Bush denounces calls for reprisals against Chinese

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration, saying the Chinese government has "murdered many, many of its citizens," on Friday denounced calls for reprisals against the democracy demonstrators.

The administration also said the reappearance of Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping in public does not settle the question of who bears responsibility for ordering last weekend's bloody crackdown on civilians in Tiananmen Square.

"You can watch television and see who the government is, but in terms of individual actions and motivations... we don't know," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

But he added that "I don't think anyone doubts" that Deng and Prime Minister Li Peng are now in charge of the overall government in Beijing.

President Bush is still waiting for Deng to return a phone call the U.S. leader made to no avail on Thursday.

■ Evacuation of foreigners from China almost complete, related story — 2A, 8C

"The phone call remains placed and we'll see if he returns our call," Fitzwater told reporters. Deng appeared in public Friday for the first time since May 16 to attend a ceremony at which he saluted military leaders for carrying out the crackdown on the "counter-revolutionaries."

The number of Americans in China has dropped precipitously in the past week in the wake of the turmoil and Secretary of State James A. Baker III's warning that U.S. citizens should leave the country.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler told reporters slightly more than 1,500 Americans remain in China, down from about 8,800 estimated by U.S. officials to be in the country a week ago.

Ms. Tutwiler said Beijing "is still an armed camp." An administration source familiar with intelligence estimates said the number of Chinese troops in and around the capital city had grown to approximately 340,000, up from the figure of 200,000 estimated this past week.

Fitzwater used some of the strongest language yet to express U.S. condemnation of the military actions that claimed hundreds and possibly thousands of lives last weekend.

First Contra leader leaves exile to return to Nicaragua

MIAMI (AP) — The first Nicaraguan Contra leader willing to return home to test the Sandinistas' commitment to democracy left exile here Friday, saying he hopes to help end the bloody fighting that has divided his country.

Cesar

Alfredo Cesar, the only one of seven Contra directors to make the trip, departed Miami aboard an Eastern Airlines flight Friday evening. He planned to arrive in Nicaragua on Sunday morning.

Cesar said he goes home wary of the Sandinistas' sincerity in conducting February's scheduled presidential elections, but willing to test his former enemy.

"I've been in exile seven years and it's pretty hard to assess the Sandinistas' intentions," Cesar told The Associated Press. "I do return with good will, and I hope that this is going to be the final solution for the conflict in Nicaragua."

The anti-communist rebels' other six directors refused to bow to pressure from the Bush administration and Latin American leaders to return, and earlier this week criticized Cesar.

"We think it divides the opposition," Aristides Sanchez said. Cesar said the Contra leadership must agree to disagree.

"I told them that I respect their decision, and that I hope they will respect my decision," Cesar said.

Cesar said he and his family want to return to Nicaragua because now it is the only place he can continue battling for freedom and democracy.

He and 15 other people, most associated with Nicaragua's Social Democratic Party, are meeting in Guatemala City and will fly to Managua on Sunday aboard a plane provided by Venezuela's President Carlos Andres Perez.

"What I plan to do is mobilize the people in Nicaragua to put on pressure to make sure the elections are going to be fair," he said.

He is not expecting a smooth political campaign.

"That's inevitable — we're coming out of eight years of civil war, you can't have it perfect," Cesar said.

The Sandinistas have harassed opposition politicians by interfering with their communication and transportation, and limiting their access to the media, he said. That alone will not cause him to give up, however.

"The key issue is that we can't have widespread fraud" in February's vote counting, Cesar said.

He said internal opposition groups will agree on a single candidate to run against the Sandinistas but insists he will not be that person.

"I will be devoting my time to grassroots politics, organizing the party nationwide," he said. "I don't have plans to run for office, and I will support a single candidate from the opposition."

Despite his willingness to jump into the political process, he does not favor disbanding the thousands of U.S.-supported Contra troops in Honduran camps just over the Nicaraguan border.

He said the United States should continue providing non-lethal aid to the rebels, although he opposes military aid at this time.

Wagner & Brown gas claim award set at $11.7 million

From Staff Reports

An independent three-member arbitration panel has awarded $11.7 million to Wagner & Brown II, a partnership owned by Midland oilmen Jack E. Brown and Cyril Wagner, on a take-or-pay natural gas claim against Valero Natural Gas Partners L.P.

Wagner & Brown had sought $19.7 million plus attorneys' fees and interest for natural gas available that Valero did not take during 1987.

The arbitration board's award includes about $1.3 million in interest.

Williamson predicts flexible fuel future for U.S.

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

America can look toward a flexible fuel future for transportation and electrical generation. That was the message delivered Thursday to a meeting of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association by Barry Williamson, director of mineral management for the Department of Interior.

Williamson

Williamson, a former Midlander, said President Bush's energy policy called for a fuel mix of oil, natural gas, nuclear and coal for electrical generation, and a flexible fuel system that would include: gasoline, methanol, ethanol and compressed natural gas.

He said natural gas was the "bright spot" in the energy future of America. "Natural gas is clean-burning and domestically produced. It will be America's fuel of the future."

The Arkansas native said compressed natural gas and other alternative fuels would play a role in a flexible fuel future but predicted they could not be "forced into the market."

He lists expensive conversions and infrastructures as two of the main factors offering resistance to alternative fuels. "We will have to get help from the market," he emphasized.

"Right now, oil is the cheapest thing going — even cheaper than conservation."

He explained that it would cost up to $11 a gallon just to enforce a 45 mpg fuel requirement for vehicles, by the time conversions and enforcement were added in.

"We will be able to sell oil for as long as any of us cares to work," he said, confessing that alternative fuels would be slow in coming.

But, he said a flexible fuel system would be a part of America's energy future because of the growing dependency on foreign oil and environmental problems. "About 100 cities are not out of compliance with EPA restraints," he said.

"We are now approaching 50 percent dependency on foreign crude. When we reach that level, it will get a lot of attention in Washington," he predicted.

He explained that America now utilizes two thirds of its petroleum consumption for transportation fuel, and that conversion of many of the 200 million vehicles on the road could help back out foreign crude oil.

He said that natural gas could play a major role in backing out oil imports by replacing gasoline and fuel oil.

"The trick for the natural gas industry will be to keep natural gas cheap enough so that it is not backed out of the market by coal."

The former Midland lawyer and oilman expects his department will have a hand in bringing much of the new natural gas into the market, since it oversees mineral leasing on the federally controlled outer continental shelf. Individual states have jurisdiction to three miles out.

"The OCS looks good for future discoveries. We expect that in the future one-third of all oil and gas discoveries will come from offshore," he said, noting that one-eighth of all natural gas is now produced offshore.

Williamson is proud of the fact that his department is the biggest non-tax revenue maker for the federal government. With a staff of 2,080 and a budget of $200 million, the Department of Mineral Management brings in $4 billion annually to the federal government.

"There are a lot of people who would like to delay offshore exploration and development because of the Valdez oil spill, but they have to be made aware that there is a big difference between an oil spill in Alaska and the OCS program."

Texans to exceed New Yorkers by 2000

HOUSTON (AP) — The state's population is predicted to exceed New York's by the end of the century despite significant population declines in Texas during the past few years, according to U.S. Census Bureau estimates.

Texas' population is predicted by the Census Bureau to grow 21.1 percent during the rest of the century to exceed the number of residents well past that of New York.

New York now holds the No. 2 rank in terms of population, while California is the most populous state in the nation. The bureau expects California to keep that distinction.

Demographer Campbell Gibson said the bureau expects 20,211,000 people will be living in Texas by the year 2000, compared to 17,986,000 in New York.

According to the latest estimates, Texas now has 16,841,000 residents.

Census Bureau analysts, however, cautioned that the projections may be optimistic because they are based on growth trends that occurred between 1980 and 1986 and therefore do not include events of the last two years, when fallout from the decline in oil prices was most severe.

"We only really had one year of the downturn (included in statistics)," Signe Wetrogan of the bureau's population projections branch told The Houston Post's Washington bureau.

Still, the experts believe their predictions basically will prove correct.

"If I had to make a wager, I would bet the Texas population will still exceed New York's by the year 2000," Gibson said. "Texas could still grow a lot more slowly and still exceed New York."

Wetrogan said that in making the population projections, she already included factors to "temper down" the effect of Texas' phenomenal growth in the early 1980s, which reached a high of 4.1 percent between 1981 and 1982. More than 430,000 people moved into the state in that oil boom year, the largest "immigration" of the decade.

Between 1986 and 1987, experts said, 86,000 more people moved out of Texas than moved in. Last year, the figure grew to 124,000.

But Texas still managed to register an 18 percent growth rate between the years 1980 and 1987, making it the fifth-fastest growing state in the country.

Treasurer candidate says Texas money should work for Texas

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A Houston financial planner said the state should do more to stop the "flight of capital" out of Texas as she announced Friday she will run for state treasurer.

"I think Texas money needs to work for Texas," Karen Friend, 47, said at a Capitol press conference. "It needs to stay in our state. It needs to be invested and earn a high return and a percentage of it needs to come back to our community to stimulate our economic recovery," she said.

Friend would look into ways the state might help overcome a "lending gap" that limits economic diversification efforts. "Bankers' hands are tied by regulations so that bankers are having difficulty loaning money to small businesses," she said.

The "linked deposit" program that offers discounts on state deposits to banks that reinvest the money in Texas businesses is an area she proposed to expand.

The state encouraged investments could help efforts to diversify the economy and reduce the state's reliance on agriculture and oil and gas, she said.

Ms. Friend had no plans to change programs developed by Treasurer Ann Richards, who is preparing to run for governor. "She has built a firm foundation for us to continue," Ms. Friend said.

"Ann Richards...has brought the treasury into the 20th century," Friend said. "I intend to take it into the 21st century."

Ms. Friend has worked for two years as a financial planner with Houston Executive Financial Group. She said she has handled long-term investment portfolios for individuals and small businesses. "Thus, my experience in managing large sums of money qualifies me for this office," she said.

She had few details of how she would change the state's investment practices, but said she would seek advice from bankers and economists. "When it comes to economics, I don't claim to have all the answers," she said. "However, I am experienced enough to know what questions need to be asked and what issues need to be raised."

Ms. Friend was born in Mercedes in South Texas, grew up bilingual and was graduated from La Feria High School. A 1964 graduate of the University of Texas, she worked several years as a journalist and founded a weekly newspaper, The Independent, in Liberty.

She was a State Democratic Executive Committee member from the 4th Senatorial District in Southeast Texas from 1974 to 1976, a delegate to the national Democratic Convention in 1976 and a delegate to every state Democratic convention from 1984 to 1984.

She is divorced and has two sons, aged 17 and 22.

Canadian fugitive arrested in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — One of Canada's 10 most wanted fugitives, an alleged rapist who escaped from a Toronto mental institution eight years ago, was arrested Friday by authorities, a U.S. Marshal's official said.

Ronald Perkins, 35, was taken into custody at about 3 a.m. after the car he was driving in with a friend was stopped on a west Houston street by local police and a Canadian officer, said Rey Cestero, a supervisor for the U.S. Marshal's office.

Authorities had received information that Perkins had been living in Houston since the beginning of the year and they had a description of the type of car he drove, Cestero said. That car was spotted early Friday and the arrest soon followed.

Perkins was charged in 1981 with five counts of rape, six counts of indecent assault and one count of sexual assault in connection with a series of attacks on young women in the Toronto area, he said.

He was sent to a mental institution there for evaluation, but he managed to escape from the facility Feb. 25, 1981. Authorities said Perkins was believed to have been living in Florida before coming to Houston.

Perkins, who was using the name Michael Aplan, did not have a job in Houston and is not accused of any crimes in the United States. He does, however, face one additional escape charge in Canada.

"He was living with friends," Cestero said.

STATE

tero said. "He had a way of talking his way into people's hearts and homes."

Canadian authorities are seeking to extradite Perkins to their country where he can be tried on the various charges.

During an afternoon hearing Friday in U.S. Magistrate George Kelt's court, Perkins waived extradition, Cestero said. Perkins, who will remain in custody during the week-end, is scheduled to appear in court again Monday afternoon where he will be turned over to Canadian authorities, he said.

Hightower warns about fake pesticides

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower warned farmers and ranchers that some unregistered and illegal pesticides are being marketed in the state.

"The easiest way to beat this scam is to buy only from established, well-known businesses," Hightower said Friday.

Hightower said the most common method of selling the illegal pesticides is over the telephone when a salesman offers a pesticide supposedly like a commonly used product, but at a reduced price.

"Texas producers should immediately be suspicious of telephone sales of pesticides," he said.

Most of the fraudulent products are diluted and have improper, inadequate labeling, and are almost useless, Hightower said.

New Mexico officials have warned the Texas Department of Agriculture to be on the lookout for an imitation of a pesticide sold under the name Oust, he said. The impostor is labeled Dust.

Hightower said the phony pesticide — Dust — is not registered with state and federal officials and does not list active ingredients.

Most of the complaints about the bogus pesticides have come from the Lubbock and Tyler areas, Hightower said.

Persons with questions or information about possibly illegal sales of pesticides should contact the nearest state agriculture department office, he said.

Army medical team leaves for U.S.S.R.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A plane left Kelly Air Force Base Friday afternoon with a 17-member medical team and truckloads of supplies and equipment dispatched at President Bush's command for the relief of last weekend's gas explosion and train disaster in the Soviet Union.

The plane lifted off at 5:18 p.m. CDT on about a three-hour flight to Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington, D.C., and was scheduled to continue Friday night to Ramstein Air Force Base in West Germany on the way to Moscow.

In Washington, presidential press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the expert U.S. team would remain in the Soviet Union "as long as necessary."

Two trains carrying almost 1,200 people were engulfed in a firestorm Sunday when gas from a ruptured pipeline filled a valley and exploded, officials said.

"There are 750 severe burn cases, many of them children," Fitzwater said. Bush offered the Army burn team to the Soviets earlier this week during a visit to the Soviet embassy in Washington.

Tass, the official news agency of the Soviet Union, reported Monday that 137 bodies were found at the scene in the Ural Mountains and 53 died in hospitals. Izvestia, the government newspaper, reported that a mile-long "flame front" consumed the trains.

Bob Clarke, a spokesman for the Brooke Army Medical Center at Kelly Air Force Base, said the medical team is comprised of three surgeons, three registered nurses, six licensed vocational nurses, three respiratory therapists, a laboratory technician and a civilian who is chief of the microbiology branch of the command that operates the burns unit.

"They took several Army truckloads of supplies and equipment with them," Clarke said. Clarke said the Soviet Union accepted the offer of the U.S. burn team Thursday night.

"The Soviet government did not grant permission to send any Soviet citizens to the United States for treatment," Clarke added.

Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev blamed the disaster on careless workers continuing to pump gas into a ruptured pipeline.

Some of the dead were children bound for summer resorts, Gorbachev told the Soviet Congress after visiting the site 750 miles southeast of Moscow.

Bullock: State missing opportunity by not increasing tax on cigarettes

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas — which ranks near the bottom in spending on human services — missed a "golden opportunity" to gain federal funds when it did not increase the state cigarette tax, Comptroller Bob Bullock said Friday.

"We are missing the boat on getting back our fair share of the tax dollars Texans have paid to Uncle Sam," Bullock said. He said eight states this year have decided to raise their cigarette taxes.

During the regular legislative session, Bullock proposed raising the state cigarette tax by seven cents per package, from 26 cents to 33 cents.

The increase would have produced an additional $166 million in state tax revenue and would have attracted $274 million in federal funds for health care and low-income assistance, he said.

But the cigarette tax proposal never got off the ground because Gov. Bill Clements said he would veto it. Clements said the state had enough revenue.

But Bullock said the failure to increase the tax means, "Texans are subsidizing other states because we aren't taking advantage of the federal matching funds that are available to us."

"By increasing the tax on this known health hazard, we can get more of our money back from the federal government and improve our human services programs. Common sense tells you it's right," he said.

Bullock, who is running for the Democratic Party nomination for lieutenant governor, said the additional funds could have been used to provide more Medicaid coverage for children and pregnant women, and raise payments to families with dependent children. Texas ranks 43rd and 46th in both categories, he said.

The funds also could have been used to provide better nursing home care for more elderly citizens and increase payments to hospitals and doctors providing indigent care, he said.

With a 33-cent per package tax rate, Texas would have ranked seventh among the states, tied with New York, he said.

DENVER (AP) — surveillance wastes being ill Rocky Flats nuclear according to an affidavit filed Friday in court.

The affidavit says that the Rocky Flats plant is leaking pollutants into water and air, and that the plant is a "major source of environmental contamination."

U.S. Magistrate Judge John H. Eide, Jr. issued the order after a hearing on a motion for a writ of habeas corpus filed by a group of environmentalists.

The 116-page order, which is the first of its kind, says that the government has failed to provide adequate information about the plant's operations and that it has failed to take adequate steps to protect the environment.

Surveillance shows illegal waste burning at Rocky Flats

DENVER (AP) — Aerial infrared surveillance showed hazardous wastes being illegally burned at the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant, according to an FBI affidavit unsealed Friday in this week's federal raid on the facility.

The affidavit also accused Rocky Flats operators of illegally discharging pollutants into two creeks that flow into water supplies serving four metropolitan cities and of unpermitted dumping of hazardous wastes.

U.S. Magistrate Hilbert Schauer unsealed the affidavit after a newspaper challenged withholding of the information that led Schauer to issue a search warrant for the raid Tuesday on the plant 16 miles northwest of Denver.

The 116-page affidavit catalogs the allegations made by FBI agent Jon Lipsky and indicates the investigation into possible criminal violations of hazardous waste laws will probe activities at the nuclear weapons plant going back to November 1980.

Rocky Flats is operated by Rockwell International Corp. for the Department of Energy. The plant makes plutonium triggers for nuclear weapons.

The affidavit also questions the DOE's decision to award an $8.6 million bonus to Rockwell for excellent management of Rocky Flats.

The Rocky Mountain News reported in Friday's editions that the General Accounting Office also has launched an investigation of performance bonuses awarded Rocky Flats managers.

The GAO investigation was the third blow sustained by the facility this week.

On Tuesday, 75 FBI and Environmental Protection Agency agents raided Rocky Flats in an operation dubbed "Operation Desert Glow." On Wednesday, the Colorado Department of Health announced it had found 25 environmental violations at the plant.

The affidavit revealed that the FBI conducted aerial infrared surveillance at the plant on three nights in December to determine whether the incinerator in a plutonium reprocessing building that was closed for safety violations was being illegally operated. They found that it was. Building 771 had been closed by DOE inspectors in October. It reopened in January.

The DOE closed the building after a warning sign outside the building was accidentally covered up, and three DOE inspectors walked in without proper protective gear.

The affidavit also alleges that since 1986, Rocky Flats has generated "at least 35 to 40 hazardous or mixed wastes sent for final disposal to various on-site facilities" that do not have permits or interim status under the 1976 Resource Conservation and Recovery Act.

NATION

"The knowing treatment, storage and disposal of hazardous or mixed wastes without a permit ... is an RCRA felony," the affidavit said.

The illegal discharge of pollutants into Walnut Creek occurred Nov. 15 and 16, the affidavit alleged, saying the discharges and alleged subsequent efforts to conceal them violated the Clean Water Act. Walnut Creek drains into Great Western Reservoir, which serves as the water supply for the city of Broomfield and its 27,600 residents.

The FBI's aerial surveillance of the plant in December also detected thermal activity interpreted as liquid discharges from the sewage treatment plant into Woman Creek, which flows into the Standley Lake.

The lake serves as a water supply for the cities of Westminster, Northglenn and Thornton.

The affidavit went on to say that there was probable cause to believe Rockwell and DOE officials in November 1985 falsely certified that Rocky Flats was in compliance with all applicable groundwater monitoring requirements under the RCRA.

"In fact, various Rockwell and DOE officials were aware of serious contamination and were informed that the monitoring system was deficient and did not comply with the RCRA," the affidavit said.

Also questioned in the affidavit was an $8.6 million bonus awarded Rockwell by DOE in May 1987. It said DOE gave Rocky Flats' health and safety programs and its waste-handling high marks.

At the same time, however, other DOE findings had said "Rockwell had significant problems controlling radioactive contamination at the plant and that Rockwell provided DOE with erroneous and incomplete reports on environmental, health and safety matters."

Chris Sankey, a DOE spokeswoman in Washington, said agency officials had not had time to study the affidavit and had no comment. She also said she was unaware of the GAO investigation.

Telephone messages left by The Associated Press for Dennis Hurtt, Rockwell's spokesman in Denver, had not been returned Friday afternoon.

FBI agents continued their on-site inquiry at the plant Friday. The investigation is expected to last at least through next week, said Bob Pence, agent in charge of the Colorado FBI office. The Justice Department is investigating whether hazardous waste was illegally disposed of at the plant and the actions then covered up.

The GAO investigation of the bonus program at Rocky Flats and other weapons plant is expected to be completed in about two months.

Report: Drug lords may be military target

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration is considering using the U.S. military, possibly including commando units, against drug lords overseas as part of a broad campaign against narcotics trafficking, according to a report published Friday.

New guidelines to that effect, despite a 1976 presidential order barring the U.S. government from assassinations abroad, are contained in a draft national security directive awaiting action at the White House, said the Miami Herald, in a report distributed by the Knight-Ridder news service.

At the White House, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said he was not familiar with the story, but he added: "Assassinations are illegal. We don't do assassinations."

The 1976 presidential directive forbids U.S. government personnel from carrying out assassinations.

The news report said that David C. Miller, a staff member of the National Security Council at the White House, discussed the plan with congressional aides. Miller referred all telephone calls to Fitzwater's office Friday.

The Knight-Ridder story quoted a senior administration official as saying that a National Security Council team was considering "military operations," including such efforts against "high-value targets."

One Pentagon official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Friday that "military operations" could include such activities as radio and telephone interceptions and aerial surveillance.

A congressional aide said that the National Security Council staff was drafting a directive to broaden the war on drugs.

It would call for close cooperation with foreign countries where drug traffickers operate, and would require the consent of those governments before U.S. military force was used on their territory, said the source, who spoke on condition he not be further identified.

The document, which would elaborate on the directive signed by then-President Ford on April 8, 1976, would also call for increased financial assistance to Latin American countries where drugs originate and for an expanded intelligence capacity against traffickers, sources said.

"All policy options are being considered in our efforts to combat drug trafficking, and more and more people are beginning to view drug trafficking as a form of low intensity conflict," said Raphael Perl, an attorney and specialist on international affairs at the Congressional Research Service.

"People in policy positions in the administration are considering a full range of options," said Perl.

Asked whether the use of military force against drug lords might be viewed as illegal, Perl said: "There is no doubt that a reading of the 1976 directive would give the impression that that was illegal."

Other government lawyers have argued that the use of military force against enemies in a low intensity conflict might not be considered assassination.

An Army attorney says that the term "assassination" refers to the killing of political figures rather than drug traffickers.

The Army's top lawyer, Maj. Gen. Hugh Overholt, has argued in an eight-page memorandum that killing drug traffickers also would not be classified as assassinations if U.S. military units rather than covert agents were involved.

The memo, drafted by another Army attorney, W. Hays Parks, originated as a proposed section in an Army manual on international law rather than as a policy initiative, according to Pentagon officials. The memo is not classified and has been provided to reporters.

When asked to draw a distinction between assassinations of foreign leaders and the killing of drug lords, Fitzwater said:

"Well, I don't know what the story is about. I haven't seen it. But assassinations are illegal, and we are not involved in those."

Woman reopens 100-year-old Galveston soda fountain

GALVESTON (AP) — You can't get a prescription filled at the Star Drug Store, but you can still get a banana split or a butterscotch sundae at one of the most historic soda fountains in Texas. The lunch counter in this 1880s building, which has served generations of Galvestonians, has reopened.

The Star Drug Store, 510 Tremont, opened in 1880 and operated continuously until the early 1980s when the owners retired. From that time, the building stood vacant with only Galveston's ever-present pigeons as tenants.

Elie Rogers, 43, isn't a tenant. She's the owner, and after mortgaging everything she owned to buy the building, the first thing she had to deal with was what the birds left behind. "I took 4,000 pounds of pigeon stuff to the dump," she said. "After that, I saw that the building is in beautiful shape structurally."

It took Rogers slightly more than a month to open the doors of the Star Drug Store, which she bought March 7, for lunch. During that month, she scavenged the five-story building for anything she could find to fill the dozens of glass display cabinets which held sundries at the turn of the century.

The task was an easy one. The original owners of the business never threw anything out. One of the things the long-ago druggists didn't dispose of was toxic waste.

"They made their own medicines. Some of the chemicals they used were found to be harmful," she said. "I got the head of toxic waste at the University of Texas Medical Branch to come out and advise me how to store the things that were harmful. I also sold some, and some I've still got stored."

Now on display are bottles and boxes of Cough Grass, Canada Snake Root, Dandelion root and Henbane Leaves, all with the familiar Star Drug label. One case holds a "Sure Hold Truss," a laced corset, a pair of wooden crutches and an aged box of Morton Catnip.

Not all of the glass cases are full. Rogers plans to rent the remainder to vendors to display their wares.

In her upstairs office are the prescription records of generations of Galvestonians contained in large ledger books. "One man came in from Conroe and looked up his grandfather. He was tickled to find that he was taking castor oil in 1920," she said.

The main attraction of the Star Drug Store is its horseshoe-shaped, tiled lunch counter and soda fountain. "Everybody in Galveston came here at one time," Rogers said. "Everybody who comes in tells me where they used to sit. One guy said he met his first wife in here, but he wasn't too nice about it. I guess he has had other wives."

Rogers, a Galveston native, remembers afternoons at the Star when students from the town's two high schools would gather for ice cream and sodas. She hopes those days will return. "I want this to be a children's center after school," she said. "No alcohol and no drugs."

Rogers knows she faces an uphill battle in making her lunch counter an soda fountain work without the prescription pharmacy to support it. "I know that this is what I'm supposed to be doing with my life, I'm certain," she said. "I know that it will be provided to make that mortgage payment every month. I have a lot of faith."

Star Drug's prices are lower than those found in the trendy lunch spots on the nearby Strand, and it may take more than faith to make the old lunch counter a viable business again. You can get a chicken

"Everybody in Galveston came here (drug store) at one time. Everybody who comes in tells me where they used to sit. One guy said he met his first wife in here, but he wasn't too nice about it. I guess he has had other wives."

— Elie Rogers, owner

sandwich for $2, an ice cream soda for $1.50 and a phosphate for 50 cents. She serves her ice cream in vintage glassware.

Many of the Star's customers have memories of the old drug store. Galveston businessman Jack Heffernan, 59, said he spent a good share of his youth at the green and white lunch counter.

"I used to sit right there 40 years ago," he said, pointing to an empty stool. "They always wore those plastic gloves when they fixed those sandwiches. You didn't see much of that in those days."

Heffernan remembers the food. "The sausage sandwich was the best around," he said. "Forty years ago, we weren't making a lot of money. The prices were why we came here. Their chili was the best and their soup of the day was also good."

Rogers gazes around her new business as a steady stream of people comes in. Some sit at the counter, while others just look around. She makes a banana split, a sundae and a sandwich. "I was a soda jerk when I was a kid, so I had a handle on that. I've come full cycle."

One person who is delighted the Star Drug Store is open again is Julie Caddel, executive director of Galveston's Downtown Revitalization Committee.

Caddel has one of the toughest jobs on the island. Most of the storefronts in downtown Galveston are abandoned, as Star Drug once was. It is Caddel's job to find tenants and get the doors opened again. For the past nine months, she has attempted to heighten awareness of the historic downtown buildings, many of which predate the Strand buildings.

"Hopefully, by promoting the positive points of downtown, people have become interested in properties like Star Drug," she said. "Since it is a local owner, it shows the confidence Galvestonians have in downtown."

Rogers is inviting local artists to adorn the walls of Star Drug. "I feel like I'm finally doing something for my city," she said. "There are so many fond memories. I love Galveston."

Scientists believe Chernobyl exploded like atomic bomb

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The nuclear industry said it couldn't happen, but some scientists now believe the 1986 accident at the Soviet Union's Chernobyl power plant exploded like an atomic bomb.

An article in Friday's Technology Review, a journal published by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, says similar accidents could happen at 13 other nuclear reactors in the Soviet Union.

However, "the possibility of such an accident in a U.S. reactor is vanishingly small," wrote William Sweet, a reporter for Physics Today, published by the American Institute of Physics. Sweet gathered his information in interviews with scientists and specialists at the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the U.S. Department of Energy.

"A runaway nuclear reaction set off a chain of events that severely damaged the reactor core and surrounding structures," Sweet wrote.

"This damage set the stage for a second explosion which was much more violent than the first and almost certainly was a full-fledged nuclear explosion."

Some scientists say the article accurately reports current thinking, but others say it is causing unnecessary alarm.

"To call this a nuclear explosion is very misleading," said Themis Speis, deputy research chief at the NRC.

"The reactor went out of control, but the time it took to raise the temperature and pressure is many orders of magnitude smaller than it takes to get an atomic bomb going," he said.

John Ahearne, former NRC chairman, said, "I wouldn't call it a nuclear explosion."

Harvard University physics Professor Richard Wilson said in the article, "It was a nuclear explosion; there's no doubt, because the ultimate source of energy was nuclear."

"To ever say it was not a nuclear explosion is just plain wrong."

The argument is one of semantics, said Gregory Van Tuyle, a nuclear engineer at the Brookhaven National Laboratory.

The plant was not destroyed by a steam explosion as scientists had believed, but "power grew to very large levels very rapidly," he said. "The phrase 'nuclear explosion' is not inappropriate."

The accident, blamed for the deaths of at least 31 people, injured many more and spread radiation for thousands of miles.

Sweet acknowledged that the reactor at Chernobyl "exploded" far more slowly and with much less energy than a bomb. But, he said, official reports suggest the reactor's fuel formed a critical mass, reacted uncontrollably, melted and vaporized.

"It would be deeply misleading to say that the plant did not blow up like an atomic bomb," he said.

"Ever since the first nuclear power plants were built in the 1950s, the industry has insisted they can't explode like bombs," Sweet said. "Chernobyl casts doubt on whether that is true of all power reactors."

"Of the plants operating in North America, however, only the Canadian plants are susceptible to a Chernobyl-type accident."

In an interview Friday from his New York office, Sweet said a Chernobyl-type accident is unlikely in the United States because U.S. commercial reactors have safer designs.

Double-decker highway construction commences

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Construction began on a double-decker highway Friday in an effort to ease one of the nation's worst commuter traffic jams, but road work threatened to worsen the bumper-to-bumper standstill called rush hour.

Gov. George Deukmejian presided at a ceremonial dedication of the overhead highway project dubbed "The Second Generation of Freeways."

Standing atop an unfinished freeway link that will give rise to the top deck, Deukmejian praised the $530 million project, which will cater to buses and carpools, as California's road to rational commuting.

"The fact that we're holding this event on an onramp is symbolic," he said, "because it demonstrates our commitment not to let traffic congestion force California onto an off-ramp in terms of our prosperity in the future."

Car worship has caused mounting problems in Southern California, where cruising is still king but frustration over snarled roadways prompted a 1987 summer of freeway violence — as angry motorists took potshots at one another.

"We know that impatience and driver anger often result in serious injuries," said Sgt. Mike Brey of the California Highway Patrol.

Urging everyone trapped in their "Fast Car" to "Don't Worry, Be Happy," K-EARTH radio disc jockey Steve Morris broadcast his morning commute show from a Denny's restaurant in Hollywood, where commuters were offered a complimentary meal.

The new overhead project will link the Century Freeway still under construction with exclusive carpool and bus lanes from the heavily traveled Harbor Freeway, which links downtown to the city's port district.

The elevated sections of the Harbor Freeway Transitway will stretch 2.6 miles and are scheduled to open in the fall of 1993.

During construction, which takes place in the center of the existing highway, some of the average 230,000 daily drivers are bound to get testy during delays because the freeway already has a 50 percent higher accident rate than other Los Angeles freeways. As a result, the time lost on the Harbor is 40 percent higher than other freeways.

Deukmejian said increasing reliance on mass transit and carpools was the only way to solve the state's traffic problems.

"We cannot just build ourselves out of the problem," he said.

Judge won't separate charges against Secord

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge Friday rejected arguments by Iran-Contra figure Richard Secord and combined 12 criminal charges against him into a single indictment.

Chief U.S. District Court Judge Aubrey Robinson took three counts against Secord involving accusations of illegal gifts to Oliver North and consolidated them with nine new charges accusing Secord of lying to Congress.

The alleged lies involve covering up Secord's own profits in the Iran-Contra affair and denying that North received any benefits from the maze of corporations known as the Enterprise set up by Secord and business partner Albert Hakim.

North, who enlisted Secord to run arms to the Nicaraguan rebels during a congressional ban on military aid to the Contras, was convicted last month of accepting a $13,800 home security system from Secord. North faces sentencing June 23 for that and two other crimes in the Iran-Contra scandal.

The government says Secord's profits from running arms to the Nicaraguan Contras and assisting the Reagan administration's secret Iran arms initiative totaled more than $1 million.

Consolidating the 1988 gratuities charges against Secord with the nine-count indictment brought in April will serve "the interests of judicial economy and sound administration," Robinson said.

Secord's lawyer, Thomas Green, argued Thursday in favor of trying Secord on the gratuities charges alone.

Green said the new indictment is laden with potential problems over the use of classified information which "will delay any trial." In short, consolidation will not result in any judicial economy," Green also said the indictments are not logically related.

But Robinson said proof for the gratuities charges would be admissible to prove the cover-up allegations and that there is little doubt that consolidation is appropriate.

The office of independent counsel Lawrence Walsh has said it plans to offer no classified documents in prosecuting the 12 charges.

Hostages freed at Yellowstone

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — A gunman took eight people hostage in the visitor's center at the Old Faithful complex in Yellowstone National Park on Friday, but released them unharmed a few hours later, the National Park Service said.

The eight hostages were freed almost three hours after the unidentified gunman drew a handgun at the visitor's center, said Interior Department spokesman Steve Goldstein in Washington.

"We believe now that the hostages are free that we can quickly resolve the situation," he said, adding that the gunman, who made no demands, was still armed and remained in the visitor's center.

National Park Service spokesman Shelton Johnson said the man initially released some women and children.

"I don't believe he wanted to hurt anybody," said Rebecca Painter, 26, a tourist from Salt Lake City who was held hostage for about five minutes with her two daughters, ages 4 and 1½.

ments in his defense will have very little likelihood of success, the prosecution said in a court filing.

Associate independent counsel Reid Weingarten said the government would seek dismissal of broad conspiracy, theft and wire fraud charges against Secord. They focus on the diversion of Iran arms sale money to the Contras and prosecuting them would involve the use of extensive amounts of sensitive material.

Swedish demonstrator stopped as he rushed toward pope

UPPSALA, Sweden (AP) — A fundamentalist Protestant demonstrator rushed toward Pope John Paul during an outdoor Mass on Friday, but Vatican security agents and Swedish police stopped the unarmed man and dragged him away.

Authorities hauled the man, identified only as a 28-year-old Swede, into a police van and drove him to a station for questioning, said police Inspector Ulf Ohlsson. He said no one was injured.

The demonstrator belonged to a fundamentalist Protestant group that opposes the pope's efforts to improve Roman Catholic relations with the state church of this overwhelmingly Lutheran country, Ohlsson said.

Police said the protester was carrying leaflets denouncing the pope "with all his abominations" to distribute to participants at the Mass.

They said he would be released without charge and refused to disclose his name in keeping with Swedish practice.

It was not clear why the protester rushed toward the pope as John Paul distributed communion.

Witnesses said four or five agents wrestled with the demonstrator, who came within 10 yards of the pope, and pulled him away from a security barrier around the altar. They pinned him to the ground until the police van arrived.

Several other fundamentalists were outside the Mass. The Maranatha group, which sometimes calls the pope's teachings "fascist," says no church, or the pope, is needed to speak to God — just the Bible.

It was the most serious incident during John Paul's tour of five Scandinavian countries, which ends Saturday. On May 2, Norwegian police hauled away demonstrators from a Mass in Tromsø, but those protesters did not get near the pope.

The incident in Sweden caused little disruption. It appeared that many people were unaware anything had happened. "I saw some commotion, but I thought it was someone fainting," said a nun who did not give her name.

Earlier in the day, the pope attacked abortion and euthanasia while emphasizing family values.

"The primary right which society must defend is the right to life.

Whether in the womb or in the final phase of life, a person may never be disposed of in order to make life easier for others," he said in a speech at the 500-year-old Uppsala University.

Abortion in the first three months of pregnancy is legal and widely practiced throughout Scandinavia. Euthanasia is illegal, although it has been debated.

John Paul also praised Raoul Wallenberg, a Swedish diplomat credited with saving thousands of Jews in Hungary from Nazi death camps.

"I cannot fail to mention your compatriot Raoul Wallenberg, who in praiseworthy fashion rescued so many members of the Jewish people from Nazi concentration camps. His example inspires a dedicated fight for human rights."

Wallenberg disappeared after he was arrested by Soviet troops entering Budapest in January 1945.

Moscow has said he died in a Soviet prison in 1947, but Soviet dissident sources claim he was seen alive in the 1980s. The Swedish and U.S. governments have called on the Soviets to release all the facts in the case.

In addition to Sweden and Norway, John Paul has visited Denmark, Finland and Iceland during his 42nd foreign trip. He is to return to Rome on Saturday.

Throughout his visit to the largely Lutheran region, the pope has stressed unity among Christian denominations, despite their differences.

Tests with mice indicate virus may cause AIDS-related cancer

MONTREAL (AP) — Mice given an AIDS virus gene developed an AIDS-related cancer, suggesting the virus itself may cause cancer, leading researcher Dr. Robert Gallo said Friday.

Gallo, one of the discoverers of the AIDS virus, also said an experimental AIDS drug called CD4 is the closest thing to a "magic bullet" to eradicate AIDS.

"If CD4 doesn't work in the early phases, don't despair," he said. The drug blocks the mechanism by which the AIDS virus attaches to certain white blood cells and infects them.

This mechanism is so critical to AIDS virus growth in the body that some version of CD4 ought to be able to interfere with it, he said.

Gallo spoke at the Fifth International Conference on AIDS, which ended Friday.

His studies of the cancer, called Kaposi's sarcoma, offer one possible explanation for the origin of the disease in AIDS patients.

Others have evidence that Kaposi's sarcoma may be caused by a virus other than AIDS, but Gallo's work suggests otherwise.

He reported a study showing the cancer developed in mice that were genetically engineered to contain an AIDS virus gene called tat. The tat gene is a kind of supercharger that speeds up replication of the AIDS virus.

The mice carrying the tat gene developed Kaposi's sarcoma, but the cancer did not arise in the cells carrying the gene. It arose from other cells.

That suggests the gene triggers production of some biochemical factor that causes the cancer.

He also showed that certain Kaposi's sarcoma cells called spindle cells release "a whole series of biological molecules that allow us to create KS in a mouse."

If the work proves correct, it offers the possibility that drugs could be designed to interfere with these molecules and thus treat or prevent Kaposi's sarcoma, Gallo said.

The AIDS virus infects certain white blood cells that direct many immune functions. They are called T4 cells or CD4 cells.

Gallo argues other viruses that activate the immune system — and therefore activate T4 cells — can aggravate infection with the AIDS virus, known as the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV.

For example, a leukemia-causing virus called HTLV-1 can infect the same cells infected with HIV and can "turn on" HIV in the cells, triggering production of more HIV, he said.

Human herpes virus type 6, or HHV-6, which was discovered recently by Gallo and his colleagues, also can infect the same cells and turn on HIV, he said.

Gallo described a possible vicious cycle in which HHV-6 and HIV work together to cause disease.

"All of us in this room almost have HHV-6," he said. Healthy people control it; it causes no illness. But HIV weakens the immune system, allowing HHV-6 to grow.

The proliferating HHV-6 then activates production of HIV, in Gallo's scenario. The HIV further weakens the immune system, allowing further growth of HHV-6 — and so on.

Aldrete awaits indictment on murder charges

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The woman described as the high priestess of a gang of drug-smuggling ritual killers said Friday she is awaiting indictment on murder charges in connection with 15 slayings in Matamoros.

Sara Aldrete Villarreal, 24, said she is innocent of any wrongdoing and scoffed at the idea she was the cult's "madrina," or godmother, as authorities have alleged.

Aldrete, 24, and Omar Francisco Orea Ochoa, 23, spoke with The Associated Press at the Eastern Penitentiary, where they have been held since the May 6 shootout in which cult leader Adolfo de Jesus Constanzo and his right-hand man, Martin Quintana Rodriguez, died.

They said they expected to be indicted for murder Saturday in connection with the grisly murders in the border town of Matamoros that launched a two-nation manhunt for Constanzo and his followers.

They and cult member Alvaro de Leon Valdez were arraigned in the Matamoros slayings earlier this week in the 9th Federal Criminal Court in Mexico City.

The defendants were indicted last month on a variety of charges in connection with Constanzo's death in Mexico City and pleaded innocent. Aldrete, of Matamoros, and Orea Ochoa, of Mexico City, said they were innocent of the grisly murders in Matamoros as well.

They said that they were on the run with Constanzo against their will.

"He threatened me," Orea Ochoa, Constanzo's lover and companion of more than five years, said in the prison interview.

"He threatened our families, too," Aldrete said.

Constanzo, Quintana Rodriguez, Orea Ochoa and Aldrete fled Matamoros after authorities began digging up horribly mutilated bodies April 9 at the Santa Elena ranch near Matamoros.

Among the victims was a 21-year-old University of Texas premed student, Mark Kilroy.

Authorities say Kilroy and several others were sacrificed in gory rituals aimed at draping a cloak of magical protection over the Matamoros gang's drug trafficking business.

Seven people in Matamoros, including two fugitives, were charged last month in the slayings.

Both Orea Ochoa and Aldrete said they knew nothing of the Matamoros murders until they saw it on the news. Orea Ochoa said he had never been to the ranch. Aldrete said she was there only once for a birthday party.

Aldrete said the Constanzo who forced her to hide out with him was a different man from the charming fortune-teller she first met a year and a half earlier.

"I thought I knew him, but I didn't," Aldrete said. "It's like this person who died, it wasn't Adolfo."

She said Constanzo forced her to go with him when he fled Matamoros for Mexico City because he was afraid she would notify the authorities.

Pharmaceutical company helps doctors turn entrepreneurs

CARMEL, Ind. (AP) — The soft click and hum of pill-counting machines give a high-tech tone to the operations of the Pharmaceutical Corporation of America, but the heart of the business is simplicity itself — moving medicine from big bottles into little bottles.

In the company's brightly lit, air-filtered filling room, women in surgical garb stuff in cotton, screw on tops and paste on labels, readying stacks of machine-filled plastic containers for resale in clinics and doctors' offices around the country.

Goodman

Despite its small size, just 12 employees, PCA is a big player in a new industry called repackaging, a business that is helping physicians re-mold themselves from professionals into entrepreneurs — and in the process prompting ethical questions and calls by legislators for tighter regulation of doctors.

Repackaging houses are mass production versions of the local drug store. Instead of one pharmacist counting out pills to fill one prescription, the repackagers buy antibiotics, decongestants and other drugs from manufacturers in large lots, then break them down into bottles that can be resold to individual patients. These are sealed, labeled and shipped to doctors, who add $2 to $4 per prescription to the wholesale cost.

An estimated 8 percent of the nation's 330,000 office-based doctors have become retailers of repackaged medicines.

"The repackagers are trying to re-make the role of the doctor as a patient advocate into something else, in effect, making the physician a vendor," said Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., who has sponsored legislation to prohibit doctors from selling prescriptions for profit.

"THERE IS A growing number of fast-buck artists who are telling doctors they can make $50,000 without any more difficulty than reaching for a prescription pad."

Repackagers say they only are responding to an increasingly competitive medical profession where anything that brings in additional patients and income to a practice might make the difference between success or failure.

"The industry developed because there was an opportunity," said Dr. Mason Goodman, a lung specialist who is also chief executive officer at PCA. "All of the changes in the marketplace made physicians more receptive to this than they would have been 10 years ago."

Indeed, 10 years ago the repackaging industry was just getting started, but it has grown fast.

Market analyst Joy Twiss Thompson of Marshall & Co. of Atlanta predicts 10 percent of the $20 billion annual prescription drug market will move from the pharmacy to the doctor's office over the next seven years. She estimates repackagers' revenues will climb from $25 million in 1986 to more than $75 million this year.

"When I survey doctors and nurses to see their attitudes, I could probably sell 10 to 15 accounts in an average day," she said. "They have been waiting for a dispensing company. The repackagers have not had the ability to get out and meet the demand."

CRITICS SAY THE demand was created in part by hard-sell brochures and medical journal ads that promised doctors up to $50,000 a year in additional income. One ad, no longer used by PCA, talked of $15,000 to $30,000 "with no additional work."

Much of the advertising has cooled, partly in response to criticism. The repackagers now emphasize physician dispensing as a convenience to patients and a way to build a practice.

"It's not a huge money maker, but it's a great practice enhancement tool," said Goodman of PCA. "The first law in medicine is not to erode your patient population. You want to grow it."

Steven Geringer, executive vice president of the Nashville-based Clinical Pharmaceuticals Inc., puts profits from drug sales at $8,000 to $10,000 annually for the average doctor.

Many repackagers say their business strategy was — and in many cases still is — aimed at clinics, ambulatory care centers and large group practices. Smaller physicians' offices, they say, don't do the volume of drug sales the repackagers need to make a profit.

"This is a business of low margin with high selling costs," said Charles Hampton, chairman and president of Allscrips Pharmaceuticals Inc. of Vernon Hills, Ill. "About half our business by number are groups under five, but in terms of volume they probably account for less than a third of our sales."

Allscrips is a good example of how the repackaging industry began and grew. Founded three years ago by Hampton, a former drug company executive, and funded with venture capital from Allstate Insurance Co. and several other groups, the company is approaching $20 million in annual revenues.

"We got into it because there were a lot of things happening in the market," Hampton said. "There was the growth of the urgent care centers and the large group practices where they were traditionally dispensing out of envelopes. There was a change in the industry in general."

But this change has brought calls for tighter regulation of dispensing doctors.

WHILE THE REPACKAGERS are regulated as drug companies under federal and state law, a recent study by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' inspector general's office found less governmental scrutiny of drug selling doctors than of pharmacists.

"We felt there should be some of the same procedural requirements that exist for pharmacists, such as record-keeping, supervision and labeling," said Martha Kvaal, a deputy regional inspector general who headed the study.

Kvaal also noted some 15 states reported taking disciplinary action against physicians for dispensing abuses since 1986. Often it was for procedural errors, such as improper labeling of medication. But there also have been cases of overprescribing by physicians who make money from drug sales.

Such concerns led Rep. Wyden to file a bill last year to ban doctors from selling drugs for profit. The bill, which failed to make it to a House vote, was strongly opposed by repackagers, who formed the Competitive Health Care Coalition and hired Washington lobbyists and public relation consultants to fight the bill.

Geringer, who headed the coalition, said the bill would have killed his industry even though it would still allow physicians to dispense drugs at cost.

"If there weren't any profit in it, the doctors wouldn't do it," Geringer said.

The repackagers have found an ally in the federal government. The Federal Trade Commission's Bureau of Competition has endorsed physician dispensing and even advised Maryland and Georgia against over-regulation.

THE REPACKAGING industry is likely to flourish. The new Medicare Catastrophic Coverage Act allows doctors to be reimbursed by the government for drugs they sell to elderly patients, and repackagers are lobbying insurers to include doctors in their drug coverage.

Sunday Silence even money pick

By ED SCHUYLER JR.

NEW YORK (AP)—Sunday Silence, who has given racing fans their kicks this spring, gave Charlie Whittingham one Friday — literally.

"I hope he didn't bruise his foot hitting me on the noggin," the bruised 76-year-old trainer quipped.

Sunday Silence, the even-money early favorite to win the Belmont Stakes Saturday and capture the Triple Crown, was spooked while being led onto the Belmont Park track, with exercise rider Pam Mabez up.

"He just reared up," Whittingham said. "You know how hard they strike. I thought I got out of the way, but I didn't quite make it."

"It scared me when I saw it," said Arthur B. Hancock, who co-owns the colt with Whittingham and Dr. Ernest Gaillard. "It was lucky it just grazed him."

Whittingham was bruised in the area of the right temple. "They kissed and made up," said Pat Valenzuela, who rode Sunday Silence to victory in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness.

Sunday Silence will try to end a 10-year drought of Triple Crown winners on a track that might be wet from several days of rain.

Should Sunday Silence be beaten by Easy Goer or one of the eight other 3-year-olds entered in the 1 1/4-mile Belmont, it would be the second longest stretch without a Triple Crown winner.

The longest stretch has been from Citation in 1948 to Secretariat in 1973. There also was a 10-year gap between Sir Barton in 1919 to Gallant Fox in 1930.

The forecast was for rain and thunderstorms to taper off by midnight Friday. A chance of a shower and temperatures between 75-80 were predicted for Saturday.

"If it stops by early morning, it would be a fast track by race time," Shug McGaughey, who trains Easy Goer, said.

Post time for the 121st Belmont is about 5:30 p.m. EDT. ABC will televise from 4:30 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Easy Goer didn't like the mud at Churchill Downs when he finished second in the Derby, beaten by 2 1/4 lengths. Sunday Silence's winning margin over Easy Goer was a nose on a fast track in the 1 3/16-mile Preakness.

No Magic sans Magic

Lakers just not same without Johnson

Copley News Service

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Two bad for Magic. Two bad for the Lakers. Two bad for the NBA.

Watch, too, how quickly two goes into four. For all intents and purposes, the NBA finals ended Thursday night, and with 4:39 left in the third quarter of Game 2 at The Palace. Never mind that just five seconds earlier, Mark Aguirre's layup had merely tied the Detroit Pistons with the Lakers.

If anything, up to that point the Lakers seemed almost on the verge of taking control of the playoffs that few expected them to win. And even if your set was broken Thursday night, you knew how the Lakers were doing it.

"Everybody's got a nuclear bomb," Isaiah Thomas of the Pistons had said a day earlier. "Every team can explode. But the Lakers got the guy who knows how to push the button. I drove him home last night. His name's Earvin."

EARVIN JOHNSON was now driving the Lakers, pushing the ball up the floor, dishing it around.

And then he stopped. Magic just stopped. Suddenly, his left leg was bent, braced by the toe of a gold-and-purple sneaker. With his left hand, Johnson rubbed the fire in the back of his thigh, the same sort of burning sensation that had kept him from five games in February.

Beyond that, all he'd missed was the All-Star Game, but those are just for show. This was the finals.

The expression on Johnson's face was of agony, but really nothing unusual, since Magic looks pained every time he hears a whistle blown in his general direction. He whirled away from the grasp of trainer Gary Vitti in anger.

"SO unfortunate," Johnson said. "We'd worked so hard to get to that point. Seven months of hard work, and to have something like this happen. I just can't believe it."

Following him into the locker room were Drs. Robert Kerlan and Steve Lombardo, the Lakers' physicians, and they told Johnson what he already knew. It was the hamstring again, the left one.

But when Magic asked the biggest question of all, they could merely look at each other in silence.

"I asked them, 'Why me?'" Johnson said. "It's has to have happened for some reason. But everything was going according to the game plan."

Eventually, Johnson was confronted with the seven words on everybody's mind.

MAGIC, can the Lakers win without you?

"They've done it before," Johnson said. "I just

End of sentence. End of questions. Johnson, his voice beginning to waver, stood up and walked back toward the showers.

Magic was right, as usual. The Lakers were sticking to the plan and, as a result, sticking it to the Pistons.

Joe Dumars was lighting up the scoreboard — most of them over Johnson — but even that was working in Los Angeles' favor. The Pistons are the best team in the NBA because they're the best balanced, and when only one man is scoring all, the points, it means they're off-balance.

Magic, meanwhile, had all his teammates involved.

"As a ballplayer, as a professional, you try to shake it off," said Orlando Woolridge. "But when you your key warrior goes out ... it's devastating."

Halos host Cal Angels Thursday

From Staff Reports

For the first time since 1975, Midland will play host to a major league baseball team when the California Angels comes to Angels Stadium Thursday to play their Texas League Midland farm club.

The 2 p.m. contest is cosponsored by the Midland Reporter-Telegram and Equitable Financial companies.

"Both presenting sponsors are a natural for a game of this nature," said Midland Angel General Manager Bill Davidson. "The Equitable Financial Companies have enjoyed a long association with professional baseball and the Reporter-Telegram is known for its support of important community events."

"We are pleased to be associated with the exhibition game," commented Taylpr Etchison, district manager for EFC. "As active as Equitable has been with pro baseball, we felt that the California-Midland game was an excellent opportunity to further our relationships throughout West Texas."

The entire California Angels roster will be in Midland Thursday, which means Midland will get its first live look at Jim Abbott, the pitcher who should "by rights" started and played the season here. Unfortunately, for Midland, it was a case of Abbott seeing Parre...

Tickets for the exhibition are available, $8 reserved seat, at Angels Stadium 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Wednesday.

All box seats for the game have been sold. No general admission tickets will be available and Angels Stadium has been separated into sections with each seat individually numbered.

Scottsdale led after the second day, but trailed Central Alabama by a stroke going into the final 18 holes. The veteran Scottsdale squad, led by tournament medalist Aguirre, won by three over Central Alabama.

Three Florida teams—Brevard, Indian River, and Florida Junior College—took third, fourth, and fifth.

"Mike Johnson just played a super tournament for us after making the team as a substitute. In fact, he posted the team's lowest total score for the tournament. He's also the first Midland athlete to be named an NJCAA All-American for Midland College since another Johnson, Charles, was selected as a basketball All-American in 1981," said MC coach Delnor Poss.

Johnson and Brian Wallace were selected to play for the Chaps in the national tourney after the team's top two players, Andrew Coltart and Sean Duffy, honored a previous invitation to play in the British Amateur. "This is an all-freshman team, but they played with lots of poise for the four days and I couldn't be prouder of them," Poss said. "After the last two years, we're getting to like this national tournament and think we have the players to make a run for the championship."

TED BATTLES

Smith, Hernandez alike, but Roberto knows how to use a bat

The tableau remains sharply etched in the memory bank, even after all these years.

It must have been spring training 1980 in Mesa, Ariz. The Chicago Cubs were holding a workout in soon-to-be packed HoHoKams Stadium.

But now, in the morning, the park was virtually empty except for the Texas sportswriter up in the deserted press box, pecking out his next day's column on his trusty Royal...anybody remember Royals?

THE VIEW of the Superstitions 40 miles to the east was compelling, no matter how many times you'd seen it.

Battles

But this a.m., the sight of Lee Smith, bat in hand, doggedly following batting coach Billy Williams around, took precedence.

I could almost read Lee's lips from 75 yards away. "Come on, Billy, how do you use one of these things?"

As a graduate of the Texas League, for Smith bats, to pitchers, were hostile instruments of destruction, not friends to be employed against the enemy.

IN THE National League, Smith would be required to use one. Of course, in the Texas League, Lee was a starting pitcher. In the NL, as the Cubs' ace closer, the 6-5, 220-pounder didn't use a bat much more often than he did at Midland.

If Roberto Hernandez ever makes it to California Angels, he won't have to chase a Hall of Famer around the field to learn how to use a bat.

HERNANDEZ, in his first full year with the Midland Angels, you see, was a catcher and a catcher who hit with power, back in his days at the University of Connecticut.

That's one reason he wound up at the University of South Carolina-Aiken. He wanted to pitch and a coach friend in a Virginia summer league suggested if he switched to USCA after his freshman year, he could pitch.

California scouts thought enough of Hernandez to make him their No. 1 draft pick in the 1986 free agent draft, compensation from Baltimore for Juan Beniquez.

SMITH was raised in Louisiana and attended Northwestern La. on a baseball/basketball scholarship.

Hernandez, born in Puerto Rico, is from Manhattan and attended New Hampshire Prep on a scholarship.

World's apart, perhaps, but somehow at the Midland stage of their careers, there's a striking similarity.

Roberto is struggling with the adjustment to AA Texas League ball. In his first season at AA. As a TL rookie, Smith also had problems, 8-10, but a TL leading 128 walks?

This was a guy who would develop into the National League's premier game-on-the-line reliever, the guy in whom Chicago had so much confidence that they traded off Bruce Sutter, the Cy Young winner.

AT NH Prep, "I played two years of football and two years of basketball, but the scholarship was for one sport and that's all they preferred you to play," says Hernandez, a Smith like 6-4, 220. "So I took baseball. It's the sport I liked."

Then, came UConn and his days as a catcher. "I remember in the Big East tournament, Georgetown had this guy who had about 60 stolen bases. It turned out the key to our winning was throwing him out on attempted steal in the eighth inning."

It may be that Midland catcher John Orton appreciates the way Roberto holds runners on first. No coach had to stress the importance to Hernandez of keeping runners close.

ALTHOUGH Hernandez is in his early years of development as a pitcher, it didn't take long to make an impression as a pitcher.

"One game in college, there were four or five fans in the stands and 25 scouts," Roberto later found out, he was the lure.

A couple of years into his NL career as the Cubs' ace fireman, I cornered Lee Smith in Mesa one spring day and asked him how he could come in with the bases loaded and pitch out of trouble when in his days with Midland as a starter, he was constantly in early-inning trouble because of walks.

"We used to kid that you should go down road and pitch in the High Junior League for a few innings and before the Cubs game. You usually pitched well after those early innings."

"The difference was that I found out up here. I had to throw strikes right away," Lee responded. After all, with Smith's heat, there was no need to dilly-dally around.

Hernandez' problem isn't so much walks, although they hurt, it's those ground balls. "I get a lot of ground balls and on this infield, it's so fast a lot of them get through before anybody can do anything about it."

Chang, Edberg in French final

Youngest American to reach Slam final

By MARILYN AUGUST

PARIS (AP) — When Michael Chang wakes up Sunday morning to face Stefan Edberg in the men's championship match at the French Open, he may just have to pinch himself.

The 17-year-old from Placentia, Calif., etched his name in the annals of tennis history Saturday, downing Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union 6-1, 5-7, 7-6, 7-5 to become the youngest male player to reach the final of a Grand Slam tournament.

"It's definitely a dream," Chang said after his four-hour, five-minute marathon on center court before a packed house of 14,500. "It's something special I'll always have with me."

"He's surprised everybody, even himself," said Rod Laver, a tennis

Hall of Famer and the only person to win the Grand Slam twice.

Implacable and imperturbable as ever, Chang showed little emotion as he left the court, raising his eyes and waving quickly to the crowd to acknowledge their applause.

"On the surface he looks like a duck, but underneath you know he's paddling," Laver said.

Chang is the first American to earn a berth in the final since John McEnroe five years ago, and only the sixth since Tony Trabert won the coveted title in 1955.

In a fourth-round thriller, Chang ousted the world's No. 1-ranked player, Ivan Lendl, and instantly became the darling of the French crowd.

"The mosquito has stung the bull," headlined a leading sports French daily after Chang's victory over Lendl.

Clay court veteran Jose Higuera of Spain, who has been helping Chang hone his skills on the soft, slow clay, said his prodigy was "very, very exhausted" after his match against Chesnokov.

"I'm excited inside, but I'm a quiet person," Chang told a news conference several hours later. "It's hard to jump around when you're drained. You don't have any energy left to show excitement."

Chang, who beat Lendl despite a bout of severe cramps in the fifth set, said he began to cramp again after the Chesnokov match was over. He said he received no special treatment, but walked around, then had a massage and rested.

"I should be OK for Sunday," he said.

Higuera said the American is that special class of player blessed with both physical ability and mental toughness along the likes of six-time French Open champion Bjorn Borg and Mats Wilander, the defending champion who eliminated in the quarterfinals by Chesnokov.

"Mike hits from the baseline, he's consistent, he moves his feet to get into position and then he goes for his shots," Higuera said.

Chang's future is a rosy one.

"He has no real weaknesses, but everything can get better — his forehand, volley and serve. And that's what's so exciting," Higuera said. "He's got the head of a champion, and that's the most important thing in tennis."

Cowboys may abandon plush Valley Ranch

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys may abandon their 30-acre training facility and office complex at Valley Ranch in favor of fulltime operations at Texas Stadium, Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said Friday.

"Our initial conclusion is that there's a possibility we'll be leaving Valley Ranch. One place that is so appealing in many ways is Texas Stadium," Jones said.

OPERATING out of Texas Stadium, where he owns the operating rights, is more economical than Valley Ranch, which he described as a financial burden, Jones said.

"The (cost of) maintenance and upkeep of Valley Ranch are unacceptable and not competitive with anybody else in the NFL," said Jones, who refused to apply numbers to his statement.

Texas Stadium is so easily adaptable, Jones said, that "it could well have been anticipated when the stadium was built that the club would use it as a home."

Midland College had its first national tournament experience a year ago at Scottsdale, getting into the tournament as a wild-card team based on its national ranking. They made the 36-hole cut and finished 13th last year. After the Chaps finished third in the conference standings behind New Mexico Junior College and Odessa College last month, they weren't expected to make this year's field. But a strong effort gave them the Region V tournament title, with NMJC making the national field as the regional runner-up.

Odessa College made the field by invitation. NMJC finished eighth here, while OC was tenth.

Cards' DeLeon cools off Cubs with three-hitter

Associated Press

Jose DeLeon and a brisk 15-mph wind Friday helped cool off the red-hot Chicago Cubs.

DeLeon pitched eight innings of three-hit, shutout ball and Pedro Guerrero drove in the only run with the first-inning double, leading the St. Louis Cardinals to a 1-0 victory.

In winning five of their previous seven games, the Cubs had scored 54 runs and homered 13 times, including six at St. Louis last Sunday. The Cardinals have won three straight.

"It makes a big difference when the wind is blowing in," said DeLeon, 8-3. "My breaking ball is a lot better when the wind is blowing in."

DeLeon struck out 10, tying a season high, and walked two.

"That's the first time in a long time I've worked on three days rest and I got a little tired. I did it when I was 23, but now I'm getting close to 30," said the 28-year-old DeLeon.

After Damon Berryhill's one-out single in the ninth, Todd Worrell replaced Ken Dayley and retired the next two batters for his seventh save. Worrell was making his first appearance since coming off the 15-day disabled list on Wednesday.

Scott Sanderson, 6-4, gave up consecutive doubles to Ozzie Smith and Guerrero with two outs in the first inning.

Expos 5, Phillies 0

MONTREAL — Dennis Martinez pitched a three-hitter for his first complete game this year and Andres Galarraga drove in three runs as the Montreal Expos beat the Philadelphia Phillies.

Martinez, struck out six and walked two in his first complete game since last July 31. It was his 15th career shutout.

Floyd Youmans, 1-4, making his third start against his former club, gave up four runs and five hits in five innings.

Wichita meets Texas in CWS title contest

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Todd Dreifort drove in three runs, including the go-ahead run with a sixth-inning double, and Mike Wentworth hit a three-run home run as Wichita State earned a berth in the College World Series championship game with a 12-9 victory over Florida State Friday night.

Wichita State, 67-17, advances to today's noon championship game against Texas, 54-17, which beat Louisiana State 12-7 in the other semifinal Thursday. Texas, in its eighth final, is seeking its fifth championship and first since 1983. Wichita State lost to Miami in only championship game appearance, in 1982.

The Shockers handed Florida State starter Clyde Keller his first loss in 14 decisions this season, while Pat Ceno, 13-4, avenged a 4-2 loss to the Seminoles in the tournament last Sunday. The Shockers also beat Florida State 7-4 on Wednesday.

Wichita State scored a run in the first on P.J. Forbes' single and Mike McDonald's double. Florida State took advantage of two errors to score four times in the top of the second. Buddy Cribb opened with a single and headed to third when Chris Brock singled to right. Dreifort's throw to third skipped past Mike Jones, allowing Cribb to score.

After Brad Parker walked, Cedeno mishandled Marc Ronan's sacrifice bunt for an error to load the bases. Rocky Rau singled two runs home and Ronan scored on Pedro Grifol's grounder.

Wichita State tied it in the fourth when Pat Meares and Jones singled and Wentworth homered to right. It was only the second homer in 41 at-bats this year for Wentworth.

BELMONT, N.Y. — You imagined Black Beauty looked like this. Glowing coat, the color of anthracite in the sun. A movie horse. Something Clint Eastwood would ride into town.

Sunday Silence is not America's horse, exactly. He's not Man o' War, Swaps, the horse that saved the fort or won the West. But, he's the big horse around the barns at Belmont this week.

Off in a corner, his bright blue eyes missing nothing, the canny old trainer, Charlie Whittingham, the Casey Stengel of the horse business, looks him over for telltale signs of short-windedness, trembling in the legs. He feels him for heat, then nods. A blanket is thrown over Sunday Silence and he is turned over to the oat bin.

Charlie is satisfied. His horse is ready. He's got the horse, where are the windows?

THIS DOES not mean Sunday Silence is as sure a thing as Mike Tyson or sunset in the West. If winning a Triple Crown is not the hardest thing to win in sports, it's in the photo. It's as hard in its way as winning a Grand Slam in tennis or golf, or winning three titles at the same time in the ring.

In the first place, it's not only contested in three different places but in three different states. Belmont is not a track, it's a country. The track itself is a mile and a half in circumference and the race Saturday goes around all of it. Nothing a horse has done in his life so far fits him for this test.

You don't have to say winning the Triple Crown is the hardest thing in sports to do but the last time a horse won it, Jimmy Carter was President, you could buy a new car for less than $10,000 and coffee was a quarter.

THE BELMONT Stakes is 121 years old and they ran 51 of them before anyone won the Triple Crown at all. That was Sir Barton and he beat two horses. There never are a lot of horses in the Belmont but the ones that are there are quality. They all have a chance. No ribbon clerks here.

They went a half-century before the first Triple Crown winner and a quarter-century between winners No. 8, Citation in 1948, and No. 9, Secretariat in 1973. There have only been 11 winners in the 121-year history of the stake.

There's a misconception that, because of its distance — 5/16ths of a mile longer than the Preakness, a quarter of a mile longer than the Derby — stamina will win it. You can go broke betting that way. If a field has a bunch of mile-and-an-eighth horses in it, the best mile-and-an-eighth horse will win the mile-and-a-half race. And American horses are not bred to go much more than a mile anyway. Sprinters win the Belmont. All the time.

WHAT WINS a Belmont are the same things that win any other title fight — speed and courage. Thoroughbred racers, you have to know, are the most faint-hearted of athletes. If they were fighters, they'd never get up. In football, they'd run out of bounds. In baseball, they'd take a called third strike and hope for a walk.

Once a thoroughbred is passed, he's through. Quits in his corner. In poker, thoroughbreds would fold aces. What they are is yellow, to tell you the truth.

Sunday Silence is not. But, neither, you have to say is Easy Goer. When a horse is alive in the Triple Crown, all the attention focuses on him. Sunday Silence is the leading man in this drama. Easy Goer gets the faithful old sidekick part. He's Tonto to Silence's Lone Ranger, Gabby Hayes to John Wayne's Ringo Kid. He gets listed alphabetically in the credits. If Sunday Silence wins again Saturday, Easy Goer becomes a trivia question, no more.

It's a melancholy role but it's one his father played before him. The last Triple Crown winner was Affirmed in 1978. He beat a horse called Alydar, Easy Goer's sire, in all three of the races by diminishing margins. Affirmed gets his name in lights. Alydar is in the fine print.

DOES EASY Goer keep the family tradition, second? Well, two years ago, a horse called Bet Twice finished second at Kentucky and Pimlico and then more than evened the score at the Belmont.

It came about this way: Not too long ago, the Triple Crown was just a newspaper diadem. Only journalists in search of an angle linked the three races.

Until 1985, that is. That's when a Kentucky Derby winner infelicitously named Spend A Buck contemptuously dismissed the Preakness and the Gasp! Quick, Jeeves, the smelling salts! Triple Crown itself for an upstart race called the Jersey Derby, which paid the winner $2.6 million for breaking with tradition.

Faced with this proletarian revolt, the Triple Crown tracks hastily banded together and fell into each others' arms to guard against further defections of this kind. Chrysler, stepped in, posting $1 million for any horse scoring the most points in a Triple Crown series — five points for first, three for second and one for third. They further guaranteed a Triple Crown winner would clear $5 million.

IT OPENED an intriguing panel of possibilities. By finishing second twice to Alysheba in the Derby and Preakness, Bet Twice earned six points, to Alysheba's 10. But when he won the Belmont and Alysheba finished out of the money, Bet Twice heisted the million dollars right out of Alysheba's pocket, posting 11 points to his rival's 10.

The same thing could happen Saturday. By holding on courageously over the oil slick that was Churchill Downs in the Derby and then engaging Sunday Silence in an ears-flat, toe-to-toe slugfest at Pimlico, Easy Goer has left the issue in as much doubt as the second Dempsey-Tunney fight. Easy Goer needs a knockout to win but Bet Twice landed it two years ago. And it's a million-dollar shot.

Sugar Ray adds bulk for Hearn

By TIM DAHLBERG

LAS VEGAS (AP) — No bully would dare kick sand in Sugar Ray Leonard's face at the beach these days.

Leonard, who once relied on speed and balance to win fights, is noticeably more solid and well-developed as he approaches Monday night's fight against Thomas Hearns.

He has shown off his new muscles at every opportunity, and taken pains to make sure Hearn has noticed.

He has. "It's like you think you're a body-builder," Hearn told Leonard at Thursday's final prefight press conference. "You're blown up like a big balloon."

HEARNS and his manager, Emanuel Steward, even suggested that steroids might be the reason for Leonard's increased body definition.

But Leonard, who expects to weigh about 162 pounds for the fight, credits work on the heavy bag for making him look like a full-fledged middleweight.

"It's something he learned while training for the (Donny) Lalonde fight," Leonard's attorney, Mike Trainer, said. "I think now the message has gotten across that Ray's bigger and stronger than the man he (Hearn) fought in 1981."

Leonard believes the added bulk and his maturity as a fighter at the age of 33 can do nothing but help him against Hearn.

"I think if anything I'm able to stop an opponent faster," he said. "I'm stronger, I take my time more, set things up."

Both Leonard and Hearn were scheduled to complete their final workouts Saturday as they tapered off training for the scheduled 12-round fight for Leonard's 168-pound World Boxing Council title.

BOTH fighters are expected to weigh in Monday at less than 164 pounds, the reported contract weight for the bout.

The rematch of their Sept. 16, 1981, fight for the undisputed welterweight title will be lucrative, with Leonard earning at least $13 million and Hearn at least $11 million.

"The fact that it's Tommy is enough motivation for me," Leonard said. "I'm looking forward to this fight with tremendous anticipation."

ROSE ATTORNEYS FACE OBSTACLE— Pete Rose's lawyer Robert A. Pitcairn, Jr., says the breakdown of an agreement to interrogate Ronald Peters, who claims to have booked at least $1 million in Rose bets, has been the biggest obstacle in preparing for the baseball commissioner's hearing.

U.S. DRAGGING FEET— Robert Hayward, member of the House of Commons, said in Parliament that American sports organizations are lagging in the fight against drugs, observing the worldwide battle to rid sports of drugs cannot succeed unless the United States stops talking and starts acting against the problem. "There is a general belief in American society at present that they are tackling the problem of drugs in society and in sport. That is not the case." He targeted the U.S. Olympic Committee as a major impediment to drug-testing action, saying its approval last weekend of joint American-Soviet testing of athletes is inadequate.

Violent storms fail to stop Gary Player

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — Heavy rain and strong winds knocked out power and blew down trees at the Senior Tournament Players Championship Friday, but couldn't stop Gary Player.

The three-time Masters champion shot a 6-under-par on the 6,646-yard TPC at Sawgrass Valley Course for a one-stroke lead over Butch Baird.

Player, who won the $700,000 tournament in 1987, completed his round just before a storm sent most of the leaders scrambling for the clubhouse for a delay lasting 54 minutes.

Several trees were blown down and debris scattered on some parts of the course. Electrical power was restored about an hour after play resumed.

"It was getting dark and a little scary coming up to 18," said Player.

"I did get a little distracted," he said. "That was a disappointment, but I played very well overall."

Player, ninth on the Senior Tour in earnings this season, shot a 68 in Thursday's opening round and finished with a two-day total of 10-under-par 134.

Baird, who shared the first-day lead with Arnold Palmer, Orville Moody and three others golfers, had a 68. Palmer and Moody shot 69s to trail Graham, Tom Shaw and Dick Howell, the other three first-round co-leaders, struggled.

Inspired Rizzo leads Bradley

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Patti Rizzo used the inspiration from a friend in the gallery to post a second straight round of 14 points for a total of 28 to win $4,000 in the $400,000 Pat Bradley International tournament Friday.

Myra Blackwelder scored 26 points and won $2,000.

Rizzo was at 16 points through her first nine holes and admitted she had conceded the first-place money to Blackwelder, who won $2,000 for finishing first in the opening round.

"I had said to him going into 8 that this all seems for nothing now," Rizzo said. "He said to me 'Yes it is. I got a bet on you.' He was not forcing me, but saying it in a joking way. He said 'Come on, you can score the most points of the day and feel proud of yourself.' I said OK."

After she fell to 16 points with a bogey at her ninth hole, Rizzo sank an eight-foot putt for birdie at 10, and followed with an 18-footer for 22 points. Birdies at her 15th and 16th holes capped the round.

"I just wanted to keep getting as many (birdies) as I could," she said. "I was kind of free-wheeling it out there."

Under the modified Stableford scoring system, birdies are worth three points, pars score nothing and bogeys cost a player one point. For Saturday's third round, the field of 144 will be cut in half and scores from the first two rounds will be erased. But Rizzo said she's already gotten a lot out of the first two days.

"I like not being scared. You can talk yourself out of things real easily when you're out there playing stroke play and it's coming down to the wire," Rizzo said. "I think I realize now more of why those players are in the top five on the money list. It's because they're not afraid to make bogeys."

Blackwelder, who had 21 points through one round, expects a battle for the final 36 players who will compete on Sunday.

"It's going to be a dogfight out there," Blackwelder said. "It will be real interesting."

"Maybe what I'll do is just try to get into a rhythm on the front nine, see what happens and see where I stand," he said. "If things aren't going so well, just try to stay relaxed, don't press and try to play golf. I really don't think anybody really knows what to do."

Blackwelder had two points at the turn after bogeying her second hole and sinking a 10-foot putt for birdie at the par-5 sixth hole. On the backside, she posted two birdies and two bogeys.

Rain halts Westchester play

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — First-round leader Tom Sieckmann, Australian Wayne Grady and Dick Mast shared the lead Friday before rain halted play in the Westchester Classic.

Meanwhile, Curtis Strange, the last golfer to finish before second-round play was stopped, completed a 65 that moved him into contention.

A steady rain flooded portions of the Westchester Country Club course and forced a suspension of play at 1:05 p.m. EDT, with 99 players in the field of 157 still out or awaiting their starting times.

They are scheduled to come back to the saturated course Saturday morning to complete the second round.

After the full field has completed the second round, the field will be cut to the low 70 scorers and the third round will be played later Saturday.

The day-late second-round starters will be chasing Sieckmann, Grady and Mast, who were grouped at 134, eight under par.

Sieckmann had a 70 in the difficult conditions. Grady shot 65, six under par, in the rain and wind. Mast, winless in nine seasons on the PGA Tour, slogged in with a 68.

Strange, who will defend his U.S. Open title next week at Rochester, N.Y., was tied for 79th starting the day's play but moved to within three strokes of the leaders at 137 with his bogey-free effort.

"Don't ask me how I did it," Strange said.

"You go out on a day like this with not the greatest expectations. You know par is going to be a good score. You don't put pressure on yourself and you make a few birdies and all of a sudden it's a 65."

J.C. Snead, 48, who scored the eighth victory of his career in this tournament two years ago, had a 68 and was one stroke off the lead at 135.

Tom Watson had a 69 for 140. Defending Westchester champion Seve Ballesteros of Spain, Australian Greg Norman and Tom Kite, the year's leading money-winner, were just getting started when play was halted.

New products make camping more enjoyable

By DEBRA LEE BALDWIN
Copley News Service

Camping is a favorite family vacation, whether you cruise the highways in an air-conditioned Air-Stream or carry your world on your back. Today there are many new products that can make your outdoor experience easier and more enjoyable.

Campgrounds are better than ever, too. Some even have Jacuzzis and swimming pools. A camp store and game room often are part of the operation.

To get an idea of possible destinations, visit your bookstore and browse the travel section. You'll need one book with maps and facts on campgrounds, and perhaps another that tells about sightseeing in and around the area you choose. There also are videos that can give you a "how to" overview of setting up camp.

Check out a camping store when time allows. It'll be a revelation if you haven't been to one for a while. You'll be particularly impressed by new high-tech materials that are lightweight, brightly colored and weatherproof.

The basics for the beginning camper include a lantern, a flashlight or two, a portable stove, an assortment of lightweight cooking gear, a cooler, a canteen, good sleeping bags, foam pads and some form of shelter, such as a tent.

Plan to pack at least two changes of clothes, no matter how short the trip, a jacket, a raincoat and a Wind-breaker. Dress the kids (and yourself) in darker clothes that won't show dirt. Be sure everyone has at least two pairs of shoes and bring extra laces.

Improved sleeping bags are graded to handle even the coldest climates. Many are equipped with an internal zipper that acts as a temperature regulator, and layers of soft synthetic insulation that trap heat. These bags don't bunch up or bind, and they stuff easily into a pack.

Sunglasses, insect repellent and sunscreen are essential if you're traveling to hot, sunny climates. Take along a crushable hat that you can stuff inside your pack or bag.

Include a sewing kit, clothesline (ideally a stretchy one with hooks on each end) and biodegradable detergent. Refill any prescriptions you may need.

No camping trip is complete without a first-aid kit and a Swiss army knife (make sure it includes a pair of scissors). Bring magnesium matches, in case you forget your lighter.

Zane Grey summed up one of camping's greatest pleasures: "Fishing is a condition of mind wherein one cannot possibly have a bad time." So remember to restock your tackle box.

If your idea of roughing it is doing without your electric blanket, you're not alone. Many campers make the wilderness cozy with RVs complete with four-burner stoves, double-compartment sinks, refrigerators, electric lights and TV sets.

RVs range from pickup campers to huge motor homes. In between are travel trailers, tag-along tent trailers, car-toppers and vans.

Some campers, however, prefer the sound of rain beating on canvas. They read books by candlelight, campfire or lamp. Yet even these back-to-basics types often opt for cozy sleeping bags above insulated pads. And they wear down booties on their feet.

The camera that most experienced campers and backpackers prefer is a small, automatic 35mm. It's compact and lightweight and fits easily inside a pocket.

High-tech tents have insect- and snake-proof sewn-in floors and screened zipper doors. Tents designed for backpackers weigh less than 5 pounds — complete with guy ropes and aluminum stakes. Canvas has, for the most part, been replaced with rip-proof lightweight nylon. Aluminum frames form a supporting arch over the tent.

There's no better way to leave the rat race behind than to strap a pack on your back and head into the hinterland.

"Twenty years ago in the Sierra," advises a veteran backpacker, "there was no need to carry a one-burner stove and heavy fuel. There was plenty of downed firewood around. You can't count on this largess now. Better bring your own stove and fuel."

Fortunately, stoves have become lightweight and packable — characteristics of most backpacking products now stocked by wilderness outfitters.

They are scheduled to come back to the saturated course Saturday morning to complete the second round.

Attorney divides days between law, church

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — During the week, Jimmy Odabashian can be found representing clients at the Cameron County Courthouse. On evenings and weekends, he leads Bible studies at his home and preaches at a modern dance studio, which he rents from his sister-in-law.

Odabashian's jobs as attorney and minister keep him on a hectic 80-hour-a-week schedule and he admitted juggling them is difficult.

"When I first heard the word bi-vocation, it sounded so good, so easy," he said. "It's difficult to keep my priorities straight. My family comes first, then church, then the job. Of course, God is on top always. It really is two full-time jobs."

Odabashian said he chose to become a lawyer, but it was God's call, not his own desire, to enter the ministry.

"I don't think it's something you decide to do because you want to go up in front of people and talk," he said. "It's more than standing up in front of people for an hour on Sunday. It requires being involved and willing to listen. One of the commands of love is to be willing to listen and to have the door of your home open to people when they're in trouble, hurting, disappointed, excited and full of joy."

The word bi-vocation didn't enter into Odabashian's vocabulary much until he found himself with two jobs.

Odabashian

He has been an attorney since 1973 and hadn't considered adding a hyphen to his job description. That changed in 1986 after he attended the North American Conference on Evangelism in New Orleans and heard a speaker address the topic.

"He said today many pastors are holding onto a secular job and also ministering," Odabashian said in his office that he shares with another attorney. "In many denominations this isn't anything new, but I felt like that was something I could do. I could continue my law practice and work toward the establishment of a church."

Two years later, that's exactly what he did. He started a non-denominational, full-gospel church to reach the "lost" between 20 and 40 years of age and named it Solid Rock Christian Fellowship. Before making the move, however, he made certain his wife, Pat, shared his vision.

"We were in California at a seminar, and Pat saw the ministry as I had been describing it to her," he said. "She realized she didn't have to be packaged as a 'pastor's wife.' She could be herself and retain her individuality and still move with God and minister as a woman."

Odabashian, a 40-year-old Brownsville native who sometimes wears a salt-and-pepper beard, graduated from the University of Houston law school. It was when he landed a job as an assistant district attorney for Cameron County that he thought he had found his lifetime profession. Gradually he became disenchanted with his work and personal life.

"By the time 1976 rolled around, I had become everything I said I wouldn't be," he said. "My marriage wasn't going well. I was drinking too much. I had a lot of fear. And it came to the point where I knew I was out of control."

The solution to his inner turmoil, he said, was a personal encounter with God.

"I needed to come to Jesus because my life was a mess," he said. "I cried out from my heart, and God didn't disappoint. He moved in like gangbusters and started to work me over and reshape me. My whole life changed."

Odabashian said he immediately lost all desire for alcohol and tobacco.

"I had tried to quit smoking for years. Smoking wasn't the issue, not even drinking," he said. "They just reflected a need I had. Those are exterior things. God moved in and changed something on the inside of me."

In 1977, he closed his law practice and moved with his family to California to attend a seminary. A year later, he returned to Brownsville. He had a desire even then to start a church, but it would be 10 years before his vision became reality. In the meantime, he continued to practice law and became an elder at an established full-gospel church.

"There was a certain frustration (with law)," he said. "I had worked for the DA's office, and I had done some family law work as well as representing Cameron County Child Welfare. It was pretty obvious to me that the system of man were limited, and there was a growing dissatisfaction."

Although he handles a variety of legal assignments ranging from real estate and wills to criminal work, the majority of his practice involves family law. In most cases, it concerns couples who want a divorce. They don't always realize that Odabashian will make every effort to encourage a reconciliation.

"Many of the men and women who come in here don't realize or don't know they have other options," he said. "There are other alternatives to divorce. One is the Biblical alternative, which is to love your wife and love your husband. They don't realize that that's a decision, not a feeling."

In both jobs, Odabashian said he deals with people who have serious problems.

"The difference is that I believe there's a far greater opportunity to reach a solution with people who come with spiritual problems than people who have been wronged and are seeking redress in the courts."

Odabashian's intention is to gradually phase out his career as a lawyer and work exclusively as a pastor. Until then, he'll be Jimmy Odabashian: lawyer-minister.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Extension seminary courses begin in area

The Presbytery of Tres Rios and Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary have joined together to bring extension seminary courses to the Midland/Odessa area. The classes are designed for those interested, but not able to attend regular classes at the seminary in Austin, according to Dr. A.L. Moreau, director of the West Texas Extension of APTS.

The first of the courses will be "Reformed Theology," taught by Dr. Alan Edmond Lewis, professor of constructive and modern theology at APTS.

The two-week course will meet at Trinity Presbyterian Church, 2800 W. Louisiana, July 24-Aug. 4. Classes will meet Monday through Friday, 7-10 p.m., for a total of 30 class hours. Students may audit the course or enroll as a "special student" of the seminary and take the course for six credit hours.

"Anyone interested in quality theological education may participate," says a release from the Presbytery of Tres Rios.

"The program will be especially attractive to persons interested in beginning work toward a master of divinity degree; persons working toward certification as Christian educators; and lay persons interested in deepening their knowledge and competence."

Because the course is intensive in nature, early registration is encouraged. Those enrolling will be given a list of assignments and reading to start on prior to the class. There will also be a paper to be completed following the class sessions.

For enrollment information, Dr. Moreau may be contacted at P.O. Box 5111, Midland 79704 or 682-2514.

Group to be commissioned

During the 11 a.m. worship service Sunday at First Presbyterian Church, the second group of Stephen Ministers will be commissioned to their ministry of care and support in the congregation.

They will join 20 previously trained members of the congregation in this ministry.

The new group consists of Ben Hoffacker Jr., Robert K. Hudson, Sadie Hudson, Barbara Ann Jordan, Sarah Nelsig, Blanche Pluckett, Jane Ramsland, Susan Snelson and Diane Young.

Stephen Ministers, named after one of the first deacons in the Christian Church, receive 50 hours of basic skills training in listening, dealing with feelings, using the traditional resources of Christianity, maintaining confidentiality and many others.

Upon completion of training, Stephen Ministers are commissioned into active caring ministry on a one-to-one basis with people who are going through major or minor crisis in their lives. This may include hospitalization, grief, depression, loneliness, divorce, loss of job and other situations which call for understanding and support. This is a way of multiplying the caring ministry exercised in a congregation.

This ministry, begun in the early 1980s by a Lutheran pastor who was also a trained clinical psychologist, now exists in nearly 3,000 congregations of the major denominations in the United States and offers an authentic and high-level ministry of caring for a congregation.

Marketplace created

First Presbyterian Church is again creating Marketplace 29 A.D. the week of June 12-18, from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

Marketplace is a program for children, ages four years through sixth grade, which goes beyond the typical vacation Bible school. It is designed to create the atmosphere of a middle-eastern marketplace in the year 29 A.D. when Jesus was on earth.

The children will be exposed to the activities common at that time as well as the people one might have met. The marketplace idea follows the church's philosophy that children learn best when they are involved. This year there will once again be plenty for them to explore as they participate in rope-making, pottery, weaving, bread-making, carpentry and much more.

The theme will introduce children to people who met Jesus. Through drama, music, storytelling and more they will meet a blind man, a tax collector, a beggar and others who knew Jesus. First Presbyterian believes this will be a week which will not only be fun and full of activities, but will also have significant impact in the lives of children.

If you would like to have your child be a part of Marketplace 29 A.D., please call the church office at 684-7821 or bring your child at 9 a.m. Monday, June 12 for registration.

Singles seminar offered

A "Successful Single Living" seminar will be conducted June 23-25 at Kelvyn Heights Baptist Church.

The seminar, for those formerly married and yet to be married, will be led by Clyde Beeson.

"The seminar is designed to help singles through the emotional trauma of a dissolved marriage or relationship, cope with single living, to use the present situation as an opportunity of personal growth and to use the past as a means of improving future relationships," says a release from the church.

The seminar was created by Beeson, who is the author of "Picking Up the Pieces: Success Single Living" and the founder of Christian Growth Ministries, a non-profit organization to provide seminars and counseling.

The seminar begins at 6:30 p.m. Friday, June 23, continues June 24 and concludes with a singles rally at 10 a.m. June 25.

A children's seminar will be available for those in the first through sixth grade. This seminar is entitled "Healing the Hurts" and runs concurrent with the adult seminar.

For more information and a registration form call the church, 682-3842.

Crestview has film series

Crestview Baptist Church Family Ministry Summer Film and Video Series continues Sunday at 5:45 p.m. in Adult 4 Department in the church's Education/Activity Center.

"The Strong-Willed Child" being shown today features Dr. James Dobson who deals with the difference between childish irresponsibility vs. willful defiance.

On June 18, "Preparing for Adolescence: The Origin of Self-Doubt," Dr. Dobson discusses how to build self-esteem in pre-teenagers and youth.

A heartwarming new family film, "A Man Called Norman," scheduled June 25, tells a true story of love, acceptance and following God's will.

Crestview Baptist Church is located at Illinois and Midkiff, adjacent to Dellwood Mall.

The church's regular meetings times are Sunday morning worship at 8:30 and 10:50 a.m.; evening worship at 7 p.m. and Sunday school at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday night prayer service is held in the church's Education/Activity Center at 6 p.m. each week.

Divorce workshop begins

"Some Answers to the Divorce Dilemma," a divorce-adjustment seminar, will be presented by the Singles Ministry of Golf Course Road Church of Christ, 3500 W. Golf Course Rd. today from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The semi-annual event is being presented by Tom Vermillion, minister to singles for the church. He has conducted numerous divorce-related seminars around the United States and has published numerous articles on ministry to the divorced.

Topics included in the seminar will address divorce's effect on children, the emotions of divorce, God's healing for divorce, and making the adjustment journey.

Vermillion will also host a six-week support group beginning June 11, from 6-7 p.m. to offer encouragement and acceptance to the participants.

Child care can be arranged through the church office at 684-8836.

Shatner doesn't like being told he's too old for 'Star Trek' role

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Any suggestion that the crew of the Starship Enterprise is getting a tad old to be zipping about the galaxy at warp speed brings a phaser stare from the man who plays Capt. James T. Kirk.

"I keep reading that, that we're too old, but they never say too old for what," said William Shatner, the 58-year-old star, director and co-writer of the latest Star Trek film, "Star Trek V: The Final Frontier."

Shatner said he keeps cool when people point out lines on his face or that he doesn't have the same jaw line of 25 years ago. "But what does make me angry is when some jerk keeps talking about this age thing, like we've gotten too old to entertain people and belong in a home somewhere," he said in a recent interview. "I don't think I look too old to get up and hit some guy in a movie."

NEW YORK (AP) — Ted Kennedy Jr., who lost a leg to cancer at age 13, says he used to feel pity for people with disabilities.

"I imagine that, like most young people at the time, I didn't really expect that a person with a disability could accomplish anything in life," Kennedy writes in the Sunday issue of Parade magazine.

"Now I, too, have a close bond with such individuals, because I share the characteristic that makes them 'very special' — a disability that challenges me every day of my life," said Kennedy, 29, board member of Very Special Arts, which promotes work of disabled artists.

NEW YORK (AP) — Novelist Larry McMurtry is the new president of the American Center of PEN, a writers organization.

The Texas-born author of some 14 novels, including "The Last Picture Show," "Terms of Endearment" and the 1986 Pulitzer-Prize winner "Lonesome Dove," succeeded Susan Sontag at PEN's annual meeting Wednesday night.

Past presidents include Norman Mailer, Jerzy Kosinski, Arthur Miller, Bernard Malamud and Robert Frost.

GREENEVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Entertainer Pat Boone calls himself an approachable celebrity. Boone, known for his charity work and popular hits of the 1950s, said "many of today's stars are remote to their young fans."

"They are unreal," he said this week. "They don't try to identify with kids and kids can't identify with them. They (youngsters) know they're not going to have that kind of life."

Boone, a Nashville native, was in Greenville to dedicate a new hospital emergency room, play in a charity golf tournament and perform in a concert.

JACKSON, Tenn. (AP) — Entertainer Dolly Parton isn't donating scholarship money and she won't sing, but she will talk when she shows up here June 24 to help the governor crown a new Miss Tennessee.

"She's going to talk on the show, but she won't sing," said Tom Hensley, the pageant's executive director.

Hensley said this week he asked Parton to donate scholarship money for the pageant, but she said she already has a program through which she gives college money to every high school graduate in her native Sevier County.

Hensley then invited her to help Gov. Ned McWherter crown the new Miss Tennessee.

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana works too hard, her father says.

Earl Spencer spoke to reporters after accompanying his daughter in heavy rain Thursday in central England where the princess was made an honorary Freeman of Northampton.

"I am worried that she is working too hard. In my day the royals only did one job a day and she sometimes does two or three," the earl, 65, said of his 27-year-old daughter, wife of Prince Charles, heir to the British throne.

But Spencer, once an aide to the late King George VI, added that the princess "loves" her work.

"Someone said to me recently that the two most famous people in the world are the Pope and my daughter. I am so proud," the earl confided.

Diana carries out some 250 engagements a year, far behind the 665 fulfilled last year by Princess Anne, her sister-in-law.

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — An Athens court on Friday granted Premier Andreas Papandreu a divorce, ending his 38-year marriage to his American-born wife, Margaret, a court spokesman said.

The court issued the divorce on the basis of a suit Papandreu filed on March 30 saying the couple had been separated for at least four years, the spokesman said on condition of anonymity.

The 70-year-old Papandreu has been living with former airline hostess Dimitra Liani, 35, since October.

Papandreu married the former Margaret Chant, 66, of Elmhurst, Ill., in 1951. They have four children.

Mrs. Papandreu played an active role in the country's political life. For many years she was the leader of the Greek Womens Union, the largest feminist group in Greece, until she resigned earlier this year.

She resigned after Papandreu's ruling Panhellenic Socialist Movement pressured her to give up her prominent role in the feminist movement for fear she would undermine her husband's re-election efforts. At the time, Ms. Liani had replaced her as the premier's companion.

Greek newspapers have speculated that he may marry Ms. Liani next Sunday, one week before the June 18 general elections.

Calvary schedules revival

A one-week revival beginning Sunday and going through June 16 at Calvary Assembly of God Church, 908 South Johnston, will feature Ron and Paula Kelley as guest speakers. Services will be at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. on Sunday. Monday through Friday services will begin at 7:30 p.m. Rev. Gayle Reeves, pastor, invites the public to attend.

Evangelists Ron and Paula Kelley believe that music and the preaching of God's Word go hand in hand.

Their ministry has taken them into many states from the smallest church to some of the largest as well as Youth Camps, Youth Conventions and television ministries.

Turnout at convention expected to be low

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Many Southern Baptists are expected to shun this year's denominational convention in Las Vegas, Nev., because of the city's distance from Baptist enclaves and the reputation of the gamblers' paradise.

Some may also do so because they're tired of the prolonged partisan strife in the 14.8 million-member denomination, the country's largest Protestant body.

Although its annual conventions in recent years have attracted large crowds, hitting a high mark of 45,000 in 1985, only 13,000 to 15,000 are expected June 13-15 at the Las Vegas Convention Center.

Lee Porter, registration secretary, estimated the reduced attendance based on responses from congregations. Each may send a maximum number of delegates, called "messengers," based on membership and financial contributions.

For the last 10 years, huge turnouts have been spurred by the conflict going on between fundamentalist and moderate factions. Although the struggle continues, fatigue with

Catholics, Lutherans try to mend fences

CHICAGO (AP) — As a symbolic gesture in reverse of Martin Luther's nailing to a church door his 16th century challenge to Roman Catholicism, a new covenant between Catholics and Lutherans here was posted on a church door.

Signed and celebrated at a joint service, the covenant between local Roman Catholic leaders and the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America affirms that they share much in faith and pledges work for full unity.

To remove remaining barriers, Chicago Lutheran Bishop Sherman G. Hicks advised: "Let us listen to each other in dialogue and admonish one another in a spirit of love and gentleness."

Cardinal Joseph Bernardin, Chicago's Catholic archbishop, said: "We celebrate our covenant as servants and partners, not denying our differences...but not being immobilized by them either. Our common baptism serves as the foundation for more complete unity."

CHICAGO (AP) — Of those answering a survey on prayer by the monthly U.S. Catholic, 92 percent said that they have had specific prayers answered. Seventy-five percent say they could cite instances when God answered a prayer that they virtually despaired of being answered.

Lecture series underway

"Tough Questions for Thinking Christians," a new series of lectures, is scheduled at 7 p.m. Wednesdays through August 23 at Golf Course Road Church of Christ.

Speakers for the class are Douglas Parsons, pulpit minister for the church, and Gary Grady, the church's family minister.

The series is designed to explore issues that face contemporary Christians in their daily lives, such as careers for mothers of small children, divorce and remarriage, funeral planning, homosexuality, the right-to-die movement, and the care of the aged and infirm. A more specific calendar is available from the church office.

No offerings will be taken and children's classes will be provided during the lecture time.

Group finds new site

The Midland Monthly Meeting of the Religious Society of Friends has announced a new meeting site.

On the first and third Sundays of each month, the Friends will be meeting at the Unitarian-Universalist Church of Midland at 5:30 p.m. for unprogrammed worship. On other Sundays, the members will continue to meet in members' homes.

"All seekers are invited to share in this unique form of worship," says a Society of Friends release.

For more information, call 699-5512 or 697-1828.

Wade has gospel meeting

Ronnie Wade, evangelist from Springfield, Mo., will hold a gospel meeting at the Hughes Street Church of Christ, 1701 Hughes, from Thursday, June 8 through Sunday, June 11. Services are scheduled nightly at 7:30 p.m. Sunday services will be at 10:30 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Future uncertain for Meski Turks

By MARK J. PORUBCANSKY

MOSCOW (AP) — The last time Nazi Mir Vagir-Zade saw her father, he was in a frightened crowd of people looking for a way to flee the mob that set fire to their homes.

The next day, she said her fear of the rampaging mobs caused her to suffer a miscarriage. But after two days in the hospital she fled to Moscow from the Fergana Valley of Uzbekistan to save herself and her 22-month-old son Ali.

Mrs. Vagir-Zade was one of the people caught up in violence that swept the Central Asian republic of Uzbekistan.

Her husband, an engineer, insisted on staying behind Tuesday to look for her father and older brother. But there has been no further word from the family in the fertile valley 1,500 miles southeast of Moscow.

Communications are cut off.

On Friday, a week after the rioting reached her hometown of Fergana, the 31-year-old teacher placed a black lace scarf of mourning around her shoulders and joined 100 other Meski Turks pleading at a Moscow government office for a meeting with President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to stop the bloodshed.

Gorbachev was finishing the first session of the Congress of People's Deputies at the Kremlin, and by late afternoon there had been no meeting.

The Meski Turks were not surprised. They said it was the 148th delegation they've sent to Moscow since 1957. They said they've seen no results.

The Turks say overcrowding and economic frustrations have raised tensions among Uzbeks and Meski Turks, who were exiled to the region from their native Georgia by Stalin in 1944.

Mrs. Vagir-Zade didn't know whether her father or her older brother are among the 80 dead.

Seated in a small downtown Moscow park on Friday, she related her experiences in an emotional but steady voice.

Homes built by the Turks when they were exiled "are all burned down," she said. The crowd that included her father gathered Sunday in downtown Fergana not knowing how to protect themselves. "The people were all afraid, and no one knew where to run, what to do."

The next day, "I ended up in the maternity hospital because of my fear, and I had a miscarriage. I lost a 3-month-old child," she said. "When I wanted to leave, not one Uzbek taxi driver would pick me up. A Russian man stopped for me in his private car."

"We don't have anywhere to go. The Uzbeks want to clean us out and in Georgia, our homeland, they don't want us," she said.

The late dictator Josef Stalin forced the Turks to move to Uzbekistan from Soviet Georgia in 1944.

"I still don't know where my father and older brother are, what has happened to them," she said.

Another brother, two sisters-in-law, nieces and nephews are among about 10,000 Meski Turks now living in open-air camps protected by some of the 9,000 Interior Ministry soldiers sent to the region to restore order.

When the rioting started, ethnic Uzbeks began hanging red rags or cloths from their houses to ensure that the mobs could distinguish them, she said.

Rioters, mostly young people armed with knives, gasoline bombs, clubs and some firearms, split into bands of a few hundred and terrorized neighborhoods and whole cities, she said.

Local authorities didn't try to stop the violence, she charged.

Some Uzbeks risked their lives to protect friends.

Mrs. Vagir-Zade said her own house was still standing when she left because her neighbors convinced rioters that Uzbeks lived there. "But I can't chance having our neighbors risk their lives and their children for us," she added. "So I decided to take my baby to Moscow."

Karib Aliev, a Meski Turk from Frunze, Kirghizia, 250 miles northeast of the Fergana Valley, said the small valley of cotton and grapes was peaceful for decades until it filled up with people and the economy went sour. "As soon as the economic situation got bad, they began to demand that we be sent back," he said.

The valley is home to 2.5 million people. "There is no longer any land to build a house, not enough work, and the economic situation has gotten worse," he said.

Mrs. Vagir-Zade, reflecting on the future, said it was impossible to go back to Fergana and start over there.

"My mother died last year, and I think she was a lot luckier than us, because she didn't see this," she said.

U.S. vetoes U.N. resolution condemning Israeli violence

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States vetoed a Security Council resolution Friday calling it unbalanced because it condemned Israel's crackdown in the occupied territories but did not address Palestinian violence.

The vote was 14-1 with American allies Britain, France and Canada supporting the resolution. In weeks of negotiation and argument before the vote the United States sought first to block debate and then to obtain amendments.

U.S. Ambassador Thomas R. Pickering said the resolution made "sweeping condemnations of Israel's policies and practices without any reference to any of the serious acts of violence by the other side."

"It does not condemn violence from all quarters or affirm that all parties have a responsibility to help reduce tensions," he said.

Arab League Ambassador Clovis

Maksoud called the veto "a major disappointment. It indicates how entrenched is the U.S. bias in favor of Israel and how cosmetic and superficial can be U.S. official proclamations of concern for Palestinian suffering and rights."

He said the league had hoped the Bush administration was moving toward a more even-handed position in the Arab-Israeli conflict.

At least 513 Palestinians have been killed during the 18-month-old rebellion in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, and 22 Israelis have been slain. Israel captured the territories from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 war.

Israel said the denunciations of the Jewish state prove an international conference on the Middle East would be accomplished nothing.

The Soviet Union, France and Finland said Friday an international conference should be held under U.N. auspices as away to begin peace negotiations.

U.S. rallies show support for slain Chinese protesters

Associated Press

Thousands rallied in U.S. cities Friday to support China's battered democracy movement with "freedom" headbands in New York, ringing church bells in Chicago and peace songs in San Diego.

In New York, more than 15,000 people packed Dan Hammarskjold Plaza, across from the United Nations. One of them, Tommy Chiu, 24, a native of Canton, said, "I feel terrible. I still can't believe the people's army used their guns against unarmed students."

On campuses across the country, students facing final examinations took time out to remember their slain peers in Beijing. In Los Angeles, Hispanic students helped Asian-Americans organize an afternoon march, and friends of a student missing in China circulated petitions. Chinese students at Princeton University in New Jersey held a memorial service.

About 1,500 people gathered in downtown Chicago, where SaSa Lu, a Chinese-American student from Northwestern University, promised the victims of the army assault on Tiananmen Square. "We will show your younger brothers and sisters where you have fallen."

"No matter how violent or repressive, no government can forever deny the hopes and aspirations of its citizens," Mayor Richard M. Daley said. "We are here this afternoon to show our solidarity with the Chinese people." Church bells throughout the city rang after a moment of silence at the rally.

In New York, where many wore white headbands with the word "freedom" scrawled across them, Mayor Edward I. Koch drew cheers when he said, "All these students wanted was a chance to speak with their own government about democracy."

Koch urged President Bush to go before the U.N. Security Council and "say to the representative of the People's Republic, 'Shame, shame, shame.'" The mayor promised to rename the corner outside the Chinese consulate as Tiananmen Square.

At a mock funeral procession through New York's Chinatown, several marchers carried a figure inspired by the Statue of Liberty and similar to one displayed by the student protesters in Tiananmen Square.

Sorrow over the Chinese repression of the pro-democracy movement dominated comments around the country.

"We thought maybe the government was going to change," said S.Y. Cheng, a University of California, Los Angeles, professor originally from Hong Kong. "Sometimes I think all of us are too naive."

"They shouldn't give up. They should continue. They don't fear dying," Zhewu Wang, 31, a visiting scholar at the University of Iowa from the northeast China city of Harbin, said in Iowa City.

With Beijing gripped by a hard-line Communist crackdown on dissent, Chinese nationals in the United States gloried in their ability to support their country's pro-democracy movement from exile.

"You can do more here than in China," said Liu Dianding, a Stanford University graduate student studying petroleum engineering. He said it's "not necessary to shed more blood. It's better to preserve your strength for fighting for democracy."

Tong Boning, 25, a UCLA graduate mathematics student who went home to deliver donations to the protesters in Tiananmen Square, hasn't been seen since Monday, when he was trying to leave China. In Los Angeles, a rally organized by his friends called for public pressure for his release.

Bush has pledged to extend visas to spare dissident students from having to return home as long as the atmosphere remains dangerous. While Bush said the Chinese students are not seeking amnesty, a legal status that would let them stay permanently, Edward Lau, a San Francisco lawyer, said he is petitioning members of Congress to declare a blanket amnesty for the students.

"Especially on the West Coast, I would say we're going to see large numbers of people applying to stay here. I would say several thousand in the Bay area," said David Ilchert, district director for the Immigration and Naturalization Service in San Francisco.

At the University of California, San Diego, about 150 Chinese and American students sang John Lennon's "Imagine" and other peace anthems at a mournful noon gathering. Organizers of the rally sold red-and-white T-shirts emblazoned with the slogan "Dying for Democracy" over a globe with China highlighted.

OVER 50

Grandparents can aid cancerous children

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

Every year, 6,600 children are diagnosed as having cancer. About half of them go into remission or recover from this dread scourge. In a world rife with unfairness, the link of children and death ranks with the most unfair of all.

When a child has cancer or any other dread disease, the whole family is affected dramatically. Grandparents find themselves in a different role than before and they can be invaluable. The families that withstand such an assault best are those whose members communicate with each other, that share information and listen.

So says Jean Dycus, director of social work at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, an institution whose primary focus is children with cancer.

Often grandparents are left out," she says. "Most of the attention is on the patient and the patient's parents. Sometimes it's difficult for grandparents to get information and get their own emotional needs taken care of and recognized."

At St. Jude's counseling is considered so important that eight social workers, six psychologists and two chaplains deal with patients, families and grandparents.

There are situations where distance makes it difficult for grandparents to get as much information as they need, Dycus says, and "sometimes parents try to protect grandparents and don't want them to worry."

It's the wrong thing to do, she says. Knowing the grandchild's disease and prospects for cure will help allay fears.

"Sometimes we help them get the medical attention they need," she adds. "We support them in expressing their feelings and coming to the acceptance of the grandchild's fate."

St. Jude's gets about 270 children a year. The hospital has few in-patient beds and families stay in motel rooms with their children.

There is no cut and dried way to the way people react to the trauma of a critically ill child.

"People need to realize every person will react in an individual way," she says. "Grandparents are going to have different reactions, even though they are of the same generations. Their reactions may range from sadness to guilt to anger; they may have all those feelings."

Grandparents often find dealing with children's cancer doubly difficult, because they are concerned for two generations, their adult child, as well as their grandchild. For many, it means taking on new roles.

"Grandparents play two roles," Dycus says. "They either stay at home and take care of the siblings or come and assist the parents with the care of the child." On the day she was interviewed, she said, "I was here at 4 a.m. and there was a grandparent in the hall, looking for a cup of coffee. She was spending the night with the child so its mother could get some rest."

At St. Jude's, the cancer-stricken child is not kept in the dark. "Children can understand what is happening to them according to age and intellectual development," Dycus says. "Doctors include children right from the beginning."

Children are involved in the process, and that's how we get conflict. Maybe the grandparent would want to shield the child, while the parent wants to be more open. We try to help grandparents know that children do go on to survive, that they need to have a normal life and they need to have opportunities for socialization and education, and they need discipline."

Although a child is ill, grandparents should resist the inclination to indulge him or her and reinforce the parents' child care and philosophies of discipline. "It's no time to excuse misbehavior out of sympathy," says Dycus. "All children benefit from the security of consistent rules."

Dycus has been at St. Jude's since 1981. The job, she says, is heart-rending, but there's a balance. "For every ill child, there's one that's recovering," she says. "You have to keep that balance."

U.S. rallies show support for slain Chinese protesters

Associated Press

Thousands rallied in U.S. cities Friday to support China's battered pro-democracy movement with "freedom" headbands in New York, ringing church bells in Chicago and peace songs in San Diego.

In New York, more than 15,000 people packed Dag Hammarskjöld Plaza, across from the United Nations. One of them, Tommy Chiu, 24, a native of Canton, said, "I feel terrible. I still can't believe the people's army used their guns against unarmed students."

On campuses across the country, students facing final examinations took time out to remember their slain peers in Beijing. In Los Angeles, Hispanic students helped Asian-Americans organize an afternoon march, and friends of a student missing in China circulated petitions. Chinese students at Princeton University in New Jersey held a memorial service.

About 1,500 people gathered in downtown Chicago, where SaSa Lu, a Chinese-American student from Northwestern University, promised the victims of the army assault on Tiananmen Square, "We will show your younger brothers and sisters where you have fallen."

"No matter how violent or repressive, no government can forever deny the hopes and aspirations of its citizens," Mayor Richard M. Daley said. "We are here this afternoon to show our solidarity with the Chinese people." Church bells throughout the city rang after a moment of silence at the rally.

In New York, where many wore white headbands with the word "freedom" scrawled across them, Mayor Edward I. Koch drew cheers when he said, "All these students wanted was a chance to speak with their own government about democracy."

Koch urged President Bush to go before the U.N. Security Council and "say to the representative of the People's Republic, 'Shame, shame, shame.'" The mayor promised to rename the corner outside the Chinese consulate as Tiananmen Square.

At a mock funeral procession through New York's Chinatown, several marchers carried a giant effigy of the Statue of Liberty and similar to one displayed by the student protesters in Tiananmen Square.

Sorrow over the Chinese repression of the pro-democracy movement dominated comments around the country.

"We thought maybe the government was going to change," said S.Y. Cheng, a University of California, Los Angeles, professor originally from Hong Kong. "Sometimes I think all of us are too naive."

"They shouldn't give up. They should continue. They don't fear dying," Zhewu Wang, 31, a visiting scholar at the University of Iowa from the northeast China city of Harbin, said in Iowa City.

With Beijing gripped by a hard-line Communist crackdown on dissent, Chinese nationals in the United States gloried in their ability to support their country's pro-democracy movement from exile.

"You can do more here than in China," said Liu Dianding, a Stanford University graduate student studying petroleum engineering. He said it's "not necessary to shed more blood. It's better to preserve your strength for fighting for democracy."

Tong Boning, 25, a UCLA graduate mathematics student who went home to deliver donations to the protesters in Tiananmen Square, hasn't been seen since Monday, when he was trying to leave China. In Los Angeles, a rally organized by his friends called for public pressure for his release.

Bush has pledged to extend visas to spare dissident students from having to return home as long as the atmosphere remains dangerous. While Bush said the Chinese students are not seeking amnesty, a legal status that would let them stay permanently, Edward Lau, a San Francisco lawyer, said he is petitioning members of Congress to declare a blanket amnesty for the students.

"Especially on the West Coast, I would say we're going to see large numbers of people applying to stay here. I would say several thousand in the Bay area," said David Icher, district director for the Immigration and Naturalization Service in San Francisco.

At the University of California, San Diego, about 150 Chinese and American students sang John Lennon's "Imagine" and other peace anthems at a mournful noon gathering. Organizers of the rally sold red-and-white T-shirts emblazoned with the slogan "Dying for Democracy" over a globe with China highlighted.

Grandparents can aid cancerous children

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

Every year, 6,600 children are diagnosed as having cancer. About half of them go into remission or recover from this dread scourge. In a world rife with unfairness, the link of children and death ranks with the most unfair of all.

When a child has cancer or any other dread disease, the whole family is affected dramatically. Grandparents find themselves in a different role than before and they can be invaluable. The families that withstand such an assault best are those whose members communicate with each other, that share information and listen.

So says Jean Dycus, director of social work at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, an institution whose primary focus is children with cancer.

Often grandparents are left out," she says. "Most of the attention is on the patient and the patient's parents. Sometimes it's difficult for grandparents to get information and get their own emotional needs taken care of and recognized."

At St. Jude's counseling is considered so important that eight social workers, six psychologists and two chaplains deal with patients, families and grandparents.

There are situations where distance makes it difficult for grandparents to get as much information as they need, Dycus says, and "sometimes parents try to protect grandparents and don't want them to worry."

It's the wrong thing to do, she says. Knowing the grandchild's disease and prospects for cure will help allay fears.

"Sometimes we help them get the medical attention they need," she adds. "We support them in expressing their feelings and coming to the acceptance of the grandchild's fate."

St. Jude's gets about 270 children a year. The hospital has few in-patient beds and families stay in motel rooms with their children.

There is no cut and dried way to the way people react to the trauma of a critically ill child.

"People need to realize every person will react in an individual way," she says. "Grandparents are going to have different reactions, even though they are of the same generations. Their reactions may range from sadness to guilt to anger; they may have all those feelings."

Grandparents often find dealing with children's cancer doubly difficult, because they are concerned for two generations, their adult child, as well as their grandchild. For many, it means taking on new roles.

"Grandparents play two roles," Dycus says. "They either stay at home and take care of the siblings or come and assist the parents with the care of the child." On the day she was interviewed, she said, "I was here at 4 a.m. and there was a grandparent in the hall, looking for a cup of coffee. She was spending the night with the child so its mother could get some rest."

At St. Jude's, the cancer-stricken child is not kept in the dark. "Children can understand what is happening to them according to age and intellectual development," Dycus says. "Doctors include children right from the beginning."

Children are involved in the process, and that's how we get conflict. Maybe the grandparent would want to shield the child, while the parent wants to be more open. We try to help grandparents know that children do go on to survive, that they need to have a normal life and they need to have opportunities for socialization and education, and they need discipline."

Although a child is ill, grandparents should resist the inclination to indulge him or her and reinforce the parents' child care and philosophies of discipline. "It's no time to excuse misbehavior out of sympathy," says Dycus. "All children benefit from the security of consistent rules."

Dycus has been at St. Jude's since 1981. The job, she says, is heart-rending, but there's a balance. "For every ill child, there's one that's recovering," she says. "You have to keep that balance."
