP) — An increasingly violent struggle between Western European governments and foes of nuclear power flared into a bloody battle that left one person dead and more than 100 injured near a nuclear plant site in southeastern France.

Authorities blamed firebomb-throwing militants among an international group of 30,000 antinuclear protesters for provoking the bloodshed Sunday in this town in the French Alps.

Interior Minister Christian Bonnet said French, German and other militants "illegally and deliberately attacked" security forces.

Medical personnel said the one death, of a French demonstrator, apparently resulted from a heart attack. Grenade explosions blew off the hands or feet of two demonstrators and two policemen, officials said. Five of the injured were reported to be policemen.

The 30,000 demonstrators gathered in this area over the weekend to mount a march on the Super Phoenix fast-breeder reactor plant, under construction in nearby Creys-Malville.

On Saturday night, small groups of West German protesters smashed windows at the town hall in nearby Morestel.

As the demonstrators rallied for their march Sunday on the roads outside Faverges, 5,000 police were able to contain most of the crowd, but a splinter group of about 100 helmeted militants broke off from the main body and entered the town, where they met police in the worst violence of the day.

Authorities said the militants hurled rocks and firebombs and the police routed them with tear gas and smoke grenades.

As the protesters ran off, police found the body of 31-year-old Vital Michalon on the ground. Medical personnel said there were no marks on the body and Michalon apparently died of a heart attack.

Later clashes were reported in Morestel and in a neighboring hamlet, but it was not known if there were any injuries there.

Five arrests were made in the Faverges area.

The long-planned Faverges march was one of a series of sometimes violent protests across Western Europe in recent months staged by ecological and leftist groups opposed to nuclear power programs.

Their principal argument is that technologists have not yet devised adequate methods for the disposal of dangerous radioactive wastes and for prevention of nuclear accidents.

Rebels claim victories in Ethiopia fighting

By JOHN EDLIN

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Somalian-backed rebels fighting to unite Ethiopia's Ogaden region with Somalia claim to have hoisted their secessionist flag over all but four towns on the semi-desert plateau.

There has been no independent confirmation of rebel victory claims in the Ogaden, which makes up about two-thirds of Ethiopia's easternmost Harar province.

Somalia radio in a broadcast Sunday quoted a communique issued by the Western Somali Liberation Front that said inhabitants of "all liberated areas" were "staging demonstrations and festivities to mark their liberation."

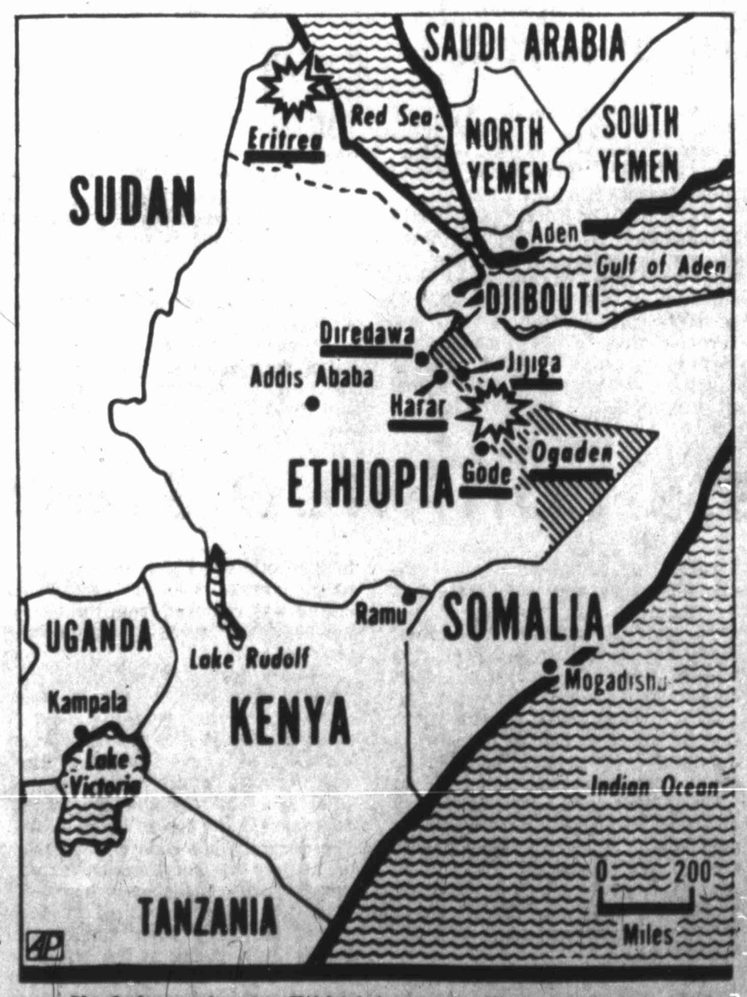

Ethiopia radio, which usually reports on the conflict, made no mention of it in Sunday broadcasts. The Ethiopians have said they retain control of major population centers in northern Ogaden.

The rebel report, monitored in Nairobi, said, "Only four towns remain to be liberated." They were not identified.

Most maps show about 40 towns and villages dotting eastern Harar province, which juts knife-like into Somalia in the strategic Horn of Africa.

The insurgents, said to be backed by Somalian troops and equipment, want to tie the Ogaden into an East African "Greater Somalia."

Inhabited by tough Moslem nomads of Somali origin, the Ogaden plateau — about the size of Wyoming — was given to predominantly Christian Ethiopia 80 years ago by the British, then colonial rulers of East Africa, who arbitrarily divided the territory without regard for ethnic populations.

Shafter Lake's stones ended with year 1920

It was in remembrance of Joseph Snively, who was laid to rest in 1909 at age 71.

His is but one of a smattering of markers that pinpoint the graves of former denizens of this settlement that faded after Andrews won its bid for the county seat of Andrews County in 1910.

The cemetery, which overlooks the brackish waters of shallow Shafter Lake northwest of Andrews, is marked off and protected by an iron and wire fence.

Two turnstiles afford honest access to the cemetery that's somewhat overgrown in weeds and dotted with fragmented and whole beer bottles and with beer cans shot up with small caliber fire.

This place, for sure, is not totally forgotten.

Some scissortails and other birds were flying about or were perched on mesquite shrubs.

To them, it mattered not what the fenced-in plot of land was called by homo sapiens. Maybe it was just a place to perch, fly around, search for insects and other nourishment, and, generally, to live. Maybe it was their home.

The cemetery was kept active from 1900 to 1920. The latter appears to be latest date on many markers here.

Nearby is the stone marker of Grace Logsdon, 1891-1911.

The stone markers may tumble, wear down with the passing of time, wind and rain, but they are long-enduring.

"Asleep in Jesus,
"Blessed sleep.
"From whence none ever
"Wake to weep."

Raging Alaska fires force fighters back

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Racing across a landscape dried to a crackle by record high temperatures, Alaska's worst fires in eight years are forcing fire fighters to fall back to protect threatened native villages.

The federal Bureau of Land Management said Sunday that 68 separate fires had charred an estimated 830,000 acres — about 1,300 square miles. One blaze had burned 300,000 acres about 100 miles northeast of Nome, while an 80,000-acre fire threatened the village of Shungnak 300 miles west of Fairbanks.

Temperatures in interior Alaska — where highs normally are in the mid 60s — reached as high as 90 degrees. The same heat which fed the northern fires melted snow caps and glaciers south of here and pushed the Kenai River over its banks. Minor flooding was expected to last through Tuesday.

Smoke from the fires was reported from as far away as eastern Siberia. It hung murkily over the landscape, and the National Weather Service said in some areas it was impossible to fly without instruments, even in the daytime.

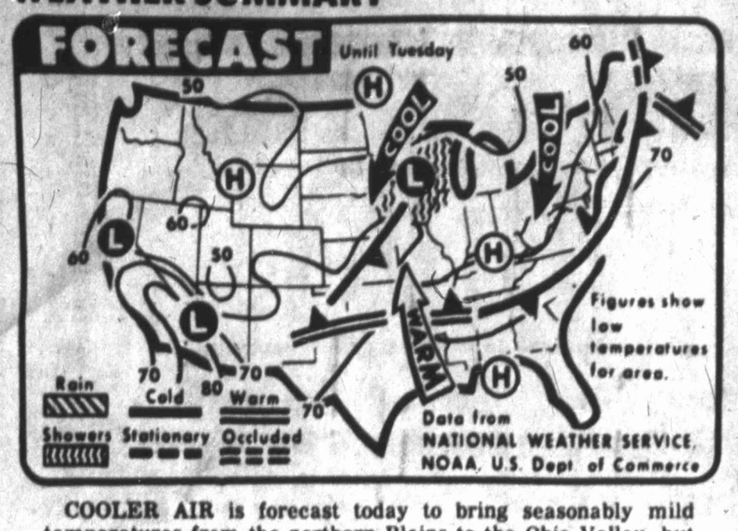

BLM District Manager Richard LeDosquet said his fire crews were abandoning fires which threatened only tundra.

At Shungnak, flames had reached to within six miles of the village. The BLM said an evacuation plan was prepared for its 140 residents.

Nine other villages, a major mining area and a trans-Alaska pipeline construction camp also were reported threatened by fire — though the pipeline itself was in no danger.

The agency said it had more than 600 fire fighters in the field and hundreds of others in staging areas awaiting transport to the battle areas.

WEATHER SUMMARY

COOLER AIR is forecast today to bring seasonably mild temperatures from the northern Plains to the Ohio Valley, but most of the country will be warm to hot. Showers are forecast for part of the Midwest and upper Great Lakes. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Commissioners expected to act Sept. 12 on '78 budget, tax rate

The Midland County Commissioners Court probably will act on the proposed budget and tax rate for 1978 at its Sept. 12 meeting, County Judge Barbara Culver said today.

The most important aspect of the budget, Judge Culver said, is that the 95 cent per $100 of assessed valuation with assessments based on 32 per cent of market value would remain unchanged.

The propoaed budget calls for $4,895,943, an increase of $650,886 from estimated expenditures for 1977. The county budgets run from Jan. 1 through Dec. 31.

Total general fund expenditures are expected to be $3,476,052 in 1978. Special revenue expenditure, primarily for the road and bridge department is budgeted at $972,270 and the sinking fund for courthouse and jail bonded indebtedness is budgeted at $179,923. In addition, the county expects to receive $276,698 in revenue sharing funds, bringing total expenditures to $4,895,943.

Judge Culver said increased property values caused by economic growth and increases in revenues from fees and fines make it unnecessary to increase taxes, in spite of increased expenditure.

Among the expenditure increases expected in 1978 is an approximately $117,626 rise in judicial costs. Creation of a new district court and additional salaries for the district clerk's and district attorney's offices account for a large part of that increase. The conversion of the Domestic Relations Court to the 318th District Court will save the county approximately $30,000, but $34,000 for a county court at law is included in the budget to be available if that court is created by the commissioners court.

Cost of financial administration is expected to be $648,470, up from the estimated 1977 expenditure of $563,542. Nondepartmental expenses for 1978 are estimated at $645,789, up from estimated 1977 expenditures of $385,789. The 1978 budget figure includes $106,363 in unallocated funds.

Cost of law enforcement is expected to increase from $472,126 in 1977 to $542,147.

Judge Culver said $130,000 budgeted for 1978 indigent hospital care can be trimmed from the budget if voters approve creation of a hospital district.

Neutron bomb would be built near Amarillo

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — If President Carter certifies the need for the controversial Neutron Bomb, it will be built at a somewhat isolated nuclear armaments plant 17 miles northest of this Panhandle community.

Ross Dunham, manager of the Energy Research and Development's Pantex Plant here, has confiremd the project but said there have been no protests from nearby Amarillo residents regarding the bomb despite the furor it has raised elsewhere.

The weapon has been called a "clean bomb" by its proponents and "immoral" by detractors. It is a nuclear device designed to kill people by massive doses of radiation that can penetrate buildings but leave them standing in most cases.

"If the weapon is OK'd by Congress, we'll be assembling it," said Dunham. "Like many of the other weapons we have worked on here, it will be made ready for use when it leaves our facility."

Dunham said the Pantex Plant is the only complex in the country presently involved in assembling nuclear weapons for the United States arsenal.

He said Pantex has been involved in every stage of the bomb's development and will, if given the go-ahead, receive components from other ERDA facilities and complete final assembly.

"When it leaves here, it is ready for detonation," he said.

Blasting caps found in Midland residence

Midland police were called to the F. L. Kintwell residence on East Golf Course Road Sunday morning where several blasting caps were found in a bedroom closet.

Kintwell told police he found the explosives while cleaning the closet. He did not know where the blasting caps came from or how they got into the house.

Police took the caps to the firing range near Gole Park where an explosives company will pick them up today.

AUTO BURGLARIZED

Burglars entered a car belonging to A. B. Canady of 3206 W. Michigan Ave. about 6:30 a.m. Saturday and took a .45 caliber pistol valued at $150, several credit cards, $200 in cash and a pair of dress pants valued at $35.

According to police, Canady left the car to drink coffee at a restaurant in the 3700 block of West Wall Avennue, and when he returned the items were missing. The burglars left a CB radio in the car untouched.

GUN TAKEN

Burglars also left a CB radio, but took a .38 caliber pistol from a car belonging to O.C. Franklin of 706 S. Lincoln while he was eating at a restaurant in the 300 block of North Lee Street about 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Franklin told police the gun was in the glove compartment and the car was unlocked. He said he discovered the gun missing after he returned home.

TELEVISIONS TAKEN

Genell White, the motel's desk clerk, told police the televisions were taken from apartments 67, 68 and 69.

Robber hits Dairy Queen

Midland police early today were looking for an armed robber who took $2,040 in cash and checks from the Dairy Queen store at 3702 W. Wall Ave. about 12:30 a.m. Sunday.

Witnesses told police employes were cleaning up when a man wearing a hood and carrying a pistol walked into the store. He forced all the employes into an office and told the manager to give him all the money, witnesses told police.

The bandit then cut the telephone line and fled from the store.

Police said the witnesses described the bandit as a white male in his early 20s, slender build and blond or light brown hair.

Officers investigating the heist found the man's hood in a field behind the store. Footprints headed in a northwest direction were also found.

Make-up tennis lessons start

Make-up tennis lessons for Midland Parks and Recreation Department programs will be held starting today at Midland High School.

The lessons are to run today, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. The times are 9 a.m., 10 a.m., 11 a.m., 7 p.m., and 8 p.m.

Scholarships offered at MC

A number of scholarships are available through the music department of Midland College for the 1977-78 school year, according to Robert LaFontaine, coordinator of musical activities.

The scholarships are available for music majors and non-majors.

Those interested in applying for a music scholarship should contact La Fontaine at 684-7851 or 684-4968.

Woman, 23, abducted; found slain

LUBBOCK — Police here today were continuing their investigation of the slaying Sunday morning of a 23-year-old Lubbock woman.

The victim, Toni Diane Kumpf, was reportedly abducted from her home about 6:25 a.m. Sunday by a man described as 6 feet tall, 220 pounds and with shoulder length blond hair.

Her body was discovered by a farmer about three hours later beside a dirt road south of Lubbock. Her throat had been slashed ear-to-ear. The body was clad only in underwear and a T-shirt, police said.

Miss Kumpf reportedly was a recent graduate of Texas Tech University who was employed as a secretary at the university's medical school.

Neighbors told police they heard the victim scream, "Help me. Help me. Get him off me," before her abductor pulled her to a white pickup truck parked near her apartment.

Officers said the door frame in the entrance to her apartment had been smashed.

Operator claims home 'does favor'

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The operator of an Austin nursing home says she is doing "the city a favor by taking deadbeats off the street."

Loyce Graves of Cartwheel Lodge said in an interview published by the Austin American Statesman on Sunday that she routinely falsifies activity reports because her 91 patients don't have minds that can be stimulated.

"These rules make liars out of all of us," she said. "There's no way we can comply with the law.

"Most of my people just want to be left alone. They have no minds. They're not able to learn," she said.

"We've got dribblers, soilers and spitters." Some of the rooms at Cartwheel smell of urine because the residents "don't know what a toilet is. Some just as well use the sink," she said.

Rules require water pitchers at every bedside, but the Cartwheel operator says some of her patients urinate in them. Reading lights must be provided, but she said none of her patients can read.

Cool front brings chance for rainfall

The frontal system from the east that brought strong winds this morning is bringing with it a 40 per cent chance of rain tonight.

Temperatures Tuesday are expected to be in the upper 90s.

That cool front from the east this morning brought gusty winds, a little dust, and an overnight low of 69 degrees reached at 8 a.m.

The peak wind gust was 37 mph at 4 a.m., and the morning wind storm averaged 27 mph as many Midlanders came to work between 7 and 8 a.m. today.

Low clouds and some dust was reported this morning in Lamesa, Stanton, Odessa, Andrews and Big Lake.

Scattered thunderstorms were expected to continue to roam over North Texas today, bringing cooler temperatures to the Panhandle, and some rain was forecast for other parts of the state.

Golf ball size hail was sighted late Sunday night at Skelly Town in the Panhandle, but no damage was reported. However, some street flooding was reported at Amarillo.

Skies were clear over the rest of the Lone Star state with temperatures ranging from the 60s in the mountains and the Panhandle to the 70s and 80s in East Texas and South Texas before dawn today, the Associated Press reported.

The National Weather Service looked for more scattered thunderstorms today in Northeast, West and South Texas.

Official forecasts called for temperatures to reach the 80s in the Panhandle and the 90s in other parts of the state, except for the Big Bend area, where temperatures were expected to climb to 105 degrees.

Midlander appointed

Dr. O.C. Collins, D.V.M., of Midland has been appointed as an Action Council Member of the National Federation of Independent Businesses(NFIB).

NFIB is a non-profit, non-partisan organization representing the needs of small businessess across the country. The organization was founded in 1943. It was designed to promote the concept of free enterprise and to give independent business a greater voice in shaping the laws which regulate business and government.

of what was about to happen. This call to alter the votes came about 24 hours after the election. Coke told me if there was going to be any heavy vote altering it would be in South Texas. I went to a good police source in Laredo, a Laredo police captain, to help me try and uncover any vote irregularities. I dropped him off in Duvall County and I went to Alice. When the Box 13 thing popped up, we were right there."

Dibrell said he went to question Salas but that the election judge had gone to Mexico.

"Of course, the case went to court, but when U.S Supreme Court Justice Black voided a temporary injuction against putting Johnson's name on the ballot, that ended all investigation," he said.

Justice Hugo Black's action stopped a federal court investigation of the election. The probe included a hearing at which Salas testified the election was "level."

Food costs continue steady rise

By The Associated Press

Grocery prices continued to increase at a relatively moderate level during July, although there were scattered sharp boosts for a variety of items, an Associated Press survey shows.

Among the products most frequently rising in price were frozen orange juice concentrate, tomato sauce, milk and frankfurters. Decreases were spotted in the price of chopped chuck, pork chops and eggs.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and nonfood items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973 and has checked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

Highlights of the latest survey were:

—The marketbasket total at the checklist store increased during July in five cities, up an average 2.2 per cent, and decreased in eight cities, down an average .9 per cent. The biggest increases—just over 4 per cent in Providence, R.I., and Salt Lake City — occurred because items that had been on sale at the start of July were at regular price levels in the current survey.

On an overall basis, the bill at the end of July was about a third of a per cent higher than it was a month earlier. The rate of overall increase was the same as it was during June, when the marketbasket was higher at the checklist store in nine cities and lower in four.

—Comparing prices at the start of August with those seven months earlier, the AP found the marketbasket total was higher in every city, up at average of 9.4 per cent. When coffee was removed from the totals, however, the increase was only 2.7 per cent.

—Coffee prices took a dip last month, decreasing at the checklist store in six cities, generally about 20 cents a pound. Coffee now is between $3.50 and $4 a pound in most cities. The drops reflect cuts at the wholesale level which, in turn, mirror decreases in the cost of coffee beans. The decrease has been edited partly to a drop in consumption among shoppers who rebelled at high prices.

—Orange juice increased in more places than any other single item during July, rising at the checklist store in eight cities. There have been predictions of higher prices ever since the winter freeze which hurt the Florida citrus crop.

—As usual, food products accounted for more of the fluctuations than nonfood items. Nonfoods represented 20 per cent of the total number of items, but only 16 per cent of the ups and downs.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, chocolate chip cookies, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar.

The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M., Atlanta, Ga., Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, Salt Lake City and Seattle.

Strange reasoning

President Carter continues to stray further and further off base in his public references to the petroleum industry.

One wonders why he or his close advisers are so determined to hamper the industry in its all-out efforts to find and produce more oil and gas, while at the same time calling on everyone to cooperate more fully in helping to overcome the energy shortage. It doesn't make sense.

And neither does it make sense for Mr. Carter to come back now and say that Gov. Dolph Briscoe of Texas is mistaken if he believes the President has broken his commitment to work toward deregulation of new natural gas, as reported by the Washington Bureau of The Dallas Morning News.

Mr. Carter undoubtedly will have a difficult time in selling that bill of goods to the governors of Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana, to whom he made pre-election pledges in this regard.

But the President strays even further afield in expressing doubt that gas rates are tied to exploration.

He also would have everyone believe that oil companies, which have played such a tremendous role in the development of this nation and its high standard of living, are interested only in windfall profits.

The Dallas News reported in its Saturday editions that President Carter, in a private meeting with selected members of the news media on Friday, voiced a strong statement against the basic argument of oil state and industry leaders in which he said he does not believe exploration would be substantially increased even if prices were allowed to increase to $20 per barrel for oil and $2 or $3 per thousand cubic feet for natural gas.

"I think the present rate of exploration would not be substantially enhanced, but it would be a great windfall to the oil and natural gas companies of our nation," Mr. Carter said.

This certainly is not at all complimentary to the oil companies and independent operators who find and produce oil and gas.

Mr. Carter further described his proposal to set a $1.74 per thousand cubic feet price on all natural gas as his "first move" to carry out his pre-election commitment to Briscoe and other oil state governors to work for deregulation.

But setting a price — any price — for natural gas or anything else is not deregulation.

Mr. Carter said he had not seen the new Texas state analysis of the National Energy Plan, which is a comprehensive study criticizing the President's program, but he said any recommendation similar to the proposals by Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Tex., could cost the American consumer $70 billion more than the administration bill.

There also, and quite naturally, is a wide variance of views on that $70 billion figure used by the President.

Mr. Carter told the newsmen that he thinks this "is a crucial question in the overall energy concept — — whether or not we should have extremely high prices to be established by the oil and natural gas companies without constraint and accept their proposition that exploration would build by leaps and bounds and that we would have unlimited supplies of oil and natural gas as a result ... I don't think that a crash program to extract oil and natural gas in a hasty fashion from American supplies is advisable under any circumstances."

We would disagree with the concept that oil and gas companies could set and hold "extremely high prices" under deregulation. Keen competition would fix the price under such a condition.

Mr. Carter said also, "I think the emphasis on conservation and a shift toward coal, which we advocate, is the best approach."

Yet very little has been done or is being done by the government in the shift toward coal, which the industry and others also advocate.

It is most unfortunate that Washington continues to use the petroleum industry as its whipping boy.

A CHANGING WORLD:

Blame for violence, looting, arson placed

By JOHN PINKERMAN
Copley News Service

America's U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young stepped from an airplane in London recently and, for once in his political life, said, "I have nothing to say."

In contrast, just a few days before he had commented on looting, arson and violence mostly by blacks and Puerto Ricans during New York's blackout. "If you turn the lights out," he said, "folks will steal...Sin began with Adam. All men sin and fall short of the glory of God."

He then implied, as do the bleeding hearts, both black and white, after almost every occasion of minority violence, that such conduct is society's fault — that the rest of us really are responsible every time a store is looted, then set afire. And, if we don't do more in the way of welfare and other handouts, more violence will be the result — and we deserve the worst.

Young, the major black leaders of the United States and the other social reformers might better have read the words of distant observers like the Daily Express (London) editorial writer who wrote: "With its jails full to the bursting point with looters, hospital patients fighting for life on emergency power, domestic water running out and fire erupting, New York became a haunting specter of how anarchy can take over a sophisticated Western city within a few hours."

The key word in this sage observation is "anarchy" and the sad fact is that those who rationalize, who offer excuses, who predict more of the same if the rest of us don't "do more" are the very ones who give aid and comfort to violence and to other kinds of lawlessness. Worse, they also are the very ones who should be in the front lines of Harlem, of Watts, of Detroit, of Chicago, of Hartford, when the threat of lawlessness surfaces.

But, they are not there then. Most of them, from the late Martin Luther King Jr. on down, preach nonviolence as they march and they sing "We Will Overcome." This is fine and it is everyone's hope that they will overcome — and they have overcome to a great extent.

But, despite their preachings on nonviolence they rarely jump on an airplane and rush to the site of such violence for the purpose of using their influence to calm the atmosphere, prevent the looting, stop the arson, stem the stabbings and the shootings.

Instead, they stand back — or they give excuses, warn of more to come and demand that it really is the fault of the rest of us — the honkies. There is no question but that early entry of King on the Watts scene in the '60s would have prevented much loss of life and saved homes and businesses that in some cases belonged to those who were rioting.

For Young's information, there were only 75 arrests during New York's 1965 blackout, only 20 for looting. But, violence has grown to be profitable, and there were 3,500 arrests during the '77 power failure.

No police officers were injured in 1965; 420 hurt in 1977s incidents. There were no fires in 1965; 904 in '77, plus 1,519 false alarms.

Even the wildest of the social bleeding hearts would have to acknowledge that minority race opportunities in 1977 are many times what they were in 1965. So why the situation that the London Express properly calls anarchy?

New York's blackout of 1977 was the "night of the animals" simply because it was clear that violence pays dividends. And, those who parade as disciples of nonviolence actually give tacit support to conduct they should be trying to prevent.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Spy missions swept under rug

By JACK ANDERSON
and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON —The James Bond industry has had its most embarrassing secrets broadcast from the rooftops. The beleaguered Central- Intelligence Agency, for example, has received more publicity than government agencies that advertise. All this hoopla has brought acute distress to espionage officials who regard it sourly as "indecent exposure."

But now President Carter has assured us that the revelations are over and that the nation's intelligence operations have been fully aired. There are "no lingering, unresolved illegalities or improprieties," he declared, that remain uninvestigated.

The President, however, has overlooked the 7602 Air Intelligence Group at Ft. Belvoir, Va. Over the years, this obscure unit has conducted a bewildering number of cloak-and-dagger operations around the globe.

During the Indochina fighting, for example, the unit dispatched an intrepid, young major on a secret mission to Laos. The Pentagon had picked up disturbing reports that one of its favorite Laotian generals was a double agent, who posed as a right-wing militarist but was really a secret communist. There was the awkward possibility that he might be diverting his massive U.S. military shipments to the communist guerrillas.

The major's grim orders were to investigate the general and then kill him if the reports proved true. Dutifully, the undercover officer, though a married man with two children, courted the general's attractive daughter. The American spy and the Laotian beauty, inevitably, fell in love.

But the major, true to his trust, delivered a full, factual report to his superiors. He had learned from his romantic liaison that the general was totally corrupt. But there was no evidence that he was working for the communists. The honest officer also gave his bosses a frank report on his own romantic involvement.

The Air Force, taking a stern view of adultery if not murder, withdrew the major from the assignment and rushed over his wife and children to rehabilitate him. His mission was turned over to a replacenent less susceptible to Laotian charms.

The confidential files also contain a report of another murder plot against a Laotian general. This general, too, was an Air Force favorite. According to the files, he would sneak down back trails, clogged with underbrush, from Laos to Thailand to provide the Air Force the latest intelligence.

But rival CIA spies somehow got the notion that the general wasn't true to the United States. Without bothering to inform his Air Force handlers, a CIA team ambushed the general on one of his visits but botched the assassination. The Air Force tenderly nursed the wounded general back to health at its Udorn base, but the aggrieved military men were unsuccessful in pressing charges against the CIA assassination team.

If U.S. authorities seemed unduly harsh on questionable generals, they pampered the loyal Laotian brass shamefully. Tbe Air Force, for example, procured a large limousine for a Laotian mountaintop commander, who had a special fondness for big American cars. The luxurious limousine was deposited at the doorstep of his craggy sanctuary by a U.S. cargo helicopter.

There was one limitation; he had only about 50 yards of rugged mountaintop road suitable for limousine travel. The proud commander, nevertheless, gunned his limousine back end forth over the 50-yard stretch. A team of orderlies also kept the car highly polished so he could show it off to visiting dignitaries. Now both the mountaintop and the limousine presumably are in communist hands.

Another Laotian warlord, with even more expensive tastes, wanted his own luxury plane. The Air Force obligingly refurbished an old transport plane in Japan and flew it to the delighted general, It was written off as "foreign aid."

Not all the Air Force intelligence operations, of course, were so dubious. A small but ingenious Air Force unit, for example, developed some of the best spies in the business along China's obscure southern borders.

These spies, some of them former Chinese Nationalists with excellent contacts in China, brought out valuable intelligence. The Air Force was also able to establish its own agents on the mainland. Through a devious payment system originating in Hong Kong and Taiwan, the Air Force was actually able to deliver payments to the agents inside China.

Footnote: We have cited only a few of the Air Force endeavors from intelligence reports that are full of unpublicized activities.

Mark Russell says

Whoever invented the neutron bomb must be a genius. As I understand it, if a Communist soldier and a civilian are standing side by side, the bomb only kills the Commie.

I guess the bomb comes with a dial and you simply set it on "enemy."

Let's hope the Japanese don't get in on this game, saying, "I'll see your Hiroshima and raise you one Cleveland."

It turns out that the New York blackout was caused when a power generator stopped working — the squirrel broke his foot.

They had a power failure in Plains, Georgia, one night around nine-thirty, but no one noticed, since all the lights were out already.

INSIDE REPORT:

President Carter's sugar is bit bitter these days

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBDRT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Political schizophrenia has led two members of President Carter's cabinet to take one position in private and another in public on increasingly troublesome sugar policy, raising questions about the impact here of a single corporation: the Coca-Cola Co.

Atlanta-based Coca-Cola, which buys 10 per cent of all home-grown or imported sugar in the U.S., profits heavily from current low prices. It supports the administration's two-penny domestic grower subsidy, viewed as hopelessly inadequate by U.S. growers, so strongly that chairman Russell Long of the Senate Finance Committee calls it "a Coca-Cola program."

That claim carries special significance in Jimmy Carter's Washington. Coca-Cola gave the President his Attorney General (Griffin Bell, senior partner in Coca-Cola's Atlanta law firm) and his Deputy Secretary of Defense (Charles Duncan). Budget director Bert Lance as an Atlanta banker had strong business and social links with the Coca-Cola hierarchy.

Nobody is charging conflict-of-interest. But congressional opponents of the administration's sugar policy fear the Coca-Cola connection means Mr. Carter may not be getting the full story on sugar policy from his cabinet — a clear breakdown of "cabinet government." What gives their fears substance is a July 7 confidential memorandum to the President.

lamenting an unexpected further decline in sharply falling sugar prices, the memo nevertheless defended the administration's two-penny domestic subsidy. Growers view that as worthless against cheap sugar imports and want import restrictions instead. The Eizenstat-Daft memo warned the President against congressional efforts "to cripple the program or replace it with a more protectionist program."

"As a result of these congressional actions," the President was told, "we have met with (Agriculture Secretary) Bob Bergland, (trade negotiator) Bob Strauss and (Assistant Secretary of State) Julius Katz to reassess our options. This group has concluded that the policy you announced in early May (the two-penny grower subsidy followed by a still elusive international sugar agreement) remains the best option and that we should redouble our efforts to avoid any congressional action that would undermine its chances."

In his heart, however, Bergland's concept of a "best option" differed. Exactly six days later, testifying before a Senate Finance subcommittee, Bergland used language seemingly designed to tear the two-penny program to shreds.

"Things are coming apart at the seams," he told the Senators. "We understand that...from our vantage point in the Department of Agriculture, we will never support a policy that will consciously or subconsciously allow the disintegration of the domestic sugar industry."

At that point, Sen. Long lashed out at the "Coca-Cola program" that was destroying Louisiana cane and Western beet growers.

Furthermore, Bergland's true sentiment about "the best option" makes twins of him and Bob Strauss. Testifying on July 20 to the House Banking Committee, Strauss declared:

"Secretary Bergland and I and the members of the Economic Policy Group (headed by Treasury Secretary Mike Blumenthal)...think it is proving to be wholly ineffective."

Strauss then made an even more dramatic departure from Eizenstat's memo. Asked whether he agreed with Comptroller General Elmer Staats' ruling that the two-penny subsidy is illegal, Strauss called the Comptroller General "dead right on that, and we have always been concerned that that was going to be where we end up...And it would not surprise me one bit if the Justice Department upheld it."

There would, however, be a problem there. Since Atty. Gen. Bell ran Coca-Cola's Atlanta law firm (King and Spalding, now headed by presidential intimate Charles Kirbo), an appeal by the administration to him from Staats' ruling would invite conflict-of-interest problems. The appeal would go to Deputy Atty. Gen. Peter Flaherty.

Congress, however, may seize upon the administration's lamentable confusion and place sugar under a mandatory price support system with import restrictions. If so, the President may be spared immediate further agony over sugar that has resulted from disjointed "cabinet government": Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal fighting for free trade, Bergland angling for supports and quotas, Strauss battling for anything that works, White House economic advisers plotting to continue low-price sugar for anti-inflation reasons.

The President seems willing to accept confusion as the price of diversity. The worrisome aspect is added by the Coca-Cola connection. Whether or not this is wholly unjustifiable suspicion in hyper-suspicious Washington, the confidential memo to the President can only promote those worries.

THE BIBLE
CAN YOU QUOTE IT?

By LAVINA ROSS FOWLER

1. From womb to tomb, life is full of pitfalls, with parents trying to steer their children clear of them. Solomon tried to prepare his sons to meet bad situations. "Be not afraid of sudden fear ——— For ———.: Proverbs 3:25,26.

2. "Trust the Lord with all thine heart: and ———." Proverbs 3:5.

3. "Be not wise in thine own eyes: fear ———." Proverbs 3:7.

4. "As ye have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also ———." 1 Cor. 15:49.

5. What question did Paul ask the disciples about their complete baptism when he reached Ephesus? Acts 19.

Four correct ... excellent. Three correct ... good.

BIBLE VERSE

"Ye are the salt of the earth: but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? it is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men." — Mat. 5:13.

DiAnn R. Schmidt becomes bride of George Koehl III in Malaysia

PORT DICKSON, Malaysia—DiAnn Ruth Schmidt of Abilene, Tex. and George Aloysius Koehl III of Abilene and formerly of Midland, Tex., were married at 6 p.m. Sunday in a double ring ceremony in the Golden Sands here. Officiating was Dr. Sidney P. Schmidt, the bride's father who is a missionary in Singapore.

Parents of the couple are Dr. and Mrs. Sidney B. Schmidt of Singapore and Mr. and Mrs. George Aloysius Koehl Jr. of Ahwaz, Iran.

The bride was attended by Rebel Koehl, the bridegroom's sister of Lubbock, Tex. George Koehl Jr. served as his son's best man. Flower girl was Thomasin Capps of Penang, Malaysia.

Ushers were Tim Schmidt and Todd Schmidt, the bride's brothers of Singapore. Mark Shelby of Penang, Malaysia was ringbearer.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal-length gown of ivory bridal satin and is the same gown her mother wore at her wedding. It was fashioned with a sweetheart neckline and long tapered sleeves which ended in points. The princess-line skirt descended into a chapel train edged in lace.

Her cathedral-length veil was edged in lace and fell in cascades. She designed the veil. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of white orchids grown in Malaysia.

Wedding music was provided by Sue Walker, pianist, and Janene Weller, soloist.

A reception was held in the Golden Sands following the ceremony. After a wedding trip to Penang, Malaysia, the couple will reside in Abilene after August where they will be attending Hardin-Simmons University.

Labs trying to improve food

By MARIAN BURROS
The Washington Post

PHILADELPHIA — "Maximum product uniformity ... more stable flavor ... builds profits ... our only real competition is nature ... create a food based on carbohydrates ... imparts richer mouth feel ... a new breakfast cereal that changes colors and flavors as you eat it ... remrakable uniformity ... virtually indistinguishable from real cheese."

Those were the kinds of slogans being used to sell the latest advances in engineered foods at the 37th annual conference of the Institute of Food Technologists here recently.

The concept that laboratory technology can improve on nature, which took root in the 1950s, pervades this convention of food scientists from the country's leading food companies and those who sell them the component parts. The results are what one would expect if a love for real food is not factored into the finished product. Food that would be recognizable as having come directly off a tree or out of the ground was so rare among the 290 exhibitors that one convention goer was prompted to describe a dried fruit and nut display as "an oasis in the desert."

This longtime observer of the IFT meetings said the exhibits usually reflect the problems plaguing the food industry at the time. "This year," she explained, "the emphasis was on the cheap." There were dozens of examples of how to substitute manufactured chocolate for chocolate from a bean; how to make cheap cuts of meat more palatable or completely substitute vegetable protein for meat protein; how to use less sweetener by using a stronger one.

In addition, according to Howard Mattson, public information director for the IFT, more equipment for analysis of engineered foods is being shown because the Food and Drug Administrration is looking more closely at both old and new food additives. Mattson said, "The new regulatory atmosphere makes it important to have instrumentation for analysis."

Some of the booths, staffed by white-coated men, did look like chemistry laboratories. Beautifully colored liquids going plop, plop, fizz, fizz, spinning, twirling, rotating in little test tubes. Computers, calculators and other electronic wizardry to calibrate the composition of a product within parts per billion.

It didn't make much difference whether the food was a dessert or main dish. The various products extended, or made solely from textured vegetable proteins, the meats and fish, were sweet. Sweetness is, of course, a great aid in disguising either unpleasant taste or absence of taste.

Mattson said there was also greater emphasis on what he called "natural flavors and natural colors" because "consumers are expressing greater and greater interest in them.

"There's a possibility in six, eight, 10 years that there won't be any synthetic dyes," Mattson said.

Synthetic dyes, those made from petrochemicals, have come under increasing fire lately as either potentially hazardous or insufficiently tested. A French company was selling powdered grape skins as a substitute for the now banned Red No. 2 and No. 40 artificial dyes. Others are selling beet extracts.

One of the newest technologies being touted was the "encapsulation" of flavors. Since the oil that carries the flavor is volatile, being able to capture it and keep it is supposed to ensure that the flavor is retained, an exciting concept to a food technologist when viewed as a triumph of science over nature. After all, if flavors and colors can be consistent, the finished product will be consistent. To a company that manufactures food this is preferable to the natural product, which has the bad grace to come in different degrees of color, flavor and even size. It also will be cheaper.

But even with the myriad of flavors being displayed, the overriding taste sensation at the exhibit was sweetness.

It didn't make much difference whether the food was a dessert or main dish. The various products extended, or made solely from textured vegetable proteins, the meats and fish, were sweet. Sweetness is, of course, a great aid in disguising either unpleasant taste or absence of taste. The beef stroganoff made from soy protein by Archer Daniels Midland, one of the largest processors of soybeans, did not taste of sour cream or of beef. It was simply sweet.

The flaked and formed "steaks" and "roasts" made by Griffith Laboratories from a low grade of beef — utility — and extended with vegetable protein were sweet.

Americans have a seemingly insatiable sweet tooth. Experts say they will react positively to things that taste sweet even if they should taste of something else.

To further feed the sweet tooth, there were several exhibitors showing the new high-fructose sweeteners. The substance is from 10 to 60 per cent sweeter than sucrose, so less of it is needed to achieve an equal degree of sweetness. It is being promoted as an alternative to saccharin for calorie-reduced foods.

Also in the sweet category were the many different ways of achieving an effect without using chocolate. What consumers see in the stores today in the way of synthetic chocolate is a fraction of what will be coming on the market in the near future. Some of the products had faint chocolate-like tastes; others were merely sweet.

But for a truly bizarre taste, one had only to sample a warm, soft pretzel flavored to taste like a hot dog.

Over at the McCormick & Co. display, tomato extender was being featured. It is used to extend foods in which tomato is the predominant flavor. It contains no tomato.

ITT-Continental is dreaming up new ideas for its alpha cellulose, popularly known as wood pulp.

HOROSCOPE

By CARROLL RIGHTER

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day to effectively handle whatever chores and tasks awaiting your attention so that you have the free time you will need later to conduct important activities. Be thoughtful.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be sure to keep any promises you have made to others and gain their goodwill. Not a good day to start a new project.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Coercing others is not wise today but clearing up any misunderstanding is possible. Take time to relax tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Handle any civic matters wisely today and avoid trouble later on. Show more thought for family members and increase happiness.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) New outlets are good to look into today, but be sure you follow through in a practical way. Don't neglect to pay your bills.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Handle those obligations that face you in a most efficient fashion. Being gentle with loved one is wise and brings fine rapport.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be completely honest with associates and come to a better understanding with them. Forget outside matters for the moment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't be upset by a co-worker who is highly sensitive now and you avoid an argument which could prove costly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Forget pleasure that is too expensive, otherwise you could regret spending the extra money later on. Show others you have wisdom.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Money and family matters should be handled in a most precise way today for best results. Take needed health treatments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Using much care in motion today is wise. Be sure not to criticize others at this time. Express happiness at home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't spend money too freely now and later you will have a reserve which you will need. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You may be depressed about current conditions but problems are often the means through which to advance if handled properly.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I love my parents, but they have their faults, and the one that bothers me most is their prejudice against people of other races and religions. They have tried their best to make me believe as they do, but I am happy to say they have not succeeded.

I know that children are supposed to honor their mothers and fathers, and I honor mine in most ways, but not in all. We've had some very heated arguments over this subject but I am only 14 ½ and I know they will never change, so now I just keep my cool.

I am writing to you, Dear Abby, because some of the stuff in your column has helped to open up my eyes.

Please keep stressing the importance of doing away with bigotry and prejudice.

I believe that we are all brothers in the family of man, and we could love each other if the children all over the world would refuse to accept the prejudices of their parents and society.

If this letter is good enough for your column, please sign me.—JIMMY

DEAR JIMMY: It is. And it's young people like you who give me hope for the future. Thank you for a beautiful letter.

I think you will appreciate the following philosophy which supports your view, and came to me unsigned. I hope that someone out there will identify its author.

"First they came for the Jews.
And I did not speak out
For I was not Jewish.
Then they came for the Catholics.
And I did not speak out
For I was not Catholic.
Then they came for the Gays.
And I did not speak out
For I was not Gay.
And then they came for me,
And there was nobody left
To speak out for anybody."

DEAR ABBY: Someone signed SPEAKING FOR TEENS stated in a letter to you that, in Samoa, premarital sex was customary. As a native of Samoa may I set the record straight?

Premarital sex is NOT the custom in Samoa today. We are taught that the very best gift a Samoan girl can give to her husband is her virginity, and to lose it before marriage not only brings disgrace to her family, but automatically places the girl into the category of a prostitute. Thank you.—PROUD SAMOAN TEEN

Woman hits 40

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP)—When Barbara Weekley turned 40 recently, her husband, Phillip, didn't handle the matter lightly.

He draped the garage door with black cloth and posted a large sign reading, "She's 40." As an added touch he put some potted lilies at the foot of the sign.

Katie Pyle ... HOUSEWIFE AND NEW MOTHER SAYS:
When I joined Golden Life Fitness Centers I weighed more than I'd ever weighed in my life. Of course I'd just had my first child and felt that it was an impossible task to get my now flabby body in shape.
For 5 long months I tried many of the various methods available trying to lose weight. Then I decided not only to lose that weight, but also to get in shape. I've now lost 11 lbs. but more important I've lost 15 inches of fat and I feel better than ever.

Jim Doyle...Bachelor--KHOB DISC JOCKEY AND BUSINESSMAN SHOWN HERE WITH HIS MAN-OF-THE-MONTH TROPHY SAYS;
You may find this hard to believe, but less than 3 months ago, the pants I'm wearing in the above picture were my favorite. I started my weight reduction program at a terrible 206 pounds. Within one month, I'd lost 33 lbs. and over 18 inches. But I was far from finished. I've now lost 50 pounds and over 25 inches of ugly fat. Amazing? No, but I have been fat all my life. If I can do this, think of what you can do!

Senators swipe at gas guzzlers

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the House prepared to begin a week of debate on President Carter's energy plan, a Senate committee voted today to set minimum mileage standards through 1985 as a means of discouraging production of gas-guzzling cars.

The Senate Energy Committee also voted as part of its consideration of the Carter energy proposals to double the penalties for auto companies which fail to meet existing mileage standards.

American auto manufacturers now must meet an average for gasoline mileage covering all models they produce. A 1975 law sets that average at 18 miles per gallon for 1978 models, climbing to 27.5 miles per gallon in 1985.,

A proposal by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, approved 10 to 6 by the committee, would set a mileage floor. The minimum would begin at 16 miles per gallon for 1980 models and rise to 21 miles per gallon in 1985.

The move was opposed vigorously by the big three American auto makers. Chrysler said it might have trouble with one of its 1980 models if the proposal became law. A Ford official said none of its cars planned for 1980 through 1985 would fall below the minimum set in the Metzenbaum proposal.

Nonetheless, Ford official Fred G. Secrest said there is a danger that a car model might fall below the minimum by a "trival percentage."

"We might face, therefore, the sudden necessity of closing plants that produce certain models or components, even though our over-all fleet-average efficiency was better than mandated goals."

In the House, meanwhile, the President's energy proposals appeared likely to survive unscathed during four days of scheduled debate and votes.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said 90 per cent of the President's plan, first revealed last April 20, has won approval from various House committees.

O'Neill has scheduled a full day of debate for today, with three days of votes on various aspects of the program to follow.

Last week, the House voted 238 to 149 to limit voting to 30 specific amendments to the energy plan, plus a comprehensive set of proposals offered by the Republican party. The GOP plan is to be considered in one piece.

The principal battle over the plan is expected to focus on whether to deregulate the price of natural gas or set a $1.75 ceiling, as urged by Carter, for each thousand cubic feet of gas.

House members from oil and gas producing states had hoped for wide latitude in urging variations on deregulation. Instead, they will be limited to proposing full deregulation of gas prices in a form previously defeated in the House Commerce Committee.

Also expected to be hotly debated is a four cent increase in federal gasoline excise taxes, which was approved by the House Ad Hoc Energy Committee. The proceeds from the added tax would go in part to mass transit projects.

Another version to be voted on would increase the present four cent tax by five cents with half the proceeds going to mass transit and the rest to the states for upgrading highways other than those in the Interstate system.

A third proposal that will be subjected to discussion during the floor debate would kill any increase in the gasoline tax that is aimed at reducing fuel consumption and encouraging Americans to drive less.

In the Senate, one portion of the President's energy plan — coal conversion — has been approved by a committee and could reach the floor this week. Meanwhile, natural gas deregulation will be voted on by the Senate Energy Committee, where the fight is expected to be as lively as it has been in the House.

On other issues, the Senate has been slowed by a Republican-led filibuster against a bill to subsidize Senate election campaigns.

Grand jury meets Tuesday

The Midland County grand jury is expected to consider 39 criminal cases when it meets Tuesday.

Among the cases to be considered are two murder charges and several charges of aggravated assault, burglary, theft and criminal mischief.

This meeting is the last of the current grand jury.

Dr. James G. Harris

Baptist leader dies

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Funeral services have been set for Tuesday for Dr. James G. Harris, the president of the Baptist General Convention of Texas, who died over the weekend. He was 63.

Dr. Harris died of an apparent heart attack Sunday morning while jogging, a spokesman for University Baptist Church said.

The El Dorado, Ark., native had served at the University Baptist Church since 1954.

Dr. Harris would have completed his second term as convention president in November. His administration launched this spring a multi-million dollar statewide media campaign called "Good News Texas."

Dr. Harris was a graduate of El Dorado Junior College, Louisiana Baptist College in Pineville, La., and received his masters and doctorate degrees from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary here.

Two more wounded by New York killer

By JACKIE STONE

NEW YORK (AP) — The killer who calls himself "Son of Sam" marked his first year of terror by pumping slugs into his 12th and 13th victims as they sat in a parked car watching the full moon over New York harbor.

He struck in Brooklyn, turf untouched in previous forays into Queens and the Bronx and unguarded by the beefed-up police patrols in those boroughs.

Stacy Moskowitz and Robert Violante, both 20-year-old Brooklynites, spent their first date Saturday night seeing a movie, dancing at a popular neighborhood discotheque and walking hand-in-hand in the moonlight.

The date ended Sunday morning with the pair in critical condition at Kings County Hospital, both shot through the head. Violante may be blinded. Miss Moskowitz was given only a 50-50 chance to survive.

"We had 2,000 cops out looking for Sam this weekend," a member of the special task force investigating the shootings said.

Mayor Abraham Beame ordered the assignment of 100 more policemen to the 70-man task force and promised Police Commissioner Michael Codd, "If you need still more men you'll have them."

Friday marked one year since the .44-caliber killer's first attack, when 18-year-old Donna Lauria died. The killer became known as Son of Sam following the April 17 fatal shooting of a man and woman as they sat in their car in the Bronx. A note attached to the car's steering wheel was signed, "Son of Sam."

His toll is now eight attacks, four women and one man dead, five women and three men wounded. In one of two handprinted notes left by the killer, he hinted he would kill again near the July 29 anniversary of his gruesome debut.

Starting on that anniversary, and all through the weekend, police had concentrated heavy patrols in Queens and the Bronx, neighborhoods where the Son of Sam had struck. But it was in the Bensonhurst section of Brooklyn, shortly before 3 a.m., that the killer spotted the young couple. Violante, in his father's brown Buick, had promised his father he would avoid Queens.

According to Chief of Detectives John Keenan, a witness parked with his girlfriend nearby "saw a man approach the car, crouch down, fire four shots and turn and walk away."

The gunman walked calmly past a playground and into a park, with the witness unable to pursue, Keenan said.

The description of a young white man, about 5-foot-7, of medium build, was similar to that given by witnesses to previous attacks by the Son of Sam.

Police said that several prime suspects had been under surveillance this weekend but all were accounted for when the Brooklyn shooting occurred.

Dibrell wishes information had come sooner

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — A man who investigated rumors of voting fraud in a 1948 election that launched Lyndon Johnson toward the Presidency says he wishes he could have had 29 years ago information revealed Sunday about vote tampering.

San Antonio lawyer T. Kellis Dibrell referred to an exclusive interview of former Jim Wells County election judge Luis Salas by The Associated Press. In the interview, published Sunday, Salas, 76, said he had increased the total votes for Johnson by about 200 in one ballot box.

"Luis Salas has finally confirmed what we knew all along," Dibrell said. "But we had some clues at the time there was going to be election cheating by the Johnson forces. We would have given anything to have this information 29 years ago."

Salas' statement concerned Box 13, which produced enough votes for Johnson to win the Democratic Party primary runoff for the U.S. Senate over Coke Stevenson, three-time Texas governor. The final tally gave Johnson an 87-vote margin out of almost 1 million ballots cast.

Salas said his orders to certify the bogus ballots came from South Texas political kingpin George Parr during a meeting in Alice attended by Johnson. Parr committed suicide in 1975.

However, unlike Dibrell, Mary Rather, who served off and on as Johnson's secretary from 1941 until his death in 1973, remains convinced her late boss knew nothing of the meeting.

"I know he wasn't in Alice," she said. "I have a very vivid recollection of that election and the days after. I'm positive he hardly left his residence where he and Mrs. Johnson lived. I was there constantly those days."

Dibrell said he always believed Johnson knew the votes were going to be changed. He said he had worked for Stevenson in Austin while attending law school and decided to help in Stevenson's 1948 election campaign.

"I had spent the last few months of a seven-year FBI carreer in Laredo and I had some idea of political problems in South Texas at that time," he said. "One of the Stevenson supporters called us from the Panhandle and said a person from the LBJ office had erroneously phoned him. He said the LBJ office thought he was a Johnson man and asked him if he would alter some election returns if necessary."

"That gave Coke a pretty good clue

FAVERGES, France (AP) — An increasingly violent struggle between Western European governments and foes of nuclear power flared into a bloody battle that left one person dead and more than 100 injured near a nuclear plant site in southeastern France.

Authorities blamed firebomb-throwing militants among an international group of 30,000 antinuclear protesters for provoking the bloodshed Sunday in this town in the French Alps.

Interior Minister Christian Bonnet said French, German and other militants "illegally and deliberately attacked" security forces.

Medical personnel said the one death, of a French demonstrator, apparently resulted from a heart attack. Grenade explosions blew off the hands or feet of two demonstrators and two policemen, officials said. Five of the injured were reported to be policemen.

The 30,000 demonstrators gathered in this area over the weekend to mount a march on the Super Phoenix fast-breeder reactor plant, under construction in nearby Creys-Malville.

As the demonstrators rallied for their march Sunday on the roads outside Faverges, 5,000 police were able to contain most of the crowd, but a splinter group of about 100 helmeted militants broke off from the main body and entered the town, where they met police in the worst violence of the day.

Authorities said the militants hurled rocks and firebombs and the police routed them with tear gas and smoke grenades.

As the protesters ran off, police found the body of 31-year-old Vital Michalon on the ground. Medical personnel said there were no marks on the body and Michalon apparently died of a heart attack.

Later clashes were reported in Morestel and in a neighboring hamlet, but it was not known if there were any injuries there.

Five arrests were made in the Faverges area.

The long-planned Faverges march was one of a series of sometimes violent protests across Western Europe in recent months staged by ecological and leftist groups opposed to nuclear power programs.

Their principal argument is that technologists have not yet devised adequate methods for the disposal of dangerous radioactive wastes and for prevention of nuclear accidents.

Rebels claim victories in Ethiopia fighting

By JOHN EDLIN

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Somalian-backed rebels fighting to unite Ethiopia's Ogaden region with Somalia claim to have hoisted their secessionist flag over all but four towns on the semi-desert plateau.

There has been no independent confirmation of rebel victory claims in the Ogaden, which makes up about two-thirds of Ethiopia's easternmost Harar province.

Somalia radio in a broadcast Sunday quoted a communique issued by the Western Somali Liberation Front that said inhabitants of "all liberated areas" were "staging demonstrations and festivities to mark their liberation."

Ethiopia radio, which usually reports on the conflict, made no mention of it in Sunday broadcasts. The Ethiopians have said they retain control of major population centers in northern Ogaden.

The rebel report, monitored in Nairobi, said, "Only four towns remain to be liberated." They were not identified.

Most maps show about 40 towns and villages dotting eastern Harar province, which juts knife-like into Somalia in the strategic Horn of Africa.

The insurgents, said to be backed by Somalian troops and equipment, want to tie the Ogaden into an East African "Greater Somalia."

Inhabited by tough Moslem nomads of Somali origin, the Ogaden plateau — about the size of Wyoming — was given to predominantly Christian Ethiopia 80 years ago by the British, then colonial rulers of East Africa, who arbitrarily divided the territory without regard for ethnic populations.

Shafter Lake's stones ended with year 1920

It was in remembrance of Joseph Snively, who was laid to rest in 1909 at age 71.

His is but one of a smattering of markers that pinpoint the graves of former denizens of this settlement that faded after Andrews won its bid for the county seat of Andrews County in 1910.

The cemetery, which overlooks the brackish waters of shallow Shafter Lake northwest of Andrews, is marked off and protected by an iron and wire fence.

Two turnstiles afford honest access to the cemetery that's somewhat overgrown in weeds and dotted with fragmented and whole beer bottles and with beer cans shot up with small caliber fire.

This place, for sure, is not totally forgotten.

Some scissortails and other birds were flying about or were perched on mesquite shrubs.

To them, it mattered not what the fenced-in plot of land was called by homo sapiens. Maybe it was just a place to perch, fly around, search for insects and other nourishment, and, generally, to live. Maybe it was their home.

The cemetery was kept active from 1900 to 1920. The latter appears to be latest date on many markers here.

Nearby is the stone marker of Grace Logsdon, 1891-1911.

The stone markers may tumble, wear down with the passing of time, wind and rain, but they are long-enduring.

"Asleep in Jesus,
"Blessed sleep.
"From whence none ever

Raging Alaska fires force fighters back

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Racing across a landscape dried to a crackle by record high temperatures, Alaska's worst fires in eight years are forcing fire fighters to fall back to protect threatened native villages.

The federal Bureau of Land Management said Sunday that 68 separate fires had charred an estimated 830,000 acres — about 1,300 square miles. One blaze had burned 300,000 acres about 100 miles northeast of Nome, while an 80,000-acre fire threatened the village of Shungnak 300 miles west of Fairbanks.

Temperatures in interior Alaska — where highs normally are in the mid 60s — reached as high as 90 degrees. The same heat which fed the northern fires melted snow caps and glaciers south of here and pushed the Kenai River over its banks. Minor flooding was expected to last through Tuesday.

Smoke from the fires was reported from as far away as eastern Siberia. It hung murkily over the landscape, and the National Weather Service said in some areas it was impossible to fly without instruments, even in the daytime.

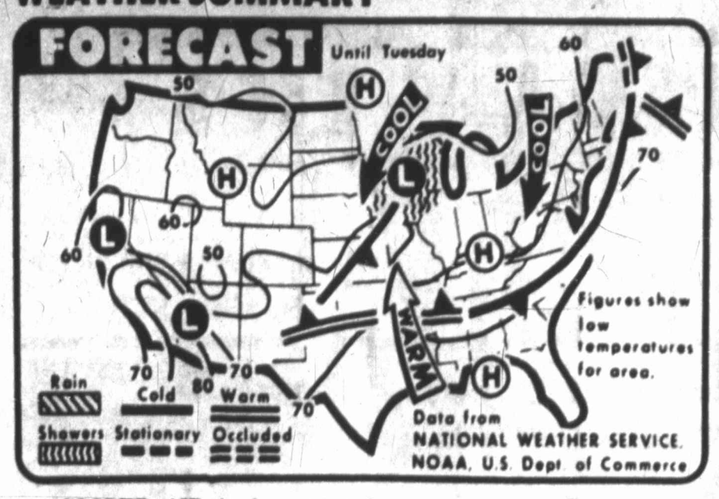

BLM District Manager Richard LeDosquet said his fire crews were abandoning fires which threatened only tundra.

At Shungnak, flames had reached to within six miles of the village. The BLM said an evacuation plan was prepared for its 140 residents.

Nine other villages, a major mining area and a trans-Alaska pipeline construction camp also were reported threatened by fire — though the pipeline itself was in no danger.

The agency said it had more than 600 fire fighters in the field and hundreds of others in staging areas awaiting transport to the battle areas.

WEATHER SUMMARY

COOLER AIR is forecast today to bring seasonably mild temperatures from the northern Plains to the Ohio Valley, but most of the country will be warm to hot. Showers are forecast for part of the Midwest and upper Great Lakes. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Strong thunderstorms hammer nation's East, South, Midwest

By The Associated Press

Thunderstorms and strong winds lashed out in the eastern and southern portions of the nation today while continued rain and thunderstorms were expected through much of the East and Midwest.

Storms were reported in the Appalachians from upstate New Yorf to Tennessee, rain was falling along the Gulf Coast from Florida to southeast Louisiana. Isolated showers were reported in coastal sections of Southern California.

A tornado touched down Sunday afternoon near Buffalo, N.Y., where it overturned cars and uprooted trees. Strong winds downed power lines in Mayville, N.Y., near the Pennsylvania border. Baseball-size hail fell in Holly, in southeastern Colorado, and in Manter and Elkhart, Kans. Golf ball-size hail was reported in Skellytown, Tex.

Mostly cloudy skies were reported from Southern California to the south Atlantic coast and over the Appalachians. Elsewhere skies were clear to partly cloudy.

High temperatures continued in the desert Southwest, with several locations reporting overnight lows in the 90s. Readings were seasonably mild elsewhere. Temperatures were in the 50s and 60s in the northern states and in the 60s and 70s over the southern states.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 51 degrees in Bismarck, N.D. to 102 degrees at Needles, Calif.

The National Weather Service predicted scattered showers and thunderstorms over the northern and southern Atlant c coast states and over the eastern Gulf Coast region. Isolated thunderstorms were likely over the northern Plains, the upper and lower Mississippi Valley, the mid-Atlantic coast states and portions of the southern Plains.

Temperatures will be seasonably mild over the northern Plains and upper Missisippi Valley, as well as portions of the lower Mississippi Valley and the Ohio Valley. Parts of Nevada and the Pacific Northwest can expect very hot weather. Warm to hot conditions will prevail over the rest of the nation.

Atlanta missing, Boston 71 hazy, Chicago 64 clear, Cincinnati 69 clear, Cleveland 67 cloudy, Detroit 65 clear, Indianapolis missing, Louisville 74 thunderstorms, Miami missing, Nashville 71 clear, New Orleans 79 clear, New York 68 hazy, Philadelphia 76 partly cloudy, Pittsburgh 64 partly cloudy, Washington 76 hazy.

Canada:

Montreal 68 partly cloudy, Toronto 68 showers.

Society has big library for clarinets

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—Cecil Gold, 33, is in charge of the library of the International Clarinet Society, one of the world's largest collections of clarinet scores and materials.

The nucleus of the library is a large score collection given to ICS by Bur Burnet C. Tuthill, an amateur clarinetist and composer.

When Gold was a clarinet professor at the University of Idaho, the library was housed on the university's Moscow, Idaho, campus. Last year, Gold got a post with the University of Akron. Now the library is housed on the University of Akron campus.

Gold receives six or seven score requests a month, mostly from clarinet students. Only members of ICS may borrow library materials. Since the society roster now contains more than 2,000 clarinetists, that is not an unfair restriction, he says.

Every year Gold and ICS publish and distribute a catalog of library materials that is updated with quarterly supplements in the ICS journal, The Clarinet.

Blasting caps found in Midland residence

Midland police were called to the F. L. Kintwell residence on East Golf Course Road Sunday morning where several blasting caps were found in a bedroom closet.

Kintwell told police he found the explosives while cleaning the closet. He did not know where the blasting caps came from or how they got into the house.

Police took the caps to the firing range near Cole Park where an explosives company will pick them up today.

AUTO BURGLARIZED

Burglars entered a car belonging to A. B. Canady of 3206 W. Michigan Ave. about 6:30 a.m. Saturday and took a .45 caliber pistol valued at $150, several credit cards, $200 in cash and a pair of dress pants valued at $35.

According to police, Canady left the car to drink coffee at a restaurant in the 3700 block of West Wall Avennue, and when he returned the items were missing. The burglars left a CB radio in the car untouched.

GUN TAKEN

Burglars also left a CB radio, but took a .38 caliber pistol from a car belonging to O.C. Franklin of 706 S. Lincoln while he was eating at a restaurant in the 300 block of North Lee Street about 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Franklin told police the gun was in the glove compartment and the car was unlocked. He said he discovered the gun missing after he returned home.

TELEVISIONS TAKEN

Genell White, the motel's desk clerk, told police the televisions were taken from apartments 67, 68 and 69.

Robber hits Dairy Queen

Midland police today early today were looking for an armed robber who took $2,040 in cash and checks from the Dairy Queen store at 3702 W. Wall Ave. about 12:30 a.m. Sunday.

Witnesses told police employes were cleaning up when a man wearing a hood and carrying a pistol walked into the store. He forced all the employes into an office and told the manager to give him all the money, witnesses told police.

The bandit then cut the telephone line and fled from the store.

Police said the witnesses described the bandit as a white male in his early 20s, slender build and blond or light brown hair.

Officers investigating the heist found the man's hood in a field behind the store. Footprints headed in a northwest direction were also found.

Make-up tennis lessons start

Make-up tennis lessons for Midland Parks and Recreation Department programs will be held starting today at Midland High School.

The lessons are to run today, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. The times are 9 a.m., 10 a.m., 11 a.m., 7 p.m., and 8 p.m.

Scholarships offered at MC

A number of scholarships are available through the music department of Midland College for the 1977-78 school year, according to Robert LaFontaine, coordinator of musical activities.

The scholarships are available for music majors and non-majors.

Those interested in applying for a music scholarship should contact La Fontaine at 684-7851 or 684-4968.

Woman, 23, abducted; found slain

LUBBOCK — Police here today were continuing their investigation of the slaying Sunday morning of a 23-year-old Lubbock woman.

The victim, Toni Diane Kumpf, was reportedly abducted from her home about 6:25 a.m. Sunday by a man described as 6 feet tall, 220 pounds and with shoulder length blond hair.

Her body was discovered by a farmer about three hours later beside a dirt road south of Lubbock. Her throat had been slashed ear-to-ear. The body was clad only in underwear and a T-shirt, police said.

Miss Kumpf reportedly was a recent graduate of Texas Tech University who was employed as a secretary at the university's medical school.

Neighbors told police they heard the victim scream, "Help me. Help me. Get him off me," before her abductor pulled her to a white pickup truck parked near her apartment.

Officers said the door frame in the entrance to her apartment had been smashed.

Operator claims home 'does favor'

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The operator of an Austin nursing home says she is doing "the city a favor by taking deadbeats off the street."

Loyce Graves of Cartwheel Lodge said in an interview published by the Austin AmericanStatesman on Sunday that she routinely falsifies activity reports because her 91 patients don't have minds that can be stimulated.

"These rules make liars out ofall of us," she said. "There's no way we can comply with the law.

"Most of my people just want to be left alone. They have no minds. They're not able to learn," she said.

"We've got dribblers, soilers and spitters." Some of the rooms at Cartwheel smell of urine because the residents "don't kpow what a toilet is. Some just as well use the sink," she said.

Rules require water pitchers at every bedside, but the Cartwheel operator says some of her patients urinate in them. Reading lights must be provided, but she said none of her patients can read.

Cool front brings chance for rainfall

The frontal system from the east that brought strong winds this morning is bringing with it a 40 per cent chance of rain tonight.

Temperatures Tuesday are expected to be in the upper 90s.

That cool front from the east this morning brought gusty winds, a little dust, and an overnight low of 69 degrees reached at 8 a.m.

The peak wind gust was 37 mph at 4 a.m., and the morning wind storm averaged 27 mph as many Midlanders came to work between 7 and 8 a.m. today.

Low clouds and some dust was reported this morning in Lamesa, Stanton, Odessa, Andrews and Big Lake.

Scattered thunderstorms were expected to continue to roam over North Texas today, bringing cooler temperatures to the Panhandle, and some rain was forecast for other parts of the state.

Golf ball size hail was sighted late Sunday night at Skelly Town in the Panhandle, but no damage was reported. However, some street flooding was reported at Amarillo.

Skies were clear over the rest of the Lone Star state with temperatures ranging from the 60s in the mountains and the Panhandle to the 70s and 80s in East Texas and South Texas before dawn today, the Associated Press reported.

The National Weather Service looked for more scattered thunderstorms today in Northeast, West and South Texas.

Official forecasts called for temperatures to reach the 80s in the Panhandle and the 90s in other parts of the state, except for the Big Bend area, where temperatures were expected to climb to 105 degrees.

of what was about to happen. This call to alter the votes came about 24 hours after the election. Coke told me if there was going to be any heavy vote altering it would be in South Texas. I went to a good police source in Laredo, a Laredo police captain, to help me try and uncover any vote irregularities. I dropped him off in Duvall County and I went to Alice. When the Box 13 thing popped up, we were right there."

Dibrell said he went to question Salas but that the election judge had gone to Mexico.

"Of course, the case went to court, but when U.S Supreme Court Justice Black voided a temporary injuction against putting Johnson's name on the ballot, that ended all investigation," he said.

Justice Hugo Black's action stopped a federal court investigation of the election. The probe included a hearing at which Salas testified the election was "level."

Food costs continue steady rise

By The Associated Press

Grocery prices continued to increase at a relatively moderate level during July, although there were scattered sharp boosts for a variety of items, an Associated Press survey shows.

Among the products most frequently rising in price were frozen orange juice concentrate, tomato sauce, milk and frankfurters. Decreases were spotted in the price of chopped chuck, pork chops and eggs.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and nonfood items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973 and hes rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

Highlights of the latest survey were:

—The marketbasket total at the checklist store increased during July in five cities, up an average 2.2 per cent, and decreased in eight cities, down an average .9 per cent. The biggest increaees — just over 4 per cent in Providence, R.I., and Salt Lake City — occurred because items that had been on sale at the start of July were at regular price levels in the current survey.

On an overall basis, the bill at the end of July was about a third of a per cent higher than it was a month earlier. The rate of overall increase was the same as it was during June, when the marketbasket was higher at the checklist store in nine cities and lower in four.

—Comparing prices at the start of August with those seven months earlier, the AP found the marketbasket total was higher in every city, up at average of 9.4 per cent. When coffee was removed from the totals, however, the increase was only 2.7 per cent.

—Coffee prices took a dip last month, decreasing at the checklist store in six cities, generally about 20 cents a pound. Coffee now is between $3.50 and $4 a pound in most cities. The drops reflect cuts at the wholesale level which, in turn, mirror decreases in the cost of coffee beans. The decrease has been c edited partly to a drop in consumption among shoppers who rebelled at high prices.

—Orange juice increased in more places than any other single item during July, rising at the checklist store in eight cities. There have been predictions of higher prices ever since the winter freeze which hurt the Florida citrus crop.

—As usual, food products accounted for more of the fluctuations than nonfood items. Nonfoods represented 20 per cent of the total number of items, but only 16 per cent of the ups and downs.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, chocolate chip cookies, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar.

The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M., Atlanta, Ga., Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, Salt Lake City and Seattle.

DiAnn R. Schmidt becomes bride of George Koehl III in Malaysia

PORT DICKSON, Malaysia—DiAnn Ruth Schmidt of Abilene, Tex. and George Aloysius Koehl III of Abilene and formerly of Midland, Tex., were married at 6 p.m. Sunday in a double ring ceremony in the Golden Sands here. Officiating was Dr. Sidney P. Schmidt, the bride's father who is a missionary in Singapore.

Parents of the couple are Dr. and Mrs. Sidney B. Schmidt of Singapore and Mr. and Mrs. George Aloysius Koehl Jr. of Ahwaz, Iran.

The bride was attended by Rebel Koehl, the bridegroom's sister of Lubbock, Tex. George Koehl Jr. served as his son's best man. Flower girl was Thomasin Capps of Penang, Malaysia.

Ushers were Tim Schmidt and Todd Schmidt, the bride's brothers of Singapore. Mark Shelby of Penang, Malaysia was ringbearer.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal-length gown of ivory bridal satin and is the same gown her mother wore at her wedding. It was fashioned with a sweetheart neckline and long tapered sleeves which ended in points. The princess-line skirt descended into a chapel train edged in lace.

Her cathedral-length veil was edged in lace and fell in cascades. She designed the veil. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of white orchids grown in Malaysia.

Wedding music was provided by Sue Walker, pianist, and Janene Weller, soloist.

A reception was held in the Golden Sands following the ceremony. After a wedding trip to Penang, Malaysia, the couple will reside in Abilene after August where they will be attending Hardin-Simmons University.

Labs trying to improve food

By MARIAN BURROS
The Washington Post

PHILADELPHIA — "Maximum product uniformity ... more stable flavor ... builds profits ... our only real competition is nature ... create a food based on carbohydrates ... imparts richer mouth feel ... a new breakfast cereal that changes colors and flavors as you eat it ... remrakable uniformity ... virtually indistinguishable from real cheese."

Those were the kinds of slogans being used to sell the latest advances in engineered foods at the 37th annual conference of the Institute of Food Technologists here recently.

The concept that laboratory technology can improve on nature, which took root in the 1950s, pervades this convention of food scientists from the country's leading food companies and those who sell them the component parts. The results are what one would expect if a love for real food is not factored into the finished product. Food that would be recognizable as having come directly off a tree or out of the ground was so rare among the 290 exhibitors that one convention goer was prompted to describe a dried fruit and nut display as "an oasis in the desert."

This longtime observer of the IFT meetings said the exhibits usually reflect the problems plaguing the food industry at the time. "This year," she explained, "the emphasis was on the cheap." There were dozens of examples of how to substitute manufactured chocolate for chocolate from a bean; how to make cheap cuts of meat more palatable or completely substitute vegetable protein for meat protein; how to use less sweetener by using a stronger one.

In addition, according to Howard Mattson, public information director for the IFT, more equipment for analysis of engineered foods is being shown because the Food and Drug Administrration is looking more closely at both old and new food additives. Mattson said, "The new regulatory atmosphere makes it important to have instrumentation for analysis."

Some of the booths, staffed by white-coated men, did look like chemistry laboratories. Beautifully colored liquids going plop, plop, fizz, fizz, spinning, twirling, rotating in little test tubes. Computers, calculators and other electronic wizardry to calibrate the composition of a product within parts per billion.

It didn't make much difference whether the food was a dessert or main dish. The various products extended, or made solely from textured vegetable proteins, the meats and fish, were sweet. Sweetness is, of course, a great aid in disguising either unpleasant taste or absence of taste.

Mattson said there was also greater emphasis on what he called "natural flavors and natural colors" because "consumers are expressing greater and greater interest in them.

"There's a possibility in six, eight, 10 years that there won't be any synthetic dyes," Mattson said.

Synthetic dyes, those made from petrochemicals, have come under increasing fire lately as either potentially hazardous or insufficiently tested. A French company was selling powdered grape skins as a substitute for the now banned Red No. 2 and No. 40 artificial dyes. Others are selling beet extracts.

One of the newest technologies being touted was the "encapsulation" of flavors. Since the oil that carries the flavor is volatile, being able to capture it and keep it is supposed to ensure that the flavor is retained, an exciting concept to a food technologist when viewed as a triumph of science over nature. After all, if flavors and colors can be consistent, the finished product will be consistent. To a company that manufactures food this is preferable to the natural product, which has the bad grace to come in different degrees of color, flavor and even size. It also will be cheaper.

But even with the myriad of flavors being displayed, the overriding taste sensation at the exhibit was sweetness.

It didn't make much difference whether the food was a dessert or main dish. The various products extended, or made solely from textured vegetable proteins, the meats and fish, were sweet. Sweetness is, of course, a great aid in disguising either unpleasant taste or absence of taste. The beef stroganoff made from soy protein by Archer Daniels Midland, one of the largest processors of soybeans, did not taste of sour cream or of beef. It was simply sweet.

The flaked and formed "steaks" and "roasts" made by Griffith Laboratories from a low grade of beef — utility — and extended with vegetable protein were sweet.

Americans have a seemingly insatiable sweet tooth. Experts say they will react positively to things that taste sweet even if they should taste of something else.

To further feed the sweet tooth, there were several exhibitors showing the new high-fructose sweeteners. The substance is from 10 to 60 per cent sweeter than sucrose, so less of it is needed to achieve an equal degree of sweetness. It is being promoted as an alternative to saccharin for calorie-reduced foods.

Also in the sweet category were the many different ways of achieving an effect without using chocolate. What consumers see in the stores today in the way of synthetic chocolate is a fraction of what will be coming on the market in the near future. Some of the products had faint chocolate-like tastes; others were merely sweet.

But for a truly bizarre taste, one had only to sample a warm, soft pretzel flavored to taste like a hot dog.

Over at the McCormick & Co. display, tomato extender was being featured. It is used to extend foods in which tomato is the predominant flavor. It contains no tomato.

ITT-Continental is dreaming up new ideas for its alpha cellulose, popularly known as wood pulp.

HOROSCOPE

By CARROLL RIGHTER

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day to effectively handle whatever chores and tasks awaiting your attention so that you have the free time you will need later to conduct important activities. Be thoughtful.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be sure to keep any promises you have made to others and gain their goodwill. Not a good day to start a new project.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Coercing others is not wise today but clearing up any misunderstanding is possible. Take time to relax tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Handle any civic matters wisely today and avoid trouble later on. Show more thought for family members and increase happiness.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) New outlets are good to look into today, but be sure you follow through in a practical way. Don't neglect to pay your bills.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Handle those obligations that face you in a most efficient fashion. Being gentle with loved one is wise and brings fine rapport.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be completely honest with associates and come to a better understanding with them. Forget outside matters for the moment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't be upset by a co-worker who is highly sensitive now and you avoid an argument which could prove costly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Forget pleasure that is too expensive, otherwise you could regret spending the extra money later on. Show others you have wisdom.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Money and family matters should be handled in a most precise way today for best results. Take needed health treatments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Using much care in motion today is wise. Be sure not to criticize others at this time. Express happiness at home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't spend money too freely now and later you will have a reserve which you will need. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You may be depressed about current conditions but problems are often the means through which to advance if handled properly.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I love my parents, but they have their faults, and the one that bothers me most is their prejudice against people of other races and religions. They have tried their best to make me believe as they do, but I am happy to say they have not succeeded.

I know that children are supposed to honor their mothers and fathers, and I honor mine in most ways, but not in all. We've had some very heated arguments over this subject but I am only 14 ½ and I know they will never change, so now I just keep my cool.

I am writing to you, Dear Abby, because some of the stuff in your column has helped to open up my eyes.

Please keep stressing the importance of doing away with bigotry and prejudice.

I believe that we are all brothers in the family of man, and we could love each other if the children all over the world would refuse to accept the prejudices of their parents and society.

If this letter is good enough for your column, please sign me.—JIMMY

DEAR JIMMY: It is. And it's young people like you who give me hope for the future. Thank you for a beautiful letter.

I think you will appreciate the following philosophy which supports your view, and came to me unsigned. I hope that someone out there will identify its author.

"First they came for the Jews,
And I did not speak out
For I was not Jewish.
Then they came for the Catholics.
And I did not speak out
For I was not Catholic.
Then they came for the Gays,
And I did not speak out
For I was not Gay.
And then they came for me,
And there was nobody left
To speak out for anybody."

DEAR ABBY: Someone signed SPEAKING FOR TEENS stated in a letter to you that, in Samoa, premarital sex was customary. As a native of Samoa may I set the record straight?

Premarital sex is NOT the custom in Samoa today. We are taught that the very best gift a Samoan girl can give to her husband is her virginity, and to lose it before marriage not only brings disgrace to her family, but automatically places the girl into the category of a prostitute. Thank you.—PROUD SAMOAN TEEN

Katie Pyle ... HOUSEWIFE AND NEW MOTHER SAYS:

When I joined Golden Life Fitness Centers I weighed more than I'd ever weighed in my life. Of course I'd just had my first child and felt that it was an impossible task to get my now flabby body in shape.

For 5 long months I tried many of the various methods available trying to lose weight. Then I decided not only to lose that weight, but also to get in shape. I've now lost 11 lbs. but more important I've lost 15 inches of fat and I feel better than ever.

Protestors renew fight on N-plant

SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — The Clamshell Alliance, opponent of a proposed nuclear power plant here, is returning to the construction site three months to the day that 1,414 protestors were arrested.

Clamshell is sponsoring a vigil at the plant gate today to protest last week's reinstatement of the plant's construction permit by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's appeals board.

The construction permit was suspended earlier this year because of questions about the plant's proposed ocean water cooling system. The Federal Environmental Protection Agency has approved the plan.

Officers of Public Service Co. of New Hampshire, the prime stockholder in the $2.5 billion oceanfront project, have said it may take months to bring it back to the level of activity before the permit was suspended. They said many of the workers found other jobs during the suspension.

Few workers are expected on the site today when the vigil is going on, union leaders said.

The Clamshell Alliance, a loosely knit coalition of anti-nuclear power groups from the Northeast, has charged that the Seabrook plant is not needed and would not be safe. It sponsored the weekend occupation of the Seabrook site on April 30 and May 1.

House debates Carter's plan

By MIKE SHANAHAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's energy plan is going before the House of Representatives with most of its major provisions intact, despite three months of preliminary legislative skirmishing.

While major tests remain for the proposals in the Senate, chances appear good that the President's program will survive unscathed during four days of debate and voting in the House this week.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said 90 per cent of the President's plan, first revealed last April 20, has won approval from various House committees.

O'Neill has scheduled a full day of debate for today, with three days of votes on various aspects of the program to follow.

Last week, the House voted 238 to 149 to limit voting to 30 specific amendments to the energy plan, plus a comprehensive set of proposals offered by the Republican party. The GOP plan is to be considered in one piece.

The principal battle over the plan is expected to focus on whether to deregulate the price of natural gas or set a $1.75 ceiling, as urged by Carter, for each thousand cubic feet of gas.

House members from oil and gas producing states had hoped for wide latitude in urging variations on deregulation. Instead, they will be limited to proposing full deregulation of gas prices in a form previously defeated in the House Commerce Committee.

Also expected to be hotly debated is a four cent increase in federal gasoline excise taxes, which was approved by the House Ad Hoc Energy Committee. The proceeds from the added tax would go in part to mass transit projects.

Another version to be voted on would increase the present four cent tax by five cents with half the proceeds going to mass transit and the rest to the states for upgrading highways other than those in the Interstate system.

A third proposal that will be subjected to discussion during the floor debate would kill any increase in the gasoline tax that is aimed at reducing fuel consumption and encouraging Americans to drive less.

In the Senate, one portion of the President's energy plan — coal conversion — has been approved by a committee and could reach the floor this week. Meanwhile, natural gas deregulation will be voted on by the Senate Energy Committee, where the fight is expected to be as lively as it has been in the House.

On other issues, the Senate has been slowed by a Republican-led filibuster against a bill to subsidize Senate election campaigns. Democratic leaders planned another attempt today to limit debate on the issue.

A House-Senate clean air conference committee met for three days last week, but was unable to reach agreement on major revisions to federal clean air rules.

The auto industry, which says it cannot meet standards currently in the law, is threatening to shut down unless Congress takes some action so the conferees scheduled night sessions for tonight and Tuesday.

Sadat clarifies position

NEW YORK (AP) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat says he wasn't trying to overthrow Libya strongman Moammar Khadafi in the recent four day conflict between their two countries, but it was not because he doesn't think Khadafi should be ousted.

Sadat said the overthrow of Khadafi would "not only benefit the Arab people but the people of the whole world."

Sadat, interviewed on the ABC program "Issues and Answers" which was broadcast Sunday, also said he believes "for sure" the Soviet Union provoked the fighting between Libya and Eqypt.

He said he would protest to Moscow what he called interference by Soviet helicopters. Sadat charged that the Soviet helicopter carrier Moskova lay just outside Egyptian waters during the conflict and that 12 helicopters from the ship interfered with Egyptian radar and radio communications.

Dr. James G. Harris

Baptist leader dies

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Funeral services have been set for Tuesday for Dr. James G. Harris, the president of the Baptist General Convention of Texas, who died over the weekend. He was 63.

Dr. Harris died of an apparent heart attack Sunday morning while jogging, a spokesman for University Baptist Church said.

The El Dorado, Ark., native had served at the University Baptist Church since 1954.

Dr. Harris would have completed his second term as convention president in November. His administration launched this spring a multi-million dollar statewide media campaign called "Good News Texas."

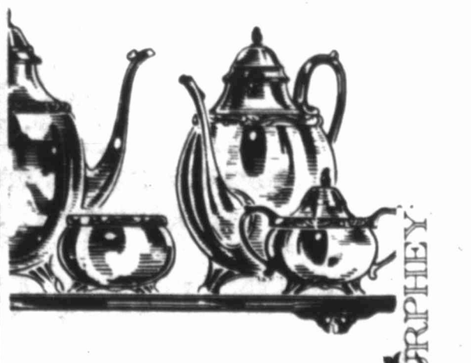

Dr. Harris was a graduate of El Dorado Junior College, Louisiana Baptist College in Pineville, La., and received his masters and doctorate degrees from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary here.

Nuclear plant fosters debate

By PETER J. BOYER

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — At the foot of a gentle bluff on the central California coast stands a nuclear power plant that splits no atoms and generates controversy, not electricity.

Diablo Canyon Nuclear Power Plant looks like any of the nation's 66 operational power plants — a huge monolith of concrete and steel, wires, dials and rotors. But Diablo is different — an earthquake fault lies on the ocean floor just three miles from the plant.

And that is the ace in the hole for fervent antinuclear protestors who hope to garner publicity and make Diablo a testing ground for the whole issue of nuclear power.

The Hosgri fault, named after two oil company geologists who discovered it, was found after construction on the twin reactors in Diablo Canyon was well under way.

Pacific Gas and Electric Co., the private, San Francisco-based utility that owned Diablo, says its plant can hold up under any quake the fault can produce.

Others, including the U.S. Geological Survey, disagree. The USGS said that although Diablo was built to withstand a quake registering 6.75 on the Richter scale, it is not strong enough to take what the Hosgri fault might produce, a 7.50 quake.

The Diablo plant stands idle while the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) considers whether to license it.

The NRC has never refused any power plant a license, but the Diablo case is a sticky one. Here is a billion-dollar atom splitting tool, a plant that could generate as much electricity as that of PG&E's hydro-electric plants together, standing on a fault that could cause an earthquake that might shatter Diablo's foundations.

The local protestors are a hybrid group, steeped in the antiwar movement and using civil disobedience as their weapon.

They gained heart recently from a huge demonstration against a nuclear power plant in Seabrook, N.H. About 2,000 longhairs, nursing mothers, grandmotherly Quakers and revitalized antiwar radicals converged on the proposed site and sat there for 24 hours, prepared to go to jail.

Police arrested 1,414. The news media jumped on the story, and the Clamshell Alliance, which led the protest, had captured what demonstrators hungrily feed upon — national exposure.

Inspired by the Clamshell Alliance, California protestors formed the Abalone Alliance and picked Aug. 6-7, Hiroshima Day weekend, for their action. Clamshell also has a demonstration planned for that weekend.

"We will have about 50 hardcore occupiers (those willing to cross on to PG&E property and go to jail)," said Bob Wolf, of People Generating Energy, one of the groups comprising Abalone Alliance. With Daniel Ellsberg as a featured speaker, the protestors predict 1,000 supporters will show up.

"They are not going to be allowed in. If they do get in, we'll have to have them arrested. They'd be trespassing," said Dick Davin, a spokesman for PG&E.

Gas well fire still blazing

ZAPATA, Tex. (AP) — A partner in a firm that owns a gas well that has been burning for three days says Red Adair, Houston's world famous oil and gas well firefighter, will try today to control the blaze at the rig 20 miles southeast of this South Texas border town.

Former U.S. Ambassador John Hurd of Laredo, who is a partner in Killam and Hurd Ltd., owners of the well, said the fire has been burning out of control since Friday. He said there were no injuries.

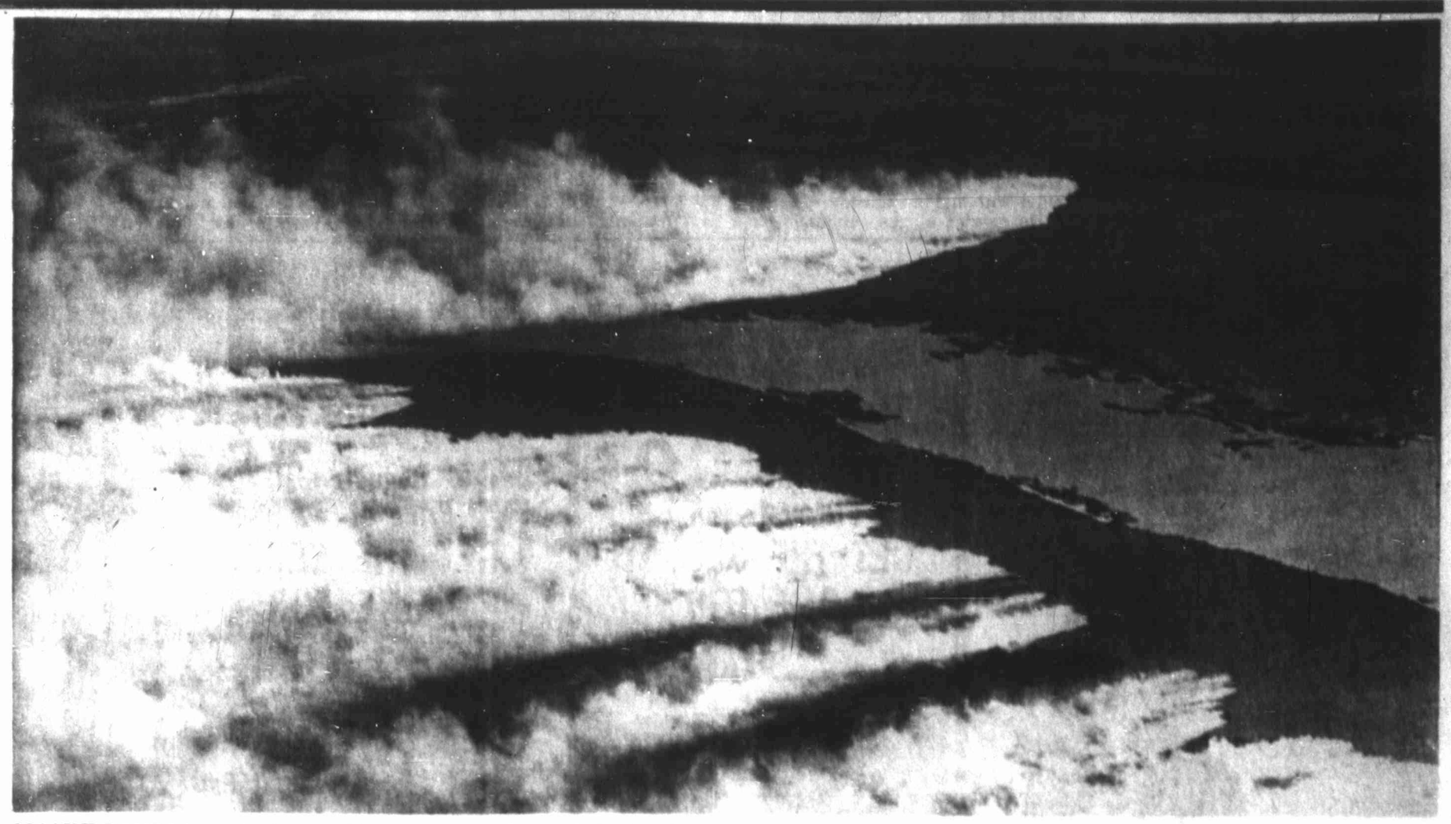

"We were down about 7,900 feet and had been drilling through four feet of sand at the time," Hurd said Sunday.

Hurd said he understood that Adair will attempt to force mud into the hole to cut the gas flow.

"Right now, we are gathering mud from all over, trying to get him what he needs," Hurd said.

Hurd, who was an ambassador from 1970-1975, estimated surface damage "in excess of a million dollars." He said up to 10 million cubic feet of gas under 6,000 pounds of pressure per square inch is escaping from the blazing well daily.

"It's a real ball of fire," he said.

SMOKE POURS from the fringe of the 300,000-acre Kugruk Heights range fire on Alaska's Seward Peninsula, about 100 miles northeast of Nome. The Bureau of Land Management said the blaze is the largest of 68 Alaskan fires, which totaled about 830,000 acres late Sunday.

Women preparing anti-abortion memorandum

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women who work for President Carter but don't like his opposition to federally financed abortions are preparing a memorandum that will underline their discomfort with his position.

The memo, which is expected eventually to be seen by Carter, says their "reaction is deeply felt on a deeply felt issue — federal funding for abortions."

Carter opposes using federal Medicaid funds to pay for elective abortions.

The preparation of the memo follows a White House meeting on the abortion issue two weeks ago, which was attended by about 40 people, including some of Carter's top female appointees and their aides.

A source familiar with a draft of the memorandum said it reads in part: "We believe we are here to assist you. We are here to do a job. We joined the administration proudly. In an administration where we feel comfortable in speaking out, we want you to know that your leadership could make a difference in (this matter.)"

People familiar with the situation say they expect at least two Cabinet members to sign the memo. They would not specify which ones, but there have been reports that Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Patricia Roberts Harris told Carter at a Cabinet meeting she does not agree with his abortion position.

Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps also is reported to oppose the President's position.

Sources say one reason why Carter has not yet received the memo is that the women, whose professional backgrounds vary, have been unable to agree on exactly what it should say.

"You have 40 strong-minded, very busy women, and it's hard to get them together, much less agree," said one who is working on the memo.

Many of the women took issue with a statement Carter made at a press conference a few weeks ago:

"There are many things in life that are not fair, that wealthy people can afford and poor people can't. But I don't believe that the federal government should take action to try to make these opportunities exactly equal, particularly when there is a moral factor involved."

And Carter said that if the federal government is willing to finance abortions for poor women it amounts to "an encouragement to abortion and its acceptance as a routine contraceptive means."

Many of the women said they felt Carter was imposing his own moral and religious beliefs on public policy.

HEW officials say their department paid for 30,000 abortions last year at a cost of $50 million, primarily through the Medicaid program. That was more than one-fourth of the 1.1 million legal abortions performed in the United States last year.

Iron-ore workers strike

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — Thousands of iron-ore workers defied a no-strike contract clause and walked off their jobs in northern Minnesota and Upper Michigan today, staging the first strike in the basic steel industry in 18 years.

The strike, if continued for very long, could seriously cur' tail steel production. Minnesota accounts for about two-thirds of the country's iron-ore production.

United Steelworkers spokesmen said members voted overwhelmingly to strike after last minute negotiations between 21 union locals and 15 iron ore and steel firms failed late Sunday.

The steel industry said it would sue the locals for violation of the no-strike clause in the current contract. But that clause is operative only on national issues, and the strikers say they are disputing local matters, which is allowed.

U.S. Steel Corp. spokesman Andrew Starsky in Pittsburgh said the companies would ask damages totaling millions of dollars daily.

Linus Wampler of Lead, S.D., USW district director, met Sunday in Hurley, Wis., with other union officials. He said that the union received no new contract offer from the steel companies — "none whatsoever."

Wampler said there are about 1,250 unresolved issues between the workers and companies, involving topics from pay to safety standards.

The basic steel contract, signed earlier in Pittsburgh, would include an 80-cent an hour pay increase over three years, plus fringe benefits. Steelworkers' wages average a little more than $8 an hour.

About 14,000 workers were on strike in Minnesota and another 6,000 in Michigan.

"I Never Thought I'd See the Day I Could Walk Into A Size 7, But I Can Thanks to Pat Walker!"

. . . Says Helen Jourde

All through junior high and senior high school I had to wear homemade clothes because it was hard to find ready-made clothes that would fit me. I would look at the slim girls in their cute current fashions and wish I could look like they did. But how could I lose when I didn't like to exercise or diet?

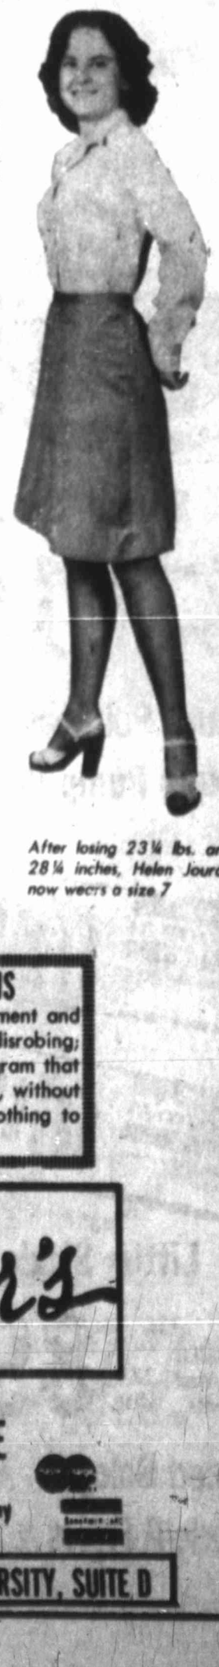

Helen Jourde before coming to Pat Walkers

By the time I was in my first year of college I weighed 140 pounds. Relatively few of the girls at college were overweight, and seeing all those slim, fashionable girls made me determined to lose weight! But I was dismayed because I knew I could not do it on my own; I had tried and failed before.

When I saw Pat Walker's ad in the newspaper I decided that this was my chance to finally shed this excess baggage that I was needlessly carrying around.

I was surprised and delighted when I lost weight after just one week at Pat Walker's Figure Salon. Now that I'm down I am very happy indeed. I never thought I'd see the day when I could walk into a size 7, but I can! And I couldn't have done it without Pat Walker.

(Signed) Helen Jourde

After losing 23¼ lbs. and 28¼ inches, Helen Jourde now wears a size 7

Man, accompanied by dog, travels when urge hits

By ROBERT W. WELKOS

WINNEMUCCA, Nev. (AP) — As Loren Williams tells it, he once married one of those "nest builders" who enjoy "buying trinkets like a couch that folds down into a pool table or some damn thing."

She was the kind of woman who wanted him to mow the lawn "when I wanted to prop my feet up and watch the football game," he remembers, adding: "My ex-wife is into the washer and dryer routine but I'm into trash."

Well, Williams has flown the nest.

It happens to be raining in this north-central Nevada town on this particular day. Inga is sleeping under a blanket while Williams dons his plastic rain suit.

"We're on our way to the Calgary Stampede in Canada," Williams says, scratching his beard and breaking into a wide smile.

"We left Yuma about two months ago," he says. "We make about 100 or 200 miles a day and can cruise at about 40 to 45 miles per hour. But she squirts oil all the time and it feels like I'm riding on a tractor."

Williams says he found the motorcycle — a "dinosaur" as motorcycles go — alongside a house trailer in Yuma four years ago. He has since spent $1,500 on parts. "I've burned up the motor twice," Williams says. "She needs lots of oil."

For the past year, Williams, a house renovator by trade, has been traveling whenever the urge hits him. It hits him often.

He admits that his life doesn't appeal to everyone but it's his life and he's living it his way. "My parents always told me to make something of myself and be somebody, but what's somebody? What does make something of yourself mean?"

Williams' sons are nearly grown. Their ages are 21, 19 and 17.

"I like to check in on the 17year-old every chance I get and see what he's up to. The others are working or going to school. They accept the way I am."

Williams says he was once happy with the 9-to-5 life but gradually got fed up with the routine. "I see a lot of people screwed up," he says.

Williams prefers the open country to the cities.

Berlin official launch attempt to mend image of old 'Embassy Row'

By STEPHEN H. MILLER

The mammoth red stucco embassy of Mussolini's Italy still stands crumbling on Tiergarten Strasse, its main doors sealed, weeds in its curving driveway, its courtyard in ruins.

Across the street, huge reception rooms stand decaying and empty in the giant hulk of the Japanese embassy. Lion dogs and elegant brass gratings still guard uncarpeted marble steps and hallways into a dark interior.

Other embassies stood on what are now overgrown vacant lots along cobblestone streets leading through brushy undergrowth.

The abandoned neighborhood is bordered by the fringes of downtown West Berlin, the city's Tiergarten Park and the Berlin Wall. Now an out-of-the-way part of West Berlin, it was once just a few minutes from government ministries and Adolf Hitler's chancellery, in what became East Berlin.

Tourists still flock to the Potsdam Square section of the Wall to stare at the deserted remains of what was once Europe's busiest intersection. But few ever discover the ghostly embassy area a few hundred yards behind them, still shown on city maps as a built-up area.

Prostitutes work the fringes of the area in the evening. And on weekends, most of the few people in the area are bringing their dogs to an exercise area tucked away in a scruffy woods.

"We'd like to improve the city's image in the area," says one official in West Berlin, which wants to erect a construction exhibit in the area in the next decade.

The area has remained deserted because most of it was owned by foreign governments waiting to see what happened to postwar Germany. Now, the city is trying to buy the land back or work out trades.

South Africa leases its land to the city for one mark (about 45 cents) a year.

Japan has scrapped plans to restore its embassy as a cultural center and is hinting it might consider selling, city officials say.

BRIDGE

Sex doesn't affect quality of bridge

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

It's considered male chauvinism if a bridge columnist mentions the fact that declarer is young, female and pretty. What has all that to do with the quality of the bridge? Perhaps it's all right if we also mention that West in today's hand was Omar Sharif.

Nicola Gardener took Sharif's opening lead with the king of spades when today's hand was played recently in a tournament in London. She led a diamond to dummy's queen, returned with a club to the king, cashed the ace of diamonds and the ace of spades and got out with a diamond to the king.

Sharif took his spades, and Miss Gardener threw a club. The film star then led the king of hearts to the ace.

Miss Gardener cashed the last diamond as her seventh trick and then gave up a heart. Now Sharif had to lead a heart to dummy or a club to let declarer get the eighth trick with the queen of clubs.

CHEERS

Three cheers for the charming declarer, but no cheers for our handsome defender. (See, Ma? No chauvinism.)

Sharif should drop the king of diamonds when Suth plays the ace. When East gets in with the jack of diamonds, he can return a heart to defeat the contract. The defenders get two spades, two hearts, one diamond and one club.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold: S-AK5; H-A9; D-A984 C-KQ76. What do you say?

ANSWER: Using standard methods, open one club, planning to jump to 2NT or 3NT at your next turn. Many experts consider this hand good enough for an opening bid of 2NT because they would open with two clubs if the hand were 2 or 3 points stronger.

Vance leaves for Middle East

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance is carrying undisclosed U.S. "suggestions" for setting up Middle East peace talks as well as for promoting a settlement as he begins a series of talks with Arab and Israeli leaders.

Guarded about prospects for success, he already is planning further talks with Arab and Israeli foreign ministers next month in New York.

Additionally, congressional sources say the Carter administration has not ruled out yet another Vance tour of the region.

Vance departed Washington late Sunday night, saying he hoped to "lay the necessary framework for a Geneva conference." He was to arrive in Egypt early today.

The principal hurdles to reconvening the Geneva peace conference are the question of Palestinian representation at such talks and the future of the Israeli-held West Bank of the Jordan River.

Vance reportedly will explore with the Arab leaders an Israeli proposal for temporary trusteeship until a plebiscite is held on the territory's future.

And he will take up Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin's call for direct talks between Israel and its Arab neighbors on permanent borders and a peace treaty — but with still-secret U.S. revisions.

On Palestine, there appears to be little ground for a compromise.

However, Egyptien President Anwar Sadat, with whom Vance will meet first as he begins his 11-day trip, has floated the idea of including Palestinians in a Jordanian delegation to Geneva.

Begin, while ruling out any negotiating role for the Palestine Liberation Organization, has said Israel does not intend to "check the credentials" of members of that delegation.

After seeing Sadat in the historic city of Alexandria, Vance will fly to Beirut on Wednesday to discuss with Lebanese leaders a U.S. proposal for stationing U.N. observers near the Israeli border.

Crediting Begin with "a positive attitude" toward the idea, Vance said last week: "it is pretty important to find ways of increasing stability in southern Lebanon" and preserving order there.

Palestinian and Christian forces have clashed in the area, which Israel wants to remain clear of guerrillas.

Vance will follow his stop in Lebanon with visits to Syria, Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Israel. He also will confer in London on the continuing — but so far unsuccessful — joint effort with Britain to bring about black control over Rhodesia.

Alleged payoff said believed 'hush money'

NEW YORK (AP) — Justice Department officials believe former President brichard M. Nixon was talking about a $1 million cash payoff he allegedly received from the Teamsters Union when he told White House Counsel John W. Dean III he could get hush money for Watergate burglars, according to Time magazine.

Time reported in its current issue that the Justice Department believes N xon received the $1 million from Teamsters Union President Frank Fitzsimmons in exchange for keeping former Teamster boss Jimmy Hoffa out of office in the union.

Hoffa vanished from a restaurant parking lot outside Detroit on July 30, 1975. He is believed by authorities to have been murdered.

Nixon had commuted Hoffa's 13-year prison sentence for jury tampering and mail fraud in December 1971, with the provision that he have nothing to do with running the union until March 1980 when his sentence would have expired.

Quoting unidentified government sources, Time said government informers have claimed that in early January 1973, New Jersey Teamster boss Anthony Provenzano ordered thet $500,000 in cash be delivered to a White House courier in Las Vegas.

Provenzano allegedly told an associate he collected the money at Fitzsimmons' request and that another $500,000 had been provided for Nixon, also on Fitzsimmons' orders, by Allen Dorfman, a convicted Chicago labor racketeer. Dorfman had been acting as an adviser to the Teamster's Union pension fund.

According to the magazine, the second $500,000 payment was made in Las Vegas on Jan. 6, 1973, and was arranged for by Nixon White House aide Charles Colson.

Colson told the FBI last bfebruary that he knew nothing about the alleged payoffs, Time said.

balthough at least one payment was made before the Las Vegas meeting, the magazine said, the $1 million may have been what Nixon referred to in the March 21, 1973, White House meeting with Dan concerning the Watergate burglars' demands for huge sums money in return for keeping quiet.

Last Thursday, NBC News, quoting FBI sources, reported that more than $250,000 in two separate payments were made to members of the Nixon administration in exchange for keeping Hoffa out of the Teamsters Union. It was not known whether the two rehorts dealt with the same incident.

Visitor brings review

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Secret Service says it is reviewing White House security after a young man wandered unannounced into President Carter's study last week and asked Carter for directions to an aide's office.

But the agency, responsible for the President's safety, disputes how close the unidentified man actually got to Carter in the incident Friday.

"It was a case of him being in the wrong area for his appointment when he was located," said Jack Warner, a Secret Service spokesman. "Our review does not indicate he went into any office occupied by the President."

However, the Washington Post quoted sources as saying the young man "somehow managed to go out along the veranda and into the Oval Office," then went to Carter's study, where the President was working.

The Post said its source was convinced the incident happened "roughly" that way.

Other sources said the man asked the President where he could find the office of Mark Siegel, a White House aide.

The sources said Carter replied, "I believe it's downstairs," and the young man withdrew.

Siegel, an aide to presidential assistant Hamilton Jordan, was out of town Sunday, and the White House operator said he could not be reached.

Warner said the man was later identified and interviewed, but he refused to name him or give other details of the incident.

Thunderstorms wreak havoc in Oklahoma

By The Associated Press

Heavy thunderstorms flung high winds, heavy rain and hail into southwest Oklahoma Sunday evening, leaving a trail of damage across five counties.

Three persons were injured when the 50 to 60 mile per hour winds hit Lawton, overturning their trailer home. The unidentified persons reportedly received minor injuries.

Winds wrecked two buildings at the Oklahoma State Reformatory at Granite and left the facility without electrical power. Power had not been restored by late Sunday, but no disturbance was reported.

Initial damage estimates were placed at $200,000 by officials at the reformatory, but there were indications that amount might be scaled down.

Similar high winds smashed two barns near Corn, did extensive damage to the Corn elevator and disrupted utility service, the Oklahoma Highway Patrol reported.

Gusting winds also destroyed a trailer home south of Geronimo and two in Lawton, where heavy rains left cars stalled and caused minor flooding.

Unemployment total increases

Despite a slight increase in May, Midland's unemployment continued to rank as the lowest of any metropolitan area in Texas.

The report was made by George E. Crosby, vice president and economist of First City Bancorporation of Texas in a recent economic analysis.

May unemployment in Midland edged up to 2.6 per cent from 2.4 per cent the previous month, but still stood well below the 3.4 per cent rate of a year earlier.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

'Gimmicks' far from safe to use

Dear Dr. Solomon: I had been thinking of buying a rubber sweat suit so I could lose some weight and stay in shape this summer. Some of the fellows in the office were talking about it, but when I mentioned it to my wife, she said she didn't think these "gimmicks," as she called them, ever worked.—Malcolm K.

Dear Malcolm: Your wife is on the right track—those suits are "gimmicks," and not very safe ones. Athletes try them from time to time, thinking they can get in shape fast, the same way you thought. But sports experts of the American Medical Association have repeatedly advised against them. They do nothing to help anyone really lose weight. What they do is cause serious dehydration through excessive sweating. There have been cases of heat exhaustion and, in a few instances, heat stroke with death.

Sweating is simply the way the body cools itself when it has become too hot. As far as conditioning is concerned, sweating has no value by itself. Exercise conditions you; sweating is a by-product of exercise, which, by the way should be allowed to evaporate so that you do not overheat.

Dear Dr. Solomon: We commend you for an excellent column concerned with vision. Your reference to the Home Eye Test has generated hundreds of requests in this short time for the Home Eye Test from your readers. Especially appreciated is your mention that the Home Eye Test for Preschoolers does not replace a complete professional eye examination, a particularly important point often omitted in articles directed to the public.

Since inception of the Home Eye Test program late in 1972, almost five million copies have been distributed by the National Society throughout the United States and in many foreign countries, resulting in millions of parents being made aware of the importance of early detection and treatment of children's vision problems. Thousands of youngsters who failed the test and were taken for a professional eye examination were confirmed to have a vision problem which might otherwise have resulted in needless loss of sight.—Virginia S. Boyce, National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, Inc.

To J. I. of Kannapolis, N.C.: Your doctor gave you good advice when he told you that water therapy: cold, wet compresses or an ice cap, a sheet bath, or general sponging, is the method of choice for a rapid reduction of fever. However, the oral temperature should not be reduced to less than 101 degrees F. Otherwise, the patient's temperature may drop too low and blood pressure may fall.

Gas opener reported

FINDLAY, Ohio — Marathon Oil Co. has announced a gas discovery and an oil discovery in the Gulf of Mexico.

The gas discovery was drilled on Mustang Island Block A-86, about 65 miles east of Corpus Christi. In a test of the Miocene at 10,411-10,557 feet, the well flowed at the rate of 15.27 million cubic feet of gas per day and 4.4 barrels of condensate per million cubic feet of gas.

The oil discovery was on Eugnene Island Block 349. It flowed 640 barrels per day from the Pleistocene at 5,045-5,082 feet.

Marathon, as operator, has a 57.1 per cent interest in the well, with Louisiana Land Offshore Exploration Co. holding a 28.6 per cent interest, and Texas Eastern Exploration Co. holding 14.3 per cent.

The company said additional drilling will be necessary to determine the areal extent of the new pay zone.

Marathon, as operator, holds 66.67 per cent interest in the block on which the gas discovery was hit. Louisiana Land & Exploration Co. holds 33.33 per cent.

CHART DEPICTS the flow of Alaskan oil which began its journey through the newly-opened Alyeska oil pipeline from Prudhoe Bay June 20. After several delays, the first of the oil completed the 800-mile journey to Valdez July 28. Transport of the oil from Valdez will be by tanker.

'Study' shows citizens want Carter's program

By WILLIAM GREIDER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — When the soothsayers of public opinion on President Carter's national energy plan whisper in his ear, they could begin with the bad news.

The public is against most of the crucial proposals in President Carter's energy package. The people do not want a conservation tax on gasoline. The people are opposed to his "gas-guzzler" tax on large automobiles. They do not like his plan to let "new" oil rise to match the world price. They do not even agree with his attempts to halt development of fast-breeder nuclear power plants.

Now here is the good news, Mr. President: a majority of the people want Congress to enact the Carter energy program.

These conflicting messages, derived from a new public-opinion study by Cambridge Reports, illustrate once again that the general public is capable of embracing contradictory positions just like some politicians. But the study also describes a delicate political contour of the Carter presidency — making policies that are offensive to folks who voted for him last year, but appealing to those who didn't.

The Cambridge survey, which conducted 2,400 personal interviews during the last two weeks of May, was commissioned by Westinghouse Electric Corp., but Washington policy-makers will study it closely, because the president of Cambridge Reports is Patrick Caddell, the unpaid political adviser to President Carter.

Caddell did not work personally on the energy survey, but it is reasonable to assume that he will familiarize the President with its findings.

In broad terms the contradictory signals from the public make sense in this way:

The strongest opposition to Carter's specific energy measures, at least the proposals that mean higher taxes, comes from the traditional Democratic constituencies that elected him last fall — the poor and less-educated citizens, the blue-collar workers, the blacks. Conversely, most of these proposals win support among professional and managerial ranks — the better-educated and more affluent citizens who voted for Gerald Ford.

But when the Cambridge survey asked citizens for their overall view on Carter's energy plan regardless of dislike for some specifics, the traditional Democratic voters give Carter a vote of confidence — switching to support for the President's general leadership on the subject. In all, 51 per cent said they want Congress to accept the plan, compared with 26 per cent who want it rejected and 23 per cent who don't know. This constrasts with these views on specifics:

	Favor per cent	Oppose per cent	Don't Know per cent
Gasoline tax	34	59	7
Guzzler auto tax	40	50	11
Halt breeder reactor	23	32	45
Lift "new" oil price	36	45	19

The general public is much more sympathetic with elements of Carter's plan that do not suggest personal economic pain or sacrifice. Tax credits for home insulation and solar poewr, for instance, are supported by 76 per cent, opposed by 17 per cent.

A substantial majority wants to encourage the use of coal, and also to build more nuclear power plants — the two energy supplies that are crucial to meeting Carter's goals for 1985 — if it can be done without environmental damage.

In the short run the political message seems to be this: Carter's personal popularity and the continuing confidence in him among the Democratic voters give added bouyancy to his energy pacakge — even though a lot of those folks are against what he is proposing.

In the long run, however, the political effects of the energy plan may be more dramatic. The general results of the survey suggest that Carter's energy proposals are effective in reaching out to the new constituency that Caddell emphasized in the celebrated memorandum on political strategy that leaked out last winter — the white-collar and professional, college-educated voters.

"THIS IS THE largest rising group in the population," Caddell wrote. "It must be attracted in significant numbers if Democrats are to be successful in the future."

But what attracts the affluent about energy conervation are the very elements that antagonize the working-class and poor. If Congress enacts all of those measures for President Carter and raises the price of cars and petroleum products, not to mention the general cost of living, the impact will offer an interesting test of whether Caddell's game plan produces votes or loses them.

The proposed "gas'guzzler" tax, which is intended to penalize large and inefficient cars, illustrates this conflict.

Among professional people surveyed, the idea wins support, 50 to 39 per cent. Among skilled blue-collar workers, it is rejected, 52 to 36. The very poorest families under $4,000 income are against it, 47 to 34, while the most affluent over $25,000 are for it, 49 to 44. Citizens with only a grade-school education are opposed, 55 to 27; college graduates are for it, 58 to 38.

ISSUE AFTER ISSUE in the Cambridge survey illustrates that the energy debate is very much an argument between the different social classes. The Carter proposal for allowing "new" oil to rise to the world price is opposed, for instance, in every income group under $25,000 — but supported by the most affluent. Democrats oppose the idea, 47 to 34 per cent; Republicans support it, 44 to 38.

The shorthand explanation is that President Carter's general approach, stressing conservation of energy more directly than increased production, appeals to the environmentalist concerns of younger voters and the affluent, suburban, well-educated classes. The working class and the poor are more worried about jobs and and high prices.

Skepticism about conservation proposals tended to increase as the survey moved down the income and social scale. By 53 to 36 per cent, the public beleives that they as individuals cannot do much to save on energy — but that there are others in the society who ought to do the conserving. People with low incomefs were especially pessimistic.

"TO SOME EXTENT," the report noted, "this clearly reflects the true situation, since it is likely that wealthier Americans do use proportionately more energy. However, this skepticism about conservation on a large part of the basic Carter-Democratic constituency probably weakens the political basis for support of the program."

Furthermore, the general public overwhelmingly prefers the idea of conserving energy through government-made rules — instead of CArter's strategy of conserving fuel by raising prices. The "rules" approach is regarded as more fair, 71 to 13 per cent.

The Cambridge survey says this "may reflect a growing feeling that it is precisely those who can most easily afford to pay who are the chief energy wasters, and thus the only realistic method of effective conservation is by rules.

"All in all, the public seems quite confused about what to do. Although conservation is viewed as cost-effective, there are serious doubts as to its effectiveness as a solution. It would seem that while a majority of the people feel that they can do something personally to conserve, they also feel there are other people who ought to be forced by rules to act before they do."

ON THE OTHER side of the energy debate, the public takes very strong positions in favor of developing new energy supplies — the theme pushed by the energy industry — but it continues to insist on the environmental safeguards that the energy companies want relaxed.

For instance, 75 per cent favor expansion of offshore drilling for oil and gas, 55 per cent support nuclear power plants and 68 per cent favor the increased use of coal.

However, when the survey asked whether people want more coal burned "even if this means dirtier air," the balance swings against coal: 50 to 36 per cent. This has been a fairly consistent public attitude over several years, according to the Cambridge analysis, but the environmentalist sentiment has become somewhat weaker in recent months.

The public throws one big curve at public officials. The American people generally have much greater faith than Washington policy-makers do in solar energy as a major solution to energy problems. When asked what energy source would be most important to America 25 years from now, 38 per cent chose solar energy; the same proportion chose nuclear.

When the survey asked the people being interviewed to accept the argument that solar energy will not be feasible as a major source that soon, and then repeated questions about other fuels, it found increased support for coal and nuclear power.

On several related issues the survey found continued public hostility toward the major oil companies. For instance, 51 per cent favor a national energy corporation that would explore for the government instead of relying on private companies. A minority of 33 per cent favor nationalization of the big oil companies, while 47 per cent oppose it.

Field stepouts slated in New Mexico areas

Two field stepouts have been planned for Eddy County, N.M.

Amoco Production Co. plans No. 1-ER State Communitized as a one-mile south outpost to the one-well Turkey Track, North (Morrow) gas field.

It is scheduled for a bottom depth of 11,500 feet, and spots 1,980 feet from north and east lines of section 6-19s-29e, 18 miles northeast of Carlsbad.

The pool opener, Hondo Drilling Co. No. 1 Alscott, finaled in July 1976 for a calculated, absolute open flow of 22,637 million cubic feet of gas daily, with gas-liquid ratio of 67,823-1, through perforations at 11,079-11,092 feet.

Yates Petroleum Corp., Artesia, staked site for No. 6 Lechuguilla Canyon Unit as a ⅝-mile north offset to the two-well Morrow gas area of the Crooked Creek (Strawn and Morrow) field.

It spots 1,601 feet from south and 2,459 feet from west lines of section 4-24s-24e, nine miles northwest of White City. Planned depth is 10,200 feet.

State champ Goodrich eyes national play next

By BOB DILLON

"National tourney and Cleveland, Ohio, here we come."

Those were the cries in the dugout following Goodrich Service Center's thrilling 16-14 victory Sunday afternoon in the finals of the Men's State Open Slow Pitch Softball Tournament at Hogan Park.

The victory came over a solid Brazos Sports team from Lake Jackson and it came dramatically when rover Mark Withrow slammed a two-run homer with two out in the bottom of the seventh inning. Jim Donnell also came through with a pinch double.

It was a come-from-behind victory for the Tiremen who trailed 14-12 after the Sports had exploded for six big runs in the top of the inning.

Goodrich won seven straight games to go undefeated in the big three-day tourney which had a strong field of 41 teams in the Tall City.

GOODRICH BOMBED the Big Spring Merchants, 29-0, Friday in the opening round and then went on to polish off Jay's Auto Sales of El Paso, 9-3; Tomball's Rangers, 12-10; Mr Burger of Amarillo, 16-10; D&D Farm and Ranch of Seguin, 17-13; Abilene Barrett's, 16-10 and of course, Brazos Sports in the finals.

The victory automatically moves Goodrich into the National Open Slow Pitch Tourney in Parma, Ohio, Sept. 1-5. Parma is a suburb of Cleveland.

The Sports and Barrett's qualified for the Regional Open Tourney in Houston next month by finishing second and third behind the Tiremen.

The Sports, too, had plenty of muscle with Billy Hinkle and Jeff Jones hitting homers during that big six-run rally in the seventh inning. FRED KOPPE hit a two-run homer for the South Texas team in the second inning.

Barrett's had knocked the Sports into the loser's bracket by ripping them, 19-4, late Saturday night, but Goodrich beat D&D after trailing 11-0 in the second inning and disposed of Barrett's 16-10.

The powerful Abilene crew had won the recent July 4th Invitational by going undefeated here earlier in the month.

McGee posts easy victory

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — On the drive to the golf course, Jerry McGee turned to his wife, Jill, and said:

It did.

McGee, under pressure from a late move by Australian Bob Shearer, dropped a couple of critical putts in the stretch and, with a two-under-par 69, scored a four-stroke victory Sunday in the Philadelphia Golf Classic.

"This game of golf, it's a crazy thing," McGee said after claiming only his second title in 11 years of tour activity.

"I've played maybe 20 tournaments where I've been in contention, had a chance to win, and played better the last 18 holes than I did today, and I didn't win. I lost some and some were taken away from me.

"I can't tell you how much this means to me. We're all out here to win. That's the name of the game.

"I've won only once. I really wonder how many nights I've laid awake wondering if I'd ever win again, if it was supposed to be that I'd never win another one.

"After a while it gets you in the guts, like somebody stabbing you."

He ended those doubts with a 272 total, 12 under par on the testing little 6,687 yard Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course and four in front of Shearer and New Zealand's John Lister. Shearer had a last-round 67, Lister 72.

While the final margin was convincing and seemingly comfortable, it wasn't as easy as the figures make it appear.

Athletes throw bull after tossing ball

By THOMAS COLLINS
Newsday

NEW YORK — In the beginning, the athlete picked up stones and threw them around. Then somebody invented the ball, and he threw the ball around. Today, when he is through throwing the ball around, he goes on television and throws the bull around. .

When that long fly ball is hit deep, deep to center field nowadays, chances are that after a ballplayer chases it, a former ballplayer will explain the instant replay on TV. Thus, when Don Meredith goes to a football game this fall, it will not be as a participant but as a highly paid TV announcer who is earning more money off the field than he did on it.

More and more star athletes, who once could have looked forward only to selling insurance or opening bars when their playing days were over, are signing contracts for broadcasting jobs with CBS, NBC and ABC — when they are not doing movies or TV commercials. There are few holdouts. Where there was once only an occasional Pee Wee Reese or Phil Rizzuto in the broadcast box, there are now 60 to 70 former stars who talk strategy, second-guess coaches and managers, crack jokes and often, it seems, just talk to hear themselves.

NETWORKS SCOUT them as competitively as the ball clubs once did in their playing days — for "credibility" with the fans and the ratings that they hope to reap. "It's not enough anymore to have one man do the play-by-play," says Linda Sutter, who works with a roster of former sports figures at CBS. "We have a need for someone who can give insights, the why behind the thing. The public is more educated about sports today." Personality, articulateness, a big name and a store of anecdotes also help, she says, "because it's show biz as much as it is sports, and our purpose is to entertain."

Whether the former athletes are achieving or defeating that purpose is something that each sports fan has to decide. Some fans, at least, have been heard to doubt it. An extension of that idea — the notion that the networks feel a compulsion to "entertinn" while broadcasting a sports event — would seem to imply that they don't trust the event itself to do the job. The question, then, becomes this: Does a nation whose pastime has long been baseball really need Joe Garagiola's "insights"? Do avid football fans need all that strategy in the voice-over? Or is the medium once again getting in the way of the very action that it purports to report? A well-known TV newscaster said after last year's Republican convention, "There are two conventions — theirs and ours." So one might say that there are two sports events — the one on the field and the one in the anchor booth.

Meredith and Alex Karras are only two of the ex-jocks who have left the playing fields for the semi-vaudevillian world of sportscasting. Frank Gifford, Pat Summerall, Tom Brookshier, Tony Trabert, Cliff Drysdale, Tony Kubek, Julie Heldman, Maury Wills, Carey Middlecoff and Johnny Unitas are a few of the broadcast names once associated with football, tennis, baseball and golf.

FOR SOME of them, the second career has proved more rewarding than the first. Meredith is probably more famous today for being a sidekick of Howard Cosell and a "Lipton Tea lover" than he was for playing with the Dallas Cowboys. Karras is probably better known for doing sports commentary and knocking out a horse in the movie, "Blazing Saddles" than he was as a Detroit lineman. And Garagiola didn't really become a national figure until he landed on the "Today" show.

The stereotype "dumb" athlete who can't do anything but catch and throw a ball is a thing of the past. Now, he takes voice lessons, straightens his accent, learns to project and delivers such lines as: "Boy, that's gotta be some kind of play," and: "Wow, he's some kind of hitter." And gets paid for it! ts qyyf CBS and NBC are also playing the game with about the same number of players as ABC. CBS has signed 21 jocks for its sports coverage, including Jerry Quarry, who preps for his moments on the air as fiercely as he trains for a fight; high jumper Dwight Stones; golfer Ken Venturi; halfback Paul Hornung, and gymnast Muriel Grossfeld. NBC has about 22 in its lineup, including tennis star John Newcombe; former basketball coach Billy Packer; Vikings quarterback Fran Tarkenton; Garagiola, and former Green Bay defensive end Willie Davis.

NOT ALL of them are going to wind up millionaires. Some, like Meredith and Jenner, get long-term contracts in the high six figures; some work seasonally, some year-round. Some may get a few thousand dollars per game, while others make a bare minimum of $750 an assignment. "It all depends on what level you finished your career, whether you're still on top or whether your name has dropped," says Maury Wills, former shortstop for the Los Angeles Dodgers who does NBC's Saturday "Game of the Week."

Wills, a likable, unpretentious man, said that he himself had not been at his peak when he went into broadcasting, but that he has never regretted it and is grateful to Curt Gowdy for breaking him into the business. "He carried the ball for me." Wills still coaches Dodgers in baserunning as a sideline, works one day a week for NBC in season, and says his combined income is greater now than it was when he was stealing bases for the Dodgers.

OF COURSE, all those statistics — player averages, numbers of strikeouts, amounts of money won in past tournaments — all of that is written out on index cards in advance of the game. But in figuring out what else to say on the air, the onetime players themselves seem to be in a bit of a box. Unquestonably, they bring years of experience to the games that they are broadcasting. But they are told, on the one hand, not to get too technical because the fans won't understand them, and on the other, they are instructed to "inform and educate and entertain" — often in 10 or 20 seconds.

"The time frame is tight," says Davis, the former Green Bay Packer who worked for NBC and now owns a beer distributorship and a radio station in Los Angeles. "The toughest thing for any athlete in broadcasting is to take that 15 or 20 seconds and say the thing he wants to say."

Knowing what to say and when to say it, and then how to time it to fit the demands of the control room, is an art not learned in a day. "You can't just walk into it and begin flapping your lips," ABC's Frank Gifford, a former Giants halfback who has become a senior statesman among athletes turned broadcasters. Gifford will be inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame Saturday.

CBS HIRES a diction teacher to coach and critique its athletes. "I try to get rid of their major faults, poor phraseology, the negative aspects of their speech," says Joseph Rice, a 30-year veteran of broadcasting. He also tries to smooth out their accents. He gets southerners to say "window" instead of "winda," and New Yorkers to broaden their "a's" instead of biting down hard on them. Another common fault, he said, is that too often they like to start their sentences with the word "well," as in: "Well, on that last play ... " He tells them: "'Well' is a stall word. Drop it!"

Rice reviews tapes of the performances carefully with the ex-jocks, pointing out the flaws. Sometiomes, he rips into them, he says, but most rise to the challenge once they understand that the way they talk on the air has to be different from the way they talked in the locker room.

Pokes' rookie is center of attention

By BOB OATES
The Los Angeles Times

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — Last year when Tony Dorsett was a student at the University of Pittsburgh he was a Heisman Trophy-winning halfback. The other day in National Football League training camp operated by the Dallas Cowboys he was a rookie prospect sitting under a tree when a photographer walked up and took his picture. Five minutes later the rookie hadn't moved — so the photographer shot him again, from another angle. Then Dorsett got up and stretched and, again, click-click.

The photographer was Walter Iooss of Sports Illustrated, who had come to Thousand Oaks with a two-week assignment: follow Dorsett everywhere — into the huddle, into the shower, into the sack. At the same time SI writer Joe Marshall was making notes on all that, keeping up with Iooss on a duplicate two-week game plan. Nor was SI alone in its vigil. One TV company (NBC) contacted Dorsett with three different representatives in a single three-hour period. First, Tom Brokaw called. Then Bryant Gumbel came out from Los Angeles. And before lunch, Barbara Hunter arrived from New York.

ABC AND CBS have been hanging around with camera crews. A Texas talk show seems to be maintaining an open line. And as usual, the wire services and newspapers are present. The upshot for Dorsett is that before ever playing a pro game, he is a pro football celebrity. Indeed, he has become the most closely inspected party to land in pro football since O.J. Simpson nine years ago.

There is, however, a major difference.

"The difference between Simpson and Dorsett," a Dallas freelance writer named Steve Perkins was saying here one day, "is in the teams that drafted them. In college these players were both famous running backs who won the Heisman Trophy, but when Simpson moved from USC to Buffalo he went to a team so bad he clean disappeared from view. When Dorsett was drafted by the Cowboys, he went to a Super Bowl contender, one of the best teams in the game. I have a hunch this will be the big story in sports for the next six months, right up to the Super Bowl."

Is Dorsett that good?

His college statistics suggest it. As a freshman he gained 1,000 yards at Pittsburgh, and thereafter exceeded that figure annually for the club that won the national championship last season. On his way to an NCAA-record 6,082 yards Dorsett became the first college player to parlay four 1,000-yard seasons, and later he become the first Cowboy to sign for $1 million.

His training camp debut for Dallas this summer was likewise respectable. Day after day at practice under the supervision of coach Tom Landry, Dorsett continued to make the fast, smooth, graceful runs that identified him at Pittsburgh. And he worked willingly on blocking and receiving, the neglected arts of his college career.

During sprint trials at 40 yards Dorsett ran a 4.4 eased up (within a tick of Bob Hayes' best time) and hit the wire so smoothly he could have balanced a plate on his head. Other Cowboys here — even the other good athletes — tend to wobble. The contrast recalled a comment once made in Pennsylvania by Tony's mother, who said he was born with a sense of balance. "He would never fall off anything," Myrtle Dorsett remembered.

As of the early hours of Dorsett's NFL career, Dan Reeves, the offensive coordinator for the Cowboys and a halfback on their first Super Bowl team, said last week:

"It's too early to be positive, but as a running back he has the three things the good ones all have. First of all, he does things so easily. No matter what he has to do, he isn't exerting much effort. He also has the great acceleration that means so much in football. And he can make the fullspeed cut. Very few runners have ever had the skill and balance to change direction without loss of speed — O.J. Simpson, Gale Sayers, maybe one or two others — and even Sayers cut kind of jerky. Tony does it so smoothly."

IT IS nearing the end of football practice on the California Lutheran Campus at Thousand Oaks, in a valley 30 miles west of Hollywood, and almost everybody who has watched the Cowboys this morning has made the same two comments about Tony Dorsett: he isn't very big (5-11,190) and with his helmet off he looks like entertainer Flip Wilson.

"Sizewise," said Cowboy vice president Gil Brandt, "Tony is in the new wave. The bulls have run their course — the John Brockingtons and Calvin Hills. You can't beat these modern defenses with power runners. You need the elusiveness and quickness of a (Terry) Metcalf or Dorsett."

Coach Reeves: "Tony is about the right size for a good running back today. Much larger and you don't have the body control and acceleration to stay out of trouble. In four years at Pittsburgh Tony never missed any playing time. This means that with his agility to accelerate — he starts so fast he's a blur — and his body control, nobody got that great shot at him."

Asked to analyze his assets one day, Dorsett mentioned strength first.

"I am the most durable back in the history of college football," he told a group of writers, "when you consider number of carries and frequency of injuries. I've worked hard to make myself strong."

TEE TIME

Young scores ace on No. 3

By REX WORRELL

The high school golf coaches sort of stood out this week at Hogan Park Golf Course. Midland High coach Bob Young has solved his putting problems. Bob had reported that he was hitting the ball well the past two weeks, but couldn't sink a putt. The solution he came up with was simply to knock the ball in the hole from the tee box. Bob aced the 155-yard par-3 number three hole at Hogan Park this week.

Tim Peden, the Lee High golf coach, had his putter working and with the aid of one chip-in eagle on the 17th hole, went on to record a superb round of 65.

The Hogan Park Junior Golf program results from Friday, July 22, were: 12-13 — 1. Walter Meller; 2. Kevin Ballard; 14-15 — 1. Penny Sutcliffe; 2. Emil Hale; 16-17 — 1. Jim Leach; 2. Stacy Raney.

Among the teenagers, Dick Yates shot a real fine round of 76 this past week, and always tough Chet Powers had rounds of 75 and 76. There were also two birthdays celebrated this week in the group. Chet Powers and Ray Trammel reached milestones. Both seem more reluctant to report their age than their scores.

We wish to remind everyone again of the Reporter-Telegram Men's City Championships scheduled for August 5-7 at Hogan Park. Entry fee for this year's event is $20, with the entry deadline set at Tuesday, August 2. We encourage all golfing residents of Midland County to sign up before the deadline for this fine tournament.

The Hogan Park Women's Golf Association held a Most Pars event this past Thursday with the following results....9 hole division winner was Peggy Parkins with 2 pars. Tied for second place were Frances Stahl, Betty Williams, and Jeanne Allen with one par each. 18 hole division....There was a three way tie for first place between Florence Malley, Joyce Parker and Linda Ballard. They each had seven pars.

The HPWGA will hold their monthly Trophy Day event Thursday, August 4th with the pairings as follows....18 hole division ...Linda Ballard, Marilyn Philpy & Dorothy Melzer...Shirley Edwards, Merla Ketner & Bernice Cox...Alvina Hill, Joyce Parker & Connie Kern...March Davis, Gloria Dellenback & Jane Wagner.... Charlene Hulme, Florence Malley & ChataMee....Dottie Turk, Gene Velton & Fern Barnett...Jean Elkin, Sandy Wilkerson & Charlene Roseberry....Betty King, Margaret Mills, Cheryl Starcevich & Neil Kimball. 9 hole division... Rams hit draft jackpot

By BOB OATES
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — In one extraordinary week in Pittsburgh one winter not long ago to the Steelers drafted seven college football players who became starters on their back-to-back Super Bowl winners in 1975-76.

And as their opponents have said ever since, that's the kind of luck and skill you need to make it big these days in the National Football League.

Well, it turns out that the Rams had a week like that a couple of winters ago. Their 1975 draft has already provided five starters and seems certain to yield a sixth. And a seventh is a possibility.

In quantitative terms it was their most successful draft since the Rams won their only championship in 1951.

Their Class of 1975 includes two starting offensive linemen, tackle Doug France and guard Dennis Harrah; the two cornerbacks, Monte Jackson and Rod Perry, and quarterback Pat Haden, who faced Fran Tarkenton twice in Minnesota last year and will get him at home this time on opening night Aug. 6.

IN ADDITION, the top draft choice of 1975, Mike Fanning, may start at left defensive tackle — it will be either Fanning or Cody Jones — and the coaches say a fifth-round choice in that class, Rick Nuzum, has the tools to be a starting center in the NFL someday.

The 1975 draft is, moreover, still paying off. Two of those picked in the second and third rounds that year were later traded for draft rights which have materialized as two of the most promising rookies in this summer's camp: Nolan Cromwell, considered a sure starter in the secondary in the near future, and Billy Waddy, a fast young receiver.

Because of Davis — and because the Rams refused to bring him in — the 1975 draft was their most controversial ever. Media critics pointed, for instance, to Monte Jackson, who was picked on the second round when Davis was still available, and asked, "Monte who?" Some asked (and said) worse.

Nonetheless, as good as Davis is, he'll have to run fast in Tampa to catch up with Jackson, who made All-Pro last year, leading the league with 10 interceptions.

JACKSON'S success may indicate that some Ram scouts know more about college talent than some reporters and broadcasters.

— The Rams had three first-round choices in the 1975 draft. In addition to their own, they had Green Bay's and Philadelphia's as a result of the John Hadl and Roman Gabriel trades.

Those trades have done a lot for this club.

Goodrich wins state

by beating BaggettBridwell of Wichita Falls, 14-12 and followed with wins over Schumann Engineering of Midland, 14-10; Acapulco A's of Killeen, 15-11 before bowing to Barrett's.

The loss to Barrett's seemed to anger the Sports for they came back to blister pre-tourney pick Aaron-Kimball's Brewers of Wacos, 21-8.

THE SPORTS eliminated Barrett's, 20-13, to set up the big showdown with the Tiremen and they would have had to win two straight from Goodrich to secure the first place trophy.

Hamilton-Bryan of Wichita Falls started play early Sunday morning by losing to Aaron-Randall, 20-11, to drop from the tourney while the Tomball Rangers knocked out BB&L Builders from Freeport, 11-9, before bowing to D&D of Seguin, 12-5.

Hinkle, Roy Anderson, Bobby Koenig, Jones, George Warney and Maurice Tracy all homered in the Sports' 24-15 win over D&D which sent the Seguin team back home.

A big seven-run fifth inning for the Sports gave them their win over Barrett's in the semifinals with Warney, Hinkle, Jones and Tracy all homering. Keith Fletcher, Mike Brown, Jaret Moss, Hugh Standifer, Mike Farley, Donnie Wood and Mike Murphey, all hit homers for Barrett's.

GOODRICH TAKES a season record of 94-27 into the National tourney in Ohio in two months while Brazos Sports own a 68-14 into the regional in Houston. Barrett's, meanwhile, will take a record of 76-14 into regional.

Goodrich led the all-tourney team with four slots. Al Wootan, Withrow and Schroeder were named to the team while Don McClung was picked a Most Valuable Player of the tourney.

Warney, Anderson and Hinkle were picked from the Sports while Maurice Roberts of Aaron-Randall was chosen and the hard-hitting outfielder, led the meet with 13 homers.

Mark Herbold and Gary Kubenka of D&D Farm and Ranch were also chosen along with Murphey, Brown and Wood of Barrett's.

Nuclear plant fosters debate

By PETER J. BOYER

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — At the foot of a gentle bluff on the central California coast stands a nuclear power plant that splits no atoms and generates controversy, not electricity.

Diablo Canyon Nuclear Power Plant looks like any of the nation's 66 operational power plants — a huge monolith of concrete and steel, wires, dials and rotors. But Diablo is different — an earthquake fault lies on the ocean floor just three miles from the plant.

And that is the ace in the hole for fervent antinuclear protestors who hope to garner publicity and make Diablo a testing ground for the whole issue of nuclear power.

The Hosgri fault, named after two oil company geologists who discovered it, was found after construction on the twin reactors in Diablo Canyon was well under way.

Pacific Gas and Electric Co., the private, San Francisco-based utility that owned Diablo, says its plant can hold up under any quake the fault can produce.

Others, including the U.S. Geological Survey, disagree. The USGS said that although Diablo was built to withstand a quake registering 6.75 on the Richter scale, it is not strong enough to take what the Hosgri fault might produce, a 7.50 quake.

The NRC has never refused any power plant a license, but the Diablo case is a sticky one. Here is a billion-dollar atom splitting tool, a plant that could generate as much electricity as that of PG&E's hydro-electric plants together, standing on a fault that could cause an earthquake that might shatter Diablo's foundations.

The local protestors are a hybrid group, steeped in the antiwar movement and using civil disobedience as their weapon.

They gained heart recently from a huge demonstration against a nuclear power plant in Seabrook, N.H. About 2,000 longhairs, nursing mothers, grandmotherly Quakers and revitalized antiwar radicals converged on the proposed site and sat there for 24 hours, prepared to go to jail.

Police arrested 1,414. The news media jumped on the story, and the Clamshell Alliance, which led the protest, had captured what demonstrators hungrily feed upon — national exposure.

Inspired by the Clamshell Alliance, California protestors formed the Abalone Alliance and picked Aug. 6-7, Hiroshima Day weekend, for their action. Clamshell also has a demonstration planned for that weekend.

"We will have about 50 hardcore occupiers (those willing to cross on to PG&E property and go to jail)," said Bob Wolf, of People Generating Energy, one of the groups comprising Abalone Alliance. With Daniel Ellsberg as a featured speaker, the protestors predict 1,000 supporters will show up.

"They are not going to be allowed in. If they do get in, we'll have to have them arrested. They'd be trespassing," said Dick Davin, a spokesman for PG&E.

Gas well fire still blazing

ZAPATA, Tex. (AP) — A partner in a firm that owns a gas well that has been burning for three days says Red Adair, Houston's world famous oil and gas well firefighter, will try today to control the blaze at the rig 20 miles southeast of this South Texas border town.

Former U.S. Ambassador John Hurd of Laredo, who is a partner in Killam and Hurd Ltd., owners of the well, said the fire has been burning out of control since Friday. He said there were no injuries.

"We were down about 7,900 feet and had been drilling through four feet of sand at the time," Hurd said Sunday.

Hurd said he understood that Adair will attempt to force mud into the hole to cut the gas flow.

"Right now, we are gathering mud from all over, trying to get him what he needs," Hurd said.

Hurd, who was an ambassador from 1970-1975, estimated surface damage "in excess of a million dollars." He said up to 10 million cubic feet of gas under 6,000 pounds of pressure per square inch is escaping from the blazing well daily.

"It's a real ball of fire," he said.

SMOKE POURS from the fringe of the 300,000-acre Kugruk Heights range fire on Alaska's Seward Peninsula, about 100 miles northeast of Nome. The Bureau of Land Management said the blaze is the largest of 68 Alaskan fires, which totaled about 830,000 acres late Sunday.

Women preparing anti-abortion memorandum

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women who work for President Carter but don't like his opposition to federally financed abortions are preparing a memorandum that will underline their discomfort with his position.

The memo, which is expected eventually to be seen by Carter, says their "reaction is deeply felt on a deeply felt issue — federal funding for abortions."

Carter opposes using federal Medicaid funds to pay for elective abortions.

The preparation of the memo follows a White House meeting on the abortion issue two weeks ago, which was attended by about 40 people, including some of Carter's top female appointees and their aides.

A source familiar with a draft of the memorandum said it reads in part: "We believe we are here to assist you. We are here to do a job. We joined the administration proudly. In an administration where we feel comfortable in speaking out, we want you to know that your leadership could make a difference in (this matter.)"

People familiar with the situation say they expect at least two Cabinet members to sign the memo. They would not specify which ones, but there have been reports that Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Patricia Roberts Harris told Carter at a Cabinet meeting she does not agree with his abortion position.

Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps also is reported to oppose the President's position.

Sources say one reason why Carter has not yet received the memo is that the women, whose professional backgrounds vary, have been unable to agree on exactly what it should say.

"You have 40 strong-minded, very busy women, and it's hard to get them together, much less agree," said one who is working on the memo.

Many of the women took issue with a statement Carter made at a press conference a few weeks ago:

"There are many things in life that are not fair, that wealthy people can afford and poor people can't. But I don't believe that the federal government should take action to try to make these opportunities exactly equal, particularly when there is a moral factor involved."

And Carter said that if the federal government is willing to finance abortions for poor women it amounts to "an encouragement to abortion and its acceptance as a routine contraceptive means."

Many of the women said they felt Carter was imposing his own moral and religious beliefs on public policy.

HEW officials say their department paid for 30,000 abortions last year at a cost of $50 million, primarily through the Medicaid program. That was more than one-fourth of the 1.1 million legal abortions performed in the United States last year.

Iron-ore workers strike

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — Thousands of iron-ore workers defied a no-striked contract clause and walked off their jobs in northern Minnesota and Upper Michigan today, staging the first strike in the basic steel industry in 18 years.

The strike, if continued for very long, could seriously cur' tail steel production. Minnesota accounts for about two-thirds of the country's iron-ore production.

United Steelworkers spokesmen said members voted overwhelmingly to strike after last minute negotiations between 21 union locals and 15 iron ore and steel firms failed late Sunday.

The steel industry said it would sue the locals for violation of the no-strike clause in the current contract. But that clause is operative only on national issues, and the strikers say they are disputing local matters, which is allowed.

U.S. Steel Corp. spokesman Andrew Starsky in Pittsburgh said the companies would ask damages totaling millions of dollars daily.

Linus Wampler of Lead, S.D., USW district director, met Sunday in Hurley, Wis., with other union officials. He said that the union received no new contract offer from the steel companies — "none whatsoever."

Wampler said there are about 1,250 unresolved issues between the workers and companies, involving topics from pay to safety standards.

The basic steel contract, signed earlier in Pittsburgh, would include an 80-cent an hour pay increase over three years, plus fringe benefits. Steelworkers' wages average a little more than $8 an hour.

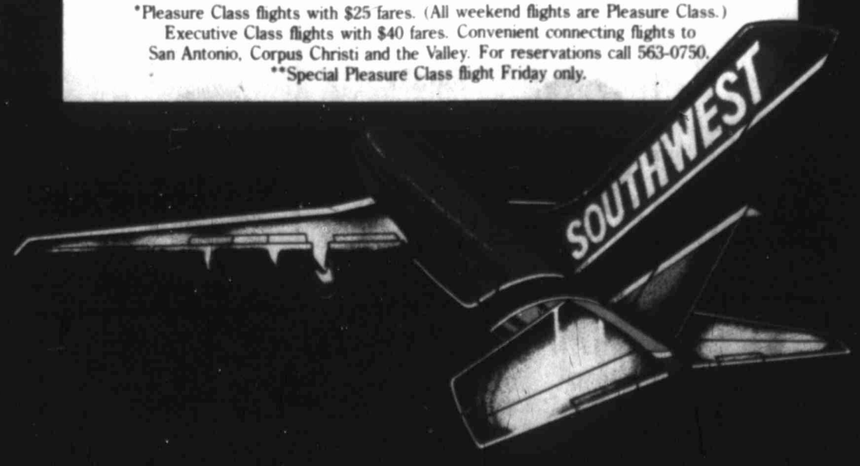

About 14,000 workers were on strike in Minnesota and another 6,000 in Michigan.

"I Never Thought I'd See the Day I Could Walk Into A Size 7, But I Can Thanks to Pat Walker!"

... Says Helen Jourde

All through junior high and senior high school I had to wear homemade clothes because it was hard to find ready-made clothes that would fit me. I would look at the slim girls in their cute current fashions and wish I could look like they did. But how could I lose when I didn't like to exercise or diet?

Helen Jourde before coming to Pat Walkers

By the time I was in my first year of college I weighed 140 pounds. Relatively few of the girls at college were overweight, and seeing all those slim, fashionable girls made me determined to lose weight! But I was dismayed because I knew I could not do it on my own; I had tried and failed before.

When I saw Pat Walker's ad in the newspaper I decided that this was my chance to finally shed this excess baggage that I was needlessly carrying around.

I was surprised and delighted when I lost weight after just one week at Pat Walker's Figure Salon. Now that I'm down I am very happy indeed. I never thought I'd see the day when I could walk into a size 7, but I can! And I couldn't have done it without Pat Walker.

(Signed) Helen Jourde

Man, accompanied by dog, travels when urge hits

By ROBERT W. WELKOS

WINNEMUCCA, Nev. (AP) — As Loren Williams tells it, he once married one of those "nest builders" who enjoy "buying trinkets like a couch that folds down into a pool table or some damn thing."

She was the kind of woman who wanted him to mow the lawn "when I wanted to prop my feet up and watch the football game," he remembers, adding: "My ex-wife is into the washer and dryer routine but I'm into trash."

Well, Williams has flown the nest.

It happens to be raining in this north-central Nevada town on this particular day. Inga is sleeping under a blanket while Williams dons his plastic rain suit.

"We left Yuma about two months ago," he says. "We make about 100 or 200 miles a day and can cruise at about 40 to 45 miles per hour. But she squirts oil all the time and it feels like I'm riding on a tractor."

Williams says he found the motorcycle — a "dinosaur" as motorcycles go — alongside a house trailer in Yuma four years ago. He has since spent $1,500 on parts. "I've burned up the motor twice," Williams says. "She needs lots of oil."

For the past year, Williams, a house renovator by trade, has been traveling whenever the urge hits him. It hits him often.

He admits that his life doesn't appeal to everyone but it's his life and he's living it his way. "My parents always told me to make something of myself and be somebody, but what's somebody? What does make something of yourself mean?"

Williams' sons are nearly grown. Their ages are 21, 19 and 17.

"I like to check in on the 17year-old every chance I get and see what he's up to. The others are working or going to school. They accept the way I am."

Williams says he was once happy with the 9-to-5 life but gradually got fed up with the routine. "I see a lot of people screwed up," he says.

Williams prefers the open country to the cities.

McGrath Mark Twain show resurrects writer

"Mark Twain Live!" has been described as a re-creation of Mark Twain. It's more like a resurrection, because Douglas G. McGrath's one-man show at the Midland Community Theatre Sunday night certainly gave the audience the feeling the famous writer was with them again.

Wandering about the summery set of white wicker furniture and ferns, McGrath displayed all the movements appropriate to the 70ish Twain. It would almost be safe to say that, were it not for the words the audience came to hear, they would have been satisfied to watch McGrath's excellent mime of the writer in the methodical moving about of his books, his gently strained sitting down, the perpetual attention to his cigar. Only an occasional overly-quick gesture belied Twain's age and suggested the youthfulness of McGrath. But the voice never did. Nineteen years old, McGrath delivers every line as the septaugenarian Twain.

The several hundred in Sunday night's audience were representative of the appeal Twain has always had. Included were the young, the middle-aged, and those who audibly appreciated Twain's comments on exercise and aging: "If you can't reach 70 by a comfortable road, don't go!"

Doug McGrath is a native Midlander whose theater training began at the Theatre Centre. He appeared in MCT's 1969 production of "Life With Father" and in several Pickwick Players shows. His Twain program originated as a senior project at the Choate School in Connecticut where he attended boarding school. Directed by George Moredock, he spent six weeks in research and rehearsal before his first performance. The current performances are being given as benefits for the Midland Community Theatre building fund. McGrath will be a sophomore drama major at Princeton University this fall.

While similar to, McGrath's show does not reproduce the Hal Holbrook program. Much of the material will be fresh to even the best-read of Twain fans. For those unfamiliar with this type of program, it is a kind of cross between a relaxed, one-sided dialogue with the audience and a stand-up entertainer, circa 1900. It is actually akin to what Twain himself presented to audiences as an enormously popular teller of tales from his own writings.

Twain's observations on his world cover a wide range of subjects including some of his most widely-quoted comments. On smoking. And on giving it up. ("I've done it a thousand times.") Medicine. Lying. Clothing. ("Clothes make the man. Naked people have little or no influence on society.") Getting into the

Sex doesn't affect quality of bridge

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

It's considered male chauvinism if a bridge columnist mentions the fact that declarer is young, female and pretty. What has all that to do with the quality of the bridge? Perhaps it's all right if we also mention that West in today's hand was Omar Sharif.

Nicola Gardener took Sharif's opening lead with the king of spades when today's hand was played recently in a tournament in London. She led a diamond to dummy's queen, returned with a club to the king, cashed the ace of diamonds and the ace of spades and got out with a diamond to the king.

Sharif took his spades, and Miss Gardener threw a club. The film star then led the king of hearts to the ace.

Miss Gardener cashed the last diamond as her seventh trick and then gave up a heart. Now Sharif had to lead a heart to dummy or a club to let declarer get the eighth trick with the queen of clubs.

CHEERS

Three cheers for the charming declarer, but no cheers for our handsome defender. (See, Ma? No chauvinism.)

Sharif should drop the king of diamonds when Suth plays the ace. When East gets in with the jack of diamonds, he can return a heart to defeat the contract. The defenders get two spades, two hearts, one diamond and one club.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold: S-AK5; H-A9; D-A984 C-KQ76. What do you say?

ANSWER: Using standard methods, open one club, planning to jump to 2NT or 3NT at your next turn. Many experts consider this hand good enough for an opening bid of 2NT because they would open with two clubs if the hand were 2 or 3 points stronger.

Vance leaves for Middle East

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance is carrying undisclosed U.S. "suggestions" for setting up Middle East peace talks as well as for promoting a settlement as he begins a series of talks with Arab and Israeli leaders.

Guarded about prospects for success, he already is planning further talks with Arab and Israeli foreign ministers next month in New York.

Additionally, congressional sources say the Carter administration has not ruled out yet another Vance tour of the region.

Vance departed Washington late Sunday night, saying he hoped to "lay the necessary framework for a Geneva conference." He was to arrive in Egypt early today.

The principal hurdles to reconvening the Geneva peace conference are the question of Palestinian representation at such talks and the future of the Israeli-held West Bank of the Jordan River.

Vance reportedly will explore with the Arab leaders an Israeli proposal for temporary trusteeship until a plebiscite is held on the territory's future.

And he will take up Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin's call for direct talks between Israel and its Arab neighbors on permanent borders and a peace treaty — but with still-secret U.S. revisions.

On Palestine, there appears to be little ground for a compromise.

However, Egyptien President Anwar Sadat, with whom Vance will meet first as he begins his 11-day trip, has floated the idea of including Palestinians in a Jordanian delegation to Geneva.

Begin, while ruling out any negotiating role for the Palestine Liberation Organization, has said Israel does not intend to "check the credentials" of members of that delegation.

After seeing Sadat in the historic city of Alexandria, Vance will fly to Beirut on Wednesday to discuss with Lebanese leaders a U.S. proposal for stationing U.N. observers near the Israeli border.

Crediting Begin with "a positive attitude" toward the idea, Vance said last week: "it is pretty important to find ways of increasing stability in southern Lebanon" and preserving order there.

Palestinian and Christian forces have clashed in the area, which Israel wants to remain clear of guerrillas.

Vance will follow his stop in Lebanon with visits to Syria, Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Israel. He also will confer in London on the continuing — but so far unsuccessful — joint effort with Britain to bring about black control over Rhodesia.

Visitor brings review

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Secret Service says it is reviewing White House security after a young man wandered unannounced into President Carter's study last week and asked Carter for directions to an aide's office.

But the agency, responsible for the President's safety, disputes how close the unidentified man actually got to Carter in the incident Friday.

"It was a case of him being in the wrong area for his appointment when he was located," said Jack Warner, a Secret Service spokesman. "Our review does not indicate he went into any office occupied by the President."

However, the Washington Post quoted sources as saying the young man "somehow managed to go out along the veranda and into the Oval Office," then went to Carter's study, where the President was working.

The Post said its source was convinced the incident happened "roughly" that way.

Other sources said the man asked the President where he could find the office of Mark Siegel, a White House aide.

The sources said Carter replied, "I believe it's downstairs," and the young man withdrew.

Siegel, an aide to presidential assistant Hamilton Jordan, was out of town Sunday, and the White House operator said he could not be reached.

Warner said the man was later identified and interviewed, but he refused to name him or give other details of the incident.

Alleged payoff said believed 'hush money'

NEW YORK (AP) — Justice Department officials believe former President Richard M. Nixon was talking about a $1 million cash payoff he allegedly received from the Teamsters Union when he told White House Counsel John W. Dean III he could get hush money for Watergate burglars, according to Time magazine.

Time reported in its current issue that the Justice Department believes Nixon received the $1 million from Teamsters Union President Frank Fitzsimmons in exchange for keeping former Teamster boss Jimmy Hoffa out of office in the union.

Hoffa vanished from a restaurant parking lot outside Detroit on July 30, 1975. He is believed by authorities to have been murdered.

Nixon had commuted Hoffa's 13-year prison sentence for jury tampering and mail fraud in December 1971, with the provision that he have nothing to do with running the union until March 1980 when his sentence would have expired.

Quoting unidentified government sources, Time said government informers have claimed that in early January 1973, New Jersey Teamster boss Anthony Provenzano ordered thet $500,000 in cash be delivered to a White House courier in Las Vegas.

Provenzano allegedly told an associate he collected the money at Fitzsimmons' request and that another $500,000 had been provided for Nixon, also on Fitzsimmons' orders, by Allen Dorfman, a convicted Chicago labor racketeer. Dorfman had been acting as an adviser to the Teamster's Union pension fund.

According to the magazine, the second $500,000 payment was made in Las Vegas on Jan. 6, 1973, and was arranged for by Nixon White House aide Charles Colson.

Colson told the FBI last February that he knew nothing about the alleged payoffs, Time said.

McGrath makes Twain live

newspaper business. Slavery. Man, "the only animal who blushes— or needs to."

One of the funniest segments of the program is the one on Twain's being interviewed by a rube newspaper reporter, done in dialogue style. McGrath has chosen a beautiful balance of material which shows Twain as the gentle cynic, the serious philosopher, the humorist. In the latter half of the show, he reminisces on what was obviously his most poignant memory, his life as a riverboat pilot on the Mississippi. His description of the river at dawn provides one of the show's most touching moments.

Four more performances are scheduled, at 8 p.m. on Tuesday and Wednesday and Aug. 8 and 10, all at the American Legion Hall. Admission is $3, with tickets now on sale at the Theatre Centre box office.

If imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, Mark Twain would be more than flattered by Douglas McGrath's performance. He'd be amazed and delighted.

Thunderstorms wreak havoc in Oklahoma

By The Associated Press

Heavy thunderstorms flung high winds, heavy rain and hail into southwest Oklahoma Sunday evening, leaving a trail of damage across five counties.

Three persons were injured when the 50 to 60 mile per hour winds hit Lawton, overturning their trailer home. The unidentified persons reportedly received minor injuries.

Winds wrecked two buildings at the Oklahoma State Reformatory at Granite and left the facility without electrical power. Power had not been restored by late Sunday, but no disturbance was reported.

Initial damage estimates were placed at $200,000 by officials at the reformatory, but there were indications that amount might be scaled down.

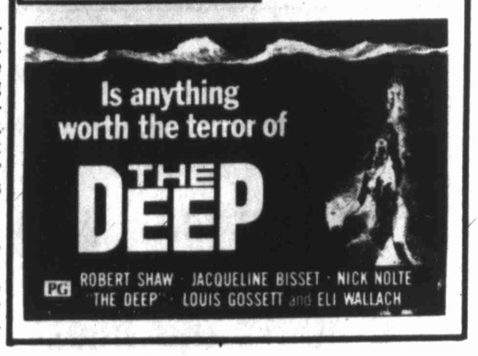

Similar high winds smashed two barns near Corn, did extensive damage to the Corn elevator and disrupted utility service, the Oklahoma Highway Patrol reported.

Gusting winds also destroyed a trailer home south of Geronimo and two in Lawton, where heavy rains left cars stalled and caused minor flooding.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

'Gimmicks' far from safe to use

Dear Dr. Solomon: I had been thinking of buying a rubber sweat suit so I could lose some weight and stay in shape this summer. Some of the fellows in the office were talking about it, but when I mentioned it to my wife, she said she didn't think these "gimmicks," as she called them, ever worked.—Malcolm K.

Dear Malcolm: Your wife is on the right track—those suits are "gimmicks," and not very safe ones. Athletes try them from time to time, thinking they can get in shape fast, the same way you thought. But sports experts of the American Medical Association have repeatedly advised against them. They do nothing to help anyone really lose weight. What they do is cause serious dehydration through excessive sweating. There have been cases of heat exhaustion and, in a few instances, heat stroke with death.

Sweating is simply the way the body cools itself when it has become too hot. As far as conditioning is concerned, sweating has no value by itself. Exercise conditions you; sweating is a by-product of exercise, which, by the way should be allowed to evaporate so that you do not overheat.

Dear Dr. Solomon: We commend you for an excellent column concerned with vision. Your reference to the Home Eye Test has generated hundreds of requests in this short time for the Home Eye Test from your readers. Especially appreciated is your mention that the Home Eye Test for Preschoolers does not replace a complete professional eye examination, a particularly important point often omitted in articles directed to the public.

Since inception of the Home Eye Test program late in 1972, almost five million copies have been distributed by the National Society throughout the United States and in many foreign countries, resulting in millions of parents being made aware of the importance of early detection and treatment of children's vision problems. Thousands of youngsters who failed the test and were taken for a professional eye examination were confirmed to have a vision problem which might otherwise have resulted in needless loss of sight.—Virginia S. Boyce, National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, Inc.

To J. I. of Kannapolis, N.C.: Your doctor gave you good advice when he told you that water therapy: cold, wet compresses or an ice cap, a sheet bath, or general sponging, is the method of choice for a rapid reduction of fever. However, the oral temperature should not be reduced to less than 101 degrees F. Otherwise, the patient's temperature may drop too low and blood pressure may fall.

WT sectors gain tests

Amoco Production Co. plans No. 4-B Marion Flynt, a 13,500-foot venture in Martin, four miles southwest of the RK (Devonian) oil field.

Drillsite is 440 feet from north and west lines of labor 21, league 249, Hartley CSL survey, 12 miles northwest of Tarzan.

Location, surrounded by production in the Spraberry Trend Area, and four miles southeast of the Sale Ranch (Strawn) pool, is 1,980 feet from north and 660 feet from west lines of section 31, block 36, T-1-N, T&P survey, five miles northwest of Stanton.

Exxon Corp. filed application for No. 34 American National Life Insurance Co., a 9,700-foot wildcat in Ward, surrounded by production in the Ward-Estes field.

Drillsite is 660 feet from northwest and southwest lines of section 25, block 34, H&TC survey.

Consultant authorized

AUSTIN — The employment of a consultant experienced in oil, gas and mineral transactions was authorized for The University of Texas System during a recent meeting by the board of regents.

Deputy Chancellor E. D. Walker was instructed to employ the consultant subject to prior approval by a committee composed of three regents named by Chairman Allan Shivers.

It was reported that such an individual is needed by the UT System since terms and conditions of several kinds of transactions pertaining to oil, gas and other minerals — including exploration agreements, deeds, leases, production, transportation and sales — are continually undergoing significant changes.

As a result, a review and study of such matters, together with recommendations as to terms and conditions which would "properly protect and advance system interests," need to be made in the near future for consideration by the Board of Regents, the report said.

Acquisition announced

HOUSTON — Lynes, Inc., of Houston has announced the acquisition of Burns Tool Co.

Burns Tool, headquartered in Bell, Calif., was founded in 1939 and is a manufacturer of liner hangers.

Lynes is a subsidiary of Baker International Corp. and is a manufacturer and supplier worldwide of inflatable packers, drillstem testing and other related products to the oil and gas industry.

Field stepouts slated in New Mexico areas

Two field stepouts have been planned for Eddy County, N.M.

Amoco Production Co. plans No. 1-ER State Communitized as a one-mile south outpost to the one-well Turkey Track, North (Morrow) gas field.

It is scheduled for a bottom depth of 11,500 feet, and spots 1,980 feet from north and east lines of section 6-19s-29e, 18 miles northeast of Carlsbad.

The pool opener, Hondo Drilling Co. No. 1 Alscott, finaled in July 1976 for a calculated, absolute open flow of 22.637 million cubic feet of gas daily, with gas-liquid ratio of 67,823-1, through perforations at 11,079-11,092 feet.

Yates Petroleum Corp., Artesia, staked site for No. 6 Lechuguilla Canyon Unit as a ⅝-mile north offset to the two-well Morrow gas area of the Crooked Creek (Strawn and Morrow) field.

It spots 1,601 feet from south and 2,459 feet from west lines of section 4-24s-24e, nine miles northwest of White City. Planned depth is 10,200 feet.

Vermonter assembles solar power facilities

By NANCY SHULINS

WEST TOPSHAM, Vt. (AP) — When a 107-foot tower appeared in Charlie Hall's backyard here, neighbors politely pretended not to notice.

They couldn't help but notice six others that Hall put up to power a solar oven that bakes bread, and a solar heater that in one afternoon boosted the water temperature in his swimming pool 17 degrees. He also has a hydroelectric dam that lights his home

Annoyed neighbors, who Hall circumvented by getting the zoning ordinance changed to permit his wind and solar towers, were among the obstacles the strapping, black-haired Vermont native overcame in his five-year metamorphosis from a Barre television repairman to alternative energy consultant.

"My kids watched me awful close at first," he said with a grin. "But when things began working, they started believing in me."

Hall, who watched the wind blow over the hills behind his house for nearly50 years before putting it to work for him, decided to "make a clean break" from his first career.

"I felt trapped in my repair business — I felt like an unpaid worker for the government," he said.

"It got to the point where my phone bill was more than my light bill, and my light bill was more than my house payment. I began to think about how wasteful Americans really are.

"And I began to think about homesteading. A homesteader is really tooled down to what's around him. Until you do that, you're just a slave to society," he said.

While there were fewer Vermonte s studying alternative energy five years ago, Hall said he "saw the future coming very fast."

Now building a 40-foot solar dome in his backyard, Hall has completed plans for a house powered by wind and water and heated by the sun.

Another dome covers Hall's swimming pool, where he swims seven months of the year and reises trout the other five.

Scurry area venture set

Exxon Corp. has slated an 8,250-foot wildcat in Scurry County. It is No. 1 W. D. Everett.

Location is 660 feet from south and east lines of section 505, block 97, H&TC survey, 12 miles northwest of Snyder and on the west side of the SACROC (Canyon reef) area.

Gas opener reported

FINDLAY, Ohio — Marathon Oil Co. has announced a gas discovery and an oil discovery in the Gulf of Mexico.

The gas discovery was drilled on Mustang Island Block A-86, about 65 miles east of Corpus Christi. In a test of the Miocene at 10,411-10,557 feet, the well flowed at the rate of 15.27 million cubic feet of gas per day and 4.4 barrels of condensate per million cubic feet of gas.

The oil discovery was on Eugnene Island Block 349. It flowed 640 barrels per day from the Pleistocene at 5,045-5,082 feet.

Marathon, as operator, has a 57.1 per cent interest in the well, with Louisiana Land Offshore Exploration Co. holding a 28.6 per cent interest, and Texas Eastern Exploration Co. holding 14.3 per cent.

The company said additional drilling will be necessary to determine the areal extent of the new pay zone.

Marathon, as operator, holds 66.67 per cent interest in the block on which the gas discovery was hit. Louisiana Land & Exploration Co. holds 33.33 per cent.

By WILLIAM GREIDER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — When the soothsayers of public opinion on President Carter's national energy plan whisper in his ear, they could begin with the bad news.

The public is against most of the crucial proposals in President Carter's energy package. The people do not want a conservation tax on gasoline. The people are opposed to his "gas-guzzler" tax on large automobiles. They do not like his plan to let "new" oil rise to match the world price. They do not even agree with his attempts to halt development of fast-breeder nuclear power plants.

These conflicting messages, derived from a new public-opinion study by Cambridge Reports, illustrate once again that the general public is capable of embracing contradictory positions just like some politicians. But the study also describes a delicate political contour of the Carter presidency — making policies that are offensive to folks who voted for him last year, but appealing to those who didn't.

The Cambridge survey, which conducted 2,400 personal interviews during the last two weeks of May, was commissioned by Westinghouse Electric Corp., but Washington policy-makers will study it closely, because the president of Cambridge Reports is Patrick Caddell, the unpaid political adviser to President Carter.

Caddell did not work personally on the energy survey, but it is reasonable to assume that he will familiarize the President with its findings.

In broad terms the contradictory signals from the public make sense in this way:

The strongest opposition to Carter's specific energy measures, at least the proposals that mean higher taxes, comes from the traditional Democratic constituencies that elected him last fall — the poor and less-educated citizens, the blue-collar workers, the blacks. Conversely, most of these proposals win support among professional and managerial ranks — the better-educated and more affluent citizens who voted for Gerald Ford.

But when the Cambridge survey asked citizens for their overall view on Carter's energy plan regardless of dislike for some specifics, the traditional Democratic voters give Carter a vote of confidence — switching to support for the President's general leadership on the subject. In all, 51 per cent said they want Congress to accept the plan, compared with 26 per cent who want it rejected and 23 per cent who don't know. This constrasts with these views on specifics:

	Favor per cent	Oppose per cent	Don't Know per cent
Gasoline tax	34	59	7
Guzzler auto tax	40	50	11
Halt breeder reactor	23	32	45
Lift "new" oil price	36	45	19

The general public is much more sympathetic with elements of Carter's plan that do not suggest personal economic pain or sacrifice. Tax credits for home insulation and solar poewr, for instance, are supported by 76 per cent, opposed by 17 per cent.

A substantial majority wants to encourage the use of coal, and also to build more nuclear power plants — the two energy supplies that are crucial to meeting Carter's goals for 1985 — if it can be done without environmental damage.

In the short run the political message seems to be this: Carter's personal popularity and the continuing confidence in him among the Democratic voters give added bouyancy to his energy pacakge — even though a lot of those folks are against what he is proposing.

In the long run, however, the political effects of the energy plan may be more dramatic. The general results of the survey suggest that Carter's energy proposals are effective in reaching out to the new constituency that Caddell emphasized in the celebrated memorandum on political strategy that leaked out last winter — the white-collar and professional, college-educated voters.

"THIS IS THE largest rising group in the population," Caddell wrote. "It must be attracted in significant numbers if Democrats are to be successful in the future."

But what attracts the affluent about energy conervation are the very elements that antagonize the working-class and poor. If Congress enacts all of those measures for President Carter and raises the price of cars and petroleum products, not to mention the general cost of living, the impact will offer an interesting test of whether Caddell's game plan produces votes or loses them.

The proposed "gas'guzzler" tax, which is intended to penalize large and inefficient cars, illustrates this conflict.

Among professional people surveyed, the idea wins support, 50 to 39 per cent. Among skilled blue-collar workers, it is rejected, 52 to 36. The very poorest families under $4,000 income are against it, 47 to 34, while the most affluent over $25,000 are for it, 49 to 44. Citizens with only a grade-school education are opposed, 55 to 27; college graduates are for it, 58 to 38.

ISSUE AFTER ISSUE in the Cambridge survey illustrates that the energy debate is very much an argument between the different social classes. The Carter proposal for allowing "new" oil to rise to the world price is opposed, for instance, in every income group under $25,000 — but supported by the most affluent. Democrats oppose the idea, 47 to 34 per cent; Republicans support it, 44 to 38.

The shorthand explanation is that President Carter's general approach, stressing conservation of energy more directly than increased production, appeals to the environmentalist concerns of younger voters and the affluent, suburban, well-educated classes. The working class and the poor are more worried about jobs and and high prices.

Skepticism about conservation proposals tended to increase as the survey moved down the income and social scale. By 53 to 36 per cent, the public beleives that they as individuals cannot do much to save on energy — but that there are others in the society who ought to do the conserving. People with low incomefs were especially pessimistic.

Furthermore, the general public overwhelmingly prefers the idea of conserving energy through government-made rules — instead of CArter's strategy of conserving fuel by raising prices. The "rules" approach is regarded as more fair, 71 to 13 per cent.

The Cambridge survey says this "may reflect a growing feeling that it is precisely those who can most easily afford to pay who are the chief energy wasters, and thus the only realistic method of effective conservation is by rules.

"All in all, the public seems quite confused about what to do. Although conservation is viewed as cost-effective, there are serious doubts as to its effectiveness as a solution. It would seem that while a majority of the people feel that they can do something personally to conserve, they also feel there are other people who ought to be forced by rules to act before they do."

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS
NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals addressed to the Honorable Mayor and City Council of Midland, Texas will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 2:00 P.M., August 24, 1977, for furnishing all necessary materials, machinery, equipment, superintendence, and labor for constructing certain improvements at the Midland Regional Air Terminal, Midland, Texas.

Immediately following the closing time for receipt of bids, proposals will be publicly opened and read aloud. Any bid received after closing time will be returned unopened.

The project consists principally of the construction of a new transformer vault, installation of transformer vault equipment, removal of existing lighting vault, installing area lights on terminal parking apron, installing lighting cable, installing ducts, and other related items of work.

A bid or proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is hereby expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid or, if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance bond and payment bond. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Midland.

The successful Bidder will be required to furnish a Performance Bond and a Payment Bond each in the amount of the contract, written by a responsible Surety Company authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and satisfactory to the Owner, as required by Article 5160, V.A.T.C.S., as amended by H.B. 344, passed by the 56th Legislature, Regular Session, 1959.

All lump sum and unit prices must be stated in both script and figures. The Owner reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive formalities. In case of ambiguity or lack of clearness in stating the prices in the bids, the Owner reserves the right to consider the most advantageous construction thereof, or to reject the bid. Unreasonable (or "unbalanced") unit prices will authorize the Owner to reject the bid.

Bidders are expected to inspect the site of the work and to inform themselves regarding all local conditions.

The proposed contract is under and subject to Executive Order 11246 of September 24, 1965, and to the equal opportunity clause, and the Bidder must supply all the information required by the proposal form.

Minimum wages and labor rates for the construction of the proposed work have been established by the Secretary of Labor, and a schedule of labor classifications and wage rates to be paid are included in the specifications and will be made a part of the contract. The bid form shall contain a statement that the prices bid are based on such wage rates.

Information for bidders, proposal forms, specifications and plans are on file in the office of the Director of Public Works, City Hall, Midland, Texas, at the office of the Director of Aviation, Midland Regional Air Terminal, Midland, Texas and at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 4010 Avenue R, Lubbock, Texas 79412.

Copies of the Plans and Specifications may be secured from Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 4010 Avenue R, Lubbock, Texas 79412, upon a deposit of FIFTY DOLLARS ($50.00) as a guarantee of the safe return of the plans and specifications. The full amount of the deposit will be returned to the Contractor on submission of a bona fide bid on the work, with such plans and specifications; or upon returning the plans and specifications immediately after examination of same, and advising the Engineer that bid will not be submitted; otherwise, the deposit shall be forfeited.

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS
NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals addressed to the Honorable Mayor and City Council of Midland, Texas will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 2:00 P.M., August 24, 1977, for furnishing all necessary materials, machinery, equipment, superintendence, and labor for constructing certain improvements at the Midland Regional Air Terminal, Midland, Texas.

Immediately following the closing time for receipt of bids, proposals will be publicly opened and read aloud. Any bid received after closing time will be returned unopened.

The project consists principally of the reconstruction of approximately 60,000 square yards of rigid pavement on the terminal apron and perimeter taxiway, removal of existing pavement, construction of drainage structures, excavation work, electrical work, and other related items of work.

A bid or proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is hereby expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid or, if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance bond and payment bond. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Midland.

The successful Bidder will be required to furnish a Performance Bond and a Payment Bond each in the amount of the contract, written by a responsible Surety Company authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and satisfactory to the Owner, as required by Article 5160, V.A.T.C.S., as amended by H.B. 344, passed by the 56th Legislature, Regular Session, 1959.

State champ Goodrich eyes national play next

By BOB DILLON

"National tourney and Cleveland, Ohio, here we come."

Those were the cries in the dugout following Goodrich Service Center's thrilling 16-14 victory Sunday afternoon in the finals of the Men's State Open Slow Pitch Softball Tournament at Hogan Park.

The victory came over a solid Brazos Sports team from Lake Jackson and it came dramatically when rover Mark Withrow slammed a two-run homer with two out in the bottom of the seventh inning. Jim Donnell also came through with a pinch double.

It was a come-from-behind victory for the Tiremen who trailed 14-12 after the Sports had exploded for six big runs in the top of the inning.

Goodrich won seven straight games to go undefeated in the big three-day tourney which had a strong field of 41 teams in the Tall City.

GOODRICH BOMBED the Big Spring Merchants, 29-0, Friday in the opening round and then went on to polish off Jay's Auto Sales of El Paso, 9-3; Tomball's Rangers, 12-10; Mr. Burger of Amarillo, 16-10; D&D Farm and Ranch of Seguin, 17-13; Abilene Barrett's, 16-10 and of course, Brazos Sports in the finals.

The victory automatically moves Goodrich into the National Open Slow Pitch Tourney in Parma, Ohio, Sept. 1-5. Parma is a suburb of Cleveland.

The Sports and Barrett's qualified for the Regional Open Tourney in Houston next month by finishing second and third behind the Tiremen.

The Sports, too, had plenty of muscle with Billy Hinkle and Jeff Jones hitting homers during that big six-run rally in the seventh inning.

FRED KOPPE hit a two-run homer for the South Texas team in the second inning.

Barrett's had knocked the Sports into the loser's bracket by ripping them, 19-4, late Saturday night, but Goodrich beat D&D after trailing 11-0 in the second inning and disposed of Barrett's 16-10.

The powerful Abilene crew had won the recent July 4th Invitational by going undefeated here earlier in the month.

Meeting scheduled

There will be a meeting at 7 p.m. today in Commercial Bank & Trust Company to draw up the pairings for the Texas Teen-Age State Hi-Junior Baseball Tournament which starts at 1 p.m. Tuesday at Simon Field.

Eight teams are entered in the double elimination tourney which runs through Friday night.

Teams entered include Mustang Mud of Midland; El Paso Products of Odessa; Kip's of Dallas; Bel Air's Cardinals of Houston; Tyler's Raiders; Abernathy; Optimists of Waco and Leo's Mobil Air from LaMarque.

Midland will play in the 8:30 p.m. game Tuesday.

McGee posts easy victory

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — On the drive to the golf course, Jerry McGee turned to his wife, Jill, and said:

It did.

McGee, under pressure from a late move by Australian Bob Shearer, dropped a couple of critical putts in the stretch and, with a two-under-par 69, scored a four-stroke victory Sunday in the Philadelphia Golf Classic.

"This game of golf, it's a crazy thing," McGee said after claiming only his second title in 11 years of tour activity.

"I've played maybe 20 tournaments where I've been in contention, had a chance to win, and played better the last 18 holes than I did today, and I didn't win. I lost some and some were taken away from me.

"It just seems when you're fated to win a golf tournament, you'll win.

"I can't tell you how much this means to me. We're all out here to win. That's the name of the game.

"I've won only once. I really wonder how many nights I've laid awake wondering if I'd ever win again, if it was supposed to be that I'd never win another one.

He ended those doubts with a 272 total, 12 under par on the testing little 6,687 yard Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course and four in front of Shearer and New Zealand's John Lister. Shearer had a last-round 67, Lister 72.

While the final margin was convincing and seemingly comfortable, it wasn't as easy as the figures make it appear.

Stock market advances

The Dow Jones ave age of 30 industrials, off more than 33 points last week, recovered 6.15 to 896.22 by noontime today.

Gainers led losers by close to a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market's relatively steady showing last Thursday and Friday after the steep drop of the three previous sessions had encouraged some buying today.

In particular, they noted some buying by traders nailing down profits on previous short sales.

GVENERAL Motors helped lead the market higher, climbing 1⅛ to 69¼. There was speculation about a possible dividend increase by the company following its report of better-than-expected second quarter earnings last week.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks picked up .27 to 54.39. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained .39 to 120.54.

Big Board volume slowed to 8.13 million shares by noontime from 9.53 million at the same point on Friday.

Protestors renew fight on N-plant

SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — The Clamshell Alliance, opponent of a proposed nuclear power plant here, is returning to the construction site three months to the day that 1,414 protestors were arrested.

Clamshell is sponsoring a vigil at the plant gate today to protest last week's reinstatement of the plant's construction permit by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's appeals board.

The construction permit was suspended earlier this year because of questions about the plant's proposed ocean water cooling system. The Federal Environmental Protection Agency has approved the plan.

Officers of Public Service Co. of New Hampshire, the prime stockholder in the $2.5 billion oceanfront project, have said it may take months to bring it back to the level of activity before the permit was suspended. They said many of the workers found other jobs during the suspension.

Few workers are expected on the site today when the vigil is going on, union leaders said.

The Clamshell Alliance, a loosely knit coalition of anti-nuclear power groups from the Northeast, has charged that the Seabrook plant is not needed and would not be safe. It sponsored the weekend occupation of the Seabrook site on April 30 and May 1.

Sadat clarifies position

NEW YORK (AP) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat says he wasn't trying to overthrow Libya strongman Moammar Khadafi in the recent four day conflict between their two countries, but it was not because he doesn't think Khadafi should be ousted.

Sadat said the overthrow of Khadafi would "not only benefit the Arab people but the people of the whole world."

Sadat, interviewed on the ABC program "Issues and Answers" which was broadcast Sunday, also said he believes "for sure" the Soviet Union provoked the fighting between Libya and Eqypt.

TEE TIME

Young scores ace on No. 3

By REX WORRELL

The high school golf coaches sort of stood out this week at Hogan Park Golf Course. Midland High coach Bob Young has solved his putting problems. Bob had reported that he was hitting the ball well the past two weeks, but couldn't sink a putt. The solution he came up with was simply to knock the ball in the hole from the tee box. Bob aced the 155-yard par-3 number three hole at Hogan Park this week.

Tim Peden, the Lee High golf coach, had his putter working and with the aid of one chip-in eagle on the 17th hole, went on to record a superb round of 65.

The Hogan Park Junior Golf program results from Friday, July 22, were: 12-13 — 1. Walter Meller; 2. Kevin Ballard; 14-15 — 1. Penny Sutcliffe; 2. Emil Hale; 16-17 — 1. Jim Leach; 2. Stacy Raney.

Among the teenagers, Dick Yates shot a real fine round of 76 this past week, and always tough Chet Powers had rounds of 75 and 76. There were also two birthdays celebrated this week in the group. Chet Powers and Ray Trammel reached milestones. Both seem more reluctant to report their age than their scores.

We wish to remind everyone again of the Reporter-Telegram Men's City Championships scheduled for August 5-7 at Hogan Park. Entry fee for this year's event is $20, with the entry deadline set at Tuesday, August 2. We encourage all golfing residents of Midland County to sign up before the deadline for this fine tournament.

The Hogan Park Women's Golf Association held a Most Pars event this past Thursday with the following results.....9 hole division winner was Peggy Parkins with 2 pars. Tied for second place were Frances Stahl, Betty Williams, and Jeanne Allen with one par each. 18 hole division.....There was a three way tie for first place between Florence Mailey, Joyce Parker and Linda Ballard. They each had seven pars.

by beating BaggettBridwell of Wichita Falls, 14-12 and followed with wins over Schumann Engineering of Midland, 14-10; Acapulco A's of Killeen, 15-11 before bowing to Barrett's.

The loss to Barrett's seemed to anger the Sports for they came back to blister pre-tourney pick Aaron-Kimball's Brewers of Wacos, 21-8.

THE SPORTS eliminated Barrett's, 20-13, to set up the big showdown with the Tiremen and they would have had to win two straight from Goodrich to secure the first place trophy.

Hamilton-Bryan of Wichita Falls started play early Sunday morning by losing to Aaron-Randall, 20-11, to drop from the tourney while the Tomball Rangers knocked out BB&L Builders from Freeport, 11-9, before bowing to D&D of Seguin, 12-5.

Hinkle, Roy Anderson, Bobby Koenig, Jones, George Warney and Maurice Tracy all homered in the Sports' 24-15 win over D&D which sent the Seguin team back home.

A big seven-run fifth inning for the Sports gave them their win over Barrett's in the semifinals with Warney, Hinkle, Jones and Tracy all homering. Keith Fletcher, Mike Brown, Jaret Moss, Hugh Standifer, Mike Farley, Donnie Wood and Mike Murphey, all hit homers for Barrett's.

GOODRICH TAKES a season record of 94-27 into the National tourney in Ohio in two months while Brazos Sports own a 68-14 into the regional in Houston. Barrett's, meanwhile, will take a record of 76-14 into regional.

Goodrich led the all-tourney team with four slots. Al Wootan, Withrow and Schroeder were named to the team while Don McClung was picked a Most Valuable Player of the tourney.

Warney, Anderson and Hinkle were picked from the Sports while Maurice Roberts of Aaron-Randall was chosen and the hard-hitting outfielder, led the meet with 13 homers.

Cubs, Phils triumph

By The Associated Press

The Chicago Cubs continue their act with singles, doubles, and pitching while the Philadelphia Phillies used a more direct approach.

Both teams, however, were successful Sunday as they kept pace in their battle for the National League East title.

The Cubs, behind Ray Burris' eight-hitter, got run-scoring doubles from Jerry Morales and Steve Ontiveros to snap a two-game losing streak and defeat the Houston Astros 4-1. Down 1-0, Chicago knotted the score in the second inning on a walk to Bobby Murcer and singles by Ontiveros and Mick Kelleher.

In the sixth, the Cubs scored three times on a single by Greg Gross, Morales' double, an RBI single by Murcer and Ontiveros' two-base hit to right.

The Phillies remained 1½ games behind the Cubs utilizing a barrage of home runs against the San Francisco Giants to chalk up a 5-4 victory. Greg Luzinski smashed his 25th and 26th home runs of the season, Mike Schmidt clobbered his 28th homer and Rich Hebner added his 13th round tripper of the season.

Joe Morgan's 15th home run was just one of his four hits as he paced the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals. However, the Reds remained 14 games back of the NL West Division-leading Los Angeles Dodgers who exploded for six runs in the top of the 10th inning, including Dave Lopes' two-run single, to defeat the Montreal Expos 8-2.

Fourth-inning homers by Jeff Burroughs and Vic Correll powered the Atlanta Braves to an 8-3 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates. The New York Mets outlasted the San Diego Padres 10-9 as Steve Henderson drove in three runs, including a tworun homer—his sixth since joining the Mets on June 15.

The Boston Red Sox moved into first place in the American League East with a 1-0 victory over the California Angels. The game's lone run came in the ninth as Jim Rice, George Scott and Carlton Fisk singled with Rice scoring on Fisk's hit.

The Seattle Mariners downed Baltimore 6-1 to drop the Orioles into second place in the AL East. Glenn Abbott won his fifth straight game, hurling a four-hitter.

Ralph Garr's single in the 10th inning scored Eric Soderholm as the Chicago White Sox rallied for a 5-4 decision over the Kansas City Royals in the opening contest of a twinbill.

Kansas City took the nightcap 8-4 as Hal McRae drove in four runs and joined Amos Otis and George Brett with home runs.

The Yankees rode Cliff Johnson's three-run homer and Mickey Rivers' three RBI to a 9-2 victory over Oakland. Ed Figueroa, 10-7, pitched an eight-hitter in beating Vida Blue, 10-12.

Mike Hargrove singled home Tom Grieve in the 10th inning to give Texas a 3-2 victory over Detroit. Ben Oglivie's ninth-inning home run had tied the game.

Rutherford wins 200

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — Johnny Rutherford was leading the Texas 200 and didn't know it. The way things turned out, all of his competitors might chip in to help him get his radio fixed.

"I thought I was behind and I was really putting my foot on the pedal," said Rutherford, the defending champion from Fort Worth who scored a clear 12-second victory in Sunday's U.S. Automobile Club race over a hard-pressing Gordon Johncock.

"We made a pit stop and I thought I was second," said Rutherford. "Jim Ellis, one of my crewmen, gave me a sign that showed plus eight. I thought that meant I was eight seconds down, so I turned on the booster.

"The next time I came around it said plus nine. I thought I was losing ground. Then on the next lap the crew was out there waving their arms to slow me down. I must have been doing 202 miles an hour or so."

Rutherford smiled. "Then it dawned on me I was ahead, and I pulled my horns down," he said.

The 39-year-old Rutherford said he couldn't communicate with his pit crew "because my radio wasn't working. We've been having trouble with that thing all year. It's something to do with that Cosworth engine. It just seems to throw the radio off."

Rutherford, who won $15,322 to $9,822 for Johncock, survived a potentially nasty pit incident before the 31,000 fans at the Texas World Speedway.

Rutherford clipped Dick Simon, who was also making a pit stop.

"That was an unfortunate incident," said Rutherford. "I never did see Simon. I couldn't believe it and clipped his left rear. I was lucky. It didn't bother my car at all."

It was the third USAC victory of the year for Rutherford, who is second to Sneva in USAC point standings.

Rutherford won the pole position in a tie with Danny Ongais at 205.421 m.p.h. Ongais went out early with clutch problems.

Favorite wins Rainbow

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Ronny Schliep couldn't believe his eyes as his two-year-old filly, Miss Thermolark, hit the wire in the 14th running of the $442,600 Rainbow Futurity at Ruidoso Downs.

"I was never closer to shock than after this race," Schliep said. "I just took a great big breath."

Miss Thermolark was the 6-5 favorite of the crowd and she didn't let them down. The unbeaten filly grabbed the lead as she broke from the gate and thundered 400 yards in 20.23 seconds.

A large crowd bet $75,287 on the Rainbow, the second leg of the Triple Crown for quarter horses, with $12,142 on Miss Thermolark. And the $153,160 first prize purse boosted the filly's total earnings to $182,682.

Jockey Jackie Hopkins from Sallisaw, Okla., broke Miss Thermolark last year and has ridden her to eight straight victories.

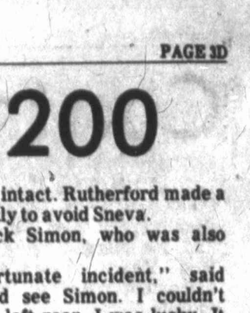

"She left the gate good, but not great," Hopkins said.

Meeting scheduled

SAN ANGELO — There will be a meeting of team managers and players at 1:30 p.m. today to draw up the bracket for the Texas Teen-Age State Sophomore Baseball Tournament which will be played on two diamonds here starting tonight.

There will be a 10-team field in the big tourney, including Midland Furr's which sailed through the District 2 Tourney last weekend in Abernathy.

Furr's went undefeated with only two runs being scored off the superb pitching staff. There were nohitters thrown by Steve Miller and Jeff Hicks while Mark Hewitt picked up two wins with a two-hitter and eighthitter for the Tall City team.

Vilas, Dibbs win matches

By The Associated Press

Guillermo Villas took advantage of a heat-slowed Phil Dent, hitting higher and scattering his shots when he noticed his opponent's discomfort, and moved within one match of winning the $125,000 Louisville International Tennis Classic.

Villas, top-seeded in the tournament after winning three of the last four years, beat the seventh-seeded Dent 5-7, 6-2, 6-1 Sunday to move toward today's final match against Eddie Dibbs of Miami Beach, Fla.

"Once he started missing a little, I hit the ball higher and tried to make him run," Vilas said. "It was very hot and Phil was hitting very well. I had to play very well."

In Sunday's other semifinal match, Dibbs disposed of unseeded Hans Gildemeister 6-2, 7-6.

Elsewhere, Dr. Renee Richards scored a first-round victory in an $85,000 open tournament in South Orange, N.J., beating schoolgirl Donna Lies of Springfield, N.J., 6-1, 6-1.

Tom Gullikson, the left-handed member of the tennis-playing twins from Onalaska, Wis., edged Lito Alvarez of Argentina 6-2, 1-6, 7-6 in the opening of a $125,000 international tournament in North Conway, N.H. Kim Warwick of Australia beat West German Frank Gebert 46,7-6, 7-6 in another first-round match.

The tournament's top seed, Jimmy Connors, was scheduled to defend the title he has won the last two years, playing today against James Delaney of Newton, Mass. Also set to play were seeded competitors Arthur Ashe, Stan Smith, Bob Lutz and Raul Ramirez of Mexico.

In European Davis Cup play, Adrianno Panatta and Paola Bertolucci downed Jose Higueras and Manuel Munoz 6-4, 7-5, 6-4 to give Italy a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five zone against Spain.

"Even though I live in an apartment, I'm extra conscious about how I use electricity."

"I'm a customer operations representative for Texas Electric, and I know people are getting higher electric bills.

Of course, I know why, too. Higher construction costs. Higher fuel costs. Everything's more expensive now.

Even though I live in an apartment where the bills are included in the rent, I try to save electricity.

If I'm not going to be home during the day I cut the air conditioning or heat off or at least turn it so it won't come on as often.

I know if I don't conserve electricity and if the guy next door doesn't — then everybody ends up paying for it. The rent goes up. It has to.

Because electricity is costing more, you just need to be extra conscious of how you use it.

If you'd like a free copy of a new booklet full of energy-saving ideas for apartment dwellers, give Texas Electric a call. Or request one on the comment portion of your electric bill."

Controversy rages on

CINCINNATI (AP) — Contrary to Cincinnati Reds General Manager Dick Wagner, team leaders Pete Rose and Joe Morgan agree with former Red Rawly Eastwick that his discontent posed no threat to club morale.

Eastwick, 1976's National League Fireman of the Year, was traded June 15 to the St. Louis Cardinals for rookie Doug Capilla. Eastwick, who had blasted the Reds' management and said he was "insulted" by their contract offers before the trade, was called a bad influence by Wagner.

Rose, veteran Reds' team captain, said, "That's just like saying I was a bad influence when I was holding out. Lord, no, Eastwick didn't cause any problems with the players."

Rose added, "The man said what he felt and you have to respect him for that. Of course, sometimes you shouldn't say everything you feel."

"I don't want to say anything for the rest of the players, but I don't think he caused any problems," Morgan said. "I know he didn't affect me. I got along well with him."

Eastwick said Wagner is "full of bull."

"I said a lot of things before and after I was traded, but a lot of the players agreed with me. There are a lot of players who are tired up putting up with all the pettiness from the management," Eastwick said.

Cincinnati fans booed Eastwick Friday night when he made his first major league start, losing to the Reds, 6-5. He was also shelled for three runs in a brief relief stint Sunday.

"I'm intelligent enough to realize that the fans are pretty well duped into believing I was the bad guy in this. I expected it," Eastwick said.

Eastwick, admitted that since joining St. Louis, "I've been struggling a little bit. I've got too many things running through my mind. I've got to try and get myself together."

The 27-year-old righthander is 3-5 with a 5.08 earned run average with St. Louis, while Capilla, pressed into the Reds' starting rotation, is 3-3 with a 4.12 ERA.

Eastwick interjected, "One and a half months don't make a trade. They're over there trying to build up Capilla and make the trade look good. From what I've seen of Capilla, he looks like a good kid, but he's only been around the league once. I've been here three years and I helped them win two World Series."

Eastwick said he's sticking to his vow not to sign a contract this season, but said he respects Cardinals' President August A. Busch.

"He's a great owner. Baseball could use a few more owners like him."

Dallas perfect place to beat summer heat

The Rangers were bringing a six-game winning streak home from Toronto and the Mrs. was complaining about the heat in Midland, so we took the hint and prescribed a trip to cool off.

Arlington seemed the obvious solution. Okay, we can see those heads shaking out there already. "Dallas to cool off? The guy must be crazy."

You just haven't followed through far enough. After a couple of days in the Dallas-Fort Worth steambath, coming back to Midland is like a weekend flight to Ruidoso.

The Mrs. didn't realize it, but she almost didn't get to see Saturday's 12-inning chiller, to use the term loosely, and it wasn't because the Rangers played like a team that had rowed across Lake Erie to catch the Pullman for the trip back to Arlington in Friday's 13-6 loss to Detroit.

WHENEVER WE go to Las Vegas, the first two marquees we look for are Mitzi Gaynor and Myron Cohen. Mitzi has never been in Vegas at the opportune time, so when it was noticed in the paper after Friday's game that Mitzi was appearing at the State Fair Music Hall, we didn't want to appear too obvious.

"You know, there's more to do in Dallas than just ball games," we broached magnanimously. "Like maybe there's something worthwhile at the Music Hall, although I have no idea of what it could be. Still, they say they have some good shows there once in a while."

As it turned out our "grand sacrifice" for culture and the Mrs. weren't necessary. There was a Saturday afternoon matinee, plenty of time to make the game Saturday night at Arlington.

THE 6-5, 12-inning win Saturday more than made up for Friday's letdown, even though the Rangers let it get away twice in the ninth. With two out and nobody on, Texas blew a one-run lead. And then in the last of the ninth, eventual hero Jim Sundberg became the goat of the moment by taking a called third strike with the bases loaded to send the game into overtime.

When Sundberg came up to lead off the 12th, he admitted, "I was thinking home run until he (John Hiller) got two strikes on me. After that, I just wanted to get good wood on the ball."

The night before, the Rangers, despite four homers, an unusual display of muscle, exposed all the frailities that have made them a disappointment this year while graphically demonstrating why Manager Billy Hunter has been conducting a "mini spring training" since taking over.

It was a night in which they made basic mistakes in fundamentals you don't even expect to see in the Texas League where the players are still learning.

In sum, it wasn't a team that looked like it was making its move.

HOWEVER, THE Rangers have more troubles than those on the field. Perhaps they didn't row Lake Erie and take the Pullman, but what they did do wasn't much better and left them in no shape to give sharp effort Friday.

In a cost-cutting move, the Rangers are flying commercial rather than charter this year. Since no flights leave Toronto after 11 p.m., which is hard to believe, the Rangers stayed over and flew back Friday, arriving midday in time to make it to the field for pregame batting practice.

DOYLE ALEXANDER, an 11-game winner who had won his last five in a row, was the victim Friday and didn't hesitate to voice his opinion.

"I definitely think we should have been here last night. I asked if I could come in Thursday night and they said I could, but the only flight I could have gotten would have gotten me in at 2 a.m.

"I wanted to get my running in. I did, but that's not why my pitching was bad. It's the guys who are playing every night who should have been in at a good time. If we're going to have a chance to win the division, somebody is going to have to reschedule some of our flights so we can get more rest."

Austin captures Pocono

POCONO MANOR, Pa. (AP) — For Debbie Austin, putting "has never been my forte." But that ended in the first $75,000 Pocono Northeast Ladies Golf Classic.

Miss Austin dropped a 25-foot birdie putt on the second hole Sunday, then sank a 60-foot birdie at 10 and a 90-footer on 13 to win the $11,000 purse, the biggest of her 10-year career.

"That kind of turned it around for me," said the pro from West Palm Beach, Fla. "I was just trying to get the ball close at both of those holes."

Miss Austin shot a four-under-par 69 Sunday, giving her 213 for the 54 holes and a oneshot victory over Sandra Post.

The two had been tied going into the final hole, but Miss Post hit her second shot to the left of the green and had to settle for a bogey.

Commenting on the final hole, Miss Post said: "Well, I hit an eight iron and it took one of those famous bounces on this course—dead left.

"There was no way I could make that last eight-footer. I stood there and wondered why I was even reading the putt," she said.

Miss Austin trailed secondround leader Jane Blalock by three shots entering Sunday's final round. But she caught Miss Blalock after playing the first five holes in two under par while the leader was two over.

Kathy Ahern of Dallas fired a two-under 71 to finish in a three-way tie for third at 216 with Miss Blalock and Sally Little, also of Dallas.

"It's a rocky rock to the hole," Miss Blalock said of her third-place finish. "I misjudged a few shots out there today, but mostly I couldn't get my putts to fall."

Turner's 11th gives Cubs split

SHREVEPORT—Duane Gustavson's heavy bat led the Midland Cubs to a 7-1 victory over Shreveport here Sunday in the first game of a doubleheader, but the Captains came back in the nightcap with a run in the sixth inning to pull out a 4-3 win over the Cubs.

In the first game, Gustavson hit two doubles and his sixth homer of the year to lead the Midland attack. Gustavson also drove in three runs while Kurt Seibert hit his first homer of the year and Aaron Randall hit his sixth homer of the year.

Darrell Turner went the distance, giving up six hits. Turner lost his shutout in the first frame when the Captains touched Turner for their only run of the game.

The Cubs captured a 3-0 lead in the second game's third inning with two runs. Steve Haug drove in a run with a key single and Jeff Albert had a run scoring sacrifice fly.

Shreveport tied the game in the fourth frame when Larry Littleton smashed a three-run homer off loser Mark Covert. Covert fell to 5-5 on the year.

The Cubs meet Shreveport again tonight and Tuesday in single games before a break in the schedule which has Midland open Wednesday and Thursday. The Cubs open a five-game homestand with San Antonio Friday.

Drillers blank Gold Sox

By The Associated Press

Tulsa's Billy Sample and Mel Barrow each swatted a two-run doubles in the first inning and the Drillers held the Amarillo Gold Sox at bay for a 4-0 Texas League victory Sunday.

Amarillo stranded 15 runners, leaving the bases loaded in four innings.

Danny Darwin stretched his record to 8-4 by pitching nearly eight scoreless innings to the Gold Sox. Jerry Bostic got the save. Mike Lentz, 2-5, took the loss.

In other Texas League action, El Paso beat Arkansas 10-2, San Antonio whipped Jackson 6-2, and Shreveport split a double header with Midland.

El Paso's Gil Kubski went four for five with three doubles and Jim Anderson stroked two solo homers to set the pace against Arkansas. Floyd Rayford continued the Diablos drive with a two-run homer in the seventh.

Arkansas' two runs came from solo homers by Leon Lee and Nick Leyva.

A two-run single by Mark Hance put San Antonio ahead in the second inning, and Jackson never caught up. Marty Kunkler, 4-6, got the victory in relief. George Milke, 7-6, was the losing pitcher.

Earl Anthony takes lead

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) — Earl Anthony of Tacoma, Wash., won six of eight match play games and opened a 62-pin lead after the fourth round of the $60,000 Quad Cities Open Professional Bowlers Association tournament here.

Anthony, professional bowling's all-time leader with 27 career victories, started Sunday's opening session of match play in third place, 15 pins behind co-leaders Tommy Hudson and Jimmy Certain.

Death illustrates ICU problem

By GEORGE H. JOHNSTON

"Code four, ICU. Code four, ICU."

We were touring Midland Memorial Hospital Monday when the words rang out from the intercom system.

Someone was dying in the intensive care unit. A physician, any physician, in the hospital was needed immediately.

The patient died of an apparent heart attack a short time after the first physician, Dr. Viola Coleman, arrived.

I was with Dr. Coleman to prepare for a series of stories on a proposed addition to and renovation of the hospital.

The addition would include a critical care unit directly across the corridor from the present emergency room.

We were on the second floor when the code four was announced. We took the first available elevator — there are no elevators for patient-staff only — but instead of going directly to the fourth floor, the elevator went first to the basement, then to our destination.

Fortunately there were no stops on the way up, but the trip took about five minutes.

Dr. Coleman had a resigned look on her face as if to say, "It's happened before, and it will happen again."

Another doctor rushed into the ICU while a woman waited next to the doors. She was talking to a member of the hospital auxiliary.

After what seemed like a long, long time, but was only a few moments, the second physician walked out shaking his head.

He whispered something to the woman standing by the door. Her husband was dead.

Dr. Coleman then walked out.

"You lost him didn't you?" I asked quietly.

"Yes, he stopped breathing on the elevator, and there was nothing we could do to revive him. He was too far gone," she replied.

After the tour was completed, Dr. Coleman said she would never know if they could have saved the man's life if the ICU had been closer to the emergency room.

We continued on the tour of the hospital. I saw the cramped private rooms and the one bathtub serving all 36 patients on the third floor.

I also saw the crowded conditions of the maternity ward where, if too many premature babies are born, they would have to go to Odessa.

We also walked down the two-block long corridor from the emergency room to the first elevator — a trip every critically ill patient must make after his initial treatment.

But the code four situation stuck in my mind. "What if that was a relative, or me, that might not live through that trip?" I thought.

Along with Dr. Coleman, two other hospital officials agree the relocation of the ICU is top priority for the hospital.

Although he knows of no specific cases, hospital Administrator Wayne Ulrich said there is always a possibility the trip from the emergency room to the ICU could be the reason for a death.

And Micky Cappadonna, Midland Memorial Hospital board chairman, said that although he knows of no documented cases, "a closer ICU

Natural gas price control win predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democratic leaders today predicted victory for President Carter's plan to continue price controls on natural gas, a big pocketbook issue in his national energy program.

"We're quite confident," said Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill about sustaining the administration-backed pricing plan in a series of floor votes tentatively set for this evening.

However, none of the leaders or managers of the legislation would predict victory for the Carter-backed proposal for a nickel hike in the federal gasoline tax.

Meantime, the administration reportedly will not oppose legislation to ban the sale of "gas-guzzling" cars in 1980, even though the provision was not part of the President's energy package.

The Senate Energy Committee approved the proposal Monday, voting to require at least 16-mile-per-gallon performance from every 1980-model car sold in the United States and backing up the requirement with a $10,000 fine for each car that falls short.

The Senate panel acted as the House began debate on a 580-page energy bill and the President called for higher gasoline taxes and continued price controls on natural gas in a statement urging approval of his energy plan.

House leadership is hoping the bill, based largely on Carter's proposals, can be approved and sent to the Senate by Friday.

The Senate energy panel acted on a proposal by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, to increase performance requirements for cars. Under the proposal, the 16-mpg requirement will be increased by one

Energy bill provisions capsuled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are the major provisions of the energy bill being debated by the House of Representatives:

Residential conservation: Tax credits of up to $400 through 1984 would be provided to encourage improved home insulation, with additional credits of up to $2,150 allowed for offsetting partial costs of solar and wind equipment.

Business conservation: To encourage industry and utilities to use more coal, the use of oil and natural

Vance, Sadat try to solve dilemma

By BARRY SCHWEID

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, fresh from a long session with President Anwar Sadat, met with other Egyptian officials today to seek an answer to the question of how to represent the Palestinians at Middle East peace talks.

In a 3½-hour session at Sadat's seaside villa Monday night, Vance reportedly was handed an outline of Egyptian negotiating proposals. These were said to have dealt with a potential compromise on Palestinian participation at the Geneva conference, which the United States, Egypt and Israel hope to have reconvened in October.

Sadat and Vance, who is beginning a six-nation Mideast tour, will wind up the talks at another meeting tonight, followed by a joint news conference.

Israel refuses to recognize the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) on the grounds that it is a terrorist band intent on destroying the Jewish state.

Though, the Arab states recognize the PLO as the sole spokesman for the Palestinian cause, Egypt is believed to have suggested alternative ways of representing Palestinian interests at Geneva.

In Beirut, Lebanon, the PLO today warned the Arab states against accepting a U.S.-sponsored settlement with Israel without PLO participation.

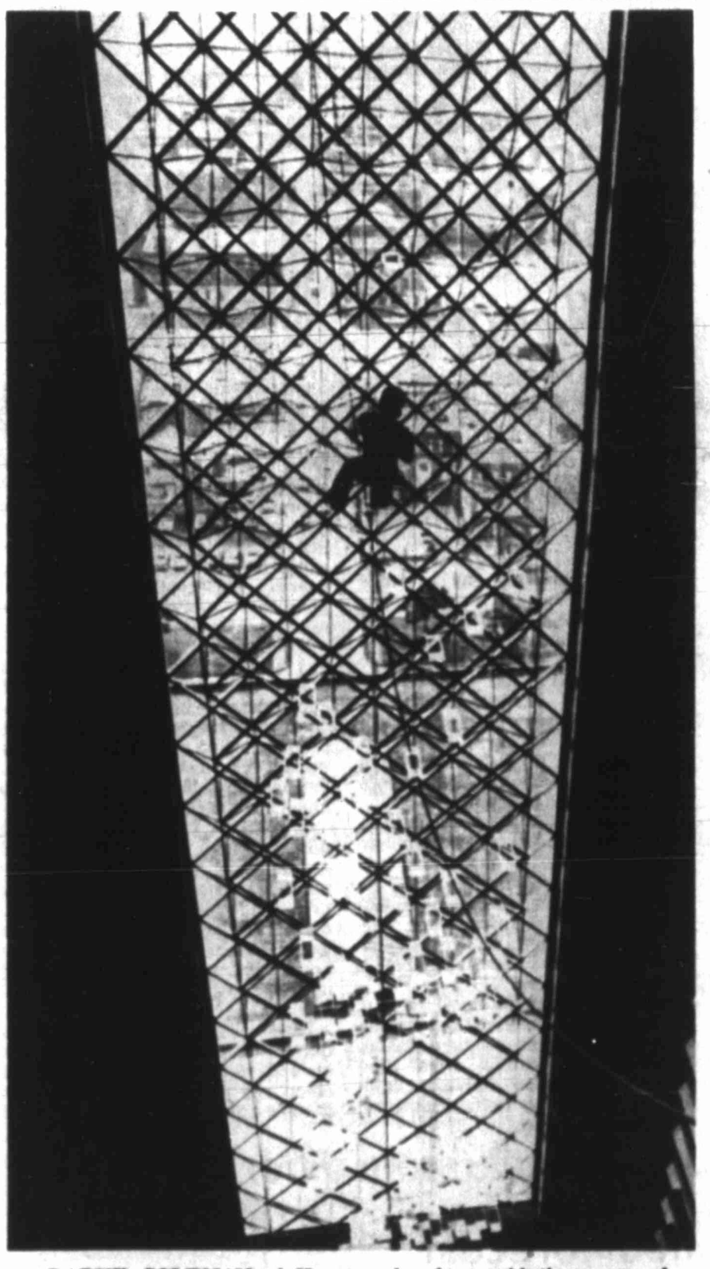

The Palestinian organization called for a high-level, pan-Arab conference to decide on a unified course of action before any commitments are made to Vance. It insisted on equal and independent Palestinian representation at any reconvened conference in Geneva.

"We have been waiting for you for a long time," Sadat told Vance jokingly after the American's arrival Monday.

The Egyptian leader told reporters he was "more than optimistic" about the outcome of the meetings.

Vance said he planned "to see what we can do to speed this process" toward a "just and lasting peace."

Ship passes new limit unscathed

By M.H. AHN

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A South Korean ship carrying 465 passengers today reached a South Korean-held island off North Korea without interference in the first test of the Communist North's new "military sea boundary," a radio message said.

The radio said the 450-ton Ongjin-ho, escorted by South Korean naval vessels, docked at the island of Paengyong-do after an 11-hour voyage from the port of Inchon near Seoul.

The island is within 10 miles of North Korea's west coast and apparently falls inside the newly announced, unprecedented military zone.

North Korea said Monday that civilian as well as military craft were barred from entering the zone without permission.

The area was defined as extending "50 miles from the starting line of the territorial waters in the East Sea (Sea of Japan) and to the boundary line of the economic sea zone in the West Sea (Yellow Sea)."

The North Korean economic zone, announced recently and effective Monday, generally extends 200 miles from shore but is narrower in the Yellow Sea because of the proximity of China. Just how far the zone extends into the Yellow Sea was not certain, but observers estimated it would be roughly 50 miles.

Declaration of the economic zone means North Korea claims control of fishing, mining and other economic activities within the area.

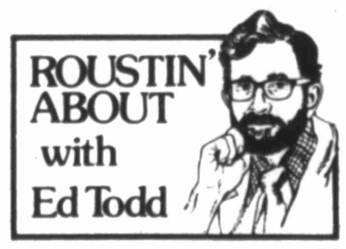

The U.S.-led United Nations Command (UNC) here rejected North Korea's unilateral action in setting the offshore military boundary.

"There will be no change in our operations in international waters and air space," a command spokesman said.

He "reaffirmed the longstanding UNC position that no unilateral North Korean declaration can curtail rights of either side under the armistice" agreement.

The United Nations Command and North Korea are signers of the 1953 armistice agreement that ended the Korean War.

Kyle Tabor was on a solo cross-country flight from Midland to Jal, N.M., one late afternoon last week.

Naturally enough, it was a pleasant flight for the 20-year-old private pilot, whose pleasure is flying.

About all he ran into, before he hit the ground, was some threatening weather. So he, being a safe and cautious flier, took heed of the controller's advice and was vectored around the storm.

It was a short (53 nautical miles) and routine flight. Just follow the rules, and you'll be okay.

Except Tabor didn't.

He was making his approach in the single-engine monoplane, a low-wing job similar to the one he had learned to fly in, at the Jal-Lea County Airport at about 7:45 p.m.

He'll be okay.

Anyway, he failed to check the wind and dropped on into the airport. He was landing with the wind, which is a fundamental no-no among fliers . . . if they want to keep on flying.

And Tabor does.

Curse it! He knows to land into the wind.

The airplane came down on the runway all right, but it kept right on going.

"And I was running out of runway," Tabor said, "and I was heading for the fence, and I veered to the right." The aircraft left the runway, missed the fence but hit something else. Hit it hard.

He hadn't enough airspeed to get back into the air.

It was somewhat rocky and jarring off the runway, and Tabor was Abortion advocates losing hope

By PEGGY SIMPSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The emotional abortion question is returning to the House floor where advocates see little hope of easing restrictions that will deny federally funded abortions to poor women.

House debate today follows release Monday of an opinion by Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell restricting tax-paid abortions even further, by denying them to the victims of rape or incest.

Bell said the controversial Hyde Amendment, which now limits federally funded abortions to those necessary to save the life of the mother, cannot be extended merely because congressional debate indicates congressmen who approved the amendment thought it would pay for abortions in cases involving rape and incest victims.

Bell's opinion of the extent of the Hyde Amendment had been sought by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which has ben paying for abortions under the Medicaid program.

The Hyde amendment was passed by Congress last year, but never was enforced because of court challenges. The Supreme Court struck down a lower court's finding that the Hyde amendment was unconstitutional and ordered the lower court to study the issue further. Bell's opinion makes the amendment more restrictive.

Abortion supporters were not optimistic about gaining more liberal provisions in the House bill, which will cover funding for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, because of complicated rules governing consideration of the proposal.

The bill is being managed by a congressman who says he wants a provision in the bill similar to the Hyde Amendment, rather than a more liberal proposal approved by the Senate. The Senate version would allow federally funded abortions to victims of rape or incest and in cases of medical necessity.

Under the House rules, the congressman, Rep. Daniel Flood, D-Penn., can introduce his own amendment before any others. Abortion supporters, therefore, must defeat Flood's amendment before they can put their own before the House.

But to do so, they must also run the risk neither amendment would be passed, leaving the language in the bill unchanged. And, supporters note anxiously, the existing language bars use of federal funds for all abortions, even if the mother's life is endangered.

Reps. Donald Fraser, D-Minn., and Charles Rose, D-N.C. called on congressmen to support "the more compassionate Senate language."

Big Spring man dies in wreck

BIG SPRING — Austin Morton, 55, of Big Spring was killed in a two-vehicle accident Monday morning at the intersection of FM 1584 and FM 846, 15 miles north of Big Spring.

Morton was an employe of the Howard County Road Department, where he had been employed 16 years.

Three other persons were injured in the accident, including Andres Sanchez of Lamesa, driver of the second vehicle, his daughter Patricia, 6, and Johnny Green, a passenger in the county-owned pickup driven by Morton, according to the Howard County Sheriff's office.

Sanchez and his daughter were hospitalized in Cowper Hospital in Big Spring after the accident. Both suffered concussions. Sanchez also suffered numerous lacerations of his head and body. Green was treated and released at Malone-Hogan Hospital.

Morton apparently fell from the truck he was driving and died as a result of head injuries, sheriff's office personnel said. The accident occurred about 8:15 a.m.

Controversy rages on

CINCINNATI (AP) — Contrary to Cincinnati Reds General Manager Dick Wagner, team leaders Pete Rose and Joe Morgan agree with former Red Rawly Eastwick that his discontent posed no threat to club morale.

Eastwick, 1976's National League Fireman of the Year, was traded June 15 to the St. Louis Cardinals for rookie Doug Capilla. Eastwick, who had blasted the Reds' management and said he was "insulted" by their contract offers before the trade, was called a bad influence by Wagner.

Rose, veteran Reds' team captain, said, "That's just like saying I was a bad influence when I was holding out. Lord, no, Eastwick didn't cause any problems with the players."

Rose added, "The man said what he felt and you have to respect him for that. Of course, sometimes you shouldn't say everything you feel."

"I don't want to say anything for the rest of the players, but I don't think he caused any problems," Morgan said. "I know he didn't affect me. I got along well with him."

Eastwick said Wagner is "full of bull."

"I said a lot of things before and after I was traded, but a lot of the players agreed with me. There are a lot of players who are tired up putting up with all the pettiness from the management," Eastwick said.

Cincinnati fans booed Eastwick Friday night when he made his first major league start, losing to the Reds, 6-5. He was also shelled for three runs in a brief relief stint Sunday.

"I'm intelligent enough to realize that the fans are pretty well duped into believing I was the bad guy in this. I expected it," Eastwick said.

Eastwick, admitted that since joining St. Louis, "I've been struggling a little bit. I've got too many things running through my mind. I've got to try and get myself together."

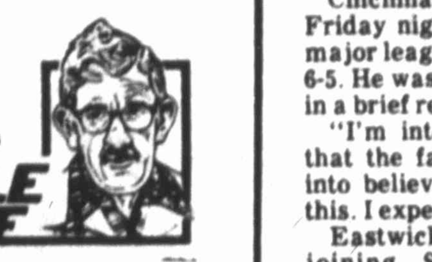

The 27-year-old righthander is 3-5 with a 5.08 earned run average with St. Louis, while Capilla, pressed into the Reds' starting rotation, is 3-3 with a 4.12 ERA.

Eastwick interjected, "One and a half months don't make a trade. They're over there trying to build up Capilla and make the trade look good. From what I've seen of Capilla, he looks like a good kid, but he's only been around the league once. I've been here three years and I helped them win two World Series."

Eastwick said he's sticking to his vow not to sign a contract this season, but said he respects Cardinals' President August A. Busch.

"He's a great owner. Baseball could use a few more owners like him."

Dallas perfect place to beat summer heat

The Rangers were bringing a six-game winning streak home from Toronto and the Mrs. was complaining about the heat in Midland, so we took the hint and prescribed a trip to cool off.

Arlington seemed the obvious solution. Okay, we can see those heads shaking out there already. "Dallas to cool off? The guy must be crazy."

You just haven't followed through far enough. After a couple of days in the Dallas-Fort Worth steambath, coming back to Midland is like a weekend flight to Ruidoso.

The Mrs. didn't realize it, but she almost didn't get to see Saturday's 12-inning chiller, to use the term loosely, and it wasn't because the Rangers played like a team that had rowed across Lake Erie to catch the Pullman for the trip back to Arlington in Friday's 13-6 loss to Detroit.

WHENEVER WE go to Las Vegas, the first two marquees we look for are Mitzi Gaynor and Myron Cohen. Mitzi has never been in Vegas at the opportune time, so when it was noticed in the paper after Friday's game that Mitzi was appearing at the State Fair Music Hall, we didn't want to appear too obvious.

"You know, there's more to do in Dallas than just ball games," we broached magnanimously. "Like maybe there's something worthwhile at the Music Hall, although I have no idea of what it could be. Still, they say they have some good shows there once in a while."

As it turned out our "grand sacrifice" for culture and the Mrs. weren't necessary. There was a Saturday afternoon matinee, plenty of time to make the game Saturday night at Arlington.

THE 6-5, 12-inning win Saturday more than made up for Friday's letdown, even though the Rangers let it get away twice in the ninth. With two out and nobody on, Texas blew a one-run lead. And then in the last of the ninth, eventual hero Jim Sundberg became the goat of the moment by taking a called third strike with the bases loaded to send the game into overtime.

When Sundberg came up to lead off the 12th, he admitted, "I was thinking home run until he (John Hiller) got two strikes on me. After that, I just wanted to get good wood on the ball."

The night before, the Rangers, despite four homers, an unusual display of muscle, exposed all the frailities that have made them a disappointment this year while graphically demonstrating why Manager Billy Hunter has been conducting a "mini spring training" since taking over.

It was a night in which they made basic mistakes in fundamentals you don't even expect to see in the Texas League where the players are still learning.

In sum, it wasn't a team that looked like it was making its move.

HOWEVER, THE Rangers have more troubles than those on the field. Perhaps they didn't row Lake Erie and take the Pullman, but what they did do wasn't much better and left them in no shape to give sharp effort Friday.

In a cost-cutting move, the Rangers are flying commercial rather than charter this year. Since no flights leave Toronto after 11 p.m., which is hard to believe, the Rangers stayed over and flew back Friday, arriving midday in time to make it to the field for pregame batting practice.

DOYLE ALEXANDER, an 11-game winner who had won his last five in a row, was the victim Friday and didn't hesitate to voice his opinion.

"I definitely think we should have been here last night. I asked if I could come in Thursday night and they said I could, but the only flight I could have gotten would have gotten me in at 2 a.m.

"I wanted to get my running in. I did, but that's not why my pitching was bad. It's the guys who are playing every night who should have been in at a good time. If we're going to have a chance to win the division, somebody is going to have to reschedule some of our flights so we can get more rest."

Austin captures Pocono

POCONO MANOR, Pa. (AP) — For Debbie Austin, putting "has never been my forte." But that ended in the first $75,000 Pocono Northeast Ladies Golf Classic.

Miss Austin dropped a 25-foot birdie putt on the second hole Sunday, then sank a 60-foot birdie at 10 and a 90-footer on 13 to win the $11,000 purse, the biggest of her 10-year career.

"That kind of turned it around for me," said the pro from West Palm Beach, Fla. "I was just trying to get the ball close at both of those holes."

Miss Austin shot a four-under-par 69 Sunday, giving her 213 for the 54 holes and a oneshot victory over Sandra Post.

The two had been tied going into the final hole, but Miss Post hit her second shot to the left of the green and had to settle for a bogey.

Commenting on the final hole, Miss Post said: "Well, I hit an eight iron and it took one of those famous bounces on this course—dead left.

"There was no way I could make that last eight-footer. I stood there and wondered why I was even reading the putt," she said.

Miss Austin trailed secondround leader Jane Blalock by three shots entering Sunday's final round. But she caught Miss Blalock after playing the first five holes in two under par while the leader was two over.

Kathy Ahern of Dallas fired a two-under 71 to finish in a three-way tie for third at 216 with Miss Blalock and Sally Little, also of Dallas.

"It's a rocky rock to the hole," Miss Blalock said of her third-place finish. "I misjudged a few shots out there today, but mostly I couldn't get my putts fall."

Turner's 11th gives Cubs split

SHREVEPORT—Duane Gustavson's heavy bat led the Midland Cubs to a 7-1 victory over Shreveport here Sunday in the first game of a doubleheader, but the Captains came back in the nightcap with a run in the sixth inning to pull out a 4-3 win over the Cubs.

In the first game, Gustavson hit two doubles and his sixth homer of the year to lead the Midland attack. Gustavson also drove in three runs while Kurt Seibert hit his first homer of the year and Aaron Randall hit his sixth homer of the year.

Darrell Turner went the distance, giving up six hits. Turner lost his shutout in the first frame when the Captains touched Turner for their only run of the game.

The Cubs captured a 3-0 lead in the second game's third inning with two runs. Steve Haug drove in a run with a key single and Jeff Albert had a run scoring sacrifice fly.

Shreveport tied the game in the fourth frame when Larry Littleton smashed a three-run homer off loser Mark Covert. Covert fell to 5-5 on the year.

Turner raised his record to 11-5 in the first game with his route going performance. He struckout three Caps and walked three.

The Cubs meet Shreveport again tonight and Tuesday in single games before a break in the schedule which has Midland open Wednesday and Thursday. The Cubs open a five-game homestand with San Antonio Friday.

Drillers blank Gold Sox

By The Associated Press

Tulsa's Billy Sample and Mel Barrow each swatted a two-run doubles in the first inning and the Drillers held the Amarillo Gold Sox at bay for a 4-0 Texas League victory Sunday.

Amarillo stranded 15 runners, leaving the bases loaded in four innings.

Danny Darwin stretched his record to 8-4 by pitching nearly eight scoreless innings to the Gold Sox. Jerry Bostic got the save. Mike Lentz, 2-5, took the loss.

In other Texas League action, El Paso beat Arkansas 10-2, San Antonio whipped Jackson 6-2, and Shreveport split a double header with Midland.

El Paso's Gil Kubski went four for five with three doubles and Jim Anderson stroked two solo homers to set the pace against Arkansas. Floyd Rayford continued the Diablos drive with a two-run homer in the seventh.

Arkansas' two runs came from solo homers by Leon Lee and Nick Leyva.

A two-run single by Mark Hance put San Antonio ahead in the second inning, and Jackson never caught up. Marty Kunkler, 4-6, got the victory in relief. George Milke, 7-6, was the losing pitcher.

Earl Anthony takes lead

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) — Earl Anthony of Tacoma, Wash., won six of eight match play games and opened a 62-pin lead after the fourth round of the $60,000 Quad Cities Open Professional Bowlers Association tournament here.

Anthony, professional bowling's all-time leader with 27 career victories, started Sunday's opening session of match play in third place, 15 pins behind co-leaders Tommy Hudson and Jimmy Certain.
