SHALL PERRYTON PAVE?

To pave or not to pave. That is a question that is confronting the citizens of Perryton today. A survey of the property owners along Main Street brings out the fact that a majority of them are strongly in favor of starting a paving program to cover at least the business district. Many residents of the town seem to think that the streets leading to the school-house should be paved.

There is no question but what that no improvement could be thought of that would do more to improve the appearance of a town than paving the streets.

There are few towns the size of Perryton in the southwest that do not have some paving. The majority of the county seats of the Panhandle have paved streets. Out of the forty-five counties comprising what is known as Northwest Oklahoma, only five county seats have unpaved streets.

What about Perryton? The question of cost is the main consideration. A responsible engineering firm would be glad to make a survey and estimate of cost without charge to the city, unless the paving program is carried out. We think that a survey should be made. Then the voters can decide whether they want to pave now or "Wait A While."

OLD SETTLERS LIKE REUNION

TWO DAY PICNIC DECLARED BIG SUCCESS BY THOSE ATTENDING; MANY ATTRACTIONS

The third annual old settlers reunion and picnic held at Jines Springs last Thursday and Friday was a decided success, according to Sibley Jines manager of the event.

Ball games both days, horse races, a novel Ford car race, swimming, horseshoe pitching contests, a big dance both evenings, and the many Carnival attractions were only a few of the many entertaining features arranged for the picnic.

Many old settlers of this section of the country were present and exchanged stories of the early days when the Panhandle was new.

THEY

"THEY" ought to do something about the grade crossings where the whole family was wiped out yesterday.

"THEY" ought to stop those bootleggers from selling denatured alcohol to our your folks to make them blind and crazy.

"THEY" ought to prevent corruption in high places which destroys the public confidence in a popular form of government.

"THEY" ought to do something about educating the foreign-born radicals in our country.

"THEY" ought not to have politics in the hands of gangsters and criminals who elect only those they can control.

"THEY" ought to clean up the streets and alleys, of this town.

"THEY" ought to see about paving the streets and building sidewalks.

"THEY" ought to plant trees and beautify the town.

"THEY" ought to look after the moral conditions existing in this town.

"THEY" ought to get more factories and industries located here.

"THEY" ought to be doing something toward improving living conditions in this town.

"THEY" ought to provide better fire protection, and obtain reduction in insurance rates.

"THEY" ought to get the people to paint up their property, plant more shrubbery and beautify their places.

"THEY" ought to be doing something towards obtaining a better and larger water supply for future demands.

Do you know why "THEY" are not doing all these worthwhile things?

"THEY" are waiting for you to do something; waiting for YOU to use a little of YOUR time and energy; waiting for YOU to loosen the strings of your pocket book a little and aid in the civic enterprises of the community.

Hazel Hurd Players Will Make City Every Tuesday Night For Next Eight Weeks

Fred J. Twyman, Spearman, manager of the Hazel Hurd Players, was in Perryton, Wednesday, making arrangements with the management of the American Theatre for the first appearance of his stock company here next Tuesday night.

According to Mr. Twyman, the Hazel Hurd Players will show in Perryton every Tuesday night for the next eight weeks, with a different bill each appearance. The play to be presented next Tuesday, September 11, is "The Push", an original and spontaneous comedy.

Mr. Twyman has arranged a circuit over which he will play, composed of six Panhandle towns, playing each town one night a week with a bill and then going over the circuit the next week with a change in program. Mr. Twyman states that he has the best stock company organized that he has ever had and believes that theatre patrons will like his show.

BRYAN AND HOLLAND TO BUILD

WILL LET CONTRACT AT ONCE FOR 75 FOOT BRICK ON NORTH MAIN; MUCH BUILDING TALK

W. C. Bryan & Son and R. H. Holland announced yesterday that they had definitely decided upon the erection of a 75 ft. brick building on their lots on North Main Street. Mr. Bryan will build a fifty foot front on the lots now occupied by his store, the Thompson Cafe and the Anderson Shoe Shop. The building now used by the Bryan store will be moved over into the street north until the new structure is completed.

The Bryan building will be fifty by seventy-five with a basement under the rear part. It will be divided into two rooms, the room on the corner being used for the grocery department. The south room will be used for a dry goods, ready-to-wear and shoe departments.

Mr. Holland plans on building a twenty-five by eighty brick on the lot just south of the Bryan building. This room is being built for lease purposes. Mr. Holland states that he has a number of opportunities to rent the new structure but that he has not closed with anyone to date. Mr. Holland also owns another fifty feet joining on the south. He has been negotiating with several different parties for the erection of a building on these lots.

He states that he is ready to build at any time he can get a desirable lessee.

From all indications, it looks like this is going to be the biggest year yet in business building for Perryton. The fifty by one hundred forty two story Stump & Rogers building is now ready for the roofers. Mrs. F. A. Edwards and W. B. LaMaster both announced new brick business buildings last week. There are a number of other business structures contemplated being erected during the next few months. All that Perryton needs now is to have our streets paved.

THE TIGER TRAIL

by Edison Marshall Illustrations by PAUL FREHM

"Yet you knew of this influence. The fact that Southley let his guests strike you before his face."

"It seemed to me that they were the closest of friends."

"And where were you just before the bell rang, when Southley told you to get out the car?"

"In the kitchen."

"How long?"

"At least an hour before."

And he told him what he was doing to prove it.

Ernest corroborated my story perfectly.

"And what did you think of the elder Hayward?" he was asked.

"I didn't like him."

"And why not?"

"I didn't like his attitude with my father. He was too arrogant, and demanded more than a guest should. His manners were often boorish. Nor did I like the way he threw his son with my sister."

"I believe that was your sister's part to object—not yours."

"Perhaps it is."

"And she made no objection?"

"Never. Of course I don't know sis very well."

The detective and I looked at him in amazement.

"And what do you mean by that unusual speech?" the former asked.

"That you don't know your sister very well."

"Because we went to different schools. Both of us are comparative strangers to Southley Downs."

The detective turned to Josephine.

"And what light have you to throw on this matter, Miss Southley?" he asked.

"None at all," the girl replied.

"And where were you, after the scene in the den?"

"I went straight to bed. My maid helped me undress."

"And the Haywards must not have been so unpopular with you as with your brother and Ahmad?"

"I was with both of them a great deal."

"And I think you took Vilas's part against Dr. Long."

"Yes."

"And why did you do that?"

"Because I couldn't do anything else under the circumstances."

"You evidently didn't like Dr. Long?"

"I did like Dr. Long. But his relation with me was greatly different from that with Vilas."

She looked squarely into his eyes as she talked. The room faded except for her. The faces of the watching circle became as mist. I don't know why each answer she made seemed to go so deep into me—each word—each inflection of voice an indelible imprint in my memory. I couldn't turn my eyes from her white face. I hardly heard the detective's questions when he turned to Southley. They came from somewhere far off.

"Please tell me, Southley, just what were the relations between you and the Haywards?"

"The elder Hayward and I were the oldest friends," the old man answered. He spoke falteringly, in the hesitant way of age.

"They had been here almost a month?"

"Yes."

"How long did you ask them for?"

His voice changed ever so slightly.

"As long as they would remain."

"You were in the den, in the scene between Dr. Long and the younger Hayward?"

"Yes."

"You sided in with Vilas Hayward?"

"Yes."

"Did you think he was in the right?"

"—I didn't know—for sure."

"Then why did you take the stand you did?"

His answer called me from my preoccupation. It rang in the quiet room. He spoke it softly, hesitantly; yet all other sounds became as nothing.

"Because, Inspector Freeman," he said simply, "I couldn't do any other thing with wisdom. Because Vilas Hayward is going to marry my daughter, Josephine."

After dinner I met Inspector Freeman in the hall. He called me to one side. Perhaps he was a little more intent, a little more nervous and quick of motion than in the afternoon.

"I'm in need of your help," he told me.

"And I'm ready to give it."

"Look in the kitchen and see where Ahmad Das is, and what he is doing."

I obeyed, on a plausible excuse. Ahmad Das was polishing the silver I came back to report.

"The coast is clear, then," the inspector exulted. "Long, I want you to come with me and search Ahmad's rooms. I can trust you, I think, when I say that I haven't any further question but that the Hindu is the murderer."

Then you must have discovered something new."

"No; but he was the one man who went out of the house with Hayward—the one man in striking range. I don't believe the Southleys were implicated; and knowing you as I do by reputation, it is absurd to think that you were. There leaves Ahmad. We know that he hated him, so we have a motive but the Hindu's a funny duck, isn't he?"

"Did you ever see a man cross the room with such a funny, catlike stride? He walks as if he had cushions on his feet."

We mounted to the third flight; then turned into Ahmad's room. My admiration for Freeman increased mightily when I saw him in action. It was impossible to imagine a more complete search.

"If there's murder, there's bound to be blood," he said. "Nothing is so convincing to a court as a garment with blood on it. He's been kept pretty busy since the murder, and I don't believe he'd have time to dispose of all his things. That's the chance I'm playing for."

But evidently Ahmad Das had foreseen this contingency. The detective searched swiftly for twenty minutes; then paused to wipe the little beads of perspiration from his lean face.

"It's no use," he said. "No clues worth finding."

He started toward the door.

"There's one place you haven't searched at all," I told him.

"That drawer full of linen," I pointed to a drawer in the dresser.

"I glanced into it. He wouldn't put it in such an obvious place as that. Even Ahmad Das wouldn't be that much of a fool."

"Perhaps, Inspector Freeman, you have never heard of M. Dupin?"

Inspector Freeman stopped to consider.

"His name's slipped my mind," he confessed.

"M. Dupin was a very famous detective—a Frenchman. A very great American wrote about him long ago."

"Oh, you mean a story-book detective," Freeman scorned. "I'm glad to say I've never wasted my time reading such truck. None of 'em were ever practical. Practical men are the go nowadays. The time they wasted in theories and talk—"

"Yet sometimes their theories come out right. Mr. Dupin would have been the first to tell you that for the very reason that you would think that drawer too obvious a place for a man to hide a garment, it would be the very place an astute criminal would hide it. He would know in advance that you wouldn't look there, and therefore it would be a good place. He proved it with the story of a stolen letter, hidden among a packet of other letters, in plain sight."

"It's all right in books; but it don't work out in life," Freeman commented.

Of course I knew as a whole he spoke the truth. But it had begun to dawn on me that Freeman was not the highest type of official detective. If he had been, I would never have asked the question about Dupin; and I would not have had the cold courage to lecture to him now.

"Then there was a later detective—a little, fat Catholic priest," I went on. "He asked his friend where a wise man would hide a pebble."

"And his friend, if he had any sense, would have said to bury it six feet under the ground and smooth off the top."

"His friend told him to hide it on the beach. Then the detective asked where a wise man would hide a leaf. And the answer was—in the forest. I don't say that Ahmad Das would have chosen this drawer if he had time to choose a better place. But it is certainly the most likely place in this room."

I went to the drawer and hunted among the garments. And I'm afraid the color came to my face. Evidently my theories were to go unsupported by fact.

"I guess Ahmad Das didn't hide his pebble on the beach," the detective exulted.

Then I looked twice as a newly laundered shirt that I had picked up and laid down before. It struck me as being an unusually heavy garment. Some inspiration made me unpin it. And folded within it was found another shirt, covered with great splotches of dark brown stain.

Freeman leaped toward me and took the garment in his hands. Just for an instant he examined it. "Good Lord!" he exclaimed. "You've found it after all. Do you know what those spots are?"

"No."

"They're blood. It's convincing proof. And it's Ahmad's shirt."

too." Swiftly he compared the laundry mark on it with the mark of the other garments in the drawer. I didn't dream that this austere man eyes actually seemed to glisten; and a high color suffused his lean, dark face. I thought of a hound hot upon the trail.

"It's the final proof!" he cried. "We'll get him now. I'll bring a confession out of him."

Then both of us drew up sharply. "Ahmad is coming into his room," I whispered. For I was sure that the faint sound I had heard had been the fall of Ahmad's light feet in the corridor.

Both of us instinctively braced ourselves. We didn't know what frenzy of desperation we would have to face if Ahmad saw us with the condemning evidence in our hands. A long moment dragged away.

Then Freeman stole to the door. He looked up and down the corridor.

"Must have been a rat," he exclaimed.

"Rather noisy for a rat."

"Maybe the wind. But we'd better get out of here. He'll come back any moment."

I started to pin the dinner shirt into even folds, just as I had found it.

TIGER TRAIL

Robbin. I believe you were no answer worth making. So we sat and watched the flood begin to recede. The flood was the sole results of the ten days of rain; now it was done. The river was quickly falling. Florida darkness is always watching. It comes so gently, a dark mist that the wind picks up. The color of the water deepened. The shadows were the jungle grew black. We heard the sounds of wild animals in the storm of the previous night. The smoke of the cigars and talked. One of the colored men came to tell us of a discovery. A rock jutting from the hillside about fifty yards from the river, he said. Just as the light had walked near it, he noticed a queer discoloration on the stone. It was evidently blood, he thought, and what like fragments of flesh. "I don't mean—human flesh?" he asked. "Yes, ever so slightly," he said. "I couldn't tell for sure, but it was some kind of flesh." "I couldn't waste any more time," he said. "I was standing perfectly on the hillside. Of course we saw plain. He was possibly feet distant; and if we possessed such an accurate knowledge of the geography of the place, might have easily been misled by a shrub or stump. He was standing perfectly still, and detection. He was trusting the shadows to obscure him. The detective stopped on the trail. "There?" the detective asked. The shadow did not move. "There? Answer, or I'll insist," Freeman insisted. He crossed the turf toward him. As a deer springs, the other man was something startling in the air. But even if he had, it would have been impossible, except for the blindest of the detective to have hit him. A pistol is never accurate at long range; and few men can shoot at all in the dark. In an instant our quarry slipped away and melted in the shadows. "He cried out and hunted the hill in vain. And after a while he met again, on the path. That doesn't beat the devil!" the detective greeted me. He was as pale as a ghost. "Long, there's things yet, about this I don't know."

Here's the Engine with Big Advantages

The remarkable popularity of the John Deere Farm Engine is due to several advantages which put it far in advance of all other types of farm engines. It's the engine that will run as long as there is fuel in the tank without one moment's attention, and it's unusually safe to operate. Put an end to engine worries with the

JOHN DEERE ENGINE

The cross-sectional view shows how the working parts of the John Deere are fully enclosed in a dust-proof case and automatically oiled. The self-oiling feature is one of the big reasons for the steady power and long life of this engine. The simple splash oiling system insures the thorough lubrication of every working part. Oil is kept circulating—very important working part bathed in a spray of oil while the engine is in operation. Oil-

"Do you think that was Ahmad?" "Couldn't have been. The Hindu was in the house when we left. But there isn't any doubt but that he committed the crime. I'm sure of that much, anyway. And now there's nothing to do but go down and find the stone that the colored man told us about."

We found the place where the body had been found, and struck off fifty yards directly to the left. The detective flashed his light about. He called out when he saw the stone. It was the only white rock in the vicinity, and it could not be mistaken. He knelt quickly beside it.

Then got up with a little snort of disgust. "That colored man was crazy. Nothing here—but by the Lord!" He scarcely breathed as he rubbed his hand over the surface of the rock. He bent until his eyes were within a few inches of its rough face.

"Somebody's beat us to it, that's all. This rock has just been washed off, with water. Either there's another amateur detective around this place—cleaned off the clots to make blood-tests—or else the walls of that old house have ears!"

"What do you think?" "What is there else to think but that some one came down here and destroyed the evidence?"

Freeman made a close examination of the soil about the rock. The imprint, and lifted it from the one clod at least. There was a bare bit of soil just beside the stone where no grass had grown, and in it we found the clear, sharp imprint of a man's heel.

"But it might be the track of the colored man that told us about it," I suggested.

"And it might not be, too. If I don't do anything else I ought to, at least, observe who I'm talking to, and all about him. That darky was barefoot."

"Then it's the track of the man we chased a moment ago?"

"Of course. He'd come up here, just before we did. He either collected the evidence for some amateur experiments of his own, or, what's more likely, destroyed it to protect the murderer. But there's something funny about this print." He bent over it with his light. "You see it's perfectly clear—a perfect imprint. Never saw a better. Ground happens to be particularly sticky, and there are no grass roots to interfere. Probably the water drained off the stone and softened it, in yesterday's rain. And the odd thing about it is that the heel hasn't any nails in it."

"A rubber heel then?" "Evidently—but not the kind of rubber heel you wear. Most of them have some sort of non-skid devices. This heel is solid rubber."

He took a long-bladed hunting knife from his pocket, and with infinite care, cut the earth around the imprint and lifted it from the ground. I thought it would crumble at first. But the soil itself had a sticky quality, and some of the grass roots around it helped to hold the little cube of earth together. "It isn't safe to leave it here," he explained. "But I'll be lucky if I get it to the house. And this, Dr.

Long, gives us something else to think about."

We thought about it as we walked back toward the house. And I thought of many things else, particularly those never-to-be-forgotten words of the elderly Southley:

"My daughter is going to marry Vilas Hayward", the old man had said.

Her face had given no sign whether or not he had spoken the truth. In the seconds that followed, it might have been that she glanced at me. But she didn't hold the glance long enough for me to tell for sure.

Her face as it had been was still before my eyes; soft-lined shadow-eyed. And I was scornful at my senseless optimism that I even presumed to doubt but that her father had spoken the truth—that I was even fool enough to hope otherwise.

Of course she had loved Vilas from the first. Nothing else mattered. She was the kind of woman, whose love subjugated all other things. Her kindness to me, the gentleness with which she looked and smiled, might have been simply the expression of a sweet girlishness such as most men, some time in their lives, are fortunate enough to know. And again it might have been contrivance, design, the purpose of which was hidden in the intricate web of the mystery. Perhaps unconsciously I was playing a part in the drama of the old house, and her relations with me were in some mysterious way involved.

Yet I couldn't bring myself to question her motives. It was simply impossible for me to accuse her of actual craft.

But in the test her true feelings had stood forth. She had shown where she really stood. The fact that I was to leave the house in disgrace meant nothing to her. Her love had spread its wings above all such things as this. I had not mattered a grain of dust on the windowsill. Of course I hadn't forgotten her hesitancy. Perhaps there had been regrets—indeed—but the truth had come out in the end.

And it had come out again in the little scene beside the marsh, when I had been ready to leave the estate with the coroner. It was not to be forgotten that her lips had told the detective of my dispute with the Haywards, bringing down upon me a certain measure of suspicion.

I remembered how she and Vilas Hayward had always been together. And it only cost a laugh to remember that I had attributed this fact to the mysterious forces that were at play in the old mansion, rather than to her own wish. Her love for him was evidently the most passionate, intense kind, hardly to be expected in the slender, appealing girl. She showed this fact in her willingness to sacrifice for him. But why had she been ready to kill him that night in the den? The look in her eye as she leaned across the table could not be mistaken.

Yet many times before, in the long years of the world, women have killed the men they loved. Conditions have arisen in which love itself was the power that pressed back the finger against the pistol trigger. It was not for any man to say. The question went deep into the mystery of a woman's heart. She had tried to kill him, and yet she loved him. He brought sorrow to her eyes; and yet it had made no difference. It was seemingly a love not to be measured. And I wished that I could go beyond the dull, strange reaches of the swamps, and never return to Southley Downs again.

"After all," I heard Inspector Freeman saying. "I don't see why I should worry about these things. Such things as the tracks that the niggers tell about in the road—and that chap who ran away from us on the hill—and all the rest of this funny business. I've got my man, and that's the only thing that matters."

I don't know how much he had said that I had not heard. My thoughts had been too busy. "So you're sure of it, are you?" "It's a clear case. Blood-stained shirt—ancient enmity—above all things, the fact that he's the one man, except of course Hayward's own son, that hasn't an alibi. He went outdoors with him. Nothing to it at all, Long."

We climbed the steps of the great house, and parted in the hall. The detective took the clod that held the imprint up to his room to deposit with the shirt. He was to meet me in the library immediately after.

I waited a long time for him to come. And when at last I heard him on the stair, he walked as slowly as a pall-bearer with a bier. Every step was distinct and slow, instead of the usual tap-tap of his quick motions.

Then I saw him in the candlelight at the door of the library. And never have I seen such bewilderment upon the face of a human being.

"This is the damndest house I ever saw!" he cried.

He stalked into the room with eyes wide and staring from sheer amazement. He sat down in a great chair, and rocked himself back and forth, his eyes on the floor. And now and then he swore gently, dazedly. I have seen the same look, in my professional experience, in the faces of men just picked up alive after startling automobile accidents.

"You look a trifle upset, inspector," I said. "What's the matter now?"

He turned slowly, still numbed and dazed. "I say the damndest! No case I was ever in had quite the devilish, upsetting, aggravating features that this one has. When I started to put away that clod that held the footprint, I opened the drawer where I had put the stained shirt."

THANKS FOR BLESSINGS
BIG BRAINS BETTER
CARNEGIE'S FIRST $400
A $500,000,000 BABY

Mount Rokatinia, on the Island of Paloweh, Dutch East Indies, blew up in a volcanic eruption. Half the island, six villages were destroyed, a thousand killed.

Yesterday news came that three more villages were wiped out by a tidal wave caused by a submarine earthquake.

We pay little attention to these deaths far away, a thousand or fifty thousand, little difference.

But we ought to observe with gratitude how many things might happen to us that do not happen.

Raditch, Croatian statesman murdered leader of peasants, is found to have a brain of abnormal weight, 1,459 grammes.

The average for eleven thousand human brains was 1,361 grammes.

All things being equal, a heavier brain is better than a lighter brain. But one of the heaviest brains ever weighed, that of Cuvier, the great naturalist, was lighter than that of a man who died in a British poorhouse.

Possibly the man in the poor house was also a genius, but never had a chance.

"Andrew Carnegie made his first $400 without spending a cent." That's how big fortunes often start. Carnegie bought $400 of insurance stock, gave his note in payment, paid for the stock with its dividends, owned it for nothing.

Joseph P. Day, learned land scientist, says the three greatest letters in the alphabet are "O. P. M." meaning "Other People's Money."

A quicker way to make money without capital is to have a good idea and push it. A way to plate metallic surfaces with aluminum something hitherto found impossible, is discovered and involves actually billions of dollars to be saved.

The invention will be applied to endless uses, from kitchenware to locomotives, and is expected to give automobiles a finish defying time and weather.

There are as good ideas in the human brain as ever came out of it. Try and find one.

Sears, Roebuck stockholders yesterday voted to increase capital stock by 800,000 shares. At market price that company is worth more than $500,000,000. Julius Rosenwald hardly expected that when he took hold of the company a few years ago.

Compared with other companies, General Motors, Standard Oil, U. S. Steel, etc., Sears, Roebuck is only a baby. We have the four billion dollar stock company. When will the 100 billion company arrive?

The death of Chang Tso-Lin, dynamited in his railway carriage, is attributed by a British writer, Lennox Simpson, to the Japanese "Black Dragon Society," which interests itself in patriotic Japanese affairs, and is said to have had a hand in the death of the Queen of Korea in 1895. In spite of the romantic name and the patriotism, the Japanese will probably dig out the facts.

They don't like any organization exercising powers outside of government, or controlling government, such as is tolerated, some times, in other countries.

The Greatest Profit Maker Ever Devised For Dry-Land Farmers!

In those regions subject to intense winds, severe winters, and scanty rainfall—where crops are threatened by oil drift, winter-killing, and drought—the need of a successful means for proper seeding has been keenly felt.

This need has been supplied by the Superior Deep-Furrow Drill. This amazing new invention takes 75 per cent of the gamble out of wheat raising. There are several deep-furrow drills, but the SUPERIOR is the most successful deep-furrow drill ever built.

Why Superior Deep-Furrow Drilling Mean Bigger Crops

The Superior Deep Furrow Drill penetrates any kind of soil, throwing up high ridges. It puts the seed down into moist soil. It gives the plants room to tiller out. It produces crops where failure would otherwise be almost certain by—

1. Protecting crops from winter-killing
2. Protecting crops from soil blowing
3. Conserving the moisture.
4. Making the seed go farther

That is why we say that the Superior Deep Furrow Drill is the greatest profit maker ever devised for dry-land farmers.

THE SPIRIT OF NEIGHBORLINESS

If You've Ever Borrowed a Cup of Sugar--

WHEN you must borrow a cup of sugar, or the use of the telephone or a little gas for the car, why do you unhesitatingly appeal to your neighbor?

GROCER, telephone company, filling station would eventually supply your need. But to meet the immediate contingency you call across the back-yard fence. The sugar--and it's good sugar--is handed over. That's service, prompt, efficient, honest. But there's a certain something more to that little transaction--an indefinable something that can scarcely be described in the printed word or illustrated in a catalog. It's a feeling of mutual understanding and reciprocity, as of one who, having lived long among strangers, returns again to his own people; it's the same feeling that inspires this and our similar messages to you.

It's The Spirit of Neighborliness.

AFTER all we're more than mere merchant and patron. We're neighbors. And if service, prompt, efficient, honest, is essential to true neighborliness--and we believe it is--that's the service that we sincerely offer and promise to you.

CONGRESSMAN JONES VISITED PERRYTON LAST WEEK

Congressman Jones, Amarillo, Texas, representative of this district in the United States house of representatives, was in Perryton on Thursday of last week visiting with his many friends in this section. He had been visiting at his old Miami home and availed himself of a chance opportunity to come to Perryton.

In the recent July primary, Jones received the approval of his constituency for his service in congress by receiving an overwhelming majority over his opponent, Bell of Paducah. Ochiltree County did her share in piling up the big Jones vote. Marvin Jones represents one of the largest districts, both in area and in population of any man in the lower house. There were four times as many votes polled in this district in the recent primary, as in any other district in the state.

Mrs. E. W. Witt was called to the bedside of her brother, Geo. Mills, Neosho, Mo. on last Friday night because of serious illness. A message came Saturday notifying them of his death. Mr. Witt and sons left to attend the funeral services. The sons returned at once, but Mr. and Mrs. Witt will remain for a two weeks visit.

Rev. E. C. Raney and family and Misses Belle and Gertrude Witt drove to Canadian, Texas, Monday. Miss Gertrude will attend the Clarendon College this year. She was the banner student of the Perryton schools last year and the Clarendon school bids for this type of a student.

Mrs. Lawrence Lamb and children of Canadian are visiting in the J. N. Conley home this week.

Misses Rhoda and Gladys Phelps of Gray are assisting at the People's Supply during the sale.

Mrs. J. T. Ridgeway returned to her home at Dallas Tuesday after spending several weeks with her mother, Mrs. Lettie Morrow, who has been critically ill. Mrs. Morrow is now able to be up and about and is greatly improved.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Brown of near Gray, and family returned Wednesday from Hot Springs, Arkansas, where they have been for the past month.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Wilbanks and daughter, Trixie Lee, of Amarillo came in Monday for a few days stay in Perryton. Mrs. Wilbanks and Miss Trixie are visiting with friends while Mr. Wilbanks attends to business.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee P. Blake, Hooker, Oklahoma, and Miss Jony Sims, Norman, Oklahoma, visited in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Van W. Stewart, the fore part of this week.

Mrs. John N. Stump and granddaughter, Miss Chester Carter, left Thursday for Vista, Missouri, to visit several weeks with Mrs. Stump's mother. Mr. Stump expects to join them later.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Daley and sons returned Tuesday from a visit with relatives at Norton, Kansas.

Ed McMillen and daughter, Lucilla, and Ross Thurman left Saturday to take Mrs. Jake Thomas and children to their home at Lyn-drieth, New Mexico.

STORM CAVES NEEDED FOR DISTRICT SCHOOLS

"How many districts have storm caves at the school house?" asks the September 1 issue of the Oklahoma Farmer-Stockman.

"How many, many times we read in newspapers about a tornado that has swooped down on a community, striking a schoolhouse, killing and crippling precious little lives; all because not even a little of the school money had been used for building a cave."

The Stage Stand school in Stephens county of southwest Oklahoma gives an example of the need for a storm cave at the school house. This school was destroyed about a year ago by a tornado. Five years before a cave had been built and had never been used. But when the storm struck, nothing was left of the school; but the children were all safe.

For five years the people of Stage Stand community had doubted the value of a cave at the schoolhouse. Five minutes' use proved that no school house should be without a cave.

Orville, son of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Cook, broke an arm Sunday while trying to crank a Ford.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Hamker have moved in from their Lipscomb county ranch to send their boys to the Perryton school.

BIG WHEAT CROP IS FILED ON GROUND

Western Oklahoma harvested one of the biggest wheat crops in its history this year. Take Cimmaron county, westernmost county of the state, for example.

The Oklahoma Farmer-Stockman of September 1 reports that over one and one-half million bushels of wheat is now piled on the ground in this one county for the lack of storage space. One local cooperative elevator at Keyes claims the distinction of being the only elevator in the world to handle 125,000 of wheat during course of construction. This one elevator has already handled over 200,000 bushels of wheat and expects to handle 300,000 bushels.

This wheat was raised on land which has been heralded as the home of sand storms and hot winds—the famous "no man's land" of frontier history. It has proved to be some of the best wheat land in the world.

Mrs. W. B. Lilly returned Sunday from Dallas where she has been visiting with relatives several weeks. Mr. Lilly met her at Canadian.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Claybrook and children of Amarillo spent the week end in the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs. J. M. North.

C. W. Jr., Lela and Cleo Callaway spent last week visiting with their aunt, Mrs. C. E. Cooper, northwest of town.

"The Safest Investment In The World"

Perryton Townsite Lots Offered At A 15 Per Cent Discount Until October 1st

Know the satisfaction of owning a piece of earth—a site that will someday be your home. Decide now to quite paying rent and to own a home of your own. Or perhaps you are considering it from an investment standpoint. Nothing could be safer. As Perryton grows—your property increases in value. With a Junior College next fall, Perryton should double in population. Lots will be in greater demand—values will increase.

That is why we insist that this is "The Safest Investment in the World!"

You Let One Week Go By Without Investigating!

Are You Going To Let Another One Slip Away?

Last week we announced a 15 per cent discount on all Perryton Townsite Lots purchased during the month of September. Several took advantage of this offer and got their pick of the 150 lots we are offering. But how about YOU! Are you one of the few that bought or one of the many that let the week slip by without investigating.

Think of buying townsite lots at less money than they would have cost nine years ago when Perryton was first opened! That is our offer—15 per cent less money with the taxes paid this year. You can't lose. It's the surest bet in the world. A golden opportunity, that is slipping away, day by day.

Lot Prices Advance Oct. 1st

We also announced that on October 1, lot prices will be advanced. This advance is justified. Think of the way real estate values have increased in Perryton during the past nine years. Think of the way Perryton is growing. Vacant lots are gradually becoming new homes and business sites. Dozens of new homes are being built now. Play safe! Come in at once and look into this proposition! Many desirable locations await your choice! Act today!

Liberal Terms

A PLEASANT SURPRISE

I am here again and hope that this won't hit the waste basket as before. If you really knew what a pleasant surprise, I had last Saturday morning. I was quilting very busily when I heard some one talking. Thinking that it was a neighbor, I did not get up, but while paying Mr. Cutter, I heard some one say that they wanted to surprise Ma. Of course, I yelled out and said,

"You best not talk." Of course, I knew his voice. Why not, when I had raised him from the time he was 10 years of age.

He was just my own boy coming in from Washington with his bride. I never thought of him coming to my humble little home, the first thing, but they were tired enough to stop at the first resting place and give me a surprise. It was such a pleasant surprise. Your kind mothers are always glad to have the children come at any time.

I am sure that he has made a very wise choice and feel that she will make him a good comforter and companion in his old days. She was a total stranger to us but I am so well pleased and I believe she will be a good companion and a Godsend to me. She seems like such a natural god, kind, sensible lady. I feel that I, as well as Allen, will have a good comforter and a friend to confide in and she will be near me.

I am not saying that my other children are not good but they are scattered so far and wide and those that are near have their own cares and duties to perform and I can't see them every day. They want me to stay with them but I so much enjoy helping myself along as I am able. There may be a time coming when they can use their Good Samaritan spirit.

It is not that they don't treat me nice. No! No! I naturally love to be alone. I am in such good company. See, I have such a good confiding friend to talk to all day long when alone. God is my helper for I have only one day to do all that I can. Yesterday is gone with all its care and little ups and downs with the long stitches and crooked lines on the quilts. Tomorrow will bring another day for us to our work. Don't worry about what it might bring. One day is enough for us to perform our work. I will ring off now, else I won't get this one days work completed. Grandma Dowers

Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Johnson and daughter, Mary Beth, left Friday for Corpus Christi where they will spend the winter.

Hints for the Home

by Nancy Hart

Modernistic furniture has achieved a great vogue, and often comes unpainted so purchasers may decorate it according to fancy.

Many who enjoy doing this work, however, find that, when applying a second color, the paint brush in untrained hands leaves wavy, crooked lines instead of straight ones.

If this be your experience, remember that adhesive tape may be used as a straight edge stencil to give clean, straight lines and edges. Ordinary zinc oxide tape, commonly referred to as ZO (zinc oxide) adhesive tape, may be applied directly to the surface to be painted and arranged in the desired design. If edges of tape are in close contact with the surface, no paint will flow under, and a first rate painting job can be done by a novice.

THINKING OUT LOUD

By Samalman

Premier Mussolini says that women change their minds frequently. We hope the Premier doesn't think he has discovered a new truth.

A telephone girl is discovered who is said not to have given a wrong number in 25 years of service. Perhaps the line was always busy.

"Sound" motion pictures are rapidly being developed to such a point that soon the silent drama will be a thing of the past—then just imagine hearing all those kisses.

Add smiles: As happy as a Scotchman at a free-lunch counter.

There are "wets" and "drys" but most of our politicians seem to be either "dry or wet drys."

Now that spoken words will take the place of subtitles at the movies, we fear many persons will forget how to read.

Thousands of prisoners now have cells equipped with radios. Everything is being done to make the prisoners feel at home—they can even be kept awake by their neighbors' radio sets.

GOOD COWS PAY THIS MASTER FARMER

I have always had dairy cows on my farm and they have always paid. For about 15 years I sold butter extensively, selling an average of 75 pounds a week, but for the past 2 1-2 years have been selling whole milk. My milk has averaged between 3.25 and 4.25 per cent fat and I have produced as much as 100 gallons of milk per day from 25 cows.

In order to produce clean milk we built a model barn with cement floors and keep it as clean as a parlor. The barnyard fertilizer from my cows fertilizes the land that produces the feed that makes up their ration.

The main factors in dairying are:
1. Registered sires, with proved production record.
2. Cows with production records.
3. Balanced rations.
4. Cleanliness.
5. Cowtesting and records.
6. Labor-saving devices.
7. Comfortable, clean quarters.
8. Abundance of fresh water.

9. Pasturage for economical production.
10. Silage.
11. Kind treatment.

RESTRICTED IMMIGRATION

There are now in the United States about 8,000,000 unnaturalized aliens. The Commissioner General of Immigration, Harry E. Hull, says that the United States annual pay roll and income exceeds that of the entire world, and he believes that this advantageous position of our Nation can be protected only by restrictive immigration laws. While the United States is willing to take in as many immigrants as it can absorb, Mr. Hull believes thoroughly in the new theory of national self-preservation, and immigration which anticipates the admission into this country of only those who will embrace American principles in every particular, and thus become good and fit citizens to be added to our native born.

FIVE-CENT CIGARS

The five-cent cigar is being dressed up and is "coming back," according to a survey recently made in the tobacco field. Five-cent cigars today amount to well over fifty per cent of the total production, so cut out some of your extravagance, if you must smoke, and join the partisans of the five-cent smokes. Some of the best sellers are being wrapped in cellophane, which gives them the "de luxe" appearance of higher-priced cigars and keeps them fresh and sweet. One company has found that after dressing up its five-cent cigars in this way that their sales have doubled.

GREAT-ROAD-BUILDING OUTLAY

An estimate issued by the American Automobile Association places the probable outlay for highway construction in the United States this year at $1,360,025,776, which is almost $12 for every man, woman and child in the Nation. Thus the amount spent on the highways alone exceeds the entire appropriations of the United States government in that day when Thomas B. Reid, Speaker of the House of Representatives, met the complaints of the people because Congress had appropriated more than a billion dollars to carry on the Government for a year, with the retort: "This is a billion dollar country!"

The total mileage of highways of all types to be constructed by the various States during 1928 totals nearly 31,000 miles.

Texas produces large quantities of lime stone. The annual value of the product is about $2,500,000.

he could fellowship in purity and discovered Aquila and Priscilla, recently put out of Rome because they were Jews. They were also tentmakers. Paul's well-learned trade. This couple were taken to Ephesus and did fine missionary work in that city.

Work started, as was customary, in the synagogue where both Jews and Greeks formed the audience. Soon Silas and Timothy came from Macedonia. Their arrival seemed to have given still greater courage to Paul who was still bolder in "testifying to the Jews than Jesus was the Christ." Those who would not believe began to blaspheme.

Again we note the purposeful and resourceful Paul, who can be an inspiration to any quitter, as he plans a new method of campaign in carrying forward his consuming purpose. This time he made use of the home of Titus Justus, a believer, and there preached and taught as the people became apt pupils. Many believed and were baptized.

When problems and plots were extra hard the Lord said to Paul in a night vision "Be not afraid, but speak and hold not thy peace." Such messages were heartening to Paul in other disturbing situations. Read with care Acts 16:9; 22:18; 23:11; 27:23-25. Paul wrought in Corinth for a year and a half while there wrote his first epistles; I and II Thessalonians. The nature of the truths that were announced were akin to those found in I Timothy 2:3-7. The Golden Text is another clear statement "For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and Him crucified." I Cor. 2:2.

KNOW TEXAS

Honey producing has become an important industry in Texas during the past few years. There are now about 300,000 hives in the state.

Texas has inexhaustible sand and gravel resources suitable for highway construction.

There are in the state enormous supplies of several kinds of fuel, natural gas, petroleum, coal and lignite.

Much carbon is made in Texas oil fields from waste gas. Most of this carbon is shipped to tire manufacturers.

Texas is the leading state in number of beef cattle and number of sheep, number of mules.

TRI-STATE FAIR TO DRAW CROWDS WITH FREE GATE

AMARILLO, Texas, Sept. 5.—Two of the outstanding entertainment features of the Tri-State Free Fair, September 22 to 29, will be the Schooley and Collins Winter Garden Revue with eighty people participating, including a chorus of more than 30 girls, and Leonard Stroud's Rodeo.

The Rodeo performance offered by Stroud is an annual attraction at many of the biggest cities and fairs in the nation. Included in Rodeo acts are some of the leading cowboys and cowgirls in daring breath-taking exhibitions.

The Winter Garden Revue of 80 people, one of the highest type of revues for big state fairs, will furnish beautiful and rollicking entertainment every evening in front of the big grandstand.

Indian dances, football games and a number of other entertainment features are scheduled. The gate will be free for the first time in the history of the fair.

For the first time in American history, more than half of the country's population resides in the big cities. The rural and small town population predominated until recently. In the presidential campaign we are witnessing the struggle for big city domination in government. "The side-walks of New York," said Elizabeth Tilton, "are pitted against the frontier." Is our representative government safe in the hands of that leadership exemplified by city-made Tammany, or would we fare better under the guidance of one born and trained in the open stretches west of the Mississippi? Jefferson feared the mentality of big cities and rejoiced in the domination of the frontier in our political life.

Herbert Hoover said in his acceptance speech exactly what he intended to do with regard to farm relief, if elected president. Farm leaders, with only a few exceptions, have commended his stand. What is the Hoover plan? Careful attention to the mechanics of marketing and distribution of agricultural products; adequate tariff protection for farmers as well as manufacturers; a Federal farm loan board equipped with authority and resources to meet farm problems as they may arise from time to time; frequent conferences with farm leaders for determining the best course to pursue. Governor Smith promises, to be sure, that if elected he will call out a remedy. The man who has never lived outside the City of New York, however, can hardly inspire the confidence of the farmers as one born on an Iowa farm, and who for many years has known agriculture and dealt with its problems.

Newspaper readers soon will see how much truth there was in the declaration of Al Smith that there would be "no boloney" in his campaign for the presidency. The day after his nomination he was reported to have refused to do certain poses for photographs. But since the Tammany-loving dailies of the big cities have pictured Smith holding grimly to the leash of a big dog, driving a fire truck, and in a Smith family smiling contest. If not "boloney" what slang word is more suitable?

New York friends of Governor Smith hoot at the preachers for opposing the arch-enemy of prohibition. The same element hooted at them for daring to advocate prohibition in the first place. Hoover typifies temperate speech and temperate action.

Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Coffee and daughters, Mary Margaret and Nell were Shattuck visitors Saturday.

APPROPRIATIONS

ROADS THAN SCHOOLS

D. C.—The extension of the federal government of the field of rural education, approximately one-tenth of the total appropriation for the year 1928-29, has been advanced for Federal building, the Director of the work department of the U. S. Warburton, estimated that each

Hawaii now receives $30,000 without requirement of state match this sum with the federal appropriation. The remainder of the fund is divided among the states in proportion to population, and with the result that the state must contribute an equal amount of money to the federal government in order to qualify for the extension of the federal government is about $100,000,000.

Actually, the states, on the whole, do much more than their share. For the current year appropriations were $100,000,000.

The expenditures for extension of other activities, Warburton noted that the federal government has spent approximately $100,000,000 in aid of roads, and about seven cents per acre for the whole population. The federal government has spent one-twentieth of the cost of farm equipment purchased in 1927, and to about one-half per cent of the value of the crop.

THE GRASS GETS AHEAD

The grass, so called because of creeping stolons, which is imported from China about 1890, has proved to be an invader of the south, especially on the drier soils. This grass is propagated in much the same way as Bermuda grass. In its growth the grass is protected from grazing animals by the closeness with which the leaves and blades adhere to the soil. This enables it to be established in pastures even when the land is being grazed. After the grass has grown somewhat vertically to a height of three or four feet in this state it makes a pasture and remains green and dry up. Centuries ago it was not adapted to northwestern conditions.

Richardson-Dodd

The Methodist parsonage in this city was the setting for a very pretty wedding at six o'clock on last Saturday afternoon, when Miss Nora Richardson was united in marriage with Mr. Cecil Dodd. The living room of the parsonage was beautifully decorated with purple and rose asters. The ceremony was read by Rev. E. C. Raney with Miss Marie Kent and Mr. Vance Apple attending as brides maid and best man. The bride wore a lovely frock of navy crepe and velvet. Miss Kent was dressed in a beautiful autumn brown gown.

Immediately after the service, the bridal party left for Woodward, Oklahoma where they were met by Cecil Dodd, a brother of the bridegroom, with whom they motored to Kink to visit for a few days in the home of Mr. Dodd's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Dodd, former residents of Perryton. Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Dodd and the newly weds will make an extended visit in the Ozarks before they return to Perryton.

Mrs. Dodd is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Richardson, pioneer citizens of this county. She is a graduate of the Perryton schools, later attending business college at Wichita. After completing her course, she entered the employ of the W. B. LaMaster Realty Co. where she is a trusted and valued employee. She will resume her work as soon as she returns from the honeymoon trip.

Mr. Dodd has lived in Perryton for a number of years and is one of Perryton's most popular young business men. During the time that he has been here, he has won the confidence of Perryton people. The good wishes of their many friends follow these young people.

Hanna-Miller

Miss Opal Hanna, Perryton, and Harry T. Miller, Waka, were quietly married Sunday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock, in the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Robert Clark.

The bridal couple will make their home at Waka where Mr. Miller is putting in a wheat crop.

Beach-Davis

Mrs. Mamie Beach and Mr. R. C. Davis of Darrouzett, Texas motored to Perryton on last Saturday, where they were united in marriage at the Methodist parsonage by Rev. E. C. Raney, pastor of the Perryton Methodist church.

Mr. Davis is one of the prosperous farmers of the Darrouzett section. They will make their home on his farm located four miles west of Darrouzett.

Scroggs-Janzen

On Wednesday afternoon, August 29, Rev. E. C. Raney and Rev. W. C. Bryan of this city drove to the home of Miss Irene Scroggs in the northwest part of the county, where the marriage ceremony uniting Miss Scroggs and Mr. Sam Janzen in the holy bonds of matrimony, was read by Rev. Raney.

The ceremony was performed at four o'clock in the afternoon, after which ice cream and cake was served by the mother of the bride to about thirty guests. Mr. and Mrs. Janzen will make their home on a farm near Booker.

Mr. and Mrs. K. W. Claybaugh and two sons, K and Seth, Oklahoma City, visited over the week end in the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Claybaugh, returning home Monday afternoon.

BROOMCORN MARKET REVIEW

Notwithstanding the unfavorable marketing weather which, for two days curtailed receipts, unusual activity again featured the marketing of broomcorn in the Lindsay district for the week ending August 25 according to G. B. Alguire of the Broomcorn Market New Service, U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Increased orders and inquiries from manufacturers, more confidence in present price levels for Lindsay broomcorn, principally on account of certain of the trade now taking on supplies, together with the fact that many dealers who have driven the district are freely predicting less tonnage there than was earlier expected, appear to be the outstanding factors which are influencing the heavy buying movement at this time.

Street marketing at Lindsay this year is attracting offerings from points throughout the district and particularly the more outlying sections, some broomcorn having been reported in from southern Oklahoma. Producers, however, who live close to market and who are in position to watch the trend of the broomcorn movement closely are not selling freely. Since some two hundred and sixty five carloads already have been marketed, mostly from outlying points, it is generally felt that the street marketing, in point of receipt, has probably reached its peak for the year. This also is indicated by increased shipments from minor shipping markets which usually are the result of country point buying and slower selling attitude on the part of producers.

Receipts at the various markets of the district to date were 265 carloads of which 139 were marketed last week, 90 carloads the previous week as against only 36 carloads the week before. Shipments for the district as of August 24 were as follows: Blanchard 1, Bradley 9, Alex 9, Marlow 10, Chichasha 10, Lindsay 10, Mayaville 2, Pauls Valley 18 and Wayne 7, or a total of 169 carloads. Storage in the district totaled 96 carloads or about 35 per cent of the broomcorn which has been marketed this year.

Offerings generally, for the week, showed a decided improvement in quality over the week previous principally on account of the late cut offerings which appear to be somewhat better, both in color and growth. The fact too that the common and stained broomcorn comes in stocks which can be produced more cheaply than the Lindsay standard may also have factored in the early marketing of the less desirable brush.

GET ON CASH BASIS
"Crops and prices being what they are 1928 should see a few more farmers freed from the yoke of the chattel mortgage. Food and feed crops are abundant and prices of hogs, cream, eggs, etc., are good which will make the crop money available for paying debts."
"No more deadly curse has ridden the farmers in Oklahoma and Texas than the chattel mortgage, usually given to secure money spent for food and feed which could be raised on the farm."
"With more milk cows, more flocks of hens, more hogs, more and more feed crops we should soon arrive at the day when no man calling himself a farmer will have to borrow money to live on while making another crop."—Carl Williams in the Oklahoma Farmer-Stockman, September 1.

The Chinchilla rabbit, introduced into this country only ten years ago, has gained rapidly in popularity and has been persistently promoted, particularly for its fur value. According to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the Chinchilla offers unusual possibilities to persons who will develop its good qualities. Effort should be made to increase the size of the breed and to improve the color and texture of the fur, as the future of the Chinchilla depends solely upon its value as a food and fur producer. These rabbits should be bred only three times a year, instead of four or five as is the general practice, and should be allowed to raise only four or five young in a litter.

SAVE THE FEED CROPS FOR A TIME OF FAMINE

For the fifth time in as many and north Texas will harvest bumper feed crops. Since 1924 grain and rough feed crops have been abundant with a few local exceptions.

Such a series of good crop years is the exception. It has happened once before in the last 30 years, according to the September 1 Oklahoma Farmer-Stockman. From 1904 to 1923 was a period of bumper feed crops. But between that and the present period were several years of famine as 1911, 1918 and 1923 will readily bring to mind.

Livestock farmers have enjoyed largely because they have raised feed to meet the needs of their stock. During that time more good herds of milk cows and more flocks of carefully bred and culled hens have been built up than Oklahoma has ever seen. Interest in sheep has been revived and flocks are growing in size and numbers. More farmers are raising hogs than any time since the war.

To maintain the livestock now on farms we must hoard feed from the years of plenty to the years of scarcity. Profitable livestock production cannot be based on using up each season the feed produced the one before. In years like 1911, 1918 and 1923 the feed produced is wholly inadequate. Following such years feed either must be bought or stock must be sold. At such times the value of distressed stock is low and feed is correspondingly high; the man with stock loses money whether he sticks or sells.

Feed in a well-built stack and grain in the bin over this winter's need may be the means of getting by 1929 and into 1930 with the livestock intact and without buying a lot of shipped-in feed. The surplus of feed on nearly every farm this fall is a chance to insure against a feed failure next year.
