Clements' drilling firm sued for $42 million

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — A Dallas oil drilling firm headed by Texas Republican gubernatorial candidate William Clements has been named in a $42 million lawsuit filed by an Iowa millionaire who claims he was swindled out of $16.9 million in a Persian Gulf oil deal.

A copyright story in today's San Diego Union says Iowa businessman Roy J. Carver's suit contends that in late 1975, acting on advice from an executive of Clements' SEDCO Inc. drilling firm, he paid a "commission" to Ali Jaidah, then oil minister of the Persian Gulf emirate of Qatar, for permission to drill for oil off the Qatar coast.

Clements, a former U.S. undersecretary of defense, is in a tight race with Texas Attorney General John Hill for Texas governor.

SEDCO lawyers, according to the Union story, sought and obtained a delay in the deadline for filing a reply to the suit until Nov. 15 — one week after Tuesday's election.

SEDCO President B. Gill Clements, son of the gubernatorial candidate, told the Union his father, then serving as undersecretary of defense in Washington, had no active involvement in SEDCO activities during the period of the Qatar project. The elder Clements, his son said, relinquished his corporate post when he went to Washington, although he retained ownership of $100 million in SEDCO stock.

B. Gill Clements denied that the firm played any part in the payment of Carver's alleged commission to Jaidah. Such commissions were not specifically outlawed by Congress until 1977.

Although Carver's suit does not specify the amount of the alleged bribe to Jaidah, the Union reports it was told it was $1.5 million, and that the money was deposited in the Swiss bank account of a Jaidah relative.

Efforts to reach Jaidah at OPEC headquarters in Vienna were unsuccessful as of late Thursday and a spokesman at the Qatar embassy in Washington, D.C., said Qatar officials would respond only to written inquires about the alleged payment.

Carver's suit was filed July 20 in federal court in Davenport, Iowa. Details in it outline a complicated scheme by which Carver contends he was victimized.

Carver, who amassed a $250 million fortune with his Iowa-based Bandag tire recapping company, claims in the suit he was pursuaded to become

MidTran is described as 'venture in faith'

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
R-T Staff Writer

MidTran "is a venture in faith," Board President John Ingram said Thursday night during a public hearing in City Hall on the project.

Purpose of the hearing was to explain the objectives and plans of MidTran, a non-profit corporation put together to provide a public transportation system for Midland, and to solicit comments from the public.

Also available to answer questions were John Schafer, transportation coordinator for MidTran, and Paul Forney, a representative of General Motors who has worked on the plan from the beginning.

The board of directors for the public transportation system will submit an application for a $160,000 grant from the Urban Mass Transportation Administratin.

Those funds will be used to initiate the system with the purchase of seven vans, two wheelchair lifts and a radio system, Schafer said.

Transportation will be provided on two bases: "demand responsive" and subscription.

Demand responsive will involve picking up and delivering people door to door for individual trips. Schafer said a GM study showed this type of service would best meet the needs of Midland.

With subscription service, employees could contract with MidTran for transportation to and from work.

Hours of operation for the system tentatively have been set for 6:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Rates would be 75 cents per person each way.

Trial act no problem

By MARK VOGLER
R-T Staff Writer

Midland County District Attorney Vern Martin isn't worried about any criminal cases being thrown out the window on account of the newly instituted Speedy Trial Act.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals recently ruled that, beginning July 1, defendants charged with crimes should be brought to trial within a 120-day period or have their cases dismissed.

The court also ruled the act could not be applied to cases where indictments were returned before July 1, the date the law went into effect.

Some district attorneys throughout the state find themselves swamped with heavy case loads and in a position to lose some of their cases because of the law. However, Martin said the act is little cause for consternation in Midland County.

"None of our cases are in jeopardy because of the Speedy Trial Act. I'm feeling about as good about the situation as one could," Martin said in an interview Wednesday.

"As it stands right now, as far as bringing cases to trial, we're in a position to bring new cases to trial within 30 days."

Regulator not producer

"We do not drill oil wells. We simply regulate those who do," says Railroad Commissioner John Poerner.

That's his way of saying he doesn't believe it's necessary to have an oilman on the commission.

Poerner, who was appointed to the commission by Gov. Dolph Briscoe, is seeking election to a two-year unexpired term. His Republican opponent is Midland oilman Jim Lacy.

The Democratic nominee earned his spot on the ballot after a hard-fought primary campaign, which ended with Poerner's victory over long-time Texas politician Jerry Sadler in a runoff election.

The former owner of a land survey company, Poerner served six years in the Legislature and three years on Briscoe's staff before taking his commission seat.

Poerner contends his experience is broad, with knowledge of oil and gas, cations, that is, he knows how to drill an oil well," but doesn't know much about the commission.

With the energy shortage, he suggested, Lacy would better serve the public by continuing to drill oil wells.

Poerner also has suggested Lacy may fall victim to a conflict of interests or become an industry advocate at the expense of Texas consumers.

During the coming year, Poerner

Good for everybody

"Generally, what I'm saying is what's good for the producer is going to be good for the consumer."

And as a producer of oil and natural gas, Midlander James Lacy thinks he should be on the Railroad Commission.

In spite of its name, the commission regulates oil and gas industries, as well as transportation.

Lacy is the Republican candidate running for an unexpired four-year term against appointed incumbent John Poerner.

Lacy contends consumers benefit from the maximum possible supply, and, thus, whatever stimulates producers to find more of the fossil fuels ultimately benefits the consumer.

Further, a healthy energy business is important to state government, Lacy said. The oil and gas industry

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

This is the weekend for gluttons and mild-mannered festive-goers with good taste.

It's also for beer-bellies who devour chili or scrumptious menudo heavy on the tripe.

One is for charity, good will, a good time and the parishoners in St. Lawrence. German sausage, barbecued brisket, slaw, potatoes and beans will be the made-in-St. Lawrence fare.

The other is for profit, rollicking, and for the coffers of Glenn Pepper and the concessioners at Terlingua.

The two, a day and 200 crow miles apart resemble each other about like a dove resembles a raven. At least, that's the way it's supposed to be.

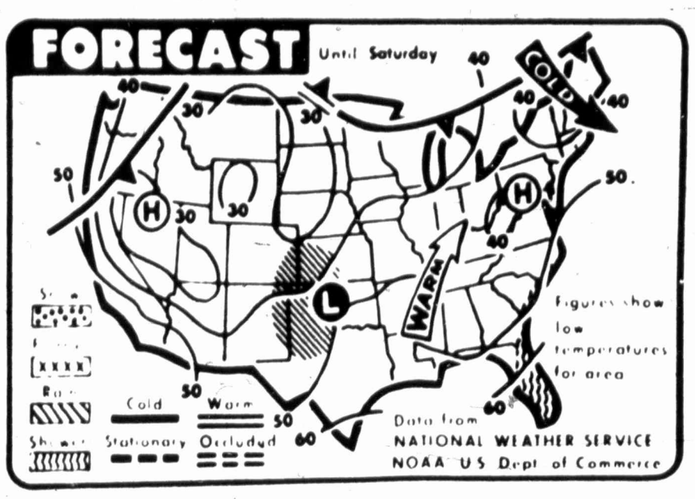

The Saturday bash (¡Arriba!), which really begins tonight and carries into Sunday, is the 12th annual Terlingua World Championship Chili Cook-off.

But it's not really at Terlingua. Paul Vonn, who used to host the grand-size beer bust at Terlingua proper, ran off the chili-fans after his land at the old ghost mining town was pitifully littered.

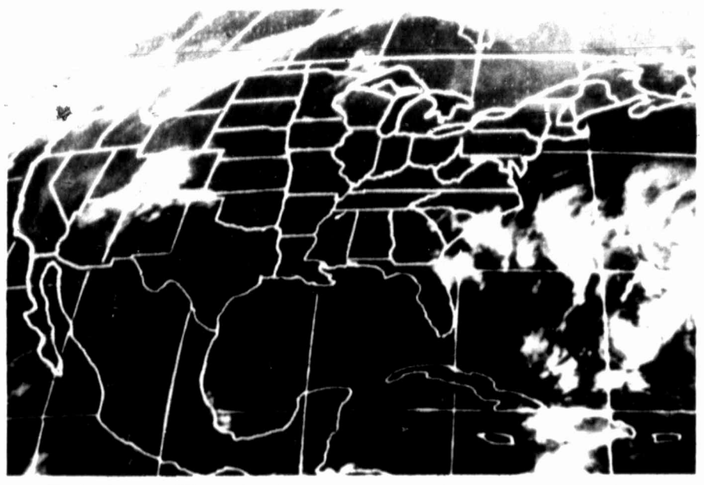

The next year, 1977, Pepper, a river, trail and off-beat guide and rancher, got the "contract" to host the cook-off and brought it to his Villa de la Mina just down the road from Terlingua town, off Texas 170 about

Higher interest to limit inflation: Krueger

Increased interest rates will be "painful," but should help control inflation, said Democratic Senate candidate Bob Krueger in Midland Thursday.

Krueger said action announced Wednesday by the Federal Reserve Bank to raise the discount rate, the rate at which the Fed loans money to banks, by a full percent will result in higher interest rates because of a tighter money supply.

Its long-term effect, said the congressman from New Braunfels, should be to help close the gap between increases in productivity and increases in the money supply. That, in turn, should help stem inflation, he said.

The candidate, who is running

against Republican incumbent Sen. John Tower, praised President Carter's reliance on voluntary rather than mandatory wage and price controls.

The president's plan for using the voluntary system "has a chance of working" if people will cooperate, he said.

Tower often has called for a delay in scheduled minimum wage increases as a means to curb inflation. Krueger said he expects Congress to look closely at the increases.

"Minimum wage is not an ideal tool for addressing the needs of the people at the end ofEthe economic scale, but i is a tool," he said.

The congressman said he thinks the minimum wage scale should be lower for youths under 18. Such a step would increase job opportunities for teenagers, he said.

Concerning the progress of his Senate campaign, Krueger said he is "extremely pleased" with available poll results, which, he claimed, show him "at worst tied," and up to 6 percentage points ahead of Tower.

Because Tower has been in office 18 years, said Krueger, it will be more difficult for the Republican to sway voters this late in the campaign.

"It's the problem of the DeSoto versus the Mustang," the Democrat said, because people are more familiar with the old and less likely to be won over.

He called Tower "a desperate man" and said he expects "a new charge every day" from the incumbent.

"But just remember, there are only four more days," he said.

Whalen Lake 'hot item' for Poerner, Lacy

By MARK VOGLER
R-T Staff Writer

ANDREWS — Whalen Lake, an unattractive playa lake just 15 miles west of here, has become a "hot item" lately in the campaign rhetoric of two men opposing each other for a seat on the Texas Railroad Commission.

Railroad Commissioner John Poerner, a Democratic appointee who is running for an unexpired term, said he believes he has taken an unpopular position politically and doesn't expect to win many votes from his hard line stand against oil companies he believes are polluting Whalen Lake.

Meanwhile, Poerner's opponent, Midland oilman and Republican Jim Lacy, said he thinks the Whalen Lake issue smacks of politics on the part of Poerner.

Lacy in particular has branded as "politically motivated" Poerner's criticisms leveled last month at the Railroad Commission's Midland field office. Poerner had charged the local office has been lax in enforcement of pollution regulations governing oil companies.

Poerner also said there were pollution problems at Whalen Lake, just days after the Railroad Commission had said in published reports companies disposing brine at the lake were conforming with commission regulations.

Poerner said his staff had investigated quietly the Whalen Lake situation four months ago after he received reports dumping practices were adversely affecting ground water and migratory waterfowl.

He later said he was convinced a serious problem did exist, then publicly stated he was willing to "camp out" at the Midland office until "problems there clear up."

Lacy said Poerner "is playing politics with the Midland office because it's in my area."

The Midland oilman initially took the position that oil companies were complying with pollution regulations at Whalen Lake and that the local Railroad Commission office was doing "a pretty good job." However, he later altered that to: "Let's wait and see what the Railroad Commission does."

Lacy charged Poerner with "a lack of administrative ability" in criticizing the Railroad Commission office.

"What he (Poerner) did is not a good management practice. You don't criticize your men in public like that," the Republican candidate said.

"If they're not doing their job, you get 'em in your office, close the door and raise hell with them. You chastise them privately. What Poerner did will last with the commission for a long time."

Lacy called Poerner "politically naive" for singling out West Texas as a major problem area for the Railroad Commission, and said "I seriously doubt this is the only area where the commission has problems."

He also attacked Poerner's non-oil industry back ground, and suggested it was a major factor in the commissioner being "easily swayed" by environmentalists.

"I think he has been pushing this thing (Whalen Lake controversy) to some degree for the publicity. But the main reason, I think, is that he doesn't have enough industry background to remain objective," Lacy said.

Poerner said his opponent's charges against him were unfounded and defined the roles of the commissioners as "stewards of the soil" rather than as "working for the oil companies.

"I am not being political in this point, but I have a firm belief that at no time should oil field practices contaminate ground water or endanger the environment. At no time should we say it's worth one barrel of oil to kill 59 birds," Poerner said.

"We can produce oil and gas in this state without harming the environment...This commission is not going to tolerate any further damage to wildlife."

October building permits up almost $1 million

Building permits for the month of October topped those of a year ago, giving the year's total another good shot in the arm.

The permits totaled $4,415,170 for last month compared to $3,670,713 a year ago. This has boosted the year's total to $77,012,730, way past last year's total at this time of $53,639,271.

New single family residences dominated the building scene last month with $3,449,800 issued in permits. This was a total of 62 permits.

One permit was issued for a duplex at $47,000. Another permit for a quadraplex $90,000 was issued. Two permits for mobile homes totaled $43,500.

New commercial permits only totaled $344,500 for October. This included a sign, $3,500; two retail stores, $122,000; a quick oil change business, $39,000; an office building, $50,000, and two restaurants, $130,000.

There were 41 permits issued for alterations to residences which should cost $287,305, and 12 issued for commercial alterations, $153,065.

The number of permits issued last month was only one more than those issued a year ago, 131 to 130. While the amount of building this year has increased sharply over that of last year, the number of permits is down to 1,398, compared to 1,532 at this time last year.

100 miles south of Alpine.

By way of the winding road, Texas' Chiliville is about 270 miles from Midland.

The antics and utter nonsense going on down there won't be a whole lot different from recent years.

This year's Terlingua crowd, which may out number last year's 2,500, will be exposed to the mountainous, desert wilderness, as well as to the music of The High Cotton Express of San Marcos, Jim Blanton's Flying X Ranch Hands out of Carlsbad, N.M., and The Country Night Riders from Alpine.

By the way, for starters it'll cost $4 tonight to pass through the gate and $3 Saturday.

Now, Terlingua will have fellowship.

And if you want that, plus loads of honest-to-goodness good food, you might truck on down to St. Lawrence this Sunday for the annual St. Lawrence Festival to benefit the St. Lawrence Catholic Church in the farming-ranching community of about 140 families.

St. Lawrence is located about 35 miles southeast of Midland in Glasscock County.

The menu will be the same as usual, but more of it. The tab will be $4 for grow-ups and $2 for the kids.

The feeding starts at 11 a.m. and relents at 2 p.m. for the auction of bales of cotton and other merchandise, donated by businessmen and merchants the farmers and their families trade with. Herb Henderson of Wolfford will be auctioning off the merchandise.

The Bill Henderson country and western band out of Rogers will be playing at the dance that night.

Sausage, the entree at the festival, will be prepared Saturday morning on the Alfred Schwartz farm by about 120 men and their sons.

They'll be making up between 6,000 and 6,500 pounds of the sausage from the meat of about 30 hogs and five head of cattle raised in the community.

Only the good and choice cuts of beef and pork will be put into the sausage, which will be smoked with "live oak right out of deer country" and then boiled in water just before serving time Sunday, said Dennis Fuchs (pronounced "fox"), who is organizing the effort.

A.W. Strube over at Rowena is slaughtering and dressing the swine and cattle. The St. Lawrence menfolk do all the rest.

"Man, as soon as it's made, we're about ready to start selling it," said Fuchs.

"We still cook like the old-timers," Schwartz said.

About a dozen men will get together at the church Saturday night to barbecue about 1,300 pounds of beef brisket.

Earlier Saturday, the womenfolk will cut up 500 pounds of cabbage for the slaw. They'll return early Sunday to finish it and to prepare the beans, potatoes and the rest of the trimmings.

Fuchs is expecting between 3,500 and 4,000 folks from all over to show up for the feast at this community 15 miles southwest of Garden City.

"You better come early," said the Rev. B.J. Binversie, the church's pastor, "because they could be sold out."

The Novemberfest started not long after the 1948-founding of the community, largely by German descendants from Wall and Rowena in the San Angelo area.

"It's getting bigger and better every year," the priest said of the festival.

But there will be something noticeably different this year. No buckets of beer or beer in way will be sold on the church grounds this year.

Last year, "trouble" brewed at the festival after sunset, when "barefoot hippies" and others unwanted, already drinking, showed up.

One man, a farm worker arrested for disorderly conduct, subsequently was shot to death after he allegedly attacked Royce "Booger" Pruit.

So, for the sake of "clearing up" the good name of St. Lawrence, beer won't be available on the church grounds. But free-wheeling folks can bring their own suds to the festival. After all, what's a festival without beer?

"We got taken advantage of last year," noted farmer A.W. Schraeder.

"If they bring it (beer) in, we can't help it," he said. "The law will take care of them (the rowdy ones)."

The festival will be back to normal next year — beer and all — should all go well. It will.

him into service.

In addition to his desire to see an oilman on the commission, which regulates oil and natural gas as well as transportation, he believes he may help the Republican ticket.

And, "There's a certain amount of ego trip involved. You've got to be honest about it."

Lacy credits his wife, Juandelle, with the political know-how in the family. Mrs. Lacy has been actively involved in party politics since 1960 and currently is first vice president of the Texas Federation of Republican Women.

"A lot of people think Juandelle pushed me into running...but that's not true," he said.

Of charges he would be an oil and gas industry advocate, Lacy said that's "partly true." But, he insists, "I would be less influenced by industry people than people that weren't knowledgeable."

Lacy discounts charges by his opponent that his expertise is limited to oil and gas production. Though drilling, production and exploration — all regulated by the commission — form the basis of his primary qualifications, he said, he equals Poerner in the area of transportation.

Lacy also contends he is familiar with the dilemmas caused by strip mining, another commission resposibility. He said he advocates strip mining, with reclamation of the the land.

"You have to have it (reclamation)...We've also got to have the lignite." However, he cautioned, reclaimation will raise the cost. "I'm not an expert (on strip mining), but I'm not totally uneducated in it, either."

And, said Lacy, "I have better business sense" than Poerner. The Republican said Poerner was a small businessman, but Lacy has run large companies.

Of Poerner's charges Lacy would face conflict of interest if elected to the commission, the oilman said the issue has been "totally blown out of proportion...What you're talking about is personal integrity."

He promised to put his oil interests in a blind trust and disqualify himself on cases involving Adobe Oil and Gas Corp., in which he is still a major stockholder.

Lacy said his involvement in public corporations, which required making disclosure to the Securities and Exchange Commission, makes him aware of potential conflicts so he can avoid them.

Lacy links his chances for victory to those of Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements.

"If Bill runs well, I'm going to have a chance. If he doesn't, I won't have a chance."

Poerner against transportation of nuclear wastes through Texas said, the state will be responsible for administering applicable provisions of the federal energy bill.

He promised to work to avoid a regulation overload for producers and to keep the administrative cost from being "burdensome."

The commissioner said he hopes a suit to overturn the intrastate gas regulation provisions will be successful.

But, if not, the commission must do the best it can to enforce the law to prevent the federal government from coming in and doing it, he added.

Texas also can have a role, Poerner believes, in setting up the enforcement regulations. Since Texas produces 40 percent of domestic natural gas, the government will look to the commission for help in setting up guidelines.

"They're just bureaucrats," he said. "We're trying to guide them in the right direction."

During the next few years, numerous transportation issues will face the commission, also, Poerner said.

One of these is transportation of nuclear waste materials. "We do not want those materials transported through our state. If the federal government insists on it, we want certain safeguards," he said.

But, he continued, in the next two years there will be two nuclear power plants in Texas, and some means will have to be found "to dispose of it (waste) in our own state."

Because of his background in land surveying, Poerner has a special interest in preparing better maps of the state. He said he hopes to use combined efforts of the Highway Department, Water Resources Commission, General Land Office, Railroad Commission and other agencies which need maps.

The "hardhat of the commission" said currently available maps won't even be adequate to administer the energy bill.

Poerner said one of the primary responsibilities of the commission is to balance the interests of producers and consumers — to hold down utility costs while encouraging oil and gas exploration.

That, he said, is a "daily challenge."

The commissioner said he enjoys campaigning, but the press of official duties limits his time on the hustings.

Poerner's fellow Democratic commissioner, chairman Mack Wallace, will be on the ballot for a full six-year term. He is opposed only by Socialist Worker Party candidate Jana Pellusch.

Stabbing death of trucker being investigated in Odessa

ODESSA — Odessa Police Department officers are investigating the stabbing death here of a 25-year-old Pasadena truck driver.

The body of Jimmy Wayne Keen was discovered early Thursday in a motel located two miles east of here off U.S. Highway 80.

Captain Jack Fillyaw, chief of the Detective Division, said the man had at least nine stab wounds to his chest.

A fellow employee of Universal Metals and Machines Company of Odessa and Houston found the body in a room of the Hospitality Lodge and called police shortly after 9:30 a.m., Fillyaw said.

Keen had brought a load of machinery to Odessa and was supposed to have unloaded the equipment locally, said Fillyaw.

According to Fillyaw, the other employee checked on Keen when he did not deliver the machinery as scheduled.

Peace Justice Virgil Lumpee pronounced Keen dead late Thursday morning and ordered an autopsy.

Capt. Fillyaw said early today the autopsy results are pending.

Jewelry, watches stolen from home

Viola Natividad of the 400 block of East Spruce Avenue told Midland police late Thursday afternoon that $680 worth of personal property was stolen from her residence.

Police said they were told the possessions included jewelry and watches. Authorities indicated no forced entry to the home was discovered.

Some of the items were removed from a jewelry box in a bedroom, according to officers.

Ugandans tighten grip on bridge

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Invading Ugandan forces were reported tightening their grip on the strategic Taka Bridge in northern Tanzania.

The Ugandans took the Kagera River span Thursday, Western diplomatic sources said. The bridge provides the region's best access to Uganda.

Military observers said Ugandan President Idi Amin seized it to thwart any possible Tanzanian thrust into his nation.

GOP candidate Bush under fire from Hance camp

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
R-T Staff Writer

Republican candidate George W. Bush of Midland Thursday came under fire from a supporter of his opponent's campaign for a September event which involved free beer for Texas Tech University students.

Bush faces Kent Hance, a Lubbock attorney and state senator, in a hard-fought race for the 19th Congressional District seat to be decided Tuesday.

Criticizing Bush and his campaign was a letter mailed to area Church of Christ members in the distric.

The letter questioned Bush's actions in connection with an advertised "bash." Tech students reportedly were invited to a Lubbock residence for "free beer and music."

Author of the letter is George Thompson III, one of Hance's law partners. Prompting the letter, according to its writer, was a "Bush Bash" advertisement in the school's paper, The University Daily.

Bush, campaigning in Lubbock, said Thursday there was an effort in early September to get Tech students interested in his candidacy.

"But I didn't know anything about the advertising that was put in the newspaper. A young Tech student did that," the Midland independent oil man said Thursday.

"This is the only place where we served beer. It is an isolated incident," Bush replied.

"The letter implies that there was more than one event and that is not true. It also implies we have used vast sums of money for the alcohol and that is not true."

In the letter , Thompson wrote: "Kent's opponent, young Mr. Bush, apparently is using tactics to secure votes which do not indicate the same high character. Mr. Bush has used some of his vast sums of money in an attempt, evidently, to persuade young college students to vote for and support him by offering free alcohol to them."

Bush said he was "upset at the last minute tactics and I feel it was uncalled for and unfair.

"His (Hance's) campaign has been funny. First he attacked my family, then my background and now my morals," Bush said.

election 78

"Plenty of people know of my character," he continued.

"We have people in my campaign of all different walks of life and religions and frankly, they are upset that a guy would do this at the last minute."

According to the Republican candidate, the authorization of the Hance campaign was listed at the bottom of the letter.

When questioned about the "Bush Bash," Hance told a Lubbock newspaper, "Maybe it's a cool thing to do at Harvard or Yale."

Bush, who has degrees from both schools, said Thursday: "That is harking back to my education. He won't campaign on the issues and that's going to hurt him.

"If any more low blows do come through (from Hance), I hope the people will tell him in the polls they are tired of this."

Hance, who was in Midland Thursday morning for a press conference, made no mention the letter. Reports of the letter appeared in print for the first time early Thursday.

Hance did say Thursday that Bush lost Midland supporters by moving his campaign to Lubbock after the June runoff.

"Moving my campaign to Lubbock gained supporters," Bush said in answer to Hance's statement.

"People realize we had to do that to win. People there (in Midland) know me, know my energy background and will turn out for us."

Few Americans remain in Rhodesia's bush war

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Desertions, deaths and doubts about the future are thinning the ranks of Americans fighting with Rhodesian forces against black nationalist guerrillas.

"The only ones left are the hard-core professionals," says an American major, who for three years has commanded a unit of black troops. "The opportunists, the dewey-eyed adventurers and the riff-raff have gone back home."

Rhodesians were reminded of the role of Americans in the six-year-old war by last weekend's routine communique containing the latest deaths in the conflict.

It included trooper Joseph Patrick Byrne, 29, from Kearny, N.J. As usual, the military command didn't say where, how or when he died.

He was the latest of an estimated 10 Americans to have died in Rhodesia since the guerrillas, seeking to topple the government, started their war in late 1972.

Since 1972, some 300 Americans, most of them Vietnam veterans, have fought with the Rhodesian forces as volunteers or national servicemen.

Scornful of the term mercenary, the regulars regard themselves as adopted Rhodesians serving their country's armed forces on the same pay and conditions — no more than $700 monthly — as other Rhodesians.

Americans doing duty as national servicemen spend six months a year in uniform as do all able-bodied white, Asian and mixed-race males here between the ages of 18 and 38. They see their periodic call-ups as a patriotic duty.

But with the escalation of the war, dim hopes for an early peace and the inevitability of black rule in the next few months, most of the Americans have packed their bags and gone home.

Americans remaining, who refuse to be identified, estimate no more than 50 of their countrymen have stayed on to fight.

"There were a lot of big mouths who came here filled with the glamor of the mercenary label," said the major, a former Green Beret officer in Vietnam who has signed on for another seven-year hitch with the Rhodesian army.

"We were glad to see the last of them. What this army needs is the professional and that's what it now has."

An undisclosed number of Americans and other foreigners deserted, often slipping into neighboring Botswana on the same trails used by the guerrillas they came to fight.

Others, wounded by landmines, shrapnel or gunfire, are maimed for life.

"I can understand these guys volunteering for a war in which the Yanks are involved," remarked a Rhodesian army officer. "But there's got to be a lot of grit in a bloke who will come here to fight our dirty war for little money and a lot of risks."

Those who died under the hot African sun include Cpl. John Coey, 22, a medical orderly from Hide-A-Way Hills, Ohio, the first American slain in the conflict. He died in a clash with guerrillas in mid-1975.

'Rough times ahead'

Dr. John J. McKetta, noted University of Texas chemical engineering professor, says there are rough times ahead in America's energy picture.

He is not at all optimistic about the situation, believing that the nation may not survive the rough times unless it changes its production and consumption habits.

Dr. McKetta, who is well and favorably known in this section of West Texas, is especially well-versed on the subject of energy. His observations merit serious consideration.

Speaking before the North American Society of Corporate Planning Inc. at Dallas early this week, Dr. McKetta said Americans will have to take some drastic steps in a desperate attempt to survive the crisis.

He particularly was critical of politicians who say that the United States can become energy self-sufficient by 1985. "We are not going to make it," he said.

The professor also lashed out against environmentalists. "You can't discuss the energy problem without discussing the environment," the former five-year member of the National Air Quality Board commented.

There are people who want ultra clean air and water, he said, adding "these people have to be shut up."

"I get more hydrocarbons out of my grass than out of my car," he added.

Instead of present environmental protection regulations, the professor would much prefer to see standards which protect the environment while allowing energy development with "reasonable concentrations" of pollutions.

This really makes sense, and it would be well for the powers that be to heed his recommendations. We agree wholeheartedly with McKetta in his firm belief that the nation certainly does not need more government regulations for nuclear power plants. The big need right now is for fewer regulations and more nuclear plants.

There is no doubt the energy problem is a crisis because of the great demands the United States has for energy. McKetta says it is this great demand which calls for a great deal of conservation. And this isn't going to be easy.

In order to cut U.S. energy consumption by 10 percent by 1985 — and avoid rationing — McKetta proposes a partnership in which citizens and government would join together to save energy.

The public, according to McKetta, needs to;

- Stop using auto air conditioners, thus saving two to three miles per gallon.
- Do not use heaters or air conditioners in the home when temperatures are between 60 and 80 degrees.
- Do not use clothes dryers.
- Ban escalators. The professor noted particularly the energy wasted by escalators which operate around the clock.
- Use carpools. McKetta says three passengers to a car makes the automobile the most efficient means of transportation.
- Drive 55 miles per hour and use re-refined motor oil for lubricating auto engines.
- Do not build any buildings in which the windows cannot be opened.
- Raise the legal driving age to 18 years and eliminate weekend driving.

In turn, McKetta says the government should:

- Stop forced busing of school children.
- Eliminate catalytic converters from automobiles, except in the Los Angeles Basin.
- Change Interstate Commerce Commission regulations which require trucks to "deadhead" (return from trips with no load).
- Change environmental laws to reasonable levels.
- Triple coal production and the means to transport coal by 1985.
- Build 1,000 nuclear power plants.

Now you know what Dr. McKetta means when he refers to "drastic steps" Americans will have, to take in meeting the energy challenge.

Somoza's survival appears shaky

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Over the past decade, Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza — whose family was put in power by the United States 46 years ago — has survived riots, general strikes and even an earthquake that virtually destroyed the capital city of Managua.

He recently survived a severe political earthquake as well: a brief armed rebellion and accompanying general strike that, for a time, threatened to depose him. He put down the popular uprising with typical cold-blooded ruthlessness, but the aftershocks continue to shake his regime to its foundations.

The Nicaraguan economy, which provides the base for Somoza's vast wealth and power, is in shambles. Sales tax collections are 10 percent of normal; customs collections are a third of what they should be. Some of the cotton and coffee crops, essential to Nicaragua's economic survival, were destroyed in the recent fighting. Those that remain will have to be harvested under the protective guns of the National Guard.

Even more ominous for the Nicaraguan freebooter perhaps, is the threat posed by a report prepared by investigators for the human rights commission of the Organization of American States. When it is released it may well strip Somoza of what little international support he still retains.

The commission's final report is still secret. But with the assistance of Larry Birns, director of the Council on Hemispheric Affairs, plus other sources in Nicaragua, we have ferreted out the major conclusions. They will make it difficult for President Carter, the self-proclaimed champion of human rights, to continue the all-important U.S. support for Somoza.

Here are some of the findings:

— During the September civil war, Nicaraguan officials routinely tortured political prisoners and summarily executed street fighters and suspected rebel sympathizers in the city of Leon.

— The recent rebellion claimed between 2,000 and 2,500 lives; only 52 of those killed were National Guardsmen.

— A bloody siege of the city of Esteli was led by the dictator's son, Anastasio III. The city was virtually destroyed, and most civil leaders who did not flee for their lives were either killed or thrown in jail. Somoza's son, incidentally, was promoted to lieutenant colonel for his "heroic action" in the conflict.

— At least 500, probably thousands, of Somoza opponents are languishing in jails all over Nicaragua. This figure does not include hundreds who were classified as "common" criminals rather than "political" prisoners.

Footnote: Our reporter, Bob Sherman, recently returned from an investigative trip to Central America. His reports on the situation in Nicaragua will be published in a series of future columns.

FORSAKEN WIZARD: Martin Kaiser is an electronics wizard who for years was the federal government's major supplier of bugging and de-bugging equipment.

But after he blew the whistle on shady practices that were costing the FBI thousands of dollars in overpriced equipment, his sales to Uncle Sam dried up and blew away.

Even worse, the FBI expressed its gratitude for the money Kaiser saved the agency by instigating criminal and civil suits that may ruin him.

Kaiser made his first government sale in 1967, and his merchandise was so highly regarded that his customers soon included virtually every federal intelligence agency. At one point, his annual sales to the feds totaled $150,000.

But in 1975, Kaiser testified before the House Select Committee on Intelligence that the United States Recording Company, the middleman between Kaiser and the FBI, was marking up his equipment as much as 238 percent. The General Accounting Office confirmed the ripoff.

Disclosure of the mark-ups evidently embarrassed FBI officials who had sanctioned the arrangement. Kaiser was visited by two G-men who tried to get him to change his story. He refused, and, within a year, Kaiser's sales to federal agencies had dropped to almost zero.

He was told by two members of an interagency technical committee that at the FBI's urging, no intelligence agencies would buy from him. A highly placed Army intelligence official told Kaiser he was "taboo" in the spy community.

Then, last December, Kaiser was included in a criminal case against two North Carolina bank officials, who had used some of his equipment to bug FBI agents who were interviewing bank employees. Ironically, the bugging device which Kaiser supplied to the bank officials was detected by a de-bugging device the FBI had purchased from Kaiser.

The bank officials pleaded guilty. Kaiser was found not guilty, but his legal costs amounted to more than $80,000.

That was not the end of it. Although the FBI agents were on official business when they were bugged, they are now preparing a multimillion-dollar civil suit against Kaiser and the bank officials for "great humiliation" and injury to their professional and private reputations.

The FBI maintains there is nothing in the anti-bugging statutes that prevents someone who is bugged in the course of official business from suing as a private individual.

CHARLEY REESE

General's ghost critiques Vietnam war for columnist

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

Charley Reese

ORLANDO, Fla. — I met the ghost of Gen. Carl von Clausewitz the other night. He was jogging in my neighborhood. You know what physical fitness buffs those Prussians are.

Anyway, I asked the general, since he is acknowledged by everyone except the National Security Council to be one of the world's most profound military thinkers, if he would critique the Vietnam War.

I explained that it was now fashionable for everyone, from aging flower chilren to former commanders, to give the Vietnam War the old Monday morning quarterback routine.

Surprisingly, for such a stern man, General von Clausewitz agreed. I think really he was a little pooped and wanted an excuse to pause for a moment in the moonlight.

The first thing the old general said was that we had failed to accomplish all three of the main objects of war: (1) to conquer and destroy the armed power of the enemy; (2) to take possession of his material and other sources of strength, and (3) to gain public opinion.

In explaining why, he quoted the words he wrote to the Prussian crown prince, Frederick William:

"The first and most important rule to observe in order to accomplish these purposes is to use our entire forces with the utmost energy. Any moderation shown would leave us short of our aim."

You mean, I injected, that the policy of gradual escalation was wrong? He nodded and continued:

"Even with everything in our favor, we should be unwise not to make the greatest effort in order to make the result perfectly certain. Suppose the country suffers from this, no lasting disadvantage will arise; for the greater the effort, the sooner will suffering cease."

In the same vein, von Clausewitz added, "The third rule is never to waste time. Unless important advantages are to be gained from hesitation, it is necessary to set to work at once. By this speed, a hundred enemy measures are nipped in the bud, and public opinion is won most rapidly."

Well, I commented, we certainly dragged it out and we certainly never used our full power.

The general smiled sympathetically. The toughest thing, he said, for a leader to do is to remain true to his original principles because wars never work out in practice the way they do in theory.

"The minute we begin carrying out our decision, a thousand doubts arise about the dangers which might develop if we have been seriously mistaken in our plan. A feeling of uneasiness, which often takes hold of a person about to perform something great, will take possession of us, and from this uneasiness to indecision, and from there to half measures are small, scarcely discernible steps."

You mean it's easy to get cold feet, I said. He nodded and then listed some of the factors that can chill a commander's toes: (1) troops and field commanders will tend to complain of insurmountable obstacles; (2) enemy strength will tend to be exaggerated, and (3) we will have tended to overestimate our own strength so there is an initial shock when our own forces don't meet our expectations.

To steel yourself against these factors requires great determination and faith, he said. "Be audacious and cunning in your plans, firm and persevering in their execution."

I bid the older soldier farewell as he trotted off into the shadows in perfect cadence. I couldn't help but regret that we had been stuck with Robert McNamara instead of von Clausewitz when we decided to go to war.

As I strolled toward the house, I was also uneasy with the knowledge that the Russians are appreciative students of von Clausewitz while our own civilian gurus have pronounced him out of date.

It would seem strange to him that military strategy and planning are in the hands of civilian professors who are more arrogant than intelligent and he would have been shocked out of his mind by the anecdote told me by another general, Lew Walt, who has more combat experience than any other living Marine.

When General Walt told one of McNamara's 28-year-old civilian Ph.D's that the "new idea" he had, had already been tried 20 years earlier on the battlefield and found not to work, the youngster replied, "We're not interested in your battlefield experiences."

INSIDE REPORT:

Menahem Begin-Jimmy Carter shootout in the making

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

Evans

Novak

WASHINGTON — Israel's display of anger at President Carter directly results from top-secret American replies to questions by King Hussein of Jordan about the future of Jewish settlements on the West Bank.

These answers, published here for the first time, hint that President Carter expects Israeli inhabitants of the settlements to start clearing out of Arab territory at the end of the five-year transitional period. During that period, Israel, Jordan, Egypt and the Palestinians are pledged to restore "the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people," consistent with Israeli security.

In answer to the king's question about "the status" of Israeli settlers — "Will there be any (settlements) after the end" of the five-year transition? he asked — the U.S. replied as follows:

"Whatever number that might remain beyond the transitional period ...would presumably be agreed to in the negotiations concerning the final status of the West Bank and Gaza."

Those words infuriated the Israeli government, and particularly Prime Minister Menahem Begin, when the secret U.S. answers to Hussein were shown to the Israeli government on Oct. 19 and discussed with Begin by Assistant Secretary of State Harold Saunders the next day. To demonstrate Israel's defiance of President Carter for implying to Hussein and the Palestinians that the settlements will become vestigial remnants, Begin went public with his long-nourished plan to "thicken" the settlements.

Mr. Carter's response was equally angry. He took Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's draft of a presidential protest letter to be sent to Begin "and doubled it in spades" before cabling it to Begin.

Thus the settlements question, on which Mr. Carter feels he has been betrayed more than once by Begin, returned to haunt his Mideast peace hopes. Equally forbidding is this suspicion known to be held by the president: that Begin's settlements offensive stemmed less from demands by his hard-line Likud coalition than from his strategy to throw up barricades to prevent King Hussein and the Palestinians from joining the peace talks.

Begin's fury at the U.S. answers to King Hussein's 14 questions about the Camp David agreement go beyond the settlements issue. For example, Hussein asked: "What is the U.S. position" on whether the self-governing authority to be created on the West Bank includes East Jerusalem "both in terms of territory and people?"

"The U.S. will support proposals," said the U.S. repsonse, "that would permit Arab inhabitants of East Jerusalem who are not Israeli citizens" to vote in the election leading to self-rule. Further, these Jerusalem Palestinians could share "in the work of the self-governing authority itself."

There is nothing startling in this statement of American policy on occupied East Jerusalem. Ever since the 1967 war, the U.S. has denied Israel's legal power to absorb East Jerusalem. The U.S. has never recognized Jerusalem as Israel's capital.

But the political impact of the U.S. answers to Hussein is linked in Begin's mind to Israel's magnanimous agreement to withdraw from all its settlements in the Egyptian Sinai. To Israel, the clear intent of the answers to Hussein is to encourage Arab hopes that the West Bank settlements are also doomed.

Israel's counterattack raised the threat of delay in the negotiations for a peace treaty between Israel and Egypt, despite the coincidence of a Nobel peace prize for both Begin and President Anwar Sadat. Beyond that, the Carter-Begin shootout risks future U.S. retaliation against Israel, which is seeking billions of dollars from the shrinking U.S. budget.

"Begin is slapping Carter in the face with one hand and reaching for Carter's wallet with the other," one administration official said privately. He predicted the aroused president might cut "a cool billion" from the bill Israel is now preparing for the U.S. to finance the Israeli-Egyptian treaty.

Such passions will cool. What will not change is Mr. Carter's Camp David pledge to be a "full partner" in the peace game. That was Hussein's first question. The U.S. replied that it would use its "full influence" to get a West Bank settlement and that "President Carter will continue to take an active personal part in the negotiations."

If Israel really is trying to scuttle the West Bank talks and get a separate peace with Egypt, as the White House suspects, those words brought no comfort to Prime Minister Begin.

zens, the cost would drop to 35 cents per person.

Under the demand responsive system, the person wanting to use it would be required to make arrangements the day before. Peak time for that program would be from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., after subscription riders have been taken to work.

"If someone would call and say they would want to be taken somewhere then (immediately), we would tell them to call a cab," Ingram said.

Schafer said the vans would include modifications for handicapped and senior citizens, including the wheelchair lifts and safety tie-downs.

Ingram emphasized the project must "prove itself dependable. If we all agree to work together and to cooperate with every agency, it will succeed. If there are any diversionary efforts, it (MidTran) probably will not succeed.

"We have concurred with the Midland City Council if MidTran has not been able to prove dependable and successful (within a year), it will be discontinued," he added.

The year refers to a funding year, according to Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr.

Times for operation of the system may be changed according to the demand, Ingram said in answer to a question.

"We will be flexible," he said. "Whether we will have a dispatcher or telephone-answering service around the clock is under question now."

Louis Hochman told the MidTran board he feels there is a need for public transportation after 6:30 p.m., and Ingram answered to the effect that vans will be run on the basis of need.

Schafer added, "We would operate if economically feasible. It is possible we could contract with a cab company for after-hours and weekends."

Another Midlander pointed out that senior citizens and handicapped persons already receive free rides from Casa de Amigos and Midland College.

Ingram replied: "There is no free transportation. The agency providing for it has been paying for it. We are negotiating now with the agencies. It is possible we could take over these services at a lesser cost to the agency. Those receiving free rides from the agencies still would not have to pay."

According to a GM study, there should be about 510 passenger trips a day, said Forney. While this number would require eight vans, Ingram said MidTran is planning to buy only seven, so as not to be overly optimistic.

Drivers for the vans will be dealing with elderly and handicapped people, and one woman questioned drivers' ability and planned wage scales for the drivers.

Schafer said all drivers will go through a sensitivity training session to learn to become more aware of elderly and handicapped persons' needs. Wages also should be high enough to retain drivers, he said.

No definite date on the initiation of service was given by any MidTran member.

Probability of rain 70 percent

for the sold-out 8 p.m. Lee game, featuring two undefeated teams, to be held in Midland's Memorial Stadium. Tickets to the game officially have not been available since Wednesday morning.

The likelihood of showers and thunderstorms over the Midland area tonight and Saturday is in the 70 and 60 percent range.

Barring a genuine deluge, however, the game should not be rained out.

"It's one of those in-between type of things. It's possible," a weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport said of rainfall chances.

A possible omen early today consisted of partly cloudy skies over much of the area — from Lamesa to Rankin and from Andrews to Stanton to Big Spring.

The chance of rainfall was in the 20 percent range today, but was to jump to 70 percent tonight and then drop to 60 percent Saturday, said the weatherman.

The only rainfall gauged in Midland this month was at mid-week, when the weather service recorded .02 inch, bringing the year's precipitation total to 14.84 inches.

Today's high temperature reading was expected to be near 70 degrees, and the top reading Saturday should be in the mid-60s. Tonight's low should be near 50. Thursday's high was 74 degrees, and the overnight low this morning was 52.

Southerly winds at 10 to 20 mph today are to shift to southeasterly at 10 to 15 mph hour tonight.

The sun was to set today at 5:58 p.m., and will rise at 7:08 a.m. Saturday.

Long before sunrise this morning, a Rebel flag was flying over Permian's schoolgrounds, but the colors were lowered by irate Panther fans shortly before the sun rose over the rival football cities.

Elsewhere, forecasts called for partly cloudy skies and continued warm temperatures today.

Free sex for policemen probed in New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal grand jury has heard several hours of testimony from the manager of a Canal Street massage parlor where policemen allegedly got free sex.

Ed Gammill, who operated the Magic Touch Massage Parlor, testified for three hours Thursday morning and was called back for further questioning in the afternoon.

WVUE-TV said Gammill was called back after a key witness came forward with new information naming various policemen, police employees, lawyers, criminal sheriff's deputies, a criminal court clerk and others as having gotten free sex from the massage parlor in exchange for favors.

Federal investigators reportedly are looking into allegations of white slavery, racketeering and perjury in connection with the massage parlor, which witnesses say was frequented by numerous policemen.

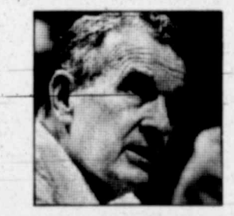

An Orleans Parish grand jury is expected to convene next week, and Gammill is expected to be called to testify.

District Attorney Harry Connick said his office is looking into allegations of malfeasance, bribery and perjury in connection with the Magic Touch.

WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE?

CLEMENTS

Bill Clements:
Is a businessman and manager. He started with nothing and built a successful world-wide drilling company. Because of his outstanding management skills, he was appointed Deputy Secretary of Defense for four years and was responsible for a $125 billion a year budget and 3 million employees. He cut the civilian payroll of that bureaucracy by 85,000 people.

Bill Clements:
Is a conservative. He publicly stands for less government and less federal interference. And for more local control.

Bill Clements:
Is concerned about education. He was Chairman of SMU Board of Governors and head of Defense Dept. Committee on Excellence in Education. He's for "back to basics," competency testing and classroom discipline. He has made no promises to special interest groups.

Bill Clements:
Plans a "Taxpayers' Bill of Rights" to provide for citizen Initiative and Referendum; ban state income taxes, and require a record two-thirds vote of the legislature to pass any tax bill. It would also allow local taxpayers to ratify or reject tax increases by local governments. He will reduce taxes. Not just "freeze" them.

Bill Clements:
Is for complete and immediate natural gas deregulation. And for increased production of all energy sources. He favors expanded research into solar, fusion, biomass and other energy-producing forms. He is against Carter's energy plan which will give the federal government power to allocate Texas' resources.

HILL

John Hill:
Is a professional politician. He first ran for governor ten years ago and has been running ever since. He is a claims lawyer who was appointed to a government position. Later, after becoming State Attorney General, he used that office to further his political career.

John Hill:
Is a liberal. He stands for big government and federally controlled assistance. He supported a proposed new Constitution which would have centralized power in Austin. He has increased the State Attorney General's staff by 300% and its budget by 600% during his term of office.

John Hill:
Received a teachers' union endorsement in return for promising to raise all teachers' salaries regardless of performance. (At a taxpayers' cost of over $1 billion.) He has no education-related experience in his background.

John Hill:
Is for a billion dollar giveaway to increase state government and centralize bureaucracy. During the recent special session, he worked to defeat measures in the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights. He fought against tax relief so he could afford to finance his promised giveaway programs. He will freeze taxes, not reduce them.

John Hill:
Is closely tied to the policies of his national party and its liberal leaders and will support them. No matter what the cost to Texas taxpayers. Is responsible for a liberal takeover of the State Democratic Party in Texas.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, left, embraces President Carter at a hastily called meeting in New York Thursday at an East Side townhouse. Begin announced that "real progress" had been made during two and a half hours of talks with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance on the Israeli-Egyptian talks. (AP Laserphoto)

Begin, Israel seek 25-year loan from U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, urging Americans to invest in his country and in Egypt, says the Mideast nations "will get together to turn the desert into a blossoming garden."

He made the appeal Thursday night, saying that in a meeting with U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, Israel had asked the United States for a 25-year loan to help it pull its forces "from one desert to another" — apparently referring to withdrawal from the Sinai.

Begin spoke at the annual dinner of the New York Council of Churches, which honored the Israeli leader and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat for their peace efforts. Accepting the award for Sadat was Mamdouh Salem, former Egyptian prime minister and now assistant to Sadat.

"We ask for a loan which we will repay to the last penny and we will toil for it for 25 years until we pay back that loan," Begin said. He did not state the amount of the requested loan.

"Egypt, too, will need some help," he said. "So I appeal to all Americans to come to Egypt and Israel and invest. We can help each other and you can help us ... and both countries will flourish."

Begin was interrupted by three young demonstrators who apparently rose from a table in the audience to shout "The Sinai is Jewish." They were hustled away by Secret Service agents.

Earlier Thursday, Begin and President Carter met in Manhattan. Carter had come to New York to campaign for Gov. Hugh Carey.

Carter, who greeted Begin outside the home of Democratic fund-raiser Arthur Krim, said: "We are going to have peace in the Middle East."

The meeting came after Carter revised his plans. Begin said he was aware of news reports that Carter was snubbing him because there had been no scheduled visit. "I did not feel for one minute snubbed," he said.

The two leaders talked for about 30 minutes. White House press secretary Jody Powell said it was a courtesy visit.

Begin plans to visit California during the weekend.

Attorneys to complete Davis jury

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorneys in Cullen Davis' murder-for-hire trial were expected today to complete the week-long process of selecting a jury to hear the much-publicized case.

Late Thursday, only one person remained to be "qualified" to be added to a list of 32 persons from which the jury will be selected. When the 32nd is picked, both sides will strike 10 names to seat a 12-member jury.

However, Judge Wallace Moore has said that even if jury selection was completed by today, testimony would not begin before Monday.

Davis, 45, an heir to one of the state's great oil-related fortunes, is accused of soliciting a "hit man" to kill the presiding judge in his high-stakes, bitterly contested divorce suit.

Texas candidates zeroing in on major metropolitan areas

By The Associated Press

With less than a week of campaign time left, candidates are zeroing in on major metropolitan areas.

Republican John Tower, seeking re-election to the U.S. Senate, said Thursday in Austin that he has consistently opposed the imposition of wage and price controls.

"The record shows that in 1974 I led not one, but two, battles which successfully ended wage and price controls ... The experience we gained with those controls illustrates the unworkable nature of these controls in combating the real economic sickness of excessive government spending," Tower said.

Tower's opponent, Democrat Bob Krueger, said Thursday in Midland-Odessa that Tower is a "DeSoto" that's been around a long time, but that he is a "Mustang" full of new ideas and life.

"At worst, the polls show us tied or significantly ahead in the race," Krueger said, exuding confidence.

John Hill, Democratic candidate for governor, said Thursday in Beaumont that he would have a six-point budget management program to reduce waste in state government, if elected governor. He said his program would include "a trade-off policy in state budget writing to require state agencies to identify low-priority programs they are willing to reduce or eliminate so the funds can be used to finance higher priority new programs."

Meanwhile, Hill's opponent, Republican Bill Clements, said he will start his own investigation of three-year-old charges of misuse of public funds in Webb County. Clements had said Wednesday that Hill was responsible for a story alleging the Clements campaign promised a Laredo man $200,000 in exchange for a deposition damaging to Hill.

Mark White, Democratic candidate for attorney general, announced his endorsement by three major Mexican-American organizations. He said the support came from the American GI Forum, the League of United Latin America Citizens and the Mexican-American Democrats.

White's Republican opponent, Jim Baker, appeared Thursday before the Political Association of Mexican-Americans. He listed newspaper endorsements by the Austin American-Statesman, El Paso Times, Marshall News Messenger, Sherman Democrat, Midland Reporter-Telegram, Austin Citizen and the Daily Texan.

In Austin, Secretary of State Steve Oaks predicted Thursday that heavy absentee voting in metropolitan areas — particularly in Republican strongholds — indicate some tight races Tuesday.

The state's chief elections officer predicted there would be about 2.3 million voters Tuesday, 37 percent of those eligible, to vote for governor and U.S. Senate at the top of the ballot. But only about 1.8 million are expected to vote for the proposed constitutional amendments on the bottom of the ballot.

Oaks said he based his estimate on the theory that general elections produce about 125 percent of the votes cast in that year's primary. There were about million primary votes last May.

Figures show law officers in jeopardy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seventy police officers were killed in the line of duty during the first nine months of this year, one less than during the same period in 1977, the FBI says.

FBI Director William H. Webster said in a statement released today that the figures demonstrate law enforcement officers are in "constant jeopardy" and "must be ever-alert for potentially hazardous situations."

The statistics indicate 68 of the 70 officers who were killed were shot to death, including 53 by handguns. The FBI said 11 of the officers were shot with their own weapons.

The figures cover the United States and Puerto Rico and show that the largest proportion of killings, 36, occurred in the South.

Men should take interest in children

KENTFIELD, Calif. (AP) — Psychologist-author Phyllis Chesler says the trouble between American men and women can be traced to the relationship — or lack of it — between fathers and sons.

The solution, she says, is for men to take a greater interest in their children.

"Not only would men and their children be closer, but it would help men to learn to handle the violence within themselves," said Ms. Chesler, who is in California this week for a series of lectures.

Most men never experience a warm, open, sharing relationship with their fathers, said the author of the recently published book, "About Men."

"They have had to settle for a few rare hours of companionship, usually with fathers who are tired, preoccupied with work, who would rather watch television or drink beer," she said.

In her research for her latest book, Ms. Chesler said, "I'd ask the men to tell me about their fathers and they wouldn't or couldn't. They'd say, 'My father's all right. What else can I say.' Or, 'Oh, you want to know about my childhood; let me tell you about my mother.'"

The yearning for paternal approval "creates many problems," she said. "It makes men hate and distrust other men, despite the myths about male friendship."

And women, Ms. Chesler said, become "opiates which keep men from killing one another."

She interviewed prison inmates in researching her book, she said, "curious as to what men did together when they didn't have us to kick around....

"Well, what they do is pretty ugly....They rape each other and they even kill each other. Without their opiates, men are very brutal toward other men," she said.

The psychologist said men would learn to deal with their emotions in caring for their children.

"If you're taking care of children, you can't just let yourself go," she told a College of Marin audience. "If you get angry at a baby and throw it on the floor, it dies."

U.S. official steps down

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Education Commissioner Ernest L. Boyer is now the first — and so far only — lame duck among top officials in the Carter administration.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare announced Thursday that Boyer plans to resign in January 1980 to become president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

The 50-year-old former chancellor of the State University of New York will remain as chief of most federal education programs until then, with the proviso that the Carnegie Foundation seek no funds from HEW.

Boyer also has promised to avoid taking part in any decisions that might affect the foundation.

If Congress creates a separate Department of Education next year, it would smoothe — and possibly speed up — his departure.

Boyer, in an interview last July, said he would like to move to "a neutral position" where he could spend more time speaking about priorities in education.

He will also fill a vacancy left by the approaching retirement of Clark Kerr as president of the Carnegie Council on Policy Studies in Higher Education. That organization, based in Berkeley, Calif., is being merged with the parent foundation.

The title of foundation president is now held by Alan Pifer. He will relinquish that role but continue as president of the grant-making Carnegie Corp. of New York.

The foundation has served as a think-tank for the problems of higher education, and its studies have influenced the structures and programs at many American colleges and universities.

Boyer is a soft-spoken Quaker who was trained as a speech pathologist and earned a reputation as an innovative college administrator.

He ran SUNY, the nation's biggest university, for seven years before taking the HEW job in April 1977.

Kerr, the onetime University of California president whom then-Gov. Ronald Reagan fired in 1967, said he was "delighted" with the selection of Boyer.

Steel magnate Andrew Carnegie set the foundation up in 1905 with a $15 million grant to provide pensions for professors at America's secular colleges. The money soon ran out, and a separate, successful organization, Teachers Insurance Annuity Association, was created in 1918 to handle the pensions.

The foundation, with assets of $23 million and a budget of $1.3 million, still pays $300,000 a year in pensions to professors' widows from the old days, according to vice president David Z. Robinson.

Boyer will not control the Carnegie Corp., which has assets of $280 million and distributes $12.5 million yearly.

Dollar gains more muscle

LONDON (AP) — The dollar put on more muscle on foreign exchanges today in continuing response to President Carter's rescue measures. The price of gold dropped.

The pound weakened in London to $1.9825, compared to $1.9860 Thursday, but was looking stronger against leading European currencies.

There was no trading in Tokyo because of a national holiday. But on Thursday the dollar closed at 186.025 yen, up from 178.80 Wednesday.

Early dollar rates in major European financial centers, compared to Thursday:

Frankfurt — 1.8725 marks, up from 1.8705.

Zurich — 1.6265 Swiss francs, up from 1.6000.

Paris — 4.3075 French francs, up from 4.2700.

Milan — 834.5 lire, up from 830.5.

Gold prices fell back in London to $219.55 per Troy ounce, compared to $221.75 Thursday. In Zurich, Europe's other major bullion market, the price was $220.00 an ounce, compared to $221.50 Thursday.

LCRA official raps irrigation arguments

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—A Lower Colorado River Authority official Thursday countered arguments put forth by a Colorado River Municipal Water District consultant that irrigation efficiency improvements could be forecast and subtracted from future water demands.

That counter-argument was posed before the Texas Water Commission by LCRA Manager of Systems Operations Bill West during the continuing hearing on the application by the district for a permit to construct a reservoir on the Colorado River in West Texas.

The application is opposed by the LCRA, the city of Austin, downstream irrigators and others.

CRMWD consulting engineer Bob Gooch had previously testified that improvements in irrigation technologies and metering to make farmers aware of the water they are using would reduce the amount of water needed by downstream irrigators served by the LCRA on the Colorado River, reducing the amount of water which should be figured into future demands.

West, however, indicated that a great deal more land could be irrigated for rice farming along the Gulf Coast from the existing irrigation systems operated by the LCRA and private companies. He added that the tendency of farmers nowadays to plant two rather than one rice crop yearly and to rotate their land on a two-year versus a three-year basis is increasing water demands.

While acknowledging "there is room in the irrigation industry for improvement," West said "any projection along the lines (of a forecast of improvements in irrigation efficiency) would be purely speculative."

West also testified the LCRA's Highland Lakes system is operated on a "gameplan" based on predicted demands rather than on a conventional "firm yield" plan which emphasizes predicted inflows to the reservoir system.

"We do not release water in anticipation of inflows," he said.

The LCRA water gameplan, West explained, is adjusted "day to day, minute to minute", in response to changing conditions on the river.

In general, West said the plan calls for water to be supplied to downstream irrigators during the first half of the March to October rice growing season from Lake Travis, with the water passing through hydroelectric generators to Travis and Lake Austin to aid in early summer electric power system "peaking."

In the second half of the season, he continued, the irrigation water is released from the first lake in the Highland chain—Buchanan—enabling the LCRA to use all its hydroelectric generation facilities while passing water downstream through the lake chain.

This operation also is designed to insure that Lake Travis—the authority's only flood control structure in the lake chain—is capable to retaining any flood flows which might occur in the spring and summer months while lowering Buchanan later in the season to capture and store winter inflows.

On cross examination by CRMWD attorney Jim Wilson, West said the plan was not "written down" but rather reflected in the authority's hydro-generation facility and dam maintenance schedules.

Apparently frustrated by his inability to obtain a hard copy of the LCRA's reservoir operation plan, Wilson showed West a copy of a 1942 LCRA intraoffice memo with a handwritten notation that "verbal orders don't go" and telling the memo recipients to "write it down."

"That old memo," West replied, was written a long time before his time and by former General Manager Max Starke. He said that the current operation of the lake system is more complicated now and involves both written and verbal orders.

"Don't you ever write anything down?" Wilson said.

Testimony in the case was to continue this morning.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Communications Properties Inc. said Thursday it has begun operation of it second receive-only earth station in Midland.

The announcement said the Midland site can receive signals from two different domestic communications satellites.

"This is the first dual earth station site operated by CPI," said G.M. Batsche, CPI vice president, "and probably the first such operation for cable television use in Texas."

Common drugs harbor dangers

By STEPHANIE S. COOKE

BOSTON (AP) — Medicines as common as cough drops and aspirin, taken by pregnant women, can lead to goiters, and internal bleeding in their newborn babies, and even death, a Houston doctor says.

A pregnant woman "should limit any drugs during pregnancy," says Reba Hill, but particularly drugs such as anticonvulsants, some antibiotics, potassium iodide, aspirin and tranquilizers such as valium. Cigarettes also are included.

Dr. Hill, who specializes in newborn research at St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital in Houston, says gynecologists and obstetricians should check their pregnant patients' "social habits."

Some epileptic women may have outgrown their need for anticonvulsants by the time of their pregnancy and could be taken off it, she told her colleagues at a meeting of the New England Obstetrical & Gynecological Society Wednesday.

If not, the medication may cause their babies to be born with heart disease or cleft lip and palate.

A study of 47 children whose mothers took anticonvulsants during pregnancy showed a high degree of both defects and there also was some evidence of learning disability in young children, which seemed to disappear as they grew older, Ms. Hill said.

"I've seen some mothers who have been on the drugs 20 years even though they had no siezures within the past 10," she said. "I recommend that a mother be re-evaluated before pregnancy to see if the drugs can be discontinued or a single drug used."

Ms. Hill said there is evidence that cough medicine containing potassium iodide can cause a goiter to form around the neck of a newborn, leading to potential respiratory problems and even death. In addition, the medicine can cause low thyroid activity which, left untreated, may cause mental retardation.

Women who smoke more than a pack of cigarerres a day increase their chances of bearing infants with congenital defects, but she said even those who smoke less than a pack a day may bear unhealthy babies.

A study of 300 patients showed that even in small amounts, aspirin increased poison levels in the blood of unborn fetuses, she said. One woman patient took 25 aspirin tablets a day while pregnant, and her baby was born with internal bleeding and she suffered a heart attack giving birth, Ms. Hill said.

Antibiotics such as tetracycline, used to treat problems as common as acne and asthma, can cause staining on primary teeth and severe tooth decay, she said, and sulfa drugs that are used to treat kidney problems can lead to brain damage.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Drug looks good but tests not in

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: My husband has had a good deal of trouble with duodenal ulcers for several years, and had a bad attack six months ago. He seems all right now, but he has to be careful with his diet and drinking and getting enough rest and so on. I heard recently about a new drug against ulcers that works very well by cutting down the acid production. Would this be a good thing to take to prevent the ulcers from coming back? Is it better than antacids?—S.H.

DEAR S.H.: The drug you are referring to must be cimetidine (the trademark is Tagamet), which has been in use in the United States for a little over a year. Both here and in Europe, where it has been available longer, it has proved to be effective in relieving the pain and promoting healing of duodenal ulcers by drastically reducing the actual production of gastric acid. The traditional antacids neutralize the acid after it is produced.

Whether cimetidine is safe and effective for long-term use in low doses to prevent the recurrence of duodenal ulcers is not yet known, but tests are now going on. There have been reports that relapses have been prevented for up to 12 months.

In other words, cimetidine is a valuable alternative to the traditional antacid regime during an active case of ulcers. For long-range prevention, we shall have to wait and see.

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: What do you know about opium?—Mrs. J.G.

DEAR MRS. J.G.: The plant was grown in the Mediterranean region as early as 300 B.C. At various times it has been produced in Hungary, Yugoslavia, Turkey, India, Burma, China, and Mexico. There were no restrictions on the importation or use of opium in the United States until the early 1900s. Patent medicines in those days often contained opium without any warning label and many persons became physically dependent on medicines that were bought and sold without restriction. Today there are state, federal, and international laws governing the production and distribution of narcotic substances, and there is little abuse of opium in this country.

At least 25 organic substances can be extracted from opium. These are alkaloids of two general categories, each producing markedly different effects. The first, represented by morphine and codeine, are used as analgesics and cough suppressants. The second, represented by papaverine (an intestinal relaxant) and noscapine (a cough suppressant), have no significant influence on the central nervous system. About 240,000 kilograms of opium are legally imported into the United States annually. Although a small part of this amount is used to make antidiarrheal preparations such as paregoric, most of it is processed by U.S. pharmaceutical and chemical firms for the manufacture of morphine and codeine.

Kent Hance.

When Kent Hance began work in the Texas Senate, he did not sit on the sidelines like most freshman Senators. He sponsored Legislation to remove a State Supreme Court Judge from office following his indictment for perjury. He led the fight in the Senate trial to impeach a District Judge from Duval County for misconduct in office. This was the first such trial in more than 30 years, and was the first major effort to clean up corruption in Duval County. He sponsored measures to remove the Senate's top employee for questionable conduct.

Wherever Kent Hance found waste in government, he acted. He sponsored and passed into law "sunset legislation" that abolishes state agencies on a periodic basis unless they are re-established by the Legislature. This helps to keep agencies from getting out of hand, and to eliminate those that are no longer needed. He made welfare fraud or food stamp fraud a felony in Texas.

In his four-year term, Kent Hance never missed a day in the Senate's five sessions, regular and special. In four of those five sessions he didn't miss a vote. In the fifth, he had a 96% voting record.

In Congress, Kent Hance will continue this kind of representation where it is needed most . . . at the Federal level. Kent Hance has proved that when he sees evidence of corruption, waste or inefficiency in government he does not look the other way . . . HE ACTS. West Texas needs Kent Hance in Congress.

Let's make sure the man we send to Congress is the man with qualifications we can measure—and count on . . . !

Midland, Odessa chambers bet turkeys on football games

Sports enthusiasts have predicted there will be some "feathers flying" on football fields in Odessa and Midland tonight as the two rival communities meet in not one, but two, high school football matches.

And the chambers of commerce in the two cities have entered into some friendly rivalry of their own on this topic: Officials from the two chambers have bet a turkey on the outcome of each game — Permian vs. Midland Lee and Midland High vs. Odessa High.

"This bet isn't anything we're likely to get our feathers ruffled over," commented Odessa Chamber President Don Carter.

"That's right," agreed Midland Chamber President Harrell Feldt. "This is just a friendly rivalry to show we're both behind our communities in all their endeavors, and it's really nothing new for the Midland and Odessa chambers to 'talk turkey' over major issues."

Joining Carter and Feldt in their wager are Fred Tyler and Art Roberts, executive vice presidents, respectively, of the Midland and Odessa chambers.

Roberts pointed out the bet is appropriate for a football game, because Benjamin Franklin once tried to have the turkey designated as the national bird.

"And, as everyone in West Texas knows, football really is the national pastime, in spite of what baseball promoters claim."

After the traditional hand shake, Tyler was heard to say, "This is one feast I'm looking forward to."

Portuguese peasants give up land

BEJA, Portugal (AP) — About 150 armed police rolled up in jeeps and told 25 peasants to get off the land they had been farming collectively for three years. It was being given back to an absentee landlord.

"They gave us half an hour to get out," said Manuel Fernandes, leaning on a fence post and gazing across the rolling wheat fields where, suddenly, battles of the Portuguese revolution of 1974 were being fought all over again.

"We can't fight them but they can't win. One day, when they have gone, we'll just come back."

Fernandes, 45, a farmworker all his life but a newcomer to politics, obeyed communist union directives not to resist the police who were enforcing the return of dozens of estates to former owners in the southeastern third of Portugal, the Alentejo belt of grain, cork trees and olive groves stretching from the Tagus River to Spain. As foreman of the Muralha d'Aco — Steel Wall — collective, he led the displaced peasants to shelter on nearby farms.

The sun-scorched Alentejo, literally meaning "beyond the Tagus," has long been a land of discontent. Before the 1974 revolution that ousted a rightist dictatorship and brought leftists into the government, it was possessed by a wealthy few who let large tracts lie fallow.

After the revolt, peasants rushed onto the plantations in a mass land grab, expelling landlords and creating several hundred communist-backed collectives, plus several hundred more left-wing cooperatives. Illiterate tillers who once had worked for daily wages sat on workers' committees that bought tractors and marketed crops. Communist farm unions moved in to negotiate huge government loans.

The Alentejo became the Communist Party's only electoral base outside the industrial suburbs of Lisbon, and some non-communists complained that the region had, in effect, simply shifted from one group of big landowners to another. As rumors circulated of inefficiency and million-dollar frauds on the farms, harvests plummeted last year to the lowest level in 60 years.

The 1978 crops were only slightly better and Portugal spent nearly $1 billion to import half its food.

Peasants claimed that the land was being cultivated more intensively than before, despite crop-killing weather, and that state subsidies were buying livestock and machinery. But successive governments in Lisbon, viewing the communists' grip on the farms as an economic disaster, declared many of the takeovers illegal.

'Leadership Midland' will begin first training program next week

"Leadership Midland," designed to develop future leadership in the community, begins its training program next week.

Forty Midland residents, ranging in age from 23 to 53, have been accepted as the first "class" of the leadership project. They were selected by an anonymous committee from among the 60 applicants for the training program.

Persons not accepted for the first training class have been encouraged to re-apply next year for places in the second class.

Leadership Midland, based on the "Leadership Dallas" community leadership training concept, will have the first of almost a dozen intensive class sessions next Thursday in the Fine Arts Building recital hall at Midland College.

Additional training sessions will be held monthly through the winter and spring.

The initial meeting will be concerned with "What Is Leadership?", "The Decision-Making Process" and "Midland Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow."

Archaeological Society plans Tuesday meeting

A comparative study of archaeological sites in the Midland area will be the highlight event of the Midland Archeological Society's meeting here Tuesday night.

Natural sweetener eliminated from Wrigley's Orbit gum

CHICAGO (AP) — The Wm. Wrigley Jr. Co. says it has eliminated a cavity-preventing natural sweetener, called xylitol from its sugar-free Orbit chewing gum.

The gum containing the controversial sweetener was introduced early last year. Sales have dropped since a study last November reported that the sweetener caused bladder cancer in laboratory mice.

Dental researchers, however, dispute these findings and say xylitol, which is many times sweeter than sugar, poses no health hazard.

A study in Finland found that xylitol counteracts acid in the mouth and reduces cavities in children by as much as 90 percent.

A Wrigley spokesman said Tuesday xylitol no longer is being used in its Orbit brands produced in the United States and is substituting two corn syrup-based sweeteners — sorbitol and mannitol.

The company said the unresolved status of xylitol led to the decision to remove it at this time, although the company shares the opinion of outside authorities that xylitol is completely safe and has great future potential in dental health.

Wrigley said xylitol will continue to be used in Orbit gum manufactured in Canada and West Germany.

Radioactive seeds could help cancer sufferers

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Permanently implanted radioactive iodine "seeds," each about the size of a quarter-inch long pencil lead, could sharply reduce impotence in men suffering from prostate cancer, a New York researcher says.

Dr. Basil Hilaris of Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center told reporters Wednesday the Iodine-125 seeds are implanted in the tumors. The technique has been used in the case of 81 patients since 1970 and its success rate is 75 percent, Hilaris added.

He said the technique would be especially beneficial to those whose prostate cancer is spotted early, about one-third of the estimated 57,000 men nationwide who will develop prostate cancer in 1979.

The disease is the second major cause, after lung cancer, of death among American men.

Paul Heerwald of 3M Co., which produces the Iodine-125 seeds, said less than 5 percent of the 1970 group suffered such side effects as impotence and loss of bladder control which are associated with cancer patients treated with external radiation and surgery.

Describing the Iodine-125 procedure, Hilaris said the radioactive seeds are implanted into the tumor with a syringe. The number of seeds implanted depend on the size of the tumor, with up to 50 used for the largest cancers.

Transcripts ordered into lawyer's hands

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors were ordered Thursday by a federal judge to turn over to defense lawyers part of the transcripts of state and federal grand jury testimony in the case of a Shreveport, La., youth shot to death in a high speed chase with Houston police.

A Houston policeman and three former officers were to have gone on trial Friday in Beaumont on charges of violating Randall Webster's civil rights but U.S. District Judge Finis E. Cowan postponed the trial indefinitely while taking the grand jury testimony dispute under advisement.

The federal indictment alleges the four defendants conspired to place a "throw down" gun near Webster's body to make it appear he was armed when he was shot to death in a high speed chase with Houston police in 1977.

Appeals Board to meet

Three cases will be heard when the Board of Appeals meets at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday in the conference room of the basement at City Hall.

James L. Prince of 3102 W. Cuthbert Ave. is requesting a variance to occupy a structure in a fire district as a real estate office.

Scott Davis, 4241-4251 Siesta Lane, is asking for a variance to change the fire wall requirements to allow a duplex to meet townhouse requirements.

Larry Rusk, 1110 W. Texas Ave., is asking for allowance to use a building wired in romex as an office.

Art of scrimshaw enjoying renaissance

By LESLIE LA ROCHE

Scrimshaw: to waste time in idle pursuits.

That was the original meaning of the word referring to a 300-year-old craft in which shipbound sailors and whalers passed the time carving scenes from their world on shells, ivory and whalebone, the natural "canvas" of the sea.

But the delicate centuries-old art is in its renaissance in the gifted hands of Jim Sorensen and craftsmen like him who have revived scrimshaw "for those who can appreciate the real beauty of nature."

Sorensen is in a community of talented young artists involved in the "Ancient Ivory" company, a corporation devoted almost entirely to scrimshaw.

The firm uses only 20,000-year-old fossil ivory mined by Eskimos and traders in Alaska and other parts of the frozen north. Only ancient materials are used because, Sorensen said, "There would be no beauty if it meant you had to kill."

"Ancient Ivory" has expanded the focus of scrimshaw from the original great ships and scenes of the sea to roses, wildlife, of which Sorensen is most fond, and other aspects of nature.

The rarity of the natural raw "canvas" adds as much to the beauty and value of each piece as the detailed artistry that adorns it. And the Bellingham, Wash., firm has found a strong market for its creations among the wealthy.

But Sorensen and his colleagues don't want merely to cater to the rich. So they're bringing their "heirlooms of the future" to the general public in a series of shows across the country.

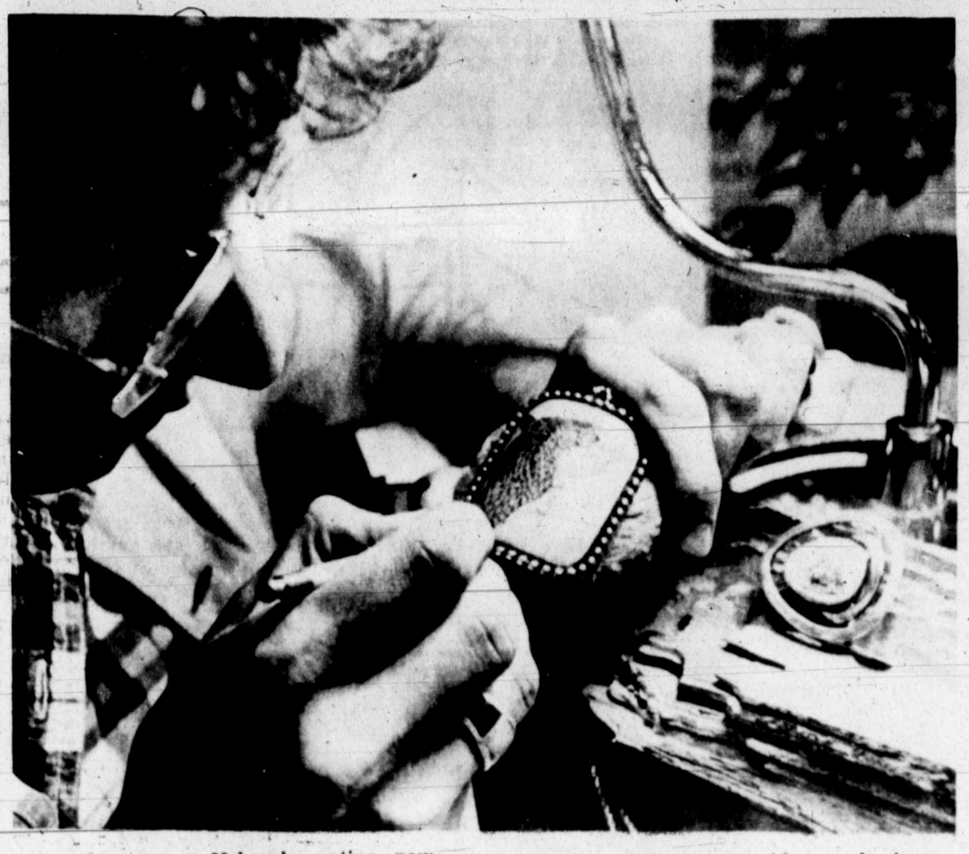

Sorensen, 27 and a Fremont, Neb., native, has a sales approach that is high-powered only in his enthusiasm and love for his art and the people who enjoy it.

"We don't pitch," Sorensen said. "I really feel we're bringing this art to the people to enjoy, not to get their money. We do the work. There is no mass production. Each piece is one of a kind. There is no other exactly like it in the world."

Sorensen is nearly as unique as his calling and his scrimshaw creations, more artist than art.

His drawings and carvings are free-hand and generally based on nature, most of them wildlife. Among his first creations was a great, stately owl. Others depict lions and gentler creatures, the hunted and the contented.

"It's a great challenge to bring an animal to life in drawing," Sorensen said. "I like to give each one expression ... so people know what he's thinking at that moment ... whether he's content, or poised and ready to pounce ... or maybe just studying them as closely as they study him.

Jim Sorenson, a Nebraska native, now from Bellingham, Wash., demonstrates the delicate artistry of scrimshaw, carving freehand on 20,000-year-old mastadon ivory. (AP Laserphoto)

'Celebrity Politicking' newest fun show

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Hollywood has a new fun game show. You need two candidates, a lackluster contest, a stable of celebrities for each side and, most important, an apathetic electorate. Best of all, it has a built-in cancellation date — Nov. 8, the day after elections.

"Celebrity Politicking," like its real-life television kin, "Celebrity Bowling," delivers lots of stars to compensate for what it lacks in substance.

The idea is that if you don't like a candidate's political posture, maybe you'll like the fact that The Muppets are in his corner.

Crucial to the game is the apathetic electorate. Without it, candidates wouldn't need celebrities to grab the attention of the voters, and an election could be decided on issues alone.

The celebrities help their candidate with fund-raisers, commercials, public appearances, endorsements, donations and all-around association with their favorite politico.

California's race for the 27th Congressional District is an example of "Celebrity Politicking" at its finest. In fact, the race between Rep. Robert Dornan and Carey Peck has been dubbed "Star Wars" for all the glimmer and glamour fallout the fray has produced.

Dornan is a former TV newscaster, a celebrity's celebrity in these parts. Peck...well, Gregory, the actor, is his dad.

Young Peck counts on his side such luminaries as his famous father, and many of his famous father's famous friends — including Liza Minnelli, Charlton Heston and Cheryl Ladd.

In Dornan's corner are Pat Boone and his singing daughter, Debby, plus Jack Haley, the Tin Man from "The Wizard of Oz," and former singin' cowboy Gene Autry.

In the governor's race, singers Helen Reddy and Linda Ronstadt are pulling for Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. So are Red Buttons, Lily Tomlin and Cindy Williams.

Brown's opponent, Attorney General Evelle Younger, hasn't proven particularly adept at "Celebrity Politicking," but his running mate, lieutenant governor candidate Mike Curb, a record company executive, is a living example of the game's hidden wisdom. Curb entered politics by supplying recording stars to Republican soirees in need of publicity.

One of the state's hottest issues, Proposition 5, promises to limit smoking in public places, and among those lending their names in support are Michael York, Carol Burnett and Heston.

One of the most in-demand celebrities this election season is not a movie star, but an ornery old man who cusses and hollers when he faces a crowd — Howard Jarvis, father of California's property tax reduction initiative, Proposition 13.

Any politician with a damp finger to the wind knows this is the season to be anti-tax and anti-government spending, and Jarvis is the personification of those sentiments.

Those seeking his support for their candidacies "are lining up like ...lemmings," he says.

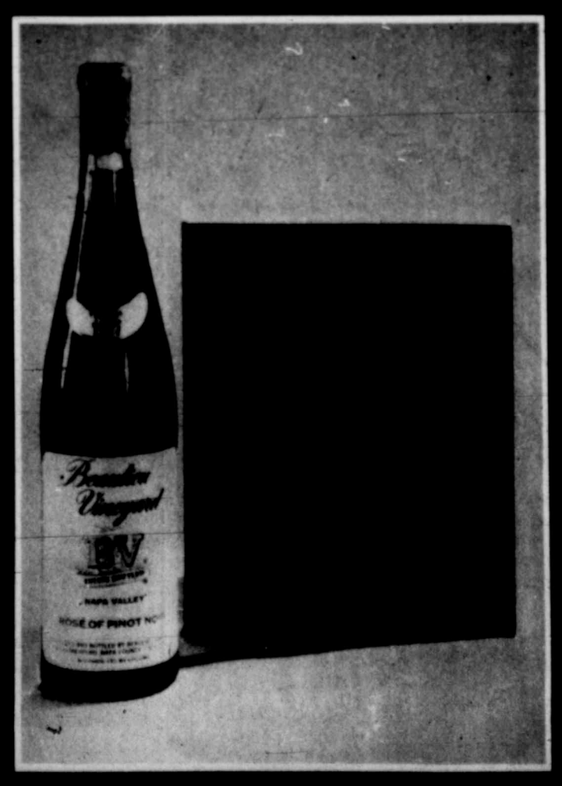

But Jarvis is not your normal "Celebrity Politicker." He isn't what you'd call a team player. He'll endorse anyone who has ever uttered a kindness about Proposition 13. He has cut commercials for both Younger and Brown in the governor's race.

Just last week, "Celebrity Politicking" reached its zenith when Jane Fonda, the spiritual mother of "Celebrity Politicking," called in several celebrities to help raise money for "Campaign for an Economic Democracy." CED is a political group that grew out of the unsuccessful 1976 Senate campaign of her husband, Tom Hayden.

Among the stars on hand to help Miss Fonda's cause were television's Kristy McNichol and Cheryl Ladd. They were serving, you might say, as the celebrity supporter's celebrity supporters.

'Haunting' adds to nation's ills

By LUCRETIA STEIGER
Copley News Service

You go to the bank and a camera records your transaction. Stop in at a convenience store and round mirrors reflect everything you do. Department stores make videotapes of their customers and airlines scrutinize passengers and their luggage.

It is this "ongoing routine of surveillance" which is affecting the fabric of American lives, according to Jim Hougan, author of "Spooks: The Haunting of America — the Private Use of Secret Agents."

"We say to each other, 'Oh, well, isn't it all for protection?'" Hougan said during an interview. "But then the people who are honest become a little more hostile to each other because of this surveillance. There's a little resentment there. It disrupts the fabric of our relationship as a nation. It raises the level of unhappiness just a degree. It adds to the tension."

Hougan became a believer in these effects of surveillance, which he thinks touch every American, about five years ago. As Washington editor of Harper's magazine, a position he still holds, he began investigating the world of "spooks."

There is in this country, he began, a "federal intelligence community" made up of the seven or eight agencies of government involved in intelligence activitues. These include the FBI, Secret Service, military intelligence, Commerce Department and others he said.

And a "spook," Hougan added, "is someone who works behind the scenes for profit, usually invisibly, but sometimes with a high profile as a cloak."

Problems begin, Hougan said, when such spooks leave government employ and go to work for private industry or rich employers. They take with them government secrets and contacts along with intelligence skills. And this is a fairly recent problem, he added, because of the time span involved.

"Before 1947 or '48, there was virtually no intelligence community," he said. "So if you take those years and add 25, the length of an average work career, you'll see that these people began retiring about 1973, and going to work in other careers in droves. In 1973, the big exodus began.

"It has been estimated that now there are some 148,000 full-time intelligence officers working for the federal community, so that gives some idea of the scope."

Hougan believes that these former intelligence employees should be known through a "domestic agents registration act" much as foreign agents are registered. Such agents have a responsibility to the public, he believes, because they were "trained by tax dollars and so accountable to the public." This idea forms the crux of his book.

"It's very glamorous, of course, because of the people involved, but it's also very real and serious."

He also is concerned about a new development in surveillance called PSE, or Psychological Stress Evaluation, which "represents psychiatric invation of our privacy.

"This is a device, about attache case size, which enables a trained operator to test tape recordings of the voice for stress, usually without the speaker's knowledge." (Although they may know the conversation is taped, they may not be aware of the possible PSE testing, he said.)

Such PSE devices, costing about $3,500, are used by most large police departments, many employers to test prospective employees and already employed workers, stores checking for shoplifting, insurance company investigators or negotiations between businessmen or labor unions and management, he said.

Now Hougan is interested in writing another book, this time a novel based on some of the incidents he uncovered for Spooks. He is also interested in recording more of the "miniphenomenia" occuring in the intelligence industry.

"One of these has surely got to be women in the field," he said. "You think of intelligence as a man's world, but women are going into investigative work in great numbers.

Everywhere you turn in America today, you see cameras, mirrors or some other form of the "ongoing routine of surveillance" — it's the subject of a new book by Harper's magazine editor Jim Hougan.

Carter tuning speeches to needs of candidates

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, who seemed to commit one political faux-pas after another in his early days in the White House, is now showing a keen sensitivity to some of the political problems Democrats are facing this year.

He was on the road for Democratic candidates every weekend but one during October, carefully sizing up their difficulties and lending their campaigns the prestige of the presidency.

In two states, Minnesota and Maine, he was particularly adept. In Minnesota, Carter invoked the spirit of Hubert Humphrey in an attempt to reunite warring factions of Humphrey's old coalition Democratic Party.

Then, in Portland, Maine, he delivered an uncharacteristically partisan speech as he tried to boost Sen. William Hathaway's re-election battle, perhaps the toughest fight being waged by an incumbent this year.

Carter's aides say that the president was speaking off-the-cuff in both situations, working from his own sense of what was called for in each state.

The direction such political speeches take is a decision Carter makes for himself, based on "his own political judgment," said Frances M. Voorde, Carter's deputy appointments secretary.

Before Carter visits a city on such a trip, however, he is given a briefing book outlining the political situation, local issues and details about individual candidates. For a one-day trip with four stops, the material may be two inches thick in a looseleaf notebook.

Last Saturday, before Carter reached Portland, he stopped in Buffalo, N.Y.; Hartford, Conn.; and Lynn, Mass. In each city, the president's message was the same:

First, there was a pat on the back for each member of the Democratic ticket. Then there were a few minutes of patting his.

On the last stop on his one-day trip, the message changed. One overriding political problem brought Carter to Maine: Hathaway's battle.

"Bill Hathaway is perhaps not a very good politician," Carter said. "He doesn't brag on himself. He is not a flashy person."

So, Carter decided to brag for Hathaway. According to Carter, Hathaway helped bring down the nation's unemployment rate and Hathaway won't be swayed by a powerful committee chairman.

He is, said Carter, the champion of small business and the elderly, of tax reform and national defense.

It was all aimed at fending off the political strategy of Rep. William Cohen, the Republican fighting for Hathaway's seat. Cohen has attempted to portray Hathaway as an extreme liberal, out of touch with Maine, its needs, and what Cohen sees as its voters' moderate and conservative philosophy.

The problem was different in Minnesota, although the bottom line was also the possibility that the Democrats could lose a Senate race.

The state's Democratic Party organization, the Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party, has been split in a liberal-conservative fight ever since businessman Robert Short won a Senate nomination in September, defeating Rep. Donald Fraser, a leader of House liberals.

Speaking at an airport rally in Rochester, Minn., Carter came face to face with the split and reminded his audience that it was just such divisiveness that cost Hubert Humphrey the presidency in 1968.

"I would like to urge you, if I don't do anything else while I'm here, to remember Hubert Humphrey, to remember what happened to him when our party was divided, to remember what he stood for, to remember his friends and commit yourselves now to give the Democratic candidates a tremendous victory on Nov. 7," Carter said.

The president's speech was just what party campaigners in Minnesota thought was necessary, said an aide to Vice President Walter F. Mondale, who has been campaigning heavily in the state and is familiar with the Democrats' problems there.

Another not-unbiased observer, John White, the Democratic National Committee chairman, said he thought the Carter speech in Maine "was very strong."

White said the Hathaway speech was "100 percent Jimmy Carter," prepared by Carter while he waited his turn at the lectern.

"He developed the speech after he got there," White said.

The party chairman said he and Carter talked about the speech on their way back to Washington and Carter said the speech stemmed from "an inner feeling" that the Portland rally had not concerned itself with Hathaway's problems.

"Carter has not been considered a strong party man, but I've not seen a president make a stronger pitch," White said.

Father says son misled

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Freddie Faith Bonnet of La Pryor, Texas, says he helped his son escape from Camp Pendleton because the Marine Corps never kept its promise when the boy enlisted.

Bonnet said his son signed up at 17 to be trained as an aviation electronics technician, but wound up in ordnance as a bomb loader.

After almost two years, Robert Bonnet went home to his family's 578-acre grain farm in Southwest Texas. His father convinced him to return, but the Marine was held for a disciplinary hearing for absence without leave.

Bonnet drove his pickup truck by the hearing room last July, his son bolted from his guard and together they drove back to Texas.

SOS attempts to warn women of dangers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An elusive band of feminists armed with red paint and stencils has begun a clandestine campaign to warn women of the dangers of Philadelphia's dark streets: signs proclaiming "A woman was raped here" painted at about 40 locations.

A group calling itself SOS, Save Our Sisters, claimed responsibility for the signs in a press release.

"Because neither the city nor the police department has taken action in this direction, we are determined to warn women about areas where women have been and are being raped," the release said.

The FBI said 1,334 rapes were reported in the Philadelphia area in 1977, and law enforcement officials say many more rapes went unreported. The FBI Uniform Crime Report said the number of reported rapes increased 11 percent nationwide between 1976 and 1977.

Police in Philadelphia have declined comment on the signs.

An anonymous SOS spokeswoman said each sign marked the site of at least one rape, and that in some cases, the locations had been the scene of a succession of rapes, attacks or muggings.

The SOS spokeswoman said several of the painted warnings were quickly obliterated. In one case, the SOS member said, a jackhammer was used to remove the message. And the warning on City Hall was removed while other graffiti were ignored, the SOS member said.

A Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority spokesman said workers spotted three women and a man with a can of paint and a stencil near a subway stop early Thursday.

The SEPTA workers chased them away, but they returned later to leave their warning. A maintenance crew then erased the sign, the spokesman said.

"We have not been involved in it at all, although we support the concept of women taking action on the issue of rape," said Lynn Moncrief of Women Organized Against Rape, a volunteer group.

"A lot of people are seeing these signs and responding to them in one way or another. I can't speak for the people who are doing it, but I feel that this helps increase the general awareness that women are being raped."

She said she was concerned that "some people might be lulled into thinking that as long as they avoid certain areas, they would be safe. I don't think that was the intention.

"But if, in certain areas a high number of rapes do take place, if there seems to be a high frequency, the signs could help make people more alert and take more precautions," Ms. Moncrief said.

"We're aware that the number of rapes is much, much, much higher than that," Ms. Moncrief said of the FBI statistics on rape.

"But I can't even give you a ball park figure — except that the FBI says that the number reported is between one out of three and one out of 10."

Mail costs should drop

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — With the cost of preparing and sending an average business letter hitting $4.77 this year, more attention should be paid to improving business mailroom operations, says the manager of Pitney Bowes' postal-education seminars.

The manager, Samuel J. Paul, says most businesses could easily reduce expenses by at least 10 percent.

"That's because there's far too much spending on mail," Paul says.

Centralizing decision-making on mailing practices and setting standards for those who use the mail are two of the best ways to offset the burden of rising costs, he explains.

Teens and older women ignore prenatal care

By CHRIS CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teen-agers and women 45 or older are least likely to seek prenatal care early in pregnancy and most likely to bear low birth-weight children, a government survey shows.

The study by the National Center for Health Statistics said poor women and those who dropped out of school also are more likely to have low birth-weight babies — 5 pounds, 8 ounces or less — who run higher risks of death and disease.

The survey found that from 1969 to 1975 the number of mothers who sought care during the first three months of pregnancy gradually increased. Nearly 76 percent of white mothers first saw a doctor then and 56 percent of black mothers.

Some 17.5 percent of black mothers and 5.5 percent of white mothers received care only in the last trimester. Unwed mothers in general were much less likely to seek care early.

"Women aged 25-29 were most apt to start care early and least likely to receive late or no care," the report issued Thursday said.

The ideal is for a pregnant woman to see a doctor at least once every four weeks for the first 28 weeks of pregnancy, every two weeks until the 36th week and weekly thereafter, according to the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

"This amounts to about 13 visits for a normal 38-week pregnancy," noted the report.

Women were somewhat more likely to start care early with their second children, but after that early care dropped off to only 55.5 percent of mothers having a fifth child, the report said.

These mothers may have their hands full at home, the report said.

Cardinal wins derby race

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — For Greg Cardinal, winning the 41st All-American Soap Box Derby in Akron, Ohio, recently was like a dream come true.

"I still hardly believe it," said the 13-year-old Flint boy. "It was a miracle."

Greg, who drove his sleek, white, miniature racer to victory over 83 other competitors in the senior division, received, among other things, a $3,000 scholarship.

He hopes to become a veterinarian.

Versatile wallpaper serves many purposes

Copley News Service

If you pass up wallpaper shops because you live in an apartment, you may be passing up a number of opportunities to give your things a personal touch.

Wallcoverings don't just cover walls. They have many other uses ranging from decorating furnishings to renewing old objects. Wallpaper also can be used to personalize some of the store bought furnishings in your apartment.

Using a little imagination and a minimum amount of time and effort, you can transform tables, drawers and even mirrors into decorative focal points.

When you go to a wallpaper store to find paper for these special projects, check to see if they have a bargain bin which contains odds and ends or portions of rolls. These often are a lot less expensive and provide the right quantity of paper for the smaller jobs.

DEAR ABBY

Religion deeds as well as words

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: We don't go to church. Instead, my husband and I and our three children sit down to a hearty breakfast on Sunday morning and afterwards have a friendly discussion around the breakfast table.

We talk about school problems, family gripes and relations with relatives and friends. We support each other in overcoming bad habits and faults and come to an understanding about allowances, TV watching, homework and chores. Then we seek ways to improve family life and ways to contribute to our community and our nation.

We believe that God's spirit is within us (all) and that ours are helping hands which can be used to make this spirit evident here on earth.

Recently, some of the neighborhood children have been calling our children "atheists" because we don't go to church. They are shocked and upset and don't know what to answer. Do you in your wisdom have an appropriate answer?—AT A LOSS

DEAR AT: How is this: "We are NOT 'atheists.' We accept the existence and influence of God in our lives. But to us, God's spirit is within all of us, and we offer helping hands which can be used to make this spirit evident here on earth."

(P.S. In my opinion, yours is a stronger religious commitment than many church-goers make. But that, too, is their business.)

DEAR ABBY: SHELDON'S WIFE couldn't understand why her husband came home with red smudges on his shirt and red hairs on his coat. Don't jump to conclusions, Abby. He may have been feeding strawberry jam to a cocker spaniel!—CHATTANOOGA DOG LOVER

DEAR LOVER: True. But there is always an outside chance that he had been feeding a line to a redhead.

DEAR ABBY: I have been invited to an evening wedding at 6 p.m. A friend of mine tells me that I must wear a long dress.

I do not own a long dress, and I have no intention of buying one. If I must buy one for this occasion, I cannot afford to buy a wedding gift.

Please tell me if you think I absolutely must get a long dress, or would a dressy short dress be acceptable?—NO NAME PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Wear what you have, and don't give it a second thought. What's a few inches of fabric more or less?

Top designer replaces simplicity with chic

Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — High chic has replaced the simple little dress with pearls.

That's the message from Oscar de la Renta who has pushed out "plain" and ushered in "extravanganza."

Those who attended the first showing of his collection at the 20th Century studios came away with good news and bad news. First, the new clothes are brilliant, daring, detailed and very different. Second, they call for slim, proportioned figures and cost a bundle.

A wee bit of comfort — high-heel sandals and elbow-length kid gloves left over from the 50s can be part of the story. So while you're busy clearing out your closet of little frocks and denims put aside your ostrich plumes, sequins, gold lames, satin heels and those no-longer-old-fashioned natural kid gloves.

"The girls MUST forget their bad training of the past eight or 10 years," said de la Renta. "There is no more simple little dress, suit, evening gown or hostess gown. AND there is no more sexy vulgar for the show-offs or wide tent dresses for the hide-aways."

The flamboyant Spaniard said, "Everything is intricate glamour."

Expressing shades of Balenciaga of Paris, for whom Oscar designed in the '60s, his collection has a sense of drama and new luxury. His dinner suits are highlighted by fetching bolero jackets in new silk cloquet or brocades over matching dresses in sheers of crepe de chine and lace.

"Men and women are dressing for dinner," he said, as he introduced a sophisticated example. The slim model appeared in a decollete, form-fitting, long-sleeved, emerald green satin gown which bordered on the flamenco with its yards and yards of lacy ruffles at the hemline. The layers of green lace, knee-length in the front trailing to floor-length in back, were repeated in miniature on a small black satin and lace cocktail hat perched coquettishly on the model's head.

"With gloves," Oscar explained, "the lady has made the perfect entrance for dinner or disco anywhere in the world."

Knurled head bolt handy device for easy turning

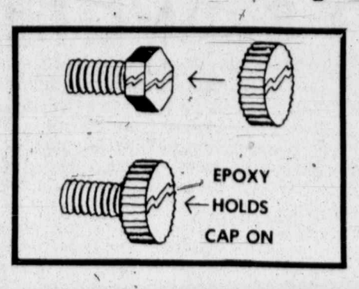

By AL CARRELL

It's not true that I used to think that a "wing nut" was a crazy pilot. Wing nuts are designed for use where the nut needs to be removed often. They have flat thin wings that extend on each side so the removal can be done by hand. Sometimes the bolt head is the accessible part, and maybe you'd like to convert it so it has a better grip to let you remove it by hand instead of grabbing a wrench. If you have saved all those knurled caps from toothpaste tubes and other such containers, here's a use for them. Select a cap that will fit over the bolt head as closely as possible. Then pour some epoxy adhesive into the cap and insert the bolt head. Clean away the excess glue. When the epoxy sets up, you have a nifty-looking, easy-to-grip knurled head bolt that should be easy for hand turning.

Dear Super:

I have found that the window screens fit best if they go back into the same opening from which they came, and so I decided to code them with numbers. Rather than paint the numbers on, however, I used a staple gun to staple Roman numerals (all straight lines) onto the wooden frames. I didn't have to code the windows since I just started at the one next to the front door and worked all the way around the house. — P.B.

Now if you can just remember whether you started to the right or the left of the front door...

Dear Super:

All the autumn leaves in our neighborhood seem to blow into our courtyard. Last year, they all collected in the four corners, and I had to wrestle with them. This fall, I placed plastic drop cloths into each corner. Then when the leaves piled up, I merely folded the corners of plastic together and picked up all the leaves in each corner at one time. I just let the wind do the raking. After each load, I replace the plastic. — B.T.A. I'm trying to sell myself on the idea that leaves are mulch and should be left alone.

A SUPER HINT — A long time ago, we passed along the trick of making wood filler out of white glue and sawdust. If you need a really strong patch for wood, mix the finest sawdust you have with epoxy glue. Put in enough sawdust to make it into an almost putty-like thickness. Work this in as a filler, and when the epoxy cures, you really have a strong patch.

Dear Al:

Until you can replace sections of rotted boards, here's a tip to curtail additional damage. First, remove the rotted wood with a saw, chisel, or whatever tool is called for. Go into the good wood by at least an inch or more. Then rub the bare wood all around the area with table salt. Just pour it dry into your hand and rub as hard as you can against the wood. This won't kill the fungus on rotted wood, but will retard its getting a start in the good wood. — S.S.

SHOP TALK — I haven't tried it, but I just found out about a jack that will raise the car up without any muscle power on your part. It's a tough vinyl bag that you slip under the car. The bag has a hose that attaches to the exhaust pipe so the exhaust inflates the bag, which raises the car. It comes in two sizes for standard and small autos. This bag trick could also come to your rescue to lift a stuck wheel out of mud or snow.

Holiday Folk Fair feature: Ukranian Torte

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Many midwestern cooks, as well as those from other parts of the country, know that if they want to taste interesting ethnic food the place to go is the Holiday Folk Fair held yearly in Milwaukee.

This year the Fair will be 35 years old and will take place Nov. 17-19 at MECCA, Milwaukee's convention center complex. Various nationality groups contribute the food specialties available at the fair, so there's plenty of choice.

When we heard that Mrs. Aleksandra Shimoniak was an expert at making the Ukranian Nut Torte that has been sampled enthusiastically at the fairs, we asked for the recipe. Mrs. Shimoniak sometimes uses a simple coffee-flavored filling and frosting for the torte, then decorates it in true Ukrainian fashion — with a charming geometric design in red, yellow and blue.

When we baked the torte in our test kitchen, we filled and frosted it with coffee-flavored whipped cream just before serving so we wouldn't have to refrigerate it. The nut layers taste best at room temperature.

HOLIDAY FOLD FAIR UKRAINIAN NUT TORTE

8 eggs, separated
1 cup confectioner's sugar
1½ cups walnuts, finely grated
4 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Few grains of salt

Line two 8- or 9-inch round layer-cake pans with wax paper; butter the paper well. Beat the egg yolks until thickened and lemon color; gradually beat in the sugar until mixture is thick and ivory color. Stir in the nuts, flour, lemon rind, lemon juice and salt. With the clean beater, beat egg whites until stiff and fold in. Turn into the prepared pans. Bake in a pre-heated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — about 30 minutes. Let stand in pans on wire racks for a few minutes, then loosen edges and turn out on racks. Cool completely. Fill, frost and decorate as desired.

Note: When we tried this recipe, we used a hand-operated, rotary-type nut grater for the nuts. — C.B.

Create order in sewing room

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

Since housework and I have never understood each other, I have developed this terrific philosophy: If it doesn't show, don't clean it. If it doesn't move, don't feed it.

However, when it comes to my sewing room, I do try for a certain amount of order. I have neat little boxes for my patterns; my buttons are sorted; and all my zippers are side by side in their own nests.

But, I have to admit, there is one thing I haven't conquered yet. What in the world do I do with all the sewing magazines and fashion publications I have accumulated? I don't want to throw them away. If I cut out the articles I want to save, I have no place to file them.

Have you found a place for your magazines? If so, won't you please help me? I'm afraid mine are going to organize and attack.

Dear Betty: Do you know any special tricks to help in making matching buttonholes on double knits? I always mark mine very carefully. Then I practice and practice on a piece of fabric. But, when I try to do them on my garment, they just never turn out right. I have been sewing for 45 years, so I am not usually stumped by a sewing problem.—Lucia K. Chase, Council Bluffs

Double knit is especially fussy about buttonholes because of its stretch. The buttonhole area must, of course, be interfaced. But, for added stability, we need to "stay" each buttonhole location.

Cut small squares of lightweight fusible interfacing that is compatible with your fabric. Fuse one square on the wrong side of the fabric at each buttonhole location. If your knit is extremely stretchable, back the buttonhole area of the facing fabric as well.

Set your machine for a fairly wide buttonhole stitch. Adjust the length guage so the stitches are not as close as usual for a buttonhole. Loosen upper tension.

Now, make a practice sample by layering scraps of facing, interfacing, and fused outer fabric (just like your garment!). Work a buttonhole on the scrap, making sure you go in the same direction as on your garment. This is important when working with knits, since the stretch is not the same lengthwise as it is crosswide. Adjust stitch width and length, upper tension and pressure until you have a perfect buttonhole.

Opening lead — ◇ Q

South won the first trick with the ace of diamonds in order to lead a trump at once.

West stepped up with the ace of spades and led the jack of diamonds. Declarer had to play dummy's king, and East ruffed. (If Declarer played low from dummy, East would discard and ruff the next diamond.)

South eventually led clubs, and West took a club and a diamond. Down one—at a cold contract.

NO HURRY

There was no hurry about drawing trumps. The important thing was to win the first diamond with dummy's king. If East managed to ruff the next diamond he would ruff only declarers lose instead of a top diamond.

Declarer should lead dummy's king of clubs at the second trick. West can play his ace of clubs and lead a diamond, but South plays a low diamond from his hand when East ruffs.

East cannot get a second ruff because West's only entry is the ace of spades. When West gets in with the ace of spades East must follow suit with his last trump.

DAILY QUESTION

Dealer, at your left, bids one diamond, your partner doubles, and the next player bids one spade. You hold: S-92; H-QJ1062; D-7; C-J10764. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two hearts. You have only 4 points in high cards, but your distribution is excellent. Since partner guarantees support for all unbid suits, you should have a good fit in hearts and clubs.

Teamster book gives insight to union's workings, history

by ALDEN WHITMAN
The Los Angeles Times

The advance hype for Steven Brill's "The Teamsters" would lead a prospective reader to believe its major accomplishment is to offer the inside story of Jimmy Hoffa's 1975 abduction and murder. That is an injustice to what is a several-sided and well-balanced account of the history, operation, influence and outlook of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, numerically the largest single union in the United States and among the country's most powerful. Oddly, only 20 percent of the union's 2.3-million members are Teamsters (truckers and warehousemen), while the others are scattered in hundreds of other occupations other unions have neglected to organize.

One of the breed of New Journalists, Brill tackles the Teamsters' story through vignettes and anecdotes about union officials and members, the virtuous and villainous alike. His technique plays upon any reader's curiosity for the human dimension line figures and it virtually guarantees few will close the book in midcourse.

Indeed, Brill begins his investigative work with a brilliant set piece on the golf links at lavish La Costa Hotel and Country Club, just north of San Diego. There on Oct. 13, 1976, Frank Fitzsimmons, the $156,000-a-year (plus perks) president of the Teamsters, is about to tee off in the seventh annual tournament named in his honor. A clutch of famous pop people are on hand to partake with a workers' leader in what was once the sport of the upper class. The gathering is blessed with a letter from the president of the United States.

Fitzsimmons, nonetheless, does not radiate bliss, for he is in deep trouble. The Internal Revenue Service for one thing, is becoming nosy about the union's $1.4-billion Central States Pension Fund and its dubious loans to some very dubious characters in Las Vegas and Miami. Mr. F. also is under pressure from rank-and-file groups, his son is having difficulties and his image seems more than slightly cracked.

Using this fortuitous golfing event as a backdrop, Brill cues onstage five union leaders he assures us are Mafia-connected — Hoffa, of course; Fitzsimmons, once his protege in Detroit; Tony Provenzano, the New Jersey convicted hood; Allen Dorsman of the Pension Fund; and Jackie Presser of Ohio, who has been trying to get the union to refurbish its facade. Scrutinizing their careers, Brill alleges that all have been involved in such practices as extorting money from the boss in return for "sweetheart" contracts, using their union posts for self-enrichment, playing footsie with the workers' pension funds and brass-knuckling and killing their opponents when necessary.

This adds up to a Hieronymous Bosch parade of evildoers and hypocrites, but one is obliged to take on faith that the Mafia is a totally organized and monolithic crime syndicate, as Brill states. It occurs to me that Brill takes the Mafia too much for granted by relying uncritically on FBI and Justice Department sources who, after all, have a vested interest in magnifying the pervasiveness of the Mob for the sake of higher congressional appropriations. This is not to say Teamster leaders have not played patty-cake with gangsters, but it is an easier (and more popular) charge to make than to document.

Brill, nonetheless, does his best to be fair to the union by taking us beyond the Teamsters' top leadership and into its pockets of honesty and democratic practice. In refreshing contrast to Fitzsimmons, we get to know Ron Carey, head of local 804 in New York, whose income is a modest $34,000 a year, including reimbursed expenses. We also are introduced to Al Barkett, a rank and file truck driver with a net income of $28,000.

Barkett, who is presented as typical, is hard working and shrewd, with a head full of commonsense doubts about his union's chiefs. Yet he seizes the indubitable benefits of union membership in high wages and medical and hospital coverage. It seems clear, Brill says, that the union leaders, for all their alleged chicanery, have indeed "taken care of" their members' pocketbooks.

Brill's best piece of reportage deals with Harold Gibons, an aging socialist from the '30s who was Hoffa's executive vice president for most of his term as head of the union. It is a bittersweet portrait of a utopian progressive whose ideals for the union were slowly sapped by plush living and an elastic expense account.

One of the techniques (or tricks, if you will) of New Journalism is to give the reader a camera-eye view of a subject. This is precisely what Steven Brill has accomplished, fleshing out his pictures of Teamster personalities with intimate details of their lives and characters.

'Lifers' star in film designed to help stop juvenile crime

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A grinning juvenile offender proudly announces he hopes to attend school to learn security systems so he can become a professional thief.

Three months later, he has a job and a clean record. What happened?

He and thousands of other young offenders were literally "scared straight" in a brutal, intimidating rehabilitation program run by lifers at Rahway State Prison in New Jersey. It claims 80 to 90 percent success.

"Scared Straight," a one-hour documentary from Los Angeles television station KTLA, follows 17 young people as they are locked in the prison auditorium to hear straight talk about the horrors of prison life.

The lifers pull no punches. It is a shocking program, with possibily the most offensive language ever broadcast. The producers felt censorship would blunt the program's impact. The lifers warn the youths what they're in for in prison: Murder, rape, homosexuality, suicide and a total loss of identity and dignity. It is a routine of bells, boredom and brutality.

The show, narrated by Peter Falk, will be syndicated to other stations by Golden West Television Productions and will be available to civic and educational groups.

Producer-writer-director Arnold Shapiro went back to New Jersey three months after their indocrination and found 16 of the 17 young people had gone straight. Six months later, all 17 had clean records.

"It's unequaled by traditional methods," says Judge George J. Nicola in the documentary. "It's effective and the most inexpensive rehabilitation method known."

Shapiro, director of development for Golden West Television Productions, took a film crew cross-country because he hoped it would inspire similar pograms in California and other states.

"California and New York lead the nation in juvenile crime," he said. "Our justice system obviously is not working. This seems to be working, and it doesn't interfere with other programs. It doesn't cost the taxpayers a dime. It gives the convicts something worthwhile to do."

Ambitious movie begun

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The most ambitious movie in the history of the Walt Disney Studios is the $17 million "Black Hole," now in production.

The casting of the space epic is also another departure for Disney. It stars Maximillian Schell, Anthony Perkins, Robert Forster, Joseph Bottoms, Jennifer O'Neill and Ernest Borgnine. None has ever been in a Disney picture before.

The film, with a shooting schedule of 122 days, is taking up every sound stage at the studio. It is closed to all visitors.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Betty White plays a cynical divorcee in the NBC miniseries "The Best Place To Be," which also stars Donna Reed, Helen Hayes, and John Phillip Law in his TV debut...

Lee Grant, Chris Sarandon and Hurd Hatfield star in the CBS movie "You Can't Go Home Again," adapted from the novel by Thomas Wolfe. .. Foster Brooks and Paul Lynde join the cast of the madcap western "The Villain"... Susan Flannery, Stuart Whitman and Patty Duke Astin star in the NBC miniseries "Women in White."

PYRAMID POWER, PSYCHICS AND OTHER NONSENSE!

A review of the work of the Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal. The committee was established to investigate unusual phenomena without bias and to help the public distinguish between what evidence is valid and what is invalid, between legitimate questions and manufactured mysteries, between fact and sheer fiction. These scientists like a good tale as much as the next person, and they are often avid science-fiction readers, but they do not want the average citizen to be duped. Paul Kurtz, founding chairman of the committee thinks the recent tide of anti-scientific and pseudoscientific claims threatens to drown us in sheer nonsense. The committee opposes the commercial or ideological exploitation of ignorance.

The review will include comments on the absurdities of Pyramid Power, Psychic Phenomena (a la Uri Geller), UFO's, Bermuda Triangle, mystefied tales of ancient astronauts, Biorythms and other paranormal claims. Books on these weird subjects sell by the millions while scientific rebuttals gather dust on library shelves.

'Comes a Horseman' is somber experience

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

"COMES A HORSEMAN" views the modern American West through a glass darkly — in fact, the way Ingmar Bergman might see it. Although set in World War II, the plot is frontier traditional: plucky land owner (Jane Fonda) teams with hired hand (James Caan) to save her ranch from a rapacious neighbor (Jason Robards). No reason old formulas can't be reworked. But director Alan J. Pakula maintains such a somber mood that the whole thing is a downer — except for the stunning photography of Gordon Willis. Fonda gives another of her thoughtful performances, and Caan is convincing as the cowhand. Believability fades with the one-dimensional role played by Robards, who needs only a black hat to complete the characterization. Rated PG, because of violence.

"MIDNIGHT EXPRESS" (slang for prison escape) is a raw, compelling, apparently factual account of an American youth's payment for a tragic mistake: an attempt to smuggle hashish out of Turkey. Billy Hayes, a Marquette University student, endured unspeakable conditions in a Turkish prison and asylum before escaping to Greece. Director Alan Parker depicts Hayes' torment in a film that is often punishing to watch. His cast is superb, especially Brad Davis as the ill-fated American; he is touching and eloquent, a solid candidate for stardom. The rating is R, with many violent scenes and one of semi-nudity. Not for the squeamish.

Actor Brad Davis, 28, from Talahasse, Tenn. and Atlanta Ga., is held back by prison inmates during the filming of the Turkish prison movie "Midnight Express" recently on location at Fort St. Elmo in Malta. (AP Laserphoto)

INCREDIBLE ADVENTURE IN A FANTASTIC WORLD...

WHERE TIME BEGAN
JULES VERNE'S CLASSIC THRILLER!

Lieutenant Starbuck began career on beery note

By JAY SHARBUTT

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In ABC's "Battlestar Galactica," raffish, skirt-chasing Lt. Starbuck carries on as befits a young fighter pilot who feels he can beat any Cylon at any game, any place, any time.

Actor Dirk Benedict, who plays Starbuck, is like him in a way. But it's doubtful Starbuck (a) played Dixieland trombone in college; (b) has a novel afoot, and (c) began his career on a beery note.

Nor would Starbuck say things like, "I look at the highs and lows of one's professional life as a wonderful drama that I'm creating. I don't take any of it personally. Or seriously.

"So, great, 'Battlestar Galactica,' recognition, interviews, autographs, all that. Two years before that, I couldn't get arrested if I exposed myself at Hollywood and Vine.

"It's all part of the same novel," says Benedict, who emphasizes the upbeat even though he often gave the downbeat as a jazz bandleader in his student days at Whitman College in Walla Walla, Wash.

The son of a lawyer, he'd been a music major. But when he passed a campus theater at a time auditions were underway for "Show Boat," a beer-fueled challenge changed his whole life.

"I was drunk at the time," grinned the pride and joy of tiny White Sulphur Springs, Mont. "My football-playing buddies and I were inebriated and walking by this theater one spring evening.

"I said, 'Aw, I can do that.' So they dared me to."

He found himself cast in the show, "and it opened up a whole world to me which felt strangely comfortable," he said, rendering a bit of "Old Man River" right then and there.

Benedict, a guy who talks somewhat like a Zen version of Dale Carnegie and is one of Hollywood's freer spirits, broke in as a professional actor with a Seattle repertory company after college.

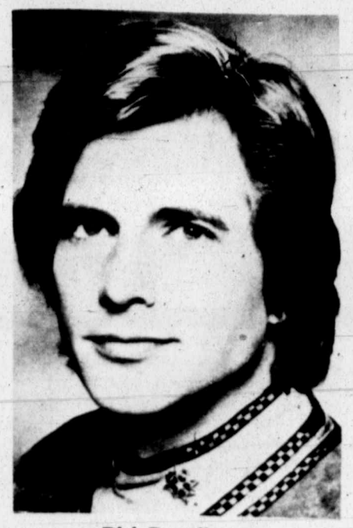

Then came summer stock, two Broadway shots, several film and TV roles and even a short-lived ABC series, "Chopper One."

Which indeed is a world "totally alien to where I came from," that being what he unabashedly calls "a Hemingway childhood, a cliche right out of Mark Twain — hunting, fishing, working outdoors on a ranch. Great way to go."

When "Chopper One" crashed, he decamped to a cabin back home in Montana. There, he says, he spent almost two years before returning here, writing a still-to-be-finished novel of life as he knows it.

Naturally, it's about a kid who grows up in Montana and winds up in Hollywood, he said, and is a bit in the deadpan manner of the Tom Robbins' best-seller, "Another Roadside Attraction."

Mildly grousing that his "Battlestar" work gives him no time to continue tussling with the muse, he says the novel's theme is that "there aren't any limits to what one can do with one's life. Which is my own personal philosophy.

Reynolds plays detective

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Burt Reynolds stars in "Sharky's Maehine," adapted from the novel by William Diehl.

He plays an Atlanta police detective who is called on to solve the attempted murder of a sophisticated call girl having an affair with a U.S. senator seeking his party's presidential nomination.

Diehl is a former columnist for the Atlanta Constitution and onetime managing editor of Atlanta magazine.

'Diff'rent Strokes' replaces 'Waverly Wonders'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC lately has heavily promoted the person and cute sayings of Gary Coleman, a merry-faced tyke who may remind you of a smaller Rodney Allen Rippey without the hamburger.

Seems he and an older lad, Todd Bridges, are in a new comedy, "Diff'rent Strokes," playing two orphaned brothers from Harlem taken in by a white, middle-aged millionaire (Conrad Bain).

"Strokes," to fill the void caused by the exit of "Waverly Wonders," premieres on NBC tonight. It may widen the void.

From Norman Lear's emporium (though he's not involved in it or TV now), it has all the Lear trademarks but quality.

It has a clash of generations, ditto racial, social and fiscal backgrounds. There's a theme song, scenes of a city, New York in this case, and yes, it begins in the living room.

Alas, the script suggests the author paused somewhere but his typewriter pressed on without him, perhaps feeling if it does well here it can leave him and swing a better deal at Universal.

We start with the millionaire, a widower, chatting with his middle-aged housekeeper (Charlotte Rae) and priming her for the new arrivals with a few jokes, one of which he calls "little."

"When they're that little, they need a lot of love," she says.

Ah-hah. He says he is taking in these Harlem kids because he told their dying mother, his former housekeeper, he'd do this. The doorbell rings, the tykes enter. He addresses them as "gentlemen."

Coleman beams and tells his older brother: "How 'bout that, Willis? Downtown two minutes and we're already gentlemen."

More chat. Then comes Bain's 13-year-old daughter (Dana Plato). She greets the lads, exchanges friendly insults, then withdraws.

This is known as establishing the characters. The rags-to-riches plot thins as Bain shows the new arrivals their spacious bedroom in his Manhattan penthouse. They are properly amazed.

Alas, though supplied with love and goodies, the older brother feels he and his sibling don't belong in such luxurious surroundings. As he puts it: "We're the wrong color."

"I'll get a skin transplant," Coleman quickly replies.

The rest: Bridges plots their retreat back to the ghetto and Bain tries to get them to change their minds.

The show's approach is unique: a plea for tolerance that asks two poor black kids from Harlem to understand and show empathy toward a white, middle-aged millionaire from Park Avenue.

Where else but in Hollywood could such a concept arise? They are in touch with reality here, or my name isn't Nero.

Summation: Coleman is mighty appealing, Bridges is a fine young actor, the rest of the cast is highly professional. But this show is a turkey and it's not even Thanksgiving yet.

Actors reunited

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Barbra Streisand and Ryan O'Neal are reunited in "Main Event," now filming here.

The film tells the story of a perfume manufacturer (Ms. Streisand) left penniless after her accountant flees the country. Her only asset is a prizefighter (O'Neal), who she decides to personally manage.

They were first together in the movie "What's Up Doc?"

Nothing prepared Greg Harrison for 'Centennial' role

By JERRY BUCK

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Gregory Harrison believes that the island of Catalina off the coast of California is a great place for a actor to grow up.

"It's crimeless, smogless, peaceful," he said. "I was always in the water, fishing, skiing, rowing. Or hiking around the island.

"You could develop a very independent lifestyle. You could leave home early in the morning and not come home until night and your parents didn't have to worry."

Most important, he said, "is that at an early age I learned to entertain myself. Your imagination takes over. I guess that's what led to my becoming an actor."

Harrison might still be on Catalina, where his father runs the glass bottom boat, if Jason Robards Jr. hadn't spotted him in an amateur production and encouraged him to seek training.

Little on Catalina, however, prepared him for other aspects of his role as pioneer Levi Zendt on NBC's "Centennial," the 26-hour series adapted from the book by James A. Michener. "Centennial" airs on Saturday the next two weeks.

His is a pivotal role that bridges the era of early exploration and the foundation and growth of the town of Zendt Farm, which becomes Centennial, Colo. Harrison, who ages from 23 to 66 in six segments, said, "All the aging in the show depends on how Levi looks. He becomes the patriarch of the town of Centennial.

"Donald Pleasence knocked me into the Ohio River," he said. "I got a four-inch gash and staph from the polluted water. I was laid up for four days.

"I had to learn to drive a team of grays. Then I had to drive six oxen with a whip. It had to be me in the shots and I felt terrible hitting the oxen. Then I realized their hides are so thick they hardly felt it."

Harrison, who had never been on horseback, also had to learn to ride like an expert. He said, "I had an accident with the saddle horn and I couldn't go to the bathroom for five days without excruciating pain."

Harrison, 28 and unmarried, spent four months on location in Kentucky and Colorado.

"The hardest thing is leaving a production when it's over," he said. "You've established a lifestyle and made friends. It reminds me of the bond you form with friends in Army basic training. I've been melancholy since I left. I miss the people and the place.

"It's a wonderful, simple life. All you have to do is think about going to work in the morning and being with your friends at night"

Harrison said he had only one gripe about the production. "They spent so much time on the sets, the horses and the cattle that when we started shooting they'd say, 'We're behind schedule and can't shoot it a second time,' he said.

Clements' firm named in $42 million swindle suit involved in the oil venture by former Georgia state Sen. Eugene Holley.

Carver and his attorneys have refused comment on the lawsuit. But it reportedly contends that Carver became involved in the oil venture because he was told he could reap extradorinary profits from a $2 million investment, plus a commission to Jaidah.

The oil wells involved were abandoned in 1971 by a Japanese oil concern after being drilled by Clements' SEDCO Inc.

Holding out that promise to Carver, the suit says, were top executives and consultants employed by SEDCO, and Carver's new partner, Holley.

Just before January 1976, Carver alleges, he paid the commission to Jaidah, and in partnership with Holley, embarked on the drilling project for which they hired various SEDCO subsidiaries.

Eight months later, SEDCO and its subsidiaries had been paid millions in drilling and consulting fees, the suit said. Holley, a non-paying partner in Carver's oil venuture, is reported to have used the paper assets of their partnership, Holcar Inc., to hold off a group of Georgia bankers demanding repayment of $30 million in personal loans to Holley.

Carver said that in the same eight-month period, he invested nearly $10 million of his personal fortune into wells that produced no saleable oil — only low-grade, high-sulphur crude.

After Carver's attorneys tried for a year to extricate him from the predicament, a negotiated takeover of the troubled project by a Pakastani-based company was prohibted by the Qatar government.

Carver's suit says he was banished from Qatar without compensation for his investment, for non-performance on the oil concession.

SEDCO continued to pursue a December 1977 lawsuit against Carver for $232,000 in back drilling fees, and after losing nearly $17 million and his property, Carver filed his $42 million countersuit.

The suit, alleging fraud and misrepresentation, names SEDCO; the former president of its international subsidiary, Amos Carter; SEDCO's TerraMar Consultants Inc., subsidiary; and Robert Smith, a top TerraMar officer.

In addition to $16.9 million he claimed in actual damages, Carver asked the court to order SEDCO to pay him $25 million in punitive damages for what Carver claims was a deliberate scheme to misrepresent to him the extent and the quality of the available oil reserves — and the cost it would take to extract them.

SEDCO would not permit interviews with Amos Carter.

B. Gill Clements said his firm had no active involvement with the Qatar project until after Holley and Carver had obtained permission to reopen the offshore wells in a concession agreement with the Qatar government signed in January 1976.

Holley told the Union, "It is not in my best interest to talk to news reporters."

Such payments by American businessmen to foreign governments — such as the "commission" allegedly paid by Carver to Jaidah — were not outlawed specifically by Congress until 1977.

who is nearing the end of his second year in office, said his case load was not always as comfortable as it is currently.

"When I took office in January of 1977, there were 671 cases pending. Then during 1977, we had 503 indictments. So far this year, we've indicted 528 cases," Martin said.

"That's a total indicted case load of about 1700. But we don't have any problem. We've cleared the docket. There are definitely less than 400 indicted cases pending at this time."

Martin's office, with the help of an increase in personnel and the addition of two new district courts, has been able to whittle down the case load.

Two years ago he had three lawyers and three secretaries in his office. The district attorney staff now includes an administrative assistant, five lawyers and four secretaries.

The district attorney also has instituted weekly grand jury sessions, which yield about 50 indictments each month.

"The faster you get these people indicted, the faster you can get them scheduled for trial," he said.

"We have no great fear of losing any cases at all. We have guilty pleas scheduled with the court through December. Everyone indicted would be ready for trial within the 120-day period."

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals decision eliminated the question as to whether the act could be applied retroactively.

The court considered the case of Linzy Wade, who was convicted in Austin of driving while intoxicated and received a suspended three-year prison sentence.

Wade was arrested Feb. 5. On July 5, he tried to have the indictment dismissed, since 120 days had passed without prosecutors announcing they were ready for trial.

The court said prosecutors and courts are not required to follow a new law before it takes effect. Even so, Martin said he doubts retroactive application would have significantly affected Midland County.

"Most of the cases that would have been dismissed would have been dismissed whether we had the Speedy Trial Act or not," he said.

The prosecutor said about 49 cases would have been affected had the court ruled the law could be considered retroactively. And since February, his office has stacked about 250 cases which are 120 days or more old. But all these cases have been called for trial dates, Martin said.

"However, I don't think the real issue has been faced yet. The court hasn't clearly answered the question of whether a case will have to be brought to trial within 120 days or that the case would have to just be ready for trial in that period," Martin said.

"The law does not say that a case must have been brought to trial within 120-day period. It does say a defendant has a constitutional right to a speedy trial within that framework. I think the court will eventually say that the prosecution must be ready for trial within the 120 day period."

Murdoch files suit

The Washington Post

NEW YORK — New York Post publisher Rupert Murdoch filed suit against the Daily News Thursday, alleging that the News conspired with the newspaper deliverers union to prevent him from bringing out a new morning paper, the New York Daily Sun, that would have competed with the News for readership.

The Post seeks $75 million in treble damages for alleged violations of antitrust laws and a court order prohibiting the news and drivers from any further actions against the unborn Sun.

Murdoch broke with the New York Times and Daily News to settle the pressmen's strike and resumed publication of the Post on Oct. 5.

Two weeks later, Murdoch announced that he would launch the Sun, a morning tabloid obviously aimed at taking readers and advertisers away from the Daily News.

"It will be a bright, enterttaining, street-smart paper not unlike what the Daily News was like 15 years ago," Sun editor Neal Travis said.

However, the Sun has not appeared.

The Post's suit charges that the Daily News threatened to eliminate drivers' jobs at the News if "the Sun were allowed to appear" and that Douglas Lachance, the head of the drivers' union, refused to consider distribution of the Sun "except upon terms acceptable to the News."

Jonathan Thompson, a spokesman for the Daily News, said the News never threatened to lay off drivers in retaliation for the appearance of the Sun. Thompson said news executives had not received a copy of the suit that was filed in U.S. District Court here, and had no formal comment.

The News and drivers have an agreement that the drivers cannot provide a better deal to any other paper than the union provides the News. Lachance initially agreed to let Murdoch deliver the Sun by using wholesalers and thereby save money. Lachance changed his mind after the News said there were parts of the city in which it might want to use wholesalers.

State Department concerned about overtime payments to armed agents

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The State Department office of security paid $1.3 million in overtime to 135 of its 144 armed agents during the last fiscal year — an average of $10,000 apiece — and the figure is expected to rise to $1.8 million for the same number of agents this year, department figures show.

Officials at various levels agreed the situation has gotten out of hand — despite the special working circumstances of agents who guard public figures — and said the officials are considering possible solutions.

The situation has created a group of agents who are "well-to-do, but overworked and financially overextended, who earn the equivalent of their base salary and sometimes double or triple it in overtime," according to one State Department source.

"When they go out and buy a house, they ask the office to tell the bank they make, say, $16,000 in salary, but can count on making another $16,000 in overtime pay, so they are way overextended," the source said.

The nature of the work and the long hours combine to cause ulcers, high blood pressure, possible drinking problems, and a high rate of marital difficulties, among other problems, the source said.

The armed agents, who are assigned to guard visiting dignitaries such as those in the Arab-Israeli peace delegations, have been working such long hours — 12 or 14 hours a day, 30 or 60 days in a row — that some sources say they are concerned about the effectiveness of the security and the physical and mental well-being of some of the agents themselves.

The recent rise in terrorist activities, the convening of the U.N. General Assembly, and the Arab-Israeli peace talks here all have contributed to a dramatic increase in the demands on agents' time, State Department officials said.

The number of dignitary protection assignments has grown from 150 in 1976 to 238 so far in 1978 while the number of agents has remained the same.

John Thomas, assistant secretary for administration at the State Department, disputed allegations that the level of protection has become inadequate. But, he said, "we are concerned about the long hours to the point that we have already started a review of the method of assignment" and the effects on the efficiency of agents."

But "I don't see any increase in staff coming," he said.

The agents' base salaries range from about $13,000 to more than $30,000.

However, the Secret Service insists on using a much larger number of agents per assignment than the State Department provides, one source said. In fact, the souree said, visiting heads of state have on occasion declined Secret Service protection because "they didn't want (so many) gunslingers, follow-cars, platoons of troops and flashing lights.

Mysterious cracks raising new nuclear safety questions

By THOMAS O'TOOLE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Mysterious cracks have appeared in the piping that supplies cooling water to atomic power plants in West Germany and Japan, raising new safety questions about similar nuclear plants in the United States.

So serious does the Nuclear Regulatory Commission consider these cracks that it has reconstituted a Pipe Crack Study Group of 10 experts it put together three yeas ago when 18 pipe cracks appeared in six U.S. nuclear plants.

"What surprises us about the new cracks in Germany and Japan is that they've shown up in very large diameter pipe, up to two feet across," said Harold Denton, director of the NRC's Office of Nuclear Reactor Regulation. "This is the first time we've seen cracks in such large diameter pipe."

If cracks in large diameter pipes worsen and become leaks, so much water might flood from a nuclear plant's cooling system that it might be unable to cool adequately the burning uranium in the reactor core. Though the possibility is remote, the core could begin to overheat under such conditions and possibly even begin to melt before an emergency cooling system could be activated to augment the leaking pipes.

The fresh cracks have appeared in 12-inch pipes in three Japanese nuclear power plants and in 24-inch pipes in one German plant. NRC officials have expressed the most concern over the German cracks, in part because they are in the largest pipe and in part because they are in three different sections of pipe.

The cracks are all small, not very deep, and have not resulted in any leaks, but the Japanese Agency of Natural Resources and Energy has ordered two electricity companies to close down their three plants and replace the cracked pipes. The German Reactor Safety Commission has not ordered the pipes to be replaced, but it has closed down the 237,000-kilowatt plant near Munich to study the cracked pipes and investigate their cause.

The large diameter pipes of the type that have cracked in Japan and Germany serve as the nuclear power plant's primary cooling system. The pipes carry water that circulates right around the reactor vessel, cooling it down and removing excess heat generated by the burning uranium inside the vessel.

The NRC has sent experts to Japan and Germany to study the cracks, talk with nuclear engineers about how they found the cracks and what they believe the cause is. U.S. nuclear engineers at first expressed disbelief when the German cracks were discovered two months ago.

"There was a theory widely held that large stainless steel pipes could not crack," said Darrell Eisenhut, deputy director of the NRC's division of operating reactors, "but there's no question that the cracks in the German pipes are real. I've seen them."

Curiously, the discovery of the pipe cracks in Japan and Germany came on the heels of a fresh cracks found in much smaller pipes in two American plants.

Cracks were found in eight pipes of 10-inch diameter in Iowa Electric Light & Power Co.'s nuclear plant at Cedar Rapids and in one pipe at the Brunswick plant of Carolina Power & Light Co. near Wilmington, N.C. The crack in one pipe at the Iowa plant was big enough to have sprung a leak, which forced the closing of the plant to repair the leak and the cracks in the seven other pipes.

Despite the leaky pipe in Iowa, the cracks in the two U.S. plants are not viewed as seriously as the cracks in Germany and Japan. First, the U.S. pipes that have cracked are made of Inconel, a steel more susceptible to cracking than the stainless steel used in the cracked pipes abroad. They are also in smaller pipes that are not as essential to the cooling systems as the large diameter pipes that have cracked abroad.

Workers recover explosion victims

By GORDON D. MOTT

VILLAHERMOSA, Mexico (AP) — Rescue workers dug bodies Thursday from the smoldering ashes of a crossroads truck-stop destroyed when a natural gas pipeline ruptured and sent a fireball flashing through a dozen small restaurants and taco stands.

Adolfo Arroyo Villasenor, chief security officer for the national petroleum company PEMEX, which operates the pipeline, said 52 persons were killed by the blast and 11 severely burned. He said only 40 bodies were identified because the rest were too badly burned.

The fiery explosion occurred late Wednesday near this southern Mexican city.

Small fires still burned in the area Thursday afternoon. Gaston Rodriguez Ferrara, a pilot employed by the state, said the explosion wiped out large chunks of the highways and left "a very deep crater approximately 240 feet in diameter. Everything was wiped out."

The blast occurred at about 11:30 p.m. along a highway 48 miles west of this city, capital of oil- and gas-rich Tabasco state in southernmost Mexico, 360 miles southeast of Mexico City.

The 21-inch pipeline, a main line carrying gas from the region to Mexico City, burst and leaked gas into the surrounding area. The gas exploded into flames and quickly consumed the crossroads buildings.

Radio reporter Jesus Torpey said an unidentified survivor told him a tank truck was parked at the stop at the time of the explosion "and there was nothing left of it — it too exploded." The survivor did not know what the tank truck was carrying.

"The flames shot up very high and destroyed shacks, burned trees and everything else some 300 yards around," Torpey said. "They're still dragging out burned bodies."

A Pemex spokesman said initial investigations indicated the line break apparently was caused by a fault in the pipe material.

Tabasco state Police Chief Capt. Jose Serna Garcia said the flames destroyed about a dozen huts, small restaurants and taco stands that served bus and truck drivers at the intersection of two major highways.

Mass held for victims

COLONIA BENITO JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Sobbing survivors of a natural gas pipeline explosion that practically wiped out this tiny southern Mexican truck stop held a midnight requiem Mass in its church — one of the few buildings still standing.

"What good has the pipeline done us?" a woman at the service asked a reporter. "It's killed all our people."

Fifty-two persons were killed and 11 were severely burned, officials said, when the crossroads village of roughly 100 inhabitants was almost leveled late Wednesday. The blast left a crater about 300 feet across and 20 feet deep.

Discovery completes

Aminoil USA, Inc., No. 1 Harral, Leonard oil discovery in Pecos County, 20 miles southeast of Fort Stockton, was completed for a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 160 barrels of oil per day and no water.

The potential was calculated from a seven-hour flow through a 24/64-inch choke and perforations from 7,076 to 7,298 feet. That flow previously was reported in error as the 24-hour potential.

The pay was acidized with 6,000 gallons and fractured with 63,700 gallons.

Total depth is 20,082 feet and nine and five-eighths-inch casing is set at 11,666 feet. The plugged back depth is 7,850 feet.

Opertor reported the top of the Yates at 2,008 feet; the top of the san Andres at 3,250 feet and the top of the Leonard at 5,192 feet. The ground elevation is 2,950 feet.

The discovery is 1,980 feet from south and 1,320 feet from east lines of sectidon 5, block 125, T&StL survey. There is no other nearby production.

Producers seek buyers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Natural gas producers — who couldn't provide enough of their product to meet demands last winter — this year are looking for customers to buy up unused reserves.

The chief spokesman for natural gas marketers, George H. Lawrence, said Thursday that pipeline and distribution companies are trying to find new customers or sell additional gas to old customers.

He said many natural gas users have switched to oil or coal and no longer consider gas supplies reliable.

"It's going to be a hard selling job to get them back," he said.

Lawrence, president of the American Gas Association, said the industry is lagging behind in reserves-on-hand. He said the gas industry in general has reserves adequate for 10 to 12 years of current production, whereas the supply should be 15-to-20 years. He said reserves should back up contracts, which usually run for 20 years.

Red Adair fights fire

GRAFORD, Texas (AP) — Drilling mud was to be pumped into a 4,000-foot burning well near here today as Red Adair's petroleum firefighting team attempted to extinguish a fire that's been raging since Tuesday.

A spokesman for Gulf Energy Resources of San Antonio, the owner of the well, said it ignited when a drill bit hit a gas pocket during drilling operations and mud already in the well could not contain the pressure.

Officials of the Halliburton Co. and Adair's Houston firm said they hope the mud pumped into the well Friday will stop the flow estimated at between 500,000 and one million cubic feet a day.

There were no injuries reported, company officials said.

The extreme heat from the flames caused the well's derrick to lean at a precarious angle, later forcing workers to pull it down entirely.

The well is located about five miles east of this West Texas town.

Louisiana state official not happy with storage

NEW IBERIA, La. (AP) - Secretary of Natural Resources William Huls says he is not satisfied with the safety record of the federal government's new program to store oil in underground salt domes.

"We asked back in December 1977 that you adhere to our rules and regulations relative to fire prevention. To this date you've done nothing," Huls told officials of the federal government at a hearing Thursday night. 7

About 100 people showed up for the hearing on the issue of safety at the 75,000-barrel oil storage site proposed for the Weeks Island salt dome near New Iberia.

Weeks Island, where Morton Salt Co. has a mine, is one of several places where the government plans to store a billion barrels of oil by 1985 as a safeguard against a foreign oil embargo.

Concern about safety at the salt domes has increased since a man was killed in August in an explosion and fire at the first of the underground storage sites, near Hackberry.

"I can assure you that nowhere is one barrel of oil worth a loss of a life or injury, and we are mindful of that responsibility," Bill Parker, head of the federal oil storage program in Louisiana, said at the Thursday night hearing.

Kim Hoag, safety engineer with the U.S. Department of Energy, said government officials are taking steps to ensure that the Weeks Island site will be safe.

Huls asked Hoag if the government had filed fire-prevention plans with the state. Parker said the plans are being prepared.

"Did you at Hackberry file those plans?" Huls asked. "Did you get a permit from the fire marshal?" n

"I cannot answer you tonight," Parker replied.

"I'll help you. You did not," Huls said.

Huls said state officials have tried to cooperate with the oil stocage program, but that their patience is wearing thin.

"We've had a fire and a man is dead," Huls said. "We've turned our cheeks for the last time."

Huls warned the federal officials that they had better be in compliance with state fire regulations before the next hearing, expected to be held in December in Bton Rouge.

Salt mining at Weeks Island is scheduled to continue despite the oil storage program. Ted Williams, president of Local 29 of the International Chemical Workers Union, which represents workers at the mine, said that in addition to safety, their chief question was: "Five to 10 years from now, do we still have a job?"

"No action we take will result in unemployment at Weeks Island," said Carlisle Hysted, an official with the Department of Energy.

John Goodbrake, manager of the Morton Salt mine, said Weeks Island has been mined since the turn of the century, and "it's our intention to do everything possible to be here at the turn of the next century."

Amoco honors hands

ODESSA — Amoco Production Co. 350 Odessa District employees were honored Thursday night for completing 2 million man-hours without a lost-time accident, the company announced.

Employees and their spouses celebrated the achievement at a steak dinner held at the Ector County Coliseum. They also received a company award signed by Amoco Production President George H. Galloway.

"This is an outstanding record," Galloway said in a congratulatory letter, "one seldom achieved in the production and processing of oil and gas."

The award was presentd by Ralph Reed, Amoco Division production manager, and John Okerson, Division operations superintendent, both of Houston. Jim E. York is the Odessa District superintendent with offices at 1118 W. 12th St. The first of its kind to be presented to any Amoco Production district in the country, the award recognizes Odessa employees for working nearly three years without a lost-time injury.

The dinner for employees, held in Exhibit Barn A at the coliseum, was catered by the Chuck Wagon Gang. A similar observance will be held later this month for Sonara sub-district employees, who are included in the Odessa District.

Cryobiologist says being revived after frozen death is 'science fiction'

By RUDY MAXA
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Around the United States lying frozen in liquid nitrogen are about 20 corpses whose descendants hope medical science will someday find a cure to the disease that took the life of their loved one. Then, the scenario has it, the bodies will be thawed, surgery will be performed and, voila, life after death.

Dr. David Robinson

"That's pure science fiction," snorts Dr. David Robinson, a 46-year-old British cryobiologist whose work at Georgetown University is nonetheless a step toward that final solution. Robinson is one of only about 20 or 30 investigators in the world concerned with cryobiology, the study of living things at very low temperatures. In recent years those scientists have successfully frozen individual cells — blood and sperm, for example. Their next challenge: preserving entire organs.

"Organ transplant operations are here to stay," says Robinson, "and the problem is rejection. Unless you have a perfect match of organ and patient, it's often rejected. The other problem is timing. There's not enough time to check and characterize the organs, they have to be slapped into the patients before they die. Freezing would solve that; you could bank them just as blood is banked."

Toward that end Robinson has found that the kind of anti-freeze automobiles use might help preserve major organs. Using hearts from rats, mice or chickens, Robinson prepares cell cultures that have the same properties as the whole organ. (He's learned, for example, that heart cells beat spontaneously and regularly as he prepares them for freezing). Once he successfully freezes and thaws the cells, he tries to freeze the entire organ. "When we can bank organs successfully — preserving in the brain the memory and individuality — then we might begin thinking about preserving a whole organism like a human, which would give a whole new slant to the word 'stiff,'" he says. "But today we can't even freeze a piece of skin let alone a whole heart or human without producing some damage. Right now those preserved corpses are nothing more than frozen meat and bone."

Usually liquid nitrogen is used, and that has to be topped off every week. It's a considerable investment. What happens when inflation overwhelms?"

But Robinson thinks it wise that the world begin considering the moral and ethical questions raised by the possibility of everlasting life.

"What's it going to be like when you come back? You'll find a high-tech society you wouldn't understand; you'd be a living fossil. I suspect we probably wouldn't want to preserve entire human beings," says Robinson. "We're not going to solve the world's problems if we can all avoid death."

Number of expatriates in Africa increasing

By DAVID LAMB
The Los Angeles Times

NAIROBI, Kenya — American Bob Wilcox has lived in Zaire for three years. He is pushing 50 and tiring fast of the expatriate life.

What Wilcox wants to do is put away enough of his $25,000 a year income to buy a boat that he and his wife can sail off into the South Pacific sunsets.

Another two or three years and he'll have the money, he says, if he can keep his sanity amid the chaos, the heat and the generally unpleasant living conditions of Zaire.

Wilcox — the name is fictional, at his request — is one of more than 20,000 Americans living in black Africa. Depending on where they live and what they put into the experience, their lives can be either dreadful or delightful.

The Wilcoxes' three-bedroom clapbord house, situated in a guarded compound, is modest by any standards. It rents for $850 a month, about half of which is covered by his employer, a U.S. construction company. There is no telephone and sometimes no water.

WILCOX HAS LITTLE contact with Zairians because he cannot speak French. There is little to do on weekends. The last time he took his wife out to dinner the bill was $150. The wine was extra. While driving home that night, they were stopped at a roadblock and the police shook them down for a few dollars more.

"This isn't living," Wilcox, an engineer, said to his wife the other evening. "I don't know what you'd call it. Surviving, I guess. But it isn't living."

Although accurate figures are not available, the number of American expatriates in Africa is undoubtedly increasing as economic opportunity and development expands. They include businessmen, technical advisers, journalists, missionaries, teachers, pilots, oil executives, wildlife conservationists, worldly wanderers, experts and alleged experts in fields ranging from agriculture to zoology.

Most come for two or three years, under contract to an American company or an African government. In most countries there is nothing glamorous and a great deal that is difficult. But there are places in Africa where companies have trouble recalling an American when his contract in Africa is finished. One of them is Kenya, a home away from home for about 5,000 Americans.

BILL GRAY — NOT HIS REAL name — has worked in Nairobi for four years. He is a well-paid executive with a New York financial instituton and he lives in a large house with a swimming pool in a mostly white suburb. He speaks Swahili and often socializes with Kenyans in the top echelons of business and government.

The things he misses — ballet and the theater, weekend football games, Christmas snow and peanut butter — are more than compensated for, he says, by the bonuses of working in Africa: a 10-minute commute to work, a relatively cosmopolitan city with a Southern California climate, three first-run movie theaters, some pleasant restaurants, generally good race relations and weekends that offer the coast at Mombassa, camping in the shadows of snow-capped Mt. Kenya, and game parks rich with some of Africa's most abundant wildlife.

"I'm going to stay in Kenya until they throw me out or bury me," Gray says. "I've told the head office that this is my last stop. Promotions be hanged. Kenya is home."

Most Americans who come to Africa for an American company do live better than — or at least differently from — the way they did at home. And under the old tax law in which they paid no U.S. taxes on the first $20,000 of earned income, they could save more money (a new law diminishes that advantage). But they also must endure inconveniences, frustrations — and occasionally even dangers — that would leave many Americans in Los Angeles or New York screaming for mercy.

Although accurate figures are not available, the number of American expatriates in Africa is undoubtedly increasing as economic opportunity and development expands.

MANY OF THEM CAN afford servants for the first time. In Nairobi, for instance, a full-time gardener costs about $30 a month, a live-in cook-houseman about $75. On the other hand, the alternatives are limited. Dishwashers are unknown in Africa, a small clothes washer costs more than $1,000. So the expatriate hires a household staff or reverts to rustic living. He should also hire a night watchman for his house because of the high incidence of urban crime in Africa.

Americans live better here — as they usually do anywhere in the Third World — because there are generally only two classes of housing in Africa: very good and very bad. In many countries the choice is between a colonial-style home with an acre of gardens and a bamboo shack without running water.

In Lagos, Nigeria, an American banker pays $25,000 a year to rent a three-bedroom home that is the equivalent of a nice tract house in the United States. "If you don't learn patience, you would just go nuts. If anything has ever made me appreciate the United States, it's Nigeria."

In Tanzania such things as cheese, butter and sometimes even soft drinks are luxuries seldom available in the store. Zambia has even less on its shelves.

A HANDFUL OF AMERICANS in Ethiopia lived behind locked gates for several months earlier this year while civil strife rocked the streets of Addis Ababa. In Uganda the American community — one businessman representing an oil company, several pilots, some communications technicians and 100 or so missionaries — lives under constant threat by President Idi Amin, who, when angered at Washington, had announced plans to take "drastic action" against Americans in Uganda. In Zaire nearly 100 Americans working on a hydroelectric project barely escaped with their lives last March when they were evacuated from Shaba province, which was under an attack by Angola-based guerrillas. One American civilian was killed.

Most Americans in countries with sizeable expatriate communities like Kenya, Nigeria and Liberia remain fairly detached from the local population and tend to spend their nonworking time with one another.

"When my wife and I arrived in Africa a couple of years ago," an American businessman said, "we were really intent on making friends with Africans and avoiding the trap of spending all our time with the same people we would back home.

"But it's harder than it sounds. There are cultural differences, language problems. There's just not that much to talk about comfortably if you come from such two different worlds. Then all of a sudden you find that you're spending most of your time with Americans and Brits. I guess we just haven't tried hard enough. Certainly it makes the African experience less than complete."

THE BIGGEST ADJUSTMENT often falls to the American woman who comes to Africa only because her husband has been assigned here by his company.

Unless she is a teacher or perhaps a doctor, she probably can't get a job in Africa. Jobs in Africa are reserved for Africans. If an American wife is lucky enough to find a job as a teacher or nurse, she is usually paid less than $250 a month. Like her husband, she must pay local taxes.

There is usually not a job for her at home, either. The cook takes over the kitchen; a nanny (earning about $50 a month) takes over the children. Unless a woman is content with a life built around her husband's work and the country club swimming pool, the days can hang heavy.

"The second night we were in Nairobi, the man my husband was replacing gave a reception for us," the wife of an American said. "It was all expatriates. Pretty soon the men were in one corner talking about African politics and the women were in another talking about problems with servants and bridge-club luncheons.

"I panicked. I said to myself, 'My God, is this what it's going to be like?'"

Eventually she found work as a freelance artist.

But the wives of four U.S. diplomats in Nouakchott, Mauritania, have gone back to the States for jobs.

Unbeaten Lee, Permian excite West Texas fans

By BOB DILLON
R-T Sports Writer

The battle lines are drawn.

Robert E. Lee's Rebel Express squares off with the Odessa Permian Panthers in a battle of undefeated football teams in Memorial Stadium.

Kickoff for the District 5-4A showdown is set for 8 p.m. with the winner getting the inside track into the Class AAAA state playoffs later this month. Both Lee and Permian stand 7-0 on the year and are 4-0 in league play with Abilene High one step behind with a 3-1 reading.

THE WINNER tonight, however, will be favored to go on an represent the district against the District 6-4A champions. Mojo already has a 24-3 win over Abilene and the Rebels must face the Eagles here next week.

Coach Gil Bartosh sends his Rebels against John Wilkins who was his assistant the two years he was headmaster at Permian in 1971 and 1972.

"This is the big one," said Wilkins and Bartosh agrees with that. "Having both of us unbeaten really makes it exciting," said Bartosh.

BOTH LEE and Permian have polished off pre-district favorite Abilene Cooper, so it boils down to tonight's confrontation which is the 18th meeting between the two teams which in recent years have really devloped an intense rivalry. Mojo has a big edge in wins, 14-3, but Lee has been the winner two times in the past four years.

IN 1974, Permian came to the Tall City, highly-ranked and unbeaten and limped back to Odessa after suffering a 34-7 loss. Then two years ago, Permian was No. 1 in the state and the Rebels won, 14-13, to wrestle the 5-4A crown away from the Panthers.

There is lots of football talent on both teams and a crowd of more than 14,000 is expected to see what shapes up as the title game for this year. Abilene would still be in the running if it beats San Angelo, Lee and Cooper in its final three games since its only loss thus far has been to Mojo.

Lee also faced Permian in 1968 in W.T. Barrett Stadium and came away a 28-26 victor in that one when quarterback Jody Turner, under Coach Bob Burris, passed the Panthers dizzy with 57 attempts on the night. Mojo went on to win the league title and went all the way to the finals, losing to Austin Reagan, 17-11 that year.

JEFF MCCOWAN, blockbuster fullback for the Rebels, will go over the 1,000-yard rushing mark tonight against Mojo. The 215-pound senior has rushed for 968 yards on 181 carries and has scored an amazing 16 touchdowns in seven games. If Mojo keys on McCowan, then there's 165-pound senior tailback Ricky Johnson who is no slouch himself. He has gained 561 yards in 106 carries and has scored four touchdowns.

Joining McCowan and Johnson in the Rebel backfield is junior quarterback Gary Butler. The 180-pound junior lefthander, has improved and is No. 5 passer in the league with 14 of 26 passes for 279 yards and three touchdowns. On the year, he has connected on 31 of 61 passes for 525 yards and seven TDS.

HIS FAVORITE receiver both on the season and in district play has been Elmer Montgomery who has caught seven aerials for 164 yards and two TDs in 5-4A competition and latched on to 12 passes for 266 yards on the year and three touchdowns.

Permian has the No. 1 passer in the league in senior Vic Vines who has hit 31 of 57 passes for 531 yards and eight touchdowns. On the year, the 176-pounder has completed 51 of 96 passes for 882 yards and 14 TDs. Wingback John Muery and split end David Loper are his favorite receivers. Muery has 13 catches for 234 yards and six TDs while Loper has 14 for 214 yards and three scores. Tight end Tom Strickland also is over the 200-yard mark on the year with 11 catches for 202 yards and two TDs.

WHILE MCCOWAN, the Cactus Flower, pits his power running against Vines' passing, there could also be a great duel between Johnson and Permian's fine tailback, Gregg Lambert. Lambert has rushed for 629 yards in 119 carries and has scored 10 TDS. McCowan is the No. 1 rusher in 5-4A with 502 yards in 103 carries, good for nine touchdowns. Lambert is No. 5 with 405 yards in 73 cracks into the line followed by Johnson's 397 yards in 74 carries.

If these statistics don't impress you, then Vines' two-year totals will. He has connected on 98 of 180 passes for 1,690 yards and 24 touchdowns and eveytime he hits a TD strike, he adds to a school record of 20 TD passes by Steve Looney.

With all that backfield talent made up of the likes of McCowan, Butler, Johnson, Vines, Lambert, Muery and Roger Lightfoot, it's still up front that counts and both have good linemen.

LEE IS anchored down by Brian Briscoe (200), Rodney Taylor (232), Paul Speight (215) and Herb Pearce (215) while Mojo, although smaller, has tackles Tim Hendrix (230) and Kirby Sanford (223) along with Mark Graves, a 190-pounder at center.

Briscoe suffered a strained knee in the Big Spring game last week and will most likely only see duty at center on offense with his linebacker slot being taken by either Mark Thompson (190) or McCowan.

Permian has a couple of players banged up, but will play, according to Wilkins. "It ought to be a great game and we are looking forward to playing the Rebels." said Wilkins. Bartosh feels that Mojo has a stronger kicking game and the specialty teams are loaded with talent too.

LEE'S DEFENSE is led by linebacker Michael McCrea, Pearce, Speight, Dwight Washington, Montgomery and John White along with Clay Calhoun who plays both ways, manning a guard slot on offense and end position on the defensive unit.

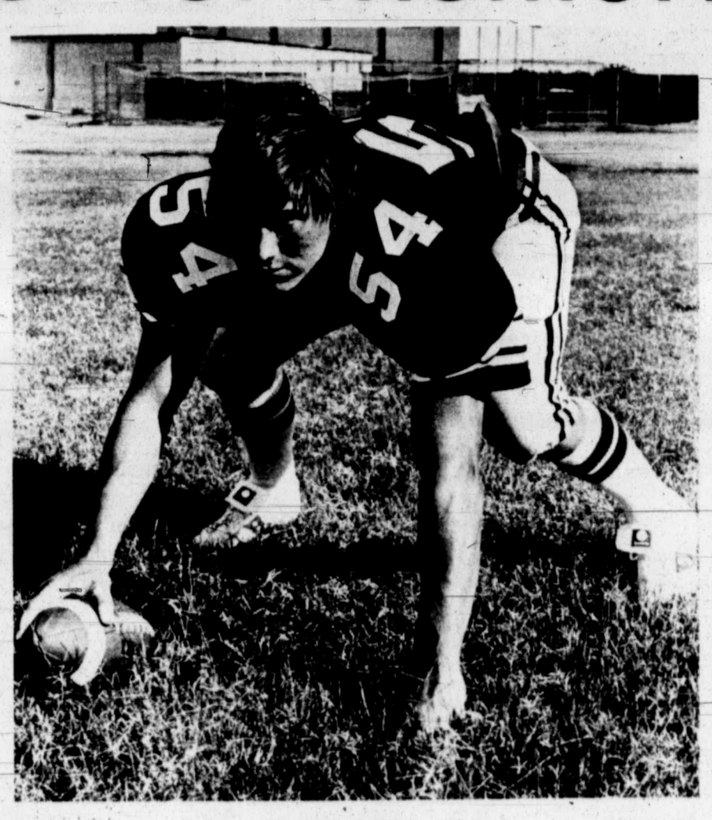

Graves plays linebacker and is joined by Mike Moore and Carl Cunningham at end and tackle, respectively. Dee Witt, only 165 pounds, is still a good one and ia very quick for Mojo.

Bryan Lambert, Kelly Howard and Ricky Reynolds are three juniors that start on the defensive unit for the defending district champions.

Mojo brings in the No. 1 offense and 1 No. defense in the Little Southwest Conference. The Panthers have only given up 424 yards rushing and 155 passing in four league games and given up 30 first downs. On the year, opponents have only been able to come up with 56 first downs in seven outings.

Joining Bryan Lambert and Graves at the other linebacker slot is Chris Soape, a veteran off last year's team which racked up a 13-1 mark in going all the way to the semifinals against Plano.

Yessir, there's electricty in the air and it shapes up as a great battle as Lee, the No 3 team in both offense and defense, puts it all on the line against Mojo.

Midland High Bulldogs travel to face Odessa High's Bronchos

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
R-T Sports Writer

ODESSA — With two weeks of tension reaching mammouth proportions for the Midland Lee-Odessa Permian matchup in Midland tonight, the District 5-4A outing between the Midland High Bulldogs and the Odessa High Bronchos has gone almost unnoticed.

But for the football observer, the 8 p.m. contest here at W. T. Barrett Stadium promises to be as good a matchup as the one in Midland. Both teams may be out of the loop race in theory, but this could be the tightest battle of the night.

THE REBORN Midland High Bulldogs seem to be getting better with each outing. The Super Dogs went through a period where injuries crippled their efforts, but that is all behind since the team is near full strength. Also, Midland has made some offensive formation adjustments that seem to be paying dividends.

The Bulldogs have won two of their last three outings and the offensive punch is improving weekly since Coach Dennie Hays has gone to the I and split backfield formations. An interior line adjustment with the switch of guards to tackle and vice versa has also been an aid to the offense.

"I THINK our kids have weathered the storm. We had a lot of injuries and a lot of missed playing time which hurt us because we were inexpierenced to begin with. But they are becoming more famaliar with what we are trying to do each week, and I hope we are beginning to see the results," Hays said this week in trying to explain the Bulldogs' comeback.

"Billy Applin and Randy Moore are more suited to the I-formation and Jeff Robnett is a great blocker. I think we have been able to utilize our talent better since switching to the I-formation. We are also using the split backfield some, and it gives the teams we play some different looks, but we are basically running the same plays, but with more success.

"We were picked to win two games this year by some, but our goal was to win 10. We have had to revise our goals, but now we are out to win six, and we can't do that until we beat Odessa High."

THE BULLDOGS will be without the services of end Jerry Hollums, who played such an outstanding defensive game against San Angelo. Hollums has been sick all week. The Bulldogs also received another scare early in the week when fullback Robnett suffered a hip bruise, but he has returned to full speed. Bobby Floyd is also back after missing last week with a sore knee.

Reserve quarterback Tommy Somers is no longer with the team after moving to the Greenwood school district.

"The last three years Odessa High has been a very aggressive football team. Coach (Dick) Winder always has his team ready to play. They have a good football team," Hays said. "But we are confident going into the game. The offense has come along well in the past few weeks. We need a good defensive effort against Odessa High, and if we get it, I think we will be in good shape.

THE BRONCHOS have lost three district games, but is like Midland High in a lot of ways. Odessa had a lot of early success as Midland has of late, but the Broncs have suffered injuries late in the season instead of early.

Odessa High has recently lost two defensive ends and two linebackers for the season. So, naturally, the defense has suffered.

Offensively, however, the Bronchos can put points on the boards with the best of them. Tailback Scott Caywood is one of the finest running backs around and he causes a lot of concern for opponents.

ODESSA LOST their first 5-4A encounter 21-20 to Midland Lee when they failed to convert a two-point conversion attempt. Then they came right back and lost to Cooper, and last week lost 24-20 to Abilene High.

The game could be a close one, and if it is, the Bulldogs may have to rely on the toe of field goal ace John Schwartz, who kicked an important 29-yard field goal to turn the tide against San Angelo last week in a Memorial Stadium clash.

Midland High has the momentum going for them in this one and that could prove to be the biggest plus in what shapes up as a tossup contest.

Houston Cougars look for encore

By The Associated Press

What do you do for an encore after you play a mistake-free football game?

That's the happy problem facing the University of Houston Saturday night in the Astrodome against weak Texas Christian.

The Cougars didn't make an error last week in defeating the Arkansas Razorbacks 20-9 to jump into a first place tie with Texas.

Houston can take the lead in the Southwest Conference by a half game with a victory over the Horned Frogs. Texas is idle.

"I don't think this group will look one second past the next play," said Houston Coach Bill Yeoman when asked the prospect of his team being overconfident.

Yeoman said of TCU: "They'll come down here high and take a good broadside shot at us, so we had better be ready."

TCU Coach F.A. Dry said Houston is "one of the class football teams...I just don't see any great weakness...they are really dangerous when they get the ball around midfield. They seem to always drive it in."

Houston was a solid four-touchdown choice for the 7:30 p.m. game.

Elsewhere around the SWC it was a battle for third place with each club owning at least two losses behind Houston and Texas with 4-0 ledgers.

The Texas Aggies, 1-0 under new Coach Tom Wilson, were one and one-half point favorites over Southern Methodist in a regionally televised (3:10 p.m.) game in the Cotton Bowl.

Texas A&M, SMU and Baylor are each tied at 2-2 followed by Arkansas and Texas Tech at 1-2, Rice at 1-3 and TCU at 0-4.

Rice is at Arkansas and Baylor is at Texas Tech in other league games Saturday afternoon.

Arkansas was a four-to-five touchdown favorite and Baylor was a field goal choice over Texas Tech.

"Tech will be healthy and rested up after the open date," said Baylor Coach Grant Teaff. "They impress me very much, especially their offense with (fullback) James Hadnot and young quarterback Ron Reeves.

"We've gotten better each week of the season and that's gratifying to me."

Arkansas Coach Lou Holtz sounded a warning about Rice and its spread formation: "They do the thing that gives me the most trouble. They throw the football and throw it very well.."

SMU Coach Ron Meyer said of the Aggies: "That team is unbeaten as far as I'm concerned. They're under a new coach and they are tough."

Dwyer pleads no contest

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Sentencing has been set for Nov. 14 for a man who pleaded no contest to charges that he struck a Big Eight Conference official and a police officer at a Kansas University football game.

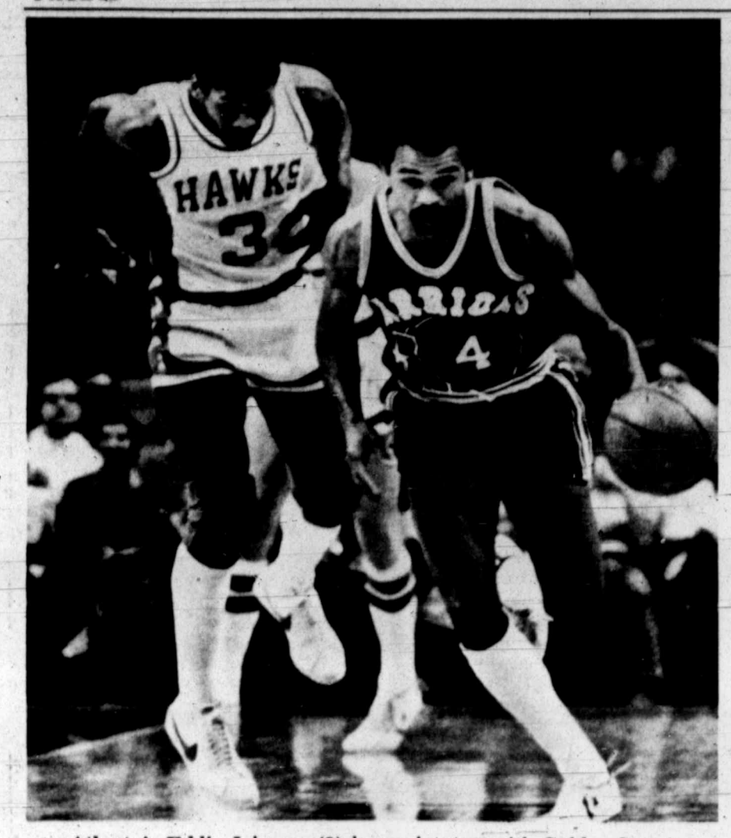

David Dwyer, 30, of Wichita, entered the plea Thursday to misdemeanor charges of battery against a police officer and simple battery against the official.

Dwyer's trial was scheduled to begin today in Douglas County District Court. But after Dwyer entered his plea Thursday, Associate District Judge Mike Elwell set the sentencing date and ordered a presentence investigation.

The incident occurred in the third period of the Kansas-Texas A&M game Sept. 9 seconds after the Texas team had scored a touchdown. The official, Tom Fincken of Arvada, Colo., had signaled a touchdown on a play many Kansas players and fans disputed.

A spectator was seen striking Fincken in the end zone. The official was not injured. A campus police officer also was struck while attempting to restrain the spectator.

After the incident, Big Eight Commissioner Charles Neinas encouraged the official to press charges and said the conference would pay for all costs stemming from the trial.

Home court advantage is licked

By The Associated Press

Say, what's all this jazz about the home court advantage in the National Basketball Association?

Four games were played Thursday night — and all were lost by the home team, including the New Orleans Jazz.

"We just didn't close the middle enough or get back on defense very well," New Orleans Coach Elgin Baylor said after a 106-99 loss to the Phoenix Suns. "Our guys looked kind of sluggish tonight — why, I don't know."

Other home-team losers Thursday were the Detroit Pistons, Atlanta Hawks and San Diego Clippers.

The Pistons were beaten 95-94 by the Seattle SuperSonics; the Hawks lost to the Golden State Warriors 113-106 and the Clippers dropped a 127-122 decision to the New York Knicks.

"It was a good win for us," said Phoenix Coach John MacLeod. "We are playing hard and working together. That is the key. We emphasize the team concept and the players accept that and play together."

Paul Westphal scored 27 points to lead the Phoenix attack. Both teams played without top players. Phoenix was missing center Alvan Adams, who has a sprained ankle, while New Orleans guard Pete Maravich was out with the flu.

The Jazz led during most of the early going, but two free throws by Westphal put the Suns ahead to stay, 43-41, with 6:54 left in the first half.

Sonics 95, Pistons 94

Baskets by Gus Williams and Jack Sikma, plus two free throws by Williams in the final 18 seconds, carried Seattle over Detroit. The victory was the eighth in nine starts for the Sonics this season, while Detroit lost its eighth game in 10 starts.

The Sonic dramatics began after the Pistons appeared to have wrapped up the victory when a jumper by rookie Terry Tyler made it 92-89 for Detroit with 42 seconds to go.

"This one really hurts — more than probably the others we've lost in the last few minutes," noted Detroit Coach Dick Vitale. "Heck, we had the Western Conference champions and NBA finalists on the ropes and what do we do? We say, 'Here, take it from us, we don't want it.'"

Warriors 113, Hawks 106

Phil Smith struck for 26 points and fellow guard John Lucas added 18 to fire Golden State over Atlanta. Smith — starting in his 257th straight game, the NBA's longest current streak — had 17 points in the first half to put the Warriors on their way to their fifth consecutive triumph.

"There's not much to say," said Atlanta Coach Hubie Brown. "We were embarrassed. our guards were intimidated and Golden State had total control of the tempo. That's a key factor in pro basketball. Golden State deserves all the credit."

Knicks 127, Clippers 122

Ray Williams, Spencer Haywood and Marvin Webster combined for 79 points to lead New York over San Diego.

Lloyd Free hit a career-high 42 points for San Diego, but it wasn't enough as the Knicks overcame a late one-point deficit when Haywood hit a 10-foot jumper with 1:56 left in the game to give New York the lead for good.

Williams finished with 29 points, Haywood had 27 and Webster 23 for the Knicks.

Mallory's slobber not for Oklahoma

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — "I'm not going to slobber all over the place in talking about Oklahoma," Bill Mallory told a boosters' club meeting this week. The Colorado coach then proceeded to slobber all over the place in describing the most awesome college football team in the country.

"It's a great football team," said Mallory of the top-ranked Sooners, who have knocked off eight opponents while generating a whopping 493 total yards and 42 points per game.

"They have it all — great backs like (Billy) Sims and (Thomas) Lott, good blocking, great team speed and an aggressive, active defense.

"They have a fine offensive line, and guard Greg Roberts is the best of them. He's 6-foot-4 and 250 pounds. He's just a whale of a football player.

"They have tremendous skill in the backfield. Lott is the guy who really makes them go. He's very clever at running the wishbone. Sims is a big Joe Washington. He is as fine a back as this league has seen in quite a while. His speed is fabulous.

"They haven't been running their fullback as much as in the past, but in Kenny King they have a three-year starter who is very quick. You can't just concentrate on Sims and Lott. King has hurt us before.

"And they'll throw when you least expect it. About the time you get to playing the run, they'll slip that pass out there on you.

"Speed and quickness are the two things that make their defense great," said Mallory, singling out linebackers George Cumby and Daryl Hunt and nose guard Reggie Kinlaw. Cumby was an Associated Press first-team All-American last year while Hunt and Kinlaw were third-team selections.

"In addition to the All-Americans, they have a quality pair of tackles and the best pair of ends we'll face," added Mallory.

"And they've got a fine kicker in Uwe von Schamann, who kicks the ball as well as anybody in the country."

Needless to say, Mallory has had no trouble getting his team motivated this week.

The Buffaloes bring a 6-2 overall record and 2-2 Big Eight mark into the contest. Mallory's job appeared in jeopardy after consecutive losses to Oklahoma State and Nebraska, but he got a reprieve when the Buffs pulled out a 28-27 victory over Missouri last week after trailing 27-7 with 22 minutes left in the game.

Quarterback Bill Solomon ignited the rally, completing 8 of 11 passes for 145 yards in the late stages. Unheralded sophomore fullback Eddie Ford scored two of CU's final three touchdowns, including the game-winner on a 16-yard run. His emergence has enabled ex-fullback James Mayberry to remain at tailback.

Although Oklahoma owns a commanding 23-8-1 edge in the series between the two teams, the Sooners have had problems at Folsom Field. Colorado has won four of the last six meetings here.

Trojans, Stanford to show tailbacks

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — "We're talking about two of the best football players in the United States," Southern California Coach John Robinson said of his own Charles White and Stanford's Darrin Nelson.

The two tailbacks will perform before an audience that could number 80,000 or more, biggest crowd in the Pacific-10 this year, when the teams play in Stanford Stadium Saturday.

Robinson, like Stanford's Bill Walsh, coached in the National Football League before returning to the college game, and he sounded like an NFL coach on the subject of White versus Nelson.

"If we traded, Darrin would be my tailback and have as many yards as Charles has, and Charles would have as many yards with Stanford as Darrin has," Robinson said.

White and Nelson are ranked 1-2, respectively, in the nation in all-purpose running, the category covering rushing, pass catching and kick returning. White is third nationally in rushing, with 144 yards per game, while Nelson's average of 6.5 yards per rush is one of the best in college ball.

Southern Cal's sixth-ranked Trojans gain most of their yards on the ground. Stanford has the nation's leading passer in Steve Dils, who has accounted for 282 yards per game and thrown 18 touchdown passes.

The two offensive units seem equally matched, so defense probably will make the difference.

"They put on a good pass rush and just shut down our offense last year," recalled Nelson, who rushed for 1,069 yards as a freshman but totaled just 22 on nine carries against USC in an embarrassing 49-0 loss at Los Angeles.

Nelson appraised the 1978 Stanford squad, which is 2-2 in the Pac-10 and 5-3 for all games as "better than last year's because of team speed, quickness and overall ability."

The Cardinals are very young, however, and mistakes led to last-minute conference losses to UCLA and Washington, teams Stanford outgained in offensive yardage.

Southern Cal's only loss was to Arizona State by a 20-7 score three weeks ago, when an inexperienced center had constant trouble getting the ball to quarterback Paul McDonald. Sihce then, with Ray Peters at center, the Trojans have beaten Oregon State 38-7 and California 42-17.

"This is a typical USC team," says Walsh. "They have great talent and awesome size."

Navy aims big salvo of footballs at big Irish

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Navy cruises into Cleveland Stadium Saturday to fire perhaps its most important broadside in 18 years — a salvo of footballs aimed at Notre Dame.

The 11th-ranked Midshipmen head into the important intersectional college grid clash unbeaten in seven games, leading the nation's big schools in total defense and coming off a startling 21-11 upset of highly regarded Pittsburgh.

Notre Dame, rated 15th, has bounced back from losing its first two games to win five in a row and get back in the running for a postseason bowl berth. In fact, there will be scouts from at least eight bowl games among the about 55,000 spectators expected Saturday.

Coach George Welsh's Navy team has surprised everyone, including itself, with its success this season. And most everyone is waiting for the more heralded Irish to turn Navy's Cinderella carriage into a collapsed pumpkin.

But nobody at Notre Dame is taking the Midshipmen for granted.

"The Navy team we beat in Cleveland in 1975 (28-21) was a good team," explained Notre Dame Coach Dan Devine. "This is a great team. I think it's going to be a fantastic ballgame, but we have to stop making the mental errors that have hurt us all season.

"We'll need concentration and I'm afraid there are just too many distractions for the players and coaches in getting ready for a game like this."

Irish linebacking star Bob Golic, La senior from nearby Willowick, Ohio, hopes Navy can be a springboard to get Notre Dame back in the race for the mythical national championship it captured last year.

"This could be like our Southern Cal game last year," Golic said. "People are starting to believe in Navy. And we're moving up, too. If we beat them, we re-establish ourselves with those who take care of the polls. It could kick us into high gear."

Welsh, who has directed the Midshipmen to their best start since 1960 when Heisman Trophy winner Joe Bellino was dazzling the opposition at halfback, is wondering how his team will react to all the publicity and hoopla surrounding the game.

"I know we have to learn how to handle this," Welsh said. "Good teams do it again and again, but we haven't had to before.

"There were diversions last week before Pitt, but much more the last couple of days. I know this is all part of winning, but maybe the players will begin to believe all that is being written and said.

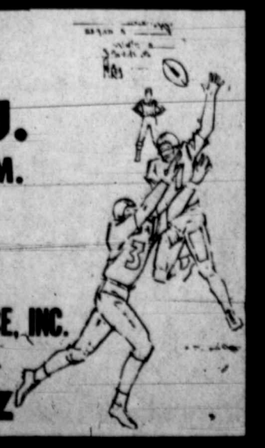

"I keep telling them that it's where they are at the end of the year that really counts. That's why I won't even guess at the significance of the Pitt game or this one," he added.

Mr. Alfredo Ray

Midland, Texas

Dear Mr. Rey:

I have been attempting to obtain information covering the Midland Community Action Agency and so far have been unable to obtain the information that I desire. I, therefore, request that you please furnish me with the total base grant of the Midland Community Action together with a list of all salaried personnel covering their gross salary.

Also, I would be interested in the names of the board members on the Midland Community Action Agency.

Thank you for your cooperation. It will be greatly appreciated.

Yours very truly,

Sam H. Snoddy

OPEN LETTER TO SAM SNODDY

In your campign for County Commissioner of Precinct 2, you stated in public that there was a discrepancy in the handling of funds by the Midland Community Action Agency. This charge caused me great distress because, my wife, Alexandra Morris, is the Executive Director of this agency, and has been so employed since July 1, 1977.

I went to you on October 11 and asked you, point blank if you were calling my wife a thief. You apologized and stated to me that you did not know that she was either now, or had ever been, Executive Director of the Midland Community Action Agency. Further, you stated that you did not know that Alfredo Rey is the present Chairman of the Board of the Agency. You also said that you did not know what the purpose of the Agency was, nor what it did. You stated that your charges against the Agency were based on a series of newspaper articles about the Agency that were published in the spring of 1977. These newspaper articles are well known and are accounts of discrepancies in handling of funds that occured over two years ago. You stated that this was the only basis for your charges against the Agency. I asked you, at that time, to make this clarification public so that the public would know what you meant in your charges. You promised that you would do this. When you didn't keep your promise by November 1, I asked you about it again that day.

You made unfounded and incorrect accusations against my wife. You admitted they were in error. You promised to correct the error in public. You have not. Now, you tell me, you have to look into the fact that you made a promise and broke it.

When you do look into it, you won't have any difficulty concluding that 1) you made a mistake and won't admit it, and 2) you made a simple promise and you won't keep it. In the meantime, you offer yourself to the voter as a man of integrity.

On October 11, you told me that your negative political ads about the Agency were based upon news articles written eighteen months, and more, ago. There was nothing wrong with considering the information in those articles, however, it seemed to me that basic fairness would have dictated a current appraisal of the Agency, its operation and progress before you called for its abolition in your political ads. It wasn't until long after you started and continued these ads negative to the Agency that you tried to learn anything about its current operation as shown by your October 26 letter to the Chairman of the Board of Directors, Alfredo Rey. Your October 26 letter is printed with this letter. You have admitted that you began your campaign for the abolishment of the Agency without any knowledge of what it is doing now. In the meantime you offer yourself to the voters as a man of judgement.

Mets select Pete Rose in draft

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Mets opened baseball's third re-entry draft today by making Pete Rose the first choice in the annual grab-bag of veteran free agents.

Each player on the list of 42 eligibles could be selected by as many as 13 teams in the draft. In addition, his old team had the option to enter negotiations with the player.

The draft rotation was in reverse order of the final standings, with the Mets picking first because they had the National League's poorest record. Seattle, with the worst won-loss mark in the AL, had the No.2 selection.

Among the top names eligible were pitcher Luis Tiant of the Boston Red Sox, listed at 38 but rumored to be much older, and pitcher Tommy John of the Los Angeles Dodgers, who is 35.

The draft lasted 19 rounds and took 1 hour, 4 minutes, with Oakland the last team selecting. The Tigers passed throughout the entire duration of the draft.

Rose did not reach his 13-club limit, with no team picking him after Cleveland chose him in the fifth round.

Besides the Indians, the teams choosing Rose were: Los Angeles, California, St. Louis, the Yankees, Pittsburgh, Kansas City and the five clubs who chose him in the first round — Philadelphia, Texas, San Diego, Atlanta and the Mets.

Of the 42 players on the list, 10 were not chosen at all in the draft. They were Bob Bailey, Jim Bouton, Steve Brye, Jim Colborn, Joe Coleman, Andy Etchebarren, Al Fitzmorris, Cito Gaston, Vic Harris and Willie Horton. Four others — Wayne Garrett, Harrelson, Bill Plummer and Tiant — were picked by only one team apiece.

Those 14 players remain free agents, eligible to negotiate with any of the 26 major league clubs.

The Dodgers, when asked if they chose to exercise their option to negotiate with John, answered an emphatic: "No!"

The Reds, however, stayed in the derby for Rose by saying they would try and re-sign him.

Rose was selected by four other teams in the first round, including the Atlanta Braves, San Diego Padres, Texas Rangers and Philadelphia Phillies.

Also chosen by five teams in the opening round was John, who posted a 17-10 record with a 3.30 earned run average for the Dodgers in 1978. The veteran left-hander was chosen by St. Louis, Cincinnati, which was participating in the re-entry process for the first time, Kansas City, Milwaukee and the New York Yankees.

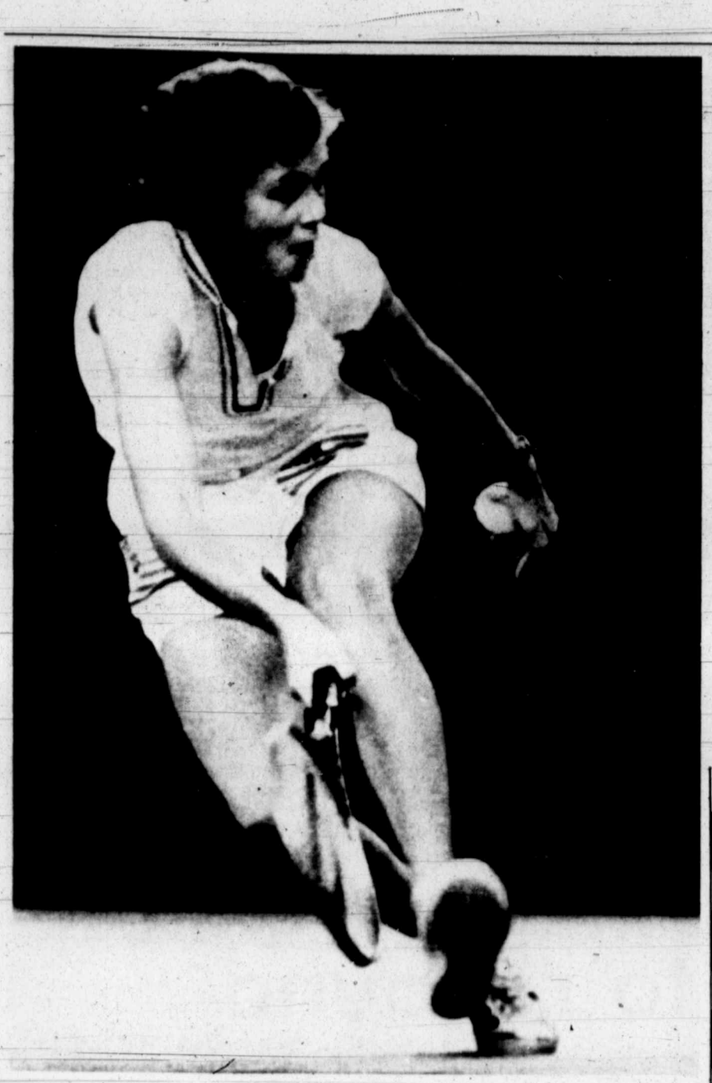

Relief pitcher Mike Marshall, almost completely ignored when he was available in this draft a year ago, was chosen four times in the first round. Marshall, 10-12 with 21 saves and a 2.36 earned run average after signing with Minnesota last season, was picked by Montreal, the Chicago White Sox, the Chicago Cubs and San Francisco.

Larry Gura, the stylish left-hander who posted a 16-4 record and a 2.72 ERA for Kansas City's American League West champions last season, also was picked by four teams in the first round. Choosing Gura were the Houston Astros, Minnesota Twins, Pittsburgh Pirates and Baltimore Orioles.

Following the Mets and Seattle in the draft rotation, Atlanta chose Rose. Then, Toronto picked veteran pitcher Jim Slaton, who was 17-11 with a 4.12 ERA for Detroit last season. St. Louis then chose John, and Oakland, which has lost a host of stars in the re-entry draft process, selected third baseman Darrell Evans, who batted .243 with 20 homers and 78 runs batted in for San Francisco this year.

Then, Houston took Gura and Cleveland chose Oakland reliever Elias Sosa, who posted an 8-2 record with 14 saves and a 2.64 ERA for the A's in 1978.

Montreal, the White Sox and the Cubs all picked Marshall in rapid succession, before Minnesota went for Gura and San Diego selected Rose.

Taking a week off from high school studies, a tense and nervous Pam Shriver, 16, makes a low return Thursday, but went on to lose her Wightman Cup match to Michele Tyler. (AP Laserphoto)

Net gamble on youth hangs in Cup balance

LONDON (AP) — America's gamble on youth hung in the balance today as 15-year-old Tracy Austin, the youngest girl ever to play for the United States in the Wightman Cup series, faced former Wimbledon champion Virginia Wade with the teams tied 1-1.

Pam Shriver, 16, also making her Wightman Cup debut, lost to Britain's Michele Tyler 7-5, 3-6, 3-6 in a tense and nervous two-hour battle at the Royal Albert Hall Thursday. This was after Chris Evert cruised to a 6-2, 6-1 victory over Sue Barker in less than an hour.

Two more matches were scheduled for tonight, and Austin was involved in both. After her singles she was scheduled to partner Billie Jean King in a doubles match against Sue Mappin and Anne Hobbs.

The cool and experienced Evert, who has a 100 percent record in five Wightman Cup encounters since 1971, never looked in any danger of losing that record against an out-of-form Barker.

But Shriver, who is taking a week off from high school studies in Lutherville, Md., and who traveled to Britain suffering from a cold, was nervous and jittery in front of the 7,000 partisan British fans — not as confident and aggressive as she'd been in attaining the final in the U.S. Open two months ago.

The tall American girl's play was punctuated by errors. Her backhand was often awry, and when she got to the net her volleys were frequently misdirected. Tyler, 20, although she made her own quota of mistakes, hit a lot of inspired winners from the baseline.

The United States took a calculated risk by using the two youngsters in singles play. King, 34 and older than the ages of the two girls combined, is player-coach to the team and insisted on playing doubles only.

Shriver, cheerful but still sniffling from her cold, said after the match she preferred the Royal Albert Hall to any other place she had played.

"I never imagined I would play anywhere like this," she said, looking up at the ornate Victorian architecture. "It has got a different atmosphere from any other tennis hall — especially because it's in Britain and we are playing the British."

Golf's young lions take command of team play

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Three teams of young lions seeking qualifying exemptions led the Disney World National Team Golf Classic going into today's second round, but old pros Sam Snead, Miller Barber and Don January were right on their heels.

Sharing the first-round lead with 9-under par 63s in the best-ball tournament were the teams of Joe Porter-Bob Zender, Keith Fergus-Phil Hancock and Bill Calfee-Eddie Pearce. Among them, only Porter, from Scottsdale, Ariz., has won a PGA tour event.

Four other teams — including the Barber-January combo — were one stroke back at 64. And four more shared third place with 65.

Slammin' Sammy Snead, the 66-year-old veteran of 41 years on the circuit, was at 66 with his partner, 23-year-old Curtis Strange, also a non-winner in his second pro season. Snead-Strange were in a jam-up with 11 other teams shooting for the $40,000 first prize in the $200,000 tourney.

"The money's important, but many of the younger players want that exemption. That's what they're out here for, primarily," said Fergus, a University of Houston All-American who turned pro in 1976.

The event will not count on the PGA's money list for the year, but the winners will earn a year's exemption from qualifying if they are not on the exempt list.

Joining Barber-January at 8-under 64 were Dave Barr-Ed Fiori and Bobby Wadkins-Lanny Wadkins.

Tied for third place at 7-under par 65 were the teams of Perry Arthur-Steve Veriato, Buddy Gardner-Gary Groh, Brad Bryant-Joe Hager and Tom Kite-John Mahaffey.

Defending champions Gibby Gilbert and Grier Jones combined for a 35-34—69 on the 7,197-yard Magnolia layout while Hubert Green and Mac McLendon, considered one of the early favorite teams, shot 33-35—68 on the 6,951-yard Palm Course.

Bullpups fall to Odessa in junior varsity game

The talented Odessa High junior varsity, led by the running of Jim Harris and Geordie Mason, romped past the outmanned Midland High Bullpups, 42-0, here Thursday night in football action in Memorial Stadium.

All Harris did was to score four touchdowns, and rush for 135 yards in 19 carries, while Mason picked up 131 yards in 11 carries. He didn't score any touchdowns, but did have a 70-yarder called back.

Harris went 18 yards for the firsrt TD and teammate Terry Connally booted the PAT for a 7-0 lead. Harris ran 10 more yards for a score later in the period and Connally's boot made it 14-0.

Chuck Smith of the Bronchos blocked a Bullpup punt in the third period and the ball went 30 yards backwards into the end zone, where as you might know, Harris pounced on the losse ball for the TD. Connally's kick made it 21-0.

Harris scored again on a six-yard run and John Valdez passed to Mike Rich for the two-point conversion to make it 29-0.

Scott Tschauner raced 20 yards for still another OHS score and Connally's PAT made it 36-0.

The final TD of the evening came on a five-yard run by Gary Gage and this time, the extra point failed making it 42-0.

The victory gives Coach Ron Leach's JV a 7-0-0 record on the year while Midland is now 3-5-0 on the season and plays the powerful unbeaten Cooper JV in Memorial Stadium next Thursday at 7 p.m. OHS, meanwhile, faces the winless Big Spring JV in Big Spring at 1:30 p.m. on Nov. 11.

Midland lost the services of stellar back Dino Grimes, who suffered a severe knee injury in the contest. It was believed to be a dislocated knee.

NFL expansion has not occured

TERRY WILLIAMSON

At last word, the NFL had not expanded to Midland or Odessa in the last week, but you couldn't tell from the grid fever that has spread through the Permian Basin area.

With undefeated Midland Lee hosting equally undefeated Odessa Permian today at 8 p.m. in Memorial Stadium, the two cities seem to have gone bonkers. Tickets for the Super Bowl of the Permian Basin went faster than the Downtown Lions' pancakes earlier this week, and the war of words went to the fans instead of the teams.

WORD IS that the going price for a ticket from one of the numerous scalpers is anywhere from $25 to $50. Inflation seems to have hit West Texas football since Wednesday when the price was $3 for a reserved seat if you were lucky enough to get one.

Even in the glory days of Rome, entrance into the Colisieum to watch the lions eat the Christians was easier. The Greek Olympics didn't have that kind of sway.

But with all this fighting for tickets, the game itself has been lost in the shuffle. It's been like the real Super Bowl, where the ticket itself is the item of prestiege, and it will be game time before the fans really feel the presence of football in the air.

BUT THE game has all the trappings of a great one. It could be one of those historic moments in West Texas grid history. It could even top the 1972 game between the same two teams when Permian won 14-13 when Lee missed a two-point conversion attempt on an off sides penalty.

And guess who was coach at Permian that year? It was Lee's own Gil Bartosh, who went on to guide Permian to a state championship that season. And his assistant that year was John Wilkens, who is now head boss of the Panthers. Tonight's action will form the reunion for these two. The teacher now faces the student, so to speak.

It is a game between two teams which have shown both defensive and offensive fire power. And the question is who will make the big plays in the biggest game to hit this area since the covered wagons left their ruts in the soil?

CAN LEE move the ball against the Permian defense that has given up only an average of eight first downs a game and five points per outing? Can defending champion Permian keep Lee's steady offense from moving the ball?

In short, there are more questions than answers. Who will be the key?

Will Lee's Jeff McCowan, the full-back with star status and a nickname of the Cactus Flower, be the difference, or will it be junior quarterback Jeff Butler with a passing hand? Or will it be tailback Ricky Johnson with his blazing speed that will turn the tide for Lee?

IS HIGHLY touted quarterback Vic Vines the answer for Permian, or will it be on the rushing slants of Gregg Lambert or John Muery?

Or will it be the defensive teams that will earn the win? Will the top name be Kelly Howard with an interception for Permian, or will it be defensive end Mike Moore or linebacker Martin Graves that will deal the Rebs misery?

Or will it be Lee's defensive unit that will pull the upset? Will it be Lee linebacker Michael McCrea or tackle Herb Pearce or cornerback Elmer Montgomery to come up with the big play in the big game? Or will it be Dwight Washington, Rodney Taylor or John White who will be the hero?

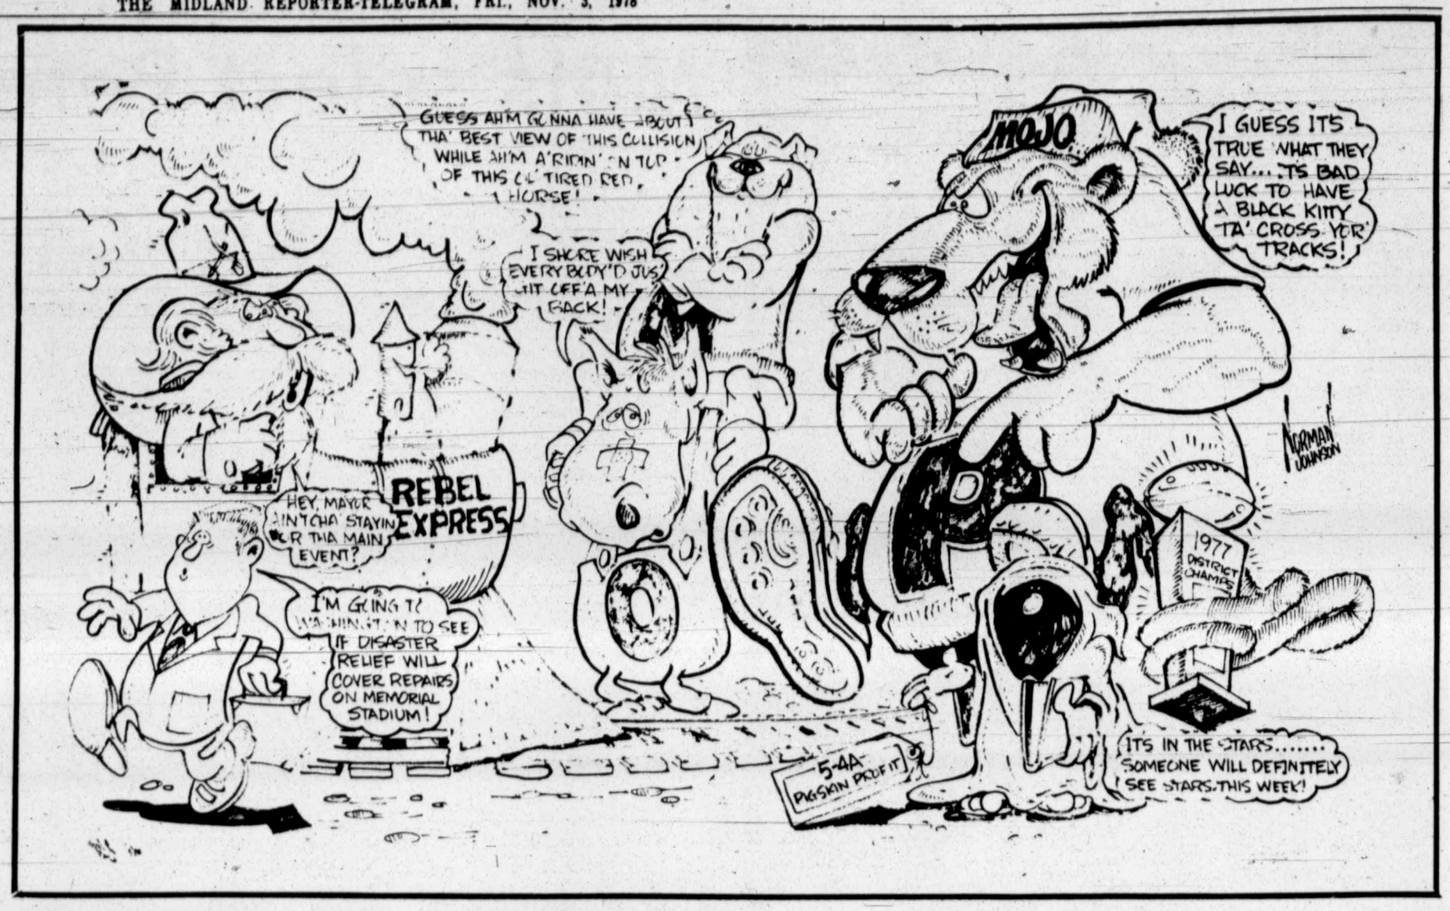

The fact is someone will come out of the game with their name in lights, and it will be a name that will be hard to forget in years to come.

AND THE winning team will probably go on to greater feats of glory. The District 5-4A playoff berth is up for grabs. No one has even remotely suggested that the winner won't make the playoffs.

Realistically however, Permian would benefit the most it would appear from a victory. They could then lose one of their two remaining games against San Angelo and Odessa and be insured of a playoff berth since they already have a win over Abilene High.

On the other hand, Lee would be in the driver's seat with a victory, but would still have to defeat Abilene High next week to insure the playoff spot. The Rebels could then afford a loss to Midland High in two weeks if they beat Abilene.

Tonight's game is a must for both teams. The district title, a high state ranking and Permian Basin bragging rights are at stake. Other than that, it's only a football game.

Cowboys picked to rebound

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Picking the pros has become no challenge this wacky National Football League season. All you have to do is study the past performance charts, examine the statistical matchups, take a long, careful look at the injury lists and then ... flip a coin.

Stay with the favorites and you're likely to choke on chalk this season. So you pick the upsets and the wrong teams get upset. It all comes with the territory.

But if the Pro Picker has nothing else working for him, he can still call on his supply of tenaciousness. Week after week, he comes back, sticking out his chin and asking for more punishment.

Last week's 8-5 ran the season's mark to 72-53 and .576.

The picks:

Dallas 23, Miami 20

Those extra days off following last week's Thursday night game give the Cowboys the edge. Come to think of it, after that game, they need an edge.

Pittsburgh 31, New Orleans 14

The Steelers learned their lesson in last week's close call against Kansas City. They won't let up against the Saints.

New England 34, Buffalo 13

Everything went right for the Patriots against the Jets last week. It will be almost as easy against the Bills.

Green Bay 17, Philadelphia 14

Denver 20, N.Y. Jets 13

Houston 24, Cleveland 21

One vote for the home field edge. There's little else separating these two in-and-out clubs.

Los Angeles 27, Tampa Bay 14

Isn't it time the Rams stopped kidding around? If they don't, those Tampa Bay kids could surprise them.

Minnesota 17, Detroit 7

There is great temptation to pick the Lions since the Vikings rarely do what you'd expect. We'll give form another chance here.

N.Y. Giants 20, St. Louis 14

The Cards have won their game. The Giants learned last week not to sit on a lead. Now if they can just get one...

Seattle 31, Chicago 21

The Bears are in a shambles and that condition can be compounded by the ambitious young Seahawks.

Oakland 24, Kansas City 17

Did you know that Ken Stabler has thrown 20 interceptions, the second highest total in the NFL? Did you know that the Chiefs' eight interceptions are the second fewest by any team in the league?

Atlanta 16, San Francisco 10

The new-coach trick won't work for the 49ers, who'll need more than Fred O'Connor to salvage this season.

San Diego 28, Cincinnati 20

Both teams are coming off victories, but Chargers get the edge here because they're at home.

Washington 21, Baltimore 10

Billy Kilmer's old eyes will light up when he gets a look at the NFL's 28th-best defense.

O. J. Simpson says coaching change will help team slump

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — O.J. Simpson says that a coaching change was necessary to shake the San Francisco 49ers out of the 1-8 doldrums and that perhaps with Fred O'Connor now at the helm, the team won't lose as often.

"It was quite apparent that something had to be done," the National Football League's highest paid player said Thursday. "If we were playing competitive football, it might have been a little different. But we start a game, we do well in the beginning and then we seem to get frazzled.

"And the team would look around for some direction on the field and, once the situation got tough, we seemed to have no direction. We've beaten teams and still lost the game."

San Francisco, under Pete McCulley, who was fired Tuesday, lost fourth-quarter leads in three games and squandering an early 10-0 lead against Washington last Sunday.

Ewbank leaves gore to others

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK — Wilbur "Weeb" Ewbank settles back in an easy chair at his home in Oxford, Ohio, almost every Sunday afternoon and flicks on the TV set.

"I see those guys down there pacing up and down the sidelines," he said, referring to rival coaches of the National Football League game at hand, "and I say to myself, 'Thank God, it's you and not me down there.'"

IT'S NOT that Weeb didn't relish almost every minute of his 30 years on the firing line — a deeply satisfying experience that produced unique championships with both the Baltimore Colts and New York Jets and landed him in the Pro Football Hall of Fame — but at 71, and now retired, he'd just as soon leave the gore and glory to others.

"It's so tough on head coaches these days," he said. "With the number of new teams continually expanding there aren't enough good players to go around. Most teams are lucky to have 22 good men. Get a couple of key fellows hurt, and you're in real trouble.

"Who takes the gaff? Always the coach — even when the coach is not at fault, which I think was the case at Cincinnati this year with Bill Johnson — but the coach is the most expendable.

"I'm still troubled to see so many injuries, although Pete Rozelle (the NFL commissioner) is doing his best to take brutality out of the game. Some of the new rules regarding use of hands confuse me and the fans — they're outrageous, sometimes so wild it's frightening."

Ewbank is a puckish, round-faced little man with a football mind like a steel trap. He won successive NFL championships at Baltimore in 1968-69 and then, having moved over to the ragtag Jets of the old American Football League, he beat his old Colts in an astonishing upset in Super Bowl III. He's the only coach to win in both the old and restructured leagues.

He was in New York over the weekend for the Boys' Club dinner honoring all new inductees in the Halls of Fame of various sports. He was enshrined at Canton, Ohio, July 29.

RELAXING PRIOR to ceremonies at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, the old gridiron strategist expressed greatest alarm over the unchecked deportment of fans, who seem to be growing more berserk in every sport.

"I was watching a college game the other day on TV," he said. "I think the teams were Colorado State and Wyoming. A fight broke out while they were tossing the coin to start the game.

"I'll never forget how the crowd surged out on the field at Yankee Stadium after the last game of the World Series a year ago. I was afraid I wasn't going to get off the field in one piece.

"I've had close scrapes myself. See this hip?" He pointed to his right thigh. "In 1968 when I was being taken off the field on the players' shoulders after a playoff game, a guy almost jerked my leg out of socket. I've just had a metal joint put in."

Ewbank recalled recent disturbances at Madison Square Garden and said, "I'm in favor of having police dogs on the sidelines as they do at Miami — nobody rushes onto the field down there."

He said the greatest difference he's noted in pro football since he retired in 1973 lay in sophistication and flexibility of the defenses.

"The six-man line was fundamental when I coached," he added. "Then they brought in the free safety, started loosening up some with the zone and went down to a five-man front, then four and then three."

EWBANK SAID he was old-fashioned and didn't like the rules allowing linemen to extend their arms instead of keeping them close to the chest with hands closed.

"They encourage holding," he said. "All you get is a lot of pushing, circling and grabbing. With full extension, the players are winding up with a fistful of shirt. The rules are unenforceable."

The hard helmet has been turned into a lethal weapon, he acknowledges, but it probably prevents more serious injuries than it inflicts. "And the face mask is a God-send," he added. "I can't tell you how many college guys we used to get with no front teeth."

Hatfield named coach

DETROIT (AP) — Fred Hatfield, who had been a coach of the Detroit Tigers the past two baseball seasons, Thursday was named manager of Detroit's Class A farm club at Lakeland of the Florida State League.

Hatfield lost his coaching job when Les Moss succeeded retiring Ralph Houk as manager at the end of this season and brought in several new coaches.

The 54-year-old Hatfield, an Alabama native, played major league ball for nine years.

Permian JV routs Brigade by 33-6

ODESSA---Odessa Permian pounded out a 33-6 victory over the Midland Lee Stonewall Brigade Thursday night in a junior varsity football game.

Permian took a first half lead of 26-0 and the Brigade settled down to play much better in the second half in only being outscored, 7-6 in the final two periods.

Jamie Fierro got Mojo off to a good start in the first period as Permian drove 76 yards for its first touchdown of the evening. Fierro raced in from 22 yards out with 6:04 left in the period and Roy Dunn booted the extra point for a 7-0 lead.

A 72-yard punt off the toe of Permian's Rusty Holt put the Brigade in a hole late in the period and Bobby Massey recovered a Lee fumble at the Midlander's 18 to set up another TD.

Quarterback Jerry Hix scored from the four, but this time Lee's Richard Dolan blocked the extra point, making it 13-0 with 27 seconds left in the opening period.

Bruce LaRoque intercepted an Alan Koonce pass for Mojo in the second period, but on the very next play, Lee's Robert Usrey recovered a Panther fumble. Permian held and scored in its next posession with Fierro skipping 14 yards for the TD. A pass for the two-pointer failed, making it 19-0 with 5:01 left in the period.

Hix hooked up with end Ty Goines with just 39 seconds left to score from 13 yards out and Dunn booted the PAT for a 26-0 halftime lead for the Odessans.

The only score of the third period was turned in by fullback Phillip Crain who raced 62 yards for the score. Dunn booted the PAT for a 33-0 lead with 8:09 left in the period.

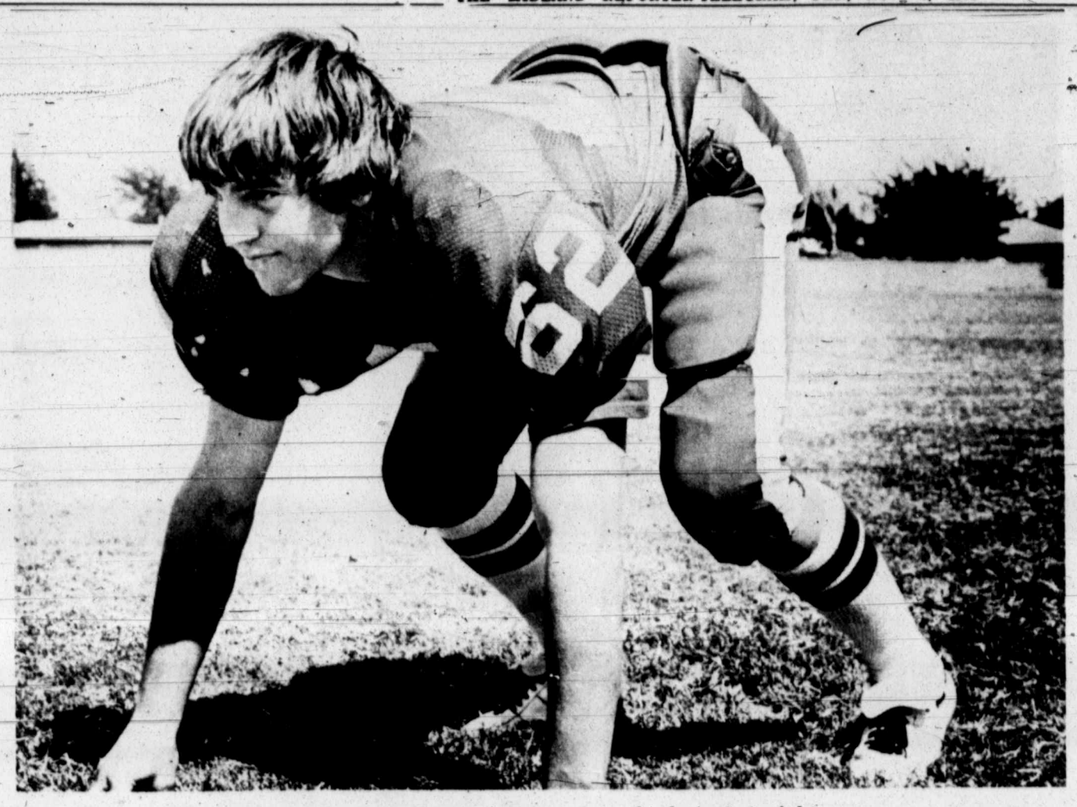

Lee got on the scoreboard when Gabriel Luna picked off a mid-air fumble by Permian's Mike Chalambaga at the 18-yard line. The pass for the two-point conversion with 5:25 left in the game failed for Lee, however.

Permian is now 5-1-1 on the year while Lee drops to a 2-4-1 mark and plays the Abilene junior varsity on Nov. 11 at 1:30 p.m. in Abilene. Mojo faces the San Angelo JV in Odessa on the same day.

Kuechenberg may miss game against Cowboys

MIAMI (AP) — Coach Don Shula said Thursday he plans to start veteran offensive lineman Bob Kuechenberg this Sunday when the Miami Dolphins host the Dallas Cowboys.

Kuechenberg, hobbled by a painful ankle, saw only limited action last week and was listed as questionable for this week. But the ankle has improved, so Kuechenberg's status was upgraded to probable.

Running plagues teams

By The Associated Press

Pennsylvania's biggest problem in the National Football League is running.

It seems Pittsburgh can't stop it. It seems Philadelphia can't get it going.

Fortunately or unfortunately, depending on your point of view, the Steelers and Eagles aren't playing each other Sunday.

The Steelers, having given up a larger-than-usual amount of yards to Houston and Kansas City in their last two games, face Chuck Muncie, Tony Galbreath and the rest of the surging New Orleans Saints.

And the Eagles, their ground game decimated by injuries to Wilbert Montgomery and several other backs, take on the National Football League's surprise team of the season, the Green Bay Packers.

Sunday's other National Football League games are the New York Giants at St. Louis, Cincinnati at San Diego, San Francisco at Atlanta, Tampa Bay at Los Angeles, Detroit at Minnesota, Seattle at Chicago, New England at Buffalo, Cleveland at Houston, Oakland at Kansas City, Dallas at Miami and the New York Jets at Denver. Washington visits Baltimore on Monday night.

"The first thing you have to do is shut down the running game," said linebacker Jack Ham, "and the last two weeks we've had it shoved up our noses." The Steelers gave Houston 169 yards two games ago, and Kansas City rolled up 186 last Sunday. "When you give up that many rushing yards, the defense is not playing very well," Ham observed. "We have to get back to playing good football. Giving up that many rushing yards is out of character for our team."

Still, the Steelers have the NFL's best record, 8-1, and hold a three-game lead in the American Conference Central Division. New Orleans is 5-4 and has run off three straight victories. They've never won more than three in a row and never won more than five games in a season, so there's plenty of incentive for Galbreath, who has amassed 745 yards rushing and receiving, and the rest of the team.

The Packers hold a two-game lead in the National Conference Central, thanks in part to a running game paced by Terdell Middleton, second in the NFC with 755 yards. Montgomery has 754, but he's got ankle and knee injuries and is a doubtful starter against Green Bay.

Jim Betterson, having undergone knee surgery, is probably out for the season. Cleveland Franklin has a pinched nerve in his shoulder and Billy Campfield has a hip pointer. They'll probably play. All were hurt during the Eagles' loss to St. Louis.

Eagles Coach Dick Vermeil has shored up the ground game a bit by signing Larry Barnes, San Diego's sixth-round draft choice.

Greenwood completes unbeaten season

GREENWOOD — The Greenwood junior varsity completed an undefeated season Thursday night by edging the previously unbeaten Colorado City jayvee, 27-22, in a see-saw battle.

After Colorado City jumped out to an 8-0 lead, Greenwood pulled to withing two on Homer Lopez's four yard TD run of four yards. The run for the conversion failed.

Colorado City scored again to take a 14-6 lead, but Greenwood came right back to make it 14-14 at halftime on Lopez's nine yard pass to Rex Evans. Joe Mobley ran in the two point conversion.

Mobley was the difference in the second half as he scored on runs of 30 and 36 yards, the last one coming after Colorado City had taken a one point lead.

Penn State talks about hereafter

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Some Penn State football players were sitting around the other night and talking. It was about Saturday's game with Maryland, right?

They had to be discussing the impending confrontation between the two unbeaten Eastern giants: Penn State, ranked second in the nation, and Maryland, fifth, each with eight victories.

The Penn State players had to be concerned with protecting the nation's longest major college football winning streak — 16 games.

Right?

No, said defensive tackle Matt Millen.

"We were discussing exorcism and religion and that stuff," said Millen, a 249-pound junior. "We were talking about the hereafter.

"Then, when it ended, I said, 'Let's everybody think about what the Maryland game means.' Do you know what the answer was? It doesn't mean a thing."

MILLEN HASTILY explained that it wasn't that he and his teammates didn't want to beat Maryland, but he explained that they were just trying to keep things in their proper perspective.

"It reminded me of when I first left for college and I told my father my goals," Millen recalled.

"My father said to me, 'Matt, who won the 1960 Heisman trophy?' Of course I didn't remember. It made me realize that things may be important to you, but who remembers? It gave me a different point of view than I had."

In other contests involving teams ranked in The Associated Press Top Ten, No. 1 Oklahoma visits Colorado, No. 3 Alabama is at home to Mississippi State, No. 4 Nebraska plays at Kansas, No. 6 Southern Cal goes to Stanford, No. 8 Michigan is at Iowa, No. 9 UCLA entertains Oregon and No. 10 Houston hosts Texas Christian. No. 7 Texas does not play.

In the second 10, it's 11th-ranked Navy against No. 15 Notre Dame in Cleveland, No. 12 Louisiana State vs. Mississippi, No. 13 Georgia vs. VMI, No. 14 Purdue against Northwestern, No. 16 Clemson vs. Wake Forest, No. 17 Arkansas vs. Rice, No. 18 Michigan State vs. Illinois, No. 19 Pittsburgh vs. Syracuse and No. 20 Washington vs. Arizona.

MILLEN AND his defensive tackle running mate, Bruce Clark, are rated by Penn State Coach Joe Paterno as the best pair at the position in the nation. Many experts compare them with Mike Reid and Steve Smear, two great Lions' tackles of the late 1960s.

"I've seen films of them playing and we try to do the same things. Just being compared with them makes you feel great," Millen said.

But Millen tries to stay out of the limelight because he's afraid the rest of the defense tends to be overlooked. Penn State is ranked No. 1 against the rush, No. 3 on total defense among the nation's college teams.

"Nobody does that alone," Millen noted. "It's the overall defense. It should be obvious. Larry Kubin and Joe Lally (ends), and Tony Petruccio (middle guard) are doing great jobs. They make it easy for Bruce and me.

"If it wasn't for Petruccio, a lot of our games would be gone. He's strong and so quick," Millen said. "We (Millen and Clark) get double-teamed a lot. That leaves Lally and Kubin open. It's simply good team defense."

As for Maryland, Millen said the job of the defense is to control the line of scrimmage.

"If we don't, we'll get beat," he said. "They're that good. If they take away one part of our game, they'll beat us. We can't afford to key on anyone. We just have to play our game."

THE NAVY-NOTRE Dame game is among the most intriguing meetings Saturday. It features a continuation of one of the country's oldest consecutive intersectional rivalries.

"There's no question about the validity of this Navy team," says Notre Dame Coach Dan Devine. "We have been told this is the best Navy team since the days of Roger Staubach."

Staubach quarterbacked Navy in one of its best seasons in history, 1964, when the Middies went to the Cotton Bowl.

"I think Navy should be ranked higher," added Devine. "If they had been undefeated last season and going ust as well as they are now, they'd surely be ranked No. 1 or 2. And I think the winner of the Notre Dame-Navy game should be ranked in the top five next week."

Oklahoma and Nebraska, heading for a Big Eight showdown, both play relatively weaker teams this week, although Colorado is certain to have more bite than Kansas. The Sooners are undefeated in eight games thus far and Nebraska has a 7-1 record.

ALABAMA RATES as a solid favorite to beat Southastern Conference colleague Mississippi State, although the Crimson Tide has had a propensity for fumbling the football this season. Coach Bear Bryant says he is welcoming suggestions "from anybody" to cure his team in this department.

"I've had three letters from ministers," noted Bryant. "I appreciate them very much, and we will try what they suggested."

He did not say what they suggested, but he did say: "I pray that we don't fumble."

Bryant also said he was worried about his team's tendency in some games to give up the long pass, especially with State leading the SEC in passing.

UCLA is the Pacific-10 Conference's only unbeaten team with a 5-0 record and has a 7-1 overall mark. Oregon is 1-3 in conference play and 1-7 overall, but "vastly improved," according to UCLA Coach Terry Donahue.

"I think it's an outstanding football team," says Donahue. "I think they're a very physical team, a well-coached team. Their offensive line and fullback really impress me, as do their front seven on defense."

COACH JIM Young wants better blocking on running plays and sharper tackling on defense from his Purdue team for Saturday's Big Ten game with Northwestern.

"We didn't run as well against Iowa as we have been," said Young about last week's game during a break in this week's pregame drills. "I think our blocking and our general running game needs to get back into shape. From a defensive standpoint, we weren't as sharp tackling and we weren't quite as tough on defense inside."

Chap netters split matches

The Midland College Invitational Team Tennis tournament got underway Thursday with the Chaparrals splitting matches with South Plains Junior College.

The Chaps won the men's match by a nifty 7-2 margin, but the women fell to South Plains, 5-4, in a squeaker.

In the only other match of the day, the Texas Tech women defeated New Mexico Junior College by a 9-0 count. The tourney continues today and runs through Saturday. Eight schools are represented in the tournament and 12 teams.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — Top-seeded Renata Marsikova defeated Cynthia Doerner 6-0, 6-3 to advance to the semifinals of the River Plate Tennis Championships.
Francois Durr, angered by unfavorable line calls, stalked off the court in the second set and forfeited her match to Emilse Raponi, who was leading 6-2, 3-3 at the time.
TOKYO — Bjorn Borg of Sweden and Sandy Mayer of the United States scored quarter-final victories in a $200,000 international tennis tournament.
Second-seed Borg defeated fifth-seeded Harold Solomon of the United States 6-1, 6-2, while Mayer, the No. 6 seed, beat fellow American Vitas Gerulaitis, the third-seed, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3.
HOCKEY
INDIANAPOLIS — The financially ailing Indianapolis Racers of the World Hockey Association sold three of their top players, including million-dollar rookie center Wayne Gretzky, to the Edmonton Oilers.
Besides the 17-year-old Gretzky, the Racers sent left wing Peter Driscoll and goaltender Ed Mio to the Oilers for $800,000 to help alleviate a money pinch that has inundated the Racers.
Gretzky become one of the youngest players ever to sign a professional hockey contract when he signed a $1.7 million personal services contract with the Racers after last season.

Four NFL cheerleaders says league hypocritical

NEW YORK (AP) —Four former National Football League cheerleaders, who posed in various stages of undress in a national magazine, called the league hypocritical Wednesday and said their teams had encouraged the publicity.

Pete Rozelle, NFL commissioner, maintained what he called "the hands-off policy" the league took when the issue of sexism on the sidelines arose this season. And a representative of the Chicago Honey Bears, one of the cheerleading groups, denied the team had approved nude photographs.

"We were never told, 'No, you can't pose for Playboy,'" former Honey Bear Jacquelyn Rohrs said. "And what do they think Playboy is, Good Housekeeping? I think they're all being very hypocritical.

"When we posed for our publicity poster before the season, we were told to use push-up bras, and cleavage was emphasized and all that."

Rohr and Andrea Mann, formerly a cheerleader with the Baltimore Colts, were fired as a result of publicity surrounding their posing. The San Diego Chargers and New Orleans Saints' cheerleading groups were disbanded, San Diego's because of the photographs, New Orleans' because of an unrelated issue involving drugs.

Mann said Sam Orofino, director of personnel for the Colts' cheerleaders, approved the idea of Playboy photographs. And Bunny Hover, formerly with New Orleans' cheerleaders, said Saints owner John Mecom, encouraged it and was actively involved in contacting the magazine.

Neither Orofino nor Mecom was available for comment Wednesday.

But Corinne Nierman, who identified herself as general manager of the Honey Bears, said: "After our publicity poster was taken, the poster was touched up because there was a little too much cleavage and we didn't want that shown to the public. We felt it was in poor taste. And we only approved the idea of photographs if the girls were clothed."

Rohr observed: "The Bears say we're cheerleaders, but did you ever hear 50,000 people saying, 'Bear down, Bears'? They're making it sound like we're mom and apple pie and all that. If that's what they want, why don't they go back to bobby sox and turtle neck sweaters? We're not cheerleaders. We're entertainers."

Japan All-Stars rip Seaver

TOKYO (AP) — Two-run homers by Koji Yamamoto and Daisuke Yamashita and a solo round tripper by Masayuki Kakefu powered the Japan All-Stars to a 6-4 exhibition baseball victory over the Cincinnati Reds and Tom Seaver today.

The defeat was the second for the Reds against two wins and one tie so far on their 17-game exhibition tour of Japan.

Seaver, Cincinnati's 33-year-old right-hander, allowed eight hits, including two home runs, struck out eight and walked three before turning over the mound to Pedro Borbon in the eighth inning.

Playing before 50,000 spectators at Tokyo Korakuen stadium, the Reds jumped to a 2-0 lead in the top of the second inning. After two outs, shortstop Ron Oester tripled to score Champ Summers and Junior Kennedy, both of whom got on base on singles.

But the Japanese overtook the Reds in the bottom of the third with three runs, including a two-run homer by Yamamoto of the Hiroshima Carp into the right field bleachers. Yamamoto had 44 homers last season.

Kakefu hit the second homer of the day off Seaver in the seventh inning after two outs. The inning ended with Sadaharu Oh, all-time home run leader with a career total of 805 round trippers, striking out for the third time. Oh also had a single and a one walk.

The All-Stars virtually wrapped up the game in the eighth when Borbon issued a two-run homer to Yamashita of the Yokohama Taiyo Whales.

Rodgers bitten by another bug

By MATT MITCHELL
The Los Angeles Times

SAN DIEGO — He's a self-proclaimed "superstar," but he has flamed out like a tiny satellite re-entering the earth's atmosphere.

A bet on his productivity the last two years in the National Football League would have been like making a huge investment in the stock market a week before the Crash of '29.

Johnny Rodgers, "superstar," won't be seen again this season in a San Diego Charger uniform. His next garb probably will be a hospital gown as he prepares for knee surgery.

Rodgers has spent more time in the training room than on the football field after he abandoned a very lucrative career in the Canadian Football League for a place with the Chargers in 1977.

SAN DIEGO invested a first-round draft choice in Rodgers in 1973, but Montreal offered big bucks as the Chargers talked about how nice it would be for the Nebraska star to test himself against the best in the NFL.

It took four years of Canadian football to build a small fortune and make Rodgers aware there were other football fields to conquer.

"When I was young, my most important motivation was money. When I decided to leave Montreal, it was because I wanted to see how good I coule be," said Rodgers.

"So I asked the Alouettes to be let out of my contract. I didn't have to buy my way out, but I left a lot of bonus and deferred funds there," Rodgers said, in his expensive El Cajon, Calif., home which overlooks a Romanesque swimming pool.

"I came back to the United States because I wanted to play against the best. I'd already been Rookie of the Year and almost made Most Valuable Player. There was little else left in Canada."

BUT ALL there's been in the NFL has been continuing bad luck and crummy bounces. "It seemed to start in my first game when I mishandled two punts in Oakland and the Raiders scored both times to beat us," he recalled. "Since then, nothing seems to have gone right. In the third game of the 1977 season, I pulled my right hamstring near my knee and it never did heal during the rest of the season.

"This year in training camp I stepped on (Charger safety) Mike Fuller's foot running a simple curl pattern and there went my knee."

The man who scored 37 touchdowns in the wide-open brand of Canadian football has none, officially, for the Chargers, although if you looked quickly during the 1977 pre-season, you'd have seen him get four exhibition scores. Since then he has drawn a blank.

As a Charger he has a total of 882 yards on rushes, passes caught and punt and kickoff returns. In Canda, in four seasons, the total was 7,924 yards.

"Now this," said Rodgers, unconsciously rubbing his right knee. "This is the first time I've had to say I can't do something on a football field. I've had to let my ego go and say, 'I can't do it,' and I've always prided myself in being trained to give the maximum to win."

COULD THIS mean at 27 that Johnny Rodgers has slowed? Or is he fat and complacent? Has he made enough money, especially with two more years on what in essence is a no-cut, $1 million contract with the Chargers, that football means little to the real estate magnate?

"If I'm going to be mediocre, I might as well be nothing. Football is too fast a game to play on just one leg. I agreed with new coach Don Coryell that I should step aside and let them get someone who could help the team in some fashion while I can't do anything well."

Last week, Rodgers was placed on injured reserve for the remaining half of the '78 season and will be seeing Los Angeles orthopedic specialist Dr. Robert Kerlan about why he's been developing fluid on his knee every week — "even when I didn't practice all week."

Rodgers does little to hide his frustrations. "I can't break punt returns or go deep on passes. Maybe there's something in the air. I've had the same luck as the Charger team itself — none good.

"My biggest asset in football always has been that I've been small and durable and didn't miss games. I wish I had some answers to all this, especially since I wasn't really hurt in action."

Okada defeats Nancy Lopez

HANAYASHIKI, Japan (AP) — Japan's Michiko Okada knocked in a short birdie put on the fifth hole of a sudden-playoff today with American Nancy Lopez to win the $125,000 Mizuno Golf Classic, a Ladies Professional Golf Association tour event.

Okada, who started the final round 6 shots off the pace, fired a 5-under-par 69 and moved into a playoff with Lopez, the sensational newcomer of the U.S. golf circuit, and Ai-Yu Tu of Taiwan, the first and second-round leader.

The three finished the regulation 54-hole play with a 6-under-par 216s over the par-74 Hanayashiki Country Club in western Japan.

Lopez shot a final-round 73 and Tu a 1-over-par 75.

Tu was eliminated after the second hole while Lopez, gunning for her ninth tournament title this year, lost out to Okada when she parred the fifth hole.

Lee girls lose match to Permian

The Midland Lee girls volleyball team dropped a District 5-4A match to Odessa Permian here Thursday night, winning the first set, 15-2, but dropping the next two by scores of 15-11 and 15-8.

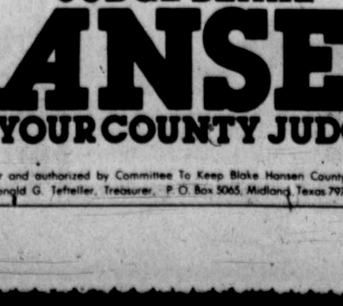

Julie Ochsner had an outstanding game, both on offense and defense for Lee, according to Coach Linda Weikel.

The loss eliminates Lee from the second half title, but it still has a shot at a playoff spot if Big Spring wins the second half.

Permian also won the junior varsity game, 15-3 and 15-8.

Next action for Lee is Tuesday when it plays Abilene in the Tall City.

Churches sponsor refugee families

By GUY SULLIVAN
R-T Staff Writer

They come by night, desperately crossing the Mekong River from Laos into Thailand.

Behind, they leave their homeland taken over by Communists.

Ahead, they face a life in Thailand refugee camps until they can be sponsored to relocate in a foreign country.

Along the way, their hardships include forced labor, minimal food and harsh punishment.

Even upon reaching Thailand, they sometimes are stripped of all valuables by officials allowing their entry into the country.

"They" are the estimated 120,000 to 170,000 Laotians and other people of Southeast Asia who each day risk their lives to seek freedom from Communist rule.

Midland churches have sponsored two such Laotian families.

These families are called "small-boat cases" — because they escaped by primitive boats.

Through such organizations as Church World Service, refugees have a chance to relocate in the United States.

That's true in the instance of the Khamvongsa family in Midland.

The First Presbyterian Church of Midland in conjunction with the New York-based Church World Service is giving the Khamvongsa family a chance to begin a new life in the Permian Basin.

The Rev. Larry Grimm said the Khamvongsa family arrived at Midland Regional Airport about 1 a.m. Sept. 15 "with nothing but a box full of cooking gear."

Both Poune and Tha Khamvongsa are seeking work now. Some of their children already are working. However, before the children can enroll in school they must have a home, Grimm said.

Grimm said members of his congregation are providing as much food, clothing, transportation and furniture as possible. But they would be "glad to receive donations for this family."

Donations may be mailed to the First Presbyterian Church at P.O. Drawer 2438, Midland, Texas 79702, or dropped off at 800 W. Texas Ave. Grimm may be reached by phone at 684-7821 between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays.

It was on the night of June 2, 1976, that Poune Khamvongsa and four of his children escaped Laos in a wooden fishing boat.

Accompanying him across the river to Thailand were Chanthavone Khamvongsa, 16, Keo Nhay Khamvongsa, 14, Touy Khamvongsa, 9, and Keo Noy Khamvongsa, 13.

The Khamvongsa family is staying with the Sirimanodkham family. The latter was relocated to Midland through the efforts of the First Christian Church.

Poune Khamvongsa said, through an interpreter, "Over here, it's better than in Laos or Thailand."

The refugee explained that he and his family lived in the Nangkhai, Thailand, refugee camp.

And, he said in Laos the average wage was $10 to $20 per month, "barely enough to live on."

That's why, he said, he's glad to be in West Texas. "We are grateful for the help given us by everyone," he said.

Said Grimm: "Church World Services contacted the First Presbyterian Church of Midland and asked us to sponsor a refugee family.

"We had previously tried to do so, but there was a quota on the number of people allowed to enter the country."

Poune Khamvongsa said before he left Thailand there were an estimated 30,000 refugees in the camp where he and his children stayed. This camp was one of seven similar facilities throughout Thailand containing 100,000 refugees.

Under Communist rule, he said Laotians must endure rationed rice distributed arbitrarily to families, and people are forced to work or face going to a prison camp.

"I'm not free to live with the Communists," he said. "They force you to do things they want you to do."

Khamvongsa said everyone who worked for the Laotian government was put in prison camps.

And he still remembers paying $4 for a bag of rice which was supposed to last a family one month.

"That amount of rice is barely enough for one family," he said.

Tha was staying in a Thailand refugee camp with her twins, Na Na and Nou Nou, 7, when she met and married Poune Khamvongsa.

She said she and nine others paid $150 to cross the Mekong River on a ferry, which formerly only charged passengers about five cents.

On the night of Nov. 11, 1977, she and the others crossed the Mekong River only to be detained a month before being allowed to join others in a refugee camp.

Tha said she knew of cases where people were taken halfway across the river, robbed of their few belongings and tossed overboard.

Poune recalled a woman who paid $400 to cross the river from Laos into Thailand. Once she reached Thailand, he said, she was struck on the head and her children were thrown into the river.

Refugees, according to the Laotian, are mostly poor people with practically nothing. Yet they must give everything to the Thailand police or others.

Both Grimm and Jack Swallow, a member of the First Presbyterian Church, went to the Midland Police Department to pick up the refugee family, which had been taken there by a cab driver.

Grimm said members of the church have taken turns teaching English to the newcomers to West Texas.

"We're just trying to help them become self-sufficient as soon as possible," said the pastor.

The church is trying to find a home for the refugee family, he added. "As soon as we get them a home, we will enroll the children in school."

Said Poune Khamvongsa: "We're surprised because America has many things Laos does not have."

Even as the family spoke, Les Weatherall of the Transportation Committee of the First Presbyterian Church was ringing the doorbell to take the family to church.

The Khamvongsa family has finally found a home.

New residents to Midland from Laos by way of Thailand are these members of both the Khamvongsa and Sirimanodkham families.

New Midlander has no wish to return to Laos

His father, Khampheui Sirimanodkham, died during surgery before he could learn his Laotion family had found freedom in the United States.

Today Midlander Phouthasith Sirimanodkham does not wish to return to his native land.

However, he still wishes his countrymen well in their fight to return the small Southeast Asian nation to Laotian control.

He realizes Laos is a French colony. But he also realizes people are dying each day there in a cause which some will never give up.

Some Laotions, he said, do not wish to live under Communist rule.

"Some of my people would rather die there than leave Laos," said Sirimanadkham, 21, an employee of a Midland restaurant. He also attends a local school.

The Communists, he explained, took over Laos about 1976.

His family consists of nine people.

"We lost everything because of the communists," said the young man who speaks fluent English.

"I estimate my father's business interests amounted to assets totaling $500,000 in Laos," he said. "That included about 30 Chinese shops and many homes he rented plus land. We were building our businesses at one time."

Sirimanodkham said his father knew the communists would one day take over the nation.

"He knew what was going to happen. He said he was going to try to join the party so that he could remain and look after his business interests after sending us out of the country."

Today the former refugee said he is helping to pay for his family's local home.

"I'm helping to pay for the home until my sister, Mrs. Sangouane Philaphandeth, comes here from Thailand. Her husband was captured by Communists and she has not heard from him. She has given up trying and decided to come live here with us."

He said he expects her to arrive here by Christmas from a Thailand refugee camp.

Another sister, Mrs. Nari Siackhachan is "doing well," he said, adding she has married a wealthy Asian businessman and seems happy.

"Still, I think we would all be happy to get our country back," said Sirimanodkham.

If his nation is regained, he said, "that would be great. But I intend to stay here as I'm getting married!"

Final votes of Congressman in 95th session tallied

WASHINGTON—Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the final days of the 95th Congress.

HOUSE

SMALL CLAIMS COURT. Failed, 224 for and 166 against, to get the two-thirds majority needed to pass a bill to upgrade small claims courts in the states. A two-thirds majority was required by the short-cut parliamentary procedure under which the bill (S 957) was debated. This vote killed the bill in the 95th Congress.

ROLL CALL REPORT

The bill sought to establish a program of Justice Department grants to help states and localities better handle comparatively minor and inexpensive civil claims that now clog dockets. It had a price tag of about $95 million over five years.

Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Tex., a supporter, said: "The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, Ralph Nader's Congress Watch, the American Bar Association, Ford Motor Co. Consumer's Union, and the National Association of Automobile Dealers are just a few of the organizations who support this bill."

Rep. Carlos Moorhead, R-Calif., an opponent, said the bill "has been rushed through in the final days of the session" and that such far-reaching legislation should be subjected to normal rather than short-cut debating rules.

Members voting "yea" favored passage of the bill.

Reps. Charles Wilson, D-2, Jim Mattox, D-5, Bob Echkardt, D-8, James Wright, D-12, Barbara Jordan, D-18, Henry Gonzalez, D-20, and Abraham Kazen, D-23, voted "yea."

Reps. Samuel Hall, D-1, James Collins, R-3, Ray Roberts, D-4, Bill Archer, R-7, Jack Brooks, D-9, Jake Pickle, D-10, W. R. Poage, D-11, Jack Hightower, D-13, Kika de la Garza, D-15, Omar Burleson, D-17, George Mahon, D-19, Bob Gammage, D-22, and Dale Milford, D-24, voted "nay."

Reps. Olin Teague, D-6, John Young, D-14, Richard White, D-16, and Robert Krueger, D-21, did not vote.

TRIS CLAIMS Passed, 304 for and 90 against, a bill (S 1503) to allow the U.S. Treasury to compensate sleepwear manufactureres for damages incurred when the government last year banned the chemical Tris from the market place. The bill, which faces a possible pocket veto to President Carter, permits the U.S. Court of Claims to adjudicate Tris claims. The flame-retardant had been used by garment-makers to comply with federal flammability standards. But it was banned when found to be a possible cause of cancer. An estimated $51 million in claims could be paid under this bill.

Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., a supporter, said sleepwear manufacturers deserve "relief for losses incurred as a direct result of government-imposed standards and through no fault of their own."

Rep. Robert Drinan, D. Mass., an opponent, called the bill a precedent that will "put every industry subject to any kind of federal regulation on notice that they can be reimbursed by the taxpayers for the costs of compliance."

Members voting "yea" favored allowing reimbursement.

Wilson, Collins, Roberts, Mattox, Archer, Eckhardt, Pickle, Wright, Hightower, de la Garza, Burleson, Gonzalez, Gammage, Kazen and Milford voted "yea."

Hall, Brooks, Poage, Jordan and Mahon voted "nay."

Teague, Young, White and Krueger did not vote.

QUOTAS Rejected, 187 for and 200 against, a motion that the House stand by its previously-voted opposition to quotas in higher education. The House position, which was abandoned by this vote, prohibited the use of appropriated funds to implement admission policies based on quotas of race or sex. That language was deleted during a House-Senate conference on the Department of Health, Education and Welfare appropriations bill for fiscal 1979 (HR 12929), later signed into law.

There was no pro-and-con debate preceding this vote. Members voting "yea" opposed the use of federal money to implement race and sex quotas in higher education.

Hall, Collins, Roberts, Archer, Brooks, Poage, Hightower, Young, de la Garza, Burleson, Gammage and Kazen voted "yea."

Wilson, Mattox, Eckhardt, Pickle, Wright, Jordan, Mahon and Milford voted "nay."

Teague, White, Gonzalez and Krueger did not vote.

SENATE

1ST CLASS OR COACH? Voted, 70 for and 22 against, to allow businessmen to continue to receive tax deductions for first-class air travel and entertainment expenses such as the cost of sporting-event and theatre tickets. This vote tabled an amendment proposed to the tax bill (HR 13511) later sent to President Carter for his signature.

No senator spoke in favor of tabling and thus killing the amendment.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., the sponsor, said the tax deduction for coach fare is legitimate but that "the additional cost of first-class air travel is primarily a luxury item and should not be deductible."

Senators voting "yea" favored keeping the business tax deductions for first-class air travel and entertainment costs.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D, voted "yea."

Sen. John Tower, R, did not vote.

CORPORATE TAXES Adopted, 60 for and 30 against, an amendment to gradually cut corporate income taxes from the present 48 per cent rate to 44 per cent beginning in 1981. The amendment was attached to the tax bill (see above vote). House-Senate conferees later disregarded this vote and agreed on a corporate tax rate of 46 per cent effective in 1979. The rate applies to net profits over $100,000. Lesser profits are to be taxed at rates ranging from 17 to 40 per cent.

Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., a supporter, said that by leaving more profit in the hands of corporations the amendment would help to "redress the problem we are having in this country with respect to capital formation and productivity...."

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., an opponent of the 44 per cent rate, said that other tax benefits for corporations already written into the bill make it "a far sweeter bill than the President recommended in terms of dollas."

Senators voting "yea" favored a 44 per cent corporate tax rate.

Bentsen voted "yea."

Tower did not vote.

'Furniture Highway' explored

By JEFF PRUGH
The Los Angeles Times

HIGH POINT, N.C. — The road winds past acres of Carolina pines and trees wearing the colors of autumn, past factory showrooms bearing oversized logos of such companies as Bassett, Burlington and Thomasville.

Inside, once you hear the fast-talking buyers with thick New Jersey accents or nasal Midwestern twangs speak of "first cuttings" and "high-end brands," you know you're on Furniture Highway, the 150-mile-long heartland of the nation's multi-billion-dollar home-furnishings industry.

Here, within a 200-mile radius of High Point, the furniture "capital', 60 percent of all wooden bedroom furniture made in the United States is produced. And the same is true of 52 percent of all wooden dining-room furniture, 28 percent of all upholstered sofas and chairs and 80 percent of all wooden lamps manufactured in this country.

Ths North Carolina hill country is also a place where styles are set — where 35,000 buyers and salespersons from all over the world this week are attending the twice-a-year Southern Furniture Market.

In addition, all year long people in cars with out-of-state license plates stop here to pay cut-rate prices for expensive furniture that will be the envy of the neighbors back home.

"We grow up with sawdust in our hair, and we talk the lingo of the furniture business," said George W. (Buzz) Lowe Jr., a manufacturer's representative.

He sat in the basement showroom of Gilliam's (pronounced "GILL-um's") in Statesville, 68 miles west of here, relaxing with several retail salespersons among apple-filled cracker barrels, an antique scale, a Pony Express-style mail pouch and rows of dried tobacco leaves hanging from the rafters.

"I guess it's like going to Detroit to buy a new Cadillac," Lowe said. "You probably have a secure feeling with your choice."

Indeed, like Detroit rolling out fastbacks and hatchbacks, Furniture Highway rolls out thousands of rattan recliners, 18th-century reproductions, modular sofas, mutli-stacked wall units and clock radio-equipped waterbeds.

And bargain-shoppers arrive by the thousands. They leave with furniture (or have it shipped home), bought at prices well below retail levels. Many others order by mail or phone.

Blackwelder's, a retailer in Statesville that sells top-quality brands at markups of 35 percent instead of the 100 percent that is usual at furniture stores, is typical of several North Carolina companies that undersell rivals only hundred of miles away.

For example, a Gilliam-made sofa priced at $844 retail can be purchased at Blackwelder's for $590. A Baker reproduction of an 18th-century secretary priced at $4,235 sells for $2,964. Blackwelder's salespersons say they do not assess North Carolina's 4 percent sales tax if the furniture is shipped out of state. Which makes for yet another saving.

A year ago, Blackwelder's reportedly grossed $15 million. The business is expanding about 20 percent every year. Owner John Blackwelder, 43, says he keeps prices down because overhead is low and his two-level 57,000-square-foot showroom is close to the major furniture makers.

Proximity is also the key to furniture manufacturing's success here. Furniture Highway is one big package deal; its forests grow the fine hardwoods, its fields produce the textiles for upholstery, its workers largely handcraft the tables, chairs, head boards, cabinets and other goods in factories from the town of Burlington west to Lenoir, and in towns such as High Point, Hickory, Thomasville and Lexington along the way.

Business is enormously competitive, but it proceeds in a mood of Southern hospitality and relaxation.

"You go to these markets in places like Chicago or New York, and they don't give you the time of day," one Midwestern retail buyer said. "Here, the folks are real nice. They make it a pleasure to do business."

It is no accident that the nation's Southern-anchored furniture industry — which did $7.6 billion in sales last year — competes so strenuously for the dollar of retail buyers and consumers.

Unlike many other industries, there is no pre-eminent manufacturer. One study released b the Bank of Virginia (another state with considerable furniture production) noted that the top 10 manufacturers last year sold only 23 percent of the total achieved by America's 1,500 furniure makers.

The land along Furniture Highway long has been home for stubbornly self-reliant whittlers and woodworkers using materials from the nearby Blue Ridge Mountains and the Piedmont. Some made gunstocks for the Civil War.

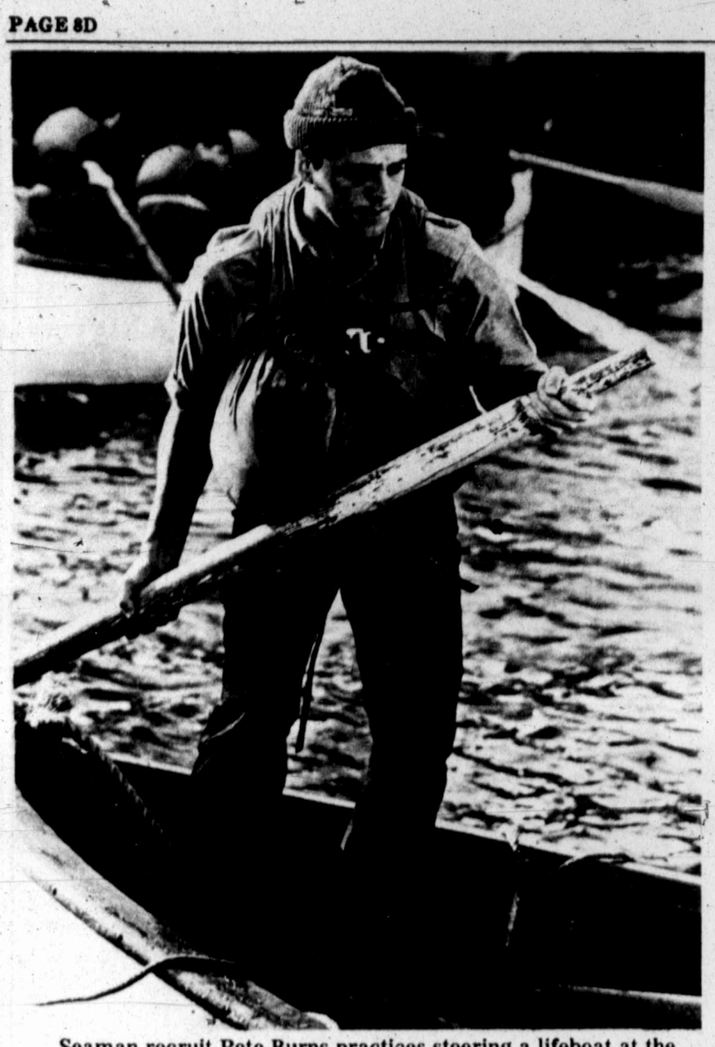

During the 1920s, these artisans went to work in factories that sprang up in small towns when the industry's balance shifted from Grand Rapids, Mich., to the woodlands of the Carolinas and Virginia to take advantage of more abundant raw materials and cheaper, craft-oriented labor.

What once was a scattering of small, family-owned manufacturing plants across the South became an industry that came of age during the home-building boom of the late 1940s and early 1950s.

Today these companies remain independent and generally successful. They suffered a slump during the 1974 recession, but soon were on the rebound.

"We're catching the World War II baby boom now, the people in their mid-30s who have established households are buying quality furniture to replace what they started with," said Richard Barentine, executive director of the Furniture Factories' Marketing Association of the South.

The furniture business for 1979 — was launched last week at the Southern Furniture Market, where 1,300 manufacturers exhibite their new wares to buyers in a spraeling high-rise complex here and in factory showrooms along Furniture Highway. The products are attractively displayed in track-lighted settings that look like pages out of House Beautiful magazine. The displays, however, are closed to the public.

Seafarers' fare not the fairest

By ANGUS PHILLIPS
The Washington Post

Anyone who has ever spent time at sea has wrestled with the dream of someday making it his life.

We were all seafarers at heart when I was a lad on Long Island. We dreamed of months on ship with only a duffel and a bunk, starlit skies overhead and rolling gray ocean to rock us to sleep.

The merchant marine — that was the answer. One by one we checked it out, and one by one we came back with bitter news, gleaned from a wide spectrum of unreliable sources.

You can't get into the merchant marine, we learned, because you have to have your papers to get a job and you can't get your papers unless you have a job.

It was the first Catch 22 our innocent minds had to swallow and it didn't go down easily. No work without papers, no papers without work. Ground zero.

The odd thing is that this piece of information, which I've harbored for 20 years with the suspicion that it couldn't really be true, really is true.

The only difference is that nowdays there's a loophole.

I spent an afternoon last week watching fresh-faced teen-agers from landlocked places like Paducah and Dubuque trying on their sea legs at the Harry Lundeberg School of Seamanship in Piney Point, Md.

The school, an outlet of the prosperous Seafarers International Union, grinds out bottom-level seafarers at a rate of 25 a week. That's easy.

The hard thing the Lundebert school does is guarantee these kids a job aboard a U.S. flag vessel as soon as they graduate from the 12-week course. And with a job guarantee they can get their Coast Guard papers.

The youngsters, half of whom never graduated from high school and some of whom can barely read at all, walk out with jobs on inland waterways that pay about $40 a day or $10,000 six-month tours on the high seas, according to Lundebert spokeswoman Kathleen Kneeland.

We were all seafarers at heart when I was a lad on Long Island. We dreamed of months on ship with only a duffel and a bunk, starlit skies overhead and rolling gray ocean to rock us to sleep.

Sounds great. But before you enroll those three lazy sons that are eating you out of bowling money, look at a few of the cold realities.

According to Kneeland, there are no entry requirements for taking the Lundeberg course. "All you have to do is fill out an application and pass a physical. There is no educational requirement," she said.

Very democratic. But what it also means is that there are some pretty hard-nosed customers passing through the Lundeberg portals. I watched a couple dozen working out on a tow barge drill and the crisp fall air was sprinkled wih some pretty remarkable oaths and threats.

There's a healthy waiting list for admission, too. Most applicants wait at least a year before they are admitted, and the ones who want to go deep-sea may wait 2½ years. There's more demand for open ocean jobs and far fewer jobs available.

Then there's the harsh reality of the Lundeberg program. Recruits leave their freedom behind when they walk through the guarded front gate. There's an eight-foot fence around the 60-acre grounds, and barbed wire on top of that.

"Once they're in here, they don't leave until they get their orders or drop out," said Kneeland. "We figure if they can't take 12 weeks here, they'll never make it at sea."

We passed one recruit who had just been assigned to a Great Lakes ore boat. "Where you heading?" we asked. "I don't know," he said. "I don't care. Just so I get out of here."

The Lundeberg school handles 300 entry-level recruits at a time, all year around as long as the industry keeps booming. "The demand is so great for bottom-level seamen on the inland waterways right now that we have no trouble placing them all," Kneeland said.

The graduates are likely to work as wipers in an engine room, mess-hall cleanup men or as ordinary deckhands on tankers.

One plus is that Lundeberg is equipped to help high school dropouts pick up their equivalency diplomas while they are in training. And everyone who can't read to a sixth-grade level is required to take remedial reading.

That's good, but it doesn't always take.

Kneeland said there's no need for a seaman to be able to read to get his papers. If he can't take a written Coast Guard test to get his endorsements, the Coast Guard will administer the exam orally.

One myth that made the impossibility of getting a merchant marine job easier to take when I was young was the word from various sources that the industry was teeming with savage seafarers who would cut your throat for a cigarette.

Kneeland claims it isn't so. "The essential reason we undertook training the lowest-level seaman was that we viewed his job as the first step in a career. The maritime industry has become so technically advanced that we had to keep pace. These guys aren't loading freight into canvas sacks and swinging it onto the docks anymore. It's all automated."

Ah, the sea. They've finally got a way for a fellow to make a life there, but I'm not sure I'd want it anymore.

Metric system 'yards' away

By EDWARD NICHOLS
Copley News Service

Every movie-goer knows that the last yard in a football game sometimes is the longest one. By the same token, there is no doubt at all that the last meter in America's conversion to the metric system is kilometers away.

Few persons buying metric wrenches to tune their foreign automobiles or reading the strange second mathematical language on things they buy are aware that metrication has been in progress in the United States for two centuries.

George Washington proposed a uniform system of weights and measures in 1790. Thomas Jefferson concluded that uniformity could come only with a decimal system. John Quincy Adams recommended conversion to a metric system in 1821. And in 1866 Congress legalized use of the metric system in the United States.

In those days, mere mention of liters, kilograms, meters and joules aroused passions strong enough to overcome reason.

In the 1850s, for example, a group calling itself the Pyramidalists was able to halt the advance of metrics by convincing many Americans that any change from the English customary system, used here because the bulk of our trade was with the British Empire, was tantamount to religious heresy. The Egyptian pyramids were constructed under direction of God by using the British system of measurement, they explained. England, of course, went metric in 1965.

A quarter of a century after the Pyramidalists, traditionalists argued vigorously that the United States should not accept the Statue of Liberty from France because the Liberty Island monument was constructed on a metric scale.

Traditionalists exist today, and some of their opposition to metrics is just as irrational. For example, Floyd Davis, who coordinates metric studies for the U.S. Office of Education, says some Americans opposed supersonic transport landings in New York City because the aircraft are in metric dimensions.

On the whole, however, after two centuries of education, Americans are, by and large, far more sophisticated than they were in the last century. Congress had little problem in passing another law in 1975 stating that metrication was a national goal and establishing an initial budget of $1.8 million to underpin an agency that will eventually consist of up to 80 persons.

The money flowed out in the next few years, but the Metric Board did not hold its first meeting until last Aug. 18.

Malcolm E. O'Hagan, executive director of the American Metric Council, which serves the board, admits that progress has been slow in the last three years.

"Although the metric system was legalized in 1866, other laws and regulations were adopted that outlawed it in a sense," he said. "I'm talking about such things as weights and measures laws that require such things as milk, butter and bread to be sold in prescribed quantities. It is illegal, for example, to sell milk by the liter."

Another problem, the Metric Council director said, is that many states also have contradictory weights and measures laws. And, he added, some of the state legislatures do not meet every year, so change will come slowly.

O'Hagan is the first employee of the Metric Board. Currently he is operating by "borrowing" people from other agencies. "It will be several months before we are operational," he said.

When his office is operational, O'Hagan will embark on a program to inform and educate the public and coordinate metric research, as directed by the Metric Board at its first meeting.

An independent government agency reporting directly to the President, the Metric Board has a budget of $1.8 million for the coming year.

Operating in tandem with the Metric Board's process of public acceptance and education is the metrics instruction division of the U.S. Office of Education, headed by Davis.

Davis, who inaugurated the program three years ago, operates with an annual budget of $2,090,000 and six employees. He says that he needs nine.

Over the last three years his staff has supervised 217 programs across the United States, working with schools, states and private consulting groups.

Ed Carr, a spokesman for the American Institute, says that the organization primarily is a consulting agency in education and behavioral science. It recieved its first grant to support conversion to metrics "about five or six years ago," says Carr.

In the interim, it has received about $300,000, mostly to help train teachers. As a result of American Institute's experience, Carr believes that a complete changeover to metrics is perhaps 20 years away.
