The First of a Series Of News Editorials On A Vital Subject

EDITOR'S NOTE: Other articles dealing with Lubbock's public schools will follow daily in the Morning Avalanche. The series has been prepared by the Avalanche-Journal and Superintendent M. H. Duncan and presents authentic information on one of the city's most prized and valuable possessions—its public educational system.

The present superintendent of our public schools came to his position nearly four years ago with some definite ideas as to the weaknesses of the average public school system and with fixed convictions as to what should be done to improve their work. From the beginning, he knew that in order to bring about the needed reforms he would have to have, not only the sympathy of his school board and the patrons of the schools, but also the hearty co-operation of the teaching staff. In order to let the people know the meaning of the new education, he has written a number of booklets which have been distributed among the patrons of the schools and has also prepared a number of articles for the local papers.

Has Informed Patrons

By talks at patrons' meetings, and in every way possible, he has sought to give the patrons the viewpoint of the new education and to let them know that the child is educated by what he does and not necessarily by what he reads. We are of the opinion that he has succeeded in convincing the patrons of the community that education is a matter of living and not primarily a matter of learning. He has convinced us that the child learns to live rather than lives to learn. During his first year as superintendent, he met with the teachers in regular teachers' meetings and led them in a study of the learner and his attitude. A text by that name was used as a basis for the work and effort was made to focus the interest of the teachers on the child, so as to gain his co-operation in the work of his education. It was emphasized that year in the study that the child learns most and is most effectively educated when he is in the right attitude towards his work and enters it with wholehearted enthusiasm. Education was

Recovery of Stone Mountain Sought

S. H. Venable and Owners Attempt To Gain Possession of Famous Monument

(By Associated Press)

DECATUR, Ga., Jan. 26.—S. H. Venable and two other original owners entered a suit here today for recovery of the Stone Mountain site they deeded for a memorial to the Confederacy, charging that the Stone Mountain Monumental association had violated a contract to complete the main carving within 12 years.

An allegation that the organization was insolvent was coupled with charges that it had been wasteful in use of funds, that it had lost public confidence, and that it could not complete the monument if allowed more time.

The suit added that it was the hope of petitioners to recover the property so as to re-dedicate it to its original purpose.

Fashion Decrees Feminine Modes

PARIS, Jan. 26. (AP)—"Miss Summertime" came to Paris this week in a wardrobe that brought visions of leafy bowers.

Every leaf in the new frocks and fripperies was signed with a costly name but "Miss Summertime" has thousands of them ready for use.

The summer girl, as revealed at the first fashion show this year, is to be a sunburned lassie with plenty of "allure", as the French term what in America is called "it". She will have a little more covering on her bones than last year, but a little less on her back. She will advocate all that is feminine without being frail.

Moody's Program Classed State's Most Ambitious

Administration Leadership Is Lacking For Headway In Legislation; Teer Is Missing From Ranks

Selection Likely

Leaders Expected to Show Up During Next Week for Carrying Executive's Recommendations

By R. W. BARRY
Associated Press Staff Writer

AUSTIN, Jan. 26. (AP)—Success to be attained by the 41st legislature, now three weeks old, depends almost wholly on administration leadership in the two houses.

So far the sessions have not produced any leadership for Governor Moody's legislative program, is given up to be, by all law makers, as one of the most ambitious ever laid out by a chief executive.

When the highway financing, prison centralization and reorganization, civil service and other subjects of legislation recommended by the Governor in his messages get to the senate and house, it is obvious the Governor must have capable floor leaders, else a slip in the form of an amendment might defeat his purposes.

Teer Is Missing

Claude Teer, veteran member of the house from Williamson county, recognized as the Governor's spokesman in the fortieth legislature, is not in the body now, having been placed on the board of control by appointment of his friend. Senator A. E. Wood, also of Williamson county, represented the Governor on the floor of the upper house, but he has ben succeeded by Senator John W. Hornsby of Austin.

It is probable that the session will develop capable leaders for the Governor, and that his interests will be properly served, but so far many of the legislators have commented on the absence of administration guardians.

The legislature plainly is friendly to the Governor and many members of each house gladly would espouse his cause in the legislative program he has enunciated and it may be he is bidding his time in making selections.

Prison Question Not New

The problem of doing something with the chaotic condition surrounding the penal system is not new, the Governor having failed in the last legislature to get action on his recommendations for centralization and reformation.

Commissioner Asks For 5,400 More Officers

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, Jan. 26. —Hoodlums of Chicago gasped today at the second solar plexus blow delivered within a week by police.

It might have been expected that the arm of the law would be tired, after rounding up more than 4,000 prisoners. The pain of so sudden a follow-up punch was surprising and the cells of the city lock-ups again began to be filled.

The bureau of identification resumed its day and night schedule so police could begin immediately the work of checking up the 400 odd prisoners.

Two holdups, detectives reported, were nipped in the bud by the second throwing out of the dragnet.

The second, at Oklahoma City, resulted in a conviction and Hale being sentenced to life imprisonment. Sympathy with his charge caused the guard to relax his vigilence. As he started to crawl through a wire fence near the Blassingame home he was pounced on and left hanging in the strands unconscious.

Blassingame was sent up from Upshur county about a year ago for robbery of a bank at Ore City.

Seventieth Birthday of Ex-Kaiser Is Marred by Illness and Dissension

DOORN, Holland, Jan. 26.—The largest family reunion of the house of Hohenzollern since the outbreak of the World War in 1914, assembled here today to celebrate Ex-Kaiser Wilhelm's 70th birthday tomorrow. All told, there were, including the former emperor himself, 57 present.

The general family joy was dampened by two cases of illness and the strained relations with Wilhelm's oldest sister, Princess Victoria, because of her marriage to Alexander Subkoff. She was among the absentees. Another absentee was Prince Henry, brother of the exiled ruler. He was kept at Kiel by an attack of influenza, but he sent his oldest son, Prince Waldemar and the latter's wife, to represent him.

Wife Is Ill

The deepest shadow was cast by the sudden illness today of the emperor's wife, Princess Hermine. She was seized with chicken pox and isolated in her room.

Frederick August III, ex-king of Saxony, was one of those present, but he was the only one of the former kings of German states in attendance.

Girls Race Out of Building Into Freezing Weather; Mass Meetings Planned For Today

(By Associated Press)

BELTON, Jan. 26.—Two hundred and fifty girls, many of them in borrowed clothing, went to classes at Baylor College for women here today as prominent Baptists planned mass meetings here and Temple tomorrow to consider replacing historic Luther Hall, girl's dormitory, destroyed by fire here early today.

When the fire was discovered by a nightwatchman, the girls raced out of the building into freezing weather, some wearing nothing but pajamas and house slippers. Although others had time to snatch up a coat, all of their personal belongings burned.

Fire apparatus from Temple and Georgetown rushed to the campus here but by the time they arrived the wooden interior of the rock structure was burning so fiercely the building could not be saved. Business Manager Hooper estimated loss at $285,000.

Dr. J. C. Hardy, college president, issued a call for clothing for the girls. Some of them, he said, might not be able to stay in school unless their wardrobes are replenished. The girls this afternoon, however, when they met for a roll call held to ascertain definitely whether any were missing, voted unanimously to stay in school.

Luther Hall, in which the 250 girls were housed, and where 600 had their meals in the central dining room, was built in 1886.

Although the girls lost everything but what they were wearing, all but one, Dorothy Williams of Dallas who was bruised when she jumped into a blanket from a third story window, escaped without injury.

Coastguard Cutters Start Out In Search of Distressed Steamers; No Details Are Given

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Jan. 26 — What happened to the British steamer Silver Maple, fifth vessel this week to send out the SOS over the storm-swept Atlantic, still was unbroken tonight while the cutters Mojave and Tampa sped to her position 780 miles east of oBston, pasition 37:10 north 56:15 west.

The plight of the Italian freighter Capo Vado, silent for 24 hours after she sputtered an SOS from a point some 750 miles east of Bermuda, also was a mystery.

New Denver Depot In City Is Opened

Structure Is Completed And Ready for Occupancy; All Day Ticket Service Available; Visitors Invited

Opening last night of the new Fort Worth and Denver City Railway depot in Lubbock, corner of 18th street and Avenue G, marks the completion of one of the outstanding beauty spots of the city, in addition to furnishing to patrons of the line one of the most modern and up to date stations in the state.

This beautiful structure, built of brick and stone with a tile roof, was erected at an approximate cost of $85,000. It was opened last night for service of the railway employes. Temporary ticket office and waiting room had been used since the completion of the Denver service into Lubbock November 1.

No Formal Opening Slated

Although no formal opening is to be held, due to the late completion of the building, the public is invited to visit and inspect the station. The depot will be open all day today and visitors will be shown through the building by railway officials.

Jimmy Valentine, Lubbock passenger and freight agent of the Denver lines, and nine other employes of the company will occupy the building after February 1. On that date, all-day ticket service will be available. Mr. Valentine reports that both passenger and freight business have been better than was expected, and are continually on the increase. The train schedule has been 100 per cent on time during the past forty-five days, he said. The train arrives here at 8:20 o'clock in the morning and departs at 7 o'clock in the evening.

Is Well Furnished

New mahogany furnishings, purchased from a local furniture concern, adorn the entire building. The waiting room for whites contains a seating capacity for fifty-five persons, with tile wash rooms connected. The ticket office, negro waiting room, baggage room, express room, and a spacious freight warehouse and office compose the remainder of the building.

The structure is one of the best lighted in the city with sixty-one 200-watt globes. It is equipped with automatic gas steam heating system, which will regulate the temperature at any desired amount.

An automobile platform for unloading cars and other heavy shipments has recently been completed at the station. According to Mr. Valentine, additional equipment and furnishings will be added from time to time.

Nolan County Breeders To Conduct Annual Event On February 25 Of This Year, Says Report

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SWEETWATER, Jan. 26—The annual spring sale of the Midwest Texas Hereford Breeders' Association will be held this year on February 25, according to an announcement by the Nolan county breeders who are sponsoring the event. Indications are that the sale will be the best ever staged here.

Forty head of good choice Herefords have already been consigned. This is a decided increase over past sales, and all animals to be entered are said to be of unusually good strain and in first class condition.

Two of the country's best known Hereford auctioneers will have charge of the sale. They are Col. Fred Reppert of Indiana, who has conducted past sales here, and Earl Dartin of Missouri. Both these auctioneers are among the best known in the United States, and their presence here is expected to add materially to the success and interest of the sale.

As in the past, the sale will be held at the fair grounds, and an attendance of Hereford men from throughout the state is anticipated.

Nolan county breeders who have consigned animals to the sale include E. B. Herndon, W. L. Boothe, P. D. Neel, W. A. Howe, E. P. Neblett, W. S. and H. F. Hendrix, O. O. Oliver, J. D. Dulaney, G. E. Your Milkman Never Holds A "Sale"

You would be surprised, wouldn't you, if your milkman told you that on Tuesdays and Fridays he would sell milk at half price. Quite naturally you would question the quality of the milk offered you on those days, or you would wonder if you were not paying too much on the other days of the week.

But, of course, your milkman doesn't sell his product that way—nor does the J. C. Penney Company. Both of us realize that our customers must have merchandise of assured quality, priced as near the actual cost of production as possible, plus a fair charge for distribution and handling.

The cream cats had a heap of fun and licked until the work was done. The Tinies all stood very still, 'cept Clowny who jumped 'round. "The cat that's licking cream from me is getting much too rough," said he. And then he pushed the cat and it jumped back with quite a bound.

At last a dwarf said, "Well, let's quit. You Tinymites are looking fit. The cats have licked the whipped cream off your clothes, and now they're through. We'll chase the big cats on their way. They'll sleep the balance of the day."

Away they went. 'Twas very queer to see the fat cats disappear. Said Scouty, "Why you'd think that they would be too full to run." Then Clowny added, "Well, now what? Our clothes are spoiled, as like as not. They're very badly messed despite what all the cats have done."

And then they heard one wee dwarf shout, "Now, don't you fret. We'll help you out. I'll get some little bath robes which you Tinymites can wear. Hop from your clothes and do it quick. We'll wash your garments up real slick. They'll soon look just as good as new. Now that seems very fair!"

A little wash board was brought out, and Coppy said, "I have no doubt that we will soon be looking fine. Let's let them wash our clothes." So, in the tub their clothes soon went and 'bout a half an hour was spent at scrubbing all the garments. It was hard work, goodness knows.

When everything was washed up fine, a dwarf brought forth a little line and stretched it out to hang things on. 'Twas neat as it could be. "Well, well," said Scouty, "This is great. We're glad to sit right here and wait. When you are through we're sure that some real clean clothes we will see."

Canyon Eagles Come Back To Annex Second Tilt With Lubbock

IN THE REALM OF SPORT

WITH ALLAN CARNEY
Avalanche Sports Editor

In spite of the absence of their stellar guard, Jimmy Kerr, the Tech Matadors have returned from the most successful basketball invasion of Abilene they have ever experienced. Playing under this handicap and with Ransom Walker having but one week's practice with the squad, the Paynemen divided a two game series with the A. C. C. Wildcats, dropped a single game to Simmons and swept their two game engagement with the McMurry Indians.

Resuming practice on the home court Monday, the college basketeers will have four days to prepare for the Daniel Baker Hill Billies who come here next Friday and Saturday for two games. The Brownwood cagers have their eyes set on the T. I. A. A. basketball title, but are meeting stiff opposition this season. Their title hopes received a stunning blow Friday night when the Southwest State Teachers from San Marcus gave them a sound trouncing.

The addition of Walker to the Tech quintet has injected considerable momentum to the Matador's scoring power. With only one week's practice with the squad before the Abilene trip, "Handsome Ransome" was an outstanding performer in the entire five game series. Another week of training with the squad should find the former cage captain going at top speed. His presence in the lineup will go a long ways toward rebuilding the club after the departure of Jimmy Kerr from the lineup.

Jack Sharkey met a rugged foe when he stepped in the ring with "K. O." Christner Friday night in Madison Square Garden. The Akron heavyweight not only proved himself a shock absorber but a fighter of the gamest sort. The Boston Gob threw everything he had into the mid-section and head of the knockout artist, but he was still holding on grimly at the end of the ten round go. Christner did a great deal more than take a lot of punishment, he had Sharkey reeling on several occasions. The fight fans who have been crying for a real fight must have gotten their money's worth at this slug-fest. Jack had a $100,000 battle with Young Stribling at stake, and the Akron slugger was offered the opportunity to step into the limelight and take Sharkey's place at the Miami Beach fuss.

Undoubtedly Sharkey, who is over-gifted with gab, helped on the cause Jack Dempsey is promoting in Florida by the exhibition of slugging he gave the 20,000 fans gathered in the Garden. His ring superiority over the green Christner was apparent throughout the fight, and his display of punching power was far better than he has been able to give for many moons. Matched with the Georgia pugilist, who has won considerable notice for his ability to lay 'em flat on the canvas, Sharkey will likely draw a full house for the new 40,000 arena Dempsey has built for the occasion.

Stribling had little trouble in mauling the Los Angeles giant at New Orleans Friday night. The Western man mountain made the Georgian look like a dwarf beside him, but Strib slaughtered him so mercilessly in the brief three rounds of the fight that the referee stopped it, giving the heavyweight contender a technical knockout. Smith was never able to land a solid blow on the elusive Southerner, and his 38 pound advantage only served to give Stribling a larger target.

And now it seems that both of these tuning-up encounters before the big battle in Florida February 27 turned out just as the promoters would have them. Both Sharkey and Stribling won decisively over their opponents and both showed beyond a doubt that they can punch. With the heavyweight throne vacated by Gene Tunney in the offing, the battle amid the palms of Florida should prove a gem of a fight. Stribling's inclination to wrestle instead of fight when he is in the ring has been the cause of considerable adverse criticism. Recent months has revealed a far more aggressive and more dangerous Stribling, with a socking power that has worlds of possibility.

District 1 Team Trims Local Five In Rough Tussle

Thrilling Battle of High School Teams Results In 26 to 17 Score for Eagle Aggregation

The Canyon Eagles sank their talons deep into the ranks of Lubbock High school basketeers last night, spreading their wings so effectively that the locals were forced to take the defensive during most of the contest and be content with the little end of a 26 to 17 score. It was a thriller from the first to the last whistle.

Coming back after their overwhelming defeat at the hands of the Lubbock five last night with worlds of aggressiveness, the Canyon aggregation held the upper hand in a rough, hard fought game that was made rougher by loose officiating.

Canyon jumped into the lead in the first minute of play when O'Donald and R. Cabe sank long looping field goals in quick succession. Earnest Dowell, the Lubbock long distance sharpshooter, followed shortly with a counter from mid-curt at which instance, the Canyon defense stiffened. Lubbock team-work fell to pieces and the slaughter was on.

As the quarter ended the Eagles were leading 11 to 4.

Reserves go In

The Lubbock regulars continued to look sick in the second frame, and before the half had ended, Coach Morgan had an entire new team on the floor, made up for the most part of second stringers. The half ended with the visitors holding a seven point advantage.

Lubbock's reserves took the floor at the beginning of the second half and displayed a superior brand of basketball than the regulars had shown, scoring 7 points while the Eagles were counting 5. With the Eagles showing no signs of letting up, the Lubbock coach sent his regulars back into the fray, the score standing 20-15.

Fighting gamely to penetrate the stubborn defense of the visitors to overcome their lead, the first stringers who had trounced the opposition on the night before, could add only two free throws to the Lubbock cause while Canyon was piling on six more points.

Wiggins, crafty Canyon center, carried off scoring honors with 12 points while Dowell of Lubbock led the locals with 8.

HOOKS AND SLIDES

By Henry L. Farrell

DEAR TO HIS HEART

It would have been dear to the Rickard heart to have had a big row about the man who is to referee the Sharkey-Stribling fight It would have made the fellers talk and with a lot of sectional and partisan feelings involved it would have been natural ballyhoo for the customers.

Sharkey, perhaps without first degree intent, always lent himself to the kind of ballyhoo material that Rickard loved. When he was calling Dempsey names before their fight and saying things that couldn't be printed about Tunney Rickard came as close to laughing out loud as he ever did in his life.

Rickard had a very warm spot in his heart for Sharkey because he had such a genius, if it might be called that, for getting himself in print. When he came to New York from Boston Rickard would get him steamed up by saying nice things about Dempsey and Tunney and Jim Maloney. And when he spread the salve about Maloney Sharkey would go through the roof.

HEAT BEGINS TO WORK

One afternoon the newspaper bunch had gathered, as customary, in his office for the daily conference. Sharkey had been in to see him and went down to Jess McMahon's office boiling after Rickard had burnt him up talking about what a great fighter Maloney was.

Rickard called his secretary and told her to send down to McMahon's office.

"Tell him to send Sharkey up here. The boys want to talk to him."

Sharkey stormed into the office and without greeting the boys stormed at Rickard:

"What the hell do you want now? If you're going to blow off any more about that —— Dempsey and that dirty suchandsuch of a Maloney, I'm going to blow the joint."

Turning to the newspapermen he shouted: "Do you know what he's been trying to tell me about Dempsey and Maloney?" And then he went on to repeat the steaming-up conversation, finishing with: "He's in love with that suchandsuch Dempsey."

Similar incidents occurred almost every time Sharkey visited the Garden, and it is quite certain that Sharkey's part was not an act He was sincere and meant it. If he was talking purely for publicity he would have used language that didn't have to be censored.

THEY HAD THEIR SIDE

There will not be any trouble about the referee. If there is a controversy it will be ballyhoo. Sharkey is smart enough to know that he couldn't get a raw deal in the south because he is a northerner and belongs to a certain church. Mike McTigue did have some kind of an experience in Georgia, but, in justice to Stribling and the men who are charged with responsibility for the demonstration, it must be recalled that the people down there were aroused when McTigue claimed a broken hand would not allow him to fight. And they didn't think his hand was broken and wanted a show for their money. Stribling came north later and beat the ears off Mike in Jersey.

THERE'S THE DIFFERENCE

Rickard did have a real referee fight on his hands before the Johnson-Jeffries fight, and he had to step in and referee the fight himself.

When Colonel Carey, Rickard's successor at the Garden, was asked if he might do the same thing in Miami he was horrified.

"Good Lord, not me!" he said.

T. C. U. Mourns Death Of Don Frazee, Star Athlete

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

FORT WORTH, Jan. 26.—Don Frazee who was killed in an air plane crash at San Angelo Friday, was one of the best fullbacks ever to play for Texas Christian University. Don came to the Purple school in 1924 and was captain of the freshman football team. In 1925 he was one of the outstanding backfield men in the conference.

"He was one of the best fullbacks I ever coached," said Matty Bell, Frog mentor. Frazee was especially adept at backing up the line and was considered as one of the best defense backs in the Southwestern loop. He was also one of the best line plungers to perform for the Purple and added many points to the Frog total in 1925. He was a member of the Frog cake team during the season of 1925-26 as a guard

Unheralded Wisconsin Golfer Slips In With 69 Score to Take Lead In Texas Open Tournament At San Tone

Frank Walsh of Appleton, Wis., Tops Field of 66 Who Qualify for Sunday Play Over 36 Holes

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 26. (AP) — Frank Walsh of Appleton, Wis., unheralded, slipped in with a 69 tonight to lead the field in the Texas Open golf tournament. Henry Cluci of Bridgeport, Conn., and Horton Smith of Joplin, Mo., were tied for second with 141's. Joe Kirkwood of Albany, Ga., and Danny Williams of Shackamaxon, N. J., were one stroke behind with 142.

All scores of 156 or better qualified for tomorrow's play over the 36 hole route. This qualified a field of 66 as there were several tied at the top figure.

Willard Hutchinson of Pasadena, Calif., was next with 143 and Bill Melhorn, of Fennimore, N. Y., Dennis Shute of Columbus, Ohio, and John Dawson of Chicago, an amateur, were tied at 144.

Ed Dudley of Los Angeles, a leader yesterday, dropped back today with a 76 for 145.

In addition to Dawson, Lewis Levinson of San Antonio, with 147, Ossie Carlton of Houston with 150, Clarence Hubby of Waco and Logan Van Zandt of Tulsa tied with 155's and Bob Meneffee of San Antonio with 156, all amateurs, were in the field.

Shoots Two Under Par

Playing with a slender gallery, in spite of his 70 yesterday, Walsh clipped a stroke from par at the third hole, and the fifth but slipped one over on the eighth to turn one under par. On the back nine he birdied the eleventh and seventeenth but wasted a stroke at sixteen to finish two under perfect figures.

His 69 was not the best score of the day, however, as Joe Kirkwood turned in a 68, missing the course record by one stroke and Hutchison and Melhorn each had 69's.

Walsh's card for the two day play follows:

Par out	435—444—435—36.
Walsh Friday	434—444—534—35.
Walsh Saturday	434—444—544—35.
Par in	344—544—443—35—71
Walsh Friday	344—545—433—35—70
Walsh Saturday	334—544—533—34—69—139

Weather Better

The players were favored by better weather than that which greeted yesterday but the air was still cool and it took most of them some time to hit their stride.

Most of the prominent pro's survived the elimination but a few well known players were eliminated, including Cyril Walker of Paramus, N. Y., Ralph Smith of Summit, N. J., R. Daniels of Chicago, Bill Witherspoon of Kansas City and Jack Curley of Huntington, West iVrginia. Hubert Bandy of Waco, Tris Speaker—the famous "Spoke" of baseball—and Al Barbee of Waco were among the better known amateurs to fall by the wayside.

Tomorrow's play will start at 8 a. m. and 2 p. m. each man touring the course twice. The thirty finishing with the best scores will divide the $6,500 prize money and the medalist of the 72 holes taking $1,500

Western Leaguers Juggle Game Dates

Club Representatives Meet To Arrange 1929 Schedule and Will Continue Today; Makeup In Doubt

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo., Jan. 26. (AP)—Four men today sought to arrange a 1929 Western League baseball schedule to meet approval of all club owners at a league meeting February 20. The juggling of dates was to continue tomorrow.

The four men entrusted with the task were Dale Gear of Topeka, Kansas, league president; Barney Burch, owner of the Omaha club; John Holland, Oklahoma City owner and Spencer Abbott, Pueblo, Colo., franchise holder.

With the exception of the Amarillo, Texas, franchise, transferred to St. Joseph, Mo., the same clubs as last year will have teams. They are Oklahoma City, Tulsa, Wichita Des Moines, Omaha, Pueblo and Denver.

Last year there was much talk of Oklahoma City and Tulsa withdrawing from the Western to enter the Texas League. The Western League refused to release the two clubs, they are entered. Again and probably little agitation for a shift will be heard.

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo., Jan. 26. (AP)—The make-up of the Western Association baseball league still is in doubt, Dale Gear, president, said here today.

Membership Drive Started By Club

Matador Club Begins Expansion Program With Unlimited Membership; Greater Service Is Aim

Beginning a membership campaign that is destined to make of the Matador Club an organization of unlimited consequence, members of the local club are looking forward with added anticipation to the greater things that are in store for worthy students of Texas Tech.

Inviting all Lubbock business men who want a part in looking after the interests of the college and college students to join their organization, officials of the Matador club believe that the efficiency of the organization can be increased many fold by the increase in membership and support of Lubbock citizens.

Organized to help needy students and further the interests of the college, the club has grown to one of the most prominent organiaztions of the city. Seeking to build the highest type of character, the club has always stood willing to aid materially those worthy students who are unable to finance their way through college.

As a representative body of Lubbock citizens who do everything to further the interests of Tech, the Matador boosters have taken an active part in all college movements. The drive for membership now under way is a step forward which club leaders expect to add greatly to their position as leaders in college affairs.

Wesley Fesler May Equal Feats Of Chick Harley at Ohio State

By NEA Service

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 26.—It has been assumed by followers of Ohio State athletic teams that no athlete ever would equal the record of Chick Harley. That, however, was before Wesley Fesler arrived on the scene.

Harley, whose importance in Ohio State athletics may never be equaled by Fesler, has the distinction of being the only Buckeye athlete who ever earned letters in four different sports. He is also the only Buckeye ever placed on the first All-American football team three years in a row.

Fesler has more than a ghost of a chance to equal those two records. He was named All-America end on practically every team chosen this fall. If he continues the same brand of play and is not bothered by injuries, he likely will make All-America the next two years.

He already has cinched a berth on the basketball team. He is going out for the baseball team this spring, and has an excellent chance of making it. He had a brother who captained the varsity a few years back. And, in high school, he made respectable marks in both the high and pole vault which may be bettered as a college performer.

Ponies Comeback To Trim Farmers

S. M. U. Cagers Employ A "Stalling" Attack That Throws Aggies Off Balance In Conference Tilt

DALLAS, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Employing a "stalling" attack that threw their opponents off balance, the Southern Methodist University Mustangs came from behind an 8-7 disadvantage at the half to trim the Texas Aggies, 23 to 15, in their Southwest conference basketball encounter here tonight.

It was the second conference win for the Ponies and the first defeat handed the Farmers by a North Texas team. It was a typically torrid Mustang-Aggie fray, witnessed by 1,200 fans.

Doped to lose, the Ponies surprised the visitors with their newly developed offensive. The Aggies were pulled away from their own goal and the Mustang shooters slipped down the floor for points.

Early in the second half A. and M. went on a rampage and ran its lead up to six points, but the Red and Blue rallied and pulled into a tie. For several minutes it was a see-saw affair, then about midway of the final period the Aggies began leaving their goal unguarded in their zeal to get the ball, and the Ponies quickly ran up a safe lead. Johnson and Brooks manufactured the points that spelled victory for St. Clair's pupils.

Brooks of the Mustangs and Webster of the Aggies divided scoring honors, each getting seven points.

Freeland Heads Physical Education Department, Retiring As Coach For Varsity; Higginbotham Grid Mentor

Payne Named Assistant Football Coach and Head Mentor Of Basketball and Track; Entire Staff Will Remain Intact Through School Year of 1929 and 1930

A re-organization of the coaching staff and the department of physical education at Texas Technological college was announced last night by the Athletic Council. Action of the council in making the re-organization covers the balance of the present school year and will continue in force through the school year of 1929-1930, the announcement said.

Ewing Y. Freeland, who has been serving as director of athletics at the college ever since it opened its doors in 1925, becomes head of the department of physical education, with the rank of professor, under the re-organiation. Grady H. Higginbotham, who has been assistant head coach throughout the school's life thus far, becomes head football and baseball coach, with the rank of associate professor of physical education and Victor Payne, who joined the coaching staff of Tech in 1927, also ranks as an associate professor with the title of varsity basketball and track coach.

Ingerton Will Help

Rhodes Ingerton, another member of the department, who has been at Tech since 1926, continues as an associate professor in the department and will be freshman football coach and assistant track coach. Payne will be assistant varsity football coach and Higginbotham will be freshman basketball coach. Freeland, who has been active in football, baseball and track coaching, will not continue as a varsity coach.

Under the new plan of organization Professor Freeland, as head of the department of physical education, may assign the associate professors to the teaching of physical training classes as he sees fit but the coaching work of the different sports will be solely under the direction of the head coach in each instance. Minor sports, such as intramural athletics, freshman track and baseball, which are not provided for at present, will be cared for through action of Professor Freeland.

Council Makes Statement

Dr. W. A. Jackson, head of the department of government and a member of the Athletic Council, made the following statement in regard to the reorganization:

"These changes have been made with the full approval of the entire council. Mr. Freeland, President Paul W. Horn and the college regents. The present coaching staff will remain intact until the close of the 1930 school year and there will be no additions."

The Athletic Council, in addition to Doctor Jackson, is composed of the following: Prof. W. L. Stangel, head of the department of animal husbandry, chairman; E. L. Dohoney registrar; Ernest W. Provence, business manager and secretary to the Board of Regents; Bailey Carroll, assistant instructor in history, representing the alumni association; and Jesse A. Raley, jr., non-voting member representing the Matador club.

Announcement Follows Statement

The reorganization of the coaching staff at the Tech came on the heels of an announcement by President Paul W. Horn Thursday that the staff would remain intact and the coaches would "continue to serve in the same capacities, subject to the approval of the Athletic Council." President Horn's announcement followed his return from a recent meeting of the regents at Fort Worth.

In assuming the position of head grid mentor, Coach Higginbotham takes over the reins with a well rounded experience, both in coaching and in active sports participation. A graduate of Texas Agricultural and Mechanical college, he is rated as one of the greatest backs football teams of that institution have ever had. He has also been prominent in the ranks of professional baseball.

Payne From Simmons

Coach Payne came to Lubbock with a fine record as director of athletics at Simmons university, Abilene, and likewise an outstanding athlete of that institution. Professor Ingerton is a former Center College athlete and prior to coming here was assistant coach at Bucknell university, in Pennsylvania.

The history of Professor Freeland is well known to Texas and Southwestern sportsdom. As one of the greatest all-around athletes of Vanderbilt university, he graduated into the coaching field, filling posts at Daniel Baker college, Brownwood; Austin college, Sherman; and Southern Methodist university before coming here. With Ray Morrison, present director at S. M. U., Freeland helped lay the foundation for the recent great grid teams wearing the Pony livery and when a head coach was selected for Texas Tech in 1925 was selected for the place over a large number of applicants.

Tech Fish Cagers Show Promise

Squad of Sixty-Five Cut To 18 As Coach Grady Higginbotham Weeds Out Future Matadors

Beginning three weeks ago with 65 Freshmen basketball candidates, Coach Grady Higginbotham of Tech has developed a formidable cage aggregation from the first year material that has been working out daily under his direction. Gradually cutting the squad down as the weeding process worked out, the college mentor has now 18 court performers on the freshman roster who give the future basketball outlook for the Matadors a rosy tint.

Although no schedule has been worked out for the first year sharpshooters, several practice games have stamped the remaining squad members as versatile court performers.

In Kelsey, Hart, Hobbs, Grimes, and McColloch, Coach Higginbotham has an array of forwards who will make valuable additions to the varsity squad in 1930. Three centers have been retained on the squad by the freshman coach. These are: Jennings, Baker and Dyer. All have proven their worth at the central post. Of the nine guards left on the squad, Moore, Alingham, Wesner, Crites and Kerr are the most promising.

Other squad members are: Stockwell, Kline, Brodrick, Rhodes and Maxwell.

County In Need Of 'Fool Proof' Road Plan for Progress

Slaton View On Highway Program Is Explained; Ask For Fair Proportionment of Roads In Election

By LLOYD A. WILSON
Special Correspondent

SLATON, Jan. 26.—After the failure of two road bond issues in Lubbock county, the citizens of Slaton, as perhaps all over the county, realize there exists a very definite problem in framing some kind of road plan for the county as a whole that will meet general approval, that will be, in fact, "fool proof."

Such a plan—one that would suit the whole county and not be subject to sound criticism on the part of any group in the county—would be much more preferable to the people of Slaton than would the plan of creating separate districts, as has been proposed.

Wants Right Treatment

However, Slaton's attitude simply is that, if Lubbock and the rest of the county will not agree to what Slaton believes she is entitled to, Slaton would prefer to be left out of the next road bond plan, and let the remainder of the county go ahead and vote such roads as they want. Later, of course, it would be Slaton's purpose to vote roads in this part of the county—roads that would serve the purposes Slaton thinks they should serve, that is, the needs of the farmers in the surrounding territory.

If this alternative is chosen by Lubbock and the rest of the county, Slaton will insist that her trade area not be infringed upon—that the lines of road district number two be moved back west of the boundaries as proposed in a petition recently presented to the commissioners' court, and upon which the court deferred action. It would be wholly unjust, Slaton people contend, for the boundaries of that district to come anywhere near as close to Slaton as they would come if this petition were accepted in its present form.

Willing To Cooperate

If Lubbock and the other parts of the county are willing to allow Slaton some additional roads over what would serve Slaton if the state and federal roads only were paved, Slaton would rather stay with the remainder of the county in voting a county-wide highway program. Otherwise, Slaton would prefer to be left in her own district, but certainly have her own district left to her.

Road District Number One, which now exists and includes Slaton, is a very small district, starting at the city's northwest corporate limits, extending about nine miles north and thence east to the county line, and from its starting point at the northwest corner of the city it reaches less than one mile south, thence to the east line of the county. This omits some of Slaton's territory to which Slaton is entitled and will necessitate Slaton's determined opposition to the new road district having this territory included in it.

Argument Is Met

It has been argued by certain Lubbock citizens that Slaton is not entitled to any more roads than she would have received under the last proposed bond issue. To support this argument, it is cited that the taxable valuations in Road District Number One are just slightly over $1,570,000.00, which is only about seven per cent of the county's total valuations, whereas, it has been said, Slaton would have received about ten per cent of the roads of the county if this last issue had carried.

Slaton citizens know this line of reasoning is wrong—that it will not stand up when investigated. In the first place, Road District Number One includes far less of the area of this part of the county than Slaton has all kinds of rights to lay claims to. If this additional territory is included, the size of the road district would be doubled or trebled in size, it is argued here. And, this would increase the taxable valuations to which Slaton may lay claim, so that the percentage would be far more than seven per cent.

Lubbock Profits Most

Furthermore, Slaton believes Lubbock should be willing to help Slaton have the roads she needs. Lubbock doesn't pay all of the taxes in the county, yet she would get all the roads to be built in the county, if only the state and federal roads are to be paved. Slaton is a city of 6,000 people, and the eastern part of the county is more thickly inhabited and further developed than most of the other parts of the county, excepting the city of Lubbock. This part of the county needs and deserves more roads than they would get if only the state and federal highways of the county were to be paved.

To illustrate, in such a case as the latter, the western part of the county would have three paved highways, whereas the eastern part would have only two, unless the road north of Idalou to the Hale county line should be designated as a state highway. If that were done, it would serve Lubbock, principally, in the opinion of leaders here, certainly having very small value for Slaton, although Slaton is the second largest city of the county.

Routings Discussed

It has been suggested by some people in Lubbock that, if Slaton does not stay with the rest of the county on a highway program, Lubbock and the remainder of the county will build the roads they want to build, and that this would make "a consolidation of Highway No. 7 with Highway No. 9 from Post through Tahoka and Lubbock the solution to the problem."

This, from Slaton's viewpoint, is far less sensible than would be the re-routing of Highway No. 9 between Tahoka and Lubbock, so that it would pass through Wilson and Slaton, thence to Lubbock over No. 7. If No. 7 could be easily changed, why could not No. 9?

However, Slaton is not asking for the change of No. 9. She has never asked the State Highway Commission to change No. 9. She did ask Lubbock to help in securing such change, but this aid was declined, although a pledge of non-interference was given, if Slaton wished to work for the change.

Slaton Not "Greedy"

Slaton has been accused of being "greedy." And, Slaton thinks she is less guilty of that than are some of her accusers. Rather, Slaton believes lateral roads for the farmers are as much needed as the state highways, in fact more so, if there is any difference. Lubbock doesn't face the need of lateral roads like Slaton does, because she has enough roads without the lateral roads. But, not so with Slaton, and hence Slaton is fighting for herself and her trade area, believing Lubbock and the rest of the county will "see the light" and give the southeastern part of the county a fair deal in the next road bond campaign.

Didn't Work On First

Inconsistency on Slaton's part has been argued by some people because Slaton did not vote two to one for the bond issue on Dec. 1, whereas she opposes the plan of paving only the state and federal roads. Slaton did not vote full strength the first time, many advocates believing the issue could not be carried in the county as a whole at that time, hence they did not work intensively for the issue. Other local conditions, easily explainable, but unnecessary here, caused this result on Dec. 1. Slaton now believes that, if Lubbock county is to vote on roads again soon, the original plan, or one very similar to it, should be reverted to, and if it loses, go right back again and so on until the people are educated to the fact that such an issue, giving lateral roads, is by far the best one for the entire county, including Lubbock.

Slaton is conscious for her responsibility as a part of Lubbock county, but she also realizes her obligation to this part of the county and to future generations who will live in and near Slaton. She doesn't want to impose on any other part of the county, neither does she wish to be imposed upon. She believes a good many people of the county would do well to study the question before opposing what Slaton believes is a fair deal for herself and her neighbors.

In short, Slaton is progressive, but is not in favor of being the goat.

YOU and BASKETBALL

In the four-man offensive—man ahead of the ball — four men are used in combination in handling the ball and the fifth is in defensive territory. The man handling the ball has two men on one side of the floor in front of him and one man opposite the two men.

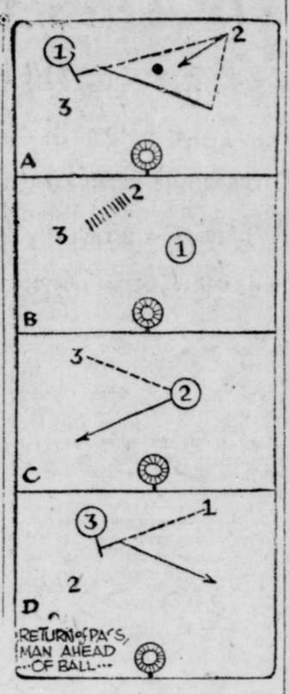

You can follow, on the accompanying diagram, the working of this four-man offense.

Note in "a" that No. 1 makes his pass to No. 2 alone on his side. No. 1 makes the pass but does not advance too far becauce he may need to cut back very quickly. No. 2 fakes to No. 4 close to the basket but passes back to No. 3, as you can see in "b".

In "b" No. 2 has completed his fake to No. 4 and passes back to No. 3. No. 3 fakes a return pass to No 2 on his way diagonally in front of No. 4.

In "c" No 3 has faked a return pass to No. 2 but has passed back to No. 1. No. 3 goes in front of No. 1 but does not cut very deeply. No 1 fakes the longer pass to No 2 near the basket and may pass back to No. 4 to continue the combination as shown in "d".

There always presents the possibility, when the play is near the basket that the man having the ball may be able to dribble in and shoot or else pass to an opening.

Choice Of Shrubs, Trees Limited

Tech Horticulturist Explains Problems That Confront The Home Gardener In The South Plains Area

Why is it that trees do not grow on the Plains?

Many years ago according to an old Indian legend there were forests of great extent to be found in this section of the country, but fire rained from heaven destroying the forests and turning the Indian's skin brown.

Of course this is merely a legend, but today there are many people who still believe that trees will not flourish on the wind-swept prairies and who would not think of planting other than a staple variety such as the black locust.

Prof. Charles Mahoney, who is head of the Department of Horticulture at Texas Technological college says that it is a great mistake for only certain species of shrubs and trees to be planted in this region and is proving by experimentation that the soil is adaptable for almost any kind of tree of greenery.

Watering Is Essential.

"The trouble that local gardeners have in getting their trees and shrubs to live throughout the winter is due to the fact that they so rarely water them," said Mr. Mahoney. Another difficulty which arises over transplanting trees is due to the fact that the high winds evaporate moisture before the roots have time to take it up. Experiments have proved that if a tree or scrub lives through the first year it will root. There are many varities of greenery received at Tech from California potted in soil and already rooted. These plants are set out in their native soil and rarely ever die. $3,000 was spent at the college the first year in landscape beautification, and since then as much as $3,000 has been spent. On Tech's 320 acres of actual campus ground there are 20,000 plants and trees.

Many Plants Die.

The first year 15 per cent of the shrubbery died, the following year 20 per cent while the last year only 2 per cent was lost to show a gradual improvement in the adaptation to the soil.

In planning the landscape of Tech the sites of the various buildings were kept in mind and along with the architectural blue prints there appears numerous dots of trees. These trees are mainly of the evergreen kind because of the bareness of the landscape after winter comes.

At either entrance to the Administration building there are sequoyahs which were sent from Califronia and there are also two of them in front of the president's home. The government is sending rare plants to the college for the purpose of experimentation. Many of these as well as the common varieties are first rooted in the nursery and later transplanted.

Near the Agricultural building and running in front of the Cafeteria and Home Economics buildings are two roads lined with arboretum and it is now planned to have a similar row extending from Broadway to Nineteenth street running along College Avenue.

No trees are planted anywhere on the campus without the definite plan of the campus being consulted and the contour of the country is taken into consideration in the planting of low shrubs and higher ones.

Growth Is Remarkable

The trees have shown a remarkable growth according to Mr. Mahoney and in ten years the campus could hardly be recognized from the standpoint of its landscape. The main difficulty lies in the expense of watering until the tinest shrubs and trees become adapted to their environment. Plans starting this year and which will probably become a tradition of the college are to the effect that there will be a senior grove and a day set aside each year for the planting of the emblem to represent the class in future years.

It is planned to have a palte by each variety of shrub with the scientific name labelled in order that visitors and students may know the kind of plants which grow on Tech's campus.

Reed Excepts To Rate Reductions

Traffic Expert Declares Coal Schedule Too High; Seek Greater Reduction On Rates

Although substantial reductions in the rates on coal for this section of the state, ranging as high as $1.20 per ton, as rendered by the examiner for the Interstate Commerce Commission in a tentative report made recently, these have been excepted to by Albert L. Reed, traffic specialist representing the coal dealers of the South Plains and the Lubbock chamber of commerce, according to information reaching officials of the chamber here Saturday.

Mr. Reed's letter, written from his office at Dallas, states: "Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, Gentlemen: While in Lubbock I advised you that the Examiner had rendered a tentative report in the coal case, which suggested substantial reduction in the rates on coal, ranging as high as $1.20 per ton and that we had filed exceptions to this report seeking to obtain reductions that range from $1.50 to $2.40 per ton.

Exhibits Are Valuable

"I desire to say at this time that the testimony and exhibits which you have in this record were used to a large extent to prove the rates charged to be unreasonable. The service and cooperation which you rendered was of substantial value in obtaining a favorable report looking to the reduction of the coal rates into the Panhandle Plains country. I wish at this time to thank you again for this service, and remain, Yours very truly, A. L. Reed."

A. B. Davis, manager of the chamber of commerce, represented that body in the case and presented the evidence and exhibits referred to by Mr. Reed as being so valuable. Mr. Reed stated, when in Lubbock the other day, that the exhibits and evidence of the Lubbock chamber of commerce were the most valuable presented in the hearing, which was held before an Interstate Commerce Commission examiner at Plainview last year. Mr. Reed represented the Coal Dealers association of this section and the decision already gained will result in the saving of hundreds of thousands of dollars to the farmers and other fuel users of this section and, if these additional reductions are obtained, they will result in still further savings.

Attention!
Poultry Raisers!

MOORE BROTHERS HARDWARE CO.
908 Main St.
Lubbock, Texas

Jan. 28, 1929.

Dear Mr. Poultry Raiser:

It was my pleasure to accompany the West Texas Chamber of Commerce Poultry Bus on its trip to California last year and to make thorough investigations of the leading poultry communities of the Western States.

I was amazed at the great profits made by these aggressive poultry raisers and gleaned all of the information possible from them pertaining to the efficiency in which they operated. As we started on the homeward journey I resolved to make our hardware store do its bit in bringing this industry to the same basis on the South Plains.

On my return I immediately placed orders with the leading hatchery supply houses of the country for the most important pieces of equipment that constitute the well organized poultry farm.

At this time we have on display in our store a full line of hatchery supplies that we have priced unusually because of our sincere interest in promulgating this industry on the South Plains. Incubators, brooders, feeders, leg bands and all equipment that is necessary for the successful poultry farmer.

It will be my pleasure to give any information that I obtained on this trip and will be glad to personally conduct you through the complete line of equipment.

Yours for more chickens and eggs,

GEORGE H. MOORE.

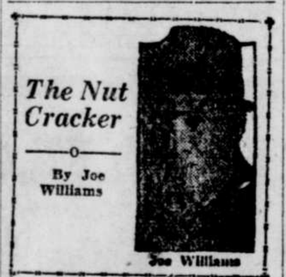

P. S.: The West Texas Chamber of Commerce will sponsor another trip to California this year and if you are interested it will be advisable to make an early reservation.

Cotton Crop To Be Near 35,000 Bales

Reports Saturday Show Gins To Be Near Through With Crop; City Continues To Lead Total Ginnings

Apparently those who predicted that Lubbock county's cotton crop would aggregate slightly more than 35,000 bales this season knew whereof they spoke.

Reports from Avalanche-Journal correspondents throughout the county yesterday showed that slightly more than 35,000 bales had been ginned and that fields contained enough cotton to last for about two more weeks of picking, on the average. Increase during the week was a little less than one thousand bales.

Near 8,000 In Lubbock

The total for the city of Lubbock mounted nearer the eight thousand mark, showing 7,900 bales. Slaton's six gins and the three in the communities of New Hope, Union and McClung reported a total of 7,397 bales.

Idalou's gins reported a total of more than 4,800 bales. Monroe, Acuff, Shallowater, Canyon, Hurlwood, Wolffarth, Woodrow, Becton and Estacado reported slight increases in the ginnings total.

Union Laborers To Form Council Here

Meeting of All Crafts To Be Held Monday Night In Carpenters' Hall; 600 Men Employed Here

In a move to form a stronger organization of the trade unions in Lubbock, all of the union workers of the city are to meet at the Carpenters' hall tomorrow night at 8:30 to organize a Trades' Council here, officials of the unions announced yesterday.

All union men of the city are invited to attend the meeting which will be presided over by a chief organizer of crafts from Kansas City. About 600 union men are employed here, quarters being held by the carpenters, printers, plumbers, electricians, plasterers, bricklayers, cooks and waiters, barbers and painters, paper-hangers and decorators.

Addresses by various members and visitors will be interspersed by a feed and smoker.

VIOLATING INSURANCE

Olive Warns of Grounding Radio On Gas Pipe

If you are grounding your radio on gas pipe lines you are not only violating fire insurance regulations, but are taking a big chance with your own property, according to Lee D. Olive, state fire insurance inspector, who has been in Lubbock the past few days.

"I find that a great many people here are grounding their radios on gas pipes," Olive declared. "This frequently causes explosions, and therefore creates a dangerous fire hazard."

Shallowater Gets Affiliation As 4 Year High School

State Department of Education Recognizes Work Of Rural School; Is First In County

The Shallowater rural school has been classified by the state department of education as an affiliated regular four-year high school, it was learned by a letter from the department received yesterday by R. L. Hooten, superintendent of the school.

Mr. Hooten reported that the school has met all of the requirements and is now ready for affiliation. This is the only rural school in Lubbock county to receive the four-year affiliated classification.

It is expected that some of the affiliation will be made during this session of the school. Mr. Hooten intimated. This affiliation has been the goal of the school for many months.

While her captain remained on the ship, the story of how the Dannedaike started to the rescue of the foundering Italian freighter Floriad, five days ago, only to be hit herself by mountainous seas and so badly damage as to be forced to send an SOS, was related tonigh by Quartermaster John Hagarty of Philadelphia.

Never Spent Any Money That Gave Better Returns

Amarillo Man Said He Was Generally Run-Down Before He Took Orgatone

"I never spent a dollar and quarter in my life that brought better returns than when I bought my first bottle of Orgatone," declared R. A. Gray, of 800 Bryan St., Amarillo, Tex., a few days ago. "For I never took anything in my life that did me near as much good and in so short a time as Orgatone has done.

"I suffered from constipation and pains in my stomach," continued Mr. Gray, "and was in such a run down condition that I really did not feel like going about my work. I would go home at night and roll from one side of the bed to another and some times I just couldn't go to sleep and would get up in the morning feeling worse than when I went to bed.

"My food didn't taste right and it didn't seem to nourish me any, and I was so constipated I had to be constantly taking medicine. Sometimes after eating I was about the most miserable feeling creature you ever saw from indigestion.

"Some few weeks ago I started in taking Orgatone, and noticed right off it was getting in its work, and in that short time I have got so much better all those awful indigestion pains in my stomach don't bother me now at all anymore. I am not constipated and I sleep like a top, so calm and comfortable and I get up in the morning feeling as fit as you please and ready to tackle anything. I eat now with a relish, and every thing tastes good and my food is giving me the strength and energy I have lost when I started to run down so. I am now on my second bottle and I feel that Orgatone is doing the right thing for me, and it will do the same for anybody else who will take it when they ought."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called secret or patent remedy but a new scientific treatment containing no alcohol or other false stimulating drugs and is sold in Lubbock exclusively by the Bowen's Drug Store under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative.—adv.

Oldest Bank President, 90, Was With Farragut At Mobile Battle

BY NEA SERVICE

HAVERSTRAW, N. Y., Jan. 26—"You can't help growing old, as the calendar reckons years but whether your mind stays young or not is a matter for you to control.

That is the opinion of Horatio N. Wood, who at 90 has just been re-elected president of the National Bank of Haverstraw.

Wood walks to his office every morning, keeps regular hours, uses all the new mechanical devices for simplifying accountancy, approves of women in business, finds no fault wth the younger generation, eats everything he likes, and believes the world is a pretty good place.

"Keep Busy," His Motto

He is one of the 60 stockholders who founded the bank, in 1875, and is the only one living today.

"Why should I retire," he asks, "when I feel just as fit as I ever did? One of the secrets of keeping young is to keep busy."

That is the only one he knows. "I've always been healthy," he said. "Never had a serious illness in my life. But I've always had regular habits, lived at a moderate pace and not worried much."

Wood is no faddist about food. He has a healthy appetite and a sweet tooth. For years he has put sugar on his ice cream. He gave up smoking when he was 70, and never has been a drinking man in spite of having served in the navy in the old days when the navy wasn't dry and a sailor was not supposed to turn down his glass when on shore.

Fought with Farragut

Wood served aboard the Hartford, Farragut's flagship, and took part in the battle of Mobile Bay. After the Civil War he served four years as a clerk in the Navy Department at Washington.

In 1927 Wood and his wife celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary. At present they live with their only daughter. They have two grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Horatio N. Wood . . . no faddist.

Public Schools

studied as a matter of what the pupil does rather than as something to be crammed into him by the teacher.

"How to Study" Taught

The next year the interest of the teachers in the teachers' meetings was centered on teaching the children how to study. During that year the teachers were asked to make a careful survey of the best means of teaching the children to use the tools of learning and to give them the proper technique in their study. It was seen that the child learns only when he studies and that the chief aim of the teacher is to teach him to study effectively. It was found, too, upon investigation, that children do not, as a rule, learn to study in school and that many of them go through life without knowing how to use the tools of learning. During that year, the teachers saw more clearly than ever before the importance of emphasizing this phase of the work and now in the Lubbock public schools one of the chief aims is to teach the pupil how to get the thought from the printed page, how to observe, and how to organize the materials he has gained from his study and observation.

Cramming Doesn't Mean Everything.

Promotion in the Lubbock public schools does not depend primarily, as is the case in the average public school system, on the pupil's having memorized or crammed into his head a certain amount of information, but on the skills, attitudes, and interests he has attained. The new course of study for the high school, which will soon be off the press, says that the teacher will base his granting of credit on work done in the following items: (1) Skill in the use of textbooks, reference books, and other tools of learning; (2) Skill in taking notes, making outlines, and in organizing the materials he has gained from his reading and study; (3) Skill in stating logically and clearly, orally and in writing, what he knows; (4) Ability to make the make the book a point of departure for creative thinking rather than something to be memorized; and (5) Attitude toward his work. It will be seen that such a viewpoint of the pupil's work is quite different from that ordinarily held. It emphasizes education as a process of building rather than as a cramming process.

Expert Opinions Received.

During the last school year, and up to the present time of the present school year, the teachers have been studying more carefully the question of teaching children how to study and how to enlist in their work. They have made as a basis of that study Foundations of Method by Professor Kilpatrick, of Columbia University, and are seeing more clearly all the time that education is not a process of cramming but a process of living. It is seen that the child learns to live by living. He studies in order that he may remove the difficulties in the way of his living and outside of that study has no place in the child's education. Effort is being made to make the life of the child in school as near like the normal life he will have to live outside of school as it is possible to make it. The aim is to make the schools a miniature world where the child learns to meet the real problems of life by actually meeting them. The pupil in the Lubbock public schools studies and he studies more than he ever did, but he studies for a different purpose. He did study to memorize the customary amount of information, but he studies now to solve a problem that is to him a vital problem. He studies in order to remove the difficulties in the way of his better living and not merely to cram into his head some useless information that he is supposed to know.

Legislature

has well-defined ideas of what needs to be done to make the system self-sustaining and efficient. He is not a member of this legislature, but has been in town ever since it convened and intends to keep in touch with the penitentiary problem. In fact, he said today that he will likely take a hand as an interested citizen, and, in so far as one on the outside can, help shape the policies to be adopted by the legislature.

Satterwhite May Talk

Satterwhite may even give his ideas before a joint session of the two houses Thursday, called to hear members of the prison board. He said that in the event members of the board confine their remarks to a perfunctory report of conditions at the penitentiary and prison farms he will not have anything to say, but in case recommendations are made he probably will "accede to request of my friends and give my views."

The way was paved for Satterwhite's appearance when the house on motion of King of Throckmorton amended the senate concurrent resolution, inviting the prison board members, to include "any others who desire to be heard."

To date, 323 bills, 16 joint resolutions and 12 concurrent resolutions have been introduced in the senate. In the house 453 house bills have been read and referred to committees and 14 joint resolutions and eight concurrent resolutions brought in. The senate has passed and sent to the house 65 bills, and the house has passed and sent to the senate 18 bills. Four senate bills, one house bill and three senate concurrent resolutions have passed both houses and were sent to the Governor for his approval. Governor Moody had signed only two bills, the measure providing for contingent expenses of the legislature and the Hornsby senate bill withdrawing from the market all University land oil and gas leases.

Senate Is Far Ahead

The senate is far ahead of the house because of the delay by Speaker W. S. Barron in appointing committees.

Virtually all important legislation touching highways, prisons, water priority rights, conservation of oil and gas, civil service, consolidation of departments and bureaus yet is in a formation state before committees with advocates and opponents not yet through presenting arguments.

For Monday night are scheduled hearings before joint house and senate committees bills proposing to fix priority rights of takers of water from the public streams, and measures proposing a financial policy in constructing and maintaining a connected, permanent and adequate system of highways, including a constitutional amendment to permit issuance of state road bonds. Tuesday night court reform bills will be discussed before joint committees of both houses on civil jurisprudence and constitutional amendments. Wednesday afternoon another hearing will be held on the bill which revamps the present gas and oil conservation laws, including proration in the West Texas oil fields.

Utilities Hearing Set

Hearings in other important legislation, including the proposal to set up a public utilities commission with authority to regulate the prices and rates of telephone and telegraph companies, traction companies, gas companies, light and water companies and all other public utilities, will be held during the week.

Legislation on prison centralization and reorganization so far has been confined to a bill by Tillotson of Sealy, providing for the sale or exchange of the system's present farm lands over a period of six years and providing for purchase of other lands essential to the plan.

Both the highway bond issue and prison centralization plans are sure to have hard sledding on the floors of both houses. There is considerable opposition to both.

Senators Parr of Benavides and Miller of Weatherford are opposed to the bond issue phase of the highway legislation and Senator McFarlane of Graham does not believe in the centralization idea as a panacea for prison difficulties. The house is an unknown quantity on both propositions, because a survey revealed that a majority of the members are open minded on both subjects, although a number are openly opposing plans.

For every inch of stature a man should weigh three pounds and 5 ounces.

Forty-eight different materials are used in the construction of a piano.

McCleary Issues Warning On Vents

City Manager Gus W. McCleary Saturday asked that a warning be broadcast to the citizens of Lubbock about proper gas connections and vents for gas hot-water heaters.

"Two small children, here the other day, were almost killed by escaping gas fumes from a hot-water heater," McCleary, said. "The children were playing in a bath room, when the fumes overcame them. Fortunately they were discovered and revived."

Mr. McCleary states that everybody should investigate as to whether or not their hot water heaters, if operated by gas, have proper vents, in accordance to city ordinances pertaining thereto.

Your tribute to the departed should remain unchanged throughout the coming generations. How often in old-time church yards the monuments of an earlier day are found crumbling and discolored with age, the precious record of their inscriptions obliterated by time and the elements.

No such fate awaits the memorial shaped in Rock of Ages. The names that are entrusted to it for perpetuation will not be forgotten. Let us give you the benefit of our experience in the selection of a design that will harmonize with your cemetery plot.

Sewers At Quitaque

QUITAQUE, Jan. 26—J. L. Goodman and son, H. L. Goodman of Dallas, have arrived in Quitaque to supervise the installation of the $35,000 sewer system to be installed in the next 60 to 90 days.

The installation of the sewer would have been made sooner but it was necessary to wait until the construction company completed installation of one 50,000-gallon standpipe, a $50,000-gallon reservoir and to lay several thousand feet of six and eight-inch main.

"Texas Wampus Cat," One Of State's Most Interesting Characters, Pays Visit To City; Claims Inventions

"They called me a damn fool thirty years ago when I invented the six-cylinder automobile, and now I think they were right," W. B. Chenoweth, 64-year-old champion fiddler of the Confederate Veterans of the South, will tell you.

Heralded variously as the "Craziest Nut in the South," "Texas Wampus Cat," "feeble minded," and the "moneyless millionaire," this self-styled "Damohoot" inventor, still spry and active for all of his more than three score years, is now touring the country with his young son, playing for small theaters and competing in old fiddlers contests. "That is all that I can do now— to play the fiddle, and March 15 I am going back home in Dallas to stay," he says.

Competed In Contest Here.

This aged "break-down" fiddler was a Lubbock visitor last week and competed in the Old Timers' Fiddle contest held at the courthouse Friday night. He and his son formerly played a long run with the Keith-Ornheum vaudeville circuit, and he claims that child labor laws now prevent the pair from drawing $350 a week for performances. He cannot play without the accompaniment of his son on the banjo.

In 1905, Mr. Chenoweth puffed into Lubbock in a White Steamer, one of the first automobiles to be made. He parked the smoking vehicle in front of the old Broadway Hotel, which still stands at the corner of Broadway and Avenue H, much to the interest and the amusement of the small population of the city at that time. He was ordered by an irate constable, to get the car off the streets of Lubbock and keep it off. It seems that the car was scaring all of the horses and that it was impossible to drive a team by the hotel.

Designs 6-Cylinder Car

In 1909 Mr. Chenoweth designed a six-cylinder gasoline automobile. A picture of the car which he still prizes among his possessions shows the vehicle to be similar in looks to a wagon with many parts actually interchangeable. It was his idea that the car could be made to run twenty-five miles an hour on good roads, of which there were few at that time. He conferred with the leading gas-engine manufacturers at that time. His idea was branded as absurd and he was called crazy. One of the letters—and he has saved them all—is quoted as saying, "You must have been kicked on the head by a mule when you were a boy which left you under the hallucination or delusion that ice could be frozen on a red hot stove by thinking of driving a self-propelled vehicle over a public road 25 miles an hour." The company which wrote this letter, The National Engineering Laboratory, Philadelphia, still in existence, recently paid him $50 for it.

Has Seventeen Patents

In spite of all of the unfavorable advice he went ahead with his invention. "I have seventeen patents that are now working in the United States and I have never made a dime from them," he says. The first automobile license sold in Texas was issued to Mr. Chenoweth in Scurry county, July 12, 1907, five days after the license law was passed. It cost him fifty cents.

With the wagon-wheeled car of his own invention, Chenoweth started a bus line in Scurry county. His bus activities came to an untimely end, however, when a mass meeting of the citiens in a rural school house ordered him out of the county.

Seventeen radio stations have broadcast the tunes from Mr. Chenoweth's fiddle. He and his five children are known as the "Cornfield Symphony Orchestra," and have appeared in a number of public appearances. The act of Mr. Chenoweth and his son is called "Texas Wampus Cat and His Kitten." They have appeared in twenty-seven states during the past three years, and he makes phonograph records for two recording companies.

Flew Airplane

In 1908 Mr. Chenoweth claims to have made the first airplane flight of as much as twenty-four miles in a heavier than air machine. He flew the plane, his own invention and make, out of Chicago, but was arrested for being crazy and riding over the city without a permit, he states. Up until that time the longest flight had been four and one-half miles, made by the famous Wright Brothers. Broke at the time he was assessed the fine, it was necessary for a Shreveport banker to wire the money.

Until his appearance here Friday night, Mr. Chenoweth and his boy had never been defeated in a fiddling contest, and they have competed in the outstanding contests for a number of years. They were disqualified, however, in the Henry Ford contest of several years ago on the grounds of professionalism.

New Fire Truck

FLOYDADA, Jan. 26 — Floydada received its new fire truck. It is a quadruple pumper, chemical, hose truck hook and ladder. It cost $10,500.

Hays, fire marshal; James M. Hays, secretary-treasurer; C. M. captain No. 1; Bob Lee, captain No. 2; Lois Crump captain No. 3. Other members of the department are H. L. Bullish Buying Is Continued In Wall Street Activities

Industrial and Trade Reviews and Gold Prospects Throw Saturday Into Busy Sessions

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

NEW YORK, Jan. 26. (AP)—Favorable weekly trade and industrial reviews and the prospects of further gold takings in London, kept bullish enthusiasm aglow through heavy week end profit taking in today's short session of the stock market.

Some two dozen issues were bid up to new high levels with gains running to maximum of 13 points in American Telephone. Utilities led the advance, the Associated ress index of 20 reaching a new high level, while the industrials and rails receded slightly. The bulk of the list closed slightly lower.

Aside from the weekly reviews, which reported that the seasonal expansion of industrial activity was going forward at a thoroughly satisfactory pace, there was little in the day's news to influence speculative sentiment. Sterling cables dropped to a new low for the movement and substantial takings of gold for New York are expected in London Monday when a ne wshipment of Transvaal gold will be offered in the open market.

A 6 per cent call money rate over the week end was reassuring although tighter money is looked for with the month end requirements. New York banks however, have reduced their borrowings at the reserve bank to a point not far in excess of a year ago and are expected to prevent a severe flurry in the money market.

American Telephone was seized upon as a market leader and rushed up 13 points to a record price at 220, an unusual spurt for this sedate issue.

Federal Mining and Smelting jumped 10 points to a record price at 270 and American Smelting climbed 3 points to a new peak. Green Cananea, however, lost 3 points. In the motors, Nash sold down about 2 points on profit-taking while Mack Truck jumped 2 to a new peak and Studebaker touched a new high on a small gain.

Columbian Carbon, Air Reduction, Coty, and Ligget and Myers jumped 3 to 5 points to record prices and Wesson Oil pushed up nearly 10. Radio jumped about 3 points, Indian Refining was a strong feature of the sluggish oils, the certificates jumping more than 8 points to a new peak. Chicago Great Western preferred and Pere Marquette were strong points in the rails, mounting about 3 and 6 points to new tops.

International Nickle was sold heavily, receding 2 points and U. S. Steel, after making a moderate advance, reacted and closed fractionally lower.

Foreign exchanges weer heavy, Sterling Cables dropping to a new low for the movement at $4.87 7-8 and the Canadian dollar again sagging.

New Orleans Has Steady Situation

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 26. (AP) — Although trading was only moderate prices in today's short session of the cotton market showed a slightly upward trend. The steadiness was attributed to a good trade demand with shorts covering and March contracts after selling down to 19.15 rallied to 19.25 and closed one point under the latter figure for a net gain of 4 points. The general market closed steady at net advances of 4 to 6 points.

Although Liverpool cables were relatively easier the market opened steady. iFrst trades were unchanged to 1 point up. An initial advance in New York probably was responsible for the early firmness here and soon after the opening call March sold at 19.17, May 19.21 and July 19.18 or 1 to 2 points net up.

At these levels the market encountered some ring selling and before the offerings were absorbed March sold down to 19.12, May 19.15 and July 19.11 or 5 to 7 points below yesterday's close.

Towards the close a good trade demand developed and this coupled with covering by shorts for over the week-end soon carried active positions to new highs for the session. March sold up to 19.23, May 19.25, and July 19.22 or 10 or 11 points above the lows. Final prices were 1 to 2 points under the top.

Receipts were 19,827; for year 7,798,432; last year 6,643,576. Exports 4,836; for year 5,233,069; last year 4,385,648. Stocks 2,320,728; last year 2407,222. Stock on shipboard 147,219; last year 132,067. Spot sales 14,281; last year 14,216.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 26. (AP)—Grain values ran up against a stone wall of profit-taking sales today. Consequent recoils from fresh upturns in price went to well below yesterday's finish. Nevertheless, increased general inclination was shown to give attention to reports showing likehood of serious damage to domestic winter wheat. Incidentally, corn today established a new all-around high price record for the season.

Closing quotations on wheat were weak, 1c to 1 1-2c net lower, with corn 1c to 1 1-2 to 1 5-8c down, oats 1-4 to 3-8c off, and provisions varying from 7c decline to a rise of 2c.

Livestock Trade In Fort Worth Is Clean-Up Affair

FORT WORTH, Jan. 26. (AP)—Except for cows, trading in livestock here Saturday was a cleanup affair with no indication on the part of buyers to pay different values from those in effect on Friday.

The early receipts included four cars of good beef cows that sold at 8.50 and averaged a little over a thousand pounds. A few odd head sold at 5.25 and up. These prices about in line with recent sales of similar cows.

About half a load of bulls sold at 8.50 and odd head clearing at 6.50 and up. Bulls had little trouble getting tickets for the scales at steady prices.

A few yearlings sold at 6.60 and 10.25—The latter price for fair fed yearlings that averaged 715 pounds.

The supply of calves light and prices ranged from 6.00 for the cull calves up to 10.00 for a load of calves in the southern division

The day's receipts included very few cattle suitable for stocker buyers. Not enough on hand to test the market.

The light supply of hogs sold at steady values as compared to yesterday's trading. Rail top 9.25; truck top 8.50. Bulk 175-250 pound butchers sold at 8.25 to 9.25; packing sows at 7.50 to 8.00.

No sheep on hand to test the market.

Erratic Trading In Hogs Features Kansas City Sales

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 26. (AP)—(U. S. D. A.)—The week's trade in hogs was about the most erratic that has been experienced since wartimes. Sharply higher prices prevailed during the early part of the week with several markets reporting $10.00 and above on choice grades, and the extreme top reaching $10.30 at St. Louis. On later days a decidedly weaker undertone was in evidence and most of the advance was erased and final prices were generally 10 to 25c over a week ago. The late top rested at $9.60 at St. Louis. Total arrivals were 670,500 against 793,728 last week and 784,329 a year ago.

Fat lambs prices held on a strong basis throughout the week and some late trades at Chicago were quoted 10 to 15c higher than a week ago. On Friday some choice, closely sorted lambs brought $17.45 for the week's top. Mature classes were relatively scarce and closing levels are strong to 25c higher. Aggregate receipts were 260,850 as compared with 299,198 last week and 248,856 the same week a year ago.

A weaker undertone featured the fed steer and yearling market early in the week and unevenly lower prices were effected. Toward the close lighter receipts stimulated the market and a good share of the loss was recovered. Desirable grades show only slight declines while some of the in-between grades are 25 to 50c lower. Most classes of she stock closed at weak to 50c lower rates with some heifer classes 50c to $1.00 off. Stocker steers held mostly steady for the week but feeders moved slowly and are lower in sympathy with killing classes. Offerings for the week totalled 165,750 against 225,074 last week and 197,140 a year ago.

Poll Tax Paying On Increase Here

Poll tax payments have been increasing at a marked pace during the past week, according to A. J. Clark, county tax collector, and it begins to look as if the county will have a creditable showing in total poll tax receipts issued this year, as compared to last, when January 31 rolls around.

Reason for the increase lately is evidently traceable to the agitation for another good roads bond issue election. While the number of poll tax payments was not available as to an exactitude, either of Lubbock's or of Slaton's, from the rush that clerks have experienced the past week, there seems to be a race betwen th two cities.

Registrations of automobiles show that about 6,500 passenger cars, 711 trucks and 1,786 automobile transfers have been issued by the county tax collector's offices since January 1.

GOES TO PRESCOTT

George Eubank, city peace officer, left yesterday afternoon for Prescott, Arizona, where he is wanted to identify a prisoner being held there by officers. The prisoner is said to be J. H. Barber, who was tried in Lubbock on a statutory charge several months ago.

GETS HIS 238th COUPLE

"Uncle Billy" Clark, Lubbock's marrying justice of the peace, reported having performed his 238th wedding ceremony during his career as a justice, yesterday The couple to stand before him and swear were L. V. Gipson and Mrs. Collie Nelson.

Continuation Of Cotton Declines Halted By Rally

NEW YORK, Jan. 26. (AP)—Early declines under a continuation of yesterday's selling movement in the cotton market were checked up by the development of an increased trade demand as prices approached the 19 3-4 cents level for spring months. Rallies followed which carried the price of May up from 19.76 to 19.87. That delivery closed at 19.86. The general market closed steady at net advances of 1 to 4 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 3 points to a decline of 6 points. There were overnight selling orders in evidence and prices soon yielded with March selling off to 19.76 and July to 19.39 in the early trading. In addition to scattering liquidation through commission houses, there appeared to be some southern and local selling. The latter was promoted by relatively easy Liverpool cables and continued talk of a less active spot demand following the completion of January commitments.

Some trade buying made its appearance at the lower prices, which was thought to include moderate demand from European sources. After the early offerings had been absorbed the market turned steadier on covering for over the week end. March recovered to about the opening figures. July sold up to 19.49 and closing prices were at practically the best point of the day.

Week end reviews of the cotton goods situation indicating some improvement in business despite rather irregular conditions made rather a favorable impression on sentiment and may have contributed to the rally late in the morning. Private cables said that a decline under liquidation had been checked by trade calling and continental buying in Liverpool and that there was a fair cloth demand from China, although yarns remained quiet in Manchester.

Cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 155,000 bales against 116,000 last year.

Oil Notes

TULSA, Okla., Jan. 26. (AP)—On the rebound again the Greater Seminole oil field, after registering a 10,579 barrel loss yesterday, increased 2,052 barrels in the last 24 hours, gauging 287,287 barrels at 7 a. m. today. Maud, Little River pool, leading with a gain of 1,672 barrels after declining 2,635 barrels yesterday. Bowlegs was up 1,265 barrels after dropping 2,229 in the previous 48 hours.

A drop of 3,363 barrels in the 24 hours ending at 7 a. m. today was reported in the production gauge of the Saint Louis pool. It gauged 125,704 barrels from 301 wells. Yesterday this pool gained 674 barrels over the previous day's yield.

DALLAS, Jan. 26 (AP)—The Shell Petroleum Corporation's Hendricks No. 11-A in the southwest one-fourth of section 29, block B-5, Winkler county, Texas, struck the top of the pay at 2,700 feet and its initial flow was 1,000 barrels of oil an hour. The well was drilled to a total depth of 2,934 feet and no water was reported.

Another large producer was completed in the Hendricks field of Winkler county when the Southern Crude Oil Purchasing Company's Hendricks T-88 H-5 located in the southwest one-fourth of section 28, block B-5 came in with an initial flow of 10,000 barrels of oil per day with no water reported. The well topped the pay at 2,730 feet and was drilled to a total depth of 2,968 feet.

Daily average production of the Salt Flat or Bruner field of Caldwell county on January 22 reached a new high of 15,402 barrels per day from 62 producing wells, records of the Sun Oil Company show. At present, there are approximately 50 drilling wells, rigs and locations in the field. The Bruner Field is the new Edwards lime formation located about one to five miles due north of Luling, Texas.

The Sun Oil Company has set and cemented casing at 953 feet in their Witt No. 1 in the Clay Creek field in Washington county, Texas, and it is showing for a good producer. The well is located on an interior salt dome discovered and blocked by the Sun Oil Company during 1928.

Remark Air Sign

CLARENDON, Jan. 26—Air markings for fliers are being overhauled this week on top of one of the most easily seen buildings in the city from the air. This building has always been marked with the name of the town since air markings were demanded, but is being enlarged and improved to meet new regulations. A certificate of acceptance has been received from the Guggenheim Foundation.

Gilbert Swan

In New York

By Swan

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—They are beginning to call Manhattan "the sandwich isle."

Each day the bite and nibble grows mightier than the meal. The law of grab, bite and run prevails and each week the sandwich industry becomes a more formidable one. Not only are the drug stores growing by leaps and bounds on their soda fountain trade, but the various agencies of distribution are making it possible to bring the humble "ham on rye" to the desks of the mighty.

In the Wall Street section, one concern now has a comely assortment of young women who make a noon-time canvass of the skyscraper offices, taking the sandwich and coffee orders and attending to their eventual distribution.

Since the stock market began to prance so wildly about, the "Exchange" neighborhood has noted the appearance of basket peddlers. Cheap candy is a favorite confection among a great many men who ought to know better. It is no novelty to see frock-coated gents, whose investments in an Exchange seat involves more than half a million dollars, munching upon a marshmallow-filled bar, the par value of which is a nickel or a dime.

The fact is that the more money that is being made on the "market," the greater is the fall off in trade at cafes of the better class. The market dealers have no time to go out for food. They either go without, or depend on the sandwich concessionaries.

Meanwhile great fortunes are being made by a few well organized sandwich factories. These turn out millions of slices of bread, wrapped and ready for delivery. Sandwich stuffing has become a new and well paid calling.

It is a piecework job and many workers have scores running into the thousands.

Meanwhile a few epicures attempt to keep the gastronomic traditions alive. A few cafe Columbuses fare forth and eat here and there, spreading the news about to the if-any "cognoscenti."

One of the leaders of this group is none other than George Jean Nathan, who after a year of experimenting issued the challenge that the food to be found in Manhattan was as good, or better, than the widely heralded food of Europe. He declared that it was just a matter of knowing where to go. Whereupon he issued a list of about one hundred places where certain dishes are featured.

Many of these are small places with a small following, who jealously hide their secret from the rest of the world lest it grow popular and go into the decline that so often results from over popularity. Where a small and jealous group is thus entrenched, the arrival of the "cognoscenti" is resented.

For some time Monetta's was the favorite resort of the Park Row newspaper celebrities. But now, as they say, it has "fallen to the mob." Nathan was seen there a few weeks ago and the "regulars" are finding their exclusiveness invaded.

Cheffard's was another little place, featuring French cooking, which for a long time was frequented by a small group of gastronomic experts. Then, one day, a New York cartoonist "discovered" it, and drew a picture about it for his paper. Within a few weeks this cartoon had been reprinted on the menu cover and all the "trailers" were arriving to look it over.

There are hundreds such places tucked away in New York—Thousands for that matter—and here the foods of the world may be found.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26 (AP)—Social New York turned its back on modern America to live for ten hours amid the scenes of ceremony and grandeur that marked eighteenth century France when Napoleon ruled the land.

Queens and court ladies, soldiers and peasants, reminiscent of the days of old France, moved through the Hotel Astor at the Beaux Arts ball, the highlight of a season's gaiety.

For months New York had been preparing its costumes for this affair.

Pioneers In Extension Work Take Lead In Twenty-Fifth Anniversary

By NEA Service

HOUSTON, Jan. 25.—Two men who have played an important part in the development of the southwest's agriculture will attend the twenty-fifth birthday celebration of the founding of agricultural extension work which will be held here February 5 to 7.

On those days agricultural leaders of the nation will meet to revere the memory of Dr. Seaman A. Knapp, who 25 years ago put into operation the present demonstration system of teaching improved farm practices. This idea has grown until today 2,300 county agents and 900 home demonstration agents are employed in the work under the direction of the United States Department of Agriculture and the state agricultural colleges.

The two men who will have an unusual interest in the proceedings are Dr. Bradford Knapp and W. D. Bentley.

Revere Knapp Memory

Bradford Knapp is a son of the man whose memory the Houston conference will revere. He was successively with the United States Department of Agriculture, dean of the school of agriculture at the University of Arkansas, president of the Oklahoma A. and M. College and is now president of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn.

Another son of Dr. Seaman Knapp, Herman, is also closely associated with the work the father started. He is business manager and has been acting president of Iowa State College at Ames.

Bentley, now assistant director of the extension division at the Oklahoma A. and M. college, is rounding out 25 years of service to agriculture He was one of the first special agents—now called county agents—sent out by Dr. Knapp to establish demonstrations in the southwest.

Many years ago he came to Oklahoma to set up the extension division and, except for a brief time when he was in Washington with the Department of Agriculture, he has been actively engaged in the work in this state.

Terrell Is Scene

The first demonstration, which has grown into an organization calling for the active co-operation of more than a million farmers in every state in the union, was designed to teach better methods of protecting the cotton crop against the boll weevil. It took place on the Walter C. Porter farm near Terrell, Texas, 25 years ago.

A few months after its inception, the United States Department of Agriculture took it over and, aided by funds from the General Education Board of New York City, the farm demonstration plan extended over the entire south. In 1914 it became national in scope with the passage by Congress of the Smith-Lever act.

To Aiken county, South Carolina, goes the distinction of the birthplace of home demonstration agent work for it was there in 1910 that a school teacher, Miss Marie Cromer, inspired by the work of Dr. Knapp, organized the first girls' tomato club. Canning clubs soon became the rage and by 1912 nearly every southern state had home demonstration agents whose work has since developed into a comprehensive program of home making covering the entire nation.

These two men will lead the festivities at the anniversary celebration of farm extension work at Houston, Texas. At top is Dr. Bradford Knapp, son of Dr. Seaman A. Knapp, founder of farm extension 25 years ago. Beneath is W. D. Bentley, one of the first fafm agents.

WHITEY PLANS ALIBI

Alleged Bandit Busies Himself with Trial Plans

COLORADO SPRINGS, Jan. 26. (AP)—"Whitey" Walker sat in jail here today and busied himself with plans to perfect what he termed an "air tight alibi" in the Lamar bank robbery.

Every precaution was being taken to guard against any attempt to deliver Walker. A machine gun has been bounted and Floyd Jarrett, Oklahoma gunman, held as another suspect in the Lamar robbery, has been removed to the state penitentiary at Canon City fore safe keeping. Police here feared that the presence of two suspects in the same prison might sour their friends to aid them to escape.

Slapped a Cop

Never talk back to a traffic cop; just give him a good slap. That seems to have been the philosophy of Miss May Abell, of Washington, who was fined $10 for slapping a capital policeman on the ear when he attempted to stop Miss Abell from driving through fire lines.

Baby Born After Mother Is Slain

Born shortly after his mother died of bullet wounds inflicted by her crazed father-in-law, the infant son, above, of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Giannamore of Steubenville, O., is reported to be "doing nicely." Dr. C. W. Sunseri, left, and Dr. V. B. Diloreto, right, performed the remarkable operation.

TO MAINTAIN ORDER

Senate Votes $25,000 Fund For Inauguration

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—(AP)—The senate adopted a joint resolution today authorizing an appropriation of $25,000 to maintain order during the inauguration of President-Elect Hoover, but not without objection for the democratic side. Senator Blease, democrat, South Carolina, said "it is a reflection on the American people that we have to hire policemen to enforce order," after the "magnificent vote" given Hoover.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the minority leader, added that "we have to have more policemen to take care of the republicans."

Two hundred policemen are to be brought from Baltimore.

SHUN SECRETARY

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 26. (AP)—Showing interest in the part played by Mrs. O. O. Hammonds in the administration of Henry S. Johnston, suspended governor, whom she has served as confidential secretary. The house of representatives investigating committee today nevertheless, evinced no eagerness to interview her personally.

TO ATTEND HEARING

Texas Land and Royalty Owners Go To Austin

MIDLAND, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Texas land and royalty owners and independent operators will go to Austin Wednesday to protest sections of House bill No 388, which leaders in the movement charge will curtail development and "give monopolistic control of oil lands in the state."

E. G. Bedford, Midland, president of the Texas division of the Mid-continent Royalty Owners' association, will lead the delegation. Operators from Pecos, Odessa, Midland, Big Spring, Colorado, Sweetwater, Abilene, Coleman, San Angelo, Brownwood and other cities have notified Bedford they would attend.

New City Hall Ready

FLOYDADA, Jan. 26.—The new city hall, fire station and jail, begun early last fall, has been completed and accepted by the city council.

Total cost of the building was $12,800. Furnishings and fixtures cost approximately $2,000.

Many of the newest buildings in London obtain their water supplies from artesian wells which go down upwards of 400 feet to the chalk bed below the city.

There are more than 450 varieties of mistletoe, including some with colored berries.

Plans for Snyder Produce Plant To Be Complete Soon

Good Market Awaits Grower of Poultry, Avers Official of Western Produce Company

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SNYDER, Jan. 26.—Plans for the new $60,000 cream and poultry plant for Snyder will be announced very soon, according to J. P. White, vice president of the Western Produce company of Abilene who was a Snyder visitor today.

Commenting on poultry conditions in general, Mr. White stated "there are good times ahead in 1929 for the farmer who will make poultry raising a serious part of the year's work." Continuing, Mr. White said: "According to official reports from the U. S. government and opinions of poultry experts in all parts of the country, conditions for poultry were never better, and a good market awaits the producer.

"This is not mere guess work," said Mr. White, "for here are the reasons:

1. "Government reports show a scarcity of hens and a short crop of pullets on farms throughout the country. Chicago Produce News says 'about 30,000,000 less than a year ago.'
2. "This means fewer eggs laid and satisfactory egg prices.
3. "Reports indicate bumper crops of oats and corn. Poultry feed prices are declining as a result of these big crops.
4. "The serious shortage at present time of beef cattle, swine and sheep is going to make even greater demand for poultry meat and eggs.
5. "Prices of meat, especially beef are being forced to new high levels which may exceed the wartime peak.
6. "If poultry meat is cheaper than beef, people are going to eat more chickens.
7. "Thousands of poultry farmers everywhere are now eager to replenish their flocks and increase egg production.
8. "Leading hatcherymen are uniting under a slogan of 'hatchery chicks for greater profits' to assist in raising the poultry standard of farm flocks by pledging better chicks and fair dealing.
9. "Greater egg production from flocks means increased profits per pound of feed.

"With a ready market promised, lower feed prices in sight, and a large demand predicted, the farmer prepared to satisfy the demand, stands in a position to reap a considerable profit from farm poultry flocks," concluded Mr. White.

County Makes Progress

Remarkable progress is being made in Scurry county along poultry lines with the announcement of the coming here of Charles Weeks famous promoter of the One-Acre Poultry farms at Owensmouth and Palo Alto, Cal., and his latest at Wichita Falls The local agriculture committee of the Scurry County Chamber of Commerce hope to establish 2 1-2 and 5 acre tracts. Giles Garner, chairman of the committee has commenced the erection of four poultry houses, 30 by 120 to house 6,000 laying hens. 1,500 hens to the house. He is purchasing White Leghorns exclusively. F. B. Russell who for eight years has topped every show with his Barred Rocks has already established a chicken ranch a mile from the city limits and will go into big scale production.

Snyder with a distributing market made possible through the Snyder Produce company is looking forward to a most successful year with poultry, along with the other dairying objectives. More than 30,000 acres have already been terraced this year, according to County Agent Logan and many more thousands will be completed before the season is over. While Scurry county has been working on a five year diversification program, this year's poor cotton crop has made the one-crop man realize that the cow, sow and hen spell success for him with a bank roll and more attractive home and community life.

THE GROUP STUDY PLAN

A new method of teaching, the group study plan, is invading the schools of this city; therefore it is necessary that school patrons be told of this system.

The group study plan means the division of a class into a number of groups with a leader for each section.

This new plan was first introduced to me last year in sociology class but it has spread to all my classes this year.

From these experiences I believe that the new method of teaching is better than the old for the following reasons: First, more work can be done by the class, as each group can study, investigate and report on a different phase of a problem. These varied reports give color and life to recitations. Second, this allowed to act as a group leader causes a student to really work since he is responsible for the work of all other members of his group. Third, the teacher is unable to give special attention to every student, but the group leader, having fewer to direct, is able to help each one individually. Fourth, the group study plan saves the teacher from talking so much and so loudly; consequently this acuses him to be more cheerful and helpful.

W. R.Fickas, jr.

All students in both the senior and junior high schools are busy writing themes on the subject "Why Lubbock Needs a New High School." Two prizes, one of five dollars and another of ten dollars, are offered by a local business man for the best papers.

PIERCE HEADS SENIORS

At the end of the first half of this school year the election of a new senior president became necessary. Accordingly C. C. Cox called a meeting of the vice presidents' council and following the tactics of the previous election they nominated a group of five from a large group of possibilities.

Those who were nominated by this body were George Pierce, Mary Beth Sheeley, Eulala Henderson, Frank Maddox, and T. Q. Scott. These names were submitted to the senior class in their general meeting of Tuesday, January 22.

When the smoke of battle had cleared away it was found that "Little George" Pierce had succeeded to the throne so recently held by Joe Powers. George held a substantial lead over his opponents in receiving more than half the total votes cast.

That Airport!

History Prompts Lubbock To Secure Good Field

By CHARLES A. GUY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

It is not a strange thing that there are a few souls who are conscientiously opposed to airports and air travel. There are probably some of these in Lubbock but thus far they haven't come out in the open. It is for the benefit of these conscientious objectors—and for those who just won't believe that aviation is anything more than a bunch of money-business—that this article, the second of a series, is being printed.

When Robert Fulton perfected the first crude steamboat people laughed at him. His ship was dubbed "Fulton's Folly" and a goodly crowd of derisive citizens gathered on the banks of the Hudson when he made his first public trip.

"The Folly Worked"

But "Fulton's Folly" revolutionized sea travel, regardless of the hooters.

The same thing can be said of the railroad, the wireless, electricity, and other great innovations which have changed a sleepy world into one of immediate action. In their respective infancies there were "doubting Thomases" galore so there is no reason for one's lifting an eyebrow at those who take a similar stand toward air travel. People thought the Wright brothers were bordering on feeble mindedness 25 years ago when they made their first sucessful flight at Kitty Hawk. For a long interval thereafter no particular importance, as far as the average citizen was concerned, was attached to that flight. It was just a "stunt"—a foolhardy trick—in the minds of most people.

Then Came A New Era

Then came the world war and a decided advance for aviation. The years which have followed the war—particularly those of more recent date—have seen aviation grom from a rather gangling child to a potential giant of the commercial transport world. With that growth has come a decided need for airports.

Municipally owned and operated airports have been found to be the most efficient and the most sucessful. For that reason nearly all of the active ports in the country are owned by the cities to which they are adjacent and for that reason it is believed that Lubbock's air transport problems can best be solved by the purchase and installation of a municipally owned airport.

Whether or not you, as an individual, are opposed to the installation of a municipal airport doesn't mean that Lubbock does not need such an innovation or that it will not be used.

Business Will Come

There is little or no air business here now, that is true. But neither was there any railroad business in Lubbock until 1910 when the Panhandle and Santa Fe began its first operations. Give Lubbock the necessary conveniences to offer and the air business will come. If history of other cities repeats itself here it will come a good deal faster than most of us think.

It is no secret that the city commission, aided by the directorate and a special committee of the Board of City Development, is planning for an election for the issuance of bonds with which to purchase and equip an airport. Further than that, it is no secret that Lubbock, usually the leader, is miles behind most cities of its size in this matter.

Whether you personally favor air travel and transportation should have no bearing upon your action concerning a municipal airport for Lubbock. There will be plenty to need it—plenty to use it.

Lubbock Must Act

A city of 20,000 without an airport nowadays is like a city of 5,000 without a railway connection. It is a situation which should not be tolerated. If the citizenship as a whole studies the problem it will not be tolerated here much longer.

This much you may count on—aviation is here and here to stay. Its field is not even spotted, its surface is yet unscratched. For these reasons it behooves us to look well to our laurels and at the same time to move to catch up with the world in this matter of airport facilities.

PROBE KIDNAPING

Young, American Missionary Missing In China

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26 (AP)—American Minister MacMurray advised the state department today he had instructed Counsellor Perkins of the legation at Nanking, to take up with Foreign Minister Wang the kidnaping of the Rev. The consul general at Hankow reported he was making direct representations to the local authorities at Nanchang.

CRUDE PRICE REDUCED

FINDLAY, Ohio., Jan. 26 (AP)—Reductions ranging from five to fifteen cents a barrel in the price of crude oil in central west and Wyoming fields, were announced today by the Ohio Oil company.

New Campaign To Boost City's Paved Area To Thirteen Miles

First Project In 1920 Grows Into City-Wide Effort

Work Just Begun To Raise Total Pavement From 163 To 182 Blocks; 20 Blocks Laid Nine Years Ago

There are probably more blocks of pavement in the city of Lubbock, this year of 1929, than there were blocks of any sort on all the streets of Lubbock in the year 1920.

Those citizens who were counted among the 4.051 residents here, back in 1920, well remember the beginning then of the first paving program ever attempted by the city of Lubbock. That program included the total of 20 city blocks. At the time, such an effort was considered exceedingly pretentious. And it was. Perhaps it was from the resultant publicity of Lubbock's 20-block paving program that started some things rolling in this direction—to think that a town of 4,051 citizens would have the progressiveness to pave 20 blocks of its streets!

More Than 12 Miles Paved.

Today, Lubbock possesses $1,082,153.63 worth of paved streets, and work is progressing on the construction of another $100,000 worth of paved streets and alleys to be completed within the next three months.

There are 163 city blocks now paved. That's more than 12 miles. When the present pavement is finished, we will have more than 13 miles, and a total of 182 blocks of city streets paved.

Water meters say Lubbock's present population is more than 22,000. Comparing the 1920 population with that of today, and looking back over the past nine years of progress and expansion in street improvements, a healthy condition is seen.

Record Is Very Good.

Sometimes we fail to realise it, but there are very few towns or cities in the entire United States, particularly in an agricultural section, boasting a record for the past nine years—or any nine years—that Lubbock can speak about with just pride.

Those first 20 blocks paved included the following:

Five blocks on Broadway, from Avenue F to Avenue K. Six blocks on Main, from Avenue E to K. Avenue J, from Main to Broadway. Texas avenue, from Ninth to Fourteenth streets. Avenue H, from Tenth to Main. Avenue H, from Broadway to Thirteenth. Avenue G, from Broadway to Main.

1925 Program Large.

No further paving was done until 1924 and 1925, when the following blocks were paved:

Main, from Avenue K to College. Broadway, from K to College. Broadway, from F to D. Thirteenth, from G to T. Sixteenth, from H to Q. Avenue Q, from Sixth to Nineteenth. Avenue M, from Seventh to Nineteenth. Avenue K, from Tenth to Thirteenth. Avenue J, from Tenth to Main. Avenue J, from Mroadway to Thirteenth. Avenue H, from Thirteenth to Nineteenth. Avenue G, from Thirteenth to Broadway. Avenue N, from Broadway to Thirteenth. Ninth, from M to K. Avenue X, from Broadway to Main. Texas, from Ninth to Sixth.

The last paving program, before the present one was started, was in 1927 and 1928, as listed following:

Audit Of Plains Fair Books Will Offer Statement

Report Of Accountants To Be Ready Soon; Directors Will Not Assemble Prior To April 1st

Auditors are preparing a report at the present time which sets forth the financial condition of the Panhandle-South Plains Fair Exposition, organization which conducts the annual fair here.

The report will probably be available next wek.

Tentative plans for the 1929 exposition are already being shaped by officials of the fair but there will be nothing pertaining to the exposition available for public announcement until later in the spring.

To Name New Directors

Three new directors are to be elected to the board which governs the fair at the annual meeting in March.

Directors will assemble, probably on April 1, to choose new officers. The new board will have complete charge of this year's exposition and may easily face a probation through "unbecoming" conduct. It is contrary to rules of the institution for a non-resident student to attend public dances without special permission, but few of the students are attending, Mrs. Doak said, although she is making no attempt to police the dance halls to determine the attendance.

Her position is primarily advisory and it is her aim to assist every girl in orientation at college and in preparation to face life. "After all, the students here are men and women and they must be treated as adults in order that they may be better fitted for life out of school," she explained.

Event Is Likely To Become Great Boon To Farmers

Eighteen Faculty Members Will Be Aided By Agents From Nearby Counties In Opening Study Session

Farmers, farm wives and Four-H club members from all parts of the South Plains area are expected to gather at the Tech on Tuesday of this week for a two-day short course, the first event of an annual function destined, observers believe, to some day rank as one of the banner agricultural courses in the Southwest.

The annual summer short course held at A. and M. college attracts nearly 5,000 farmers, farm wives and Four-H club members and it has become one of the outstanding agricultural educational events in the entire country. Tech proposes, in time, to put her short course on a par with that at the older institution.

As explained by officials of the agricultural department at the Tech, sponsors of the course: "The college wishes to go one step further than to be a place where high school students go for further instruction. As an institution devoted to the instruction of resident students it has equipment and forces on its campus which can be used for several types of service.

Variety of Topics

The program has been planned so as to take up nearly every topic of interest to the farmer or farm woman. Experts will discuss the various subjects of interest and time for discusion will be alloted after each lecture. Lubbock county agricultural and home demonstration agents, Texas Farm Bureau officials, demonstration agents from surrounding counties, railroad agricultural agents will assist the eighteen Tech faculty members in the lectures.

Sessions of the short course will be held at the Tech stock judging pavilion and at the home economics room. Lectures for the farmers will be given at the former building and for women at the latter place.

A luncheon will be given all visitors Tuesday noon by the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce.

Theoretical instruction in the form of lectures will be backed by practical demonstrations on the college properties.

Every farmer, farm woman, and Four-H club member in the South Plains is invited to the affair.

Tech Dean Of Women Upholds Youth; Discipline At College Improving With Years, She Finds

"Youth of today has more genuine decency than he is credited with having when he blunders it may be only a reflection of his home and the community in which he has lived."

This is the opinion of Mrs. Mary W. Doak, dean of women at Texas Technological college since the institution opened its doors four years ago.

From her advisory position, Mrs. Doak has felt the pulse of Tech's womanhood since the first harrowing days when youngsters crowded doors of the institution from the far-flung Plains' schools—entering without the traditions of older institutions and without the precedences in dress and action now lent by young women who have mellowed with their experiences—and it is Mrs. Doak who is most eager to credit youth with a fineness of purpose, with ideals, with potentialities that make this age better than any in the past.

Co-Eds Are Improving.

The conduct and scholarship of young women at the college are improving. They dress better, their manners are more polished and they have more sophistication now than they did four years ago, according to the dean of women.

Mrs. Doak believes that the presence of the Women's Forum, the Association of Home Economics students, the Young Women's Christian Association and the girls' pep squad are factors which have influenced the improvement in conduct and lessened the disciplinary problem.

Undesirables Are Limited.

While requirements for membership in these organizations are determined by the members, they have various rules which will eliminate undesirable girls and these will encourage scholarship and promote higher standards, she believes.

The Technological college has certain regulations governing the conduct and environment of young women who enter the institution. There are infringements on the rules but this is to be expected, Mrs. Doak said, because no group of young people is going to be perfect.

"Is No Police Officer."

"I do not want to appear to disregard the fact that there are rules governing the students but I am no police officer and cannot patrol the town to enforce the regulations," the dean explained. When there is a case of morality to be considered or if a girl drinks, her connection with the college is severed. Grades which are lower than a certain specification mean automatic dismissal regardless of the dean of women.

Mrs. Doak is not concerned with the froth of gossip which accompanies every discrepancy of the college girls but she is wholeheartedly interested in the facts of each circumstance and unless there is proof that the girl is in the wrong, she believes her innocent.

Some Only Blunder.

Some girls simply blunder. Everything they do seems to be done in the worst way and these young women make one of the greatest problems of the dean of women.

"While I am not the type of person to whom girls come and weep out their troubles, I do have a genuine affection for the girls in the school. I attempt to be always absolutely sincere with them and to make them believe that I am their advisor and friend," the dean explained.

Some girls do come to the dean's office to sob out their tales of distress; some few carry through their college career a feeling of belligerency toward the dean, others, and this group includes a large percentage of girls in the college, according to some of the more prominent upper classwomen, feel that the dean of women is their ally, that she is sympathetic with their ambitions, their trials and their activities. It is this feeling that carries many of them into her office for a friendly chat now and then when the dean has a few moments to devote to them.

Hostesses Are Responsble.

Hostesses of boarding houses in Lubbock have been responsible for much of the improvement in conduct among the girls of Tech, Mrs. Doak said. They have learned to understand the girls better, they have become better acquainted with the dean and her assistant, Mrs. R. M. Chitwood, and with the regulations of the college in regard to the young women.

This dean is optimistic about the young women and she feels that Technological college has some of the most worthwhile students of any institution in the state but she is not satisfied. There are still problems of discipline in the institution and problems of manners and conduct among the co-eds but they are no worse here than in other institutions, Mrs. Doak believes.

Doesn't Police Dance Halls.

Petting parties are not encouraged by the institution and girls

Last Week Is Busiest Socially Here Since Holidays; Clubs Elect, In-Honor Parties and Regular Functions Given

Church Meetings Are Held Here; P.-T. A. Officials Select Meeting Place For April

With club and church affairs and in honor parties on afternoons and evenings, last week was the busiest since the holidays for women of the city.

New officers were elected in the Twentieth Century and Lu-Beta Delphians societies when annual business sessions were conducted and the City Federation, which is composed of eight societies in the city, elected new officers Friday afternon.

Monday and Tuesday were filled for women in St. Paul's Episcopal church as annual sessions of the Women's Auxiliary of North Texas were conducted here on those days. Social and church affairs filled the days and evenings and on the Saturday evening previous these women had entertained their visitors with a large reception in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Wilson.

Board In Meeting.

The executive board of the fourteenth district of the Texas Parent-Teacher association and Mother's Congress met here on Monday afternoon in a luncheon with the president, Mrs. J. E. Griggs, and selected Tahoka as a place for the annual spring convention in April.

A number of affairs have complimented Mrs. C. C. Pearson of San Gabriel, Calif., who has been the guest of her mother, Mrs. K. Carter, since Christmas. Mrs. Pearson spent her girlhood here and friends of those days have extended her a number of informal courtesies. Among these was a dinner served on Thursday evening by Mrs. Earl Hunt, who named Mrs. Jerry Clayton of Members, N. M., as joint honoree. Mrs. Clayton is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Dickinson.

On the following evening Mrs. Hunt complimented Mrs. Alice Nisley of Chicago with a dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Williams, who are moving to Plainview where he will be manager of a J. C. Penney store, are being given farewell affairs prior to their move about the first of February. Mrs. Elmert Stotts entertained on Thursday afternoon and Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Parsons were hosts on Friday evening.

Mrs. Jones Feted

Mrs. Murray Jones was honor guest at a party given by Mrs. M. B. Hilburn and several affairs are being planned for her this week. Mr. and Mrs. Jones are moving to the Rio Grande valley.

Affairs continue for Mrs. J. Lee Quillen, Christmas bride. Members of the Sunday school class of Mrs. E. W. Camp in the First Methodist church, of which Mrs. Quillen is a member, entertained on Thursday afternoon with a program tea for Mrs. Quillen in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam T. Davis.

In addition to these affairs, bridge and forty-two clubs continued with regular meetings and on Wednesday evening Las Chaparittas members entertained the Stag Bridge club with a bridge party at Hotel Lubbock.

A gift was presented to the honoree by the hostess. Miss Eunice Cox scored high in the games and Mrs. W. B. Price was high in a cut.

Palm Beach Colorful With New Togs As Dame Fashion Hies Self To Dixie

Mrs. Halpin Smith — Mrs. Theodore Sheaffer

BY BETSY SCHUYLER
NEA Service Writer

PALM BEACH, Jan. 26—The season has been very slow getting under way. Once here, however, one wonders what brief could be held for anything but laziness. It really is superb baking on hot sands under burning sunlight—especially if you have just escaped the frigid weather.

As usual, Palm Beach is fascinating. So many stunning women coming and going, the regular program of swimming, tennis, golf, lounging for mornings and then formality creeping into things until none but the loveliest costumes seem good enough for evenings.

Pink Costume

Palm Beachers always prefer pastel tones for their togs, really. This year plenty of them stray from the pastel path. The scene is dotted with prints, checks, novelty patterned costumes.

Yet no one could look sweeter or smarter than Mrs. Lewis A. Coffin, jr., did when I met her in a pink and white knitted outfit, pleated pink skirt banded in white, white sweater banded in pink, white sandals, gloves and wooly angora beret of pink.

Mrs. H. Erwin Schur, out airing her little Scotty, wore a singularly stunning outfit, white tussar silk frock topped by scarlet slipover sweater, scarlet turban and fancy scarf. Mrs. George Sloane is another advocate of white. She has several charming off-white sports frocks and softens them by off-white hats of wide brim, which are vastly sensible in this glare and vastly becoming to her aristocratic features.

Novel Cuffs

Tricky fullness, unique neck and sleeve treatment and slightly longer length are the features of most of the frocks I've noted. Mrs. Vincent Hupbeil, for instance, strolled into the Breakers Casino in a white Rodies cloth frock with its uncollared tight neckline fastened with a couple of hand-etched gold buttons, its sleeves flaring at about cuff length and down around her wrists two little tight cuffs, entirely separate from the sleeve save at the inside seam, fastened with similar buttons.

Skyscraper Pleats

Alice Doubleday has a white crepe frock with French box pleats set onto a fitted yoke in set-back design just like a sky-scraper, with the peak forming a pointed pocket on the left hip. Snappy? Well, I should say so. Edna Hastings topped a flaming red and white coat with one-inch ermine banding outlining the collar, cuffs, the front closing and one neat pocket.

The two-color outfits in yellow and brown or yellow and white are excellent here. Mrs. Halpin Smith took and early morning stroll in a nifty orange and off-white two-piece knitted frock, with a ballibunt helmet in the off-white.

Short Sleeves and Gloves

Prints are loud and luscious. Mrs. Edgar Selwyn has innumerable pajama suits in floral and printed designs. One has half of Paris in its coral, green, blue and lavender printed figure. For something new I suggest the pajama suit of hand-blocked silk Mrs. Frederick Tanner sponsors. It is chartreuse orange, black and a medium strong blue. The trousers are figured, the body of the long coat black and blue and the sleeves fancy.

Something new in prints was introduced by Phoebe Lee, a brown, beige and white printed silk frock topped by a velveteen brown coat, lined with the print, with a huge collar of the print showing.

Sleeveless frocks with short gloves are snappy. Mrs. Theodore Sheaffer, of Philadelphia, wore a chic sleeveless rose crepe frock with short white gloves. Her mushroom hat was of woven straw in pink and white and her shoes were rose and white, too, with rose polka dots on the white.

Better Yard Contest For Women Of Rural Communities Is Feature Of Home Demonsration Program For '29

Simple Rules To Be Followed In Making Working Plan For Planting Yard Are Given

A yard improvement contest is to be one of the outstanding activities of home demonstration clubs in Lubbock county, according to a 1929 plan of work that has been outlined. The purpose of this contest, according to Miss Louise Baird, home demonstration agent, is to encourage interest in beautifying rural yards and to spread information regarding the simple rules of yard beautification.

If one wishes to give a touch of beauty to his farm home, it can be easily done at little expense provided there is a working plan that is enlarged each year, according to the agent who added, "Even though many homes are plain and unplanted, they can be made spots of beauty in three or four years of patient effort."

Miss Baird stressed the necessity of having a working plan drawn and she has given a list of rules to be considered in drawing the plans. These rules will be stressed in the yard beautification contests, she said, and are as follows:

1. The entire premises should be neat and clean. No part of the yard should appear neglected or be needlessly unsightly.

2. The entire yard should be well drained and be free from standing water. This is one means of combating mosquitoes.

3. Waste products of all kinds should be disposed of and not allowed to accumulate.

4. Buildings and outhouses should be repaired, as well as fences.

5. Walks and driveways should lead as directly and as conveniently as possible to their destination. A slightly curved walk is sometimes more attractive than a straight walk. Neither walks nor driveways should cut across an open lawn. Use as few walks and driveways as are absolutely required. Gravel or finely crushed stone make durable driveways, while stepping stone, or brick make attractive walks.

6. A lawn is the first essential for a beautiful yard. The lawn is more beautiful if left in wide open spaces and it should not be cut up in fancy flower beds or by individual bushes. Where it is not convenient to water and take care of a bermuda or a blue grass and clover lawn, a good substitute is the natural prairie grass. Where this is encouraged, it has proved to be very successful.

7. Trees should be planted to form a background for the house, and other plantings. Informally placed groups of trees at the back of the house or at the sides gives this natural setting. Trees should never be planted in front where the view of the house is obstructed and should never be planted in rows on either side of the walk or elsewhere, as this is too formal to be beautiful.

8. Foundation plantings are those at the corners, around the porch, and at the base of the house to conceal the more or less rough foundation and to tie the building to its surroundings. Foundations should consist largely of group and mass plantings of shrubbery. The site for foundation plantings should be given more consideration than the number of plantings.

Borders Attractive

9. Borders may be used to make an attractive boundary to the lawn or to separate the field or garden from the lawn. Sometimes it is advisable to divide the front and back

The Woman Day

By Allene Sumner

Allene Sumner

A novel, which the author admits is the frank and honest story of his own life; does not sound so very surprising, especially when the author is a man as in the case with such an announcement concerning "This Madness," a new novel by Theodore Dreiser. Dreiser explains that the book is based on his "love for three different women."

The same old question pops up. What do the women themselves think of it? D'Annunzio wrote the detailed story of his love affair with lovely Eleanora Duse and she retired, a broken woman, from the world because of it.

HOW ABOUT GIRLS?

And yet, don't women use their own love lives for writing material fully as much as men, now that we have given the other sex their wallop? They may disguise a bit more than men. They may refuse, even for sweet publicity's sake, to tell exactly who the men were, but that they are any less reluctant to make commercial capital out of a sweeping emotional experience is doubtful, or isn't it?

AFRICAN LADIES

Miss Ethel Traphagen, instructor in costume design at the Woman's Art school of Cooper Union, went to Africa to find style designs and buy up some native costumes. She reports that buying the costume of a kikuyu woman in Nairobi was apt to be a month's job by the time all parts were assembled. When the lady was ready to sell, her husband refused, she says; and when he was ready, she refused.

Which is an encouraging comment on the state of the African woman. Somehow we would just naturally expect that when hubby said "sell," sell she'd have to.

JAPANESE ONES

Japanese department stores complain that their customers will not wear "foreign clothes" the year round—that the little Japanese ladies love the short skirts, low necks and short sleeves and silk undies of Occidental costume till the wintry blasts begin to blow, when they hie them for the leg shielding length of their native kimonos. They explain that Japanese homes are not heated in the winter as American homes are and that while the Occidental lady can wear her brief garments in a steam heated house it's quite another matter when one must huddle around a small charcoal fire.

Maybe—and yet here's wagering that it'd take more than cold houses to make our gals wear any more clothes. Why should they? They have proved that few clothes seem to make for better rather than poorer health.

Church Women's Societies Of City Among Most Active; Many Members Engaged In Study And Mission Work

Societies Are Divided Into Units; City Federation Is At Head Of All Societies To Develop Fellowship

(EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the first of a series of articles on church women's societies. Others will follow in successive Sunday editions until the reports of all the auxiliaries in the city are presented fully.)

BY BLANCHE E. BEAN

Brotherhoods of men in the churches are formed and disbanded from time to time but the women's organizations, which probably compose the most active single unit in any church organization, are so stable that they are considered almost analogous to the church.

The women's organizations in Lubbock include scores of women in the city in their societies and subsocieties and a vast number of activities are engaged in throughout the year, including the spending of several thousand dollars. Combining some of the larger societies is the Church Women's Federation which meets on fifth Mondays and coordinates the work of all the organizations as well as bringing the church women into closer fellowship.

Baptists have Circles

In the First Baptist society there are ten circles, each a unit drawing membership from certain boundaries designated within the city, and the general Women's Missionary Society of the church, which comprises all of the circles, sponsors four other associations: The Young Women's Auxiliary, composed of unmarried young women and college girls; and three junior bands—the Royal Ambassadors, the Girls' Auxiliary and the Sunbeam Band.

The Women's Missionary Society of the First Methodist church has voted a budget of $1,000 for the year of 1929 and reports made recently revealed that the society had spent a total of $1,361.39 on home and foreign missions during 1928.

Results Far-Reaching

Results of missionary work here literally reach around the world as each church has a foreign mission department of which the local society is a contributing part, and money accumulated throughout the months here goes into the mission schools and to individuals in China and India, in Brazil, Africa, Europe, Canda, Mexico and other lands near and far as well as into the remote corners of America.

It is the ladies aid in any church that welcomes the new pastor and his wife into the community and that anticipates their coming by visiting the manse or parsonage and replacing worn curtains or furniture, repairing stoves, redecorating and cleaning rooms and otherwise preparing a home. It is the missionary society which collects and dispenses clothing and food to the needy, to the foreigner who is without work and money, to the sick; the missionary society women who call on the stranger and the sorrowing.

They are Workers

And in order that these things may be financed, the missionary society women serve club dinners, ballyhoo their wares at expositions and fairs, collect old clothes and papers to be sold to manufacturers, sell magazine subscriptions and novelties, conduct food sales and bazaars, in fact, engage in a score of different merchandising plans a year.

"Sun Up" Will Be Presented Here On Thursday Evening In Auditorium Of High School; Typical American Play

Miss Ruth Pirtle Directing Her First Little Theatre Play For This Season On Thursday Evening

The first Little Theatre play to be presented this season under the direction of Miss Ruth Pirtle is to be on Thursday evening in the high school auditorium. It is "Sun-Up," a representative American play written by Lulu Vollmar.

The curtain is to rise on the play at 8 p. m. and an orchestra will play preceding the performance and between acts, according to an announcement made yesterday.

This three-act drama deals with the life of the mountaineers of South Carolina. Mrs. T. A. White is cast as Widow Cagle, a very positive character. She has been widowed by moonshine raiders and bears an ignorant hatred for the law which predominates all her actions.

Sparks Has Role

Earl Sparks plays the role of her son, who is drafted for service during the World War. George Smallwood has the role of Rap Todd, a typical mountaineer, and Mrs. Leta Flo Edgar is cast as his daughter, Emmy. E. W. Provence plays the role of the preacher, Gaylord Hankins is cast as a stranger, Leroy Vaughan is cast as Bud, a strong young mountaineer, and J. B. Galland is cast as a sheriff. Charles Lackey is cast as Bob.

There will be several players in this drama who are new to Little Theatre audiences in Lubbock and others who have starred in past productions.

Three Make Debut

Mrs. White is making her debut in Little Theatre although she has read on many occasions. Mr. Sparks, Mr. Vaughan, Mr. Galland and Mr. Lackey are also new on the stage.

The crudity of the mountaineers life is presented in this play which was written by one who has lived in the mountains of Tennessee and the Carolina for a number of years. Costuming of characters for this production is to be appropriate.

"Sun-Up" is a popular drama with amateurs and has been produced by many Little Theatres in the South recently.

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton

©1928 by NEA Service, Inc.

Often it is difficult for parents to agree on the manner of bringing up their children, but it is still more difficult, sometimes, for grandmothers and mothers to agree.

Grandmothers are apt to say "I know, for I have already brought up one family." And mothers are likely to answer, and rightly, "It is my job and I'll have to learn."

If mothers could raise two families, however, we wonder if the second would be any better off than the first. Isn't each child a new experiment? Are any two children alike? Is it possible to use precisely the same method with Tom and Betty that she used with Richard and Louise?

When Grandma lives with the family she is going to be very unhappy if she allows her daughter's of her daughter-in-law's method of training the children to disturb her.

If she does she will see things daily that are going to put a strain on her fortitude and patience. But wise grandmothers will be far happier, and incidentally daughters too, if they learn to close their eyes to things of which they disapprove.

I feel doubly sorry for grandparents these days, as methods in child-training have changed so radically.

It is better to allow mothers to attend to the training of the children. If a little spanking is impending, that is the time I'd advise Grandma to make a few long-put-off calls. And if she has to let off a little indignant steam, dear soul, it would be an excellent idea for one of the calls to be on an old friend or neighbor who is in the same plight she is.

It would be a good thing, of course, for everyone concerned if young mothers and grandmothers could have an occasional intelligent quiet talk over the child problem; but these should be without emotion, and not during the excitement of a crisis as such things are apt to be.

It is bad for children to overhear these arguments, particularly if Grandma is taking their part. It shakes faith in their mother's judgment and undermines respect for discipline. The result is a very bad thing in the long run.

The Morning Avalanche Menu for the Day

Menu

BREAKFAST: Oranges, fried mush, syrup, cocoa.

LUNCHEON: Cream of tomato soup and crackers, celery, home canned spiced peaches, milk, bran buns, butter, salted nuts.

DINNER: Roast pork with bread dressing, mashed potatoes, gravy, carrots and peas, cold slaw, date pudding, coffee, bread, butter, strawberry jam.

This is the time of year when the home canned fruits and vegetables taste good. I may be old fashioned, but I do like to have a few glasses of home made jam and jelly and a few cans of fgruit on my shelves. I appreciate the work of the canning factories and help myself out a good deal with their products, but I must admit to a partiality for the home canned goods. It does seem to me they have a superior flavor. This menu was planned for seven.

Today's Recipes

Coleslaw: Shred one medium head of cabbage. Put over it a dressing made of one cup whipped cream, sweet or sour, one-half cup vinegar, one-half cup sugar, one-half teaspoon salt and a dash of paprika. Do not mix with the cabbage until serving time.

Date pudding: One-half pound graham crackers, rolled fine, one-half poung English walnuts, one-half pound dates, cut fine, one-half pound marshmallows, one-half pint milk. Cut marshmallows in half and soak in milk. Cut nuts and dates up fine. Roll graham crackers fine and save out one-half cup. Mix all together and shape in loaf. Roll in the one-half cup crumbs, let stand overnight, serve in slices with whipped cream.

Fabrics, Cut and Trim of Evening Frocks Are New

By HENRI BENDEL
For NEA Service

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—If one doubts that fashions have entirely changed in line and feeling, a glance at any collection of party dresses will be most convincing.

Where is the "simple little evening frock" that was to be seen by the dozens even six months ago? By that I mean those frocks that were more or less perfectly plain, straight line, without adornment.

Such frocks are not to be found today. Every party dress contribuaes something individual in its cut, trimming neckline ,waist treatment or in some other way presents a change from the very simple.

Studied simplicity there still is and always will be where women of taste are concerned. But simplicity in dress today is really the most disarming kind of sophisticated planning.

Distinctive Touches

Among the characteristics that distinguish new party frocks from old are such things as much greater length, trains—especially on the side, skirt fullness, distinctive necklines, girdles and sashes and new materials that are royally gorgeous.

Pompadour taffetas are among the most popular of new party gown fabrics. Faille taffetas are excellent also, finely printed chiffons, brocades, chiffons in rich plain colors, nets, tulle, spangled point d'esprit, and lace.

Very new and charming for the very young matron or girl is a black faille taffeta, lightened by Chinese red. Its bodice is tight, its girdle swathing to the hiplines and its bouffant skirt trails to form a fan train in the back. This skirt has scaloped edges and, since it is lined with the Chinese red taffeta, is charming when its wearer dances.

Two things contribute youth to this gown. There is a stunning bow of Chinese red taffeta, with five trailing rounded ends, placed at the center back waistline. This bow has its ends spread like a fan and appliqued right into the dress, with a pattern of gold beads spreading from it into the dress. The neckline is its second new touch, a novelty V neck, with gold beaded shoulder straps.

Informal Prints

For informal occasions printed chiffons are excellent this year. In a black and red printed little dress we have several new notes. The bodice is the popular surplice but the skirt has an organ pleated overskirt that gives excessive fullness. It is posed on the bodice to give a

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

THROAT LINES ARE VITAL TO BEAUTY

A good clear contour line is not only significant of youth, but of good grooming. Early signs of age seem to center around the throat curve, the chin and the back ne of the neck. need hardly ell you how tterly destructive to the appearance of youth s the double chin. We all know from our personal experience, as well as from watching other people, that the first signs of a double chin appear when a woman is still in her middle twenties. It is an absolute fact that if this condition can be pounced upon and corrected before it gains dangerous headway, the youthful line of chin and throat can be preserved when youth has only become a memory.

Start in to treat yourself to the preservative measures of nightly patting. Start in at the point just below the lobe of your ear, and with a good contour jelly pat smartly with the back of either one hand or both until the jelly has been absorbed by the skin. Reducing jelly is another item to be considered in maintaining lines of youth at neck and throat.

To preserve the even contour of the neckline, you are more likely to need nourishing items than astringents. However, to be on the safe side, especially if you are in your thirties or forties, you can well afford to use both measures. Massaging the neck with long, throat-grasping movements, with palms greased with a nourishing cream, will help to preserve smoothness and good looks.

The nourishing process should follow the tightening one, and then it does no harm to leave the nourishing cream on the neck overnight. So much for the front part of your neck.

The back line is almost as important, however, and where the tendency is always to develop a certain unprepossessing lumpiness, I urge that with the palms of your hands you massage an astringent daily into the tissues. Another thing that you must take into consideration in maintaining good lines of shoulders, throat and neck is your posture. If your head pokes forward, if you stoop or if your neck seems to be insufficiently strong to control the upright carriage of your head, you are bound to develop throat and neck beauty disturbances Try to stand unright at all times, carry your head high, keep your eyes looking for stars instead of for the stones at your feet, and you will be avoiding one of the most common causes of ugly throat lines.

Laundry washing prolongs life of dainty fabrics

Hard water has the same effect on your clothes as it has on your hair. You simply cannot make a real sudsy lather to cut the acrid dirts—and though it may look clean, you feel your hair and know better. Nor will hard water rinse out the soap and dirt. There's nothing miraculous about laundry methods. Although modern laundries are scientific institutions dedicated to cleanliness, their results are obtained in a simple manner. Your clothes are gently washed with pure soap in filtered rainsoft waters of accurately determined temperatures — and with from nine to thirteen complete changes of water. Instead of rubbing the life out of fabrics to get them clean, the washing action in the modern laundry is as gentle as when you wash lingerie in a bowl of warm water in your home.

swathed back hipline and nearly reaches the floor in the back.

A side train gown comes from Worth bringing individual touches to prove the supremacy of the new styles over the old. Its fabric is a bright blue metal cloth embroidered in silver. It has a sweet little narrow yoke of pearls and sapphires, lingerie shoulder straps also of pearls and sapphires and a handsome ornament of pearls, sapphire and tassels of matching silk catches the side train at the low left hipline.

This train flares, in circular manner to give a fan train of some width and two to three feet on the floor.

annually in each society, composed of executives, secretaries and chairmen of each division of work in the associations.

New Officials Chosen

New officials have been named in the Federation and the Cumberland Presbyterian Ladies Aid since the beginning of the year and officials were installed in the First Methodist Women's Missionary society and Mary Helm auxiliary to initiate the new year activities.

Although officers have been elected in the First Baptist societies in August during the past, the women have recently voted to elect each January and close the association work with the year.

Virtually every society in the city sponsors auxiliaries among the girls and children of the church and most of the organizations are divided into units.

The 19th Street Methodist and 19th Street Baptist societies are divided into circles for mission and Bible study, the First Baptist society has ten circles.

Women in the First Methodist Women's Missionary society have divided the town into four districts for unit meetings. The Mary Helm society is composed of young matrons in the church.

The First Presbyterian society is divided into six corcles, one of which is made up of young women. Memberships in the other five are automatically shifted each year in order that every woman in the church may become better acquainted with every other woman. One becomes a member of the women's society upon affiliating with the church.

The Women's Missionary society of the Cumberland church studies missions, both home and foreign, and the Ladies Aid, which is a separate organization, looks after the needs of the manse and the church and people within the congregation.

The First Christian Ladies Aid is divided into three circles and this society looks after the general development of the church while the Women's Missionary Society is organized primarily for study.

All of these organizations afford a medium for fellowship among the women of the church congregation and the federation of societies has for a specific purpose the development of this friendliness interdenominationally.

Better Yards

yard with a border of plantings. Higher and more permanent plantings should form the background while annuals and lower plants should be placed in the foreground.

Plantings may be used to screen objectionable sights from view, or lessen the unattractiveness of out buildings. Evergreens always make the best screen because of their effectiveness the year around. Screens may be hedges, border plantings of trees, large shrubs or vines.

10. The yards should not be cut up or spotted with fancy shaped flower beds. Flowers are properly used in front of borders and backgrounds of shrubbery. For cut flowers, such things as roses, dallias and zennias may be planted in a separate flower garden which is near the water supply and protected, or these flowers may be planted in the vegetable garden.

Hardy perennials do not require replanting each spring.

11. Every effort should be made to have the plantings as permanent as possible. Trees, shrubs and flowers should be selected which are known to thrive in the community, so that time and work will not be spent on plantings which will not survive climatic conditions.

Permanent plantings grow more valuable and more beautiful with the years and, when once started, require less attention. Some perennials such as salt cedar or tamarock will grow from cuttings and can be had at little or no cost. This is especially good for screens.

12. Windbreaks of evergreens or other trees or high shrubs, are especially valuable in this country to protect the other plantings. These stop not only the sharp winds but keep out much of the sand that ordinarily piles up in a sandy community. Windbreaks are not only valuable, but are beautiful as a background for the home.

RECEIPTS GROW

Turkey Post Office To Get Higher Rating

TURKEY, Jan. 26.—The Turkey postoffice is rapidly bordering on a second class rating, owing to the fact that the 1928 receipts were more than double those of 1927. Fourteen steps are necessary from the third class to second class and the office has reached eleven of them already. January business shows a marked increase in volume over last January and belief prevails that Turkey will be placed in the second class by July 1, 1929.

With all lines of business prospering under the rapid growth of Turkey and the community's attainment of many essential permanent improvements, such as an adequate water supply, paved streets, sidewalk construction, white way, more and better roads, a north and south railroad, natural gas, telephone improvements, a live chamber of commerce, noon luncheon club, etc.

Colman's "The Resue" Headlines Week's Movie Bills

"Beau Geste" Star Returns In Role Of Sea Narrative

Thrilling Epic Of Joseph Conrad Shows At Palace Starting Monday; Alice White Appears Today

With the news wires of the day carrying so much about sea disasters and rescues, the showing of Joseph Conrad's "The Rescue" at the Palace, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, comes as a timely event in the current happenings. The arrival of Captain Fried with his American liner and the rescued crew of thirty-two men from the ill-fated Florida, will no doubt, be re-enacted in the picture.

The film brings Ronald Colman as an individual star in a new light and the week's movie headliner. The hero of "Beau Geste" and "Two Lovers" now has a role of the sean and desperate intrigue among the natives of the Malay archipelago.

Lily Damita Has Role.

"The Rescue" also affords Lily Damita a coveted role as Mr. Colman's leading lady. This romantic and adventurous yarn of the sea, as only Conrad can tell it, is spun by the directional genius of Herbert Brenon, director of "Beau Geste" and "Sorrell and Son," who was rated as the greatest director in 1927. It is a story of honor, love and betrayal in the Java seas, photographed against tropical backgrounds of rare beauty.

Alive White and Jack Mulhall are paired in a lively and colorful comedy of New York City life, "Naughty Baby" which shows at the Palace, today matinee. This is the initial film in which they have appearde together. Miss White having just completed her first vehicle "Show Girl" for First National while Mihail busied himself with Dorothy Mackaill in "Waterfront."

Miss White is a check girl at the Ritzy Hotel, hence the name. She is one of the girls of flapper face and figure who have champagne ideas on a home brew income. Mulhall, as might be imagined, is the youthful heir to a fortune, and he provides the champagne possibilities.

Is Ritzy Story.

The story is breezy and replete with laughs from beginning to end. Thelma Todd, Doris Dawson, Fred Kelsey, James Ford and half a dozen other well-known players combine to make a notable cast.

All the various angles of newspaper publicity are portrayed in the story which stars Johnny Walker and Sylvia Breamer. It is a story of the thrilling recklessness and nerve of a reporter in a busy greedy world.

RONALD COLMAN in "THE RESCUE"

Paragraphs On New Pictures

Moran and Mack, known as "The Two Black Crows" have been signed by Paramount Famous Lasky corporation to make two feature length talking pictures at the company's Hollywood studios.

Now comes cocky, self-confident William Haines in a "Talkie," "Alias Jimmy Valentine." An early local screening of the picture is promised and from advance reports it should please the Haines fans one hundred per cent.

"Auto-optical phantasmagoria" play a very important part in "Interference." Paramount's all-talking motion picture version of the dramatic stage success. The "aops" are Evelyn Brent, William Powell, Clive Brook and Doris Kenyon. In other words, audio-optical phantasmagoria are farmous actors and actresses who are both seen and heard on the screen. The production is scheduled as the opening "talkie" at the Palace.

Patsy Ruth Miller, the star of "Marriage by Contract," John M. Stahl's special production, paid her first visit to Europe just before playing in this picture and was guest of honor at a luncheon given by the dramatic and cinema critics of the French Press association.

"Music Hath Charms" is the second famous Octavus Roy Cohen colored stories to go into production at the Christie talking studios. The story will present those famous dusky characters of Cohen's Saturday Evening Post stories.

Film players, who ordinarily fear Kleig eyes, caused by the intense flare of studio lights during the making of a motion picture, encountered a new terror during the filming of "The Trail of '98," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's northern epic. It was snow blindness. Despite the vigilance of a whole staff of doctors taken on location during the filming of the Chilkoot Pass sequence, more than two dozen people were stricken by the malady.

A Texas boy, Guinn Williams is having success on the screen of late and is appearing in a number of features. His latest is in "Noah's Ark" as a buddy to George O'Brien. "Big Boy" as he is known in movieland is the son of Congressman Guinn Williams of Texas. He is now booked to appear with Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor in "Blue Skies."

Stardom within the next few months is being freely predicted for William Blackwell, handsome young leading man for Alice White. He is to appear in "Hot Stuff," her next production.

Lois Wilson To Appear At Lyric In Home Narrative

Lois Wilson, star of "The Covered Wagon" and other leading films of the past appears at the Lyric Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday in "Sally's Shoulders", her latest screen production, a homely narrative of modern life which depicts the struggle of a determined young girl to keep her head above the water when family support is placed upon her shoulders. The film is directed by Lynn Shores

The story is heralded as one of the most appealing of the season and is replete with human touches of home life. Miss Wilson plays the part of "Sally" whose self sacrifices to save a wastrel brother and an ungrateful sister, at the risk of her own romance and happiness.

An excellent supporting cast including Huntley Gordon, George Hackathorne, Edythe Chapman and Lucille Williams.

for that reason any announcement relative to plans for the year must of necessity be tentative.

The exposition was crowded for space last year and it is altogether probable that proposals for construction of new buildings will be brought up by the new directorate. Furthermore, it is understood plans now call for the most elaborate program of entertainment.

Lubbock Fire Department Founded Twenty Years Ago, Has Record For Other Flame-Fighters To Shoot At

Local Organization Grows With City; Protection Of Homes And Buildings In Lubbock Is Good

The chief leans back placidly in his chair as he puffs at his favorite pipe. Four men are silently engrossed in a game of dominoes while two others look on. In another corner a group of men, sitting around lazily on tables and boxes, swap yarns or plan a prank on someone.

There is a sudden clanging of a huge phone bell. Domino playing ceases; stories remain unfinished; the chief puffs his pipe more rapidly—everyone remains tense, rigid as the phone is answered. With the cry of "Fire," the firemen with lightning and almost super-human quickness, have on their coats, climb on the large fire trucks and speed from the station amid the clanging of bells and the shrieking of sirens, and the Lubbock Fire Department is off to another fire.

Must Be Always Ready

Always ready and expectant of a fire alarm, the firemen are faced with the difficulty of always being ready to depart in an instant's notice.

Through its twenty years of existence, the Lubbock Fire Department has a remarkable record. It was first begun in 1909 as a volunteer department with Charlie Frederick as the first chief. About fourteen men belonged to the corps of fire-fighters. In 1916 the first paid fireman was employed, although the department was essentially a volunteer organization until as late as 1924.

Following Frederick as fire chief was Jack Robertson. Next came W. E. Twitty, the present fire chief, who first assumed the duties in 1913. He was followed by F. K. Mitchell, then in 1914 by L. H. Simpson. Lubbock's present fire marshal. Twitty again became chief in 1913 and has served since that time.

Only One Fatality

The tragic, untimely death of Neuell Bryan, youthful assistant fire chief of the local department, who was crushed to his death recently beneath a huge fire truck when he swerved it around a corner suddenly in an effort to miss another car, is the only accident ever to mar the record of the department. Up until that time no fireman had been injured, with the exception of slight burns and scratches, serious enough to be taken to the hospital.

The Texas Utilities fire in November, 1920, which resulted in a damage of about $125,000, was the most destructive in the history of Lubbock. Chief W. E. Twitty states. The Lubbock Mercantile fire on the site where the present Temple Ellis building is located in 1911 caused an estimated damage of more than $50,000.

City in Good Shape

Formerly the location of numerous fire traps and fire hazards, Lubbock is now in first class shape from the standpoint of safety from fires. This is the opinion of Lee D. Olive, general inspector of the state fire insurance department at Austin, who has conducted an inspection of this city during the past week. Chief Twitty and Marshal Simpson were commended by Mr. Olive for their cooperation in eliminating fire hazards. He reports that the hazards have decreased more than half during the past year. He said further that fire fighting aparatus was always in A-1 condition in Lubbock due to the work of Chief Twitty and his department.

The department now contains thirteen paid men, two well-equipped stations, and five trucks. In the early days of the volunteer organization the department became more or less famous for the running and track ability of its members. In competition with other fire departments over the section, the local volunteers carried off numerous laurels, consisting of loving cups, nozzles and trumpets.

Alarms Are Numerous

During the past year there were 107 alarms placed with the department, and of these many were grass fires and others of little or no consequence. TThe "fighting fires before they start" campaign is reflected in the fact that in 1927 there were 131 fires, twenty-four more than last year. Eight fires have been reported so far this year.

The funniest experience that Chief Twitty can remember during his connection with the department was in the early days when the trousers of a local Irish plumber caught fire. He put in a fire alarm and when the truck passed by at a rapid rate of speed he grabbed hold of it and climbed on the truck. Another time, owners of a house, which had caught fire, put a piano and other expensive furniture out of a second story window, letting them crash to the ground. Then the house was saved.

Drilling Is Slow On Test Wells In South Plains Area

Gaines Well Is Down 2587 Feet; Brownfield Location Goes Beyond 5000 Foot Mark, Reports Reveal

Very little progress was made during the past week on test wells being sunk in various portions of the South Plains country, a survey of oil scouts and operators here revealed yesterday.

Drilling was reported slow on the Pure Oil company's No. 1 well in Gaines county, just 12 miles southeast of Seagraves. A depth of 2587 feet has been reached, reports said.

The Terry county test, eight miles from Brownfield was reported slightly beyond the 5,000 foot mark with drilling being very slow.

The Marland test in Cochran county has been shut down at a depth of 1500 feet. Another well spudded in in Cochran county has been abandoned for the time being.

Drilling on the Boles well on the edge of the canyon seven miles southeast of Lubbock has been halted due to the fact that tools have fallen in the well and blocked progress.

There is a vaccine for whooping cough which is valuable in reducing the severity of the disase, though it does nto always prevent it entirely.

RATIFIED! NOW FOR THE NEXT STEP

The Nation will breathe easier now that the Senate has ratified the Kellogg peace pact. It is not altogether because the treaty marks an almost immeasurable step toward the goal of the final abolition of all war. In so far as it contributes to that end all nations should rejoice equally with the United States in its progress. But the United States faced a peculiarly menacing situation during the hesitation of the Senate over ratification. It is not too much to say that in the quesion of ratification the national honor was vitally involved. Had this treaty, formulated by the Secretary of State and by him urged successfully upon the principal nations, been rejected by the Senate, the Untied States could scarcely have expectd further invitations to international conferences.

Fortunately, ratification is accomplished. The opposition was expressed rather in vociferation than in votes. The size of the majority is a reflection of the measure of public sentiment favoring the measure. If the record of the influences brought to bear upon the Senate could be published it would probably show that the moral forces of the Nation were a unit in urging ratification. Every church organization, peace society, disarmament council; every international body of standing petitioned for ratification. If the Senators in opposition had anything except their personal convictions or prejudices back of their position they failed to get any such mandate into the record.

This treaty is a triumph for the Administration of President Coolidge and the secretaryship of Mr. Kellogg. It will be recorded in history as their greatest achievement. But friends of the incoming Administration need not apprehend that nothing has been left for Mr. Hoover to do. This treaty is in fact but a single step toward the goal of the abolition of war. It is more than a mere gesture, as its foes have described it, for it does put each of its signatories under a moral compulsion to refrain from war as a means of attaining national ends. But it does not preclude future international disputes. One must recognize that occasional differences are inevitable and that, since war as a means of settling them has been renounced, some method for their determination must be provided. Necessarily, it must take the form of an international court of arbitration with proper sanctions for the enforcement of its findings. To provide such a curt and to secure the participation of the United States therein must be one of the first tasks of the Hoover administration.

Beyond doubt the same organized forces which did so much to secure the ratification of the treaty, will now take up consideration of the second step toward the complete outlawry of war.

SLEEPYHEADS

Every student of typewriting has yawned broadly over the practice phrases, "Time and tide wait for no man" and "God bless the man who first invented sleep." He has not only yawned over these typewriter drills, but has grown so sleepy over the job as to have fallen into a catnap occasionally and been rudely jerked into wakefulness by his instructor. But times are changing at school as everywhere and though time and tide still won't wait, and though sleep yet is valued as highly as formerly, a Daniel has come to judgment over in a Fort Worth coed college and requires her pupils to slumber in classes in order to properly acquire their credits. Sleeping in classes is as old as classes themselves but being required to leep in class is new, observes a member of the college publicity staff in commenting on the extraordinary feature. We agree with him while we deplore not being a student in this day of rare privilege for him who would sip at the font of learning. However, our hearts are soothed somewhat when delving further into the matter we see that underweight nervouus pupils are required the hour of slumber in a rest room arranged in the physical education department. Those of us who never were fragile or pale; whose parents did not have to tempt us with dainty foods or bribe the teacher to be lenient with us because of our frailty, haven't missed anything by not being students today. We wouldn't be granted the privilege of blessed sleep anyway. It would be the same old ctory—no sympathy. Meanwhile, however, we find health and beauty specialists firm in their command for young and old to indulge in quantities of restful slumber. Long hours of sound sleep in comfortable, well ventilated quarters build energy, and health and beauty, authorities say, and they denounce the modern habit of keeping late hours, of slighting their daytime relaxation through a mania for activity and excitement. Sleep is a great restorative and has no substitute. Persons seeking physical comfort and charm defeat their purpose when they slight this great medicine. It is foolish and presumptuous to expect cosmetics to eradicate the lines and hollows that appear in the countenance due to lack of rest; or to hope for the eyes to sparkle and the skin to glow without benefit of sleep. It can not be accomplished, neither can alert, vitalized thought or erect, graceful carriage be maintained without attention to this great requisite. Therefore, he who burns the midnight incandescent in pursuit of knowledge or pleasure, errs because he disobeys nature's precepts at detriment to himself. Better excessive sleep than a dearth of it.

Disturbed His Prayers.

J. H. Frandsen is responsible for the statement that whenever he is called upon for an extemporaneous speech, he feels somewhat like the darky who was routed out of a chicken house one dark night. When an explanation was demanded the best reply this dusky son of Africa could make was, "Well, bless de Lawd, can't I go no place to say my prayers without bein' disturbed?"

Along Hoover's Trail In Central America

DASHING ARGENTINE GAUCHO TURNS OUT TO BE PLOWMAN

EDITOR'S NOTE: Here is another of the interesting articles on South America by Rodney Dutcher, Washington correspondent who accompanied President-elect Hoover on his recent trip.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer
(Copyright, 1929, NEA Service, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—There is romance on the pampas of the Argentine, but it is the romance of the polw and of waving fields of grain rather than of the dashing gaucho whose type has been resurrected by Valentina and Douglas Fairbanks.

The picturesque, romantic, native cowboy died off long ago and offers even less material for the novel and the movies than our own cowboys of today. The vaquero, as the pampas cow man is known rides a trick saddle and swings a mean lasso, but he is only a peon on horseback.

The people of the pampas are divided into two classes: the few wealthy estancia owners and the peons who do all the work. By peons, one does not mean victims of the penage system as the term is generally understood in the United States—a condition of semi-slavery. In South America the peon is merely the unskilled farm laborer.

LIFE seldom holds much for the peon. He lives meanly, without the comforts, good treatment or pay of a farmhand in the United States. Generally he lives with others in long sheds, often sheds of adobe though sometimes of brick, with four or five ther peons in the same room. His wages average 60 pesos a month, which is about $24, and he spends extravagantly on pay day.

But the peon appears satisfied with the bare necessities of life. His condition is commonly better than that of the tenant farmer on the pampas.

The large ranches, some of which are tremendous in size and operated like so many feudal estates, often rent out land on a percentage basis and thousands of Italian immigrants, especially those from Piedmont, have become tenant farmers. They live very poorly through the year on credit; sometimes a tenant farmer is found subsisting only on mate, an unpalatable tea raised and brewed in this country, and galleta, a kind of hard tack. Boiled white corn is also a common fare. He has few if any comforts. In an exceptionally good year he may be able to kill a couple of bullocks and a few pigs for a long spell of sausages.

Everyone in a tenant farmer's family works hard. Here a boy of 18 is likely to appear to be a man of 30. Boys of 12 are to be seen pushing plows and tenant farmers spend much time and labor in a continual fight against pests.

BUT although some immigrants are willing to adopt this kind of life, most of them stay at Buenos Aires, where a few, by hard work, brains and luck, become millionaires.

Pampas means plains. This region is comparable to our own grain belt and its development is following along the same lines. It produces wheat, corn and cattle. Physically, it is a broad, vast area of treeless, grass-covered plain with enough water and rainfall to permit grain growing, up to the point where the western and southern fringes resolve first into fields fit only for sheep grazing and then mere desert.

In the north is the wooded Chaco region, its forests as yet untapped through lack of railroads. With millions of acres of highly productive lands, the pampas have become the most highly developed section of South America.

TUBERCULAR CURE TAKES TWO YEARS; DONT WED BEFORE

Tuberculosis and Marriage

R. had tuberculosis but is cured. She wants to know if she may marry?

I'll tell you what Pottenger, who was my professor on tuberculosis, says in his book, "Tuberculosis and How to Combat It"!

"For those who are engaged, as a rule it is best to postpone all thought of marriage until two years after the disease has become arrested. We set two years, because experience shows that it requires about two years to make an arrestment permanent, and it is wisest that no extra burdens or cares be taken on during that time.

"In some rare instances, however, where a patient marries in such a manner as to improve his or her condition and to relieve care and worry, this rule may be set aside. But it is a safe working rule and should be followed in most instances."

"Man often improves his chances of keeping well by settling down after marriage, but he has to face the extra expense incident to keeping his wife and maintaining a home. This is often the factor which interferes with his completing the healing. The period when the patient is fighting tuberculosis is not the time to assume new responsibilities....."

"It is to the tuberculosis woman, however, that marriage offers the greatest danger. Not only does she take on the added responsibilities of maintaining a home for her husband, but she also assumes the risk of child bearing. No woman should become pregnant while suffering from active tuberculosis."

"Tuberculosis women who have not been advanced in the disease may bear children after two years have elapsed from the time of arrestment without great risk, provided they receive the best of attention and care during and after the pregnancy. Repeated child bearing is very prone to be disastrous."

If you are interested, R., we have an article on tuberculosis which gives a list of books on the subject written by authorities for the layman.

"Help! Answer at once!" I find on the envelope of one letter addressed to me this morning. In the letter, L. describes a condition for which she asks me not to tell her to go to a doctor.

Now, dear L., even though I could answer your letter today, it will be at least four weeks before it will appear in the paper, for I have to have my material ready four weeks in advance to allow for printing, correcting and distributing to different parts of the United States and Canada. And it happens that I cannot answer your question at all, because of its nature and because it is not of general interest. So I must advise you to see your physician, L. Sorry.

Mrs. A.—No, breast pumps (or any other mechanical appliances) to develop the breasts are not to be recommended. They may do a great deal of harm. The only time when they may be used is when the milk has to be pumped out for some reason, in the nursing mother.

If you need it, gain in weight, and correct your posture: develop your chest. That is all you can do. Have you our pamphlet on gaining and losing weight?

The March Of Civilization In Afghanistan

SO THINK WE

We think that since Jesse Jones of Houston has made the statement that Texas is safe for democracy, there should be some way of turning the thing around and making democracy safe for Texas. This is a job that should occupy the attention of the party leaders of the state.

—o—

We think that Oklahoma has a peach of a house of representatives when it comes to impeachment.

—o—

We think it must have been very much like a circus come to town when President-elect Hoover entered a Florida town and a girl rode an elephant.

—o—

We think it may be possible that some men may have more money than brains, but we are sure this condition will not last very long.

—o—

We think that too many people are worrying over what Mr. Hoover went to Washington so long before the time for inauguration. We cannot see why anyone should be worried about that specially. Mr. Hoover might make a very satisfactory explanation of it if he saw fit.

—o—

We think there was a time in our young days that if a man had given a girl a pair of garters for a Christmas present that he would never have expected to see them again. However times have changed.

—o—

Once Sunday was a day of rest,
When sweet religion all did doff, too;
Now, Sunday even for the best,
Is the day things are put off, too.

—o—

We think you should not put off paying your poll tax too long. You might be left out, and you would be disappointed in not getting to vote this year, when so many things will come up for consideration.

—o—

We think that dairying is not all profit on the farm, and neither is printing a newspaper or operating a dry goods store or a grocery store. There is going to be some expense. The feed that the cows eat is worth a price, and the time of milking and marketing the cream is all a matter of overhead expense, but after all of this is counted at its market value, we believe there is still a margin of profit.

—o—

We think Mr. Brisbane may be right in his conclusion that airplanes wil likely make battleships obsolete, but he is possibly overlooking the fact that battleships are not always used for fighting. They are used for pleasure boats for the presidents and fishing smacks for high officials and it must be understood that a president, and ex-president or a president-elect cannot fish from an airplane very well.

—o—

The number of bills introduced in the Texas legislature are almost as numerous as those received by the average Texas citizen on the first of each month.

—o—

We think that President Coolidge would make a fine silent partner for some man when he gets through being president.

—o—

We think it would be fine if our bills could run as long as the McNary-Haugen bill has, without interest.

We think that the wives of this nation began to show their independence of their husbands when they began to eliminate the thirty six inch row of buttons from the back of their dresses.

We think if Al Smith is so anxious about the private life he should have offered himself for vice-president and possibly he might have realized his ambitions.

We do not know much about bridge, except in the moonlight. But there seems to be a difference now. It used to be that there could be more dummies in the game than now. We understand that the greatest number in the game now is four.

We think the trouble with some wives is that they will believe their husbands when they are lying, and know they are telling a big one when they are really telling the truth.

We think this calendar revision should certainly have very close consideration because it would add another rent day and another pay day, and it would also take more sheets for the calendar pad.

We think that the Question Mark certainly made it mark, but the important thing about it is the name will have to be changed for there is no more questions about it.

The Way Of The World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

EGOTISM AND FEAR

Fear is largely an expression of egotims. We take ourselves and our lives so seriously that we are all out of proportion in our fears. Because we think we are very important, we care too much what others think about our actions. Because we have such an exalted opinion of the value of ourselves on this speck of land in this immeasurable universe, we are all out of proportion in our fears for our comfort and safety.

FRILLS AND FUNDAMENTALS

Some things in the high school course that we used to call frills and look on as a waste of time are now regarded as fundamentals. Much time and attention are given to the teaching of them. When we hear about these "new-fangled" things let's not question their value or compare them with the subjects we older ones had in school. Let's have sense enough to see that this world has changed more in the last 30 years than it had in the 300 years preceding. Some things that we once thought silly are now sound, and some things we once thought sound now appear to be silly. When we find ourselves groping about and inclined to criticise schools and teachers and systems let us remember that the trouble is not with the modern methods but with those of us who have not been strong enough to grow up.

THE OTHER SIDE

It was pointed out by Professor Ripley, well-known economist, some time ago that the distribution of stocks in large corporations in this country was a dangerous tendency. The ownership of great concerns by widely separated people who have no direct hand in the management has been called inefficient and unfortunate. But there is another side, and an important argument to be marshalled in favor of it. Thousands of shares of stock in large corporations are held by workingmen by what we call the rank and file of employes. What is the result? These stockholders, as soon as they have a part in the ownership of a big business, become more loyal supporters of good government and all that goes to make business sound and stable.

The distribution of ownership is one of the reasons why revolution never gets a real start in the United States.

HOPE

As long as you can hope, you have a chance.

PRESS COMMENT

30 COWS ALREADY APPLIED FOR

The more and better cows proposition put forward some few weeks ago by the Ralls Chamber of Commerce is rapidly rounding into "working order." Already some thirty farmer shave indicated a desire to purchase the cows, Mr. Young, vocational agriculture teacher in Ralls schools and an expert judge of dairy cows has located some good ones well worth the money down state.

Both the First National and Security State Bank and Trust company of this city have signified their desire to co-operate in the movement to stock the Ralls country with better dairy cows and are anxious to assist their farm customers in acquiring the animals at the lowest price possible, with no profit on the first cost of the cows.

Now, that's the way to do things, folks. We have in a manner gone on financial rocks trying to plant the whole earth in cotton. While the cotton was being hailed out and eaten by worms and feed crops went right ahead and matured abundantly. We have gobs of feed in this country and now that we know how to grind and mix it so that it's as good dairy feed as is obtainable anywhere all we need is more and better cows and a lot of regular toil in pulling the milk out of the cows, to place this country back in a prosperous condition. Oh, of course the country is not "broke" like a lot of countries are, but we are worse off than a country having the fertile soils that we have ought to be. The one crop method did it, and the only way to pull out is to have plenty of cows, chickens, turkeys and hogs to market our feed crops through at the greatest profit.

Mr. Farmer, if you are interested in more and better cows, see Mr. Bullock at the Ralls Chamber of Commerce or talk it over with your banker.—Ralls Banner.

FORTUNATE SELECTIONS

Again the American representation on the reparations commission is to be Young and Dawes, but with Rufus Dawes serving in place of his brother, Vice President Charles G. Dawes, who served with Mr. Young several years ago in working out the so-called Dawes plan. The American delegation probably is not weakened by the substitution of Rufus Dawes for the vice president. Rufus Dawes is one of the most successful bankers of Chicago, and is nationally known as a financier. He is a worthy colleague of Mr. Young, who was given credit by Vice President Dawes for being chiefly responsible for the reparations plan now in operation. This American team of financial experts will command high respect at the reparations council table, and indeed among the people of Europe, since the work Mr. Young did four years ago in shaping up a plan for the liquidation of the reparations obligation has been regarded as generally successful and satisfactory. The powers interested in evolving a plan for the final settlement selected Mr. Young to serve again on the commission, and they took Mr. Young to serve again on the commission, and they took Mr. Dawes as second choice, being unable to secure the vice president again. Our government refused to take any hand in the selection of these experts, but is highly gratified at the selections that were made. Our country is fortunate in that men of their ability, character and standing are to serve as the American representatives, although it is understood, of course, that they do not officially represent the Washington government. — Houston Post-Dispatch.

THIS HAPPENED

ASHTORETH ASHE is involved in a fascinating and rather dangerous conversation with HOLLIS HART. They are quite alone in a little house on the mountain, with the shutters drawn, and the place tightly barricaded. Outside a hurricane rages.

Ashtoreth is a stenographer, and Mr. Hart is her millionaire employer. The little house on the mountain is his. And the scene of their romantic sojourn is an island in the West Indies—the loveliest island in the world.

Ashtoreth stopped there for a few hours, when the cruise ship on which she was traveling put in the harbor. To her delighted amazement, she met Mr. Hart strolling through the village streets. He had visited the island en route to South America, and becoming infatuated with its beauty, had rented a plantation and house full of servants.

Ashtoreth goes to his place for dinner, and purposely misses the boat, so that she may have an adventure with him. He treats her with charming deference, and makes tender love, while she seeks, in vain, to wring an actual proposal from him. He christens her "Orchid" because she reminds him, he says, of the flowers. Because she is so exquisite, and remote, and cool.

Ashtoreth tells him a great deal of her early life, and is recounting now the story of her father's death, and telling of a letter which was her father's bequest to her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXI

Ashtoreth was remembering that Maizie's hard-earned money had paid for her tropical trip. That Maizie's devotion had nursed her when she was ill. That Maizie's love enfolded her every hour of the day and night. . . . And, remembering, she felt low and hateful. Unworthy for Maizie to mother and cherish.

But she had started her story, and she would finish it.

"I love my mother with all my heart," she told herself. "Is it wrong that I should know her, also, for what she is?"

And aloud she said, "Daddy had strange ideas about morality. You know how everybody thinks that if a woman is loyal to her husband, and works for him, and never looks at anybody else but him—why, they just naturally call her a moral woman. Don't they? Everybody does."

Mr. Hart nodded.

"Why, I suppose so," he said.

"Well, daddy didn't," she declared. "He thought that any woman who got married, just to get herself supported, was exactly as bad as if she'd never married the man at all. But just lived with him.

"Here's one paragraph from the letter he wrote me. I can quote every word of it because I know it all by heart:

"'If you trust exclusively to your youthful charms for your provision in life,' he said, 'and if your cunning is further prompted by your mother, you will have just the same aim as a courtesan, Ashtoreth. Only you wil be wiser and less honest'."

Ashtoreth paused to explain. "I found the letter," she said, "three days after daddy died. He had tucked it under some things in my bureau drawer. It was in a big white envelope, all stuck up with red sealing wax. And it said on it: 'For Ashtoreth; a personal letter. To be opened after her father's death.'

"That was long before Judge Lindsey and everybody started talking about companionate marriage. But daddy quoted something that he said Nietzsche said. 'If married couples did not live together,' he said, 'happy marriages would be more frequent.' And after that he wrote, 'To be surfeited with loves is a tragedy. In marriage there is inevitable satiety.' And he advised me, if I loved a man a great deal, to refuse to live with him."

Hollis pursed his lips reflectively. "That was pretty strong fodder for a 16-year-old girl," he observed.

"Well, he said that women like to believe that love can do everything," expounded Ashtoreth. "That it is a superstition peculiar to us. And that the sooner I found out how helpless and blundering even the best and deepest love is, the better off I'd be. And he said that love destroys, rather than saves."

"Do you suppose," asked Hollis, "that he felt that your mother's love for him had destroyed him?"

Ashtoreth hesitated.

"Well," she said, "I think mother's devotion was a sort of suffocating thing. Mother isn't what you'd call an inspirational person, Holly."

"Did your father read Nietzsche a great deal?" inquired Hollis. "Would you call him a student of Nietzsche's philosophy?"

"Why yes, I suppose so. Daddy read a lot," explained Ashtoreth.

Hollis held her hands in his.

"And don't you know," he asked her, "that Nietzsche preached a decadent philosophy? The philosophy of gloom and horror. Now, my dear, I wouldn't hurt your feelings for the world. And I've no doubt your father was a remarkable man, and a wonderful father. . . . But you know, it seems, Orchid, you're rather overlooking your mother. She sounds to me like a lovely, wholesome soul. And it's rather a dreadful think you know, child, when a young girl gets to feeling so very superior to the mother who bore her."

Ashtoreth smiled loftily.

"That 'mother who bore you' stuff bores me to tears," she announced. "All that sanctity drivel about motherhood! Why, just because a woman's been through a perfectly normal, natural experience, people should start writing poems and singing songs about her, is more than I can see."

Hollis smiled at her.

"Don't," he besought, "be a Modern! Be a nice, old-fashioned little girl."

"But I'm not old-fashioned!" she cried, "and I'm not particularly nice."

"Well, I think you are," he told her. "So don't spoil my good opinion of you."

"I wonder," she remarked, changing the subject suddenly, "if it's ever going to stop blowing. Maybe I won't be leaving tomorrow after all. I should think the whole side of the mountain would be an absolute washout."

"It probably will be," he admitted. "How would you like to stay a little longer?"

"I'd be fearfully compromised," she declared, "but I certainly would love it."

"You're compromised already," he said. "Wait until your pious friends learn that you've visited with me for a week!"

He laughed boyishly. . . . . .

"What will Sadie say?" he asked.

But Ashtoreth did not want to talk about Sadie.

"Oh, she'd say plenty," she admitted. "But I don't propose broadcasting this little stop-over, you know, Hollis. I'm not going to WNAC and make a speech. Or hand out a statement to the press. What makes you think my pious friends are going to learn about it?"

"Pious friends," he told her sagely, "have strange and devious ways of finding out what we least want them to know. Haven't you discovered that?"

"I don't believe I ever tried to keep things from people before," she answered.

"W-w-w-ee-ee-e!" shrieked the wind. "W-w-ee-ee-ee!" . . . And they well silent to listen. It was moaning now like a lunatic. Mournfully, as if it repented the devastation it had wrought.

Ashtoreth surprised herself when she spoke again.

"I mean," she said, "I'm always keeping things from people . . . . I suppose everybody pretends—but I'm the worst counterfeit that ever lived! It was a preposterous lie for me to say I never tried to keep things from people. To tell the truth, Holly, it's the busiest thing I do."

She laughed nervously.

"It's this uncanny wind that's making me so truthful," she confessed. "It's as if God was flying all around the place . . . . I mean I've been making-believe all my life. I'm always trying to keep things from people. My poverty, for instance. The fact that I've never been very much to school—I didn't tell you, Holly, that mother and I bought fur coats and a walnut bedroom set with the money daddy put away for college. And other clothes, besides. Dresses we couldn't afford, and hats, and shoes and things. In those days I'd rather put money on my back than in my head. I know better now, but it's too late."

Hollis laughed softly.

"You're having a perfect orgy of confessions," he said. "When the wind stops howling you'll be sorry you've told me so much about yourself."

Ashtoreth looked thoughtful.

"I'm a fraud, I know," she declared. "But I think almost everybody pretends they're nicer than they really are. If we didn't, I don't believe anybody would like us very much. It's only when you get to know people awfully well that you dare to be yourself with them. And I don't know that it's wise even then.

"For instance, if I hadn't pretended that I was a most unusual stenographer that first time you ever saw me, you'd never have thought about me again. If you'd known I was just a common, kitchen-garden working girl, you wouldn't have looked at me.

"Millionaires don't play with the hired help unless the hired help looks rather special. So I started showing off the very moment you noticed my ring. Talking about scarabs and Cleopatria. And pretending my mother was a student of antiques . . . . . "

• • • •

Ashtoreth blushed . . . . . "Of course" she said, "girls always tell lies to men that interest them. When a woman is absolutely truthful with a man she either loves him beyond all reason or he hasn't registered at all."

Hollis came and stood in front of her.

"You're being absolutely truthful with me," he said.

She tried to laugh. To pass it off lightly . . . . "It's the wind," she declared. I'm afraid to tell lies. I'm scared to death. God might strike me dead with a mango branch. Then what would I do?"

"Did you mean what you just said?" he demanded.

"Why, yes," she parried. "I guess so. I mean, I never told the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth before."

"Then I don't register at all?"

"Now, see here, Hollis Hart!" she protested. If you think you can win a declaration out of me that way! . . . . You know perfectly well you do."

He drew her to her feet. Their eyes, as they faced each other, were nearly on a level. Gray-green eyes blazing into blue ones. Hollis' eyes, reflected Ashtoreth, were a sort of unholy blue, and extremely thrilling when they flashed like

Today's Poem

"So live that when thy summons comes
To join that innumerable caravan
Which moves to that mysterious realm
Where each shall take his chamber
In the silent Halls of Death,
Thou go'est not like the quarry slave—
Scourged to his dungeon—but,
Sustained and soothed by an unfaltering trust,
Approach thy grave, like one who Wraps the draperies of his couch about him

that.

"But you don't love me," he insisted. "Now you're telling more lies.

"How do you know I don't?" she asked . . . . and shrank a little from the fire that blazed in those blue, blue eyes.

"One doesn't banter about love," he said.

"I'm not bantering," she told him . . . Now . . . . now he was going to tell her that he loved her. . . . . Loved her truly.

"Little lovely Orchid, playing with love."

* * * *

"You're a darling fraud," he told her. "And I'm glad you're going home tomorrow."

"Why?" she asked. "Why am I a fraud? And why are you glad I'm going home?"

He answered her seriously.

"You're a fraud," he said, "for the same reason that you are beautiful, and young, and soft. And make men want to love you . . . . . Because you cannot help it, my dear . . . . And I'm glad you're going home because I'm falling pretty seriously in love with you."

" 'Alas!' " he moaned, " 'how easily things go wrong!

A sigh too deep or a kiss too long,

And life is never the same again.' "

You don't really love me," she affirmed.

"Oh, my dear," he cried, "I'm old enough to be your father. It's ridiculous for us to talk of love. How could I hope to make a girl like you love me?"

Ashtoreth thought of a number of ways . . . . There was, for instance, that flying machine she had heard about . . . The foreign car that waited outside the office, with the chauffeur in a crimson livery that matched the leather . . . . . There was a little chateau somewhere in Normandy . . . . . And a chalet in Switzerland.

All in all, there were a number of things calculated to increase Hollis' hopes . . . . They weren't however, things a girl could mention at the moment.

Prospectors Using Radio To Spot Ore-Bearing Soil

Pick And Shovel Are Relegated To Past By New Mode

Radio Engineers Are Taking Place Of Once-Picturesque Mineral Hunter All Through The Country

By NEA Service

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 26.—The prospector has left his pick and shovel behind and taken to radio.

This is slightly more cumbersome to carry and perhaps a litle too technical for the kind of adventurer who followed the mountain trails of years ago, but it's much more certain of getting results.

It is for this reason that large mining companies in the United States, Canada and Mexico have hired radio engineers to locate ores for them which otherwise would require weeks and months of patient and costly search. All that is needed is a radio transmitter with a loop aerial, a radio receiver with another type of loop antenna, and the knowledge of geometry and trigonometry that is required in land surveying.

The most recent radio prospecting for ore bodies has been made in the fields around Miami, Okla. Many ore bodies have been located in Canada and Mexico, and methods of radio prospecting have been taken up generally as a result of this. Thousands of dollars have been saved, while weeks of time and considerable effort have been obviated.

Current Induced In Ore.

The radio process is based on the fact that electrical currents can be induced in electro-conductive bodies below the earth's surface by the operation of a transmitting apparatus, or oscillator, on the ground above. High frequency currents of about 7500 kilocycles are employed. These currents induce a secondary electric-magnetic field whose axis can be determined by means of radio receiving set with a double loop antenna. The set is also operated above ground.

From observations made at the receiver, the location of the underground conductor, which may be the ore sought, can be calculated approximately by simple surveying methods.

Engineers using this process do not pretend to find commercial bodies of ore. They merely guarantee to locate a conductor if one of sufficient magnitude exists below the scene of operation.

The engineers frankly state that the outfit cannot locate zinc ore because the mineral is not a conductor and it doesn't contain sulphide in large enough quantity to render it conductive to high frequency currents. But zinc ore almost invariably is found where lead ore exists and the radio apparatus does indicate the location of lead.

Simple Apparatus Used.

In the outfit used in Oklahoma and Canada, the transmitter consists of a two 75-watt oscillator tubes in parallel in a Hartley circuit. For power two six-volt storage batteries are carried to supply the filaments and a small rotary converter and transformer supplies 900 volts of plate current. A large six-foot loop is used as antenna. All this apparatus is portable.

The receiver is much more compact and portable. It consists of a three-tube receiving set and a double loop aerial that looks much like a huge pair of spectacles when mounted on a tripod. The set works in conjunction with the surveyor's transit on the same tripod.

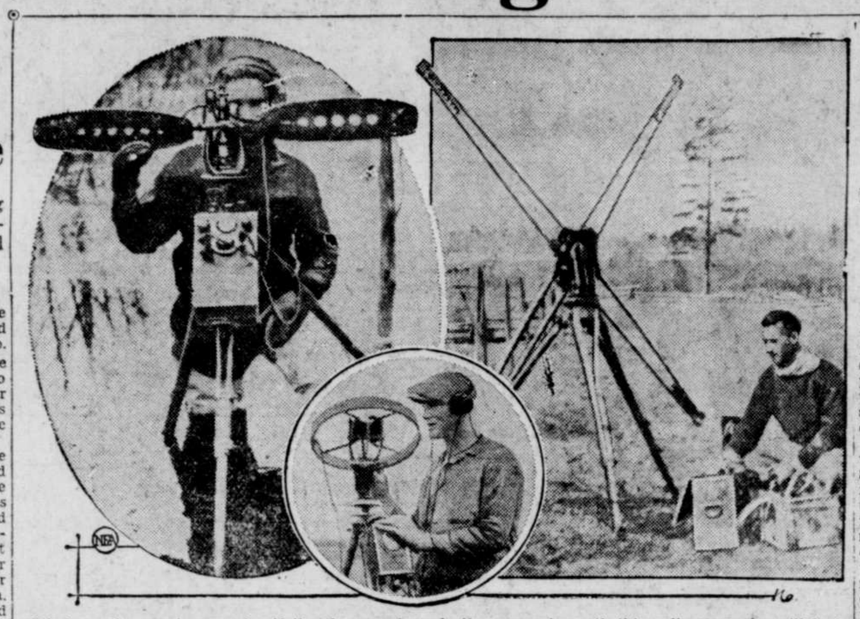

In operation the two sets are placed about 100 yards apart. Two men assigned to the broadcasting end turn the hand generator and manipulate the directional antenna and instruments on the sending panel. The engineer in charge handles the receiving end, with earphones over his head and the double loop and transit before him.

As the engineer rotates the loop he listens for the radio impulses coming from the supposed ore field by induction from the transmitter. When these impulses reach a minimum of strength in the receivers, the engineer knows that his loop is at right angles to the direction from which the waves are coming and that he is facing the center of the ore field.

Located by Angles.

After jotting down his location, he moves to another spot and makes similar observations. After a few such observations, it is a simple matter to find the central point from which the electric lines of force emanate. That's where the center of the ore field is located and that's where drilling for the ore is suggested.

The radio instrument may show many "zero" readings in country which has no conducting ores. That marks this territory as of ore mining value, except for zinc or oil on which the radio process cannot work.

Whatever the country may be, if there's current-conducting ore underneath this radio prospector will find it. At left is the receiving apparatus with the spectacle-shaped loop antenna, and at right is the transmitter with large square aerial. Between these is an engineer operating another type of receiver.

Hoover Sees Navy Radio Machinery Put In High Gear

President-Elect So Long In Close Touch With Problems of Broadcasting As He Observed On Tour

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—President-elect Hoover, who as an engineer and communications expert, is intensely interested in the swift development of radio had an opportunity on his South American trip to observe the efficiency of short wave transmission as developed by the navy.

Thousands of miles away on the waters of the South Pacific and South Atlantic, radio central of the navy here or some other station in the naval network was in communication with him and his party almost hourly. To maintain this contact and to handle thousands of words daily in press dispatches, navy communications made elaborate plans to clear channels for traffic and maintain relays in the event of breaks in the "line."

On the southward trip, the battleship Marylan done night was unable to maintain communication with San Diego. This situation was detected by the "security watch" at the navy department here. He notified radio central which established communication with the ship. A few nights later the Maryland talked with Brownsville, Tex.

Later the ship routed all its traffic through the station at Balboa, Canal Zone. To guard against possible breakdowns in communication, the U. S. S. Rochester was ordered to the Galapagos islands, and in far-off Honolulu, navy radio operators stood watch for emergency service.

Communication with the battleship Utah, bringing the party north from Buenos Aires, demonstrated the effectiveness of a new high frequency transmitter with the comparatively low power of 1,000 wats, navy radio men say. A few years ago, 100 times more power was required to send messages a distance of 4,000 miles on the low or intermediate frequencies.

The Utah used four wavelengths, the selection depending on day or night transmission, weather conditions and "skip distance" effects. These frequencies were tried out on the southward trip of the Utah with radio central listening. In this manner, the most effective channel for the distance and time of day was determined for the return journey.

LAMESA, Jan. 26—The mercury dropped as low as 15 degrees here Thursday night, which is the lowest point observed here this winter according to weather officials.

Far North Is No Longer Lonely

OTTAWA, Jan. 26—One hundred and fifty miles north of the Arctic Circle, on Coronation Gulf, may be perfect isolation and cause many men to grumble, but they get dandy radio reception there.

At the Bernard Harbor Royal Canadian Mounted Police post in that district, the constables received 169 American stations, 33 Canadian, seven from the British Isles and others from Danzig, Berlin, Hamburg, Madrid, Reykjavik, Stockholm, Bergen, Tokio and Brisbane, Australia, in seven months.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 26 (AP).—WKBC, a 10-watt station, is known as Alabama's "emergency broadcasting station." Operated by H. L. Ansley, an amateur, it goes on the air only when its big brother here, WBRC, is incapacitated.

Radio Is Widely Used By Police

Five Frequencies Are Given By Federal Commission For Pennsylvania State Police Work

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26 (AP)—Extensive use of radio communications to aid in the apprehension of lawbreakers is to be made by the Pennsylvania state police. The federal radio commission has granted their five applications for frequencies in the short wave band.

The Massachusetts police, the Dallas police and fire departments and the Baltimore and Boston fire departments have been assigned short waves. Hearing will be soon on the application of the New York police department for two channels.

Texas Police Ask Test Of Eyesight

Motor Accidents Frequently Traceable To Very Poor Vision Of Driver, Survey Asserts

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—Texas police and traffic officials in common with those in 68 of the largest cities of the country favor regulations which will require the eyesight of motor drivers to be up to a reasonable standard before they are permitted to operate cars, according to the Eye Sight Conservation Council of America.

The council has just completed a nationwide survey which disclosed that nearly two-thirds of the states do not require licenses of all drivers of automobiles. This report emphasizes the necessity of licensing all drivers so that the state may pass upon the qualifications of the individual and both control and enforce safety measures on public highways.

The fatalities in a single year from auto accidents aggregated 25,000. "The physical capacity of the driver is of obvious significance and an important requirement should be fairly good eyesight," the council declares.

Contribution to a national symposium of police chiefs and motor vehicle commissioners, W. H. Lee, chief of police of Fort Worth, told the council: "I believe a city regulation governing eyesight requirements would be of much benefit."

Texas has no provision by statute or departmental regulation for testing the eyesight of operators of motor vehicles.

The council's survey showed that a very small proportion of the drivers of motor vehicles in the United States are required to give evidence that they can see sufficiently well to enable them to operate a motor vehicle safely upon public highways.

Wayland College Seeks $250,000

Board Of Trustees After Endowment To Insure Finances For Operating Plainview Institution

PLAINVIEW, Jan. 26.—A $250,000 endowment for Wayland college is the goal set by members of the board of trustees in session here Thursday. This action of the board was the climax of a two-day conference of Panhandle-Plains Baptists here. More than 100 representatives of fifty churches in this section attended the meetings.

The board plans to dispose of land owned by the college, expecting to realize approximately $13,000 which will be used as a nucleus for the endowment fund. To this amount Dr. J. E. Nunn of Amarillo has pledge $5,000 with an additional $5,000 for each $20,000 raised for at least the first $100,000. The balance of the fund will be solicited from the churches and individuals interested in the college.

Wayland College is a junior college institution, which was established here in 1909. A drive for funds last summer cleared the college from debt. It has an enrollment of approximately 350 students.

The value of Christian education and the part which Wayland can play in the development of this section of the country and in the character building of its citizenry were the main themes of several addresses made by Baptist leaders in this locality during the conference.

Pastors in attendance pledged their co-operation to the endowment plan.

FORM FOUR-H CLUBS

Eight Junior Groups Being Organized In Howard

BIG SPRING, Jan. 26.—Eight junior 4-H clubs with an enrollment of approximately 200 boys will be organized the early part of next week in the rural schools of this county, according to County Agent Bush. A number of schools are being visited each day by both county and home demonstration agent and plans are being laid for the organization of these clubs. Boys between the ages of fifteen and twenty are eligible for membership. The major part of the club work with the boys will be done with dairy cattle, poultry and grains.

Before The Microphone

The educational possibilities of radio have been recognized since the days when it was well known as "wireless," but surprisingly little has been done to make it in any way a formal adjunct to our educational system.

It will be interesting to watch the outcome of Ohio's recent effort along this line. Broadcasts over WLW, Cincinnati, supplied by the state department of education, reaching a schoolroom audience of well over 250,000, should provide enough evidence from which it will be possible to judge the wisdom of making loud speakers as familiar objects in the classrooms of the future as blackboards.

Giving the public what it wants is part of Ervin Schenck's job as noon-hour organist for WLW, Cincinnati. So when he found that out of 580 letters received in six months, chiefly from housewife listeners, only five requested serious classics and only one a "hot" program, he concluded that sentimental ballads and "hearts and flowers" effect are about what the majority of married women today like to listen to over the radio. And that is what they are getting from Schenck.

What do radio men do on their day off? Having heard the one about the postmen who go for a walk, you probably have guessed that they listen to their radios. This is almost correct, except that instead of listening at home, they are usually to be found haunting their studios. Statisticians, who claim to know about these matters, say that, as a class, radio men give more gratis overtime to their jobs than any other.

HOTEL GETS TELEVISION

Two 100-foot towers will be erected on top of the Hotel Carteret in New York City, between which an aerial will be strung for the broadcasting of radio pictures. This hotel is said to be the first in the country to install television for the entertainment of its guests. A receiving outfit has been installed in the auditorium where the guests can view radio's newest invention.

To Ban Duty On Foreign-Bought Cars By New Act

Congress Asked To Amend Tariff Act Allowing U. S. Citizens To Bring Back Cars Duty-Free

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 26.—Residents of the United States purchasing American cars in foreign countries would be allowed to bring them to this country duty-free, under an amendment to the Tariff Act, sought by the American Automobile Association in behalf of the motorists of the nation.

This statement was issued at National Headquarters of the A. A. A. today, on the heels of a letter sent by Ernest N. Smith, General Manager, to Representative Willis C. Hawley, (R. Ore.) chairman of the Ways and Means committee, asking that consideration be given to the advisability of such an amendment to the present tariff law.

Decision to vigorously campaign for the amendment to the Tariff Act was reached at a meeting of the board of directors of the A. A. A., held in New York durtng the recent automobile show.

Mr. Smith pointed out that approximately 400,000 Americans went abroad in 1928, and that travel in foreign lands by residents of the United States in their own motor cars has became so great that the A. A. A. finds it essential to maintain its own representatives at twenty-three European ports.

His letter to Chairman Hawley follows in part:

"There is also an increasing number of Americans who go abroad and who purchase American made cars for touring purposes. Under our present laws an American citizen can take his car with him abroad and bring it back without being subject to the imposition of American duty. However, if he wishes to purchase an American car while abroad, he not only must pay the foreign duty on such car but must pay an American duty if he desires to bring the car back with him to the United States. It is submitted that this is a hardship which the present law did not contemplate. Furthermore, it is believed that the removal of the present duty would not in any way act as a deterriment to American commerce, but on the contrary would stimulate the sale of American cars in foreign countries.

"It is believed that our recommendation in this matter can be put into effect by an amendment to paragraph 369 of schedule three of the Tariff Act, exempting from its provisions American made automobiles purchased in foreign countries."

Out of 733 offences investigated in connection with the Edinburgh (London) juvenile courts, 257 were commited on Sunday.

One of the most important topics for research is that of the research is that of the relationship between the motor and the fuel that is fed into it. The United States Bureau of Standards is studying just this relationship in order to improve the motor and find fuels that will go best with whatever types are in use.

A method of determining the effect of certain fuels on certain motors is to see what the gasoline does toward accelerating the engine under certain conditions.

In the search for these tell-tale facts, the engineers have asked themselves two questions. One is:

Why is it that when you step down on the accelerator suddenly, the engine sometimes misses?

The other question is: In such event, is the fuel to be blamed or the engine or the carburetor which mixes the fuel and air for the engine?

Partial answers has been found for these questions.

For instance it has been discovered that the character of the fuel has something to do with the performance of the engine during acceleration. One fuel may not be as good as another and yet perform better under certain conditions. In winter time one fuel may produce better acceleration performance than another and yet might be poorer than the other fuel under summer conditions.

We have often found it difficult to accelerate with a cold engine. But the government engineers find that the temperature of the water jacket, which is practically that of the engine, has nothing to do with the motor's acceleration. In fact the power plant will speed up as well with a cold water jacket as with a hot one.

What does affect the acceleration is the temperature of the mixture that enters the engine. If this is preheated, as many motors provide, it will accelerate the engine efficiently as fuel—and the motor—will allow.

For this purpose the intake manifold is heated from the exhaust, and the fine spray that comes from the carburetor is further volatilized almost up to the point of combustion in some engines even before it gets into the combustion chamber.

The more volatile the mixture before combustion the better does the engine operate and the more efficiency is obtained from the fuel.

Fuel volatilization is part of the study the Bureau of Standards has set for itself in this connection. The engineers have worked with lean and rich mixtures in various degrees and haxe measured the degree of motor acceleration obtained from the use of each. They have tested carburetors working alone and others with the attachment of various auxiliary devices which have been designed to give practically as good acceleration with any low-grade fuel as could be gotten with a better fuel.

Ultimately we shall be told by these engineers how to get better performance with the use of less fuel.

85 Miles Made By New Hudson Plant

In outward aspect, the new rubber-mounted plant of the The Greater Hudson—as the new car is called—remains the 3 1-2x5 F-head motor developed by the company. In its different performance, however, the engine betokens the adoption of a number of refinements. These become evident, first of all, in the circumstance that the actual delivered power output is increased from 80 to 92 horsepower, with speed, hill-climbing ability and other operating features correspondingly bettered.

Among the engineering features affecting the engine are a newly perfected "moose horn" type manifold through which a thoroughly equalized fuel mixture is delivered to all cylinders.

Grand Prize Of America Is New Speedway Name

Annual Memorial Day Race At Indianapolis Is Re-Named, According To A. A. A. Contest Board

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The annual 500-mile Memorial Day race on the Indianapolis Speedway, which since 1911 has been the most colorful event in the world of automobile racing, will henceforth be titled the Grand Prize of America.

This announcement was made today by the contest board of the American Automobile Association, the official governing body of racing, which voted at its annual meeting in New York last week to award this high honor to the Indianapolis classic, which has always been run under A. A. A sanction.

Seventeenth Race Held

The contest board said that the Memorial Day event in May will mark the seventeenth renewal of this premier race. It was first inaugurated in 1911, but in 1916, due to the World War, it was shortened to 300 miles and was not held in 1917 and 1918.

"Throughout the period of its running," says the board" the Indianapolis race has consistently been regarded as the greatest held on track and speedway. At the same time, its cash prizes have been steadily greater than those offered on any other speedway and the event has always been the focal point of interest on the part of automobile and allied accessory industries."

Permanent Trophy Announced

The American Automobile Association also announced that it will award a suitable permanent challenge trophy to the winners of future races on Memorial Day. The winner will be presented with a replica and given possession of the trophy for a period of eleven possession of the trophy for a period of eleven months. The A. A. A. said this recognition is well deserved and will give added prestige to the greatest race developed up to this time in automobile racing history.

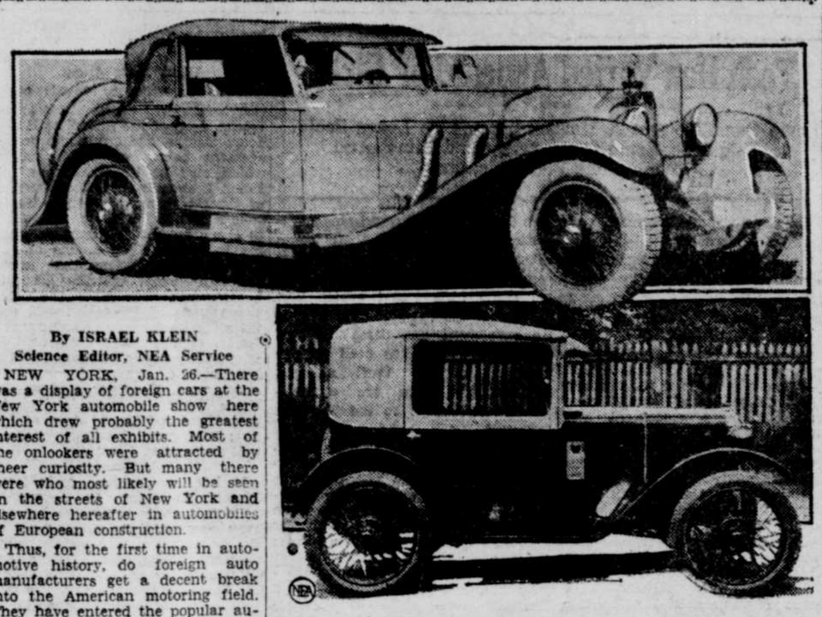

TWIN PRINTS

New skirts for spring now come in what are called twin prints. There are two sizes of the same pattern, the finely printed one for the frock and perhaps kerchief, the larger, bolder print of the same pattern for the sports coat.

SPRING STRAWS

The first of the early spring hats show a preference for either bakou of Paris Meme straw used in conjunction with fine felts or fabrics.

Foreign Cars Take America's Eye For First Time

By ISRAEL KLEIN
Science Editor, NEA Service

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—There was a display of foreign cars at the New York automobile show here which drew probably the greatest interest of all exhibits. Most of the onlookers were attracted by sheer curiosity. But many there were who most likely will be seen on the streets of New York and elsewhere hereafter in automobiles of European construction.

Thus, for the first time in automotive history, do foreign auto manufacturers get a decent break into the American motoring field. They have entered the popular auto show for the first time.

This showing was the first of a series of similar appearances of most of these automobiles in a half dozen cities of the country. The cars include the Daimler, Renault, Mercedes-Benz, Vauxhall and Austin—from the high-price field to the low.

The cars are unique in many details. The Renault, for instance, appears in sixes and eights, the latter being the latest Renault models and replacing production of the four-cylinder cars. It is a straight eight with three speeds instead of four formerly used, and is of sturdy construction.

Unique Renault Features.

The Renault eight has such European novelties as a separate small radiator underneath the water radiator for oil cooling, triple spring suspension in the rear, the extra cross spring designed to eliminate sideways, a single front radiator instead of the old-type Renault radiator of three pieces, the starter geared to the flywheel from the side instead of being attached to the crankcase in front, and a mechanical servo-brake system which makes only a slight touch of the foot on the brake pedal necessary for complete braking efforts.

With a body built along the lines of the highest priced cars in America, this car sells in New York for $14,000.

On the other end of the line is the tiny Austin "seven." Here is a car that looks so small, one is tempted to pick it up and carry it home as a gift to the children. Its four cylinder motor is half the size of the four of any American car. Its controls are small, its transmission box is small, its wheels, its axles, its springs, in fact every part is small.

Yet this little car is highly popular in England where it is made. It is said to go 50 miles on a gallon of fuel and to make as high as 50 miles an hour. It has three-speed transmission and only two brakes, although the emergency acts on the front wheels.

Less Than Half a Ton.

The whole car is 9 feet 2 inches long and weighs 850 pounds One semi-elliptic spring is used across the back for suspension, while two quarter-elliptic springs are in front. Shock absorbers are in front and rear, all of the mechanical type,

Close by is the Vauxhall, another "small" car, but larger by far than the Austin. The Vauxhall is the recently acquired General Motors product in England.

The chief features of the 20-60, which is the most popular type, are its overhead valves, nine-bearing crankshaft, four-speed transmission, four-wheel brakes, adjustable front seats and shock absorbers, in addition to the regular run of improvements found on the American cars. It is a six.

This car looks more like an American product than any of the rest at the show.

The Mercedes and the Daimler, one German and the other English, accompany the Renault, which is French, in the "exclusive" field. The Mercedes and its chassis for the sport model has been drawing great crowds at the New York show. It is the only automobile, not a racer, which is using a supercharger to boost its efficiency at high speeds.

Such American notables as Jack Dempsey, Al Jolson, Cliff Durant, Harold K. Vanderbilt and Charles A. Levine own the sports model Mercedes.

The features of this automobile, besides the supercharger, are its 120 horsepower six-cylinder engine, dual ignition, two carburetors two sparkplugs in each cylinder, disappearing top with side posts folding into the back, triple-exhaust manifold appearing outside the hood, servo-brakes and choice of left or right-hand drive.

Only one Raimler is shown. That is the model which the king of England owns. It is a twin-six sleeve valve engine of 150 horsepower, with such features as dual ignition with dual carburetors, vacuum servo brakes, vibration damper of the clutch type, a steering damper to eliminate wheel wobble and electrical control of the oil and electrical systems.

This car can be had for $18,600 in New York. That includes silver plating of all such parts as are chromium plated on the average American car and upholstery that is truly fit for a king.

Brakes Essential As Safety Factor

All authorities agree that brakes are the greatest single safety factor on an automobile. For that reason it is important that brakes be kept in perfect condition and adjustment, according to T. H. Stambaugh, general service manager, Olds Motor Works.

"Much depends on the first adjustment of brakes at the factory. If this is correctly done brakes will wear in evenly and future adjustments will not be often or difficult. The brakes of every Oldsmobile are adjusted at the factory by means of a special dynamic brake tester, which definitely and precisely indicates the exact braking effort developed by the brake at each wheel, thus enabling the mechanics, in making adjustments, to attain absolutely correct distribution of braking effort among the four wheels and perfect equalization between the right and left front wheel brakes.

"The brake tester is an electric motor driven dynamometer with a complete unit for each wheel. The four units are imbedded in the floor and each consists of an operating motor, speed reduction gears, driving roll and weighing mechanism."

Modernistic Type Chassis Is Shown

A new "modernistic" chassis showing a mottled mother-of-pearl finish under brilliant colored lights is proving a leading attraction to the Oakland-Pontiac booth at the National Automobile shows.

Already displayed at New York and now on exhibition at Chicago, a chassis of either the new 1929 Pontiac Six or the latest Oakland All-American Six is scheduled to be shown at approximately a hundred other automobile shows in scattered sections of the country.

The unusual appearance of the chassis is achieved by a new finish just composed by Dupont in which fish scales are used as an important ingredient. Oakland officials explained. Three Oaklands and four new Pontiacs have been "dressed up" for the national showings of the chassis, popularly voted as the most distinctive display of its kind at New York.

BRACELET CUFF

A beige satin black crepe frock has its left cuff ornately worked in a pattern of embroidery and jewels to look as if Milady had a very deep bracelet on that wrist.

Inter - Continent Drive Completed

The first motor trip ever made from South America to North America has been completed by Jose Mario Barone who started from Rio de Janeiro on May 29, 1927. He crossed the Texas border January 4, 1929 and continued north to Chicago, thence east to the Atlantic seaboard.

This inter-continent jaunt had never before been accomplished, though several times attempted. Yet Barone optimistically started on a trip that was to take him 20,000 miles across two continents with a 5-year-old Studebaker Tourer that had already traveled more than 100,000 miles!

Barone rolled southward through Sao Paulo and the coffee plantations of prosperous Brazil to Montevideo, capital of Uruguay. Then a swing around the great bay to Buenos Aires, metropolis of the continent and chief city of Argentina.

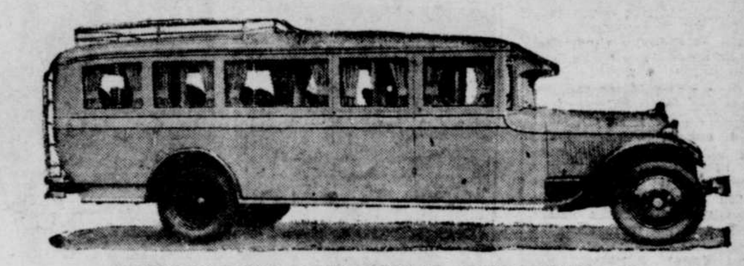

On June 21, the adventurer and his veteran Studebaker headed north over the plains of the Argentine. Eighteen days later, after driving through deep snow crossing the Andes 13,000 feet above sea level near Tres Cruces, Chile, the trail blazers were triumphantly received in LaPaz, capital of Bolivia.

BROWN-ORANGE

More and more evidence appears of the pending popularity of brown and orange. A tweed suit in an invisible brown and tannish check has an orange flat crepe blouse that has a detachable collar of the tweed which lifts outside over the collarless neck line of the three-quarters coat when the whole ensemble is worn.

Conventions To Attract 100,000 People Here In 1929

Lubbock Rapidly Becoming Hub As Gathering Place

South Plains Fair Proved Best Drawing Card For City During Year Just Past

Evidence that Lubbock's claim of being the "Hub of the Plains" is being strengthened constantly with the growth of the city is revealed in a glance backward and a look into the future at the meetings which have been and are scheduled to be held here.

Approximately 75,000 visitors were in Lubbock during last year, exclusive of the tourists, while estimates gathered from various organizations of the city show that more than 100,000 are to be here during 1929.

More than a score of conventions assemblies and meetings were held in Lubbock during 1928 while the number is certain to increase this year. Prominent among the conventions of 1928 were the district Rotary convention which entertained 700 people from over the state, the Northwest Texas district conference bringing more than 500 to the city, the Presbyterian Synod bringing several hundred, the Christian church assembly, the Peddlers' Jubilee, drawing 600 salesmen; the South Plains Music festival, more than 500, the district interscholastic league with its 2,000 or more school children and fans; the State Experiment Farm Congress, entertaining 400 farmers of the section; the annual club encampment with 400 club boys and girls of the South Plains; the Parent-Teachers convention with 600 women present; the county track meet, 150; the district basketball meet, 100; the Tech stockjudging contest, 150 boys; the South Plains ginners' meeting of more than 200 ginners of the section; the annual A. C. C. Reunion of more than 300 ex-students and students and numerous other sales meetings of the automobile, implement and products representatives.

Fair Best Magnet

Drawing the majority of the visitors during the year was the annual Panhandle-South Plains Fair. Officials estimated that fully 60,000 of the people attending the fair during the six days were from over the South Plains territory. They expect a much larger attendance during the next exposition, it was said. Bolstering the regular dates scheduled during the year will be a number of additional meetings in 1929, the calender of activities reveals. The Tech short course, inauguarated on the 29th of this month as an annual two or three-day affair, is expected to attract several hundred farm people from over the section. The Episcopal convention which closed the past week accounted for more than a hundred visitors to the city.

The semi-annual meeting of the South Plains Executives association had 50 in attendance on January 15 and an increase is expected for the next meeting in August. The annual session of the Lubbock Retail Merchants association on March 7 at which time G. W. Sulley, educational director of the National Cash Register company, will lecture, is expected to bring numbers of out-of-town credit men from over the section.

The annual Chamber of Commerce banquet and meeting will be attended by approximately 100 South Plains visitors. The date has not been set, officials said yesterday.

Other meetings during the year, many of them called affairs, are sure to swell the list of visitors into the city. The innovation of sound pictures in the Lubbock theatres will be an attraction for South Plains people. Sessions of the new Federal court and the district courts call numerous witnesses, jurymen, attorneys and visitors to the city.

The annual Tech commence and the Tech pageant are sure to bring their share of visitors as well as other attractions on the college calender such as football games and association meetings.

Not only will the city be filled with various visitors during the year but representatives of organizations are looking to the future and bids are extended constantly for conventions during 1930, paramount among them being the invitation of the Lubbock Kiwanis club for the 1930 convention of the Texas-Oklahoma district.

The city's central location, it's progressive spirit and constant growth place it perennially in the limelight as an ideal meeting place of the section.

Guard Kidnaped Bank Cashier

Detectives have been detailed to guard Benjamin Henderson, cashier at Camargo National bank, Madeira, near Cincinnati, O., since his recent kidnaping. Henderson was forced into an automobile, driven 50 miles, robbed of $12 and thrown out near West Carrollton, O. Two months ago robbers entered his home and at the point of guns marched him to the bank, forcing him to open a vault from which they took $6,000. Above the bank, Henderson and his daughter, Elizabeth, 10, who was with her father when he was kidnaped.

Births Leading Deaths By Thirty Percent Edge Here

Grim Reaper Keeps Well Ahead Of Stork, Vital Statistics For The Year Reveal

Should Lubbock be isolated from the remainder of the world from the standpoint of immigration and further colonization, the city would still experience a steady growth in population if the present ratio of births and deaths continue.

Official records of Dr. J. W. Rollo, city health officers, reveal that the births during the past year outnumbered deaths by approximately thirty per cent.

The rate is about the same each month of the year, the records show. This month, however, has given a sharp reversal as thirty-four deaths and only twenty-two births have been reported. Health authorities explain that this is not a representative month, the death total being inflated due to the slight influenza epidemic felt in the county since the first of the year.

During the year 1928 there were 289 deaths in Lubbock and 370 births, a net increase of almost 100. Of this number 215 were boys and 155 girls.

Both the birth and death total of 1928 showed an increase over the previous year, and this year both totals promise to mount higher.

Dr. Rollo declares that Lubbock has been healthier during the past year than previously, explaining the increase in number of deaths to a much greater proportionate increase in population of the city.

Tech Has Varied Appeal For Girls

** *** *** *** **

Some Come To Get A Husband, Some To Learn Social Etiquette, Some to 'Have a Good Time' And Yes—Some For Education

"Go West, young woman, and get your education."

While these are not exactly the famous words uttered by Greely they may be as well carried out as the well-known advice for young men.

Years ago when the South Plains were first being made into ranches there were more men than women. The cowboys were lonely many times and quite discontent with their lot as is evidenced by reading the weekly papers of those days. During the dreary winter evenings after chores had been attended to and work was finished for a few hours the cowboys would gather around the rough table and by the light of a smoking kerosene lamp painstakingly write to the papers. These letters were often written in rhyme and were poignant in the depth of their need for the companionship of women.

More Girls Attending

Once again there is to be found in the west a place where the men are in the majority and this institution is none other than Texas Tech. When the college was first established it was not expected that so many girls would enroll. The first year the ratio of boys leading in enrollment was three to one. Each year there has been an enrollment increase until at the present time there are approximately 13,00 boys to the 700 girls enrolled.

Popular coeds, upon being interviewed as to their purpose in coming to college, gave vague answers but a summary would probably include: To meet classes, to learn to dance (if they have not already acquired the art); to drive a car; to earn money and spend it; to stay up late and lose sleep without showing it and to get up "affairs" in a hurry.

Husband Hunting Ground

If a coed is approached seriously enough she will admit that she came to college to try to find some one who will help to bear economic burdens in a few years, and to learn enough about some vocation to be able to earn a living.

Many male students declare that the maidens enroll in the Technological college because of the male element and back up their statement with the assertion that their chances for matrimony in Tech are two to one while at many state institutions the girls are in the lead.

Want More Girls

"Tech wants more co-eds each year," declares Miss Margaret Weeks, dean of the School of Home Economics. A modern home management house on the campus which may be the residence of Home Economics girls for a period of three months while they are in college is one incentive, according to the dean, for so many girls being in school. Tech is one of the four state institutions that issues a Smith-Hughes diploma. This is a certificate awarded by the State Department of Education and entitles the holder to teach under the Smith-Hughes plan. Girls in this school may major in design, clothing, foods or general home economics work. Fifty per cent of the Home Economics work is done in the School of Liberal Arts, so the girls have general college work as well as vocational training.

Tech Is Democratic

It hard to separate facts from fallacies in trying to determine why girls come to college because they stay on their guard most of the time. One of the main reasons why the young college is proving so popular as an educating center for them is because Tech's claim that she is democratic and the girls declare that they find the claim to be true.

"The only good money will do you around Texas Tech is to pay your debts," said one student and admittedly there are no financial worries over joining social societies.

The weekly scool paper might be compared to the weeklies of the earlier days if the girls read the longing poems which have appeared from time to time composed by budding poets who will never burst into bloom. Perhaps to these poems is due the large percentage of girls on the campus. Who knows? At any rate the influx of "fair ones" continues.

announcing The New PONTIAC BIG SIX

Introducing Big Car Standards of Luxury, Style and Performance at $745

TODAY a new type of low cost motoring luxury is available. It embraces big car style. It provides big car riding comfort. It embodies big car quality in unseen parts. It includes big car performance even to the point of developing big car power and traveling at big car speed. It is offered by a brand new automobile—the New Pontiac Big Six.

Frankly, the New Pontiac Big Six was designed to appeal to a certain group. True, every motor car owner in America will find in it many things to admire. Two-car families will find it an ideal second car. But the group for which it is primarily intended is made up of people who are beginning to move up in the world. Many of them will soon make the first important step up in the quality of their cars. All are progressive. The New Pontiac Big Six was designed for them.

It comes to them entirely new in appearance. Stunning new bodies by Fisher contribute to the big car beauty and big car style presented by the car as a whole.

Progressive people are seeking greater luxury. The Pontiac Big Six offers them the luxury, the deep, richly upholstered cushions and the charming appointments for which bodies by Fisher are famous the world over. It provides the smooth-riding qualities of a car 167 inches in overall length, with accurately balanced rotating mechanical parts and such advance comfort features as adjustable drivers' seats.

It is a six, but more than just a six. It is a six with the added power of a larger L-head engine and the added smoothness imparted by a dynamically balanced, counter-weighted crankshaft and the famous Harmonic Balancer. It is a six with the added efficiency and silence achieved by means of the G-M-R cylinder head. It is a six with the added cold-weather advantages provided by the cross-flow radiator, thermostatically controlled.

From fan to rear axle, its "line of drive" is in accurate dynamic balance. Its new brakes are of the internal four-wheel type which neither mud nor rain nor ice can prevent from operating efficiently.

As for its performance, you can drive it at express train speed. You can watch it accelerate alongside the finest cars on the road. You can test its power under any conditions, confident of its ability to pull through. Meanwhile it continues to provide that unmatched dependability for which every Pontiac has been famed.

Only a few highlights in its construction have been mentioned. Just enough to prove that the Pontiac Big Six is entirely new and capable of meeting progressive Americans' demand. But the amazing thing about it is that it gives so much big car luxury, style and performance at prices which come within practically everyone's reach!

Prices, $745 and up, f. o. b. factory, plus delivery charges. Bumpers and rear fender guards regular equipment at slight extra cost. Check Oakland-Pontiac delivered prices—they include lowest handling charges. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

Pontiac Six Has Big Car Values

Flexible Performance And Improved Bodies Gives New General Motor Line Popular Acceptance

Fulfilling advance promises of big car value, the Pontiac Big Six, essentially a brand new car from radiator to tail lamp, went on display today at the showrooms of the local Oakland and Pontiac dealers.

Chassis improvements that give the car flexible performance comparable with cars in a higher price range with bodies styled along entirely different lines, distinguish every model in this newest General Motors line.

Is Volume Leader

While only rounding out its third anniversary, the Pontiac Six enters upon its fourth year a definitely established volume leader, in which position officials of the Oakland Motor Car company are confident it will more firmly entrench itself by reason of the extraordinary value evident in the car for 1929.

All bodies are entirely new, the line including a 2-door sedan, 4-door sedan, coupe, sport roadster with folding rumble seat, sport phaeton, convertible cabriolet with folding rumble seat, and a landaulet sedan. The last two types are innovations in the Pontiac line, having the appearance of custom built bodies.

ON AUTO ROW

Optimism continued to prevail among the ranks of local automobile dealers during the past week, with January sales surpassing the first month of 1928 by a substantial margin. Many Lubock dealers have been unable to fill the demand for their new 1929 products, but nevertheless, report unusual business for the tax-paying month.

Basing their faith in Lubbock and the South Plains upon the evidence of prosperity on all sides, business men from other cities and local dealers have opened up new agencies here to take their place on "Automobile Row" alongside the numerous other automobile concerns.

SALES SPEAK WELL

The sale of new cars during the past week speaks well for local dealers. Whereas new cars are moving rapidly, the sale of used cars has become a serious problem. More than one dealer in Lubbock has ordered his salesmen to take in no more used cars until the present supply is sold out.

TRUCKS ARE SELLING

Although the Royalty Motor Co. has been unable to get as many new cars as could be handled, the local Dodge dealer reports the sale of two 3-ton trucks and five ton trailers to the Ligon Transfer Co. this last week. A tentative deal is under way between the Royalty Motor Co., and the Izard Transportation Co. for a 20 passenger bus. This third city bus will likely be added about April 1, Mr. Izard said.

SHIPMENTS EXPECTED

Two Chevrolet trucks were sold during the last week to Davis and Humphries, wholesale grocers, and to J. A. Rogers, by the Kuykendall Chevrolet Co. The local distributors for this General Motors product have been handicapped because of the scarcity of their 1929 models of the new Chevrolet Six. Shipments should begin coming in within the next few days, Mr. Kuykendall said.

NEW WHIPPETS SOLD

Receiving a new shipment of the new Whippet models Thursday of this last week, the South Plains Motor Co. has delivered a number of new cars within the last few days. These include J. H. Snyder, sedan; C. F. Litton, coach; Bill Bishop, coach; W. T. James, four coach; and Henry Harper, four coach.

OPENS NEW AGENCY

O. W. Moore, manager of the Tony Chisum company in Amarillo for the past nine years, who has recently opened up the Graham-Paige agency in Lubbock, plans to hold the formal opening of the new concern February 10. On this occasion, Mr. Moore hopes to have a number of the larger models on display at his show rooms at 1106 Main.

BAN ON USED CARS

Sale of new cars continues to increase at the Davis Oldsmobile company, according to C. C. Arnold, sales manager, but the used car problem is becoming acute. Because of the slowness at which the old models are moving, the management of this concern has temporarily put a ban on used cars. This will likely be lifted within a short time, Mr. Arnold indicated.

GOUGH TRUCK DISTRIBUTOR

W. H. Leslie, special factory representative of the Studebaker Manufacturing Co., was in Lubbock last week conferring with C. E. Gough, local Studebaker dealer.

Gough Motor Co. has been made the central distributing point in West Texas of Relay trucks, a new product which has recently been placed upon the market. One of these trucks will be on display at the Studebaker show rooms early next week, Mr. Gough said. Heralded as the greatest improvement in motor trucks made in recent years, the Relay is featured by new applied power where the weight of the load adds power to the drive.

Mrs. Paul Barrier, of Barrier Brothers, is the owner of a new President Straight-8 Studebaker. J. H. Teague, prominent rancher and banker of Slaton has also purchased a new Studebaker President, as has W. S. Perry of Tahoka.

NEW FORDS MOVING

New Fords have been rolling off the floor at the Lubbock Motor Co. steadily this month. Thirty-two new cars and one truck have been sold by the local agent. Cars delivered within the last few days include: Vacuum Oil company, Tudor Sedan; Bettes Oil and Tire company, pickup; T. P. Coal and Oil company, Standard Coupe; Vernon Brown, Coupe; Ed D. Allen, Four Door Sedan; W. R. Graves, Sedan; Park Produce company, delivery; W. A. Myrick, jr., Sedan.

The Ragland Motor company, Nash dealers in Lubbock, report the sale of a new Nash "400" Advanced Sedan to W. M. Roberts of Fort Worth. J. W. Turner was delivered a Buick Sedan by Slaughter Motor company Friday. Joe Hilton company reports the sale of a new "75" Chrysler. Carl George, of Slaton, is the owner of a new Hudson Coach.

Writing 'Personals' Not So Easy

But Gathering Of Local Items Meets Many Persons WhoA re Ready And Willing To Supply Material

BY MRS. W. A. McGEE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

If being a personal writer on two full-fledged double dailies does not cause one to seem too personal, well then, there's a great chance that his name may some day be chronicled in the annals of Who's Who in Journalism, in America.

For since the personal writer needs must deal with innumerable cases where humor or pathos figure in, he must guard carefully his stock in trade, lest he become offensive, to the grief-stricken or the over-sensitive individual. His work is tedious and painstaking more particularly because of its minute detail. Too, the writer must get the personal touch, without being too personal! For if the personal touch means anything at all—it means everything. It is the warp and woof of both social and commercial life. It is the very heart-throb so to speak of all humanity. It is that bond of human kindness and understanding without which all fall short of things worthwhile.

Majority Are Courteous

As we go about our semi-daily circuit in the down-town business section of the city—writing personal news—we stumble on to many different types and classes of personalities. The majority of folk however, are always courteous, though not a few distinguish themselves as members of the "hard-boiled" family. When we ask them for personal news, they answer in a curt, brusque voice "No, no news. We don't know anything", shaking their heads as they speak.

Others will grin and try to "kid" us by saying, "No, we never know any news, we're dumb as Dora."

Then again as we enter another office or store, we are met by an individual with a sort of "I don't owe it" expression playing over his face. Naturally, one would think he'd be so tickled upon discovering we were not a bill-collector—that he'd decorate his countenance with a smile, and open up and give us a "scoop" of personal news. But not so. They're not that kind of a "newsie."

Many Help Willingly

Though as we make our rounds here and there, in the shops and stores, we find any number of folk who are willing and proud to tell us all the current personal news they know. While still others are beginning to file news notati .s for us, thanks to their generous souls! May their tribe increase.

At first we found the problem of extracting personal news from the jaws of a hurrying public, not an easy matter. And many would inform us, the had never before been called upon for such news. And others would express delight at now being able to keep tab on friends and relatives, together with Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Smith, who are darting her and there by automobile and aeroplane. For in this day of the double-daily, telephone, telegraph and radio, things must be done in short order so that "those who run may read" the personal column.

Norton Baker Is Back From North

Northern manufacturers consider the Southwest, and especially the region around Lubbock, as one of the most prosperous zones in the country and are concentrating their sales efforts in this area, according to Norton Baker, owner of the Baker Furniture company, who has just returned from a buying tour to Chicago, Grand Rapids and Milwaukee.

Mr. Baker purchased fifteen cars of new furniture ,most of which will go to the Baker store in this city. Part of this large shipment, however, will be sent to the Plainview Baker establishment, which was opened on January 1.

New trim and smartness is noted in the late furniture designs, Mr. Baker asserted. He said that attractiveness was a point on which manufacturers are now concentrating their efforts.

Mr. Baker also purchased a large consignment of rugs and his stock in this line is now complete in every way.

Other Baker stores are to be located in South Plains towns Mr. Baker said. He declared that a complete stock was being laid in by his company, in anticipation of a banner business year.

There are about 800 different kinds of wood known to the timber trade.

All Chrysler engines are provided with counterweighted 7-bearing crankshafts. An expensive feature, but one that provides an almost incredible engine smoothness and remarkable long life.

CHRYSLER popularity is due not only to the public acceptance of Chrysler originality in style and beauty, but to the acclaim of the freshness of Chrysler engineering and performance.

Chrysler engineers bring to the task of developing their new cars the same originality and the same enterprise which characterize their achievements in style and beauty.

Chrysler engineers, from the beginning, have applied what is best in the existing art and practice of the industry, but have not been content to accept even such features without subjecting them to their own improving touch.

In addition, they have devised and developed so many entirely new features that Chrysler cars are in no sense like anything else that runs.

That is why the speed, the dash, the stamina you find in Chrysler can scarcely be equaled, much less surpassed, in cars costing even as much as a thousand dollars more.

HOW CAN WE IMPROVE THIS OLDSMOBILE for 1929

Before changing Oldsmobile at all, the engineering staff of the Olds Motor Works consulted Oldsmobile owners, dealers, salesmen, automotive experts, and engineers at the General Motors Proving Ground ... inviting criticism.

They found that Oldsmobile was too good to change fundamentally—that it was ahead of its time—that it offered many features not to be found in cars within hundreds of dollars of its price.

But certain improvements were recommended. And these have been made.

Piston pins are now pressure-lubricated—a feature hitherto characteristic of high-priced cars. And Oldsmobile's big high-compression engine now develops 62 horsepower.

Radiator shutter design was improved. The shutters now run entirely to the top of the shell.

Oldsmobile has adopted the new adjustable front seat, recently introduced by Fisher, which may be quickly and easily regulated.

Interiors have been made even more luxurious. Upholsteries are richer. Seatcushions are deeper and softer.

Four Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers are standard equipment.

West Texas Cities Rapidly Falling In Step With Movement For Adequate Landing Field In Every Large Town

Rapid Strides Of Aviation In Past Decade Manifest By Number Of Airports To Be Found In Region

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

STAMFORD, Jan. 26.—There is no question mark in the minds of the people of West Texas as to whether aviation is going to be the leading means of transportation in the future.

Almost every town in the western section of Texas is either maintaining an airport, building one, or doing its best to get the proper people interested in designating one, regardless of the fact that in the majority of cases the operation of an airport will be an expense for a number of years.

Various methods are used to get people "airminded." In Sweetwater where a 260 acre plot for an airport has recently been purchased at $70 an acre the chamber of commerce induced two government airport men to visit the city and talk aviation. Commercial fliers and aviation enthusiasts were asked to speak at civic luncheon club meetings in the effort to sell the idea of a municipally owned airport to the public, and the Sweetwater paper conducted a news and editorial campaign keeping the people informed as to advancement of aviation in other sections. The result is that a hangar and standard markers are to be erected.

Ranger Backed Move

In Ranger every club indorsed the movement to get an airport and each appointed a committee to look after a specific thing such as grounds, hangar, etc. Robert Hazen of the department of commerce came to Ranger and approved one of several sites that had been picked out. The city bought the land, and the improvements were made by public donations.

In this way a 60x60 all steel hangar was placed on the field and equipped with telephone, electric lights, water, aviation gas, and oil for servicing of planes. A 200 foot circle standard marker was placed in the field. All fence posts and nearby telephone and telegraph poles which constituted and obstruction or meanace to land were painted with alternate bands of creme yellow and black.

Snyder's new airport will be entirely a commercial port, probably the first of its kind in West Texas, and in addition to landing fields and hangar will have a modern filling station, restaurant, camp grounds with rooms running from 50c to $2.50 a night, natural gas, water, electricity and sewage disposal. Snyder expects to spend $50,000 on its recently purchased 200 acre port.

At Waco bonds amounting to $75,000 were voted to buy Rich field which had not been used since the war, for an airport. It now has on its 258 acres of ground three wooden hangars, a beacon light and boundary lights, and $23,400 of the bonds left to spend on providing gravel runways, another hanger and flood lights.

Midland Port Popular

The airport at Midland, where from 40 to 60 planes land each month, is a kind of monument to the late Sam Sloan. The field has a four plane hangar, administration building, home for the chief pilot, and an 18,000 gallon aviation gas tank from which 22 gallons of fuel is electrically pumped per minute. Midland's port is one of the most popular in the state with transcontinental fliers.

Kinsolving field, Abilene's airport, has hangar accommodations for six ships, is lighted and has fuel and oil. A stock of spare parts are kept available. A $100,000 bond issue to give Abilene a larger hangar, offices and a lighting system that will meet all government requirements is expected to be voted by a large majority.

Big Planes at El Paso

Two Ford tri-motored all metal 12 passenger airliners make their home at the El Paso modern airport. A new Consolidate "Husky" has been purchased for training purposes. Several long trips by plane has been inaugurated by the chamber of commerce over an itinerary which included Pecos, Fort Stockton, McCamey, Odessa, Wink, Pyote and Carlsbad. Another trip had Mexico City as its objective.

Lubbock has a temporary airport equipped with markers, and available to transportation, refueling, and other similar accommodations. Several pilots live in the city and others spends weeks there because of the good landing field. The city has an option on sites for a permanent airport, and expects to have a municipally owned class A airport within the next 60 days.

Plainview has an emergency port of 80 acres which is used when planes wish to land there. The interest in aviation is intense and two citizens, G. A. Lowery and Theo Brown own planes. Mr. J. McKenzie, airport specialists of the department of commerce of the United States visited Plainview in an official capacity recently and outlined the requirements of a modern airport. The city intends to act on his suggestions during the year.

Pampa Has Air Class

Pampa has leased a 160 acre landing field with Ray Shifflet, licensed pilot of Mangum, Okla., conducting a flying school on it. Fifteen local citizens have been students.

Civic organizations in Breckenridge were responsible for the visit of Harry Weddington of the United States air corps, who officially approved two locations for airports, one of which will be chosen and improved in the near future.

Although Coleman does not have a landing field at this time the interest of the citizenship in the subject is shown by the fact that they sent the secretary of the chamber of commerce to the aviation school of the Texas Air Transport, Inc., Fort Worth.

Eastland is establishing a strictly modern aviation field on the Bankhead highway just past the Bell Hurst poultry farm towards Ranger on a location that has natural drainage and a soil that will not bog, enabling the takeoff regardless of wind direction.

Since Big Spring is strategically located as an operating center for West Texas oil fields, the 160 acre port located two miles west of the city on the Broadway of America which is being equipped with 3,000 feet runways will some day be one of the most used ports in the state.

Frank Shelton, the licensed pilot at Denton, and Ray Hudley, the only citizen who owns a plane, are not the only ones interested in aviation there since these men are kept busy carrying up local thrill seekers and using their planes in trips to other cities, and in advertising campaigns.

Pecos, which was one of the control stops for the national air races last year, at which time the world's most noted woman flier was entertained in the city for five days, is the home of oil companies who keep Spartan and Travelair planes to commute with offices in other states.

Cisco is rapidly preparing a 200 acre plat of ground to meet first class requirements. The field will be sodded this summer.

For fear some bewildered aviator flying at night might alight on some of her buildings Canadian has a remarkable marker in the way of illuminate light.

GREEN AND LAVENDER

A deep lavender kasha suit for spring has its coat lined with lavender and a lavender crepe blouse to complete it.

Divorces are most frequent between the fifth and tenth years of marriage, and next between the second and fifth years.

Estimate 23,000 Bales For Floyd

Fair Crop In All Parts Of The County With A Yield Classified As 'Excellent' In Some Sections

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

FLOYDADA, Jan. 26.—With 20,280 bales of cotton already ginned, Floyd county 1928-29 crop of cotton is estimated at 23,000 bales. It is estimated by local farmers that there is yet approximately 3,000 bales in the fields which will be gathered in the fields which will be gathered in the form of bollies.

The composite figures show that practically all portions of the county have had a reasonably good crop, with an excellent crop in some sections. Figures for individual gins have not been released. In the above estimate round bales are given as half bales. The estimate was cut down several thousand bales by the inroads of boll worms in some sections where continued wet weather affected the growth of the stalk, and in some portions of the county hail damage probably exceeded a thousand bales.

PLAID HAT

A new beach hat is huge, floppy and made of plaid Sisol straw. Its colors are green, red and natural straw shade and it is banded in narrow grosgrain ribbons in all three colors.
