Could you call it a 'crew cut?'

A "sign of the times" appears in the window of this beauty shop as contracting crews lay new Southwestern Bell phone cable in the 300 block of North Midland Drive. The sign could apply to streets throughout Midland as the city's unprecedented growth continues.

Pact reached on spending?

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican congressional leaders and Reagan administration officials are in tentative agreement on an additional $4 billion in domestic spending cuts to meet "the major challenges of the president" and avert another budget crisis.

"I am very optimistic that we can fly this thing," said House Republican leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois.

President Reagan's "final signoff" on the plan, to be included in a new emergency money bill to replace one that expires Dec. 15, was expected today, said a congressional source who asked to remain anonymous.

The source quoted White House budget director David A. Stockman as telling participants in a private Capitol Hill meeting Thursday night that the proposal "meets the major challenges of the president."

On Sept. 24, Reagan asked Congress for an additional $8.4 billion in domestic spending cuts — 12 percent across the board. He later indicated he was willing to accept half that amount, and White House spokesman David Gergen repeated Thursday that "what the president has asked for is something that meets him approximately halfway."

Sources said the new proposal generally calls for across-the-board cuts of 4 percent in most domestic programs, including those singled out in Reagan's September request.

Government benefit programs such as food stamps and Medicare would be exempt, as would defense, the judiciary, law enforcement operations and veterans' medical benefits.

The issue of how much to spend on foreign aid is unresolved pending action next week in the House on related legislation, the sources said.

There was optimism that the plan would be adopted by the full House and Senate. The president's acceptance would avert a confrontation like the one that occurred last month when Reagan vetoed a compromise spending measure, forcing a temporary shutdown of non-essential government services.

"I just feel real good about it at this juncture," Michel said of the proposal.

Rep. Silvio O. Conte of Massachusetts, the ranking Republican on the House Appropriations Commiteee, was reported to be generally pleased with the proposal, in part because it included $1.7 billion for low-income energy assistance and $400 million more for social programs than the Senate approved in the stopgap bill that Reagan vetoed last month.

That money presumably would make the plan attractive to some moderate or liberal Republicans, as well as some Democrats whose support will be needed.

Father, son find each other in prison

ROSHARON, Texas (AP) — Stanley Fletcher finally is getting to know his son Curtis, but only because what he feared would happen did — the teen-ager ended up in prison.

The Fletchers are one of about 20 father-son combinations imprisoned by the Texas Department of Corrections. But TDC officials say that as far as they know, the only father and son sharing a cell are the Fletchers at the Ramsey One Unit.

"I had been hurting for the love of my kids for so long," the father said, recalling their reunion. "When I heard he had come in the back gate, my first impulse was to run up and hug him."

They shook hands.

When his son was 6, Fletcher was serving a 50-year prison sentence for two rape convictions. Ten years later, it was the son who was sentenced, to nine years in prison for using a shotgun in the robbery of a 23-year-old woman outside a Houston convenience store.

"I don't know of any others that share the same cell, but we do have at least one other father-son combination here," said David Moya, assistant warden at the Ramsey.

"Generally, it doesn't cause any great problems. In this case, it has worked out very well," Moya said.

TDC spokesman Guy Taylor said younger inmates normally are not put in cells with other prisoners.

"And not all fathers and sons are allowed to live in the same cell and work together. But in this case, the chance for the father to teach his son a trade appeared an excellent option for us," Taylor said.

Fletcher, 52, is teaching his son carpentry, and they hope to open a cabinet-making shop in Cleveland, Texas, when they get out of prison. The elder Fletcher probably will be paroled in May and his son is expected to leave prison two or three years later.

"We've spent a great many hours talking about the situation we're in, the things we've done, the things so bad that shouldn't have been done. And what we should do to better ourselves in the future," the elder Fletcher said.

One of the elder Fletcher's regrets is that he wasn't there when his six children were growing up.

"With their daddy in prison, I guess it was pretty hard for a woman to properly see that all six were attended to," Fletcher said, referring to his wife.

"If I had been there, I'm convinced not one of the boys would have strayed," he said. "It liked to drove me crazy the first four of five years I was down here. I was worrying myself sick they'd start fooling with alcohol or drugs and end up here. As it was, their mother wouldn't let me correspond with them. I was of no influence at all."

Stanley and Curtis Fletcher were first reunited last April when the teen-ager was bused in from the Clemens Unit in Brazoria for a visit at the Ramsey unit, about 30 miles south of Houston. From the start they wanted to share a cell, but the permanent reunion didn't take place for another six months, after the elder Fletcher's request for parole was denied again.

Before their first visit, neither knew what to expect.

"I had heard some stories that had been told about me to the kids," the elder Fletcher said. "I didn't know how he might feel. I figured we'd just have to iron it out."

His son said he didn't know his mother had hidden letters from his father. He said the family didn't talk about the father much.

"I wished a lot of times that he had been there," he said. "All I knew was that he was in prison. I didn't know if it was in Texas, Louisiana or where."

He said they shook hands and "ended up talking all night and half the next day.... What I found was that everything that was said about him is different from what I now know about him."

The elder Fletcher is proud of his son's studying while in prison. The fourth-grade dropout had trouble reading and writing but now may earn his high school diploma before his father gets out of prison.

"It sure will make me proud," the father said. "He studies all day, sometimes. He can see the need for more education and he's trying to benefit himself while he's here.

"A lot of boys down here can hardly wait to get out and pull another caper. It encourages me that he wants to help himself."

Give Saturday service a spin

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Jim Johnson likes to listen to others. And if what they say sounds good, he'll put it into action.

That's why MidTran will be initiating Saturday service this weekend.

"Some of us were kicking around the idea of Saturday service one day, and we decided to see what the people thought," said the new director of Midland's 22-month-old public transportation system.

A survey of bus riders and results from questionnaires in newspapers provided the answer: It was 99 percent in favor of Saturday service, Johnson recalled.

"We found out where the bulk of the people who responded lived and where they wanted to go on Saturday: to work or shopping and what shopping area."

The plan calls for buses operating on a demand-responsive system from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. along with the system's brown and green flex-routes. A bus will provide hourly service to Midland Park Mall and K-mart with half-hour service to Dellwood Mall.

Rates will be $1.75 one way for door-to-door service and 75 cents for street pickup. Reservations for the door service should be made by 3 p.m. Fridays by telephoning MidTran at 684-7433. Subscription service won't be honored on Saturdays.

BUT FOR THE FIRST day, riders will get a bargain. Rates will be $1.25 one way for pickup at the door and 50 cents for street pickup.

This additional service is being implemented on a trial basis for 120 days. If revenues don't reflect a demand, it will be dropped, according to Johnson.

"Some people are limited to public transportation," he said. "This is one way to get the shoppers out. Workers who use MidTran during the week for transportation also need something on the weekends for shopping."

This new service has a two-fold purpose, he said, listing as primary the effort to get people "out and about on Saturday." The secondary purpose is trying to encourage people who normally use a vehicle to give bus service a chance.

"Once people get used to it, they like it. They don't have to worry about the traffic or parking," Johnson explained.

A native of Lubbock, he knows the job of convincing West Texans that riding a bus is easier than driving is a big one.

Johnson has spent the last 16 years in California, and eventually will move his wife and two children here from San Diego.

"I GOT TIRED of all the hustle and bustle of the big city," he said as one reason for coming to Midland two months ago as MidTran's new director.

He's spent the last 12 years working in the transportation field, and has driven almost every type of vehicle.

With a relaxed demeanor toward his job, Johnson has in mind some general goals for MidTran. These include providing the best service possible, increasing ridership and raising the overall revenues.

"You have to look at every piece of

Investor files lawsuit against GMW

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland oilman-investor Walter R. Davis has filed a breach-of-contract suit in Midland's 142nd State District Court against the partners and their spouses in the Gifford, Mitchell, Wisenbaker (GMW) Corp.

Davis is accusing the partners of theft, embezzlement and wrongful appropriation for "their own use and benefit" of Davis' real property interests "with a value substantially in excess of $10,000."

The GMW Corp. itself is not a defendant in the suit.

The properties in litigation are producing and non-producing oil-and-gas interests in Lea County, N.M., and in about a dozen counties in West Texas.

Defendants in the suit are Bascom L. Mitchell and his wife, Ann; Joe N. Gifford and his wife, Emily; and Michael B. Wisenbaker and his wife, Alinda.

The lawsuit alleges Davis and the defendants last May entered in a written agreement "to transfer or convey...to W.R. Davis an undivided one-half interest" in their interest in "certain oil and gas properties."

The contract states that Davis would "be deemed to have a vested economic interest in an undivided one-half" of the defendants' interest in "all non-producing tracts" covered by the leases. The contract, contends Davis, also said that the defendants were to transfer to Davis the interests in wells prior to any drilling operation.

Davis is alleging that he has "paid his proportionate share of the cost of drilling" for oil and gas in certain exploration ventures but that the defendants "have dishonored their contractual commitment...by flatly refusing to execute and deliver to him (Davis)" a recordable assignment of those interests.

"Defendants have stolen, embezzled or wrongfully appropriated to their own use or benefit by theft of real property interests of the plaintiff with a value substantially in excess of $10,000," the suit's petition alleges.

Furthermore, the suit's petition says that the conveyance of one-half of the defendants' interests in "all currently producing properties is conditioned upon the indebtedness of sellers (Gifford, Mitchell, Wisenbaker and their spouses) to The First National Bank of Midland." That indebtedness is represented by a $25 million note, which is "secured or to be secured by a deed of trust and assignment of production proceeds covering all of sellers' interest" in the property in litigation.

The petition says that "if and when" the indebtedness to the bank is reduced, the partners in GMW are to "convey by recordable assignment" to Davis that "undivided interest in all properties" in litigation.

Those properties included the fol-

Big Spring man, 39, killed in morning traffic mishap

An early morning traffic accident has claimed the life of a 39-year-old Big Spring man.

Thomas P. Swann suffered head, leg and internal injuries in the crash, which occurred along Interstate 20 near Cottonflat Road about 1:25 a.m. today.

According to city police, Swann was westbound on the interstate when his 1976 Dodge ran into the rear of a westbound tractor-trailer rig driven by Dulces Machuca, 36, of Big Spring.

Swann's vehicle skidded through the median strip, crossed both eastbound lanes of the highway and struck a guard post before crossing the south service road and coming to rest.

He remained in the vehicle and was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine. The body was taken to Thomas Funeral Home where arrangements are pending.

Machuca was not injured.

Give Saturday bus service a spin

idea to bring in more revenues," Johnson said. "I think MidTran is stable now; the transit system is here to stay in Midland."

Where once MidTran had been tied up with the problem of how to repair the buses when the city garage closed at 5 p.m., Johnson said that issue has been resolved. "We recently received notification we'll have an assigned stall at the city compound and we'll be able to work on buses at any time."

Repairing vehicles immediately should keep more buses rolling and improve the image of MidTran. "No rider wants to hear that the bus is broken down. If a person is late to work all the time because of a broken down bus, he won't ride it," said Johnson.

In addition to prompt service, he views the bus operator as an important factor in bus service.

"NO ONE KNOWS who I am, or the dispatchers. But they see that driver every day," he explained. "Our main emphasis is to keep the image up. We're very picky about the people that drive our buses. We're all on the same team."

And instead of calling them bus drivers, Johnson prefers the title of bus operator. "With bus drivers, you see people hanging on. With bus operators, you see people reading or talking or looking out the window. Anyone can be a bus driver, but not everyone can be a bus operator."

While the San Diego bus system was much larger than MidTran, Johnson said the Midland transportation system is "just as complicated. I still have headaches, but they're just a bit smaller. You still have to have rapport with the public and project a positive image."

He prefers a system with flexibility, as MidTran has had in the past with its various programs.

"It's a process of elimination in this system. You work down to what works best for you," Johnson said. "You can stick a bus out there, but if no one rides it, you're defeating your purpose."

Because the system is there to serve the public, Johnson is open to ideas for improvement from people.

"I really appreciate comments from the passengers and staff. Sometimes it flies; sometimes it doesn't fly," he said.

MORE IDEAS for different types of service may be forthcoming when MidTran gets its 10 new buses. Three should arrive in about two weeks from Kerrville, which was selling its used buses after its transportation system was closed. And seven more will be ordered and should arrive in about seven months.

By increasing ridership and services, Johnson hopes to accomplish the third of his goals — a growing revenue figure.

But he's not unrealistic about this goal. "It's not easy to see an enormous amount of money go in the fare boxes. It just doesn't happen."

Now that he has the basics of MidTran under his belt, Johnson is concentrating on finding a house. His plans call for buying land and building a home where he can put a horse, dog, chickens, bees and a garden and work on his favorite hobby — rebuilding old cars.

"Midland is a super town," Johnson said of his desire to put down roots here. "People are friendly and honest. They either like you or they don't like you."

Allen fails to list consulting firm's clients

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard V. Allen, already under review for filing an inaccurate financial disclosure form, faces new questions about failing to list his consulting firm's clients despite an apparent legal requirement to do so.

When the White House national security adviser filed his government disclosure form in February, he did not include the names of any clients, even though federal law requires the listing of those he was "directly involved" with who paid at least $5,000 in the previous two years.

Allen has acknowledged that his firm, Potomac International Corp., had several clients who paid over $5,000, but he claims he was advised by the White House counsel's office that he did not have to list them because the fees were paid to the company, not to him.

Allen, however, says he does not recall who gave him that advice and he refused to discuss the question Thursday.

Asked about the issue, presidential spokesman David Gergen said he wasn't sure whether Allen should have listed his clients. He also said the counsel's office was unable to determine who gave Allen the purported advice.

The 1978 Government Ethics Act requires an incoming official to identify sources of "compensation in excess of $5,000" in the previous two years and to give "a brief description of the nature of the duties performed or services rendered."

The main exception to the requirement is if the official was an employee of the firm that provided the services and was not "directly involved" in work for that client.

Allen's Potomac International was largely a family-run corporation with Allen its founder, owner, president and chief consultant. His wife, Patricia, was the corporation's vice president and treasurer, and his son, Michael, was its secretary.

A source familiar with Allen's business described it as largely a "one-man show" and said he had only about five to seven clients, all Japanese or affiliated with Japanese firms.

While the Justice Department has given no indication that it is examining the client-list issue, it has said it is looking into Allen's use of an inaccurate date for the sale of the company in his government disclosure statement filed last February.

Allen initially reported that he stepped down as president of Potomac International and sold the firm in 1978. But after press inquiries, he said he had made a mistake and amended the form to say he was president until January 1981, when he sold the firm.

Allen's initial disclosure statement also listed no holding in Potomac International at the end of 1980. He subsequently corrected that to show a $100,000 to $250,000 interest in the firm.

Earlier this week, the Justice Department announced that no special prosecutor would be named to look into Allen's receipt of $1,000 from two Japanese journalists who interviewed Nancy Reagan on Jan. 21.

But the department said it still was considering whether one should be named to investigate the inaccurate sale date and Allen's receipt of two watches from the Japanese journalists. Allen is on paid administrative leave pending that inquiry.

Under the ethics law, an independent prosecutor must be named if a preliminary review by the Justice Department turns up evidence that a high-ranking government official committed a federal crime.

J. Jackson Walter, director of the Government Ethics Office, said the issue of listing clients is a "gray area" in the federal disclosure requirements, with differing opinions inside the ethics office over precisely when an official must submit a client list.

The question often boils down to the degree of a person's involvement in a firm, Walter said.

He said that if Allen had stepped down as president and sold his firm in 1978 — as he initially reported — there would have been less of a requirement to list the clients than if he were the owner during the two years before he entered government.

Willfully and knowingly filing a false disclosure statement is a felony, punishable by up to five years in jail and a $10,000 fine. In its review, the Justice Department therefore would look to see if there was any motive for Allen to deliberately file false information.

In a related development, a spokeswoman for Republican National Chairman Richard Richards confirmed that Richards told a group of GOP contributors that "I don't think Mr. Allen will be back" from his current administrative leave.

But spokeswoman Jennifer Hillings said the comments made Monday night were "strictly the chairman's speculation."

Reagan's top aides get Secret Service protection

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's three top aides are being given Secret Service protection in the wake of reports that a Libyan assassination squad is out to kill high government officials, sources say.

Under orders from the president, agents were assigned Thursday to counselor Edwin Meese III, chief of staff James A. Baker III and deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver — the men who make up Reagan's inner command.

The new protection became apparent Thursday when a Secret Service agent accompanied Baker to a meeting with congressional leaders on Capitol Hill.

White House and Secret Service spokesmen declined comment.

Secret Service spokesman Jim Boyle said, "We never comment on whom we protect, beyond the obvious, such as the president and vice president and members of their families."

However, authoritative sources confirmed that Reagan had ordered protection for his senior aides.

In addition, security around the president, which has been tightened since the March 30 attempt on his life, continues to increase. "You can expect to see it get tighter," said a source, who declined to be identified.

Asked if Reagan is considering curtailing public appearances because of security worries, the source said, "It's moving in that direction."

Initial reports of the assassination team were based on unconfirmed intelligence reports, but an informant has since described the training and plans for assassinations, according to unidentified senior administration officials quoted in today's editions of The New York Times.

The informant claimed that he helped train five-man assassination teams in Libya and worked on preparation of specific assassination plans, the newspaper said.

In the three months after March 30, threats against Reagan's life surged to more than 1,800. Figures were not immediately available for a comparable period, such as the three months before March 30, but a source in a position to known called the increase "dramatic."

Only last week Reagan said that he is considering the safety of others in planning personal appearances.

For example, when the president travels outside the White House, he usually enters and leaves buildings through a garage entrance, riding in his armored limosine.

Reports surfaced recently that Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy had dispatched a hit team to the United States to kill the president and other top officials. That alone has resulted in increased security for the president and Vice President George Bush.

The source said the administration believes the reports are true but has no hard evidence that an assassination team is operating within the United States.

Even so, the source said, there was great concern within the administration about a tip that an attempt would be made on Reagan's life during a speech at the National Press Club on Nov. 18. Security was beefed up for that appearance and no attempt was made.

Midland hit with freezing weather

A gentle freeze just nipped Midland in the dawn hours this morning, but another freezing nip may bypass the area tonight, when the temperature is to drop only into the mid-30s.

The temperature just barely hit the 32-degree freezing mark this morning, according to the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The high Saturday is to be around 70 degrees.

Winds are to be southeasterly at 5 to 10 mph today and are to shift southerly at 10 to 15 mph Saturday.

The overnight low of 32 wasn't near the record low of 20 degrees for the date in 1934. Thursday's high of 79 degrees was within four marks of tying the record high of 83 degrees for the date in 1954.

Handy Dan sued for negligence

The son and daughter of a 70-year-old Midland woman who was injured when corrugated plastic fell on her "with great force" at Handy Dan Do-It-Yourself Home Center in Midland last March 14 have filed a $500,000 lawsuit based on negligence against the store.

The woman, Goldie L. Smith of 3713 Gaston Drive, died six months later, on Sept. 23, in her home.

The suit, filed by her son and daughter, Richard William Jones of Midland and Janet Upson of Dallas, alleges that improperly stacked corrugated plastic fell on Mrs. Smith while she was being shown the merchandise by store employees and knocked her to the floor. She suffered a fractured leg and multiple bruises and abrasions, the suit alleges.

The plaintiffs are contending that the corrugated plastic was stacked "to a height which was physically calculated to fall," that the store was not maintained in "reasonable safe conditions," and that the merchandise was displayed in a "dangerous" condition.

The suit was filed in Midland's 142nd State District Court. Attorney for the plaintiff is Robert "Bob" Freeman of Midland.

Clements' car gets parking ticket

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The SO-1 license plates marking the red Lincoln as Gov. Bill Clements' car might be impressive in some parking lots, but they meant little outside a Mexican restaurant.

While Clements was in the restaurant Thursday as the guest of a reporters' organization, his car was ticketed for being parked in a fire zone.

Ernest Copeland of Longhorn Security Service said the ticket was written after the manager of the restaurant called to complain about the car parked in front of the establishment.

However, before the governor finished his news conference and lunch, Copeland scurried back to the car and took the ticket off the windshield.

"My captain told me to forget it," he said.

But George Bayoud of the Clements' campaign staff told Copeland to put the ticket back on the car.

Police can't pin down number of 'ski-mask' rapes

JENA, La. (AP) — Police say it may be "weeks and months" before authorities can pin down the number of crimes attributed to the man they have in custody in the so-called "Ski Mask Rapist" cases.

Jon B. Simonis, 30, of Lake Charles, has admitted to at least 77 crimes, most of them robberies and sexual assaults, in 12 states and "it could be weeks and months before we have the whole story," said Baton Rouge police Lt. Ronnie Jones.

"If there are 77 he can recall, there must be others he can't remember," Jones said. "God only hopes there aren't too many others. He does seem to be remorseful for the crimes he has committed."

Simonis may figure in an April 30, 1979 case in Bridge City, Texas, for which a man was convicted for a sexual attack on a 40-year-old woman and her teen-age son and daughter, Jones said.

"Mr. Simonis has indicated he was involved in an attack in Bridge City," said Jones. He said a prosecutor from Orange County, Texas would come to Louisiana to determine whether the claims match.

Simonis and two alleged accomplices were arrested over the weekend. Simonis, taken to the LaSalle Parish jail in Jena, quickly pleaded guilty to burglary, armed robbery, and unauthorized use of a vehicle in a Jena case.

He immediately was sentenced to 231 years in prison — without benefit of suspension, probation, or parole.

Jones said Simonis has admitted to involvement in crimes in Louisiana, North Carolina, Michigan, Wisconsin, California, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Oklahoma, Ohio and Texas.

"All involve robberies. Most involve sexual assault to one degree or another," Jones said. "Keep in mind this is 77 households. In some households, more than one person was assaulted. So there may be many, many more crimes than the 77.

"It should be pointed out these are not legally binding confessions, but he has admitted to his involvement in the crimes," Jones said.

Police who confiscated Simonis' 9-month-old, red Pontiac sports coupe said it had logged 76,000 miles on its odometer. They said the car was seen near the scene of an an attack in Gonzales, and Simonis was later arrested.

Jones said 15 of the cases attributed to Simonis are in Louisiana — seven in Baton Rouge — where a pattern of attacks dating to 1979 was first spotted.

The armed attacker, his face hidden by a ski-mask, would enter quietly through a back door or window.

Teachers strip-searched students

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The strip-search by teachers of 26 third-graders was the second incident of its kind here in about a week, according to a broadcast report.

Fifteen to 18 female students at Valley High School were strip-searched Nov. 23 by a female counselor and a female teacher with the approval of an assistant principal, television station WHAS reported Thursday.

Third-graders at Frayser Elementary School, most of them 8 years old, were told to disrobe at least partially Monday. Both schools are in Jefferson County, and county Superintendent Donald Ingwerson on Thursday reassigned the three female teachers who ordered the searches of the children.

Hyatt hotel lounge closed because of structural faults

CHICAGO (AP) — City officials have temporarily closed a balcony lounge and an access area beneath it at the Hyatt Regency Chicago because of flaws in the balcony's design.

The 124-seat "Rumours Lounge" was evacuated after consultants hired by the hotel said the lounge had structural problems, spokeswoman Mary Ann Josh said Thursday.

Ms. Josh did not elaborate on the problems.

The city began inspecting the hotel and similar buildings after suspended walkways at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Kansas City, Mo., collapsed in July, killing 113 people.

However, city officials released a statement Thursday saying the closing was ordered while repairs are made on a cracked weld and bent base plates at the bottom of hanger rods that support the floor of the lounge.

The city also said the Department of Inspectional Services ordered the area below the lounge closed until testing and repairs are completed.

Temporary repairs will begin immediately on the balcony lounge, which overlooks the hotel lobby, Ms. Josh said, adding that new designs are being drawn up for the lounge and should be completed by the end of the month.

Last week, city officials ordered the hotel to limit occupancy in the reception area, a cocktail lounge and a bridge connecting the building's two towers until structural tests are complete.

The city has given the Hyatt until Dec. 15 to complete the tests and repairs, said Nick J. Fera, deputy commissioner of the services department.

Hearst donates newsreel footage to UCLA

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 2.— The world's last great remaining archive of privately-owned newsreel footage, the Hearst Metrotone News Film Library, consisting of 27 million feet of news film and valued at $62 million, will become a part of the UCLA Film Archive. The latter is already the largest such repository outside of the Library of Congress. The formal announcement was made today in ceremonies on the UCLA campus.

One-third of the total library, or 9.5 million feet of film, will be delivered to UCLA this month, and The Hearst Corporation has announced its intention to give the remainder of the footage over the next several years. The Hearst Corporation Board of Directors will consider the approval of the second gift of film footage for delivery in early 1982.

THE announcement was made jointly by Randolph A. Hearst and Frank A. Bennack, Jr., chairman and president respectively of The Hearst Corporation.

"Over the past 75 years," said Hearst, "my family has been privileged to be able to serve and contribute to the University of California in a number of ways. This initial gift of a part of the Hearst Metrotone News Film Library is in keeping with that tradition. Our family is rooted in California, and we are enormously pleased to know that the Film Library will be such a valuable teaching and research source at the university."

Members of the Hearst family who attended the ceremonies included David W. Hearst, vice president and director of The Hearst Corporation; William R. Hearst III, development manager of Hearst Newspapers West and a corporation director; and David W. Hearst, Jr., associated with the Los Angeles Herald Examiner.

Charles E. Young, chancellor of UCLA, acknowledged the gift with praise for The Hearst Corporation's spirit of public service. "The gift is unique because it is a history of the twentieth century on film — something which does not exist for any previous time period. By making this available to the UCLA Film Archive at the College of Fine Arts, it will eventually be available to the world via the sophisticated retrieval systems that are currently under development. We can envision these images being beamed by satellite to students, researchers, film and television producers, scholars and newsrooms around the world."

THE HEARST Metrotone News Library contains footage dating from as early as 1895. The concept of regularly produced news reports on film that could be viewed in motion-picture theatres began to take shape in 1913. The founder of the publishing empire, William Randolph Hearst, already commanded an army of news reporters and photographers. It became his dream to capture major news events around the world on motion-picture film as well. By 1936, "News of the Day," distributed to theatres twice weekly, provided millions of people with a look at a whole range of contemporary events — wars, disasters, social ferment and human interest.

In 1967, when newsreel distribution to movie theatres was discontinued, Hearst Metrotone News continued to record history in the making for television, as well as documentaries for schools, business and industry.

According to Bennack, "The gift of Hearst Metrotone News Library material to UCLA makes certain that this national treasure will be maintained and made available for use to future generations. The Library is an indelible record of the people and events who figured prominently in this century."

ROBERT H. GRAY, dean of the College of Fine Arts at UCLA, said, "We welcome this gift from The Hearst Corporation as part of our continuing responsibility and commitment to serve as a media resource. We don't take the responsibility lightly. We are now custodians of events, people and places that have long since vanished, but which can be brought visually and audibly back.

No impropriety found in Copley actions

By MIKE KONON
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — An appellate court has found no impropriety in the actions of Helen K. Copley in her administration of Copley trusts.

The court also upheld a judge's order directing the redistribution of nearly $10 million in stock of Copley Press Inc.

The 4th District Court of Appeal rejected contentions of Janice and Michael Copley that Helen Copley, widow of James S. Copley and administrator of his estate, was guilty of impropriety in a 1975 redemption of stock from a non-marital trust which benefits Janice and Michael Copley, of which Helen and her son David Copley are also named beneficiaries.

The redemption of stock was designed to pay inheritance taxes after the death of James S. Copley.

In an 83-page ruling written by Justice Gordon Cologne, the appellate court found Monday that Superior Court Judge William L. Todd Jr. erred in 1978 in finding that Helen Copley and her brother, Joseph Kinney, had violated their fiduciary duties in the transaction.

COLOGNE FOUND THAT Mrs. Copley and Kinney were "carrying out this direction of the trust" and "committed no breach of the duty of loyalty to the beneficiaries and no violation of the prohibition against self-dealing in the sense of profiting or obtaining an advantage."

The court reinstated Mrs. Copley and Kinney as trustees of the non-marital trust.

It also decreed the execution of Todd's order to transfer 173,346 shares of Copley Press stock to the non-marital trust from the marital trust, over which Mrs. Copley has substantial control.

The court said the order should be carried out in order to establish a "fair relative relationship between the two trusts' shareholding."

The non-marital trust is intended to provide lifetime incomes to Copley's first wife, Jean Erdman; his two adopted children, Janice and Michael Copley; Mrs. Copley; and her son David Copley, who was not a party to the litigation. Mrs. Copley and Kinney acted as trustees of the non-marital trust, which alone with the marital trust had been established in Copley's will.

Copley died Oct. 6, 1973, and upon his death the Copley revocable trust reverted to two permanent trusts, with evenly divided interests.

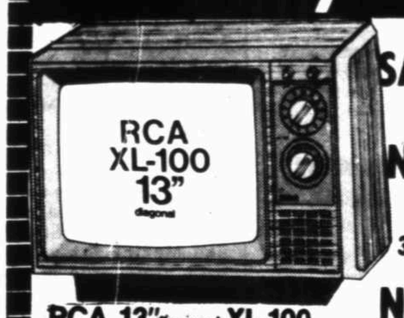

The challenged transaction provided that Copley Press redeem stock from the estate's non-marital trust for cash and notes. The transaction was intended to provide funds for payment of estate taxes and administrative costs after Copley's death, as directed by his trust agreement.

In reversing Todd in part, the appellate court ruled that Mrs. Copley and Kinney should be reinstated as trustees and that they should recieve trustees' fees for performance of their duties.

IT ALSO VACATED Todd's ruling that the transaction created a constructive trust, directed Todd to conduct a hearing on the marital trust's request for $200,000 in atorneys' fees and ordered another hearing on compensation for trust assistants.

Furthermore, the court awarded attorneys' fees for Michael and Janice Copley, directed the Bank of America as holder of the stock of the non-marital trust to deliver the stock to the trustees and levied the costs of the appeals of all parties against the non-marital trust.

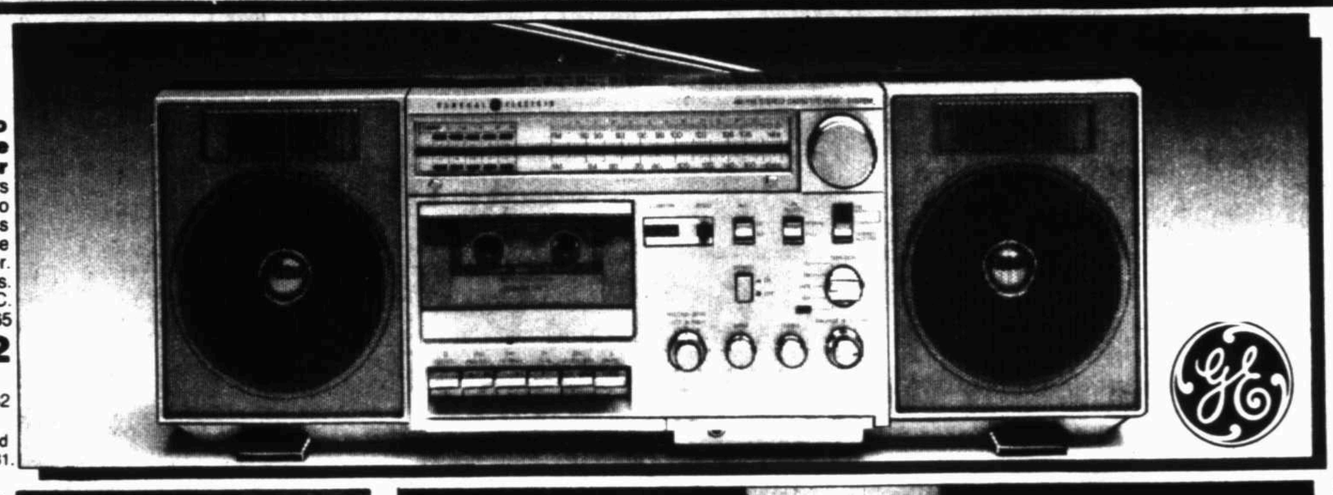

"Helen Copley's actions as administratrix with the will annexed, trustee, beneficiary and Copley Press' principal officer were directed toward the best interests of the beneficiaries and in accordance with the intent of the trustor (Copley)," Cologne wrote. "The trustees' acts were reasonable in light of the duties imposed under the terms of the trust and did not justify their discharge."

Lockbox units are available

For the first time in several months, Midland's Postal Service will make two additional lockbox units available to rent, according to Postmaster D.E. Holster.

"Due to the rapid growth of our city, all post office boxes at the three postal facilities in Midland have not had vacant boxes to rent for sometime," he said.

However, the new units located at 32 Plaza Center, Plaza Shopping Center on the corner of Wadley Avenue and Garfield Street and at Airline Mobile Home Trailer Park, U.S. Hwy. 80, are now open at the same rates as the lockboxes at other postal facilities. Holster said the lockboxes will assure the customer of a safe and convenient location to obtain a mailing address even if the housing situation in Midland requires numerous moves within the city.

He added that the opening of the boxes will allow the post office to extend services to customers that were forced to stand in line for general delivery pick-up.

Postal customers will have 24-hour access to the lockboxes and a stamp vending machine will be available along with mail drops in the units. Additionally, a clerk will be at both units to hand out parcels and accountable mail during specified hours.

Cafeteria employees trained

School cafeteria employees from Midland and Ector County independent school districts were trained in several skill areas in a recent Foodservice Workshop sponsored by Region 18 Education Service Center.

Over 100 people participated in the workshop, which included sessions on quantity food production, basic nutrition, safety and sanitation and attitudes and personnel management.

Both districts have entered into an agreement with Region 18 Education Service Center for a Nutrition Education Training Cooperative, funded through the Texas Education Agency and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Twelve on honor roll

Twelve students were named to the A Honor Roll at Midland Freshman High School for the second six-week period.

Block going to Mexico

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John R. Block will be doing some far-flung traveling next week.

On Sunday, he is scheduled to be in Tijuana, Mexico, for a ceremony commemorating the eradication of screwworms from three Mexican states.

Screwworms are maggots which burrow into wounds of cattle and other warm-blooded animals. The United States and Mexico for years have cooperated in efforts to eliminate the pest.

On Dec. 11, Block will join the U.S. team attending a meeting in Brussels to discuss U.S.-European trade issues.

Swedes try using teamwork

By TOM EASTHAM
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — A Swedish auto manufacturer who is abandoning assembly lines for a new kind of "team assembly" system reports more satisfied workers, improved quality and higher profits, says an American researcher.

Troubled by quality problems and worker discontent, the Saab auto plant at Trollhattan, Sweden, and its union in 1971 began an experiment using teams to assemble auto doors instead of conventional conveyor lines, according to an article in World of Work Report based on a study by John Logue of Kent State University.

The pilot project — eliminating the repetitious tasks common to assembly lines — changed worker attitudes and improved quality. Since then, Saab has extended the team approach to all areas except final assembly — and is considering using it there.

"BACK ON THE assembly line," commented one body-shop worker, "you didn't care whether the weld's fit was exact — you just had to get it done. You better believe I fit pieces exactly when I weld now — because I'm the guy who's got to grind it down."

Saab officials say the company saves nine times the cost of the work reforms each year, Logue reported. The initial investment for converting to team assembly was recovered in just 2-1/2 years. More importantly, worker concern for quality has reduced the need for inspectors and employee turnover fell from 78 percent to 14.

Team assembly has made Saab a very different place to work, says Logue in the report he produced for the Swedish Information Service. And it has resulted in a system of management-labor cooperation that seems acceptable to both.

BEFORE THE changeover, workers suffered the same mind-numbing routine and job complaints that plague assembly line workers everywhere. The lines were simply too fast for many workers, and in 1970-71 accidents, absenteeism and turnover were high — which was devastating because it cost $2,000 to train every new employee. Quality had fallen off.

Today, workers participate in company decisions, seem more content in their jobs and less prone to absenteeism and accidents, Logue reports, while the quality of Saab products has improved.

In the body shop, for example, the team has taken over jobs previously done by skilled craftsman and even white collar workers. The team earns bonus money by managing its own affairs, monitoring quality, maintaining equipment and buying replacements, hiring new team members and controlling budgets.

THERE ARE A FEW problems. The union, for example, has had trouble persuading teams to hire women and older workers who might reduce the group's efficiency. But so far, it says, friendly persuasion has worked every time.

The cooperative effort sometimes proves more cumbersome, and it takes longer in instances such as when workers and management consult on new equipment purchases.

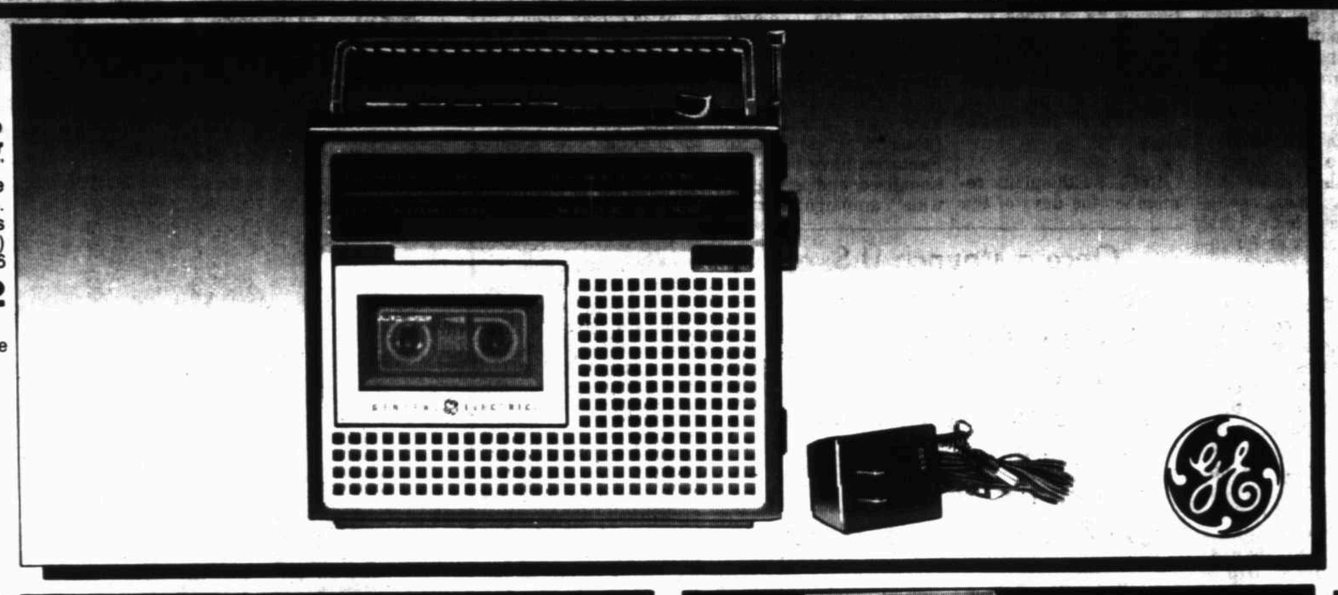

"It takes time to make the right decisions," commented plant manager Roger Svensson. But he quickly added: "I know our investment decisions in body assembly are better for it."

Team methods vary with each facet of the automobile manufacture. The welding shop, for example, works in seven-member teams which have 45 minutes to finish sanding, welding and adjusting each auto body.

Ethiopia firmly in Soviet corner

By EDITH LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The statue of the late Emperor Haile Selassie that welcomed ships to the Red Sea port of Massawa is covered with straw mats.

It is an example of how, seven years after the military toppled the monarchy, Haile Selassie has been wiped from the facades of Ethiopia.

Today, government buildings, shops and crowded bars across the country display photos of the country's current leader, Mengistu Haile Mariam, and the famed Communist triumverate — Marx, Lenin and Engels.

The arch at the entrance to Harrar, very close to the disputed Ogaden region, has a more updated triumverate — Mengistu flanked by leaders Fidel Castro of Cuba and Leonid I. Brezhnev of the Soviet Union.

ONCE A STAUNCH U.S. ally in black Africa, Ethiopia has switched allegiance to the Soviet Union which provided massive military assistance after neighboring Somalia invaded the Ogaden region in 1977 in a territorial dispute. Ethiopia's socialist revolution has since taken on a Marxist flavor and remains firmly committed to Moscow.

Wole Gormu, director of public relations in the Ministry of Information, said there are still "some remnants" of the monarchy "trying to subvert the revolution." The Soviets are also roundly disliked by many Ethiopians, who blame them for everything from high prices to unemployment.

Still, virtually everyone agrees that Mengistu is very much in control. For the first time since the 1974 revolution, Gormu and other top government officials say they have the "upper hand" in the Ogaden and in Eritrea, where secessionists have been fighting a 20-year war for independence.

AMNESTY International, the London-based human rights organization, estimates that "several thousand" people are being held in Ethiopia without charge on political grounds.

Among them are numerous relatives and supporters of Haile Selassie, including a daughter and several grandchildren. Diplomats claim hundreds of followers of the Lutheran Church, the largest Protestant denomination in Ethiopia, are in jail. Well-informed sources said more than a dozen falashas, the so-called black Jews, are behind bars in Gondar for trying to escape.

In the last three months, however, Mengistu has released two top tourism officials and one leading banker who had been imprisoned since the emperor's downfall — and gave them back their old jobs. One Western relief official who has lived here for many years said there is "a changed attitude" now and political prisoners are able to attend schools and technical workshops, read newspapers and magazines.

STILL, Ethiopians remember the days of the so-called "Red Terror" vs. "White Terror" in 1977 when soldiers, policemen and neighborhood defense committeemen roamed the streets gunning down suspected anti-government elements. Informed sources say the number of deaths was in the thousands.

In the cities and countryside today, locally organized defense committees are responsible for security. Some Ethiopians express concern that these men and local government officials are spying on them and they fear another outbreak of "Red-White terror."

After seven years of revolution, the landlords who ruled the countryside have been replaced by peasants' associations and farmers can now own 10 hectares (about 25 acres) of land. Factories have been nationalized and a nationwide campaign has reduced illiteracy from 93 percent to 60 percent in two years.

DESPITE THESE changes, Ethiopia remains one of the world's 10 poorest countries. It has fielded black Africa's largest army, conservatively estimated at 270,000, and has a debt of $2.3 billion to the Soviet Union for arms. There are also 12,000 Cuban soldiers in the country, stationed mainly in the Ogaden, along with about 5,000 Soviet and East-bloc advisers.

Wole said the government is now "in the reconstruction phase." But it doesn't have money to rebuild the war-devastated cities in Eritrea and the Ogaden or to feed more than five million Ethiopians displaced by the fighting and severe drought, which has plagued the country for the last four years.

According to a recent United Nations report, the annual per-capita income of the 31 million Ethiopians in 1979-80 was about $70 "and the majority of the rural population earns much less." In the last six years, the retail price index in Addis Ababa has increased by about 15 percent a year — and everyone is feeling the crunch.

Wole said Ethiopia has had to spend millions and millions of dollars on defense to preserve the country's territorial integrity, though it would rather have spent the money on development.

Once a staunch U.S. ally in black Africa, Ethiopia has switched allegiance to the Soviet Union which provided massive military assistance after neighboring Somalia invaded the Ogaden region in 1977 in a territorial dispute.

Fighting arson fires

When fire raced through Lynn, Massachusett's, historic shoe mill district last Saturday it didn't take any human lives — fortunately. But that doesn't mean it failed to have an impact on human lives.

This week officials of that city were saying the $35 million fire left 300 people homeless and 1,500 jobless. The fire affected the lives of those people and many more. It's impact will be felt there for years to come.

Fire officials say the blaze, which destroyed 17 buildings and damaged six others, was the work of an arsonist. The fire was set and, as such, it joins a growing list of arson fires that destroy property and threaten life throughout the United States each year. In fact, arson has become epidemic in proportion. Nationally arson fires account for more than a thousand deaths, 10,000 injuries and $2 billion in property losses each year.

Just in Midland, arsonists were responsible for 21 fires in 1980, according to fire department officials. This year's tally shows that through November of this year, 24 fires in the Tall City have been the work of arsonists. The damage resulting from those fires reaches into the thousands of dollars, fire officials say.

Arsonists may do their dirty work for various reasons — to collect insurance on the buildings, to cover evidence of another crime or just as an act of vandalism — but statistics from a U.S. Departent of Justice study show that somewhat surprisingly, 52.4 percent of all arson related offenses involve juveniles and officials even consider that estimate modest.

On a national level, reducing the number of arson fires appears to be a prime area for concern. Not all arson can be prevented, of course, But fighting arson through education and in the courts should offer some relief.

Youngsters and others must be taught that arson is a crime regardless of the circumstances and that anytime a fire occurs in threatens not only property but also human life.

It seems that now is as good a time as any for a concerted effort to reduce arson fires. The longer we wait, the greater the danger that fires, like the one in Lynn, Massachusetts, will continue to affect lives.

Sinking ship of state

At the moment at least, the sky isn't falling in on the federal bureaucracy but the way things are going in Big Brotherland such a day may not be far off.

A seemingly routine task, such as placing a stop on a Social Security benefit check, becomes an impossibility. A Louisiana woman who died eight years ago is receiving a check monthly to this day. Her son has been unsuccessful in trying to get the government to halt the 101 benefit payments mailed thus far.

That's only one example. Social Security officials acknowledged as much as $60 million may have been sent to 10,000 recipients after they had died.

Other federal agencies are encountering similar problems. The General Accounting Office, which looked into the matter, estimates taxpayers are being thrown for a loss of $15 billion annually by government payments to unauthorized persons.

A year ago, the Immigration and Naturalization Service promised Congress it would upgrade its computer system to clear up its mess. Despite the promise, the INS still doesn't have any idea of the whereabouts of 20 million foreign visitors to this country. Their forms remain unprocessed and nobody knows whether the aliens have returned to their homelands or still remain in the United States.

Building up backlogs is a major failing of big government. The Social Security system announced recently it still has not posted wage reports of a half-million workers for 1978 — that's three long years ago.

CHARLEY REESE

Two officials not reflecting honesty, truth

Richard Allen, the president's national security advisor, and David Stockman, the director of the Office of Management and Budget have both earned the boot.

Charley Reese

Allen demonstrated bad judgement, if not something more serious, in accepting $1,000 from a Jap journalist for an interview with the First Lady. Allen is paid to exercise good judgement on vital matters.

It's foolish to expect people who fail in small matters to succeed in large ones.

It doesn't matter whether he intended to keep it or to turn it in as he now says. A wise man would have said, "No thank you. That is not our custom in this country."

Stockman has also shown bad judgement. He consented to a long series of interviews with a Washington journalist without an explicit agreement as to when the material would be published. Any public official who trusts a journalist — including me — has bad judgement.

There is a simple rule for public figures to follow. If you don't want to see what you say in print, don't say it — not on the record, off the rcord or even to your wife. It is ridiculous to have a man in such a high position who not only cannot keep his own counsel but is so immature that he has to cry on a journalist's shoulder about his disappointment. Poor baby.

Moreover, Stockman so much as said the president's economic program was sold under false pretenses. If that is true, the president owes the public an apology; if it is not true, Stockman should be fired.

I am tired of dishonest government. We have no right to demand perfection. That doesn't exist. We have no right to demand instant solutions to our problems. They don't exist. But we do have the right to demand that all public officials tell the truth all the time about everything.

One of my fellow pundits has defended Stockman on the grounds that he just exposed politics for the double-dealing, deceptive business it is. Balderdash. Politics is often that way, but we don't have to either accept it or condone it. If we allow cynics to convince us that all politics is inevitably deceptive and dishonest, then we might as well pack it up and quit pretending that self-government is possible. Self-government depends on an informed citizenry, not a duped citizenry.

More than a balanced budget, the American people need their trust restored in their government. Ronald Reagan should know that. Public trust has been shredded by Vietnam, by Watergate, by Billygate, and by Abscam. The president himself enjoys a reputation as a man of honor and for that reason alone he should impose stringent standards on the men around him.

The way to restore the people's trust is to trust the people. Any program which has to be "sold" with deception and half-truth is a bad program. Any official who does not trust the American people with the truth about their own affairs has no place in government.

No matter how good and honest a man the president is, his administration will be rightly judged by the sum of all the people he places in position of power. He chose Allen and Stockman and right now, neither of them is a good reflection on his own judgement.

Liberal press stereotyping El Salvadoran war

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN
Hearst Feature Service

Flying back to Miami from Santiago in Chile, one has the feeling that the eight-hour trip between two safe shores is over a deepening abyss. The southern cone of Latin America is not about to go communist — they had their fill of Marxism in Chile during the Allende interlude, and the Argentinians and Uruguayans have more or less successfully combatted terrorists. Brazil is becoming a great modern country, and the Venezuelans are busy digesting their oil and mineral riches. Even Peru, now rid of rule by its generals, seems ready for a better day.

But Central America and the Caribbean are something else again. It is really odd that the two ends of the hemisphere, where all the power lies, can't find a way to deal with Cuba's Fidel Castro, the Soviet front-man in a continuing campaign to sever the Americas at their vulnerable waist.

The dilemma was the subject of an agonized paper read by an El Salvador publisher at the Mont Pelerin Society meeting in Chile on a program that was led off by Reed Irvine of the Washington-based Accuracy in Media.

Like Irvine himself, Enrique Altamirano, the editorial director of San Salvador's Diario de Hoy, ascribes the greater part of the Central American debacle to semantic idiocies in the liberal press, which he accused of "manipulating a significant portion of public opinion in Western countries."

An avid reader of Time magazine, the Miami Herald, the Baltimore Sun, the New York Times and the Washington Post, Senor Altamirano thinks a great deal of the mis-reporting of Central American news might be avoided if those publications would only weed out the cliches that fill the envelopes in their libraries, or morgues.

The cliches spill over from the liberal newspapers into non-political magazines — The New Yorker, for example, recently spoke of "a feudal system in which a small group of families controls the nation's land, its banks, its major businesses, and foreign trade." This is the "myth" of the "fourteen families."

Senor Altamirano does not deny that Central America has had rich families. The Somozas in Nicaragua were a reality. But when Jimmy Carter's administration maneuvered El Salvador into accepting a "reform" that has been aptly named "instant socialism" by a good reporter named Virginia Prewett, it was discovered that in the whole country of El Salvador "there did not exist a farm larger than 5,000 acres." The confiscation of the properties of families whose combined holdings were in excess of 1,250 acres "only affected less than 15 percent of the land."

As for El Salvador banking, Senor Altamirano could find no mention in the liberal press of the fact that state banks handled 25 percent of the credit and deposits of the country even before nationalization. Nor has it been reported "that Salvadoran businessmen pay the highest percentage of income tax in all of the continent."

Before El Salvador fell victim to the semantic distortion that has been of such benefit to the Castroite left, "no country exceeded it in the production of coffee per acre, and very few, countable on one hand, in efficiency in the harvesting of sugar or cattle products." It was also, says Senor Altamirano, "the only country in all of Central America and the Caribbean self-sufficient in the production of basic foodstuffs."

The good things in El Salvador have gone down the drain as the Castroite guerrilla squeeze continues with arms smuggled from Nicaragua and Cuba. Though the Miami Herald reports that "31,000 families were given land" by the reform, and Time magazine speaks of a program that "has already created cooperative farms for 386,000 peasants," only "100 tillers have been given fee simple title to land, out of a potential 100,000."

Eleven months after the government, to the plaudits of the Left, had confiscated all properties greater than 1,250 acres, land-hungry campesinos found themselves "forced into agrarian collectives similar to the Soviet model." The "reform" has stalled with a "liquidation of international reserves, the increasing unemployment and the irresponsible increase in the prices of all products." In 1980 it cost the United States "about $80 million to pay for reforms in El Salvador and to keep the economy going."

The human loss to El Salvador has been incredible, with more than 300,000 persons choosing to go into exile. The competent professionals — businessmen, administrators, technicians, specialized workers, salesmen — have vanished.

What Senor Altamirano thinks can be done to save El Salvador did not come clear from his paper. But it would help if the liberal press would listen to his advice and stop seeing things in terms of "ultra-rightists," a "bloody leftist-rightist war," and "another Vietnam."

The cliches tell us nothing important about the agony of a small country that has been caught in the drive of the only remaining world-hungry imperialism, which is that of the Soviet Union in alliance with its New World henchman, Fidel Castro.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Dec. 4, the 338th day of 1981. There are 27 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Dec. 4, 1945, Congress approved U.S. participation in the United Nations.

On this date:

In 1942, U.S. bombers struck the Italian mainland for the first time in World War II.

In 1975, Chinese leaders and President Gerald Ford ended a meeting in Peking without achieving any significant change in U.S.-Chinese relations.

And in 1977, Iraq walked out of an Arab meeting in Tripoli, Libya, breaking the united front against Egypt's peace moves with Israel.

Ten years ago: The Soviet Union vetoed a U.N. Security Council resolution calling for an immediate ceasefire in the India-Pakistan war.

Five years ago: British composer Banjamin Britten died of a heart ailment at the age of 63.

One year ago: President Carter said he would veto a $9 billion appropriations bill because it contained an amendment barring the government from asking the courts to order school busing for integration.

Today's birthdays: Philanthropist Stewart Mott is 44. Singer Dennis Wilson of the Beach Boys is 37.

Thought for today: Our greatest glory consists not in never falling, but in rising every time we fall. — Ralph Waldo Emerson, American essayist and poet (1803-82).

INSIDE REPORT:

Stockman's out of the woodshed, but the budget isn't

WASHINGTON — David Stockman is back at his old stand using numbers in hopes of influencing economic policy, partly thanks to his private explanation to President Reagan of verbal indiscretions that insiders believe differed from his public explanation.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Stockman denies that allegation. Nevertheless, suspicion grows within the Reagan inner circle that in his private "woodshed" meeting with the president, Stockman blamed his troubles on William Greider, author of the famous Atlantic Monthly article. Stockman's gracious public statements absolved Greider of guilt; so did his private statements to senior presidential aides, but not to lesser aides.

What Stockman said in the woodshed may explain Reagan's decision to keep his brilliant budget director against the Republican consensus, a decision with widening economic repercussions. Contrary to expectations by Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and others that Stockman would now be reduced to numbers-crunching routine at the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), Stockman's numbers loom large in determining economic policy.

In a meeting between the president and his principal economic advisers Friday (Dec. 4), Stockman was ready to present Reagan his approval of painfully-tight money growth projections that not only undercut Don Regan's monetary policy intentions but incidentally point to future budget deficits. The next logical step would be a resumption of Stockman's campaign for higher taxes.

The fact that Stockmanonics is far from dead can be traced to that Nov. 12 "woodshed" session with the president. Nobody else was present. But a member of the Reagan inner circle reported that Stockman had given the president the impression that the villain was his self-described "old friend," Bill Greider, in publishing what was never intended to be published.

Remarkable credence for this version of the meeting was provided exactly two weeks later in Reagan's Thanksgiving Day interview with ABC's Barbara Walters: "... I think David Stockman was not the sinner. He was sinned against." According to the president, Stockman would "get together with an old friend ... knowing the safety of not-for-attribution."

After seeing the president Nov. 12, Stockman went to the White House press room to tell the world that publication of his quotes "is not an act of bad faith on his (Greider's) side, nor on mine." Acknowledging that he knew Greider planned to publish the article after the first phase of the Reagan program, Stockman said: "I don't take issue with him or fault him for doing what he did."

Did Stockman give a different story to Reagan's lieutenants? "Not to me or anybody else that I know of," one senior aide told us the day before the Reagan-Walters interview. "There was no effort at all to put the blame on Greider."

Asked to explain the discrepancy, Stockman informed us through an aide that he had told the president exactly what he told the news conference and "did not allege" bad faith by Greider. In fact, said the OMB spokesman, Stockman was "troubled" by the president's Thanksgiving Day remarks.

Yet, there are additional contradictions. On the evening of Nov. 10 as the story was breaking, Stockman implied to a political ally that he had been done in by Greider. On the next day, said a presidential aide, "I got the impression that Stockman was blaming Greider. There were about five of us present, and there was no mistake."

At the Treasury, Regan received no first-hand explanation from Stockman and wanted none. Despite their policy differences, he wanted to retain Stockman's expertise. Friends say the secretary talks of Dave Stockman's realm being the 20 percent of the economy dominated by the federal budget while Don Regan's is the other 80 percent. But expecting Stockman to stay cooped up in that 20 percent is tantamount to assuming Napoleon would limit himself to regulating wine consumption if returned to Paris after Waterloo.

Stockman's policymaking is, as usual, numbers-oriented. OMB projects four-year annual increases in the money supply of 4 percent, 3.5 percent, 3 percent and 2.5 percent — painfully tight for all but the most dedicated monetarist. These projections run counter to Regan's hopes for a less constrictive monetary policy and, incidentally, point to massive budget deficits into the future.

That renews the debate over whether continuing budget deficits will call for tax increases, supposedly to shrink the deficit. In the teeth of recession — a policy for which Stockman is the most potent advocate. It is a debate resumed in the shadow of doubts and conflicting reports over what this key debator really said in the presidential woodshed.

Jimmy Buffet funds signs to be posted in manatee areas

Buffet

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Signs warning boaters to slow down will be put up in manatee areas of Florida's waterways, courtesy of country singer Jimmy Buffet, who gave Florida $35,000 for just that purpose.

What is a manatee area, you might ask?

It is an area populated by manatees, the large docile water creatures sometimes called sea cows.

Buffet, a Floridian who has taken an interest in the endangered animals, presented a check to Natural Resources Director Elton Gissendanner in ceremonies Thursday. The money, which will pay for 365 signs, came from proceeds of two of Buffet's recent concerts.

Gov. Bob Graham, a fan of Buffet's music, asked the singer earlier this year to help lead the state's effort to protect the animals, which are sometimes injured or killed by boats in bays and rivers.

NEW YORK (AP) — A late-night talk and entertainment show starring David Letterman will start Feb. 1 on NBC, after more than a month of reruns of Tom Snyder's "Tomorrow Coast to Coast," NBC says.

The last original broadcast of "Tomorrow" will be Dec. 17, network officials announced Thursday. Snyder is negotiating with NBC, but network officials say he will probably leave before his contract expires in late 1982.

Snyder was reportedly upset by NBC's decision to move his starting time back from 12:30 a.m. EST to 1:30 a.m.

Letterman's show at 12:30 a.m. will follow Johnny Carson's "Tonight" show.

●

Gibb

LONDON (AP) — It's a long way from the disco beat of "Staying Alive" to the iambic pentameter of Lord Byron's "Don Juan," but Barry Gibb of the Bee Gees is ready to make the leap.

Gibb, at 35 the oldest member of the pop-music group, is to make his acting debut as Lord Byron in a new movie, producers Mikola and Elizabeth Shevcheck announced Thursday.

They said Gibb had already been signed for the film about the life and loves of the 19th-century English poet, who helped the Greeks in their struggle for independence against the Turkish empire.

In a statement issued through the producers, Gibb said he had turned down numerous scripts over the past few years because he was waiting for the right challenge.

"Lord Byron was a man who overcame past difficulties and personal problems, and forged boldly ahead," he said.

The producers said they were "very fortunate" to discover the pop star's dramatic side. Filming is to begin next summer with an expected 1983 release date. No mention was made of Gibb's salary.

Francis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Singer Connie Francis says she sends President Reagan telegrams a couple of times a week to tell him what he's doing right and says he makes her feel "like it's John Wayne in the White House."

"I'm an avid fan of the president," Miss Francis said Thursday as it was announced she was joining the board of the Crime Victims Legal Advocacy Institute. Miss Francis said she hoped to drum up support for the administration's program to enact tougher laws against violent criminals.

The institute is a private group, funded by conservative foundations like the Coors Foundation. Miss Francis succeeds Edwin Meese III, who resigned when he became President Reagan's right-hand man.

The institute held a cocktail party for Miss Francis at a hotel near the White House, and Miss Francis discussed her own experience as a victim of rape.

She said it caused the breakup of her marriage, gave her a nervous breakdown, and prevented her from singing for seven years. "But I'm not an angry or a vengeful person," she added.

Miss Francis was raped in a suburban New York motel room in 1974. The rapist was never caught.

WOODBRIDGE, N.J. (AP) — Bill Gadek has never met the senior senator from New Jersey, but he says he wants people to know "that there's somebody out there who likes the man."

So Gadek, upset over the threatened expulsion of Democrat Harrison A. Williams Jr. from the Senate, spent $500 to have a billboard on Route 9 painted with the message: "Abscam framed Senator Williams. Don't expel him. Please support him."

Gadek, a 35-year-old restaurant owner, says he thinks Williams is an effective senator and was entrapped by the Abscam investigation.

"From day one, I never felt the case against Williams was right," he said. Wiliams was convicted in May of bribery and conspiracy. The Senate ethics committee recommended that Williams be expelled for "ethically repugnant" behavior.

Mystery lover leaves $200,000 to Sacramento municipal library

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The city's chief librarian says $200,000 that a 70-year-old widow left to the municipal library system so it could buy more mystery novels is "going to help us quite a bit."

"We've been hit by inflation just like everyone else," said Robert J. Richard, adding that the trust constitutes the biggest cash donation ever given to the library system.

Bernice Horne Moore, who read as many as six mysteries a week, left her entire $200,000 estate to the library system. She directed a trust fund be established for the library to buy "novels and, parficularly, mysteries and novels of suspense." Mrs. Moore died Nov. 18.

"All my life I've enjoyed the public libraries," Mrs. Moore wrote in a letter found among her personal effects. "Sacramento has excellent libraries and everyone working for them has always been very kind and helpful to me."

Mexia peach grower Erie Ellice Lightsey, 58, whose family has raised peaches since 1918, said he had no alternative but to plow over 35 acres of prime peach trees because of high taxes due to property appraisals. Lightsey was trying to call attention to the lack of profit in growing peaches.

Farm life 'youthening'

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rural America is experiencing "a substantial youthening" as the ranks of younger farmers continue to swell, says an Agriculture Department population expert.

Calvin Beale, head of population studies in the department's Economic Research Service, said there were 401,000 farmers under the age of 35 in 1980, compared with 265,000 a decade earlier. That youthful group swelled while the overall ranks of farmers declined.

But Beale said he could not predict if the trend would continue.

In virtually every farming area, he said, the number of youths reaching age 20 "will decline now for the next 15 years." And that will mean a lower potential supply of young farmers.

But the trend so far is somewhat surprising, Beale says, in light of the economic difficulties faced by young people who want to go into farming.

"A lot of these guys have a lot of debt and unless you've got the father or father-in-law to facilitate it, it's pretty tough," he said.

Beale said his studies show that the median age of farmers has declined from a peak of 53.1 years in 1970 to 48.6 years in 1980.

AGRICULTURE

"There has been a substantial youthening," he said.

The research figures by Beale, as yet unpublished, are based on monthly Bureau of Labor Statistics reports on employment and earnings, which include agriculture.

Beale, who made his findings available to The Associated Press, said the age figures relate only to farmers who are self-employed and who make most of their living on the farms.

He said a decade or so ago "there was a large potential supply of young farmers."

"You had large numbers of farm youth who had been born after World War II, in the 1950s, just as you had in the cities," Beale said. "And in the early '70s there was an improvement in the income position on farms, particularly in the boom years of '72-'73."

Beale said he had conducted many interviews, mainly in the Midwest, to determine why young people stayed or returned to the farm.

"There were a number of them who had non-economic considerations, I think, in their decisions," Beale said. "They had seen the city and it wasn't all that great any more."

Beale said he was "surprised at the extent to which this has taken place and sustained itself."

It is still difficult for young farmers to get started and to keep going, he said. Practically every year Congress considers bills to help younger farmers get started or stay in business.

The figures show that in 1970 there were 1,810,000 farmers. Of those, he said, 265,000 to 14.6 percent were under 35.

Farm income reports don't look encouraging

WASHINGTON (AP) — The latest word from the Agriculture Department offers no encouragement to farmers that their income situation will improve significantly in coming months.

"This year's large U.S. crops and the weak economic climate here and abroad will continue to dominate the agricultural outlook until well into 1982," officials said Thursday. "Consequently, the farm sector faces the possibility of a third consecutive year of low net income."

But the report, issued by the department's Economic Research Service, said the 1982 outlook will be affected by several factors, including:

—The outcome of Northern Hemisphere winter crops, such as the U.S. winter wheat crop planted this fall, and summer crops now growing in the Southern Hemisphere.

Farm fuel prices leveling off

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average price farmers pay for fuel has apparently leveled off this fall, according to the Agriculture Department.

As of mid-November, according to the most recent tabulations, leaded gasoline delivered to the farm in bulk averaged $1.29 a gallon, unchanged from mid-October. A year ago, it averaged $1.17 a gallon.

Diesel fuel delivered to the farm averaged $1.17 per gallon nationally, also unchanged from October. It was $1.01 in November 1980.

Bulk deliveries of LP gas averaged 70.5 cents per gallon in November, up from 70.1 cents in October and 64 cents a gallon a year earlier, the report said.

★ Introducing a financial first. From First Savings & Loan Association of Midland. The All Saver's Certificate, a fully insured savings plan that earns up to $1,000 tax-free interest on individual returns or $2,000 tax-free interest if you file a joint return.

★ Now for the first time, Uncle Sam will not only fully insure your savings plan, he'll give you a tax break on it as well. Here's how it works: to equal an assumed tax-exempt yield of 12½%, a taxable investment would have to earn 17.86% if your family income is $25,000 and your tax bracket is 30%.

| IF YOUR FAMILY INCOME IS: | YOUR TAX BRACKET PROBABLY IS: | THE INTEREST RATE YOU'D HAVE TO RECEIVE TO NET 12.5% AFTER FEDERAL INCOME TAX IS |

| $25,000 | 30% | 17.86% |
| $20,000 | 25% | 16.67% |

Figures above are approximate and based on 1981 tax tables. Interest rate on 12.5% is an assumed average investment yield on the All Saver's Certificate. Actual rate is 70% of the average investment yield on one-year treasury bills at date of purchase.

Marcella Mitchell wins grand prize

Mrs. Mitchell won for her "Coffee Angel Pie" recipe, which was selected from a field of more than 400 entries.

Mrs. Mitchell is employed as an office assistant in the exploration department at Exxon in Midland. She and her husband, Tom, who works in pipeline construction, have lived in Midland since 1953. They have four sons, Jerry, who lives in Oregon; Robbie of Albuquerque, N.M.; Mike of Crane, and Jim of Midland. They also have one daughter, Sharon Taylor of Midland.

COFFEE ANGEL PIE

2 egg whites
½ teasp. vanilla
¼ teasp. salt
¼ teasp. cream of tartar
½ cup sugar
½ cup finely chopped pecans
1 pint coffee ice cream
1 pint vanilla ice cream
3 tblsp. butter or margarine
1 cup brown sugar
1 6-ounce can evaporated milk
½ cup light raisins
1 teasp. vanilla

Beat together egg whites, vanilla, salt and cream of tartar till soft peaks form. Very gradually, beat in granulated sugar till soft peaks form and sugar is dissolved. Fold in nuts. Spread in well-buttered 9-inch pie plate, building up sides to form a shell. Bake in very slow oven (275 F.) for 1 hour. Turn off heat and let dry in over (door closed) for 1 hour. Cool. Pile scoops of coffee and vanilla ice cream in cooled shell. Freeze. Let stand 20 minutes at room temperature before serving.

Serve with warm caramel raisin sauce: In small saucepan melt butter or margarine. Stir in brown sugar, evaporated milk and a dash of salt. Cook and stir over medium-low heat just till mixture boils. Remove from heat; add raisins and vanilla. Cool slightly. Makes 1½ cups sauce.

DEAR ABBY

Widow dances at funeral

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Recently my husband attended the funeral of a fellow-Legionnaire. (I was informed that my presence wasn't necessary.) Services were at 2 p.m., and afterward the relatives and members of the Legion met at the Legion Hall for a supper with the widow and her two teen-aged children, which was all well and good, but then they proceeded to dance!

I don't know how many other members of the funeral party were dancing, but I am told it looked like some kind of celebration! Well, as luck would have it, my 19-year-old daughter and her boyfriend just happened to drop by the hall at 11:30 p.m., and the first thing my daughter saw was her father dancing with the bereaved (?) widow!

Abby, is this something new, that people have so little respect for the dead that they would bury a spouse in the afternoon and dance the same evening?

I am no prude or saint, but I can't imagine anyone doing this. I am ashamed of my husband for being a party to this disgraceful scene.

Please give your deep-down "gut" feelings about this. — CONFUSED IN INDIANA

DEAR CONFUSED: On the face of it, it would seem most inappropriate for mourners to dance only hours after burying a loved one. Your husband is the only one who knows what really occurred and why. I suggest you ask him for an explanation.

DEAR ABBY: I think this women's lib thing has been carried too far. When I took my children (ages 2 and 3) to see Santa at our local department store, we found that "Santa" was a woman!

She was dressed in a regular Santa Claus outfit — only "Santa" had long dark hair hanging to her shoulders. And she wore lipstick and eye make-up, too. "Santa" spoke to the children in her normal feminine voice, making no effort whatsoever to come across as the jolly, bearded, white-haired old man the kids had expected to see.

The kids were confused and I was shocked. Abby, I'm all for employing women if they can do the job as well as men, but a lady Santa Claus! I think it was unreal.

What do you think? — HORRIFIED

DEAR HORRIFIED: Traditionally, "Santa" is not a lady's bag.

DEAR ABBY: We have a beloved family member (I'll call her "Aunt Letty") who poses a rather sticky problem for us all. She's widowed, no longer young, but she's spry and good company.

Aunt Letty is adored by us all, but when she is invited to dinner, she always brings at least one other person along — and very often two or three! She never rings up to ask, or even to tell us she's bringing someone — she just appears with her "guests." This, of course, creates problems with place settings and food portions for a planned dinner.

As a result, we have omitted Aunt Letty at times, but we always feel a touch guilty because she's such a dear. How is this best handled? — THE RELATIVES

DEAR RELATIVES: Lovingly, of course. But in the future when one invites Aunt Letty, she should be given a stern warning that she is not to bring anyone along without first consulting her hostess.

DEAR ABBY: What is the difference between a psychiatrist and a psychologist? — KANSAS CITY QUESTION

DEAR QUESTION: A psychiatrist is a medical doctor (physician) in addition to being trained to treat mental and emotional disorders. A psychologist is trained to treat mental and emotional problems, but is not a medical doctor.

This adviser is bullish on woman investors

By ANN EHRENBURG
Copley News Service

Ann Benson likes to brag about her famous son, actor Robby Benson, 25, and her daughter, Shelli Segal, 27, a sportswear designer. But when this proud mom boasts about her flock, she's apt to include more than the immediate family.

Benson, an effervescent native of Texas, is a crusader for women's financial independence, and she's darn proud of how far American females have come:

"It's terrific to see more and more women carrying the Wall Street Journal," says Benson. "I hear them in ladies' rooms talking about their investments. I think it's fabulous."

Benson is investor information specialist for Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith. She created its investor education program for women in 1976.

Benson spends most of her time traveling around the country for workshops, radio programs and TV shows to educate women on the need for financial planning.

"Women say, 'Don't protect me, but educate me so I can protect myself.' Those words are what I hear constantly from women all over the country," Benson said.

Many women as well as men are confused about the new tax laws and are increasingly concerned about inflation, retirement and other financial considerations.

"These days, it's not only difficult to plan for the future, it's urgent," Benson said.

She advises women that the new tax laws have many provisions that help them, especially on Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs).

"On Jan. 2, every woman who can possibly do it should open an IRA account," she said. "It allows more women to provide for their future than ever before."

She said it will help career women, full-time homemakers and wives who work part-time outside the home.

In 1982 all employees will be able to establish IRA accounts and put up to $2,000 a year into them. Previously, workers could not open IRAs if their employers had pension plans.

The $2,000 is an income tax deduction, and the interest on the IRA account is tax-free, as long as you don't take it out until you're at least 59.5, she said.

"A woman who's a homemaker but works part time can take the first $2,000 of her salary and squirrel it into an IRA to provide for her own retirement."

It's also great for career women. "You can have a pension plan at work and an IRA, too."

New tax laws on IRAs will help full-time homemakers, too, because it allows more working husbands to participate. They can open spousal accounts, totaling up to $2,250 a year.

Since the money goes into separate accounts for husband and wife, Benson has suggested that a husband put $250 in his account (if he has a pension plan at work) and $2,000 in the account of his wife who is a homemaker without a pension plan.

As for women who work in their husband's business — often without pay — Benson advises: "Now she can be paid $2,000, which can be put into an IRA. The salary can be deducted as a business expense, and it gives her something of her own."

The financial adviser, who grew up in Dallas, said her own mother "worked for my dad in his store. She never got a dime, never got Social Security, salary or retirement. She wasn't building up anything for herself."

Benson, who uses her maiden name, is married to Jerry Segal, her childhood sweetheart and a well-known screenwriter.

"I've known him since I was 13," she said. "We grew up in the same neighborhood."

She studied drama in Texas, and then the couple moved to New York, where she was an actress touring in such productions as "Hello, Dolly."

When children Robby and Shelli were little, she decided they needed her closer to home, so she took a job managing Merrill Lynch's investment-information center in New York's Grand Central Station.

She also managed Robby's career, and still does.

"When he was about 11, he started going to auditions," Benson said. "Then he'd come over to Grand Central Station, and we'd have a hot dog and chat about his day."

Juggling her roles as wife, actress, mother, show business manager and financial information specialist, Ann Benson says she realizes how much women can do.

"Most of us have traditionally handled the family budget," she said. "We've been socialized to care for other people, and we do a good job. It's ludicrous to ask a woman if she works, because we all do — whether or not we get paid.

American style: A happy, well-fed widow

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — Lolita is a happy widow who attracts a lot of attention. She's still very young, intelligent and, although she's moody at times, she's easy to get along with.

There's one problem, however — she has one whaleuva appetite.

In fact, she consumes 130 pounds of fish daily — give or take a few pounds. That's to be expected, however, for a killer whale that tips the scales at close to four tons.

But "killer" she's not, says her head trainer, Lou Roth, a 23-year-old bachelor who looks as much at home in the water as she does.

"She's gentle," he says affectionately, after putting the 20-foot mammal through a performance at the Miami Seaquarium. "But if she decides she doesn't want to do something, she won't do it."

Of the three trainers who work with Lolita four shows a day, 365 days a year, Roth knows her best. He's worked with her four of the five years he's been with the tourist attraction.

"I don't think of myself as her trainer — it's more of a partnership," he explains, "and if I ever leave here, I'll miss her."

Roth is justifiably proud of Lolita, and brags that she usually performs 21 "behaviors," or tricks, during a performance. "She actually knows about 40," he says.

Responding to hand, voice and whistle signals from Roth, Lolita will, on cue, nod "Yes" or "No," swim upside down, wave to the audience with either of her fins, perform swan dives and bellyflops and, in the finale, leap 21 feet from the water to touch a rubber ball suspended in air.

Her big splash back into the tank from that "behavior" usually drenches many of the spectators, but no one ever complains.

Lolita prefers when Roth is in the water close to her.

"She likes it best when I'm in her environment," he says.

When the two perform in the 18-foot-deep tank that's her home, she lets Roth stand on her stomach as she swims upside down and backwards for the crowd. He has such confidence in her that he can open her huge mouth and place his head between her powerful jaws. He has yet to even be nicked by her 45 sharp teeth.

"The only danger for me is she might crush me against the side of her tank in her enthusiasm," he says.

She was captured as a youngster in Puget Sound in 1970 and brought to the Seaquarium to join Hugo, a male whale caught in Vaughn Bay, Wash., in 1968. No one seems to remember who gave Lolita her name, but Hugo received his to honor Hugo Vihlen, a Delta jet pilot from Homestead, Fla., who sailed the Atlantic alone in a six-foot sailboat that year, a feat yet to be surpassed.

Vihlen's voyage took 85 days, the same time it took from the day Hugo the whale was captured until he arrived at his Miami home.

Hugo and Lolita performed together for years, until he died of an aneurysm March 4, 1980.

"We expected problems when Hugo died, but Lolita performed as usual the next day," Roth recalls. "Once in a while she would look for him, but she got over it."

BREAD DUMPLINGS

Measure the following in a 2-cup measuring cup:

1 egg; add milk to measure ¾ cup, add water to measure 1½ cups, add 1 tsp. salt. And mix well.

Pour the above mixture into a large mixing bowl. Add enough sifted flour to make a medium dough, about 2½ cups. Add 5 slices of cubed bread (1 inch squares or smaller). Add enough flour to make a stiff dough, about 1½ to 2 cups. Lightly flour the top of the mixture and cover with wax paper.

Heat 4 quarts of water to a rolling boil. Divide dumplings into 3 logs. Add dumplings to boiling water one at a time keeping the water boiling. Cover and cook 10 minutes then roll the logs over and cook another 10 minutes.

Remove the dumplings in the same order as they were dropped into the boiling water. Slice into serving size pieces and pass the gravy.

These dumplings go best as a side dish to fowl. Make these instead of potatoes or dressing.

Main energy sources

NEW YORK (AP) — Coal and nuclear power will be the main sources of energy in an increasingly electrified economy in the 21st century, according to an energy journal.

Energy User News says the price of electricity will remain steady and possibly decline after the year 2,000 as nuclear power becomes the main energy source. The price of non-electrical energy also should grow more slowly as oil shale and coal-based synfuels act as a backstop to the price of imported oil.

A plump belly is about the only characteristic common to Santa Claus Christmas ornaments. Through the ages, Santa has changed from a rather pale, beady-eyed fellow to the rosy-cheeked, twinkly-eyed elf of more recent decades. Ornaments from the Hallmark Historical Collection show Santa as a tree bulb (lower left) and with a tree hoisted over his shoulder (upper left). A cheerless rendition of the "jolly old elf," from the early 1900s (upper center), differs greatly from Hallmark's special edition Santa for 1980 (lower center). The English "Father Christmas", dressed in a purple coat, is closely related to the American Santa in styling (upper right), while a yarn Santa ornament from the Hallmark collection offers a totally different look.

Technology changes carpeting

By BARBARA MAYER
Ap Newsfeatures

Many home furnishings products are made today as they were in the past. Furniture, fabric, china and glassware come readily to mind. But modern technology has played a major role in shaping present-day carpets and rugs.

So far, technology has changed the preponderance of carpeting from natural to manmade fibers, from woven construction to tufted and from a sameness of texture to a variety, including cut pile, flat looks and shag.

Despite the rapid technological changes which already have altered its product, leaders of the carpet industry predicted more changes to come at a recent panel discussion in New York sponsored by the National Home Fashions League.

Marjorie Rhodes, a textile stylist, predicted that new computer-controlled coloring and patterning machinery will lead to carpet that looks like an abstract painter's canvas.

Heretofore, multicolored carpet has been used mainly to hide soil. But the new machinery which can apply as many as eight colors in a soft or hard-edged precise pattern will lead to the use of multiple colors for the sake of design, she said.

The machinery, developed by a Georgia machinery manufacturer, has been sold to at least three large American carpet mills and to two Canadian manufacturers and styling work has already started on new carpet designs, said the textile stylist.

Another prediction made at the panel is that easily-installed carpet tiles will replace roll goods, especially in office and other commercial installations. Carpet tiles already account for 35 percent of the European commercial market, but only a very small portion of the American market, according to Norman Rosenblatt, a contractor.

The advent of flat electric cable has made carpet tiles the best choice in new and refurbished buildings, he said. The cable, which is laid directly on the floor, saves construction costs. But its use precludes installation of rolled carpeting, since cutting the carpet could damage the cable and laying it would prevent future access to the cable.

The tiles, however, are installed without cutting and can be picked up and reset if the cable must be moved or repaired. "All of the five or six major jobs we are working on are tile projects," the contractor said.

It seems likely that once carpet tiles are widespread in commercial installations, their use will spread to the home since the distinction between commercial and residential carpet is breaking down, according to the panel.

"A handmade oriental rug took 15,554 hours to produce, tying each knot by hand. Yet, using modern machinery, we can produce a good rug the same size in 30 seconds," said Walter Guinan, an industry consultant, summarizing the contribution technology has made toward mass production.

Such technolgoy has benefited the consumer by keeping prices down in comparison to other consumer durables such as automobiles, added Guinan. And it has changed the consumer's expectations, said Ted Einstein, partner in a New York area carpet retail firm.

"Today's consumers think more about quality and less about fads, yet they are looking for wider and wider choices," said Einstein. He see consumers as more intelligent shoppers than they used to be. "The old weight-price formula (which says the heavier the carpet, the more people will pay for it) no longer applies," he added.

Once, color was considered the most important determinant in choice. Today, texture has replaced color as a consumer's first concern.

What do carpet industry leaders see in the future? A National Home Fashions League survey turned up the following opinions:

"The trend in color for residential carpet is toward soft yet clear peaches and roses, though white and neutrals continue strong. Pattern for residential markets is subtle, a play of color for an airbrushed effect. In commercial uses, the trend in pattern is toward mini-geometrics," said Robert V. Dale, Karastan Rug Mills.

"The trend is toward velours — low tightly-constructed carpet with a rich velvety texture. Cranberry, burgundy and eggplant will be trendsetting colors in velours. Salmon and mauve will be the big fashion colors," according to Gerald Leifer, Collins & Aikman.

"As times grow more turbulent, the need for the therapeutic uplift of cheerful colors becmes more important. Soil-resistant finishes help make the softened color palette possible," said Lee Kolker, C.H. Masland & Sons.

Test your tree for freshness

By AL CARRELL

The Christmas tree is a tradition of the season. However, by the time the tree has been cut and shipped and sits out on a lot waiting for you to come along, it can become dried out. If it's too dry, it could be real fire hazard.

I want to remind you of how to pick out as fresh a tree as possible. My time-tested method of picking freshness is called the scratch, flex and whock test.

When you find a tree that looks like the right size and shape, reach in the trunk and use your thumb to scratch into the back. A fresh tree should reveal a juicy green spot underneath.

The next test is to flex some of the branches. However, don't break a big branch off or the guy selling the trees may want to break your arm. A fresh tree should have branches that will feel flexible and bend without breaking.

The whock test involves picking up the tree by the trunk and raising it up about a foot off the ground. Then you bring it sharply back down against the ground. The too-dry tree will shower needles on the ground. Even a fresh tree will drop some needles, but not too many.

Once you've picked out the right tree and bring it home, be sure you keep the cut end of the trunk in a bucket of water until time to bring it in. In fact, I'd suggest you saw off about an inch from the bottom because the old cut end is probably going to have sealed over some with sap, and may have logged pores which would prevent it being able to drink in the water.

When it's time to bring in the tree for decoration, be sure it's in a tree stand that lets you supply water on a continuous basis. If the tree and stand will allow, you may wish to saw off the bottom of the trunk at an angle to have more exposed areas for water to be taken in. Just be sure that the angle won't prevent the stand from holding the trunk securely.

Another trick to make the tree drink as much as possible is to use a long drill bit and drill a hole right up into the trunk from the bottom. Then poke cotton into the hole. The cotton acts as a wick to bring the liquid up for the tree to drink.

The tree will drink more warm water than cold for some reason. You should check the water level each day while the tree is up and replace any water that's been consumed with warm water.

There is also a "magic" formula that you can use that many people swear by. It involves using a gallon of hot water to which you add 2 cups of clean corn syrup and 4 teaspoons of liquid laundry bleach. Many people also add 4 tablespoons of iron powder that you buy at your nursery store. It's an iron made for plants. If you use this as a starter in the tree stand, and then add hot water as needed each day, it should help keep the tree fresh and green longer.

One important reason for having a fresh tree is because the tree lights can cause a fire hazard. Inspect all the strings of lights before you string them. Go over evry inch of wiring, check the plug and all sockets. If there are flaws, either correct them or discard the set. Never work with lights while they're plugged in. Be careful when installing the lights to be sure that the cord doesn't get near the water in the tree stand. If you're not using the midget lights, avoid letting the lights touch the foliage as the lights could become hot enough to cause a fire on a too-dry tree.

Those midget lights use very little electricity, and the twinkle type are off about half the time, so they use even less. Whatever type of lights though, be sure to unplug them when you retire at night and when you leave the house.

Christmas candles are also festive, but never have lit candles anywhere near the tree or any type of greenery.

Many folks prefer a living tree. That way, when Christmas is over the tree can either be planted or kept in a pot to grow. Just be sure you don't get one too bit to handle because the big tree will have to have a large amount of dirt, and that's heavy. Also try not to keep the tree inside more than about a week to 10 days as it needs to be outside. Buy a tree that can grow in the climate and soil you have. And be sure it's watered properly too.

Have a safe and happy Christmas.

Jeepers creepers

SAN FRANCISCO — The reptiles and insects in "Raiders of the Lost Ark" were considered almost as valuable as the stars of the movie.

The actors emerged unscathed, and so did all of the creepy creatures, to the relief of Fireman's Fund Insurance Companies here, which provided Paramount Pictures with a "creepers-and-crawlers" policy on some 2,000 snakes, 150 tarantulas and 36 beetles.

The snakes and bugs were insured as props against loss or damage, according to Edward E. Hamby, in charge of the companies' entertainment industry division, which also provided cast insurance protecting against delays in production caused by illness or injury to key actors and production personnel. There were none.

Major issues

NEW YORK (AP) — The winners of an international competition to support the writing of non-fiction books on major issues and trends in contemporary society recently were announced by the Ford Foundation.

Awards totaling $848,052 went to 23 writers and scholars from the United States and abroad for writing on such themes as juvenile justice, attitudes toward marriage and the family, and federal wilderness policy.

The winners were selected from among 1,500 proposals.

Bunny

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Snowball, a rabbit, probably thinks she's a dog. She has a dog house and wears a dog collar and chain.

She shares a corner lot with two canines. A neighbor says Snowball's companions protect her.

Snowball's owner, Rosemary Jessing, does not carry the canine theme for Snowball too far. The rabbit enjoys a bunny's traditional diet of greens and an occasional slice of bread.

Korean War vete ran living in China

By LIU HEUNG SHING
Associated Press Writer

JILIN, China (AP) — He speaks fluent Chinese. He gets prime cuts of meat because he is a friend of the butcher. He joined the radicals in the Cultural Revolution and still recites Chairman Mao Tse-tung's quotations.

He is an American.

He identified himself in an interview as former Pvt. James G. Veneris of the U.S. Army — captured by Chinese forces in the Korean War in 1950 but opting to remain in China when the war ended. He now teaches English at Shangdon University here in Jilin, 600 miles northeast of Peking and about 150 miles from the North Korean border.

Here he is is known as "Lao Wen."

He said he was an out-of-work laborer in Vandergrift, Pa., when he joined the U.S. Army to fight in Korea and that his family later moved to California.

Lao Wen said another American captured in Korea is living in Jilin as well. He identified him as Howard Adams.

(At the National Archives in Washington, a U.S. Army release dated Jan. 29, 1954, and entitled, "Background Material on Non-Repatriated Prisoners," lists among its 21 names Pvt. James George Veneris of Hawthorne, Calif., and Cpl. Howard C. Adams of Corsicana, Texas, both World War II veterans who re-enlisted in the Army for duty in Korea.)

IN MANY WAYS, Lao Wen said, he is more grassroots Chinese than his third Chinese intellectual wife, but he added he still misses Lucky Strikes cigarettes.

"I also miss pancakes with Log Cabin syrup, strawberry ice cream and banana splits," he said in the interview with The Associated Press.

Lao Wen added that he was denounced in some U.S. quarters as a traitor, defector and turncoat for refusing repatriation after the war and given a dishonorable discharge from the U.S. Army. He is being denied back pay, he claimed, for the time he spent as a prisoner of war.

During China's 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, however, Veneris was branded as a spy for the Americans and rival Nationalist Chinese on Taiwan, he said, adding that the toilet-paper factory where he worked had to bar the gates to protect him from Maoist Red Guards who then were attacking foreigners in China.

"I am not a Pacifist and I don't believe in communism," said Lao Wen. He wears a faded Mao jacket now but still speaks the English of his coal-mining town in Pennsylvania.

"I believe in friendship between people," he added. "I want to be a bridge of friendship between the Mississippi and the Yellow Rivers."

Lao Wen described himself as a staunch anti-Soviet.

"AS LONG AS I AM in China, if the Russian bear invades us, I'll pick my gun for China," he said.

He gave this account of events leading up to his life today:

After serving in World War II, he was out of work and joined the Army again in October, 1950, for the Korean War. On Nov. 28, 1950, Veneris and 23 other Americans were captured by the Chinese, two days after they thronged across their border into Korea.

"That was the turning point in my life," Veneris said. He spent 3½ years as a prisoner, studying Chinese and reading Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn.

"I found I liked the Chinese people and wanted to stay," he added. "I opposed the American propaganda that the Chinese people were cruel and out to conquer the world. I know they love peace."

After his release as a prisoner, Veneris moved to Jilin, an industrial city in China's northeast. His life reads like contempary Chinese history. He experienced the Communist land reform, Mao's disastrous Great Leap Forward into industrialization. He watched the frenzied overnight formation of communes and the subsequent "three bitter years" of famine. He, too, was hungry.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Impotence possible with certain drugs

Dear Dr. Solomon: You once wrote that blood pressure pills can cause a man to be impotent. Could you list the names of these pills? Also, will you explain why this happens? — Stan, Baltimore

Dear Stan: Any hypertensive medication has the potential for causing impotence since it results in decreased blood flow to the sexual organs; however, it does not have this effect in all patients. If it does, a change in medication or some alteration of the dose may be all that is needed. If you are on antihypertensive medication and have this problem, I suggest you check with your doctor.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I'm not a doctor, but a lot of the talk about type A and type B personalities, and how they affect the possibility of a person having a heart attack, just doesn't make any sense to me. I have a civil service job that is boring and ridiculous. While I've never had a heart attack, I think this kind of work can be more harmful than the kind of stress experienced by executives. I would appreciate your opinion. — Hattie, Easton, Pa.

Dear Hattie: You may be surprised to learn that some doctors agree with you. At least one study has shown that many top executives have less cardiovascular disease and fewer stress-related health complaints than people employed in lower-level positions. The explanation is that working at a job that is boring and unappreciated may make a person as susceptible to coronary heart disease as the work peformed by top executives.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Everyone, including his teachers, say that my 12-year-old son is very bright; yet he does poorly in school. The school psychologist says he has emotional problems, and recommends I take him to a community agency for counseling. He says it would help my son to do better in school. Id like to help him with this problem. Do you think counseling is the answer? — Mrs. T.J., Detroit, Mich.

Dear Mrs. J.: It seems to me you are confusing a symptom with a problem. If your son has emotional problems, his inability to do well in school is a symptom — it is not the problem. Once his emotional difficulties are resolved, the symptom will disappear.

You can compare this situation with that of a person running a high fever because of pneumonia. The fever is a sign; it will disappear once the pneumonia is cured. Therefore, if counseling will help resolve your son's emotional problems — and if he is very right — there is every reason to expect that his school work will improve.

In one study conducted by Dr. R. Dennis Staton, of the University of North Dakota School of Medicine, depressed children who were given antidepressant medication showed an increase in their I.Q.'s. I am not suggesting that your son needs or should be given drugs; I only cite this study as another example of how a child can be helped to function more effectively once emotional problems are resolved.

Motorcade more than transportation to Reagan

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The presidential motorcade, one of the most visible perquisites of the nation's highest office, has become camouflage for Ronald Reagan whenever he ventures from the White House.

In the months since Reagan was wounded in an assassination attempt, the Secret Service has steadily increased the lengths to which it goes to protect the president's life. And in recent days, with reports that Libyan assassination squads might be trying to enter the country, the blanket of security around Reagan has been wrapped even tighter.

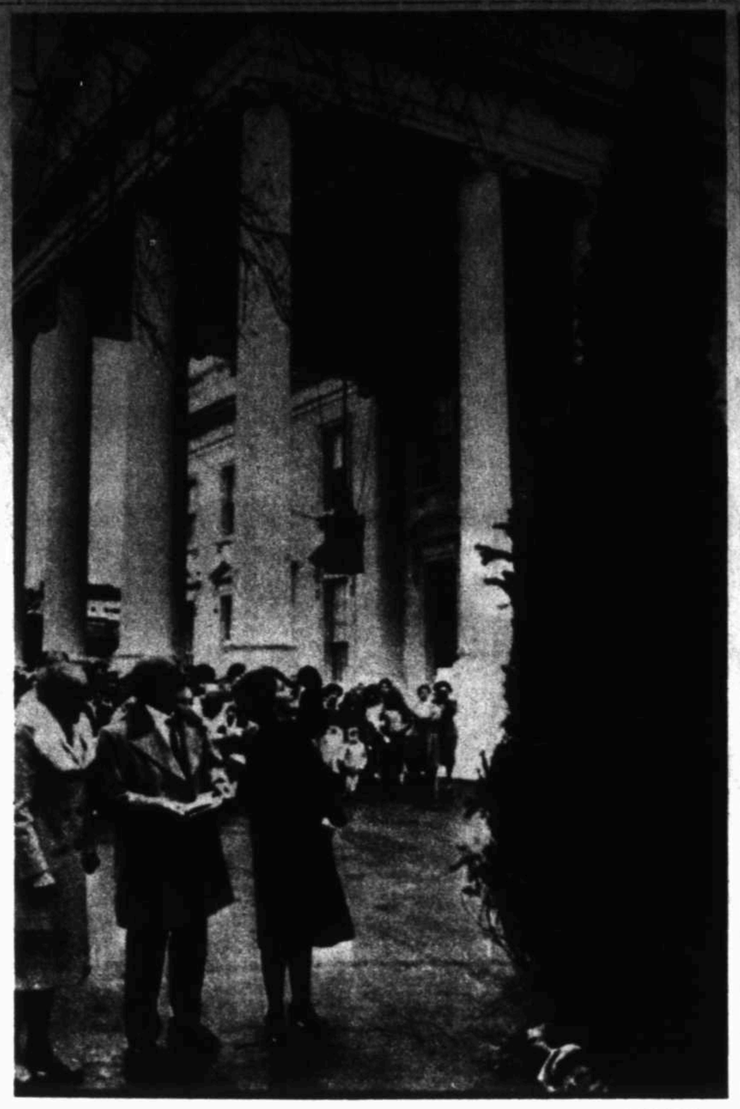

Officials refuse to discuss the precautions they are taking for fear of compromising their effectiveness.

But some things are obvious to even the casual observer.

The long, black, armored limousine that flies the presidential flag to announce it is carrying the nation's most distinguished passenger now may carry only a couple of staff members. Reagan may be riding elsewhere in the motorcade of more than a dozen vehicles, either in another presidential limousine or in a less conspicuous, unmarked car.

A van or station wagon carrying a specially trained anti-sniper assault team travels along, its doors ajar and its occupants positioned to leap out at any moment.

The president no longer steps out onto an open sidewalk, rewarding a gathered crowd or just a few lucky passers-by with a glimpse of him walking inside. He is now whisked into an underground garage, a private entrance or behind a curtain to minimize his exposure.

Amateur historians rallying to save Custer's battlefield

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — A group of amateur historians is trying to raise $1 million to buy and set aside Crow Indian lands that lie between the two battlefields where Custer and his 7th Calvary fell at the Battle of the Little Bighorn.

"There's a lot of important lands we're trying to preserve for future generations, for future historians," says Robert Lawrence, a Fall River, Mass., psychologist and secretary-treasurer of Little Bighorn Associates Inc.

The unprotected sections of the historic battlefields are in the rolling hills of southern Montana where Lt. Col. George Armstrong Custer was killed in an encounter with thousands of Sioux and Cheyene Indians on June 24, 1876.

The National Park Service administers the grassy hill where Custer made his last stand, as well as the battlefield about five miles to the south where Maj. Marcus Reno and Capt. Frederick Benteen survived the battle with the Sioux and Cheyenne. But the 800 acres in between, including Medicine Tail Coulee, where Custer probably first encountered the Indians, is owned by individual Crows.

It is used for grazing, but the Crows want to sell.

Ensign gets closed hearing on charges he sent secrets to South African diplomats

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A young Navy officer charged with sending secret electronics warfare material to South African diplomats has been granted a closed hearing at his pretrial investigation Monday, the Navy says.

Ensign Stephen Anthony Baba, 21, a former electronics material officer on the San Diego-based frigate Lang, is being held in a federal prison after the Navy accused him of mailing classified information to the naval attache of the South African Embassy in Washington, D.C. on Sept. 28.

South Africa turned the material over to U.S. government representatives in Washington, said Capt. Jack Garrow, spokesman for Naval Base San Diego.

Baba, of Gaithersberg, Md., was formally accused Wednesday of sending the secret electronics warfare material, Garrow said. The closed hearing was announced Thursday.

In three separate charges and six counts, Baba was accused of mailing three classified documents which "could be of assistance to a foreign power...could be used to the injury of the United States."

Garrow said the documents were a copy of "Electronics Warfare and Education Quarterly," published by the military in May 1980, and two pieces of microfilm described by the Navy as "key word index reports" pertaining to electronics warfare.

A general court-martial has already been recommended for Baba on other charges, including attempted robbery of a local jewelry store and extortion from a federal credit union on a military base, Garrow said.

Baba has been in jail since Oct. 3, when he was arrested in the jewelry store holdup. The extortion charge involves an alleged threat to explode a bomb at the credit union at the Naval Amphibious Base in San Diego on Oct. 1 if money was not received.

Charges associated with transmitting secret information and passing a bad check will be aired Monday. A pretrial investigation is the Navy's equivalent of a grand jury probe.

Garrow said it would be inappropriate for the Navy to say whether Baba asked the South African government for money.

In Gaithersburg, Dorothy Baba said her son was in need of money "all the time."

"Stephen told us he had become engaged to a girl in the Philippines and was going to marry her," Mrs. Baba said, "but he needed money to send her so she could go to college."

She described her son as an exceptionally intelligent young man who graduated from high school 18 months early and qualified for the University of Maryland when he was 16, graduating from there at 18.

Town gets $6 million to rebuild shoe district

LYNN, Mass. (AP) — This harbor town's designation as a disaster area by President Reagan will bring $6 million in federal and state aid to rebuild the quaint shops and apartments of the restored shoe district, which was leveled by fire over the weekend, officials said.

David Sparks, regional director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency and coordinator for the relief effort, said his agency will open a field office in Lynn today to take applications for disaster assistance.

The spectacular fire, which raged for 16 hours, destroyed 16 buildings, heavily damaged 10 others and leveled an apartment house. The area that was once the shoe-making capital of America was ending a huge restoration project when the blaze hit.

In all, 37 businesses and 478 apartments were damaged, with 400 people left homeless and 1,500 put out of work. No one was seriously injured.

Reagan's declaration Thursday followed four days of lobbying by Gov. Edward King and the state congressional delegation.

King said he filed a special message with the Legislature seeking $1.5 million to meet the state's share of $6 million in initial recovery costs.

The city can get direct aid for damage to public facilities, but individuals primarily will be eligible only for low-interest loans, rather than grants that do not have to be repaid.

New tax deduction aides Congress

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is about to consider a new tax deduction for itself that could be worth thousands of dollars a year for some members.

The legislation would let a Senate or House member deduct as a business expense some costs of maintaining a home in the Washington area — even if the lawmaker's family also lives most of the year in the capital. It comes only two months after Congress wiped out the $3,000 limit on deductions that members may claim for such Washington expenses as transportation and entertainment.

The new tax break also would benefit a businessman who maintains a second home for business purposes.

The liberalized deduction would be law now had President Reagan not vetoed a stopgap spending measure that shut down parts of the government for several hours on Nov. 23.

At 6 a.m. on Nov. 20, near the end of an all-night session, the Senate added the provision to the measure, which was designed to keep the government operating until July 15. It was described by its sponsors, Republican Sens. Ted Stevens of Alaska and Bob Dole of Kansas, as a technical amendment.

The amendment was accepted by the House and sent to the White House as part of the big spending bill vetoed by Reagan.

The deduction could be attached to a new spending bill that must be passed by Dec. 15. A better bet is that Congress will pass a miscellaneous tax bill already written by the House Ways and Means Committee, that includes the provision.

Congress usually gets skittish when it considers increasing its own pay or benefits. With most federal programs being squeezed, the squeamishness is even more pronounced this year. Although most lawmakers would not vote to raise their $60,662 salary this year, they agreed on the need for a bigger tax deduction.

Here is why Congress wants that deduction:

Almost all the 539 members of Congress maintain one house in their home state or district and a second in the Washington area, where living costs are among the highest in the nation. The first is considered "home" for tax purposes, meaning that when a senator or representative is in Washington, he or she is on business away from home.

Like any other businessman, a lawmaker may deduct reasonable expenses associated with out-of-town business. The only difference is that a member of Congress is limited to a $3,000 deduction per year. That limit will end on Jan. 1.

Even without that limit, a lawmaker whose family lives in Washington — that means most members — would be unable to deduct business-related costs of owning the Washington home.

That's because another section of tax law, originally written to apply to vacation homes, has been interpreted to bar a business deduction if a second home is used for personal reasons more than 14 days a year. If the family of a member of Congress lives in Washington more than 14 days a year, the member loses the deduction.

Chinese refugee held until gets U.S. visa

By RONNIE WEI
Associated Press Writer

HONG KONG (AP) — An illegal immigrant from China, who has been granted "humanitarian parole" to settle in the United States, remained in prison today awaiting his entry visa, a government spokesman said.

Zheng Langqun, 34, who fled from China to Hong Kong in May, claims his father is American and says he intends to go to the United States to continue his search for his family.

He received the "humanitarian parole" after a number of U.S. representatives appealed to Hong Kong authorities on his behalf.

Zheng's American sponsor, Kee Chang, a Dover, Del., restaurant owner, said he was disappointed that Zheng's move to the United States has been delayed.

According to local press reporters, Kee blamed the problem on red tape in Hong Kong Immigration Department.

"There is hangup because the immigration officials in Hong Kong want to see my financial statement," he was quoted as saying.

Scottish will be honored guests at celebration

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The lord provost of Aberdeen, Scotland, will be an honored guest at the Texas Capitol on Feb. 1 when the state marks the 100th anniversary of the start of construction of the Capitol.

Alexander Collie and his wife will be here in honor of the Scottish stone masons who helped build the granite building, according to Randy Lee, executive director of the Texas Sesquicentennial Commission.

The Scottish visitors will arrive at the Capitol in a horse-drawn carriage that once carried Presidents William McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt, according to Lee. Gov. Bill Clements and wife Rita will join the Collies in the carriage.

Mrs. Clements is chairwoman of the committee that met Thursday to make arrangements for the centennial celebration.

Lee said the committee also wants a giant, Capitol-shaped birthday cake for the party.

High school singers and groups from the University of Texas and Texas A&M also will be asked to participate, according to Lee.

The activities will take place on the steps at the Capitol's south entrance. They will be moved inside the Capitol in case of inclement weather, he said.

Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., left, and unidentified participants of the White House Conference on Aging are shown as the conference ended Thursday in Washington. The group gave overwhelming approval to nearly 600 recommendations its chairman says will shape "social policy and planning for the aged in the decade ahead."

Participants claim aging conference packed

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senior citizen groups are hailing the recommendations of the White House Conference on Aging while calling for a Justice Department probe of allegations that the Reagan administration packed the event with partisans.

The accusations grew in intensity Thursday as the four-day conference ended with about 2,300 delegates and 1,200 official observers shouting overwhelming approval of nearly 600 recommendations drafted by 14 committees.

Among the proposals were maintaining current Social Security benefit levels; restoring the minimum Social Security benefit; ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment; expanding Medicaid and Medicare benefits; and instituting tax credits for home care for the elderly.

THE APPROVAL IS only tentative. Final results, based on a poll within a month to see how each participant feels on each recommendation, will be published in a conference report, which is due by next June.

Jack Ossofsky, chairman of the Leadership Council of Aging Organizations, a 25-group coalition, hailed the recommendations: "Our victory was overwhelming. ... Somehow or other the truth comes out."

Rep. Claude Pepper, the Florida Democrat who all week had battled and negotiated with conference leaders, called them "wonderful recommendations. ... Democracy has a way of rising to its proper height."

The $6 million conference began Monday amid complaints — denied by officials — that the committees were rigged with Reagan supporters to ensure that they would produce recommendations in line with administration policies.

On Thursday, dissidents said their allegations were substantiated by the appearance of documents that purportedly came from conference files but were not on conference stationery.

THE DOCUMENTS, circulated by sources who asked not to be identified, purportedly listed delegate "whips" and "adversaries" and the overall number of "favorables" and "unfavorables" on each committee.

One of the documents was a Sept. 18 letter from Polly Sowell, deputy personnel director for Texas Gov. William P. Clements Jr., to Betty Heitman, co-chairman of the Republican National Committee.

The letter, which Mrs. Heitman acknowledged was authentic, contained a list of Texas delegates and the statement: "There are only four of them, marked with an asterisk, who would put loyalty to the president ahead of their commitment to the elderly and who would not take offense at the involvement of the Republican Party."

Mrs. Heitman, in a telephone interview from Baton Rouge, La., said she gave the letter and information from Republicans in other states to the conference staff to identify Reagan loyalists.

She said she sought the political intelligence because others had used "scare tactics with the delegates, telling them that the administration was going to destroy Social Security."

But Mrs. Heitman said, "I had nothing to do with stacking any committees."

Ossofsky called the documents "just unbelievable, absolutely a terrible disgrace. ... I want the attorney general to look into this."

Paul Kerschner, associate director of the National Retired Teachers Association-American Association of Retired Persons, said: "The documents that are being circulated around this convention today are full proof that this is a gray scam. This is watergate on the elderly. ... This is the smoking gun."

THE AGING GROUP leaders vowed to monitor closely the polling of participants on the conference recommendations.

David Newhall III, chief of staff for Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker, denied the Reagan administration manipulated committee assignments or ran a "whip" operation to orchestrate committee votes.

"I would doubt very much that these documents have anything to do with either the administration or the (conference) staff," said Newhall. "The conference was not stacked. The outcome proves more clearly than my statement that it was not."

Newhall said he would check on the letter to Mrs. Heitman and stated that other documents "appeared to be stuff that was created once the conference was underway, not ahead of time."

Plane snaps carrier cable; Two crewmen killed

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — An A-7E Corsair II jet fighter attempting to land on the USS John F. Kennedy snapped an arresting cable which struck and killed two crewmen and injured three others Thursday, the Navy said.

The Norfolk-based aircraft carrier is operating in the Caribbean with 30 other ships in exercise Readex I-82.

The A-7E and three aircraft parked on deck were damaged in the accident at 7:45 a.m. EST, said Lt. Cmdr. Dave Thomas, a spokesman for the 2nd Fleet.

The single-seat A-7E took off after the cable broke and landed later at Roosevelt Roads Naval Air Station in Puerto Rico, Thomas said. The pilot apparently was not injured and the damage to his plane was minor.

The Navy identified the dead as Airman Apprentice Anthony W. Davis of Oxon Hill, Md., and Petty Officer 3rd Class Robert A. Baughman of Virginia Beach, Va. Their ages were not released.

The most seriously injured man was Airman Apprentice William E. Bley of New Bloomfield, Mo., said Lt. Ross Kudlick. Bley was flown to a Navy hospital in Puerto Rico and then was transferred to a Miami hospital, Kudlick said. His condition was not available.

The other two men hurt were treated aboard the ship for minor injuries, he said. Their names were not released.

Carrier-based airplanes have tailhooks that snag one of four cables stretched across the 130-foot wide deck to slow them down on landing. Each cable is as thick as a man's wrist.

Thomas said one of the wires snapped and whipped across the deck causing the deaths, injuries and damage to the other aircraft.

Also damaged were an E-2C Hawkeye early warning plane and two SH-3 helicopters. The extent of the damage was not known.

The Navy said it was the first fatal accident on the Kennedy since June 22, 1978, when another A-7E crashed while taking off, killing the pilot.

Last month, an A-7E failed to return to the aircraft carrier Nimitz during a routine mission, and an S-3A anti-submarine warfare aircraft with four men aboard crashed about a mile from the ship.

Wagner executor of Wood will

By KATHY HORAK
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Natalie Wood, who drowned during the weekend after falling from her yacht near Santa Catalina Island, divided most of her multimillion-dollar estate between her husband and her two daughters.

Her husband, actor Robert Wagner, was named trustee and executor of Miss Wood's will, which was filed Thursday in Superior Court. He will receive most of her personal belongings, including cars and furnishings, although the will said she asked him to distribute some of her personal mementos and jewelry to friends. They were not identified.

"Obviously, she's worth millions," said a secretary for tax-probate attorney William Stinehart Jr., who asked not to be identified.

"Mr. Wagner gets half the estate outright and will hold the other half in trust for the two children," said the actress' attorney, Paul Ziffren.

"It's impossible to make an estimate of the value of the estate until the inventory is filed," he said, "and it won't be done for several weeks." Ziffren said he would become executor and trustee should anything happen to Wagner, 52.

Miss Wood, whose body was found Sunday, set aside a maximum $12,000 per year for her mother, Maria Gurdin of Los Angeles, gave her sister Olga Viripaeff $15,000 and another sister, Lana Wood, her furs and clothing.

She also asked that if Wagner died before her daughters had grown, they would live together in the couple's Beverly Hills home under the guardianship of her housekeeper, Willie Mae Worthen.

However, Miss Wood requested that Gregson be given custody of Natasha if he requested it.

Company expects claim for Wood movie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The status of actress Natalie Wood's uncompleted last movie, "Brainstorm," was still uncertain Thursday but an insurance consortium said it expected to be given an insurance claim for the movie.

With production on the movie suspended, but with principal photography nearly complete, MGM officials referred all calls to their attorney, Frank Rothman.

Rothman, however, was "in meetings," according to an aide, and was not immediately available for comment.

On Wednesday, an MGM official had said that two "crucial" scenes involving Miss Wood had not been filmed.

Lloyds of London on Thursday reported it had been advised by MGM that an insurance claim would be filed for "Brainstorm" because of the actress' death by drowning over the weekend.

A consortium of insurance companies, led by Lloyds and including California-based Pacific Indemnity, had provided cast insurance for the movie, which reportedly was budgeted at $12 million.

Chaps sting St. Philips

Midland College goes against unbeaten Laredo tonight

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland College stung like a bee and floated like a butterfly in gliding to a 106-64 victory over St. Philips in the opening round of the Chaparral Classic at the Chaparral Center Thursday night, but the toughest is still to come.

The Chaps, now 6-4 for the season, meet unbeaten Laredo College at 7:30 p.m. today in the middle game of a tripleheader that will tip off with Howard College against St. Philips at 5:30 p.m. and finishes with Barton County, Kansas, against Odessa College at 9:30 p.m.

Laredo rolled to its ninth straight win, beating Odessa 82-67 while Barton County eased by Ranger Junior College, 85-71.

MC will meet Barton in the 8:30 game Saturday with other games at 4:30 and 6:30 p.m.

PUNTUS WILSON, MC's 6-3½ forward, scored 28 points while Spud Webb, the Chaps' 5-6 point guard, made the plays and chipped in with 13 points to pace Midland.

Also in double figures for MC were Lance McCain, 15, Chester Smith, 11, and Bradley Richardson, the King of Dunk in Amarillo, at least, had 10.

Midland College jumped in front 26-10 and was in control all the way, although the Tigers threatened to make a game of it late in the first half, closing a 33-16 spread to 35-29 with 3:47 left in the half. The Tigers went scoreless the rest of the half and for 2:24 of the second half as MC stowed the game away by opening a yawning 58-29 gap.

WILSON, MCCAIN, Richardson and Webb supplied the offensive punch during that 19-0 shutout stretch at the end of the first half. Wilson scored three baskets, McCain two and Richardson a couple, but Webb seemed to have a hand in all of them, plus scoring a couple himself.

It was a night that didn't start out too well for Wilson. He was one for six and two for two for 12 before he got rolling, converting nine field attempts in a row and 10 of his last 11.

St. Philips, slipping to 4-4, was led by Edwin Pellotrosa with 12 points.

Barton, which probably rates as the tournament favorite, exhibited a balanced attack against Ranger as Cliff Moss, 15, Rudy Sandes, 14, Jeff Nobel, 12, and Willis Thomas, 12, led the way.

Harold Howard hit 20 points as Laredo walloped OC, now 4-5. Wayne Lister, Eric Brown and Steve Sulla all had 13 for the Wranglers.

CHAPSTYQUES—Howard College coach Harold Wilder was on hand to watch the proceedings. With a WJCC game scheduled Thursday night, Howard was unable to make it, so Ranger filled in. However, the WJCC game was rescheduled, but too late to enabe HC to make the tourney....Bradley Richardson won his Dunk contest at the Amarillo Tournament and consequently his title...St. Philips went 8 minutes and 26 seconds without a field goal during a stretch that began late in the first half and finally ended 4:26 into the second half when Kenneth Bland hit a bucket...

Dog rally defeats Amarillo Tascosa

ODESSA — Midland High kept its winning streak alive Thursday night by overcoming an Amarillo Tascosa third quarter lead enroute to a 65-63 final score in the Odessa Invitational basketball tournament and their sixth straight victory of the season.

With the victory, the Bulldogs (7-1 on the year) advance into the semifinals of the tournament and will face El Paso Eastwood today at 6:20 p.m.

Along with their six-game winning streak, the Bulldogs are seeking their second consecutive tournament title. Last week in the Tall City Tournament, MHS defeated cross-town rival Midland Lee 63-58 to claim championship honors.

Neither team was able to maintain the lead more than a quarter of play in the see-saw affair at Odessa High. Tascosa led the Bulldgos by a 17-10 count at the end of the first quarter and MHS held the advantage, 35-32, at the half. In the third quarter, the Rebels regained the edge with a 50-47 score before being outscored 18-13 in the final period.

Preston Robertson upped his 21.4 average to 22 by leading the Bulldogs in the scoring department with 26 points, all from the field. Behind Robertson, Raymond Parker connected for 15 points while Don Sharnowski added 14.

Tascosa was paced by the hot shooting of James Dawn, who canned a game-high 28 points, while teammates Reggie Lee and Pat Farrell added 16 and 11 respectively.

In other Odessa Invitational action Thursday night, Odessa High defeated Lubbock High 51-42, El Paso Riverside downed Odessa Ector 60-56 and Eastwood knocked off Odessa Permian, 51-44.

Today's tournament action will get underway at 3 p.m. with Ector facing Lubbock High followed by Tascosa against Permian at 4:40, MHS against Eastwood at 6:20 and Odessa High against Riverside in the nightcap at 8.

Nielsen hikes Oilers' rating

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston football fans may have witnessed a changing of the guard when quarterback Gifford Nielsen came off the bench to rescue the Oilers in a come-from-behind victory over the Cleveland Browns.

Nielsen, relegated to backup status when starter Ken Stabler unretired during the exhibition season after first announcing he would quit the game, completed five of his first six passes after entering the game in the third quarter. He directed an 80-yard drive that resulted in a 30-yard touchdown pass to tight end Dave Casper.

It was enough to spark Houston to a 17-13 victory in a National Football League game Thursday night.

The scoring pass put the Oilers ahead for the first time, erasing Cleveland's 6-3 halftime lead built on field goals of 18 and 19 yards by Matt Bahr. Toni Fritsch's 32-yard, first-quarter field goal provided Huston's only first-half points.

Houston rookie Avon Riley provided the game's turning point when he blocked a punt at the Cleveland 11 later in the third quarter. Adger Armstrong returned it to the Browns' 3 to set up Earl Campbell's 1-yard touchdown run that boosted the Houston lead to 17-6.

Campbell, long the Houston workhorse, carried the ball just 15 times for 31 yards. That did little to allay fears of some Oiler fans that he may be traded.

"Bud, please don't fire Earl Campbell," a sign in the stands implored of Oiler owner Bud Adams, who last season fired popular Coach Bum Phillips, now at New Orleans.

"There is no truth to that rumor, it is something that hasn't been discussed," Houston Coach Ed Biles said in response to questions about the 5-foot-11, 230-pound running back's future with the Oilers.

"That's the farthest thing from my mind, but I just can't stop the rumors."

Campbell, the National Football League's leading rusher the past three seasons, played a secondary role to Nielsen, who completed seven of 11 passes for 86 yards and no interceptions after replacing Stabler.

Asked about Campbell's reduced workload, Biles said, "I didn't think we needed to (run Campbell more) since it was a short week and he hadn't had much rest. He had other things on his mind."

Biles declined, however, to elaborate on the "other things."

Campbell, who scored the final Houston touchdown on a 1-yard dive, professed no knowledge of a possible trade.

"I have nothing to say about that," he said. "If they trade me they trade me and if they don't they don't. I would hate to leave because I love Texas and this team and I have been through a whole lot together. But whatever happens I can deal with it."

Cleveland quarterback Brian Sipe drove the Browns to a fourth-quarter score, a 1-yard plunge by Cleo Miller. Sipe, who increased his league-leading interception total to 23, also took the Browns to the brink of a winning comeback before they were stopped at the Oiler four with 20 seconds left in the game.

Sipe, who completed 21 of 31 passes for 206 yards, agonized in the Browns' dressing room following Cleveland's failure in the closing seconds.

"Everybody's got to remember that I'm not a general or a chief," he said. "I am only an Indian and I don't want to second-guess calls from the bench."

Sipe has been asked to comment on the final play of the game, a handoff to Miller, who was stopped for no gain.

"Sometimes I disagree, but I always follow instructions. The fourth-down call was a good one. I worked for a touchdown against Cincinnati."

Carter wants pay like Winfield

MONTREAL (AP) — All-star catcher Gary Carter says he wants to be paid as much Dave Winfield gets from the New York Yankees, and the Montreal Expos may accomodate him.

With his agents seeking a seven-or eight-year deal, Carter would be making about $2 million a season by the end of the contract if the National League baseball club signed him.

And the Expos appear willing to pay close to that amount to keep Carter, who has one year remaining on a five-year contract.

Midland Lee honored its football players with an awards banquet at the Lee High cafeteria Thursday night in the year's final bash for the Rebels, a team that missed the playoffs in 1981 by a mere 13 seconds.

Under head football coach Spike Dykes, the Rebs posted an 8-2 season mark to finish second in the District 5-5A race, and if it hadn't been for an Odessa Permian field goal in the last 13 seconds of play against Lee, the Rebs might still be playing.

THE BANQUET also marked the end of high school football careers for 24 Lee seniors. It was a senior oriented club that had given of itself and appreciation of their efforts by the Lee coaching staff and fans was evident during the affair, which featured guest speaker Ray Alborn, head football coach at Rice University. In Lee's final game against Midland High, a 14-8 victory, the starting lineup was made up of all seniors.

All-District center Van Gravitt, who is also a National Merit semifinalist, was honored twice during the banquet. Gravitt, active in many school and church activities, was presented the Lena Douglas Award for earning the highest grade point average among players on the team. The award is presented annually to the player who shows academic as well as football talent. Dr. Joe Smith, Lee High principal, presented the award to Gravitt. The center was also named as the most valuable offensive lineman. Gravitt was also recognized for being a team captain this year.

LINEMAN Len Bridgeman was the first Rebel ever to receive the Fighting Rebel Spirit Award. Bobby Dunn made the presentation to Bridgeman and said the award will be an annual award in memory of Bob Dillon, a sports writer for The Midland Reporter-Telegram who died in a car accident last February. The team felt Bridgeman best represented the fighting spirit of the Rebels.

Fullback Calvin Riggs and linebacker Terry Thompson were named as the most valuable offensive and defensive players of the year by the coaching staff. Riggs won offensive and defensive berths on the All-District team for the second year in a row and Thompson was All-District on defense. Dykes noted that both had served as team captains for two years in a row. Gravitt and Alan Kyle were the other team captains this year. Kyle was named as the most valuable defensive lineman.

OTHERS TO receive honors included Bart Ryan, most valuable offensive back; Kenneth Brown, most valuable receiver; Chris Parker, most valuable defensive secondary player; and Greg Woodberry, specialty team player of the year.

Riggs, Thompson, Brown, Parker and Gravitt were all All-District choices this season. Kyle, Ryan, Kevin Sparks, Tim Murray, Kenneth Hardison and Brown all received honorable mention honors on the All-District team. Brown was a unanimous All-District choice at wide receiver and was an honorable mention selection as a safety on defense.

Dykes also made special presentations to Ken Marks for his work as booster club president and to Dr. Thurston Dean, a Midland doctor, for his service to the team this year.

Cathy Olson presented Dykes with a complete scrapbook of clippings and pictures on the 1981 team on behalf of the Rebelettes, a spirit organization at Lee.

Alborn gave a brief address to the gathering and offered a four-point plan of success to the Lee players. He urged the Rebels to emphasis their strengths and work on their weaknesses, take time to prepare for the moment they are called on, develop leadership potential and to be thankful for the opportunities that they have in life.

Scotty Alcorn, who did not receive an award of any kind, served as master of ceremonies during the event. He kept the crowd in stitches with his quick wit and humor. But the real stars were the Lee Rebels, who could have prolonged the season if it had been 13 seconds shorter..

Andrea Freeman, left, and Becky Simpson, both of the City of Midland Swim Team, take part in a workout for Sunday's Texas North-South meet, which will be held in Dallas.

Four COM swimmers in North-South star meet

The City of Midland will be seeing a lot of action over the weekend. Head coach Hank O'Neill will be taking Becky Simpson, Andrea Freeman, Laura Morse and Tracey Delany to Dallas to compete Sunday in the Texas North-South All-Star meet being held on the Southern Methodist campus. Assistant COM coach Don Wederman will be taking the younger swimmers to an ABC meet in Odessa at the Odessa Permian pool Saturday and Sunday.

O'Neil, who will will coach the North 17-18 age group girls, said, "Our (COM) four girls should place among the leaders. Of course, it will depend on how the South squad puts swimmers in certain events."

The North squad, which defeated the South team for the first time last year, is made up of swimmers north of Austin while the south team is comprised of tankers below Austin.

Freeman and Simpson earned their berths on the team in a qualifing meet earlier this fall at a meet at TCU while Morse and Delany were added to the team to fill out events. Morse and Delany finished with the fourth best time at the TCU meet in each event they will be swimming Sunday.

Freeman will be representing the North team in the 17-18 girls 200 and 500 freestyle in addition to the freestyle relay.

Simpson will be swimming in the 11-12 girls 200 and 500 freestyle and the 100 breast stroke.

Morse and Delany will be swimming in the 11-12 girls age group. Morse will swim in the medlay relay, freestyle relay and the 100 breaststroke while Delany will be competing in the medley relay, 100 freestyle and the 50 freestyle.

According to O'Neill, the ABC meet in Odessa is expected to drop 24 to 30 teams.

Frazier undaunted after ring tie with Cummings

CHICAGO (AP) — He had to settle for a draw in the verdict, but in his mind Joe Frazier was a winner ... and his comeback will continue.

"From what I did tonight after a five-year layoff, I didn't see too much missing," said the 37-year-old former heavyweight champion who drew with Floyd "Jumbo" Cummings Thursday night. It was his first fight since he retired after being stopped in the fifth round by George Foreman June 15, 1976.

Referee Nate Moran scored the 10-round bout at the International Amphitheatre 46-45 for Cummings, but the fight was declared a draw because judges Harold Mararvitz scored it 47-47 and Collins Brown 46-46. A fighter must have at least two of the three officials vote for him in order to win.

"I don't even think the fight was close," said the 30-year-old Cummings, who turned pro in 1979 after serving 12 years of a 50-75-year prison term for a murder conviction in connection with a killing during an armed robber.

"We got shafted in our home town," said Blackie Pesoli, Cummings' manager. "It was Frazier's reputation and sympathy for him that kept Cummings from winning the fight."

The bout was bathed in nostalgia. Most of the estimated crowd of 6,500 fans in the 10,000-seat arena rooted for Smokin' Joe, the man who had won the heavyweight championship and engaged in three classic fights with Muhammad Ali.

But this Frazier had a role of fat around his middle — he weighed 229 pounds — and he showed his age and the effects of his long absence from the ring. He landed several of his famed left hooks, but he missed more and he never had Cummings in serious trouble. He also seemed unable to put a series of punches together and he was nearly knocked down on two occasions.

Yet after the fight, Frazier, who will be 38 Jan. 12, said "I don't see no reason to stop."

He said he hoped to fight again in three or four months, then changed it to five or six months.

Asked if he would fight Ali again if his old adversary, who will be 40 Jan. 17, beats Trevor Berbick next week, Frazier said,"It's got to be up to the public."

"I proved to myself I can go 10 rounds," said Frazier.

But in the eighth round it looked as if might not reach the end.

Cummings, who weighed 223½, caught Frazier with a right to the jaw along the ropes, then follwed with several head punches. Frazier started to fall, but grabbed Cummings, who then forced Frazier into a corner with another barrage of head blows. But Frazier lasted out the round.

Frazier also almost went down in the third from a 1-2 to the jaw that put him back on his heels.

The former champion's best round seemed to be the fifth. He caught Cummings with a good left hook. Cummings mugged, indicating he wasn't hurt. But then Frazier nailed with two more hooks and a good right to the head that shook Cummings.

"Joe Frazier can punch, but he never hurt me," said Cummings.

Frazier did punch harder, but Cummings landed many more punches. He also backed up Frazier with his strength and dictated the temp of the fight.

Maverick comedy nears drama act

By NICK CANEPA
Copley News Service

DALLAS — Go ahead and laugh. Yuk it up. Double over, fall down and kick your feet in the air. The Dallas Mavericks are already heavy losers and the running one-liner of the National Basketball Association. Very funny.

So, go ahead and laugh. While you can. Because in a very short period of time, the Mavericks just may turn their situation comedy into serious drama.

A year ago, in the team's charter NBA season, Dallas finished 15-67. This year, the Mavericks.

But now comes the interesting part of the plot.

The second-year franchise had two No. 1 draft choices last spring, and with them, it brought in forward Mark Aguirre from DePaul and guard Rolando Blackman from Kansas State. They also drafted forwards Jay Vincent from Michigan State and Elston Turner from Mississippi in the second round. Not bad for starters.

Now for the main course. Next year, the Mavericks have one No. 1 pick. In 1983, they have two. In 1984 they have two. In 1985 they have three. That gives them 10 — that's right, 10 — No. 1 draft choices in a five-year span.

These are the rocks on which solid frenchises are built. And the Dallas fans and the club seem patient enough to wait.

"Our goals are not numerical," said Rick Sund, the Mavericks' director of player personnel. "What we want to do is play hard and give our rookies a lot of playing time. Our rookies will put in more minutes than any other rookies in the league.

"Hey, we're going to take our lumps, we know that. The key is to learn from them and not just to take them."

The Dallas people seem prepared to take them right along with the club. A splendid new facility, Reunion Arena, has been built to house the franchise and the fans are showing up. The Mavs are averaging more than 9,000 per game.

"I don't know if there's a right or wrong philosophy for a young franchise, but once you establish that philosophy, you have to maintain it and not deviate from it," Sund said. "All the people have to see is improvement, and I think we have improved.

"Last year, we didn't try to sell wins. We sold the league. 'Hey, come and see Magic Johnson, Dr. J. and Kareem.' Last year, the fans knew we didn't have a shot. Now they know that if Aguirre ms hot and we're running on all cylinders, we can win games."

As for Aguirre, his name brings up an interesting point, one that has brought about considerable discussion around the NBA. Did Dallas, with the No. 1 pick, do the right thing in drafting Aguirre over Isiah Thomas, the little swizzle stick who has stirred up so much enthusiasm in Detroit?

Aguirre hasn't exactly been a flop. Because he is averaging 22.1 points a game, eighth best in the league, Sund and other Mavericks will defend their choice. And do so emphatically.

"A lot of people are comparing Dallas with Detroit, and that's not fair," Sund said. "Detroit is a good example of where we'd like to be two years from now. They have Terry Tyler, John Long, Phil Hubbard and Kent Benson, players with a lot of NBA experience to build around. We didn't have that.

"I'd like to think three years from now, when Aguirre, Blackman and Vincent have some experience and we have more than just one player, we will have a chance for the catalyst.

"It was a decision we had to make. Mark or Isiah? Isiah is the perfect catalyst for Detroit. He's perfect for their system. At this point, we wanted a scoring machine that all great teams have."

Rutgers stuns No. 8 Bruins of UCLA

By The Associated Press

Down through the years, UCLA's basketball team owed most of its success to John Wooden.

Thursday night, the Bruins could partly blame him for a defeat.

The newly-instituted alternate-possession rule in college basketball this season, long advocated by the one-time UCLA coach, helped send the eighth-ranked Bruins down to a 57-54 defeat by Rutgers.

"John Wooden helped us win tonight because he advocated the rule change," said Rutgers Coach Tom Young after the upset at the Meadowlands Arena in East Rutherford, N.J. "I hate it myself, but I loved it tonight."

Here's what happened:

UCLA's Michael Holton had hit two free throws with 15 seconds left to cut the Rutgers lead to 55-54. Rutgers then inbounded under the UCLA basket with six seconds to play. Mike Sanders stole the pass and the Bruins worked the ball around to Holton, who threw up an errant 12-foot shot.

UCLA'S MIKE Sanders and Rutgers' Chris Nieberlein tied up under the basket and under the old rule, a jump ball would have been called. But Rutgers got possession under the revised rule that teams alternate inbounding instead of throwing the ball up after a tieup. The Scarlet Knights' Brian Ellerbee then dribbled the length of the court and put in a layup for the final margin.

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 1 North Carolina turned back Tulsa 78-70; 13th-ranked Arkansas walloped San Diego State 85-68 and 18th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas beat Arizona 69-49.

Down 33-21, Rutgers opened the second half by outscoring UCLA 16-2. Sanders, who finished with 18 points, scored six of the Bruins' next eight points to help UCLA regain the lead at 42-41.

With 1:28 remaining, Rich Brunson tied the game for Rutgers with a field goal and Kevin Black followed with a layup at 1:09 to provide the Scarlet Knights with a 54-52 lead. Ellerbee then hit one of two free throws before Holton came back with his free throws in the final, frantic seconds.

"They have to realize that talent alone won't win ballgames," said UCLA Coach Larry Farmer. "Execution wins ballgames and we didn't have one sustained drive in the second half. Rutgers got themselves up to play us, especially in the second half. That's what I've got to make this team understand, that it doesn't matter who we're playing, that they're going to be ready for us."

FRESHMAN Michael Jordan scored 22 points to lead North Carolina's conquest of Tulsa. Jordan scored North Carolina's first six points and finished with 10 in the first half. Along with James Worthy, he led the Tar Heels out of two first-period droughts to give them a comfortable halftime cushion, 34-22. North Carolina later broke away from Tulsa in the second half and held a 24-point lead, 60-36, at one time. The fat cushion was enough to withstand a late Tulsa rally.

"I just had the open shots," Jordan said. "James (Worthy), Matt (Doherty) and Sam (Perkins) gave me the passes."

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith called the victory a "learning experience" but was disappointed with his team's ballhandling, which almost proved costly.

"We're better ballhandlers than we showed," said Smith. "Of course, you must give Tulsa's defense some credit for that."

The usually sure-handed Tar Heels had 24 turnovers.

SCOTT HASTINGS scored 25 points and Arkansas played a near-flawless first half en route to a relatively easy victory over San Diego State. Hastings had 11 points in the first half and finished with 10 of 15 from the field and five of six from the foul line. But it was the Razorbacks' quick defense that led to a 34-15 halftime advantage over the Aztecs, who had averaged 100 points in winning their first two games of the season.

Nevada-Las Vegas raced past Arizona as forward Larry Anderson scored 16 points. The Rebels, who led 38-33 at halftime, saw their lead dwindle to one point in the opening minutes of the second half. But sophomore guard Jeff Collins, Arizona's leading scorer with 16 points, went to the bench with his fourth foul and Las Vegas immediately ran off seven straight points. Arizona never got any closer.

In other action, Tom Haywood's 23 points paced Weber State to a 78-29 decision over Wisconsin-Superior; Swan Smith had a game-high 20 as West Texas State drubbed Pan American 104-76; Ed Perry's 18-foot jumper with three seconds left in overtime led Middle Tennessee over South Alabama 71-69; Doug Selvig scored 15 points and handed out seven assists as Montana stopped Utah State 61-46, and Jose Slaughter scored 18 points and collected eight rebounds to pace Portland over Montana State 75-58.

Also, LaSalle Thompson scored a game-high 29 points to lead Texas past Colorado 76-64; Kevin Greany's 27 points powered Holy Cross over Navy 78-66; a 20-point performance by Devi Parks led Drake to an 89-65 decision over Chicago State; Claude Riley's 19 points and a pressing Texas A&M defense triggered the Aggies past Sam Houston State 81-53; Boston University tripped Massachusetts 91-65 behind Jay Twyman's 21 points and Ricky Pierce scored 21 as Rice crushed Southwest Texas State 79-53.

Is UCLA in trouble?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — UCLA Coach Larry Farmer says he hasn't been informed of any NCAA decision to put his team on probation for two years, and the school's athletic director says reports of that action are not entirely true.

The NCAA investigation into alleged rules violations is believed to have gone on for about a year and covered the team's activities beginning in 1974. Reports of the findings and the penalty surfaced in the Los Angeles Times on Thursday.

Fischer, in New Jersey for UCLA's 57-54 loss to Rutgers, said there is "some truth to it, some untruths" to the report that the school has been placed on probation.

Pac-10 honors Cougars' Walden as top coach

Washington State's Jim Walden was named Pac-10 Coach of the Year after leading the Cougars to their best record and first bowl in 51 years. State, 8-2-1, plays BYU in the Holiday Bowl Dec. 18...

Clemson's Danny Ford, 33, was named ACC Coach of the Year after his Tigrs finished 11-0 to win the conference title. Ford took over in December 1978 after Coach Charley Pell resigned to take over at Florida and in his first game as head coach guided Clemson to a 17-15 Gator Bowl win over Ohio State. "I was scared to death holding press conferences then and really didn't know what to do," he said...

Steve Scott, one of the nation's outstanding distance runners, used his talents to play what is being called the fastest round of golf in history, playing the the 6,025-yard, par-71 Santa Barbara, California's H.G. Miller Golf Course in 29 minutes, 33.05 seconds. The old record was 29-49.90 at Santa Barbara's Municipal course last year...

Los Angeles' Rams activated rookie quarterback Jeff Kemp and placed rookie tight end Ron Battle on the injured-reserve list. Kemp, from Dartmouth, was placed on the injured reserve list in October because of a back injury. Battle underwent surgery on Tuesday to repair torn ligaments in his left thumb...

San Diego running back Chuck Muncie, only five TDs shy of O.J. Simpson's single season TD total, is trying to make amends for his fumble-filled 1980 season. "I told people the guy they saw last year wasn't the real Chuck Muncie," said Muncie, who scored a career-high four touchdowns in Sunday's 34-17 victory over Denver.

The nightmare of 1980 is dead and being buried as Muncie closes in on several all-time NFL records. Already with 18 touchdowns, all by rushing, in 13 games, his next TD will tie the league mark for TDs rushing in one season. Green Bay's Jim Taylor set the record of 19 in 1962 and Houston's Earl Campbell tied it last year. Simpson holds the NFL record for total touchdowns in a season, scoring 23 in 1975 with the Buffalo, with 16 by rushing and seven as a pass receiver...

Dick Kupec, offensive coordinatory, Guy Ingles, running back coach, and Dave Buckey, receiver-quarterback coach, resigned at NC State after the Wolfpack finished 4-7 during an unproductive experimental season with the I formation...

A funeral Mass will be said Saturday for Tony Piet, 74, a former Chicago White Sox second baseman who ended his major league career in 1938 and became a South Side auto dealer. He died Tuesday...

Quarterback Mike Machurek of Idaho State and defensive tackle Randy Trautman of Boise State were named MVPs in the Big Sky conference while Boise State freshman quarterback Gerald DesPres and Weber State quarterback Milt Myers, a junior college transfer, tied for newcomer of the year honors...

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, December 5, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Today is the birthday of U.S. Senate kingpin Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, producer Otto Preminger and Oakland comeback quarterback Jim Plunkett. In the months ahead, tension abates when you resolve a financial problem. Creative thinking helps you put together some very promising business deals. Count on romance to take you in an interesting new direction. You are susceptible to fads and may be tempted to try an unusual diet. Be sure to check it out with your doctor first. Ambitious and impatient, you need to curb your restlessness in order to reach your goals. Concentrate on combining style with comfort.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A good day for family activities. You are able to reach an understanding with someone special. Something you have sought for a long time now moves within your grasp.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A very happy day for those who are married or engaged. Be on the lookout for a chance to do something for loved one. Take a journey for a change of scenery.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Plan ahead for the weekend so that you will not disappoint those who are counting on you. Home clean-ups may be part of the picture. Mate will be in an understanding mood.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can make up a lot of the ground you recently lost in your relationships with loved ones. Be more affectionate and understanding with family members.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Entertaining need not be expensive if you plan carefully. You will keep expenses down and have the most fun if you party at home. Mate will be cooperative.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Loved ones will be offended if you ignore their wishes. Travel is best postponed. Someone who has proved elusive in the past is now available and interested in romance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Many of you should learn to listen to the ideas put forward by youngsters. What they have to say can increase family harmony. Curb personal spending in spite of the holidays.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Family activities are encouraged. Young people have fun and learn at the same time if you include them in your holiday preparations. It is not too early to start baking cookies, fruitcakes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The ideas you develop in your spare time could prove to be money-makers in the future. You begin to move ahead. Get together with friends. Do not delay Christmas shopping.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A good day for baking Christmas goodies. The more serious side of your nature comes to the fore. Traditions become more important as the holidays near. Conform to family customs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You deserve a break and are likely to get one this weekend. Push ahead on a family project with confidence and vigor. Do not take any financial risks.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Distant affairs require your close attention. Money and family could be involved. Let others do the talking while you listen and learn. Social events will bring you great pleasure.

Opening lead: King of ♡.

Although they lost to the United States in the finals of the World Team Championship in Port Chester, N.Y., the Pakistan team impressed observers with their skillful play of the cards. Here's an example.

Both West and North were surprisingly conservative at their first turns—the Far Eastern players showed throughout the championships that they had come to bid, not to pass. North wasn't sure whose hand it was, so he allowed himself to be "pushed" into four spades. We are not surprised that East chose to double.

Four spades doubled was a popular contract, as was the opening heart lead. Those declarers who won the ace of hearts, ruffed a heart and then led a diamond to the king and ace received a nasty surprise. East shifted to ace, king and another trump, and declarer usually ended up down two.

Masood, the Pakistan declarer, found a more elegant line. He won the ace of hearts and immediately led a low diamond. When the jack won, declarer switched to a trump. Here, too, East played three rounds of trumps, and West thought that he had discarding problems. He let go two clubs, but to hold onto his diamonds he sluffed a heart on the third trump.

Declarer read the hand perfectly. He won the third trump in his hand and led a diamond. He called for the seven from dummy, forcing the ace! The rest was simply a mop-up operation.

East returned the queen of clubs, ruffed on the table. There followed a heart ruff, establishing dummy's ten of hearts. Thus declarer made the last three tricks with the king-queen of diamonds and ten of hearts to land his contract.

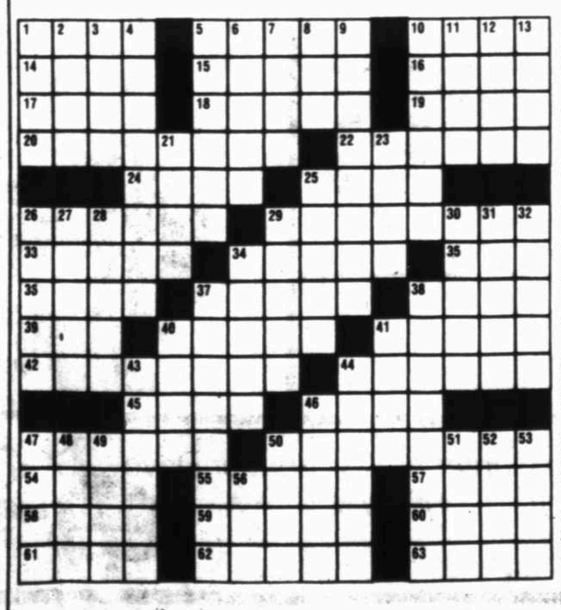

This is only the second time that Pakistan has appeared in top-level international competition. If they have more players like Masood at home, they will be looked on with respect in future world championships.

Allen's statistics impressive, but...

TED BATTLES

BATTLE SCENE

Marcus Allen probably will win the Heisman Trophy. His statistics for the season can't be ignored. It's just that they would be more impressive if they had been compiled at Northwestern, SMU, Florida State, BYU, Jackson State, Clemson or South Carolina or the University of Chicago.

You never know for sure with a Southern California tailback. They have that Heisman Trophy battle-seasoned, know-all-the-angles word machine promoting them even if they just make the starting lineup. And they benefit from one of the nation's media capitals. A back is an automatic glamor boy for just playing at USC. But most of all, there's that big offensive line.

ANYBODY could look great running behind that Himalaya sized front, even Bo Derek, although come to think of it, she really doesn't need an SC line. She'd get 10 every time all on her own.

The point is that Trojan tailbacks have a habit of becoming journeymen plodders in the pros or fading into the woodwork along the sidelines. You can never be sure how much is for real and how much is tinsel. Of course, O.J. was tinsel, but that was just window dressing for a lot of talent.

Earlier this season, Allen ran something like 24 yards up the gut for a touchdown against Oklahoma. The tv people were doing cartwheels. "Did you see that. Right up the middle. Now that's a tough place to run."

He also went up the middle untouched except for a couple of Sooner linemen who waved ineffectual arms at him from a horizontal vantage points.

ALLEN MAY go on to become the next Walter Payton, Gale Sayers or, then again, he may be the next Anthony Davis. We'll have to wait and see.

Oddly enough, even though he didn't make it as a pro, we still think Davis should have won the Heisman.

I think the tailback would be the last player I would draft from a USC team. Let me at those linemen or the fullback. Now, that's where it's at.

Of course, it's unfair to base a Heisman Trophy choice on the guy's potential as a pro. That should be the last consideration. But then again it's unfair to award it every year to a guy because of the USC line.

The USC tailback goes hunting with a howitzer. The poor guy at Northwestern is turned loose with a BB gun and no BBs.

YOU KNOW the USC tailback is an good athlete. That's all the Trojans recruit, at any position, and sometimes they don't even have to recruit 'em.

He'll have speed and ability, but you won't know until he's a pro just how good his moves are or whether he can run in traffic like an Earl Campbell.

So, they'll give the Heisman to Marcus Allen, but we won't know until next year whether it maybe should have gone to someone like maybe Joe Morris of Syracuse or Joe Crutcher of Iowa State.

Horns stage comeback against Colorado, 41-29

By The Associated Press

All week long, Texas Longhorns basketball coach Abe Lemons had been complaining about his team's lack of enthusiasm during practices.

And when the 'Horns were flat, flat, flat during the first half of Thursday night's game with Colorado, trailing 41-29 as they trudged to the locker room at intermission, Lemons was about ready to go home for the evening.

"That's one I thought was gone," he said later. "At the half I wouldn't have given you two cents for our chances. I didn't think we had the enthusiasm to bring it back."

Texas came out gunning in the second half, shut out the stunned Buffaloes for the first seven minutes of the second period and won going away, 76-64. But Lemons does not know where the team found the inspiration for the turnaround, and says they did it without his help.

"I didn't tell them anything at the half," the veteran coach said, as his team ran its non-conference record to 2-0. "Oh, (assistant Barry) Dowd got on them a little but there wasn't anything I could do. I've been coaching 32 years and I don't know how to get them excited.

"There are some things they just have to do on their own."

Center LaSalle Thompson scored 20 points in that aroused second-half effort, for a total of 29, as the Longhorns scored the first 14 points following the half and never again trailed the Buffaloes.

In other Southwest Conference basketball games Thursday, 13th-ranked Arkansas rode the 25 points of center Scott Hastings to an 85-68 win over San Diego State; Ricky Pierce gunned in 21 points of Ricky Pierce to, an easy 79-53 win over Southwest Texas State and Texas A&M forced 29 turnovers, most of them steals by guards Tyren Naulls and Reggie Roberts, in blitzing Sam Houston State 81-53.

"We're trying to use our guards to put good pressure on the ball," said A&M coach Shelby Metcalf. "Naulls gives us a lot of stability at guard and he's still learning our system."

Wendy Turnbull becomes last Aussie

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Wendy Turnbull, the lone Aussie remaining in the $200,000 Australian Women's Open, will need a major upset over top-seeded American Chris Evert Lloyd Saturday if she is carry her country's banner to the final round.

Turnbull scraped through her quarterfinal match today with a 6-3, 7-6 victory over American Andrea Jaeger. But she faces an uphill battle with Lloyd, against whom she has a 1-14 record dating back to 1976.

In the other semi-final, third-seeded Martina Navratilova plays Pam Shriver in a matchup of Americans.

To the disappointment of the sellout crowd, Navratilova mastered Australian favorite Evonne Goolagong Cawley in straight sets today, winning 6-4, 6-1.

Shriver overcame American Tracy Austin in a more difficult encounter, squeezing out a 7-5, 7-6 victory.

Both Turnbull and Lloyd said they were happy to win in view of what they called disappointing performances.

"I'm glad that's over, I'm glad that the ball (a final return by Jaeger) hit the net and fell back on her side," Turnbull said.

Turnbull faced up to her quarterfinal encounter with bandages on her thigh and ankle as a precaution following a fall earlier in the week.

Jaeger forced the Aussie to four match points before allowing her to clinch a spot in the semi-finals.

Fiesta has more luster

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The winner of the Fiesta Bowl may be in contention for the national collegiate football championship should top-ranked Clemson lose to No. 4 Nebraska in the Orange Bowl, says Southern California Coach John Robinson.

In a telephone interview here with members of the Phoenix Press Association, Robinson said the matchup between his eighth-ranked Trojans and the No. 7-rated Penn State "is developing into one of the key New Year's Day games."

"The winner of our game should be considered," Robinson said Thursday. "If Nebraska (9-2) does beat Clemson (11-0), a lot of teams would have one loss or more and it will be a mad scramble for the title. And if the winner is considered on the basis of toughest schedules, Penn State has to be right up there with us."

YMCA cagers to hit floor

The Midland YMCA is taking registrations for its basketball programs now through December 30.

Teams are formed by neighborhood school districts and on a first come, first serve basis.

There will be three leagues formed: one is the Pee Wee Basketball program for boys and girls in first thru third grades; one for girls baseketball in the third thru sixth grades and Peanut Basketball for boys in the fourth thru sixth grades.

You don't have to be a superstar in YMCA Basketball. Everyone plays in every game and there are no tryouts or cuts — just a league where any youngster can play for the fun of it.

There is a program fee of $10 for YMCA members and $20 for limited members which must be paid upon registration.

To registar for basketball or for more information come by or call Alamo YMCA, 901 N. Midland Drive (694-2528), Central YMCA, 800 Big Spring (682-2551), the Park Center YMCA, 1509 Orchard Lane (682-0533), or the Washington YMCA, 1600 E. Wall (683-6294.

A MOVE TO IMPROVE HOME SECURITY

Today the protection of life and property is a serious national problem.

Cities have become more crowded, population more transient, crime more rampant. Our homes are less secure.

Police are confronted with more burglaries and robberies than they can handle. More and more people are arming themselves to protect their homes.

To supplement these official programs, this newspaper series is presenting specific tips on how you can improve your home security.

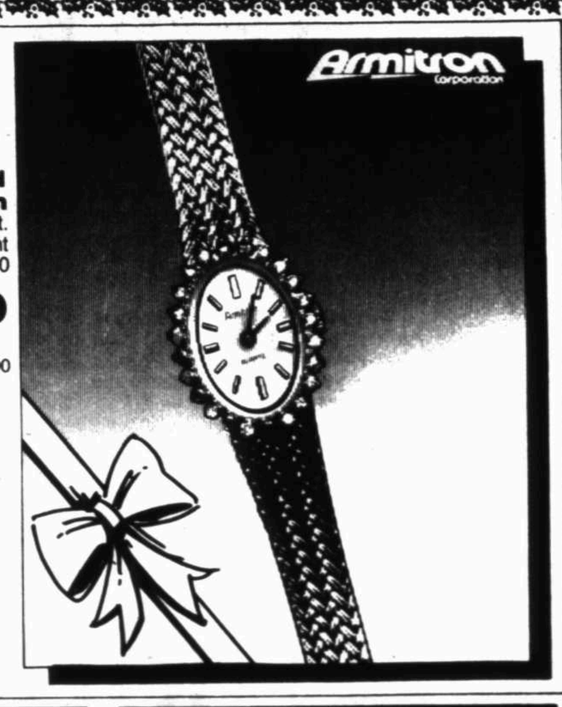

We hope this series will help homeowners restore their homes to their rightful role as havens of safety for families and possessions.

Mobil enlists Amerada Hess in battle

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Mobil Corp. apparently believes it has hit upon a way to get around antitrust laws in its hot pursuit of Marathon Oil Co. — it has enlisted a smaller oil company to join its battle.

Mobil disclosed Thursday it planned to make a new offer for Marathon stock, this time with a partner. Mobil would not identify the company, but the New York Times, quoting unidentified industry sources, reported today that it was Amerada Hess Corp., which owns the Hess chain of filling stations.

An antitrust decision against Mobil this week said a purchase of Marathon would damage competition at the gasoline pump in the Midwest. Mobil would not disclose its new strategy, but apparently Mobil would take Marathon's vast U.S. oilfields and Hess would get the refining and filling-station operations.

Hess operates mainly in the East, so a Mobil-Hess split of Marathon apparently would not amount to restraint of trade in the Midwest, analysts said.

Mobil officials declined comment and Leon Hess, president of Amerada Hess, did not respond to telephone calls, the Times said.

When word of a renewed Mobil fight hit Wall Street, Marathon stock soared in anticipation of another round of bidding for the 17th-largest U.S. oil company. The stock closed at $102.50 a share, up $3.50.

Marathon fears being consumed by Mobil, the nation's second-largest corporation, and is fighting the takeover, courting instead an offer from U.S. Steel Corp. Marathon executives apparently believe U.S. Steel would use a takeover as an investment and leave alone Marathon's operations, which are based in Findlay, Ohio.

It was Marathon that won an antitrust fight against Mobil in U.S. District Court in Cleveland. Shortly after Mobil disclosed its new plan, however, it learned that the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati had dealt it a serious blow, denying for now its request for a temporary stay of the Cleveland order.

However, the federal court in Columbus, Ohio has done to U.S. Steel what Marathon did to Mobil: U.S. Steel is prevented from buying more shares than it has already contracted for.

Marathon stockholders who have tendered shares to Mobil have until midnight tonight to switch their shares to U.S. Steel to ensure they receive the $125-a-share cash portion of U.S. Steel's $6.3 billion offer.

TMI owners sue for $4 billion from government

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Owners of the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant have gone to court to get the $4 billion they have been demanding from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, which they blame for the plant's March 1979 accident.

The plant owners said in the federal lawsuit that the NRC failed to inform them of the causes of a similar accident in Ohio in 1977, five months before TMI was granted an operating license by the NRC.

The owners said if they had known about the causes of the Ohio accident, they would have been able to prevent the TMI accident.

The suit said the NRC was negligent when it granted the plant an operating license on Feb. 8, 1978 because TMI used the same type of safety valve that had failed the previous September during an accident at Toledo Edison Co.'s Davis-Besse plant.

The Ohio plant was operating at 10 percent of its capacity and plant operators were able to bring the reactor under control without damage, according to the suit, filed Thursday in U.S. District Court.

The Unit 2 reactor at Three Mile Island was operating near its maximum capacity when it began losing its coolant. The loss could not be controlled until the reactor core had been damaged, the suit said.

"The NRC should have known of the defects and hazardous conditions (and) negligently or wrongfully failed to warn of this imminent peril," said General Public Utilities Corp. and its three electric subsidiaries in the suit.

TMI and the Ohio plant both were built by the Babcock & Wilcox Co.

"It was not until after the accident at TMI that the NRC directed all licensees of B&W plants that procedures and instructions be modified," the suit said.

The utility, based in Parsippany, N.J., had submitted a claim for $4 billion in damages to the NRC in December 1980, but it was rejected last June, prompting the lawsuit.

Clare Miles, an NRC spokesman in Washington, said the NRC was standing by its finding that the GPU claim was unfounded.

In dismissing the claim, the commissioners stated the allegations by the plant owners were "at odds" with the law.

They wrote the regulated industry has the "primary responsibility for the proper construction and safe operation of licensed nuclear facilities."

The nuclear plant, located on an island in the Susquehanna River south of Harrisburg, has been shut down since the accident.

The suit contends the plant owners suffered the damages because they have had to purchase power from other utilities to supply customers, spend hundreds of millions of dollars to clean up the contaminated reactor and repair and replace damaged equipment.

The cleanup of Unit 2 is expected to take at least five years and cost $1 billion, while Unit 1, which was not in operation when the accident occurred, is expected to resume service early next year.

TMI is owned by the Metropolitan Edison Co., which also is responsible for operating it, the Jersey Central Power & Light Co., and the Pennsylvania Electric Co.

In September, U.S. District Judge Sylvia Rambo approved a $25 million settlement for economic and health testing costs resulting from the accident.

The class action lawsuit, naming General Public Utilities Corp., its subsidiaries and Babcock & Wilcox Co., was filed by individuals and businesses near the plant.

Oil discovery finaled, three wildcat tests planned

An oil discovery has been finaled in Sterling County, along with three wildcats, including a re-entry project, scheduled in Hockley, Yoakum and Dawson by West Texas oil operators.

STERLING DISCOVERY

The well flowed 80 barrels of 43 gravity oil plus 130 barrels of water through a 18/64 inch choke in 24 hours.

Production was gained through perforations between 7,510 and 8,186 feet, which had been acidized with three barrels. Gas to oil ratio was 2,500 to 1.

The well was drilled to 8,295 feet, with 4 1/2 inch casing set at that depth, and plugged back to 8,212 feet.

HOCKLEY WILDCAT

The No. 1-A Joeie Moore will be drilled by Leeper Oil Exploration and Production Inc., Midland, 14 miles south of Levelland.

The scheduled 8,200-foot wildcat is located 2,224 feet from the south, and 1,270 feet from the east line of labor 1, league 23, McCulloch CSL survey.

It is approximately 2,000 feet northwest of J.G. Brown's No. 1 Keese, a 10,500-foot test, dry and abandoned Aug. 19, 1962.

YOAKUM VENTURE

Petro Lewis Corp., Levelland, has scheduled a 9,300-foot wildcat, 13 miles northwest of Denver City.

Designated the No. 2A Bowen et al, the location is 660 feet from the south, and east line of section 663, block D, J.H. Gibon survey.

The project is 3/4 mile east of production in the Janice (Wolfcamp) field, which not currently produced.

DAWSON RE-ENTRY

Laguna Petroleum Corp., Midland, will re-enter to 7,800 feet the No. 1 H.G. Graham, et al, seven miles south of Lamesa.

The project, originally drilled by D.B. Baxter as the No. 1 Graham, is located 660 feet from the north, and 1,650 feet from the west line of section 6, block 35, T-4-N, T&P survey.

Two remain in serious condition after well blowout

By DAVID C. SODAMANN
Oil Editor

Two men burned early Wednesday in a fire at a Runnels County drillsite remain in the intensive care unit of Hendricks Medical Center, Abilene, where they are listed in serious but guarded condition. The fire followed a blowout, which occured when the rotary bit penatrated an oil and gas bearing formation only 87 feet below the surface.

The well being drilled when the accident occured was Desana Corp. wildcat No. 2 Baker. It's located two miles south, and one mile east of Winters, and spots 1,680 feet from the south line, and 900 feet from the west line of section 332, block 64, H&TC survey. The property is reportedly known as the "old Presley land."

The injured men were employees of Hack Drilling Co. Inc, Abilene. Hack vice president F.H. Lloyd said Tom Parks, 66, toolpusher on Hack's Rig 1, suffered second degree burns over 45 percent of his body. Delbert Dennison, 43, driller on Rig 1, had second degree burns over approximately 25 percent of his body.

Both men were being cared for in the intesive care unit Thursday evening, Lloyd said. However, Dennison may be moved to a private room soon. LLoyd reported that Mrs. Parks had told him her husband was improving, but would probably remain in intensive care for sometime to come.

An effort was being made this morning to clear the damaged substructure, draw works and derrick from the drillsite. The fire had softened the iron and the and the 97-foot Lee C. Moore jackknife derrick had fallen.

Lloyd said the equipment would be moved to the Hack yard in Abilene, where damage could be evaluated and salvage and repair operations completed. Lloyd estimated his company's losses as being in the $350,000 to $400,000 range.

What caused the fire?

It's totally speculation on everyone's part," Lloyd said.

The fire started around 2:30 a.m. Wednesday when the bit reached the 87-foot point. It burned into the morning Thursday, when it was extinguished by a Red Adair crew.

Lloyd said when the blowout occured sand, gravel, water and gas blew from the well bore. "At times that flame was blowing as high as the double board," Lloyd said, but at other times it was burning only 10 feet high. "I would assume there was not a great deal of pressure there," Lloyd concluded.

Don McClurg, Midland, chief geologist for Desana Corp., said Thursday afternoon that the well was being drilled in an old field. Four abandoned wells are near the drillsite. "It is possible that a shallow zone was charged with leaks from the old wells," McClurg said.

McClurg said it appeared there was some oil blowing out along with the gas as smoke from the flame as black.

Lloyd was of the same opinion. "It used to be when a well was dry," Lloyd said, "they more than likely filled it up with drilling mud and put some cement on to of the hole, then put a cap on it."

Lloyd speculated that oil and gas in a well plugged the old fashioned way could reach the surface and charge a shallow zone. Some have suggested, Lloyd said, that water flooding in the area may have forced oil and gas in the abaoned wells to the surface, where a leak in old surface pipe may have permitted the petroleum to fill a shallow zone.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A legislative hearing into thefts of crude and equipment in the Texas oil patch has been rescheduled for Jan. 13.

Rep. Tommy Adkisson, D-San Antonio, will chair the hearing by the Oil Field Theft Subcommittee of the House Intergovernmental Affairs Committee at the Institute of Texan Cultures.

The hearing originally had been scheduled for Thursday, but was postponed by Adkisson to give witnesses a chance to prepare.

The legislator said testimony was being sought to document losses of oil and equipment and their effect on the general public.

Reagan commutes Mandel's prison sentence

Marvin Mandel

By CHRISTOPHER SULLIVAN
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — President Reagan ordered the prison doors opened for Marvin Mandel today, 19 months after the former Maryland governor began serving a three-year sentence for taking bribes.

The 62-year-old Democrat wept when lawyer Arnold Weiner called Thursday to say the president had commuted the sentence three months before his release date, said Mandel's wife, Jeanne.

"The feeling to know that finally I'm going home and that I'm going to be back with Jeanne and the family is a wonderful feeling," Mandel said in a telephone interview from Eglin Air Force Base prison near Pensacola, Fla.

"I never lost hope, I never gave up, and we had continued to fight and fight."

The Justice Department and lawyers for Mandel said the former governor will be placed in pre-release center until Dec. 20, when he will be released. He will be free to leave the center during the day, but will have to spend the nights in custody.

Mandel, found guilty of accepting $350,000 worth of cash and gifts in a scheme to fix racing dates for a Maryland race track, expressed gratitude to all who helped him win release.

"In spite of all that has happened, I have been fortunate to have served as governor and to have had the people of Maryland honor me."

"I think the man has suffered enough and I think it's time for him to be released," said Washington lawyer Ronald S. Liebman, who was one of three prosecutors at Mandel's trial.

Bruce Bereano, one of Mandel's lawyers, said a letter delivered by Laxalt to the White House in October helped persuade Reagan that there was no reason to keep Mandel in prison.

"Oh God, what a happy night," she said. "I have always had a great deal of respect for Ronald Reagan. Now I will never forget him."

The Justice Department said Reagan decided on clemency for Mandel because he already has served 19 months, longer than any of his co-defendants.

Along with five other people, Mandel was convicted of mail fraud and racketeering charges in the scheme to obtain favorable racing dates for the now-defunct Marlboro Race Course. State law said only one thoroughbred track may be open at a time, and there is keen competition for spring and summer dates.

Reagan also commuted the sentence of W. Dale Hess, the only other defendant from the case still in custody. Hess will be released on Dec. 20 from a halfway house where he had been transferred from a federal prison in Alabama. But Reagan stipulated Thursday that Hess must pay the rest of a $40,000 fine imposed when he was sentenced.

The Justice Department had recommended to Reagan earlier this week that Mandel be transferred in January and released shortly thereafter, according to government sources in Washington.

Mother fears 3-week-old son has been sold

DALLAS (AP) — A woman who kidnapped a 3-week-old boy after promising the child's mother she would get gifts for the infant may have sold the baby, police say.

Authorities said Thursday that Linda Sample gave her son, Sarae O'Dale Sample, to a woman who said she would take him to a Salvation Army gift exchange program. The woman took the baby Monday and has not returned, police said.

The 32-year-old mother told police she met the kidnapper in October, a month before her child was born. They exchanged telephone numbers and talked about being pregnant, police said.

"It could be one of two things," said Dallas police investigator Jim Shivers. "She got conned into giving her baby to a lady who possibly is in the baby-selling business...the other possibility is a frustrated mother situation. A woman has several miscarriages. She decides she wants a baby and goes and gets one."

"She doesn't even know the woman's name," said Sgt. Jerry Huffman. "That's what is so bad about it. We just don't have much to go on."

Ms. Sample says she fears with woman may have planned the kidnapping in advance in order to sell the child.

"I'm afraid she wants to sell it or keep it for herself," Ms. Sample said Thursday. "If she plans to sell the baby then she had plenty of time to make preparations. She kept in contact with me. She really wanted my baby."

Ms. Sample said she met the woman in the parking lot of a grocery store. She said the woman told her about a gift exchange program for children.

"The woman said she was having a baby herself in March," Ms. Sample said. "She sounded so nice, and she said she could help me get gifts for my baby."

The Dallas mother said she threw the other woman's phone number away and soon forgot about the conversation until the woman called her Sunday to say the gifts were still available.

Ms. Sample said the woman came by her home about 9 a.m. Monday with diapers and formula. She was carrying a shopping bag containing a baby blanket and a lime-colored infant suit, police said.

The woman told the child's mother she could not come along because there would not be enough room in the car once other children had been picked up, authorities said.

"She said she could get gifts for my other baby, Sasheka, and for my sister Cynthia's three children," the distraught mother said. "She said she would come back in 30 minutes to work in the other kids."

Police said they contacted the Salvation Army and were told the organization does not operate the kind of gift exchange program the kidnapper described to Ms. Sample.

The suspect was described as about 31 years old, 5-foot-1 and 170 pounds, police said. She was wearing a green maternity smock and a black curly wig when she took the infant Monday, officials said.

MC president: Community colleges flexible

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A community college has one important advantage over a four-year university — the ability to be flexible and responsive to the needs of the community it serves.

According to Dr. Jess H. Parrish, Midland College president, unlike the four-year institution, a community college such as MC is not inflicted with what he calls, "hardening of the categories."

Speaking on "What Does Midland College do for an Encore," during the Midland Rotary Club's meeting at the Midland Hilton Thursday, Parrish said, "An encore is just a repeat of the last half — and we don't intend to repeat anything.

"A community college has to be constantly changing," he continued. "We are oriented toward this community — the city of Midland, Midland County and the surrounding area."

PARRISH said there were four main "missions" that should be accomplished in the role of a community college.

"The traditional role is that of a first class academic program for two years," Parrish explained, "where the students receive individual training and teaching so that they can then move on (transfer to a higher educational institution in order to receive their diplomas) with a minimum of loss of credits."

The occupational and technological programs, such as MC's allied health, nursing school, real estate and petroleum engineering technological programs, play a major role in the purpose of a community college. According to Parrish, these types of programs are available in order "to put persons into a job market as producing, tax-paying citizens within two years."

Out of the 3,000 students presently enrolled at Midland College, Parrish said approximately 1,000 are taking continuing education classes with the remaining 2,000 students enrolled full-time.

DUE TO the growth of Midland, Parrish said he expects to see the enrollment of MC double within the next decade. He expects many of these future students to be in the 25-45 age bracket and to enroll in adult education classes.

He said when many people think of continuing education, they think of basket weaving and belly dancing courses.

"But the tax dollars don't go for belly dancing and those types of classes," he explained. "We are the facilitators for those courses."

"There is a lot of talk about 'back to basics,'" Parrish said. "In a community college, we find lots of educationally, socially and economically deprived students that have basic skills missing from their backgrounds."

"We have an open door policy," Parrish said, "but it's not a revolving door."

Midland College will continue emphasizing these goals in the future, "but we will allow for changes that are new and exciting," Parrish said.

One of the changes foreseen by Parrish is in the occupational-technological programs. Due to the high cost of equipment, "the ability of being able to provide constantly new technology on campus is disappearing," he said.

"We hope to see the concept and practice taught on campus, and have the students go out on the jobs."

ACCORDING to Parrish, being taught on site would benefit the students, whether it was at 2 a.m., the change of shifts or whenever.

The relationship between MC, Odessa College and The University of Texas of the Permian Basin also is expected to change, due to a big push by the UTPB administration to become a four-year institution.

"The interface with an upper division college is perfect in theory (for MC and OC)," Parrish said.

"UTPB says it (turning into a four-year university) won't hurt OC or MC," he continued, "but the reasons for doing it all come up to saving UTPB and that's not a good reason.

"In terms of what will happen if UPTB opens the first two years, other than dilute all three institutions — I have no idea."

Parrish also addressed the campus housing issue by saying that the philosophy of a community college is to provide educational opportunities for the community.

"Philosophically, I don't think we need housing," he said. "On the other hand, any college grows and strengthens itself from outside influences."

MIDLAND College offers many scholarships to athletes and area students graduating in the top 5 percent of their classes.

"We can offer them scholarships, but not a place to live," he said.

Housing could be financed with revenue bonds, but Parrish said there is an important question that needs to be answered before any decision to hold a bond election is made.

"Is this a temporary housing crunch (in Midland)?" he asked. "In order to financially afford housing, we would have to have a 96 percent occupancy for the next 25 years."

With the influx of families in Midland with young children, Parrish said, "That at least gives us five or six years of breathing time."

Cemetery offered

KYOTO, Japan (AP) — Taking Japan's lifetime employment system one step further, an industrial ceramics company is offering its workers a chance to stay on the job through eternity.

The Kyoto Ceramic Co. will commemorate its 23rd anniversary next spring by opening an employee cemetery, company spokesman Takayuki Maeda said today in a telephone interview from the northern Japanese city.

4309 CRENSHAW

This beautiful home is one of the most popular Ramcon models. When you see it you'll know why. One of the largest living areas you'll find in a home this size is accented with stained ash paneling and an all-brick, wood-burning fireplace. The master suite is sequestered and has it's own bath and dressing area along with a walk-in closet. Come see the rest for yourself this weekend.

This bust of slain San Francisco Mayor George Moscone was partially unveiled by widow Gina Moscone during the opening of the George Moscone Convention Center on Wednesday. A red cloak hid the lower two-thirds of the statue, a pedastal that incorporated some symbols of Moscone's life, including a gun, bloodstains.

Moscone statue causes rucus

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A bust of slain Mayor George Moscone in the new convention center that bears his name is causing a ruckus because its pedestal shows spattered blood and a Twinkie, a reference to the trial of his killer.

"I think it is unacceptable to us," said Gina Moscone, the mayor's widow. "It's just not the way I want George to be remembered."

The San Francisco Art Commission, which commissioned the work, said it would ask that the pedestal be changed.

But the artist said no.

"This work is not being redone," sculptor Robert Arnesen said Thursday. 'it's a complete artistic statement. ... You can't be shocked by a Twinkie."

Former Supervisor Dan White was convicted of voluntary manslaughter in the November 978 shooting deaths of Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk in City Hall. White's defense of diminished mental capacity came to be known as the "Twinkie defense" because of testimony that White became hooked on junk food during his alleged mental decline.

Mrs. Moscone said she liked the $37,000 bust itself, but the pedestal shows an outline of Moscone's body next to a .38-caliber revolver, blood-like splatters of glaze and a depiction of a Twinkie, the sweet, cream-filled snack.

Other sections of the pedestal refer to Moscone's career in the Legislature and schools he attended.

Mrs. Moscone unveiled the statue Wednesday during the opening ceremonies of the $126.5 million underground Moscone Convention Center, but the pedestal remained covered behind a red shroud. Convention center officials said Mrs. Moscone was shocked by it.

"It's really something we didn't order," said San Francisco Art Commission President Ray Taliaferro. "We'll definitely ask for a modification of the pedestal."

"In working with the artist on the project, we found him to be a very sensitive and sensible man, and we feel certain he'll consider the proposal," Taliaferro said.

The commission scheduled a Monday meeting to decide the pedestal's fate, and Mayor Dianne Feinstein told Taliaferro that Arneson should be asked then to take back the pedestal.

"The memorials to Lincoln, Martin Luther King and the Kennedys don't proclaim their assassin the way George's does," she said.

"I like the whole thing," said Dawn Rutherford, 17, a Peninsula High School student who saw the base. "It's colorful and moving. It's real and tells me something about the man. It's a lot better than those public statues that are only fit for pigeon droppings."

"That so-called artist sure did Moscone an injustice, the poor guy," Wahlstrom said. "I'd sure be rolling in my grave if somebody did that to me after I died."

Rates on long-distance calls to increase

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six months after the biggest telephone rate increase in history, the Bell System is seeking a new rate structure that would raise the cost of most interstate long-distance calls.

The rate request, filed Thursday with the Federal Communications Commission by American Telephone & Telegraph Co., calls for a total annual increase in revenues of $181.4 million — most of it from business customers.

Consumers would be assessed $34.1 million of the total, but the effect on individuals would vary widely. Depending on when and where the calls are placed, consumers actually could reduce their interstate long-distance bills.

AT&T's request, which will not affect consumer rates for local or intrastate long-distance calls, follows implementation of the largest telephone rate increase in history last summer. AT&T was allowed in June to raise regular interstate and private line rates by 16 percent and WATS rates by 10.5 percent.

The phone company's proposal stems from an FCC order that it equalize profit margins for each of its major services: regular interstate calling, business private lines and WATS service.

The FCC has 90 days to either delay, reject or approve the rate changes. AT&T asked permission to implement the new rates March 3.

Under the proposal, companies would pay 1.6 percent more for private long-distance services. Customers with toll-free WATS, or Wide Area Telecommunications Service, would face an across-the-board increase of 4.1 percent.

The changes for regular interstate calls are more complicated, however.

For example, the company wants to impose a flat charge for "operator involvement" in long-distance calls and then add the standard time charge used for direct-dial calls. It also wants to reduce the three-minute minimum billing period for operator-assisted calls to the one-minute billing cycle used for all other calls.

AT&T also wants to reduce from 14 to nine the number of "mileage bands" used to calculate a phone call's cost.

AT&T said that as a result of the changes, the cost of a direct-dial interstate phone call would rise an average of 1.8 percent.

Consumers would be offered a larger evening discount for direct-dial calls between 5 p.m. and 11 p.m. — 40 percent instead of 35 percent — and the cost of credit-card calls would fall.

Interstate phone calls of less than 55 miles in distance, however, would cost 11 percent to 21 percent more because of the change in mileage bands. And the cost of an operator-assisted call, if three minutes or longer, also would rise on average

D.J. Culkin, the AT&T assistant vice president who delivered the proposal to the FCC, said Thursday that the restructuring of regular long-distance rates was being "undertaken to offer increased incentives for effective use of the service by customers."

AT&T spokesman Pic Wagner said the proposed changes would have little effect or would actually reduce the bills of consumers who use the phone network at night and dial their own calls.

—A direct-dial call from Washington to Los Angeles for three minutes during the day now costs $1.58. Under the new proposal, the cost would rise to $1.72. The cost of the same three-minute call during the evening would change by only a penny, from $1.02 to $1.03.

—A daytime phone call from Washington to Chicago would rise from $1.45 to $1.48 for three minutes. But the cost of the same call during the evening would drop from 94 cents to 88 cents.

—A station-to-station phone call placed through an operator from Washington to Los Angeles during the day now costs $2.75 for the first three minutes. The cost of the same call would rise to $3.57. But if the caller can take advantage of the new billing cycle and talks only one minute, the cost would drop to $2.59.

Senate committee stymmied on Clean Air Act

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Facing what could be the legislative equivalent of a Rubik's Cube, a frustrated Senate Environment Committee is trying to figure out what it has done and where it is going on rewriting the Clean Air Act.

After only three working sessions, the committee spent its fourth session Thursday trying to figure out the effect of changes already adopted.

After all, noted Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., "We all have this great desire to appear as if we know what ... we're doing."

The panel's effort Thursday delayed committee consideration of a major amendment, sponsored by Sen. Steven Symms, R-Idaho, to relax auto emission standards for carbon monoxide.

The measure was put off until next week after several opponents said there would be lengthy debate on it.

Authorization for the Clean Air Act expired Sept. 30. Until the law is extended, current standards and deadlines remain in effect.

The re-examination of the earlier sessions was prompted by a question from Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, on whether the committee had voted to require light-duty trucks, such as pickups, to adhere to emission controls equivalent to passenger automobiles. The debate soon led to questions about committee votes on heavy-duty truck emissions.

The questions were prompted by complaints from General Motors Corp. that amendments adopted last week would require pickups to carry the same catalytic converters and electronic equipment now installed on autos.

"I guess I have a problem understanding whether we did or didn't," Murkowski said. "Since it seems to have been the most significant thing that we did at the last meeting, we should reflect on what action we've taken."

But the professional staff advising the committee also was uncertain.

While most felt the committee had adopted light-truck emission standards for carbon monoxide equivalent to a passenger car standard of 7 grams per mile, two of them felt the standard was equivalent to a stricter standard of 3.4 grams per mile.

The issue was important because the committee knew it would soon be considering Symms' proposal to relax the current 3.4 gram standard for autos to 7 grams.

Symms' amendment could make the truck debate premature and result in trucks being subject to tougher standards than cars, Murkowski said.

Sen. Gary Hart, R.-Colo., sponsor of the light-truck amendment, said his intent was to set the standard equivalent to an auto standard of 7 grams per mile. But since trucks use different figures derived from a different base year, no one was quite certain.

Hart said the issue should have been settled with the earlier vote. The industry lost that vote, Hart argued, and was now trying to reopen a closed issue.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., one of those questioning the earlier votes, told Hart he was not trying to delay the panel unnecessarily. But Domenici said he wanted to be sure he acted correctly in voting for the earlier proposals.

He said he wanted to re-examine the votes on both light- and heavy-duty trucks to see if the changes should be changed.

Objectivity of Watt's lieutenants questioned

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — New allegations that Interior Secretary James Watt's leadership team is top-heavy with Western development interests are nothing but "warmed-over hash," the Interior Department says.

A report from Common Cause, the self-styled citizens' lobby, alleges that 14 of the department's top 16 officials either worked for development interests, such as oil and mining, or had some other contact that they had to declare as a possible conflicts of interest when they took their present jobs.

Common Cause said Watt and his top lieutenants reflected an "industry perspective" to a disproportionate degree, giving rise to serious concerns about their objectivity in their new jobs.

The Interior Department said in a statement that the report was "warmed-over hash" of information already known.

"The officials have all been examined and confirmed by the Senate, which had the benefit of the full particulars about their previous activities," the statement said.

The report, titled "Who's Minding the Store," said 11 of the Interior Department's top 16 officials either worked for or had as clients the five major industries regulated by the agency — oil and gas, mining, timber, livestock and utilities.

The Common Cause study said seven of the top-echelon officials had past affiliations with the oil industry, six with the mining industry, three with utility companies, three with the timber industry and two with the livestock industry.

In addition to the potential employment conflicts, Common Cause said 10 of the 16 officials, including Watt, had to promise before taking office to disqualify themselves from participating in certain decisions because of potential conflicts.

And six of the 16 had to divest themselves of between $326,000 and $925,000 in stock holdings in oil, gas and mining companies that have extensive operations on public lands, the study said.

The study said that of the 16 Interior officials required to have Senate confirmation, only two — Fish and Wildlife Service Director Robert Jantzen and U.S. Geological Survey Director Dallas Peck — declared they had no contacts with the five industries that could raise a conflict of interest.

Geneva talks black out in effect

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Negotiators from the United States and the Soviet Union opened a second full bargaining session today in talks aimed at reducing nuclear missiles in Europe.

Chauffeur-driven limousines carrying the U.S. delegation arrived at the Soviet mission shortly before 11 a.m. (5 a.m. EST). U.S. Delegate Paul H. Nitze smiled at reporters gathered at the main gate but refused to answer questions.

The two delegations agreed Monday to a news blackout on progress in the politically sensitive talks, which have been scheduled for Tuesdays and Fridays.

Soviet spokesman Vladimir Evdokuchin said there would be no statement issued after today's meeting. "The blackout remains in force for the moment," he said.

The negotiations are being closely watched in Western Europe, where NATO governments are facing intense domestic pressure to cancel a December 1979 decision to deploy 572 cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Europe starting in 1983.

President Reagan has offered to scrap the deployment plan if the Soviets dismantle their medium range nuclear missiles, particularly the multi-warhead SS20, already in place.

Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev rejected the Reagan offer, known as the "zero option," because it did not include other Western medium-range delivery systems, including those held by France and Britain.

The Soviets have called for a moratorium on deploying or modernizing new nuclear weapons systems during the course of the talks. Brezhnev has said the Soviets are prepared to reduce their nuclear missile force "by the hundreds" as part of an overall agreement.

In Bucharest, Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu, whose country is a member of the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact, appealed personally to Reagan and Brezhnev to insure success at the Geneva talks.

"The Romanian people would like to see the Geneva negotiations end with an agreement conducive to the reduction at the lowest level of all nuclear weapons in Europe," Ceausescu said.

IRA: Strikes increased Catholic support

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The Irish Republican Army claims the hunger strikes in which Bobby Sands and nine other imprisoned guerrillas died greatly increased its support among Ireland's Roman Catholics.

Because of this, it is planning to battle British rule in Northern Ireland with ballots as well as bullets and bombs.

"The movement is stronger than it has been for 10 years," said Richard McAuley, a leader of Sinn Fein, the IRA's political arm. "All the indications are that support has increased in strength for the IRA. For Sinn Fein, it's increased immeasurably."

British officials conceded privately that the IRA's Provisional wing, which has been fighting since 1969 to unite British-ruled Northern Ireland with the predominantly Catholic Irish Republic to the south, has gained ground among the province's 500,000 Catholics.

One British military official who asked not to be named for "security reasons" told The Associated Press: "The Provisionals now enjoy a degree of political credibility that would have been unthinkable even a year ago. At the beginning of the year I thought we were making some progress (in wooing away support among the Catholic minority). Now I'd say the whole thing's wide open again."

British intelligence estimated the hard core of the Provos, as the Provisionals are known, at 400 men earlier this year. Sources close to the IRA claim it has recruited about 100 young Catholics since the hunger strike and turned many more away.

"The hunger strike has transformed what was equivocal support for the Provisionals into hard-line support that in many ways has wiped out what political gains we had made," a British military source commented.

The buildup in support for the Provos has been matched by a surge of extremism among Northern Ireland's million Protestants, touched off by the IRA assassination Nov. 14 of Protestant clergyman Robert Bradford, a member of the British Parliament from Northern Ireland.

The Rev. Ian Paisley, the most vocal of the militant Protestant leaders, claims to have formed a 15,000-man paramilitary "Third Force" to combat the IRA. This has heightened Catholic support of the Provos.

The IRA's previous high-water mark was after "Bloody Sunday" — Jan. 30, 1972, when British paratroopers fired on Catholic civil-rights marchers in Londonderry and killed 13.

The turning point this time was the seven-month fast at the prison outside Belfast. The IRA called it off after the strikers' families began intervening to save their young men from death. The Provos failed to win the political-prisoner status they sought for imprisoned nationalist guerrillas. But the government allowed all prisoners to wear their own clothes and associate with each other more freely. And the 10 dead men became IRA martyrs and focused international attention on the movement's cause.

Japanese sub crew paid

TOKYO (AP) — The United States today paid more than $26,000 each to to 13 Japanese crewmen who survived the sinking of the freighter Nissho Maru after the submarine George Washington holed it with its conning tower last April, the Navy said.

The out-of-court settlement was made in Osaka, western Japan. The Navy, which accepted blame for the sinking, agreed to the compensation on Nov. 13.

The United States paid $374,000 each to the families of Capt. Taizo Noguchi and 1st Mate Sumio Matunoge, who died in the East China Sea mishap. Katsuna Kaiun, the owner of the ship, got $1.1 million.

German terrorist gets life

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (AP) — A West German court today sentenced a member of the Baader-Meinhof terrorist gang to life in prison for his part in the 1977 slayings of industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer and his four bodyguards.

Wisniewski, who was arrested May 11, 1978, frequently interupted the judge's reading of the sentence with remarks like "exploiters" and "we are not interested in this."

During the year-long trial, Wisniewski refused to give details about himself or answer questions about the crime.

Schleyer, the leader of West Germany's powerful Industrial and Employers Federations, was kidnapped Sept. 5, 1977 by five members of the leftist radical Baader-Meinhof gang.

CIA given authority to collect intelligence in U.S.

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is going ahead with a presidential order that would relax some of the restrictions imposed on U.S. intelligence agencies to prevent abuses of civil liberties, officials say.

Government sources, who asked not to be identified, said the order would give the CIA broader authority to collect intelligence in the United States, but on a more restricted scale than administration officials first proposed last March.

When signed by President Reagan, the order will replace one issued by Jimmy Carter in January 1978.

Beginning last March, three successive drafts of the order leaked to the press generated a storm of protest from civil libertarians and both Democrats and Republicans in Congress.

Administration figures said during the debate that Carter had gone too far to protect civil liberties and they wanted to "restore the balance" between the rights of U.S. citizens and national security. Deputy CIA Director Bobby R. Inman denied that the CIA wanted to conduct domestic spying.

Critics particularly assailed the administration's proposals to allow CIA agents to infiltrate and influence U.S. groups and to conduct some covert operations in the United States. They said these plans could open the door to a repetition of the scandals of the mid-1970s, when a Senate committee found that intelligence agencies spied on and disrupted U.S. citizens who were simply exercising their rights to dissent on civil rights and Vietnam policies.

After the Senate Intelligence Committee unanimously suggested changes in these and other proposals on Oct. 27, the administration partially backed away from some of them in a fourth draft. Even then, some Senate Intelligence Committee members, including Vermont Democrat Patrick Leahy and Minnesota Republican David Durenberger, sought additional revisions.

Both House and Senate sources said Thursday night that the administration had not sent the final draft to Capitol Hill, though it had discussed some limited, additional changes by telephone.

Tom Horner, an aide to Durenberger, said Thursday night, "Durenberger still has some concerns. They have at least addressed all the major-league questions, but not necessarily to his satisfaction."

In mid-November, sources reported that the administration's fourth draft largely accepted the chief Senate recommendation to keep Carter's almost-complete ban on CIA infiltration and influencing of U.S. organizations. Carter's order allows only the FBI — not the CIA — to try to influence U.S. groups and permits only limited CIA infiltration of U.S. groups.

The third Reagan draft proposed allowing the CIA director or his designee to authorize CIA infiltration for any lawful purpose and would have permitted influencing activities if the attorney general ruled they would not violate constitutional rights.

The sources said, however, that the fourth draft still would authorize the CIA for the first time to conduct covert operations in this country. But it would forbid any such operations involving the news media or intended to affect U.S. politics or policies, the sources said.

They also said the fourth draft would let the spy agency use surveillance and informants inside the United States to collect "significant" foreign intelligence, including such data as bank and medical records.

Carter's order limits CIA collection of foreign intelligence in this country to information volunteered to it and to data on people acting on behalf of a foreign power.

Teacher accused of killing five worshippers to be tried

DAINGERFIELD, Texas (AP) — A former high school math teacher accused of gunning down five worshippers during a Sunday church service last year was returned to jail after being found competent to stand trial, authorities said.

Officials said Alvin Lee King III, who is charged with murder in the deaths of five people and attempted murder in the wounding of 10 others, was transferred from a mental health facility to Morris County jail Thursday under maximum security.

King was turned over to Morris County officials here after a team of psychiatrists at Rusk State Hospital determined he is mentally competent to stand trial for the June 22 attack on worshippers at the First Baptist Church of Daingerfield.

"He doesn't really talk," Skipper said Thursday. "He just says 'yes' or 'no' to questions. He seemed meek as a lamb."

King is accused of bursting into the church, shouting, "This is war," and spraying the stunned congregation with gunfire.

Moments after the shooting, the heavily armed flak-jacketed man ran outside and shot himself in the head with a .22 caliber pistol, police said.

King's attorney, Percy Foreman of Houston, said Thursday he has hired a psychologist and two psychiatrists to review King's hospital records. He said he will wait for their report before deciding whether to oppose the competency finding.

"Part of the man's brain was shot away and that was given in previous reports as one reason why he was incompetent to stand trial," Foreman said. "That part of his brain is still shot away, but now they say he is competent. I want to see if that is scientifically sound."

Foreman has until Dec. 16 to request a competency hearing. If no hearing request is filed, State District Judge B.D. Moye can set a trial date.

Although rumors of threats against King have circulated in this Northeast Texas town of 2,800, Skipper says he doesn't expect anything to happen.

"This is a law-abiding town. We won't have any trouble," he said.

Rapist senetnced to 20 years

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A 20-year prison sentence has been given to a Texas Tech student accused of raping a woman and taking photographs of her during the attack.

Ronald Charles Pylant, 22, was sentenced Thursday, one day after a state District Court jury of eight men and four women convicted him of aggravated rape in the Sept. 15 assault near Lubbock International Aiport.

The victim, a 21-year-old Texas Tech student, testified that Pylant forced her at knifepoint to drive to a field. Then, in the back seat of the car, he raped her and took photographs during the assault, she said.

Pylant's lawyer, Floyd Holder, had argued Thursday for leniency for his client, who he described as a first offender who had been "hard working, ambitious, an Air Force veteran who took jobs on the side" while attending college.

"He has demonstrated he will be of some use to society," Holder said.

He said the rape victim "suffered no permanent physical disability."

Court issues largest award

HOUSTON (AP) — A state court jury deliberated two days before ruling the family of a woman who was killed by a train should be paid $1.5 million, the largest award of its kind ever issued in Texas.

The panel ruled Wednesday both the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad and Amtex, a construction firm, were negligent in the April 23, 1980, death of Darlene Dunegan.

The damage award was the largest ever given in Texas for the loss of consortium, or the loss of a husband-wife relationship. However, the judgment will be reduced 20 percent because the jury ruled that Mrs. Dunegan was partially at fault.

Prior to the trial, Amtex had agreed to pay the first $1 million in damages so the railroad will be required to pay only $271,200, said the family's attorney, George Payne.

Mrs. Dunegan was killed as her car crossed the railroad tracks on the city's outskirts. Her husband, John, was following her in another car and watched his wife die, he said.

Cable TV people see future as great

By HENRY FUENTES
Copley News Service

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Sounding cocky and self-congratulatory, leading cable officials, including Atlanta's Ted Turner, earlier this week forecast a glowing future for the cable industry and predicted the death of newspapers within 10 years.

Meeting at the Anaheim Convention Center for the 13th Annual Western Cable Show and Convention, the flamboyant Turner told a session-opening audience that he is not alone in his belief that newspaper presses will grind to a halt within the next decade.

"I've predicted to newspaper publishers that within 10 years the newspaper will be virtually out of business — and a lot of them are agreeing with me privately," Turner said, adding that the print medium cannot match cable in reaching subscribers "with the same information."

"Newspapers are going to be gone," Turner said, provoking laughter from the audience of cable operators by adding: "They (newspapers) will be very, very altered — there will still be a weekly classified."

"BUT THE CLASSIFIED ads are going to be available on cable — everything that's available to newspapers today will be available on cable systems," he said.

Turner also had some dire predictions for commercial broadcasters, equating the three major networks with being "archaic and dinosaur-like."

"They (commercial networks) will either be much more effective than they are now, or they'll be gone," Turner said. "The networks aren't happy and they have plenty of money right now. They're not happy because they haven't done a good job in serving the public, and nobody's going to be sorry when they go!"

Turner predicted that by the end of the decade up to 90 percent of the homes passed by a cable line will be hooked up, boasting that "we're going to be the richest and the most powerful group of people that ever existed — and hopefully we're going to be happy." He labeled the cable industry "the single most important communications medium the world has ever seen."

Ralph M. Baruch, chairman of Viacom International Inc., said that by the end of the decade there will be more than 50 million cable subscribers nationally, more than double the current number. He also said that by 1990 cable advertising spending will climb from a projected $500 million in 1985 to $1.5 billion.

HOWEVER, UNLIKE TURNER, Baruch had a more optimistic outlook for commercial broadcasters. Citing statistics showing that television viewing is 15 percent greater in cable households, Baruch said this should give broadcasters and networks comfort and they "should breathe easier about their financial future."

Baruch also warned that "we're developing the technical know-how and really don't know yet what to do with it. What we are really saying, it seems to me, is, 'Here is the developed technology in search of a market.'"

Russia-China split may soon end

By JOHN HARRIS
Hearst Feature Service

PEKING — The historic rift between China and the Soviet Union could soon end, according to American experts here, with vast implications for the world's future.

"Ideological differences between the two communist giants are lessening," an analyst explained here. "China, like Russia, is becoming more bourgeois, with a rising distribution of consumer goods."

The territorial dispute between China and Russia, involving Chinese claims to huge tracts of Soviet Siberia, also appears to be losing momentum, it was pointed out, with China becoming reconciled to the permanence of most of its present borders.

The Chinese-Soviet split — which in 1972 resulted in an armed border clash between the two countries — has its origins in traditional ethnic rivalries and animosities between the two huge, adjacent populations. With the establishment of a communist government in China in 1949 these emotions soon acquired a political form.

COMMUNIST CHINA at first sought to mold its society on orthodox Stalinist lines. But the Soviets instituted "destalinization," or more relaxed internal and external policies, after the death of Josef Stalin in 1953. China oppposed this, and the "ideological" split between the two countries began.

With the death of Stalin, too, Chinese leader Mao Tse-Tung sought to acquire Stalin's mantle as the nominal head of communists throughout the world, a suggestion the Russians rejected contemptuously. Mao, it is said, never forgave the Russians for this. But Mao is now dead.

The ideological aspect of the split was aggravated by China's contention that Tsarist Russia had acquired 750,000 square miles of Chinese territory in the 17th, 18th and 19th centuries through "unfair" treaties with local Chinese leaders. China has repeatedly demanded return of the territories, but the request has been repeatedly ignored by the Russians.

One of the treaties, signed in 1689, was negotiated in Latin by Polish priests working for the Russians and Portugese priests working for the Manchus, the rulers of China at that time. The negotiators refused to enter each other's tents and talked equidistant between 100-man elements of the Russian and Chinese armies.

IN A SUBSEQUENT treaty, concluded in 1858, the Russians put pressure on the Manchus, whose power was then declining in China, and acquired 450,000 square miles of Chinese territory. In 1860 the Russians obtained another 300,000 square miles.

The political aspect of the Sino-Soviet rift was accentuated by the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968. China accused the Soviet Union of seeking "hegemony," or dominance, over widening areas of the world. The "hegemony" charge is still made against the Russians in China, but in a markedly less strident manner.

Since the Czechoslovak invasion, however, China has sought to cultivate better relations with the west. This effort culminated in the establishment of diplomatic relations with the U.S. in 1979.

In 1972 the territorial dispute between China and the Soviet Union escalated into heavy fighting, involving artillery, between Russian and Chinese forces on an island in the Ussuri River, which forms part of the border between China and Russia in a strategic area of the Far East.

SINCE THEN THE border has been relatively quiet. But both countries maintain huge forces on their respective sides of the frontier, with as many as 50 Soviet divisions and large numbers of aircraft concentrated in the area.

On the Chinese side a huge force is deployed under a plan to "go into the mountains" in the event of a Soviet attack and to conduct guerilla warfare from there.

The American experts pointed out that if tension vanished between China and the Soviet Union, on the border issue at least, the Russians' 50 divisions could be deployed elsewhere — in Europe, in Afghanistan or to threaten the Middle East.

"This would have a profound effect on American strategic planning," one expert observed. "If there was a full reconcilation between China and Russia the entire western world would have to pull out the economic, political and military drawing-boards and begin all over again."

In this connection the experts said that hard evidence is appearing to substantiate speculation that such a reconciliation is possible.

They noted that many Chinese underground, anti-nuclear attack bomb shelters are being converted into space for hotels and shopping centers. In addition, they said, China's standing army, formerly numbering nearly five million men, has been whittled down to less than four million.

"If the Russians pulled out of Afghanistan and if Russian-controlled communist parties in Eastern Europe showed signs of losing power — as is happening in Poland — then I think the Chinese might begin to adopt a less hostile policy toward Russia," one expert said.

French have harder time with traditional amour now

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN

PARIS — Socialism has begun playing havoc with the extracurricular love life of the French.

Since the Socialists came to power here six months ago and started changing things, Frenchmen — and, for that matter, women — have found it a lot trickier to conduct their private lives in the time-honored Gallic tradition which blends the sensual and the material in precisely calculated doses.

Dalliance's difficulties were enhanced by a new law requiring that any purchase for more than 5,000 francs (about $900) must be paid by check.

Cuban subversion presents potential crisis

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Foreign Affairs Editor

WASHINGTON — The deliberate lengthening in recent weeks of airport runways in both Nicaragua and Grenada to accommodate sophisticated Soviet Mig-19 fighter-bombers has put the issue of what to do about Cuban subversion "front and center" for the Reagan administration, senior U.S. officials disclosed.

They predicted that Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig, after his return Friday from an OAS foreign ministers meeting on the Caribbean island of St. Lucia, will present President Reagan with a series of options ranging from broadening the trade embargo of Cuba to a naval blockade.

"They're scared to death of what's happening in Nicaragua," one high-ranking adviser said in explaining Haig's attitude. "Haig came into office charging like a white knight on El Salvador. He's pinned a lot of his own prestige on seeing to it that free elections take place there in March."

"IF THEY'RE going to act, they have to act now," the official said, "not in a year when Nicaragua will have a 50,000-man Army (the largest in Central America) and a 250,000-man militia." The Haig plan is to "go public" with a white paper on Cuba this month as part of testimony to a Senate committee.

But this policymaker said that specific actions also would accompany the public relations blitz that will be designed to isolate Cuba both diplomatically and economically. To that end, the Pentagon has prepared a specific series of military options for Reagan to consider.

None of these, the official said, will involve the direct use of American troops. However he refused to rule out the possibility that the United States may try to coordinate a multi-national naval blockade — the first time in hemisphere history that other Latin American nations may join in such a move.

During the Cuban missile crisis of 1962, the U.S. Navy alone blockaded Cuba, but with the support of the OAS allies.

THE PENTAGON also is said to have prepared detailed studies of the feasibility of more limited military options, including a show of American airpower as a "deliberate signal to Cuba to call it off" or large naval exercises short of an actual blockade.

If action is taken to interdict the flow of Cuban arms and men to Nicaragua, estimated already to total around 2,000 in Cuban military personnel alone, it most likely will take the form of a quarantine limited to Soviet and other East European arms shipments, the official said.

Cuba is said to have helped funnel almost $30 million worth of military equipment to Nicaragua in the last 12 months, including tanks, light aircraft, helicopters, heavy artillery and surface-to-air missiles. There also are 3,000 Cuban civilians, many of them intelligence agents, based in Nicaragua.

the runways in Grenada as part of a multi-million dollar project to construct a new Grenadan airport. The longer runways will enable the Soviet Union to base long-range Mig fighters on a second Caribbean island. The Soviets already maintain an advanced Mig fleet in Cuba.

The new airport, the report states, also "will

> "They're scared to death of what's happening in Nicaragua. If they're going to act, they have to act now."

In addition to military options, the State Department has readied for Reagan a recommendation that the economic sanctions against Cuba be strengthened. It suggests legal measures to prevent overseas subsidiaries of American companies from circumventing the embargo and seeking OAS cooperation in cutting trade.

A SECRET document sent to more than 50 American diplomatic posts on Nov. 8 catalogued Cuban "covert activities" in Latin America and instructed American envoys to brief appropriate officials in those nations and report back "any significant reactions."

give Cuba a guaranteed, Cuban-controlled point for military flights to Africa." The government of Grenada, it further declares, "has slavishly followed a pro-Soviet foreign policy line" since a socialist coup took place in March, 1979.

The report states categorically that not only Nicaragua and El Salvador have become bases of Cuban subversion but that five other, pro-American, democratic nations have been targets of direct Cuban interference.

They are: Guatemala, Colombia, Jamaica, Costa Rica and the Dominican Republic. The subversive Cuban effort "does not discriminate between democratic governments and dictatorships," the report explains. It states that:

"Cuba's immediate goals are to exploit and control the revolution in Nicaragua and to induce the violent overthrow of the governments of El Salvador and Guatemala. At the same time, Cuba is working to sustain terrorism in other countries, and to fan political instability in the hemisphere."

CUBA played the leading role in facilitating the supply of weapons to Salvadoran guerrillas and "played a key role" in setting up contacts between radical Arab states, including Libya and Iraq, and the Salvadoran guerrillas.

The report charges, for example, that Cuba "laundered" half a million dollars in Iraqi funds purportedly extended as part of an "economic aid package" to Cuba. Those funds went to the Salvadoran guerrillas to buy arms.

Haig is said to be spending a good deal of time with his Latin counterparts in discussing the details of the proposed American options. "We think it is useful to share this information," State Department spokesman Alan Romberg said Wednesday.

"We also hope that in various way there will be cooperation but we are not prepared to say what those various ways are yet. Obviously we've been talking about what our policy might be and actions that would logically flow from it," he added.

Study indicates colorful fruits may partly prevent cancer

By VICTOR COHN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A major new study indicates that people — even cigarette smokers — who eat a lot of carrots, peaches, tomatoes, spinach and other deep red, green or yellow fruits and vegetables are less likely than others to get lung cancer.

This relationship has been reported by scientists from four major institutions — Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago, Harvard and Northwestern University Medical Schools and the University of Michigan — in a lead article in the British medical journal Lancet.

All these foods are high in vitamin A and particularly in carotene (a natural coloring matter which is converted to vitamin A in the body).

A 19-year study of 1,954 Chicago men, all Western Electric Co. employees, found far less lung cancer than expected in men, even smokers, whose diets were high in carotene.

AMONG CIGARETTE users of 30 years' standing, those who consumed the least carotene had eight times the risk of those who consumed the most carotene.

More studies are needed, the scientists say, to prove whether carotene or any vitamin A intake will reduce lung cancer risk. Meanwhile, they add, "it seems prudent" to include carotene-rich foods in daily diets.

"I'd suggest one or two helpings a day," the study's chief author, Dr. Richard Shekelle of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's, said Wednesday. "I've increased my carrot intake," Shekelle, an ex-smoker, added.

Carotene abounds in vividly red, green or yellow fruits and vegetables, Linda Smith of the Community Nutrition Institute in Washington reported. Among those with large amounts of carotene: dark salad greens (like endive, bibb lettuce and collard greens), beets, broccoli, green and yellow squash, sweet potatoes, grapes (especially red grapes), apples (especially in the skin) and persimmons.

But no one, said another scientist, should try to augment vitamin A intake by taking vitamin A pills. These contain forms of the chemical which can cause liver damage in excess doses.

The Rush-Presbyterian scientists have been studying the Western Electric employees since the late 1950s. They recently found that those who ate diets low in fats and cholesterol tended to have less cholesterol buildup in their blood vessels and also less heart disease.

Thirty-three of the Western Electric men developed lung cancer over the 19-year observation period. Twenty-five of these 33 ate less than average amounts of carotene; 14 were in the lowest 25 percent for carotene intake.

'To err is human,' Allen explains

Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — "We, too, are ordinary individuals," said Richard V. Allen. "We put our trousers on one leg at a time . . . there is nothing qualitatively different in us."

The words were spoken forcefully and sombrely, but they were etched with plaintiveness. They constituted both an appeal by Allen for understanding and a claim that he did not comprehend the "particular standard" to which government officials are held in this post-Watergate era.

Like ordinary individuals, said President Reagan's embattled national security adviser, high government officials sometimes are guilty of memory lapses and sloppiness in filling out forms. But, he added, he could not understand why guilt of such human errors should be enough to force them from government.

ALLEN SPOKE the words to a group of reporters shortly before the Justice Department decreed that he had violated no criminal law in receiving $1,000 from a Japanese magazine that interviewed Nancy Reagan on her second day in the White House. His clear implication was that he was the victim of a double standard that holds government officials to higher codes of ethics and efficiency than those that prevail outside government.

Yet even as the Justice Department cleared him of criminal conduct involving the $1,000, the FBI continued to investigate his erroneous financial disclosure statements and his acceptance of two watches from a Japanese friend.

Allen said he longed to discuss the whole matter with Ronald Reagan -- but, alas, access to the Oval Office confessional has been denied him since Reagan was informed of the Justice Department inquiry in September. Still, said Allen, he hoped the day would come when the president would hear him out.

BY ISOLATING himself from Allen, Reagan apparently has sought to isolate himself from any possible scandal. Yet, it seems strange that the president would not want to hear a first hand account of the case from the national security adviser with whom he has been closely associated for some time.

This is Allen's third tour of duty in the White House and he does not want it to end because of $1,000 handed him by a Japanese magazine editor or because he failed on his financial disclosure form, to list fees paid him as an international consultant.

Yet, because Allen has served previously in the White House -- under Richard Nixon in 1968-69 and again in 1971-72 -- and because he had to bow out of the Reagan campaign last year due to his close ties with foreign companies, he should know better than anyone else that standards governing the conduct of White House officials are tough and rigid. He should understand also that that is the way they should be.

ALLEN IS A man of high intelligence, vast experience and worldwide connections. He is not a pauper from Peoria who was suddenly led to an office in the West Wing of the White House and told to start talking foreign policy.

He also is adept at intra-government guerilla warfare, having watched and learned in the Nixon White House as his old boss, Henry Kissinger, spent four years undercutting former Secratary of State William Rogers. That is one of the reasons Secretary of State Alexander Haig has been so uneasy with Allen ensconced just down the stairs from Ronald Reagan.

Anyone who ever doubted Allen's sophistication in manipulating the Washington scene to his advantage need only have watched his adroit use of the news media over the past few days. After Reagan granted him "administrative leave" Saturday night, Allen started on a steady round of newspaper, network and magazine bureaus -- explaining his case and pleading his cause. He touched all bases.

Allen told the group of reporters that he is prepared to resume his White House duties. But, even if he is cleared of any misconduct, it is questionable whether he will be invited back to his old office.

LAPSES OF MEMORY and sloppiness in filling out financial disclosure statements may not be major crimes. But they do not cast much lustre on the character of a man who has dealt with world leaders and has been afforded three opportunities to work in the heady atmosphere of the White House.

Allen knew the rules of government conduct far better than most of the Reaganites because he had served in the White House long before the rest of them got there.

Whether deliberately or negligently, he failed to follow them. That is not the kind of conduct that the American people expect from an individual -- human though he may be -- who sits at the side of the president of the United States.

Joining Fransie Geringer, left, 8, of Orkney, South Africa, and Mickey Hays, right, 9, of Hallsville, Texas, at Disneyland is Alicia Gowans, 11, of San Jose, Calif. The three progeria victims met for the first time Wednesday at Anaheim and later toured the park's Magic Kingdom.

Progeria victims make gathering place of Anaheim

By CYNTHIA STEVENS
Associated Press Writer

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A young progeria victim's trip from South Africa to Disneyland is making Anaheim a rendezvous for the wizened sufferers of the incurable disease that ages children 10 times faster than normal.

After reading about the trip of three progeria victims to Disneyland, Meg Casey, 26, of Milford, Conn., possibly the oldest living victim, flew to California to meet them today.

"I decided to come to give them hope, that's all. 'Hi, I'm Meg, I'm 26.' That speaks for itself," said Miss Casey, who is four feet tall and weighs 40 pounds. She arrived at an Anaheim hotel Thursday night.

"There are exceptions to every rule and I'm it," she said, referring to the fact that most victims of the disease die by their mid-teens.

Before the plight of Fransie Geringer, 8, of Orkney, South Africa, was publicized last August, Miss Casey, Fransie and the two other progeria victims who have come to Southern California were either unaware of other cases or had never seen the ones they heard about.

The feeling of isolation was compounded by the physical deformities that make the victims targets of morbid curiosity.

The victims look like little old men and women. They are scrawny and bald with bulging eyes and bent postures. The children fail to grow beyond 4 feet tall and generally die in their teens.

An Associated Press article about Fransie mentioned his love of the storybook character Pinocchio and desire to visit Disneyland. Readers responded with donations to send Fransie and his parents to Los Angeles.

Mickey Hays, 9, of Hallsville, Texas, read about Fransie and wanted to meet him. Both boys until then had believed they were the only living progeria victims in the world.

When Alicia Gowans, 11, of San Jose, Calif., heard that Mickey and Fransie were at Disneyland this week, she was anxious to join them. The trio had an unplanned meeting outside a hotel coffee shop after breakfast Thursday morning.

"I want to see Alicia again," Fransie said. "I liked her. She's pretty."

Meanwhile, Rabbi Harold Kushner and his wife, Suzette, of Natick, Mass., whose 14-year-old son Aaron died of progeria four years ago, said in a telephone interview they very much wanted to meet Miss Casey, the children and their parents when the Kushners visit the Los Angeles area this week.

Nader associate says Reagan can't take credit for health

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government gadfly says the Reagan administration can take none of the credit for its finding that Americans as a whole are healthy and getting healthier.

"At the very time they are announcing this good news, the Reagan administration is unleashing a plague upon this country," said Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of Public Citizen's Health Research Group and an associate of Ralph Nader.

Wolfe did not dispute the central finding of a report issued by Dr. Edward N. Brandt Jr., assistant secretary of health, that "the level of health in this country is good and getting better."

But he said the health of Americans will deteriorate if the administration's budget plans prevail.

He said Congress and the White House are crippling health and safety regulatory agencies such as the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, Environmental Protection Agency, Food and Drug Administration and Consumer Product Safety Commission while considering deep cutbacks in Medicare and Medicaid and the Center for Disease Control.

"The inevitable health worsening consequences of these Reagan administration plans must be seen even though they are selling themselves as the administration of a healthy country," Wolfe said.

The point he wanted to get across, he said, is that there has been "a decrease in human suffering" in this country.

But that carries its own problem, he said — the question of how to care for the large number of people who live longer as a result.

Society's very success in keeping people healthy and permitting them to live into old age is putting "great stress" on the nation's health care resources, he said, and the solution must be in prevention and education so people will enter old age in good health.

Brandt pointed to some successes: smoking is at its lowest level since World War II; more adults than ever are having their blood pressure checked; more women are being examined for breast and cervical cancer; more people are physically active and are watching their weight and diet.

"We mult accept the necessity of preparing physically for 'd age — a healthy old age," he sa "I believe that if we begin to p ctice good health habits, we can loc orward not only to a longer life bu lso to more years of that life in whi we are free from infirmity."

Are Texas City brain cancer deaths related to occuptaion?

TEXAS CITY, Texas (AP) — Union Carbide and federal researchers are at odds over the implications of two studies that show the firm's plant here has a brain cancer death rate two to three times the national average.

A National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health study of 9,000 employees released this week concluded 23 workers died of brain cancer between 1941 and 1977, and it raised the possibility that the deaths may be job related.

But an independent Union Carbide study of 6,600 current and former employees found 12 brain cancer deaths since the plant opened in 1941, and plant manager Damon Engle said the deaths appeared to be a 'chance occurance."

"We simply are far apart on interpretations," said NIOSH spokeswoman Deborah Van Brunt.

"It's not likely to be a sampling error" when the variance is as great as this one, she said.

Neither study included women, but the government study included black men. Engle said the company sampled only white men because the firm thought it was following ground rules laid down in 1978.

"If NIOSH had used the same rules, they would have found the same 12 we did," Engle said.

Government investigators counted certificates that listed brain tumors or brain cancer as the cause of death. That method is used to figure the number of brain cancer deaths nationwide, Ms. Van Brunt said.

Engle said Union Carbide checked death certificates as well as autopsy and other medical records in drawing its conclusion. He said one death certificate incorrectly reported that a worker killed by lung cancer died of brain cancer.

He said another worker the government counted as dead is still living.

Engle said there was no link between the workers' deaths and their job assignments. But Ms. Van Brunt said the company was overlooking the possibility that a combination of chemicals could raise the death rate.

Hammer giving $2 million grant for cancer research

WASHINGTON (AP) — Industrialist Armand Hammer plans to award $2 million over the next 10 years to scientists trying to conquer cancer, but a citizens' group says his companies cause more cancer than his money can cure.

The 83-year-old multi-millionaire who chairs the President's Cancer Panel said Thursday he believes "a scientific breakthrough in the cure of some cancers is closer than we know."

Hammer told a panel meeting he will give $1 million to the person who achieves a cancer cure similar to the vaccine that virtually eliminated polio and $100,000 to the person thought to have made the biggest annual gain toward a cure.

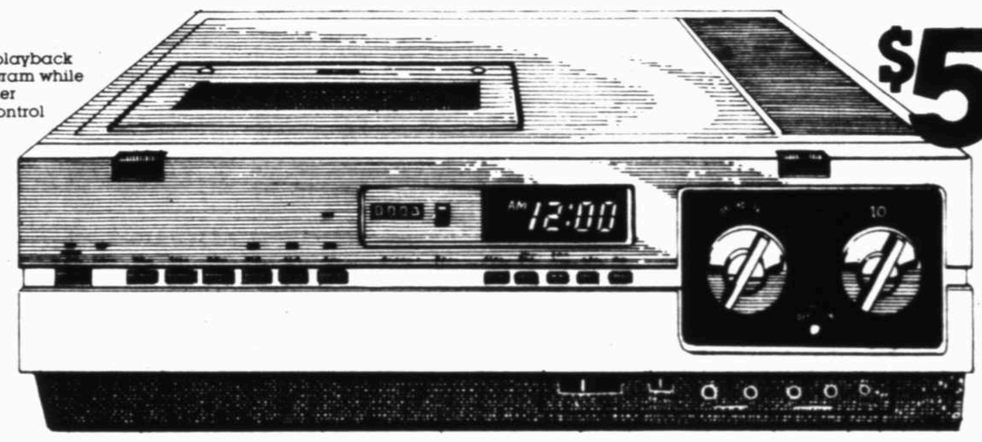

The meeting was interrupted by outbursts from Citizens Against Corporate Cancer, which said Hammer, the board chairman of Occidental Petroleum Corp., should resign as panel chairman.

The group said that an Occidental subsidiary, Hooker Chemical Co., was responsible for widespread cancer-causing pollution, including the Love Canal chemical dump in Niagara Falls, N.Y.

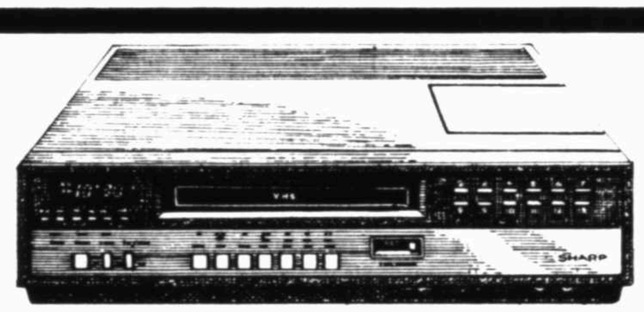

Occidental and Hooker have denied the allegations. They said in a statement that they have "responded to each and every environmental issue in a forthright and responsible manner."
