Defense focuses on prejudice, publicity

Most jurors reluctant to serve during Williams' trial

By DAVID PACE
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Lawyers for Wayne B. Williams are focusing on racial prejudice and the publicity stirred up by a string of 28 killings around Atlanta as they question prospective jurors for the young black man's double-murder trial.

District Attorney Lewis Slaton and his assistants asked few questions of the prospective jurors in the initial day of jury selection, but defense lawyers Alvin Binder and Mary Welcome interrogated each one carefully, often at length.

Williams, a 23-year-old free-lance photographer, is charged with murdering Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, two of 28 young blacks whose deaths over a 22-month period have been investigated by a special police task force. There have been no arrests in the other 26 slayings.

"HAVE YOU HAD ANY experience or relationship with a black person that would make it difficult for you to sit in judgment in this case?" Binder and Ms. Welcome asked Monday.

While none admitted to racial biases that would affect judgment, each told of reading newspaper stories or seeing television reports about the series of slayings and Williams' arrest.

"If you were charged with a crime, and a juror in your frame of mind was trying you, would you feel comfortable?" the defense lawyers asked.

Some 700 prospective jurors have been called for the trial, but only 47 were questioned Monday. Of that group, 17 were excused because of medical or family hardships, and two were dismissed because they acknowledged they already had formed opinions about Williams' guilt or innocence.

OF THE REMAINING 28, 11 were qualified for the jury pool from which the 12 jurors and alternates for the trial will be selected, and the other 17 faced individual questioning today by defense lawyers and prosecutors.

None of the potential jurors seemed eager to serve during the trial, which is expected to last six to eight weeks. One man told Judge Clarence Cooper that when he received the jury summons and learned what the case was about, "I couldn't believe my luck."

That same juror said the "notoriety" of the case "frightens me. In the society that we live in, it seems like any time someone comes to the forefront, they're a target."

Cooper assured the man he has "taken steps to make it highly unlikely that your name or any other name of a juror in this case will be made public."

The courtroom was packed Monday with reporters and spectators, who were required along with the prospective jurors to pass through a metal detector before entering.

Williams sat with his elbows propped on the defense table during most of the questioning of the jury, conferring occasionally with members of his defense team.

PROSECUTORS ARE NOT seeking the death penalty for Williams, who has pleaded innocent. Under Georgia law, it cannot be imposed unless a murder is accompanied by another felony, such as rape or kidnapping, or the defendant has a previous conviction in a capital case.

Parking their Christmas tree

Troy Bush, left, and Gregg Bartus place the family Christmas tree in an appropriate place for disposal as they throw it atop a pile of trees at Hill Park, Cuthbert Avenue and G Street. The city asks that Midlanders take their Christmas trees to city parks and place them near the red and yellow park signs. The trees then will be collected by the city's sanitation department. Deadline for taking your tree to a park is Jan. 8.

Reagan limits Soviet exports

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan, moving to punish the Soviet Union for the military crackdown in Poland, will block the sale of equipment for a pipeline that would carry natural gas from Siberia to Western Europe, a well-placed administration official says.

After reviewing recommendations by a high-level task force, Reagan also decided to halt of exports of high technology to the Soviet Union, including computers, and suspend maritime rights under which Soviet ships use U.S. ports and aviation rights under which Soviet airliners operate within U.S. boundaries.

An aide who asked not to be identified described the program being pursued by Reagan as "tightening the screws." It marks the first step taken by the administration against the Soviets, whom Reagan blames for the imposition of martial law in Poland.

Reagan, spending a week-long holiday in California, was expected to announce the decisions this afternoon after receiving the recommendations Monday of the administration's Special Situation Group.

The group met 2½ hours Monday while Reagan was on his way by helicopter to an afternoon of manual labor at his ranch about 100 miles north of here. The recommendations were relayed by telephone by Vice President George Bush, Edwin Meese III, the presidential counselor, and Adm. James Nance, acting national security adviser.

THE PRESIDENT WILL confer later in the week with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. in Palm Springs, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said. Haig was speaking in San Francisco today.

Although Reagan's aides have said he would consult with the Western allies about any steps taken in connection with the developments in Poland, those likely to be announced today could be pursued without allied cooperation.

At the top of the list was a break in the sale of the equipment intended for the Soviets' planned 2,400-mile pipeline to carry natural gas from Northwest Siberia.

One official said that among the companies affected would be Caterpillar Tractor Co. of Peoria, Ill., although another official said the recent approval of an export license permitting the company to ship 200 pieces of construction machinery would not be affected.

Under the export license granted Dec. 9, the equipment was not supposed to be used for the trans-Siberian line, although its delivery could free other machines for the job.

The administration has expressed concern over heavy Western European involvement in financing the construction and providing pipe for the line, which would supply gas to West Germany, France, Austria, the Netherlands, Belgium and Italy.

Thus, any action touching on the pipeline equipment, which includes drilling bits and computer technology, could have an impact not only on the Soviet Union and the U.S. manufacturers but on the Allies as well and may not sit well with those countries.

One well-placed source said the president rejected a proposal Monday to limit Polish credit at U.S. banks and to interrupt the export of technology for a combine harvester plant in the Soviet Union. The financially pressed International Harvester Co. received an export license for the technology transfer in early December.

ONE OFFICIAL SAID the options for action against the Soviet Union ranged all the way up to cutting off grain sales and export of other foodstuffs.

Polish workers reportedly producing unfitting auto parts

By The Associated Press

Defiant Polish workers are producing automobile parts that don't fit and engaging in other acts of industrial sabotage, according to uncensored reports reaching the West.

But Poland's military government claims work is returning to normal as the last strikes against martial law are dropped.

Warsaw Radio quoted the Ministry of Mining and Industry as saying 939 miners at the Piast mine in Silesia would return to work today after ending their 13-day occupation — the last large-scale protest of martial law.

Earlier official Polish media reports said the 2,300 miners who abandoned their strike last week at the nearby Ziemowit coal mine resumed digging Monday, and that full production had resumed at the Huta Katowice steelworks — where security forces had routed protesters.

THE BRITISH Broadcasting Corp., in a report from Warsaw, said, "The military are said to have effectively secured the country."

But British newspapers said today that thousands of workers have been fired for refusing to resign from the now-suspended independent labor union Solidarity.

Uncensored reports reaching the United States from sources in Warsaw on Monday night painted a picture of defiance in Poland, under martial law since Dec. 13.

Sources said workers at the FSO automoble plant in Warsaw were turning out parts that do not fit together. Three alleged instigators of an earlier strike at that plant went on trial Monday in Warsaw and were to be sentenced today.

A traveler returning to Warsaw from the port of Szczecin said facilities were open, but dockworkers were merely "recycling" cargo — loading and unloading the same goods. About 200 former employees have been fired as undesirables, the traveler said.

THE KATOWICE STEEL mill was closed, according to the reports, because workers sabotaged furnaces before security forces broke up a strike a few days ago. In Warsaw, Western observers said they saw only one smokestack working at the giant Huta Warszawa steel complex.

Warsaw Television quoted the press spokesman for the general prosecutor's office as saying seven men have been charged with "leading the sit-in strike at the Katowice steel works, obstructing normal work and seriously damaging installations and production."

Workers at the Lenin shipyard in Gdansk, birthplace of Solidarity, were told to stay home until Jan. 4.

Reagan to sign budget bills

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan, fresh from an encounter with the brush and firewood at his ranch, was returning to desk duty today to clear away a year-end pile of legislation that included bills on defense spending, Social Security and foreign aid.

The president was expected to sign most of the measures, including those giving the Defense Department a record $199.7 billion and salvaging the $122-a-month minimum Social Security payment for some 3 million Americans.

White House officials said Reagan planned to act on all 36 bills before him before his trip Wednesday to Palm Springs for New Year's festivities at the home of publisher and former ambassador Walter Annenberg.

Among the other bills awaiting the president's signature was one allocating $11.5 billion for foreign assistance, including $2.2 billion for Israel.

Another measure tightens eligibility requirements for coal miners to receive black lung benefits and doubles the tax on coal to shore up the fund that pays the benefits.

Although Reagan and his wife, Nancy, came to California for a brief vacation, the pressures of national business followed the president Monday — even during a quick helicopter visit to his hilltop ranch near Santa Barbara.

The White House press office said Reagan spent about 20 minutes receiving a telephone report from Vice President George Bush, presidential counselor Edward Meese III and the acting natio James Nance.ll are members of the Special Sitaton Group which has been evaluating U.S. options on Poland.

THE FLOOD OF year-end legislation was highlighted by the military spending bill that cleared Congress earlier this month. It i.1 billionshort of Reagan's original request and $9 billion below the original version voted by the Senate. However, the compromise version is $2.25 billion above the amount approved initially by the House.

The bill provides an increase of more than $28 billion over the amount appropriated for the Pentagon in the fiscal year ended Sept. 30.

The $11.5 billion foreign aid bill was sent to Reagan after Congress rejected attempts to suspend $2.2 billion in aid to Israel in response to its annexation of the Golan Heights.

The bill grants an administration request to lift the congressional ban on aid to Pakistan, Argentina and Chile, but rejects Reagan's request to lift the ban on U.S. aid for covert operations in Angola.

The black lung bill attempts to make up a $1.2 billion deficit in the fund which was created in 1969. It tightens eligibility for benefits and increases taxes from 50 cents per ton to $1 per ton on coal from underground mines and from 25 cents per ton to 50 cents per ton on strip-mined coal.

Hospital to receive $300,000

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Although Christmas has passed, the spirit of giving is still present.

At least that's how the executive committee of the Board of Governors of the Midland Memorial Foundation voted Monday.

MMF was to present $300,000 today to Midland Memorial Hospital for purchase of needed equipment.

"The executive committee voted to provide the funds to purchase equipment totaling $300,000," said John J. Redfern Jr., chairman of the board.

Redfern added that the Foundation was "very pleased with the amount of contributions that it received this month," referring to contributions totaling $200,000.

"We don't like to hold on to a lot of money. We feel it should be used. These items have been approved (by the hospital district), so we decided to disburse the funds for the needed equipment."

"Even though we (the hospital) are tax supported, the Foundation provides the private sector to contribute to the advancement of our hospital," Ken Jastrow, a member of the board of governors, said. "And I'm always proud to be part of the board when we receive money for the hospital."

The Foundation has presented a total of $400,000 to the hospital this month. An earlier $100,000 donation will go toward renovation of the radiology department.

According to an MMH spokesperson, hospital officials are currently considering departments which will be affected by this contribution. The majority of funds will be used in general areas of surgery, anesthesiology, nursing services and the emergency room for specific services relating to patient care, the spokesperson said.

The seven-member executive committee of the board of governors includes Redfern, Jastrow, William P. Franklin, Murray Fasken, J. Holt Jowell, J. Harvey Herd and Robert L. Wood.

Todd Cantrell has more than one star in his eye

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Christmas was long over but actors Charlton Heston and David Doyle were still playing Santa Claus for a boy who recently returned from the Soviet Union after treatment for progressive blindness.

Heston, honorary chairman of Retinitis Pigmentosa International, on Monday gave 12-year-old Todd Cantrell an electronic night vision aid valued at $2,800.

Todd, of Dalton, Ga., had tested the device the night before. "I never thought I would get to see a star until last night," he said at the presentation luncheon.

Doyle, of the television series "Charlie's Angels," gave Todd $200 sunglasses that filter out strong light thought to aggravate a disease called retinitis pigmentosa, in which the eye's light-sensitive cells gradually deteriorate.

Todd, who has suffered from the disease since he was 6 months old, returned from Moscow a week before Christmas after undergoing a series of injections which Soviet doctors say may help save some of his sight.

U.S. physicians insist the Soviet treatment is ineffective, but Todd's mother says the peripheral vision in his left eye is improving, and a small amount of the peripheral vision in his right eye has been restored.

Miss Burgos, also 21, is a native of Merida, a city of about 500,000 on Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula. The two met here when he was playing in the Mexican leagues.

British police afraid marsh sighting of bear may be hoax

LONDON (AP) — A bear hunt in the unlikely terrain of London's East End has drawn a blank, but police were going out for another look today, wondering if perhaps the whole thing was a hoax.

No bear was reported missing, but accounts by four schoolboys, footprints in the snow and the discovery of two skinned and headless bear carcasses in the same area led to the search.

"We have no evidence that there is a bear here, other than the boys' report, but we are taking it seriously as a bear is a dangerous animal," said Chief Inspector Peter Platten.

The bear hunt began late Sunday after 13-year-old Tommy Murray and three friends said they saw a brown bear, "a giant, great, growling hairy bear," rearing on its hind legs as they walked across the marshes in the 5,000-acre desolate area in the Lea River valley.

Fifty police officers, some armed with pump action shotguns, are taking part in the hunt over Hackney Marshes. Mounted police and dog handlers joined the search, dubbed by the skeptical press: "Operation Goldilocks."

At the end of the hunt Monday, an officer said, "We are very cold and we have seen no bears. I hope we are not being hoaxed."

Animal experts who examined tracks on the marshes said they were made by a bear, which could be 6 feet tall.

Coats illustrate Russian bleakness

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — When the winter wind blows cold in Russia, life itself can depend on an overcoat. And few commodities better illustrate the bleak lot of the Soviet consumer than the search for a coat that is both warm and stylish.

"We can buy coats. But they last only a year or two. And besides, I don't have time to spend the afternoon waiting in line to find one," grumbled one Russian woman.

The price of a Soviet overcoat can run more than double the average monthly wage, 172 rubles (about $250), and imported coats cost even more.

The situation, however, has improved since Nikolai Gogol penned the 19th century classic "The Overcoat," a bitter chronicle of Akaky Akakevich, a clerk in czarist Russia who spent all his money on a tailored overcoat. Thieves stole his new coat, and he suffered from exposure and died because he could not afford another.

A VISITOR to modern Moscow could be excused for thinking he is seeing double or triple while strolling the street. All the people are wrapped in warm coats, but many sport identical models.

"Our styles are way behind the West. Here, they make the same models every year," said one shopper, adding that she preferred imported over Soviet models.

Among the favorite Soviet-made coats for women are green, blue and maroon models of a wool and synthetic mix, adorned with fur collars sewn on by individual owners. Parkas stuffed with down have yet to appear but those made of synthetics are on the increase.

Men who work out of doors favor the "telogreika," or body-warmer, made of quilted fabric, while factory managers and politicians seem to prefer formal wool coats similar to those worn by their counterparts in the West.

The long lines for clothing, and the lack of variety, has not escaped the attention of the Soviet government, which makes and sells virtually all commercially available clothes in the country.

Kremlin leaders promised to boost production of consumer goods in 1981 by 4.2 percent, faster than the 4.1 percent growth they project for heavy industry. Final data for the year have not been published, but preliminary figures suggest neither goal will be met.

SOVIET President Leonid Brezhnev, in a major address Nov. 17, promised that over the next five years "The production of fabrics, footwear, and knitwear will grow by a far larger amount than during the previous five-year period."

"The range of goods will increase and their quality will improve," Brezhnev said, repeating a promise first made in October.

Despite Brezhnev's rhetoric, the Supreme Court (the national parliament), subsequently passed a law which called for faster growth of heavy industry in 1982, at 4.8 percent, over consumer industry, at 4.6 percent.

The Soviet leadership has not explained the shift in priorities, although Premier Nikolai Tikhonov hinted this month that the Kremlin was spending money on arms at the expense of the consumer.

Pole's request for asylum denied

SAN YSIDRO, Calif. (AP) — A polish woman's request for political asylum in the United States has been rejected because her case wasn't considered "compelling," despite her assertion that she had been jailed in Poland, immigration officials say.

The request from the 20-year-old woman, who was waiting in Mexico to enter the United States, was forwarded to the State Department for a recommendation.

Immigration and Naturalization Service District Director Robert Mitton said Monday the woman's plight was not desperate enough for granting immediate asylum.

"We did not feel she established a compelling, clear-cut case to allow her to enter the country immediately as a refugee pending final determination," he said.

The woman's identity was withheld at her request.

Veterans meet with Vietnamese minister

NEW YORK (AP) — Four Vietnam veterans who visited Vietnam to inquire about Americans missing in action and the effects of the defoliant Agent Orange were angrily denounced by other veteransas dupes of the communist government.

The four said at a news conference Monday that Vietnam's foreign minister, Nguyen Co Thach, assured them his country would make a greater effort to find American MIAs.

Thach also pledged to admit scientists to research the effects of Agent Orange, which was used by U.S. forces to defoliate guerrilla hideouts in Southeast Asia, said the veterans, who returned Friday. Some American veterans blame the chemical for physical problems and birth defects in their children.

But Frank McCarthy, who identified himself as president of the Agent Orange Victims International, disrupted the news conference, shouting "These people are frauds ... They betrayed every Vietnam veteran in this country."

McCarthy charged that the Vietnamese "are using chemical warfare against the Laotians and this is helping them."

Al Santoli, a reporter for the National Veterans Review who said he served in the infantry, criticized the four for placing a wreath at the tomb of Ho Chi Minh, who led the fight to make Indochina independent of the French.

"You are a total disgrace to every one of us who served in Vietnam," Santoli said.

The trip by Robert Muller, Thomas Bird, John Terzano and Michael Harbert was paid for by Penthouse magazine, which runs a column on Vietnam veterans' affairs.

Muller, executive director of the Vietnam Veterans of America, said they went to Vietnam "not as diplomats, but as veterans," and that the Vietnamese showed "a willingness to go down the road" toward establishing diplomatic relations with the United States.

"They made it quite clear to us they were not comfortable with their relations with the Russians," he added.

A State Department spokesman, Dean Fischer, said later that U.S. policy is that diplomatic relations with Vietnam "are out of the question" as long as it occupies Cambodia "and remains a threat to other countries of Southeast Asia."

Vietnam veterans Thomas Bird, right, and John Terzno, talk during an interview Monday in New York on NBC-TV's "Today." Back from a trip to Hanoi, they said they hoped the visit with their former enemy would help "heal the wounds" between Americans and Vietnamese.

Muller said when he asked Thach if the Vietnamese ever intended to leave Cambodia, he replied: "Yes, indeed, in time, when it is a stabilized condition."

Bird, a former army sergeant in Vietnam, said he returned from the trip feeling that "we can continue a dialogue with the Vietnamese people and hopefully heal the wounds between the American and Vietnamese people."

But George Brooks, a director of the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia, and the father of a missing Navy lieutenant, said after the news conference: "They didn't get anything. We were hoping for prime steak, but this turned out to be baloney."

Picture suggests Dozier is still alive

By CLARA HEMPHILL
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — Police say a photo released by the Red Brigades terrorists of kidnapped U.S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier suggests the general is still alive and resisting his captors.

Judith Dozier, the wife of the general, identified the man in the picture as her husband and said it raised her hopes, NATO officials at Dozier's base in Verona said. Dozier, the highest-ranking U.S. Army official in NATO's Southern European Command, was kidnapped from his Verona apartment Dec. 17.

Experts at the Interior Ministry in Rome were examining the photo, found in a trash can in Milan on Sunday, to determine if it is a montage. An anonymous caller told the Italian news agency ANSA where to find the picture and a short communique.

Police had no immediate explanation of why the terrorists might have made the montage, but a Communist senator and several newspapers suggested it was an indication that the 50-year-old general was refusing to cooperate with his captors.

"The simplest hypothesis...is that the general resisted and continues to resist, also physically," said Sen. Franco Calamandrei.

The picture shows Dozier holding a placard covered with anti-American slogans under a banner bearing a five-pointed star and symbol of the Red Brigades. Police said they believe the placard was superimposed on the photo.

"The Red Brigades have never given out a photo of a kidnap victim when the hostage was dead," said a high-ranking police official who asked to remain anonymous. "Seeing what we have so far, I would say he is still alive."

Italian newspapers said the general's expression — an ironic smile — appeared to show that he had not been broken by his captors.

Police also were investigating a 188-page Red Brigades document and the short communique found along with the photo in an attempt to determine which faction or factions of the left-wing terrorist group took part in the kidnapping.

Police say the Red Brigades are divided into "columns" according to cities and regions. They are also divided into "militarists" and "propagandists" — sometimes dubbed hawks and doves by police — who differ on strategy and treatment of kidnap victims. The hard-liners or militarists nearly always murder their victims. The "propagandists" sometimes murder their victims and sometimes release them, according to police.

Despite extensive searches of the countryside near the medieval walled city of Verona and dozens of road blocks, police acknowledged they had little new information. "We're working day and night but we have nothing new to report," a police official in Verona said.

On Dec. 22, police in Milan arrested three suspected members of the Red Brigades but said later there was no evidence linking the suspects to the kidnapping.

The Red Brigades have not made any demands for the general's release, and American and Italian officials have been firm in their refusal to negotiate with the terrorists.

In a communique found with the photo on Sunday, the Red Brigades announced the beginning of his "trial" in the "people's prison." The gang described Dozier, a Silver Star medalist who fought with the armored cavalry in Vietnam, as a "hero of American massacres in Vietnam."

Man holds up westside gas station

Police today are looking for a man who reportedly held up a westside gas station about 3:45 p.m. Monday afternoon.

An attendant at the Rio Grande Self-Serve station on the Gibson Discount Store parking lot, Cuthbert Street and the Andrews Highway, told officers a man in a white, older model Chevrolet low rider with a primer spot on the right front fender got $5 worth of gas, then pulled a .32 caliber blue steel revolver and demanded the station's money.

The attendant said he put an undisclosed amount of cash in a blue Western State Bank bag and the man fled. The suspect was described as Mexican, about 6 feet tall, weighing 130 pounds, and wearing a green silk shirt and brown dress pants. The getaway car bore Louisiana license plates.

In a theft complaint, Albert Rodriquez of 1707 N. Marienfeld St. said parts worth $1,025 were stripped from a 1970 Chevrolet parked behind his residence Monday. The parts included a carburetor, tachometer, fan and transmission. Also taken was an assortment of tools.

Fifteen-year-old allegedly stabs two men

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — A 15-year-old boy was being held Monday in connection with the stabbings of two men, one of whom died after being stabbed 51 times, police said.

The man who died was identified as Casimiro Ramirez Trejo, 53. He was pronounced dead inside a wooden shed at 1:58 a.m. Sunday.

The injured man, Ramon Huerta, was listed in critical condition Monday in the intensive care unit of Odessa Medical Center Hospital.

According to a report filed by Odessa police detective John Blanco, police officers A.S. Lawrence and Harold Salmon went to a home on Olive Avenue in response to a report of an assault. When they got there, the 15-year-old told them he had killed two men, the report said.

Police were trying to determine what prompted the stabbings.

Five Dallas men survive plane crash

GUNNISON, Colo. (AP) — Engine failure has been blamed for a single-engine airplane crash that five Dallas men survived two miles west of here Monday in the rugged south-central Colorado mountains, officials said.

Three of the five remained hospitalized today. The pilot, Jay Fichtner, 55, was in serious but stable condition with back injuries at Gunnison County Hospital, and his two sons, Kirk, 20, and Mark, 23, were in fair but stable condition, hospital spokeswoman Judy Sabin said.

The other two passengers, Kevin McCool, 23, and Mike Goodfriend, 23, were treated for bruises and released from the hospital, she said.

Gregory Feith, air safety investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board, said the Federal Aviation Administration's Denver Center at Longmont heard the pilot report that "he lost his engine and that was the last word he said on the radio."

Man wanted in Midland abducts Arizona police officer

KINGMAN, Ariz. (AP) — State police officer Claudia Schmitz, abducted Sunday by two hitchhikers, one of whom is wanted on larceny charges in Midland, says she doesn't think she "could have come any closer to death than that."

Ms. Schmitz, 31, said one of the two hitchhikers who held her at bay with her own revolver "kept saying he was going to shoot me if he didn't get free."

"Every time we saw another patrol car, he said he would shoot me," Ms. Schmitz said. "He had the hammer back and as we approached the roadblock, he had me by the collar with the gun at my head. I figured he was going to do it."

The male hitchhiker is believed to be Arnold Naftel but apparently is known by a variety of names. The other hitchhiker was identified as Dawn R. Lombard.

Ms. Schmidt stopped the pair Sunday morning on Arizona 93, about two miles north of Kingman, and had run a routine check to determine whether either was wanted for any felony, Schmidt said.

That's when she was told a second-degree grand larceny felony warrant had been issued by the Broome County Sheriff's Department at Binghamton, N.Y., in the name of Arnold Naftel for a person fitting Naphtali's date of birth and general address in Endicott, near Binghamton, Schmidt said.

Naftel told Ms. Schmitz that the warrant might be for his brother, but about that time a police dispatcher lost radio contact with Ms. Schmitz.

Ms. Schmitz said Naftel pulled a knife and that in the ensuing struggle he was able to gain possession of her gun.

"We struggled and I went for my gun and he went for it, too. I tried to get the knife that at that point was at my throat," she said.

"It all happened so fast, the only thing I could think of was to keep that knife away from my throat," she added.

Ms. Schmitz said Miss Lombard was frightened.

"She didn't want to go to jail, but she didn't want to die, either," Ms. Schmitz said.

Other officers arriving on routine backup saw Ms. Schmitz, in handcuffs with a gun trained on her, being ordered into the back seat of her patrol car, Schmidt said.

Ms. Lombard drove the patrol car north toward the Nevada border while the backup officers and aircraft followed, Schmidt said. DPS dispatchers rerouted traffic and set up a roadblock near Hoover Dam, he added.

The police car was turned around when the driver saw the roadblock but was stopped after about a half-mile, he said. A DPS negotiator then talked with the hitchhikers by radio for about 40 minutes before Ms. Schmitz got on the radio and said they had agreed to surrender to her, Schmidt said.

The man Schmidt said officers were "pretty sure" is Arnold Naftel was held at the Mohave County Jail here on charges of kidnapping and aggravated assault on a police officer, and Ms. Lombard, about 23, was held on a charge of kidnapping, Schmidt said.

Schmidt said Naftel, or Naphtali, had an assortment of altered documents, including a birth certificate and military discharge in the name of Derick Sims. Sims is wanted in Midland for larceny, Schmidt said.

Naftel-Naphtali also had various papers in the name of David Randall Autrey, wanted in San Diego for auto theft, Schmidt added.

He said the two may have been married in North Vernon, Ind., under the Autrey name in early 1981. There is a Baptist church document saying they were married but no marriage certificate, Schmidt said, adding that a letter was sent to them by the church last March 28.

Lawyers seek change of venue for Morin

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Defense attorneys say they will ask for a change of venue in the murder trial of a man accused of four killings and who is considered a suspect in a string of abductions, rapes and other slayings in nine states.

Court-appointed attorney Pete Torres Jr. said he expects Stephan Peter Morin to plead innocent based on insanity or incompetence to stand trial when he appears before Justice of the Peace Maria Irene Canales de Janssen.

The examining trial to determine whether there is probable cause to hold Morin without bail will mark his first appearance in open court since his arrest Dec. 12 in Austin.

Morin, 34, a native of Providence, R.I., has been jailed here since Austin police arrested him at a bus station on charges he shot 21-year-old Carrie Marie Scott to death in San Antonio while attempting to seal her car. He also is accused of wounding Dru Valdes, 25, during the same incident.

Torres said he will ask for a change of venue because of local publicity surrounding Morin's arrest.

Morin already had been charged at the time of his arrest with killing cheryl Daniels, 20, and Susan Belote, 18. The two women were abducted at Las Vegas, Nev., and later found dead in the Utah desert.

Since his arrest, police in Corpus Christi have charged Moring with aggravated kidnapping in the Nov. 30 abduction of Pam Jackson, who was found unharmed at a San Antonio motel where Morin eluded a police dragnet the day before his capture.

Quick verdict may be bad news

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The defense lawyer for William Bonin, charged with killing 12 young men and boys whose nude bodies were dumped along Southern California freeways, says a quick verdict from the jury could mean bad news for his client.

Superior Court Judge William Keene instructed the jurors for about an hour Monday before they started deliberations at 11 a.m. The panel recessed for the night about 4:30 p.m. and were to resume today.

The 34-year-old, twice-paroled sex offender could be sentenced to die in the gas chamber if the panel convicts him in the Freeway Killings.

If the jurors bring back a quick decision, it means "they believe (television newsman David) Lopez across-the-board," William Charvet said Monday. "But I don't think the jury is going to believe Lopez across-the-board."

Lopez testified during the 10-week trial that Bonin admitted to killing 21 people during an off-the-record interview in the jail.

The reporter initially refused to testify, but changed his mind late in the trial when he said Bonin violated an agreement to not talk to other news organizations.

Since 1972, the bodies of 44 young men and boys were found along Southern California freeways.

Boy killed from blast from own rifle

LUDLOW, Mass. (AP) — Seven weeks after his father accidentally blew his brains out trying to show that guns can be safe, a 16-year-old boy went into the woods to hunt foxes and was killed by a blast from his own rifle, authorities said.

Moments before Michael Fredette was shot in the head Monday, his companion and best friend was wounded by the same gun and police are speculating that the shootings were a tragic series of accidents. But nothing was being ruled out.

Michael's best friend, Kevin Wojcik, 15, was in "very critical condition" with a .22-caliber bullet in his head, said nursing supervisor Karen Anderson at Baystate Medical Center's Springfield unit.

As police pieced together an account of the shootings, the boy's family and friends puzzled over what a priest called the "eerie" circumstances of the boy's death.

"After his father died, Michael took it upon himself to fill his shoes," said the Rev. Homer Goslin, who officiated at the father's funeral in November and will preside Thursday at the son's Mass in St. John the Baptist Roman Catholic Church.

The young man "started out doing the chores and trying to become the man of the house," Goslin said. "It's certainly eerie, no doubt about it."

"Michael was a good-looking, healthy boy, who was always there when you needed him," said his aunt, Rose Willard.

"We haven't ruled out anything as the cause" of the younger Fredette's death, Ludlow Police Sgt. Acacio Moura said Monday night.

Fredette died shortly after arriving at Mercy Hospital in Springfield at 9:30 a.m., police said.

Earlier in the day, Sgt. Albert Bellorini said the shooting of Fredette "was definitely a hunting accident." He added: "Evidently they had stopped to rest and somehow one of their weapons went off.

"Fredette probably went to his (Wojcik) aid and with his weapon in his hand...he was upset...leaned over to see what was going on, and his weapon discharged again," Bellorini said.

"That's what we're calling it right now, an accident," Moura said. "We're really just speculating."

The two 10th graders from Ludlow and another 16-year-old companion, whom police have declined to identify, were hunting foxes in woods in town during their Christmas school holiday, police said.

Police said the third boy, about 50 yards away, heard a cry for help and found the youths lying in a field.

Postal worker's body found on reservation

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The body of a 27-year-old female postal worker who was kidnapped by a group of men, women and children has been found on the same Indian reservation where her burned-out car was discovered the day before, authorities say.

Sheriffs's officials also said Monday that about 100 pieces of mail taken from Karen Beth Green's car were found in a downtown Phoenix trash bin.

Indian police discovered Mrs. Green's body Monday night on the Salt River Indian Reservation and later turned the investigation over to the Maricopa County Sheriff's Department, which had been conducting a search for her since she was abducted Saturday afternoon.

Sheriff's investigators would not disclose the exact location where Mrs. Green's body was found. An anonymous caller had told police the missing woman was beaten and hidden in the trunk of an abandoned car.

Witnesses reported Mrs. Green had stopped to make a mail delivery in the nearby community of Mesa when one of two women in a group of people standing at a nearby intersection grabbed her by the hair, Mesa police Lt. Jack Edmons said.

"They came over to her car, opened the door and grabbed her," he said. "They pushed her over, and as she hollered for help they started beating her."

The group of at least seven people, including men and juveniles, drove the woman away in her car, Edmons added.

The motive for the abduction was unclear.

Crime ring bilks Las Vegas casinos

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Sheriff's deputies who conducted a three-state investigation of a roving clan charge the group was involved in bilking Las Vegas casinos out of millions of dollars.

An official also alleged that men associated with the group had devised an ingenious plan to steal gems from bank safe-deposit boxes.

Fred Collins, an inspector with the Orange County Sheriff's Department, said Monday in an interview that clan members triggered a minimum of 22 fraudulent jackpots in Las Vegas by manipulating slot machines.

The group, which includes at least 19 people, most of them related, also was involved in vending-machine robberies and thefts of as much as $250,000 a year from pay telephones, Collins charged.

Collins charged that the clan also has burglarized jewelry from stores and hotel rooms and fenced precious gems.

Collins, who began the investigation two years ago, said federal authorities in Las Vegas are preparing to take the case to a grand jury.

The group "is about 50 percent disabled, pending whatever happens in Nevada." Collins said. "I hope to eventually have it broken.

"Over the whole picture," Collins said, "we figure they had taken about $10 million."

Collins alleged that in the jackpot scheme, someone would play a slot machine until two of the four reels lined up, then would open the one-armed bandit with a counterfeit key and use piano wire to line up the other two reels. The biggest payoff was $68,814 at the Las Vegas Flamingo Hilton casino, he said.

"They'd have a couple of people as lookouts," the inspector said. "They had to know someone in the casinos themselves in order to get the keys and to know which machines to hit."

Collins said members of the alleged crime ring use many aliases and move constantly.

The investigation began in California and spread to Nevada and Texas. It was triggered by the August 1979 arrest of two people in San Juan Capistrano on charges of stealing 13 rings.

Collins said investigators searching the San Juan Capistrano apartment shared by Terrance Nikrasch, 45, and Susan Mendez, 28, found two key-cutting machines, assorted tools and equipment a jeweler would need to mount or unmount precious stones.

The rings were returned to the owner as part of a plea bargain in November 1981. Ms. Mendez was placed on five years' probation with eight weekends in jail, while Nikrasch received a four-year prison sentence.

RFK gravesite restored

WASHINGTON (AP) — The wooden cross that originally marked the grave of Robert F. Kennedy in Arlington National Cemetery was placed once more on the site Monday, and a new tombstone ordered. Authorities said they had no suspects in the weekend vandalism at the site.

Cemetery workers discovered Sunday morning that the tombstone and a newer, redwood cross had been stolen.

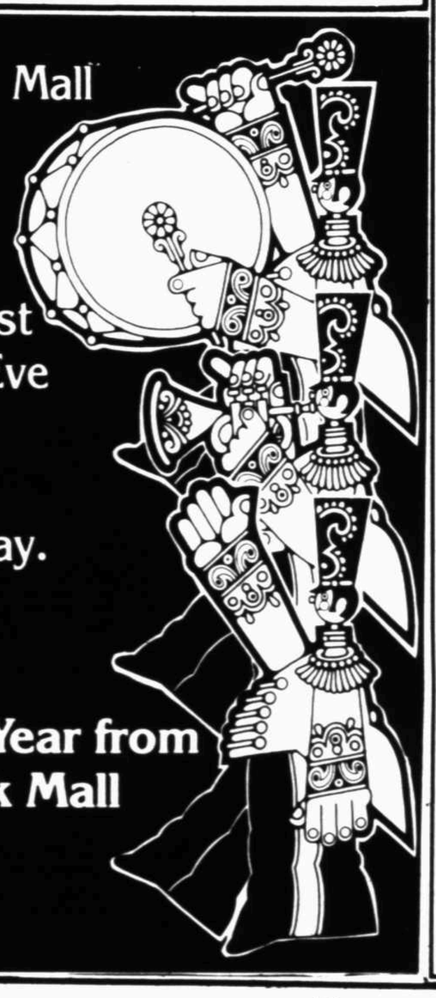

U. S. Park Police said the thieves apparently scaled a stone wall and a six-foot fence to get to the gravesite, where they dug out the small Vermont marble tombstone and pulled up the two-foot cross.

The new tombstone is expected to be in place later this week.

Afghans fighting on

The second anniversary of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan is passing with too little notice as the world focuses on more recent Soviet-sponsored crimes in Poland.

But the drama unfolding in Warsaw, however compelling, hardly excuses the scandalous inattention to the Soviet Union's continuing aggression in Afghanistan. The shameful truth is that, in some respects, Afghanistan was already in danger of dropping down the memory hole long before the Quisling junta in Poland began strangling Solidarity.

The silence of U.S. allies in Western Europe especially, and the all-too-typical desire for business as usual with the Soviet bloc, comes perilously close to making free nations accomplices in Moscow's brutal campaign of conquest in Afghanistan.

If this seems too harsh a judgment, consider what the West is doing to punish the Soviets or to aid the Afghan people.

The American grain initially denied the Soviets in retaliation for the attack upon Afghanistan is now pouring into the holds of ships bound for Leningrad.

The Olympic boycott, having momentarily embarrassed Brezhnev and company, is now history and only South Africa is barred from international athletic competition.

America's allies never seriously considered restrictions on trade and technology transfers to penalize the Soviet Union for invading a traditionally neutral country posing no credible threat to Soviet security.

On the contrary, West Germany recently agreed to purchase $44 billion in Soviet natural gas during the next 15 years and to help finance a 3,600-mile pipeline stretching from Siberia to the Rhine. Thus, the same Soviet leaders who now order the use of outlawed chemical warfare against primitive Afghan villagers can look forward to controlling 30 percent of the industrial fuel consumed by NATO's most important European member.

Worse yet, the Reagan administration approved export licenses last summer for the sale of highly specialized pipelaying equipment to be used in building the Siberian pipeline.

The United Nations General Assembly has twice condemned "foreign intervention" in Afghanistan but cannot stir itself to any more vigorous reaction than an annual debate and passage of a resolution that politely avoids even mentioning the Soviet Union by name. And no demonstrators march in the streets of Bonn, Amsterdam, London, or New York to protest as cruel an act of aggression as any since Mussolini's legions attacked an Ethiopia defended by native warriors carrying spears.

Meanwhile, in Afghanistan itself, ragged bands of resistance fighters armed with a motley assortment of small arms continue to face Soviet tanks, jets, helicopter gunships, and nearly 100,000 Russian troops.

The United States, Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Pakistan, and China reportedly collaborate in maintaining a modest flow of arms to Afghan freedom fighters. Even so, the fact that Afghanistan's tough patriots are holding their own is more a tribute to their astonishing tenacity and valor than to any help or encouragement they receive from outsiders.

Typically, the Soviets prefer to do their dirty work in the dark, which is why the foreign press has been barred from Afghanistan. Western and Third World leaders whose nations have the most to lose if Soviet aggression goes unchecked contribute to this conspiracy of silence when they shrink from words and deeds that would help keep Afghanistan alive as the supreme moral issue that it most certainly is.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Dec. 29, the 363rd day of 1981. There are two days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Dec. 29, 1170, Archbishop Thomas a Becket was murdered at the altar in the Cathedral of Canterbury, England.

On this date:

In 1940, German World War II bomber planes inflicted the greatest damage on London since the Great Fire of 1666.

In 1965, the United States banned the export of gasoline, kerosene and other petroleum products to the white-ruled African country of Rhodesia.

In 1973, Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos ended his elected term and named himself dictator.

And in 1979, Afghanistan's new prime minister hinted of post-coup purges and called for the trial of followers of the regime he ousted with Soviet help.

Ten years ago: Britain announced it would withdraw all its forces from Malta, signaling the end of its long military connection with the Mediterranean island.

Five years ago: Violent outbreaks were reported south of Peking, China, with blame placed on dissident followers of the widow of Mao Tse-tung.

One year ago: The Carter administration vowed not to pay Iran one cent until all 52 Americans held hostage there were released.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Qaddafi's petrodollars help terrorist groups

WASHINGTON — Libyan dictator Muammar Qaddafi has vehemently denied that he sent a "hit squad" into this country to assassinate President Reagan, but U.S. intelligence agencies have evidence linking Qaddafi's freely dispensed petrodollars to the terrorist gang that kidnapped American Army Gen. James Dozier.

Jack Anderson

So far, there is no direct link between Dozier's kidnapping by the Italian Red Brigades and Qaddafi's terrorist campaign against U.S. officials in this country and abroad.

But Qaddafi has lavished millions of Libya's oil dollars on terrorist groups like the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP), the moribund Baader-Meinhof Gang in West Germany, the Irish Republican Army — and the Red Brigades. Qaddafi has provided these outlaw groups with money, weapons and training. Our intelligence agencies are convinced of that.

Ever since the seizure of American hostages in Tehran more than two years ago, U.S. intelligence agencies and the State Department have intensified their investigations of international terrorism, in hopes of figuring out some way to control it. My sources tell me that Foggy Bottom is thinking of beefing up the Special Office for Combatting Terrorism, which has been somewhat less than effective in the past.

Meanwhile, the little-publicized Air Force Office of Special Investigations (OSI) — which pinpointed the Ayatollah Khomeini as a major threat to the shah of Iran years before other U.S. intelligence agencies tumbled to that possibility — has taken the lead in studying the increasingly important war against anti-American terrorists.

Here are some highlights from a recent, secret OSI report, reviewed by my associate Lucette Lagnado:

— For most terrorist groups, like the Palestinians and the Italian Red Brigades, Americans constitute a favorite target. (The report was issued before Gen. Dozier's kidnapping.)

"The perceived representation of evil within the U.S. business, diplomatic, military and assistance communities located abroad is essentially the same for today's terrorists," the OSI report warns, adding that earlier tactics of protest rallies, posters and the occasional Molotov cocktail "have escalated ... to disruption, destruction and death."

— Although the terrorist groups have a wide range of political viewpoints, the secret report notes, they feel a "revolutionary kinship" in their hosility toward "imperialism" in general and the United States in particular.

"It is this ingredient ... which unites groups ... as diverse as the PFLP, the Japanese Red Army, the Red Brigades, Official Irish Republican Army and the like," the OSI report says.

— Today's terrorist groups have become more street-smart and less individually oriented, the OSI experts warn. Recognizing the vulnerability that attaches to identification with a particular leader, the groups have become more loosely structured and autonomous. They have realized that "personality cults are not conducive to operational security nor to decisive action when the opportunity presents itself."

— A final alarming note in the OSI report indicates that the terrorist groups have become less ideologically "pure." They now welcome hardened criminals into their ranks, evidently willing to forgo revolutionary zeal for the practical rewards of professional expertise.

For modern terrorists, the Air Force experts warn, "nothing is too extreme, nothing is unattainable."

A SUSPICION CONFIRMED: On Nov. 21, 1970, a picked team of 60 American commandos landed deep within North Vietnamese territory at a supposed POW camp to rescue U.S. prisoners. The raid on Son Tay, 23 miles west of Hanoi, was successfully executed, but the raiders came up empty-handed. There were no American prisoners in the compound.

When Sen. James W. Fulbright, D-Ark., suggested that the Son Tay raid had been a political move by President Nixon, and accused the White House and Pentagon of knowing full well there were no American prisoners there, Defense Secretary Melvin Laird said such an accusation was absurd.

"We were convinced that we had a 50-50 chance of returning some prisoners of war," Laird said, adding sarcastically: "We have not been able to develop a camera that sees through the roofs of buildings."

Now, more than 11 years later, intelligence and Pentagon sources have acknowledged that Fulbright was right. Nixon and the Joint Chiefs of Staff knew there were no American POWs at Son Tay. The sources, including an advisor who was intimately involved in planning the raid, told my associates Dale Van Atta and Don Goldberg that the daring escapade was deliberately planned for political reasons — to impress the North Vietnamese with their own vulnerability.

"We knew they (the POWs) had been moved," said one source, "but we didn't want to give up the demonstration of power." The intent, he said, was to embarrass Hanoi, to let the enemy see that U.S. troops could operate behind their lines just as they were doing in South Vietnam.

The raiders did accomplish something. They not only embarrassed the enemy, they caught a number of Chinese soldiers with their pants off, so to speak; the Chinese were surprised in their underwear, and about 100 were killed.

Furthermore, shortly after the raid, American prisoners were moved closer to Hanoi, where they got better treatment.

INSIDE REPORT:

'ZOMO' violence rules out hope for Polish compromise

WASHINGTON — The ruthless "Corps of Internal Security" forces being used by communist strongman Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski to club Solidarity and its millions of backers into submission was toughened with hardened criminals released from jail before the declaration of martial law.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

This criminal element is accused by underground resisters, still battling the communist/military takeover, of performing acts of incredible brutality while regular army troops — regarded as undependable — watch from the sidelines.

In one case, miners gravely wounded in clashes with Internal Security Corps — known as "ZOMO" — were taken to hospitals in Katowice, the heart of the coal mining region. "ZOMO" irregulars invaded the hospital wards and dragged the wounded miners from their beds and out of the hospital, beating them with long clubs. It is this brutality that convinces Western observers that the new regime will never be able to make a political compromise with remnants of Solidarity.

NO HELP FROM CHINA

The Chinese communist government shrugged off urgent U.S. pleas for help in the Polish crisis, casting some doubt on the value of the Washington-Peking connection that has become an integral part of U.S. foreign policy under President Reagan as under President Carter.

Two separate pleas by the Reagan administration, through the U.S. Embassy in Peking and to the Chinese Embassy in Washington, were made for support on the Polish crisis. At the least, Secretary of State Alexander Haig wanted a denunciation of Soviet-backed oppression in Poland and perhaps a Chinese troop demonstration along the border of Soviet-allied Vietnam.

The Chinese response: We'll see. Nothing has happened. Old Chinese hands could have predicted as much. The Chinese communist regime seldom if ever takes a public position on an issue that it does not perceive directly affecting its national interests.

HAIG'S VETO

At Secretary of State Alexander Haig's insistence, the White House will terminate the embarrassing profusion of top administration officials dominating the Sunday network interview shows all on the same subject at practically the same time.

Haig was hurrying back to Washington from Europe for the Polish crisis when White House aides telephoned to ask him to go on David Brinkley's ABC Sunday show Dec. 20. He immediately said yes.

It was not until Sunday morning that Haig learned Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger and presidential counselor Edwin Meese III had also signed up — without coordination by the White House — for interviews on CBS's "Face the Nation" and NBC's "Meet the Press." Haig almost pulled out of the Brinkley show, feeling that three top Reagan officials all talking about the same subjects — the Polish and Israeli crises — at the same time were two too many. It won't happen again.

EASING OUT ALLEN

Even Richard V. Allen's staunchest conservative backers in the Reagan administration, including those who paid $30 to attend his recent testimonial luncheon, have privately changed their tune and are saying his days as the president's national security assistant soon will be over.

Their scenario: Now that the Justice Department has cleared Allen, he will return to the job at the White House — but not for long. His resignation will come relatively early in the new year.

These conservatives are now agreed on Deputy Secretary of State William Clark as Allen's successor. Unlike Allen, Clark, a longtime Reagan intimate, would insist on direct access to the president rather than being funneled through presidential counselor Ed Meese.

ARMS CONTROL POLITICS

The yearlong internal harassment of Lt. Gen. Edward Rowny, chief U.S. negotiator for arms control talks, by the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA) has been accelerated by removing him from the official bureaucratic planning loop.

Bob Grey, former aide to liberal Democratic senator Allen Cranston and lieutenant to ACDA Director Eugene Rostow, asked the State Department to take Rowny off the regular distribution list. Told to put it in writing, Grey did so on Dec 3. As a result, Rowny gets to SALT planning meetings only when he hears about it through the grapevine. In fact, he has been attending recent sessions.

Rowny was the Pentagon's representative at the SALT II negotiations, then took early Army retirement to protest the treaty negotiated during the Carter administration. In the Reagan administration, he is encountering business as usual at ACDA.

CHARLEY REESE

Poland's fall attests to appeasement

Watching the death of Solidarity, the independent Polish labor union which became intoxicated with the scent of liberty, is agonizing. It's like watching a grown man strangle a child. Watching the empty posturing of the Western democracies is sickening. In the end, they will do nothing but make empty gestures.

Charley Reese

Already they are making excuses. By warning against Soviet intervention, they are pretending that the Soviet Union is not, as it most certainly is, directing every step of the destruction of liberty in Poland. They are continuing the cowardly charade of pretending that Poland is not a Communist slave state occupied by the Red Army.

What you are seeing in Poland today is only another chapter in the sorry story of Western cowardice since World War II. The United States policy toward the Soviet Union has always been, regardless of the party in power, regardless of the rhetoric, appeasement. Only the American people have been duped into believing otherwise.

The United States wrote off Eastern Europe when the Red Army refused to go home in 1945. For awhile, American politicians pretended they were interested in freeing East Europeans from Soviet domination. The Soviets put the lie to that myth by crushing rebellions in East Germany and Hungary and Poland. We did nothing. By 1960, American politicians were even ashamed to observe Captive Nations Week, even though the law remained on the books. By the time Gerald Ford was president, we formally sanctioned Soviet control of Eastern Europe by signing the infamous Helsinki Accords.

Do you really want to know how weak and spineless we have become? We acknowledge the Soviet Union's right to control by military force the nations of Eastern Europe. The foreign policy establishment's euphemism is "sphere of influence." But we don't have the guts to remove a Soviet military base located 90 miles from the continental United States. We don't have the guts to assert that Cuba and Central America are within our "sphere of influence." We don't have a sphere of influence. Even Nicaragua tells us to go to hell.

Unpleasant to think about, isn't it? Yes, but you try to think of a place where we have any influence. Can't do it? Well, why should we have any influence? We violate the most basic rule of human relationships. We reward our enemies and penalize our friends. Nobody gets hurt by openly proclaiming hostility to the United States. But plenty of nations and peoples who proclaimed friendship for us have gotten badly hurt.

Ask the Vietnamese, the Cambodians, the Laotias. Ask the anti-communist Nicaraguans, Cubans, Chileans, Brazilians, Chinese, and Argentines. Ask the anti-communists of Rhodesia and South Africa. Ask the Kurds. Ask the Israelis. Ask the Turks. Ask the Poles and Hungarians and Czechs. Ask even the anti-communist Russians. We have betrayed or failed to support them all.

Who else but the United States would actively participate in the overthrow of anti-communists, pro-American Anastasio Somoza while at the very same time conduct secret negotiations to improve relations with the murderous, American-hating Fidel Castro? Who but us would penalize Chile for overthrowing a communist while trading with communists in the Soviet Union on credit? Who but us would demand that the government of El Salvador — as a condition of receiving aid — agree to negotiate with the communist guerillas trying to destroy the El Salvadorean government?

Ronald Reagan might have been different, but he is being surrounded by the same old foreign policy crowd so all we are getting is new rhetoric for the old appeasement policy. I'm sorry to sound bitter, but I always get bitter when I see brave men and women who love liberty being crushed.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

The evolution-creation battle rageth on. Couldn't all those lawyers and Bible-thumpers in Little Rock come to a compromise and allow the schools to teach that it wasn't an apple that Adam craved, but a banana?

Creation also includes Adam's ancestors, the monkeys, doesn't it? Who can doubt that we, his descendents, often act like animals?

And, as evidence, God created Rolling Stones fans.

The trick is to teach creation using scientific, not religious terms. All you do is teach that the universe, as most people know it today, was created by Carl Sagan.

As soon as you start talking about a Supreme Being, athiests get excited. I wonder if they could live with "pretty good being"?

What a waste of time. We have kids who can't read and teachers who use terrible grammar, and yet there still are people who can squabble over whether Adam and Eve were Baptists or Unitarians.

West Texas firms accused of bid rigging

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Eight West Texas construction firms have been accused in federal court of rigging competitive bids to control allocation and prices on Lubbock area highway projects.

No hearing date has been set on the antitrust suit filed Monday by Attorney General Mark White.

The attorney general filed the suit against High Plains Pavers Inc., Plainview; Boswell & Crafton Inc., Kerry Construction Co., Panhandle Pavers Inc., South Plains Contracting & Equipment Co., Staffor Construction Inc., W.D. Turner Construction Co. and Western Pavers Inc., all of Lubbock.

White asked for a permanent injunction to stop alleged antitrust violations and, triple damages and a series of penalties for violation of state antitrust laws.

The suit arose from a number of indictments returned recently by a Travis County grand jury after a 13-month federal investigation, White said.

The indictments allege the firms and some executives circumvented the state's bidding system by submitting "intentionally high or complimentary" bids and "collusive, noncompetitive and rigged" proposals for state construction work.

Post plans local cable television

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Post is planning to deliver a package of local news, information and advertising over leased cable television channels in the Washington metropolitan area, possibly as soon as 1983.

The project, the newspaper's first involving cable television, was announced in today's editions of the Post.

"Virtually all of the programming now being produced for cable systems is national in focus," Post publisher Donald E. Graham said. "We feel that, in addition, the new 100-channel cable systems planned for this area will also want to offer their viewers more news and information about their communities."

The newspaper plans to start discussions immediately with cable systems already operating in the area and with all applicants for cable franchises not yet awarded about leasing two channels on each system, said Thomas H. Ferguson, president of the Post.

Alice Rogoff, assistant to the publisher, said no decisions have been made on the specific format or content of the new venture. "We're looking for a distribution system because we want to develop the product," she said.

Department to take bids on Highway 20

Austin Bureau

Austin — The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation will take bids Jan. 12 on proposed improvements to Interstate Highway 20 in Martin County.

The highway department plans to apply fabric underseal and asphaltic concrete pavement on 3.78 miles of I-20 from the Howard County line to the junction of I-20 and U.S. 80 east of Stanton.

Estimated cost of the project is $936,962 and completion time is estimated at 40 working days.

The highway department also will take bids Jan. 12 on a $3,771,650 project on U.S. 67 in Presidio County.

The project includes grading, drainage, structures, structural widening, flexible base, surface treatment and removal of an existing bridge on 7.86 miles of U.S. 67 from Bunton Flat to Shafter.

Marquez conviction upheld

Austin Bureau

Austin — The Court of Criminal Appeals last week upheld the theft conviction and life sentence assessed Arturo Acosta Marquez in an Ector County court.

The sentence was enhanced by two prior felony convictions.

In his appeal, Marquez argued that the evidence was insufficient to show theft, and his attorney argued that life imprisonment amounts to "cruel and unusual punishment."

Support granted wife after she hired husband's attackers

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A physician who was attacked and robbed by two men allegedly hired by his estranged wife must pay her $1,500 a month because she has no other means of support, a judge has ruled.

"I guess I'd better stick to medicine because I sure don't understand the judicial system," Dr. Dudley O. Scott Jr.'s lawyer quoted him as saying Monday when the ruling was issued.

The lawyer, William Dubbin, said he was considering an appeal.

Scott was ordered by Santa Clara County Superior Judge Read Ambler to make temporary support payments beginning Jan. 1 until his divorce from Lidija Scott is final.

Mrs. Scott, 45, faces trial Feb. 1 on a charge of soliciting the commission of a felony. She had asked for $10,000 in temporary support for herself and their two children.

The judge, while calling Mrs. Scott's alleged conduct "outrageous," said she has no other means of support since she was a homemaker for much of the couple's 22-year marriage.

Under California law, marital fault is not a factor in setting support, Ambler added.

Dubbin said that "from a layman's point of view, I think it's unfair. It doesn't make sense."

"But the judge did the best he could ... with the existing statutes and prior cases ... The judge was confronted with a situation that to my knowledge has not arisen in California before," he said.

Mrs. Scott allegedly went to a San Jose bar where she met a man who agreed to arrange a contract assault for $1,500, Scott had been separated from his wife when he was attacked and robbed in his office parking lot Oct. 26. He escaped serious injury.

Upset that her husband's injuries "were not severe enough," Mrs. Scott refused to pay the assailants, police said.

LETTER TO COLLEGE

Interesting, useful courses outlined for next semester

By H.A. TUCK
Public Relations Director
Midland College

Since Midland College is closed this week for the holidays, I'll be outlining some of the interesting, useful courses that might be of interest to you during the spring semester.

Dr. Jerry Franks, a widely-travelled goverment instructor who has served as a tour guide throughout much of the world, has planned a new course in International Relations. In the first part of the course, students will be introduced to such basic concepts as containment, balance of power, imperalism and negotiation.

Later, students will be assigned to follow a particular country or international "actor," such as Qaddafi, Begin or Haig for the semester.

Franks also will have students reading about the development and scope of American power, concentrating on American "petropolitics."

A number of other new classes are being offered in the Social Sciences area, all of them being taught by full-time faculty members with a particular interest or background in each subject.

Dr. J.D. Martin will teach an economics course on "The Rise of Modern Industry," which will meet on Monday nights from 7 to 9:50 p.m.

Jack Scannell again plans to teach his popular course on The Civil War, from 7 to 9:50 p.m. on Thursday evenings.

A specialist in Latin America, Anita Harwell will drect a history course on "Mexican-American Studies" that is scheduled to meet from 11 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. on Tuesdays and thursdays.

"Human Sexuality" is a psychology course that will be taught by Howell Watkins from 9:30 to 10:50 a.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays this semester.

Steve Thomas will be the instructor for a Cultural Anthropolgy course, meeting from 11 to 11:50 a.m., and for a sociology course on "Social Problem," that will meet from 11 a.m. until 12:20 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

•

Of special interest to those who work with large numbers of people, and particularly for those interested in the health care fields, will be a two-hour physical education course on First Aid. Completion of the course will qualify students both the Red Cross First Aid certification and for Cardio-Pulmonary Resuscitation (CPR) certification. The course will be taught by John Cope, a crtified Red Cross first aid instructor, from 5:30 to 7:20 p.m. on Tuesday evenings.

•

Due primarily to a change n the number of Midland High School students taking vocational courses at Midland College, there are more openings in some of the most popular and in-demand technical programs this year.

Local classified ads show tremendous demand for secretaries, electronics technicians, air conditioning/heating specialists, diesel mechanics, welders, and automotive technicians...not to mention printers, draftsmen, computor specialists or petroleum technologists.

All these courses, and many others, are available in either daytime or evening courses courses at Midland College. Students may choose to plan for a two-year associate's degree program, or a one-year certification course in some of these areas. And students have found that even minimal training in some fields can help them improve their employment status.

•

It bears repeating. A person said, "I'm too old to start college now. Why after fours years to get a degree I'd be 35 years old!" To which another person replied, "And how old will you be in four years if you don't go to college?"

From all the faculty, administration, staff and students at Midland College, MAY YOU HAVE A WONDERFUL AND PEACEFUL NEW YEAR!!!

Percy meets with Israeli leaders to soothe tensions

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Sen. Charles Percy says the Reagan administration has been repeatedly surprised by the Jewish state's sudden military attacks and annexation of the Golan Heights.

The Illinois Republican, who chairs the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and frequently criticizes Israel, planned to meet Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Defense Minister Ariel Sharon later today. Israelis hope the talks will ease tensions between the allies.

Percy met Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir for two hours Monday after he arrived for the two-day talks but made no comment. Israeli officials described the tone as cordial.

"We would all like to see the relations moving to a better understanding," said an Israeli official who requested anonymity.

Percy is the first high-ranking U.S. official to meet Israel's leaders since the Dec. 14 annexation of the Golan, a plateau on Israel's northeast frontier with Syria.

He told Shamir that Washington had not expected Israeli actions such as the June bombing of an Iraqi nuclear plant, July bombing of Palestine Liberation Organization offices in Beirut and the Golan annexation, Israel Radio reported.

REAGAN SUSPENDED A new strategic alliance pact with Israel as punishment for the annexation. Israeli leaders reacted angrily, provoking a chain of denunciations that brought U.S.-Israel relations to their lowest point in years.

Israel contends all its military moves have been for protection from hostile Arab nations and the PLO, the Beirut-based guerrilla organization fighting for a Palestinian state on Israeli-occupied land.

Sharon says Israel annexed the Golan to prevent what he called a U.S. plan to force Israel to withdraw from all Arab territory it seized in the 1967 Middle East war.

Percy began his visit as Begin assured Egypt that Israel will withdraw from the Sinai peninsula on schedule by next April 26 despite violent resistance by Israeli settlers.

Israel's ambassador to Egypt, Moshe Sasson, delivered a handwritten promise from Begin to Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak which also listed Israel's reasons for annexing the Golan, Israel Radio avid peace accords with Israel, had criticized the annexation.

Israeli settlers in the northern Sinai town of Yamit set fire to two vacant houses over the weekend and fortified the town's borders with sandbags, barbed wire and trenches in anticipation of forced evacuation by Israeli soldiers.

Begin agreed to return the Sinai to Egypt under terms of the 1979 peace treaty between the two nations. Israel captured the Sinai in the 1967 war and had encouraged settlers to build on the desert wasteland.

DEAR ABBY

Boxer shorts bear blessings

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Around the first of the year you had a lot of letters in your column advising men to wear boxer shorts, instead of the tight kind that hugged the body, if they wanted to become fathers.

It so happened that my wife and I had been trying unsuccessfully for years to have a child. The doctors found nothing wrong with either one of us, but none could help us. The last doctor told us to give up and adopt a baby.

Then we saw the letters in your column recommending boxer shorts to increase fertility. We both laughed, but my wife said, "Let's try Abby's suggestion for just one month," so I bought three pair of boxer shorts and started to wear them. Guess what? The second month my wife got pregnant!

On Nov. 19 she gave birth to a beautiful baby girl. She weighed 7 pounds 6 ounces and we named her Catherine Ann-Marie. (I'm enclosing her picture.)

God bless you, Abby. My wife, Carol, and I both love you for your wonderful column in the Cedar Rapids Gazette. — GALEN A. LUKE, CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA

DEAR GALEN: Congratulations to you and Carol. Catherine Ann-Marie is indeed a beautiful baby. May the Lord richly bless you and your family.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a bachelor living alone. There's another bachelor in my building who drops in often, and we rap. He seems like a nice guy, but all he talks about is his sex life - which according to him is terrific! His biggest complaint is that once he scores with a woman he can't get rid of her.

I don't know whether to believe him or not. He certainly doesn't look like a ladies' man, and I've never even seen him with a date.

What is your opinion of a guy who is always talking about sex? — DOUBTING THOMAS IN THOMASVILLE, GA.

DEAR THOMAS: He's probably doing what he does best. Talking.

DEAR ABBY: You said you couldn't understand why anybody would refuse to share a recipe. The enclosed poem may give you a clue:

She didn't have potatoes
So she used a cup of rice.
She couldn't find paprika
So she used some other spice.
Tomatoes weren't in season
So she used tomato paste.
The whole can — not a cup, dear
She couldn't bear to waste.
And now she isn't speaking;
She's convinced I pulled a fast one.
So don't ask me for a recipe —
That one was my last one! — MT. VERNON, OHIO

A job with teeth in it

By BETH MOHR
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — "A marmoset's head is about the size of 50-cent piece and an elephant's head may weigh between 800 and 1,000 pounds. Compare the two and you can see the variation in dental treatment for exotic animals. The diversity is tremendous."

Dr. David A. Fagan finds the challenges of that diversity so appealing he now devotes 95 percent of his dental practice to exotic animals as a consultant-clinician with the San Diego Zoological Society.

Sitting in the observation room overlooking the San Diego Zoo surgery where he had just spent the morning working on dental problems of a cougar, leopard, and cherry-headed mangabey monkey, Fagan said:

"When I did a root canal on a marmoset, I could hardly get my finger in its mouth. When I pulled an elephant's molar, it took three men to hold her mouth open. Animals also have a tremendous diversity in head and neck anatomy. Consider for instance the difference between an alligator, gorilla, panda bear and camel."

Teeth of all animals do have at least one common denominator, Fagan explained.

"Dental problems are not just tooth problems. They are masticatory apparatus problems that have to do with the entry mechanism to the digestive system. Since we can't say to an animal, 'Open, please, and let's see what's wrong,' the animal's dental problems usually are not discovered until it begins to suffer from digestive or nutritional upsets and other systemic problems."

With Lucky, one of the zoo's elephants, the first symptom was weight loss.

"It's reasonable that the loss of a few pounds would go unnoticed in an animal weighing about 8,000 pounds," Fagan said. "By the time Lucky had lost 700 pounds, Red Thomas, her keeper, became concerned."

Examinations by zoo veterinarians revealed that Lucky was not masticating or digesting her food. It was going through her body without supplying her with essential nutrition.

During testing to find the cause, Fagan was called in to examine Lucky's mouth. He found that her teeth had moved into a position that made it impossible for her to chew her food.

"Elephants' teeth are very complex in how they evolve," Fagan said. "They get six sets of teeth instead of two (baby and permanent) as humans do. One of Lucky's teeth, in about set No. 4, didn't develop normally. The tooth became impacted in the way wisdom teeth often become impacted in humans. Lucky's impacted tooth also was deformed and fused to a bone."

The decision was made to remove the tooth and a dental surgery team was organized.

"A dentist is not licensed to practice veterinary medicine and veterinarians are on every team," Fagan said. "By the time dental and veterinarian assistants, anesthetists, keepers and others were added, we had a team of about 20."

Workers in the zoo machine shop became auxiliary team members, making dental instruments designed by Fagan.

"In designing equipment for all zoo procedures, I begin with human-size standard dental instruments and scale them up or down as needed," Fagan said.

Marmoset instruments, comparable to miniature kitchen equipment in a tiny doll house, were at one end of the scale and those for Lucky's surgery at the other. A crowbar about 3.5 feet long and a carpenter's drill were added to giant-sized regulation instruments for extracting the elephant's tooth.

Preparing Lucky was a complicated procedure.

"The problem of tranquilizing animals is very complex and sensitive," Fagan said. "What works well with one animal can as often as not be fatal for another. There is a good deal of preparation and a good deal of evaluation of alternative methods. As you can imagine, the anesthesia requirements for an 8,000-pound elephant were tremendous."

It was vital that the 4-ton body be positioned properly the first time. Anesthetized, Lucky would topple at a dead weight. A bed of rubber tires and layers of straw was arranged for a safe landing. Her body was rigged to enable handlers to tip her in the right direction as she went down. Then three pulleys were attached to help keep her mouth open and Fagan went to work. He may have had difficulty getting a finger into the marmoset's mouth, but he could get his whole head in Lucky's.

"Looking into that mouth was awesome, but 10 years' experience with exotic animals helped me get over the initial stun," Fagan said.

The surgery took 3.5 hours and the tooth weighed 7.5 pounds.

"It was difficult and exasperating, but we got the tooth out," Fagan said. "That was about six months ago and Lucky's teeth are moving as they should. She is gaining weight and doing all right."

Most zoo dental work is much simpler. The animals are generally sedated and brought to the surgery in a cage. The smaller animals are carried in the arms of a veterinarian or assistant and the larger ones lifted in a canvas carrier.

They are taken first to an examining table to be checked and anesthetized. Because of the sensitivity of animals to anesthetic, general physical examinations are customary whenever they are anesthetized.

"An anesthetic may cause the animal's vocal chords to spasm, cutting off air to the lungs," Fagan said. "The veterinarians insert tubes into the animal's trachea to keep the airway open."

Once an animal is placed on the surgery table, its vital signs are constantly monitored by the anesthetist and by cardiac equipment visually charting the heart action. All dental procedures begin with X-rays.

Some cases are uncomplicated. Taos, the baby cougar had been having occasional bleeding of his lower lip and was given a dental checkup.

"It was a teething problem," Fagan said. "His permanent teeth are growing in and pushing his primary teeth off to one side. One primary canine tooth was cutting into his upper lip. We just trimmed that tooth down. That procedure is done commonly on children's teeth."

Taos was only lightly sedated and knew as soon as he began to wake up that something had been done to his mouth. He kept licking his lips just as a child would.

Educating children the 'Brutalheim' way

By FRANK GREEN
Copley News Service

Bruno Bettelheim believes that most primary school children are being transformed into robots.

He blames it on modern instructional regimens that concentrate on repetition and intensive drills instead of substance.

"They think they can turn children into monkeys," mused the famed child psychologist.

The Viennese-born analyst, a disciple of Freud, also indicted the use of standardized primers that he said treat learning as unimportant and are essentially "vacuous and boring."

"The first requirement of any book is that it offers something other than a reading exercise. Most people don't read to get through an exercise. They read for knowledge, information and enjoyment. Unfortunately, reading primers teach children to have fun of the most empty kind."

Bettelheim, 78 — dubbed by some associates as Dr. Brutalheim for his rigid theories on child rearing — long has been concerned with what he sees as declining standards in American public education. A decade ago, he and his stable of researchers began investigating how children are taught in primary classrooms, with an emphasis on the value — or lack of value — of modern reading primers.

The results of this research will be incorporated in "On Learning to Read," a book he has written that was to be released in December.

The bald, disheveled professor, who speaks in a thick Austrian accent (he sounds like Peter Seller's character, Dr. Strangelove), blamed the growing number of illiterate college students on the methods of learning employed by their primary and secondary teachers.

Too many educators are "infatuated with gadgets and methods," he observed. "I've seen teachers who are masters of their subject — convinced of the importance of their subject — who concentrated too much on methods of teaching. They used so-called correct methods, but didn't achieve anything with those methods."

In fact, there is a great deal of "unlearning" transpiring on college campuses today, Bettelheim said. "Most of my colleagues, rather than transmitting our cultural heritage, are concentrating on teaching limited skills," he said. "There is too much of the specific before a broad cultural basis has been created. A kid nowadays can graduate in basketweaving or swimming. I have nothing against those courses especially, except that they won't sustain anyone for the rest of their lives."

Bettelheim, who took his time responding to questions, frequently admonished his interviewers for being in such a hurry to exact answers from him. "I'm an old man, a slow man, and you will have to suffer with me," he chuckled.

Currently a professor of child psychiatry at Stanford, Bettelheim spent most of his career — over three decades — as director of the Sonia Shankman Orthogenic School for severely disturbed children on the University of Chicago campus.

Prior to coming to America in the late 1930s, he practiced child psychiatry in his native Vienna, at times treating his most difficult patients by bringing them into his home.

In 1938, in the midst of researching the problems of autistic children, Bettelheim was arrested by the Nazi occupation forces and sent to Buchenwald and later to the Dachau concentration camps. He was imprisoned at Dachau for nearly two years before New York Gov. Herbert Lehman and Eleanor Roosevelt intervened on his behalf.

He was released by the German authorities and in 1939 came to America and set up shop on the University of Chicago campus.

From his observations in the Nazi death camps, he wrote a book — "Individual and Mass Behavior in Extreme Situations" — which became a standard text for American military personnel during the war.

Bettelheim is the author of many ground-breaking books on child psychiatry, the most famous of which is probably "The Uses of Enchantment," which argues that anxiety-provoking fantasies of fairy tales — far from being harmful — actually can promote a child's emotional, intellectual and social development.

"Bettelheim is disappointed with people who tidy up fairy tales and make them less violent," said Jerry Griswold, a professor of children's literature at San Diego State University. "He believes that it's important for children to see evil punished. This enables them to deal with anxieties about evil around them and see that good conquers evil."

This doesn't necessarily mean that Bettelheim believes in the modern day fairy tales played out on television. For instance, he feels that characters on "The Dukes of Hazzard" are decidedly not proper role models for youngsters.

"They are good-looking but empty headed," he said.

He then proceeded to bemoan the fact that there are no heroes today for children to look up to. "The great game is to debunk heroes," he said with a sigh, "and to make them as miserable as we are."

Society's modern heroes should be its teachers, but regrettably, teachers today are not given the chance to teach, Bettelheim said. "Teachers must spend an inordinate amount of time on discipline problems, so consequently, no one learns anything."

Additionally, he said, neighborhood schools are being dismantled to the point where one school now may serve a number of communities.

"We now have a homogenous group of kids in one class reading at four or five different levels," he said. "Under the best of circumstances, the teacher can spend only five or six minutes a day with a child. Imagine what the results would be if a teacher had 50 or 60 minutes per child a day."

Sex and laundry should rate equal time, sociologist says

Planned sex rather than spontaneous sex is vital if a couple wants to maintain sexual intimacy.

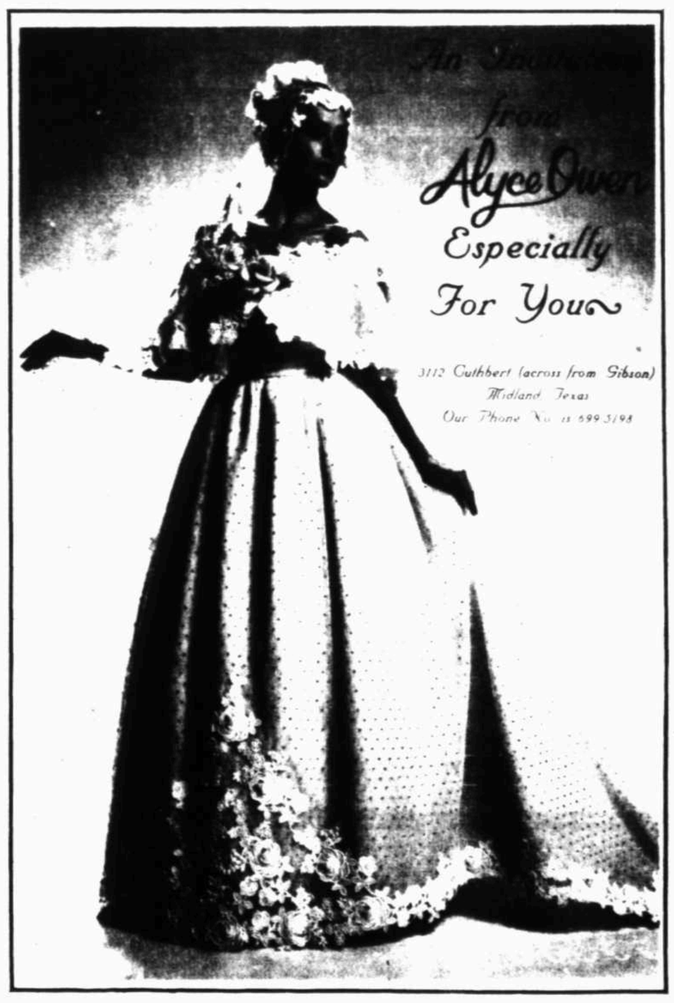

"No matter how much spontaneity is valued," asserted sociologist John Gagnon in an article published in the January issue of "Working Mother" magazine, "Planning for sex is as necessary as planning for other aspects of life." He explained, "We want sex to be spontaneous, exciting, romantic, and mutually satisfying. This kind of sex is hard to come by even under the best of circumstances. But this model for the kind of sexuality we knew in our youth and still aspire to clashes with the actuality of family life." Having children structures the lives of couples and rules out spontaneity, Gagnon claimed, and commented that contemporary parents have "an enormous amount to do," and that everything related to work, children, the home, and the community becomes priority. He observed, "Sex, which loomed so large before we had children, becomes a dispensible activity that can be set aside for more important demands. The fact is that sexuality nearly always declines in significance when it is forced to compete with the other interests of adult life."

Not only do couples tend to set sex aside in favor of more important demands, but once other demands are met, and a half-hour appears here or there in which spontaneous sex is an option, one partner or both is likely to be too tired to expend the energy. Gagnon noted in "Working Mother" that "too tired" or "too much to do" are reasonable excuses not only because they are universally accepted reasons for not having intercourse, but also because they are often true. "Working Mother" warns that there is a problem if a partner conceals a real lack of interest behind the excuse of fatigue.

The element of fatigue is going to be a factor in the lives of couples who try to devote equal energy to their work, their children, and their emotional and sexual lives, stated the magazine. "The issue," Gagnon pointed out, "is what do we get too tired for—bowling, doing the laundry, sweeping under the beds, or sex? Whatever goes undone is valued the least."

"If people are truly concerned about the role that sex is playing in their important relationships, they have to confront what they want and what their partner wants," the sociologist declared. According to "Working Mother", the key lies in partners vocalizing their concerns to each other. Each must acknowledge that sex is important enough in their relationship so that it does not automatically get pushed aside when something else comes up.

Once partners do confront each other, they pave the way for planning their intimate time together. With planning, couples should be able to reserve large blocks of time to be together. Larger blocks of time will allow transitions into and out of sexual intimacy, leaving the minds of both partners uncluttered with other past and future daily events during sex.

No-wax floor care causes complaints

HI:

I am on the rampage about a subject that has been bugging me for a few years now: No-wax floors! Don't they look lovely on the TV commercials and in the magazine ads? And, don't they just shine like glass?

Have you ever, and I mean ever, seen floors like that in a home with a pattern of family traffic running through it? (A still-shiny brand-new floor doesn't count).

They sell the stuff as being "no wax," right? Doesn't that mean that you don't wax it? Yet they offer products especially for use on these floors. Sounds like Catch 22 to me.

The advertisers get around it by calling these products "dressing" but, darn it, they mean you have to clean and polish that new floor just like you did the old floor. Then why call it no-wax? You may not use wax but you are going through the same steps of cleaning and polishing.

When you spend your money on flooring, be sure to read the care instructions. Care instructions for many types of floors specify that you have to apply an initial and periodic dressing or coating. (Why don't they just say wax?)

If you have this type of product in your home and the shine has not lived up to its advertised life, check with the manufacturers, and by all means, write the Federal Trade Commission, Pennsylvania at 6th St, Washington, D.C. 20580, or to me! — Heloise

EASIER CAN OPENING

Dear Heloise: I have a hand-held can opener which I was about to throw away as the gears would hardly turn, making opening a can difficult.

Then, I thought of oiling it, but didn't want to use regular machine oil as it would come in contact with food.

So, I tried using vegetable cooking oil and those gears are turning easy as pie again. — Del Iafelice

Be sure to give it a good scrubbing before you oil it again. — Heloise

SLICE FROM THE CENTER

Dear Heloise: When you need a slice of onion or tomato for one hamburger or sandwich, don't bother to peel the whole onion or tomato.

Just slice through the center and remove a slice or two, then push the two halves back together. Wrap in plastic wrap or foil and place in the fridge. Keeps them much fresher.

I also do this with my two-pound rolls of sausage. — Irene Hobbs

INCOME TAX RECORDS

Dear Heloise: Here is a hint for those who itemize their income tax deductions:

Pick up a small, purse-sized date book calendar (it's free) at your favorite greeting card counter and put it in your purse. Use it to keep medical records for tax purposes.

When you make your first trip to the doctor in the new year, take it out of your purse as soon as you register at the doctor's office and, in the space for that day, record all pertinent tax information.

Keep this all year and you will have all medical expense records needed for your income tax at your fingertips.

And it will have cost you nothing, not even in terms of time as you do it while waiting for the doctor. — Jane Baker

DEODORIZING TIP

Dear Heloise: I have intended to send this in before, but this morning after reading about removing the odor from antiques, I must tell you that cat box deodorizer does a great job in many instances!

Just put it in the drawers and leave it for several days. — G.B.

Teaching science to children

Why can't people get off the ground? Why don't fish drown? How is it that the weather changes? How can airplanes stay up?

Young children are full of questions about the world around them, and often those questions are science-related, says Dr. Nancy L. Hazen-Swann, assistant professor of home economics at The University of Texas at Austin in the division of child development and family relationships.

She believes there is "no minimum age" for teaching children about science. Even the children three and four years old that she teaches can understand science at a very basic level when their questions are pursued and they have "hands-on experience" with some of the things they ask about.

In the process, children begin to develop basic thinking skills, such as observing, measuring and matching things, says Dr. John P. Huntsberger, associate professor of curriculum and instruction.

"We just don't give kids opportunities to use thinking skills," he emphasizes, to develop the problem-solving skills people of all ages use in every subject area.

By "doing science," continues Dr. Lowell J. Bethel, associate professor of curriculum and instruction, "we have found, particularly at an increasingly early age," that development of other needed skills is facilitated.

When science is used as a vehicle to teach children, "we have been able to develop reading-readiness skills," he explains.

"We have been able to improve their I.Q.'s," he reports. "We are able to improve their oral communication skills, which are terribly critical."

"It is true that pre-school children are pre-logical," says Dr. Hazen-Swann, and "they cannot do scientific reasoning in the way that adults can, but to start them at an early age will get them going in that direction."

Does the idea of explaining gravity to three- and four-year-olds sound ridiculous?

"If it is presented in a way that they can actually experience, and in a repetitive kind of way, they pick it up," she says, describing the play children acted out after hearing an imaginary story of visits to other planets where the gravity was weak or strong.

On the moon, they tried "to act as light as they could and imagine that they were sort of floating," she relates. And on Jupiter, where gravity is very heavy, "they started clomping around and getting stuck to the ground and having a hard time pulling themselves up."

"Then they'd get in their spaceship and say, 'No gravity!' and pretend they were flying around floating," Dr. Hazen-Swann continues.

"At a real basic level they were beginning to understand what it was even though they couldn't understand yet why it existed and why it was heavy in one place and light in the others, which teachers don't really know either," she adds.

The crucial word in that account of the children's experience is "repetitive," says Dr. Huntsberger, who believes the "consistent repeated use of activities which emphasize certain thinking skills allows children to enhance those skills."

What can parents and teachers do—especially when they don't know the answers—to cultivate the interest children show in asking "scientific" questions?

"Show the same enthusiasm (as the child's) for learning about something," advises Dr. Huntsberger. "Admit the lack of knowledge and arrange for a time" to visit or call a public library or local university, "showing the child all the while that not only are you after answers, but perhaps after an area of thinking of the world and of human interest far expanded beyond the home. The final answer is not always the important thing."

Dr. Bethel agrees, emphasizing the critical role of the parent or adult working with children "to introduce them to the world."

Complicating that role, he says, is the back-to-basics movement, which concentrates studies in reading, writing and arithmetic.

"I don't have anything against those studies, but certainly our world is more than just those three subjects," he remarks.

Cancer not letting up

In 1980 the deaths of 7 out of 10 ordinary life-insurance policyholders were due to two principal causes: cardiovascular-renal diseases and cancer. The proportion of cancer deaths continued to increase; 23.2 percent of policyholder deaths were caused by cancer.

Reserves far ahead

World reserves of coal far exceed those of petroleum. At present prices, some 640 billion tons of proven coal reserves are economically recoverable, enough to maintain current production levels for more than 100 years.

Exhibition features

By SHERYL FITZGERALD
(c) 1981, Newsday

NEW YORK — The 18th century was a wonderful time for women, said Stella Blum, curator of the Costume Institute of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. "They won by persuasion." It was a time, she said, when the manners were less overt, a time of "grace and artifice" in women.

"Women had a lot of influence," Blum said. "They ran the fashionable salons, they were patronesses of the arts and literature, they influenced statesmen and kings. But they did it in a less direct way than women do today. They were expected to be attractive. They were masters of persuasion and the soft sell, so to speak."

When the exhibition, "The 18th Century Woman," opened recently at the Metropolitan Museum, the fashions that helped define this grace and artifice were on display.

Including more than 125 items of male and female clothing, jewelry and accessories, the exhibition — sponsored by Merle Norman Cosmetics — is like window into the lifestyles of people who lived 200 years ago. Among the items being shown are the famous "Liberty" necklace that was given to Benjamin Franklin by a Polish aristocrat and that helped finance the American War of Independence, and a replica of the notorious "queen's" necklace, which was ordered by a countess who impersonated Queen Marie Antoinette and which caused a royal scandal over payment to the jeweler and helped cause the fall of Louis XVI.

One of the interesting things about fashion in the 18th century, Blum said, is that numerous influences acted upon contemporary concepts of style. During the first part of the century, she said, everyone's idea of style was dictated by what was worn at the Court of Versailles.

At mid-century, industrial advances — like the invention of the flying shuttle by John Kay in 1733 and of the spinning jenny by James Hargreaves in 1764 — were effecting a revolution in the textile industry, thereby making it possible for better, cheaper clothing to be produced.

Women's costumes of the period were basically in three modes, Blum said. Early in the century dress in the Court of Versailles was anything but simple.

Dresses were often so wide that a lady of great wealth would have to turn sideways to pass through a door. The expectations were such, she said that if a woman appeared without a wide panier (a basket-shaped device attached to each side of a woman's waist to give width to her form) her husband might demand to know why she was under-dressed. Indeed, this exaggeration of the female silhouette reached such proportions that when Handel's "Messiah" was performed in Dublin in 1742, ladies were enjoined from wearing hoops into the music hall because the seats were not wide enough.

In about 1775, with the first stirrings of political upheaval, the French mode declined in significance and a more relaxed English way of dressing came to the fore, she said. Also coming into its own during this period was manner of dressing adapted from the French peasantry.

Exemplified by shorter — almost ankle-length — skirts and little jackets, these were the clothes that Marie Antoinette probably wore when acting out her milkmaid fantasies. The third significant influence, Blum said, was a lingerie style of dressing that eventually became known as the "robe a la chemise." Fashioned on the style of English children's clothing of the period, this style became popular after Marie Antoinette had her portrait painted in such a getup in 1733.

In the last quarter of the 18th century, the courts of French royalty lost their pre-eminence as a trend setter for the world, and Paris rose to prominence for what was probably the first time in fashion history. "At this time, fashions became more individual," Blum said. "People were less tied to the styles of the aristocracy; they were less formal."

Whatever the periodic fashions, Blums said, the thing that typified the 18th century most was the absolute luxury of most of what men and women of consequence wore. "It was a life of ease," Blum explained. "They did little going out, and a close look at the clothing — especially the shoes — will show this. When they did go out, they didn't walk. They stepped from their mansions into a carriage, little more."

AT WIT'S END

The art of starting a fire

By ERMA BOMBECK

This winter, a lot of you people out there are going to be using your fireplace a lot. As some of you may or may not have already discovered, there is an art to starting a fire.

Here are some observations that might prove helpful.

Do not count on a careless smoker to start your fire. There is never a careless smoker around when you need one. I've seen them on television a million times and so have you. The smoker who simply flips a cigarette butt into a field and seconds later 300,000 acres of forest are ablaze. All it would take to start your fire is one careless cigarette, but it'll never happen.

Old newspapers never burn. You can feed your fire 50 to 60 pounds of newspapers that are taking up space in your garage, but they won't burn. The only paper that will catch on at all is the one just delivered which no one has read and which still has a rubber band on it.

Cereal boxes, milk cartons and cracker boxes are excellent fire starters, but you lose momentum when you have to stop and wait until the kids eat up their contents.

Everyone in the room watching you struggle to build the fire will know that your wood is unseasoned but you. The builder of the fire is always the last to know.

Half of the people in the room watching you struggle to build the fire will know that you are giving the fire too much oxygen, thus creating a draft and blowing it out.

The other half of the people in the room watching you struggle to build the fire will know that you are not giving it enough oxygen, thus smothering it and blowing it out.

Do not be proud when members of the family offer old rulers, yardsticks, shoe supports, wooden hangers, birdhouses and Popsicle sticks. Every little bit of kindling helps.

Do not assault people who say they installed a gas conversion burner for under $14, use the prepared logs at the store for 98 cents, or who sit around all summer having the kids roll logs out of old newspaper that burn for 30 hours.

Never spurn the help of an eight-year-old Scout who once built a fire out of wet wood by rubbing two Boy Scout leaders together.

Never go to bed on a fireplace of darkened ashes. The moment you turn your back and say, "It's too late for a fire anyway," flames will leap out toward the screen, wood will crackle and pop and you'll have smoking embers for three days.

Remember, being warm isn't everything.

Singie mothers say independence more important than cutting costs

Why don't more single mothers team together in joint households? Although single mothers admit that cooperative living would be economically desirable, most are reluctant to relinquish their independence, "Working Mother" magazine revealed in the January issue.

"Working Mother" discovered that women are hesitant to explore joint living arrangements because they feel that living alone allows them to control their own lives, and they fear losing this control. Many single mothers, trying to regain a sense of order in their lives after a divorce or separation, often find that they are determined to make it on their own—and their living space is a concrete example of their success.

One woman interviewed by "Working Mother" declared, "My house is a big piece of me. It's a big piece of my identity. I wouldn't want anyone moving anything there." Another asserted, "No matter what happens to me at work that I have no control over, when I go home I can keep out the things that upset me. This is my place. It's safe for me. It's a place that nurtures me."

While single mothers cited other reasons for their hostilities towards sharing—such as lack of privacy to deal with their relationships with their own children, having to cope with other people's schedules, having to deal with others' values, and lack of space—the loss of control over their domain remained the most dominant reason.

According to psychologist Laura Green of the University of Rhode Island, the attitude towards control seems to be an outgrowth of the traditional stereotype of the past, that men controlled the business world and women controlled the house. "I'm wondering if the reluctance that women feel about sharing households may not go back to that 'my territory' attitude," Dr. Green observed in "Working Mother".

"Women feel 'If I lose my territory, I lose control.'" Agreeing with the psychologist, one woman commented, "You're being asked to share control and you're almost afraid you'd lose it, and you don't really have it yet, so you hunger for it."

Super Handyman: Thoughts to help until the thaw

By AL CARRELL

You know, it really doesn't make any difference whether you live in the Sunbelt or in the frozen northland, some time you have to deal with Jack Frost. If you're sitting on a sunny beach as you read this, file these tips in the back of your mind for use later on. What we have here is a collection of tips and hints on how to better enjoy Winter Wonderland and all the things that ice and snow do to you.

Dear Al: You have had many uses for sawdust. I create a lot of it and save it for the wintertime. It's just as good as salt or sand for slippery icy walks and steps, and when the weather warms up, the sawdust blows into the lawn and acts as a food. Salt isn't good for the lawn or concrete, and sand leaves everything gritty until it's swept away. — L.L.K.

Dear Al: A snow shovel works better if you'll coat it with wax. I heat the shovel in the oven just enough so I can rub a candle stub over the surface to leave a coat of wax all over. The wax prevents snow from adhering to the shovel. — R.Y.

Spray wax made for use on furniture will do the same thing and goes on quicker and easier.

Dear Al: A good snow shovel for removing the stuff from the car is a plastic dustpan. It won't scratch the car's finish, and the short handle is very convenient. — E.A.

Any dustpan would also work as a snow shovel for window ledges and other off-the-ground surfaces. Also a whisk broom is good for loose snow on a car or other raised small surface.

Dear Al: An outside padlock will often freeze and not accept the key. Prevent this by keeping moisture out of the lock. Slip a plastic sandwich bag over the lock and use a twist-tie to close the bag. Poke holes in the baggie for the lock's hasp. No moisture — no freeze-up. — M.H.F.

A small tab of waterproof tape over the key hole will also do the job. In fact, lots of folks use this trick on a car door lock when the auto will be outside. Proper lubrication will also help an outside lock to keep from freezing.

Dear Al: A shower cap will protect the outside rear-view mirror on your car from freezing if the car has to be left out. — Mrs. R.G.

Dear Al: Sometimes a car trunk lid freezes shut because moisture gets in around the gasket. It won't freeze if you coat the gasket with olive oil. — B.F.E.

Dear Al: If your car will be left out so the windshield could be coated with ice or snow, put a protector over it as well as the rear window. I use plastic bags from the dry cleaner. To hold them in place, I put several small magnets that adhere to the car to hold the bags. — T.Y.

If you didn't do this, I've received some dandy ideas for substitute window scrapers. A credit card can do the job, but maybe you'll break it and be without the ability to charge. A pocket comb will also work, as will a plastic plate cover for a light switch. There are also those who rub a slice of onion over the glass at night and say this prevents snow from sticking. Even if it doesn't always work, it gives your car a certain "air." Use that plus the olive oil idea above, and your car will smell like the salad bar.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, Dec. 30, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The great Milwaukee first baseman Cecil Cooper celebrates his 32nd birthday today. Also sharing this birthday all-star Dodger pitcher Sandy Koufax, "Hawaii Five-0" star Jack Lord, Bert Parks, country singer "Skeeter" Davis and rock musician Bo Diddley. You surprise those who thought they knew you when you act on an impulse in the months ahead. The results will be excellent, but do not test your luck too far. Keep loved ones informed of what you are doing. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences during most of the year. Your acute sensitivity to criticism could lead you to go along with someone you should stand up to.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Postpone trying to contact influential people—little can be accomplished today. Instead, catch up on routine office chores, paperwork. Make preliminary plans for New Year's Eve celebration.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Start thinking about your New Year's resolutions and consult mate regarding a fundamental change in lifestyle. A realistic budget revision can bring new peace of mind.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Concentrate on tasks you can complete alone. People who know you recognize your special abilities. Overseas letter brings happy news! Diet assumes greater importance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stop giving up something of value for nothing. An envious relative or neighbor can be a nuisance. Examine your feelings before making a romantic commitment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can make some fine profits today if you are prepared to use innovative methods. You change your mode of transportation and enjoy some very nice surprises.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Welcome an opportunity to show off your special talents. Influential person is unusually supportive. You could be contemplating going off on your own in business.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be practical and postpone launching a new project. Time is on your side. If married, you and mate draw closer together. He/she really does have your best interests at heart.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Although work can be a struggle now, there are fine compensations. Avoid conflicts and all types of excess. Someone special shares an important confidence.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Working at home holds great appeal but dealing with other people can be frustrating. A little diplomacy will make progress smoother. Loved ones' demands seem unreasonable but require immediate attention.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): News from abroad boosts your spirits, particularly if it concerns family members or friends. Your answer is likely to be in the affirmative if you are asked the right question.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The emphasis today is on who you know. Friends can provide information that will help career, business. The outlook is excellent for those seeking favors. Singles should be lucky in love.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Organize your work schedule and collaborate in a financing venture. Tooting your own horn could bring new romantic rewards your way. Pay more attention to your personal appearance.

When you have to develop tricks, it is tempting to go after your longer suit first. But what you really should be looking for is the suit that you can develop for the number of tricks you need for your contract!

North showed his good hand by first bidding his suit and then jump raising his partner's first-bid suit. With so much of his values in the unbid suit, South wisely elected to sign off in three no trump.

West led his fourth-best heart and declarer captured East's jack with the queen. Declarer could count six tricks in the major suits, so he needed only three from the minors to fulfill his contract. Dummy's good five-card diamond suit proved to be more than declarer could resist. A diamond to the jack lost to the ace, and a heart came back. The ten of hearts lost to the king, and West forced out declarer's remaining stopper. When the ten of diamonds did not come down, declarer could muster no more than eight tricks. The defenders scored three heart tricks and their two minor suit aces.

Declarer allowed dummy's diamond length to divert him from his main purpose – making nine tricks. With six tricks in the bag after the heart lead, he needed only three more for his game, and there was a sure-fire method of establishing them: going after clubs first. There was no way the suit could fail to produce three tricks.

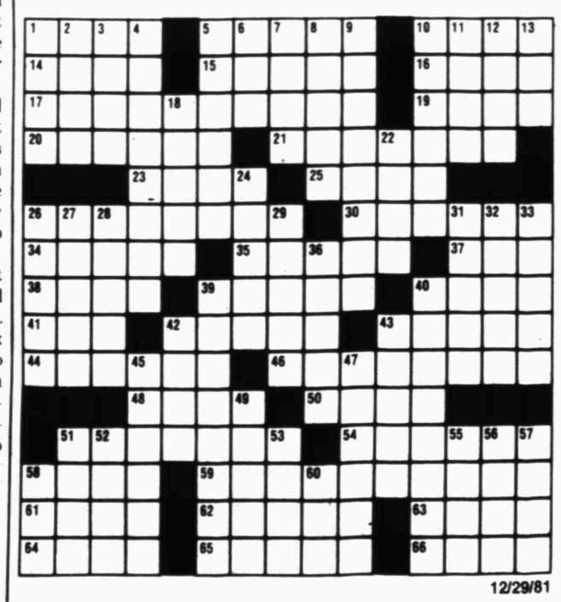

Had declarer tackled clubs, virtue would have been doubly rewarded. After winning the ace of clubs, West could not continue the attack on hearts without giving declarer a third trick in the suit. No matter what he returned, declarer would have time to drive out the ace of diamonds and make two overtricks.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Convulsions not serious in young children

Dear Dr. Solomon: You recently wrote that doctors sometimes treat young children with high fever in order to prevent convulsions. But suppose a child does have a convulsion. How important is it? — Mrs. D.B. Cincinnati

Der Mrs. D.B.: According to Dr. Paul S. Leitman, of the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, there is no evidence that febrile convulsions in children under 6 years of age cause any serious injury.

Dear Dr. Solomon: In discussing the pros and cons of a coronary bypass operation, the specialist I was referred to told me I should not expect the operation to be a cure. This puzzles me. If an operation doesn't cure anything, why be operated on? — Sam, Norfolk, Va.

Dear Sam: I assume the physician was trying to indicate that coronary bypass surgery does not affect the process of atherosclerosis, which causes the narrowing of the vessels that, in some patients, make coronary bypass surgery advisable. This doesn't mean that the operation will not be beneficial in appropriately selected patients.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've read about people who tried to commit suicide two, three, or more times, until they were successful. It seems to me that a person would be so frightened after the first attempt that he'd want to forget all about it. Can you explain how a person can bring himself to try over and over to take his own life? — Pete, Tucson, Ariz.

Dear Pete: An answer to your question would require a detailed, in-depth understanding of the individual patient. Not evryone who attempts suicide does so for the same reasons, faces the same set of circumstances, or feels so helpless to do anything about them.

Two recent studies indicate that people who came close to death as the result of a suicide attempt are less likely to make another try. Apparently a close brush with death during a first attempt has the effect of discouraging future efforts. Of course this is a generality that would not apply in every case.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father, who is 68 years old, is taking aspirin for rheumatoid arthritis. With all the new drugs being produced, isn't there anything better than aspirin for this condition? — Alex, St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Alex: Aspirin is one of the mainstays of treatment of rheumatoid arthritis in older people. It has a proven track record, and has been shown to be safe and effective for more than 100 years. Therefore, if aspirin can do the job, why look for something else?

Even if your father is experiencing some ill effects from the aspirin, it may be possible to overcome them by adjusting the timing of the dosage or when it is taken in relation to meals. Sometimes a patient who has tolerated aspirin over a period of time will develop a sensitivity to it. But if it is doing the job, be thankful that a drug as safe and effective — and inexpensive — as aspirin is available.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What is the cause of a tingling feeling in the lower leg in a 73-year-old man? My father complains of this several times during the day, but he doesn't think it's serious enough to go see a doctor. Do you think I should insist on it? — Mel, New Orleans, La.

Dear Mel: There are so many possible reasons to account for the sensation of tingling that I'm reluctant even to speculate. It could be due to poor circulation, but it could stem from other factors as well.

I would recommend that your father see a doctor who can explore the condition in some detail. Even if poor circulation is found to be the cause, the doctor might want to have other studies done. The one thing your father should not do is ignore the situation.

Dear Dr. Solomon: From what I understand, the bones of elderly people grow brittle because they don't have enough calcium. If that's the case, why not simply give them more calcium? This would seem to be a simple solution. — Mike, York, Pa.

Dear Mike: There is some evidence that what you suggest may be of value. A study by Dr. C.J. Lee and associates at Kentucky State University shows that the use of calcium supplements and calcium-rich foods can increase bone density in elderly people.

The researchers tried this with 20 elderly women for a period of six months. At the end of that time, 11 women had increased bone density; however, bone density decreased in six and remained the same in three. While firm conclusions cannot be drawn on the basis of this study, it doesn't suggest that calcium can improve bone density among the elderly.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am now on dialysis and am not having much luck sexually. Would a kidney transplant improve sexaul performance? — Frank, Newark, Del.

Dear Frank: In one study of about 150 patients who underwent successful kidney transplantation, the sexual perforance of nondiabetic men did improve. Of course there are individual differences among patients, and no one can predict how a transplant will affect a particular person.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband loves foreign foods. Recently, he has developed a taste for Japanese sushi and sashimi. These are made from raw fish. The idea of eating raw fish turns me off, plus, I am afraid my husband will become ill. Is this a foolish fear? — Elaine, Baltimore, Md.

Dear Elaine: Your husband would do well to listen to your fears. A recent issue of "Morbidity and Mortality" carried a warning that raw or undercooked fish, whether marine or freshwater, may carry a risk of worm infection. This warning was prompted in part by the recent outbreak of fish tapeworm among a group of California physicians. They had been to a party where raw fish had been served. I would suggest that you introduce your husband to some of the other Japanese delicacies. Then, both of you can relax and enjoy them.

(If you have a medical question, wrtie to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as poasible in his column.)

CONTRACTORS

There are over 90,000 Homeowners and Businesses who place three or more calls a year needing a contractor's services.

The consumer has three main sources to locate a contractor besides direct advertising: the yellow pages, classifieds, and word of mouth.

Starting January 1, 1982, there will be another way. The Contractors Bureau — through extensive advertising — expects to have at least 25% of these calls channeled through its office. This means Contractors Bureau will refer 3,900 contractors each week.

Contractors Bureau is now compiling files on contractors that offer services in the Midland & Odessa area. If you, the contractor, are not already listed in our files, call 686-7623.

Three tests staked, one completed

Three wildcats have been scheduled in the district 8 counties of Presidio, Sterling and Winkler. Also, a Dallas firm has completed a Pennsylvanian oil discovery in Howard County.

PRESIDIO VENTURE

The No. 1 Mitchell "423" will be drilled by Miller Brothers, Monahans, 16 miles southeast of Marfa.

The scheduled 3,700-foot wildcat is 1,320 feet from the north, and 467 feet from the east line of section 423, block 8, GH&SA survey.

It is between El Paso Natural's 12,017-foot No. 1 Simpson, two miles to the southwest; and Arco's No. 1 Mitchell, an 8,050-footer, two miles to the northeast. Both are abandoned. It is in a virtually unexplored area.

STERLING WILDCAT

Quanah Petroleum Inc., Dallas, will drill the No. 2 Foster, a 5,200-foot wildcat, 13.5 miles north-northeast of Sterling City.

The venture, also scheduled as a Rose Creek (Wolfcamp) test at 5,050 feet, is 1,980 feet from the south, and 660 feet from the east line of section 61, block 18, SPRR survey.

The project is one mile northeast of the Rose Creek field. By drawing an imaginary line through the producers in the field, this wildcat appears to the on trend.

It is also 5/8-mile northeast of Diamond Shamrock's No. 1 Ellwood Trust, abandoned in 1979 at 7,970 feet.

WINKLER DEEP TEST

Supron Energy Corp., Dallas, has scheduled a 15,800-foot wildcat four miles west of Wink.

Designated the No. 1 University 21-16-A, the location is 1,980 feet from the south, and west line of section 16, block 21, University Lands survey.

The drillsite is in a little drilled pocket, a few miles square, surrounded by dozens of producers and dryholes of varying depths (5,000 to 22,000 feet).

HOWARD DISCOVERY

McCann Corp., Big Spring, has completed the No. 1 Stewart Ranch "B", five miles northeast of Coahoma.

The wildcat pumped 30 barrels of 41 gravity oil in 24 hours, plus 20 barrels of water, through Pennsylvanian perforations between 8,380 and 8,410 feet.

The perforations were acidized with 16,000 gallons, and the gas to oil ratio was 2,666 to 1.

It was drilled to 9,040 feet, with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 8,557 feet, and plugged back to 8,557 feet.

The wellsite is 660 feet from the west, and 1,980 feet from the south line of section 8, block 30, T-1-N, T&P survey.

Dutch move beyond wooden windmills

By JAMES F. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

PETTEN, Netherlands (AP) — Kees Looijesteijn runs a Dutch windmill. Instead of a means of milling flour or hoisting water over dikes, he thinks of it in terms of kilowatt hours.

Looijesteijn is project operator for what the Dutch say is the world's most sophisticated wind turbine. Designed to help test the role of the winds in Holland's energy future, the turbine is packed with measuring devices, from its six acceleration meters in the carbon-fiber blades to the laser beam checking movement of the base.

The camouflage-green windmill, which began whirling June 29, 1981, rises from the sand dunes on the North Sea in classic Dutch countryside, 40 miles north of Amsterdam. The old windmills nestled behind nearby dikes are idle now, no longer used to drain the below-sea-level grazing land.

With an 82.5-foot blade diameter, the turbine is among the smallest of the "big windmills," Looijesteijn said. With this machine, the Dutch hope to analyze the vibration, stress variations on the blade and shaft and other problems that have plagued large turbines elsewhere in the world.

Despite a tradition dating back to the 13th century, the Dutch have been cautious in approaching wind power as a modern source of energy, said Hans Veldhuis, spokesman for the Netherlands Energy Research Center, which is coordinating the project.

He said engineers had found that the technology of smaller wind turbines could not simply be scaled up without encountering new problems: window-rattling vibration, slower response time to wind changes and differing stress on the blades at the high and low points of the blade arc.

"Most countries have built these windmills quickly without installing so many measuring instruments to understand the problems," he said. "Abroad, people wondered why the land of windmills had no big machines. Now they are coming to us with their problems."

The 300-kilowatt turbine is meant to be a measuring and testing device rather than a prototype, and at 8.5 million guilders ($3.8 million) the project cost 20 times the amount of a comparable commercial windmill.

Looijesteijn, called "the miller" by the dozen-member staff, works from a separate control building near the turbine, assisted by a 6-foot-tall bank of computers that both run the mill and measure its performance. Technicians monitor the turbine from video-display terminals, recording stress, blade vibration and distortion and other factors in every weather condition.

Among the innovations are the direct current (DC) generator built into the axis shaft 76 feet above the ground, rather than the usual alternating current (AC) generator. The more flexible DC generator is connected to a separate AC converter in the base, producing household-variety electric current compatible with the national electric grid.

The two carbon fiber blades are stronger yet lighter than metal alloy blades, Looijesteijn said. The blades may be replaced in a couple of years with revolutionary "tip-vane blades" being developed by the Dutch Applied Scientific Research Center in Delft. Tests have indicated the short wings at the end of the blades can more than double the energy production.

But even in blustery Holland, the wind is suitable for power generation only about one third of the time — otherwise it's too weak or too strong.

One concept for storing energy produced by the fickle wind has attracted much attention. Water engineer Lukas Willem Lievense has proposed building a 100-foot-high dike in the Ijsselmeer lake and using wind power to fill up the reservoir. Then the water could be drained through turbines to produce power when needed regardless of wind conditions.

The enormous cost and environmental aspects have prompted skepticism, but the government is studying the plan that would obtain energy by combining two ancient Dutch skills — dikes and windmills.

API awards contracts for marine-related studies

Washington - The American Petroleum Institute has awarded three contracts for studies related to petroleum operations in marine environments.

LGL, Ltd. of Toronto, Canada will study the effects of petroleum operations on cold water marine mammals. Through research of relevant world literature, the study will emphasize the effects of noise from boats, barges, aircraft, seismic exploration and island construction on arctic marine mammals.

Several species including walruses, whales and seals will be evaluated to determine their underwater hearing abilities, attraction to vessels and drilling rigs and capability to adapt to the presence of the petroleum industry.

The Fisheries Research Institute of the University of Washington in Seattle, will determine the effects of crude oil on the homing response in migrating salmon. Environmental impact statements have suggested damage potential.

Laboratory and field studies will provide information on the mechanisms of the physiological reaction to chemical stimulo in salmon and whether or not crude oil spills from outer continental shelf operations interfere with instincts of adult Pacific salmon.

Tetra Tech. Inc., of Pasadena, California, will evaluate the ecological impact of oil spill cleanup operations.

The study will review mechanical and chemical cleanup operations in environments such as coral reefs, kelp beds, rocky beaches, marshes and mangroves and make recommendations on alternative cleanup techniques which minimize ecological impact.

Imports could be reduced

WASHINGTON — The United States could reduce foreign oil consumption by 72 percent within five years through conservation and the increased use of domestic natural gas and coal, the American Gas Association said recently A.G.A. president George H. Lawrence said such a reduction in oil imports "could reduce America's foreign payments by more than $57 billion."

An association analysis found that out of a 1980 total of 7.4 million barrels of curde-oil used per day in non-transportation markets the United States could displace 4.5 million barrels per day with gas and coal. If the U. S. had displaced this 4 million barrels per day of switchable oil use with gas and coal, this would have replaced 70 of our 1980 imports of 6.4 million barrels per day.

The study, titled "Recent and Potential Substitution of Oil With Gas and Coal in Non-Transportation Uses,"reveals that, if the U. S. had utilized available natural gas in 1980 in application that could be quickly converted from oil to gas, oil imports could have been 14 percent lower that year. This could have resulted in a balance of payments savings of $11 billion at an oil price of $34 a barrel.

In 1980, 46 percent of the oil used in the U.S. was consumed for non-transportation purposes. The same year, 39 percent of the oil used in the U. S. was imported.

Last year, 500,000 household and at least 13,000 commercial buildings converted from oil to gas, an earlier study showed.

The study said that oil to gas conversions occurred in spite of gas use restrictions in the Fuel Use Act, Natural Gas Policy Act incremental pricing provisions and local restrictions on gas use. Lawrence said that if gas use restrictions are lifted, gas conversions could accelerate, quickly reducing our oil import vulnerability.

Petroleum imports declining

WASHINGTON — Petroleum imports continued to decline in November compared to a year ago while domestic crude oil production went up, the American Petroleum Institute reported recently.

Total imports (crude oil and products) fell last month to 5,436,000 barrels per day (bpd)-the lowest November level since 1972. Imports were 817,000 barrels per day or 13.1 percent lower than November a year ago.

Domestic crude oil production was 114,000 barrels per day above last November. Since June, production in the lower 48 states has averaged about 90,000 barrels per day above prior-year rates, a sharp reversal of the 300,000 barrels per day year-to-year production decline of the 1970s.

The November statistics also show that total domestic petroleum products supplied dropped 1,108,000 barrels per day or 6.6 percent compared to November a year ago. The decline was due in large part to a 792,000 barrels per day drop in demand for residual fuel oil — almost 32 percent below the already depressed level of November 1980, and 40 percent below November 1978. The decline in industrial production due to the recession and extensive fuel switching of recent years help to explain the magnitude of the drop in demand for residual fuel oil.

Motor gasoline supplied was 32,000 barrels per day above last November, which was unusually low. If last year's figure had been more typical, gasoline supplied this November would have shown a decline of about 4 percent. Distillate supplied was 65,000 barrels per day lower than a year ago. This November was about 12 percent warmer than last year.

Khomeini loyalist killed by gunfire

By SCHEHEREZADE FARAMARZI
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Gunmen in Iran killed a Parliament deputy, firing squads executed three accused bombers and citizens were warned to beware of spies, according to official reports of the Tehran government's latest struggles with its enemies.

Mohammad Taki Behsharat, a loyal follower of Iran's supreme leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, was killed Monday by gunfire from a passing car in Tehran, the official Pars news agency said.

Behsharat, often quoted on Tehran Radio, represented Semiron, a city in the central province of Isfahan. It was not clear what happened to the assassins.

Pars said the three people executed at Tehran's Evin Prison Sunday night were involved in the June 28 bombing of the ruling Islamic Republican Party headquarters that killed 70 people. The party had engineered the ouster of moderate President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr six days earlier.

The executions brought to 1,656 the number officially announced since Bani-Sadr was forced out of office.

Khomeini, in a 30-minute speech carried by Tehran Radio on Monday, said workers should guard against "undedicated or devious" people trying to infiltrate Islamic societies.

"They should be fully watching the behavior of those working in ministries, the army, offices and wherever they are," Khomeini said.

The Islamic government recently began purging the Revolutionary Guards and police forces, which have been among Khomeini's staunchest backers. Khomeini said the institutions had been infiltrated by dissidents and spies.

At the United Nations, a Bahai International Community spokesman said eight leaders of the sect were executed Sunday night in Tehran without charges or trial. He said 80 Bahai followers have been executed in Iran since the Islamic revolution in February 1979.

Bahaists, whose prophets include Moses, Christ, and Mohammad, believe in the unity of all religions. They are a tiny minority sect in Iran, where most people are Moslems.

Arafat thinks U.S. not against Israeli takeover

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat says U.S.-Israeli ties are strong and the squabble over Israel's annexation of the Golan Heights is a "falsity," the As Safir newspaper reported today.

The newspaper, which opposes Arab peace with Israel, quoted remarks made by Arafat Monday after the opening session of the PLO's 60-member Central Council in Damascus, the Syrian capital.

Arafat was quoted as saying he did not believe there are differences of opinion between Israel and United States — a reference to President Reagan's suspension of the new U.S.-Israeli strategic agreement after Israel's Dec. 14 annexation of the Golan. Reagan's move provoked bitter denunciations from Israeli leaders.

The Golan is a strategic plateau on Israel's northeast frontier. Israel seized the area from Syria during the 1967 Middle East war.

As Safir said Arafat said the United States "could not deceive the Palestinian revolution, which firmly believes that this deformed entity (Israel) which survives on American help day by day, cannot operate outside the circle of American decision making."

The PLO, a Beirut-based umbrella group of eight guerrilla factions, is fighting for a Palestinian state on Israeli-occupied land.

Arafat also repeated his belief that Israel would attack southern Lebanon, the PLO's main power base, because the Jewish state recently mobilized three divisions in northern Israel close to the Lebanese border.

A cease-fire has been in effect in Lebanon since July following 10 days of heavy fighting in which Israel bombed PLO headquarters in Beirut and guerrillas shelled northern Israeli settlements.

America has first test-tube baby

By R.D. GERSH
Associated Press Writer

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The birth the first test-tube baby in America, conceived in a laboratory dish, was a "day of hope" for treatment of infertility, says the physician who conducted the procedure.

Elizabeth Jordan Carr, who is one day old today, is "perfectly normal," said Dr. Fred Wirth, the pediatrician attending the delivery by Caesarean section at 7:46 a.m. Monday at Norfolk General Hospital.

Judith Carr, a schoolteacher from Westminster, Mass., had had three abnormal pregnancies, forcing the removal of her Fallopian tubes, which are necessary for normal fertilization.

"This condition made it completely impossible for Mrs. Carr to become pregnant except by the process of in vitro fertilization," said Dr. Howard Jones, who runs the in vitro clinic here with his wife, Dr. Georgeannna Jones. In vitro — "in glass" — means isolated from the living organism.

"WHAT A WONDERFUL Christmas present for them," said Jacqueline Bachman, who moved into the Carr's former home three weeks ago when they moved to another neighborhood. Mrs. Carr, 28, is a school teacher and her husband, Roger, 30, is a mechanical engineer.

Since Drs. Patrick Steptoe and Robert Edwards pioneered the process in England with the birth of Louise Brown in July 1978, about 20 test-tube babies have been born in England and Australia, including one to an American couple in England earlier this year.

"I think the significance of this day lies in the fact that we have demonstrated that the technique of in vitro fertilization ... is applicable in the hands of others. I think this is a day of hope," Jones said.

Five women treated at the Norfolk clinic are pregnant, and there are thousands on the waiting list.

Jones said there is a pool of about 2½ million involuntarily infertile people who could be helped by in vitro fertilization.

THE PROCESS INVOLVES removing a mature egg from the mother's ovary, fertilizing it with the father's sperm in a small glass dish in the laboratory and transferring it to the mother's uterus about 36 hours later. If the embryo successfully implants itself, the pregnancy proceeds normally.

Dr. Mason Andrews, who performed the Caesarean section on Mrs. Carr, said that had nothing to do with the method of fertilization.

"We anticipated a normal newborn, and that's exactly what we got," Wirth said.

Jones said the work done to improve in vitro fertilization, used on women whose Fallopian tubes are missing or irreparably blocked, could lead to better treatment of other types of infertility.

If You Know What An Owner/Operator Is...

You Know It's Worth $2,500 To Become One.

The only thing stopping a lot of good truckers from becoming owner/operators is the tractor cost. That's why Aero-Mayflower developed a new tractor lease program. It's a way for owner/operators to get started. All it takes to begin is $2,500. As an owner/operator with Mayflower you'll get:
1. 56% of the line haul ($560 out of every $1,000.)
2. If the fuel goes up, so does your fuel surcharge.
3. Training (if you need it) at our expense.
4. Your own business with a very successful company behind you.
We'd like to tell you more. Call 1-800-428-4220 (in INDIANA call 1-800-382-1212) between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Eastern Standard Time.

Tar Heels nip Arkansas, 31-27, in Gator Bowl

North Carolina holds off Razorbacks' fourth quarter rally

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Shrouded in obscurity by a dense fog and a potent North Carolina offense in the second half, Arkansas appeared ready to hand the 11th-ranked Tar Heels an easy Gator Bowl victory.

BUT THE Razorbacks, led by eternal optimist Lou Holtz, staged a fourth-quarter comeback and forced the North Carolina defense to come up with the key plays in a 31-27 victory.

"I'm sure a lot of people thought the game was over early in the fourth quarter, but I never felt that way," Holtz said. "We managed to recover an onside kick and then got a lift from a couple of big pass plays."

Junior tailback Kelvin Bryant rushed for 148 yards on 27 carries and one touchdown, while freshman Ethan Horton, switched from quarterback to tailback when Bryant and backup Tyrone Anthony were hurt in mid-season, ran for 144 yards and two scores on 27 carries.

Combined with a 1-yard sneak by quarterback Rod Elkins, North Carolina ran up a 31-10 lead with 7:29 left, enough to have sent some of the Razorback faithful out into a night so thick with fog that the public address announcer suggested that the officials would switch from whistles to foghorns.

But with the aid of penalties and passes by freshman quarterback Brad Taylor, Arkansas marched back down the field and scored with 5:03 remaining on a 1-yard run by Jessie Clark. A two-point conversion pass closed the Razorback deficit to 31-18.

BRUCE LAHAY'S onside kick was recovered by Ed Jackson and the Razorbacks parlayed the strategy into a 7-yard scoring pass from Taylor to Darryl Mason with 2:44 remaining. Suddenly, the rout was a contest at 31-25.

"I was a little nervous," Bryant said, fearing that his game-high performance would come in a losing effort. "I'm just glad the defense came through in the clutch."

North Carolina took the ensuing kickoff at its own 5. After being pinned in by the Razorbacks, punter Jeff Hayes elected to run out of the end zone for the safety instead of yielding ground for a last-gasp Arkansas attack.

After Gary Anderson returned Hayes' free kick 29 yards to the Tar Heel 49, North Carolina's defense did its job. The key play was a sack by seldom-used Ronnie Snipes, a freshman nose guard who had been in on several plays earlier.

"The center tried to pick me up," Snipes said of his pass rush which sent Taylor reeling for a 17-yard loss. "But it was a little too late by the time he got to me."

Neither Holtz, who is now 2-3 against North Carolina, nor Tar Heel Coach Dick Crum, now 5-0 in post-season play, would blame the fog for offensive or defensive problems.

"The fog was on both sides of the field," Holtz said, "though I think it's easier to hand off in the fog than pass in it. But we have no excuses."

Elkins basically agreed about the problems with passing in high humidity and low visibility.

"It made the ball a little wet. It was easy to grip but it just flew through the air," Elkins said. "I didn't put too much on my throw at all and it was taking off."

THE FOG also played havoc with ABC-TV's national telecast. Starting in the second half, viewers saw more field level and end zone shots due to the height of the press box camera angles and the worsening conditions.

North Carolina finished its season at 10-2 and also took its third consecutive bowl victory, a first in Atlantic Coast Conference history. The Tar Heels are also 3-1 in Gator Bowl play.

Arkansas closed at 8-4.

Arkansas' freshman quarterback Brad Taylor (16) finds the going tough as he meets North Carolina tackle William Fuller at the line of scrimmage during Gator Bowl action Monday.

Schlichter, Meyers shoulder their team's Liberty hopes

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — For Art Schlichter, pro football is just a game away. It's an entirely different story for Eddie Meyers.

First, though, they will carry the hopes of their teams in the Liberty Bowl Wednesday night.

Schlichter will be starting his 48th consecutive game for Ohio State, 8-3-0. He shattered virtually every school record in rolling up 8,713 total yards.

DESPITE MISSING most of three games, Meyers accounted for 1,318 yards to rank as the nation's No.5 rusher this fall as the tailback for Navy, 7-3-1.

Because of his size, 6-foot-2 and 200 pounds, Schlichter, equally adept at running or passing, figures to be a first-round choice in next spring's National Football League draft.

The Baltimore Colts are said to be considering a trade for Bert Jones, which would fuel their interest in Schlichter.

"Baltimore would be all right with me," said Schlichter. "I'm not picky. I've watched (Johnny) Unitas and Jones. They have been two great quarterbacks."

Schlichter, however, does have one desire — that he be drafted by a pro team that plays on natural grass.

"That's what I played on down on the farm. They didn't raise turf down there. Grass gives me a better feel about the ball," said the son of a Bloomingburg, Ohio, farmer.

HIS AERIAL performance on grass in three previous bowl games have been devastating: 47 completions in 76 attempts for 804 yards and four touchdowns. Still, Ohio State lost Gator, Rose and Fiesta bowl games.

Meyers has been one of the college sport's premier runners as a senior. He has broken three Navy school records with 298 yards against Syracuse, 43 rushes against Boston College and his 1,318 seasonal yards.

However, his automatic commission in the Navy means Meyers will not be available professionally until the 1986 NFL draft.

He realizes the odds are long on such a late transition.

Meyers believes Roger Staubach was the only Navy performer to make it in the NFL. "But he had to serve only four years, he had the chance to play a good bit of football while he was in the Navy and he was a quarterback. It's easier, I think, for a quarterback to make the transition than a running back," he said.

THE NAVAL Academy has relaxed some of its regulations to permit Meyers to play in the Hula and Japan all-star bowls after the Liberty Bowl.

Upon graduation this spring, Meyers says he will request duty at the Norfolk, Va., base. It's one of only two bases that still offer football, he said.

University of North Carolina's Matt Doherty, left, and Penn State's David Griffin battle for a loose ball during first half action Monday night in the first round of the Cable Car Classic. The Tar Heels eged the Nittny Lions in overtime to retain their No. 1 spot in the weekly college basketball rankings.

Bucs will face an angry Tony Dorsett

DALLAS (AP) — National Football League playoff games normally bring out the best in Tony Dorsett.

The classy Dallas tailback has rushed for 833 yards on 162 carries for an average of 5.08 yards per carry in postseason games with the Cowboys.

Dorsett has scored seven playoff touchdowns in his six years with the club.

"A playoff game is money time," Dorsett says. "That's what you work hard all year for — a chance to produce in the playoffs."

Dorsett goes into Saturday's National Conference divisional playoff against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers with added incentive. He's angry at himself for two costly fumbles in Dallas' regular season-ending 13-10 overtime loss to the New York Giants.

"I'm still upset about it," Dorsett said.

Dorsett twice fumbled pitchouts that the Giants recovered, costing Dallas field position and eventually the game.

He had lost only three fumbles all year prior to the contest.

"The Dallas fans have been great to me this year and I'm going to make it up to them — I owe it to them," Dorsett said.

Dorsett also lost the NFL rushing title to New Orleans' George Rogers by gaining 39 yards rushing against the Giants. Dorsett lost to Rogers by 28 yards —1,674 to 1,646.

"Winning the rushing title wasn't my No.1 priority," Dorsett said. "Going to the Super Bowl is."

Dorsett has become a team leader for the Cowboys this year and was named offensive capdain by Coach Tom Landry.

Dorsett worked extremely hard in the offseason for the first time.

Dallas is 29-1 in games where Dorsett rushed for 100 yards or more.

The Bucs and Cowboys collide at noon Saturday in Texas Stadium. Dallas is 2-0 in the short series between the two teams.

Cavemen club Rebels

CLOVIS, N.M. — The Midland Lee Rebels felt the sting of defeat for the fourth consecutive time as they dropped a 61-55 decision to Carlsbad in the opening round of the Clovis Holiday Tournament here Monday.

The Rebels (9-6) jumped out to a 20-17 lead in the first quarter but lost it in the second as the Cavemen (10-1) came back to take a 29-27 lead at the half. Carlsbad increased its lead to 42-37 at the end of three and added one more point to their advantage by the end of the game.

A key to the Carlsbad victory was the shooting at the free throw line. The Cavemen connected on 19-of-21 attempts while the Rebels settled for only three-of-five and didn't go to the charity line at all in the second half.

"We played pretty well," said Lee coach Paul Stueckler. "We beat them by 10 points from the field but we didn't shoot a free throw at all in the second half. We made three-of-five and they were 19-of-21.

"They've got a good team," continued Coach Stueckler. "They're rated No. 1 in New Mexico but I don't know if that means anything or not. I saw Clovis play last night and they looked just as good."

Three Carlsbad players broke into double figures to set the scoring pace for the Cavemen with Dick Hughes leading the way with 19 followed by Orlando Garza with 14 and Osby King with 10. For the Rebels, Alvin Dunson was high man with 16 points while Randy Pepper added 10.

In today's action, Lee played Clovis Junior Varsity, which lost to Alamogordo in the opening round, at 3:30 p.m.

Other tournament winners were Lovington over Las Vegas Robertson, 97-70 and host Clovis over Levelland, 100-70. Today, Levelland played Las Vegas at 1:30; Carlsbad faces Alamogordo at 6:30 and Clovis against Lovington at 8:30.

Farias' bucket at buzzer saves Rebels in tourney

SLATON — Sophomore Felicia Farias dropped in a layup at the buzzer to lift Midland Lee to a 65-63 win over Levelland in the first round of the Slaton Girls Invitational Basketball Tournament here Monday. The Rebels now stand 11-4 on the season and have reeled off six wins in a row. Levelland falls to 9-2 and had a nine-game winning streak snapped by the Maroon Express.

Lee got off to a shaky start. At the end of the first quarter, the Rebels trailed 18-15. At intermission, Lee lagged 35-33 after outscoring Levelland 18 to 17 in the second quarter.

The Rebels suffered a severe blow early in the second half when leading scorer Yshun King was whistled to the bench with her fifth personal foul.

Shun Harris and Rozena McCabe combined to take up the slack of King's loss. Harris tossed in a game-high 23 points and McCabe added a season-high 13 points. King ended with eight points while Farias canned a career-high seven points for the Rebels. Lisa Logsdon led Levelland with 21 points, 11 of them coming from the charity stripe. Annie Davis contributed 14 points to the losers' attack.

Lee fell by behind by four, 50-48, after three periods of action before rallying in the final eight minutes of play. The Rebels outscored Levelland 19 to 13 in the final stanza to cap the come-from-behind victory.

Coach Shirley Stephenson said, "We haven't been out on the court for about five days but I though we played pretty well. I was glad to be on the winning end."

Lee plays again today at 5:15 p.m. when the Rebels tangle with Canyon in a second-round matchup of the 16-team basketball carnivel. The Rebels lost to Canyon by 13 points earlier this season in a game played in Amariilo.

Stephenson stated, "Hopefully we can do better. I think we have learned some things since we lost in Amarillo."

NC still No. 1; Shockers move up

By The Associated Press

North Carolina was accustomed to the top spot in the Associated Press' college basketball poll, but Wichita State was new to the feeling of being No.2. Both teams, however, felt that scary feeling of a near upset.

The latest balloting of a national panel of sportswriters and broadcasters released Monday had the Tar Heels on top for the fifth straight week following their 82-69 win over previously unbeaten and then No.2 Kentucky in a nationally-televised game last Saturday.

KENTUCKY DROPPED to fourth and the Shockers of Wichita State moved up one notch to assume the second spot in the rankings.

Both North Carolina and Wichita State received scares in tournament action Monday night, as the Tar Heels escaped with a 56-50 overtime victory over Penn State in the first round of the Cable Car Classic and Wichita State just got by Fullerton State, 60-57, in first-round play in the Rainbow Classic.

The Tar Heels, 7-0, received 50 of 53 first-place votes and 1,055 points to easily outdistance Wichita State, 8-0, which received two first-place votes and 988 points.

Virginia, fourth last week, garnered 957 points in moving up one notch to third. Kentucky, 6-1, received 834 points.

Arkansas, 7-0, received the other first-place vote and 748 points in advancing from sixth to fifth. San Francisco, Missouri, DePaul, Minnesota and Iowa round out the Top Ten.

SAN FRANCISCO, which won three games last week to improve its record to 10-0, moved up one notch with 725 points. Missouri, 669, and moved from ninth to seventh with victories over Youngstown State and Alabama-Birmingham, while DePaul, 632, rose from 13th to ninth after its 75-68 nationally televised defeat of Louisville last Saturday.

Minnesota, a 62-52 loser to Kansas State last Monday night, dropped from fifth to ninth, receiving 550 points. Iowa, 6-1, remained 10th after a week off from action, receiving 537 points.

The Second Ten is comprised of Indiana, Alabama, Tulsa, Louisville, Oregon State, UCLA, Georgetown, Houston, Villanova and North Carolina State.

Last week's Second Ten were: Indiana, Alabama, DePaul, Tulsa, UCLA, Oregon State, Georgetown, Houston, Alabama-Birmingham and Villanova.

NORTH CAROLINA State is the only newcomer to the poll replacing Alabama-Birmingham, which lost to Missouri 98-80 Sunday night in the first round of the Winston Tire Classic.

Green Bay rehires Starr for two more years

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — The Green Bay Packers' hierarchy, weary of long unfinished rebuilding programs, has given Coach Bart Starr an unmistakable win-or-else mandate along with a new two-year contract.

Robert J. Parins, the National Football League club's chief executive office, said Monday that he and the executive committee's six other members "believe that reasonable success is foreseeable with our present head coach, and probably an addition to the staff."

BUT PARINS also said Starr's seven-year coaching record (39-65-2), including a season-ending 28-3 thrashing Dec. 20 by the New York Jets that cost the Packers an NFL playoff berth, weighed as heavily in the decision as did the team's second-half turnabout.

Gophers roll over Army in impressive fashion

By The Associated Press

It was simply a case of one team having all the troops.

That team was the Minnesota Gophers, who marched all over Army 79-37 in the opening round of Pillsbury Classic Monday night. The ninth-ranked Gophers' victory was the most impressive on a busy night of college basketball festivals, classics and holiday tournaments.

Gary Holmes paced 6-1 Minnesota with 17 points.

Arizona moved into the championship game with a 64-59 decision over Montana State. Gregg Cook and Jeff Collins combined for 34 points and led a 14-2 spurt in a four-minute span of the second half to put the Wildcats on top.

IN OTHER tournament action involving ranked teams, No. 1 North Carolina edged Penn State 56-50 in overtime in the first round of the Cable Car Classic in Santa Clara, Calif.; No. 2 Wichita State nipped Fullerton State 70-67 and No. 20 North Carolina State beat Michigan State 67-46 in the opening round of the Rainbow Classic in Hawaii; No. 7 Missouri took Southern California 65-58 to win the Winston Tire Classic; 12th-ranked Alabama routed Delaware 84-62 in the Best Holiday Classic in Portland, Me.; No. 19 Villanova edged No. 11 Indiana in the ECAC Holiday Festival in New York; No. 15 Oregon State fell to unbeaten Idaho 71-49 in the semifinals of the Far West Classic in Portland, Ore., and 18th-rated Houston edged Purdue 59-58 in the opening round of the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans.

The Tar Heels, 7-0, who slumbered through much of its game with Penn State, won when Sam Perkins hit two free throws with two seconds left in overtime.

Perkins' 23 points led the Tar Heels who will meet Santa Clara, which beat Texas Christian 78-63, in the finals.

Tony Martin hit four free throws in the final 24 seconds to preserve Wichita State's eighth straight triumph. Antoine Carr led the Shockers with 20 points and Martin had 17.

Forward Scott Parzych scored 18 points to lead NC State to its victory over Michigan State.

Center Steve Stipanovich scored 15 points and grabbed eight rebounds for Winston Tire winner Missouri. Guard Jon Sundvold, the tournament's most valuable player, added 14 points and six rebounds for the 8-0 Tigers.

ALABAMA STORMED to a 48-22 halftime lead and coasted, with Bobby Lee Hurt pouring in 24 points, including several crowd-pleasing dunks. The Crimson Tide takes on host Maine, an 80-64 winner over New Hampshire in the Best Holiday finals.

Villanova, which trailed Indiana by 12 points in the second half, spurted to victory as freshman Ed Pinckney hit for 22 points. A game-tying basket in the final six seconds by the Hoosiers' Steve Bouchie was disallowed because teammate Randy Wittman had stepped on the end line just before passing to Bouchie.

The Wildcats take on Big East rival St. John's, N.Y., in the Holiday Festival final tonight. St. John's edged Kansas 76-75 on Kevin Williams' three-point play with 26 seconds remaining in the opener.

Surprising Idaho's romp over Oregon State began early as the Vandals burst to a 10-1 lead. Ken Owens had 22 points to lead Idaho into the Far West finals against Oregon, which edged Portland 69-68.

No. 18 Houston, with Rob Williams scoring 19 points — including two crucial free throws with just over a minute to play — squeaked by Purdue. The Boilermakers had two chances to win in the final minute but Kevin Stallings twice missed jump shots.

The Cougars take on Louisiana State for the Sugar Bowl title. LSU knocked off Wake Forest 70-64 as Howard Carter put in 20 points.

In a non-tournament game, No. 8 DePaul beat Illinois State 74-58. Terry Cummings had 24 points and Skip Dillard added 18 as DePaul upped its lifetime mark against Illinois State to 10-1.

Toledo and Illinois advanced to the finals of the Blade City Glass Classic. The host Rockets bombed Yale 90-68 and Illinois beat Bowling Green 56-51.

Rhode Island defeated Arkansas-Little Rock 83-68 and will face run-and-gun Lamar, which scooted past Western Illinois 83-57, in the All-College Tournament in Oklahoma City.

HOST MARQUETTE moved into the Milwaukee Classic championship game against Arizona State. The Warriors rode Glenn Rivers' 24 points to a 96-84 decision over East Tennessee State and the Sun Devils upset previously unbeaten California-Irvine 88-73.

Arizona State held Cal-Irvine All-American Kevin Magee to 16 points, 14 below his average.

Vanderbilt overpowered Austin Peay 74-55 and takes on Alaska-Anchorage, which eased past Drezel 63-55, in the Music City Invitational finals at Nashville, Tenn.

Texas A&M beat Miami, Ohio 73-53 to earn a spot in the finals of the Las Vegas Classic against the host Runnin' Rebels, who blew by Loyola, Calif., 92-75.

Northern Iowa made the championship game of its own tourney by taking Cornell 82-70 and will meet Nebraska, a 63-57 winner over Air Force.

At the Senior Bowl in Mobile, Ala., South Alabama beat Grambling 91-69 and plays American, which downed N.C.Wilmington 70-59, for the crown.

Sikma's clutch shot lifts Sonics to victory

SEATTLE (AP) — It wasn't that the Golden State Warriors forgot about Seattle center Jack Sikma when he let loose a tie-breaking basket with one second remaining on the shot clock and only a half minute left in the game.

"You can't fault our defense on him. We had two or three men right on him and two hands in his face, and he still made the clutch shot," said Golden State Coach Al Attles, whose Warriors dropped a 104-100 decision to the Sonics Monday night.

The Indiana Pacers beat the New Jersey Nets 103-95 in the only other National Basketball Association game.

Sikma, who shared game scoring honors with teammate Gus Williams, hit 20 of his 26 points in the second half. World Free paced the Warriors with 25 points.

Pacers 103, Nets 95

George Johnson scored 11 points in the fourth quarter as the Pacers, who trailed 86-73 with 10:16 remaining, outscored the Nets 30-9, including a 15-2 streak. Johnson's three-point play with 1:30 left gave the Pacers a 96-93 lead.

Johnny Davis paced Indiana with 19 points.

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Newton High School running back Anthony Byerly was in fast company today after being honored as Texas' oustanding high school football player by the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce.

Byerly gained 3,074 yards, averaged 8.9 yards per carry and scored 29 touchdowns in his senior year for the Class 3A school.

Byerly says he has not decided where he will attend college, but said he has narrowed it down to either Louisiana State University, Texas, the University of Southern California or UCLA.

Announcing Midland National's Floating Rate 18-Month CD for

THE NEW IRA:

The difference between simply retiring, and retiring well.

Ring Out the Old.
IRA's (Individual Retirement Accounts) have been around for a couple of years. Originally, IRA's were designed to provide people with tax deductions now, and additional income beyond Social Security benefits upon retirement. Unfortunately, only a limited group of people qualified.

Ring Up the New.
Under the New IRA, every working American is eligible. Financial consultants call it Congress' greatest gift to working Americans in 50 years. Indeed, the New IRA could mean the difference between simply retiring, and retiring well.

Beginning January 1, 1982, you can invest up to $2,000 ($2,250 per couple with one working spouse; $4,000 with both husband and wife employed) in an IRA and deduct this investment on your income tax return. By the time a 25-year-old reaches retirement at 65, for example, he or she could retire with over a million dollars.

Age	$4,000 Annually*	$2,250 Annually*	$2,000 Annually*
25	$3,436,569	$1,933,070	$1,718,285
30	$1,933,852	$1,087,792	$ 966,926
35	$1,081,170	$ 608,158	$ 540,585
40	$ 597,336	$ 336,001	$ 298,668
45	$ 322,795	$ 181,572	$ 161,397
50	$ 167,013	$ 93,945	$ 83,506
55	$ 78,618	$ 44,223	$ 39,309
60	$ 28,461	$ 16,009	$ 14,230
65	$ 4,480	$ 2,520	$ 2,240

Based on an average rate of 12%. Federal regulations require a substantial penalty for early withdrawal.
Future value of dollars invested with annual deposits, annual compounding and annual interest rate of 12%. This table is for example purposes only. Actual rates, investment amounts, frequency of deposits and method of compounding interest may vary.

The Midland National Advantage.
To broaden your investment option, Midland National is introducing an 18-Month Certificate of Deposit for the New IRA. You simply open this IRA with a CD (minimum of $500), and you may add to it with deposits of $100 or more without extending maturity. The floating weekly rate is tied to the 6-Month Money Market CD.

Real Security vs. Social Security.
Midland National's 18-Month CD for the New IRA, unlike Social Security, is insured by the FDIC. And it's a sure way to get the tax break you need now, while assuring yourself a comfortable retirement later. For more information, call our IRA specialist, Venita Gaston, Assistant Cashier, 685-5292.

Herzog ready to cancel Smith deal

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Saying "no .230 hitter is worth what he's asking," St. Louis Cardinals' Manager-General Manager Whitey Herzog says he's ready to give up on a deal for San Diego's All-Star shortstop Ozzie Smith.

Herzog flew to San Diego Monday in hopes to making headway in the stalled deal that would send St. Louis shortstop Garry Templeton to the Padres for Smith.

But, after six hours of discussion with Smith and his agent Ed Gottlieb, Herzog said, "it looks as if we'll have to cancel the trade."

"Ozzie is a great fielder and baserunner. I'd like to have him, but if he doesn't want to come to St. Louis, I don't want him. No .230 hitter is worth what he's asking."

HERZOG SAID Smith contends he is making $500,000 a year in endorsements in San Diego "and we're not willing to match what they are asking."

Smith, who signed a one-year, no-trade contract for $300,000 a year last year, has said he will reject the trade.

Western banks have to wait on word from Poland

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — A Western banking spokesman says there has been no word on whether Poland will meet its Jan. 31 deadline to pay $500 million in interest, and Western banks will "just have to sit back and wait."

Guido Condrau, vice director of the Swiss Bank Corp. and coordinator of a task force of Poland's Western creditors, said Monday a new loan-repayment pact before the first of the year was "out of the question."

Poland had agreed to make the payment on interest due on $2.4 billion in loans by the end of the year as the final agreement for signing of a tentative loan repayment schedule worked out with Western banks last June.

Condrau, however, suggested that Western banks would not declare Poland in default immediately and said there had been no communications since martial law was declared Dec. 13.

The banks, some analysts have said, could wait well into 1982 before making a decision on writing off the loans if the debts are not paid.

Poland, whose economy is near bankruptcy, owes about $25 billion to the West — about 60 percent to banks and the rest to governments.

Poland's Handlowy foreign trade bank asked 22 banks for a six-month, $350 million loan on Dec. 15 to help pay the year-end interest charges, but there has been no announcement that the loan would be granted.

Pravda says Poles should cut party

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The leading Soviet newspaper hinted today that the Polish Communist Party should purge its ranks, another sign the Kremlin wants Poland's leaders to drastically reduce party membership.

Pravda, published daily by the Soviet Communist Party, quoted Communists and workers in Poland as welcoming imposition of martial law Dec. 13 and criticizing the failure of the Polish party to deal with the independent Solidarity union, which is now banned.

"The extremist Solidarity leaders have done much damage to their country's economy," Pravda correspondent Oleg Losoto wrote from Warsaw.

"Many people have been deceived by their demogogical agitation and have given in to psychological pressure and open terror. The consequences of these activities are ubiquituous," Pravda said.

"Not everything has returned to normal yet, and there are problems in the party itself. It is known that not all of its members and organizations have passed the difficult examination of acute political struggle," Pravda said.

"The restoration and strengthening of the party's combat ranks ...are among the tasks that must be accomplished by the Polish United Workers' (Communist) Party," it said.

Pravda quoted Z. Rothe, identified as head of the party organization at a Warsaw engineering plant, as saying, "We believe that the measures taken by the government have helped improve the public mood and restore the pace of production.

"Now much depends on our resolute actions. It is known that not all (party members) passed the test ..."

Western diplomats said the article suggested that an internal party shake-up was already underway.

"This means that some of the party members just haven't made it," said one diplomat who requested anonymity. "They are obviously thinking of sifting through the party and getting rid of some members. The phrasing means that some changes in the membership are already going on."

Your contributions are tax-free until you retire, when you usually have a lower tax base. The "Million Dollar Timetable" shows you just how fast your retirement funds can grow.
