COMING SUNDAY

Great escape

Nancy Rea is among two dozen Midland women who say there's more to fitness than good muscle tone and firm thighs after spending five days at the YMCA's "Great Escape" fitness camp. Read about the camaraderie they discovered in Sunday's Lifestyle section.

Great rugs

Twelve recognized regional styles in Navajo rugs exist today. Currently on display at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum and Library Hall of Fame is an exhibit of Navajo rugs, "Crystal to Burnt Water." Read about the exhibit in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

Great hunting

Texas' varying open season dates on wild game form a confusing "patchwork" of laws, but a bill now before the Legislature would help clear up that confusion. Midlander J.C. Henderson tells why the bill should be passed in Sunday's "Speaking Out" column.

Burford, EPA receive presidential defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today strongly defended his administration's environmental record and said critics would not be happy "until the White House looks like a bird's nest."

Answering reporters' questions for the first time since Anne M. Burford resigned under fire, he said the ex-Environmental Protection Agency chief was a "far bigger person than those people who have been sniping at her and going public with unfounded allegations, accusations and charges."

Reagan said he did not know how some of the critics "managed to look at themselves in the mirror in the morning."

As for the state of the environment, the president said his administration "can be very proud of our record in environmental protection. Believe me, it tops what we found when we came here."

The president said that California, during his eight years as governor, had led the states and the federal government in environmental protection, a fact his critics never mention. He said these critics won't "be happy until the White House looks like a bird's nest.

Reagan said he would have never asked for Mrs. Burford's resignation, discounting published stories quoting unnamed aides as saying she should quit.

"When I have faith in the individual, I am not going to yield to the first attack and run for cover and throw somebody off the sleigh."

He said that Mrs. Burford had, from the start, been willing to give Congress full access to all the subpoenaed agency documents it sought and that it had been he who ordered her not to do so. Reagan said her willingness to turn over the files "shows in my book that she has nothing to hide."

At the Justice Department, however, two officials familiar with the case said Mrs. Burford had initially opposed turning over some of the documents sought by Congress and changed her mind only late in the case. The two officials spoke on the condition they not be named.

At the embatteled EPA, meanwhile, interim administrator John W. Hernandez Jr., a former college professor whose specialty was sewage, vowed to "get this agency back to work" by restoring public confidence and reviving employee morale.

Hernandez, after two years in the No. 2 job at EPA, spent his first day as acting administrator Thursday.

"I hope everyone will understand how strongly I feel about the compelling necessity to return this agency to its one and only job...to ensure all Americans of a safe and healthy environment," Hernandez said in a brief statement to reporters.

"I intend to begin immediately the task of restoring the public's faith in what I have always maintained is an exceptional agency," he said.

A short time later in a hotel near EPA headquarters, Mrs. Burford told a crowded news conference that she did not feel like she was a victim but said it was wrong to "conduct government by allegation."

"The agency has of late been embroiled in a kind of 'who-hit-John' episode that I have been a focus of attention. It is my intention in...resigning to try and get the agency back to work," she said.

Mrs. Burford appeared with her husband, Interior Department official Robert Burford, who joked at one point that the only thing his wife would have done differently was "take a honeymoon."

Violent season expected

Record tornado number possible

From Staff and Wire Reports

The one thing meteorologists know about tornadoes is that they're unpredictable. Yet they are now making one tornado prediction — there's a good chance of a record number of twisters this year.

The "Tornado Alley," which includes a large chunk of North Texas and a portion of West Texas, is in for a battering this spring because of an unusual upper-level air pattern that will push more violent storms south, National Weather Service meteorologists said Thursday in Dallas.

The Midland-Odessa area sits on the western fringe of that alley, which stretches about 300 to 400 miles wide, according to a local NWS spokesman.

About 100 twisters have already been reported in the prime tornado belt in Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas, and the three-month season usually doesn't begin until April, NWS meteorologist Bill Alexander of Dallas said.

"This will be a more active than usual year (for tornadoes)," Alexander said. "It's already started early and we look for it to continue right through the regular season," Alexander said.

Reagan threatens veto of bill repealing tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trying to avert a threatened presidential veto, Senate leaders of both parties scrambled today to try to disentangle a stalled $3.7 billion jobs bill from an attempt to repeal the federal withholding tax on dividends and interest.

But Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., indicated they didn't know if they could muster the votes needed to stop the withholding repeal drive being led by freshman Sen. Bob Kasten, R-Wis.

President Reagan, briefing reporters at the White House, said he would veto the jobs legislation if it contains the withholding tax repealer.

"I'm deeply disturbed at the possibility that the jobs bill will become a Christmas tree for special interest legislation," Reagan said.

He accused the banking industry of mounting an intensive lobbying effort to repeal the withholding provision that has "distorted" and "obscured" its effects, and suggested that bankers concentrate instead on lowering interest rates.

"Yes, I would veto such legislation" if it contains the Kasten repeal amendment, Reagan said.

Despite personal appeals by both Reagan and Baker to call off his effort, Kasten vowed today to fight on.

"We are ready to vote on withholding now," Kasten said. "The American people are demanding action on this issue, and a majority of the Senate opposes this new withholding scheme."

At issue is a new law requiring a 10 percent withholding by banks and financial institutions of depositors' interest income, a change adopted in 1982 that takes effect July 1.

Both Baker and Byrd said the withholding measure should not be permitted to hold up action on the anti-recession jobs relief bill. "This jobs bill has to pass," Byrd told the Senate.

Senate leaders, however, were fearful of putting Kasten's withholding amendment to a direct vote because he appeared to have majority support in the Senate for his bid.

Midland chosen for firm's first inn

By LESLIE HAINES
Energy-Business Writer

A newly formed Dallas corporation announced today it has chosen Midland as the site of its first motel in what will be a five-motel chain by 1985.

Mark Twain Inns said it will erect a 114-room facility at 4714 West Highway 80, just east of Loop 250. The $3 million, Victorian-style motel should be completed by July.

Groundbreaking ceremonies were scheduled today following a press conference at the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

The inn should employ about 30 Midlanders. Several bids have already been let to area subcontractors, said Henry Fink, a Dallas hotel consultant who helped develop the concept.

Mark Twain Inns are conceived as downhome "country inns" of 1880s vintage, he said.

They will feature hardwood floors, area rugs, fireplace, brass fixtures and ornamental moldings in rooms.

The two special guest suites will have four-poster canopied beds.

The guest rooms are arranged in three two-story buildings. Two meeting rooms, a swimming pool and gazebo are included. Adequate land has been set aside within the 2.65-acre location for future lease to a restaurant operation.

"This is definitely a long-term investment and commitment," Fink said. "Midland caught our attention during the frenetic boom of 1980-81 and was then added to our list of cities to consider. When the oil slump came in, we were undeterred. Midland, like all cities, has temporary slowdowns, and will again, but it is moving now.

"There are no bottlenecks here. Midland will grow and we want to share in that growth and contribute to it."

To commemorate construction of the company's first inn, Warren Miedke, director of operations with the corporation, presented a complete anthology of author Mark Twain's works to the Midland County Public Library. Mary Lou Cassidy, president of the Friends of the Library, and Shari Davidson, reference librarian, accepted the gift.

Midland was chosen as the site of the first inn after the company conducted market research in Houston, Dallas, Austin and other cities.

"We felt very optimistic about Midland, the area, and the oil industry," said Miedke. The company began its research on the Midland area last July, he added.

Mark Twain Inns is committed to building five inns in the next two years, he said, regardless of how the Midland inn is received. As the economy improves in Texas and the nation, new markets will emerge, Miedke said.

The corporation is a project of Henry Fink, who for 17 years has been a hotel consultant in the United States, the Caribbean, Mediterranean, Mexico, Central America, and Southeast Asia.

Controversy over Alger Hiss case continues today

Stripling's Washington

part six

EDITOR'S NOTE: The 1930s and '40s were a period of self-examination for America as the fear of communism spread. This is the last of a six-part series on Midlander Robert Stripling's experiences amid this political climate through two decades in Washington. Today's article deals with Stripling's bitter feelings toward Richard Nixon.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

"The public controversy has continued for the past three decades and shows no signs of ending. Historians will surely argue that post-war interlude for centuries."

Federal Judge William A. Bootle of the Middle District of Georgia in Macon wrote these words in 1979 concerning the Alger Hiss case. Robert E. Stripling had filed a libel suit against Doubleday, the publishing company, and the judge determined he was still a public figure from the role he had played in that case.

Boodle was correct; the Alger Hiss case hasn't ended. On Feb. 15, Hiss, now 78, filed an appeal to overturn U.S. District Judge Richard Owen's rejection of a petition last July. The petition had asked that the jury's conviction of Hiss in 1950 be overturned on grounds the trial had been unfair.

"I am innocent," he contended.

Three men remain alive from that turbulent period when a House committee began uncovering evidence that top officials were leaking government secrets to the Soviet Union. Hiss is one. The other two sat on the prosecuting side of the fence: Robert Stripling and Richard Nixon. Stripling was chief investigator of the House Unamerican Activities Committee; Nixon was a junior member.

THE HISS CASE culminated Stripling's career. He quit the committee shortly after uncovering the most damaging evidence against Hiss and came to Midland to start over in the oil business.

"I nailed Hiss and he knows it and Nixon knows it. If I ever had any evidence or knowledge that would mitigate his (Hiss) guilt, I would come forward with it today."

Stripling's problems have come not from Hiss and his continual suits for appeal, but from Nixon.

When the chief investigator left Washington, Nixon took credit for the case and has yet to publicly acknowledge it was Stripling who pulled out that last piece of evidence needed to convict Hiss. Known as the Pumpkin Papers, the evidence was five cans of microfilm containing secret State Department documents.

Stripling had returned to Washington on business shortly after moving to Midland in 1949. In the Longworth Office Building, he got into the same elevator that was carrying Pat and Dick Nixon. "Going up from the second floor to the fifth, Pat said, 'Dick and I know you broke the Hiss case, but do you mind if he takes the credit for it?' Nixon was planning to run for the Senate," he recalls.

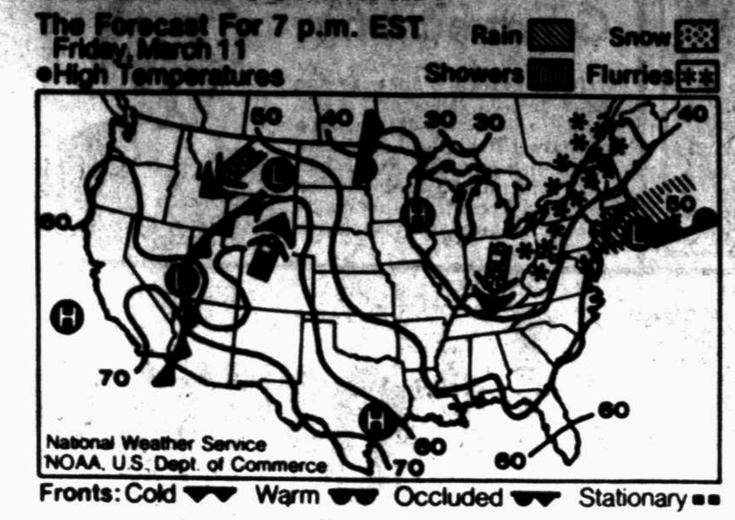

"I would put up $50,000 of my money if they would put up $50,000 of theirs and have Nixon take a polygraph test," Stripling says. "If the polygraph shows I'm wrong, my $50,000 would go to Red Cross or some other charity."

MORE CONCERNED about his life in Midland at that time, Stripling had agreed, he said. "But I didn't tell him (Nixon) to go out and tell a damn big lie. I was Nixon's first victim and it will hang over him like the sword of Damocles."

Stripling was involved in the oil business here and wasn't paying attention to what Nixon was saying. "Other members of the committee used to call me in anguish down here about Nixon." They were upset Nixon was taking credit for all the work on the Hiss case and asked Stripling to go to Washington and clear it up.

Hiss case controversy continues

Stripling: 'I nailed Hiss'

"I told them I was down here in the oil business and hustling and didn't want to get involved." When Stripling finally realized what was happening, it was too late. Nixon had already sold his version to the public and history books.

"Nixon became president because of the prominence he gained on that case," says Stripling.

The years haven't changed Stripling much. Now 70, his hair is still dark; the memories remain vivid. His eyes contain that same clear, sharp look he was known for in his pointed questioning during HUAC investigations.

He has followed closely what has been said on the Hiss-Chambers case since leaving Washington — shelves hold three-fourths of the books ever published on that subject, he notes.

Sipping on diet sodas during his recollections, Stripling points out memorabilia from his Washington associations. He's been to several inaugurations — those of Franklin Roosevelt, Dwight Eisenhower, Richard Nixon, Ronald Reagan — and had a chance to return to Washington during Eisenhower's administration. He refused.

DURING NIXON'S political climb, Stripling never mentioned to the public anything about the former congressman's true role in the Hiss case. Nixon was a public official and Stripling didn't see the need to speak out for he had no political ambitions himself.

But once Nixon was out, Stripling decided to speak up for his part in the Hiss case.

In Stripling's view, Nixon's downfall came "because he got too much power too fast.

"Here was a man who started in Congress in 1947. He had graduated a few years earlier as president of his law class. He thought he was a real smart guy. He was made a senator in four years and then served as vice president for two terms. He almost beat John Kennedy for president. And if the Chicago votes had been counted right, he might have won."

When Nixon came back in 1968 and won the presidency over Hubert Humphrey, "he got the idea he was invincible — that when he spoke it should be recorded on tape, like chiseling it in stone.

"I don't mean to put Mr. Nixon down. But he, like a lot of other important people, was a devious person. It was unfortunate for this country," Stripling said.

PUBLICLY, NIXON has never changed his story about the Hiss case. While Nixon was in the White House, Stripling was invited to dinner. "He asked me if I was still the same tough Stripling. I said, 'Tougher.' I told him that one day it's all going to come out."

Nixon occasionally has privately acknowledged Stripling's role in the case. While vice president, Nixon told Sid Richardson and Clint Murchison, two wealthy oil men, of Stripling's role. They reported to the former HUAC investigator that Nixon had said, "Without Stripling, I would have been nothing."

Knowing Nixon's past problems with microfilm, Stripling could see the Watergate tapes would be the president's undoing. "When Nixon was re-elected, I said Watergate would be his Waterloo. Any fool would have burned the tapes," theorizes Stripling.

Unfortunately for the country, there has not been a president since Nixon capable of handling foreign policy, according to Stripling.

"Outside of Richard Nixon's basic integrity, which may have been faulty, Nixon was the best president in the field of foreign policy we've had."

The Communist threat that Stripling saw so clearly during the HUAC hearings hasn't lessened over the years, he says. He watches world happenings closely, especially those in the Soviet Union.

When Premier Leonid Brezhnev died recently and was replaced by the former head of Russia's secret police, the action worried Stripling. "You've got to understand the Communist mind: It says, 'We are out to take over the world. We seek to do this by any means, but we prefer to do it by violent means.'"

Stripling's government service began 50 years ago. But his career highlight was the Hiss case.

"There are millions of people in this country who think Hiss is innocent," Stripling said. The former attorney has filed case after case, trying to get the conviction overturned, and no court has yet to agree.

"He's living," said Stripling. "I'm living and Nixon's living. Nixon disqualified himself because everyone knows he is a liar. I'm the only one left to tell the true story."

Going over the latest newspaper accounts as evidence comes out against Alger Hiss are, from left, Whittaker Chambers, Richard Nixon and Robert Stripling. Chambers began the investigation by telling of Hiss' associations with the Communist Party and leaking top-secret documents to the Soviet Union. Nixon was a junior member of the House Unamerican Activities Committee; Stripling was chief investigator.

Kahl indicted in connection with two deaths

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal grand jury today indicted fugitive tax resister Gordon W. Kahl and five others in connection with the Feb. 13 slaying of two U.S. marshals in North Dakota.

U.S. Attorney Rodney S. Webb said the 11-count indictment was returned in U.S. District Court in Fargo, N.D.

The indictment names Kahl, 63; his son Yorie Von Kahl, 23, and Scott Faul, 29, in two counts charging that they murdered U.S. Marshal Kenneth M. Muir and Deputy U.S. Marshal Robert S. Cheshire Jr., using firearms, near Medina, N.D.

Muir, three of his deputies and two local police officers were trying to serve an arrest warrant on the elder Kahl when the shooting occurred.

The grand jury charged three other persons, Vernon Alan Wegner, David Broer and Gordon Kahl's wife Joan, with a series of other violations involving the shootout.

The other charges include assault, aiding and abetting, assault on federal officers and police officers performing their official duties, being accessories after the fact to murder, harboring and concealing, and conspiracy to impede the service of a federal arrest warrant on Gordon Kahl.

Gordon Kahl remains a fugitive, but four of the other defendants are in custody and Joan Kahl, 56, of rural Heaton, N.D., is free on a $50,000 cash bond.

In custody are Scott Faul of Heaton, Yorie Von Kahl, also of Heaton, Broer, 43, of Streeter, N.D., and Wegner, 25, also of Streeter.

Besides Muir, 53, and Cheshire, 32, who were killed in the incident, deputy U.S. Marshal James Hopson, 59, Stutsman County deputy sheriff Bradley Kapp, 26, and Medina police officer Steven Schnabel, 23, were wounded.

They, along with another deputy U.S. marshal, Carl Wigglesworth, 49, were trying arrest Gordon Kahl on a warrant charging violation of his probation. Kahl was on probation from a 1977 conviction for failure to file federal income tax returns.

Reagan defends environmental record, Burford

The Burfords were married Feb. 20 and Mrs. Burford was back at work the next day, defending herself and the agency against mounting charges of mismanagement, conflict of interest and political manipulation of a $1.6 billion toxic waste cleanup program.

Mrs. Burford submitted her resignation to President Reagan Wednesday.

At her press conference, Mrs. Burford said she had compiled "a solid record of achievement that will stand the test of time," and she promised to cooperate with Congress in the half-dozen congressional probes of the agency.

"I firmly believe if there is any wrongdoing at the EPA it ought to be thoroughly investigated and people ought to be put in jail," she said.

Mrs. Burford refused to blame anyone for her predicament.

"I never claimed to be a victim and I won't now," she said, adding that she was not bitter. She said her plans now were to "take some time off and take a well-deserved rest with my new spouse."

Mrs. Burford did not return to the EPA to say goodbye Thursday, sending instead a note of thanks which Hernandez read at a meeting of her top aides.

Those present said Hernandez gave a pep talk, telling the top officials they had to work together as a team and put an end to "turf-fights."

Hernandez not only met with high-ranking EPA aides, but also strolled through the building shaking hands with employees in an effort to boost morale.

An artist's drawing shows a portion of the 114-room Mark Twain Inn to be constructed at 4714 West Highway 80. Completion of the Victorian-style motel, which was announced today at a press conference, is scheduled for December.

New hotel to be built in Midland

Fink said by 1995 the corporation expects to have developed 50 Mark Twain Inns throughout the Southwest, from California to Florida.

The inn will be built using factory-built units. Guest rooms are designed to be relocated, if necessary, in the future. In addition, new units can be in place 120 to 150 days after a decison has been made to start construction, company officials said.

The inn will aim for the single commercial and business traveler and offer rooms in the middle price range of $38 to $50 per night.

Guest occupancies are conservatively projected at 65 percent the first year, rising to 80 percent by the third year of operation.

Tornado record may be set this season

The shift in the upper-level jet stream makes the northern half of the state a prime spawning ground for twisters, he said.

The jet stream will not only bring more storms to the Lone Star state, but also more southerly air flow from the Gulf of Mexico. That combination will make the storms even more violent, Alexander said.

At least half a dozen twisters have already been reported in Texas, causing some damage and minor injuries.

NWS meteorologist Dave Martin said the shift in the weather pattern also helped divert cold Northern air from Texas this winter.

"The whole weather pattern is a little further south," said Martin, who handles emergency situations for the weather service. "The flow has been west to east. That's why we really haven't had any good artic outbreaks this year."

In 1979, a tornado ripped through Wichita Falls, killing 45 people, injuring 500 and causing $250 million in damage. On April 2, 1982, tornadoes and severe weather attacked a 70-mile-wide area of Northeast Texas and one twister tore through Paris, killing eight people and injuring another 200.

America's worst twister cut a 220-mile path through Missouri, Illinois and Indiana on March 18, 1925, killing 689 people as it raced along at freeway speeds.

A typical tornado has swirling winds of up to 300 mph. It might be 100 yards across and move on the ground at 10 to 25 mph. In the northern hemisphere, tornadoes always rotate counterclockwise.

Martin said 1982 failed to surpass 1967's record for tornados, but it came close. In 1967, a year when a hurricane spawned 100 tornadoes, 235 were recorded. Last year, 204 were counted in Texas — four of them "killer tornadoes."

OPEC ministers far from quota agreement

LONDON (AP) — OPEC ministers remained far apart today on the crucial issue of dividing production quotas as they attempted to salvage an agreement to save the world oil cartel from collapse.

"I'm afraid until now we are still apart, far away from each other as far as the quotas are concerned," the United Arab Emirates oil minister, Mana Saeed Oteiba, told reporters as the oil chiefs broke for lunch.

Oteiba said the ministerial talks would resume later today, but a formal meeting of the full cartel would not take place until there is progress toward setting quotas.

Without quotas, any price cut will not stick, said Venezuelan Oil Minister Humberto Calderon Berti, who has been prodding his colleagues since last month to adopt a plan for averting an international price war.

The 13-nation cartel wanted to finish its work Thursday, but OPEC Secretary General Marc S. Nan Nguema said Thursday night the unresolved issues were "very difficult."

"If we are working so long it is precisely because we would like to reach an agreement," he said.

"We achieved good progress," Calderon Berti said. "We are doing our best."

Ministers from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries have been meeting for nine days to devise a strategy for keeping competitive in a glutted market. The oil chiefs haven't been able to agree on quotas for the past year.

Ecuador's Oil Minister Gustavo Galindo said the group has agreed in principle to lower the official OPEC price, now at $34 a barrel. Sources said the new price would be either $29 or $29.50 a barrel.

At the heart of OPEC's crisis is an international oil market shrunk by recession and energy conservation. OPEC and non-OPEC have been competing for customers who, a decade ago, were virtual hostages of the prices set by big oil exporters.

Without production quotas, abundant supplies of oil on world markets will likely keep pushing prices lower.

Last December, OPEC ministers decided on a daily production ceiling but failed to agree on individual quotas for the 13 members.

Iran, pressed to finance its war against fellow OPEC member Iraq, has demanded a bigger share of the market at the expense of arch political rival Saudi Arabia.

Valley's 'Border Angel' dies

Ferree was to be honored by Reagan

HARLINGEN (AP) — Time and a hard life of scrounging for food and medical supplies for the poor has caught up with the tall, blue-eyed man known throughout the Lower Rio Grande Valley as the "Border Angel."

Frank Ferree

Frank Ferree, 88, who was to have received the nation's highest honor for volunteer service from President Reagan next month, died of natural causes about 8 p.m. Thursday at Valley Baptist Medical Center here.

Funeral services were pending at a Harlingen funeral home.

Those who knew and worked with Ferree during his 41-year tenure in this Texas-Mexico border region say he lived as he worked, among the poor.

Ferree gave the clothes off his back and shared the wilted produce and day-old bread he begged from merchants with thousands of sick and down-and-outers on both sides of the Rio Grande, his friends said.

He sought out wealthy patrons in the Rio Grande Valley to provide operations for the blind and crippled children and convinced pharmaceutical companies to provide medicine for his medical missionary work, they said.

But a longtime friend says people who didn't know Ferree will never understand his mission of mercy.

"Unless you're looking for miracles you can stand right beside one and never see it," said Smokey Boyle, a lay minister in Harlingen.

"He became a Christian," Boyle said. "He had done exactly what the Bible said for him to do, and he lived it, too."

Ferree suffered a heart attack two years ago and was partially paralyzed from a stroke. His condition had deteriorated over the past year and he was admitted to Valley Baptist on Wednesday, said his physician, Dr. Michael Ross.

Bill Starr, a former Valley newspaper reporter, said he didn't know if Ferree understood when Starr told him shortly before he died that Ferree had been awarded the President's Volunteer Action Award, considered the nation's highest honor for volunteer service.

Ferree, also known by his Spanish-speaking friends as the "Gringo Messiah" and the "Saintly Scavenger," was to have been one of 20 recipients throughout the United States of the national volunteer award at a luncheon with President Ronald Reagan April 13.

The award, created last year by Reagan, is co-administed by VOLUNTEER: National Center for Citizen Involvement, and ACTION, a federal volunteer agency, Sarah Harrison of NCCI said Thursday in a telephone interview from Boulder, Colo.

"We tried to explain to him what happened," said Starr, who had nominated Ferree for the award and was instrumental in getting him nominated twice for the Nobel Peace Prize.

"There's no way of telling whether he heard and understood or not," Starr said.

Ferree's award, in the human services category, was one of many presented to him for work with the poor.

Ferree had received numerous medals and honors from the Mexican goverment for his work among Mexico's poor.

"He'd just throw them (the medals) in an old tin can and maybe sell them for money for the poor," said Boyle, who met Ferree in the 1950s.

In 1977, President Jimmy Carter sent him regards for his "efforts to bring about good relations between Mexico and United States citizens."

A monument erected by the city of Harlingen in 1974 recognizes Ferree's efforts as founder and director of Volunteer Border Relief, an agency he has operated out of his own home since the early 1940s to distribute food, clothing and medicine to the needy on both sides of the Rio Grande.

Ferree, born in Valley, Neb., came to the Rio Grande Valley about 41 years ago and bought a 20-acre tract of land on Harlingen's north side.

Not long afterward, he sold the land, gave the money to the poor and moved into a shack not unlike the ramshackle huts his friends call home.

"Everybody thought he was a bum," said Starr, who wrote a biography of Ferree titled "Border Angel."

Ferree "started on a small scale" and built his reputation as an angel of mercy through years of hard work and sacrifice, said Boyle, who helped Ferree when he crossed into Matamoros and Reynosa, Mexico, bringing "tons of candy, fruit and anything we could get."

"That man's somebody. He's got a heart as big as a washtub," he said.

"The thing that amazed me most is that he didn't have anything," Starr said. "Whatever he gave them to eat, that's what he ate too."

In interviews during his life in the Valley, Ferree said it was God who sent him to the border.

"I think the Lord sent me to the Valley to do His work," he told a Valley newspaper reporter last summer.

Ferree asked for only one thing, time, in an interview published in the Brownville Herald after he became ill.

"I'd like to have 10 years," he said. "Maybe my life can help others. I can still do a lot of good."

San Antonio designated as one of eight 'All-America Cities'

WASHINGTON (AP) — San Antonio, picturesque site of the Alamo, several Spanish missions and a charming riverside walkway called the Paseo del Rio, now has another distinction: the title of "All America City."

At a White House ceremony on Thursday, Mayor Henry B. Cisneros was presented with a certificate by President Reagan designating San Antonio as one of eight such "All-America Cities."

The cities were selected by the National Municipal League for their success in tackling problems with the involvment of government, private enterprise and the community.

Reagan told mayors attending the ceremony that the awards "fit right in with his emphasis on private sector initiatives," said former San Antonio Mayor Lila Cockrell, who also attended.

Following the award, Cisneros said, "I'm very, very proud of the people of our city. They deserve the recognition."

Other cities receiving similar certificates were Ames, Iowa; Ann Arbor, Mich.; Durham, N. C.; Fort Wayne, Ind.; Salem, Ore.; Santa Ana, Calif.; and Santa Rosa, Calif.

Fred Jordan, a Municipal League spokesman, said in an interview that the eight winners were selected from among 1,000 communities which sought the "All America City" award this year.

The communities won on the basis of their accomplishments "in a partnership between citizens, the private sector and government leaders," he said.

"These are the eight best examples of citizen involvement with government and the private sector to bring about changes," said Jordan.

Mrs. Cockrell, executive director of United San Antonio, a broad based community coalition, said San Antonio was recognized for its efforts at downtown revitaliziation and its success in bringing an engineering school to the University of Texas at San Antonio.

She said the downtown revitalization program sought to achieve "a successful blend of the old and the new" through new construction and preservation of historic buildings.

The engineering program was sought out of recognitition that trained professionals would be needed if the city were to successfully build a high technology economic base, she said.

Men indicted for murder in Houston deaths

HOUSTON (AP) — What one detective called "good old-fashioned detective work" has led to the arrests and indictments of two man on separate capital murder charges in the deaths of two women, whose bodies were found in bathtubs of their west Houston homes.

David Scott Helfond, 25, was charged Thursday with capital murder in connection with the slaying of Elizabeth Faubus, 44, the estranged wife of former Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus.

David Helfond

Edward Anthony Ellis was indicted Thursday on a capital murder charge in connection with the death of Bertie Elizabeth Eakens, 73.

Helfond was arrested Wednesday at a southwest Houston motel after a woman who did not know she was under surveillance led them to the suspect, police said.

Ellis was arrested in San Antonio Monday on a Feb. 28 warrant from Harris County.

Edward Ellis

Mrs. Faubus, 44, was found naked, beaten and immersed in a bloody bathtub at her fashionable westside home March 3, less than 72 hours after the bodies of two other women were discovered in bathtubs at their apartments in the same area.

Mrs. Eakens was found handcuffed and beaten in her bathtub March 1. The third woman, Ruth Kottler, 61, was found slain in the tub of her home the same day.

There has been no evidence to link either of the two indicted men with the death of Mrs. Kottler, said Harris County Assistant District Attorney Ted Wilson.

Ellis, 29, pleaded innocent to the theft charges in state district court Thursday. Police said he had been employed briefly as a maintenance worker at Mrs. Eakens' apartment complex.

Wilson said the state is contending that Ellis caused Mrs. Eakens' death during the course of a burglary.

Helfond's girlfriend, with whom he had been living for the past three months in Houston, also was being held but police refused to release her name.

Houston Homicide Detective J.C. Mosier said Helfond's arrest came after some good old-fashioned detective work in watching Helfond's girlfriend.

"We had been watching her for two days and she led us straight to him. She didn't mean to do it. It was an accident," Mosier said.

Helfond's arrest came as a result of "some good old-fashioned detective work," Mosier said.

Wilson said the state is contending that Helfond caused the death of Mrs. Faubus during the commission of an aggravated rape and during an attempted robbery.

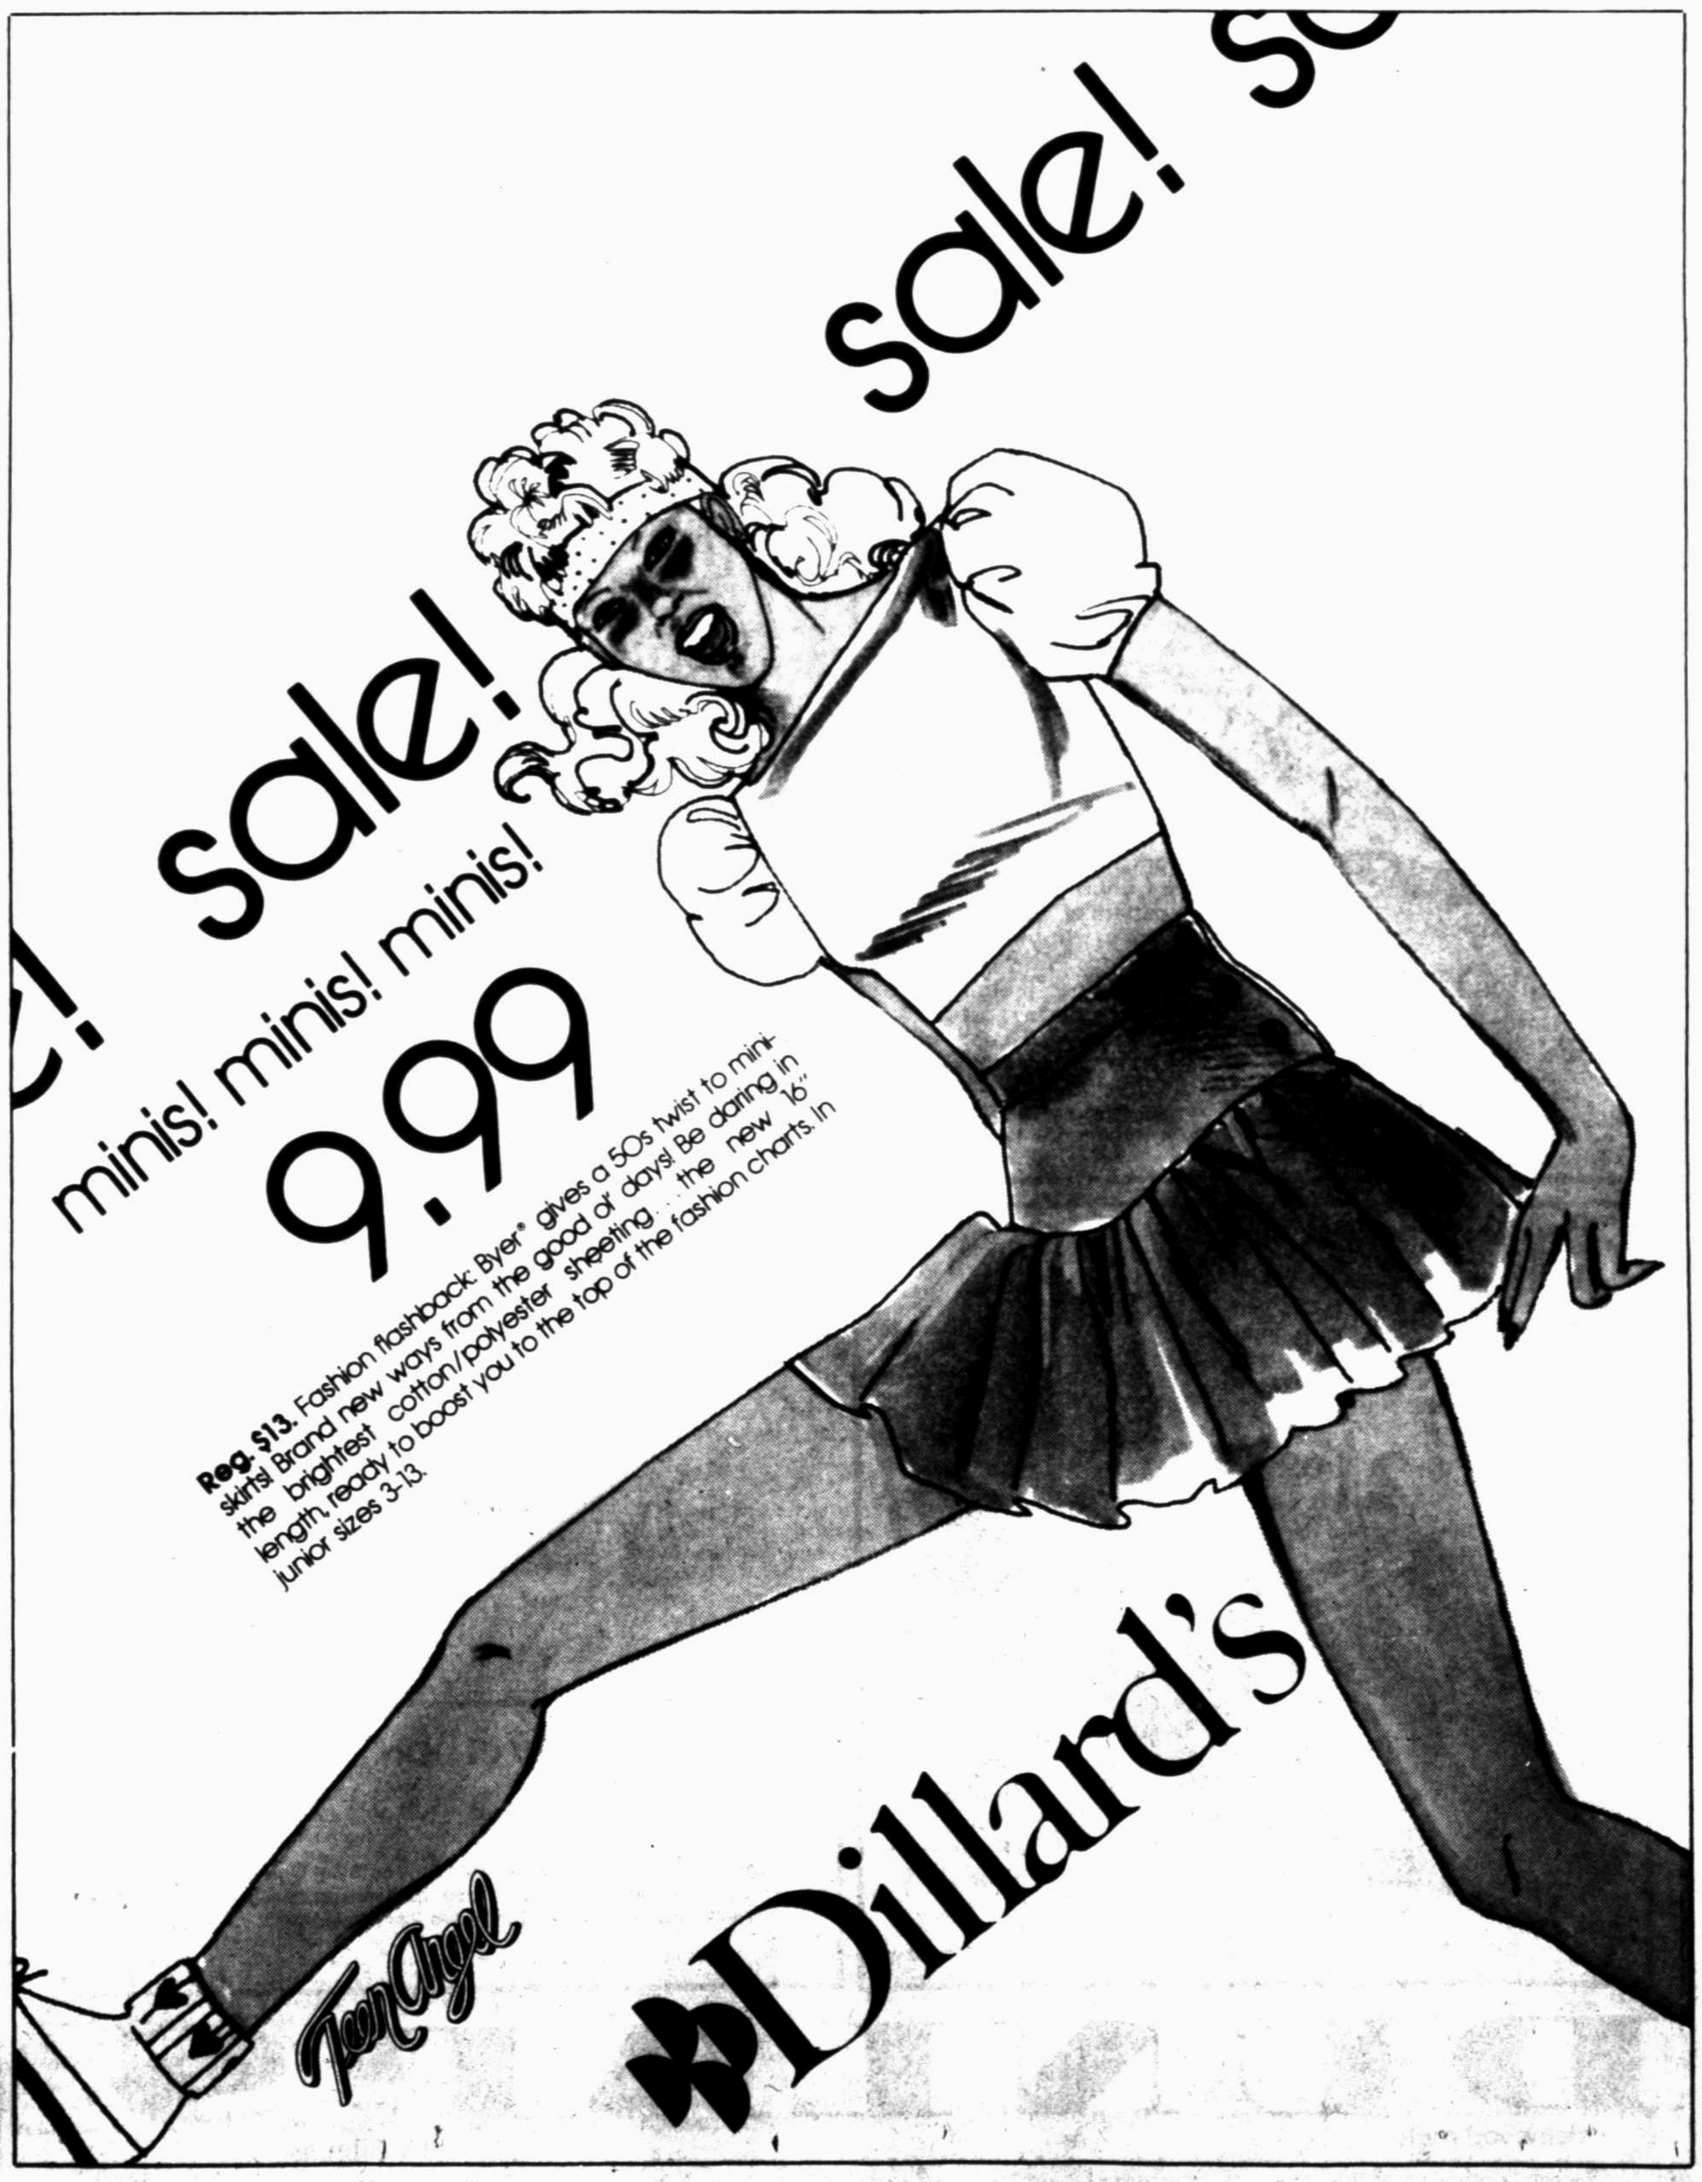

Authorities in Miami said Helfond was wanted on a Dade County warrant issued in 1982 for burglary, attempted solicitation of a capital felony, attempted sexual battery and kidnapping.

Suit dismissed against paper

HOUSTON (AP) — An attorney for two businessmen here has dismissed an $800 million damage lawsuit against the Houston Chronicle, but said that he may refile the action at a later date.

The lawsuit was filed last Nov. 10 on behalf of Thomas H. "Tom" Hajecate and his son, Thomas M. "Mick" Hajecate. The suit alleged that their reputations were damaged by a Nov. 6 story in the Chronicle, describing a federal investigation into the alleged laundering of money through Caribbean banks.

Attorney Thano Dameris noted that he may, under Texas law, file another lawsuit concerning the story at any time before Nov. 6, 1983. But declined to say whether he will do so, or explain why he asked state District Judge Geraldine Tennant to dismiss the original lawsuit.

Death row inmate agrees to fight for stay of execution

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Attorneys for Robert Wayne Vickers believe that the convicted murderer will win a stay of execution, now that he finally has agreed to fight for one.

Robert Vickers

Defense lawyers led by Kenneth Freedman were concentrating their efforts on the state Supreme Court, which scheduled a 10 a.m. hearing today on their petition for special action.

"It's a question of expediency," Freedman said Thursday.

Prosecutors agreed that what would have been Arizona's first execution in 20 years probably will not take place March 15 as scheduled — if at all.

"There is no way the parties can exhaust all the (court) steps between now and March 15," said Crane McClennen, an assistant state attorney general. "It's quite likely that some court somewhere will issue a stay."

Vickers' petition asked the state court to take over jurisdiction in the case, stay the execution until all appeals are decided and order Judge Robert L. Bean of Pinal County Superior Court to rule on an appeal filed early Thursday.

Bean had refused to issue a stay, but withheld ruling on Vickers' request that his sentence and conviction be overturned.

Vickers, 24, told Bean he did not care one way or another if he died. But he said he agreed to ask for the stay at the request of a sister who "has a soft heart."

Until the courtroom appearance, Vickers — convicted of slaying two fellow inmates — had insisted he wanted to die at 12:05 a.m. Tuesday, as scheduled.

"I'm looking forward to my party with Jesus, if you know what I mean," he said.

Freedman and John Foreman, Phoenix attorneys, questioned the competency of Vickers' previous legal representation and whether aggravating circumstances were proven beyond a reasonable doubt.

They also said mitigating circumstances, such as Vickers' youth and possible mental problems, were not given proper weight.

Bean said he found no facts to support the defense claims but withheld a final ruling.

Vickers has been isolated on Death Row since last year when he killed Wilmer "Buster" Holsinger, who also faced a death sentence. Vickers subsequently was convicted of first-degree murder. Holsinger died when a firebomb, made from toilet paper and lighter fluid, was tossed into his cell.

Tuesday's scheduled execution, however, is for the 1978 stabbing-and-choking murder of cellmate Frank Ponciano.

Vickers entered the prison in 1976, sentenced to three to nine years for a Maricopa County grand theft conviction.

He is believed unique among the 1,137 people on death rows around the country — the first to be sentenced to death for first-degree murder while under a previous death sentence.

Since 1910, Arizona has hanged 28 people and executed 35 others by lethal gas. The gas chamber would be used if Vickers is executed.

Jury 'writes final chapter' in death story

Girl convicted in dad's death

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — A jury asked to "write the final chapter" in the story of a youth who shot his father after years of abuse has convicted his 17-year-old sister of aiding and abetting the slaying.

"It's time to write the the last chapter in this story," defense attorney Terry Mackey said Thursday before the jury began deliberating the case of Deborah Jahnke.

Deborah Jahnke

After 6¼ hours, the panel returned with its verdict that Miss Jahnke aided and abetted her brother in the voluntary manslaughter of Richard C. Jahnke, 38. She faces a possible 1-to-20-year prison term.

Miss Jahnke, who had been charged with conspiracy and aiding and abetting in first-degree murder, was acquitted on the conspiracy count. The jury also decided the slaying was voluntary manslaughter, a less serious offense.

Miss Jahnke's brother, Richard, 16, was convicted last month of voluntary manslaughter in the killing, but has not been sentenced. He also faces up to 20 years in prison.

The youth testified at his own trial and then at his sister's how he felt he had to end the years of mental and physical abuse his father had inflicted on the family, and how he feared for his own life the night of Nov. 16. Young Jahnke shot his father to death with a "riot" shotgun on the family driveway.

Miss Jahnke was crying and stopped to hug friends when she came into the courtroom to hear the verdict shortly after 9 p.m. She wept briefly afterward. Her mother, Maria, remained calm in the courtroom but fainted in the hall outside.

District Judge Joseph Maier continued Miss Jahnke's bond until an appeal bond hearing next Thursday.

Earlier Thursday during closing arguments, Laramie County District Attorney Tom Carroll and Assistant District Attorney Jon Forwood portrayed the killing as cold-blooded murder motivated by "revenge" and carried out as an execution.

The two argued the brother and sister planned the killing together. They said she helped him by suggesting lighting to cause "night blindness" in the father and that the pets be put in the basement.

Judge blocks law denying aid to students to fail to register

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — A judge cited concern about unconstitutional self-incrimination as he preliminarily blocked a law which would deny financial aid to male college students who had not registered for the draft.

Donald D. Alsop

U.S. District Judge Donald D. Alsop issued the order Thursday, and Amy Silberberg, an attorney for the Minnesota Civil Liberties Union, said the organization now will ask Alsop to issue a permanent injunction declaring the law unconstitutional.

Alsop's decision is legally binding in Minnesota and will set a precedent around the country, said Dan Lass, an attorney for the Minnesota Public Interest Research Group, which initiated the case.

He said it is the first ruling in the nation on the controversial law signed by President Reagan last Sept. 8.

The Department of Education announced in January rules for carrying out the measure, which were to take effect in May and apply to student loans for the 1983-84 school year.

Plaintiffs in the case are six anonymous students — identified in court records as John Doe, Richard Roe, Paul Poe, Bradley Boe, Carl Coe and Frank Foe.

The students are sophomores and juniors who have received financial aid in the past and who would be unable to attend college in the future without continuing federal help, Lass said.

They sued the Selective Service, its director Maj. Gen. Thomas K. Turnage, and the U.S. Department of Education and its Secretary Terrel Bell.

In a 26-page opinion accompanying the injunction, Alsop said students were being denied their Fifth Amendment rights against self-incrimination.

"It takes no great stretch of the imagination to discern how plaintiffs' identification of themselves as non-registrants could incriminate them or provide a significant link in the chain of evidence tending to establish their guilt," Alsop said.

Neil Kaslowe, a Justice Department attorney, argued on Jan. 10 that the injunction request should be denied because no students yet have been denied funds.

Alsop disagreed, however, saying he was granting the injunction because students faced the threat of irreparable harm.

Lawyers for the students argued that the law punishes non-registered students who have not been convicted of a crime.

"Draft-age male students who fail to submit the statement of compliance are automatically denied financial aid, regardless of whether their non-registration is intentional or innocent," Alsop said.

Major Young explains apples, oranges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Why Times Beach and not Vietnam? When a veteran asked why the government bought out a town in Missouri that was exposed to dioxin but won't compensate veterans exposed to the same substance in Vietnam, Air Force Major Alvin Young was ready.

He flashed onto a screen a slide showing an orange and an apple.

His point was that the degree of exposure was so much greater in Times Beach, Mo., than in Vietnam that comparing the two situations was like comparing, well, apples and oranges.

For years, the Veterans Administration has dismissed veterans' claims that dioxin in the herbicides sprayed in Vietnam damaged their health. So the VA was put on the spot when another agency of government moved so fast after dioxin was found in Times Beach, population 2,400.

Young, an environmental specialist on loan to the VA, has collected a pile of data intended to prove that herbicides sprayed in Vietnam were not the culprit, but his data hasn't persuaded the veterans.

The issue won't go away. Other veterans keep asking the question that Hugh Walkup of Seattle raised at a meeting of the VA's Advisory Committee on Herbicides: Why Times Beach and not Vietnam?

AP Laserphoto

Air Force Major Alvin Young stands in the Veterans Administration's Agent Orange Library in Washington earlier this week. Young, an environmental specialist on loan to the VA, explains why the government bought out a town in Missouri that was exposed to dioxin but won't compensate veterans exposed to the same substance in Vietnam.

THE CENTERS for Disease Control decided that one part per billion of dioxin was enough to be a health risk.

The concentration of dioxin in Vietnam was much heavier. The VA says it was an average of two parts per million in Agent Orange — the herbicide sprayed on jungle growth in Vietnam. Between 1965 and 1971, 11 million gallons of Agent Orange were sprayed in Vietnam.

Nonetheless, Young argues that Vietnam veterans are at less risk than the people of Times Beach. And he says he doubts that either group is at much risk at all.

Young says the Missouri residents were exposed far longer to far heavier concentrations of dioxin "and hence the possibility of getting a dose in the body that could have an adverse effect is greater in Times Beach than in Vietnam — far greater."

Not everyone agrees. Rep. Thomas Daschle, D-S.D., told the House of Representatives recently: "If this government is willing to accept responsibility for Times Beach, it has even more of a responsibility to provide compensatory relief to individuals it was directly responsible for exposing to the very same chemical in Vietnam."

He has authored a bill, introduced Tuesday in the House, to compensate veterans for disabilities resulting from some diseases associated with dioxin.

SINCE THE WAR'S END, more than 100,000 veterans have taken a special VA medical examination out of suspicion that Agent Orange exposure has affected their health. And 16,564 veterans, many of them suffering from diseases they cannot otherwise explain, have filed for disability compensation.

The VA has rejected the claims, explaining that no link has been established between the herbicide and any disease veterans are suffering.

Dioxin is an impurity in Agent Orange which is a mixture of the herbicides 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T.

Young puts the difference between Times Beach and Vietnam this way: He calculates that maybe 300 pounds of dioxin were put down over perhaps 5,000 acres in Missouri while 368 pounds of dioxin were sprayed over three million acres of Vietnam.

The major makes five distinctions between Missouri and Vietnam:

— In Vietnam, he says, herbicides contained an average of two parts of dioxin per million while the worst sample of soil in Missouri contained 340 parts per million.

— Soil taken from sprayed areas in Missouri would contain 20,000 times more dioxin than the same amount of soil dug up in Vietnam.

Men don formal gowns to raise school funds

HURRICANE, W.Va. (AP) — They're being called "Tootsies" or "Hurricane Honeys," but the mayor, police chief and a school principal — all men — are donning evening gowns to raise money for a school PTA.

It is the "Mz. Hurricane Pageant," and money raised in the Saturday "beauty" pageant will benefit Hurricane Middle School.

PTA president Tawney Mangus explained the organization has always had rather "mundane" fund-raising activities, and wanted to add some life to this one.

"We're sort of in the Bible belt here, but I think the movie 'Tootsie' has sort of loosened everybody up," she said. "Everywhere I've gone this week, people are talking about it."

Mayor Raymond Peak, a 53-year-old schoolteacher, plans to wear pearls and a yellow Empire waist evening gown. He's entered in the pageant under the name "Ramona."

"The way it was explained to me four weeks ago was that the Hurricane Middle School was having a fund-raiser and would I help?" Peak said. "I said yes. After that is when they told me what I would have to do."

Also taking part will be "Rachel," better known as Police Chief Dick Gillespie; "Danielle," who most folks call patrolman Dan Perry; and "Elana," otherwise known as Hurricane Middle School Principal Alan Messinger.

Local businesses are helping supply the male beauties with dresses, gowns and wigs.

Peak said he doesn't mind making the unusual public appearance at the school, where he teaches business courses.

"I always say, anything to help students. I've been teaching for 33 years so I've kept a relatively young outlook on life," the mayor said as he adjusted his long, blonde wig. "I've played Santa Claus and the Easter Bunny before, but this is a first for me."

Board goes ahead with museum plans

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Plans to build a science and technology museum honoring the state's 150th birthday have met with opposition from legislators because of budget restraints, but Texas Sesquicentennial Museum board members are proceeding with the task of identifying the needs of such a facility.

Many lawmakers, including Gov. Mark White, have suggested it would be foolish to spend money on a major science and technology museum, citing the need to repair damage to the east wing of the State Capitol caused by a Feb. 6 fire. White called on legislators shortly after the fire to restore the Capitol to "its former glory" as a sesquicentennial project.

But Dallas Rep. Lee Jackson says he will introduce legislation this week to provide for a science and technology museum, which he maintains could be built with funds from the private sector.

"The state should not be in the business of building a museum with state funds," he says. "Various places around the country have built museums largely from private gifts."

The state should play a role in surveying educational and industrial needs, as well as the locatin and size of the structure, Jackson notes.

"I hope to see us continue the planning process (for the museum)," he says. "We can carry this through with the private sector."

The Texas Sesquicentennial Museum Board is expected to renew a contract with an Austin consulting firm, the Management Strategies Group, which conducted initial studies on the birthday project, sometime this week, says Fram Lochridge Forbes, acting executive director.

Three persons released

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Three persons convicted of crimes in the West Texas area have been administratively released by the Texas Department of Corrections under mandatory supervision.

James Moon, convicted in Ector County May 21, 1982, of kidnapping, has been released to El Paso County after serving and earning two years of a two-year sentence.

Ernesto Moralez was convicted in Scurry County April 16, 1981, of burglary of a vehicle, two counts; and in Howard County Feb. 17, 1977, of burglary, theft and burglary of a habitation.

Moralez was released to Scurry County after serving and earning four years of a four-year sentence.

Andrew Salcido, convicted in Ector County May 28, 1982, of escape, and unauthorized use of a vehicle, has been released to El Paso County after serving and earning two years of a two-year sentence.

Waitress' paychecks not 'void'

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Things are looking up for Margaret DeRycke, the waitress who griped loudly when new Internal Revenue Service rules left her with payless paydays.

After a string of paychecks stamped "Void, void, void," Mrs. DeRycke, a waitress for 37 years, says she has received slightly more than $6 total in her last two checks.

The 52-year-old night-shift waitress for Denny's Restaurants complained last month that new IRS tip-reporting rules had left her with a paycheck of zero dollars and zero cents.

The Associated Press carried her story nationwide, NBC's "Today Show" featured her, and radio call-in programs as distant as Hawaii kept her tied to the telephone.

She says she has received nearly 1,000 letters of support from waiters and waitresses across the country.

Mrs. DeRycke said she was told by the president of Denny's Inc., Vern Curtis, that he's "100 percent behind me" and will pay all her expenses for traveling to speak on the subject.

In May it's on to Washington where she hopes to deliver a mounting pile of petitions to the president and Congress.

Under legislation that took effect Jan. 1, restaurants with more than 11 employees are required to tell the IRS what their total receipts are.

Employees are required to report all tip income and withholding is based on that. However, if the total tips they claim is less than 8 percent of the restaurant's receipts, the owner must "allocate" an estimated tip income to each employee to reach the 8 percent level.

That "allocation" is reported to the IRS, which may audit the employee to find out why claimed tip income is less than the allocation.

As a part-time waitress earning less than minimum wage, Mrs. DeRycke in a typical week earns gross pay of $75. Deductions for items such as Social Security, pension, insurance and taxes used to leave her with a paycheck of about $30. She makes about $100 a week in cash tips.

Because she is reporting a higher tip income now, withholding taxes have increased, leaving her with paychecks near zero.

Legislation for doctors introduced

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Rep. Jay Gibson, D-Odessa, has introduced legislation relating to allocation of state funds for compensation of resident physicians through appropriations to the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System.

HB 1063 would amend existing law, which provides that each "accredited school...is entitled to receive funds...in an amount not to exceed $15,000 in any fiscal year for each resident physician appointed by the school" to add language tht the Coordinating Board "adopt rules for allocating the appropriated funds to the school."

The bill, if passed, would take effect Sept. 1, 1983.

You can never be too careful when playing a hand. This hand from a recent tournament shows what can happen if you get careless.

South considered himself too strong for a simple overcall, so he started with a takeout double and then introduced his suit at his next turn. We admire the way North took all the strain off his partner by jumping to four spades instead of making pusillanimous raise to three spades.

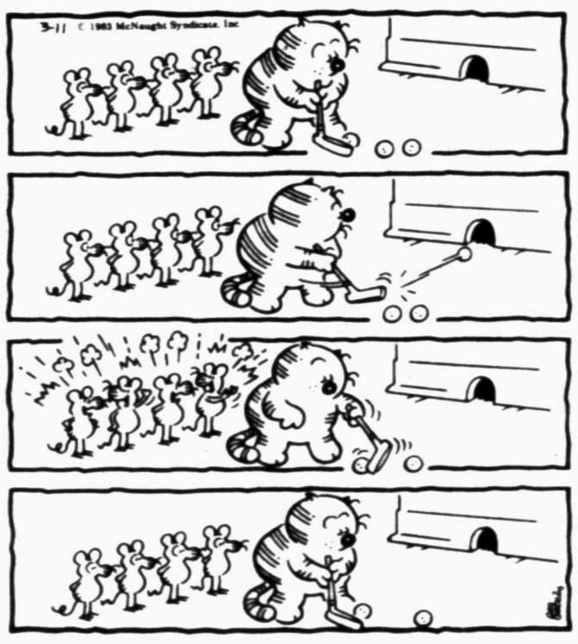

It was obvious that West's lead of the two of diamonds was a singleton. Some declarers won in dummy and led a trump. East took the ace and returned the queen of diamonds, and West ruffed away declarer's king. Since declarer still had a loser in each minor suit, that meant down one.

Some declarers did slightly better technically, but with the same outcome. To protect against having the king of diamonds ruffed, they won the first trick in hand and led the king of spades. East won the ace perforce, but now West had a second trump trick and the declarer still had to lose a trick in each minor – down one again!

The successful declarers combined the two methods. They won the first trick in hand with the king of diamonds, then crossed to the ace of hearts in dummy to lead a trump. That protected against a singleton ace in the East hand. If East returned a diamond after taking the ace of trumps, West would be ruffing declarer's loser. In any event, declarer would lose no more than one trick in each suit except hearts.

Reasons to freeze

Support is building once again for a nuclear freeze as a means of halting the proliferation of nuclear weapons by the superpowers. A freeze sounds like a good idea, initially, but a new study by the renowned Heritage Foundation undermines the contentions of freeze advocates.

In the study, Bruce Weinrod, director of foreign policy and defense studies at the Washington think tank, lists assumptions by freeze advocates and tells why those assumptions aren't accurate.

One assumption is that an immediate freeze would make nuclear conflict less probable. Says Weinrod, "Facts do not support this assertion. New nuclear arms production and deployment by the U.S. will restore a balance which has been destroyed by Soviet action."

Another assumption by freeze advocates, says Weinrod, is that a freeze is the most "moral" approach to nuclear arms reductions. But, Weinrod asks, is it moral to accept the logic of Mutual Assured Destruction (MAD) which is that, in the event of a nuclear conflict, massive destruction of the innocent civilian population cannot be avoided, when the development of defense weapons — many of them non-nuclear — could actually protect substantial portions of the populace from nuclear destruction? Is it particularly "moral" to oppose anti-missile and civil defense efforts when such efforts are specifically designed to assure the safety of the civilian population? He says, in essence, "this moral opposition adamantly rejects approaches designed to focus on military rather than civilian targets."

Defensive systems are a bad idea, say freeze advocates. Weinrod says this is a logical corollary to the position described above. "Systems which could actually defend people — such as ABMs and civil defense — are dogmatically rejected because they would call into question the whole MAD theology which is part and parcel of the freeze logic." He goes on to note, "At a minimum, any nuclear policy approach such as a freeze which must reject any consideration of ways to better protect people ... is subject to serious question."

Advocates of a freeze also contend that to feeze now, reduce later is a realistic approach. But, says Weinrod, the "bargaining chip" approach rather than the immediate freeze is more likely to lead to real reductions. "The validity of the 'bargaining chip' theory is rooted in the history of American-Soviet negotiations. Moscow did not agree to anti-ballistic missile limits until the U.S. was actually ready to deploy an ABM. The Soviets did not come to the table to bargain about intermediate-range ballistic missiles until the NATO agreement to deploy the Pershing II and the Ground Launched Cruise Missiles."

The final argument for a freeze is that a freeze is an attainable goal now. That's unrealistic, says Weinrod, because putting a freeze into effect probably would take as long if not longer to negotiate than any other arms treaty. He says why not devote U.S. resources and efforts toward a balanced and equitable reduction in arms rather than seeking to freeze a situation which is totally unacceptable.

The thought of a nuclear freeze is appealing. The thought of a reduction in nuclear weapons is even more appealing. But only equitable nuclear forces for both superpowers with verifiable limitations is realistic and human nature makes attainment of such a treaty highly unlikely.

Another View:

Sell weather service

The U.S. Marine Corps is not a profit-making institution. It is a revenue consumer, and all those dollars that it gobbles up each year help swell the federal deficit. The sensible thing is to cut loose from this negative cash-flow operation and let the magic of the marketplace decide the future of the corps. Sell the Marines to private industry, and there will be one less governmental burden on the public's aching back.

A lunatic notion? To be sure. But selling off the Marines — or for that matter the Census Bureau, the Secret Service or even the Washington Monument — is no nuttier an idea than the one that President Reagan has endorsed to turn the nation's weather-forecasting and land-satellite operations over to private firms.

The plan to commercialize weather information is no mere caprice. The Cabinet Council on Commerce and Trade for months has been pondering ways to transfer certain government activities into private hands. The weather and land satellites — used for such things as mapping, crop assessments and locating mineral deposits — and their ground tracking stations would probably be only the first to hit the auction block. Peddling the nation's assets can become an addictive habit. Today, the weather. Tomorrow, who knows?

Businesses, to state the obvious, survive by making profits. Running weather forecasting as a business operation would necessitate charging fees for information provided. What such a pricing system would mean to longstanding agreements for the free international exchange of vital weather data is not clear. What it might mean to Americans, however, can be surmised with a dismal certainty. Basic weather information, we are told, would not be charged for. But "specialized" services, like fruit frost warnings, could be. Ask not why the price of oranges will go up. Just remember that your friendly weather-satellite monopoly is in business to make a buck.

In an ironic stroke of timing, the plan to sell the weather satellites was announced simultaneously with the release of a report by a group representing 50 universities. The group's report calls for an upgrading of local weather forecasting to provide better warning of tornadoes, blizzards and flash floods. Spending $100 million over 10 years, the study says, could cut storm losses by $1 billion annually. That, in contrast to some other ideas now being bruited about, makes eminent cost-effective sense.

The 1983 cost for operating the whole weather-satellite system will be about $201 million. By comparison, the federal government is currently spending more than $1 billion a month just to subsidize agriculture — which is, of course, considered private enterprise.

A sense of proportion would seem to suggest that there is something strange going on in the Reagan administration's approach to cost-cutting.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Evidence against Thurmond told

WASHINGTON — A federal grand jury has heard sworn testimony from a witness who stated that Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., received at least $20,000 in bribes from a middleman acting for ex-CIA agent Edwin Paul Wilson, now a convicted felon.

Jack Anderson

I first broke this startling charge — which Thurmond has vehemently denied — in columns last month quoting the same witness, who asked that his identity be protected.

At the time, the Justice Department confirmed that it was looking into the charges, but described the case as an "inquiry" and a "routine" matter. Soon afterwards, the department hurried its investigation along, partly because of pressure from Thurmond, whose Judiciary Committee oversees the Justice Department.

Now the "routine inquiry" has come before a grand jury.

Meanwhile, sources say, other connections between Thurmond and Wilson have surfaced. The FBI, for example, is investigating the employment of a Thurmond administrative aide, Dan Carrison, who reportedly went to work for Wilson. A lower-level Thurmond aide also went to work for Wilson.

Furthermore, the senator's wife, Nancy, was employed by a high-powered, Republican-connected public relations firm headed by Robert Keith Gray, who was for several years a board member of Wilson's principal company, Consultants International. (An associate of Gray's said Gray was an "elevator acquaintance" of Wilson's and did not know he was a board member of Wilson's firm.)

But the key to the case is obviously the witness who swears that he personally saw Thurmond take two bribes from a onetime Thurmond fundraiser acting as middleman for Wilson.

The witness appeared before the grand jury several weeks ago and was questioned by Assistant U.S. Attorney E. Lawrence Barcella Jr. Knowledgeable sources gave my associate Dale Van Atta details of the witness' testimony.

Under penalty of perjury, the witness told the grand jury essentially what I reported earlier, with a few new wrinkles. Here's what he said in his 15-minute appearance:

As a Wilson employee, the witness was ordered to spy on Wilson's associates to make sure they weren't cheating him. One man he was told to keep under surveillance was the middleman, who had claimed to have Thurmond's ear.

On many occasions, the middleman showed up at the offices of Delex International Inc., a Wilson company occupying Suite 710 at 1111 North 19th St., Arlington, Va. On three visits, he picked up a manila envelope stuffed with cash.

The witness said he watched a Delex employee count out $100 bills — aloud — on a card table, and put at least $10,000 in an envelope each time. The middleman then left, with the witness on his tail.

The first time, the witness lost the middleman in traffic. But the second time, he followed the go-between to the Capitol Hill Club — a Republican sanctuary on the House side of the Hill. The witness testified that he watched the middleman meet Thurmond, who was waiting, and hand over the manila envelope.

On the third occasion, the witness again followed the middleman to the Capitol Hill Club. Thurmond wasn't there. The middleman made a phone call, and Thurmond showed up a few minutes later and took the manila envelope.

The middleman then returned to Delex and went out for drinks at a nearby restaurant — with the witness and two other men. One of them was Thomas Clines, an old CIA buddy of Wilson's.

The witness has said he telephoned Wilson to report the successful deliveries, referring to Thurmond only as the "same man."

The Justice Department is in the process of finding corroboration for the witness' testimony. Last December, the FBI agents showed him three dozen look-alike photos, and the witness picked out Thurmond's.

Footnote: Wilson and the middleman have both denied any attempt to bribe Thurmond. The middleman said Thurmond is "the last person I would even think of approaching" — presumably because of his known ties to the senator. But this doesn't square with a letter he wrote to Thurmond last August, asking him to help Wilson in his continuing legal difficulties.

GLORY-HUNTING G-MEN: In Senate testimony, the FBI tried to claim credit for a landmark racketeering case that was actually the work of Labor Department investigators.

Bureau official Oliver B. Revell told Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., that "the Philadelphia and Baltimore divisions of the FBI obtained a significant conviction" in the case of Delaware labor figures Francis Sheerhan and Eugene Boffa. They were convicted in a nationwide leasing scam involving payoffs to mobsters.

Nunn was puzzled. Only the day before, he had been told that the case had been developed by Labor's organized-crime and racketeering section.

INSIDE REPORT:

Adelman, nuclear freeze are tied

WASHINGTON — A murmur of surprise swept the closed-door Democratic caucus last week when patriarchal Sen. John Stennis, a pillar of presidential prerogative, rose to oppose the nomination of Kenneth Adelman to head the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA).

Rowland Evans

The unexpected defection of Stennis from President Reagan's choice of Adelman, now UN Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick's deputy, shows the self-imposed misery enveloping the White House and the State Department over a good nomination gone sour. Chances for the Senate to overturn the Foreign Relations Committee's unfavorable verdict on Adelman are only about 50-50.

Robert Novak

Coupled with the smashing 3-to-1 House Foreign Affairs Committee approval of the nuclear freeze resolution, to be followed by certain House passage, the administration's handling of the twinned Adelman-freeze challenge shows dangerous capacity for self-destruction.

Much is at stake. It goes far beyond Adelman's survival or the eventual outcome of the freeze resolution. Yet from the start, Reagan's top advisers have trivialized the appointment of Ken Adelman, a serious diplomat well equipped to handle ACDA. These same advisers have toyed with the freeze, an emotion-powered issue that finds its origin in the peace movements sweeping Europe and only briefly blunted by the West German election.

All but ignored in the selection of Adelman was Secretary of State George Shultz. Shultz consequently has no big stake in his confirmation by the Senate. Adelman's first champion was Ambassador Kirkpatrick. When she suggested him to national security adviser William P. Clark, Clark snapped up the idea.

But Clark suddenly weakened when Adelman botched the first day of his testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, partly because he was not adequately forewarned and forearmed by State Department aides. The State Department had no investment in Adelman to protect.

The trivialization of the nomination of Adelman, who one White House insider told us is now without top-level champions "except Ronald Reagan himself," has led to a spate of damaging rumors. Administration officials are quietly eyeing other possibilities for the ACDA post: former national security adviser Brent Scowcroft, named by Reagan to head the MX missile commission, and Max Kampelman, Reagan's choice as ambassasador to the European Security Conference, to name two.

More worrisome is the way that Adelman's trivialization has played into the hands of the nuclear-freezers, fueling their outrageous charges that Reagan really does not understand the gravity of the nuclear issue and toys with the great questions of nuclear war.

Protecting Reagan's rearmament program is the real objective in the battle to defeat the nuclear freeze campaign. Its first target, cloaked in confusing rhetoric, is unilateral arms control by the U.S., supposedly to be followed sometime in the future by the Soviet Union.

That means foregoing deployment of Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Europe and the abandonment of the MX missile, the B-1 bomber and the Trident 2 submarine missile at home. At stake are political pressures forcing Congress to embrace unilateralism, based on the exceedingly remote chance of the Soviets following the American lead some time in the future. John F. Kennedy was the first, but not the last, president to warn about such misplaced trust and hope. Shocked by secret Soviet preparations that resulted in massive, surprise nuclear tests in the summer of 1961, during the nuclear test moratorium, Kennedy said: "If they fooled us once, it's our fault. If they fool us twice, it's our fault."

Reagan is well aware of that Soviet record. But he and his advisers have failed to understand that the attack on Adelman and the drive for the nuclear freeze are sustained by the same phenomenon: the administration's lack of political credibility in dealing with the transcendant nuclear issue in any of its manifestations.

Water break shows lack

To The Editor:

On Feb. 22, 1983, I called the City of Midland water department business office to find out who was going to pay for all of the water being washed down Wadley Street from Garfield Street. They transferred me to the operations department where I spoke to Ms. Beth Graham. I explained to Ms. Graham about the water leak at Wadley and Garfield Streets and asked her who was going to pay for the water. She asked me who I was and I stated "Ronnie Bearden."

Ms. Graham said, "I mean, are you just a private citizen," which I answered yes. She then said, "Since you are just a private citizen, then it is not your concern as to who was paying for the water as it is not through your meter." I cannot properly explain how this comment infuriated me.

I then called Mr. George Medley with the City of Midland public works and explained what information I was looking for. He very obligingly explained that the people installing the line on Wadley Street were a contract job crew working for Key Enterprises and not city employees. They were attempting a tie-in on a 16 inch valve when some braces gave way and the valve ruptured.

The biggest problem now was that the city crew could not locate a shut-off valve for that main in order to halt water flow. Mr. Medley then explained that the Key Enterprises employees' actions were being reviewed as to neglect which would result in deducting a portion of the water expense from their payment. He also explained that the City of Midland may have to pay for all or a portion of the lost water because we could not find the cut-off valve.

This is the second time I have noticed an "accident" by this contract job crew on Wadley Street. I do not know what their problem is, but their methods obviously need to be reviewed.

Because of the day's conversations and my concern for the proper development of Midland's streets and other public works services, I will suggest the following to Mr. James Brown, Midland city manager:

1. Do away with Mr. Fred Baker as he has obviously exceeded the "Peter Principle" by two or more levels.

2. Replace him with Mr. George Medley, as he seems knowledgeable in all public works aspects and has a genuine concern for the Midland taxpayers he works for.

3. Inform Ms. Beth Graham that even though we are "just" private citizens, that we have a right to be concerned about waste of any magnitude of our tax dollars.

A hazard

To The Editor:

I am sorry the council backed down on its decision to return two-way traffic. The council has, it seems to me, been unusually concerned about the wishes of a small number of citizens. These citizens, residents of the five-block area, have every right to present their case, and have done so effectively. The rest of us, and there are a great many, are, naturally, not organized.

Several facts are obvious: The intersection at Garfield and Cuthbert is an awkward, jogging intersection. It is a very busy intersection. Cuthbert is a main, arterial street, the only natural throughway east-west between Louisiana and Golf Course. Kansas and Storey both dead-end at Garfield.

Mayor Akins doesn't "see any overwhelming problem that has occurred." Councilman Thomas suggested dropping the subject, and they did.

There is a problem, though, and it is obvious to anyone who uses these streets. Traffic counts are helpful, of course. But, observation and experience are even more helpful. I suggest that Mr. Baker and/or council members observe the intersection traffic from that vacant Cuthbert lot, perhaps. Even better, I suggest they try to continue east onto or past Garfield from either Storey or Kansas. It is awkward at any time. It is definitely hazardous at busy times. Hazardous.

Who's fault?

To The Editor:

In response to "Fast Drivers," I believe it was the old lady's fault.

She seemed impatient and unwilling to wait and let traffic pass before pulling out into oncoming traffic or maybe she tried to beat it. A lot of deaths are caused by miscalculations.

The man who was driving the truck wasn't given a ticket and he was not speeding. He was within the law. Nobody knows exactly what someone else is going to do until it's too late.

Soviet 'mole' Maclean dead of cancer at 69

MOSCOW (AP) — Donald Maclean, a former British diplomat who was part of a ring of Soviet "moles" that devastated Britain's intelligence network and then fled to Moscow, has died of cancer, his office confirmed today.

Maclean, fellow diplomat Guy Burgess and high-level British intelligence agent Harold "Kim" Philby belonged to a ring of Cambridge-educated intellectuals and Communist sympathizers whose treachery seriously damaged relations between Britain and its chief ally, the United States. Maclean helped obtain atomic secrets for the Soviets before fleeing to Moscow in 1951.

Donald Maclean

A spokesman for Maclean's former employer, the state Institute for World Economy and International Relations, said the 69-year-old defector's body was displayed in the building for 30 minutes today and then taken to Donskoy Monastery for a 10-minute funeral service. The body was to be cremated later.

"Let us have a moment of silence to honor citizen of the Soviet Union Donald Maclean," said an unidentified woman leading the service, which was attended by about 60 people.

The institute spokesman said Maclean died at home last Sunday. However, a neighbor in Maclean's riverside apartment building overlooking the Kiev train station said he had died in Moscow's Borotkin Hospital.

An Associated Press reporter visiting the flat, No. 88, found a black photo album lying in a trashcan by Maclean's door. All the pictures had been torn out but Russian words describing them were still visible. The entries included "Cambridge," "Papa in college," "Mama in France" and "Cairo," where Maclean was sent home from his diplomatic posting in 1950 after suffering a nervous breakdown.

MACLEAN AND Burgess were tipped off in the spring of 1951 that British secret agents were closing in on their spy ring. On May 29 — Maclean's 39th birthday — they slipped out of England to France, and from there to Moscow.

Philby retained his cover for 12 years after their defection, working for Britain's MI-5 intelligence service. He fled to the Soviet Union in 1963, the same year Burgess died of alcoholism, and reportedly is still living in Moscow.

All three were recruited in the 1930s by their art history professor, Anthony Blunt. Blunt, a former art adviser to Queen Elizabeth II, confessed to espionage charges in 1967 but was not unmasked by the government until 1979, when he was stripped of his knighthood.

As head of the American desk at the Foreign Office in London after postings in Paris, Washington and Cairo, Maclean was conscientious to the end. He wrote a meticulous note on British-Argentine trade negotiations hours before he defected.

Perhaps his most damaging betrayal came in Washington in 1944-48, when he was first secretary at the British Embassy and then joint secretary of the U.S.-British Combined Policy Committee on Atomic Development, dealing with the crucial issue of atomic weaponry just as the Cold War was heating up.

"Certainly he was a major traitor. He made fools of us all," Robert Cecil, the British diplomat who succeeded Maclean on the American desk, recalled.

Japanese airliner crashes into trees

TOKYO (AP) — A domestic airliner with 53 people aboard slammed into a grove of trees on the island of Hokkaido today and split open, injuring 31, airline officials said.

Haruya Miura, an official of the Nihon Kinkyori Airways, said by telephone that the pilot was the only person known so far to be seriously injured.

No deaths were reported in the crash of the aircraft as it tried to land in a light snowfall at Nakashibetsu, a remote town of 22,000 on the eastern coast of Japan's northernmost island.

Other officials gave lower injury tallies. The Transport Ministry reported 28 injured, five seriously, while airport fire department officials said 26 people had been hospitalized, four seriously.

Miura said the twin-propeller plane made one pass over the 3,960-foot runway to see if it was safe to land.

Pilot Shizuo Hara, 36, told the airlines before taking off from the Hokkaido prefectural capital of Sapporo that he would turn back if he felt the weather made it unsafe to land, Miura said.

A light snow was falling, and Transport Ministry officials said that although weather conditions were adequate for landing, low clouds may have blocked the pilot's vision of the runway as he descended.

Zimbabwe disavows anti-Botswana claim

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Zimbabwe says it will protest Botswana's harboring of opposition leader Joshua Nkomo through normal diplomatic channels and has disavowed a newspaper editorial accusing its neighbor of an act of war.

Nkomo fled to Botswana this week and said he would not return to Zimbabwe unless Prime Minister Robert Mugabe's government guaranteed his safety.

Joshua Nkomo

Mugabe, in New Delhi, India, for a summit of non-aligned nations, said today he suspected Nkomo of "collusion" with South Africa, but denied Nkomo's claim that troops were sent to his house to kill him.

"I am not an assassin," Mugabe said. "What would I gain by having him killed? It would only make him even more of a martyr. It is in our interest that he return to the country and remain very much alive."

Mugabe also defended his decision to transform Zimbabwe into a one-party state, saying such a government "is not necessarily a dictatorship."

Mugabe has been in India since Saturday, the same day his government began a sweep of Nkomo's hometown, Bulawayo, that resulted in three deaths and more than 1,700 arrests.

The most recent arrests included Nkomo's wife, son-in-law and daughter, who police said were detained Thursday for questioning about his escape to Botswana.

The Harare Herald on Thursday accused Botswana of "declaring war on us" by accepting Nkomo and accused the neighboring country of allowing Zimbabweans loyal to him to make cross-border anti-government raids.

Information Minister Nathan Shamuyarira said Thursday night that Zimbabwe did not dictate the editorial policy of the Herald.

Boston City Council overturns fire protection 'user's fee'

BOSTON (AP) — A new levy requiring churches to pay hundreds of thousands of dollars for fire protection has been overturned after protests from clergymen, who said it was a thinly disguised "tax on worship" that threatened poor churches.

The Boston City Council voted earlier this week to exempt churches and synagogues from paying the fire service "user's fee." A spokesman for Mayor Kevin H. White said he backed the action.

The council acted after public complaints from clergymen about the fee, which was supposedly intended to help pay for fighting fires in buildings deemed to present unusual problems.

But colleges in the city, which also have protested the fee, were not exempted by the council. Emerson College, billed for $12,029, is contesting its fee in a suit to be heard March 28 in Suffolk Superior Court.

The fee was authorized by the state Legislature last June to bail out Boston city government, but the first bills weren't mailed until last week.

Schools, like churches, are exempt from ordinary property taxes, but the city contends the fire levy is a user fee.

"The central question is whether this is a tax on worship," the Rev. Peter V. Conley of the Catholic Archdiocese of Boston, one of the country's largest, said before the council vote.

Parish priests receiving the fire bills had been ordered to send them without payment to archdiocese headquarters, said Conley.

The fees were "the functional equivalent of a tax on a tax-exempt religious body," complained the Rev. Dr. James A. Nash of the Massachusetts Council of Churches.

"Bills of this size could cause black churches to close down," the Rev. Charles Stith, pastor of the Union United Methodist Church, had complained. "How can you deal with an $8,000 bill on top of a $15,000 to $20,000 oil bill, particularly when you are receiving a bill well into the fiscal year of most congregations."

The city said the fees were based on the number of firefighters and pieces of equipment needed at a fire at any given building, a building's height, construction materials, occupants and availability of a sprinkler system.

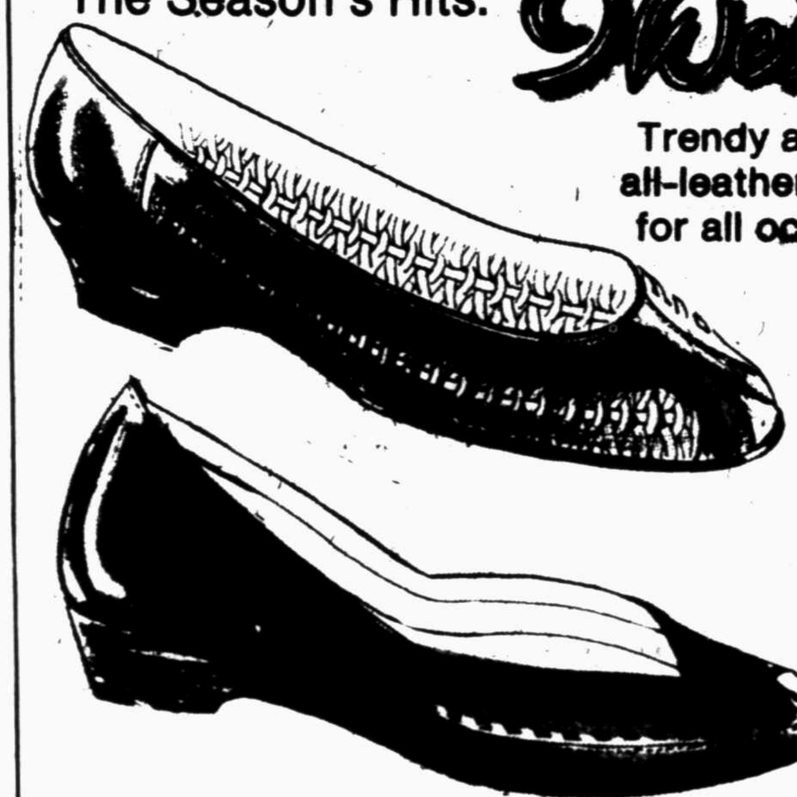

Stephen Marash, city project manager for the fire service fee, said bills averaging $3,037 had been sent to 115 churches, amounting to a demand for $349,000 of the $8.4 million the city says it wants to raise.

Another 2,400 bills each were mailed to commercial establishments judged to place unusual demands on firefighters, said Marash.

According to a Boston Globe survey, bills ranged from $1,687 on the Church of St. John the Evangelist to $8,201 on Old South Church, with half the bill due March 31.

Williamson sentences Brundage to life for Chaparrals' defeat

Oh boy, am I ever in trouble now. When Terry Williamson, our assistant sports editor, assigned me to cover the Midland College-San Jacinto playoff game in Fort Worth, he told me of his misgivings.

"I'm a little worried about assigning this game to you," he said. "Lately, every time you've covered a game we should win, we lose. If we lose this one, you better not come back alive."

If I had known before hand just how good San Jacinto was, I might have thought twice about going. Instead, I was full of confidence and even made such statements as "Piece of cake," and "No problem."

Normally, though we admit a certain prejudice in favor of our local teams, we're not overly concerned with the outcome as long as we get it covered. On this particular occasion, however, Terry was very much in favor of a Chaparral victory. You see, he's a big Chap fan and he had a lot at stake. He was going to be the one to go to Hutchinson, Kan., for the National Junior College basketball tournament and he had been rubbing his hands in glee since the Region V tournament in expectation of going. Now he has to stay home and I'm stuck with him, or rather, his wrath.

When I went into work Thursday afternoon, Terry was waiting for me. He was sitting at the computer terminal desk, hunched over a piece of paper.

"Is it safe to come in?" I asked a little sheepishly. I was ready to turn and run for my life. If he got his hands on me, I would be history.

Instead he said, rather jovially, "Come on in." There was an evil glint in his eye and a conspiratorial grin on his face.

I thought he was trying to sucker me into a trap. I edged slowly into the office and Terry dropped the bomb.

"I've just been going over next week's schedule," he said. "What day don't you want the desk. I'm supposed to give you a day off you know, though I don't want to."

I looked at the schedule and my heart sank. Not only was I assigned to three 4 a.m. shifts, I also caught the two weekend desks which are, to say the least, the longest and worst days of the week to work.

For those of you who don't know what I mean by desk shift, it's the term we use for the guy who is in charge of editorial layout for a day's paper. None of us really enjoy working it.

I started pleading with Terry to give me a break. "It wasn't my fault Terry," I said. "San Jacinto had an excellent basketball team. The Chaps were in trouble from the word go."

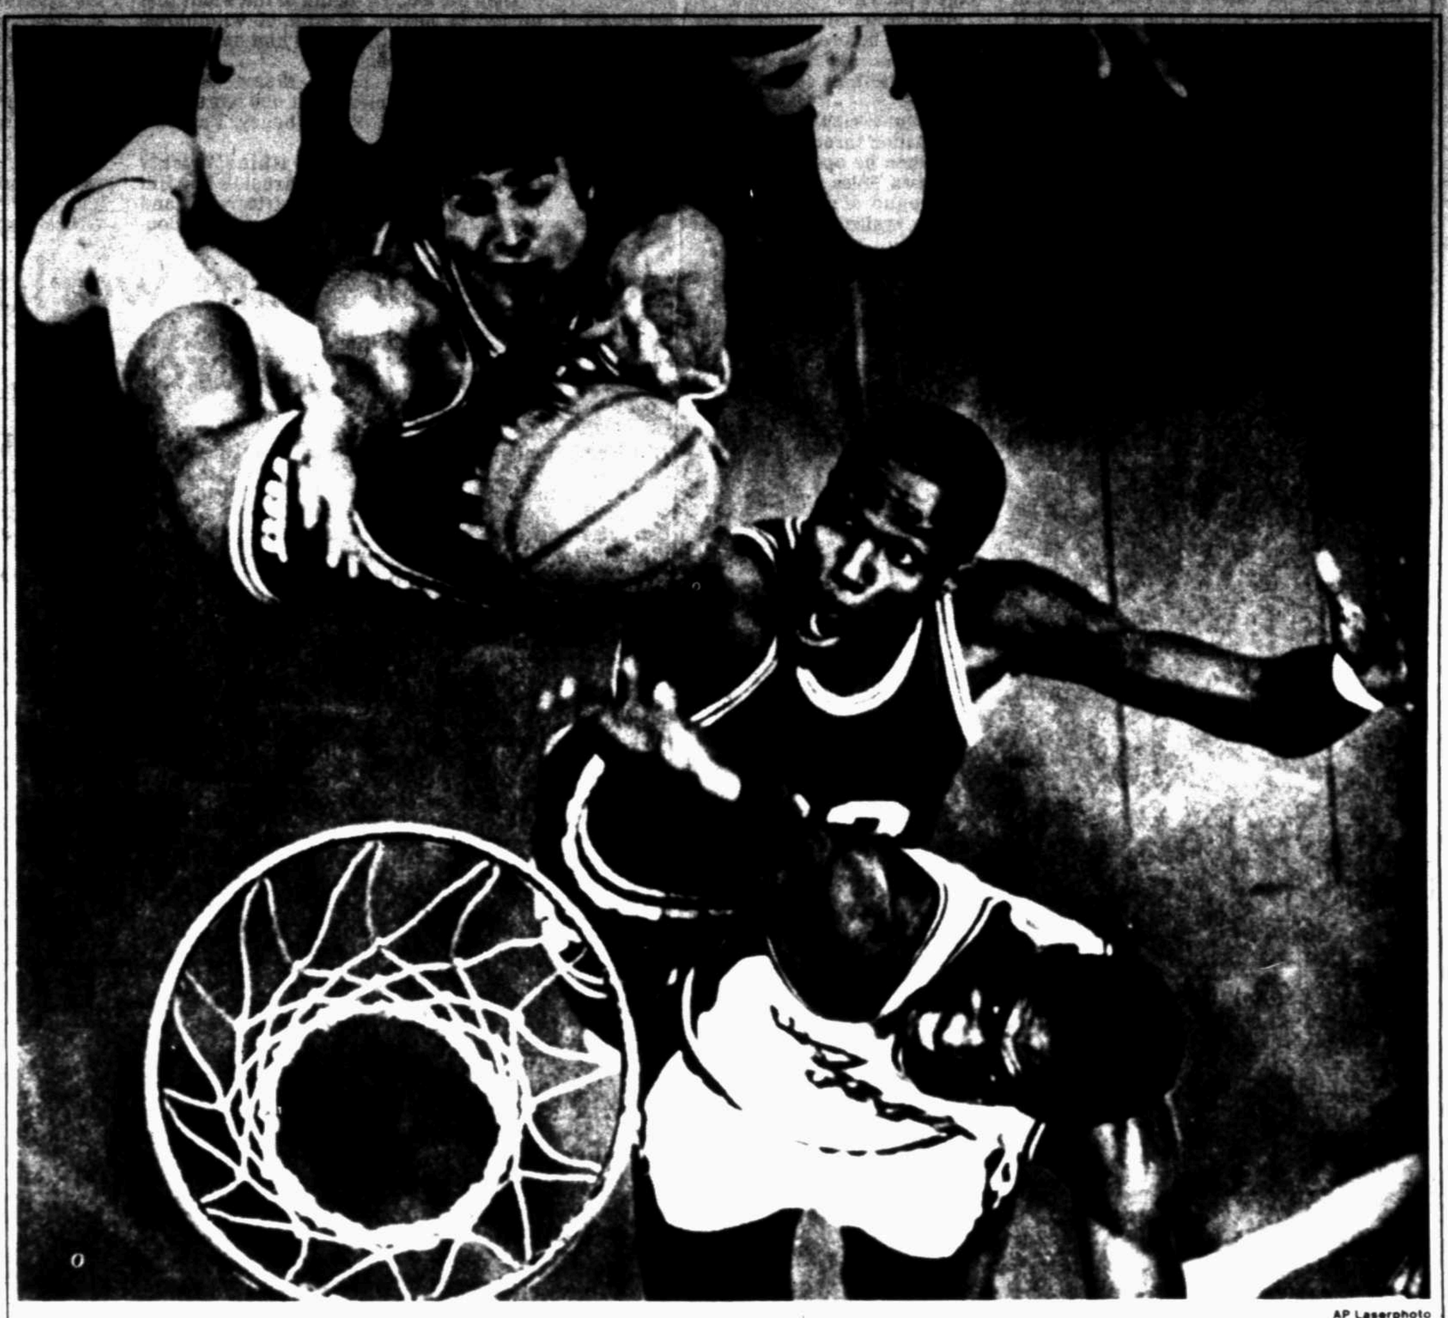

It didn't do any good. Terry is very vindictive. You rub him the wrong way and he gets his revenge, and then some.

"I warned you before you left that your life would be miserable if the Chaparrals lost that game," he said. "You've ruined my plans for next week and now you have to pay."

There was no reasoning with him. He hasn't earned his nickname "Ragin' Bear" for nothing. After a year and a half of working with him, I know better than to cross him.

The only thing I have left to hope for is that other Chap fans aren't blaming me for the loss as well and will implore Terry to ease up on me. So, I ask you, if you see him at some sporting event, talk to him, put pressure on him to let me out of the office, let me see the light of day again.

Do any of you think it would help if we sent him to Hutchinson anyway?

SMU, TCU roll in SWC tourney; Mustangs face Cougars tonight

DALLAS (AP) - Southrn Methodist Coach Dave Bliss has decided to try a little psychological warfare on No. 1 ranked Houston before tonight's semifinal meeting at the Southwest Conference Post-Season Basketball Classic.

Bliss noted that Houston lost to Virginia earlier in the year probably because they had a letdown when they found out All-America Ralph Sampson wasn't going to play.

"Five minutes before the game I'm going to Houston and tell them Sampson's not going to play tonight," Bliss quipped. "Houston doesn't beat us with baskets. They beat us with touchdowns and converions.

"We won't let the air out of the ball but we can't run against them. We won't stall, either," Bliss said.

Southern Methodist and Texas Christian rolled to relatively easy quarterfinal victories Thursday night.

SMU trimmed Texas Tech 76-69 despite Red Raider guard Bubba Jennings' career high 29 points and TCU slammed Texas A&M 65-53.

TCU meets No. 6 ranked Arkansas in the second game of tonight's doubleheader for the right to play in Saturday's noon championship finals.

SMU guard Butch Moore said the Mustangs were excted about getting another crack at the Cougars, who drubbed them twice this year.

"Houston has a lot of number one players and we're looking forward to it," Moore said. "They beat us by 36 in Houston and by 17 at our place. We're going to play our game and maybe something good will happen."

Center Jon Koncak scored 21 points for the Mustangs and got seven rebounds before he fouled out.

"Everything was falling for me," said Koncak. "I knew in the second half they would come out and front me to stop me and they did but the other guys picked up the slack."

SMU is now 19-10 for the year and Houston has a 25-2 record.

TCU, reaching the 20-victory mark for only the third time in the school's history, has nine losses Arkansas is also 25-2.

Guard Darrell Browder led TCU with 17 points, Doug Arnold had 16, and Nick Cucinella contributed 14 points.

Tyren Naulls was high for the Aggies with 20 points.

TCU Coach Jim Killingsworth wasn't as much worried about facing Arkansas as he was excited with 20 wins.

"As a coach, you carry that record forever," he said.

TCU shot 60 per cent from the field to a poor 38 per cent for the Aggies, who finished the year 17-14.

"It was one of our better games," said Killingsworth.

Texas A&M's Claude Riley said "TCU played us as well as I've ever seen a TCU team play."

A crowd of 13,050 turned out for the doubleheader in Reunion Arena.

The championship finals are at noon Saturday and will be televised to most of the nation by NBC.

Richard's surgery just a temporary detour

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros pitcher J.R. Richard underwent surgery to improve circulation in his left leg only because of his profession, his surgeon says.

"If J.R. Richard was not an athlete, we would not have considered operating," Dr. William S. Fields said Thursday following the six-hour operation.

"He could have had an office job, but that's not what he wanted to do. We wanted to get him back throwing again," Fields said.

Thursday's surgery was the latest setback in Richard's long comeback road that started in July 1980 when the former All-Star pitcher suffered a stroke.

Richard had reported to the Astros spring training last month in the best shape since his stroke, Fields said, but started sufferinig leg fatigue after running drills.

Doctors discovered that an artificial artery implanted in Richard's left leg in 1980 had become clogged. In Thursday's operation, doctors bypassed the blocked artery with another artificial artery.

Fields said Richard would remain hospitalized seven to 10 days and could resume a light exercise program within two weeks. It likely will be six weeks before Richard could resume full spring training activity, he said.

The only setback Richard had suffered was the lost time in recovering from the surgery, Fields said.

SMU under NCAA investigation

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist University's football program, which was placed on two years' probation in 1981, is the subject of a preliminary investigation launched by the NCAA, according to media reports here.

SMU president Donald Shields confirmed that he had received a letter from William Hunt, assistant executive director of the NCAA, informing him of the action, WFAA-TV reported Thursday.

And SMU Coach Bobby Collins said he received a similar letter from the NCAA Thursday, The Dallas Morning News reported in today's editions.

"I received a letter from them this afternoon informing us that a preliminary investigation was being started," Collins said. "Right now, that's all I know. It could develop into a full-scale investigation. Or it could be nothing. I have no idea."

Attempts by The Associated Press to reach NCAA officials in Kansas City and SMU officials were unsuccessful.

The letter, a form letter, was dated March 7, Shields told the television station.

"At least part of the inquiry centers on circumstances just prior to signing blue-chip wide receiver Ronald Morris of Cooper, a small town in Northeast Texas," WFAA-TV said.

WFAA-TV quoted "reliable sources" as saying the inquiry also involves a prominent Dallas banker and a Dallas attorney, both of whom are members of the Mustang Club.

Shields said he didn't know what prompted the inquiry, but said SMU will cooperate "in every way," WFAA-TV said.

"Anyone can turn you in for any one of a number of things," Collins told The News. "But I honestly don't know what this is about."

Shields told the station he has not been contacted directly by the NCAA but said he is positive and confident about the way the school's recruiting activities have been conducted under SMU's athletic director, Bob Hitch.

WFAA-TV said it contacted Hitch and Southwest Conference commissioner Fred Jacoby earlier Thursday. Both denied knowledge of the probe, the station added.

Hitch accused other SWC schools of "gunning" for SMU because of the Mustangs' football success the past two seasons, the station reported.

WFAA-TV said it contacted NCAA investigator David Beebe Wednesday in Austin, while Beebe was on the University of Texas campus. Beebe told the station he would neither confirm nor deny that such an investigation was under way, WFAA reported.

SMU has won or tied for the league football championship the past two seasons, capping last year with a Cotton Bowl triumph over Pittsburgh. Its recruiting season this year was considered one of its best ever.

The Mustang football program was placed on two years' probation in 1981 following an NCAA investigation into its recruitment practices. SMU won the 1981 SWC championship, but was barred from taking part in the 1982 Cotton Bowl because of the NCAA restriction.

SMU repeated as SWC champion in 1982 and played in the 1983 Cotton Bowl, since the second year of probation did not include any NCAA-imposed sanctions.

Lady Dogs take early lead in district golf

The Lady Bulldogs own an 11-stroke lead after the first round of the District 4-5A golf race.

The opening round, played at Green Tree Country Club Thursday, was the first of three rounds the lady linksters will play.

Midland High leads the Big Spring A squad, 362-373, with Midland Lee third at 375. San Angelo Central finished with a 382 and the Steers B team is a distant fifth at 456.

Kelle Mobley set the pace for Midland with a torrid round of 73. The senior shot a two-under-par 33 on the front nine, including five pars and three birdies. She came back with five more pars but suffered four bogies on the back nine for her 73.

"Kelle had a super round," Midland High golf coach Mary Baird said. "This is the best tournament score we have had all year."

Mobley's score gave her a six-stroke lead for the medalist title over Patricia Jones of Big Spring. Gayla Strickland of Lee is third with her first round 82.

The district tournament is based on a total score for three rounds of golf, one played at each of the three cities which high schools sponsor a golf team.

The next round will be in Big Spring, March 17.

Both Midland teams will be competing in the Kerrville invitational Monday and Tuesday.

Nicolette beats weather, golfers for Bay Hill lead

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — After longshot Mike Nicolette had nursed home an early, 5-under-par 66, the wind, cold and rain turned the first round of the Bay Hill Golf Classic into a horror show.

Jack Nicklaus made the turn 2 under par, then bogeyed three of four holes on the back for a 72, his first round over par this year. Masters champ Craig Stadler had the same score, even though he holed out from the fairway for an eagle-2.

Tom Watson, the U.S. and British Open title-holder, lost three shots to par on the last three holes and shot 73. PGA champ Ray Floyd had to make four birdies to salvage a par 71.

And those adventures took place early Thursday, before the weather turned more severe.

Even the host, Arnold Palmer, was not immune.

He sent a ripple of excitement of eager anticipation through a heavily bundled gallery when he opened up birdie-birdie and, after two holes, was tied for third in the first round of his own tournament. And Palmer, trailed by a big gallery of friends and neighbors as well as his wife, Winnie, kept it there, 2 under, for another six holes.

Then he, too, fell victim to the winds that gusted to nearly 40 mph. A windblown drive on the ninth started him on the way to a 6, a double bogey.

A couple of holes later, Winnie remarked: "One more. Just one more. If he makes one more double bogey, I'm leaving."

She was next seen walking briskly through the parking lot at Arnold's Bay Hill Club. Arnold finished with a frustrating and deeply-frustrated 78. It included three double bogeys.

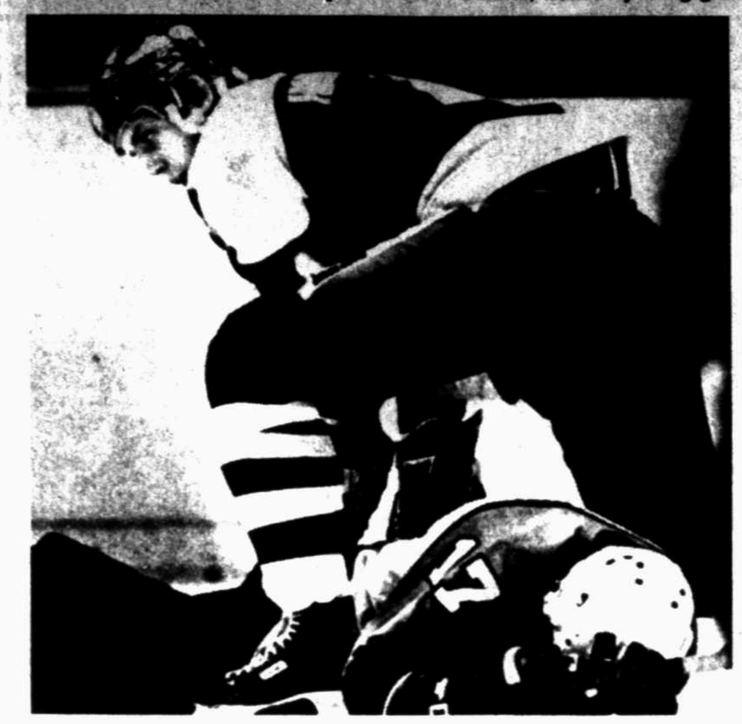

But he was not alone. Only two men in the afternoon half of the field, which got the worst of the weather, broke par 71. Woody Blackburn and Bob Gilder had 70s.

Lanny Wadkins shot 80. Tom Purtzer had a 9 on his last hole. Don Pooley, who had a string of 22 consecutive rounds at par or better, wrote an end to that. He had a 77. Tom Kite, the defending champion and winner of the Vardon Trophy for the last two seasons, shot 76. Orville Moody picked it up after playing the first nine in 41.

Nicolette, with a 7:46 a.m. starting time, was one of the first men off the tee and thus avoided most of the foul weather. "It didn't start to get bad until after I made the turn," said Nicolette, who never before had led the first round of a PGA Tour event.

Nicolette, a career struggler now in his fifth year on the Tour, started from the 10th tee, played the more difficult back nine first and so got past most of the trouble before the winds kicked up.

Using a new, longer putter for the first time in competition, Nicolette didn't make a bogey. He missed five greens but saved par on all of them, one-putting 10 times.

Hamilton retains world figure skating crown

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Scott Hamilton, world figure skating champion for the third year, proved to a delighted Finnish audience that artistry still matters most.

While his rivals attempted spectacular jumps Thursday night, the 24-year-old business management student from Denver just concentrated on skating — and retained his title with ease.

Norbert Schramm of West Germany was second and Brian Orser of Canada third.

"Some skaters want to be the first to a Triple Axel in the championships, or maybe the first to do a quadruple jump," Hamilton said. "But they don't always combine their jumping with the artistic quality that is needed to win titles.

"There is no way you can keep an audience's attention for 4½ minutes without artistry."

Three Triple Axels were done. Orser, an old hand at this difficult jump, did one — but not cleanly. Perfect Triple Axels were executed by Brian Boitano, of Sunnyvale, Calif., who finished seventh, and an unrated Czech skater, Thomas Hlavik, 19th. Alexander Fadeev of the Soviet Union, who finished fourth, attempted a quadruple. He ended his bid by sitting down.

Hamilton did not even include a Triple in his program. "It had not been going well in training," he explained, "so I decided to leave it out. I just wanted to skate well."

Hamilton admitted he had felt the pressures of going for a world title for the third successive year. "I didn't really think I could do it," he said. "I was a little nervous when I got here, but I started peaking and my skating got a little better in practice each day."

He said he owed a lot to Dr. David Jenkins, the U.S. team doctor, who won three world titles during 1957-59. "He talked to me about what he went through when he won three world championships," Hamilton said. "He helped me a lot by being so understanding, and being someone I could relate to. It wouldn't mean nearly so much to hear it from someone who had never been a world champion."

Bruins finally beat Montreal

By The Associated Press

Until recently, the Montreal Canadiens owned the Boston Bruins. Just last season, Boston managed one meager tie in eight games with the Canadiens.

But the Bruins turned the tables on Montreal this year ... until Thursday night.

The Canadiens, who trail first-place Boston by 11 points in the National Hockey League's Adams Division, asserted themselves against the Bruins for the first time since the opening game of the season. Montreal outshot the usually stingy Bruins 38-21 in posting a 3-1 decision.

"They beat us the last three times they've played us," said Montreal's Steve Shutt, who scored the Canadiens' first goal. "We had to come up with a big game. It's getting near the end of the season now, where all the teams are thinking playoffs. The Bruins are going to be in contention, too. We had to prove to ourselves that we could beat them."

Flyers 6, North Stars 3

Minnesota lost away from home for the first time since Feb. 3 and saw its six-game unbeaten streak snapped. Bobby Clarke had two goals for Philadelphia and Brian Propp contributed a goal and two assists.

Flyers Coach Bob McCammon credited a new checking system his team used for the first time, a system borrowed from the Soviets which aims to clog center ice. But Clarke was skeptical.

Red Wings 4, Black Hawks 2

Ivan Boldirev started Detroit off right with a goal at 22 seconds and later set up John Ogrodnick's score as the Wings moved within a point of fourth-place Toronto in the Norris Division. They trail third-place St. Louis by three points.

Reed Larson joined Bobby Orr and Denis Potvin as the only NHL defensemen in history to reach the 20-goal plateau four consecutive years when he scored in the first period.

Islanders 4, Penguins 3

The Islanders broke a five-game winless streak on the road as they rallied in the third period on goals by Mike Bossy and John Tonelli. Tonelli put in his own rebound after some sloppy clearing work by the Pittsburgh defense with 7:22 to go.

Flames 6, Jets 3

Kent Nilsson had two goals and two assists to pace Calgary. The Jets have lost five straight Smythe Division matchups and are only one point ahead of fifth-place Los Angeles in the sector. Only four Smythe teams will make the playoffs.

Whalers 3, Devils 0

Down at the bottom of the standings, the Whalers snapped their nine-game losing streak in style. Hartford had surrendered 63 goals in those nine games, yet it befuddled the Devils as Greg Millen stopped 23 shots. Blaine Stoughton connected for his 38th goal at 9:38 of the second period with the Whalers holding a 5-on-3 skating advantage and Millen didn't have to do much to protect it.

AUSTIN (AP) — Spectator interest at the state schoolboy tournament shifts today to Class 5A, which includes a Houston Yates team loaded with college prospects such as a 6-foot-8 forward touted as a possible point guard and guards that check in at 6-7 and 6-5.

Yates, 37-2, and Fort Worth Paschal were matched in the afternoon semifinal. Bryan, which won one and lost one to Yates early in the season, and San Antonio Sam Houston play tonight.

Yates' 6-8 Rickie Winslow and 6-5 Carven Holcombe have drawn the most attention from college recruiters, who also like 6-7 Stacey Belcher.

Another highly sought recruit is 6-9 Raynard Davis of Sam Houston.

On Thursday, Snook made a bid for its sixth consecutive Class A championship by running away from Quitaque-Turkey Valley 51-28 in the semifinals, and Dimmitt — the defending champion in 3A — beat Lindale 63-47.

Snook will play Nacogdoches Central Heights, which defeated Maypearl 61-54 in its first tournament appearance, for the title on Saturday.

Dimmitt renews a rivalry with Van Vleck, which whipped Columbus 67-57, in another Saturday championship contest. In 1975, Dimmitt defeated Van Vleck for its second crown.

In Thursday night's 4A semifinals, Borger surprised Silsbee, which had lost only once, 61-56, and Waxahachie outran Corpus Christi Flour Bluff 76-57.

Snook got 17 points from Darin Benford and 16 from Clint Thomas, a 6-2 leaper who can dunk the ball, in an easy victory over Valley. Snook is making its 16th appearance at the tournament and could win its ninth championship.

Wayne Johnson threw in 24 points before fouling out, and his sub — 6-0 freshman David Davis — scored four points and grabbed five rebounds in the final 3:55 of Central Heights' victory over Maypearl.

All-state guard Kevin Cleveland, the coach's son, tossed in 25 points for Dimmitt, which had little difficulty with a predominantly junior Lindale squad.

Van Vleck missed its first 11 shots and survived a stretch in which Columbus scored 18 unanswered points to avenge an earlier 12-point loss to the Cardinals. Despite the 18-point streak that gave Columbus a 35-28 lead, Van Vleck led at the end of three quarters 40-39 and pulled away in the final period.

Lonely Fidrych is back

This year's test is with Red Sox

By GORDON EDES
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. — Some things are not easily abandoned, especially if it's all that you have. As Mark Fidrych used to say, it was either baseball or pumping gas back home in Massachusetts.

"I'm all alone. What else do I have to do in life?" he asked. "I don't really have much. I'm not married. It's just me and my life so basically I keep on playing. They keep giving me a uni (uniform), so I might as well stick with it."

Six years of arm trouble, and Fidrych, 28, still is trying to stick. This time, it's with the Boston Red Sox, who invited him to camp as a nonroster player. The uniform isn't his yet.

The hope is, though. The hope that this time the pain in his right shoulder has gone for good. The hope that he has not wasted years of pitching in Lakeland and Evansville and Pawtucket. The hope that this time the doctors — especially one, Red Sox physician Arthur Pappas — have given him new life.

"My ultimate fantasy right now," said the man who once lived a fantasy existence, "is to make it in spring training, break with the big club and play the full year. That's my fantasy."

He paused. "And it's not a fantasy, either. It's going to happen. My chances are great."

The curly hair is more closely cropped now, but the wardrobe is the same-Early American vagrant. Blue jean jacket, frayed edges and torn collar. Blue jean shorts, with more patches than the brightest colonial quilt. Fidrych shrugs when asked about his taste.

"This is the way I've always dressed," he says.

In 1976, with the Detroit Tigers, Fidrych was in style. He was, in fact, a national fad. He was the smalltown kid who'd get down on his knees and smooth the dirt on the mound, would shake his fielders' hands after a good play, would communicate a joy in playing that was irresistible.

And he would win. The record was 19-9, with a league-best earned run average of 2.34. "He was all slider and sinker ball," Boston pitching coach Lee Stange said, "and I don't think he threw a pitch above the knees."

Fidrych was the American League's starting pitcher in the All-Star game, its Rookie of the Year, its main attraction. In 29 starts, Fidrych drew 901,239 fans, an average of 31,077 an outing. He was boffo box office, and he was a delight.

But it all ended after one season. He tore cartilage in his left knee the following spring training. Then one night in Baltimore, the arm went dead. "A tired arm. That's what they thought it was," he said.

A dead arm, wracked by tendinitis, was more like it. He was finished in '77. Two starts in '78, and he was sidelined again. Four appearances in '79, more of the same. In four years, he had a total of 10 wins and 10 losses. There were visits to specialists, even a hypnotist. Nothing helped, and the pain only got worse.

The Bird had landed, and it wasn't pretty to see.

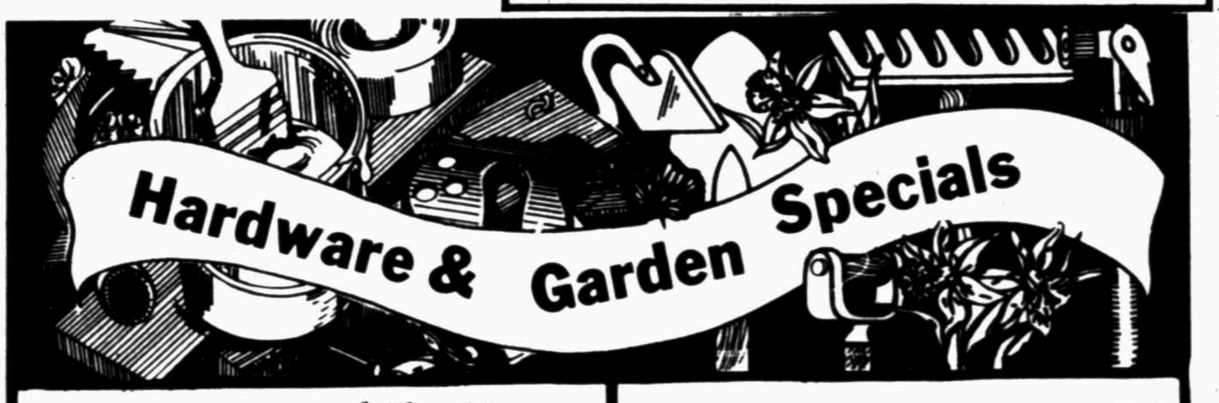

"When people say I had the world in the palm of my hands, that's wrong," said Fidrych, now that almost all of it has slipped out of his grasp.

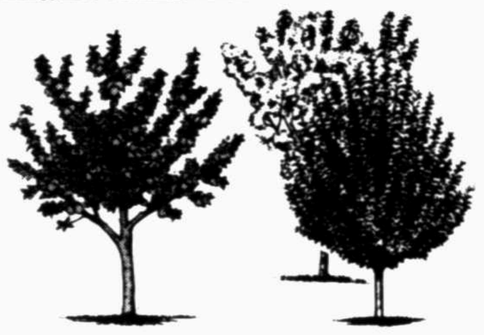

'I didn't. It's just that people liked the way I played ball, and I liked people, how they related to me.

"When you got to the seventh, eighth and ninth innings and they were yelling ... So it might be 90 degrees and you were tired and drained, and you'd try to pull something out of you and you couldn't, they'd pull it out of you. They'd get something down inside you and all of a sudden you'd have something a little extra, and you'd go, 'Wow.'

"They (the fans) haven't given up on me, so why should I give up on myself? When I step on the field, the fans still relate to me, I relate to them. That's the big thing in my life."

It was something he missed, desperately. "The glory of being able to go out there, step on the mound, and know you had control," he said.

Alston, Kell given Hall of Fame honors

Compiled from Wire Reports

Former Detroit Tigers third baseman George Kell and Walter Alston, who managed the Dodgers 23 years in two cities, were named to Baseball's Hall of Fame today by the committee on veterans. They will be inducted July 31 in Cooperstown, N.Y., along with this year's regular inductees — Brooks Robinson, the Baltimore Orioles' third baseman, and Juan Marichal, the San Francisco Giants' pitcher.

Chicago White Sox outfielder Ron LeFlore will not be prosecuted for alleged child neglect following the death of his 6-week-old son last January. LeFlore's son, John Christopher, died of sudden infant death syndrome Jan. 16. That sparked allegations that he and his wife had not checked up on the baby for 12 hours, a charge LeFlore vehemently denied Thursday.

The Texas Rangers have lowered ticket prices for the 1983 season, officials say. The change was announced Thursday by Rangers vice president Larry Schmittou. Adult general admission prices dropped from $4 to $3.50, children's general admission from $2.50 to $2 and plaza level tickets from $6.50 to $6, he said.

Football

The three United States Football League games televised by ABC on the league's inaugural Sunday drew a national Neilsen rating of 14.2, far larger than ABC had predicted and comparable to an average National Football League Sunday.

Detroit Lions quarterback Gary Danielson is negotiating with the Arizona Wranglers of the United States Football League. The National Football League veteran said Wednesday that he is willing to jump from the Lions and the NFL "if the money's right."

Two members of the Washington Federals' football team were arrested Thursday following a dispute with police, authorities said. Buddy Hardeman, 28, a running back with the fledgling United States Football League team, was charged with assault on a police officer and tight end Phil Dubois, 26, was charged with disorderly conduct and released after he paid the $10 fine.

Basketball

For the third straight year, Virginia center Ralph Sampson won the Naismith Trophy, awarded by the Atlanta Tipoff Club to the top college basketball player in the nation. Sampson is the second three-time winner in the 15-year history of the award. The other player to win three times was UCLA's Bill Walton in 1972-74.

Forward Major Jones of the Houston Rockets of the National Basketball Association pleaded no contest to a charge of drunken driving and was sentenced to two years' probation and a $300 fine.

NBC contract may change habits

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

The new contract between NBC and major league baseball, effective next season, could change America's sports viewing habits. Which is to say a lot fewer people may spend Saturday afternoons watching baseball on television.

THE REASON is that word "exclusivity" in the new contract. It prohibits any other major league baseball games to be telecast while NBC's Game of the Week is in progress. Starting in 1984, fans who have always been able to watch their home team on a local station will have to take what they're given by NBC — or spend the day playing tennis, fishing, golfing, whatever.

Given no alternative but, say Seattle and Texas, they may choose whatever.

"I would say that people here are Red Sox fans first and baseball fans second," says Doug Wheeler, production sports director of WSBK-TV in Boston, which will televise 98 Red Sox games this season, 24 on Saturday afternoons. "The real die-hard baseball nuts will probably watch the game of the week, but I don't think the run-of-the-mill Red Sox fan will."

WHAT WHEELER is saying is that baseball, playing 162 games a season, is a sport of intense local interest in which fans consider out-of-town games meaningless for most of the year unless there's a record on the line or a Fernando Valenzuela on the screen. Not until September, the denounment of the pennant races, into the playoffs and World Series, do they widen their perspective.

NBC wanted the exclusivity, which ABC has for Monday night games, because the Game of Week was losing the ratings to local teams in major markets with heavy local television. This year, the Red Sox will have those 24 Saturday afternoon telecasts, the Chicago Cubs will have 20, Detroit 15; Atlanta will carry 10, the New York Mets 9. The local outlets for the Braves, Cubs and Mets send their games nationwide via cable.

THE NEW RULES leave teams with two options — more Saturday night games or Saturday cable, excluded from the ban. But the NBC contract includes the option to do Saturday nights also, along with some prime time. And although they don't specify how, NBC sources say they will be guaranteed the right to get the games they want, presumably by switching games from night to day.

The network has already been burned by a plethora of Saturday night games. One day last summer it had only one afternoon game to choose from — it needs two, to have a rain backup. Late in the season, it had to settle for a meaningless game because Pittsburgh refused to shift a night game to daytime.

The reason baseball acceded to exclusivity is obvious — money, $500 million over five years, $6 million per season per team. Moreover, NBC made it sweeter by excluding cable from the ban, providing the owners with another source of income. "We're saying to them, 'You can make up for what you lose from local TV by selling your games to cable,' says an NBC executive.

Moreover, the regular-season contract is only an hors d'oeuvre for the network. The entree — the real reason NBC bid pre-emptively for the whole package — is the World Series, providing guaranteed ratings and a great lead-in to entertainment programming in prime time.

But where does that leave the fan?

In the north and east particularly, fans are used to weekend baseball on television.

Many of the teams there have no cable outlets yet. And where they do, not everyone gets it. In New York, where both the Yankees and Mets have signed pay-cable contracts that will take an increasing number of games each year off local television, 80 percent of the city is still without cable, meaning fans will be denied the games even if they're willing to pay for them.

But will they tune in to the Game of the Week?

"Why should I watch the Phillies and the Cardinals or some other game I don't care about?" laments a Yankee fan of long standing. "I don't need to sit home in nice weather if I can't see the Yankees. I'd rather go run in the park."

Manning has highest salary

By The Associated Press

Houston Oilers quarterback Archie Manning received the highest base salary — $600,000 — of any player in the National Football League last season, according to published reports.

The next two top base salaries were paid to Cleveland Browns linebacker Tom Cousineau, who received $500,000 and New Orleans Saints quarterback Ken Stabler, who earned $450,000 in base salary. The Dallas Morning News reported in a copyright story today. A similar story also appeared in the San Diego Union.

The other average base salaries by position were: running backs, $95,633; defensive linemen, $89,716; offensive linemen, $89,704; receivers, $88,868; tight ends, $85,595; linebackers, $84,362; defensive backs, $78,552; kickers, $70,667; and punters, $65,376.

Herschel Walker, the Heisman trophy-winning running back from the University of Georgia, signed a contract earlier this month with the New Jersey Generals of the new United States Football League worth an estimated $5 million over three years. It is the biggest contract ever for a pro football player, although it is not known how much of the money is in base salary and how much in bonuses and other incentives.

The NFL figures, which were compiled by the NFL Players Association, do not include signing bonuses or performance clauses and were not adjusted to show what the players earned for nine games during the strike-shortened 1982 season.

The report, the first undertaken by the NFLPA, indicates that 23 percent of the NFL owners' revenue goes to player salaries. At the center of last season's strike was a demand by the players that 55 percent of each team's gross income be guaranteed to cover player costs — salaries, pensions and other benefits. That demand eventually was dropped in negotiations.

The complete list of NFL players salaries have been mailed to members of the NFL Players Association by Ed Garvey, executive director of the players union.

In Washington, Garvey refused to elaborate on the reported figures.

Sox off to fast start; Cubs, Rangers lose

By The Associated Press

The Chicago White Sox are off to the fastest start in exhibition baseball thanks to some stingy pitching and hard-hitting rookie Greg Walker.

Walker, vying for a starting job at first base with veterans Tom Paciorek and Mike Squires, smashed a two-run homer as the White Sox improved their record to 4-0 with a 5-1 victory Thursday over the Cincinnati Reds.

"Every time I see that young man, he is hitting the ball hard and driving in a run," said Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa.

If Walker keeps hitting, he might force LaRussa to move Paciorek to left field, where Walker's close friend, fellow rookie Ron Kittle, the 1982 minor league home run king, also is trying to win a roster spot.

"He's rooting for me and I'm rooting for him," Walker said. "It would be great if we made the team together."

Pitchers Rich Dotson, Jerry Koosman, Al Hrabosky and Dick Tidrow held the Reds to eight hits. White Sox pitching has now given up just seven runs in the four straight victories, and five of the runs came in one game.

"I've always felt good about our pitching," LaRussa said. "It's probably the strongest part of our club."

In other games, Andre Dawson went 4-for-4, hit two homers and knocked in four runs to lift Montreal over Atlanta. Gary Carter and Tim Walach also homered for the Expos.

Karl Pagel cracked a two-run homer and two singles, giving him a 6-for-6 start this spring, as Cleveland beat Oakland.

Steve Braun's second double of the game knocked in the go-ahead run in the ninth inning for St. Louis against Los Angeles. Braun also doubled home two runs in the seventh.

Gary Ward put Minnesota ahead to stay with a solo homer against Houston. Ward, who also had two doubles, gave the Twins a 4-3 lead with his sixth-inning blast, and they got another run in the seventh on Bobby Mitchell's run-scoring single before Harry Spilman homered for the Astros in the ninth.

Jim Rice and Dwight Evans homered to account for Boston's runs against Philadelphia. Four Red Sox pitchers held the Phillies to three hits.

Tim Thompson hit a two-run homer and Ernie Whitt added a solo shot as Toronto beat the Mets. The Blue Jays scored four runs in the eighth inning as New York pitcher Ron Darling walked four, hit a batter and gave up one hit.

Another group of Mets lost to Detroit as German Barranca homered twice and Larry Herndon, Mike Laga and Glenn Wilson once for the Tigers. Barranca, a non-roster player, now has three homers in four games.

Orangemen upset Hoyas, 79-72

By The Associated Press

Jim Boeheim didn't have to say much to his Syracuse basketball players before sending them out to meet Georgetown in the Big East tournament.

"If any team needed a win, it was us," said the Syracuse coach.

The 20th-ranked Orangemen had lost two regular-season games to the Hoyas — including one as recently as last Monday night — and a loss Thursday night would not only have bounced them out of the tournament, but quite possibly out of the NCAA playoffs as well.

They made sure that wouldn't happen, beating the 15th-ranked Hoyas convincingly, 79-72.

"Syracuse was better than us tonight," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson. "Monday night had nothing to do with it.

"Rautins and Santifer knew it was their last time around. They did a great job. They beat us."

Thompson referred to two of the Orangemen's seniors, Leo Rautins and Erich Santifer. Santifer scored 23 points and Rautins had 18 points, seven rebounds and six assists.

In the other quarterfinal games at Madison Square Garden, No. 8 St. John's defeated Pitt 64-53 behind Billy Goodwin's 16 points; No. 13 Villanova edged Connecticut 69-68 on John Pinone's free throw with 23 seconds remaining and No. 14 Boston College hammered Seton Hall 79-56 behind John Garris' 23 points, outscoring the Pirates by a whopping 53-20 in the second half.

"Connecticut played inspired basketball. Our patience down the stretch and experience down the stretch took its toll on them," said Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino.

The Big East tournament was one of several played around the country Thursday night as teams continued to shoot for spots in the NCAA's post-season tourney.

Sidney Green scored 28 points to lead No. 9 Nevada-Las Vegas to 74-67 victory over University of the Pacific in an opening round game of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association tournament.

In other first-round games, San Jose State beat Utah State 80-66 behind Chris McNealy's 27 points; Fresno State defeated UC Irvine 86-68 as Bernard Thompson scored 24 and Ricky Smith hit a 12-foot bank shot with three seconds to play as Long Beach State upset Fullerton State 61-59.

In the Southern Conference, Willie White had 28 points as 18th-ranked Tennessee-Chattanooga pulled away from scrappy Appalachian State 71-62. George Singleton scored 17 points as Furman stunned Marshall 67-60. Winfred King scored 21 points and pulled down 19 rebounds as East Tennessee State took a 75-65 victory over The Citadel. Kenny Trimier's 24 points paced Western Carolina to an 86-62 victory over Davidson.

Ennis Whatley hit two free throws with 1:12 remaining to give sluggish Alabama the lead, and Terry Williams made two clinching free throws with four seconds to play as the Crimson Tide came back in the second half to trim Auburn 62-61 in the opening game of the Southeastern Conference tournament. Dale Ellis tallied 26 points, 19 in the second half, as Tennessee rolled past Florida 78-62.

Alabama Coach Wimp Sanderson said the key to the Crimson Tide victory was its man-to-man defense in the second half after playing mainly a zone defense the first 20 minutes.

Rick Lamb scored 22 points to spark Illinois State to a 79-61 victory over Bradley in semifinal action of the Missouri Valley Conference championships. Ricky Ross hit a 15-foot jump shot with four seconds left in the game to lead Tulsa past New Mexico State 49-48 in the night's second game.

John Devereaux poured in 25 points, pulled down 16 rebounds and blocked six shots as Ohio University whipped Toledo 70-59 to move into the finals of the Mid-American Conference tournament. Bowling Green was the other semifinal winner, beating Ball State 79-69 as Bill Faine scored 28 points.

"The thing I like is that we held Ball State to 47 percent shooting tonight, and they were coming off a 63-percent game against Miami," said Bowling Green Coach John Weinert.

Xavier guards Victor Fleming and Anthony Hicks scored 16 points each and spearheaded a pesky defense that forced Detroit into numerous turnovers on the way to a 90-70 victory in the semifinal round of the Midwestern City Conference tournament. Alfredrick Hughes scored 25 and Andre Battle added 17, as Loyola bounced Evansville 80-66.

Russell Davis scored 20 points and grabbed 12 rebounds and Robert Brown contributed 24 points as Long Island University rallied to defeat Fairleigh Dickinson 101-98 in overtime to gain the finals of the ECAC Metro North playoffs. Chipper Harris scored 32 points to lead Robert Morris to a 106-94 victory over St. Francis in the other Metro North semifinal.

Texas Tech's Tony Benford (34) and Mustang Jom Koncak battle for a rebound in SWC tournament action, Thursday night.

In the ECAC South, Tony Robinson stole the ball and scored on a layup with four seconds left to nail down a 68-65 victory for East Carolina over George Mason. Also, Navy hit seven of 10 free throws down the stretch to hold off Richmond 74-69.

Darren Maloney scored 23 points and Chris Logan added 22 as Holy Cross rallied in the second half to defeat New Hampshire 89-77 in an ECAC North Atlantic game. Also, Tony Simms scored 34 points to lead Boston University to a 95-82 victory over Niagara.

Darryl Murphy and James Mitchell scored 14 points each to power Jackson State to a 63-61 victory over Mississippi Valley in the Southwestern Athletic Conference tournament. Alcorn State stopped Prairie View 98-55 as Aaron Brandon, David Clabon and David Williams scored 16 points each. Southern University defeated Grambling 77-68 as Glenn Bridges scored 14 points.

Kenneth Lyons scored a Southland Conference Tournament record 47 points as North Texas State stunned regular-season runnerup Louisiana Tech 87-73 in a first-round game. Jay Hansen scored 16 of his 20 points in the second half to lead Arkansas State to a 66-56 come-from-behind victory over Texas-Arlington.

Defending champs prevail at state Golden Gloves

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Antonio Sweeney of Houston opened a cut over Dennis White's left eye in the third round and the fight was stopped at 1:58 to give the defending light heavyweight champion a quarterfinal victory in the Texas Golden Gloves Tournament Thursday night.

Robert Franco of Corpus Christi, the only other defending champion fighting Thursday night, advanced to the featherweight semifinals by outpointing shorter Johnny Almaguer of Lubbock.

The longer-armed Franco, a two-time state champ, piled up points with his longer reach. He will meet Lupe Miranda in the semifinals.

Finals in the five-night tournament are scheduled Saturday night and the 12 weight division winners will advance to the National Golden Gloves Tournament, slated March 21-26 in Albuquerque.

JIM MURRAY

Will the USFL be loved in July as in March?

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

"A tree is a tree, a rock is a rock, shoot it in Griffith Park."

This was the famous quote attributed to one old-line moviemaker whenever the new young lions of the business wanted to shoot their cinema verite movies in faraway, authentic, exotic locales.

I was oddly reminded of this last Sunday when the new kid on the block, the U.S. Football League, opened for business and the most oft-heard question of the occasion was: "Do you think the new league will make it?"

WELL, A pass is a pass, a block is a block. A football is a football. A field is 100 yards. A tackle is a tackle. Therefore, why not?

It's the same game at the same place. Only the time is different. In places like L.A. and Florida, it may be even better. October is frequently the hottest month in Southern California and in South Florida.

The quality of play may be infinitesimally inferior. But, since there's nothing to compare it to, why should that matter?

Would anybody argue that a high school performance of Gilbert & Sullivan is better than a D'Oyly Carte? That a little theater presentation of Shakespeare is as expert as the Old Vic? You want to hear "Carmen" in Japanese?

Well, they don't keep score in "Iolanthe." They're not trying to make first downs in "Hamlet." "Carmen" isn't a contest. Or it shouldn't be.

But isn't the league stocked with rejects from higher civilizations, like the NFL?

Listen, do you know Johnny Unitas was driving a steamroller and playing for a semipro league when the Baltimore Colts got him for an 87-cent phone call? What's so smart about a pro league that could leave the greatest pure passer of his time digging foundations? How bright were the scouts and coaches who cut him?

THE NEW league's problems will not come on the playing field or on the sidelines. There's plenty of talent the NFL overlooks every year to stock two new leagues.

Some years ago, the author, Robert Ruark, was asked on a talk show what had driven him out of sportswriting as a career. "February and March," he answered puckishly. In Ruark's day, those were the dull months. Basketball was just something to do before the gym was cleared out for the dance. Hockey was played by six teams clustered mainly in the Northeast and a foreign country.

The facts are, the new football league is bucking fairly empty sports pages. It's not forcing an issue. It's filling a need. The man-on-the-street in this country still considers "sports" to mean baseball, football and boxing. Everything else is polo. He may not be sure what a "hat trick" or a "moving pick" is, but he sure as sin knows what a three-man front is or a down-and-out.

It's been the fate of new football leagues to disappear or be swallowed in whole or in part by the existing league. Football is like that animal that eats its young. The fledgling leagues also operated under an inferiority complex, ratified by us geniuses of the sports pages.

It has the sports pages, and thus center stage, if not to itself, at least where it only shares billing with the dog and pony acts of sports. The attendances drawn for the opening games were a little short of astonishing — 45,000 at Denver and Phoenix, 42,000 at Tampa and more than 30,000 at Is there a cloud on the horizon? Well, more like sunshine on the horizon. Too much of it. It's a reverse of that old song, will you love me in December as you did in May? Over here it's going to be will you love me in July as you did in March?

CAN YOU watch football in a straw hat? Better yet, can you play it in a plastic helmet? Isn't football a raccoon coat and hip flask sport? Do you play crucial games in Chicago or Tampa in a climate better suited to water polo or body surfing? How many salt pills will it take to keep a team from passing out?

Noel Coward used to sing that only "mad dogs and Englishmen" went out in the midday sun. To those will have to be added the Tampa Bay Bandits, the Boston Breakers, the Arizona Wranglers and the Philadelphia Stars. Do we now add mosquito netting and pith helmets to the game-day costumes?

To all the other objections, C.B. DeMille might have answered, "A pass is a pass, a block is a block, play it in Griffith Park." But with a look at the calendar, he might have to add, "But not in July or August."

West Virginia at top of double-digit joblessness list

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — West Virginia heads the list of 30 states suffering from double-digit joblessness with an unemployment rate of 20.4 percent, the Labor Department says.

It's believed to be the first time since the recession began in the late summer of 1981 that any state registered a fifth or more of its work force unemployed, said Kathy Hoyle, a spokeswoman for the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

About 158,000 of West Virginia's 770,000 workers had no job in January, according to the figures, which are not adjusted to reflect seasonal variations in the economy.

West Virginia's jobless rate compared with a national seasonally unadjusted unemployment rate of 11.2 percent in January, the report released Thursday said.

Following behind West Virginia was Michigan, with 17 percent joblessness, and Alabama with 16.6 percent. Hawaii, at 5.6 percent, had the lowest jobless rate, followed by Kansas, 7.6 percent, and Oklahoma and South Dakota at 7.7 percent each.

Thirty states and the District of Columbia had unemployment rates of 10 percent or above in January, the report said. Twenty-one states and the nation's capital had double-digit joblessness in December and unemployment rates were at or above 10 percent in 17 states in January 1982.

The coal mining industry in West Virginia was hardest hit by the recession, but the slump subsequently had a deep impact on construction, steel and small businesses.

Nearly a third of the 165,000 members of the United Mine Workers union, many of them in West Virginia, have been laid off, and the union has cut its national staff in Washington.

The department released a companion report Thursday showing that West Virginia led the nation in the proportion of its labor force drawing unemployment compensation.

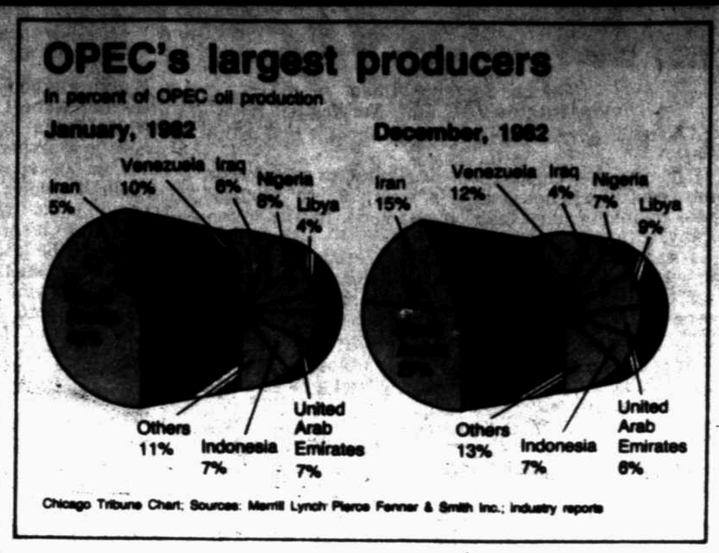

Through the week ending Feb. 19, according to the Employment and Training Administration, the state's insured unemployment rate was 11.3 percent, compared with a national insured jobless rate of 4.3 percent.

Here are January's seasonally unadjusted unemployment rates for the 50 states and the District of Columbia:

West Virginia, 20.4 percent; Michigan, 17.0; Alabama, 16.6; Ohio and Pennsylvania, 14.9; Indiana, 13.8; Tennessee, 13.7; Oregon, 13.6; Illinois, 13.5; Wisconsin, 13.4; Washington state, 13.3; Idaho, 12.9; Kentucky, 12.4; Alaska and Nevada, 12.3; Rhode Island and Mississippi, 12.2;

Also, California, 11.7; South Carolina, 11.6; Louisiana, 11.3; Arizona and Arkansas, 11.1; Iowa, Missouri, Montana, 10.9; New Mexico, 10.6; Florida and Minnesota, 10.4; District of Columbia, 10.3; Maine and North Carolina, 10.0; Wyoming, 9.9; Utah, 9.7; New York, 9.6, Colorado, 9.5; North Dakota, 9.4; Maryland, 9.1; New Jersey and Virginia, 9.0, and Massachusetts, 8.7;

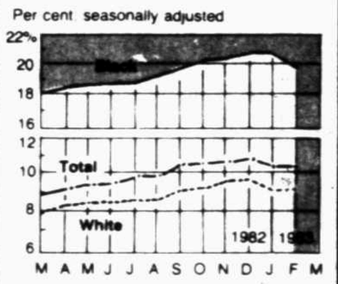

Also, Texas and New Hampshire, 8.5; Delaware, 8.4; Connecticut, 8.3; Georgia, 8.2; Vermont, 8.0; Nebraska, 7.9; Oklahoma and South Dakota, 7.7; Kansas, 7.6, and Hawaii, 5.6.

Thousands could qualify for homeloans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of unemployed Americans facing loss of their homes because they have fallen behind on their mortgage payments would qualify for emergency federal loans under legislation headed for House action.

Democrats pushed the $760 million bill through the House Banking Committee on Thursday over Republican opposition and expressed optimism they will prevail again when the measure comes up for a vote next Thursday.

It is the first element of the Democrats' so-called phase two program of recession relief to reach the House floor.

However, the loan program is opposed by the administration and backers acknowledge they will have a tough time getting the Republican-controlled Senate to approve it.

Rep. Chalmers P. Wylie of Ohio, ranking Republican on the committee, complained that the bill "would create an administrative quagmire" that might require 250 additional workers to oversee and take months to put into effect.

Housing Secretary Samuel Pierce Jr. has promised his agency would do everything possible to implement the loan program if it becomes law, but made it clear he thinks it would be almost impossible to make it work.

Republicans also oppose the program on grounds it will add to the federal deficit and thereby contribute to keeping interest rates high.

There is bipartisan agreement on another section of the bill instructing federal banking regulators to encourage lenders to "exercise forbearance (including the acceptance of partial payment) to the maximum extent possible."

The measure specifically instructs the supervisory agencies to "waive or relax" — as much as possible without endangering the soundness of the institutions — limits on how many delinquent mortgage loans they can carry on their books.

And it tells the government banks that lend money to private banks, credit unions and savings and loans to give "special consideration" to those institutions trying to work out extended payment plans for strapped homeowners.

Midwestern senators join opposition to decontrol

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three senators from the Midwest are joining consumer groups and city officials in opposing the Reagan administration's plan to remove controls from natural gas discovered before April 1977.

"The decontrol of 'old' gas is likely to cause considerable distress in cities," said Richard Berkley, the mayor of Kansas City, Mo., representing the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

Reagan proposes to eliminate all natural gas price controls by 1986.

The present system, adopted by Congress in 1978, would lift price controls on Jan. 1, 1985 from offshore gas and "new" gas, found since April 1977. But it retains indefinitely price controls on "old" gas found before April 1977.

Prices jumped an average of 35 percent a year in the past four years in Kansas City, Berkley told the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee on Thursday. He added: "Gas prices will continue to rise at this high rate if nothing is done to controb them."

The price hikes have brought consumer demand for congressional action. More than 20 bills have been introduced in the House and seven in the Senate, ranging from partial decontrol to reimposition of controls already lifted.

The Senate panel has been holding hearings on the various proposals this week, trying to come up with some type of compromise.

Energy Secretary Donald Hodel told the panel that total lifting of controls will bring gas prices down, comparing the situation to the decontrol of oil prices and noting that oil costs have dropped since then.

But consumer groups disagreed Thursday and so did three senators from the Midwest, an area particularly hard hit by rising prices.

David Greenberg of the Consumer Federation of America told the panel that decontrolling old gas will mean consumers will pay between "$40 billion and $70 billion to the 20 largest gas produce[illegible] billions more to the rest of [illegible]gas industry."

Hobbs man creates oilman's game

HOBBS, N.M. (AP) — You gambled everything you had on this last oil lease and it came up a duster. You're indebted to the bank, and you owe more than $100,000 in back taxes.

You're in serious trouble, and the options you have available are all fairly unappetizing. You can ask the local loan shark to bail you out at 30 percent interest; you can put yourself at the mercy of your competitors and sell them your productive leases for whatever they will pay; or you can declare bankruptcy and lose your credit standing forever.

It would be enough to give even the sharpest business person a nervous breakdown — if it weren't only a game.

The game is Oil Baron, invented by Geosource Wireline District Manager David Oliver, and it is on sale by mail order.

"We took all the variables of big business," Oliver said, combining them to make the locally manufactured, locally marketed, oil-business board game.

To open the contest, each player gets a $200,000 bank loan. Note, that's a loan — and players must pay it off to establish a rating for additional credit.

"Nothing is inherited, nothing is given to players for free," Oliver said. "It's just like being in a real business."

Armed with their $200,000, players enter the oil patch — or money markets, or the gold market. The choices belong to the individuals. Players roll dice, advance around the board and land on squares that offer them certain options.

Rolls of dice and turns of cards dictate oil-lease production, prices of oil and gold, prime interest rates and money-market rates.

Every complete trip around the board represents one month. After each player makes 12 laps, the game ends. The player with the most money at the end is the winner. Simple? Don't bet on it.

"It's really easy to learn how to play," Oliver said, "but how well you play depends upon how well you know every letter of Baron's Law."

Baron's Law is the multi-page pamphlet spelling out the game's complex rules that regulate transactions with banks, loan sharks, markets and other players. Like any law, it has loopholes and intricacies that players would do well to understand.

Should players run into disagreement on the interpretation of any part of Baron's Law, Oil Baron furnishes a toll free number participants may call, 24 hours a day, just to settle an argument.

Lee Click of Best Printing Co. is manufacturing the game board, which customers receive in a mailing tube, and Sharon Birmingham of Promotional Services is handling the game's promotion.

Oliver said he turned down a Houston firm's offer to manufacture the game because he believed local concerns expressed more of a personal interest in the product and were willing to begin marketing with a small number of manufactured copies.

"It costs a little more," the inventor said, "but it puts the money back into the community, and that helps everybody."

Moody's makes Bell moody

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. has taken strong exception to the lowering of its investment credit by Moody's Investment Service Inc., and said regulators should make note of the problem.

A company official called Thursday's action "not warranted and overly negative.,"

Kennedy, Cranston want to stop drilling

By Linda Breakstone
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Democratic Sens. Alan Cranston and Ted Kennedy joined forces yesterday in an effort to ban all offshore oil drilling off California and Massachusetts until the year 2000.

Cranston declared, "If the Reagan administration has its way, our beautiful country will stretch from oil-slick sea to oil-slick sea." For California, the legislation would ban drilling up to 15 miles from the shore along about 600 miles of the approximately 1,100-mile coastline.

While Massachusetts' two senators, Kennedy and Democrat Paul Tsongas, signed the bill, California's junior Sen. Pete Wilson, a Republican, did not.

Wilson held private $1,000-a-plate fund-raising dinners Wednesday night and last night at the home here of an oil-company executive to help erase a $60,000 campaign debt.

VARIOUS BUSINESSES were represented among the several Political Action Committees that attended the dinners held at the home of Robert Schramm of Superior Oil.

Wilson, as a San Diego mayor, had in the past fought moves to drill for oil off his city's shore.

Wilson first said Cranston hadn't told him of the new oil-drilling-ban legislation and quipped, "That's an excellent question" when asked why he thought the senior senator didn't ask him to join in.

Since he wasn't familiar with the legislation, Wilson said he didn't know if he'd support it but added, "I don't know whether the ban is too comprehensive. I am certainly sympathetic to protecting the California coastline from any needless risks, but I'm not certain that saying that an oil glut exists now, which it does, is any kind of a comprehensive analysis of what the future energy needs of the country are going to be."

LATER, WHEN CRANSTON'S staff insisted they had asked Wilson to join the legislation, Wilson remembered the contact. At the time, he said, he told his staff, "Let's just watch it (the legislation)."

Asked if his oil-company campaign contributors had lobbied him on the offshore drilling issue, Wilson replied, "In a couple of cases some have indicated they are interested in offshore drilling, but in more cases with energy PACs, I have not talked to them.

"It's not a big secret, they're all pretty much eager to drill if someone will let them drill. They'll drill anyplace if someone will let them drill."

Wilson insisted his oil-company contributors would not give him problems on the issue. "I think they're realists and know that members of the Congress frequently vote against their interests if they feel some compelling, overriding interest," he said.

Donoghue's Money Fund Average (Averages for all 235 taxable funds)		39	7.7	7.8

Assets of the 235 money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 declined $2.0 billion to $183.9 billion for the week ending March 9, 1983.

The funds' 7-day average yield fell to 7.71% from 7.76%. The funds' 30-day average yield dropped to 7.78% from 7.80%.

The funds average maturity figure remained at 39 days for the second week.

William E. Donoghue says, "Money fund assets have shrunk $42.9 billion since the introduction of the bank money market deposit account. Over $600 million of this week's asset drop can be attributed to institutions-only funds seeking the higher returns available from other money market instruments. Of the remaining $1.4 billion outflow, the majority -- or $486 million -- came from money funds investing exclusively in domestic prime securities. This category of money funds includes the $16.5 billion Merrill Lynch Ready Assets Trust which experienced a $157.3 million outflow.

Merrill Lynch Ready Assets Trust also saw its 7-day average yield fall, to 6.5% from 8.0%, making the fund's 7-day average yield 121 basis points below the average for all funds. Because of the fund's investment philosophy and conservative accounting policy, Merrill Lynch Ready Assets Trust's 7-day yield will be below that of other funds when interest rates rise. Of course, when interest rates fall, Merrill Lynch's Ready Assets Trust's yield will be higher than other funds. Today's volatile markets often result in wide fluctuations in weekly returns. When selecting a money fund, remember, it is wise to review both long-term and short-term yields before investing."

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven- and thirty-day period. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. x -- average term to next rate adjustment date. Dollar rallies

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rallied against key European currencies in early trading Friday as tension increased within the European Monetary System and OPEC oil ministers struggled for accord on prices and production.

Gold prices fell $10 an ounce in the uncertainty.

The EMS, the Common Market's joint floating exchange system designed to stabilize currencies, was awash with rumors of a pending realignment, perhaps this weekend or shortly after the final round of French municipal elections Sunday.

The first round last Sunday showed a strong revival of conservative parties to the detriment of the Socialist-Communist coalition.

In early trading, the French and Belgian francs, the Danish krone and the Irish pound were at their lowest permitted level within the EMS.

In Tokyo where trading ends before it begins in Europe, the dollar declined to 237.45 yen from 237.70 on Thursday. Later in London, the dollar eased further to 237.275 yen.

The British pound fell back to $1.5075 from $1.51175 on Thursday as OPEC oil ministers met in London. North Sea oil has underpinned the British currency for months and any threat of an oil price war hits sterling.

Other dollar rates early Friday compared with late Thursday:

-2.3910 West German marks, up from 2.3905.

-2.0532 Swiss francs, up from 2.04.

-6.93 French francs, up from 6.8950.

--2.6455 Dutch guilders, down from 2.64825.

NBC returns to prime-time news magazine with 'Monitor'

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC, the network without a magazine show since last July, gets back into the prime-time news field Saturday night with "Monitor," a program that could give soft news a good name.

"Soft" has been the blanket putdown for pieces that look at subjects uncritically or superficially. ABC's "20-20," which can engage in daring and meaningful journalism, sometimes does stories on pop entertainment figures with the emphasis on the stars' performance, rather than personality and psyche.

CBS' "60 Minutes" does fewer entertainment profiles, and its pieces tend to be deeper and more classical, like segments on Vladimir Horowitz and Itzhak Perlman. But the program's popularity stems more from its exposes and investigative pieces, the so-called news-western approach to journalism.

"Monitor" fits a different category, oriented more toward stories that are too deep in human feeling and foible to be labeled mere people pieces. The program successfully broadens the concept of "soft" news.

Anchored by Lloyd Dobyns, who is irreverent without sacrificing his credibility, "Monitor" is gentle, humorous and emotionally meaty. It is not flashy or sensational. Prokofiev's "Piano Concerto No. 1" is its dignified theme music. A simple grid serves as Dobyns' backdrop.

And one beauty of the opening night stories is that they are explained and explored without resorting to glittery graphics, the hocus-pocus techniques often used to camouflage swiss-cheese reporting.

Correspondent Steve Delaney has a powerful report on harassment, situations that arise when obsessive love or hate causes one person to hunt and haunt another. One example shows an 85-year-old woman who's been hounding a man for 42 years, ever since he was the paper boy and claimed her dog bit him.

The most striking illustration focuses on a man who won't take no for an answer. His one-sided love for a now-terrified woman has taken the form of letters, phone calls, stakeouts and visits to the woman's relatives. Ever-so-calmly, he says her resistance is "rude and childish behavior."

A psychologist explains that these trackers can't fathom the rejection when all they think they are doing is showing affection. They see themselves as the victims.

"Monitor" travels for another piece to Tulelake, Calif., formerly an internment center for Japanese-Americans in World War II and now the horseradish capital of the world. This funny story, narrated by Dobyns, will make you care about horseradish and the people who grow it more than you ever imagined you could.

Correspondent Rebecca Sobel's story on skin-white whites, who are judged by Louisiana law as black because of their ancestry, is interesting from a psychological standpoint, although more attention could have been given to the practical impact that being legally black has on their lives.

Hollywood brokers hold keys

Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Listeners could almost feel the power oozing from the tips of the three men's fingers. These guys are among Hollywood's high-pressure, big-money power brokers, the people who hold so many of the keys to success in show business.

They do not hang around drugstores, waiting who see who sits on what lucky stool. They are not combing the little theaters in Bismarck and Albuquerque. They are not reading letters from proud mothers who boast that little Phil won the lead in "Charley's Aunt" at La Moure High School.

The three men — an agent, a personal manager and a vice president-talent for a TV network — were speaking about how Hollywood's stars are made.

The agent is Jack Gilardi, a vice president of International Creative Management, which calls itself the world's largest talent agency.

The personal manager, a man who is paid to tell talent how to live the kind of life that will woo fame, is Jay Bernstein.

The network talent VP is Joel Thurm of NBC, who has cast such series as "Taxi," "The Bob Newhart Show," "Starsky and Hutch," "Family," "The Rookies" and "The Tony Randall Show."

For all their expertise and their veneer of professionalism, they grant that one good old American show-business ingredient goes a long way toward helping youngsters make it.

It amounts to cronyism and nepotism. It's pervasive in Hollywood. Count the number of "show business families," those where sons and daughters followed the parents to fame: the Sinatras, the Fondas, the Bridgeses. Even the Crosbys. God, the Crosbys. They form production companies, then hire their relatives and friends to write scripts, direct and star in their shows.

No charges filed in Belushi death

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A grand jury concluded its hearings into the death of comedian John Belushi without handing down an immediate indictment.

"The decision has been made not to seek an indictment today," grand jury foreman Joe Healy said Thursday.

Healy said prosecutors would review evidence taken over the past six months and return to the grand jury in a week or two with recommendations on how to proceed.

Belushi, the star of TV's "Saturday Night Live" and the film "Animal House" was found dead of a drug overdose in a Chateau Marmont Hotel bungalow in Hollywood on March 5, 1982.

Deputy District Attorney Michael Montagna on Thursday denied an earlier news report that he would seek a drug or murder indictment against Cathy Evelyn Smith, Toronto, a sometime rock singer who was believed to have been the last to see Belushi alive.

Panel discusses Midland's disaster plan

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

While only 18 people attended a Thursday night panel discussion of Midland's preparedness for handling a natural or nuclear disaster, perhaps because of the serious nature of the subject, nobody left early.

The panelists stressed the importance of communication before and during a disaster, and discussed both the strong and weak points of Midland's disaster preparedness as evidenced during the city's most recent disaster, September's plane crash at the Warwick Apartment.

They also emphasized the need for planning and described progress within their agencies to cope with disasters.

Panelists included Col. Wilson Banks, retired city aviation director; Raymond Lewis, fire chief; Dallas Smith, Midland County sheriff; Dave Dorchester, Texas Electric Service Co. spokesman; August Koenning, regional liaison officer for the Department of Public Safety division of emergency management; and Jerry Daniel, a private consultant from Austin.

The audience included several members of the League of Women-Voters of Midland, which sponsored the discussion. The league will soon announce the findings of its one-year study of Midland's disaster preparedness.

Smith said his department has secured a back-up generator and organized a specially-trained tactical team in preparation for emergency situations.

TESCO's Dorchester said his company is continually updating plans and learning from disasters. He said TESCO has a disaster plan for each major city it serves, including Midland, Odessa, Andrews and Monahans.

Dorchester said TESCO has established several alternative communication centers in Midland, and can also offer the city emergency communications if its equipment is squelched during an emergency.

"I guess if there's one thing you learn out of a disaster, if you can't communicate, you just have a terrible time," he said.

He also said TESCO's distribution maps are now being computerized, to enable easy access and eliminate the fear that the company's copies might be destroyed in a disaster.

Lewis said declining revenues forced the city to postpone construction of two new fire stations and the hiring of additional personnel. But because the city has "completely outgrown us to the north and west," he said the new stations remain a priority.

Banks said that as required by the Federal Aviation Administration, he had drafted a plan for coping with many airplane-related emergencies prior to September's crash.

"You can have no plan that will work perfectly for every disaster," said Banks. But "it's always a plan, you have to have it."

When asked whether emergency response to the Warwick crash scene wasn't hampered by the lack of a clear chain-of-command at the site, Banks said lack of an on-site "leader" of the emergency efforts contributed to some confusion, including problems with traffic and crowd control.

"There's got to be someone in charge," said Banks, who said he assumed the otherwise unfilled role at the crash site. He said the importance of establishing command of an emergency "might be something you want to make a note of" for future disaster planning.

Daniel, who will visit Midland in June to meet with city department heads and coordinate disaster planning, said confusion at the crash site was typical of a disaster. He compared the fire and police chiefs and other department heads to "a team of superstars. If they don't have a coach, it's a lousy team."

Nearly all the panelists agreed that Midland needs a disaster warning system, but were also in agreement in their uncertainty about the most workable system available.

But Smith questioned the value of a warning system, especially if the citizens don't know how to respond. "How in the world do you really make it work?" Smith asked. "It's not a practical approach."

He said the average citizen's response to a warning would be similar to that given by sheriff's deputies when sent to scout for tornadoes during a severe weather warning: "What do you want me to do with it when I find it, sheriff?"

"The problem is educating the people about what to do," Smith said.

Municipal League asks for funds to battle potholes

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Midland isn't the only city waging a continual war against potholes. The Texas Municipal League is asking the state government to participate money-wise in a "pothole control program" which would provide funding to cities across the state to battle potholes.

Under the proposal, the city of Midland would receive $1,265,400 for a two-year period.

This, according to Public Works Director Fred Baker, would wipe out most of Midland's potholes.

Companion bills are pending before the State Legislature which address funding the pothole program. Known as Senate Bill 287 and House Bill 632, it is a two-part measure.

One calls for $1.2 billion per biennium for repairing and improving the state highway system. The second part would appropriate $200 million from the state treasury over a two-year period to finance a "City Street Improvement Fund."

Under the measure, according to the TML news release, each city would receive an allocation of $3,320 for every mile of paved street. A city with 10 miles of street would receive a biennial payment of $33,200; one with 50 miles of street would receive $166,000.

Assistant City Manager Fred Poe noted the bill calls for a 30-70 participation, in which Midland would match the allotment with 30 percent of its money.

City officials support the proposal, he said. And in talking with state legislators Poe hasn't found anyone opposed. The problem, however, comes from declining revenues.

"With the state's shortfall, I would say this bill has a 50-50 chance of passing," he said.

One option might be to reduce the state's amount by calling for a 50-50 participation.

"Texas Municipal League feels streets are in such bad condition over the state," Poe said. Instead of routing gasoline taxes one-way to repairing state highways, the league is suggesting part of it go to city streets.

"A large portion of the gas tax is paid by people driving cars on city streets. On my personal car, I drive it 90 percent of the time on city streets," he said.

In calling for passage of the legislation, TML President Luther Jones of Corpus Christi said Texas cities are spending more than $100 million per year on street repairs and are still falling behind. As more people migrate to Texas, condition of the roads will worsen.

Midland's potholes pop up for two reasons, according to Fred Baker. One is that Midland has a lot of water running down the streets and that streets are built with a caliche base.

When the street has cracks and water slips under the pavement it causes the caliche to get wet, thus losing its stability. When that happens, the caliche softens, "it can carry no weight and can't support car loads," he explained.

On a wet street, caliche floats up from under the pavement, out the crack and down the street, leaving a void under the asphalt. The pavement caves in and thus comes the pothole.

In recent years, streets are being constructed differently to eliminate shifting caliche. "If you notice in our newer streets you can't find potholes," Baker said.

Majority of the potholes occur in older streets, he added.

If a hard rock base were used instead of caliche, Baker said potholes wouldn't occur as often. But caliche is the only base available for this part of the country. "The only way to get hard rock is to ship it in by rail, and the cost is almost prohibitive."

Besides being older, streets with potholes weren't constructed to handle heavy loads of traffic. This is breaking them down, leading to potholes, according to Baker.

Several of these are scheduled for rebuilding — Midland Drive, Illinois, Texas and Midkiff — and will be constructed with heavier bases to handle future traffic loads, he said, hopefully eliminating the need for a pothole patrol.

Potholes throughout Midland and cities across the state have popped up as a major problem. Bills in the state House and Senate would allocate money for repairing such problems, as seen here as the pickup's tire disappears in a pothole on Old Bankhead Highway.

Four former bank employees plead guilty to embezzling funds

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Three former Midland bank tellers and a former commercial loan secretary pleaded guilty Thursday in federal court in Midland to embezzling funds while in the employ of the banks.

The four, all women from age 20 to 35, were arrested and charged following investigations by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which said the women took more than $21,400 from two banks.

Pleading guilty before U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton were:

—Ann Bonham, 35, of Midland, former commercial loan secretary for The First National Bank of Midland. Ms. Bonham pleaded guilty to one count of fraudulently advancing herself a loan of $2,500 on Dec. 14, 1981. Altogether, the FBI said she embezzled more than $10,000 from the bank.

—Ray Teetoe Jones, 23, of Stanton, a former teller for The First National Bank. Ms. Jones pleaded guilty to setting up a fictitious account and then taking $450 of the bank's money on June 16, 1982. The FBI charged her with embezzling more than $1,500.

—Cynthia Rene Hall, 23, of Odessa, a former teller for The First National Bank. Ms. Hall pleaded guilty to misapplying $400 by the fradulent use of a teller-tape entry on March 1, 1982. The FBI said she embezzled more than $2,400.

—Callie Annette Jackson, 20, of Midland, a former teller for Commercial Bank & Trust Co., now Texas American Bank of Midland. Ms. Jackson pleaded guilty to taking $800 in December 1981. The FBI charged her with embezzling more than $7,500.

Judge Bunton is to sentence the defendants at noon on April 14, when he expects each of the women to explain why they stole the money and, if they so choose, to argue for mitigated sentences. Each defendant could be sentenced up to five years in prison and fined $5,000.

Bunton queried each of the defendants in the presence of their attorneys and the government's prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney Ricardo Gonzalez of El Paso. Representing the defendants were Edward Garza for Ms. Hall, Allen McFall for Ms. Jackson, Rusty Wall for Ms. Bonham, and Brian Martin for Ms. Jones.

Each defendant said she freely admitted her guilt, was not coerced into pleading guilty, and was offered no promises in exchange for pleading guilty rather than having her case tried by a jury. The government, however, has agreed to prosecute each defendant only on one embezzling incident and to drop other charges against them.

Ms. Jackson, who said she was a sophomore at Midland College, admitted to "taking money that wasn't mine...from the bank."

Likewise, Ms. Hall said she took money "that wasn't mine."

"From whom?" asked the judge.

"The bank."

Ms. Jones, who said she has earned six hours of college credit, and Ms. Bonham, who said she attended college for one year, admitted their guilt.

"You both have some college," the judge noted, "so you ought to know what you're doing."

Green awaits ruling

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Former U.S. Postal Service supervisor Booker T. "Billy" Green Jr., who is seeking reinstatement of his $27,000-a-year-job, is still awaiting a ruling from the federal Merit Systems Protection Board, which could force the USPS to return Green to his former position.

Green, 43, was fired by about a week before a jury last July acquitted him of voluntary manslaughter in the shooting death of R.J. Morris, 50, in the wake of a dice game on Nov. 14, 1981.

Green was suspended from his job about 10 days after the shooting, was tried before a jury in March 1982 for murder but was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter. However, the judge declared a mistrial after the jury could not agree on punishment. He was exonerated in the second trial.

Green, whose efforts to get his job back since he was found "not guilty" — he had pleaded self-defense — had been thwarted, last Nov. 30 was granted a hearing by William Wayne Carnes of the Merit Systems Protection Board.

Carnes could order Green reinstated or could uphold the action of now-retired Postmaster David Holster, who authorized Green's removal from the USPS.

Carnes was to rule on Green's appeal within a few weeks of the November hearing. However, due to "a very large backlog of cases," Carnes' ruling on the Green case may not be made until June, said Paula Latshaw, regional director for the Merit Systems Protection Board.

Prosecution witnesses portrayed as liars

DALLAS (AP) — Two prosecution witnesses who testified New Orleans policemen brutally interrogated them about the slaying of a fellow officer were portrayed as liars by defense lawyers focusing on inconsistencies in their testimony.

Clarence Green and Raymond Hughes testified Thursday in the civil rights trial of seven New Orleans policemen and said they were beaten when they couldn't answer questions about the killing of white policeman Gregory Neupert.

The federal indictment alleges policemen violated the civil rights of Green, who is black, but the document does not mention Hughes, who is white.

Hughes' brother, Elvin, was listed as a victim in the indictment and will be called to testify today, prosecutors said.

Both Green and Hughes identified detective Ronald Brinks, 37, a defendant, as one of the men they claim beat them.

Defense lawyer Ralph Whalen asked Hughes repeatedly how he could identify Brinks in court Thursday after failing to identify him earlier from pictures he was shown by the district attorney and FBI.

"I got that man's picture in my head," said Hughes, who at first claimed it was the first time he had seen Brinks in person.

"How can you forget the man who was beating the hell out of you with a book?" Hughes snapped after another question.

"How did you forget the face of the man who beat the hell out of you with a book? How could you not identify his picture when it was shown to you several times?" Whalen responded heatedly.

The sharp exchange began when Hughes said he did not see Brinks at an earlier civil court appearence, and would have identified him if he was there because he "had that man's picture in his head."

Later on re-direct by prosecutor Linda Hagerty, Hughes changed his testimony and elicited an astonished response from Whalen when said he did recognize Brinks at the civil court appearance.

Whalen also attacked the testimony of Green, who said he was given " a lick in the jaw and side" and later beaten again and stomped when he couldn't answer questions about the killing.

Whalen pointed to inconsistencies about the timing of events and the description of a police car between Green's testimony and an earlier deposition he gave in his $175,000 civil suit against the city.

The defense attorney also suggested by his questioning that Green fabricated the story about his beating to protect himself on the street because he agreed to become a police informant.

Green admitted he agreed to cooperate with police and said he later gave officers the name of a drug dealer.

"What happens in your neighborhood to people who cooperate with police?" asked Whalen.

Police looking for man who escaped from city jail

Police are looking for a prisoner who apparently hid out in a shower stall and then walked away from the city jail Thursday night.

The escapee, 23-year-old Miguel Aguilar Nieto of 401 W. Neely, was discovered missing at 10 p.m. Police believe he hid in a shower stall as other inmates were secured in their cells about 6:20 p.m.

Nieto had been arrested on traffic charges March 2 and was serving out a $359 fine. He was also being held for immigration authorities.

A 19-year-old woman reported she was the victim of an apparent rape attempt in an alley in 1400 block of South Dallas Avenue Thursday night.

The woman told police she was emptying trash about 9:40 p.m. when someone grabbed her by the legs from behind. She said she screamed and a Hispanic youth ran off accompanied by a small, curly-haired white dog.

The youth was further described as about 16 years old, weighing 140 pounds, having short hair and wearing blue jeans, a plaid shirt and a brown ski cap.

Police said a youth matching that description has been involved in similar incidents in the past. The woman tripped and fell as she was running back into her house but no injuries were reported.

A senior at Lee High School, she serves as football secretary and enjoys tennis, puzzles, softball, running and horseback riding. She is interested in all fields of medicine.

Green waits for board to rule

She said Thursday that the backlog was created by the appeals for job reinstatements by fired air controllers. The air controllers' appeals were filed beginning in August 1981 and were just resolved last January, she said. "We're working as hard as we can."

The region covers five states and includes 279,000 federal non-military employees. The backlog of cases on appeal numbered 450 to 500, she said.

Should Carnes uphold the USPS's action on Green, Green still could appeal the decision to a three-member board in Washington, D.C. If no appeal is made within 35 days of Carnes' ruling, "then our decision is final," she said.

Time-share attitudes negative, says survey

By Copley News Service

How do consumers feel about the concept of resort time-share ownership (owning a slice of time in a resort property)? What are most frequent objections?

These and other questions about time-sharing were the focus of a recent survey conducted by the Gallup Organization. Generally, the purpose of the study was to determine consumer awareness of and attitudes toward time-sharing.

For starters, the survey revealed that more people have negative impressions about time-sharing than positive. As for awareness, it showed that four out of five persons had some knowledge about the time-sharing concept — a sharp increase over a couple of years ago.

The primary objection to the concept expressed by survey respondents concerned the idea of sharing the same unit with other owners. If they were to own a resort unit, they would want to totally own it.

Also, they did not like the idea of being locked into the same resort unit each year — and the same time period each year.

A significant number of the respondents thought time-sharing was "too expensive." And they thought the time-share units were particularly hard to sell.

Other reasons for negative attitudes related to the bad publicity about the time-sharing industry. Questionable techniques used in the promotion and sale of units were cited as a point of concern.

When asked what alternatives were open to owners of time-share units, the respondents indicated (1) owners could rent the unit to others, (2) exchange their time period for a different period or (3) give it to a family member or friend.

It's interesting to note that nearly half the respondents could not name any possible alternatives. Generally, the "inflexibility of use" in time-share ownership was a major factor in sparking negative attitudes.

Q. What are the chances that the federal government will take action this year to make it easier for families to obtain a home mortgage loan?

A. Shannon Fairbanks, deputy assistant director in the White House Office of Policy Development, recently made this statement: "The Reagan administration is committed to increasing the availability of affordable mortgage credit. We in government, and those in private capital markets, have been treating mortgages as second-class citizens. Mortgages are, in fact, a better credit risk than many corporate debt instruments.

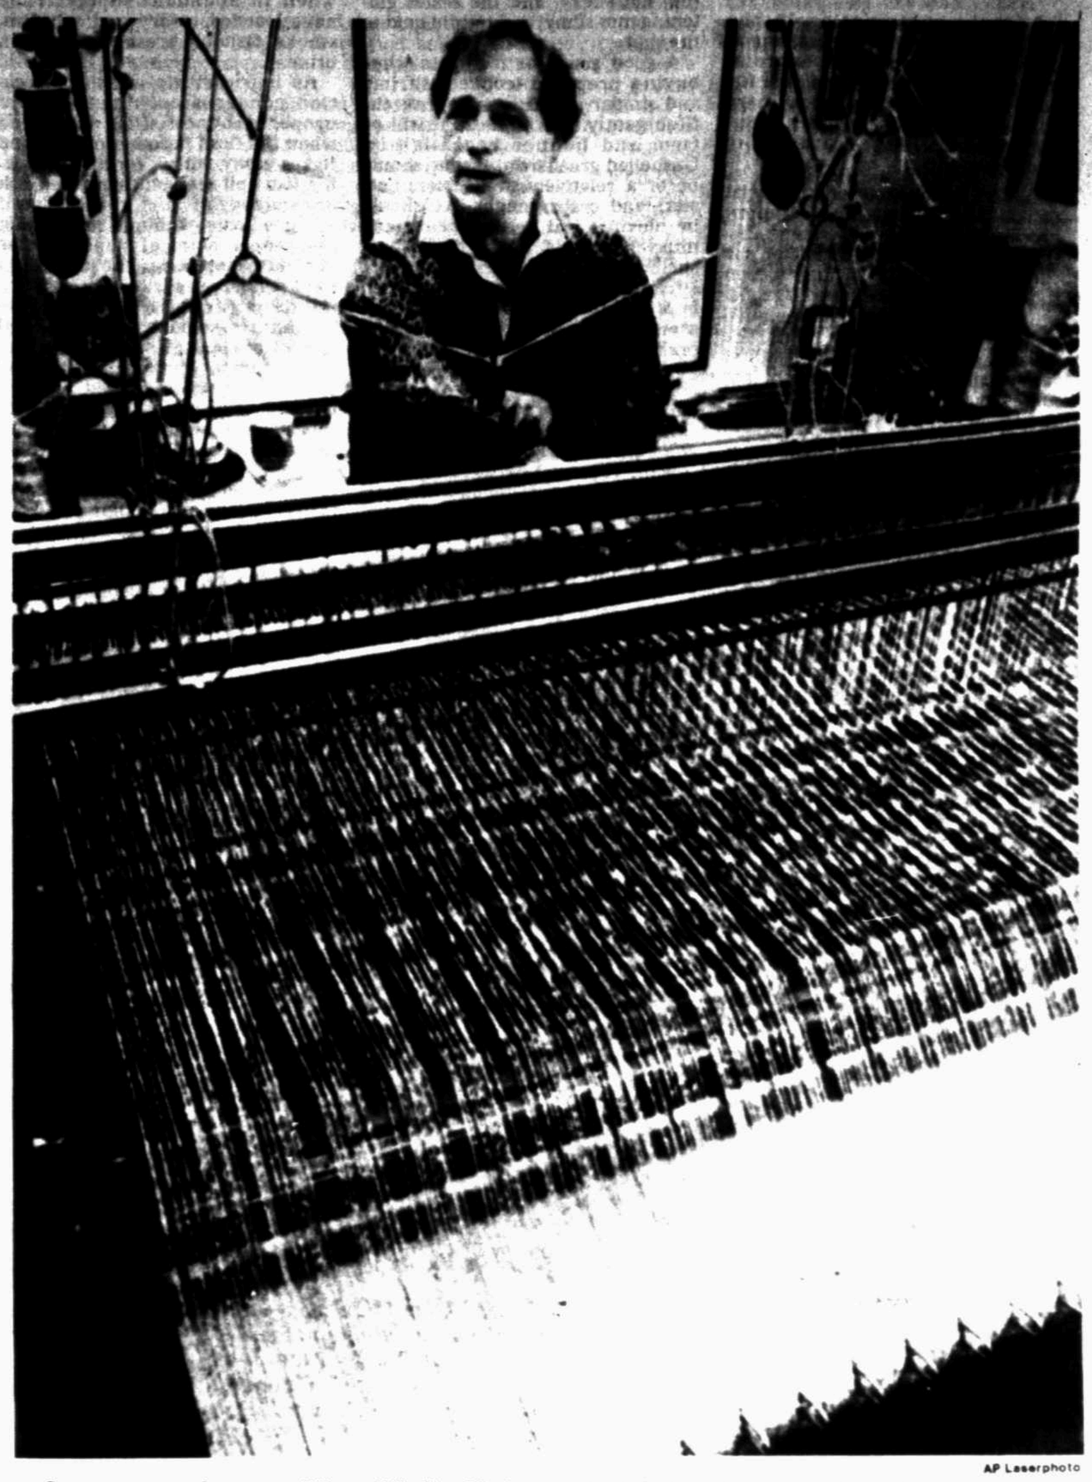

"The kind of initiative that we have under way in this administration expresses the president's own deep commitment to housing as a top social priority."

Q. What is the new FHA negotiated-interest home loan all about?

A. This relatively new home loan program, offered and insured by the Federal Housing Administration, allows home buyers to acquire a mortgage loan at an interest rate above the ceiling rate for the standard FHA-insured loan. It can be truly negotiable.

The advantage to the home buyer and seller is a possible substantial savings in closing costs. A slightly higher interest rate can sharply reduce the "discount points" charged by lenders as an up-front closing expense. Also, in an FHA negotiated-interest home loan the discount points can be paid by anyone involved in the sale (buyer, seller, broker), whereas in a standard FHA loan the points must be paid by the seller.

A limited number of these new FHA home loans have been authorized in individual regions.

Library receives $100

The Midland branch of the American Association of University Women presented a $100-check to the Midland County Library in recognition of University Women Week, March 13 — 19.

The check is for the purchase of additional printed material of interest and use to the employed woman.

"Working Women's Book," has been specially marked on a rack in the library, initally funded by the Downtwon Business and Professional Women's Club.

"AAUW, with its 100-year history of providing resources to fulfill the educational needs of women, is hoping that other women's organizations will add their contribution to this far-sighted project," said Dorothy Campbell, branch president. "A new study group, 'Career Women's Pot-Pourri,' meets the second Thursday of the month at 5:30 p.m. for no-host dinners at local restaurants. Speakers give informal talks of interest to he employed woman."

John Deats, County Librarian, said that selection of materials for this collection will be made upon input from involved readers. He expressed appreciation to these groups for their contribution, which allows budgeted County book funds to extend into other directions of community needs.

In addition to this special project, the Midland Branch makes annual scholarship awards to a senior graduating girl from Midland and Lee High Schools, as well as to a woman who wishes to complete her degree at the University of the Permian Basin. Monthly recognition and awards are given to an Outstanding Girl chosen from each of the high schools.

Any woman holding a baccalaureate degree from an accredited college or univeristy is eligible for membership in AAUW.

Study reveals some diseases less common for birth control users

HEARST FEATURE SERVICE

Use of the birth control pill has been shown to lessen the chance of developing certain types of cancer, says Dr. Phillip Stubblefield, associate professor of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the Massachusetts General Hospital of Harvard Medical School.

"Studies over the past four years have made it clear that there are substantial benefits to be gained against certain types of diseases" by taking the pill, he said. "Cancer of the uterine lining and the ovaries is clearly less common among women who have taken the pill."

Controlled, scientific tests were conducted comparing several hundred women with certain conditions, such as ovarian cancer, to women with no such conditions. The study concluded that "being on the pill cuts in half the chances of developing cancer of the uterine lining."

The gynecologist explained that estrogen makes the uterine lining grow. Women with hormonal imbalances produce too much estrogen, which further aggravates this growth, and may lead to cancer of the uterine lining. "The birth control pill turns off hormonal production, giving women progesterone and estrogen at the same time."

The decrease in ovarian cancer through pill use, he continued, is because of the fact that ovarian cancer is more likely to develop through ovulation, which occurs monthly. Ovulation leaves a hole or wound on the surface of the ovary after the egg is released. "If the woman is on the pill or pregnant, she doesn't ovulate. The more time spent not ovulating, the less the chance of developing ovarian cancer," he said.

Studies conducted at England's Royal College of General Practitioners back up these findings, Stubblefield said, and have found further life-saving benefits of the pill. Approximately 30,000 women over the course of 20 years were studied with all possible illnesses considered. Researchers have concluded that the pill "reduces the risk of pelvic and tubal infection, and reduces the risk of rheumatoid arthritis."

Stubblefield is hopeful that strides will continue in the development of pills containing lesser quantities of hormones, for fewer side effects.

Seafood low in calories, high in protein

The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Seafood consumption in the United States has been increasing as consumers become more aware of its nutritional benefits and fine flavor. Two revolutionary factors have contributed greatly to this increasing interest in fish — availability and freshness.

Modern air transportation, special packaging and new and efficient processing methods have made possible immediate distribution of sea catches in both fresh and frozen state. Freshness is captured by modern freezing techniques and on-the-spot processing in fishing fleets. The catch is brought aboard the ship at sea, cleaned and quick-frozen into solid blocks, retarding any texture and flavor deterioration.

For this reason, quick-frozen fish often has an advantage over highly perishable fresh fish that involves some traveling time to the market in its fresh state.

This quick-freezing technique makes it possible to have fish such as salmon, for instance, available at reasonable cost even when it is not in season.

WHEN SHOPPING for seafood, look for fresh fish that have a pleasant aroma and bright, shiny, round and transparent eyes. A cloudy eye, however, could be caused by contact with the ice, so rely on the nose test. Fresh fish has a mild, almost sweet, faintly marine odor except for shark, skate and ray, which emit an ammonia aroma for the first two days. The gills should be clean and red, not sticky; and the scales glistening, not slimy, and tightly held to the skin.

A good gauge of freshness when buying prepared (cooked) shrimp and similar shellfish is to press the flesh gently. If it is fresh, it will be firm and bounce back lightly. Unshelled green (raw) shrimp should be of a relatively even color. Lobsters and crabs bought live should be moving, and oysters, clams and mussels should be holding their shells tightly together.

The trend toward eating more fish is a result of a calorie-conscious society. Seafood products are generally low in calories, an excellent source of easily digestible, good-quality protein, low in sodium and contain more polyunsaturated than saturated fats. The vitamin content varies with the species.

Some fish are high in Vitamins A and D. Significant amounts of the B vitamins, including biotin and niacin, are found in various fish and shellfish, particularly oysters and clams. Minerals include phosphorus, potassium, iron, copper, zinc, magnesium, selenium and cobalt. Iodine and fluoride are also present, except in fresh-water varieties.

IN THE PAST, fish often was considered a good substitute when red meats were unaffordable. Now, however, with demand up and supplies often inadequate because of fishing difficulties, such as bad weather and poor catches, prices are rarely in the budget category. But consumers have found ways to enjoy seafood at reasonable prices by preserving fish when in abundant supply. They have learned to dry and salt fish, smoke fish or preserve them in brine.

An important tip in fish preparation concerns cooking it to the proper doneness. Fish is cooked when the flesh becomes opaque and flakes easily with a fork. Overcooking fish and seafood turns the flesh dry and tough.

A good rule of thumb for judging the proper point of doneness has been developed by the Canadian Department of Fisheries. Measure the fish at its thickest point. Allow 10 minutes cooking time for each inch of thickness if the fish is fresh, 20 minutes for each inch if it is frozen. Fish may be cooked without thawing, except for layered fillets that need to be partially thawed to separate them. If fish is cooked in foil or in a sauce, allow an extra 5 minutes per inch. As there are so many variables in cooking, always test a fish for doneness.

For a highly informative reference and recipe book on fish, check out Time-Life Book's volume on Fish in the Good Cook series ($9.95). This combined encyclopedia and cookbook contains step-by-step cooking methods with color photographs. It is an excellent primer on basic fish-preparation techniques and provides a list and description of varieties of fish.

SOLE EN PAPILLOTE

1-2 pound shrimp, shelled and deveined
4 (6-ounce) fillets sole
1-4 cup dry white wine
1-4 cup water
1 medium bay leaf
8 black peppercorns
Salt
1 cup thinly sliced mushrooms
1-4 cup chopped green onions
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons flour
1-8 teaspoon white pepper
1-3 cup nonfat dry milk
Parchment paper

Place shrimp, sole fillets, wine, water, bay leaf, peppercorns and 1-2 teaspoon salt in 12-inch skillet. Cover and poach 5 to 8 minutes or until fish flakes easily with fork. Remove from heat. Drain fish stock and measure. Add enough water to make 2-3 cup, reserve. Chop shrimp. Discard bay leaf and peppercorns.

Saute mushrooms, green onions and parsley in butter in medium saucepan. Stir in flour, 1-4 teaspoon salt and white pepper. Dissolve nonfat milk in reserved fish stock. Gradually add to sauteed mixture. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture comes to boil and thickens. Stir in shrimp, remove from heat.

Cut 4 (15 by 11-inch) heart-shaped pieces from parchment paper. Place each fish fillet on one side of each paper heart. Spoon sauce equally over fillets. Fold paper over fillet so edges meet. Starting at top end, fold edges over twice to crimp, down to pointed end. Place papillotes on baking sheet. Bake at 400 degrees 10 to 12 minutes, or until paper begins to turn golden. Serve at once, opening paper at table. Makes 4 servings.

LOW-CAL CRAB FRITTATA

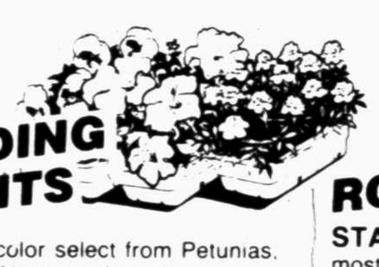

1 (7 1-2-ounce) can crab meat or 8 ounces fresh or frozen
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 clove garlic, crushed
2-3 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped zucchini
1-2 cup sliced mushrooms
1 1-2 teaspoons salt
1-4 teaspoon black pepper
3 eggs
1-2 cup nonfat milk
1-2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
Parsley

Drain and slice crab. Melt butter in large skillet. Add garlic, onion, zucchini and mushrooms. Saute until tender. Add salt and pepper. Cook, covered 5 to 7 minutes.

Beat together eggs, milk and cheese. In buttered 1 1-2-quart shallow casserole or oven-proof skillet, combine crab with zucchini and egg mixture. Bake at 350 degrees 20 minutes or until firm. Makes 6 servings, about 186 calories per serving.

Artificial blood vessel perfected

AP Laserphoto

Dr. Donald Lyman, director of the University of Utah Center for Polymer Implants, displays various sizes of artificial blood vessels which researchers have spent 12 years developing. Lyman expects that the artificial vessels will be implanted in the first human recipient in four to six weeks.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A University of Utah medical team, laboring quietly in the shadow of the school's artificial heart program, is preparing to implant the first tiny plastic blood vessels in a human patient.

The vessels — polyurethane tubes as large around as a drinking straw or as small as the lead in a pencil — potentially could benefit 300,000 people a year, says Dr. Donald Lyman, director of the university's Center for Polymer Implants.

In contrast, doctors estimate 50,000 people a year eventually could be helped by the Utah artificial heart, which was developed in a separate university department.

Dacron implants to replace large-diameter blood vessels of 8 to 30 millimeters have been used for years, often in heart patients. But never before have surgeons tried to replace the small-diameter vessels that make up about 75 percent of the human circulatory system.

Within the next four to six weeks, Lyman says, his medical team will attempt its first vessel implant in a human patient. The surgery follows nearly a dozen years of research and frustrating funding problems.

The artificial vessels, Lyman said in an interview, are simply "little tubes that essentially save lives and prevent amputations. They don't do anything dramatic like pumping.

"After seeing friends who have lost limbs or have died because they have not had vessels in their own bodies — I would have friends alive today if this graft had been available," Lyman said.

The vessels, which could be used in any part of the body, should aid victims of heart ailments or arterial diseases, accident victims whose blood vessels are damaged and those whose vessels have become hardened or weakened with age, he said.

The current method for replacing damaged veins or bypassing obstructed blood vessels and coronary arteries is to transplant a vein from a patient's leg.

However, Lyman said transplants don't always work well because some patients lack suitable veins. The body has miles of blood vessels, but only a few that can be moved elsewhere, he said.

The plastic vessels were approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for human implantation in late November. But Lyman and other members of his team had to abruptly halt their research to write lengthy applications for grant renewals.

The program has courted poverty for years.

"We're essentially donating all of our time," Lyman said of the principal researchers, and at times other employees have been laid off for lack of funds.

The surgical team that will perform the implant was reassembled last week after the grant applications were sent off. The surgeons have resumed vessel implants in animals in preparation for the human operation.

Dr. Dominic Albo Jr., the only surgeon authorized by the FDA to implant the vessels, heads the team.

"We want to check everything back out," Lyman said. "It will be four to six weeks before I'm comfortable about doing it."

The first recipient likely will be someone with failing vessels in a limb, where the alternative treatment eventually would be something serious, but non-life threatening, like amputation.

Lyman doesn't expect problems finding a recipient. "We have so many letters in our files," he said.

FDA approval came after years of research by the principal investigators, who built the vessels from the molecular level up.

Lyman originally worked on the artificial heart with Dr. Willem Kolff, director of the university's Division of Artificial Organs. He left Kolff's group in 1971 because he wanted to pursue research with vessels.

The major obstacle to development of an effective artificial blood vessel was the tendency of proteins in the blood to adhere to polyurethane surfaces. Lyman and his group developed their own plastic "atom by atom."

"We juggled the molecules around," he said, so that only albumin — a protein in the blood — would bind to the vessel walls. And since platelets in the blood won't adhere to albumin, the clotting problem was solved.

The next step was developing a vessel elastic enough not to damage parts of the body it touched, and that would pulsate — as do natural veins and arteries — in response to changing volumes of blood flow.

Compromise needed for family peace

Copley News Service

Q. Our teen-age son has a habit that bothers me, but he seems to be very comfortable with it. He always has the radio on when he studies, and not just with soft, low music. You know what adolescents like to listen to these days.

Because he is such a good student I haven't discussed this subject with him. After all, I don't want to mess up his good school situation.

However, I don't know how much longer I can live with all the noise. His father isn't bothered at all by it. No wonder — he turns the television on so loud that he doesn't hear the radio at all!

A. Almost every family at some time needs to get together in a "family council" to discuss problems that affect one or more members of the family. This may be the time for you to call for such a meeting.

Compromise is often the situation, based in your case on the time when both the radio and television are on or should be on and the noise level with which you all can live comfortably. After all, it's your home too.

Q. PERHAPS it's none of my business, but our neighbors have a child-rearing practice that seems quite strange. Their two children (10 and 12 years old) stay up late every night, often until midnight, watching television, studying or sometimes in conversation with their parents.

Most mornings they rush out of the house at the last minute to catch the school bus, finishing their dressing or breakfast as they run down to the corner. It is obvious that they get up too late to manage their morning program well.

Don't you agree with me that something should be done about all this?

A. Perhaps, but only by the parents involved, not by neighbors who follow the policy that the easiest children to raise are usually somebody else's.

From what you said it doesn't appear that they are participating in any kind of child abuse. We all seem to have different time clocks within ourselves regarding sleeping, meals and other parts of our daily schedules. Although theirs may appear to be peculiar to you, it apparently fits their lifestyle.

Q. MY CHILDREN usually do their school work all right, but I have a feeling that they could all do better. We have three, one in high school, two in the elementary grades.

My specific question is this: Do you think is it possible to raise their IQs so that they could get better grades in school?

We want all of them to go to college, even though that would strain us financially, but the way they are performing now makes us wonder whether they can do so successfully.

A. You're really bringing up two related questions — one concerned with intelligence and the other on their school performance.

An enriched environment consisting of reading, communication, problem-solving activities and games and other practices that broaden a child's activities may help raise his or her measured intelligence. Such measures may in turn contribute toward improving academic performance.

Among the other factors that can aid in school work are the teachers children have, the study schedule followed by children, and their reading skills.

One approach you might consider that could be worthwhile is to discuss your concerns with their teachers and school counselors. They are perhaps the best persons to help provide a professional approach to the situation.

Letters may be sent to Dr. Willard Abraham, Our Children, P.O. Box 572, Scottsdale, AZ 85252.

Are you the parent of a preschool child, 2- to 5-years old? Send a stamp, plus your request for information about a monthly service that may help you, to Dr. Abraham, P.O. Box 572, Scottsdale, AZ 85252.

Smoking not cancer protection

BOSTON (AP) — Contrary to an earlier report, women who smoke are just as likely as non-smokers to get breast cancer, according to a study made public today.

Last October, researchers at the Harvard School of Public Health cited studies that found breast cancer is less common among smokers. The team discovered that women smokers produce less estrogen, and they said that fact may explain their apparently lower cancer rate.

But in today's New England Journal of Medicine, Dr. Robert A. Hiatt of the Permanente Medical Group in Oakland, Calif., reported on a review of 81,657 women. He found "little evidence to support a protective effect" of smoking.

Smokers actually had a slightly higher risk of breast cancer than those who had never smoked, and ex-smokers also had a significantly higher risk.

Seafood low in calories, high in protein

The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Seafood consumption in the United States has been increasing as consumers become more aware of its nutritional benefits and fine flavor. Two revolutionary factors have contributed greatly to this increasing interest in fish — availability and freshness.

Modern air transportation, special packaging and new and efficient processing methods have made possible immediate distribution of sea catches in both fresh and frozen state. Freshness is captured by modern freezing techniques and on-the-spot processing in fishing fleets. The catch is brought aboard the ship at sea, cleaned and quick-frozen into solid blocks, retarding any texture and flavor deterioration.

For this reason, quick-frozen fish often has an advantage over highly perishable fresh fish that involves some traveling time to the market in its fresh state.

This quick-freezing technique makes it possible to have fish such as salmon, for instance, available at reasonable cost even when it is not in season.

WHEN SHOPPING for seafood, look for fresh fish that have a pleasant aroma and bright, shiny, round and transparent eyes. A cloudy eye, however, could be caused by contact with the ice, so rely on the nose test. Fresh fish has a mild, almost sweet, faintly marine odor except for shark, skate and ray, which emit an ammonia aroma for the first two days. The gills should be clean and red, not sticky; and the scales glistening, not slimy, and tightly held to the skin.

A good gauge of freshness when buying prepared (cooked) shrimp and similar shellfish is to press the flesh gently. If it is fresh, it will be firm and bounce back lightly. Unshelled green (raw) shrimp should be of a relatively even color. Lobsters and crabs bought live should be moving, and oysters, clams and mussels should be holding their shells tightly together.

The trend toward eating more fish is a result of a calorie-conscious society. Seafood products are generally low in calories, an excellent source of easily digestible, good-quality protein, low in sodium and contain more polyunsaturated than saturated fats. The vitamin content varies with the species.

Some fish are high in Vitamins A and D. Significant amounts of the B vitamins, including biotin and niacin, are found in various fish and shellfish, particularly oysters and clams. Minerals include phosphorus, potassium, iron, copper, zinc, magnesium, selenium and cobalt. Iodine and fluoride are also present, except in fresh-water varieties.

IN THE PAST, fish often was considered a good substitute when red meats were unaffordable. Now, however, with demand up and supplies often inadequate because of fishing difficulties, such as bad weather and poor catches, prices are rarely in the budget category. But consumers have found ways to enjoy seafood at reasonable prices by preserving fish when in abundant supply. They have learned to dry and salt fish, smoke fish or preserve them in brine.

An important tip in fish preparation concerns cooking it to the proper doneness. Fish is cooked when the flesh becomes opaque and flakes easily with a fork. Overcooking fish and seafood turns the flesh dry and tough.

A good rule of thumb for judging the proper point of doneness has been developed by the Canadian Department of Fisheries. Measure the fish at its thickest point. Allow 10 minutes cooking time for each inch of thickness if the fish is fresh, 20 minutes for each inch if it is frozen. Fish may be cooked without thawing, except for layered fillets that need to be partially thawed to separate them. If fish is cooked in foil or in a sauce, allow an extra 5 minutes per inch. As there are so many variables in cooking, always test a fish for doneness.

For a highly informative reference and recipe book on fish, check out Time-Life Book's volume on Fish in the Good Cook series ($9.95). This combined encyclopedia and cookbook contains step-by-step cooking methods with color photographs. It is an excellent primer on basic fish-preparation techniques and provides a list and description of varieties of fish.

SOLE EN PAPILLOTE

1-2 pound shrimp, shelled and deveined
4 (8-ounce) fillets sole
1-4 cup dry white wine
1-4 cup water
1 medium bay leaf
8 black peppercorns
Salt
1 cup thinly sliced mushrooms
1-4 cup chopped green onions
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons flour
1-8 teaspoon white pepper
1-3 cup nonfat dry milk
Parchment paper

Place shrimp, sole fillets, wine, water, bay leaf, peppercorns and 1-2 teaspoon salt in 12-inch skillet. Cover and poach 5 to 8 minutes or until fish flakes easily with fork. Remove from heat. Drain fish stock and measure. Add enough water to make 2-3 cup, reserve. Chop shrimp. Discard bay leaf and peppercorns.

Saute mushrooms, green onions and parsley in butter in medium saucepan. Stir in flour, 1-4 teaspoon salt and white pepper. Dissolve nonfat milk in reserved fish stock. Gradually add to sauteed mixture. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture comes to boil and thickens. Stir in shrimp, remove from heat.

Cut 4 (15 by 11-inch) heart-shaped pieces from parchment paper. Place each fish fillet on one side of each paper heart. Spoon sauce equally over fillets. Fold paper over fillet so edges meet. Starting at top end, fold edges over twice to crimp, down to pointed end. Place papillotes on baking sheet. Bake at 400 degrees 10 to 12 minutes, or until paper begins to turn golden. Serve at once, opening paper at table. Makes 4 servings.

LOW-CAL CRAB FRITTATA

1 (7 1-2-ounce) can crab meat or 8 ounces fresh or frozen
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 clove garlic, crushed
2-3 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped zucchini
1-2 cup sliced mushrooms
1 1-2 teaspoons salt
1-4 teaspoon black pepper
3 eggs
1-2 cup nonfat milk
1-2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
Parsley

Drain and slice crab. Melt butter in large skillet. Add garlic, onion, zucchini and mushrooms. Saute until tender. Add salt and pepper. Cook, covered 5 to 7 minutes.

Beat together eggs, milk and cheese. In buttered 1 1-2-quart shallow casserole or oven-proof skillet, combine crab with zucchini and egg mixture. Bake at 350 degrees 20 minutes or until firm. Makes 6 servings, about 186 calories per serving.

Artificial blood vessel perfected

AP Laserphoto

Dr. Donald Lyman, director of the University of Utah Center for Polymer Implants, displays various sizes of artificial blood vessels which researchers have spent 12 years developing. Lyman expects that the artificial vessels will be implanted in the first human recipient in four to six weeks.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A University of Utah medical team, laboring quietly in the shadow of the school's artificial heart program, is preparing to implant the first tiny plastic blood vessels in a human patient.

The vessels — polyurethane tubes as large around as a drinking straw or as small as the lead in a pencil — potentially could benefit 300,000 people a year, says Dr. Donald Lyman, director of the university's Center for Polymer Implants.

In contrast, doctors estimate 50,000 people a year eventually could be helped by the Utah artificial heart, which was developed in a separate university department.

Dacron implants to replace large-diameter blood vessels of 8 to 30 millimeters have been used for years, often in heart patients. But never before have surgeons tried to replace the small-diameter vessels that make up about 75 percent of the human circulatory system.

Within the next four to six weeks, Lyman says, his medical team will attempt its first vessel implant in a human patient. The surgery follows nearly a dozen years of research and frustrating funding problems.

The artificial vessels, Lyman said in an interview, are simply "little tubes that essentially save lives and prevent amputations. They don't do anything dramatic like pumping.

"After seeing friends who have lost limbs or have died because they have not had vessels in their own bodies — I would have friends alive today if this graft had been available," Lyman said.

The vessels, which could be used in any part of the body, should aid victims of heart ailments or arterial diseases, accident victims whose blood vessels are damaged and those whose vessels have become hardened or weakened with age, he said.

The current method for replacing damaged veins or bypassing obstructed blood vessels and coronary arteries is to transplant a vein from a patient's leg.

However, Lyman said transplants don't always work well because some patients lack suitable veins. The body has miles of blood vessels, but only a few that can be moved elsewhere, he said.

The plastic vessels were approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for human implantation in late November. But Lyman and other members of his team had to abruptly halt their research to write lengthy applications for grant renewals.

The program has courted poverty for years.

"We're essentially donating all of our time," Lyman said of the principal researchers, and at times other employees have been laid off for lack of funds.

The surgical team that will perform the implant was reassembled last week after the grant applications were sent off. The surgeons have resumed vessel implants in animals in preparation for the human operation.

Dr. Dominic Albo Jr., the only surgeon authorized by the FDA to implant the vessels, heads the team.

"We want to check everything back out," Lyman said. "It will be four to six weeks before I'm comfortable about doing it."

The first recipient likely will be someone with failing vessels in a limb, where the alternative treatment eventually would be something serious, but non-life threatening, like amputation.

Lyman doesn't expect problems finding a recipient. "We have so many letters in our files," he said.

FDA approval came after years of research by the principal investigators, who built the vessels from the molecular level up.

Lyman originally worked on the artificial heart with Dr. Willem Kolff, director of the university's Division of Artificial Organs. He left Kolff's group in 1971 because he wanted to pursue research with vessels.

The major obstacle to development of an effective artificial blood vessel was the tendency of proteins in the blood to adhere to polyurethane surfaces. Lyman and his group developed their own plastic "atom by atom."

"We juggled the molecules around," he said, so that only albumin — a protein in the blood — would bind to the vessel walls. And since platelets in the blood won't adhere to albumin, the clotting problem was solved.

The next step was developing a vessel elastic enough not to damage parts of the body it touched, and that would pulsate — as do natural veins and arteries — in response to changing volumes of blood flow.

Compromise needed for family peace

Copley News Service

Q. Our teen-age son has a habit that bothers me, but he seems to be very comfortable with it. He always has the radio on when he studies, and not just with soft, low music. You know what adolescents like to listen to these days.

Because he is such a good student I haven't discussed this subject with him. After all, I don't want to mess up his good school situation.

However, I don't know how much longer I can live with all the noise. His father isn't bothered at all by it. No wonder — he turns the television on so loud that he doesn't hear the radio at all!

A. Almost every family at some time needs to get together in a "family council" to discuss problems that affect one or more members of the family. This may be the time for you to call for such a meeting.

Compromise is often the situation, based in your case on the time when both the radio and television are on or should be on and the noise level with which you all can live comfortably. After all, it's your home too.

Q. PERHAPS it's none of my business, but our neighbors have a child-rearing practice that seems quite strange. Their two children (10 and 12 years old) stay up late every night, often until midnight, watching television, studying or sometimes in conversation with their parents.

Most mornings they rush out of the house at the last minute to catch the school bus, finishing their dressing or breakfast as they run down to the corner. It is obvious that they get up too late to manage their morning program well.

Don't you agree with me that something should be done about all this?

A. Perhaps, but only by the parents involved, not by neighbors who follow the policy that the easiest children to raise are usually somebody else's.

From what you said it doesn't appear that they are participating in any kind of child abuse. We all seem to have different time clocks within ourselves regarding sleeping, meals and other parts of our daily schedules. Although theirs may appear to be peculiar to you, it apparently fits their lifestyle.

Q. MY CHILDREN usually do their school work all right, but I have a feeling that they could all do better. We have three, one in high school, two in the elementary grades.

My specific question is this: Do you think is it possible to raise their IQs so that they could get better grades in school?

We want all of them to go to college, even though that would strain us financially, but the way they are performing now makes us wonder whether they can do so successfully.

A. You're really bringing up two related questions — one concerned with intelligence and the other on their school performance.

An enriched environment consisting of reading, communication, problem-solving activities and games and other practices that broaden a child's activities may help raise his or her measured intelligence. Such measures may in turn contribute toward improving academic performance.

Among the other factors that can aid in school work are the teachers children have, the study schedule followed by children, and their reading skills.

One approach you might consider that could be worthwhile is to discuss your concerns with their teachers and school counselors. They are perhaps the best persons to help provide a professional approach to the situation.

Letters may be sent to Dr. Willard Abraham, Our Children, P.O. Box 572, Scottsdale, AZ 85252.

Are you the parent of a preschool child, 2- to 5-years old? Send a stamp, plus your request for information about a monthly service that may help you, to Dr. Abraham, P.O. Box 572, Scottsdale, AZ 85252.

Smoking not cancer protection

BOSTON (AP) — Contrary to an earlier report, women who smoke are just as likely as non-smokers to get breast cancer, according to a study made public today.

Last October, researchers at the Harvard School of Public Health cited studies that found breast cancer is less common among smokers. The team discovered that women smokers produce less estrogen, and they said that fact may explain their apparently lower cancer rate.

But in today's New England Journal of Medicine, Dr. Robert A. Hiatt of the Permanente Medical Group in Oakland, Calif., reported on a review of 81,657 women. He found "little evidence to support a protective effect" of smoking.

Smokers actually had a slightly higher risk of breast cancer than those who had never smoked, and ex-smokers also had a significantly higher risk.

Law provides information on alternative treatments

Hearst Feature Service

One of every 11 women in the United States will contract breast cancer during her lifetime, according to an American Cancer Society report, and likely will find herself confronted with a maze of possible treatments.

But now, women in California who face that dilemma will have help. Under a law passed in 1981, their physicians must give them a brochure explaining the alternatives available to them.

Juliet Ristom of Los Angeles has helped shepherd that brochure through several years of revisions. But she is now "90 percent satisfied" with the brochure she believes will give women with breast cancer important information.

This week, California's 1981 law requiring that breast cancer alternative treatments be provided in printed form becomes viable, and Ristom's anger was a major force behind that law. "This brochure won't help me," she said. "I wish to God there had been something like this for me (in 1979). This will help other women."

Although California physicians have been required to provide written information to patients since January 1981, it has taken more than two years for the state's Cancer Advisory Board to come up with a suitable document.

Ristom was angry when she began her campaign that culminated in the law — after recovery from breast cancer diagnosed in 1979, which was treated with radiation implants instead of the mastectomy her surgeon had scheduled without even consulting her — and she is still angry today.

"I'm enraged that many woman still aren't being told of alternatives. They have a right to individualized treatment," Ristom said, "to make an informed choice before they have a breast amputated.

"Women who say, 'Fine, I'll have a mastectomy,' that's all right. It might be the suitable treatment for their type of cancer. What they do after they're informed is their own business."

Ristom isn't pushing radiation implants, or any other form of treatment — she is pushing for women to be given full information on all procedures so that they can make an informed choice.

"They're lying by omission," Ristom said of physicians who have not fully informed patients of options, "and that's not ethical."

Physicians will be mailed a copy of the seven-page brochure detailing all "medically viable" alternative methods of treatment, written in language a patient can understand. It will include descriptions of all forms of breast cancer diagnostic methods, types of surgery, radiation therapy and chemotherapy, along with information on advantages, disadvantages and risks of these various methods.

Physicians must either order this brochure or must make copies of it to give to women who have breast cancer. The new law says that failure to do so as grounds for unprofessional conduct complaints.

Speaking as a former breast cancer patient, Ristom is adamant that a doctor should give the brochure to a patient before her biopsy, "when she can still think clearly, before she becomes terrified and is under enormous pressure from her family and doctor."

Regulations protect newborns with birth defects

The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — In a get-tough effort pushed by "right-to-life" groups, the Reagan administration recently said it will issue new regulations to prevent hospitals from denying food and medical treatment to newborn infants with birth defects.

Hospitals that receive federal funds would have to post notices in delivery units and pediatric and intensive care nurseries stating that "discriminatory failure to feed and care for handicapped infants in this facility is prohibited by federal law."

The notices also would encourage use of a new 24-hour, toll-free hotline to report possible violations.

The announcement brought the government a step closer to monitoring the practice of medicine in the nation's hospitals. An initial warning last spring already had drawn sharp questioning from hospital groups, who argued that it interfered with the traditionally confidential medical relationships between hospitals, physicians and patients.

The new regulations follow the highly publicized death in Indiana last April of a six-day-old boy known only as "Infant Doe." The child's parents, backed by the family doctor and the state's highest court, allowed food and treatment to be withheld after the child was born with Down's syndrome, or mongolism, and other respiratory and digestive complications requiring major surgery. Down's syndrome victims face varying degrees of mental retardation.

The case spawned a renewed national debate and "right to life" activists took their complaints to the White House. On April 30, President Reagan directed the Department of Justice and Health and Human Services to apply civil rights regulations protecting the handicapped to the newborn infants.

Last May, HHS warned the nation's nearly 7,000 hospitals that they could lose federal funds if they assisted in any efforts to "withhold treatment or nourishment, discriminatorily." The warning also held the hospitals responsible for the conduct of physicians and medical staff.

Acting HHS Secretary Thomas R. Donnelly Jr. said Wednesday the new regulations are intended to strengthen the administration's ability to deal with such cases. He said that HHS also will rely on help from state and local agencies" for speedy complaint investigations."

Privately, many medical experts believe that difficult life-and-death decisions involving newborn infants take place frequently in hospitals, but without the publicity given the Indiana case.

Since last May, according to HHS spokesman Claire del Real, the department has investigated "approximately five cases of alleged denial of treatment. None of the cases were resolved in the cutting off of funds because they were not found to have been in violation."

Recently, Gary Curran of the anti-abortion American Life Lobby charged that HHS "has been dragging its feet terribly on this thing."

DEAR ABBY

Doctors don't accept patient's diagnosis

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: "Tired of Waiting" complained about having to wait for 2 1/2 hours for a scheduled 9 o'clock doctor's appointment. Then she learned that several others (also waiting) had been booked for 9 o'clock. She asked if that happened everywhere — or only in Pittsburgh.

My reply: "It happens almost everywhere. Doctors, what's the Rx for this epidemic?" A sampling of reponses:

DEAR ABBY: There are some legitimate reasons for a doctor being late, and they occur often. A doctor's office is not a factory where each person can be run through the assembly line on a fixed schedule. Depending on the type of practice, you try to estimate how long each patient will take and schedule patients accordingly.

In our primary-care setting, on the average each patient's visit takes about 15 minutes. Some visits are briefer — for example, for blood pressure checks or simple infections. Some are longer, especially for older patients with multiple problems. Some patients save up their complaints and come in with a list. Often they present a few of the minor complaints, and after the examination, when they're almost out the door, they say, "Oh, by the way, Doc, I vomited blood this morning. Does that mean anything?" — AN M.D. IN WINSTON-SALEM, N.C.

DEAR ABBY: I work in a busy ear, nose and throat office, and we try to keep to a schedule, but it's not always possible.

Some patients who have no appointments show up with urgent symptoms and cannot be turned away. Others don't cancel, they just don't show up. Some just happened to be in the neighborhood or the building, or they missed their appointment yesterday and are leaving town tomorrow. The list goes on and on.

One mother brought her 3 1/2-year-old son in with a button stuck in his ear. After the doctor took care of him, the mother said, "Would you mind looking at his twin brother, too? I think he stuck something up his nose." — ALL IN A DAY'S WORK

DEAR ABBY: I'll tell you why doctors run late: The patient calls for a routine checkup, then presents the doctor with a three-page insurance examination form to fill out.

Other patients just love to talk. They are the real schedule-busters. They not only tell the doctor about THEIR symptoms, they babble endlessly about their sister-in-law's symptoms in Scranton.

Then there are telephone calls from patients who insist on talking to the doctor right now!

Doctors are sometimes called to the hospital for emergencies. When this occurs, we always announce it to the patients in the waiting room, telling them the nature of the emergency, how long we estimate the wait will be and offer to reschedule them. For the most part, they are very understanding and appreciate being told. — A DOCTOR'S NURSE IN SYRACUSE, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: Your recent reply to a woman who waited 2 1/2 hours to see a doctor with whom she had an appointment indicated you believe that such experiences are very common. I hope they are not.

Delays do occur. Emergencies intervene, babies are born on their own timetables, medical problems cannot be precisely timed, and some medical practices are better organized than others. Our office staffs can help by telling patients when the appointment schedule has been thrown seriously out of kilter. Patients certainly are entitled to know about inordinate delays. Sometimes they may elect to reschedule their appointment for another day.

Improving mutual understanding is certainly worth our best efforts. Sincerely, GERALD R. GEHRINGER, M.D. PRESIDENT, AMERICAN ACADEMY OF FAMILY PHYSICIANS, 1740 W. 92nd ST., KANSAS CITY, MO. 64114

Young angler can't read record book

ANDOVER, Minn. (AP) — Daniel VanVickle is about to be honored for landing a state record fish, but the meaning of it all is easily lost on him.

At 3½ years old, he's still too young to be able to read his name when it is printed in the Department of Natural Resources' next record book.

Daniel, of Andover, Minn., is the state's youngest fisherman ever to achieve the distinction.

In an interview earlier this week at his home, Daniel politely listened to questions while paging through the latest issue of Sesame Street magazine.

"Was it exciting to know you caught a state record?" he was asked by a reporter.

"Boat. See boat," he answered, pointing to a picture in the magazine. He puckered his lips and imitated the sounds of a sputtering outboard.

"See my new shoes. Mommy got 'em."

"Oh, yes, those are nice shoes," said the reporter. "But what about your big fish?"

His eyes sparkled. He was fishing with his father, Kim, last April 4. They were on a pontoon boat on Coon Lake in Anoka County.

"Tell me about your big fish," his inquirer said again. Daniel climbed down from the kitchen chair.

"I threw my line in the water and 'swith' my bobber went down and I caught a fish," he said, reenacting the action.

Daniel VanVickle, 3½, holds his 2-pound, 9-ounce white crappie caught last April. The catch is good enough to be listed in the record books for its size, its type and the age of its captor.

For the record, Daniel caught a 2-pound, 9-ounce white crappie. It's not only the largest reported taken in the state, it's the first white crappie — a close cousin to the more common black species — ever submitted for the record book.

Roy Johannes, a state biologist and keeper of the record list, examined the fish and verified that it was a white crappie. The weight already had been certified at an East Bethel store.

Reagan: Soviet Union focus of evil

By BARRY SCHWEID

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — When it comes to the Soviet Union, President Reagan sees things in black and white. "They are the focus of evil in the modern world," he told a convention of evangelical Christians in Orlando, Fla.

Reagan's fire-and-brimstone speech Tuesday was something of a rebuttal to recent criticism of administration policy by church officials, notably the Roman Catholic hierarchy. In denouncing the Kremlin in fundamentalist terms, Reagan also was probably signaling the New Right that he hasn't really changed since assuming Barry Goldwater's conservative mantle nearly 20 years ago.

Conservatives had cause for doubt while arms control aides Eugene Rostow and Paul Nitze were sounding out the Soviets on an a partial cutback in nuclear weapons in Europe and while Reagan was strengthening relations with China, possibly at the expense of Taiwan.

But his Orlando speech, exhorting Americans to rise to the challenge of communism, should reassure them that Reagan would never knowingly "place the United States in a position of military and moral inferiority."

Reagan's message has been consistent since he rose to national political prominence backing Goldwater's presidential bid in 1964: America and freedom are threatened by totalitarian Soviet communism.

The Soviet Union reserves to itself "the right to commit any crime, to lie, to cheat," he said in his first presidential news conference in January 1981.

On his second anniversary in the White House last January he sounded the same theme. For the Soviets, he told reporters, "promises are like pie crust, made to be broken."

There isn't much shading in Reagan's philosophy. Back in 1967, in his inaugural address as governor of California, he observed: "We have been...told there are no simple answers to complex problems...Well, the truth is, there are simple answers, just not easy ones."

Reagan's speech in Orlando indicates he still subscribes to this view.

In practical terms, the question is whether Reagan sees any point in pursuing an accommodation with the Soviet Union on nuclear arms and other explosive issues.

Distrust for Moscow obviously explains the extra stress he puts on making sure that any arms control agreement is verifiable. But does Reagan's philosophy stand as a barrier to any attainable deal?

The Orlando speech suggests Reagan doesn't go that far. Seeing totalitarian powers for "what they are," he said, "does not guide us should isolate ourselves and refuse to seek an understanding with them."

William Hyland, a specialist in Soviet affairs for Presidents Nixon and Ford, was not surprised by Reagan's speech. "His position from the beginning has been that the clash between the systems is irreconcilable," Hyland said.

"But he continues to say that on a more pragmatic level of missiles and so forth this is not the only factor. He is willing to keep the door open to negotiated agreements."

Hyland sees two Reagans. One emphasizes the struggle with evil. The other hasn't closed the door on a summit with Yuri V. Andropov, the Soviet leader, or on agreement on nuclear missiles.

Stephen Larrabee, who held Hyland's post under President Carter, takes a darker view of Reagan's speech to the evangelical Christians.

Weather experts concerned about satellite sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some weather experts say they oppose the government's plan to sell its weather satellites to private industry, with one meteorologist claiming the move could have "disastrous implications."

"I think it's not a very good idea at all," said Dr. Robert M. White, president of the University Corporation for Atmospheric Research.

A plan to let private firms bid on the purchase of four weather and one land-sensing satellite was announced Tuesday by Dr. John V. Byrne, head of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The move follows the Reagan administration's policy to cut the budget and turn over some of NOAA's functions to private industry. But Byrne said operations of the National Weather Service would not be affected by the proposed sale.

While the sale would remove $200 million in satellite operations costs from the federal budget, Byrne said no hard figures were available to show whether the move would actually save or lose money.

Frank Forrester, a retired Washington-area meterologist and earth science expert, said: "The plan has some disastrous implications at both the national and international levels."

Dr. Robert Fleagle of the University of Washington, past president of the American Meteorological Society, said: "It seems to me it will result in a serious loss of effectiveness in our ability to cope with environmental problems."

Dr. George S. Benton of Johns Hopkins University reserved judgment, but said the proposal "raises a whole series of serious concerns."

If the satellites are sold, the National Weather Service would still need data collected by them. That information would have to be purchased from the new owners of the satellites, providing the firm a guaranteed customer for its product.

Fleagle said he doubts "we could come out financially as well as we do now, if the government had to buy the service. I don't have any proof, but I don't have any reason to expect it would be cheaper in the long run."

The sale needs congressional approval and Rep. James Scheuer, D-N.Y., chairman of the science and technology subcommittee, said several questions will need to be answered before that can happen.

Investigators requested

Hearst Feature Service

SAN ANTONIO — Investigators from the National Centers for Disease Control are being called in to help solve the medical mysteries surrounding infant deaths at Medical Center Hospital.

Chief Deputy District Attorney Nick Rothe confirmed yesterday that experts from the Atlanta-based federal facility "probably" will assist in the special grand jury probe of at least 10 "suspicious deaths" at the hospital's pediatric invensive care unit.

"We want the best medical people we can find to help us in our investigation," Rothe said.

"And we have asked the Centers for Disease Control because they are the best."

Rothe traveled to Austin yesterday for a "protocol" meeting with the Dr. Robert Bernstein, the state commissioner of health.

Although Rothe asked the CDC last week to aid in the investigation, he said Bernstein also will file an official request with the facility.

"That's the protocol of the thing," Rothe explained. "Dr. Bernstein is the top health authority in the state, and he will approach the Centers for Disease Control in our behalf."

Rothe said the CDC has handled investigations of many serious medical emergencies, including the 1981 Bexar County typhoid outbreak and a string of infant deaths in Toronto.

The CDC investigation of 36 baby deaths at Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children between July 1980 and March 1981 was completed three weeks ago. It concluded that some of the children had been given deliberate overdoses of Digoxin, a drug that stimulates the heart.

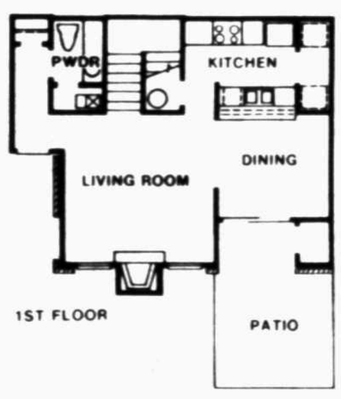

Rothe said another reason he wants the CDC to investigate the Bexar County infant deaths is that "its officials are neutral."

A.G. Bratcher stands with some of his jukebox collection in Denton recently. The retired radio-television repairman restores and collects them, and has about 20 in his collection.

Jukeboxes stand sentinel in Denton

DENTON (AP) — They stand sentinel around the walls of the concrete back porch dance floor like aging socialites gowned in the grandeur of another era.

One or another of their younger sisters makes the music that sets the dancers' feet to whirling — but all eyes return again and again to the softly glowing, everchanging lights of the old Wurlitzer jukeboxes.

Model 1015 is now empty of records. But its chrome grillwork, its plastic panels that change from green to yellow to orchid, and its bubble tubes frothing from the wooden bottom to the gracefully domed top make any former glory as a music-making machine seem almost extraneous.

Bullet-shaped model 1100, the last Wurlitzer designed by the company's master artist, Paul Fuller, is programmed to play 24 favorites: among them "Teddy Bear" by Elvis Presley, "Quicksand" by Hank Thompson and Guy Lombardo's "Swanee River."

A.G. Bratcher walks among his jukeboxes, pointing out their finer details with pride. He loves them all, but clearly the old 1940's Wurlitzer models are his favorites.

"The art went out of jukebox design, as far as I'm concerned, when Fuller died," he said. "After that, they made better music, but they're just boxes."

Bratcher has nearly 20 of the machines scattered around his house and workshop: working models, dusty derelicts and half-renovated jukes he's not quite through tinkering with. His inventory changes weekly; he's sold a dozen of the newer models since Christmas.

But selling jukeboxes isn't a business for the retired radio-television repairman. Collecting them is a hobby, and he sells the ones he can part with to buy parts for the ones he can't.

Right now he has his eye on a deluxe model 850 that uses Polarized film to create a prism effect that brings to life two peacocks on the front. The asking price is $5,000.

"It's a lot of money to pay for a jukebox," he said, "but I'll probably have to have it."

Restored jukeboxes usually range in price from about $500 for the mundane modern machines to the $5,700 Bratcher says his model 1015 is worth, and even higher. A collector usually buys a machine in poor repair, then restores it to its former glory by using parts from other jukeboxes, buying them new from companies that reproduce the old materials, or in some cases, crafting parts themselves.

Bratcher currently is puzzling over how to mend a handmade starwheel from a jukebox bought from Mexico.

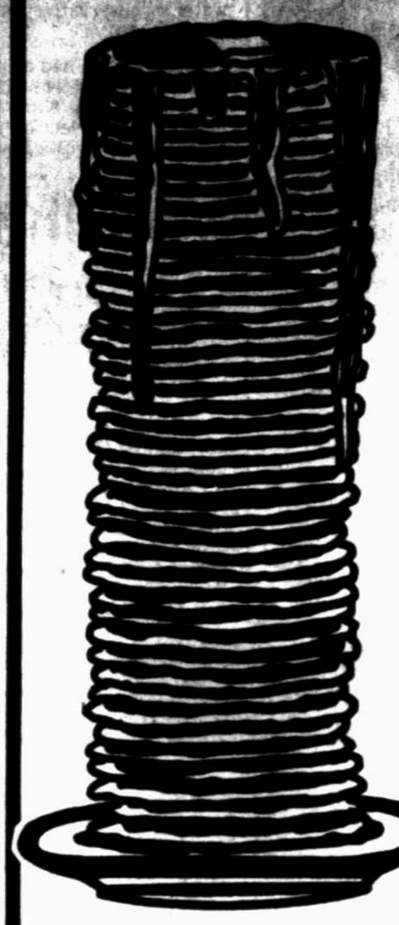

Wurlitzer isn't the only name in jukeboxes, but it is the most famous. Rock-ola, Seeburg, Packard and AMI are other ealy makers of the music machines. And it is the Seeburg that stands in most

According to "Jukebox, The Golden Age," by Vincent Lynch and Bill Hewnkin, the first coin-operated "automatic phonograph" was installed at the Palais R yale Saloon in San Francisco in 1889. But it wasn't until 1906 that the John Gabel Company brought out the first coin-operated music machine that offered more than one selection.

Teacher groups testify for health insurance

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Four bills relating to group health insurance for public school teachers and other employees have been sent to a subcommittee by the House Public Education Committee after legislators heard testimony from teacher groups.

"Every year, we see more and more qualified teachers leave for a lack of economic incentives," said Betty Pyle, an Odessa science teacher who serves as president of the Texas Classroom Teachers Association. "There is a real need for improved health care coverage."

While many school districts implement some type of health care program, some teachers do not have any plan available to them, Pyle said. "A small school district sometimes will not have enough (teachers) to qualify for a group plan and the cost of an individual plan on a teacher's salary is prohibitive," she said in support of House Bill 526, one of three measures filed by Rep. Bill Haley of Center which relate to group health insurance for public school employees.

"The impact of inadequate compensation has taken its toll," said Sally Wiedemann, president of the Association of Texas Professional Educators, who spoke in favor of Haley's HB 628. School districts with an average daily attendance rate of at least 3,000 usually provide a health insurance program, but many with less attendance do not, said Wiedemann, a business and education teacher in the Vernon Independent School District near Wichita Falls.

A lack of insurance is "keeping potentially fine prospects out of the schools," she said.

Several representatives from the Texas State Teachers Association testified for HB 105, a measure introduced by Amarillo Rep. Bob Simpson and others which provides health care benefits for employees and retirees.

"House bill 105 is a common-sense approach to a statewide problem," said TSTA president Barbara O'Neal. "Our members have voted overwhemingly over the last six years to make (this) legislative priority."

O'Neal said the measure is "equitable, fair and practical." TSTA has a membership of about 95,000 and O'Neal said 95 percent of that membership is currently teaching.

TSTA member testimony was also heard from John Donaldson, director of governmental relations, and Jeanne Cordell, a recently retired teacher from the Spring Branch Independent School District near Houston.

"We don't want to do anything to rob Peter to pay Paul," said June Karp, legislative director for the Texas Federation of Teachers, of the insurance bills. "Cutting down on retirement benefits (while providing insurance benefits) is not good business."

Johnny Veselka of the Texas Association of School Administrators said his group has given long-standing support to group health insurance programs.

Also testifying in support of the bills were David Thompson, with the Texas Association of School Boards, and Donald Turko, executive director of the Texas Association of Public School Employees, who spoke in favor of HB 526, and Cis Myers of the Texas Education Agency, who spoke in favor of HB 543.

No testimony was presented against any of the insurance measures.

Bill submitted to promote local rights commissions

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Senate State Affairs Committee has sent Senate Bill 605, creating a Commission of Human Rights to promote creation of local commissions on human rights, to the full Senate for consideration.

The bill, sponsored by Sens. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, and Craig Washington, D-Houston, creates such commissions to deal with complaints of discrimination in employment.

"This bill will set up a state agency that will do what the federal government is now doing," Farabee said.

There are currently three such commissions being operated in Austin, Fort Worth and Corpus Christi, Farabee said.

William Hale, a member of the Fort Worth Human Relations Commission, said local commissions have three advantages over the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, the federal government agency that handles discrimination cases.

Hale said they are faster, less expensive and said most cases are settled before extensive investigations.

The bill would not change penalties for employment discrimination.

Cashew rash could be problem

ATLANTA (AP) — A relatively rare rash from cashew nuts may pose a risk for people who are sensitive to poison ivy, poison oak or poison sumac, say researchers at the national Centers for Disease Control.

In south-central Pennsylvania last April, 54 people were afflicted with a poison ivy-like dermatitis after they ate cashews sold by a youth baseball fund-raising drive, the CDC reported Thursday.

Glynn "Scotty" Wolfe holds the world's record for the most marriages — 25 — and is contemplating No. 26. He and his wife of three weeks are planning a divorce, which Wolfe would like to see finalized on April Fool's Day.

'Most-married' man divorcing

But wife No. 26 waiting in wings

BLYTHE, Calif. (AP) — A 74-year-old who holds the world's record for most marriages has decided to end No. 25 after just three weeks, because his latest wife wants "to drink and have fun like these young ones."

"If everything goes right I'm going to get a divorce on April Fool's Day," Glynn H. "Scotty" Wolfe said Thursday. "There's no fool like an old fool, but I'd rather be an old fool than a dirty old man."

The certified marriage king, listed in the 1983 Guinness Book of World Records, took his most recent wedding march last Dec. 22, when he and Eileen Sheila Shelton, 23, pledged endless love in Las Vegas. After honeymooning there they set up house in their hometown of Blythe, 200 miles east of Los Angeles on the Arizona border.

The two signed up for classes at Palo Verde College along with 18-year-old Glynn Jr. — one of Wolfe's 40 children.

Wolfe carried his wife's books across campus and they helped each other with homework until the magic faded. They filed for divorce after three weeks of marriage.

"We thought it was better if we cut it off. It was a lot of fun but we agreed to disagree," Wolfe said in a telephone interview. "She likes to drink and have fun like these young ones...I knew that before but it's pretty hard when you're not used to that.

"These young ones have a lot of new things going," he added, "new actions, new songs, new lies."

The 25th Mrs. Wolfe has moved to Hollywood and there was no answer Thursday at the telephone number Wolfe gave for her.

The latest split sets a new record for Wolfe, whose shortest previous marriage lasted 38 days before divorce papers were filed. The longest survived five years. The Guinness book says he has long kept two wedding dresses — in different sizes — in his closet for ready use.

Wolfe's nuptial exploits, which began in 1931, won him an all-expense-paid trip to Japan for a world-record television special last year.

He's handling his own divorce in Riverside County Superior Court. The April 1 hearing date is fitting, he says, given that "I've been married on Valentine's Day, the Fourth of July, Christmas, New Year's, Easter and Washington's birthday. Marriage is fun."

Wolfe said he already has in mind wife No. 26: a 26-year-old Clinton, N.J., actress he's known for several years. He said she plans to visit Blythe, where he owns a small motel, once his latest divorce is final.

Why marry at all in the age of live-in love?

"I don't like to live in sin," said Wolfe, who claims he was ordained a Baptist minister. "Who likes to play marbles for fun? I like to play for keeps. Everybody thinks it's fun to shack up — I think it's fun to get married."

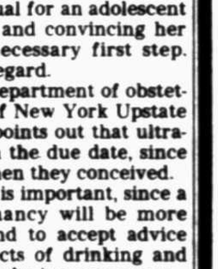

His advice for those contemplating marriage: "Get along with them and let them do what they want. When you get tired of that, let 'em go."

Spleen trouble with mono uncommon

Dear Dr. Solomon: When my son had mononucleosis, the doctor seemed to worry the most that his spleen might break. Is this common? My son was warned especially not to play ball for a while. — Mrs. K.G. Raleigh, N.C.

Dear Mrs. G.: Rupture of the spleen in patients with infectious mononucleosis is usually caused by some trauma during the second week of the illness. However, this is rare and, in addition, preventable.

Neil Solomon

Physicians generally recommend that patients with an enlarged spleen avoid contact sports for at least one month, and some physicians recommend that all patients with the disease avoid contact sports until they are completely well.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband has been drinking heavily ever since he got out of the service, but our minister has finally convinced him to go to Alcoholics Anonymous. My husband realizes what his drinking has done to himself and the family, and he has been very depressed. He went to his doctor for some medicine — like a tranquilizer to help him get over this rough period — but the doctor said he should wait a while. Wouldn't a tranquilizer be good for a heavy drinker who's trying to kick the habit? — Mrs. D.L., Orlando, Fa.

Dear Mrs. L.: Antidepressant medication may be indicated for some alcoholic patients, but not necessarily for all. Many alcoholics find that their feelings of depression are alleviated once they have been off alcohol for a time.

The results of a study conducted by Dr. David A. Gorelick of the University of California-Los Angeles School of Medicine and his associates showed that the depression experienced by about 75 percent of alcoholics is related to their drinking, and that the symptoms subside within a few weeks of treatment. These patients do not require antidepressants.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I just got an office job with an agency that works with pregnant teen-agers. I used to think that a girl who was going to have a baby knew something about life even though she may not have had much schooling. But some of these girls don't even know that they are pregnant when they are first referred to this agency. Some of these girls are sent for an ultrasound examination, and I wonder if you can tell me what this is for. — Agnes, New York City, N.Y.

Dear Agnes: It is not unusual for an adolescent girl to deny her pregnancy, and convincing her that she is pregnant is a necessary first step. Ultrasound can help in this regard.

Dr. John H. Hagen of the department of obstetrics at the State University of New York Upstate Medical Center in Syracuse points out that ultrasound can also help establish the due date, since many girls are not certain when they conceived.

Confirming the pregnancy is important, since a girl who accepts her pregnancy will be more likely to care for herself and to accept advice concerning the adverse effects of drinking and smoking and the use of drugs during pregnancy.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Student letters bring tear to Capra's eye

BERGENFIELD, N.J. (AP) — A group of fourth- and fifth-graders turned the tables on Frank Capra, bringing tears to the eyes of the director famous for his own sentimental movies.

Frank Capra

Capra recently wrote the students at Franklin School that, after receiving their letters praising his film, "It's A Wonderful Life," "a faucet inside me began to leak and run out of my eyes."

Nineteen students wrote Capra letters in December after the class watched the Christmas favorite, which starred Jimmy Stewart as a man on the brink of suicide who is shown by an angel what the world would have been like if he were never born.

Capra wrote back individual letters to the students, and also sent 19 autographed copies of his autobiography, "The Name Above the Title."

Ricky Pego, a fourth-grader, wrote Capra that he would like to direct movies someday.

"You old 9-year-old," Capra wrote back from his California home. "My age is 9 X 9 (plus) 4. I look like this." Then, in the letter's margin, Capra had scrawled a self-caricature complete with a big nose and single hair on his head.

The children were inspired to write the letters, said their teacher, Bill Munerantz, because they felt the movie showed that everyone's life is important.

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Amy Carter has some constant companions she can't wait to lose, but that won't happen until she turns 16 in October.

Amy Carter

The 15-year-old daughter of former president Jimmy Carter says when it comes to getting rid of her Secret Service protection: "I can't wait!"

In a recent interview, Amy said for entertainment she and those watching out for her often drive to Columbus, where she visits with her best friend, Katie Aumann, 18. Nights out, she said, usually include pizza, movies and a trip to a video arcade.

As for a recent characterization of her and her protectors on "Saturday Night Live," Amy said it was exaggerated — but she still enjoyed the show.

LONDON (AP) — Academy Award-winning actor David Niven, released from hospital after treatment for a muscular disease, managed a smile as he arrived at Heathrow Airport for a flight to southern France.

Niven, 73, who resides in Switzerland, was taken to the airport in an ambulance Thursday from Wellington Hospital where he underwent treatment for the disorder.

Coffin bearers usher in spring

CHICAGO (AP) — Spring will arrive early in one city neighborhood this weekend — riding on a coffin.

"St. Patrick's Day used to be the kickoff of spring around here," explained North Side tavern owner Marty Sinclair recently, "but since we started the pallbearing races, they're sort of the signal that winter's finally over — rites of spring, you might say."

Sinclair and several of his employees first dreamed up the coffin races as a macabre comment on their lack of paying customers. But the races are now in their 11th year as an organized competition at his tavern, Oxford's Pub.

In the races, four-person teams from dozens of North Side taverns and athletic clubs take turns running a 50-yard indoor course with 90-pound fake coffins.

"We thought to get real ones the second year out," said Sinclair, "but then we found out how much the things cost — and weigh."

About 35 teams have registered for this year's races, which will be held Sunday afternoon and evening.

"We've got four divisions this year," said Sinclair. "We've got the entries divided up between men's teams and women's teams, athletic teams and bar teams. The bar teams are to give your average non-athletic type drinkers a chance.

First prize in each division is $75 and a keg of beer. Runners-up receive $25 and a keg of beer.

Sinclair doesn't claim any long or hallowed tradition for the practice of coffin-racing.

"It just came to one of us," he said. "We'd lost our old bar to the real estate developers, and were new at this location. Business was terrible, and we were just sitting around one winter night in an empty joint. I doodled a skull and crossbones on some paper and somebody said, 'Hey, I've got an idea...'"

California tries new housing idea

FAIRFAX, Calif. (AP) — Residents who find strangers in their bathrooms around these parts next fall might just be looking at their new next-door neighbors.

It's all part of a $1.6 million experiment in alternative housing developed by the non-profit Innovative Housing corporation.

The plan calls for the one- and two-bedroom units of 250 square feet each to be grouped around common facilities — living rooms, kitchens, dining rooms and bathrooms — shared by six to nine tenants. The units would rent for $300 to $380 per month.

The first phase of the 36 low- and moderate-income units is scheduled for fall completion.

"We have become a coalition blooming between environmental and housing advocates," said Ann Howell, who is directing the project.

She said the proposal is particularly appropriate for Fairfax, where single-parent households account for nearly a third of the town's residential make-up.

Gary Coleman and Nancy Reagan on the set of "Diff'rent Strokes." Mrs. Reagan will appear in the March 19 segment of the show.

Nancy joins TV sitcom March 19

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When the writers of NBC's "Diff'rent Strokes" asked Nancy Reagan to help with an episode about drug abuse, all they had in mind was a recorded appearance from her White House office.

But Mrs. Reagan — an avid anti-drug crusader — wanted to do more, and on Thursday she took up her former profession as actress for the first time in more than 25 years to tape two scenes before an audience of 250 at Universal Studios. The episode is scheduled to air March 19.

"First ladies have a lot of public appearances, but she's fairly excited about this," said Sheila Tate, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary.

The first lady completed each scene in just one take, consulting cue cards beforehand but delivering her lines easily and naturally.

Mrs. Reagan plays herself in the episode, scheduled to air March 19. The plot centers around a drug abuse story that Arnold — played by "Diff'rent Strokes" star Gary Coleman — writes for a New York newspaper's journalism contest.

When Arnold's school principal refuses to enter the story because he believes it to be made up, Arnold sends it to the newspaper himself. The story is published and Mrs. Reagan shows up at the family's door.

"I'm sorry. I hope I'm not disturbing you. I'm Nancy Reagan," she says to Arnold's amazed adoptive father, played by Conrad Bain.

"Yes, you certainly are. Welcome to our building," Bain replies.

"Forgive me for dropping in like this, but sometimes it's better if I show up without any fanfare," Mrs. Reagan says.

SLOAN BROTHERS BUICK
2625 W. Wall 683-2761

Last year, 30% of all Volvo sales were to people who were also tempted to buy one of these prestige German cars. And didn't.

This year, with the introduction of the Volvo 760 GLE, we expect even more people to be led into Volvos and not temptation.

That's because the 760 GLE is, simply, the finest Volvo sedan ever built. Ten years of design and development went into it. And two million test miles are behind it. This is what a driver will get out of it.

Even more predictable handling. A unique, patent pending rear suspension system keeps the drive wheels in constant alignment, reducing the chance of losing your rear end on sharp curves. (Especially if the road surface is wet and slippery.)

Faster take-off. The turbo-diesel engine and gearing system produce 40% more torque (turning power at the wheels) than last year's conventional 6-cylinder diesel/drive train. The results (with manual transmission): 0-55 mph in 9.54 seconds. 0-60 mph in 11.7 seconds. In an on-ramp 30-50 mph acceleration test, the 760 GLE turbo-diesel made it in 4.71 seconds ... a fearless figure for entering any freeway or autobahn. (Also available: a V-6 gas engine with automatic that's no slouch either.)

See for yourself how the 760 GLE performs compared to a Mercedes or BMW. Come in for a test drive soon and, while you're at it, check out the price tag. We all know that prestige has a price. But with this all new Volvo, it isn't as steep.

THE VOLVO 760 GLE.
WE NEVER SOLD A VOLVO THAT WAS WORTH SO MUCH.
