Hike in food costs lifts consumer prices .6 percent

By The Associated Press

A sharp increase in food costs helped lift overall consumer prices by 0.6 percent in January, the steepest advance in nine months, the Labor Department said today.

The car business, meanwhile, continues to show a strong recovery from its depressed state during the 1981-82 recession: Sales are soaring and company profits are setting records.

The January rise in inflation followed a revised 0.2 percent increase in December and was the highest since prices rose 0.7 percent in April 1983, the Labor Department said. December's gain originally was estimated at 0.3 percent.

In January, food costs shot up 1.6 percent. The increase was expected by economists, who said last summer's prolonged withering heat and drought, coupled with the severe cold weather earlier this winter, made more-expensive food inevitable.

But they do not foresee a quick return to the torrid inflation pace of just a few years ago.

"Undue concern about accelerating inflation in 1984 should be avoided," said forecaster Donald Ratajczak of Georgia State University. He predicted that most of the weather-related food price increases would slow during the spring.

The major automakers said Thursday that mid-February sales of new cars jumped 73.3 percent from a year earlier. It was their best performance for the period since 1973.

The major manufacturers reported on Thursday that sales in mid-February jumped 73.3 percent from a year earlier. It was their best performance for the period since 1973.

Among the Big Three, Chrysler Corp. led the way with a 85.1 percent increase. General Motors Corp. was up 76.2 percent and Ford Motor Co. gained 64.8 percent.

Also Thursday, Chrysler reported that it earned a company record of $701 million in 1983 — including $118.3 million in the final three months — on a 31.5 percent jump in sales.

That pushed the industry's profit total for 1983 to a record $6.1 billion. The best previous total was in 1977 when the companies earned $5.18 billion.

Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca, at a news conference announcing the earnings, said the industry's recovery was fragile and the industry could "go back in the soup" quickly if the federal budget deficits push up interest rates.

Many economists believe interest rates will rise in the months ahead, but few think the increases will be enough to choke off the economy's strong momentum.

The latest evidence of the economy's vigor was the Commerce Department's report Thursday that orders to factories for "big ticket" durable goods rose 1.1 percent in January.

It said orders for durable goods — items expected to last three years or longer — totaled $99.2 billion in January. Such orders rose 1.7 percent in December and were up 3.4 percent in November.

All of the January increase came from a 17.9 percent surge in orders for primary metals such as steel, aluminum and copper. Analysts attributed this strong showing to more demand for steel for use in autos, building construction and bridge and highway work. Orders for primary metals fell 9.5 percent in December.

Without the increase in primary metals, factory orders would have actually dropped 1 percent during the month as orders in both the machinery and transportation segments declined slighlty.

In other business and economic developments Thursday:

—The U.S. League of Savings Institutions warned that the government's budget deficits threaten the dream of home ownership, and said that to ensure enough capital to meet the demands of Americans for homes, the government should reduce its spending, cut taxes on interest and dividend income and increase taxes on the amount taxpayers' consume of their income.

—The Federal Reserve Board reported that the nation's basic supply of money expanded by $300 million in mid-February. The increase was less than the credit markets expected, but did little to curb fears that the Federal Reserve might soon restrict the availability of credit further and lift interest rates, analysts said.

—Los Angeles-based First Interstate Bank predicted Thursday that inflation for 1984 will run at about 7½ percent, about 50 percent higher than was expected last fall.

—The Wickes Cos. says a creditors committee has agreed to a reorganization plan that would settle the retailer's pre-bankruptcy debt and permit Wickes to emerge from bankruptcy proceedings. It had filed for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy law on April 24, 1982.

—K mart Corp., the nation's second largest retailer, and Hechinger Co. plan to jointly market discount do-it-yourself products in specialized warehouse stores through a new venture called The Home Team Inc..

—LTV Corp. and Republic Steel Corp. officials held another meeting with Justice Department antitrust chief J. Paul McGrath to discuss alternatives to their $770 million merger, which the department blocked last week. Thursday's meeting, which lasted 20 minutes, was the second between the two sides in as many days and future sessions are planned.

—Conoco Inc. said it will develop its North Slope oil and natural gas discovery at Milne Point, which it estimated would produce 30,000 barrels of oil a day in 1986.

Democratic rivals begin final push for New Hampshire

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Democratic campaign rivals are beginning their final push for next week's New Hampshire primary after a gentlemanly debate in which the pack left presidential front-runner Walter F. Mondale free to continue a non-stop attack on President Reagan.

"Mr. Reagan, whether its Lebanon or arms control or the budget deficit or whatever, is a president who is not providing ... leadership. I will do so," Mondale declared Thursday night in the 90-minute televised debate.

"I know what I'm doing ... I would know what I'm doing the first day and I would take charge."

It was the final eight-way candidate confrontation before New Hampshire's voters deliver the first primary verdict next Tuesday.

There was plenty of good-natured kidding, and even a self-deprecating remark or two, such as when Sen. John Glenn conceded he was "dull but not boring."

Former South Dakota Sen. George McGovern sparked laughter with his explanation that he would agree to serve as vice president. "I don't have a job now," he said.

"Not only that but my apartment burned down last May. I don't even have a place to live. I need help," he said.

For the most part, there were none of the sharp attacks against Mondale that characterized earlier debates in New Hampshire and Iowa.

That left him free to continue his assault against the president, an approach he has taken since his overwhelming victory in Monday's Iowa caucuses.

"That government is out to lunch and we can't tolerate that," he said after the debate, which was sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

"I promise to defeat Ronald Reagan and provide presidential leadership," Mondale said.

Mondale is favored to win the New Hampshire primary next Tuesday and even one of his rivals, Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, says a strong victory for the former vice president would all but wrap up the nomination.

But Hollings and six others in the race used their part of the debate to appeal directly to New Hampshire's voters.

"The idea that what was cast in Iowa is irreversible is nonsense," said Glenn, hoping to end a slide that has challenged his claim to be Mondale's principal opponent. Glenn came in fifth in Iowa with less than 4 percent support.

Councilmen receive death threats

WEAUBLEAU, Mo. (AP) — Two city councilmen say they got death threats just a day after the mayor was found killed by a high-powered rifle, and one admitted, "I've got butterflies in my stomach right now."

Curtis Bailey and Henry Jerki said Thursday that they received the telephoned threats Wednesday, a day after Bailey found Mayor Ollie Cooper lying face down in a pool of blood at Cooper's farm.

The mayor's death followed a year of violence and threats against the city council that have left some lawmakers in this small southwest Missouri town frightened and angry.

The caller Wednesday told each of the men, "You're next."

Cooper, Bailey and Jerki were all up for re-election in April. Two other council members were not threatened.

Hickory County Sheriff William V. Kennedy said Thursday that he was not treating the threats as serious. "I think they're cranks," he said.

But Bailey, 69, said, "I haven't slept all night. I've got butterflies in my stomach right now."

"At night I pull the shades and I don't know whether I'm going to be shot at through the window or what," said Bailey's wife, Irene. "This town is about to scare me to death."

Jerki said he was puzzled but not frightened by the threat.

"I'm not worried. I've been shot at in World War II — why should this scare me?" he said. "I don't know what it's all about."

The sheriff was investigating tips from residents in the town of about 400 people, located 100 miles southeast of Kansas City. But there were no solid leads, sheriff's dispatcher Dennis Hutton said Thursday.

Last year, someone threw sticks of dynamite onto the lawns of Jerki, Bailey and another council member, Claude Davenport, Bailey said. Attached were notes warning: "Get out. You're in trouble," he said. The source was never found.

And other violent incidents occurred: Two shots were fired at Cooper's pickup truck last summer, and a horse, two bulls and a calf on his farm were killed.

Bailey, who said he was Cooper's best friend, found the body of the 68-year-old mayor at his 500-acre farm Tuesday afternoon, after Cooper's worried wife called to say he had never come home for lunch.

The death initially was believed to be accidental. Cooper was using a hay hook to move bales of hay when he died, and Hickory County Coroner Robert R. Boller initially concluded he had suffered a heart attack and fallen on the sharp tool, causing a wound in his neck.

But a funeral director discovered another wound in his back, and the death was reclassified a homicide.

Autopsy results Thursday showed Cooper had been shot in the back and left hip with a high-powered .30-caliber rifle from a distance of about 30 feet.

Some council members said Cooper had made enemies in some of his personal and business dealings.

"I know that several people didn't like him," said Davenport.

"Ollie was a lot more outspoken than most people around here," said Joel Verno.

But none said he had any trouble getting along with Cooper.

Hickory County Attorney John Parks, who also serves as attorney for Weaubleau, described Cooper as "well-liked by everybody." He was "conscientious and trying to do a good job as mayor," Parks said.

Bailey and Davenport both said an ordinance prohibiting people from keeping livestock in town had angered some people who kept hogs, but they noted it had been more than a year since the issue came up.

"You can't please everybody when you're in a public job," Parks said. "But still, this is a city council in a town of less than 500 that meets once a month. There's just not enough potential for friction."

Candidate 'purrfect'

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Mary Harmon may be considered catty by some. But the Art Department at Midland College thought she was the purrfect candidate for Homecoming Queen and put the 3-year-old feline on the ballot.

Surprisingly, when the votes were counted last week the cat was first runner-up. That is, until college officials smelled a rat, checked into her background and discovered she wasn't even a registered student.

Naturally she was disqualified.

Mary's owner, MC art teacher John Harmon, said she probably beat out several college lovelies because of her beautiful long hair. "She probably had the best winter coat of any of the students."

Mary, whose large green eyes and mysterious aura may have done more than anything else to capture the hearts of MC students, is interested in outdoor sports and art. She spends her leisure time previewing student art projects in the Fine Arts Building and keeping the campus' rabbit population to a minimum.

Harmon said Mary didn't really mind giving up her title. "She decided the opening of the rabbit season was more important to her."

But she was rather disappointed she couldn't perform her mewsical talent presentation.

Mary "Kitty" Harmon was unsuccessful, in more ways than one, in her attempt to don the queen's crown during Midland College Homecoming festivities Thursday night.

'Bubble boy' killed by rogue antibody

Shearer

HOUSTON (AP) — David, who lived virtually his entire life in a series of germ-free bubbles because he had no antibodies to fight disease, died when one type of antibody proliferated and ran amok through his body, doctors say.

Dr. William T. Shearer said at a news conference Thursday that the "totally unexpected" proliferation of the white blood cells was probably caused by an Oct. 21 operation intended to give the 12-year-old the immunity he never had.

But the Roman Catholic priest who pronounced the last sacraments 10 hours before the boy's death at 8 p.m. Wednesday said doctors at Texas Children's Hospital had no choice but to attempt the procedure designed to let David enter the dirty outside world.

"It was the only thing to do," the Rev. Laurence Connelly said of the transplant of specially treated bone marrow into the boy's system. "It was the right thing to do. And the next person will make it. I just thought he would make it.

"I don't think there are any regrets" about the operation, Connelly said. "Science should not regret it, the family should not regret it, the loved ones should never regret what has happened. This was the right and the proper thing to do."

Private Catholic funeral services for David were scheduled for Saturday.

Connelly was one of several visitors at the home of David's family Thursday afternoon.

The boy's family has never allowed hospital officials to release their child's last name. David's privacy was guarded as jealously in death as it had been in life.

Neighbors called in law officers, who set up barricades around the suburban home of David's family to keep back the curious.

David left his bubble at Texas Children's Hospital Feb. 7, but not as doctors had planned at the time of his operation.

Southwestern Bell's rate hike now in hands of state courts

AUSTIN (AP) — The $2.75 that Southwestern Bell wants to immediately add to residential phone bills is now in the hands of the state courts.

The Public Utility Commission ruled Thursday that the phone company can't put a $280 million, temporary rate hike into effect until April 22. The company argued it could start the new rates Thursday.

"Ultimately, this issue is going to be decided by the judiciary," Bell lawyer Jon Dee Lawrence told the commission. "The issue is in the courthouse, where it belongs. Let's get on with it and find out what the answer is."

Bell officials hoped to have a state court hearing on the matter within a few days. Dale Johnson, company spokesman, said each day without the higher rates costs Bell $700,000.

PUC Chairman Al Erwin agreed that the courts will make the final decision.

"There's no doubt this issue will end up in court," he said, adding that the commission ruling against Bell was proper because it gives the company the burden of proof in court.

At the center of the battle is a pair of state laws — one old, one new — that dictate when a utility company can begin charging refundable rates. The state allows utilities to raise rates while rate cases are pending at the PUC.

Bell has a $1.3 billion case pending at the commission.

The old law said the refundable rates could be charged 125 days after a rate hike is requested. The new law, which went into effect on Sept. 1, stretched the waiting period to 185 days.

Bell filed the rate case last June, when the old law was in effect. But the company's rate filing was not completed until Oct. 19.

Under the new 185-day law, the company has to wait until April 22 to collect bonded rates. Lawrence said by that time the bonded rate question could be moot because the $1.3 billion case might be over.

Public Utility Counsel Jim Boyle told the commission Thursday that $2.75 is a lot of money to some Bell customers — enough to make them think about getting rid of their phones.

"I don't think there's any question that some people will disconnect," he said.

Officials probe TDC fund

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Prison officials have called for an investigation of a voluntary employees' fund that is collected to provide gifts and flowers to prison employees and their relatives.

Interim TDC Director Daniel V. "Red" McCaskle has ordered a study of the "barbers' funds" — so called because they entitle contributors to free haircuts at inmate-staffed barber shops — prison spokesman Rick Hartley said Wednesday.

Employees voluntarily pay $2 to $6 a month into the fund, which is maintained to pay for Christmas parties, gifts and flowers for employees' relatives who are sick or have died. Each unit fund is controlled by a three-member board appointed by the warden.

Plane's propeller plunges into Amarillo house

AMARILLO (AP) — A propeller fell from a plane in trouble and plunged about 100 feet into a neighborhood, but no one was hurt, authorities said.

The blade crashed into a house about 8:20 a.m. Thursday, damaging it. But the woman who lived at the house was not home at the time.

Moments later, Joe Mueller, 30, of Albuquerque brought the propeller-less single-engine Cessna Centurion down safely on a city street about 1½ miles away and about 5 miles from Amarillo International Airport, where he had just taken off.

"My first thought was where the prop would land," said Mueller late Thursday from his home in Albuquerque. "'Lord,' I prayed, 'protect everybody on the ground!'"

He returned to Albuquerque on a commercial airline.

Police focus on schoolgirl rapes

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis police officials say an investigation of half a dozen sexual attacks on schoolgirls in the early morning hours has become the department's "highest priority."

The latest report came Thursday in the rape of a 15-year-old girl who was forced into a garage by a man who told her he had a gun.

"We have a sick person out there who's attacking these young girls," said police Maj. George Hydar, adding that he worries that some of the attacks may be the work of equally sick copycats.

Authorities noted that descriptions given them by the victims indicated that as many as four men may have been involved in four rapes and two attempted rapes in the past month.

Lt. Col. James J. Hackett, commander of field operations, said he believed that Thursday's rapist was the same man who abducted an 8-year-old girl at knifepoint Tuesday, raped her in the rear of a building and severely injured her.

In the past month, four girls have been raped on their way to school in the morning, all in a blighted section of the city that is dotted with abandoned buildings.

In what police called an unrelated incident Thursday, an 8-year-old girl was forced into a car and molested as she walked home from school in the afternoon. Officers said the girl told them a woman and four men slapped her, fondled her and asked her if she had any money before releasing her unharmed on the city's northwest side.

Hydar noted that all the victims were walking to school by themselves when they were assaulted.

"You don't see these attacks in the afternoon," he said. "That's because kids run out of the schools or off the bus and walk home together. It's the isolated youngster who is the target."

Meanwhile, police have beefed up patrols of schools and bus stops.

"We have 12 detectives, all dressed in casual attire, out on the street right now," said Hydar, adding that the high visibility of police patrols at peak hours should give people some additional confidence.

Hydar said he may ask for more manpower to help stop the attacks.

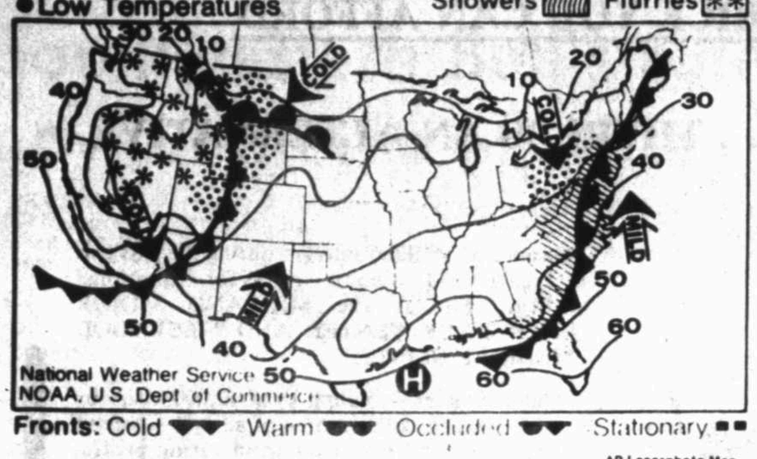
WEATHER SUMMARY

The Forecast For 7 a.m. EST Saturday, February 25
●Low Temperatures



AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts snow for most of the West, the Ohio Valley and Pennsylvania and rain for mostof the Atlantic coast.

Weekend should be warm, sunny for Permian Basin

Are you suffering from spring fever? Do you find yourself playing Beach Boys records at top volume and putting the top on your car down even though you have to wear a stocking cap to do it?

Then you'll be pleased to hear the weekend forecast from the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Although tonight is expected to be clear with lows in the upper 30s, Saturday should be sunny and warmer with highs in the low 70s.

South winds of 10-15 mph are expected to become south-southwest at 10-20 mph and gusty by Saturday.

Thursday's high of 64 degrees was 20 below an all-time record of 84 on that date two years ago. An overnight low of 29 was 15 degrees warmer than the 14 mark recorded in 1965.

STATE

A weak cold front kept skies mostly fair across the Lone Star State early today, except for patches of dense fog along Gulf coastal areas, and forecasters expected cooler temperatures to be the rule.

The front extended from Southeast Texas along the coastal plains, and across the lower Rio Grande Valley into northern Mexico. The National Weather Service said no significant weather was associated with the cold air as it moved across Texas.

Patchy areas of dense fog formed over the Coastal Bend and in the lower valley, reducing visibilities to one-sixteenth mile at McAllen, the weather service said.

Skies were mostly cloudy near the frontal boundary. Low temperatures were mostly in the 30s and 40s, except in the 50s over parts of South Texas and along the coastal plains. In the lower Valley, readings were in the low 60s.

Temperature readings in the 20s were recorded over much of West Texas, with the teens over the Panhandle.

Winds were north to northwest across much of the state at 5 to 10 mph, except west to southwest over the Panhandle and South Plains.

Cloudiness and fog over the coastal plains should dissipate, with partly cloudy skies and warm temperatures through Saturday morning. Mostly sunny and warm days and fair and cool nights were expected through Saturday.

Highs through Friday morning should range from the 50s over the Panhandle to the 60s and 70s elsewhere, except warmer readings in the 80s in the lower Rio Grande Valley.

NATION

Heavy rain dominated the Northeast and Pacific Northwest today, and travelers' advisories went up in eastern West Virginia after the Atlantic storm dropped more than a foot of wet snow in higher elevations as it moved north.

More than an inch of rain had fallen by early today in places from Wilmington, Del., to New York City, causing some minor urban flooding which was expected to subside as the rain let up later today.

On the Pacific Northwest coast, rain was mixed with snow in the mountains, where strong wind was making driving hazardous. Gale and storm warnings were posted along the coast, with travelers' advisories for mountain areas from northern Nevada and California to Washington.

Snow flurries fell in the northern Plains and northern Rockies, where morning temperatures were in the teens and 20s.

Today's forecast called for more snow over the mountains of the northern and central Plateau, with rain or mixed precipitation in lower elevations and gusty showers from Washington into central California. Widely scattered showers were expected from the central Gulf Coast into the lower Great Lakes, with rain and wind giving way to afternoon clearing across much of New England.

Today's high temperatures were expected to be in the 30s and 40s from the northern and central Plateau, across the northern Plains and into the Great Lakes and New England; in the 50s and 60s in the far West, southern Rockies, central and southern Plains, mid-Atlantic states and much of the Southeast; and in the 70s in Florida, southern Texas and the desert Southwest.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 11 in Craig, Colo., to 65 in Key West, Fla.

'David' guarded in life, death

SHENANDOAH, Texas (AP) — David's privacy was guarded as fiercely in death as it was in life.

Neighbors kept his secret for a dozen years. The last name of the child forced to live his life in a series of germ-free rooms is still not public knowledge.

David died at Texas Children's Hospital at 8 p.m. Wednesday. Dr. William Shearer said he was apparently killed by complications set off by an operation intended to give him immunity to disease and free him, for the first time, to enter the dirty world outside his bubble.

David's friends banded together Thursday afternoon against reporters and photographers who learned the address of the "bubble boy's" family. They eventually called law officers, who set up barricades around the house in a suburb about 25 miles north of Houston.

"Get out of here!" a woman yelled from her porch as a photographer attempted to take a picture of David's family home, a single-story brick house on a corner lot in a subdivision about 25 miles north of Houston.

Another neighbor, spotting a reporter going house-to-house, threatened to call police.

The family's only statement came in the form of a news release through Gayle McNutt, a spokesman for Baylor College of Medicine, thanking the hospital workers and others "for the many kindnesses extended us during our son's life."

"We are especially grateful to those who responded to the need of blood for David," the statement said. "Last, but not least, we wish to thank all who ever read about David and responded with letters of support and encouragement, especially for the many prayers."

About a dozen cars surrounded David's home, with a steady stream of friends and relatives coming and going.

Friends removed David's room-size bubble from his home Tuesday night at the family's request.

"They knew he wouldn't make it to come home again," a neighbor who requested anonymity told the Conroe Courier. "It would have been too much to face. Taking it down may make it a little easier."

Neighbor Ed Boyd concurred with the Shearer's description of David as an exceptionally bright boy who understood virtually everything about his condition.

"I've known him since he was about like that," Boyd said, holding his hands about a foot apart. "We were not dealing with a child."

"You just can't say anything but good about him," said another neighbor, Harold Brown, a television station engineer.

Both men declined to say anything further without permission from the family.

One of the visitors at the house was the boy's priest, the Rev. Laurence Connelly, who said doctors had no choice but to perform the Oct. 21 transplant of bone marrow designed to rouse David's dormant immune system.

"It was the only thing to do. It was the right thing to do," he said. "And the next person will make it. I just thought he would make it.

"I don't think there are any regrets" about the operation, Connelly said. "Science should not regret it, the family should not regret it, the loved ones should never regret what has happened. This was the right and the proper thing to do."

The cloak of privacy was extended to David's school, where officials of the Conroe Independent School District refused to say anything about David.

Ken Clutsman, community relations director for the district, intercepted visitors to the Wilkerson Intermediate School in The Woodlands, about 3 miles from David's home.

David participated in sixth-grade classes there through the use of a special telephone hookup between his bubble and the school.

The privacy, agreed to long ago by school officials, was "part of helping him grow up as a normal healthy kid and not as a freak," Clutsman said.

No announcement regarding David was made to students Thursday, Clutsman said.

But his classmates knew he was missing.

"Some of the kids who knew him really good were crying," said Jason Winn, one student at the school.

Cease-fire takes effect in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A cease-fire mediated by Saudi Arabia took effect on Lebanon's civil war fronts today, shortly after a flurry of battles between rival militias. Two hours later, police and witnesses reported sporadic bursts of rocket-propelled grenades and machine gun fire in Beirut.

Commands of varicus Shiite Moslem, Druse and Christian militias said their men were ordered to observe the cease-fire. Their statements were issued as police reported the first violation of the cease-fire and said contacts were being established to avert further infractions.

The cease-fire, aimed at halting the widespread fighting so Lebanon's political disputes can be negotiated, began on schedule at 11 a.m. (4 a.m. EST).

Police said 12 people were killed and 27 wounded in battles with mortars, rocket-propelled grenades and machine guns in Beirut and the Chouf mountains overnight.

The cease-fire was announced Thursday night by Prince Bandar bin Sultan of Saudi Arabia after eight hours of meetings in Damascus, the Syrian capital. He said it does not address the political disputes between President Amin Gemayel and Syrian-backed Shiite Moslem and Druse insurgents.

The fighting early today pitted Shiite militiamem in the largely Moslem western half of Beirut against Christian irregulars in the eastern part of the capital, police said.

Druse rebels and Christian militiamen of rightist Phalange Party also dueled with artillery and multiple rocket launchers overnight in the Chouf mountains in the Kharroub region, northeast of Israel's defense line in southern Lebanon, police said.

The prince said the agreement dealt solely with the fighting in Lebanon and did not cover political issues, such as the rebel demands that Gemayel scrap the May 17 Lebanon-Israel accord that called for simultaneous withdrawals of Syrian and Israeli troops.

The U.S. Marines, meanwhile, continued their phased withdrawal to ships offshore, but a spokesman said there would be no decrease in "combat power" at the Beirut airport base until the final pullout.

In southern Lebanon, reports from U.N. and Lebanese security sources said Shiite Moslem demonstrators stoned Israeli troops who stormed into the village of Maaraka early today, and the Israelis opened fire. A spokesman for the U.N. peacekeeping force in that area said there were casualties but that he did not know how many.

The security sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said four people were killed and 25 wounded when the Israelis opened fire.

U.N. spokesman Timur Goksel said the Israels pulled out Maaraka today about 11 hours after shooting was heard there, and that U.N. soldiers and medical teams and Lebanese Red Cross workers were allowed into the village shortly before the pullout.

Gemayel met Thursday with advisers and right-wing Christian backers at the presidential palace east of Beirut to work out a new proposal for ending the civil war.

Lebanese government sources, who spoke on condition they not be named, said the plan would have Gemayel renounce the U.S.-brokered May 17 accord and reconvene a conference in Switzerland to draw up a new system for sharing power among Moslems and Christians in Lebanon.

The current system reserves the presidency and most political power to Maronite Christians, such as Gemayel, rather than the Moslem majority.

The question of Syrian troops occupying eastern and northern Lebanon would be referred to the Arab League, which approved Syria's entry in 1976. Syria has refused to remove its troops until Israel unconditionally withdraws from southern Lebanon.

Teen-ager sentenced to 20 years in prison

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

"It was fair," Arlene Mullin said after jurors Thursday imposed a 20-year prision sentence on 18-year-old Albert Roy Sanchez, who was convicted Wednesday of stabbing her and leaving her to die on an isolated oil lease near Greenwood last fall.

"I think Albert needs extensive psychiatric help," she added. "He was quite different in the courtroom than he was out in that field that night."

Sanchez admitted stabbing the mother of his ex-fiance and abandoning her on the lease Oct. 6. But he denied planning the attack and went back to the scene twice during the three or four hours she lay there helpless.

Mrs. Mullin testified that she was finally able to persuade him to take her to the hospital about 8:30 p.m., after agreeing to "a story" that two strangers had kidnapped and stabbed her.

Following the attack, she said in testimony, Sanchez had "a strange, wild look in his eyes."

That look contrasted sharply with the submissive, downcast demeanor he projected throughout the three-day trial which began in State District Judge Pat Baskin's court Tuesday.

Sanchez denied prosecution allegations that he held the 45-year-old rural Midland housewife responsible for her 16-uear-old daughter's move to California prior to the stabbing.

Instead, he maintained in barely audible tones that characterized all of his testimony before the seven-man, five-woman jury, he still doesn't know why he did it—even after psychological counseling.

Sanchez, described as an introvert who had trouble communicating with people, got Mrs. Mullin to accompany him that day by saying he wanted to show her a car he planned to give her daughter as a present.

At one point during the drive he handed her a strip of cloth he had carried around for four days and asked her to wear it as a blindfold so she'd "be surprised" when she saw the vehicle.

But after driving to one isolated location near Cloverdale Road and Interstate-20, he stabbed her once in the lower back with a 10-inch butcher knife he had picked up earlier at his grandmother's house and concealed in his sock.

He then drove to the Greenwood lease site and abandoned her as she lay on the ground bleeding internally to the point where she lost about half her "circulatory blood volume," according to testimony by Dr. Seamus E. Carmody.

Despite her blood-soaked blouse, Sanchez contended he didn't realize how seriously she was hurt. He indicated that had he known the extent of her injuries, he would have taken her to the hospital sooner.

"I didn't want her to die," he said. "I never intended to leave her there to die. I was just afraid to take her to the hospital at first."

In summation during the sentencing phase of the trial, court-appointed Odessa attorney Bill Bowden sought leniency for his client. Citing the lack of violent behavior in Sanchez's past, Bowden said:

"Give Albert a second chance. I spent four months with him and he deserves it."

But Assistant District Attorney Janet Copeland pointed out that Sanchez was on five years' probation for burglary at the time of the attack. She also noted that he had the knife and blindfold when he induced Mrs. Mullin to go with him.

"I suggest he did plan this," Copeland argued. "She was like a lamb being led to slaughter. He enjoyed it. He was in control as she lay out there.

"What difference does it make that he never did it before? This is his second felony since he's been an adult. He had a second chance and didn't take it. I believe 25 years is an appropriate sentence."

Jurors returned the 20-year penalty after 1½ hours of deliberations. Sanchez's family daubed tears from their eyes as the sentence was read aloud, but he displayed no emotion.

As jurors were filing out of the courtroom, Mrs. Mullin's eyes filled with tears as she shook her head and said softly: "I'd still like to know why he stabbed me."

'Fiddler' plays accordion?

Over 20 years in the making, the newly published Dictionary of Newfoundland English says a "fiddler" plays the accordion, a "hypocrite" is a cripple, "whizgigging" means engaging in foolish or boisterous actions, "curwhibble" is a sudden lurch, "dwy" is a squall, "flummy dum" is hunter's bread, "boil-up" is a snack and "ballicatter" is a spray of water turned to ice.

Bombardment of Iran, Iraq continues

By ALEX EFTY
Associated Press Writer

Iran said Iraqi missiles hit two cities deep inside its territory today, and claimed Iranian forces retaliated by attacking the important Iraqi port of Basra. Iraq claimed it repulsed the Iranian offensive and said, "We have triumphed."

Iran's president repeated a threat to close the strategic Strait of Hormuz, but said that as long as Iranian ships can pass through it, "We will not do anything to anybody." He said that should the United States makes a move in the area "we would destroy all U.S. interests in the Persian Gulf."

In war communiques broadcast by the official Islamic Republic News Agency, Iran claimed further advances on the southern front where it has mounted a major offensive. IRNA said Iranian fighters had captured an oil field in overnight fighting.

IRNA said Iraqi missiles hit the cities of Khorramabad and Borujerd, killing 80 civilians and wounding 350.They were believed the deepest points hit by Iraq missiles since the war began in September 1980. Khorramabad is 94 miles inside Iran and Borujerd is 125 miles from the border.

In retaliation, Iran said it shelled Basra — Iraq's second largest city. Basra was also shelled Thursday.

Foreign correspondents are seldom allowed near the battlefront and conflicting claims about the war are difficult to verify.

Iranian President Ali Khamenehi, in a sermon at Tehran University, accused the United States of "hatching a plot" in the Persian Gulf and the Stait of Hormuz "in order to make up for its disgrace in Lebanon," according to IRNA and Tehran Radio, monitored in Cyrpus.

"We have always said ... that so long as our ships can pass through the Hormuz Strait we will not do anything to anybody," he was quoted as saying.

A U.S. aircraft carrier, the Midway, and its escort ships are in the nearby Arabian Sea monitoring the situation. Khamenehi also was quoted as saying, "Today, British naval forces have come to strengthen the American fleets in the Persian Gulf." He did not elaborate.

President Reagan has said he will not allow the strait to be closed.

Israelis fire on Moslems

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite Moslem demonstrators stoned Israeli troops that stormed into the village of Maaraka early today, and the Israelis opened fire, killing four people and wounding 25, security sources said.

A spokesman for the U.N. peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon confirmed that some wounded were taken to hospitals, adding he did not know how many people were killed or injured. The office of the Israeli military spokesman in Tel Aviv said it had no information on the reported clash and casualties.

The U.N. spokesman, Timur Goksel, said Israeli soldiers blocked all roads leading to the village and refused, for more than eight hours, to allow U.N. troops and medical teams to enter.

Maaraka, a town of about 1,500, is two miles south of Halloussiyeh, where Israeli troops uncovered a big arms cache Feb. 2.

"About 3:30 a.m. there was some shooting and four explosions were heard in Maaraka," Goksel said by telephone from U.N. troop headquarters in the south Lebanon town of Naqoura.

He said U.N. observers and a team from Senegal's contingent in the U.N. force went to the village, which is about six miles from the port city of Tyre, "but the Israelis did not allow them to enter. Our people saw tires burning in the street and heard chanting from the mosque."

Lebanese and U.N. security sources, who spoke on condition they not be named, said an Israeli unit, escorted by 30 armored personnel carriers and tanks, stormed into the village early today and arrested some residents. The Israelis gave no reason for the action, the sources said.

Witnesses who did not wish to be identified gave accounts which basically matched the security sources' reports.

The sources said Shiite residents of Maaraka gathered at the village's main mosque and began stoning the Israeli troops. One security report said several Israelis were injured.

A few minutes later, the sources said, the Israelis fired at the demonstrators with automatic rifles, killing four people and wounding 25.

Ballard opens off Broadway

NEW YORK (AP) — Marquees from the demolished Morosco and Helen Hayes theaters hang in the living room. Autographed baby pictures of Burt Reynolds and scores of other stars adorn a bathroom wall.

And two tiny black hats, once owned by Beatrice Lillie, rest in a glass case near the dining room table.

Kaye Ballard, the woman with the mile-wide smile, is a Broadway baby, still stagestruck after nearly 40 years of show business ups and downs.

Now, she's gathered all her experiences into a one-woman show called "Hey Ma ... Kaye Ballard." It opens Feb. 27 at the off-Broadway Promenade Theater.

"I'm lucky. I always knew I wanted to be an entertainer. Always," Miss Ballard said recently in her East Side apartment where she sat surrounded by her three apricot poodles — Pockets, Punky and Big Shirley — and mementos of a rich theatrical life.

"I was a character actress at 2," she said. "When I was 5 years old, I'd borrow my father's hat and do Maurice Chevalier."

Miss Ballard, 57, was born Catherine Gloria Balotta and later changed her name. Her parents — first generation Italians — didn't quite understand her. Dad, a cement finisher in Cleveland, thought she was adorable. Ma just wanted to keep her from getting hurt.

Her initial big-time stage experience was a burlesque tour in the South, traveling in a bus called the Blue Goose.

"We had a five-piece band, two strippers and comics," Miss Ballard recalled. "I did impressions of Betty Hutton and Judy Garland — singing impressions mostly. Then I was a straight woman for the comics."

An engagement with Spike Jones and his band brought her to New York, and a ticket broker gave her tickets to see Laurette Taylor in "The Glass Menagerie" and Ethel Merman in "Annie Get Your Gun."

"Then, I knew what I wanted to do," she said.

After endless auditions, she landed a job in the revue "Three to Make Ready," directed by John Murray Anderson, who warned her: "You're going to take the long road."

"You haven't made up your mind whether you want to sing, act or do comedy. You do them all," he told her, "and when you do them all, they can never put you in a direction. They can't give you an image."

In 1954, she scored a personal success in the musical, "The Golden Apple," which transplanted Homer's "Iliad" and "Odyssey" to turn-of-the-century America. Miss Ballard played Helen, wife of Sheriff Menelaus, and sang the show's big hit "Lazy Afternoon."

Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

If you suspect that this hand was not dealt at the table you would be right. It is a lesson hand we used to use quite often in classes. Until one day something happened, and we had to change it slightly.

There is nothing to the auction. Since as little as the jack of diamonds in partner's hand would make the slam laydown, to bid anything less than six hearts at South's second turn would be rank cowardice.

We gave this hand to a group who were playing a practice session after one of our seminars. The directed contract was six hearts, and the universal lead was the jack of spades. Obviously, if declarer had an entry to the table, the hand would be a pianola. Lacking that entry, though, an optimistic declarer would either play ace of diamonds and another, hoping to drop the king, or else lay down the ace of hearts to try to drop the ten, which would create an entry out of the nine. As you can see, both these lines are due to fail.

The correct line is to win the opening lead, cash the ace of clubs and now lead a low trump toward the nine. That succeeds in all cases where West has the ten. The nine of trumps becomes an entry to dummy, and declarer can discard his two diamonds on the table's high clubs.

The jack of spades was the lead at every table except one, and most of the declarers found the winning line. At one table, however, an individualist elected to lead a low trump. Declarer was good enough to play dummy's nine, which secured an immediate entry to the board, but since the ace of clubs had not yet been unblocked, he could not take diamond discards. Instead, he had to rely on the diamond finesse. Alas, we had not had the foresight to provide East with the king of diamonds, so declarer went down one!

Living in Midland

It's exciting to think about the Environmental Learning Center being planned adjacent to Hogan Park. That center likely will provide not only information and appreciation for the local environment for students. It will provide that information and appreciation to all of us who are prone to forget from time to time.

The environment around Midland and Odessa doesn't always stimulate newcomers — or some longtime residents — to expressions of appreciation. In fact, the surrounding landscape and the climate has been the brunt of distasteful jokes for decades.

But the region's environment is special because in ways it is delicate and, thus, subject to damage if individuals are not fully aware of what changes their actions may bring to bear.

Environmental concerns have suffered their share of "bad press" in recent years largely due to overzealous efforts by individuals with basically good intentions. In an area such as the Permian Basin where what's underground is so vital to the economic existence of residents, an all-or-nothing attitude on environmental matters would be foolish. The situation requires intelligent give and take.

That's so because in this age of environmental awareness few would advocate throwing wide the door to a rape and pillage policy. If it doesn't come back to haunt the ones whose actions damaged the land and water, it will return to haunt their children or grandchildren.

It's for that reason the planned Environmental Learning Center being constructed by the Midland Soil and Water Conservation District is so important and why it should be supported by all Midlanders. The information it provides will help instill in the community's residents a true appreciation of their environment and, hopefully, a desire to live in harmony with this region's special features.

Most importantly, perhaps the center will give us each inspiration to enhance our environment to the fullest and to protect it for future generations of Midlanders.

How about one term?

What do Iowa and New Hampshire have in common? They have their conspicuous differences, to be sure, Iowa being a land of tall corn and hogs, whereas New Hampshire is granite country.

But what they share in this month of February are front-and-center seats at the kickoff of campaigns to determine who will run against whom in the next presidential election.

Without drawing any conclusions about this week's Iowa caucuses or trying to guess what will happen in next week's primary in New Hamshire, the question that arises concerns the length of a president's term. The question is whether a single, six-year term would be better than the present arrangement. More and more students of our government are coming to this conclusion.

A single, six-year term would have obvious advantages. A president could devote his entire time to presidential duties, rather than tapering off in his final year to run for re-election. No matter how conscientiously President Reagan minds the store, he cannot for the good of the country sit on the sidelines with an election coming up. Every president who runs for a second four-year term faces the same problem, a problem that could be solved by a one-shot stint limited to half a dozen years.

This is not a new idea. It has been talked about in the corridors of Congress and the groves of academe for years, and recently it has been given new momentum by some of the nation's leading citizens. Let us hope this month's activities in Iowa and New Hampshire will have a side effect of renewing interest in a single, six-year term for American presidents. It needs to be fully studied, but it may be a proposal whose time has come.

Another View:

TV taste sinks lower

Parents, do you know what television programs your children watch? Do you care what they are learning from TV?

The Coalition for Better Television says that profanity on television has increased by 140 percent from 1982 to 1983.

The group used 2,400 monitors in 30 states to make a survey last fall. Its findings were based on listening to 1,294 hours of prime-time shows.

In view of the fact that children watch many hours of television, these findings are very disturbing.

They reveal a lack of responsibility on the part of the industry. Considering the amount of violence on television, perhaps the increase in profanity is not surprising. Nevertheless it is distressing.

We certainly do not believe that there should be any efforts to censor television. That would violate the First Amendment. But it is time for network executives to start doing a better job of controlling their programming.

Because they have tremendous power to influence the thinking of young people, TV networks have a great responsibility. It is a responsibility that they are not meeting.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Regan suggests Feldstein firing

WASHINGTON — The backstage squabbling between Treasury Secretary Donald Regan and Martin Feldstein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, was toned down for propriety's sake when the two rivals appeared together before Congress two weeks ago.

Jack Anderson

But I've learned that only the day before, Regan suggested privately that Feldstein should be fired. During a meeting of senior managers at the Treasury, Regan surprised some of his top aides by referring to Feldstein disparagingly several times as he discoursed on the disagreement over the administration's fiscal policy.

The next day, Regan adopted the air of a reasonable man trying to weather an impatience he knows must be suffered. He could afford to be tolerant, if still mildly disdainful, of the pedagogical Feldstein, for Regan's rosy view of the economy is the one the president accepted. Feldstein's gloomy forecasts were rejected.

But Regan made no secret of the course he thinks Feldstein should have followed once his advice was spurned: Shut up or get out. The secretary of the treasury lamented to his managers the fact that government doesn't emulate private industry, where employees "take orders and salute or else are booted out."

"He was simply trying to explain to his managers what underlies this Don and Marty show," a Treasury official told my associate Michael Binstein. "He expressed regret — even resentment — that there is a lack of esprit de corps in the administration."

Basically, Regan considers Feldstein's continued harping about the gigantic federal deficits — and his support of tax increases — to be disloyal. He also thinks Feldstein's predictions of impending doom are based on ivory-tower economics, not marketplace realities.

But interviews with Treasury economists reveal that most of them agree with Feldstein's economic analysis. They say Regan is merely providing the rationale for a president who must play the election-year role of Dr. Feelgood, prescribing uppers without coming to terms with the malady.

But oddly enough, several Treasury economists agreed with Regan's views on loyalty even as they conceded Feldstein's superior analysis of the economy. They were sharply critical of Feldstein's publicity-seeking; there's a widespread suspicion that his real motive is to return as a hero to his professorship at Harvard this summer.

These officials contrast Feldstein's behavior with that of his predecessor, Murray Weidenbaum, who fought against runaway military spending and high deficits. When his advice was rejected, he resigned.

I've learned that the falling-out between Regan and Feldstein dates back to the fall of 1982, when they were working on the president's 1983 economic report. In a preliminary draft, Feldstein referred to the "failed economic policies of the last 10 years."

Furious, Regan reminded Feldstein that this was indicting two Republican administrations along with Jimmy Carter's.

"There's been no love lost since then," a source said.

MINI-PROFILES — From intelligence sources, here are the latest readings on the rulers most likely to inflame the Middle East:

Syria's Hafez Assad — He is a wily ruler, skilled at treachery and troublemaking. But intelligence sources tell me that Assad has been treated by a U.S. specialist for cardiomyopathy, an irreversible heart disease. Assad's deteriorating health is obviously known to his brother, Rifaat, who recently had pictures of himself plastered on the walls of Damascus and in the presidential palace itself. Apparently, this was Rifaat's way of declaring his intention to take over if his brother doesn't pull through. And Rifaat, who runs the secret police as his own private army, is more troublesome and less reasonable than Hafez.

Iraq's Saddam Hussein — He's under such military pressure from Iran and economic pressure on the home front that he's close to desperation. He had relied heavily on three half-brothers to protect his power base. Two of them ran the security police; the third was a powerful district governor. But in an Arabian Nights episode, the half-brothers got into a shouting match in the presidential palace. Shots were fired, and all three half-brothers were put under house arrest.

Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini — At age 84, he appears to be as durable and determined as ever. And he isn't about to be converted to Sweet reasonableness this late in his life. Yet CIA sources assure me that Khomeini is NOT irrational. One small point might illustrate what I mean. He has refused to use the telephone, calling it a Western tool, except for one emergency call to a sick brother. Yet he hasn't hesitated to use another Western tool, the television camera, to influence world opinion. Behind the patriarch's beard and the fierce scowl, the ayatollah is shrewd and pragmatic. He doesn't allow his fanaticism to interfere with business. Iran exports 2.7 million barrels of oil a day, trades with the Western world and scrupulously pays its debts.

INSIDE REPORT:

Pro-lifers give Reagan ultimatum

WASHINGTON — When some 35 anti-abortion leaders met President Reagan at the White House Jan. 23, they handed him an ultimatum in writing: Remove population control funds from the Kissinger Central American aid package, or the "pro-life" movement will try to kill the entire plan.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The immediate reason for this unprecedented challenge from Reagan's core constituency is U.S.-financed sterilization of Salvadoran women, amid reports they are pressured by local officials to undergo the operations. Anti-abortion lawmakers, particularly Democrats, could conceivably decide the congressional battle over aid to El Salvador. Yet, in the month since the ultimatum was handed him, there has been no sign of presidential intervention.

While Reagan at home preaches supply-side economic growth, bureaucrats at the State Department and the Agency for International Development (AID) practice Malthusian population control. Frustrated by inability to influence policy, the pro-lifers have taken the issue to the anti-abortion president. In the resulting test case of how fully Ronald Reagan controls his own administration, the anti-abortion movement is not optimistic.

The movement has been battling for three years over continued U.S. support during the Reagan administration for population control programs that regard people, not inadequate economic development, as the cause of poverty. But the last straw came when the Kissinger Commission on Central America recommended "continuation of the population and family programs currently supported by" AID.

Under those programs, more than 20,000 Salvadoran women were sterilized last year — equivalent to over 1 million in the United States. A report in the Jan. 13 Christian Science Monitor by Chris Hedges charged government pressure for post-natal sterilization, sometimes without prior consultation or consent of the mothers, in violation of AID regulations.

Hedges' story was attached to the Jan. 23 pro-life "briefing book" for the president, which declared: "For three years, we have tried, through constructive criticism to correct administration policy. But the Kissinger plan's inclusion of additional demographic assault upon the innocent people of Central America compels us to take a different approach."

Then came the ultimatum. If the Kissinger Commission's recommendation for more population control funds stays in the administration's Central American plan, "the pro-life movement will have no choice but to reluctantly join the opponents of that plan in stopping it in Congress."

There has thus far been no official response to that request or two others contained in the "briefing book": to name anti-abortion Surgeon General C. Everett Koop to head the U.S. delegation to this summer's world population conference in Mexico and to remove Richard E. Benedick as the State Department's coordinator of population affairs.

For Ambassador Benedick to fill that post in Ronald Reagan's government is wormwood to anti-abortionists. A holdover career official from the Carter administration, he is a vigorous advocate of population control and has pushed U.S. money ($30 million this year) for the United Nations Fund for Population Activities (UNFPA). The fund, in turn, has given cash awards to Chinese and Indian officials, who, respectively, advocate compulsory abortion and forced sterilization.

Actually, word leaked out of the White House early in February that Koop would head the Mexico City delegation. But when Planned Parenthood and other elements in the population control lobby protested, the State Department reassured them that Koop's appointment was dead and that their ally, Benedick, would be in control. Counter-protests from the anti-abortion lobby Feb. 10 brought a White House response that Koop never had been selected, and no decision would be made for some time.

But a Feb. 13 State Department internal memorandum designated Benedick as "interagency coordinator" for the Mexico City conference and added: "He will be responsible for coordinating all matters concerning U.S. participation in the conference." In other words, the policy papers are in Benedick's hands whether or not Dr. Koop eventually heads the delegation.

CHARLEY REESE

Obeying law could ease money woes

There is a way out of the present economic mess. That is to obey the Constitution. The Constitution says the Congress shall have the power "... to coin money and regulate the value thereof."

Charley Reese

Those are simple words. They do not say the Congress has the power to hand over to a private central bank the power to coin money and regulate the value thereof, but that is exactly what the Congress has done.

The crux of our present economic problem is monetary inflation. People want indexing and cost-of-living increases because they expect the future value of currency to decline. Medicare and Social Security have become necessities because in the face of the declining value of the currency, it is impossible for the average person to provide for his own future security by saving. Lenders demand high interest rates because they expect to be paid back in dollars that buy less than the dollars they lend.

The only way to prevent inflation, however, is for Congress to obey the Constitution by taking away from the Federal Reserve Board the power to create money and then determine its value by the amount they pump into the system. The U.S. needs to return to a system of backing its currency with precious metals.

There is no magic in gold or silver. The value of a commodity based currency is that such a system makes it difficult (though not impossible) for the government to inflate. That is precisely why our government and most others abandoned it.

When you have a fiat currency — money backed by nothing, the value of which is determined solely about the amount in circulation — then there is always the temptation to finance government with the printing press. So it has always been in history. So it is with us.

It is an immoral system. It robs the many to benefit the few. A person working for wages is dead meat. There is no way wages can be increased as fast as the favored few will increase the money supply or the interest rates. There is no way a working person can save enough to provide for his own secure retirement.

Inflation benefits the rich. It benefits big borrowers and penalizes savers. It favors the speculator at the expense of the legitimate investor. To use an over-simplified example, if you had borrowed $20,000 in 1967 on a note which allowed you to pay back the principal in full in 1984, you would be paying back, as far as the principal is concerned, only $10,000. Inflation has robbed the currency of that much purchasing power. If you earned $10,000 in 1967 and by 1984 had worked your way up to $19,000 (which is the most that 55 percent of all American families take home today), you would have gone backwards. Your $19,000 is really worth only $9,000 — $1,000 less than you were earning 17 years ago.

The combination of welfare and virtually unlimited credit, even at usurous rates, serves to mask reality. Given the inflationary system, without welfare, you would see people dying in the streets. Without easy credit, people would soon realize how bad off they are. Without the use of withholding and hidden taxes, people would realize how much of their labor is confiscated by government.

It does not follow that because some people are rich and influential that they are also smart. Everytime this particular con game has been tried, the elite over-played their hand and destroyed their societies.

How do you suppose $1.2 trillion in public debt and another $4 trillion in obligations is going to be met? How is it going to be met by a government which is spending $180 billion a year more than it takes in? The answer is it won't be.

The elite who engineered this flim flam are riding on a tiger and they don't know how to get off. The posturing you see in Washington, the political capital, and in New York, the financial capital, is merely an attempt to postpone yet awhile the inevitable liquidation.

Either we elect an honest Congress and dismantle the present monetary system or it will collapse and precipitate a revolution. It is folly to suppose the American economy can expand enough to undo the damage fiat currency has done. Time is running out.

Judge removes 'badge of shame' from state

AUSTIN (AP) — A portion of Texas' work insurance law, called "a badge of shame" by critics, has been declared unconstitutional by State District Judge Harley Clark.

After 2½ days of testimony and arguments, Clark held Thursday that the workers compensation law which excludes farm and ranch hands from on-the-job injury benefits, discriminates against a definite class of workers, mostly Hispanic.

"I have been deeply touched by evidence in this case, and I do believe that section of the law is unconstitutional," Clark said.

He said his ruling will apply to all farm and ranch workers in the state — of which at least 60 percent are Mexican-American — 10 days after he signs the final order next week.

In the same action, Clark issued a permanent injunction against the Industrial Accident Board, which administers the workers insurance law, that prohibits it from turning down any injury claim just because it came from a farm or ranch worker. He issued two similar orders in January.

Clark refused to make his order retroactive for workers whose employers did not have some form of work insurance before the Jan. 9 order.

In final arguments Thursday, Austin attorney Jim Harrington, who filed the suit in the name of 10 injured farmworkers, asked Clark "to remove this badge of shame in Texas."

Harrington said the exclusion deprives migrant and seasonal workers of prompt medical attention if injured, deprives them of any rehabilitation and retraining facilities, and keeps them from having a safe workplace.

"This is just one more vestige of the old plantation life that must be removed," he said.

Assistant Attorney General Bill Barbisch argued that the exclusion also applies to farm families and to year-around farm workers as well as the seasonal workers.

He said exclusion of farm and ranch workers from workers compensation programs had been approved by courts in Nebraska and New Mexico.

Texas chief justice: More disputes need to be settled out of court

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court says "thousands of cases" could be siphoned off the overflowing court systems if lawyers would learn to settle more disputes outside the courtroom.

Justice Jack Pope called on attorneys to help unclog the overloaded courts.

"What we should be searching for is not a substitute system, but different ways that we can use our skills," Pope said. "Our purpose is to find and fashion and develop some professional skills in addition to our courtroom skills."

Pope addressed an attorneys' conference on negotiation, mediation and arbitration Thursday, sponsored by the law schools at St. Mary's and Texas Tech universities.

Using the three skills could "siphon off thousands of cases that otherwise would find their way into the clogged court system," he said.

Pope pointed to the advent of "neighborhood justice centers," which mediate some disputes, as a way to both lessen the courts' load and involve members of the community.

"The legal profession deals with problem solving, but we've got to realize that there are multitudes of problems that can be resolved that do not have to have total losers and total winners," he said. "And we don't always need to have a judge make the final decision."

Food prices soar

WASHINGTON (AP) — The biggest food price surge since August 1980 pushed consumer prices up 0.6 percent last month, their steepest gain in nine months, the government said today.

Half the gain came from a 1.6 percent jump in food prices, the Labor Department said. Prices rose for virtually all foods, including such staples as meats, eggs, vegetables and fruits.

Today's bad news had been expected by analysts who said last summer's prolonged withering heat and drought, coupled with the severe cold weather earlier this winter, made more expensive food inevitable.

"The essential story is we're finally getting the food inflation we knew was in the cards," Thomas Thomson, chief economist for Crocker National Bank in San Francisco, said in advance of the report's release.

Today's Consumer Price Index recorded the steepest-ever rise in telephone bills, largely the result of the government-ordered breakup of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. Phone bills, the report said, rose an average of 5.2 percent last month.

HEATING oil prices climbed 2.6 percent, the largest one-month gain in nearly three years, while gasoline prices, tumbling for the fourth straight month, were off 1.1 percent. Natural gas prices were also down 1.1 percent.

In all, January's increase in the CPI was three times the revised 0.2 percent advance of December and the biggest jump since the 0.7 percent of April.

"Undue concern about accelerating inflation in 1984 should be avoided," said forecaster Donald Ratajczak of Georgia State University. He predicted that most of the weather-related rapid food price increases would slow during the spring.

Indeed, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes called the 4.1 percent inflation rate for the last 12 months "a good, low rate of inflation" and said that despite the January gain reported today "prospects remain excellent for continued low rates of inflation."

MOST analysts look for a 5 percent advance for all of this year.

Consumer prices last year rose 3.8 percent, their best showing since 1972.

Prices had risen 3.9 percent in 1982 after shooting up 12.4 percent in 1980 and 8.9 percent in 1981.

The department, breaking down the 1.6 percent overall food price gain, said that prices for food bought at grocery stores rose 2.4 percent, the steepest gain since February 1977. Prices for meals eaten outside the home were up 0.2 percent.

Today's report provided these additional details on consumer price activity last month:

—BEEF and veal prices rose 3.5 percent, following a decline of 2.5 percent from September 1981 through December 1983. Pork prices shot up 5.2 percent after rising less than 2 percent over the same period.

—Fresh fruit prices soared 7.8 percent. Vegetable prices jumped 7 percent.

—Egg prices skyrocketed 21.3 percent while poultry prices rose 3.7 percent. Both were attributed to the avian flu outbreak in the mid-Atlantic states that has devastated chicken flocks. Egg and poultry prices had been driven up last year by the deadly effects of the summer weather.

—Fuel oil prices, despite last month's increase, were still more than 10 percent below their peak of April 1981. Gasoline prices were 11.9 percent below their peak of March 1981.

Hawks stump MC

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Maybe Howard College did it to Midland College again, this time 77-65, but no one could complain that the Chaparrals didn't give it their all Thursday in Langford Chaparral Center.

Despite the 12-point difference, it was a game that pumped the adrenalin of the big homecoming crowd, swollen by the pound-of-flesh seeking Hawk fans from Big Spring, basking in the radiance of a 24-3 season and a 14-2 WJCC record.

"It's the first time since the Chaparral Classic (way back in November) that I've heard the roar of the crowd here," said Coach Jerry Stone. "It was beautiful music, even though we lost.

"I asked the team before the game to give me a good effort, and that's something I couldn't complain about tonight. They gave it their best...and they know it. You won't see any tears in that locker room tonight."

THE FIRST time these Western Junior College Conference foes met a month ago in Big Spring, the Chaps held their own for a half before the Hawks ran away from them in the second half, 78-62. It was a case of the rangy Hawks height advantage, unrelenting pressure and seemingly bottomless depth that did in the exhausted Chaps.

When Coach Mike Mitchell brings a player off the bench, it's just a different number. The ability and size is the same. There is no letup in pressure.

Thursday the Chaps stayed with the Hawks for 30 minutes, trailing 48-47, before Howard outscored MC 29-13 over the final 9:54.

WHILE THERE was no question as to the Hawks' superiority, neither was there any question as to the game's MVP. Midland's Jackie Phinnessee, who scored 28 points in a losing effort at Amarillo Monday, was even better against HC.

He played the kind of game that made you wonder, Where would the Chaps be without Jackie?"

The six-five would-be tight end from Bolivar, Tenn., picketed all night by defenders three to four inches taller was magnificent in defeat. He scored 27 points, hitting 13 of 18 shots from the field, sometimes getting off a shot where there was no possible shot to be had. If the Chaps were able to get the ball inside to Jackie, he'd finesse or muscle his way to the basket.

Phinessee's only excuse for his performance of late was, "I hate to lose," as he tried to shake a reporter so he could dig into the white bag and get his post-game hamburger. "In fact, I'd like to go back out there now and go at it some more," he said obviously unconvinced that the Chaps should have lost.

It was a "no autopsy, no foul" type game and even Phinnessee admitted, "It got very physical out there tonight."

Midland College Chaparral Vernon Coleman (24) moves Howard College's Michael Porter aside as he drives down court.

WITH NO ROOM for faulting the Chaps effort Thursday, Stone's primary post game concern was Monday's game in Borger and Thursday's regular season concluding test against Odessa College, also on the road. "We've got to get back up again for those two games," he worried, "but after an emotional game such as tonight's sometimes that's not easy to do."

If the rest of the team feels like Phinnessee, Stone needn't worry. Jackie was already looking forward to Frank Phillips as MC, now 9-7 in WJCC, battled for home position for the eight-team pre-regional tournament for the two other WJCC berths.

"This thing isn't over yet." Phinnessee said, "We have two more games to play and we're not out of it yet. I just hate to lose."

MC, fueled by Phinnessee led most of the first half, the biggest margins 12-4 and 21-13, before Howard pulled even at 23. It was touch-and-go the rest of the half and ended 33-33.

When Phinnessee picked up his second and third personals in the first minute of the second half and went to the bench, it looked like it might be over. But Brian Essary hit from the lane, Vernon Coleman scored on a tip, Chuckie Graves drove for a layup and Essary hit a follow shot. By this time, Phinnessee was back and scored a rare jumper from the circle to make it 43-39 Chaps with 13:41 to go.

HOWARD rallied for a 48-43 lead as Michael Porter, Jerry Stroman and Anthony Snooks scored three points each. Phinnessee countered with two baskets to cut it to 48-47, but then the Hawks' depth began to take its toll and the Chaps began to feel the fatigue of the constant pressure.

"We made Howard play well to beat us," said Stone, "They just have a lot of people who can put the ball in the hole even with a hand in their face.

"I still have faith in this bunch. We've made a lot of freshmen mistakes, but I think we are showing signs of maturing, but we've just got to play well this next week.

'Dogs bow in OT, 66-65

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LEVELLAND — Midland High walked basketball's thin line for the last time here Thursday night, suffering a 66-65 overtime bi-district playoff loss to the Amarillo Sandies. There was finally a bullet that the Bulldogs couldn't dodge.

The Purple Pack have been living in the land of survival for almost a month, having to win three straight District 4-5A games just to make the playoffs. But when the end came before a meager crowd of around 300, it was pressure packed overtime free throws by Amarillo High that ended the Bulldog season.

The one-point heart-breaker left MHS coach Jack Stephenson limp. "We had our chances to win the game and it was close," said Stephenson. "I'll be back next year, but I feel sorry for our seniors. They are a great bunch of kids and they worked so hard. I hate to see it end for them this way because we had the chance to win."

IN THE overtime period, the Bulldogs lost it because they were forced into having to foul and it proved to be a disaster as the Sandies hit six-of-six from the free throw line.

After 1:02 of overtime play, Amarillo broke the scoring drought as Kelly Calvin, who led all scorers with 22 points, hit two free throws. Midland's Fred Franklin followed with the front end of a one-and-one, but that left the Bulldogs in the catchup mode, 62-61 with 1:25 left in the period.

Amarillo then tried to run out the clock, forcing MHS to foul Gary Hassenfratz with 20 seconds left. Hassenfratz was also perfect at the line, giving the Sandies a big three-point lead.

Eric Brunson closed the gap again to one with a pair of charity tosses with 12 seconds left, forcing MHS to foul Chris Solis with 10 seconds left. He put the icing on the cake by hitting both shots and not even Willis Ratliff's 15-footer at the end of the game could wipe out the margin of Amarillo victory.

"The free throws by Calvin, Hassenfratz and Solis were the key to victory," said AHS coach Allen Simpson. "We make them all and we win. We miss them and we lose. I'm so proud of those kids because they went to the line acting like they were going to make them. Luck is still a part of basketball."

Stephenson agreed, "The two free throws by Solis were the really big points because if he makes only one, we have a chance to tie. If he makes both, the game is over."

THE BULLDOGS had a chance to win the contest in regulation play, leading 60-57 with only 1:45 left to play. Ratliff had a chance to give the Bulldogs a five-point edge and certian victory, but he passed a chance at a layup for a slam dunk bid and hit the back of the rim.

Instead of leading by five, MHS then gave up three free throws to Calvin to knot the score at 60 at the end of regulation.

Calvin was just a figure the Bulldogs couldn't handle. He hit 12 of 15 free throw tosses and five of 12 from the field for his 22 points. He always seemed to be at the line.

"Calvin played his best game ever," said Simpson. "He was there every time we needed him and we needed him a lot. He also played a great game defensively by guarding (Chris) Rooker. Rooker made 18 points, but he shot a lot. You can't let Rooker blow you out of the gym with that great shot of his."

It was an uphill battle all night for the Pack. Seven times during the game, the Bulldogs trailed by seven points and were down 49-44 with 1:50 left in the third period.

But MHS came back to take a three-point edge in the fading moments of the fourth period, only to lose the grasp on the golden ring.

It was not a good shooting night by either team. MHS hit 21 of 50 from the field while Amarillo was good on 22 of 57. However, this was two good teams that had a knack of taking away the other's power.

Rooker, for instance, hit on seven of 20 from the field and Darrell Davis, who had 15 points, missed his first six shots and ended with four of 13 from the field. Amarillo's Tim Gilbreath, the leading scorer for the Sandies, was held to a mere eight points with a four of 13 effort from the field.

MHS HAS won 16 of 17 games when Rooker has scored 20 or more points. Rooker and Davis had both been over 20 points in each of the last three games the Bulldogs played in regular season. Two more by either one could have produced another victory. But Ratliff ended up as the villian in this one on his effort at an unnecessary dunk.

Midland's Kenneth Johnson kept the Bulldogs in the hunt in the first half, scoring 10 of his 12 points. However, Johnson fouled out with 5:11 left in the game and Davis went down on fouls at the 1:58 mark of the overtime period.

"I thought we had blown the game in the fourth period, but things happen in basketball and you have to expect it to happen. This time it worked for us," said Simpson.

The game was tied on eight occassions. MHS led three different times and Amarillo six times.

The Sandies move to the area playoffs and will face the winner of tonight's El Paso Riverside-El Paso Eastwood bi-district winner early next week. The El Paso contest is being played tonight on the campus of UTEP. Amarillo will carry a 26-3 record into that game.

MHS ends the season with a 27-8 record. Maybe Dogs have only eight lives.

Panthers head Regionals

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Region I girl's basketball tournament comes to Midland tonight when Amarillo High and Amarillo Palo Duro from District 3-5A take on 8-5A's Duncanville and 7-5A's Arlington Sam Houston starting at 6:45 at Chaparral Center.

Duncanville looks to be the team to beat in this year's tournament, considering records and returning players from last year's Final Four team.

The Panthers have posted a 31-1 record, winning 21 consecutive games since an early season loss to Longview. Last year they won the Region I title and went to Austin and were eliminated from the playoffs in the semifinals. From that team, all five starters are back.

Duncanville is led by 6-foot-1 senior center Cathy Nixon, a 20-plus per game scorer. At forward, seniors Cheryl Woodruff, 5-foot-11 and Shelly Wolf, 5-foot-10, provide additional height.

Only one of the two starting guards from last season was able to keep her starting position this year, 5-foot-7 junior Kim White. Junior Julie McMinn, 5-foot-7, earned a starting berth this year, dropping last year's starting guard, Tracy Green, to a sixth-player role.

The Panthers made it to the Region I tournament by defeating Hurst L.D. Bell 59-48 in bi-district and Weatherford, 67-44 in the area game.

DUNCANVILLE WILL open its tournament schedule in tonight's 7:45 game against Amarillo High.

The Sandies, the team that eliminated District 4-5A's San Angelo in a bi-district game Saturday, 45-42, bring a 20-5 record into the tournament. The Sandies made their first trip to Midland Tuesday when they eliminated El Paso Eastwood, 39-34 at Chap Center.

Amarillo High was the No. 2 team in 3-5A and is bringing a 20-5 record into the tournament. The Sandies are led by Lori Bolk with an 11-point average. Sophomore Amy Tollefson, 5-foot-10, provides the team with inside height. Other key players for AHS are Becky Boxwell, who scored 13 points against Eastwood. Tollefson led the scoring in the victory over San Angelo with 16 points.

Rivera on the rebound

HARMARVILLE, Pa. (AP) — A nervous Gabe Rivera, the Pittsburgh Steelers' No. 1 draft choice last year who was permanently paralyzed from the mid-chest down four months ago, said Thursday he has come through depression to an acceptance of his wheelchair-bound future.

"It was a hard time accepting it, but I think I've done a pretty good job," said Rivera, 22, holding his first news conference since his car accident Oct. 20.

"I know there's hope and I hope for a cure in the future and I hope of walking one day. But realistically, this is the way I'm going to be from now on, until I die. I can accept that," Rivera said, sitting in a wheelchair behind a bank of microphones at the Harmarville Rehabilitation Center, where he has been undergoing therapy since Nov. 23.

The former defensive lineman was thrown through the rear window of his sports car after it collided with another car on Pittsburgh's North Side. He suffered a crushed spinal cord, a broken bone and nerve damage in his right shoulder, broken ribs, a bruised lung and bruised heart.

Police later charged Rivera with drunken driving, reckless driving and speeding.

Rivera said before the news conference he would not answer any questions about the accident or the events surrounding it.

He admitted to being nervous and bit his lip several times during questioning.

Rivera said he did not dwell on the negative parts of his accident, but preferred to concentrate on what he could accomplish in therapy.

The Arkansas Razorbacks were impressive in dispensing with the last hurdle in their way before Sunday's Southwest Conference basketball showdown with powerful Houston before a national television audience.

Coach Eddie Sutton's 11th-ranked squad made 20 of 33 field goal attempts Thursday night to brush aside Texas Tech, 55-49, in Lubbock.

The victory ran Arkansas' record to 12-1 in SWC play and 22-4 for the year. Only a stunning upset by Rice keeps the Razorbacks from sharing a perfect 13-0 mark in conference play.

Houston, the nation's No. 3 team, has a streak of 37 straight victories in SWC action. Arkansas fell out of the national rankings after the loss at Rice, but moved up dramatically after shocking No. 1 North Carolina Feb. 12.

Although both Houston and Arkansas have only three conference games remaining in the SWC round-robin schedule, they have not met yet. A game scheduled for Fayetteville, Ark., was moved to Sunday afternoon, March 4, so it could be televised nationally.

This weekend's match in Houston was moved back a day so it also could be shown to a Sunday afternoon national TV audience. If they meet in the finals of the SWC postseason tournament, as expected, they will clash on three consecutive Sundays.

Texas Tech, 14-10, fell to 8-5 with Thursday night's loss to Arkansas. Four of their five league defeats came at the hands of Houston and Arkansas.

"I'd say that Arkansas and Houston can be compared pretty evenly. Both of them play good defense, but Houston may have a little more depth. It should be a super game between two great teams," said Texas Tech junior forward Vince Taylor, who shared scoring honors for his team despite getting only 10 points.

Joe Kleine used his muscle on the inside over the smaller Texas Tech players to lead a tough Arkansas defense. Kleine, who has been averaging 19 points and 9.4 rebounds a game, was held to 10 points and six rebounds.

Alvin Robertson and Ricky Norton each had 11 points and Leroy Sutton chipped in 10 for Arkansas.

Bubba Jennings and Taylor had 10 for Tech, which made only 37 percent of its shots.

"We won the game because our defense was so solid," Sutton said. "Texas Tech didn't shoot very well, but our defense had a lot to do with that. Ricky Norton in particular did an excellent job on Bubba Jennings, who is one of the best shooters in our league."

Sutton added, "Offensively, we displayed good patience. Our field goal percentage was outstanding. We would have won the game a lot easier if we had done a better job at the free throw line."

Arkansas converted 15 of 25 from the line.

The Razorbacks led 28-19 at the half, but Tech rallied to cut Arkansas' edge to 36-33 on a jump shot by Dwight Phillips with 12:41 to play. But Norton led a counterattack, and the Porkers built steadily up to a nine-point lead again, 44-35, with 4:08 remaining.

With the loss, Tech fell a game behind Southern Methodist for third place and a bye in the post-season tournament. SMU visits Lubbock a week from Saturday in a televised game that could decide the issue.

"I think my lowest spot might have been when I was lying in bed in the hospital and when I finally realized I couldn't get up. But I don't think about the low spots. Why get down and be sorry for yourself when you can enjoy life the way it should be?" he said. "What are you going to do, lie around and do nothing?"

Attending the news conference were Rivera's wife, Kim, and his son, Timothy, who was born Nov. 11 while Rivera was in a Pittsburgh hospital. They have been frequent visitors at the rehabilitation center, located 13 miles north of Pittsburgh.

Rivera said his son's birth "helped me through a lot of the state of depression at first."

His weight has dropped to 228 pounds since the accident.

Palo Duro on streak

PALO DURO won 3-5A this year with a 15-1 record, 23-2 overall. The only losses the Lady Dons suffered were to Dumas in their season opener and to Amarillo High in conference play.

In the playoffs, Palo Duro eliminated Midland Lee in the bi-district bame, 60-50 and won the area battle against El Paso Parkland, 47-37, to gain the regional berth against Arlington Sam Houston at 6 p.m. It will be the third time in as many playoff games that The Lady Dons have played in Midland.

ASH was the District 7-5A champion this year and eliminated Irving Nimitz and 24-1 Wichita Falls High for a 24-6 record enroute to tonight's game.

Th Lady Dons are led by 5-foot-8 Vanessa Wells who is averaging 15 points a game this year. Katrina Hardy matches wells in height and Yvonne Jackson and Angela Holldand are key players at the guard position.

The sister act of Cheryl and Pam Franklin is the driving force behind Sam Houston's success this year.

KC's Wilson, Martin freed

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Willie Wilson and Jerry Martin, two of four 1983 Kansas City Royals serving sentences on cocaine convictions, were released from prison Thursday, nine days ahead of schedule.

Charlotte Barron, the executive assistant at the Federal Correctional Institute in Fort Worth, said Wilson and Martin requested that the time of their release and their destination not be disclosed.

An Associated Press photographer was told the two players already had left when he arrived at the prison at 7 a.m. CST.

The players began serving their 90-day sentences Dec. 5 after pleading guilty in a Kansas City, Kan., federal court to misdemeanor charges of trying to obtain cocaine. According to Barron, the two were released nine days early for good behavior and "extra good time for their work."

Two other 1983 Royals began serving similar sentences at the federal prison after Wilson and Martin. But pitcher Vida Blue, a former Cy Young Award winner, and first baseman Willie Aikens were not scheduled for release until late March or early April. Prison officials said neither player has received time off for good behavior.

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn suspended Wilson, Martin and Aikens from baseball for one year and said his successor could review the suspensions May 15. None can play in spring exhibition games, except perhaps informal intrasquad games, but they are allowed to practice with a team.

The commissioner's office was asked by federal authorities not to investigate Blue until their investigation was finished. A spokesman from the commissioner's office said Thursday that the federal investigation has now been completed and that Blue's case was now being looked at by investigators for baseball.

Wilson and Martin were expected to appear at hearings in New York next week in conjunction with a grievance filed by the Major League Baseball Players Association. The grievance asks that Kuhn be required to show just cause for the suspensions.

Martin's attorney, William Simpson, said the former Royals outfielder probably will report soon to the New York Mets' training camp to try out as a free agent.

"He's very hopeful to be playing baseball this time next week," Simpson said. "We are very close to an agreement. In fact, we have what both sides consider a verbal agreement. We just don't have a signed contract."

Wilson, an All-Star outfielder, has been retained by the Royals and was expected to report to training camp at Fort Myers, Fla., after he visited his family in suburban Kansas City, team officials said.

"Willie and I talked about it when I visited him last month," said Royals General Manager John Schuerholz. "Whenever he is ready to come, that means whenever he has been with his family and he reaches the point where he is ready to come down here and get his mind fully on baseball, we'll be glad to have him."

Aikens has been traded to the Toronto Blue Jays. Blue already had been released by the Royals when the charge was filed against him.

Johnson wins U.S. downhill

COPPER MOUNTAIN, Colo. (AP) — Olympic champion Bill Johnson repeated as U.S. national downhill skiing champion today when he edged teammate Doug Lewis by .16 second in the opening race of the U.S. Alpine Championships.

Johnson, 23, of Van Nuys, Calif., started in the 15th position and charged down the course in 1 minute 51.64 seconds.

He then had to wait nearly 15 minutes before Lewis finished the race in 1:51.80. Andy Chambers of Jackson, Wyo., was third in 1:52.49.

Lewis, of Salisbury, Vt., who finished second to Johnson in this race a year ago, had to restart the race because the skier in front of him fell. Still, Lewis had the fastest times on the top of the course and said he lost the race close to the finish when he nicked a gate with a shoulder.

The women's downhill was scheduled for later today. The national championship races run through Sunday.

Johnson said his run was "a lot better than yesterday (Wednesday)," when he finished 13th in a North America Ski Trophy Series race. He also said it is "nice to have the national title, although the competition isn't as tough (as the Olympics)."

Weaver counted those Bighorns many a day

By EARL GUSTKEY
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

He looks as if he belongs in the 18th century, at sea, wearing an eyepatch, a hook hanging out of a sleeve and a parrot on his shoulder.

But his sunburned, weather-carved features weren't shaped at sea. Dick Weaver is a man of the desert, the Mojave Desert. Richard of Mojave. In a real sense, he's a 20th century explorer.

Now, he's a desk-bound biologist in Sacramento for the California Department of Fish and Game. His vast knowledge of the Mojave — a desert roughly the size of New Jersey and Massachusetts combined — inspires awe among his colleagues.

Says Vern Bleich, another DFG biologist: "Dick Weaver knows more about the Mojave than any man alive."

Says Bonnar Blong, another DFG biologist: "He's a true 20th century explorer. When he first started inventoring water sources in those Mojave ranges in the 1950s, maps showed only range boundaries. Really, there were no maps in those days. You know how auto club maps have 'tank' indications for water sources on desert mountains? Well, Dick found a good many of those."

WEAVER'S specialty, his first love, is bighorn sheep. In California's desert lands, their numbers are prospering, thanks in large measure to first Weaver and now Bleich and many volunteer workers.

In 1968, Weaver was assigned to compile a census of California bighorn populations, an assignment that meant hiking through all the Mojave's 60 ranges, looking for bighorns. Four years later, the census completed, Weaver had compiled an approximate population of about 3,800 bighorns in California, 2,300 of them Nelson, or desert bighorns. Today, the grand total is estimated to be 4,000 — 3,000 of them desert bighorns.

Moreover, their numbers are more dispersed than was the case in 1972.

"We've moved them around quite a bit, both the California bighorns in the Sierra and Warner mountains, as well as the desert bighorns," Weaver said recently, during just such a transplant operation in the Mojave.

"We feel the best way to insure Californians of always having bighorns is to disperse their numbers as much as possible. Bighorns are susceptible to a variety of lung and sinus diseases and you can lose a lot of them in a hurry."

CASE IN point: a week-old, half-decomposed carcass of a bighorn found just a few feet away from the base of a mountain range, near where a 25-person crew was live-trapping bighorns for a move to another Mojave range.

The sheep, a ewe, had a hole the size of a walnut in its skull, above the left eye.

"This is a case where a bacterial infection in the sinus area has eaten completely through the skull," Weaver said. "Diseased sheep frequently come down out of the mountains, to die on the flats. Disease wears them down, to where they can't climb anymore.

"We think a lot of these infections are caused by hard, splintery vegetation they eat. They'll cut a gum chewing on something sharp, a bot fly gains entrance to the wound and an infection is under way."

WEAVER'S 1968-72 odyssey through the remote ranges of the Mojave left him with enough desert tales to fill a book. Some samples:

—"In the Bullion Mountains, I found an old spring that looked like it'd dried up years before, maybe before World War II. I found 35 bighorn skulls around it."

—"At an area where Patton trained his tank troops early in World War II, I found the remnants of his 75-by-100-foot topo map. He liked to move toy tanks around on it with a long pole. It even had a catwalk. Its foundation is still there. And the tracks from his tanks will be on the desert for as long as the desert is there."

—"One time I found the Budweiser spring in the Bristol Mountains that was the water source for the Orangeblossom gold mine in the last century. On a rock wall there you can see '1897' chiseled into the rock."

—"I HEARD a funny story by some old-timers in Amboy, near the Bullions. There's an old volcano, Amboy Crater, there. One day in the 1930s a bunch of kids hauled old tires to the crater, poured gasoline on them and set them on fire. They ran into town screaming that the volcano was erupting again, and started a panic."

—A favorite desert tale of Jerry Mensch, another DFG desert partner of Weaver's, is the grisly discovery of Sheep Trap Well in the Chocolate Mountains.

"Dick and I were prowling around the Chocolates one day in 1969 looking for water sources. We came upon a natural rock basin full of rainwater, but we could see bones in it.

"We siphoned out the water and found over 30 bighorn skeletons in the bottom. The basin was so steep-sided the sheep had fallen in over the years, couldn't crawl out and drowned.

"We dynamited out a ramp for them."

WEAVER LOVEs the desert. To most, the Mojave is barren, scorched wasteland. To Weaver, it's one of nature's great stages, where creatures such as bighorns display astonishing adaptation to a formidable environment.

"I wore out several pair of boots crawling around these mountains," Weaver said recently, at the desert campsite.

"They were the best four years of my life. It's ironic, in a way. I was in the 28th Infantry Division in World War II, in the Battle of the Bulge. It was so cold over there I promised myself if I ever got out alive I'd never complain about cold weather again. So what happens? I wind up in the Mojave Desert."

Weaver got out alive, but with a few scratches. He was shot through the left wrist and left shin. His left fingertips are missing, too, but it's an injury that predates World War II.

"Dynamite cap, when I was 14," he said. He grew up on a small farm at Moreno, Calif., near Riverside, where his father dry-farmed wheat and "ran a few cows."

WEAVER AND his brother, Phillip, grew up hunting quail and rabbits.

"There were more quail in the Riverside area then than you could possibly imagine," he said. "We hunted the rabbits out of necessity. They were pests. They ate hay, and hay was our cash crop." In 1949, he went to work for the DFG. First assignment: Building quail guzzlers in the Mojave.

"Dick knocked around the desert for 10 years and did a lot for wildlife," said Blong, a Weaver partner on many desert projects. "He built water guzzlers and improved a lot of natural springs. I think his first desert sheep work was in Death Valley, when he participated in a sheep census for the National Park Service.

"He was one of the founders of the Desert Bighorn Council, in the early 1950s. I don't think he's ever missed a meeting.

"Dick has really known some characters in his desert years. For his 1968-'72 desert sheep survey, his first move was to find natural water sources in all the ranges.

"One guy he leaned on a lot was a guy named Burt Craig. He was an old hard-rock miner who lived in Essex. He knew how to handle dynamite and where the water was. He showed us how to use dynamite to improve natural water sources.

"Dick got to know all the old Mojave prospectors. A lot of them — people like Burt Craig — are unsung heroes of desert wildlife today because they pointed us to the water."

Strawberry latest phenom

By JOHN JEANSONNE
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

There are only a handful of basic themes in baseball, as in life. (Love and death. War and peace. Rich and poor.) In baseball, it is all magic numbers and trying to hit your weight. And southpaws and slumps. And phenoms.

We have seen Darryl Strawberry before. A new improved model, unveiled with a flourish; a stirring self-assured athlete one day, a blinking, skittish player — a fawn — the next four or five. We have heard Darryl Strawberry coming before. Grand tales, transmitted excitedly across great expanses: There was no pickle in the Carolina League he could not escape. No fence in the Texas League he could not clear. No pitcher in the International League he could not handle. Why not the National League?

Such an old story. From 1884 through 1891, a pitcher, born John Francis Gammon and later known as John Francis Smith, played major league baseball under the name "Phenomenal Smith." He was a southpaw, and his reputation preceded him. He was a letdown (57-78 record), and his not-as-good-as-we-expected career is something we have almost come to expect of phenoms. As often as not, the grand tales turn out to be too grand. Still, the scouts find more phenoms, the parent clubs advertise them, the fans scrutinize them, the press spreads the fuss.

AS EARLY as 1890, a New York newspaper, The Press, referred to promising young ballplayers as "phenoms," coining the phrase via that neat old newspaper trick of shortening a real word, "phenomenon." Later, to get the right slang inflection, the word often was seen in print as "pheenom." It is a prefix: the Giants' young phenom, Clint Hartung. It is a suffix: Mickey Mantle, the Yankee phenom. It is a badge: phenom Bobby Bonds. It is an albatross: phenom David Clyde.

The phenom is perpetual, a new name tied to an old name. The Next Joe DiMaggio, the Next Jackie Robinson, the Next Sandy Koufax. He's Got It Made. And yet, Darryl Strawberry will not have made it to the extent that he has been so hastily and profusely celebrated, until someone else becomes The Next Darryl Strawberry. Right now, he is busy trying to stay in the line-up against lefthanded pitchers. Trying to hit pitchers smarter than he has seen before. Trying to relax and try at the same time.

IN THE MID-'60s, Clint Hartung was announced to the baseball world as a "cross between Mel Ott and Rogers Hornsby," two of the game's immortals. Because the Giants had not decided — and never would decide — whether to use him as a pitcher or outfielder, he then became a "combination of Walter Johnson and Mel Ott." He had torn apart the low minor leagues with his powerful pitching and hitting. In 1946, he had pitched 25 games in the service leagues and won them all, meanwhile batting .367 with 20 home runs. To the generation of baseball fans who lived through World War II, Clint Hartung was the prototype phenom. He had been happened upon by accident, when the minor league Minneapolis Millers trained in south Texas, and the high school coach there told of a hulking boy he had seen from Hondo, near San Antone. Just can't you see this guy in the bigs.

"Oh, yeh," Hartung says wearily. "I was supposed to win a bunch of ballgames and hit a bunch of homers. Like Babe Ruth." In six major league seasons, he won 29 games. And lost 29. He hit 14 homers. He is 60 now, a longtime oilfield worker living in his native south Texas, where he has paid so little attention to baseball that he has not even heard of Darryl Strawberry. But if he were introduced to him, or to any phenom, what would Hartung say?

"Oh," he says, thinking about it, "about the only thing I could tell him is, 'Don't expect to do everything everybody wants you to do.'"

IN HIS first professional at bat, for Kingsport, Tenn., of the rookie Appalachian League in June of 1980, Strawberry singled. He was barely out of high school in Los Angeles, 18 years old, away from home for the first time. But he was the No. 1 amateur draft choice in the nation, and right away, he had his first hit. Better than anyone could expect.

And then he was two-for-43.

Whether you know baseball or not, you have heard this basic theme. Young and old. The old, when they were young, made mistakes and later learned that the young are condemned to repeat the same mistakes. "This profession is like any other. It can be a very humbling experience at times," says Rick Monday, a phenom of lesser proportions when he joined the Kansas City A's 17 years ago. "With a kid, he has to go through it for himself."

Clint Hurdle, the phenom of 1978 with the Kansas City Royals, now the third baseman for the Mets' Triple-A Tidewater Tides where he was Strawberry's teammate for 16 games earlier this season, sees "a lot of parallels, a lot of similarities" between himself and the phenom of 1983. "I like Darryl and I'd like to be able to help him. We talked a lot about this thing, and I think I can help; how smart are you going to be at age 21?"

How experienced are you going to be? David Clyde went from high school pitcher to major-league starter in less than a month in 1973. Five years later he said, "I've been through things I wouldn't wish on anybody."

"Once I get to the majors," Strawberry said last fall, "I want to stay."

Bobby Bonds was back in the minors in 1981, 14 years after he had put on a San Francisco Giants uniform and willingly accepted the title of the Next Willie Mays.

From the Dodger dugout, Monday now watches Strawberry, reliving a little the great fun of being proclaimed a future star at age 20. "I watch every move he makes," Monday says. "I look at a youngster like that and I think of 17 years and I say, 'It was only yesterday.' I watch a youngster like that and it brings back pleasant memories."

USA salvation for starved fans

An AP Sports Analysis
By BARRY WILNER

It doesn't have the impact or viewership of Monday Night Football or the Baseball Game of the Week. Still, the National Hockey League telecasts on the USA cable network are the main source of hockey entertainment for many viewers in this country.

USA does a first-rate job covering the sport none of the major networks wants to touch, outside the Olympics. The man who puts the package together more than 50 times a season is Mark Stulberger, who has been the producer of the NHL Game of the Week for 3½ years.

"There is a lot of prepatory work that goes into putting the game on the air," said Stulberger. "Take the opening piece, which has to be a tease to attract the audience. It's done a few days ahead of time.

"WE USUALLY try to highlight something significant but we can get burned when highlighting a player and, say, he gets injured. It happened with Rick Middleton one night. He wound up not playing in that game. He was injured after the opening was done. But it was impossible to change it.

"So we adapted the best we could."

Things rarely go that badly for the USA folks, who do one or two games a week and then offer extensive coverage of the playoffs, including every game in the Stanley Cup finals.

"I'm no different than a coach," Stulberger explained. "I'm out there coaching my guys to do their jobs, like a Herb Brooks or Glen Sather.

"The hardest thing to do was to put a team together. It's very difficult to work with different crews in each city, as we do. When we first started, nobody knew what to expect from each other. The major networks generally work with the same crews week after week. But we change to different cameramen, technical directors, graphics people and they all have their own style. You have to let them know what you want.

"YOU MUST have good support people or the broadcast will break down. Everyone has to do his job well for the telecast to look good."

Most often, it looks and sounds good. Following the little black disc around a wide-open sheet of ice isn't the easiest task, but USA's telecasts manages it well enough to be rivaled only by the superb Hockey Night in Canada productions.

"That comes from letting the director direct because he knows his job best," Stulberger said. "And the cameremen. It goes with anyone in the truck."

The announcing team of play-by-play man Dan Kelly, analyst Gary Green and host Al Trautwig is excellent. Kelly is the most prolific and identifiable voice in the sport. He's entertaining and informative and rarely gets caught behind the action.

Green, a former coach of the Washington Capitals, has steadily improved as an analyst and he isn't afraid to criticize coaching decisions and player mistakes. Trautwig is the best TV interviewer in hockey, putting his guests at ease while extracting the kind of information the viewer wants to hear.

"I HAVE to trust my announcers to let them do the game," said Stulberger. "I know they can come up with something in a crisis situation that is informative and entertaining.

"The league and probably everyone was skeptical of Trautwig at the beginning, who had no hockey background. But Dan Kelly, who is the kingpin, has schooled the other guys into his and my way of doing things.

Green has developed an on-air personality for glibness that can be appreciated even by a hockey purist. Stulberger has helped in that development.

"We went to Toronto for two days and worked 12 hours straight to shoot 18 features with Gary," he said. "It gave Gary more of a dimension and a personality more than being just another coach."

Stulberger rarely gets to appreciate the on-air product.

"I'm generally on line with eight people and I'm always wearing two headsets, at times even three," he explained. "I could be in touch with 13 other people at once.

"It's impossible with all that is going on for me to see everything. I might be working on a commercial break and someone scores and I won't see it.

"The time I get to see the game is when I come home the next morning or next day and watch it on tape.

"I gave up being a fan long ago. I don't get involved in the excitement at all."

Drugs no problem

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — Golf, suggested PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman, has a built-in protection against the drug-abuse scandals that have plagued other major professional sports.

The major baseball, football and basketball leagues all have been shaken. Leading athletes have been suspended, censured and in some cases imprisoned. Their position as role-models for youth — a position that is theirs whether wanted or not — has been questioned and scrutinized.

Individual clubs and leagues have established formal policy for the handling of drug-related situations.

The highest level of golf, as represented by the Tour, has escaped — at least to this point — such problems.

WHY? DOES the problem exist? Does golf have a formal policy in relation to drugs?

"We are not naive enough to believe that there has not been some experimentation, at some time or another, by some of our players," Beman said.

"Given the nature of society today, the age and affluence of many of our players, it would not be realistic to believe that there have not been some players who have dabbled in drugs, experimented at some time.

"But, to our knowledge, there is not a problem in relation to controlled substances."

The principal reason, Beman said, is attributable to the nature of the game and system under which it operates.

"The penalties are too severe. The results are devastating. And our players know it," he said.

"They are paid only on the basis of performance. And it's only today's performance that counts. You may have a great record. But if you don't perform today, in this tournament, you don't get paid. It's that simple.

"OUR PLAYERS are not protected by a contract. They cannot rely on their teammates. There is no one to cover for them.

"Add that to the current level of competition, and it becomes obvious that someone with a drug problem can't survive, can't exist.

"There is such a tiny bit of difference," Beman said, holding thumb and forefinger close together, "in the level of a Tom Watson or a Jack Nicklaus and some other, lesser-known player, that you simply can't afford to give your competitors that much of an edge.

"The game is built around personal discipline and a high level of awareness.

"Give someone an edge and you're beaten. Down the road. No payday.

"If that happens often enough, you're off the Tour. You go back home and you get a job.

"So," Beman said, "it is entirely possible that we have had players with drug problems who have been eliminated from golf, by golf; players who were eliminated and we didn't even know about it."

Habs continue slide

By The Associated Press

In the 1943-44 National Hockey League season, the Montreal Canadiens did not lose a single one of their 25 home games.

In 1976-77, the Flying Frenchmen dropped just one of 40 games on the hallowed ice of the Montreal Forum.

How the mighty have fallen.

When the Winnipeg Jets defeated Montreal 5-3 Thursday night, it was the Canadiens' 15th setback of the season at home. In the Canadiens' glorious past, no team wearing the tricolored bleu-blanc-rouge had suffered that fate.

"I thought we put in a good effort, but we still lost," said Montreal's Mats Naslund. "There's a lot of small things we have to put together if we want to start winning."

Moe Mantha and former Montreal defenseman Robert Picard staked Winnipeg to a 2-0 lead over the Canadiens in the opening period. But Montreal rebounded in the second, getting two goals from Chris Nilan and another by Bobby Smith which, combined with Paul MacLean's 31st goal for Winnipeg, left the teams tied 3-3.

However, Winnipeg's Thomas Steen snapped the tie at 17:42 of the second period and Lucien DeBlois tapped in his own rebound at 13:17 of the final period as the Jets recorded their first-ever victory at the Forum, where they had lost seven in a row.

"Tonight's game wasn't as frustrating as our other games in here," said Steen. "All season we've had trouble getting up for teams below us, but we seem to play better against teams who are ahead of us in the standings."

Islanders 5, Blues 1

Mike Bossy scored his 40th goal of the season on a power play late in the second period to break a 1-1 tie and the Islanders went on to maintain their two-point lead over the second-place Rangers in the Patrick Division. They put the game away with three goals in the third period — by Greg Gilbert, Anders Kallur and Bryan Trottier.

NHL

Rangers 4, Nordiques 2

Barry Beck scored a short-handed goal late in the first period and set up two goals by Mark Osborne, the first one just eight seconds into the second period. Osborne added an insurance goal with 1:08 left in the game after Quebec had sliced a 3-0 deficit to 3-2 on goals by Peter and Anton Stastny.

Flyers 3, North Stars 3

Brian Propp's second goal of the game with 2:15 left in the third period gave Philadelphia the deadlock and lifted them into a third-place tie with idle Washington in the Patrick Division. Propp wristed the puck between the legs of Minnesota goalkeeper Gilles Meloche from 15 feet out. Earlier, the North Stars rallied from a 2-0 deficit to go ahead 3-2 with the help of two goals by Neal Broten.

Whalers 3, Sabres 2

Rookie Sylvain Turgeon scored his 30th goal of the season with 4:46 left to snap the Whalers nine-game winless streak against Adams Division rivals and broke division-leading Buffalo's string of seven straight division wins. Dave Andreychuk scored both Buffalo goals, giving him 32 for the season.

Flames 3, Canucks 2

Doug Risebrough's goal at 3:33 of overtime capped Calgary's come-from-behind victory. Frank Caprice, Vancouver's rookie goaltender just back from the minors, blanked the Flames for two periods. But Steve Tambellini broke the shutout bid just 23 seconds into the third period and Eddy Beers tied the score at 3-3 with his 33rd goal of the season. Tim Hunter and Peter McNab scored for Vancouver in the opening period.

Judge upholds UIL in Killeen ruling

BELTON, Texas (AP) — A state district judge has upheld a University Interscholastic League ruling that Killeen High School must forfeit 25 basketball victories because two players were ineligible.

The action by Judge William Black on Tuesday strips the Killeen Kangaroos of the District 15 championship.

The school had asked Black for a temporary injunction against the UIL executive committee's decision.

The committee ruled that twin players Vince and Victor Webb were ineligible to play because they participated in a post-season tournament.

A University Interscholastic League rule states that no high school varsity player may compete on a non-school team during the off-season. Section 1 of the rule states, "Any type of organized basketball competition is considered a violation of this rule."

The Webbs moved to Killeen in August 1982 from Columbus, Ohio, where playing in a post-season game is legal. They competed in a tournament in Bryan the day after the conclusion of the 1982-83 season.

Attorney Alvin Wells said the twins may file suit.

"I will talk to my clients and see what their desire is," Wells said. "There's still a lawsuit possible on the constitutionality of the rule..."

As a result of Black's ruling, the Kangaroos finish 3-9 in district play and 3-29 overall.

With the forfeits, Bryan and Killeen Ellison finished with identical 10-2 records and were declared co-champions.

Powers survive scares

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer

Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said his team demonstrated "unbelievable poise," Nevada-Las Vegas' Jerry Tarkanian proclaimed his was tired, and Marv Harshman of Washington suggested his was simply lucky.

All three survived scares Thursday night — fifth-ranked UNLV and No. 14 Duke prevailing in overtime, while 18th-ranked Washington pulled away from California in the closing minutes despite poor foul shooting.

"From a coaches standpoint, the thoughts are those of thankfulness," Harshman said after his Huskies got by California 54-51. "We played almost well enough to lose. We almost threw it away, but it didn't come back to haunt us."

UNLV, meanwhile, came away with a 74-62 victory over Fullerton State after losing the lead in the closing seconds of regulation, and Duke edged Atlantic Coast Conference rival North Carolina State 73-70.

In other games involving Top 20 teams, 11th-ranked Arkansas trimmed Texas Tech 55-49 and No. 20 Oregon State downed Arizona State 69-58.

Eric Booker hit eight of nine free throws as UNLV, 24-2, buried Fullerton State in the extra session. Richie Adams paced the Rebels with 21 points and 15 rebounds, while Booker finished with 14 points.

"We wanted to play in the first half but we just couldn't," Tarkanian said. "We haven't had a day off in weeks and our legs were gone."

The triumph gave the Rebels, 15-1 in conference play, the Pacific Coast Athletic Association championship.

North Carolina State's Ernie Myers sent the Wolfpack-Duke game into overtime with a 15-foot jumper that knotted the score at 68 with nine seconds left in regulation.

Duke's Mark Alaire sank a pair of free throws 1:51 into the extra session to give the Blue Devils a 70-68 lead, but North Carolina State countered with a Myers basket 15 seconds later.

Jay Bilas' free throw with 1:41 remaining put the lead for good and Dan Meagher's charity tosses in the closing seconds gave the Blue Devils their final margin of victory.

Duke improved its record to 22-5 overall, 7-4 in ACC. North Carolina State dropped to 18-9 and 7-4 in the conference.

Alvin Vaughn's 18-foot jumper with 5:46 left gave Washington a 39-37 lead with 3:46 remaining and the Huskies, 18-5 overall, 12-2 in the Pacific-10 Conference, moved into a four-point lead on two Clay Damon free throws.

Top Twenty

A.C. Green and Charlie Sitton combined for 29 points to pace Oregon State, which outscored Arizona State 17-2 from the free throw line.

Green poured in 29 points and Sitton added 13 in the second half when the Beavers, 10-2 in the Pac-10, withstood several challenges by the Sun Devils, who trailed 52-51 with 4:12 remaining.

Unranked Teams

In other games, Jeff Adkins sank two free throws in the final 1:47 as Clarkson nipped Niagara from Georgia Tech 79-74, Syracuse turned back Penn State 102-92, Southern Mississippi topped South Carolina 77-75, Iowa edged past Ohio State 63-55 and Minnesota stopped Northwestern 69-61.

Also, Indiana was a 72-57 winner over Illinois, West Virginia trounced Massachusetts 85-59 and Arizona defeated Oregon 75-67 in overtime.

Conoco commits $787 million to North Slope

ANCHORAGE, ALASKA—Conoco Inc. and partners have committed $312 million to the first phase of developing a significant hydrocarbon discovery on Alasks's North Slope. Production will begin in early 1986 at an initial rate of 30,000 barrels of oil per day.

The four-phase development project at Milne Point is expected to take eight years to complete at a total cost of $787 million.

Conoco, with a 60 percent interst, is operator for the project.

Other partners who have committed to project development are Champlin Petroleum Co., a subsidiary of Union Pacific Corp., 13.4 percent; Cities Service Oil and Gas Corp., wholly owned subsidiary of Occidental Petroleum Corp., 12.5 percent; Chevron U.S.A., 6.0 percent, and Reading & Bates Petroleum Co., 3.3 percent.

Milne Point is 240 miles north of the Artic Cicle and about 35 miles northwest of Prudhoe Bay and the town of Deadhorse. All development operations will be conducted on land.

"Milne Point is the largest single production project undertaken by Conoco in North America," said V.C. Eissler," Conoco Inc.'s vice president of North American Production. "Development of the unit will not only significantly increase Conoco's domestic oil reserves, but also firmly establish us in a new area where opportunities for future reserve additions are above average.

A total of 18 wells have been drilled in the unit to date. Phase one of the project will include the drilling of 24 additional wells and the development of Kuparuk reserves from two well pads.

A production facility will be designated and installed to handle 32,000 barrels of oil per day and 32 million cubic feet of natural gas per day. Water injection capacity of the system will be 45,000 barrels per day.

Installation of facilitiess will start in late 1984 and will create some 300 jobs on the North Slope at the peak of construction.

Conoco's Continental Pipe Line Co. will design and install an 11.5 mile, 14-inch pipeline which will interconnect with the Kuparuk Pipeline for transportation to the Trans-Alaska Pipeline.

Crude oil from the Milne Point project will be transported primarily to either the West Coast or Gulf Coast of the United States.

The development project's first two phases will involve the Kuparuk formation, and the planned third and fourth phases would develop the Upper Cretaceous Sands.

The Kuparuk formation is comprised of middle and lower Kuparuk sandstone containing crude oil averaging 22-degrees API gravity at an average depth of 7,000 feet. The Upper Cretaceous Sands are comprised of four main reservoirs with API gravities ranging from 14 to 20 degrees at an average depth of 4,000 feet.

The discovery well tested from three formations at deptis ranging from 4,000 to 10,000 feet with combined flow rates ranging from 785 to 1,340 barrels of oil per day. The API gravity ranged from 16.1 degrees in the shallowest zone to 34.5 degrees in the deepest zone tested.

Fluor Engineers, Inc. of Irvine, Calif., has been awarded the contract for engineering design and procurement for phase one of the development.

Conoco is a subsidiary of the DuPont Company.

All 76 of crew rescued from drilling rig

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia (AP) — Supply boats today rescued all 76 crew members from a gas drilling rig who took to lifeboats after a well blew wild off Sable Island, the Halifax search and rescue center reported.

The crew spent the night aboard two enclosed lifeboats in 9-foot seas after abandoning the rig Wednesday, and helicopters and supply boats stood by so the rescue could start at dawn. Rescue workers said one man was flown by helicopter to a hospital for treatment of a possible heart problem.

The fate of the rig Vinland remained uncertain. Officials of Shell Resources Canada Ltd. said they planned to board it to determine the extent of damage and to see whether an attempt to seal the natural gas flow 12 minutes before the crew evacuated had been successful.

The Norwegian-owned ... floating unmanned, its navigation lights on, but officials said it apparently was not on fire.

The rig is being leased by Shell Resources Canada Ltd., a subsidiary of Royal Dutch Shell, and is one of four rigs testing natural gas reserves ... Sable Island on the Scotian Shelf.

The Vinland was 12 nautical miles north of Sable Island.

Silver, Gold up

LONDON (AP) — Gold and silver bullion hit their highest levels of the year in active trading early today. The dollar fell against most other major currencies.

After jumping $10.50 in New York late Wednesday, to a bid of $398.50, gold broke through the $400 barrier in the Far East and Europe.

The precious metal gained $13.23 in Hong Kong, to a bid of $402.23, and then opened at $402.25 in both London and Zurich. Prices eased later to just below $400.

At midmorning, London's five main bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $399.75 an ounce. The metal was bid at $398.25 in Zurich. Gold was quoted at $395 in both centers late Wednesday.

Silver was quoted in London at $9.80 an ounce, up sharply from a bid of $9.465 late Wednesday.

It was the highest European level for bullion since Dec. 8, when gold cost $402 in London and $401.25 in Zurich. Silver cost $9.81 dollars in London on that date.

A dealer at London bullion dealers Samuel Montagu attributed the metals' gains to the weaker dollar and tension created by Iran's threat to block Western oil supplies through the Persian Gulf.

Tax liabilities could be costly

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — People who invest in real estate partnerships generally assume that if the project goes bad they can't lose more than the relatively small amount of their investment.

Beware. It could be a costly assumption. "I don't think people recognize the potential liabilities," says Allen Cymrot. "If the tax liabilities were explained I don't think people would put money in some of them."

The potential might even exist, he adds, for some investors to be dropped into deep financial hot water by the very technique they had relied upon to hand them a profit while simultaneously cutting taxes.

The red flags are flying, says Cymrot, who helped organize hundreds of millions of dollars of partnerships while heading Robert McNeil Corp., one of the biggest providers of real estate limited partnerships.

Now president and a director of a new and growing firm, Kemper-Cymrot Inc., he contends the tax-shelter aspect of limited partnerships is overemphasized, and he expects the IRS to crack down.

This is the scenario:

A partnership is organized to offer big tax deductions, which it seeks to achieve by overpricing the property. Overpricing produces bigger tax deductions through depreciation. It usually means big interest costs, also deductible.

Overpriced, the real estate project's cash flow from rents cannot support the debt and other expenses. Rather than paying off interest currently, the partnership accrues it, hoping to repay when the building is sold.

The device creates what seems to be a delightful situation for someone trying to cut taxes. That is, there is no income to declare to the Internal Revenue Service. At the same time, the interest costs give a big deduction.

"I think the Internal Revenue Service will challenge accrued interest," says Cymrot, who travels to his Chicago and Atlanta offices from a base in Palo Alto, Calif.

That, however, is really not the worst of it, he says. Because theideal is overleveraged and overpriced to begin with, the super-inflated selling price that is to be sought might turn out to be a mere dream.

The deal might go bankrupt instead.

So, the investor might say, "I lost my investment, nothing more." Under the law, mortgage lenders have little they can do but accept the situation. They cannot seek recourse from the individual investors.

But, says Cymrot, the IRS might think differently.

Because such transactions pose the possibility of a rise in foreclosures, he says, "it is my opinion that the IRS will take an increasingly strong position." Otherwise, he points out, Uncle Sam is a big loser.

Under certain conditions, he suggests, the IRS might feel compelled to declare that the forgiveness of mortgage debt is income. Taxable income. Income that is taxed heavily rather than tax-sheltered.

Therefore, he offers these tips to those who might be interested in limited partnership real estate investments:

—Real estate is a business — "first and always a business, first and singularly a business." Tax aspects of the investment are secondary. "The more you dedicate to tax aspects the more you weaken the deal."

—"Don't assume that the only amount at risk is your initial investment. It isn't necessarily so with the IRS. If the economics of the transaction fail you may find yourself liable for several times that amount."

—Change your frame of reference when talking with your investment adviser. Your first question should not be the usual one about the tax writeoff, but instead, 'What's the bottom line.'

—A red flag is flying when the transaction involves losses for the first few years. It indicates that the real estate project is overvalued. "Any business should show profits in the first year, certainly in the second."

Take credit to cut taxes

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

"Credits are worth more than deductions," said Phil Wiesner, a partner in the Washington national tax practice of the accounting firm of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co. Deductions are subtracted from your income; credits are subtracted directly from the amount of tax you owe. "A dollar of credit is worth a dollar off your tax," Wiesner said.

You can claim credits regardless of whether you itemize deductions, although you probably will have to fill out an extra form.

The child-care credit for working parents is one of the most widely available, Wiesner said.

The credit is available to parents of children under 15 who work and therefore must pay someone to look after the youngsters. If the family includes a husband and wife, both spouses must have jobs — or have been actively looking for work.

The amount of the credit depends on how much you spend and how much you earn. Depending on your income, you can subtract from 20 percent to 30 percent of a maximum of $2,400 in expenses for one child or $4,800 in expenses for two or more children.

You cannot include expenses for food, clothing or regular schooling. But Wiesner said you can count wages you pay to a household employee like a maid as long as even part of that person's duties involve taking care of the child.

A different type of credit may be available if you held more than one job and each employer withheld Social Security tax from your paycheck. The maximum wage base on which Social Security was due in 1983 was $35,700. If your total earnings were more than $35,700, check the W-2 forms you get from your employer and add up the Social Security tax. If more than $2,391.90 was withheld, you can claim a credit.

Part of a herd of reticulated giraffes were photographed during a hunt in Kenya last month. American actress Stephanie Powers from ABC-TVs "Hart to Hart," an African game catcher and a Florida zoo manager piled into a land cruiser to rescue 25 giraffes, which are of a sub-species in danger of extinction.

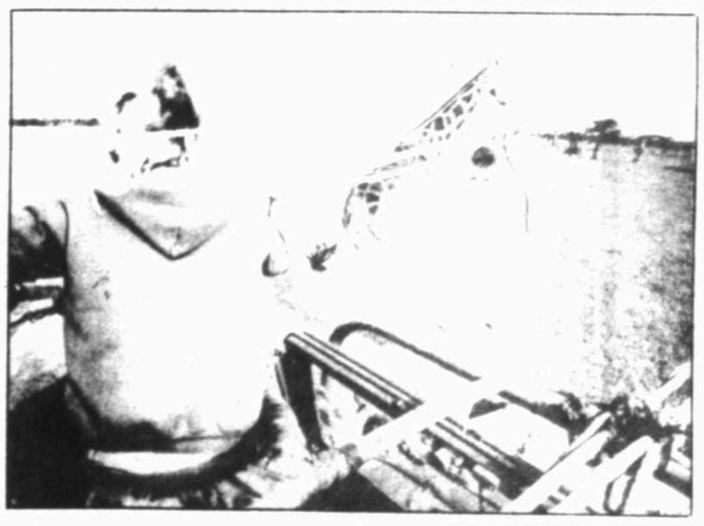
Giraffe hunt

An American actress, an African game catcher and a Florida zoo manager piled into a land cruiser in Kenya this month to rescue 25 giraffes, members of a subspecies in danger of extinction.

Don Hunt, of the International Animal Exchange, heads the operation to corral the giraffes and transport them in a cargo plane to the Busch Gardens zoo in Tampa, Fla.

He has been joined by Gerald S. Lentz, manager of the Busch zoo, and Stefanie Powers, who plays Jennifer Hart on ABC-TV's "Hart to Hart" series.

Miss Powers had been visiting Hunt and his wife, Iris, in Nanyuki, Kenya, when she was invited to join the safari.



Kevin Hunt, son of Don Hunt of the International Animal Exchange, attempts to snare a reticulated giraffe with a 12-foot pole tipped with a rope loop during a hunt in Kenya last month.

The Hunts own the Mount Kenya Game Ranch; Miss Powers is a member of the ranch board of directors.

Busch Gardens hired the animal exchange to capture 22 female and three male reticulated giraffes for the zoo in Tampa. The mission was designed to save some of the giraffes and to start a pure gene pool for breeding in the United States, Lentz said.

The reticulated giraffe is considered the most beautiful of the four most common subspecies of giraffe. But only about 1,000 reticulated giraffes survive in Kenya, and government wildlife authorities there predict they will be gone in five to 10 years.

In recent years, much of Kenya's wild land has been turned over to farming and ranching. Giraffes and other wild animals trample farmers' fences and the Kenya government has authorized landowners to shoot errant animals.

"It's a tragic thing to see a species vanish," Lentz said. "We are fortunate that the means still exist to translocate these animals to a protected environemnt."

Capturing giraffes in their natural habitat on the Laikipia Plateau, 130 miles northwest of Nairobi, has been a tricky business. Because of the giraffes' unusual respiratory system, they can't be shot with tranquilizers.

Don Hunt, of the International Animal Exchange, right, and Gerald S. Lentz, center, manager of Busch Gardens in Tampa, supervise the natives after they capture a reticulated giraffe.

Once a herd is located and a candidate is spotted, the game catchers race alongside the giraffe in land cruisers at 20 to 40 mph until the animal tires and slows. Then a catcher extends a 12-foot pole with a rope loop at the end and slips it over the head and neck of the galloping giraffe. The animal is pulled alongside the vehicle, which slows to a stop. The giraffe is given an injection to calm it down.

Workers riding in a "catch car" seek a suitable giraffe for capture during the hunt along Kenya's Laikipia Plateau. Don Hunt of the Interntional Animal Exchange headed the operation to corral the giraffes for transport to Busch Gardens Zoo in Tampa, Fla.

Dr. James Parkin exhibits the INERAID artificial ear approved by the Food and Drug Administration this week.

Surgeon prepares to implant artificial ears

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A tiny artificial ear with the potential to help 65 percent of the nation's deaf will be implanted in 20 people within a year, with the first operation to take place in three to four weeks, a University of Utah surgeon says.

Dr. James Parkin, acting chairman of the school's department of surgery, told a news conference that he has already chosen the first candidate for an implant of the INERAID ear.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved the implants Tuesday.

Researchers hope to have the tiny electronic device, which translates sounds into electronic signals that can be interpreted by the brain, widely available for five years.

It eventually could help 65 percent of the nation's 250,000 to 500,000 deaf who suffer from cochlear disease, disease of the snail-shaped part of the inner ear, Parkin said.

Preliminary versions of the device have been implanted in four people during the past eight years, but FDA approval was required for the upcoming implants under new laws that hadn't been enacted at the time of the first implants, Parkin said.

"We're very excited about this because of results obtained in patients that were implanted years ago," he said.

Blindfolded, the patients have 60 percent to 80 percent comprehension of spoken words, and understanding is almost 100 percent when they are able to watch the speaker's lips, he said.

In a normal ear, sound waves travel to the cochlea, which converts them into electronic signals that are transmitted to the brain.

The artificial ear is "like taking the cochlea outside the head and putting it on your belt," Parkin said.

Eight electrodes connected to a plug are implanted in the patient's ear — six of them in the cochlea — during a two-hour operation. The wires are laced through an opening above the natural ear, where the plug is attached with tiny screws to the outside of the head.

The first patients had to be plugged into a room full of computers to hear. But researchers have developed a microprocessor pack that can be worn on the belt and connected by a cord to the plug above the ear. Sound waves enter the device through a tiny microphone attached to the ear, then travel down the cord into the pack to be converted into electronic signals.

The signals then travel into the ear, where the electrodes stimulate nerve endings in the cochlea and transmit the signals to the brain.

Of the four patients who previously had implants, two still are using the ear, one has since died and one has had the device removed because he is hearing-impaired in only one ear and was used only to aid the research, Parkin said.

The sound produced by the artificial ear is not the same as that heard by the natural ear, Parkin said. Some sounds are similar, but the patient must learn those that are different, he said.

"I'm starting to learn those things," David Columpus of San Diego, a recipient of the device, said in a videotaped interview released by Kolff Medical, the company developing the ear. "It gives me a lot more independence, a lot more being able to be connected with people."

Without the ear, Columpus would have to communicate through sign language.

The only risk known so far is infection around the plug, a minor problem in one patient, Parkin said.

The first patient will be a Salt Lake City man in his 30s, Parkin said. "I have a series of patients that are excellent candidates waiting," he said.

The device costs $10,000 and the surgery about $7,000, but the first two patients will receive the implants free, Parkin said.

Doctor says drug helps restore hair growth

CHICAGO (AP) — A drug used for treating high blood pressure is restoring hair growth in about 50 percent of semi-bald male patients who have been tested with the medication, a published report says.

The drug, minoxidil, produced growth within three months when rubbed into the scalps of the men, according to an interview with Dr. Henry Roenigk, chairman of dermatology at Northwestern University, in the March issue of McCall's.

But "minoxidil may not turn out to be the miracle cure everyone wants it to be," Roenigk said. Usually only short and stubby hair was produced, he said.

In a Connecticut study, meanwhile, 70 percent of the subjects have shown "cosmetically apparent" hair growth after minoxidil treatment, says a dermatologist who has participated in research for the Upjohn Co.

Dr. Ronald Savin said in a telephone interview that only 4 to 5 percent of balding patients have grown "a lot of hair" after applying minoxidil lotion twice daily for a year.

Another 10 percent have shown a "light, medium" amount of hair equal to "a short crewcut," he said. Fifty-five percent of the patients shows "very sparse" hair growth, he said.

The drug is the active ingredient in Loniten, a product marketed for the past five years by Upjohn for treating severe high blood pressure that resists other medications.

DEAR ABBY

Woman needs advice

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I've been living in the United States for over three years, having come from a country that is predominantly Roman Catholic. My parents are very religious and go by the book in everything.

This summer my parents are coming here for a two-week visit. They know that I am going with a nice Catholic boy, but they don't know that we are living together.

Abby, I've never lied to my parents in my life. (There have been times when I haven't told them everything, but I've never lied.) If they come and see that we are living together, I am sure they will pressure us to get married, and neither of us is ready for that yet.

What should I do? — NEEDS ADVICE

DEAR NEEDS: Write to your parents and tell them that you and your boyfriend are living together and you hope that they will not pressure you to get married because neither of you is ready for that yet.

It may come as a shock to them, but the shock would be greater were they to come and learn it then. Of course, you could ask your boyfriend to move out while your parents are visiting, but I doubt that you could handle the guilt.

DEAR ABBY: I need your help. I've been married for seven months to a man I love with all my heart. Now the problem: He is a very heavy breather and he whistles through his nose when he sleeps. It is not a snore — it's a whistle that is louder than any snore I've ever heard.

I'm a very light sleeper, and this noise wakes me up many times during the night. I can't continue waking him up to tell him to turn over or put the pillow over his head. I've tried using earplugs (the kind used by people who work around noisy equipment), but they aren't comfortable and they don't stay in my ears.

Please don't tell me I'm lucky to have a husband and be glad I can hear. I am only 22 and I can't go on like this for the rest of my life. — SLEEPLESS NIGHTS

DEAR SLEEPLESS: If your husband has not seen an ear-noise-throat doctor, he should. (A minor surgical procedure might relieve the problem.) If that fails, check your nearest university for its sleep disorder clinic. If you strike out there, see your friendly neighborhood pharmacist for wax earplugs that can be molded to the ear, are more comfortable and stay in.

And if any readers have suggestions — short of "separate bedrooms" — I'll pass them on to you.

DEAR ABBY: This is for the unmarried secretary who thought her married boss got her pregnant. She told him, and he quickly gave her $300 for an abortion, which she never had because it turned out she wasn't pregnant after all. She said she spent the money on clothes, never revealing the truth to her boss.

Too bad! If I were she, I would have made a $300 contribution to the local family planning clinic — in her boss's name! — ANOTHER SECRETARY

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Justice Department: Briefing papers transfer not crime

WASHINGTON (AP) — Neither the Justice Department nor congressional investigators can solve the mystery of how President Jimmy Carter's debate briefing papers wound up in Ronald Reagan's campaign in 1980, but the department says no crime was involved in the transfer.

The Justice Department closed its eight-month investigation Thursday, admitting in a three-page report that it was not able to determine who transferred the briefing material and some White House documents to the Reagan camp before the crucial Oct. 28, 1980, Reagan-Carter debate.

The department concluded there was "no credible evidence that the transfer violated any criminal law" and found no evidence of "any plan or conspiracy by Reagan election officials to obtain the Carter briefing materials or any other confidential, internal Carter documents."

All documents gathered by the FBI were turned over to a House subcommittee headed by Rep. Donald J. Albosta, D-Mich., whose panel is writing a report on its own investigation of the episode. All the FBI interview and laboratory reports were also made available to the subcommittee, the department said.

BUT HOUSE sources, who declined to be named, have said the Albosta probe also came up dry in efforts to identify the person or persons who may have been responsible for the transfer.

Asked why the department did not continue until it had found out how the papers were transferred, Justice Department spokesman Tom DeCair replied, "We're not an ethics agency."

He said the department's responsibility ended when it determined there was no crime.

The department said that, without evidence of theft, neither federal laws against the theft of government property nor local theft laws had been violated. It said since none of the material was classified, no federal secrecy laws were violated.

And it said that without evidence of a conspiracy by the Reagan camp to get the documents, federal election laws were not violated.

DeCair said that despite inconsistent statements by top Reagan appointees about the materials, no polygraph tests were administered because "there were no legally significant inconsistencies."

THE LARGEST inconsistency was in the memories of two top Reagan campaign officials about the briefing materials themselves.

James A. Baker III, now White House chief of staff, said he thought he had received them from William J. Casey, now CIA director. Casey said he didn't remember seeing them and would not have touched them "with a 10-foot pole."

The department concluded the Reagan camp got a rough draft of foreign policy briefing material prepared for Carter and of briefing material prepared for Vice President Walter Mondale in anticipation of a debate with Reagan's running mate, George Bush. That debate never took place.

The FBI concluded these were campaign documents not produced on government time or at government expense and were based on public source material.

The department said the Reagan campaign never had Carter's final briefing papers and the ones it had were used only by David Stockman, now director of the Office of Management and Budget, to prepare for playing Carter in practice debates with Reagan.

"ALL OF THE Reagan campaign officials who either possesed or were aware of the materials denied any knowledge of how they were originally obtained and any belief that the materials were stolen," the department said. "In fact, there is no evidence that the material was stolen."

But FBI agents reviewing thousands of papers in the files of Reagan campaign officials did find other material "identified as internal documents of the Carter White House or the Carter campaign."

However, the FBI found no evidence of theft or criminal misappropriation of these documents. "In most instances the material in question had been widely disseminated to the press or others and were obtained through wholly proper channels," the department said.

In other cases, it was impossible to determine how these documents were obtained "due to the professed lack of memory or knowledge on the part of those in possession of the documents," the department said.

At the White House, deputy press secretary Pete Roussel said there would be no comment.

Senator divorced for second time

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — U.S. Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., is now divorced for a second time.

A statement released by Weicker's lawyers on Wednesday, after the divorce was granted in Superior Court, said, "The Senator and Mrs. Weicker have reached an agreement concerning the dissolution of their marriage and the custody of their children."

Weicker filed for divorce last October, citing "irreconciliable differences" with Camille, his wife of six years. Each had been married previously.

Neither Weicker's lawyer, Richard Silver, nor his ex-wife would say who received custody of the couple's two children, Sonny, 5, and Lowell III, 4.

"I can finally settle into a private life again," Camille Weicker said in a telephone interview Wednesday from her home in Alexandria, Va.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Actor Sean Connery, the original agent "007" of James Bond movies, was presented a curly wig as well as the traditional pudding pot at Harvard as the Hasty Pudding Theatrical's Man of the Year recipient.

"This is the first time I've been in Boston and I'm thrilled to be going with hair," the balding Connery said Wednesday night.

"If I had been educated here at Harvard, I would have made an intelligent speech. But since I left school at 13 and since we're running about 15 minutes late, I'll just say thank you very much indeed."

Connery also was presented with a dart board bearing a photo of Roger Moore, the other James Bond.

Last week, Joan Rivers received the theater organization's Woman of the Year award.

• • •

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — President Reagan couldn't make it, so comedian Bob Hope will be the speaker for this May's commencement exercises at The Citadel, officials at the military school announced Thursday.

Col. Ben Legare, school spokesman, said, "The senior class asked for either President Reagan or Bob Hope. And Bob Hope accepted.

"The reason President Reagan is not available is the proximity of May 12 to the Republican National Convention and because of his recent visit to South Carolina in September of 1983."

Legare added that "Bob Hope in his letter said it would be nice to see the two great Americans again — Gen. Mark Clark and Gen. William Westmoreland."

Clark commanded the 5th Army which liberated Italy in World War II while Westmoreland commanded American troops in Vietnam. Clark is president emeritus of The Citadel. Both generals are retired and live in the Charleston area.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Abel Kiviat, the oldest living U.S. Olympic medal winner at 91, has a word for the kind of training young runners put themselves through these days.

"Ridiculous," said the silver medalist in the 1,500 meters race at the 1912 Summer Games in Stockholm.

"You've got kids in high school running five, six miles a day before breakfast. I didn't run five miles in a month."

Kiviat made the comment Wednesday at the 61st annual convention of the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance.

The year Kiviat won the silver medal, he worked as a traveling salesman, selling class rings at high schools and colleges throughout New Jersey.

"I didn't train every day," he said. "Making a living was very important."

Kiviat, whose bright blue eyes, full head of white hair and sprightly step make him appear 25 years younger, lives in Lakehurst, N.J.

His exercise, he said, consists of "a little more walking than a normal 91-year-old. I get the mail, once a day. I take out the garbage, once a day."

PARIS (AP) —Many French people sneered when Americans elected a former movie actor as their president.

But now millions of them are turning to a man they think can lead them out of political and economic troubles — actor and singer Yves Montand, long one of the country's best-loved entertainers.

After 46 years in show business, Montand suddenly become the most talked-about political figure in France.

His broadsides against the country's Socialist leaders and his move to the political center after 30 years on the far left are causing a bigger stir here than his much-publicized love affair with Marilyn Monroe 25 years ago.

FIVE national magazines, including a scholarly economic publication, an influential leftist news weekly and a conservative journal of opinion, devoted their front covers to Montand this week.

Polls show that 44 percent of the French electorate want him to play a "national political role."

Newspaper headlines cite the "Montand Phenomena" and the "Montand Effect" on the political scene. The weekly Magazine Hebdo says the tremendous popular response to Montand's message is a "symptom of the loss of credibility" of France's politicians and traditional parties.

Montand's pronouncements on economics, domestic politics and foreign affairs have drawn comment from Socialist President Francois Mitterrand, Prime Minister Pierre Mauroy, opposition leader Jacques Chirac, business executives and labor leaders.

ONLY the Communists, who once counted him as an ally, have openly denounced him. The Socialists have carefully avoided a public debate with Montand.

On Wednesday night, while angry truckers were blockading the nation's highways and threatening to throttle the country's economy, the 62-year-old Montand appeared on national television to explain the world economic crisis to his countrymen in a taped 90-minute special.

The show drew an estimated 6 million viewers, reportedly a ratings records for the time slot. On Thursday, every major newspaper in the country and all three network news shows reported about the program. Several reviewers termed it "a triumph."

Montand says he is only "talking common sense" to the French people and claims he has no political ambition. He says he is speaking out because of his concern for the country and to "wake up" his fellow citizens.

"Ronald Reagan, who turned out to be a good president, had a mediocre career in show business. I've had a successful show business career, so I don't need to become a politician," Montand likes to say.

HE MAY not aspire to office, but Montand is clearly campaigning.

In recent interviews on radio and television and in the press he has warned:

—The Soviets are dangerous and aggressive and the West needs a strong military defense.

—The Socialists made a dangerous error when they brought the Communists into the government.

—The deep left-right split in French politics is unnecessary and destroys any possibility of a national consensus.

—As long as capitalism is France's system, it should be allowed to work and industry must modernize even if it means loss of jobs in the short run.

—France's economic problems can never be solved in isolation from the rest of Europe.
