Farm Belt credits

WASHINGTON — President Bush showered the Farm Belt with presents Thursday — concessions to growers to expand the use of corn-based ethanol and credit guarantees to help foreign countries buy $3.6 billion in U.S. farm products. The White House has been under election-year pressure from corn growers to waive proposed Clean Air Act restrictions on the use of ethanol-blended gasoline, but the oil industry has been adamantly opposed./8A

Mom files lawsuit

DALLAS — A Fort Worth woman said Thursday a baby her ex-husband and hospital workers told her was stillborn actually lived but was sold illegally to an Arizona couple. Linda Morrison Thompson said she filed the lawsuit in a Tarrant County state district court earlier this week after a yearlong search for Wendy Beth Glass. "I had given those people who stole my child a year to come forward and apologize," said Mrs. Thompson, who was told almost 20 years ago that the child was stillborn./1B

'God Help Us'

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — A crowd of jet-setters dance and swill champagne at a cocktail party, oblivious to a rising sea of mud that slowly engulfs them. Suddenly the mud spills over and covers a map of Brazil. Jackson thrills

BUCHAREST, Romania — Michael Jackson displayed his dizzying choreography and stage pyrotechnics before 70,000 enraptured Romanians on Thursday night at the National Stadium, once the site of Communist parades. Bucharest had never seen anything like it. Jackson, dressed in black leather pants, a gold satin body suit and his trademark single glove, began the show with a spirited performance of "Jam," the opening cut from his new "Dangerous" album. The 2½-hour performance, on a five-story stage with two giant TV screens, an elevated platform and a 25-foot globe, included a Jackson Five medley and hits from "Thriller," "Bad" and other albums.

Perot plunges into race

'We can fix anything,' Texas candidate says

Midlanders give billionaire low approval rating

By Tom Raum
Associated Press writer

DALLAS — Ross Perot plunged back into the presidential race on Thursday, setting up a three-way struggle with President Bush and Bill Clinton. He said the major parties haven't tackled the nation's major economic problems but "we can fix anything."

Declaring his candidacy in the final month of the campaign after bowing out in mid-July, the Texas billionaire declared: "Not only is government a mess, politics is also a mess." He suggested he was the one to set things right.

Perot made the announcement at a packed, sometimes raucous news conference, saying he was in the race to win despite his meager standing in national polls.

"My objective is not to commit political suicide," Perot said.

Still, even though Perot once

Ross Perot's re-entry into the presidential race received less-than-favorable reactions from a group of Midlanders informally polled Thursday evening.

Although some of the 15 people asked were interested in what effect Perot's presence will have on the race, none said they would vote for him. And, the majority's sentiment ran against the Dallas businessman.

"I think he lost it when he withdrew the first time," Tonya Carroll said. "I think he had a lot of support, but now he has lost a lot of voter confidence. He's not a factor anymore. He has no opinions and doesn't know the issues."

Negotiators drop limits on regulating natural gas

■ Energy bill faces hurdle of tax provisions.

By Bill Mintz
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — House and Senate negotiators have agreed on a wide-ranging energy policy bill that is intended to increase demand for natural gas and reduce reliance on foreign oil.

■ Related story/8A

Earlier, conferees agreed to drop controversial limits on the power of Texas and other producing states to regulate natural gas production.

The only unresolved issues are a series of tax provisions including $1 billion in tax relief for oil and gas producers. Top tax writers were expected to begin meeting to resolve those issues Thursday.

After the tax provisions are settled upon, the bill must go back to the full House and Senate for final approval.

As they closed in on agreement, conference committee members reluctantly

MHS parades students for homecoming

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Gold flags stenciled with a purple bulldog could be seen waving up and down A Street Thursday night in anticipation of Midland High School's 1992 homecoming parade.

By 6:10 p.m., band music could be heard by youngsters sitting on the curb of Tennessee and A Street. As it got louder, some future bulldogs — garbed in purple T-shirts with gold paw marks — clapped and squealed.

Soon after, the Midland Police Department color guard arrived, followed by the Midland Freshman High School Band.

Bobbing purple and gold balloons — and waving streamers — heralded the arrival of student council members, and MHS Posse students marched behind them yelling cheers. A doghouse on wheels brought up the rear of the Posse brigade.

"There's the bulldog," one youngster shouted, pointing to a student in a bulldog costume, who was cavorting on a flatbed float with MFHS cheerleaders.

"Enviro Hound," a student garbed in a purple sweatsuit and black cape, encouraged the crowd to recycle.

Raider Pride then blasted through as the Goddard band marched by, sporting red and white wide-stripe polo shirts.

Students in cowboy hats, including one holding a stuffed sheep, shouted chants at students on the soccer float

The Midland County Commissioners' Court activated the county's $19.86-million budget on Thursday, the beginning of fiscal year 1993, set salaries, adopted a pay scale, and amended the county's education-incentive pay policy.

The budget is $1.37 million higher than 1992's budget of $18.49 million. Reserves bring the 1993 budget to $21.7 million.

Researchers link gene to hypertension

■ Finding could help treat, prevent disease.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Scientists for the first time have linked a human gene to the most common form of high blood pressure, a finding that may eventually help treat and prevent a disease afflicting more than 50 million Americans.

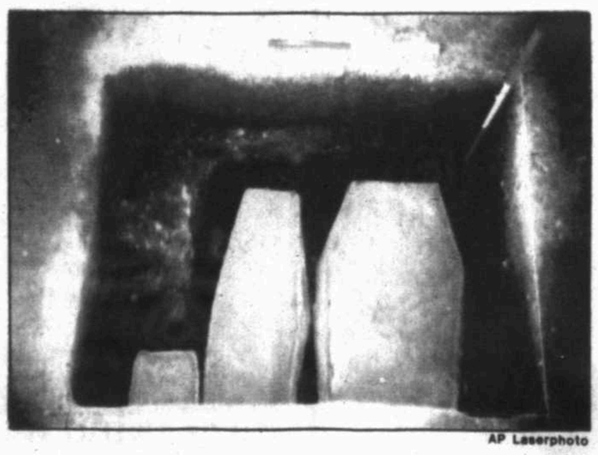

"This is a major advance that will help us understand one of the most common chronic conditions in the United States," said Dr. Claude Lenfant, director of the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute.

The institute helped fund the study, which dealt with "essential" hypertension. The condition accounts for about 95 percent of all high blood pressure. Scientists believe that multiple genes and environmental factors play a role in the disease, which can lead to heart attacks and strokes.

Dr. Victor Dzau, director of the Cardiovascular Research Center at Stanford University, said he found the evidence for the gene's role "compelling, but not proven."

Even if the gene does not raise hypertension risk, the finding gives scientists "very specific directions" on where to seek such a gene, said Dr. Theodore Kurtz, a cardiovascular geneticist at the University of California, San Francisco.

Scientists hope these sealed coffins, found in Maryland, contain preserved 17th-century air.

Scientists hold breath for preserved air

By Angela Walker
Associated Press writer

ST. MARY'S CITY, Md. — Scientists are holding their breath that three sealed coffins possibly bearing the remains of colonial Maryland's founding family contain a valuable aid to modern science: preserved 17th-century air.

On Thursday, excavators began uncovering the lead coffins that were discovered in November 1990 at the ruins of the first Catholic chapel built in colonial America. The entire project could take six weeks.

"We'll know one hour after analysis if we've found the Rosetta stone of the atmosphere," said Joel S. Levine, a research scientist in the atmospheric sciences division of NASA's Langley Research Center in Hampton, Va. "It will show us how the atmosphere has changed as a result of human activities."

The chance of finding a sample of uncontaminated air is perhaps one in 1,000, Levine said. Scientists have tried to obtain preserved air from the Egyptian pyramids, sunken ships and even ancient wine bottles with no success.

He said the chemical composition of centuries-old air would be invaluable to scientists studying how man-made chemicals have altered the Earth's atmosphere since the Industrial Revolution, which began around 1760.

"The odds are really against us being successful, but the scientific payoff is so high," Levine said. "All you need is a microscopic hole, and the sample would be contaminated."

Levine is among several NASA specialists, forensics experts, archaeologists and other scientists converg-

Sarajevo attack kills 1, wounds 10

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — A mortar attack killed one person and wounded 10 in Sarajevo Thursday, and heavy fighting flared elsewhere in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

A Red Cross convoy moved to evacuate hundreds of people held in a Serb detention camp amid new reports of "ethnic cleansing."

In Washington, Acting U.S. Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger said the airlift to besieged Sarajevo will resume today. He said the warring parties gave "general assurances of free flight, no attack," but there was still concern about forces "who may not be under anyone's control."

Relief flights were suspended on Sept. 3 after an Italian military cargo plane was shot down.

In northern Bosnia, the International Committee of the Red Cross mounted a convoy of 35 buses and ambulances to evacuate more than 1,500 prisoners released from a Serb-run detention camp and escort them to safety in Croatia.

The convoy was reported to be moving without incident toward Karlovac, Croatia, and some of the vehicles crossed the border after nightfall, U.N. officials said.

One of the former detainees, Emir Alic, in his mid-20s, said he had seen guards beating numerous prisoners at the Trnopolje camp where he had been held since May 24.

"It's hard to kill someone by beating them, so you can imagine what animals they are," Alic said before police removed an Associated Press reporter from the bus.

In other developments:

■ In Geneva, U.N. spokesman Fred Eckhard said mediators hope to end the fighting in Sarajevo in stages by arranging ways for the Muslim, Croat and Serb fighters to pull forces out of specific areas, creating demilitarized zones.

■ Yugoslavia's foreign minister, Ilija Djukic, speaking at the United Nations, said his country and Croatia have agreed to have their airports monitored to make sure no warplanes take off in their skies over Bosnia-Herzegovina, and he urged the warring parties in Bosnia to do the same.

In Sarajevo, the Health Ministry said Thursday that 13 people had been killed and 186 wounded in Bosnia-Herzegovina in the previous 24 hours, including two dead and 39 wounded in the capital.

The casualty toll was considerably lower than in recent days, reflecting a generally quieter situation, especially in Sarajevo. But later Thursday, a mortar attack hit the New Town district, and doctors in Kosevo Hospital reported one dead and 10 wounded.

Heavy fighting erupted in northern Bosnia, according to the Belgrade-based Tanjug news agency. It said Serb forces were trying to widen a corridor connecting Serb-occupied regions in Bosnia and Croatia with Serbia, and there was intense fighting near the towns of Maglaj, Zavidovici and Tesanj.

Industry in Maglaj includes a chemical factory built into a mountain, and experts have expressed fears of an ecological disaster if the factory is hit.

The Serbian news agency SRNA reported up to 150 Serbs were killed "in the most monstrous way" by Muslim extremists in the western Bosnian city of Bihac on Wednesday. It attributed its report to unidentified U.N. officials and Red Cross officials, but checks with Red Cross offices yielded no confirmation.

Officials in Sarajevo said Thursday. that Serb fighters cleared hundreds of Muslim and Croats from the Grbavica neighborhood, across the Miljacka River from the center of Sarajevo.

Enver Dzelilovic, a 46-year-old chemical engineer, said uniformed Serbs entered his apartment Wednesday and told him to leave. They threatened his mother with a knife, but relented when he gave up the keys to the apartment, Dzelilovic said.

The sudden move to clear Grbavica could be connected to efforts to find a negotiated settlement to the siege of Sarajevo and six months of warfare throughout Bosnia. By evicting all non-Serbs from the area, Serb Bosnian forces could more easily lay claim to keeping it as a bargaining chip or a toehold into Sarajevo.

PEROT: Billionaire bows to volunteers' requests, enters race had support rivaling that of Bush and Clinton, recent polls show him a distant third. A national tracking poll by Cable News Network and USA Today released on Thursday gave Perot only 7 percent support, compared to 52 percent for Clinton and 35 percent for Bush.

Even so, his entry, coupled with the prospect of a series of October debates, had the effect of injecting uncertainty to a race that Clinton has led consistently since July.

Perot said he would run an issues-oriented campaign. Top aides said Perot would concentrate heavily on paid advertising and television appearances.

With Perot's impact on the electoral landscape still uncertain, both Bush and Clinton camps greeted the development a little warily.

Clinton, campaigning in Wisconsin, said, "I don't worry about things I can't control." Of Perot's participation in debates, Clinton said: "I'm open to anything. . . . I wouldn't rule it out."

Bush spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Perot "deserves to have an opportunity to run" but that the president would continue to focus his attention on Clinton as his major foe. He said Bush's offer to include Perot in the debates stands.

Perot got back in the game 11 weeks to the day after he abandoned the race, saying he believed he could not win and did not want to be a disruptive influence on the campaign.

To his volunteers, Perot said on Thursday: "My decision in July hurt you. I apologize. I thought I was doing the right thing. I made a mistake. I take full responsibility for it.

"I thought that both political parties would address the problems that faced the nation," he added. "We gave them a chance. They didn't do it."

In his announcement speech before family, friends and supporters in his home state of Texas, Perot looked beyond the election, pledging to dedicate himself to solving problems and rallying the public to the cause. "Looking forward, working together, we can fix anything," he said.

Later, Perot said: "We will win by highlighting our issues."

At first, Perot declined to remain behind to answer questions, turning over the podium to his volunteer organizer, Orson Swindle.

But he later returned, joking, "I am green and inexperienced."

And, while accusing reporters of "the usual hostile yelling," Perot asserted: "I'm here today to have a positive, good time."

Despite Perot's deferential bow to the volunteers, spending reports filed with the government indicate that after his nominal withdrawal, he spent millions to maintain a political organization and make sure his name was placed on all 50 state ballots.

He reportedly has 20 or more television commercials ready to go and said with a smile as he left his news conference: "Got to go to work, got to earn a living, got to pay for ads."

Perot also called former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas and retiring Sen. Warren Rudman of New Hampshire on Wednesday to ask if they would go on television to speak about the federal budget deficit, Tsongas said. Neither man had decided whether to accept, said Tsongas, a former Democratic presidential contender.

Perot stepped forward as Bush and Clinton negotiators tried to nail down arrangements for a series of debates. They met privately through the day in Washington. Perot said he'd "be glad to participate" in debates.

Perot was accompanied by his wife, Margot, and the man tapped to be his running mate. Retired Adm. James Stockdale is a former Vietnam prisoner of war and a Medal of Honor winner — in Perot's words "a man of steel."

Perot's announcement followed a highly publicized run-up that featured multiple appearances on the morning television shows, a meeting of his state organizers in Dallas and what he said was a survey of his state supporters.

Swindle said that a total of 150,000 of Perot's volunteers had been polled. Of those, 141,000 said Perot should re-enter the race, he said.

Perot has liberal-conservative stand on issues

By James Rowley
Associated Press writer

■ Analysis

WASHINGTON — Ross Perot preaches a liberal social philosophy and a conservative economic agenda, favoring abortion rights, sex education, less spending and higher taxes.

The Texas billionaire, who last spring offered himself as a Mr. Fix-it to repair a broken government, espouses a philosophy that combines strains of libertarianism and tight-fisted economic policies of orthodox Republicans.

Perot favors abortion rights and would permit federal funding for women who couldn't afford it.

The Texas billionaire favors sex education for school students "so that they don't make mistakes that damage their life." Perot also doesn't object to distributing condoms to students to prevent the spread of AIDS.

But he opposes prayer in schools in keeping with the Constitution's separation of church and state.

"It seems clear that he cuts across the usual liberal-conservative spectrum because on a lot of social issues he is a liberal in a libertarian sense," says Benjamin Page, a Northwestern University political scientist.

"At the same time, in terms of economic matters, he is very conservative in what I would call the old-fashioned Republican sense, not Reagan-Kemp supply side economics, but paying attention to the deficits and actually balancing the budget," Page said.

Perot, who announced Thursday that he was joining the presidential race, has made balancing the federal budget and paying off the national debt a hallmark of his economic program.

Perot says it was a mistake to drop out of the race because neither President Bush nor Bill Clinton have proposed ways to cut the national debt.

While an active candidate, Perot outlined his ideas in speeches and interviews but didn't offer a specific prescription for balancing the budget until after he had dropped out of presidential race on July 16.

That bitter medicine, prescribed in a book that Perot published in August, includes higher income taxes for the wealthy, fewer tax breaks for home mortgages, higher Medicare premiums and increases in federal excise taxes on gasoline and cigarettes.

Last spring, the billionaire complained that wealthy people such as himself should be forced to pay higher taxes for Social Security benefits. In his manifesto entitled "United We Stand," Perot calls for taxing more of the benefits of retirees whose incomes exceed $25,000 for individuals or $32,000 for couples.

Perot would end agricultural subsidies for agribusiness and cut what he calls unnecessary programs, such as the Rural Electrification Administration. But he proposes taking steps toward national health insurance, including a board to control medical costs — similar to the one envisioned by Clinton.

The Texas computer magnate is alternately general and specific about how he would attack such problems as crime, drugs, and the decline in the quality of public-school education.

He calls for mandatory life sentences without parole for people who have been convicted of three violent crimes. He also urges "public-private efforts in diverting gang members from criminal enterprises to legal profit-making enterprises."

The Perot can-do spirit of trial-and-error tinkering is best summed up in a line from his book that follows his proposals to reduce crime and illegal drug use.

"If the measures I've recommended above don't work, let's try new ones. If those don't work, try new ones, Admit mistakes, own up to failure," Perot wrote.

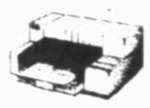

Perot's insistence that big problems can be solved by force of personal will has left many critics complaining that the Texas businessman has much to learn about the world of politics.

Sunny skies maintain hold

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high between 85-90 and south winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be clear with a low near 50, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should be sunny with a high between 85-90.

After an overnight low of 51, Thursday's high reached 85, compared to the record high for that date of 98 set in 1951. The record low was 42 set in 1965.

STATE

Sunny skies prevailed across most sections of Texas on Wednesday, although a few thin clouds drifted across southeast and northern portions of the state.

In North Texas, morning lows were well below normal, ranging from 40 degrees in Stephenville to 54 degrees at Meacham Field in Fort Worth. Temperatures warmed up to normal by afternoon.

Out west, afternoon temperatures were most in the 80s, while South Texas had temperatures in the high 70s and mid-80s.

In South Texas, expect fair skies through today with highs in the 80s.

North Texas should be fair through Saturday with highs in the 80s and lows in the 50s.

NATION

Unusually warm weather prevailed Thursday across much of the nation west of the Rockies. Frost settled on pumpkin patches in parts of the Northeast. An early snow fell in Vermont.

The mercury soared into the 80s and lower 90s in the Northwest and Great Basin. By midday, temperatures were in the 70s and 80s across much of the West.

The Southwest deserts baked in temperatures that reached the 90s or exceeded 100 degrees. The temperature hit 92 degrees in Boise, Idaho, by afternoon, a record for the day.

ENERGY: Bill faces hurdle of tax provisions

agreed to drop further limits on offshore drilling. House Democratic conferees wanted to prevent drilling in areas off the coasts of North Carolina and south Florida and Bristol Bay of Alaska, where oil companies already had paid the government for the rights to drill.

However, the Bush administration said canceling the leases would cost the government $1.5 billion and trigger automatic cuts in Medicare and other programs.

Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., said attempts to negotiate a compromise were thwarted by the administration threats.

Even if lawmakers reach a compromise, a filibuster threat from Nevada lawmakers could scuttle the legislation in the final days before Congress adjourns.

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., the principal Senate author of the bill, urged his colleagues to "Come to Jesus" and finish their work.

The members of the committee eliminated a provision inserted in the House that limited the authority of states to regulate natural gas production. These restrictions were backed by members from natural gas-consuming states who feared that new "prorationing" rules approved by the Texas Railroad Commission and the Oklahoma Legislature would result in short supplies and higher prices.

Producing-states lawmakers, led by Johnston, argued the state rules are needed to prevent waste and protect mineral rights.

In the tentative agreement, the limits on state authority were stripped from the bill, along with other provisions that would streamline the approval process for natural gas pipelines and would limit the ability of pipelines to recover the costs of adjusting to new federal regulations.

Instead, the bill includes a "sense of the Congress" statement in favor of competitive gas markets. The legislative report that will accompany the final bill also will say Congress does not support production limits designed to push up prices.

In return for dropping the prorationing limits, Reps. Ed Markey, D-Mass., and Norm Lent, R-N.Y., insisted on language prohibiting moves by state and federal regulation restricting Canadian natural gas imports.

The biggest breakthrough came when the negotiators agreed on changes in a Depression-era law that regulates the electric generation market. The changes would allow gas pipeline companies, power plant builders and other non-utilities to enter the business.

The lawmakers also agreed on terms that will permit federal regulators to order utilities to carry the electricity generated by their new competitors.

Some utilities, including Houston Lighting & Power, opposed the transmission access provisions, saying opening up the power grid would damage the reliability of the system.

The Nevada lawmakers were dissatisfied with a compromise that would limit the authority of the Environmental Protection Agency to set radiation exposure standards at the proposed high-level nuclear waste dump at Yucca Mountain.

Sen. Richard Bryan, D-Nev., said a filibuster to block the expected agreement is "a distinct possibility" even though he realized it could kill the bill.

The lawmakers were far apart late Wednesday on limits on offshore drilling.

U.S. Energy Secretary James D. Watkins told reporters in Houston on Wednesday that Clinton has asked Democrats to find a way to defeat the $1 billion worth of tax breaks for the oil and gas industry.

Watkins said Democratic leaders are planning to move the energy tax provisions from the energy bill into a general tax bill with "an impossible tax burden" the president is sure to veto.

REACTION: Midlanders give Perot move low marks

(From 1A)

Thomas said. "I mean, how soon before he unjoins the race again?"

Virgil Cox said he didn't think Perot had a chance at winning because he re-entered so late.

"People have to know you and your platform," Cox said. "You can't get your message out to people entering this late in the race."

Perot's committment to the race and, if he won, to the presidency was questioned.

"I'm not going to vote for him," Polo Calzada said. "If he gets it (the presidency), he'll probably quit."

"I won't vote for him," Hollie Davidson said. "He's a chicken and I don't think he's worth messing with. His track record so far shows what he's made of."

"I think his past actions show his committment to what he is doing," Tonya Claussen said. "He backed out in the race and then stepped back in. So, what has he done to make us think he won't back out as president?"

Perot's qualifications for the presidential post also came under fire.

'He's a chicken and I don't think he's worth messing with.'

— Hollie Davidson

"He should stay out," Ralph Mandson said. "He is not qualified and he's a quitter. He is not well-versed in the political arenas. He's qualified to run a business, but not at running the country."

"He has lost credibility and he is not qualified," Mark Price agreed. "Perot is simply not qualified to run the country."

Some of those polled thought that Perot's decision would have a positive impact on the race itself.

"I don't think he should have stepped back in," June Pillay said. "But, maybe it will shake up Bush and Clinton. You know, keep them in line."

"It think his decision is a good thing," Isaac Washington said. "Hopefully, it will make the political parties more factual. Maybe the candidates will stop avoiding the issues and start telling people the truth."

"I think he has a lot on the ball, but I wish he would have handled this differently," Dawn Kerby said. "He will probably be the deciding factor in split votes."

Others were just interested in seeing what happens over the next month, as the race gets tighter.

"I am interested in what he has to offer," Cyndi Aycock said. "We'll just have to wait and see."

"If he stays in, he can probably knock Bush out of the way," Jeanine Cox said. "Someone needs to get in and do something right."

"I figured he would be back in," David Carroll said. "I think he will be a deciding factor in the tight races, like here in Texas. I think his motive is to get his viewpoint across. We'll just have to see."

COUNTY: Commissioners launch 1993 budget

(From 1A)

Commissioner Durward Wright, who had no "technical corrections" for the budget.

Neither did the other commissioners — Guy McCrary, Lousia Valencia and Win Brown.

"I broke my crystal ball a couple of years ago," County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer said in alluding to unforeseen trials and expenses, which could cause the Commissioners' Court to amend the budget. "And I miss that thing."

The Commissioners' Court set the 1993 salaries of the 400 county employees and officials into motion and reviewed and discussed the county's policy on education-incentive pay.

The basic incentives, which were adopted 20 years ago when Ed "Big Ed" Darnell was the Midland County sheriff, encourage law-enforcement officers to enroll in college-level academic courses "that are geared toward preparing the officer to be better qualified for his position."

Today, about 70 of the 100 deputies and jailers working for Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter participate in the program, according to Chief Deputy Jim Chancellor.

A deputy who holds a bachelor's degree in criminal justice or a related field in law enforcement is paid $400 per month, or $4,800 a year, in addition to the deputy's regular salary.

An officer who holds an associate degree in criminal justice receives $200 monthly in incentive pay.

However, if the degrees are not related to law enforcement, the monthly incentive pay is $200.

In slightly revising the incentive-pay policy, the Commissioners' Court agreed that only one degree, the four-year bachelor's degree or the two-year associate degree, may be used in figuring the extra pay.

Further, the degree must be from a college or university that is accredited by the Commission on Colleges of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools or by another of the regional accreditation associations, Seltzer said.

Mail-order degrees will not qualify officers for education-incentive pay, Seltzer said.

The maximum incentive pay that a person can earn is $400, Seltzer said, and only one degree will be considered in qualifying a person for the pay.

The Commissioners' Court is allowing education-incentive pay for officers in the Sheriff's Department, in Constable Ron Rice's office, in the Facilities Management Department, and, now, in the Midland County Public Library.

"We have been harangued considerably for not paying education pay for librarians," said McCrary.

That has been corrected somewhat.

A librarian who holds a master's degree in library science is paid an additional $50 per month.

And "that ain't right," said Seltzer. It "really is unfair" for a holder of a master's degree to be rewarded with a $50-a-month-incentive pay when a holder of a bachelor's degree in law enforcement is paid an additional $400 per month.

However, the law-enforcement officer's education-incentive pay was authorized in 1972 to help "create a career ladder" to encourage men and women to stay in law enforcement, Seltzer said.

"It was designed to upgrade law enforcement," Brown said, "and they (law-enforcement officers) are required by state law" to maintain certain certifications and to enroll in continuing-education programs related to law enforcement.

Encouraging law-enforcement officers to earn academic degrees, Brown said, is an effort in "guaranteeing that they will get a proper educational background."

MHS: Students launch parade through town for homecoming behind them.

Drama students rode on a flatbed with a banner reading "Drama Dawgs support MHS football."

The San Jacinto Junior High School band was followed by one of the most spirited groups in the parade — dozens of Bowie Elementary School students shouting, "Let's go Bulldogs, let's go, oh, oh, oh, oh."

The Alamo Scout band, dressed in red and white, caught the attention of several parents with camcorders. One parent noted that this would probably be the last year that "the Scouts marched" in the MHS parade, since the direct feeder system will send all Alamo students to Lee High School in 1993.

Youngsters from the Junior Classical League sported Roman togas and poles bearing cardboard bulldog heads.

Carrie Benton, the vice president of VICA, rode in style. She sat on the back of white convertible chauffeured by two gentlemen decked out in black tuxedos, black ties, and pitch black cowboy hats.

Another well-known dog, McGruff, waved to the crowd, before the appearance of the MHS band, smartly marching and performing under the tutelage of band director Cody Myers.

"They saved the best for last," said MHS band alum Lisa Fiver. "This is the best our band has looked in years."

The MHS Homecoming game is set for 8 p.m. tonight at Memorial Stadium. The Bulldogs will face Amarillo High School's Golden Sandies in non-conference action.

The homecoming queen will be crowned at half-time.

LINK: Researchers connect gene to hypertension

(From 1A)

"It's a very exciting result and it has major implications for our understanding of the genetics of high blood pressure and cardiovascular disease," Kurtz said Thursday.

"People were skeptical for years that we'd even be able to begin to isolate a single gene that might be related."

Scientists said the study is the first in humans to directly link essential hypertension to a gene, rather than through some proxy like proteins in the blood.

The work is reported in today's issue of the journal Cell by Dr. Jean-Marc Lalouel of the Howard Hughes Medical Institute and the University of Utah and others.

Lalouel said he suspects the gene may predispose people to hypertension related to eating salt. If so, tests for the version of the gene that promotes hypertension may one day let doctors identify susceptible people early, so they could cut back on salt and avoid the disease, he said.

Kurtz said followup research might also help doctors tailor drug therapy to individual patients.

Lalouel said it is not clear what percentage of essential hypertension might be related to the gene and noted that the studies included only people of western and northern European descent. He said scientists also must examine other groups, such as blacks, who have higher hypertension rates than whites do.

The gene would be neither necessary nor sufficient to produce hypertension, he said.

The gene tells the body how to make a substance called angiotensinogen (AN-jyo-ten-SIN-o-jen).

The gene was associated with hypertension by statistical evidence, which scientists said cannot prove that it produces a risk for high blood pressure.

Researchers studied 379 pairs of hypertensive siblings from a total of 215 families in Paris and Salt Lake City, plus 237 unrelated people without hypertension.

FIND: Scientists hope coffins hold preserved air ing to the site where the great Brick Chapel once stood.

(From 1A)

A large coffin may hold the remains of Philip Calvert, the youngest son of Sir George Calvert, the first Lord Baltimore. Philip served as chancellor and governor of Maryland and died in 1682 at age 55.

One of the two smaller coffins may contain the remains of Leonard Calvert, Maryland's first governor.

The church was demolished by Jesuits around 1705 after the Anglican Church was established as the colony's official religion. Archaeologists first excavated the church site in 1938, but it was later covered up and the land farmed. An excavation team returned in 1983.

Timothy Riordan, historical archaeologist at St. Mary's City, a southern Maryland town on the western shore of Chesapeake Bay, said 500 to 600 people may have been buried in the field surrounding the church.

"When we first started out, we had no concept there would be lead coffins" in what was the interior of the chapel, he said.

Chief investigator Henry Miller has assembled experts from around the country to develop a plan to best preserve the coffins for scientific study.

The coffins first will be bombarded with gamma rays, which produce an image similar to an X-ray on film. Using the images as guides, scientists will then drill eighth-inch holes into the coffins to obtain air samples. The coffins will then be filled with argon, an inert gas that will preserve the remains.

The air samples will be tested at Langley for the presence of chlorofluorocarbons, first produced in the 1940s. If there are no CFCs in the samples, further tests will determine whether the air is from the 17th-century by searching for freon and manmade chemicals.

"There is a very strong feeling in the scientific community that human activities has a very strong impact on the Earth's atmosphere," Levine said.

Once the air is extracted, the coffins will be tested for minute cracks.

"I would hate to be lifting out the coffins, and then get a huge crack that could destroy them before we've even begun to study them," Miller said.

Steel sheets will be placed underneath the coffins, which will be transported by special cradles to a medical tent where forensic experts can examine the remains.

Tissue samples would be taken to identify what diseases early Americans were exposed to. Isotopes and trace elements in bones would provide information about health, diet and even native origin.

"We're opening a window to a past colony that we've never had open before," Miller said.

Major calls for cease-fire in war of words with Germany

LONDON (AP) — The slide of the British pound has brought Britain's relations with Germany along for the ride.

The dispute between the two free-market champions of Europe has roused ghosts of World War II. The rhetoric had sharpened to such a point Thursday that Prime Minister John Major urged a cooling-off period.

"I think it is time to draw a line under this war of words with Germany," said Major, the current president of the 12-nation European Community, after the latest diplomatic confrontation.

In a challenge to burgeoning anti-European sentiment in his divided Conservative Party, Major also pledged to submit to Parliament by early next year a bill to ratify a treaty on closer union of the European Community.

The principal strain between Germany and Britain is money — specifically the pound's downturn and Germany's refusal to cut interest rates further.

British anger is often laced with references to Nazis, in what many see as a disturbing revival of historic animosities the European Community was supposed to bury.

The anti-German rhetoric also been fueled by an underlying fear of the might of unified Germany. Most recently, Britons were offended by German plans — later scrapped — to celebrate the V2 rocket, which killed thousands of British civilians in World War II.

"Humiliated economically and frightened politically, we return to the war years," wrote Times of London columnist Bryan Appleyard, after Princess Diana recently decided to swap her Mercedes-Benz for a British car.

The German ambassador, Baron Hermann von Richthoven, was summoned Thursday for a 25-minute meeting at the Foreign Office over a Bundesbank statement that denied any role in the slide of the British pound, which led Britain to withdraw from an EC exchange-rate control system.

The statement, published in the Financial Times newspaper, included a strong rejection of British complaints that the German central bank had encouraged a Sept. 16 run on the pound by hinting the currency was overvalued.

The government-run Bank of England claims the leak of the Bundesbank document was a breach of protocol. Von Richthoven made no comment as he left the Foreign Office.

Relations between the two nations have been souring for nearly a month.

The first sign of trouble was at a Sept. 5 meeting of EC finance officials.

The Bundesbank president, Helmut Schlesinger, was reportedly upset by Britain's pressure to lower German interest rates. The pound and other EC currencies have suffered because the high rates make the mark more attractive.

Germany was further irked by Major's statement that he would remove parliamentary consideration of EC union plans if a Sept. 20 referendum failed in France. French voters narrowly supported the treaty.

Britain, in turn, was upset that the Bundesbank failed to help prop up the pound. London's complaints grew after Germany stepped in late last month to buy up French francs to keep that currency from falling.

The latest Bundesbank statements have brought British-German relations to one of their lowest post-war points.

In London, legislators' speeches and tabloid newspaper reports have been spattered with references to "jackboots" and "sourkrauts."

The British media have repeatedly ribbed Van Richthoven by noting the diplomat was related to the World War I fighter pilot nicknamed the Red Baron.

The crisis has also plunged the British government into its biggest crisis since Major took over from Margaret Thatcher in November 1990. The economy remains in deep trouble, unemployment is rising and the floating pound falling.

Opposition leaders and some newspapers, including the Financial Times, called Thursday for the resignation of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Norman Lamont.

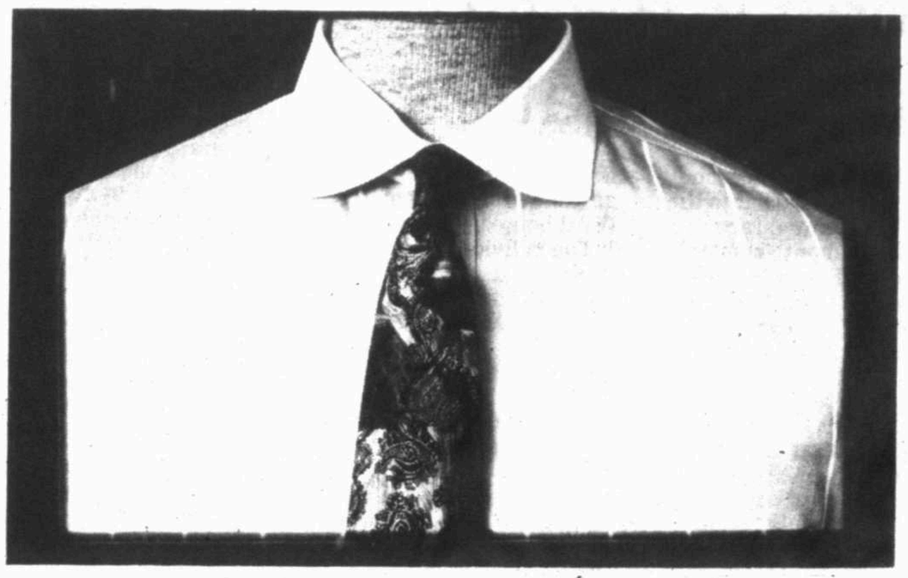

"We are now seeing not only the conduct of the British government but of the president of the community descending into humiliation and chaos," said Labor Party leader John Smith.

Major, after meeting with his 21-member Cabinet, said Germany "has made it clear they regret the publication of the document and I am happy to accept that expression of regret."

Perot's re-entry muddies waters

Ross Perot's decision to jump back into the presidential race with only a month remaining until the election puts an interesting twist on the balloting. His presence in the campaign — again — will no doubt affect the election outcome, but voters need to give a little thought to what they do.

Let's make one point perfectly clear: Perot, for all his billions of dollars and skill at playing the media to his personal advantage, is not likely to become the next person to occupy the Oval Office. Voters who once may have considered him a viable candidate will now view him with distrust and the job of president will be handed, as it should, to George Bush or Bill Clinton, the two nominees of the major parties.

That said, however, Perot should get credit for pushing to the attention of the American people the frightening economic problem threatening the nation. To their discredit, Bush and Clinton have virtually ignored the problem and although whichever one is elected president should not forget the real culprit in the economic mess is the U.S. Congress, hopefully the winner will use the powers of his administration to take a stronger role in straightening our fiscal house.

The individual elected president in November will have to address the spiraling federal deficit and the national debt, and he'll need a Congress willing to pull itself above partisan political interests. So there will be a major role for Congress as well.

Perot strikes us as an on-again, off-again candidate who would be an on-again, off-again president. We don't need that.

In addition, we are offended, and believe many other Americans are as well, at the billionaire's insistence that he will answer questions only on those subjects he deems to be valid ones and that he will reject any queries he does not feel are appropriate to what he views as "the real issues."

Service as this nation's chief executive just doesn't work that way and neither should a candidate for that office.

Voters will want to keep that fact in mind as they ponder Perot's decision to get back into the race at this late hour. A vote for Ross Perot will be a wasted vote. This November, voters should not throw their vote away.

Feed For Need cookoff offers fun, food, cause

Chili and good causes go together. That fact is virtually a Texas tradition. When Texans want to have some fun, get some sun, or promote their favorite charitable cause, the first thing they do is reach for the chili sauce and build a fire.

Well, if it isn't a true Texas tradition, it's at least well on its way. And Saturday it will get another boost as the 8th annual Feed For Need cookoff is held at the Midland County Exhibit Building.

No doubt the chili cookers will be there. But they won't be alone. The Feed For Need cookoff isn't limited to chili, the official state dish. It also includes brisket, fajitas, and ribs, and enthusiastic cookers of each ilk will be present, preparing their food to its luscious best.

It sounds like a good time for everyone who wants to spend a Saturday watching the chefs compete, participating in races, sampling all the good food, and just enjoying the excitement around the exhibit building.

There is another reason to go to this year's Feed For Need, of course. That is the four organizations that will benefit from the proceeds of the cookoff. Those organizations include the Epilepsy Association of West Texas, the Make-A-Wish Foundation, the Allison Cancer Center's Look-Good, Feel-Good Shop, and the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Committee.

The four recipient organizations do a great job for the people of Midland and this region. Feed For Need has done a tremendous job for local non-profit organizations in past years, generating more than $85,000 for them. That helps each Midlander, even if they do not need the services of the recipient organizations.

The event is good food and fun for a good cause. What better way could there be to spend a leisurely Saturday?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Oct. 2, the 276th day of 1992. There are 90 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Twenty-five years ago, on Oct. 2, 1967, Thurgood Marshall was sworn in as an associate justice of the United States Supreme Court — he was the first black to be appointed to the nation's highest court.

On this date:

In 1780, British spy John Andre was hanged in Tappan, N.Y.

In 1835, the first battle of the Texas Revolution took place as American settlers defeated Mexican cavalry near the Guadalupe River.

In 1869, political and spiritual leader Mohandas K. Gandhi was born in Porbandar, India.

In 1889, the first International Conference of American States was convened in Washington, D.C., with representatives from most Latin American countries present.

In 1890, comedian Groucho Marx was born in New York.

Senate veteran dodges insider status

WASHINGTON — Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., has been in the Senate since 1966, only five fellow senators enjoy more seniority, and nobody has served longer on the powerful Budget Committee.

Anderson

To win re-election, Hollings is hoping that South Carolinans will either forgive or forget that section of his resume.

In this Year of the Outsider, embattled incumbents like Hollings are pursuing an "if-you-can't-beat-them, join-them" political strategy. This 26-year veteran, whom many regard as the consummate Washington insider, is trying to distance himself from "those boys up in Washington" by repackaging himself as an outsider.

As anti-incumbent sentiment sweeps the country with hurricane force, this citadel of Southern politics with the booming drawl, the courtly manner, and the shock of white hair has at times presided over what appears to be a hapless campaign.

Take his effort at damage-control when allegations surfaced recently stemming from his conduct the day after Hurricane Hugo devastated the South Carolina coast in 1989. It was reported that Hollings flew at taxpayer expense with a Coast Guard crew to inspect his Isle of Palms home while other homeowners were kept off the island at gunpoint.

During a brief landing, Hollings and his wife, accompanied by a marine lieutenant colonel, inspected their damaged home and rescued two packages of frozen shrimp from an overturned freezer, according to an account by one of the state's top newspapers, The Post and Courier.

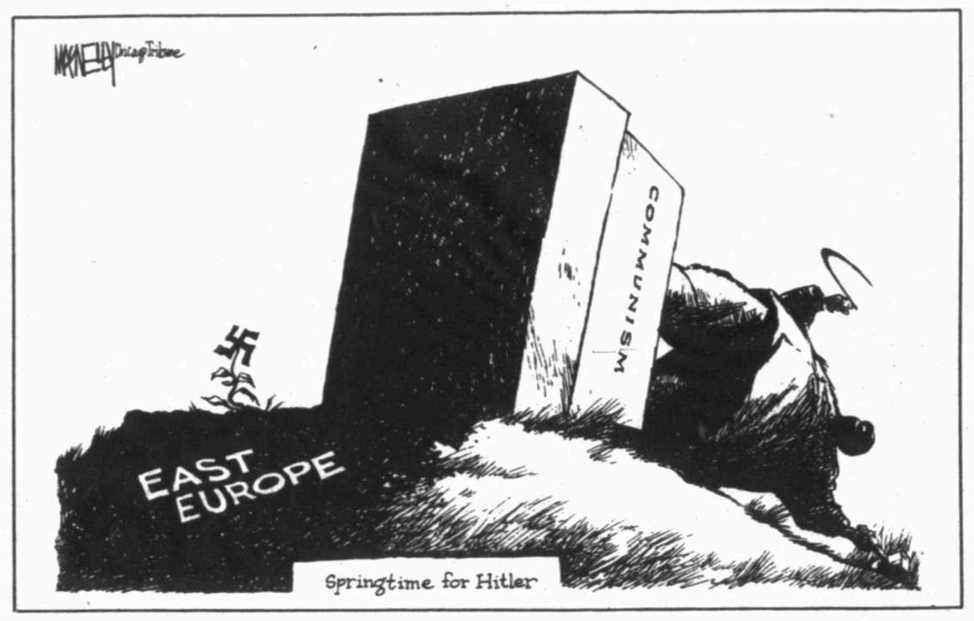

Hollings claims he simply intended to survey coastal damage until a man was spotted on a roof and the flight became a rescue mission, leading to a golf course landing near the Hollings residence.

Needless to say, this episode hasn't helped Hollings' new image. Hartnett has been relentlessly needling Hollings over it, calling it "an abuse of power and a demonstration of arrogance."

Hollings suffered more embarrassment over a campaign commercial that touted his crusade against the budget deficit. In the ad, former President Ronald Reagan is rolled out as a chief character witness — leading critics to charge that it implied an imaginary endorsement. Reagan, meanwhile, wasn't flattered by the starring role in the ad and issued a statement enthusiastically supporting Hollings' Republican opponent.

What makes the Hollings commercial even more curious is the invective he once hurled at Reagan. When Hollings was vying for the Democratic nomination to face Reagan in the 1984 presidential election, he charged that Reagan "really believes you can do away with the government and let the free market control" — a notion that Hollings condemned as "not only unrealistic but un-American."

CHARLEY REESE

Opinions, vagueness muddle Supreme Court

The present Supreme Court is nothing to shout about. It's still an activist court, and conservative activism is as bad as any other. Worse, the present court is muddled in its opinions.

Reese

Now it ought to be basic that law must be clear and understandable. How can people obey laws if they don't know what they mean? It's bad enough that in recent years much legislation has been sloppily drafted. It's even worse when the court, one of whose tasks is to clarify the law, also comes up with vague and muddled opinions.

Mississippi has been thrown for a loop by a recent muddled Supreme Court decision. A lawsuit originally filed in the early 1970s alleged that the Magnolia State's system of higher education had the effect of discriminating against blacks. Mississippi contended that it did not. The U.S. District Court ruled in Mississippi's favor. The federal appellate court ruled in Mississippi's favor.

Mind you our court system runs with the speed of molasses on a cold January morning. Even as this suit was winding its way through the courts, Mississippi was making more and more efforts to open up its universities to all. By 1992, Mississippians were confident they had eliminated any vestige of racism from the higher education system. At each of the state's eight institutions there is a single admissions standard for all students regardless of race. The state had been upheld by two levels of the federal courts. State officials were led to believe the Justice Department would argue their side before the Supreme Court.

Apparently, presidential politics got in the way of reasonable expectations. President Bush reversed positions and ordered Justice to argue against Mississippi (a political move that may cost Bush Mississippi's electoral votes). The Supreme Court in a narrow decision ruled against Mississippi.

But here's where the muddle comes in. The high court did not say Mississippi's higher education system discriminates against blacks. In its labored language, it asked the district court to look at the case (already 15 years old) again with attention to four specific areas which were "of concern" to the high court. Furthermore it based its decision on testimony and numbers taken in 1970s, which today are irrelevant and all different.

Its areas of concern? Mississippi allows each institution to set its own admission standards. The state has duplicate programs — the same programs in white schools and in predominantly black schools. The court is concerned that the state considers some schools urban, some regional and some general in their admission statements. And finally the high muddled court is concerned that maybe Mississippi, which ppends two-thirds of every state dollar on education, has too many institutions of higher learning.

Whoa, this sounds more like a politician's cover-your-bottom statement that a ruling on whether Mississippi meets the constitutional requirements. Does it or doesn't it? Mississippi wants to know. It wants to comply. The state thought it had. Two federal courts had also thought it had.

But the Supreme Court didn't say it didn't and it didn't say it did. It said it had concerns but it didn't say what Mississippi ought to do about those concerns. This is Alice in George Orwell Land adjudicating. The court in effect said,."Guess what we mean and guess what we want you to do."

Racial segregation is a long dead issue in Mississippi and in the rest of the South. The South is as integrated as any region in the country, more so than some. Mississippi, like other states, is trying its best with limited resources to provide the best education it can for all its citizens.

It can ill afford to waste time and tax dollars battling phantoms in the minds of a politicized, ambivalent and confused Supreme Court. I could cite you other examples where this court has rendered muddled, guess-what-we-mean decisions. The Supreme Court is supposed to answer questions, not raise them.

Principal thanks those who helped with fair

Once again, through the grace of God and the wonderful people of Midland, our St. Ann's Family Fair was a huge success. I want to take the opportunity to say "thank you" and let all of you know just how grateful we are.

"You" being our parents, parishioners, chairpeople, and all of you who do not have a vested interest in the school but give so generously of your time and money. It never ceases to amaze me at the number of people who are involved year after year. It is truly an example of Christ at work. We hope this letter, in a very small way, let's you know just how much you are appreciated. May God bless you all.

Fire station expresses appreciation for help

We would like to say "thank you" to the special lady who bought our groceries and delivered them to us on Saturday, Sept. 19. We comprise "C" Shift at Fire Station No. 6 and include Gary Glass, captain; Raymond Meek, driver; and paramedics David Hickman and Dean Stalder. We had been shopping in Furrs when we were called to a car accident and had to leave everything immediately.

Special deeds like yours indicate more than you realize. They help to keep us going, knowing people care about us. We appreciate your kindness and generosity.

May God the Father richly bless you and your family.

Midlander responds to Bush, Quayle editorials

I'm responding to two editorials, "Bush still deserves our praise, support" published on Aug. 9th, and "Bush, Quayle show resilience, vision" published Aug. 21.

The health plan you evidently endorse would not control cost and would most likely result in continuing greed by doctors in pricing. The current system is "high cost" and his proposal wouldn't control it. Bush made this proposal so it wouldn't affect his fat cat doctor friends. Congress has wisely proposed a comprehensive program which would control cost. His economic program consists of cutting capital gains (for years). This would help the rich — the only group not hurt by the recession! He is an elitist who identifies with the rich. He will not let reporters visit his home in Maine as it might show his wealth. Admittedly, his only vision is to fight the democrats and get elected.

The GOP Convention was pitiful! "Hate and Fear," according to Newsweek. Even some of the participants were turned off by the president's refusal to take any responsibility for the shape the country's in. He has no vision, only "status quo." His resilience is non-existent — get James Baker. He received no "bounce" after the convention, according to Newsweek. His "moral strength" is obviously absent. He vetoed the civil rights bill, ignoring millions who have recently fallen into poverty, 11 million unemployed and trying to hold on. He is a "Hoover." I believe voters will treat him as such!

He's arrogant — "Read my lips" and "Read my hips," "Sit down and shut up." He is a liar. A 72-year-old man wrote in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that he couldn't remember a time when republicans supported legislation helpful to the middle and lower class. They opposed social security, PWA and WPA, REA, CCC, aid to farmers, Civil Rights (Bush voted against it in 1964), Medicare, NDEA in '50s, aid to education (now he's wanting to give tax money to private schools run by his friends), "The buck don't stop with G. Bush." Lincoln once said when a man blames another for his failures, he has a flawed character!

I have a picture of Bush and Noriega in Havana. Iran-Contra help? Bush lied about (1) recession, (2) raising taxes, (3) C. Thomas qualifications, (4) Iran-Contra involvement.

Soap opera angel tries to save Brazil

■ TV program parallels real-life scandal that has overtaken nation's impeached president.

By Peter Muello
Associated Press writer

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — A crowd of jet-setters dance and swill champagne at a cocktail party, oblivious to a rising sea of mud that slowly engulfs them. Suddenly the mud spills over and covers a map of Brazil.

The scene opens the hot new TV soap opera "God Help Us," a withering satire of corruption that has pervaded this country and the government of impeached President Fernando Collor de Mello.

More than 30 million Brazilians tune in Monday through Saturday to watch the send-up of lovable and not-so-lovable con men, corrupt businessmen, ruthless secretaries and assorted cheats.

Nielsen-type surveys give "God Help Us" a whopping 46 percent of the national audience in the prime 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. time slot.

"It was a hit from the start," said spokesman Paulo Carneiro of the Globo network, the world's fourth-largest after the ABC, CBS and NBC TV networks.

However, the show has gained popularity by its almost uncanny parallel to the real-life scandal that overtook Collor, who was impeached Tuesday by Congress on charges of corruption.

"God Help Us" is the story of an angel in charge of Brazil, on the outs with The Boss because of all the corruption there. He gives her an ultimatum: set a human on the right path or be banished to Brazil ("Better to go straight to hell," she moans).

The target for correction is a sexy con artist named Scandalous Maria, who lives on the docks and unabashedly describes herself as "a swindler on my mother's and father's side."

The cast of characters includes unscrupulous lumber millionaire Otto Bismark, who sells Amazon wood to the industrialized world, and his idealistic son Ricardo — who falls in love with Scandalous Maria.

Director Jorge Fernando plays a drunk named Brazil.

The show's author, Silvio de Abreu, says the public reaction has been overwhelming.

"It's a catharsis," he said Thursday in a telephone interview from Sao Paulo. "People stop me on the street and say: 'Finally TV is saying what we want to say.' "

Despite the parallels with current events, Abreu said his characters are "allegories" and not based on real people.

However, the coincidences are striking. The episode that aired the day after Collor was impeached showed Scandalous Maria performing her first honest action, paying a debt to a driver.

"See?" an angel says. "It looks like Brazil can be salvaged after all."

"God Help Us" has captured a groundswell of indignation with the dog-eat-dog exploitation that has given Brazil the world's most unequal distribution of wealth — a pinnacle of the very rich at the top and at the bottom of the triangle, a wide number of the very poor.

Senate approves nuclear arms treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate on Thursday slammed the door on the Cold War by easily approving the most complex nuclear arms treaty ever written, then voting for millions in aid to promote democracy in Russia.

As Congress rushed to complete its work before abandoning Washington for the campaign trail, lawmakers also played out veto fights with President Bush on abortion and arrived at a compromise on defense spending.

And in a sign of election-year sensitivity in a time of recession, the Senate voted to cut the money spent on Congress by 15 percent over three years. The vote was 85-13.

Approval of the Strategic Nuclear Arms Reduction Treaty came on a vote of 93 to 6, belying the decade of distrust and struggle that dominated its negotiation.

In some ways, the treaty is an anachronism. The country it was negotiated with — the Soviet Union — no longer exists, but four independent republics, Russia, Ukraine, Belarus and Kazakhstan, have assumed the treaty responsibilities.

And while the document calls for the two sides to cut their nuclear arsenals by about one-third, work is already progressing on deeper cuts, made possible by the evaporation of superpower tensions.

Still, the Bush administration and other START backers said it marked an important milestone in arms control and provided the framework on which a safer world can be built. It was the first treaty limiting offensive strategic arms to be ratified since Moscow and Washington began negotiating in 1969.

Its approval came as both former superpowers are struggling with massive debt created in part by a half-century-long arms race, which Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Claiborne Pell called "a fool's game."

"Finally, at last . . . we have taken a positive, even revolutionary course," the Rhode Island Democrat told the Senate.

President Bush called it an "historic agreement" that paves the way "for further path-breaking steps and far-reaching reductions." He said the United States would formally ratify the treaty as soon as Russia, Belarus and Ukraine add their approval; Kazakhstan has already given its assent.

Approval came after a two-day debate, most of it warnings from a band of hawks that the treaty leaves the way open for Russia to modernize and maintain unlimited amounts of non-deployed weapons. Voting against ratification were Sens. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, Jesse Helms, R-N.C., Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., Robert Smith, R-N.H., Steve Symms, R-Idaho, and Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo.

The foreign aid spending bill, approved 87-12, included $417 million in technical, development and humanitarian aid for any former Soviet republic that meets human rights, democratic and economic reform tests.

It also would create a five-year, $10 billion program of loan guarantees for Israel, to be used to absorb a flood of immigrants from the former Soviet Union and other countries.

Bush showers Farm Belt with credits, ethanol concessions

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush showered the Farm Belt with presents Thursday — concessions to growers to expand the use of corn-based ethanol and credit guarantees to help foreign countries buy $3.6 billion in U.S. farm products.

The White House has been under election-year pressure from corn growers to waive proposed Clean Air Act restrictions on the use of ethanol-blended gasoline, but the oil industry has been adamantly opposed.

The president, in announcing plans that could nearly double ethanol use by 1997, said the decision was "good for farmers, good for rural America, good for the environment in our cities and good for American consumers and motorists."

But Charles J. DiBona, president of the American Petroleum Institute, said the decision was politically motivated, "further rewards the highly subsidized ethanol industry . . . and hurts oil industry workers whose numbers have declined by 450,000 over the last 10 years."

Earlier in the day, Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan said the government would help 18 countries buy U.S. grain and other farm products with $3.6 billion in credit guarantees. The credits represent two-thirds of the $5.7 billion USDA expects to guarantee this fiscal year, up from $5 billion last year.

Thursday's announcements are the latest in a string of recent efforts to improve the president's standing in the Farm Belt, where several electorally rich states are up for grabs in the November election.

Last month, Bush authorized export subsidies for 1 billion bushels of U.S. wheat and released $755 million in disaster aid to farmers who lost crops to bad weather, although his administration had fought the disaster aid legislation.

Farmers are battling crumbling prices, particularly for corn, and the ethanol question had become the top issue in the Corn Belt.

They were angry because the Environmental Protection Agency had proposed restricting ethanol's use in nine of the nation's smoggiest cities, where most of the fuel would be sold, as urban areas switch to cleaner-burning, alternative fuels.

The president's announcement, however, would allow ethanol-blended gas sales in least five of those urban areas: Chicago, Philadelphia, New York City, Hartford, Conn., and Milwaukee.

A mix of corn-based ethanol and gasoline reduces carbon monoxide emissions.

The White House said the new rules could increase use of ethanol from 900 million gallons in 1992 to 2 billion gallons by the year 2000.

Powerful speaker to be used for research

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

A speaker powerful enough to deafen an entire small town blasted down Interstate 20 Thursday morning enroute to White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico.

The $240,000 speaker — ordered by the U.S. Army — was built at the University of Mississippi and wired by Midland native Randy Ware.

On Thursday, the 56-foot speaker, with an output equivalent to 300,000 stereos, and the truck transporting it, stopped briefly at Warfield Truck Terminal.

"Man am I glad they didn't turn that thing on," said trucker Manny Alphonse. "I've got a slight headache already."

The 6,000-pound speaker, dubbed the "Mother of All Speakers" by its creators, is large enough for a man to stand in.

According to Ware's mother, Gwen Ware, the construction of the speaker was not finished until Wednesday.

The army plans to use the speaker for weapons research experiments including making sure that two new tank-destroying weapons won't fail in combat.

"Before it sinks money into them, the Army must be certain these weapons will work, and to be certain they'll work the Army needs to test theoretical predictions of how sound waves act outdoors over long distances. This speaker is the experimental tool to do that," said Henry Bass, Barnard Distinguished Professor of Physics and director of the Jamie Whitten National Center for Physical Acoustics at Ole Miss.

But some observers at the truck stop Thursday were skeptical.

"Looks like pure government excess to me. Kind of like the thousands of dollars they paid for a toilet plunger or whatever it was," said trucker Rob Meyers.

Jury finds man guilty of rape

■ Jurors to assess punishment today which can range from 5 to 99 years or life.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

A 10-woman, two-man jury took about three hours to find Blakely Lynn Ford, 27, guilty of breaking into a woman's house and raping her in January 1991.

Tension rose after the decision was announced in Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd District Court mid-afternoon Thursday.

As a result, defense attorney Allen McFall asked for a mistrial which the judge denied pending his final decision.

After the verdict was read, the friends of the defendant, sitting on one side of the courtroom, reportedly intimidated the victim's supporters sitting adjacent with stares and words, according to Assistant District Attorney John Westbrook.

Shortly afterward, concerns were raised and an investigator with the District Attorney's Office asked a brother of the defendant to move away from the path of exiting jurors. The judge heard conflicting stories about where the brother was standing and the manner in which he was asked to move.

McFall claims the incident may prejudice jurors who are scheduled to assess punishment on Ford today.

Punishment for aggravated sexual assault and burglary of a habitation ranges from five to 99 years or life in prison.

But Ford can be given probation because he does not have a felony conviction record.

Meanwhile Ford remained jailed Thursday night after his bond was raised from $20,000 to $50,000 by the judge following the verdict. Ford had remained free on the lower bond since his arrest in January 1991.

Ford's trial began Tuesday and testimony concluded Wednesday.

The victim, a 35-year-old hairdresser, testified that she woke up at her southwest Midland home about 2:30 a.m., Jan. 9, 1991, to find a strange man — Ford — standing above her.

The woman described how the man attempted to force her to perform oral sex and have intercourse but was unsuccessful.

The man threatened her with a knife, told her he had watched her in the past and wanted a relationship, the woman testified.

Ford was arrested asleep in the woman's home after she gave him several tablespoons of over-the-counter cough medicine, testimony indicated.

Ford did not testify.

A police detective testified that Ford made statements after his arrest that implied that a criminal act had occurred.

Under defense questioning, other testimony revealed that the victim did not use a rape kit following the incident, no physical evidence of a break-in was found, and the woman did not attempt to escape Ford when she had a chance.

The woman testified that after the sexual attack, she and Ford went to a nearby 7-Eleven store at her requests to buy cigarettes. The woman said she did not attempt to escape or seek help in the store because she feared for her life.

The unmarried victim had several children who were staying at baby sitters on the night of the incident because she had worked late, she testified.

Mother claims baby thought to be stillborn was stolen

DALLAS (AP) — A Fort Worth woman said Thursday a baby her ex-husband and hospital workers told her was stillborn actually lived, but was sold illegally to an Arizona couple.

Linda Morrison Thompson said she filed the lawsuit in a Tarrant County state district court earlier this week after a yearlong search for Wendy Beth Glass.

"I had given those people who stole my child a year to come forward and apologize," said Mrs. Thompson, who was told almost 20 years ago that the child was stillborn.

"I like to say that if they didn't come forward and apologize, they are guilty. They stole my child."

The lawsuit, filed Tuesday, seeks more than $250,000 in damages, said her attorney, Frank Thompson of Fort Worth. He said the lawsuit accuses Dallas attorney Albert Leviton of illegally taking control of the infant and turning it over to Paul Glass and his wife for an undetermined amount of money.

Mrs. Thompson said the Glasses, who live in the Phoenix area, had refused to help her in the search.

"I would love for Wendy to come home," she said. "But I don't believe that will be possible."

The Glasses and Leviton did not immediately return telephone calls Thursday by The Associated Press.

Mrs. Thompson's attorney said her former husband, Bill Morrison, and a North Texas hospital's staff lied to her when they said her baby boy had been stillborn in 1972.

"I was told I had a miscarriage by the staff and my ex-husband," she said. "I was kept in bed, with IV (intravenous) tubes in me, and given tranquilizers. So I really didn't know what was happening."

Mrs. Thompson's attorney, who is not related, said when she awoke from her sedation after delivery, he told her the child had been born dead. A baby born previously to the couple had been stillborn.

Thompson said the hospital released the baby to Leviton, who had a court order giving him temporary custody of the child. He said he believes Leviton met Mr. Glass at Dallas Love Field and handed over the baby for money.

But last year, Mrs. Thompson began searching through birth and death records in Tarrant County to try to locate two daughters she had put up for adoption. She found no death certificate on the little boy.

However, there was a birth certificate for a Baby Girl Morrison on that same day.

Mrs. Thompson said her husband called the Wilson Jones Memorial Hospital in Sherman and asked about records of the birth of a boy on Oct. 31, 1972. But hospital officials confirmed the Morrison baby was a girl who had lived, not a boy who had died.

"It was enough information that I didn't give up," said the 45-year-old woman, who hired Arlington investigator Tim Hotchkin.

The investigator earlier this year located the Glasses.

First fund drive for UTPB passes original goal

■ Partners for the University of Texas of the Permian Basin have received $195,000 to date, surpassing a goal of $125,000.

Staff report

ODESSA — Partners for the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, the first fund drive to benefit the four-year university, recently passed its original goal of $125,000. To date, more than $195,000 through cash and in-kind donations have been raised since the drive's April kickoff.

"With the strong support of area donors, we've exceeded our goal," said Mike Barker, director of development at UTPB. "The success of the drive shows that Permian Basin residents understand how important the university is to the future of West Texas."

Community contributions to the fund currently stand at $143,137. Grant funds brought in $32,500, and in-kind services added $22,750. Pledges for an additional $10,000 and some pending grant applications could push the total even higher when the 1992 drive concludes Dec. 31.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Cathie Tinney, associate professor of marketing, left, chairs the faculty development committee at UTPB, which will benefit from the Partners for UTPB fund drive that reached its goal Thursday with a $10,000 grant from Burlington Foundation, represented by Meridian Oil Co. employees Donna Hicks, senior staff accountant, center and Helen Stephens, supervisor of administrative services.

Not reflected in the totals are two scholarship endowments — $25,000 from the Houston Endowment and $500 from the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks.

Previously underfunded programs such as student scholarships, faculty support and minority student recruitment at the university benefit from the Partners campaign, UTPB officials said.

"We're very pleased with the response to this campaign," said Ed Sharpe, interim president of the school. "For every scholarship funded through Partners for UT-Permian Basin, another deserving person receives an opportunity to pursue a quality education."

In an attempt to meet fiscal challenges beyond state appropriations, the UTPB Development Board created the Partners campaign as an annual fundraising drive.

Donations for the 1992 campaign will be accepted through Dec. 31. The 1993 drive will begin in the spring. For additional information, call Barker at 367-2220.

Ethics Commission comes to Midland for advice

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

State government is "broke" in places and is begging for reform.

To that end, the three-member Texas Ethics Commission came to Midland Thursday on a statewide tour to get advice. Among those West Texans offering their ideas how to clean up government were a judge, a lawyer, and a legislator.

State Sen. Teel Bivins, of Amarillo, said the Ethics Commission was "doing the Lord's work in the devil's city of Austin" in trying to restore ethics in politics.

Bivins, who assured the commission that West Texans are "people with fiercely independent ideas and a deep concern for how this state is run," proposed that legislators who are lawyers should be prohibited from practicing law before state agencies.

"It's no secret this is a very common practice" that has become "very lucrative" for some legislators, he said.

Though legislator-lawyers claim that "their legal work is kept separate from their (legislative) duties," Bivins doubted the feasibility of that.

Agency board members would be "perfectly aware" that they "might be asking that same lawmaker for something in the next legislative session," he said.

"How objective can those agency representatives be when they know that legislator has influence over their budget and ultimately their paycheck?" Bivins asked commission members — James Cribbs, an Arlington lawyer, Richard Slack, a former legislator now living in Pecos, and Andrew Martin, a Texas Ethics Commission lawyer.

ETHICS: Commission wants to clean up

(From 1B)

"Even when they do their best to remain uninfluenced, the pressure is still there ... however subtle ... the potential for abuse is real."

Bivins also proposed a $5,000 limit on a contribution in a judicial campaign.

"Justice should be blind to political contributions as well as all other influences.

"Money can be a corrupting influence in any endeavor," he said. "The more money present, the greater the chance for corruption."

Midland lawyer Robert Bledsoe declared any appearance of impropriety in the judiciary should be avoided.

"Judges are just folks," Bledsoe said. "It's hard to forget someone who gave him (a judge) lots of money. Huge contributions are something we should avoid."

Bledsoe proposed the non-partisan election of judges in an off-election year, a limitation on contribution, a 30-day race, and a six-year term. The people could petition for a recall and could "invite opponents" to run against the judge, who could be re-elected.

For statewide races, Bledsoe proposed that leading members of the State Bar of Texas could nominate capable candidates to run for judgeships, since "one of the evils of a state-wide race" is the lack of name recognition.

"And a new name is difficult to get across, and it costs too much money."

For a judge, Bledsoe said that he would seek "a man of integrity, a man with ability, with a vigorous attitude about his work and who has a propensity to make a decision and who feels a calling to exercise his talents that are God-given in the area of judgment."

Judge Tryon Lewis, who presides over the 161th Texas District Court in Odessa, said "there is every appearance of impropriety even when there is not impropriety ... when very large sums of money are given to judges as contributions in political races."

The solution to that hint of impropriety is "not so much limits on contributions." as removing judges who have accepted contributions from either party to a case.

"They can recuse him, and that's fine," Tryon said. "If someone wants to give a judge $10,000 (for his election) that's fine. If they think he's just a great judge, and they want to support him, that's fine. There's no problems with that as long as he's not going to hear that case.

"It's a level playing field, and a big contribution doesn't help you any. You can give it (money) like any other citizen, but you don't get anything for it."

use," said Cecil Garza of White Plains, N.Y., "Like for the homeless."

"What kind of stereo can hold a speaker like that anyway," he said.

If the speaker proves effective in the research, the Army plans to go ahead with the construction of "smart" WAMs (Wide-Area Mines).

"It's a mine that sits up in the battlefield and listens for enemy tanks coming," Bass said. "When it hears one in the vicinity, it explodes and destroys the tank."

Also, according to Bass, the Army plans to purchase a large number of devices called BATs (Brilliant Anti-armor Technology).

"These are things that you fly out of a cannon, and they go up in the sky and hover," Bass said. "They listen for tanks and when they hear one — they attack it."

"What the Army needs to know is how these weapons will hear the tanks, what sounds should trigger them and whether they can identify foes. Those are questions they hope that the experiments ... will help answer."

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Burglary

Staff report

A Midland man was in jail Thursday in connection with a burglary that occurred at Graham Pharmacy at 319 Dodson.

Scott Wade Hopkins, 29, was charged with burglary of a business by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe and bond was set at $10,000.

According to a police report, officers responded to the pharmacy, owned by Wesley Graham of Midland, in reference to an alarm at 3:46 a.m. Thursday. Officers entered the building and found Hopkins in the back storage area attempting to get into the safe with a hand drill. He had entered the building through an air vent.

Police believe Hopkins has been involved in at least 10 business burglaries in the past 10-12 months.

Shooting

Police are still looking for the suspect in a shooting of two Midlanders late Wednesday at the Doghouse Lounge.

According to a police report, officers were dispatched to the lounge, located at 307 N. Mineola St., in reference to a shooting at 9:54 p.m. Wednesday. The officers found Jose Gonzales, 27, shot in the left bicep, and Jesus Gonzales, 34, shot in the abdomen. Both men were transported to Midland Memorial Hospital and were listed in stable condition Thursday.

The report stated that the shooting was the result of an argument.

The suspect is a Hispanic man between 45- and 60-years-old.

Accident

ODESSA — An Odessa man remained in extremely critical condition Thursday in Lubbock after an electrical accident Wednesday afternoon.

According to a Ector County sheriff's office report, Dixie Electric employee John Gray and another employee were doing electrical work at the Y-Tip Ranch in Ector County at about noon Wednesday. Gray got his head entangled in four wires and was hit with a current that knocked him off the pole. The other employee was off the pole at the time of the accident.

Gray was taken to Odessa Medical Center Hospital and then transported to the University Medical Center in Lubbock.

Water Commission rejects landfill site

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Water Commission has rejected the design and site of a proposed landfill near the city of Wilmer, saying it would have posed an "unacceptable threat" to the area's drinking water.

A 212-acre landfill was proposed to accept up to 480 tons of residential and commercial waste per day from the Dallas County area, officials said.

The Water Commission said there are more than 60 shallow wells within a one-mile radius of the landfill site, with 10 located within 300 feet of its boundaries.

Both parties 'welcome' Perot

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Republicans and Democrats had a word Thursday for Ross Perot's re-entry into presidential politics.

Welcome.

"We welcome Ross back into the race. He is running a campaign that centers on cutting the federal deficit, and a full and complete discussion of that issue can only help the president's campaign," said Rob Mosbacher, chairman of the GOP's Victory '92 Committee.

"He's George Bush's worst nightmare," said Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, who chairs Democrat Bill Clinton's state campaign. "With Perot in the race, the debate gets back to the economy and voters know Bush is a disaster."

Analysts were assessing what the revived Perot candidacy could mean.

"It's another bizarre turn in a bizarre political year. It's so difficult for anybody to say what's happening," said George Christian of Austin, former press secretary to President Lyndon Johnson.

"I expect he'll chip a little away from both candidates in Texas," Christian said. "The race is obviously between Bush and Clinton."

Both the Bush and Clinton campaigners speculated that Perot would hurt the other guy more.

Mauro said that with the deficit and economy being Perot's main themes, his campaign would help call attention to Bush's domestic problems.

"The fact of the matter is, Bush was winning in the last few days because we were talking about everything but the economy — debates, Ross Perot, the kitchen sink." Mauro said.

"The economic indicators came out yesterday and showed we're in a major recession and it barely made the papers. But with Perot back in, it's all back to the economy," he said.

Mark Sanders, spokesman for the GOP's Victory '92 drive, said Perot's themes would help Bush, because the president has been fighting with the Democratic-controlled Congress to cut the deficit.

"The president has a plan to cut the deficit. Bill Clinton has a plan to increase the deficit. Any discussion about taxes and spending — and the need to get those under control — can't do anything but help us," Sanders said.

He also suggested that voters who strongly oppose Bush likely would desert Clinton now. "The anti-Bush vote that is solidly with Clinton right now should shift over to Perot," Sanders said.

Ed Martin, executive director of the Texas Democratic Party, said he doesn't expect Perot to have much impact on the presidential race in the state because voters know the real race is between Bush and Clinton.

"Ross Perot is at his peak right now," Martin said.

"The more people look at him, the more they'll realize they don't want to waste their vote. If they really want chance for change, they'll vote for Clinton," he said.

Train builders say they will miss deadline

AUSTIN (AP) — The company picked to build a $6.8 billion "bullet train" system in Texas told state officials Thursday that it will not meet a major financial deadline, and that it doesn't have to.

The development sent members of the Texas High-Speed Rail Authority into a closed-door session for about 30 minutes.

Texas TGV Corp. told the authority that it would not have $170 million in financing for the project by Dec. 31 as required under the franchise agreement with the state. Instead, the company said it has about $40 million.

But rather than seek an extension to the deadline, TGV Corp. told the authority that another part of the franchise agreement allowed the company to miss deadlines if its work is delayed by circumstances beyond its control.

Authority members asked state attorneys to analyze that part of the contract before deciding how to proceed.

After the meeting, Authority member Bob Krueger said TGV's claim was "preposterous." "These are people of very impaired credibility. They're just looking for an excuse because they cannot deliver."

TGV says it does not have to abide by the Dec. 31 deadline because a ridership survey, and environmental impact study must be further along before the company can present the project to certain investors. Both studies have been delayed because of actions taken by the authority, TGV said.

TGV also blamed Southwest Airlines for delays because of lawsuits filed by the airlines against the project, which envisions connecting Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth, and San Antonio with a system of trains that can run at 200 mph.

Despite these problems, David Rece, TGV's chief operating officer, said, "This project is on track. We're well taken care of as far as needs of the project."

Several people attending the meeting disagreed. "If they can't get that $170 million now, how can they get that $6 billion later," said Navarro County Commissioner Betty Armstrong.

James Allison, general counsel of the County Judges and Commissioners Association of Texas, urged the authority to refuse to allow TGV to slip by the deadline. "Local governments are presently being held hostage," he said because they cannot plan roads, water and sewer lines amid the uncertainty of a rail system.

The portion of the agreement invoked by TGV allows the company to break deadlines if it is delayed because of "any intervening act of God or the public enemy, fire, flood, domestic governmental restrictions, regulations or controls or any other act or occurrence beyond its reasonable control ..."

Krueger said such a provision is usually used if a project is delayed because of a hurricane or other natural disaster.

He also questioned whether the $40 million TGV said it had was legitimate under the franchise agreement.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You may be closer to success than you think. Keep your faith and determination strong! Although December is not the best time for lending or borrowing money, family members will help out if a crisis arises. Let optimism rule every day. Early 1993 brings new career options. Choose carefully. A project or romance you begin next spring will lead to a change in lifestyle. Postpone travel until late summer.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: movie critic Rex Reed, singing stars Sting and Tiffany, fashion designer Donna Karan.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Financial matters must be handled diplomatically. Give more thought to what you should say. Getting better organized will make it easier for you to fulfill your obligations.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can make your own luck today. Listen attentively to what an older person tells you. Work out a baby-sitting exchange with a neighbor if you need to have some time alone.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A loved one may take you for granted. Be more assertive. Familiarize yourself with an employer's long-range goals. Spending too much time on minor details would be a mistake.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Continue to take people into your confidence. Even if one door closes, another will open. Trust your ideas, your way of doing things; you are on the right track.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Key goals are met as you climb the ladder of success. Phone calls, letters and meetings crowd your agenda. You are in the right crowd. Place your trust in respected family members.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Discuss your hopes and dreams with both friends and bigwigs. Voicing your ideas now can lead to a highly profitable collaboration. Join a professional organization.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Decisions can go awry today. Guessing is not good enough — be certain of your facts. Trying to force your will on others will only create enemies.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Marvelous doors are opening to you. Your social or professional life soars to lofty heights. Revolutionize the way you do business. Cutting certain ties with the past helps you move forward.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Tune in to VIPs; they can steer you in the right direction. Participating in a group project makes you look good and, better yet, feel good. Buy new furniture or kitchen appliances.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Solitude is not your cup of tea today. You want to reach out to other people and find out what is new. Contact relatives at a distance. An invitation is forthcoming.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Travel and appointments are subject to mix-ups. Do not leave anything to chance. Getting together with a friend who shares your goals proves inspiring.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be prepared to give the floor to other people. Your willingness to investigate new methods will impress the top brass. Creative inspiration strikes in science, art and metaphysics.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are dependable and hard-working with a wonderfully wry sense of humor. Although they tend to split hairs at times, they are usually very practical. Count on these Libras to be assertive when they are sure they are right about something. While these children dislike people who are crude or phony, they are not prudes. They get along well with their peers and enjoy friendships with people from all walks of life. The ideal job will give these Libras plenty of contact with the public.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 NT	4 ♡	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ◇

Here's an exercise of your analytical powers. Study the bidding and play of this hand and decide who, if anyone, committed an error.

We can't fault the bidding. True, one no trump doubled would have produced an excellent score for North-South, but there was no way that was going to be the final contract. South's jump to four hearts was an eminently practical way to express the hand's playing potential.

West led the ten of diamonds to the king and ace. Declarer ruffed the diamond continuation, drew trumps in two rounds and ran the ten of clubs to East's queen. East shifted to the eight of spades, ducked by declarer to West's queen. As the cards lay that was the last trick for the defense, since declarer could enter dummy with a trump, finesse the jack of spades and claim the rest when the suit broke 3-3.

Yes, there was one critical error, but it is by no means easy to spot even looking at all four hands. Did you find it?

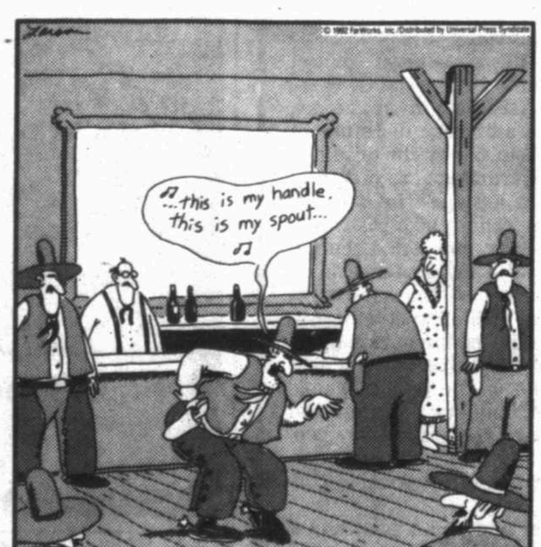

SPOT THE ERRORS

After winning the queen of clubs, East cannot afford to return a diamond because declarer will ruff while discarding a spade from the table; ace of clubs ruffed in the closed hand sets up dummy's suit while there's a trump entry; and we've seen that declarer can handle a spade return. But what about a low club?

Declarer can sluff a spade while winning in dummy with the jack, but that's not enough! Declarer will still have to lose two spade tricks as long as East covers any spade led from dummy. Beautiful.

Ozzy Osbourne returns to San Antonio for concert

SAN ANTONIO — Will he or won't he?

Only Ozzy Osbourne knows for sure, but it appears that while he is in San Antonio this week the British heavy metal musician won't be visiting the Alamo statue he once urinated on.

Osbourne, performing Thursday and Saturday nights in San Antonio, caused a citywide stir when he was arrested in 1982 for public intoxication after urinating on the Alamo Cenotaph statue.

The Alamo is the famous mission known as the shrine to Texas liberty.

Osbourne hasn't performed in San Antonio since the arrest.

But the ill feelings toward Osbourne may have subsided since the performer last month donated $10,000 to the Daughters of the Republic of Texas, the caretakers of the Alamo.

The now clean and sober Osbourne is not even planning to stay overnight in San Antonio, said Bill Sexauer, spokesman for concert promoter Stone City Attractions.

"All we've been told is Ozzy is flying in Thursday, flying out Thursday night and flying back in for the Saturday show. No, there are no plans, as far as we know, for a trip to the Alamo," Sexauer said.

Osbourne, originally slated to perform Oct. 5, now is doing two shows at the Freeman Coliseum with his band and the groups Alice In Chains and Blind Melon. The Thursday night show was sold out.

BOSTON — Not having a television at home has its drawbacks, Gov. William F. Weld said in a recent interview on (what else?) television.

Weld

He said he was at a loss when reporters asked him about the Dan Quayle-Murphy Brown flap. But things were different when he was growing up on Long Island.

The Republican governor said he watched TV 10 hours a day back then.

"Why there's anything left in my head at all, I have no idea," Weld said in a C-Span interview to televised on the cable service Oct. 11.

Asked about his patrician image, Weld said: "I'm absolutely not a patrician. I'm much more of a slob than a patrician."

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Barton Heyman is a statistic with a souvenir.

Heyman was shot in the arm Sunday night as he drove with his girlfriend, Loie Glasser, in a convertible, the Daily News reported Thursday.

The shooter wasn't found, but police told Heyman to save the bullet so they could try for a match if anybody else were hit, the newspaper said.

Police went to St. Vincent's Medical Center to talk to Heyman, but he said officers left him with the impression there was nothing they could do.

"It was so by rote that I turned to Loie and said, 'We're a statistic. We'll be filed and probably forgotten,' " Heyman said.

Heyman appeared in "Billy Bathgate," "Awakenings," "Bonfire of the Vanities" and "The Exorcist."

LINCOLN, Neb. — Writer Scott Momaday says American Indians are developing a greater sense of community.

"Tribal distinctions are falling away, but the sense of Indianess is growing," he said Monday as he opened a "Healing the Hoop" conference at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

"The idea of the self as a Native American is growing," he said.

Momaday is a member of the Kiowa Tribe and a professor of English at the University of Arizona. He won a Pulitzer Prize in 1968 for "House Made of Dawn," about Indian lore.

The conference is based on the belief that the hoop, a symbol of unity in the universe, has been broken over the centuries due to the conflict between American Indians and those who came to this continent.

FRANKLIN, Tenn. — Singer Steve Earle was arrested for failing to report for jury duty, authorities said.

Earle

Earle, who lives on a farm in Fairview, about 25 miles southwest of Nashville, was released Wednesday on $1,000 bond, said Williamson County sheriff's Sgt. James Lane.

Circuit Judge Connie Clark ordered Earle, 37, arrested for failure to report for jury duty in July, but Lane said deputies couldn't catch him at home before Wednesday.

He faces an Oct. 12 hearing to explain why he shouldn't be held in contempt of court.

Earle's songs include "Guitar Town" and "Copperhead Road."

NEW YORK (AP) — Kevin McKenzie, a former star dancer for the struggling American Ballet Theatre, is the company's new artistic director.

He replaces Jane Hermann, who took over after Mikhail Baryshnikov resigned in 1989.

Talk values with children

N.Y. Times News Service

The first rule in dealing with a child who's stolen something is to make it clear you disapprove.

"If you rationalize your child's stealing by calling it borrowing or a misunderstanding, the child won't understand what he's done wrong," said Dr. Ron Prinz, a professor of psychology at the University of South Carolina.

These are important opportunities for parents to communicate their values, said Dr. William Damon, the director of the Child Study Center at Brown University in Providence, R.I. and the author of "The Moral Child: Nurturing Children's Natural Moral Growth" (Free Press, 1991).

"There should be an immediate and forceful response, not because you're afraid that your child will fall into a life of crime, but because this is the time to talk about values in a way that's directly linked to your child's behavior," he said. "That's much more powerful than giving your child a lecture in the abstract about what to do and what not to do in life."

Here are some other steps you might consider taking:

■ Adjust your response to the age of your child.

Remember that toddlers need to learn that they can't walk off with something simply because they like it.

With a very young child, you can say: "I see that you have Tommy's truck here. He must be missing it. We should take it back to Tommy's house." This points up the problem, helps the child identify with the other person's emotions and states the solution.

With school-age children and adolescents, you can talk about the larger issues of theft and trustworthiness. Talking about moral or ethical issues with toddlers, however, would be a waste of time.

■ Have the child make restitution.

This means not only immediately returning, replacing or paying for the stolen objects, but suffering some other consequence as well, like having to do extra chores. Also, if your child has stolen something from a store, help him see the store as more than a faceless institution. Many children don't understand how thefts affect the people who own and work for stores.

■ Put your children on notice.

Keep your children out of situations that may be too tempting. Don't leave them unsupervised in stores. Ask to see receipts.

"Make sure your child knows that you're monitoring his possessions," said Dr. Gloria E. Miller, a professor of psychology at the University of South Carolina in Columbia. "That doesn't mean that you'll be a snoop, but you should be aware of unusual or new items."

FAMILY MATTERS

Woman seeks help in parenting

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I need help and I don't know where to go or how to go about getting it. I grew up in a dysfunctional family where I suffered emotional abuse on a daily basis. There was some physical abuse too but the majority of it was verbal. I don't really remember too much about my childhood. I've forgotten a lot about my teenage years too because I got involved with drugs and alcohol starting at age 12. All I know is that I have absolutely no respect or feelings of love at all for my parents (my dad never lived with us but came around quite often).

May

I started having some memories of when I was younger a few years ago, and now I'm worried that I may have also been sexually abused as a child. I've suffered from depression on and off (mostly on) for as long as I can remember. I've always been very shy and withdrawn, and if I have any self-esteem at all, it is very low. My shyness is a big thing that has kept me from looking for help, and it makes it extremely hard for me to communicate effectively with other people. But no matter how hard it is for me to seek help, I have to do it because I have a family of my own now and I don't want to end up treating my kids the way I was treated.

I have a daughter in elementary school who is shy and I think she may also be suffering from a low self-esteem. I don't criticize or call her names the way my parents did me, but I know it's got to be something I've done. I know part of the problem has to be that I'm not emotionally there for her because a lot of times I find myself just sitting and staring into space. When she tries talking to me I can't concentrate long enough to listen to her.

I also have a 1-year-old child and another one due in three weeks. I get stressed out so easy and I'm afraid that after I have the baby I'll get even worse. There are also a lot of other issues in my life that I haven't dealt with, such as being involved in an abusive relationship where I was raped. I know that I need counseling but I don't know how to get it. I'm single and on welfare so I can't afford to pay for any counseling.

I've heard of attorneys doing pro-bono work. Are there psychiatrists who do that or is there any kind of agency I can to go? Please don't suggest going to any support groups because as shy as I am, I couldn't possibly talk in front of a lot of people. I'm not even sure how I'm going to handle talking in front of one person, but I've got to get to the bottom of my problems before I end up passing them on to my children. DESPERATE

DEAR DESPERATE: You have already taken an important step toward recovery by writing about your problems — and you have written about them very eloquently. You may be a single mother on welfare right now, but you are obviously a very intelligent lady with significant writing skills.

You might want to continue your recovery journey by reading about dysfunctional families and the recovery process. Susan Forward's "Toxic Parents" and John Bradshaw's "Homecoming" might be helpful at this time. If the library does not have copies of these books, contact me and I can get either or both for you.

Your life can be so much better than it has been so far. With your obvious intelligence and skills of expression, you have special gifts that you can begin to use to start a new life. There is a known path that can lead to a healthy life for you.

In general, it is very hard to "parent" if you were not parented appropriately. You can only know what you know. The good news is that parenting is a skill that can be learned! While it may be difficult for you to attend a group parenting class, it would be a very safe place to experience yourself differently. I encourage you to call CAPP at 685-3007 for information on parenting resources.

I also encourage you to call the Rape Crisis Center, 682-7273, and go talk to them about your rape and possible sexual abuse. Dr. Mary Ross, in a recent issue of "The Harvard Mental Health Letter," wrote: "Women who know the offender (rapist) are also more likely to delay in seeking professional treatment because they blame themselves or fear they will not be believed. The effect of rape does not necessarily fade with time."

The support groups that I am familiar with do not ask or require that anyone say anything. You can attend them for as long as you choose, and listen, learn and grow. However, at this time you may find individual counseling to be more appropriate. I encourage you to call the Mental Health-Mental Retardation Center, 570-3300, for counseling. They might have a waiting list, but put your name on the list and it will be your time before you know it.

Your life can be so much better than it has been so far. With your obvious intelligence and skills of expression, you have special gifts that you can begin to use to start a new life. There is a known path that can lead to a healthy life for you.

DEAR ABBY

Quiz sorts out misconceptions

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A cousin and I have a difference of opinion. It has to do with common misconceptions about homosexuality.

Van Buren

I recall that you ran a true-false quiz dealing with this subject several years ago, and I would like to enlighten him.

Would you please run it again? — HIS COUSIN IN GALVESTON, TEXAS

DEAR COUSIN: I'm happy to run it again — and I hope it helps to shed a little enlightenment where needed:

How much do you know about homosexuality? Mark the following statements true or false:

1. Homosexuals commit more crimes than straight people. (True or False)
2. Everyone is born straight, but some become gay because they have been seduced by a gay person early in life. (True or False)
3. You can always tell homosexuals and lesbians by the way they act, dress and talk. (True or False)
4. With the proper therapy and motivation, a gay person can become straight. (True or False)
5. Boys raised by domineering mothers and weak (or absent) fathers usually turn into homosexuals. (True or False)
6. Gay people can never become mothers or fathers. (True or False)
7. Homosexuals are more inclined to molest children sexually than heterosexuals. (True or False)
8. If a person has one or two sexual experiences with someone of the same sex, he is gay. (True or False)
9. The American Psychiatric Association stated that homosexuals are "sick." (True or False)
10. Homosexuals can be legally married to each other under the law in the United States. (True or False)
11. Most homosexuals try to convert young people into becoming gay also. (True or False)
12. Children raised by gay parents (or gay people) usually become homosexuals themselves. (True or False)

How did you score?

If you marked all 12 statements "False," you are very well-informed.

If you marked nine statements "False," you are fairly well-informed.

If you marked four or more statements "True," you have a great deal to learn about homosexuality, because ALL of the above statements are false!

DEAR ABBY: A few weeks ago, I loaned one of my favorite books to a friend.

When she returned it, the cover had been badly torn and taped together. She didn't even apologize.

Perhaps I was wrong to be so upset over this, but the next time she asks to borrow a book from me, what should I say? — A LOYAL FAN

DEAR FAN: Say, "After you returned the last book I let you read and I saw how badly it had been abused, I promised myself that I would not lend you another." Period.

DEAR ABBY: A friend and I were invited to attend a baseball game. He has four season tickets and asked us to join him and his friend.

During the game, prizes were given away by one's seat number and location. As I had never been to this event before, I did not pay too much attention to the location of the seats, but upon hearing the called series of numbers again, and with the help of those sitting around me, I knew I had won the prize. My friend went to claim it and, after receiving the item, the people who had invited us to the game watched as I opened it. Because these were his seats and we were the invitees, I asked if he wanted what I had won, and he immediately took it. I was shocked but said nothing.

Was this my prize to keep? Should I as his guest have offered to give it to him, or should I have remained quiet and kept what I had won? — LOST MY PRIZE

DEAR LOST: Your number was called — therefore, you WON the prize. Since you graciously offered to give the prize to your host and he accepted — the prize was his.

DEAR READERS: Bertrand Russell, British philosopher (1872-1970), wrote: "You should never spank a child before he is 11. And after that it is too late."

By popular request, Abby shares more of her favorite prize-winning, easy-to-prepare recipes. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: More Favorite Recipes by Dear Abby, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Tough times mean more coupons used

By Eben Shapiro
N.Y. Times News Service

The weak economy is creating a nation of coupon clippers. Bargain-hungry shoppers redeemed 4.1 billion coupons in the first six months of the year, an increase of 10 percent from a year earlier, according to NCH Promotional Services Inc., a large coupon processing firm in Chicago.

And manufacturers, in response to the demand for cost savings, issued 193 billion coupons in that period, an increase of 7 percent, according to CMS Inc., a coupon processor in Winston-Salem, N.C.

Food companies and the coupon processors said, however, that for the full year the percentage of coupons redeemed would probably be about 7.7 percent, the same rate as last year. The redemption rate may even fall for the year, they said, if food companies end the year with a flurry of coupons.

CMS said that in 1991 "the recession seemed to jump-start consumer response to couponing," with the redemption rate increasing by 5 percent over 1990.

"There is a strong link between consumer confidence and coupon usage," said Jane Perrin, senior vice president of marketing for NCH. "Since the end of 1990, we've seen a growth in coupon usage among consumers because of the economic situation."

Kerry J. Smith, managing editor of Promo magazine, said that the latest wave of coupon use seemed to be attracting more than the traditional customers. In the past the typical coupon user had an annual income of $29,000.

A recent NCH survey found that 74 percent of those who earn more than $50,000 a year have used coupons, compared with 86 percent of those who earn between $40,000 and $50,000. The survey also found that 83 percent of those who earn less than $15,000 have used coupons.

Jeffrey Nedelman of the Grocers Manufacturers Association, a trade association for the largest food companies, said the proliferation of coupons was leading to a great deal of "brand hopping" among consumers. "We are dealing with the most value-conscious, least brand-loyal consumer we've ever encountered," he said.

NCH said the face value of coupons continued to rise, to an average of 51 cents this year, compared with 47 cents last year.

Coupon experts also said food manufacturers were using coupons with expiration dates to drive short-term sales, while in the past many coupons had no deadline for use. NCH says the average coupon expires in 3.9 months, compared with 4.4 months last year.

"Manufacturers are trying to spur immediate sales," said Smith of Promo magazine.

Saving on perscriptions can be done

By Steve Edwards

QUESTION: Are there ways to save money when buying prescription drugs?

Edwards

ANSWER: The most obvious answer would be for you to compare prices of the drug you need. Many pharmacies will tell you the prices over the telephone and many will also post the prices of the most commonly used drugs. Prices can vary by as much as 250 percent in a particular area. But you also may save a considerable amount of money by ordering your drugs through a mail order company, particularly if you'll be using a drug for a long time and if your doctor will prescribe the generic form of the drug. However, it is important to compare prices from various companies and drug stores before ordering.

Also, do inquire carefully into drug discount clubs. Some can save you money but others can be more costly than a local pharmacy.

Be sure to ask your doctor to write prescriptions using the generic name of a drug rather than the brand name. You can ask your pharmacist for a generic substitute even if the doctor prescribes by brand name, unless the doctors specifies "dispense as written."

Ask the doctor for free samples he or she may have if you need only a small amount, or as a starter dosage. Make sure you can read the names of a drug on the prescription, or ask your doctor to write the name on a separate sheet of paper. This will enable you to compare prices of the drug by telephone.

Find out about refills. Can the prescription be refilled and how often? If you will be taking the drug for a long, ask your doctor to write the prescription for a large quantity. This is often less expensive.

If you're elderly and on a fixed income, contact the Department of Human Services to see if you qualify for Medicaid. If you do, some of your drug costs may be paid. Also, if under a health insurance policy, check out your benefits to see if drug costs are covered.

Finally, do consider service as well as price. Ask if the pharmacy keeps a profile for you of drugs you've taken in the past. Does the pharmacy have an emergency number? Does the pharmacy deliver? Will the pharmacy call the doctor for refills on medication problems? This could save you the cost of a doctor visit. As a consumer, you do have purchasing options. You can save yourself considerable dollars by checking out your purchases and by being a comparison shopper.

AARP conducts program about heath care reform draft proposal

Staff report

A program on the new American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) health care reform draft proposal, Health Care American, was conducted during a recent AARP Chapter 256 meeting at Dellwood Senior Citizens Center.

Paul Gentry, AARP volunteer speaker and assistant state director, presented the program explaining important aspects of AARP's draft proposal. He has received extensive training in health care reform issues.

AARP's draft proposal is offered for discussion, suggestions and modifications. Input from the public and members is sought. Clubs and organizations with 50 members or more who are interested in a program presented by Gentry, call 694-5561.

"AARP designed the plan to provide access to affordable, high quality health and long-term care," Gentry said. "It reflects the current best thinking on how to address the growing concern from around the country, expressed by Americans of all ages, that something must be done about our current health care crisis."

AARP is the nation's leading organization for those age 50 and over. In Texas, there are more than 1,900,000 members and 412 chapters. It serves their needs and interests through legislative advocacy, research, informative programs and community services provided by a network of local chapters and experienced volunteers throughout the country.

The next public meeting of AARP will be 10 a.m. Oct. 21 at Dellwood Center. For more information, call 699-5023.

Preplanning of funerals a growth industry in these financial times

By Ken Kusmer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — More people are planning and paying for their funerals long before they die to spare survivors the strain of having to choose and finance the arrangements, industry experts say.

It's just another piece of today's growing financial planning picture, helped by greater state regulation that offers better security for funeral investments made years before death.

"Often, financial planners will recommend people plan for this as well," said Bruce Holstrom, president of the Pre-Arrangement Association of America, a Chicago-based industry group with 400 funeral directors, cemeterians and suppliers as members.

The number of people planning and paying for funerals in advance is roughly quadrupling every decade, according to data gathered by Indiana-based Forethought Life Insurance Co. From 305,000 in 1980, the number grew to 1.2 million in 1990 and is projected to reach 4.5 million by the end of the century.

A customer can pick out the casket, vault, service, calling hours, flowers, music and any other arrangements. In some cases, the customer may choose the arrangements but not pay for them; in others, money is set aside for the funeral but arrangements are left to the survivors.

The American Association of Retired Persons encourages its 33 million members to plan their funerals in advance, said spokesman Ted Bobrow, but warns them to be wary of financing plans and the restrictions that go along with them. In some cases, "pre-need" plans cannot be canceled or transferred to other states.

"By all means people should plan in advance, to make sure that their wishes are followed through and also so that their families aren't burdened by not being sure what the right thing to do is," Bobrow said.

'By all means people should plan in advance, to make sure that their wishes are followed through and also so that their families aren't burdened by not being sure what the right thing to do is. Making arrangements at the last minute can be very painful' for survivors.

— Ted Bobrow
AARP spokesman

"Making arrangements at the last minute can be very painful" for survivors, he added.

Revenues for future funerals represent more than 40 percent of the overall business this year at Harry W. Moore Funeral Chapels. The average cost: $4,500 to $6,000, said David Ring, president of the three-home chain.

Industry expert Robert Ninker said the prearrangement field, once tarnished by con artists working door-to-door, has matured into an industry regulated closely by state insurance and investment oversight agencies. Agents typically are funeral home directors who place the investment in an insurance policy or a bank trust, he added.

Ninker, executive director of the Illinois Funeral Directors Association, said "pre-need trusts" in that state have grown from $6.3 million in 1976 to an estimated $300 million this year. In that time, the percentage of funeral homes offering prearrangements in Illinois has grown from 50 percent to more than 90 percent. Other states report similar growth, he said.

"Pre-need now is consumer-driven, for several reasons. No. 1, people today are more sensitive to the need for advance planning. What used to be sort of an option now has become, 'We really ought to do that,'" Ninker said.

"Also, they can get a guaranteed funeral at today's prices. It gives people peace of mind," he said.

In the last five years, Forethought and other insurance companies have grabbed bigger pieces of the financing market once nearly monopolized by trusts, Ninker said.

Forethought was founded seven years ago by Hillenbrand Industries, the parent company of Batesville Casket Co. in southern Indiana. The insurance business has multiplied more than ninefold from 9,284 new policies sold in 1987 to 83,979 last year, said Tom E. Brewer, Hillenbrand's chief financial officer.

The average age of Forethought policyholders is 72, Brewer said, but he added, "We'll write it at any age." More than 60 percent of the policies are paid in lump sums, but Forethought also offers payment plans over two, three, five and 10 years.

Squirrel cage

VILLE PLATTE, La. — Autumn Friday nights normally mean high school football in Louisiana's Cajun country — except when something even more revered comes along.

The lights in three Evangeline Parish football stadiums will be dark Friday night, a regular event this time of year.

Instead of cheering the home teams, many residents — including some of the coaches and most of the players — will spend Friday night gathered around campfires, waiting for the start of squirrel season on Saturday.

Evangeline Parish schools were scheduled to be closed Friday and three of the parish's four teams scheduled their games for Thursday night to attract their regular crowds.

The start of squirrel season, especially in this south-central Louisiana parish, is eagerly awaited and not to be missed, said Basile High School coach Glen Lafleur.

"Some people laugh at us, but around here, going out in the woods on the first day of squirrel season is a tradition, like Mardi Gras," said Lafleur.

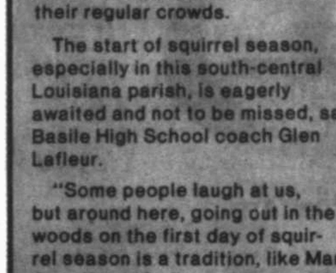

Magic money

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Magic Johnson signed a $14.6 million one-year contract extension with the Los Angeles Lakers on Thursday, the largest single-season salary in team sports.

A source, speaking on the condition he not be identified, said the deal guaranteed Johnson $19.6 million through the end of the 1994-95 season. Johnson, who on Tuesday announced he was returning following a one-year layoff, already was under contract for this season and 1993-94 at $2.5 million per year.

MHS, Lee play salty teams

Bulldogs host Amarillo High in 1992 homecoming game

By Bill Price
Staff writer

The road doesn't get any easier for Midland High's football team.

The 0-4 Bulldogs have their District 4-5A open date this week, but draw Amarillo High in tonight's 8 p.m. homecoming game at Memorial Stadium. That's the same Amarillo High that owns a 3-1 record with its only loss being a 26-14 decision to Odessa Permian.

So while MHS struggles to find a way out of a 13-game losing streak, it must also rebound from a 57-0 thrashing at the hands of intra-city rival Midland Lee last week.

The good thing about all that, though, is that the Bulldogs can take a week from the pressure of 4-5A play to regroup.

"Our pressure is for us to perform well and coach well," said MHS head coach Ronnie Reeger. "We can have a little more fun, though, and put in new wrinkles both offensively and defensively.

"The kids are excited about it being homecoming and we have reminded them of it every day because we have an opportunity to get better this week," Reeger said.

What worries Golden Sandstorm coach Larry Dippel is that he doesn't know what to expect from the 'Dogs.

"It's the fact that we don't know that much about them. It's our first year to play. They've not won a game this year, but they've played some top quality competition. Lee didn't beat Midland High a whole lot more than they beat (Amarillo) Palo Duro (41-0), and Palo Duro's a pretty good team," said Dippel, the Sandies' head coach since 1975.

"The things they're doing offensively are pretty balanced as far as running and passing, and they make you play a balanced defense."

What the Bulldog defense has to worry about is stopping the running tandem of Shane Ward and Ryan Blackburn. Ward has run for 321 yards and three touchdowns on 53 carries, while Blackburn has countered with 227 yards and four TDs on 47 carries.

No. 9 Rebels must play at upset-minded San Angelo

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

SAN ANGELO — Midland Lee head football coach Earl Miller is afraid his No. 9 state ranked Rebels are ripe for a District 4-5A upset here at 8 p.m. today and San Angelo coach Dan Gandy is hoping he is right.

"We have a lot of factors going against us in this game, so we better be ready to play or we will come away with a loss," Miller said. "San Angelo has an excellent team again and they are averaging over 400 yards a game on offense. In some ways they are better than last year in that they have two backs averaging almost 100 yards a game rushing and they can still pass."

Lee enters the game unbeaten at 4-0 and state ranked while San Angelo owns a 2-2 record through a murderous non-conference schedule that included Killeen, Killeen Ellison, No. 1 ranked Temple and Lubbock Coronado. All were playoff teams a year ago.

"San Angelo will be ready for us. They haven't beaten us in the three years since Gandy became coach there," Miller said. "There has also been a lot of pressure from the San Angelo media that they can't beat Lee. This is also their first district game and they are expecting a big crowd. We have played weaker foes and there is a danger of entering the game kind of laid back."

Miller, however, isn't giving the game away.

"On the flip side, San Angelo's defense has given up over 300 yards per game," Miller said. "We just have to match them point for point and keep the ball away from their offense. They have the potential to beat anyone on any given Friday night. It shapes up as an upset if we don't move the ball offensively. I look for a close game. That's the way we're going at it."

Gandy realizes that his team also faces a tough task tonight, but he isn't backing away from the challenge.

"There just aren't many weaknesses when you look at Lee," Gandy said. "We have scored a lot of points this year, but in

4-5A could be stronger than in 1991

San Angelo's Dan Gandy has the only team that hasn't faced a District 4-5A war as of yet, but he expects some major bumps in the road as his Bobcats jump into league warfare tonight against unbeaten and state ranked Midland Lee.

Williamson

The Bobcats were only a step away last year from playing for the Class 5A Big School state championship last season, losing to eventual Big School champion Killeen in the semifinals.

San Angelo was the third best team in the district last year, showing that it was almost tougher getting out of district play than winning playoff games. In fact, District 4-5A's three playoff teams compiled a district best playoff record last year with a 12-2 overall record and could easily have had two state championships to crow about.

Still, Gandy thinks the road back to the playoffs is even tougher than a year ago when his team gave Small School champion Odessa Permian one of its toughest games of the year.

"I definitely think it's tougher this year than last year," Gandy said. "Whether we win or lose to Lee, we still have a tough one next week. Next week isn't ever going to end."

Gandy notes that Odessa High, Abilene Cooper and Abilene High all appear to be better than a year ago, giving no slack in the district schedule.

"Cooper has impressed me and I think that is an interesting game they have with Odessa High this week," Gandy said. "Then we play Cooper next week on the road. It also looks like Abilene High is scoring a lot more points than they did last year and that concerns you. You don't have to say anything about Lee and Permian. They're up there at the top again.

"It makes it tough every week. It looks like Midland High is struggling, but I figure they will find out what is going on under a new coaching staff just about the time we play them."

Gandy seems to be right on every count. The league is tougher from top to bottom than a year ago. Odessa High's strong performance against Odessa Permian in a surprising defensive game only helps to prove the point. Also, the 31-21 victory by Cooper over Abilene High last week shows a major difference. This was usually a defensive battle, but both offenses have shown some punch this year.

This race could get quite interesting before all is said and done.

While carrying a 20-5 (.800) record in the District 4-5A picking game, here is how it will turn out tonight:

Amarillo High 35, Midland High 14: Tim McGraw tells me these two teams haven't played since 1955 when they were in the same district. This is a Homecoming loss, but at least, it isn't a district game for the Bulldogs.

Midland Lee 35, San Angelo 21: Lee holds a narrow 17-14 lead in the series, but has won 13 of the last 14 meetings. Lee last lost to the Bobkitties, 14-9, in 1983. Lee will win this one, but the scoreboard may never be the same again.

Odessa Permian 28, Abilene High 10: Permian owns a 28-3-2 record against the Eagles. Old Mojo will win again, but the Panthers sure do have us all scratching our heads. No one seems to know just how good — or average — Mojo is this year.

Abilene Cooper 21, Odessa High 18: Cooper has a 17-12-2 advantage over OHS, but if you want to lose some sleep at night, try picking the outcome on this one. If Cooper does win, the Cougars could possibly be playing San Angelo for a playoff berth next week.

ROAD 4, HOME 0: If the above predictions hold true, all four winners will be road teams. It's that kind of year in 4-5A.

Mississippi State stuns Gators, 30-6

Associated Press

STARKVILLE, Miss. — Frankie Luster's goal line interception stopped a scoring threat and Kevin Henry set up a touchdown with another of Mississippi State's five thefts as the 24th-ranked Bulldogs buried No. 13 Florida 30-6 Thursday night.

Mississippi State (3-1 overall, 1-1 Southeastern Conference) intercepted five passes off Florida quarterback Shane Matthews and also recovered two fumbles while holding the Gators (1-2 overall and SEC) without a touchdown for the first time in 21 games.

The Bulldogs blew the game open early in the fourth period when Matthews, under heavy pressure, threw a pass into Henry's arms at the Florida 17. Henry returned to ball to the 1 and backup quarterback Greg Plump, pressed into service when Sleepy Robinson went down with a suspected season-ending left knee injury, scored on the next play for a 20-6 lead with 13½ minutes to play.

Luster's big play occurred when Florida was threatening to regain the momentum after State's game-opening scoring drive. The Gators drove to the Mississippi State 2 before an illegal procedure penalty backed them to the 7. On third down, Luster stepped in front of a screen pass at the 10 and returned it to the Florida 49.

Robinson ran for 34 yards and passed for 39 on State's opening drive, which ate up the first 7 minutes, 15 seconds. From the Florida 10, Robinson rolled out and found Olanda Truitt in the back of the end zone for a touchdown.

Matthews completed four passes for 63 yards the first time Florida had the ball, and had a touchdown pass to Harrison Houston nullified by a penalty. The Gators settled for a 27-yard field goal by Bart Edmiston.

NCAA sanctions befall Syracuse

Associated Press

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — The long-awaited NCAA sanctions against the Syracuse basketball program came down Thursday, lighter than expected because of the school's cooperation in the investigation.

The Orangemen are banned from 1992-93 postseason play and the school's entire athletic program was placed on two years' probation as violations were also found in the women's basketball, football, lacrosse and wrestling programs.

The NCAA said the penalties were less than the minimum for major violations because of Syracuse's cooperation in its probe. The NCAA Committee on Infractions stopped short of banning Syracuse from live television appearances, but did assess scholarship and recruiting penalties.

"But for their cooperation, their penalty would have been much greater," said David Swank, dean of University of Oklahoma Law School and chairman of the committee.

Syracuse chancellor Kenneth A. Shaw said the university would accept the penalties.

Basketball coach Jim Boeheim said his players were disappointed when told of the penalties Thursday morning.

"But this class (of seniors) has been to the last three tournaments and they're going to have to accept it. There are a lot of kids, a majority of kids, who go to college and don't get to go to three NCAA tournaments," he said.

Syracuse is the first member of the high-profile Big East basketball conference to be sanctioned by the NCAA.

The conference's athletic directors will meet Oct. 6-7 at Providence for their regular fall meeting at which time they will vote to decide whether Syracuse can participate in the conference postseason tournament.

"It is my personal position that Syracuse should be allowed to participate," commissioner Mike Tranghese said, referring to the 1993 Big East tournament. Syracuse won the tournament in 1981, '88 and '92.

No penalties were assessed against football and women's basketball because of the limited nature of the infractions by those programs.

The wrestling and lacrosse programs each face a reduction in the number of scholarships awarded by the school because both programs exceeded their financial aid limits for several years.

Regarding the basketball program, the Infractions Committee determined "there were repeated and conscious efforts by representatives of the university's athletic interests to gain recruiting and competitive advantages for the men's basketball program."

As a result, Syracuse loses a scholarship in 1993-94 and 1994-95.

In addition, the NCAA banned the men's basketball coaches from off-campus recruiting from Jan. 1-June 30, 1993. For the rest of the year, only one coach at a time will be allowed to recruit off campus.

The number of expense-paid visits by recruits to the university also was reduced from 15 to nine from Nov. 13 until Nov. 12, 1993. For the following year, Syracuse will be allowed 13 recruiting visits.

Shaw took exception to the committee's finding.

"This is not a maverick athletic program," he said. The entire episode has been "both an anomaly and an embarrassment."

Daly keeps hot hand through Southern Open's first round

PINE MOUNTAIN, Ga. (AP) — John Daly, who last week won the B.C. Open for his second PGA Tour victory, shot a 5-under-par 67 on Thursday, his fifth consecutive round of 67 or better, for a share of the first-round lead in the Southern Open.

Using his length off the tee to shrink the 7,057-yard, par-72 Mountain View Golf Course at Callaway Gardens, Daly shot nines of 34 and 33 to grab a share of the lead with Ed Humenik, Kelly Gibson, Ed Fiori and rookie Robert Friend.

Humenik had a tournament-best 31 on the front nine and Fiori had a 31 for the best score on the back nine.

At 68 were Phil Mickelson, who made five birdies and one bogey, and Gary Hallberg, who was at 5-under before making bogey on the par-4 17th. Tied at 69 were E.J. Pfister, Tommy Armour III, Kenny Perry, Neal Lancaster, Jim Gallagher Jr., Emlyn Aubrey, Tom Seickmann and Mike Smith.

"Keeping my swing as slow as I have, even last week, has really paid off," said Daly, who pocketed $144,000 for last week's victory, his first since winning the 1991 PGA. "I've just been hitting so many more greens than usual. This is probably one of the most solid first rounds I think I've played all year. I just hope to keep the tempo going."

Beginning his round on the back nine, Daly played the par-3s in 3-under-par and the par-5s in 4-under. After going 64 holes without making a bogey, Daly's streak came to an end at the par-4 18th, when his approach found the back bunker. His bunker shot stayed in the fringe and he chipped to eight feet, then missed a par putt.

The highlight of Daly's round came at the 543-yard, par-5 No. 7, when he overcame a bogey at the par-4 sixth with an eagle-3. He put a 1-iron approach four feet from the cup.

"The key to any tournament is playing the par-3s well and taking advantage of the par-5s," said Daly.

Rebel JV beats San Angelo 24-0

Midland Lee's junior varsity football team won its first game of the season Thursday night, as the Rebels defeated San Angelo's JV 24-0.

Jerry Stanford rushed for two touchdowns while Theo Macklin scored another for Lee. Justin Little capped the Rebel scoring with a field goal.

"The offensive line did a great job and the defense did a great job in producing the shutout," said Lee coach Eddie Bull.

Mike Jones and Carlos Viellegas were instrumental in the defensive effort, Bull said, as was Daniel Hughes, who recovered two fumbles.

Lee is now 1-4 overall and 1-1 in district play.

Tip of the Week: Now that fall bowling has begun, don't forget that your body has laid off for the summer. Be sure to stretch your legs out before you bowl each time. The hamstring is especially volatile right now, so as you are preparing to bowl, bend your right knee and bring your foot up behind you. Hold it there for about 15 seconds, then do the left leg.

Philadelphia, Buffalo given edge in big games

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

They've had two weeks to hype it in Philadelphia and Dallas, two weeks to make it this year's Game of the Century. Not to mention the number of times Al, Frank and Dan hyped it on LAST Monday night's game.

Too bad it's only one of two Games of the Century THIS WEEK, Miami and Buffalo being the other.

The Eagles looked awesome in their last game, the 30-0 clobbering of Denver in which they held the Broncos to 82 yards. The Cowboys didn't, sleepwalking through Phoenix at home.

Dallas won this one last year on Kelvin Martin's 85-yard punt return that effectively put the Cowboys in the playoffs and the Eagles out.

That was against a Philadelphia team without Randall Cunningham and Herschel Walker but WITH Keith Jackson, who went south to Miami. Despite Jackson's loss, the Philadelphia offense is finally balanced, thanks to Walker and receivers Calvin Williams and Fred Barnett.

The Dallas defense? That's why the Eagles are 4½-point favorites — not all of it for the home field.

But it's still only the fourth game of the season. "If we lose, the season's not over," says Cunningham. "If they lose, it's not over for them."

So don't hold your breath yet.

EAGLES, 24-17

Miami (plus 11) at Buffalo

How come the spread's so big? Maybe because the Bills are averaging 38 points a game and the Dolphins struggled in Seattle last week.

Also, the Bills play defense this year ... at least against bad teams. They gave up 31 in a shootout with the 49ers, just 14 meaningless points in three games with the Rams, Patriots and Colts.

And thirdly, it's likely about the only thing Keith Jackson will be able to do for the Dolphins this week is yell "Fummbblle ..."

If there is one.

BILLS, 31-17

Kansas City (plus 1) at Denver

Not since 1982 have the Chiefs beaten the Broncos at Mile High Stadium. That includes seasons when the Broncos were bad and the Chiefs good and vice versa.

The jinx ends here against the Broncos, whose offense is so riddled that even John Elway can't save them.

CHIEFS, 20-9

Chicago (plus 4) at Minnesota

These are not the old Bears — to win they have to outscore the other guys. Not on what Mike Ditka likes to call a roller rink, the Metrodome.

VIKINGS, 31-20

New Orleans (plus 1) at Detroit

Everything that went well for the Lions last year hasn't so far this season — as in three losses by 10 points. If Erik Kramer starts, does it change the luck?

SAINTS, 17-14

Indianapolis (plus 9½) at Tampa Bay

Jeff George may be back.

But oh, those orange pants.

BUCS, 24-13

New York Giants (pick 'em) at Los Angeles Raiders

Al Davis's guys are one game under .500 since 1986. Ray Handley's guys are one game under .500 since 1991.

GIANTS, 27-20

Los Angeles Rams (plus 15) at San Francisco

The Rams have had their month against the AFC East.

49ERS, 34-17

Washington (minus 10) at Phoenix

The Redskins are 0-1 against the spread on the road this year when they wear their burgundy shirts.

REDSKINS, 22-17

Green Bay (plus 7) at Atlanta

Maybe Jerry Glanville traded Brett Favre because he couldn't figure out why it's pronounced "Farve."

Farve doesn't quite get his revenge. But it's close.

FALCONS, 24-20

Seattle (plus 3) at San Diego

The first of a "who cares?" doubleheader.

CHARGERS, 14-10

New England (minus 8½) at New York Jets.

Who Cares II.

Jets, 22-3

Last week: 7-4 (spread) 8-3 (straight up)

Season: 28-23-1 (spread) 39-13 (straight up)

BRETT: KC fans expected to honor star

against the California Angels on Wednesday night to become the 18th major leaguer to reach the 3,000-hit plateau. "I want to enjoy this for a while and go back to Kansas City."

Was he concerned that fans in Kansas City, where the Royals play on the final weekend of the season, didn't get to cheer the milestone at a home game?

"If the people there are upset that I got the hit out here, then they're not really true fans ..." he said after arriving Thursday at Anaheim Stadium. "And obviously, the 19,000 people here last night didn't feel like I cheated them."

He'll take whatever bows are appropriate this weekend, but it won't get out of hand, Brett said. And regardless of fan reaction, there will be no farewell tour next season.

"I'm not going to play the game and make a circus out of it," he said. "It's been too good a game to me to make a mockery of. I'm going to play as long as I feel I can contribute and help the team win."

Discouraged earlier this season when he was hitting .150 and the Royals lost 16 of their first 17 games, Brett considered retiring right then and there. But Kansas City manager Hal McRae, among others, talked him out of it.

Two considerations will figure heavily in his decision for next year and beyond: whether he believes he can still play at a high level, and whether he believes he will still enjoy the game.

"I want to go out on my terms," Brett said. "I don't want to go out like Harmon Killebrew did."

Killebrew played his final major league season with the Royals in 1975 after a Hall of Fame career with Minnesota.

"I remember as a kid watching Harmon Killebrew play, and he was one of the best players in baseball," Brett recalled. "But the Harmon Killebrew I played with was not one of the best players in baseball.

"If Harmon was on second base, a guy had to hit a triple for Harmon to score. And I don't want to do that.

"I know I'm not the player I was five years ago or 10 years ago. But I still think I can help this team win some ballgames, and I still think I can play better than most players.

"But at the same time, I don't want to out there and embarrass myself. And once I feel that I'm embarrassing myself, then it's time to quit."

The Royals have a $2.5 million option on Brett's contract for next season, with $1 million buyout, but they haven't indicated their plans.

"I've always said I'm not going to play the game of baseball for money," Brett said. "I've always said I'm not going to play the game of baseball if I don't have fun.

"It's not as much fun as it was from 1976 through 1985. Those were the fun years, when I was hitting .300 every year and we were in the playoffs almost every year and in a couple of World Series. But ever since the 1985 season, we haven't sniffed the World Series or playoffs. So, definitely, some of the fun has been taken out of the game.

"Sometimes, I just feel like I'm overmatched against some pitchers, and I never felt that way before. It's not a good feeling."

A good feeling would be a first-ballot election to the Hall of Fame, a prospect greatly enhanced by reaching the 3,000-mark.

Brett got four hits despite the sore shoulder he feared might be further damaged when he swung and cause him to miss his goal of getting his 3,000th hit this season. He took a few cuts at the batting tee before the game, decided he would play, then doubled off Julio Valera in the first inning.

He singled in the third and fifth innings and then, with rookie left-hander Tim Fortugno having relieved Valera, Brett came up in the seventh and hit a hard liner toward the right side of the infield.

The ball hit right in front of second baseman Ken Oberkfell, then took a big hop over his shoulder and into right field.

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Chuck Finley won his third straight decision and Luis Sojo and Junior Felix each drove in two runs as the California Angels beat the Kansas City Royals 5-2 on Thursday.

The Angels, who began the day a season-high 20 games under .500, played before a crowd of 16,867. It was the lowest turnout at Anaheim Stadium since Sept. 29, 1978, when 14,811 watched the Angels play Chicago.

An 18-game winner in each of the previous two seasons, Finley (7-12) won three straight decisions for the first time since June 9 of last year. The lefthander went seven innings allowing eight hits and two runs, with four strikeouts and a walk.

Steve Frey got the last two outs for his fourth save. The left-hander came in after the Royals loaded the bases off Scott Lewis and retired Wally Joyner on a short fly ball and got Gregg Jefferies to ground into a force play.

Rangers 4, Athletics 3

OAKLAND, Calif. — Jeff Frye's run-scoring single off relief ace Dennis Eckersley in the ninth inning gave the Texas Rangers a victory over the Oakland Athletics.

With one out in the ninth, Geno Petralli reached second when center fielder Willie Wilson dropped a line drive for an error. Eckersley relieved losing pitcher Vince Horsman (2-1) and issued an intentionall walk to Kevin Reimer.

Frye then connected for a solid single down the left field line, scoring pinch-runner Jeff Huson easily with the go-ahead run, handing the AL West-champion A's just their fourth loss in the 68 games Eckersley has appeared.

Kenny Rogers (3-6) faced one batter in the eighth to pick up the victory, taking over for Todd Burns when a power outage forced an 18-minute delay. Matt Whiteside pitched the ninth for his fourth save.

Dave Stewart, who struck out 11 in eight innings, held the Rangers hitless for 4 1-3 innings and had a 3-0 lead before Rafael Palmeiro homered.

Orioles 3, Indians 2

CLEVELAND — Glenn Davis homered on Eric Plunk's first pitch in the 10th inning, giving Mike Mussina his seventh consecutive victory as the Baltimore Orioles beat the Cleveland Indians.

Mussina (18-5), who entered the game with the best winning percentage in the majors, scattered 12 hits in nine innings while walking one and striking out four. Gregg Olson pitched the 10th for his 36th save, one away from his 1990 team record.

Mike Devereaux hit a two-run homer off Plunk (9-5) with two outs in the ninth, tying the score 2-2. Brady Anderson singled with one out, only the third hit of the game for Baltimore, before Devereaux connected for his 24th homer.

Twins 9, White Sox 6

MINNEAPOLIS — In what might have been his final home game with the Twins, Kirby Puckett hit RBI singles on his first two pitches as Minnesota beat the Chicago White Sox.

Puckett, one of the most popular athletes in Minnesota history, has said he will file for free agency after the World Series. He received standing ovations from the Metrodome crowd of 15,656 each of the four times he batted.

Braves match team win record

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Tommy Gregg led off the 10th inning with his first home run of the season to give the Atlanta Braves a 6-5 victory over the San Francisco Giants on Thursday night.

Gregg homered off reliever Mike Jackson (6-6) as Atlanta matched its 1957 franchise record with its 95th victory of the season. Marvin Freeman (7-5) pitched a scoreless 10th for the victory.

San Francisco tied it at 5 in the seventh off reliever Mark Wohlers when Greg Litton singled, took second on a groundout, third on a wild pitch and scored on John Patterson's RBI grounder.

Braves starter Steve Avery, who will pitch the second game of the NL playoffs against Pittsburgh, went six innings. He allowed five hits, four runs — two earned — didn't walk any and matched his season-high with seven strikeouts.

John Burkett gave up nine hits, five runs and struck out a season-high eight in seven innings for the Giants.

Atlanta took a 3-0 lead in the first on Jeff Treadway's triple, Ron Gant's double and Javier Lopez's single. by Javier Lopez.

San Francisco made it 3-2 on Litton's RBI single in the second and Royce Clayton's RBI triple in the third.

Atlanta regained a three-run advantage in the fifth on Ryan Klesko's RBU grounder and Melvin Nieves' RBI single.

San Francisco added two unearned runs in the sixth when Patterson reached on shortstop Rafael Belliard's error, stole second, took third on Clayton's single and scored on Steven Hosey's sacrifice fly to right. Clayton also scored on the play when right fielder Nieves' throw home was wild.

Dodgers 4, Reds 2

CINCINNATI — Kevin Gross broke out of a no-decision rut and Mike Piazza drove in a pair of runs as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Cincinnati Reds.

Gross (8-13) won for the first time since Sept. 9 by holding the Reds to a pair of runs on nine hits over 6 1-3 innings. He had pitched well in his last three starts, allowing a total of seven earned runs, but had to settle for no-decisions.

John Candelaria got out of a bases-loaded threat in the seventh inning and added a perfect eighth to preserve a 4-2 lead. Jay Howell pitched the ninth for his fourth save.

The Dodgers scored all four runs off Greg Swindell (12-8), who may have been making his last appearance for the Reds. The lefthander will become a free agent after the season.

Piazza doubled in the second and scored on Billy Ashley's two-out double.

Padres 3, Astros 2

HOUSTON — Greg Harris allowed three hits in seven innings and Fred McGriff drove in two runs with his NL-leading 35th home run as the San Diego Padres beat the Houston Astros.

Harris (4-8), who struck out two and walked two, is 8-0 lifetime against the Astros and improved to 30-30 in the majors.

Randy Myers got the final four outs for his 38th save.

Ryan Bowen (0-7) took the loss, allowing two runs on four hits in five innings. He walked three and struck out three.

McGriff's homer gave the Padres a 2-0 lead in the fourth.

Injured Sheffield hopes to hang on for batting title

By Bernie Wilson
AP Sports Writer

Gary Sheffield's season started with a refreshing trade and ended with a painful injury that denied him one last shot at the Triple Crown.

Done in by a trunk of clothes, the San Diego Padres' third baseman will miss the final four games with a fractured right index finger.

He finished his All-Star season with a .330 average, 33 home runs and 100 RBIs.

The injury was diagnosed Wednesday night in Houston. Sheffield, 23, will head to his home in St. Petersburg, Fla., and wait to see if he can at least hold on to the batting title. Pittsburgh's Andy Van Slyke is a close second at .327.

Sheffield would have needed a monster weekend to catch RBI leader Darren Daulton of the Philadelphia Phillies, who has 108. Sheffield was one homer behind league-leader and teammate Fred McGriff, who's been stuck on 34 since Sept. 6.

"It's very disappointing. I still felt I had a chance to win those things," Sheffield said Wednesday night. "You want to play the last games and finish strong. When I was coming back to the park I was upset, wondering why now? I guess it was for a reason.

"Now that I can't play anymore, I'm more concerned about the batting title," Sheffield said. "Before, it didn't matter. Me and Fred talked about it a lot. But I recognize how important it is now."

Sheffield was hurt Sunday night in San Diego when a trunk of clothes he was putting into his car slipped and fell on his hand.

Monday was a day off and he played Tuesday night against the Astros, doubling in the first inning for his 100th RBI. The finger didn't bother him until the fifth inning, and swelling finally forced him out in the eighth.

He was going to play Wednesday night, but told manager Jim Riggleman his finger was too swollen. He was taken to a nearby hospital for X-rays.

Sheffield was trying to become the first player to win the Triple Crown since Carl Yastrzemski of the Boston Red Sox in 1967 and the first in the NL since Ducky Medwick in 1937.

He could become the second Padres player to lead the NL in hitting.

Teammate Tony Gwynn, already out for the season with strained ligaments in his left knee, has won four batting titles. Last year, Gwynn missed the final 21 games of the season with a knee injury but still finished third in the batting race with a .317 average, .002 behind Terry Pendleton of the Atlanta Braves.

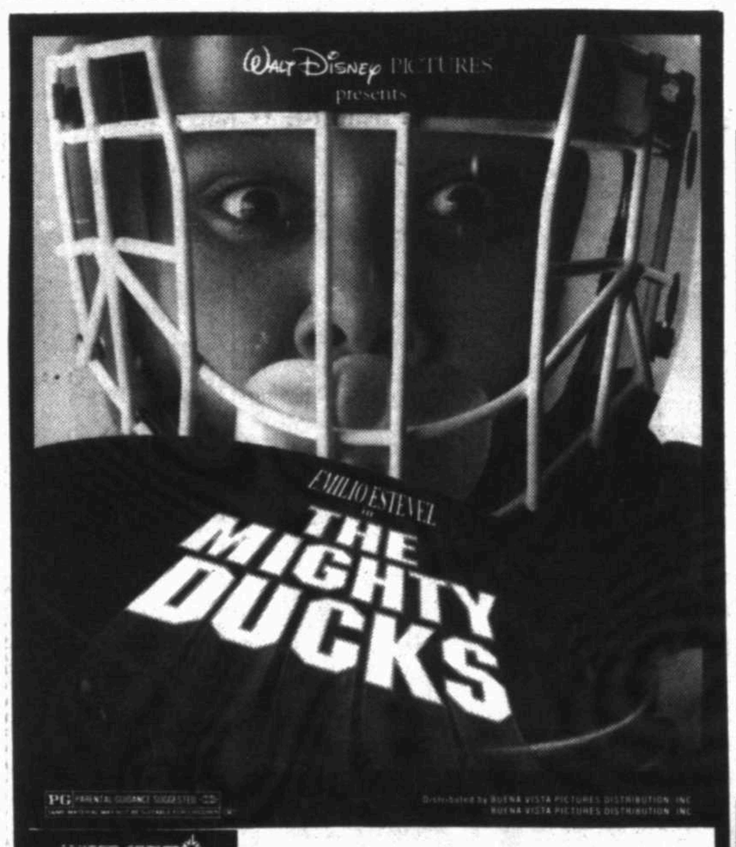

Even if he comes up empty, Sheffield went from malcontent to magnificent in one season.

He was acquired from Milwaukee in a five-player deal on March 27, ending four often-turbulent seasons with the Brewers.

Sheffield criticized teammates, management and team officials in Milwaukee. Hampered by injuries, he never played more than 125 games in any season with the Brewers. His best season was 1990, when he hit .294 with 10 homers and 67 RBIs.

"It was one of those things," Sheffield recalled during the Padres' final homestand this year. "Baseball can be hell. It was time for a change.

"Basically it's turned my life around," he said about coming to San Diego. "My life has changed as far as baseball and living overall."

Prices rise

NEW YORK — Oil prices rose mildly Thursday in light trading as investors showed little concern about fighting along the border between Saudi Arabia and Qatar.

Saudi forces seized a Qatari border post on Thursday, one day after two people were killed in fighting in the disputed region, the Qatar News Agency said.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in November settled at $21.83 per barrel, up 12 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers such as Scurlock Permian and Texaco Trading and Transportation raised their posted price 25 cents to $20.50.

Prime cut

NEW YORK — A large regional bank cut its prime lending rate Thursday by one-half percentage point to 5.5 percent, the first bank in the country to drop the key rate in three months.

The move by First Fidelity Bancorp of New Jersey coincided with fresh signs of weakness in the U.S. economy. If other banks follow First Fedelity's lead, that would put the prime rate at its lowest level in 20 years.

First Fidelity, the nation's 23rd-largest bank, said the rate cut applied to all its 523 branches in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK — The dollar rose Thursday against major European currencies while falling against the Japanese yen amid uncertainty over Europe's political squabbling concerning its currency crisis.

In New York, the pound was quoted late Thursday at $1.7380, compared with $1.7865 Wednesday. It finished earlier in Tokyo at $1.7445.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with Wednesday's late rates, included: 1.4215 marks, up from 1.41; 1.2425 Swiss francs, up from 1.2355; 4.8040 French francs, up from 4.7695; 1,244.5 Italian lire, up from 1,223; and 1.24735 Canadian dollars, up from 1.24675.

Stocks fall

NEW YORK — Stock prices pulled back Thursday in a wary response to the latest news on job-market conditions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 17.29 points to 3,254.37.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by more than 4 to 3 on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Nasdaq composite index for the over-the-counter market fell 4.94 to 578.33. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.91 at 374.81.

Jobless claims increase for 5th week

■ Commercial construction activity plunges to lowest level in eight years.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A widely watched barometer of American industry dipped back into recession territory in September while the number of Americans filing first-time claims for unemployment benefits rose for a fifth straight week and commercial construction activity plunged to the lowest level in eight years.

Analysts said the batch of dismal business statistics Thursday showed that the already weak economy stumbled further at the end of summer, adding to President Bush's election woes.

The bond market rallied on all the bad news, believing that the Federal Reserve will be forced to cut interest rates for the 25th time since 1989. Many expected the Fed's next rate cuts could come as soon as today following release of an unemployment report that is expected to show the jobless rate jumped last month, perhaps back up to an eight-year-high of 7.8 percent.

"The Fed's job is to prevent the economy from spiraling down and that job has become a lot more urgent," said Sung Won Sohn, chief economist at Norwest Corp. of Minneapolis. "It looks like a wheel is coming off the wagon."

Many economists believed the Fed would cut its discount rate, the interest that it charges other banks, from a current 3 percent down to 2.5 percent, the lowest level it has been in 33 years.

Analysts were also looking for the central bank to reduce its target for the federal funds rate, currently at 3 percent, to 2.75 percent. The funds rate is the interest that banks charge each other on overnight loans.

Cuts of that magnitude, if they occur, could be expected to trigger the lowering of a variety of business and consumer loans.

First Fidelity Bancorp of New Jersey, a large regional bank, did not wait for the Fed to act. It announced Thursday that it was cutting its prime lending rate from 6 percent down to 5.5 percent, becoming the first bank in the country to drop this key rate in three months.

If other banks follow suit, that would put the benchmark for many business and consumer loans at its lowest level in two decades.

Analysts said that all three economic reports Thursday depicted a weaker-than-expected economy.

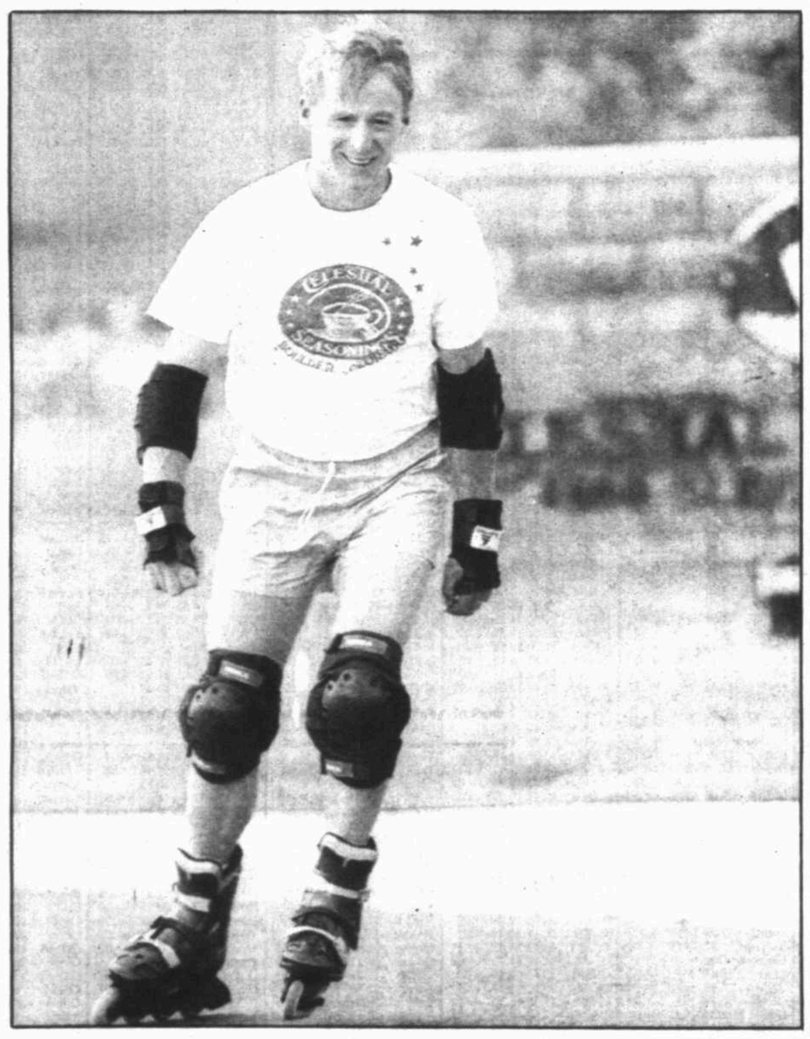

The National Association of Purchasing Managers said its widely followed index fell to 49 percent in September, down from 53.7 percent in August. It marked the first time the index has been below 50 percent, considered the trigger point for a recession in manufacturing, since last January.

The survey of 300 purchasing executives showed that factory output grew at a lackluster pace, manufacturing employment was down and the level of new orders fell sharply in September.

The Labor Department reported that the number of Americans filing new claims for unemployment benefits rose by 15,000 in the week ending Sept. 19, to 429,000, the highest level in six weeks.

Analysts said the fifth straight weekly increase in laid off workers showed a significant deterioration in labor markets and may mean that today's unemployment report will be even worse than expected.

Analysts were already braced for a bad number, reflecting the combined impact of a bad economy and several special factors last month, including Hurricane Andrew.

Siegel remains hands-on leader

By Sandy Shore
Associated Press writer

BOULDER, Colo. — Morris J. "Mo" Siegel is an older, wiser version of the free spirit who gathered wild herbs near the Rocky Mountains to create Celestial Seasonings teas two decades ago.

Part philosopher, part businessman and all entrepreneur, Siegel is taking his usual hands-on approach these days to help boost Celestial Seasonings Inc.'s sales and reduce debt after an absence from the company and a management-led leverage buyout.

The 42-year-old chief executive has his work cut out for him, but he's used to turning things around.

He recalled those early days when his idea for a tea called Red Zinger first was greeted with amazement by bankers. "The look on their face when I went in . . . it was like, 'This is a bad dream.' The banker went out laughing and got somebody else and said, 'You've got to hear this.' "

No one's laughing these days.

Siegel proved himself to be the boy wonder of the business world in the '70s. He created Celestial Seasonings when no one knew much about tea, particularly herbal varieties. Today, the company sells about 50 varieties of teas and accounts for more than half of all herbal tea sales.

Court allows health care group to control hospitals

■ Healthcare International for HealthVest to assume control of Glennwood Hospital in Midland.

Staff report

AUSTIN — The U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Austin has approved an agreement with Healthcare International for HealthVest to assume control of six psychiatric hospitals including Glennwood Hospital in Midland.

Effective October 1, 1992, the company will assume control of Cedar Springs Hospital in Colorado Springs, Colorado; Kahi Mohola Hospital in Honolulu, Hawaii; Meadow Pines Hospital in Longview; West Oaks at Cypress Creek in Houston and Glennwood Hospital in Midland.

Donald W. Evans, President of HealthVest, stated "HealthVest intends to distance these hospitals from the chaos and stress surrounding the Healthcare International bankruptcy.

These facilities were leased to subsidiaries of Healthcare and were the subject of motions by Healthcare in its bankruptcy proceedings to reject the facility leases. Under the agreement, Healthcare has agreed to assist HealthVest in the transfer of the operations.

HealthVest has assembled a team of employees, consultants (including Jean P. Smith, the former President of Healthcare), and psychiatric operating companies (including Universal Health Services and Sutter Health) to assist in operating these facilities.

The hospitals will continue to operate under their existing names and with their existing staff and programs.

HealthVest is a self-administered Real Estate Investment Trust (REIT) that invests in income-producing health care-related properties including psychiatric, general health and rehabilitation hospitals, and medical office buildings. HealthVest is listed on the American Stock Exchange under the symbol HVT.

Four U.S. airline chiefs attack British Airways' bid for USAir

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief executives of four major U.S. airlines said Thursday that British Airways' bid to buy an interest in USAir threatens U.S. jobs and puts the U.S. airline industry at risk.

The heads of United, American and Delta airlines and the cargo airline, Federal Express, called on the Transportation Department to open its deliberations on the proposal to the public. They claimed British Airways would gain effective control of USAir.

At a news conference here, they contended the deal would give British Airways unlimited access to U.S. markets while existing agreements between the United States and Britain prevent them from getting equal access to British markets.

"We are calling on our government to demand no less than total and effective liberalization of the U.S.-U.K. aviation relationship as a precondition for the approval of any significant investment by USAir by British Airways," said Ronald W. Allen, chairman and chief executive officer of Delta Airlines.

"We object to this deal because it would leave U.S. carriers at a distinct and potentially debilitating competitive disadvantage, threatening jobs and survival." he said.

"We urge the Congress to get involved and see that competition so vital to the U.S. airline industry and the U.S. economy is not undermined by a sell-off of the U.S. aviation market and a sell-out of U.S. interests," Allen said.

USAir President Seth Schofield responded that the pending deal "fully meets the letter of the law, will help protect 47,000 USAir jobs and will boost U.S. aircraft manufacturers from whom the airline has ordered more than 100 aircraft.

"USAir and its 47,000 employees should not be used as a pawn by the Big 3 (United, American and Delta) to advance their own agendas," Schofield said in a statement. "Concerns about access to foreign markets should be pursued through appropriate government channels without linkage."

Schofield described the arrangement as an alliance, not a merger, and said USAir "will remain U.S.-owned and controlled."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Here's how to gradually roll over a 401K

Q: I have $51,000 in a 401(k) retirement plan where I work. Due to the cost of operating the plan, my employer is dropping it and I will receive the $51,000.

I would like to roll this money over into a mutual fund individual retirement account. But I realize doing that in a lump sum, without dollar cost averaging, would be rather risky.

What are my options?

Doyle

A: Investing a large chunk of money in one shot, rather than doing it gradually, always increases your risk. That is especially true with an investment whose value can fluctuate, as is the case with shares of most mutual funds.

It is far wiser to follow the time-tested dollar cost averaging method of investing a fixed amount of money at regular intervals. That way, you get fewer shares when prices are high and more shares when prices are low. You don't get ulcers trying to outguess the market and you eliminate worries about "getting in at the high."

You can accomplish what you have in mind easily enough.

Pick a mutual fund organization that manages a group of funds, including a money market mutual fund and a fund in which you want to invest for the long haul. Put the entire lump-sum distribution from the 401(k) plan into a rollover IRA with that fund group. Do it within 60 days after receiving the $51,000 check, to keep that money tax deferred.

Initially, invest the $51,000 in that group's money market mutual fund. Unlike other types of mutual funds, share values of money market funds remains constant at $1. So, you will have no fear of loss while your nest egg is in that fund.

Then, gradually shift money, say, at $1,000 or $2,000 per month, into the fund you have chosen as a long-term investment.

Because you will be moving money from one fund to another within the same IRA, those transfers will not be rollovers. You will not run afoul of the regulation saying an IRA rollover can be done only once a year.

Q: I read about a new federal law imposing 20 percent income tax withholding on lump-sum distributions from pensions and other retirement plans.

I will receive a check for a large amount as a result of my employer terminating our retirement plan. Must 20 percent of my money go right to the Internal Revenue Service?

A: No. That 20 percent tax withholding will be imposed only on lump-sum retirement plan distributions made directly to employees who retire, are laid off or change jobs. It will not apply in situations such as yours. You can opt not to have the tax withheld.

Furthermore, that rule will not become effective until Jan. 1. Even then, if the withholding would apply to you, you could duck it by having your employer send the lump-sum distribution directly to a rollover IRA.

Q: I was saving $6,000 per year in pretax dollars in a 401(k) plan, which has been terminated. Is there any hope I can approach those benefits with a different retirement plan?

A: Not much. Because you no longer are an active participant in a qualified retirement plan, you can put $2,000 a year of tax-deductible dollars into an IRA. But that's a long way from the $6,000 you sheltered annually in the 401(k).

Congress, in its constant fiddling with the Internal Revenue Code, is considering increasing IRA contribution limits to adjust for inflation. When and if that will be enacted into law is anybody's guess.

It's most doubtful IRAs will ever match 401(k)s as far as tax shelters and other investor advantages are concerned.
