Gas Explodes In Bathroom Near LeFors

Ed Cooper Suffers Second-Degree Burns In Fire

Ed Cooper, Wilcox Oil & Gas company pumper, suffered second degree burns in a fire caused by a gas explosion at his four-room home on a lease nine miles south of Pampa at 12:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon. His condition at Worley hospital last night was reported as "satisfactory."

The Cooper home and all furniture was totally consumed in the fire, according to the Wilcox superintendent, Cecil Gantt, who said that the fire apparently was the result of a gas explosion from a bathroom hot water heater.

The superintendent said he believed the flame under the heater had been blown out by the wind and escaping gas in some manner had been ignited.

Mr. and Mrs. Cooper were alone in the house at the time of the blast. Mrs. Cooper ran from the house at the time of the blast and was not injured. Mr. Cooper managed to get out of the house unaided.

Another Wilcox employe, seeing the blazing house, came to the place and brought Mr. Cooper in a car to Worley hospital.

Mercury Hits 104 Degrees Saturday

For the fourth successive day, Pampans sweltered under a heat wave that sent the temperature soaring into the 100 degree zone, and little relief was promised in the forecast for West Texas today.

The United States Weather Bureau station here last night reported the forecast for West Texas as generally fair Sunday, Monday cooler in north portion.

Highest temperature here Saturday was recorded at 3 o'clock when the thermometer read 104 degrees. Starting the day off at 70 degrees (6 a. m.), the temperature rose steadily to reach 100 degrees at noon and then to inch forward to the maximum at 3 o'clock. One hour later the downward trend began, the temperature dropping from 103 at 4 o'clock to 77 degrees early last night.

Sales Tax Foes Wear '56' Badges

AUSTIN, June 17 (AP)—Whether they are the "immortal 56" or the "56 obstructionists," house foes of the sales-natural resource tax constitutional amendment espoused by Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel evidently are not ashamed of their roles.

Big badges bearing the number 56 and nothing more made their appearance in the capitol today on lapels of several opponents of the measure. They originated in the minds of Reps. Price Daniel of Liberty and Abe Mays of Atlanta.

Nine days ago, 56 representatives prevented adoption of the taxation amendment and two days ago 56 blocked adoption of a motion which would have permitted another vote on the proposal.

Worker Electrocuted At Possum Kingdom Dam

Two other men working with him were severely shocked, but responded to treatment. The crew was standing in the water trimming a bank with the saw.

That a Pampa family was sure some unseen foe was out to do them no good when a strange gas filled their house. They called police, assured them it was not natural gas. Police came to the house, found the "mysterious" gas to be ammonia escaping from a refrigerator.

Frye Asks Aid For 'Children Who Need Help'

The juvenile delinquency problem in Pampa is getting worse each year, mainly because the boys and girls who need guidance and direction don't get it, according to J. D. Frye, veteran driller and foreman of the Gray county grand jury, who put in a good word for the "bad boy" and a reproving word for good adults.

"I've had occasion to keep close tab on the juvenile situation in Pampa for more than 10 years, and it has been my observation, and also that of many other close observers, that the number of juveniles in Pampa is increasing each year," he declared.

"The most regrettable aspect of the situation is that no agency or means exists to effect the reformation of children who have been apprehended for criminal activities. Most of us have come to the conclusion that something must be done to help children who need it. We do everything for children who are not touched by influence and environments that lead to juvenile delinquency, but thus far nothing for those whose environment is not conductive to good citizenship.

"Of course, the undisputed reason

Brothers Held In Slaying Of Negro

McKINNEY, June 17 (AP)—Two brothers, Melvin Johnson of McKinney and Glen Johnson of Sherman, were held here today charged with murder in connection with the fatal shooting of Delmar Holt, 20-year-old McKinney Negro. Holt's body, with four gunshot wounds in it, was found on the banks of Honey creek near here.

Letters were mailed from the Pampa Chamber of Commerce Saturday to members of the Highway 41 association, announcing an informal meeting to be held in Borger Friday, in connection with the formal opening the same day of the Pampa-Borger paved road.

A Dutch lunch will be given at noon Friday as Borger's part in the entertainment of members of the Texas Highway department and state highway engineer, who will be special guests at the celebration.

Dr. M. M. Stephens, president of the Borger Chamber of Commerce has named Bob Grimes, Fritz Thompson, Dr. W. G. Stephens, Weldon Jolly, and Bob Bradshaw as the committee to plan the Dutch lunch. Bradshaw is chairman.

Pampa will honor the visitors at a banquet here Friday night according to a decision made at a meeting of Chamber of Commerce members and others interested in road improvement in this section, representing Borger, Pampa, and Stinnett. The meeting was held last week at the Mayflower cafe in Borger.

Officials who will attend the celebration on June 23 are the three highway commissioners, Chairman Brady Gentry, Harry Hines, and Robert Lee Bobbitt, and Julian Montgomery, state highway engineer.

Pampans working on Pampa's part in the celebration said Saturday their plans were not yet definite.

Nazis Hint Danzig Crisis May Be Near

BERLIN, June 18 (Sunday) (AP)—In an editorial entitled "Danzig comes to life" Adolf Hitler's newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, intimated today that the Danzig question may become a live issue soon.

The newspaper vigorously emphasized the same thought as that expressed last night at Danzig by Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels in one section of an impromptu speech.

Goebbels recalled that in a reichstag address April 28, Hitler said: "Danzig is German," and then observed pointedly that "it is not the habit of Hitler to utter empty words."

Voelkischer Beobachter said:

"Almost two months have passed since the fuehrer made the desire of Danzig to return to the reich his own desire. It is understandable if, here and there, Danzig citizens anxiously ask if this assurance of the fuehrer is still valid.

"But today a messenger of the fuehrer, Dr. Goebbels, repeated word for word the declaration of the fuehrer. Today Danzig knows that now and forever it does not stand alone, and that it will obtain justice —come what may. That is the historic significance of June 17."

Ex-Convict Kills Two Children, Then Self

COLUMBIA, S. C., June 17 (AP)—A 34-year-old former convict, Neil Butler, who, Sheriff T. Alex Heise said, shot himself last night after killing his two children and seriously wounding his wife, died tonight in a hospital.

Butler's two-year-old son, Joseph, and his seven-year-old daughter, Eyvon, died from pistol wounds a few hours afterward in a hospital.

The sheriff said Butler told him from his hospital bed: "I hope we all die. I don't want them to live and I don't want to live myself. If I can't have my children to raise, then nobody will."

40 Derby Cars Now At Completion Stage

Boys in the Top O' Texas area will begin this week to get down to brass tacks in the building of coaster cars for entry in The Pampa News-Lions Club Soap Box Derby to be held here July 21, 22, and 23.

A check-up Saturday showed nearly 40 cars already in the completion stage and perhaps 75 more are under construction for the big Pampa race which will pick a winner to send on an all-expense trip to Akron, Ohio, for the national Soap Box Derby finals to be run on Sunday, Aug. 13.

All boys between 10 and 15 years, inclusive, in the Pampa area are eligible to enter the Derby and entry blanks can be obtained from Registrar Luther Wagnon at the Culberson-Smalling Chevrolet company in Pampa. Rule books are given to each entrant.

Nearly 200 entries have been filed by boys in Pampa and surrounding towns and communities, Mr. Wagnon stated Saturday night.

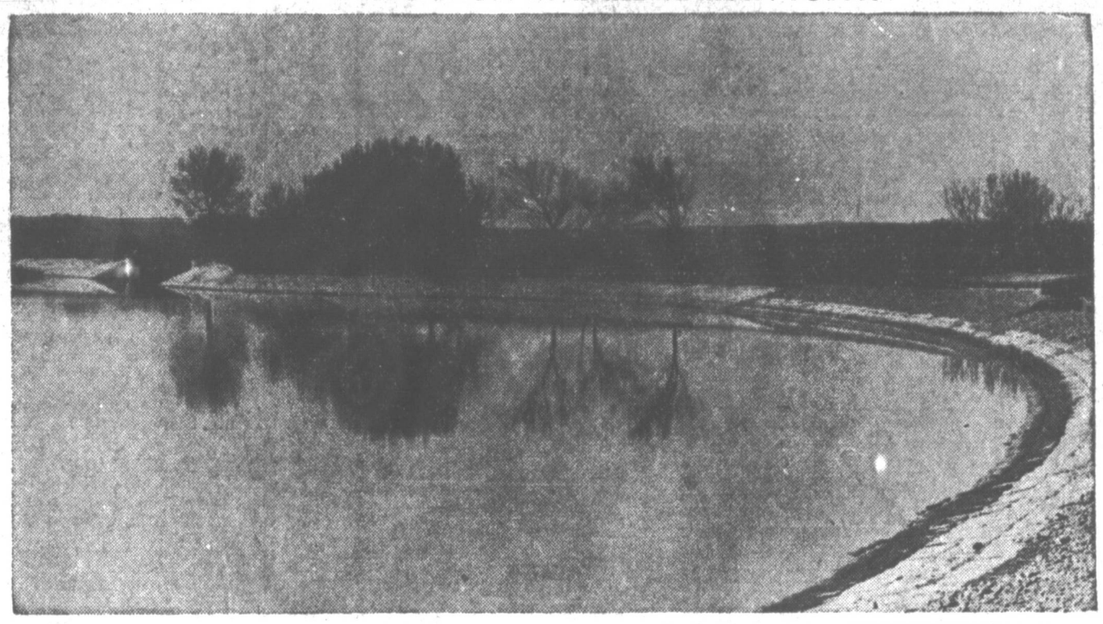

The Soap Box Derby is the biggest sporting event for boys in the world. There is nothing else to compare with it. More than 50 prizes already have been announced for local winners, heat winners, and for best constructed cars, etc.

In addition to the top prizes of the handsome silver trophy and the trip to Ohio for the local winner, there will be an opportunity to win the four-year university scholarship which will be awarded to the winner of the national derby.

Nearly two dozen boys tried out their coaster cars on the roped-off practice course in front of Horace Mann school Friday evening. The course is roped off to traffic each Friday at 5 p. m. so that entrants

Kiwanis Club Will Sponsor Twain Comedy

Sponsored by the Pampa Kiwanis club, a four-act play, "Tom Sawyer," will be presented on the night of June 30 at the Pampa High school auditorium for the benefit of the Kiwanis club underprivileged children fund.

The production, based on the Mark Twain classic, has been arranged and dramatized by the director, Dorris Landers Hess.

The life and love, defeats and triumphs of that beloved character, "Tom Sawyer," the boy whom everyone knows, will bring to many a father the glowing reminiscence of his own boyhood. To many a mother will come the recollection of the boyish pranks and mischievous deeds of her own Tom Sawyer. The typical American boy will see portrayed in this inimitable drama of boys' life an exact replica of himself, of his hopes, dreams and ambitions. Little girls will live and thrill and suffer and be happy with Becky Thatcher, the adorable little sweetheart of Tom.

There is not a typical American family, nor a member of the family, in whose hearts the antics of Tom Sawyer will fail to strike a responsive and understanding chord. For it was to and for the American people that the renowned author, Sam-

McLean To Send Big Delegation To Lake

Pampa's summer band will not be present at the dedication program of Lake Marvin near Canadian today, it was announced by A. C. Cox, director, Saturday. It had been planned to send the band to the celebration, but the plan was cancelled when it was found an insufficient number of players would be available.

The band will have a rehearsal at 8 o'clock Monday night at the Lamar building on the high school campus, and on Tuesday afternoon will play in Amarillo at the state encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and will march in the parade there at 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

McLean's Mayor, Vester Smith will lead the caravan and will be followed by: Jesse J. Cobb and W. W. Boyd, president and vice-president of the McLean Chamber of Commerce; Lee Bradshaw, project manager of Lake McClellan; Dick Peppin, chief engineer at Lake Mc-

Baptists Consider Union Of Branches

LOS ANGELES, June 17 (AP)—A step toward unity in the Baptist church, which divided geographically during the Civil War, may come out of the Northern Baptist convention here next week.

Church leaders said today that although Northern and Southern Baptists still were separated, there were definite indications of an approaching unity which would include millions of negro Baptists.

The united Baptist body would rival that of the newly formed Methodist church in size.

Japs Demand British Quit Helping China

(By The Associated Press.)

Japanese demanded unconditional abandonment of British support to China yesterday (Saturday) as the price for lifting the blockade against the British and French concessions at Tientsin.

The terms were set forth by the commander of the Japanese North China army who announced rejection of British efforts to negotiate the Tientsin crisis which began as a minor incident and ballooned into a diplomatic struggle between the two powers for prestige in China.

In the besieged concessions, where most of American residents of Tientsin live, a shortage of perishable foods became more acute as the Japanese blockade entered its fifth day.

Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander of the United States Asiatic fleet, arrives in Tientsin tomorrow on an inspection tour. Indications were that his visit, arranged before the crisis developed, would

2 Colorado Forest Fires Still Raging

LAKE CITY, Colo., June 17 (AP)—At all but three fronts determined fighters believed today they have trapped the fire monster that has ravaged large stands of pine and spruce in national forests of Colorado and New Mexico this week.

Two fires continued to blaze out of control in Southwestern Colorado. Strong winds still were a menace.

No loss of life has been reported. Forest authorities believe livestock losses will be negligible since the forests swept by fire are mostly too dense for cattle and sheep grazing.

Dinosaur Foot Print Donated To City Library

A dinosaur foot print plaque is being sent to the Pampa Library by Thomas Cabot of Boston, it was made known at the monthly meeting of the Pampa Library board last week. The foot print was uncovered during the 1936 Connecticut flood.

During the month of May, 3,192 books were checked from the library, Mrs. James Todd, Jr., librarian, reported. She told the board that a file of electrical engineering magazines for several years had been presented to the library by Henry Cox.

The hobby project being sponsored by the library is proving popular, Mrs. Todd said. The project will continue through the summer months for children between the ages of 6 and 12 years. During the week days all kinds of knitting, tatting, crocheting, weaving, reading and story telling are enjoyed under supervision.

Present at the meeting were Mesdames C. P. Buckler, C. J. Surratt, D. D. Cochrane, F. E. Leech and Roy McKernan.

Freight Rates To Be Discussed At Hearing

AUSTIN, June 17 (AP)—Persons from every section of the state will trek to the capital Monday for a railroad commission hearing which might result in cancellation of differential intra-state freight rates, long a source of complaint from many shippers.

Examiners expressed opinion the hearing might continue for 10 days or two weeks.

Specifically, the commission has ordered rail and motor carriers to show cause why differentials, applying generally to from, through or between West and Southwest Texas points should not be cancelled.

Before it reaches a decision it must hear volumes of testimony and any interested party, in addition to the carriers, may testify. The West Texas Chamber of Commerce and the freight rate equality federation, newly organized in West Texas, will present many witnesses. South and East Texas interests also will attend, as witnesses or observers.

Full Attendance Urged.

Col. Ernest O. Thompson, a commission member, terming freight rates Texas' biggest problem, has urged full attendance and presentation of complete data and exhibits.

Other matters on which the commissioners have invited testimony are the reasonableness of intra-state class rates and also commodity rates which are based on percentages of the first class freight rate.

Thompson said the hearing is the result of a commission policy of "more action and less talk" which he hoped would bring about fair and reasonable rates within the state, based on facts given under oath.

Senate Plans Speedy Action On Measure

Committee To Take Up Money Bill Next Tuesday

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP)—Senate leaders arranged today to speed action on the relief bill while economy bloc strategists decided to concentrate their efforts on preventing any increase in the $1,735,000,000 measure.

Passed by the house early today after a 14-hour session, the bill will be considered by a senate appropriations subcommittee next Tuesday.

Chairman Adams, democrat, Colo., said he hoped to send the bill to the senate floor toward the end of the week, and Majority Leader Barkley, democrat, Ky., promised it would be given right-of-way.

Barkley said speed was essential because the existing WPA appropriation runs out on June 30. In addition, Harrington has said that the new allotment should be approved before that date in order to avoid administrative confusion.

Adams, a leader of the economy bloc, said an effort undoubtedly would be made to add to the measure $500,000,000 for public works projects. The house earmarked for PWA $125,000,000 of the $1,477,000,000 President Roosevelt requested for work relief.

Senator Mead, democrat, N. Y., and others, however, have contended that the WPA appropriation should not be reduced and that an additional $500,000,000 should be allocated for public works.

Although saying he would oppose such an appropriation, Adams told reporters that "the senate is awfully fond of projects, and has always been more in favor of public works than the house."

He said that in general the allotments approved by the house "appear to be well-figured and fair."

"Neither the spenders or the savers ran away with the legislation," he asserted, adding that a $100,000,000 allotment for the National Youth administration was "a good compromise." Mr. Roosevelt had requested $123,000,000 and the house appropriations committee had recommended $81,000,000.

Mother Confesses She Killed Baby

FREMONT, O., June 17 (AP)—Prosecutor A. L. Hyzer announced tonight Mrs. Velma Baker Fink had confessed orally she killed her 10-week-old son, Baldon "Buster," whose body was found in a creek near their Clyde, O., home several days ago.

The prosecutor said Sheriff H. L. Myers, a deputy, Mrs. Oran Baker, mother of Mrs. Fink, Edwin Baker, a brother, and Howard G. Robinson, were present at the time the confession was made. It followed, he said, a lengthy lie detector examination, ordered only a few hours after the infant was buried in a Clyde cemetery.

Hyzer quoted Mrs. Fink—divorced from her husband only 10 days ago—as relating she had decided to "get rid" of the child after quarreling with her mother over its care.

Last Tuesday night, the prosecutor continued, she took the child from a carriage in her mother's home, placed it in the automobile of a brother, and drove to a bridge crossing a creek four miles west of Clyde.

Upon arriving there, Hyzer quoted her as saying, she lifted the baby from the car and threw it into the water. The body was found 12 hours later.

Near collapse and sobbing hysterically, Mrs. Fink was taken to the Sandusky county jail, a few minutes after Hyzer made the announcement.

"I just can't believe it," Hyzer quoted Mrs. Baker as saying.

Tomorrow is father's day, you know." The father opened the box and in it was a fine watch.

Dix Seen As Reporter In Radio Film

With its entire story crammed into a twelve-hour period, Richard Dix's newest vehicle, "Twelve-Crowded Hours," unfolds against a moving background of fast-paced action, tense excitement and vivid adventure. It presents Dix as a well-groomed but hard-hitting newspaperman in love with a dancing teacher, played by Lucille Ball, in a featured role.

When his scorching articles condemning the underworld accidentally aid in the unjust conviction of his sweetheart's brother, the reporter sets about to right the wrong. In doing this he becomes involved with a crime ring operating a policy racket, and also gets himself in bad with the police in his efforts to clear the name of the victimized young man.

The newspaperman's hectic romance with the dancing instructress in the shadow of constant danger, the ruthless killing of the reporter's city editor, the gang's framing of the girl's brother again, and the newsman's ingenius device to capture the racket chief and his mob, are exciting events which add to the film's powerful climax.

In support of Dix and Miss Ball in "Twelve Crowded Hours" are Allan Lane as Lucille Ball's brother, Donald MacBride, as a detective sergeant, John Arledge, as Dix's reportorial stooge; Cy Kendall, as the head of the racket ring and Granville Bates, as the city editor.

On Friday and Saturday the feature at the Crown is "Raketeers of the Range," an RKO film, directed by D. Ross Lederman, with George Chili Wills as the principals in the cast.

This is a splendid Western which presents several novelties and is very exciting cinema fare. The horsemanship is of unusual excellence and the story presents the expected triumph of virtue and law

Frank Culberson, president of the Lions Club, said Saturday that he believed the Soap Box Derby would attract one of the largest crowds ever to witness any sports event in the Panhandle.

"This is one of the greatest sporting events in the country today," Mr. Culberson said, "and because of its nationwide scope we feel fortunate in being able to bring the Derby to Pampa."

The race will be run on a course on the old Miami highway, three and a half miles north of Pampa. Seats and parking accommodations will be available there for thousands of spectators. There will be concession stands, drinking water and everything to make race spectators comfortable.

HARD TO EXPLAIN!

Richard Dix, caught between his sweetheart (Lucille Ball) and her brother (Allan Lane), whom he just slugged, finds himself very much on the spot in this scene from RKO Radio's "Twelve Crowded Hours," fast-moving story of a half-day's fight to round up a gang of murderous racketers. Dix is starred and the other two are featured in the photoplay. Opening a three-day run today at the Crown.

Sherman District Clerk Convicted

SHERMAN, June 17 (AP)—R. B. Caraway, former Grayson county district clerk, was convicted tonight in 15th district court on a charge of embezzlement and his sentence fixed at two years in the penitentiary.

The trial began Wednesday before Judge D. S. Meredith of Longview, sitting in place of Judge R. M. Carter. The jury received the case at noon today.

County Auditor B. M. Whitacre testified that he told Caraway on Feb. 8 that he had discovered shortages of $5,009.67, and that Caraway resigned immediately. Caraway was indicted on Feb. 24.

The case centered on $497.95 allegedly missing from jury and stenographers' fees, Judge Meredith ruling that money in other accounts did not belong to the county.

Plot To Kill King Results In 7 Arrests

BUCHAREST, June 17 (AP)—Discovery of an alleged plot to assassinate King Carol and officials of the Rumanian government today brought a nationwide round-up of former members of the Fascist Iron Guard.

Seven suspects, including an orthodox priest, were questioned at police headquarters on charges of plotting wholesale murders with hand grenades.

Police said that among the intended victims of the plot were Premier Armand Calinescu and Foreign Minister Grigore Gafencu.

Hundreds of detectives raided the homes of former followers of Cornelius Codreanu, known as Rumania's "Little Hitler" before King Carol suppressed his anti-Semitic, pro-German party. Police said 22 hand grenades were found in the home of one suspect.

The Iron Guards, before King Carol inaugurated his own Fascist-type, single-party system in February, 1938, openly advocated complete cooperation with Nazi Germany in foreign and domestic policy.

Codreanu and 13 of his followers were killed Nov. 30, 1938, "while attempting to flee" a concentration camp.

It was the third assassination plot reported against the 45-year-old king or members of his government this year. Several Iron Guardists were arrested in January when a premature bomb explosion led police to accuse them of plotting to kill Carol.

Early in February, 25 others were arrested on charges of plotting to kill Calinescu, who has been a leading foe of the Iron Guard.

also are pointing a drive for changes in interstate shipping costs which, they contend, are working a hardship on the Southwest as compared with the East and North.

The freight federation, which has retained traffic and rate experts, is lining up a campaign for more equitable interstate rates and the Texas legislature has appropriated $30,000 to aid in financing cases before the Interstate Commerce commission designed to reduce Texas levels to those of the East and North.

D. A. Bandeen, manager of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce and executive secretary of the federation, termed the hearing here "the biggest day since San Jacinto in removing shackles from the people of Texas."

The hearing, he said, is expected to open the whole issue of rate levels in zones of the United States. The W. T. C. C. and federation, representing shippers and consumers, will offer testimony and briefs to support the contention that Texas and the Southwestern zone suffer gross discrimination in freight rates.

Forty witnesses for the W. T. C. C. will assemble for a conference here tomorrow preparatory to the start of the hearing.

Witnesses on the opening day are expected to include Bandeen, H. S. Hilburn of Plainview, vice president of the federation, Senator George Moffett of Chillicothe, Rep. Bryan Bradbury of Abilene, Dr. Walter Prescott Webb of the University of Texas faculty, Victor Schoffelmayer, Dallas News agricultural writer, J. Walter Hammond of Tye, for the Texas Agricultural association, Mrs. Joseph Perkins of England, state president of Federated Women's Clubs, Mrs. Judd Collier of Mumford, president of the fourth district of Women's Clubs, and Ed P. Byars, Fort Worth rate expert.

DALLAS, June 17 (AP)—The Shreveport Sports coupled a pair of doubles and a single with a Dallas miscue in the eighth inning here tonight to down the Rebels, 3 to 2, and gain a split in the abbreviated series.

The loss kept Dallas from taking over undisputed possession of first place in the torrid Texas league pennant scramble, and left the Rebels in a second place deadlock with Houston, which also lost tonight.

for juvenile delinquency is that adults simply refuse responsibility for children's activities. In other words they don't get the raising that they need. If adults saw to it that children stayed at home when not at school or at work there would be no juvenile crime, but of course the conditions on some homes are such that children would be worse off if they stayed at home. Such a condition would seem to indicate that Pampa should provide activities for such children.

"It would seem that the community must provide conditions that would lead to good citizenship."

Mr. Frye has lived in oil fields all his life. He organized the first church at Drumright and was the first Sunday school superintendent there. He has served on several grand juries here, and has given special attention to juvenile delinquency. The present grand jury is investigating child delinquency in detail.

Drowning In Tulsa Lake Called Suicide

TULSA, Okla., June 17 (AP)—Sequoyah Lake yielded early today the body of Fred P. Scott, 47, chief draftsman in the city engineer's office, in a dragline search begun late last night after his clothes were found on the bank.

H. H. Cullison, county investigator, termed the death suicide attributable to ill health. City Engineer William R. Wooten said two notes found in the clothing bore Scott's signature. The lake is near Tulsa.

Shipments Of Scrap Iron May Be Pared

By ANDRUE BERDING.

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP) — Government officials, an informed source said today, have worked out a proposed quota system for exports of scrap iron and steel which would drastically restrict Japan's purchases here of metals vitally necessary in manufacturing munitions.

The system, which may be recommended to congress shortly, would have the effect of cutting Japan's purchases of the metals to perhaps one-third of t eir present volume while not mentioning Japan, nor, ostensibly, being aimed at any particular nation.

The plea goes like this:

The total shipment of American scrap iron and steel to all purchasers have been computed over several periods embracing a number of years (10 is the figure most frequently mentioned) and the yearly average taken.

Now Japan's huge purchases of scrap have been made in just the last two or three years. In 1933 they were only 500,000 tons, whereas in 1937 they rose to 1,901,202 tons and in 1938 were 1,301,901.

By taking the yearly average and making that a maximum, a law can be recommended to congress which would say in effect:

"Exports of scrap iron and steel shall be permitted under licenses to be issued by the state department only in amounts not to exceed the yearly average of exports of any one country over a period of blank years to-date."

Japan's purchases of scrap would thereupon fall to less than 500,000 tons annually, it is estimated.

There already has been agitation among some elements in congress for a ban on exports of scrap metals to Japan. What officials regard as the ingenious nature of the present plan, however, is that its language does not discriminate against any nation, and consequently no protest with a legal basis can be made against it.

Jalopy Cleanup Follows Death Of Pedestrian

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 17 (AP) —The sharp crack of a tire blowout broke the stillness of a quiet street in providence last Sunday night—sounding the death knell for one man and the signal for the biggest "jalopy" cleanup in the history of the nation's smallest state.

That bad tire on a nine-year-old automobile caused it to strike another machine, careen to the sidewalk and kill a pedestrian, 35 minutes before Providence would have started its 100th consecutive day without a highway fatality.

To this city of 250,000-odd persons, recognized nationally as the safest traffic city in its population class last year with a record 111 "deathless days," that blot on its traffic escutcheon was bad. But it was particularly irksome to Patrolman Thomas W. Kiernan, on whose beat the fatal accident occurred. He decided to do something about it.

On his own initiative, Kiernan stopped three "jalopies" Tuesday and found their brakes were defective.

Patrolman Kiernan told his superior, Captain Warren A. Martin, about those brakes. Martin notified the state registrar of motor vehicles and Inspector John J. Evan authorized the police to remove the registration plates from the three rattletraps at once. The drivers were ordered into court on charges of operating cars with defective brakes.

An hour later Chief of Police John J. Parker heard of Kiernan's one-man campaign—and found it good. He ordered all precincts to take similar action.

That first day 365 motorists were stopped in Providence; 18 registration plates were seized; 94 cars were found with worn tires, and 14 with defective brakes.

Market Briefs

NEW YORK, June 17 (AP)—The stock market today finished a generally declining week with a modest rally.

The few traders who appeared for the two-hour proceedings apparently found sufficient business and political optimism to offset the British-Japanese far eastern tension.

Anyway, a little short covering and mild investment purchasing lifted leading issues fractions to more than a point, although there was an assortment of small losers at the close.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up .3 of a point at 46.8, its first advance in seven sessions. On the week the composite was off 1.7 points. Dealings were sluggish through at the short day, transfers totalling 171,440 shares against 254,930 last Saturday. It was the smallest turnover since May 13.

Business news, on the whole, was moderately cheering and some quarters expressed the opinion the normal summer let-down would be less than season.

The only fly in the market ointment, brokers said, was the fear the recent rift between the British and Japanese in China might lead to serious developments internationally.

Stocks in the recovery tilt included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, J. I. Case, Eastern Air Lines, American Telephone, American Smelting, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, U. S. Gypsum, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Great Northern and Union Pacific.

Hopes for rail relief legislation, combines with mounting freight loadings and expanding revenues, brought renewed support for carrier shares. Utilities held to a narrow groove throughout and most Aircrafts ended a shade under water.

Fractions ahead in the curb were Lockheed, Cosden Oil and Niagara Hudson Power. American Cyanamid "B" and Humble Oil shaded lower. Turnover of 33,000 shares, smallest in a month, compared with 41,000 a week ago.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, June 17 (AP)—Wheat values toppled another cent a bushel today to the lowest level in more than seven weeks. Prevalence of favorable weather in many sections of the grain belt, which has had much to do with lowering prices 7 to 8 cents since the first of the month, continued to depress the market.

When July wheat fell to 71¼ cents, off 1¼ from yesterday's close, and September dropped to 72, it meant that Chicago quotations were back to within only 3 to 4 cents of the levels that prevailed before the late April and May crop scare.

While wheat closed ⅞-1¼ lower than yesterday, July 71½-¾, Sept. 72¼-72, corn advanced ⅛ to ⅜, July 49⅞-50, Sept. 51½-⅝. Oats were unchanged to ⅛ higher and rye ¼-⅜ lower.

Bank Robber Given 7-Year Sentence

COLEMAN, June 17 (AP)—A district court jury, deliberating only thirty minutes, today convicted J. A. McClain, 54, of robbing the Santa Anna bank of $1700 last month and gave him seven years in the penitentiary.

He had pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity. McClain was a resident of Bangs, Tex.

The Santa Anna National Bank was robbed the afternoon of May 10. After McClain's arrest a few days after the crime a part of the money was found in a fruit jar in the back yard at his residence in Bangs.

Letter To Column Read In Divorce Suit In Florida

TAMPA, Fla., June 17 (AP)—A Tampa husband's letter to a nationally syndicated column for the lovelorn backfired on him in circuit court today and went into the record as a part of the evidence in his wife's suit for divorce.

Wrote he: "I no longer love my wife and I have now fallen in love—really and truly—with another girl. What shall I do?"

The wife's petition said she had read the column too, and she noted the letter signed with the same initials as her husband. From the details she figured she must be the unwanted wife.

She confronted her mate with the clipping, her petition set forth, and he admitted he wrote the letter.

Filed also as evidence was the columnist's answer to the puzzled husband. It said: "Believe me, you are in a hot spot."

'Tisket, A Tasket' Composer Is Dead

BALTIMORE, June 17 (AP)—Ella Fitzgerald headed up from the southland tonight to do her last show for Little Chick Webb, the colored drummer boy who discovered she could sing swing and carried her with him on the upbeat to jazz-band fame.

She's going to sing Tuesday at his funeral. What she will sing wasn't decided tonight as friends of the 30-year-old Webb planned last rites for the one-time Baltimore newsboy.

The Webb-Fitzgerald combination was one of swing's trademarks. Together they composed "A Tisket, A Tasket," were featured on the radio and made scores of phonograph records—her voice, his band.

Glass Leads Bloc Against Devaluation

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP)—Headed by Senator Glass (D-Va.), the Senate's often-effective coalition of Republicans and Democrats opposed to administration fiscal policies has organized for a vigorous battle to strip President Roosevelt of his powers to devalue the dollar.

"No country in the world has ever benefitted by cheapening its money," Glass, one-time treasury secretary, told reporters. "It's unsound for any administration to have that power."

The fight against the devaluation authority will come to the floor Monday when the Senate considers a House-approved measure to continue the presidential power for two years from its June 30 expiration date.

The bill also would continue for two years in the treasury's authority to maintain the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund and to buy domestically-mined silver at prices above the world market.

Concurrently, there was an effort afoot to change the monetary law in an entirely different manner. Two western senators—Thomas (D-Okla.) and McCarran (D-Nev.)—let the Senate know they would demand a measure to provide:

That until 1941 all domestically mined silver purchased by the government for monetary purposes be at a price of $1.04 an ounce; that the government acquire no foreign silver except "when it is offered in exchange or payment for American-produced agricultural commodities for export."

The present price for domestic silver is 64.64 cents, fixed by presidential proclamation which expires June 30.

Thomas said he would ask Congress to direct adjustment of the values of the dollar to its 1926 level and issue $2,000,000,000 in additional currency.

GRAND CHAMPION TO BE IN PAMPA

Mercer, the 1938 international grand champion steer, now on a 5,000-mile tour of the leading cattle areas of the country, will be on exhibition here Tuesday, it was announced today by the Firestone Farm Service bureau. The black Aberdeen-Angus steer, touring in a model cattle barn on wheels, complete with ventilators, feed bins, and modern sanitation equipment, is traveling under the sponsorship of the Firestone Farm Service bureau of Akron, Ohio. Accompanying the grand champion are, left to right: Raus Brown, caretaker, feeder, and brother of Irene Brown, the 14-year-old 4-H club girl who raised and fitted Mercer for the grand championship at the Chicago Live Stock exposition; L. E. Copple, manager of the tour, and Rank C. Forbes, nationally known authority on cattle feeding and judging. The steer is being exhibited for the benefit of farmers, cattle breeders, 4-H club groups, Future Farmers of America, and members of all other farm organizations. Everyone interested in seeing a grand champion is invited.

F. E. Hoffman is the local Firestone dealer. He has arranged for a parade in downtown Pampa at 7:30 o'clock Friday night and for an exhibition of Mercer at the Tex Evans Buick company, following the parade.

Grand Champ Steer To Be Shown In City

Sponsored by the Firestone Tire & Rubber company and by F. E. Hoffman, local Firestone dealer, the 1938 international grand champion steer, Mercer, will be on exhibit in Pampa Friday night at the Tex Evans Buick company, after a parade through downtown Pampa at 7:30 o'clock.

The steer is being taken on a 5,000 mile tour and of the 39 scheduled stops 13 are in Texas. Mercer brought fame and financial guarantee of a college education to Irene Brown, 14-year-old Aledo, Ill., 4-H club girl who raised him.

The tour was arranged to give the thousands of farmers who could not attend the International Livestock Exposition at Chicago last December a chance to observe first-hand the peak in cattle development. Traveling in a trailer modeled after a modern stock barn, with ventilators, feed bins and numerous sanitation devices, Mercer has accommodations befitting one of his station in animal life.

He is accompanied by Raus Brown, Irene's brother, who has been feeder and caretaker of the steer since his sister sold him to the Firestone Farm Service Bureau at the International Livestock Exposition in December.

A nationally known feeder, breeder and cattle judge is accompanying the entourage as lecturer. He will point out the features which made Mercer a champion and will discuss other cattle questions with Mercer's visitors. A new sound motion picture will also be shown, featuring practically every type of farm operation, as well as many of America's champion farmers.

The tour is under the management of L. E. Coople, former Nebraska farm boy who now represents the truck and tractor tire division of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company at Akron, Ohio.

No New Taxes Probable In This Session

AUSTIN, June 17 (AP)—Barring last-minute changes in sentiment, the longest Texas legislature session on record will drag to a close Wednesday without imposition of any new taxes.

Sponsors of the sales-natural resource tax constitutional amendment advocated by Governor W. Lee O'Daniel intend a final effort Monday or Tuesday to obtain another House vote on the oft-rejected measure. They admittedly faced a most difficult task, however, as they were seven votes short of the needed number on a test only two days ago.

Other than the final vote on the tax plan, the principal business remaining before the lawmakers was adoption of conference reports on the appropriations bills and the county road bond assumption measure. The responsibility existed that a conference committee report on a general tax remission bill might be approved.

Proposals which perhaps had a chance of passage included suspension of the old age pension liberalization law until November 1, the outlawing of loan sharks, and a $1,200,000 deficiency appropriation for rural school aid. The odds were against them, however, due to the fact a four-fifths vote would be necessary for their consideration.

As is usual near the end of a regular session, speculation was ripe as to whether Governor O'Daniel would call a special session and if so, when. Numerous proponents of the sales-natural resource tax constitutional amendment predicted there would be no special session for new taxes. Other legislators voiced the opinion the lawmakers would be called back to Austin, possibly in July or August but probably not until September.

France Mourns Death Of Crew Of Submarine

PARIS, June 17 (AP)—France and her empire tonight mourned 71 officers and sailors of the submarine, Phenix, a steel tomb deep in the China sea off the coast of French Indo-China.

The only trace of the third submarine in 24 days to carry seamen to their graves was a floating circle of oil which calmed a spot on the rough surface off Cam-Ranh Bay.

Abandonment of hope for those aboard the Phenix, officially announced as 71 men, brought to 196 the number of lives lost in United States, British and French submarines in a little more than three weeks.

Warships and seaplanes of France's armed forces searched for the 2,000-ton submarine, which dived into the sea during exercises Thursday morning and failed to reappear.

A communique issued in Saigon, French Indo-China, said:

"The cause of this catastrophe is still unknown and a commission of inquiry has been formed to discover it. The search continues actively and all means at the disposal of the Indo-China fleet are being employed."

It said the water there, 225 miles northeast of Saigon, was "more than 100 meters" (328 feet) deep.

With abandonment of hope for those aboard, the navy's interest in finding the Phenix primarily was to determine the cause of the disaster.

The authorities wanted to still angry mutterings of sabotage with which parts of the French press greeted the news that a French submarine had followed the American Squalus, aboard which 26 died, and the British Thetis, aboard which 99 died, to the bottom of the sea.

Navy experts called the sabotage hints "ridiculous."

SAIGON, French Indo-China, June 17 (AP)—Officers on vessels seeking the sunken French submarine, Phenix, reported tonight they believed she was lying about 120 meters (nearly 394 feet) below the surface off Cam-Ranh Bay.

Naval authorities said the submarine was built to withstand at the maximum the pressure encountered at 100 meters (328 feet) while on the bottom at 130 meters the pressure might have crushed the hull and sent water pouring into her.

The last message from the Phenix, officers said, was a rountine report by the captain that she was about to dive and would emerge after a certain time.

They said all attempts to make radio contact with the submarine failed, indicating it met with disaster as it was submerging.

'Dust Bowl' Crop Biggest In 8 Seasons

By BEN FUNK.

BOISE CITY, Okla., June 17 (AP)—The "dust bowl" is paying off its faithful with a wheat crop which will be the richest on many farms since pre-drouth days.

From all portions of this once desert-like region in the converging corners of Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, Colorado and New Mexico came reports today of comparatively generous harvests.

Cimarron county, on the western tip of the Oklahoma Panhandle, expects 816,000 bushels, the most in eight years.

In the three-year period starting in 1935, Cimarron growers were staggered by complete crop failures. Last year, only 948 acres struggled to maturity, producing 9,560 bushels.

Section roads were lined in those dark years with vehicles of farmers fleeing from the disaster which had overtaken their once wealthy country.

Only the hardiest remained to fight it out with the "black blizzards."

In the Texas Panhandle, the harvest is gathering momentum. Farmers and elevator men are predicting the region will produce from 15,000,000 to 25,000,000 bushels.

"I have been saying all along," declared J. E. Davis, veteran Amarillo elevator operator, "that the Texas Panhandle would produce 25,000,000 bushels of wheat this year."

Good Quality Wheat.

In the worst drouth season, 1935, the area yielded only 4,000,000 bushels and acreage then was larger than this year. Much land has been retired in co-operation with the government farm program.

E. R. Duke, member of the state crop insurance staff at Amarillo, reported wheat in the Panhandle had filled out well without much moisture and was of good, heavy quality.

Crop conditions in southeastern Colorado's dry land farming section were described by Jack French, Prowers county agent, as the best in six years.

Northeastern New Mexico has had no dust storms this year but strong winds and high temperatures left an increasing need of rain. However, winter wheat production for the state, much of which is harvested in the northeast "dust bowl" region, was estimated June 1 at 3,172,000 bushels, nearly one-third larger than last years 2,380,000.

Federal and state agricultural experts agreed southwestern Kansas was going to have a "better year." Reports indicated yields would be of good quality.

The Individual Merchant

So much is said about the trend toward centralization, toward bigger units, toward co-operative effort, that one is apt to exaggerate the drift toward these things. We get the idea that the individual merchant, the single-store independent, is being crowded out of the business picture entirely.

It isn't true, according to a survey just completed for the Twentieth Century Fund, which concludes that nearly two-thirds of the total volume of retail sales is still handled through such stores. Establishments of that type have held their own in numbers since 1929, the survey found, and up to 1935 they were still 86 per cent of all the stores in the United States.

The survey indicates that there were in 1935 about 1,600,000 retail stores, employing some 4,000,000 people outside their proprietors.

That is a sizable block of people engaged in distribution of goods—with their families, they would represent probably more than 20,000,000 people. The dues-paying membership of the American Federation of Labor, for instance, was recently established at 3,750,000, thus making it a group comparable in size.

It is pretty certain that no other country in the world can present so large a group of proprietors of small individual businesses. In Russia, of course, they have been officially wiped out, and though there have been evidences of sporadic efforts to resume a share in the distributive scheme, these are ruthlessly suppressed. In Germany and Italy, recent decrees of the dictatorial governments are regarded as having signed the death knell of the small enterpriser.

It is only in America that this tremendous field for individual enterprise has been left open, and it is only here that it has been able to maintain itself in the face of adverse business conditions, competition from chain and centrally-owned stores, the rise of the co-operative movement, and other competitive situations.

When the individual store has been able to maintain its position not only in the face of competition from other individual stores, but in the face of competition from other methods of distribution, like chains and co-operatives, it must mean that it is meeting a need and filling a place.

And so long as any institution can successfully do this, it need have no great fears for the future. It is the useful, in the long run, that survives.

THOUGHTS ON DULL READING AND PESSIMISM

(Merle Thorpe in "Nation's Business.")

When a member of the cabinet, and the head of the commerce department at that, states that the reports of the National Chamber of Commerce's annual meeting made "dull reading" the comment invites elaboration.

It is doubtful if the business community could ever compete on equal terms with the official planners and dispensers in the authorship of hot news. Business can only repeat, as it did at its annual meeting, the dull prose of 2 + 2 = 4; that you can't have your cake and eat it, too; that taxes are paid in the sweat of every man who labors.

What chance has a statement of old time thrift, self-respect, pay-as-you-go virtues against the front page news of the massacre of little pigs, the mobilization of rakes for leaf juggling, the plowing under, the ordeal of the potato growers, tree belts and Greenbelts, the yardsticks, court packing, deficit financing, the Matanuska mirage, the mumbo-jumbo of "parity" and farm allotments and quotas, grocery stamps to reliefers, the tidal wave of taxes, the rain of laws, a million citizens added to bureaucracy, the nonstop climb of administrative absolutism?

The WPA itself never makes "dull reading." "Man bites dog" is the time honored example of exciting news. How close to the ideal, then, are the news items that the WPA has a project to instruct its workers how to see Europe on $2 a day . . . that the American Federation of Actors has fined two Hollywood members $10 for cracking a WPA joke . . . that the WPA distributed sixty women's ski suits in Independence, Kas., and announces that a limited number of tuxedos are available at Kansas state headquarters . . . that the WPA theater projects have produced 1,200 plays at an average cost of $40,000, with average receipts at $1.500 . . . that a WPA sewing center in Omaha made so many diapers that state headquarters distributed a quantity of them in surplus commodity packages to aged persons on relief.

"Dull reading," indeed, is the business man's review of conditions that brought the country an 80 billion dollar income and a recommendation of conditions that would permit it again. Dull reading that the most gigantic spending program of the ages still finds the number of unemployed at the 1933 peak and individual annual incomes down from $672 ten years ago to $490 today.

WHY OMIT THE MAIN SPRING?

(Chicago Daily News)

On Monday evening last, Mr. Roosevelt devoted a half hour to a discussion that concerned the fundamentals of the American economic system. That system works only by the exchange of goods and services. It can work efficiently only when the prices of goods and services are so balanced in a free market that people can hire each other and buy from each other without incurring perpetually increasing loads of debt.

It is a "price system," so termed by its friends and foes.

Mr. Roosevelt almost ignored the word "price," and said nothing about the necessity of balanced prices.

We regret to note that speakers who addressed the recent national meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States also failed to face the question of price.

Discussion of "recovery" without coming to grips with prices is as fruitless as the old debate about the priority of the chicken or the egg. Recovery will come when goods move freely from producers to consumers. Right prices will move the goods. Nothing else can move them but some form of force, open or disguised.

FASCISM AND HIGHER EDUCATION

This column recently quoted from Ralph Cooper Hutchison, President of Washington and Jefferson College on the dangers of education being absorbed by the central government, as a method of propaganda to perpetuate the state.

I wish to quote further from the article in the June Atlantic Monthly:

"Most striking of the attempts to break down the safeguards of the American system is the frequently agitated proposal to establish a federal department of education, which shall have at its head a secretary of cabinet rank.

"Meanwhile, the camel pushes his nose into the tent. Federal aid for state education is asked by the Thomas and Larrabee bills now pending in the Senate and House respectively . . . The proposed extension of social security to the colleges will it is prophesied, involve an ultimate contribution by the government of one-third of the cost of the pensions. Every such contribution to the equipment, facilities, or expenses of educational institutions is, in the end, a method of invasion by subsidization. Further and more direct support will be ominous . . .

"The most serious threat, however, against the freedom of all higher education lies in the danger imperiling independent colleges and universities. Paralyzing taxation of corporations, as well as business conditions, is reducing the endowment income of the colleges; while confiscatory taxes on private wealth and income dry up the only sources from which support and endowments can come. Surplus wealth is being appropriated rapidly by state and federal government.

"That gifts to colleges continue for the time being is nothing short of amazing. Apparently they indicate the determination of the American people that colleges, as well as other institutions, shall not pass into political control . . . Whatever the cause of current giving, the sources which make it possible will disappear if present governmental financial policies are continued.

"The irony of the situation is, however, that these funds thus taken by confiscatory taxes from the support of the private colleges are used by the state to set up and enlarge duplicating and competing institutions under state control.

"There are three methods by which the state is entering upon a devastating, wasteful, and destructive competition with the private college. The first is by the expenditure of huge funds to draw to state universities students quite capable of paying their way in either state universities or private colleges. For example, in the state of Pennsylvania great annual appropriations go to certain state-related universities. In return for such appropriations, these universities give quantities of large scholarships to students chosen by the politicians of the state . . .

"The second method by which competition at taxpayers' expense is established is through the normal schools that are in many states being developed into low-grade liberal arts colleges and low-grade universities. Again Pennsylvania is an example of what is happening in many if not all states of the Union. In the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania there are fifty colleges and universities which are privately controlled, among them many of the best and strongest in the nation. They represent an investment of $122,000,000, none of it tax money. These colleges give annually in scholarship aid $4,391,000. They produce without cost to the state three thousand more qualified teachers each year than can be used in the state. Nevertheless, the state spends $1,860,000 a year to support fourteen teachers' colleges, ten of which could be eliminated. The Commonwealth spends on teachers' colleges $1,000,000 a year to do work much of which would be done better, and at no cost to the taxpayers, by independent colleges."

"PIED PIPER OF THE AIR"

Walter Spahr in an article under the heading of "You and Your Nation's Affairs," quotes what the Toronto Globe and Empire has to say about the New Deal. After describing how we have wasted our substance, the Toronto paper says:

"We are tired to death of pink Communism and sick at heart that a great nation, leading the world in initiative and individualism, should have been brought perilously close to its knees by a 'Pied Piper of the Air,' fatuously fluting in ragtime."

Would that we could see ourselves as others see us.

Behind The News Of The Day

By BRUCE CATTON

Pampa News Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 17—An effort to line up business and political leaders behind a new plan designed to achieve "business appeasement," tax reductions and a business revival is being pushed here.

Back of the move is a group of New York business men organized under the name of United Industries.

The plan they are submitting for consideration on Capitol Hill is, basically, a proposal to swap $500,000,000 in tax reductions for reemployment of 1,000,000 idle men.

Two kinds of tax incentives to create re-employment would be offered business men, under this plan. One would give compensative credits on income tax payments to employers who put more workers on their payrolls. The other would permit up to one-third of a taxpayer's net income for a given year to be currently non-taxable if invested during that year in one or more brand-new business enterprises, provided that such enterprises were employers of labor.

More Concessions

Beyond these tax features, other concessions would be asked of the government. These would include:

Elimination of the capital gains and losses tax, except in the cases of persons or firms in the business of buying and selling securities.

Revision of the Wagner labor relations act "so as to provide impartial treatment of employers and employes, without impairing labor's rights."

Modification of the rules and administration of the Securities and Exchange Commission so as to encourage new capital issues.

The plan was drawn up by Donald R. Cotton and Henry Morse, of New York, leading spirits in the newly-organized United Industries. In a written statement accompanying the plan, submitted to the House Ways and Means Committee, they estimated that their plan would take $500,000,000 in taxes off of the business community; on the other hand, they figured that at least 1,000,000 men would be re-employed and that the government in this way would save $750,000,000 annually in relief costs.

In conclusion, their statement said:

"United Industries will undertake to obtain pledges in writing from the various branches of industry to add a total of not less than 1,000,000 men to the present business payrolls of the nation, without lowering wage rates or salaries . . . if Congress and the President will agree on receipt of said pledges to adopt a business incentive program."

The plan was submitted too late to get a hearing before the House committee. Congressman Thomas H. Cullen of New York, a Democratic member of the committee, said that he has been giving the plan some consideration and that it will unquestionably get extended consideration later on although it cannot be worked into the tax law revisions now pending.

United Action Is Aim

Morse, one of the originators of the plan, says that the big idea is to get united action for an end which all groups desire—business improvement.

"Everybody is doing plenty of criticizing," he says. "Business leaders criticize the New Deal, and New Dealers criticize the business men. But nobody makes any constructive suggestions. We're all interested in getting the country back into a healthy condition, but we don't get together on anything.

"We're trying to show in a constructive way that taxes can be reduced and that men can be put back to work. We're not just saying that it must be done—we're trying to show how to do it.

"The President and Congress have properly said that taxes can't be reduced because the unemployed must be cared for. We agree with that—these man can't be left to starve. On the other hand, business men properly say that they can't go ahead and expand their operations because they're held down by taxes. We have presented a basic idea showing how these thing can be handled."

The plan for getting signed pledges on re-employment is a bona-fide offer, Morse said. It will be a tough job, but he believes it can be done.

Back of United Industries are a number of New York business leaders, some of them men of nation-wide repute. Their proposition may yet get a public hearing at this session of Congress. It has been submitted to Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, who is reserving comment until he has had time to make a fuller study of it but who is willing to get a hearing for it if the Senate Finance Committee holds further hearings on this year's tax bill.

NOW THE MATTER OF GETTING THE HATCH BILL OUT

Around Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, June 17.—Most of the correspondents, including this one, have taken cracks at the Columbia studio for paying it "Golden Boy," William Holden, only $50 a week.

"Golden Boy, indeed!" we snickered. The widely-ballyhooed search for a lead in the screening of Clifford Odets' play must have cost a thousand times $50. And now that he had been found and had been judged capable of handling the title role in an expensive picture, he was to receive approximately the wage of a character extra.

But Mr. Holden himself is pleased as Punch. Since he is 21 years old and otherwise legally competent, I, for one, am going to quit worrying about his financial affairs.

He doesn't know yet whether he's any good as an actor. If so, there will be plenty of time and opportunity to make money. If not, it will be a lot easier this way to readjust himself to the life and allowance of a college boy.

"I'm not what you would call a mercenary guy," said Holden. "Fifty bucks is a lot of money to any fellow my age. And think how many people would gladly pay $50 a week to have the break I'm getting. It's like picking up a man and making him a king.

Whiskers No Barrier.

"A few months ago I was going to Pasadena Junior college with no idea of being an actor. I got a part in a class play, 'Manya,' based on the Curies, and I was an old man of 70 in false whiskers. It ran 12 days, and on the eighth day I was in the dressing room ripping off by beard when in walked a man from Paramount who said he wanted to talk to me about a screen test. On account of my makeup and this being the first acting I'd ever tried, I figured he must be looking for somebody else. But it turned out that he had liked my voice and didn't know what I looked like.

"So I took a test and felt awkward as the dickens. One man would tell me not to screw my face up, and another would warn me about bumping into things, and I helplessly recited the silly lines they gave me. When they ran the test I felt even sillier, but for some reason I got a stock contract at $50 a week. Other stock players are satisfied with that dough, so why shouldn't I be."

The youngster, who was 20 then, with a birthday on April 17, quit school and hung around Paramount for three weeks until he was assigned a part in a college picture. He was to say two words—"Thank you"—and even then was scared to death that he'd forget his line.

But he never had a chance to say it. Somebody at Columbia was considering hiring the girl who worked with Holden in his test, so the film was borrowed.

Nervousness Helps.

"Rouben Mamoulian, the director, and Miss Stanwyck and Adolf Menjou and Joseph Calleia have been swell about helping me," he said. "Mamoulian was smart in shooting first all the scenes in which I'm supposed to be nervous. I didn't have to act; I just said the lines and the nervousness took care of itself."

In boxing trunks, the Golden Holden looks right for his part. He stands six feet and weighs a well set up 165 pounds, and has been having daily lessons from Newsboy Brown, an ex-pug. The fighting part was easy, he said, but he nearly went crazy trying to learn how to handle a fiddle convincingly.

So far he has little time for anything but work, and anyway, he hasn't met any movie girl who interests him. He doesn't employ an agent, nor is he quite clear about his contract except that it is owned equally by Paramount and Columbia. "By the way," he said, as an obvious afterthought, "I forgot to tell you that I got a raise!"

Well, Mrs. Raymond Harrah, whose new hobby is horses, has begun the momentous experiment.

She is not from Missouri but she does not believe that a colt's legs at birth are as long as they ever will be. If she wins she will have proved that the magizine Life is in grave error. Thursday night one of her mares foaled a fine looking black filly, and as soon as it could stand on its feet, Mrs. Harrah measured its front legs. They were 26 inches long. She will measure the legs once a month to see if they grow. Mrs. Harrah now has five horses and colts.

The big attraction at the swimming pool yesterday was a quartet of Oilers (Bill Garbe, Frank Grabek, John Gyuresan, and Pietras), all good swimmers and divers. They played a game of tag that so excited the "gallery" that other swimmers retired to the banks to watch. Then they played a game of "knock-off" in which one sat astraddle another's neck and tried to knock the other, similarly perched, off into the water. When the baseball players did climb to the bank to rest, they were immediately surrounded by a bunch of awe-stricken young fans.

The Bull Wheel

It Picks Up Everything

By The Roving Reporter

The enthusiastic reception given stories about oil field workers, chiefly drillers and tooldressers, published in The News a month before the Top O' Texas Fiesta, proved this thing: that human interest stories about the people who work in the oil fields should continue to be published, and The News has no intention of discontinuing publication of such stories. So today this column, to meet that need, is born. It will appear on this page at regular intervals, probably three days a week, so look for it.

This column belongs to the oil field workers—not only the people who work on a drilling well, but to the wives of oil field workers, pipeliners, gasoline plant workers, carbon black plant employes, truck drivers, and we want to start off by soliciting human interest stories, experiences, oil field poetry, anything you think would be of interest. Needless to say, the stories about drillers published in The News created as much interest as any ever printed in this newspaper.

Today this column will feature a remarkable letter written by the wife of an oil field worker, Mrs. R. A. Smith. Read this letter. It is one of the must human documents we have ever read. We wish to thank Mrs. Smith for writing it.

But before we get to it, we want to remind N. E. and G. G. Tennant to not forget to take this writer out on a coon hunt. They have all kinds of coon dogs and they have treed and caught all kinds of coons—in season. That's what we are talking about—in season.

And also we want to remind two certain drillers of their promise to take this writer out the next time they shoot a well. Here's Mrs. Smith's letter:

Thank you for your tribute to the oil field people. I was afraid some of the articles that were printed would give wrong impressions, but the Irish and Scotch must have their jokes. I am a "pioneer oil field woman" and a "new comer." Entered the oil field when I was 15 and married a "toolie bird."

Boom towns have been my home since, and I've read every word in your historical Fiesta edition.

We came here January, 1928, and have watched Pampa grow and are proud to call it home. We have had our hardships, yes, but the hardest is making friends with the old-timers.

We have our struggle to earn a living. We like to see towns spring up over night. We rejoice when we see oil. That means wealth for the land-owners. All we get is our salary, and that is all we are after. We live in tents, haul our water in ten-gallon cans, cook on campfires till we can get gas piped to us, maybe 10 miles more or less, but we must eat while we work. We bring our babies and children, and they learn the game of making a home quite young.

Take a boy that has been raised in the oil field. He can cook, wash his clothes and patch the khakis as good as any woman; build an oil field shack from the boards off the derrick, dress a bit, splice a line, fire a boiler while he's still in his 'teens.

And show me an oil field girl that can't keep house. We must have schools for our children, and as soon as a little community is established the schools and churches are built.

We lived in Drumwright, Okla., when it was known as Tiger, and the mail was brought out from Cushing, 12 miles away, and dumped on a table and sorted out by all who were expecting mail. We lived on Boiler avenue, named for an oil field boiler that sat beside the highway from Cushing. And as one newcomer after another moved in the street grew and acquired its name.

Then Aaron Drumwright, a farmer, became wealthy in oil overnight, and the community moved over a mile and Drumwright was named. Then came the post office, and the railroad. Then the towns, Fry Schlegal, Dropright, Wheeler, Pe-

Red Horses And Texians Battle At 3:00

The Magnolia Red Horses and the Amarillo Texians will meet again at Road Runner park this afternoon. Game time will be 3 o'clock with admission 25 cents. The two teams battled 11 innings on June 4 with the Texians coming out in front 11 to 10.

Doc Howard, who until two weeks ago was a member of the Pampa Oil mound staff, will be on the hill for the Flying Red Horses with Henry Stephens behind the plate. Howard showed plenty of possibility while with the Oilers but the management had to get a left-hander on the squad and Howard was released.

Several changes will be made in the Magnolia lineup for this afternoon because of vacations. However, Manager Earl Chase expects to send a stronger lineup against the Texians than met them before.

On the other hand, the Texians will also be stronger. Manager E. H. Bowlden will have Billie Callahan from Texas A. & M. college at second base, Cecil Phillips, 210 pound righthander, who used to be with Cincinnati, Charlie Compton, shortstop, who played two years with Halliburton, George Reinert, highly touted youngster from the Cincinnati sandlots, and Hargrove and Bronson, former Amarillo high school football stars.

Besides Phillips, the Texians will have ready for mound duty Lefty Bowlden who pitched two years for the Henrich Brewers of Washington, D. C.

L'Cross Knows He'll Have To Get Plenty Dirty To Beat Jap

Gil LaCross, the hated Canadian, will try to take Sugy Hayamaka apart Monday night at the Pampa athletic arena to see just what makes the clever Jap tick. LaCross will try to win his American style fall in short time, in order to make the deciding fall his style.

At the starting of the main event, they will flip a coin to see which style, jiu-jitsu or American, will be the first fall. Whoever wins his fall in either style the quickest will have the chance to wrestle the deciding fall his style.

LaCross saw the Japanese style for the first time on his initial bow in the local arena. He stated that he would like a chance with the jackets on, but only on the above conditions. He would not risk his main event standing on strictly a jiu-jitsu match. The Jap is to be respected, in both American and jiu-jitsu style. He has proved good at both when he manhandled Ernie Peterson a few weeks ago.

The semi-final will pit "Gentleman" Dale Haddock against Pete Belcastro, the Portland lumber jack. It looks as if Dale will at last meet his match in Belcastro. Local fans have been waiting for a match like this for some time. The "gentleman" has been slugging and kneeing the boys around long enough, and Belcastro is just big and powerful enough to put a stop to that.

Otto Ludwig, the tough German, will have to start on the comeback trail in the opening bout as a result of his loss last week to Gil LaCross in the main event. He meets Sailor Jack Adams of San Francisco. The sailor likes the going rough and tough and has all the ear-marks to prove it.

The first bout will begin promptly at 8:30 o'clock, and as usual ladies will be admitted for 10 cents each, and school students for 25 cents.

Malvica Of Lamesa Leads In WT-NM With Average Of .404

Johnny Stone's batting lead in the West Texas-New Mexico League was short-lived as Sam Malvica, his Lamesa teammate surged back to the top with a .404 average last week.

Gordon Nell, slugging leader, moved into second place at .399. Stone dropped to .387, a slump of 15 points.

The big Pampa clubber pounded out six home runs during the week to bring his total to 20, four more than Emmitt Fullenwider of Lamesa. In addition Nell has poled 29 doubles and sent 83 runs scampering across the plate.

Boyd Watkins, and Grover Seitz of Pampa, pilfered 22 bases for a joint lead.

Adding his fifth straight win, Lee Harris, Hubber righthand hurler, kept ahead in the mound race. George Amthor led in strikeouts with 78, followed closely by Lefty Lucas of Lamesa, 76.

Averages include games through Tuesday, June 13, except the Midland-Clovis contest of that date:

Lamesa Downs Oilers 16-11 In 2nd Game

Base hits dropped over Road Runner park like shrapnel Friday night when the Lamesa Loboes downed the Pampa Oilers 16 to 11 in a wild hitting game. Fullenwider, Lamesa centerfielder, pulled one for the record books when he blasted two home runs, two doubles, a triple and single on six trips to the plate.

Next potent hitter of the game was Haney, Lobo rightfielder, who laid down a barrage of five consecutive singles on his six trips to the plate.

Gordon Nell, Pampa powerhouse, hit one out of the park in the eighth with the bases loaded. It was his 22nd round trip blow so far this season.

After a bad night Thursday, Lloyd Summers got his eye on the ball and bagged a double and two singles while Paul Reeves continued to get his base knocks with three singles.

In all, nine doubles, two triples, three home runs and 23 singles blasted holes through infield and outfield. So powerful was the Lamesa attack that up to the ninth inning Firstbaseman Bob Bailey of the Oilers had only one putout and it was a roller down the first base line. Only work by the infield up to that time was a couple of fielders choices.

Harvey Hutton tried to subdue the Lobo attack but was helpless before the slugging visitors, 10 runs and 14 hits being garnered off his offerings in 4 2-3 innings. Lefty Rex Dilbeck, who started the 1937 season with the Pampa Oilers, relieved but the attack had started and it couldn't be stopped although Dilbeck showed a nice curve ball and plenty of speed. He has been signed for a look over by Manager Seitz.

Fullenwider's first home run gave Lamesa two in the first but the Oilers came back with four hits, two walks an da sacrifice good for five runs in their half. Lamesa added one in the second and five in the fifth to go far in front. Nell's homer gave Oiler fans hope but the rally died when Lefty Millspaugh, former Amarillo Gold Sox chunker, took the mound, relieving Bryan.

Garbe Released Because Of His Ailing Arches

Bill Garbe, one of the best looking prospects to join the Pampa Oilers, has been released by Manager Grover Seitz. Garbe has been released not because of inability but because of broken down arches.

The flashy California outfielder was going great both in the field and at the plate when his arches gave away on him. He refused to quit and played bang up ball despite the fact he suffered untold pain every time he went after a fly ball and every time he took a cut at the ball.

The end came when he fell away from an inside pitch during a game here. He walked on crutches for several days and although his feet are much better he is unable to play ball.

Garbe will stay around here for a while, taking treatment, and should his feet get well he will be signed again. Otherwise, Garbe will go to his home in Hollywood, Calif., and rest up for next season.

"If I can't get my dogs fixed up soon, I'm going home and rest but I'll be back here next spring for training." Barbe declared. "This is the swellest place I've lived in. The people are so friendly that it makes a fellow hate to leave. The Oilers is a swell ball club and the fellows are everyone good sports."

Pampans Will Ride Against Blues Here

Polo will be on the entertainment list for Pampa sports loving fans Sunday afternoon when the Pampa Loboes meet the Plainview Blues at Recreation Park. Game time will be 2:30 o'clock with admission 25 cents per person.

Besides the polo game, Miss Lola Sweeney of Norman, Okla., will present her high school horse, Silver Squirrel. The educated horse can do 50 different tricks. Miss Sweeney is temporarily located in Pampa training horses for several residents.

Also present at the game will be polo men from Tulsa, Okla., Norman, Okla., Oklahoma City, Okla., Colorado Springs, Colo., and Roswell, N. M. They will watch play with the idea of inviting the Pampa team to enter tournaments and schedule inter-city matches providing the local quartet can furnish opposition for the experienced teams in those cities.

In order to match the crack Plainview team in speed, the Pampa players have secured a string of thoroughbred polo horses from Oklahoma City and they will be used this afternoon along with local horses.

Lineups for the game will be Travis Lively and George Garrett alternating at No. 1, Bud Mooney at No. 2, Hub Burrow at No. 3 and Jack Patton at No. 4.

The Blues will use four veterans, Crenshaw at No. 1, Bradley at No. 2, Sherbert at No. 3, and Phillips at No. 4.

The Loboes won an overtime game from the Blues two weeks ago at Plainview.

Pampa Polo club officials received a telegram Saturday evening that Mattox of Studio City, Calif., would be in Pampa Sunday to see the Pampa-Plainview game. He is on a tour of the country looking for polo teams to match against California quartets.

Mr. Mattox was formerly with the California State Militia Polo and Aerial Push Ball team and also with the Santa Ana Boot and Spur Polo club.

Firms, Individuals Asked To Buy Uniforms For Boys

Pampa's junior baseball team, sponsored by Kerley-Crossman American Legion post, needs uniforms. The post does not have enough money to purchase the uniforms and support the team so Pampa fans and firms are going to be given an opportunity to help purchase uniforms for the team.

Team sponsors can secure good looking uniforms for $5 each and any person or firm desiring to purchase a uniform for a boy may contact Paul Hill at The Hole-in-the Wall on West Foster avenue. Firms will be allowed to place advertising on the back of the shirt providing letters are not more than two inches high.

The team has been named the Junior Oilers and plans are to secure uniforms similar to those worn by the Oilers. Fourteen uniforms will be needed.

The Junior Oilers will play junior teams in this section of the Panhandle and will be eligible to enter a district and state tournament, from which the winning team will go to the National tournament.

Teams are being organized at Amarillo, Borger, Clarendon, Memphis and other cities in the area.

Clyde Winchester is coach of the team with Joe Roche business manager.

Softball Managers Asked To Turn In Scores By 9 a. m. Each Day

Managers of softball teams in the Pampa Junior Chamber of Commerce league are asked to cooperate with The Pampa News by turning in scores of games by 9 a. m., the day after the games are played. If the manager of each home team will take this responsibility on himself The News will be able to carry scores and standings.

There are 10 teams in the league and they will play two games each week. A schedule was drawn up yesterday and is released today.

Only one game was reported last week when Skelly-Schafer defeated Lefors, 12 to 2. Wapp and Weatherall held Lefors to two hits while Barfield was nicked for 12 bingles.

Because the league opened with 11 teams and one later dropped out, it is necessary to complete the first round of play with two teams drawing byes each series. When the first round of play is completed, a schedule will be drawn up for the rest of the season with the number of teams left in the league.

The field at Recreation park is not yet ready for night ball so the schedule has been drawn up for evening play on Tuesday and Wednesday nights. When night ball is begun, managers will be called together and the schedule of play outlined.

The schedule for the rest of the first round of play:

June 20: Gulf, bye. Danciger vs Young Fellows. Johnson Hdw. vs Cities Service. Royal Club vs Lefors. JCC vs Skelley. Phillips, bye.

June 22: Royal, bye. Danciger vs JCC. Young Fellows vs Skelly. Johnson Hdw. vs Phillips. Cities Service, bye. Gulf vs Lefors.

June 27: JCC bye. Danciger vs Skelly. Young Fellows vs Phillips. Johnson Hdw. bye. Cities Service vs Lefors. Gulf vs Royal Club.

June 29: Skelly, bye. Danciger vs Phillips. Young Fellows, bye. Johnson Hdw. vs Lefors. Cities Service vs Royal Club. Gulf vs JCC.

July 4th: Phillips, bye. Danciger, bye. Young Fellows vs Lefors. Johnson Hdw. vs Royal Club. Cities Service vs JCC. Gulf vs Skelly.

Wooderson Finishes Last After Bump From Texan

PRINCETON, N. J., June 17 (AP)—Sydney Wooderson's long-heralded invasion of our running fields ended on a sour note today when the little Briton was bumped and half-tripped in the final lap of the Princeton invitation mile, and, far from setting a new world record, finished last in a slow field of five.

With 30,000 cheering him on, the diminutive record-holder led all the way until Blaine Rideout of the North Texas State Teachers clipped him on the last turn, about 200 yards from home. He faltered and half stumbled and fell back in the stretch as Chuck Fenske, former Wisconsin ace, came through with a rush to win in the comparatively poor time of 4:11.

The veteran Glenn Cunningham, also profiting by Wooderson's misfortune, came up to finish second, about five yards behind Fensek. Archie San Romani came in third, while Rideout just edged out Wooderson for fourth place. Wooderson was clocked in 4:13, as compared to his world record of 4:06.4.

There was no doubt Rideout's bump was accidental. It was clearly seen from the stands. With Wooderson striding along easily on the inside, the Texan made a sudden effort to crowd through from third place and grasp the lead. He cut it too fine as he attempted to edge past Wooderson, and hit him with his left leg. The 123-pound Briton half stumbled out several yards from the inside lane, and never fully recovered his long stride.

Immediately after they had passed the tape almost shoulder-to-shoulder, Rideout ran over to grasp Wooderson's hand and aplogize for his interference. Wooderson mumbled his acceptance, but there was no doubt he was very unhappy. Asked if he didn't think it was an accident, the shy little fellow said: "I hope so."

His coach, A. G. Hill, the veteran British Olympic champion, was more caustic with: "Yes, Rideout apologized, but what good does that do now?"

Wooderson, who had been confident of setting a new world record of near 4:03 said he did not intend to run again in this country and would leave for home "after seeing the sights."

Though the mishap probably deprived him of victory, it didn't have anything to do with Wooderson's failure to achieve a record. His chance was long gone before Rideout became over-ambitious. Hampered by a strong southeast wind, Sydney set a disappointing pace all the way.

Time Bad

Closely followed by Cunningham, he passed the first quarter in 64 seconds, as against the 60 flat he had promised to do. He hit the half in 2:08, with Fenske at his heels, Cunningham a step behind, and Rideout and Sam Romani bringing up the rear. At the three quarters he was clocked in 3:14, with the same alignment behind him.

There was, naturally, a lot of argument that Fenske would have breezed past Wooderson in the stretch even if Rideout had been running in another country. At that, the red shirted winner did put on a terrific kick in the last 150 yards, and the timing reveals he did the closing quarter in 57 seconds, which is fast.

But the fact remains that much of Wooderson's reputation and his several worlds records have been built around his famous closing sprint. There was no reason to believe he had left it home in England this time. Certainly he had not set a fast enough pace to tire him before the accident. He and Fenske might have had a thrilling tussle in the stretch.

Wayne Rideout Wins

The mishap climaxed a throughly disappointing program. There were no records, no nothing, to cheer the big crowd in the stadium.

John Quigley, a 19-year-old New York high school student, supplied most of the excitement of the preliminary program by beating Archie Williams, Olympic 400-meter champion, in the quarter-mile.

The half mile went for the second straight year to Charles Beetham, former Ohio State track captain.

Wayne Rideout, twin brother of the unfortunate Blaine, won the three-quarter mile event in the slow time of 3:02.8, with Gene Venzke next and Leslie MacMitchell of N. Y. U. third. Thomas Deckard, ex University of Indiana, ran away from his field toward the last in winning an unexciting two-mile race in 9:21.2

Sydney Wooderson

LONDON, June 17 (AP)—In one word, Great Britain's reaction to Sydney Wooderson's defeat in the Princeton mile was "foul."

The result of the race was broadcast throughout the country, announced in theaters, plastered on midnight posters. News agency reports stressed the angle that the Englishman had been bumped by Blaine Rideout.

Though the result came too late for the Sunday newspapers to comment, the race was the main topic of conversation in the streets and one disappointed cockney summed up the first public reaction by saying:

"Our boy was done in."

This reaction was natural in view of the fact that British sports writers have been suggesting all week that the Americans probably would gang up on the little Englishman.

Skeet Shoot To Be Held Today

Two skeet shoots will be held in Pampa on successive Sundays, it was announced Saturday by Buddy Bliss, one of the group of Pampa skeet fans. Skeet shoots are ordinarily held on alternate Sundays, but local marksmen have decided to hold a shoot at 2 o'clock this afternoon and again on Sunday afternoon, June 25.

Location of the place of the match was given by Mr. Bliss as two blocks north of the airport on LeFors street.

Cost to entrants will be $1.35 a round if shells are furnished by the group of local skeet shooters, or 50 cents a round if entrants bring their own shells. There are 25 shots to a round.

Plans have been made for a chicken shoot to be held at the same place next Sunday afternoon. Tommy Templeton, Remington Arms company salesman from Amarillo, will help run off the shoot next Sunday, Mr. Bliss said.

There are approximately 5,000,000 table tennis, or pingpong, enthusiasts in the United States.

Electric Cookery Will Be Demonstrated By Miss Duke

If a group of homemakers were asked to account for every hour of the day spent at home, what part of the home would be charged with most of these hours? The kitchen, of course.

That is why modern women want kitchens that are beautiful comfortable, and efficient, according to Miss Bonnie Duke, prominent home economist of the Edison General Electric Appliance Company, Inc., who will arrive in Pampa today to conduct a special demonstration program on electric cookery, and the use of other modern home appliances.

The demonstration will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons, starting at 2 o'clock, at the Southwestern Public Service company.

"The Spotless, streamlined plants which produce our food products could never exist if their equipment wasn't completely modern and easy to operate," Miss Duke stated. "Why should the home's workshop, where three meals a day are planned, prepared—and sometimes eaten—be less clean, attractive, and efficient than a commercial food product plant?

"The modern kitchen should be arranged to give the homemaker the utmost efficiency in carrying out her most important tasks of planning, preparing, and serving meals, as well as the attendant cleaning and dishwashing. It should be attractively decorated to express the homemaker's taste and individuality. And most important of all, every piece of kitchen equipment which the homemaker uses should perform its appointed part of the kitchen work with speed, efficiency, and as little attention as possible.

"The development of electricity as a practical cooking fuel has brought the kitchen out of the 'sweat shop' class.

"When designing Hotpoint ranges, refrigerators, dishwashers and water heaters, our engineers remembered that lasting beauty and harmonizing lines in kitchen equipment are as necessary as efficiency, if Madam Homemaker is to remain happy in her job of meal planning and preparation. Everyone of these beautiful white appliances has been styled to harmonize with the complete all-electric kitchen.

Miss Duke's appearance in Pampa is under the auspices of Gunn-Hinerman Tire Company, through a special arrangement with the Edison General Electric Appliance Company, Inc. She will talk to homemakers and answer their questions about that most important room in the house—the kitchen.

Musketeers Will Play Borger Girls

Wearing their new red and white uniforms, the Pampa-Edmonson Musketeers, girls softball team, will try for their sixth consecutive win of the season at 5 o'clock this afternoon i.. Borger.

The Musketeers will meet the new Borger team. They have already defeated the first team organized in Borger twice and have won three games from White Deer.

The Musketeers new uniforms are snappy and colorful. The shorts are red and shirt white. A white cap and red sox complete the uniform excepting for a red jacket on the back of which is a baseball emblem in which is a map of Texas with Pampa marked and lettering "Edmonson Musketeers."

Probable starting lineup will be A. Heiskell, catcher; Smart, pitcher; White, first base; Musgraves, second base; Bennett, third base; Fore, shortstop; Switzer, roving short; Swafford, Hall and Fore in the outfield.

Fred Wolcott Wins Hurdles In NCAA Meet

By ROBERT MYERS.

LOS ANGELES, June 17 (AP)—Two new records went into the books and Southern California's mighty Trojan forces rode on to their fifth consecutive triumph today as the eighteenth annual National Collegiate track and field championships came to a close in a brilliant climax of the 1939 college season.

Thirty thousand spectators, largest crowd in the history of the NCAA and the biggest track turn out here since the 1932 Olympics, witnessed the spectacle.

Record smashing feature of the day came when chunky Gregory Rice of Notre Dame reeled off the two-mile grind in nine minutes 2.6 seconds, leaving a gallant Ralph Schwarzkopff of Michigan to trail by nine yards in second place and the N. C. A. A. meet record of nine minutes 11.1 seconds set by Walter Mehl of Wisconsin a year ago to fall.

Trojans Win Four Firsts.

Elmer (Glamour Boy) Hackney of Kansas State, failed to better the shot put mark he set in yesterday's preliminaries and it stays at 55 feet 10 3/8 inches as the new N. C. A. A. and American record.

Southern California captured four first places and won the team championship with 86 points.

Stanford, as expected, finished second in the team standings with 46 3/4 points, with Michigan next with 31, Washington State 23, Wisconsin 22, Rice 20, Oregon 16, and Texas 13.

Starting off with the mile, when Troy's Louie Zimperini retained his title with a disappointing time of four minutes 13.6 seconds after quelling a threat offered by Wisconsin's ex-two-miler, Mehl, and John Munski of Missouri, the meet was a succession of thrills.

Wolcott Wins.

Flying Fred Wolcott from Rice retained his two hurdle titles, while Stanford's Clyde Jeffrey ran to an upset victory over defending champion, Mozel Ellerbe of Tuskegee, in the 100 to ring up the first of his double victories for the day. Jeffrey did the 100 in 9.8 and ran with the 220 in 21.1.

Wolcott bested Earl Vickery of U. S. C. in the low hurdles and raced to an easy win in the highs when Jim Humphrey, his chief rival from S. C. fell on the ninth hurdle.

Long John Woodruff of Pittsburgh closed his college career by winning for the third straight year the 880 in 1 minute, 51.3 seconds, and Pete Zagar of Stanford retained his discus title with a winning throw of 164 feet ¼ inch.

Johnny Wilson of U. S. C. won the high jump at 6 feet 6 inches and Texas' Judson Atchison captured the broad jump with a leap of 24 feet 9½ inches.

Summaries of the finals included:

Javelin throw—Won by Peoples (SC), 220 feet 6½ inches; second, Brown (Oregon), 218 feet 4 3/4 inches; third, De Groot (SC), 206 feet 7 inches; fourth, Vukmanic (Penn), 206 feet 6 5/8 inches; fifth, Graham (Texas), 201 feet 5 3/4 inches.

120-yard high hurdles—Won by Wolcott (Rice); second, Smith (Wis.); third, Corpening (North Carolina); fourth, Wright (Okla A. and M.); fifth, Kinzle (Duke); sixth, Gatewood (Texas). Time: 14.2 seconds.

220-yard low hurdles—Won by Wolcott (Rice); second, Vickery (S C); third, Cochran (Ind.); fourth, Marshall (Butler); fifth, Hawkins (Stanford); sixth, Hiserman (Stanford). Time: 23 seconds.

Discus throw—Won by Zagar (Stanford), 164 feet ¼ inch; second, Watson (Mich.) 161 feet 9 3/4 inches; third, Harris (Ind.) 160 feet 8 inches; fourth, White (Tulane), 159 feet 3/4 inch; fifth, Faymondville (Notre Dame), 156 feet 5 inches; sixth, Haliand (Ill.), 163 feet 8½ inches. Non point winners—Davis (Pepperdine), 151 feet 8¼ inches; Hughes (Texas), 152 feet 1 5/8 inches; Gaspar (SC), 148 5 3/4 inches.

Running broad jump—Won by Atchison (Texas), 24 feet 9¼ inches; second, Brown (LSU), 24 feet 8 inches; third, Turner (UCLA), 24 feet 5½ inches; fourth, Watson (Mich.), 24 feet ¼ inch.

Johnstown Runs His Rivals Ragged

NEW YORK, June 17 (AP)—Johnstown ran his three principal three-year-old rivals dizzy again today, leaving Challendon and Volitant far down the stretch, as he won the Dwyer States at Acqueduct to bring his total earnings to $165,315.

William Woodward's champion three year old and leading money winner of 1939 won handily by a length and a half from Sun Lover of the Chicago-owned Millsdale stable.

He went to the front quickly and Challendon, owned by W. L. Brann of Frederick, Md., attempted to run with him for a brief period before reaching the turn. That was a mistake and after the field of five straightened in the stretch, Challendon weakened but still held third safely, five lengths in front of the unruly Volitant, which broke from outside the stalls.

"Big John" added $9,250 to his earnings through today's purse. His winnings for the year are $133,895.

He paid Brann's color-bearer and Volitant back in full for the decisive lacing they gave him in the Preakness mud last May. That was the only 1939 start he has lost, and then he was a bad fifth, sprawling far back in the mud.

Under favorable conditions, an airplane can be seen at 10,000 to 15-000 feet altitude.

Lamesa Sinks Oilers In 15 To 0 Fiasco

The good ship, "Oilers" joined the cycle of sunken submarines out at Roadrunner Park Saturday night, took a dive before a packed grandstand on ladies night, and never came up.

All of which is another way of relating the story of how the Lamesa Loboes gained a tighter clutch on their second place position in the West Texas-New Mexico League by blanking Grover Seitz' befuddled Pampa team, 15 to 0, making it a two-out-of-three sweep of their three-game week-end conference. It was the first time that the Oilers had been shut out.

Early this morning the Oilers boarded their road-trip bus for Big Spring where they will play three games—a double-header this afternoon and one on Monday night.

The Day Will Come!

Beginning Tuesday the Oilers will have three chances to get even with Lamesa for last night's disgraceful treatment. The Oilers and the Loboes play in Lamesa Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

The Oilers will return to Pampa next Friday for three games with Clovis, to be followed by three more at home with the Big Spring team.

Everything that happened to the Oilers when they were sucked in 16-11 by Lamesa Friday night, happened again last night.

Support Shoddy

Shoddy support behind Pitcher Milburn Vannoy seemed to tell the tale of last night's defeat, and the poor showing of Friday and Saturday night combined to offer up some proof that what the drugstore coaches are saying is true. That is to say, that too many Oilers are playing in the wrong positions.

However, Manager Seitz may be doing the best he can with the numerous obstacles he has to surmount in getting a balanced team onto the field in the past week. Last night, for instance, Catcher Summers was ill and failed to show up for the game, and Outfielder Reeves took French leave Saturday morning and was not on hand.

One home run rose to the surface out of Lamesa's hitting spree last night with Shortstop Malvica pounding one over the left centerfield fence in the fourth. There was nobody on.

20 Strikeouts

There were twenty strikeouts during the evening with nine of them going to Pampa's Vannoy and 11 to Lamesa's Hay. Pitcher Vannoy got two of Pampa's five hits, none of which was longer than a single. Stone and Spangler cracked out three-baggers and Malvica, Hobson and Bates garnered two-baggers for the visitors.

Vannoy allowed three bases on balls and Hay, two. John Gyurcoon made his first appearance behind the bat for Pampa last night, since the team returned for its nine-game home engagement. Manager Seitz made one of the most spectacular plays of the season in the seventh when Malvica flied to short center and Seitz caught the ball off his shoe-strings. The wiry Oiler manager rolled over twice and came up with the ball in his mitt. It was the third out.

It took two hours and 20 minutes for Lamesa to completely submerge the Pampa submarine, but at 12:30 this morning the ship was still down with the entire crew aboard.

Wendland Paces All Golfers In Tourney

AUSTIN, June 17 (AP)—Hot as the sun under which his blazing irons and wood wrote a brilliant 139, three under par, young Lonnie Wendland of San Antonio easily paced all Texas municipal golfers here today in the first 36 holes of their annual tournament.

Wendland carded a 72-67 over the par 71 Muny layout. Included was a superb eagle two on the 494-yard dog-leg sixth hole.

The round established the San Antonio shotsmith as the strong favorite to cop the Texas Public Links title and the expenses-paid trip to the national tournament in Baltimore, Md., in July. It was also in the nature of a celebration—Wendland was married yesterday in San Antonio to Miss Virginia Jordan of San Antonio.

The terrific clip set by Wendland permitted only nine others to qualify for the championship flight in tomorrow's 36-hole windup. All within 15 strokes of the leader at the half-way mark went into the title flight. The others were divided into two flights for the last round.

It was a common sight in Drumwright to see a touring car with from three to five men swathed in sheets from head to feet, rushing up to our emrgency hospital owned by Dr. and Mrs. Karasak, your first doctor at Phillips, Tex. They would be burned black on a gas well, and we all expected our husband to be among them.

One terrible experience I'll never forget was watching a derrick on a gas well burn and half-way up was a young man burned to a crisp.

Another time we were dumped from our beds at 2:30 in the morning by a nitro-glycerine explosion.

One wonderful sight was when lightning struck fire 55,000 barrel tanks of oil, and they were all burning and we didn't see the sun for three days. Every 12 hours they would boil over and shoot flames hundreds of feet up in the air.

Yes, the oil field is tough to work in because of the dangerous work and when our loved one leave to go to work, we think we may never see them again.

We were hi-jacked once on the road between Drumwright and Shamrock by five boys. They relieved us of $2, a gold watch and a gun. When they stopped us (a party of two men, myself and a four-year-old boy) we got out and lined up with our hands in the air as they told us to, and we were not harmed. The boy closest to me was nervous and swore, and then begged my pardon. Next day the hi-jackers returned the gun and watch. They were not oil field boys.

While living near Big Heart no car could get on the road to our camp.

On a "wildcat" 20 miles from Hominy we went after groceries once a week. If we ran out of provisions we hunted squirrel and rabbit and picked wild strawberries and blackberries.

In Borger, in 1926, we paid $3 a bed for one night. In Pampa, 1929, we paid $75 for an unfurnished house. That's what makes us love our rag houses and shacks. They are never too small that we can't find room for one more and make space for another chair at our tables.

Boom towns are fascinating to the oil field wife as we can accompany our husbands and help build the towns and there are no signs reading "apartments: no children.' They are brimming over with hospitality. The handclasp is a little stronger. Everybody knows everybody by their first name, and the oil field is not such a bad place to be. I've watched my Toolie Bird change to a driller, fisherman, general superintendent and pumper, and we have that vine-covered shack you mentioned and I wouldn't trade it for any home in Pampa. Thank you again for including us in your Fiesta edition.

Home Methods Of Stain Removal From Fabrics Necessary

The removal of stains is a necessary feature of the general care of clothing and household textiles. Most stains may be removed at home, if reliable methods are known and a few simple precautions taken. Prompt treatment is one of the most important rules. Changes in the character of the stain, brought about by drying, exposure to air, washing, ironing, or in other ways, often make it necessary to use stronger chemicals in removing old stains. However, miracles should not be expected as the result of amateur or even professional efforts at stain removal. Very often the staining substance has so attacked the fabric that it cannot be removed without destroying the fibers.

The nature of a stain should be known, if possible, before its removal is attempted, because it determines the treatment. If an unsuitable remover is used, the stain may be "set" so that its removal becomes difficult or even impossible. For example, if boiling water, which easily removes most fresh fruit stains, is applied to stains containing protein, such as those from milk, blood, eggs, or meat juice, it coagulates the albumin and makes its extremely difficult to remove.

The kind of fabric upon which the stain occurs should also be known and the method of treatment chosen which will affect that particular fabric the least. In removing stains from fabrics made from two or more kinds of fibers, such as silk and cotton mixtures, the effect of the stain removers upon all of the fibers should be considered. No chemical should be used which would injure the most delicate of the fibers.

Snakes Come Out Of Holes In Southwest

By ERNEST G. FISCHER
Associated Press Staff

This is the time of year when Texans see snakes, not those hallucinations of the cup that cheers, but flesh-and-blood reptiles, many of them equipped with rattles.

Although extensive cultivation has destroyed the rattlesnake's shelter in many sections of the state, there remain areas where there are enough rattlers to menace man and beast. Even in Bell, one of the best cotton-growing counties in the state, some 5,000 rattlers were killed last year when commissioners court offered a bounty. Most of the snakes came from the cedar brakes of the western part of the county. In a nearby Lampasas county where a 20-cent bounty was offered, several thousand were killed.

Nothing is so disconcerting to a cotton picker of a corn-top binder as the thought that a rattler may be coiled under the next cotton plant or bundle of fodder. That is one reason why north and east Texas negroes are not keen about picking cotton in the coastal region. Mexicans take their snakes more philosophically; it is the will of the Almighty.

But all farm hands have a morbid hatred of snakes which extends to the destruction of harmless—some beneficial—species.

Soldiers in the Mexican war, many from the old South, wrote home graphic accounts of the Texas rattlesnakes. Thomas Bangs Thorpe, in "Our Army on the Rio Grande," (1846) write:

"They (the rattlesnakes) glided through the long grass, striking terror to all, and crawled by hundreds into the camp of the soldiers, coiling themselves under the blankets, a location they seemed to prefer to any other among the army equipment. So numerous were these serpents that the soldiers humorously took the precaution to shake their knapsacks in the morning, to know if they are occupied. Occasionally the ear would be saluted with a noise resembling the pouring of shot into a tin cup, and that knapsack was treated accordingly."

A pioneer hunter recalled how he overcame the rattler's penchant for crawling under his blanket. He used black-hair cobros (a lariat made of plaited hair) to encircle the blanket which formed his bed. "No snake will crawl over this," asserted this hunter.

This idea later spread to the use of a manila rope for a similar purpose. However, the efficiency of the method remains a topic of argument among oldtimers. Another question on which there is some disagreement is whether deer and wild turkeys kill rattlers.

August Santleben, who freighted cotton from Columbus to Eagle Pass during the Civil War, said that near Uvalde he saw wild turkey gobblers killing a rattler. They flew over the snake, swooped suddenly and with their wings thrashed the rattler to death.

"It was their custom," said Santleben "to eat the snakes killed in this manner."

That is one way of getting rid of rattlers, of course. Another way was demonstrated by the zoo management at San Antonio in recent years. They chopped up some rattlers, fried them, and served them to tourists at so much per slice.

Santleben recalled also that deer killed rattlers by jumping on the reptiles "with four feet brought together, the hoofs cutting like a knife."

But the settlers living in areas where turkeys and tourists had not eaten the rattlesnakes did the next best thing. After the rattler struck, they applied something. "The Emigrants' Guide" suggested the application of "a bright hot coal to the wound or the bruised leaves of rattlesnake's master."

The guide did not describe "rattlesnake's master," but Capt. James Hobbs, in "Wild Life in the Far West," wrote that the Comanches know of "a snake-weed abounds everywhere rattlesnakes are found." Hobbs described it as "a running vine or weed with a small blossom that resembles a rattlesnake's eye." It could be used as a tea or a poultice.

Hobbs suggested "also take out the snake's liver, cut, and spread on poultice over wound."

Film Visitors Tender Thanks For Treatment

Sincere thanks to Pampans and to citizens of other Panhandle towns who greeted them at their appearance here during the Top O' Texas Fiesta, were expressed today by Walter Mattex, on behalf of George (Windy) Hayes and Nellie Walker.

The three from Hollywood were special guests at the Top O' Texas Fiesta in Pampa last Tuesday and Wednesday. They rode in the Fiesta parade, were in the grand entry at the rodeo at Recreation park, attended the old timers and modern dances, were guests at the press luncheon and at two private dinners given for them, and at the 89ers barbecue at Central Park, and were honored at the presentation of a Hollywood premiere at the LaNora theater.

Thirty minutes after they made a stage appearance Wednesday night at the LaNora, Hayes and Miss Walker left for Hollywood.

Mattex, who is agent for Smiley Burnette and Gene Autry, said: "We want to thank Pampans and all others for their acts of courtesy and friendship shown us during our stay here. We especially wish to thank Carl Benefiel, the Pampa Junior Chamber of Commerce, the rodeo committee, Sheriff Cal Rose and his deputies, Pampa police, Texas Highway patrol, and the newspapers, and I want the people of the Top O' Texas to know that they have two other great admirers in Gene Autry and Smiley Burnette."

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By ALICIA HART
NEA Service Staff Writer

The personality experts sound theory that you never build yourself up by tearing someone else down can very well be applied to beauty. In other words, the surest way to draw attention to the flaws in your appearance is to go around making catty remarks about how other women look.

If you say, "Agatha's getting pretty hippy, isn't she?", somebody is likely to think, if not actually say, "Well, you aren't so slim." Or else, "You'd be better off if you gained a few pounds yourself."

The minute you remark that so-and-so's coiffure is terrible, you focus attention on your own hair. All well and good, though hardly kind, if your own hair always looks really lovely, but pretty silly if it doesn't.

The two remarks which women hate and resent most of all are, of course, "Such and such makes you look old" and "That makes you look younger."

Furthermore, you may be an angel about watching your weight, brushing your hair and taking excellent care of your skin. But it's a mistake to say that you are, or to discuss your ways and means of self-improvement too frequently. If you do, you'll have people saying, "Mary worries too much about herself, don't you think?". Or, worse yet, "Why shouldn't Mary be attractive? Look at all the time she spends on her face and figure."

Better to go your own sweet way, making yourself as attractive as possible without going into detail about how you do it, and taking no risks of drawing attention to your defects by pointing out the shortcomings of others.

Bigness Of Modern Business Narrows Investment Field

By JOHN T. FLYNN
(Written for NEA Service)

What is it that is holding up investment, or at least making it difficult?

There are many things in the way. If you follow political discussions and the speeches of business men, you will imagine that the only thing holding up investment is Roosevelt. He is supposed to have produced uncertainty in business by his taxes, his interferences in business, his attacks on capital.

Then the European war situation is supposed to have bred fears, suspicions.

I do not wishly completely to brush aside these notions. But I think they are much exaggerated.

Business men would do well to be more realistic. They should act like business men and face facts.

One of the first troubles is found in the more limited opportunities for investment. But this is something we can correct.

BIG BUSINESS NARROWS FIELD

One of the things which limits opportunity for investment is bigness in business. Now I do not want to debate the question of whether big business is more efficient than little business. Nor do I wish to talk about big business being immoral or bad. I see it as a purely economic question.

I recognize that certain industries must necessarily be big. But this is not true of all.

Take the steel industry. When steel plants were moderate in size, there was a large number of them. It is a fact that in the United States Steel Corporation is a combination of over 300 concerns.

In an industry where plants are moderate in size, it is possible for one who is the general manager of a plant, who has saved his earnings, and who is ambitious, to start a plant of his own. He invests his own savings and perhaps induces some friends or colleagues to join him. Each year ten or fifteen such men will set up in business for themselves. Perhaps only a few will succeed. But all will bring a large amount of investment funds into the market.

The economic value of the investment opportunity is always overlooked when considering this question of bigness. I am not, of course advocating a return to little horse-and-buggy plants. I use the word "moderate-sized" comparatively.

Now you may say we cannot go back to little plants in the steel industry. All right. Then you cannot expect any newcomer ever again to seek a place for his investment money in a new steel company. The only chance is in the expansion of a few old ones.

The thing that tends to produce this situation is many-sided.

The corporation laws tend to give the breaks to the large-scale enterprises. Corporation laws enable corporate industries to escape all sorts of regulations which the individual must submit to. By the use of subsidiaries and holding companies law can be circumvented. Taxes can be circumvented. And for years the corporations enjoyed tax advantages denied the individual.

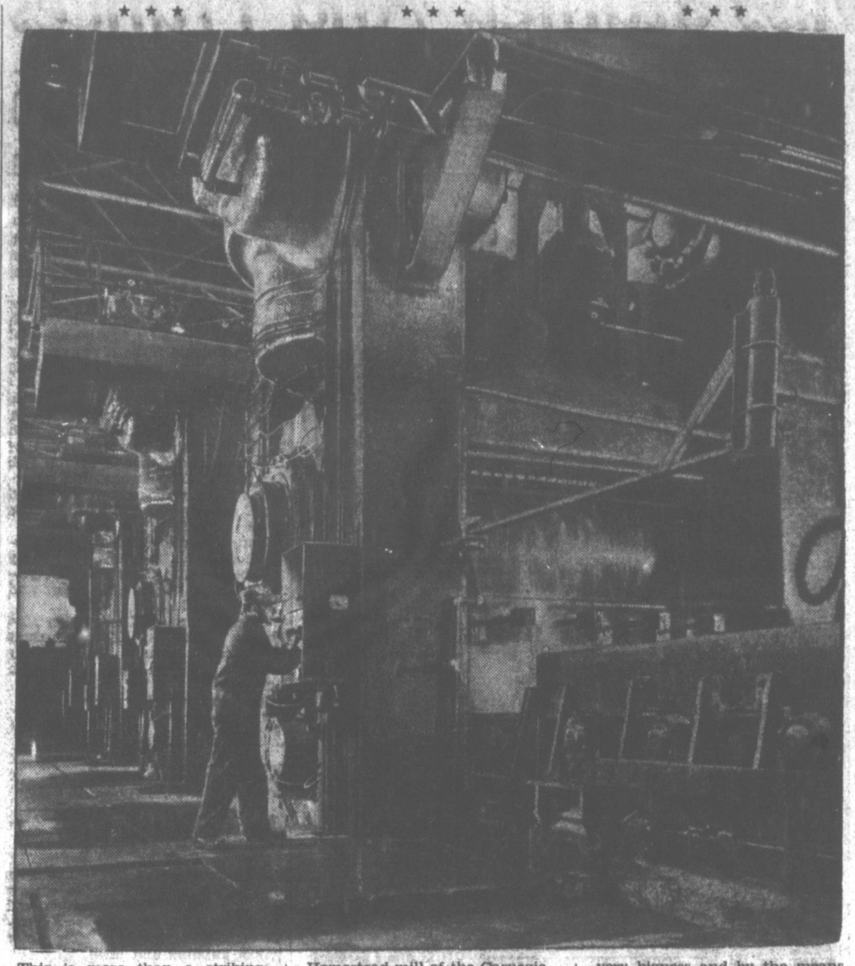

Everything we have done has tended to make enterprise seek the large-scale corporate form with subsidiaries and hence has driven industry into large units.

No one would advocate abandonment of the corporate form. But the corporation laws and the tax laws applying to corporations and individuals should be gone over carefully to deprive the large corporate concern of any administrative and tax advantages it enjoys as against the small one.

Next, monopoly of every sort should be fought at every turn. These monopolies are of two kinds. The absolute monopoly where one or a handful of concerns by artificial means gets control of the market. The other is the trade agreements where competitors get together to keep out newcomers, to keep up prices, to prevent the new man with new ideas finding a place for himself.

Monopoly and monopoly practices have all but completely destroyed the building industry. And they will gradually do the same thing to every industry into which they are permitted to enter.

Therefore, the first course is twofold: (1) War, unremitting war, on every kind of restraint upon trade and every form of monopoly practice. (2) Revision of the tax and corporation laws to equalize the opportunity of the big man and withdraw government sponsorship of bigness.

This is more than a striking photograph of a new industrial behemoth—the finishing rolls, operated by a lone workman, in the fabulous and super-modern Homestead mill of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation. It is in truth a picture of the industrial-economic scene in today's America, where business—by its very bigness and by the means at its command—has smothered the opportunity for investment in small-scale enterprises.

Old Guns Found Near Miami Hint Of Mysterious Battle

By Lorene Osborne Locke

While riding pasture, about eight years ago, Ross Cowan found an old flint-lock gun, an old-fashioned military musket, made by Sargant Brothers of England and dated 1849. It was laying on top of the ground on the Cowan ranch twelve miles northwest of Miami. This type of gun superseded the wheel lock early in the 17th century and was superseded by the percussion lock early in the 19th century. It was fired by means of a flint fixed in the cock or hammer, which on striking the cover of the pan, ignited the priming which communicated its fire to the charge through the touch-hole. This ancient gun is an interesting phase in the evolution of firearms. By a peculiar coincidence the flint used to fire it is still in the grip.

Sometime before this, Alfred Cowan had found the barrel of an old horse-pistol near the spot where his brother later picked up the flint-lock. He placed little importance on his find, and it lay around the house being used for a stove-lifter. The interest created by the discovery of the second gun reminded him of his own find.

In Mead Collection

The horse-pistol, as its name implies, was especially designed for the horseman. It was a huge revolver type gun. While the specimen of this revolver that young Cowan found is undated its very size places the mark of age upon it. The bore must be at least one inch across. Both guns were empty. Both are now on display in the Mead collection.

Thirty years ago in the same area Mage Lard found another old gun and a man's bones under a little sheltered ledge of rock, as if he had sought refuge there and been slain. This gun, of somewhat later date than the two old guns before mentioned, was an army rifle. Accompanying it was the saber and uniform buttons with the Company number, to which the owner belonged, still decipherable. Evidently it was the grave of a soldier—but a soldier of an early day, as the bones were bleached and almost gone. These articles were taken to Canadian and placed in the old Jim Berry saloon and later lost to the public.

In itself, this find was not signones described in this section, it ones described in this sketch, it arouses some conjecture. To those interested in Panhandle history these finds, all in the same locality, gives rise to questions that cannot be answered in terms of mere coincidence.

Deucette Book Cited

What is their significance? Was a battle fought here that history does not record? Was the soldier the only casualty on one side? His grave furnishes proof that if there was an engagement here it was not merely a skirmish between roaming bands of Indians.

There is some basis for belief that an expedition crossing the Washita came by trail over the divide between Red Deer Creek and the Canadian River, passing over this area, and on into Colorado, long before the Panhandle was known to the white man.

Albert Doucette of Pampa had a history in which such an expedition was mentioned, but the book was borrowed and never returned, so it was impossible to obtain further details.

In studying the region faint remains of an old wagon trail are visible. One observes, too, that the topography of the country would lend itself easily, to attack, if a party were camped on the very site where the guns were found.

Another conjecture is that an engagement between Indians and soldiers took place here in 1874 or '75, when General R. S. McKenzie waged his determined and conclusive campaign, and forever drove the Indian from the Panhandle. History records that twenty-one engagements took place all over the Panhandle region, and mentions that some of these were near Pampa. Where ever the Indians could be found and brought to a stand there was a fight.

What ever the answer these guns further augment Roberts county's contributions to prehistoric and early day lore.

The Big Moment — By EDGAR MARTIN

James Bowie Owned Three Million Acres

(By The Associated Press)

Texas, like other areas that eventually became states of the North American union, had land scandals in their pioneer stage, but none exceeded Texas in the quantity of land involved. Everything Mexico did, prior to Texas obtaining its independence, to check large individual holdings only seemed to heighten the practice. It reached a peak in 1835.

James Bowie, hero of the Alamo is credited with discovering a way to circumvent Mexican laws designed to prohibit extensive land ownership and when he was killed he had 700 certificates of land grants of a league each. Other leaders of pioneer days, records show, possessed from 10 0to 300 league grants.

A league of land is 4,428.3 acres and a present day section—by which big ranchmen count their acres—is equivalent to 640. Accordingly, 700 league made the owner a landlord of consequence. In fact, Mexico used this as one of numerous reasons for marching against Texas in 1835.

In 1825 Mexico promulgates a law intended to make it very difficult for North Americans to get into Texas except through recognized channels, namely, Austin's, DeWitt's and Green's colonie. Regardless borders were difficult to guard and immigration increased. Then in 1830, President Bustamente issued a decree absolutely forbidding further immigration from the United States.

Most colonists in Texas bitterly resented this discriminatory law, Bowie and other resourceful men remained calm and studied the law, believing they could find a hole big enough to crawl through it.

As a substitute for American immigration, Mexico ruled that Mexican families "must be encouraged to settle in the province" and to promote the plan the government offered huge grants of land. Ex-convicts of Mexico were to be shipped north if necessary to counterbalance the huge Ang'o-Saxon population. But the lawmakers neglected to rule that these grants could not be mortgaged or sold and in this Bowie and his colleagues found the loophole they sought.

The first tep was to round up eligible Mexican families and get them to apply for land grants. After grants were made titles were purchased by Texas speculators who re-sold them to immigrants at much higher figures. They had a ready market for by this time many Americans had turned eyes toward Texas. For $100 paid to the Mexican who made the application, the speculator could get as much as 50 cents an acre or more for the title when re-sold.

This system progressed fairly well until 1834 when Ben Milam protested that these hastily made grants were conflicting with the area granted to him by an earlier jurisdiction.

Families in his colonies were having to fight for their lands, so in that year Milam went to Saltillo, capitol of Texas, to see about it, but never returned. When he reached Saltillo, he found the federalists were going to resist Santa Anna's centralist movement. This created two governments in the province: one at Saltillo, the other at Monclava. The latter legislature immediately began scanning the countryside for revenue with which to operate its rump government.

They spotted this land speculation system and perfected it for their own use. At first they restricted the sale to Mexicans, although they knew the land was being re-sold to Texans. Then they abandoned this farce and opened it up to Texans, but at a slightly higher premium. Finally, as word was received that Santa Anna was marching northward to put an end to all this insubordination, the legislators issued a blanket order for the governor at Monclava to offer 1,771,000 acres for sale to finance an army to resist Santa Anna.

So disgusted were many Texans who had tolerated this system at first, because it aided in getting more Americans into Texas, that they refused to raise a hand to fight Santa Anna who had come ostensibly to end this scandalous affair. It took the massacre at Matamoros, Refugio, the Alamo and Goliad for the Texans to realize that his march against Texas was more than an act to end the insubordination of lesser officials. Then Texas united.

Even had Mexico won the war with Texas, it is doubtful whether land titles in Texas would ever have been straightened out except by decree. But there wouldn't have been many Texans by then after Runaway scrape and other defeats . . . so the war closed the chapter forever.

Grants in Texas by Mexico and Spain total 26,280,000 acres.

The Republic issued 221,400 under Lamar, and in 1876 it issued an additional 1,000,000 acres for public schools.

In 1883 the legislature gave another 1,000,000 to the State University. There have been many sizeable grants since that time, including 3,000,000 acres to build the capitol, 32,000,000 acres to encourage railroads, 36,000,000 for headright and bounties, and 1,979,000 for disabled Confederate veterans. In all 165,000,000 acres have been granted by various governments, but it ended in 1900 when the legislature incorporated all remaining land in the public domain for public schools.

That ended the homestead days in Texas.

Prince Now Rancher At Weatherford

By L. C. SLOAN,
Associated Press Staff.

A prince from the tiny principality of Leichenstein, a 65-square-mile cradle hung in the Alps between Austria and Switzerland, is a hard-working West Texas ranchman.

He is 39-year-old Prince Joannes von zu Liechenstein, who in 1931 married in Europe Miss Allene McFarland.

Four years ago the couple came to Weatherford and the prince decided to try his hand at ranching. They operate 1,500 acres of the McFarland ranch property in the Beaf creek community of Parker county.

Liechenstein is a sovereign state consisting of the ancient lordships of Schellenberg and Vaduz, which once were immediate fiefs of the Holy Roman Empire.

Two lordships came into possession of Liechenstein and in 1719 were made a principality by Emperor Karl VI. The kingdom passed from the confederation of the Rhine to the German confederation and became independent in 1866. In the 1920's a legislature was formed.

This country is ruled by Prince Joseph II, who succeeded Prince Franz I at the latter's death in July, 1938.

The romance between the prince and the Texas girl began while she and her mother were visiting in Paris. There Miss McFarland danced at a private home where the prince was a party guest.

Five years later, July 20, 1931, they were married at the Church of Our Lady of Assumption in London's West End attended by a few friends.

A month later the prince saw America for the first time.

"I do not think Hitler will be interested in a country so small," said Prince Johannes of recent rumors that the nazis were eyeing the little nation.

"Resistance to such a move would be purely political," he said.

"Liechenstein has no army and but 15,000 people. It contains 65 square miles and not much wealth."

Prince Johannes said his country was agricultural with much of the work done by oxen. However, improved machinery is being used for harvesting and threshing.

The prince has combined European farm methods with modern ranch practices.

Turkeys are his hobby. Last year his sales totaled 1,340 birds. He sells about half of the annual 6,000 egg crop from his 200 hens, hatching the remainder in incubators. He has nine movable brooder houses which can be transferred as hatching conditions require.

Young turkeys are kept in brooder houses until eight weeks old, then turned out to be herded on ranges by cowboys on horseback.

Prince Johannes is a believer in diversified ranching. He is fattening 152 steers and keeps 50 whiteface cows for breeding. Small gains, corn and forage crops are produced for feed.

For work he keeps six big Percheron mares, weighing 1,600 pounds each. From these several colts are raised yearly.

He and his wife maintain a home at Fort Worth although the prince spends most of his time on the ranch.

Part Of Sooner Strip Acquired By Collingsworth

Special to The News.

WELLINGTON, June 17—The oldest suit on docket of the Texas Supreme Court—the land vacancy claim involving 28,000 acres of land along the 199th meridian, was wiped off Wednesday. A part of this land, formerly in Oklahoma, is now in Collingsworth county.

A motion for rehearing on the case was overruled and apparently the 28-year-old litigation was ended.

The case concerns Gus L. Worthan of Houston, who sought to have the 28,000 acres extending from Childress county north to the top of the Panhandle, declared a vacancy and subject to claim as public domain. The suit resulted from a questioning of the true location of the 100th meridian, which forms the state line. Inaccurate location of the meridian by surveyors in early days resulted in the claim.

A decision made earlier this year by the court refused Wortham's plea for mandamus action and established titles of present owners of the land.

Cowboys And Sailors Mingle In Canadian

Special To The NEWS

When cowboys and sailors mingle anything can happen and usually does and this city is no exception.

Cowboys, real and otherwise, have decreed that every person in this city must be dressed in western regalia to help promote the Anvil Park Rodeo July 2-3-4 and back up their suggestion a dipping tank was installed on the main street and the local citizens warned to either dress up or be dipped.

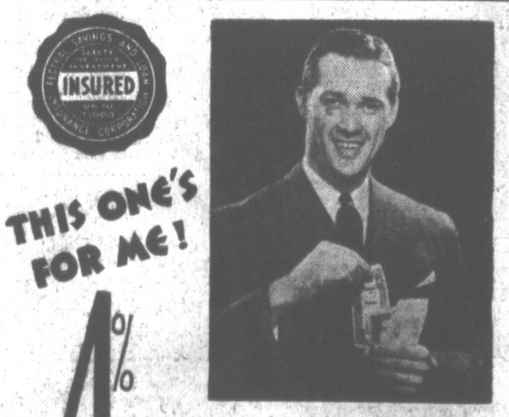

Bob Shaller, vice-commodore of the newly organized Canadian Boat club, had watched the tank being filled all day and had warned several people to dress up.

The moment the tank was filled the dipping squad paid the vice-commodore a visit and in every thing but a gesture of friendship, roped him and headed for the dipping vat across the street.

Getting the boys to "wait just a moment" before tossing him into the icy waters, the Canadian tar asked them for just one favor.

He hurried donned a life jacket and took the dipping amid the roar of a cheering crowd.

Boys May Apply Now For CCC Enrollment

Gray county boys between the ages of 17 and 24 can make application now for the Civilian Conservation corps July 1 enrollment, it was announced Saturday by Mrs. Willie Baines, Gray county case worker, with office on the the third floor of the courthouse.

No information has been received here from the TRC district office at Amarillo as to Gray county's quota for the July enrollment. In the enrollment three months ago, Gray county had a quota of 12.

For the July 1 enrollment, there is a state quota of 1,800. Priority will be given those between the ages of 18 and 23.

No youth is eligible for the July 1 enrollment if he has had more than 18 months service since July 1, 1937. Each enrolle is to send home $22 of the $30 he receives each month. Priority will be shown applicants from the relief groups, if these boys are of good character and desirable, and who will agree to remain in camp six months, and to be sent out of state.

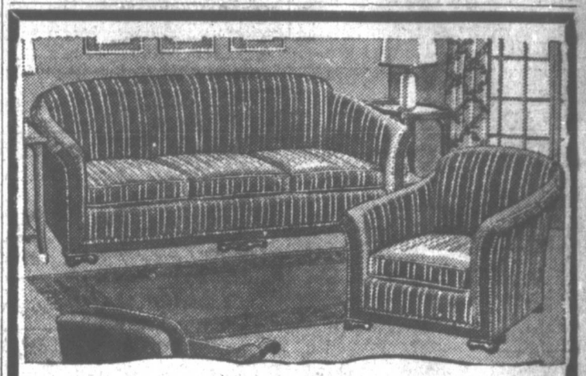

Texas Relief Commission administrators have been notified to prepare rosters showing types of training applicants are best fitted for, and to provide a sufficient number of alternates.

Information concerning the July 1 enrollment was contained in a letter, dated Austin, June 12, from C. J. Sweeney, supervisor of CCC selection, to TRC administrators. A copy of the letter was forwarded to Pampa. In the letter Mr. Sweeney advises that the division of selection has been removed from the department of labor and is now under the supervision of the director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, Robert Fechner.

Wandering Jews Now At Antwerp

By J. C. STARK.

ANTWERP, June 17 (AP)—The five-week voyage of 907 Jewish immigrants from Germany in search of a new homeland, with eager hopes turned first into tragic disappointment and then desperation, ended happily today as the Hamburg-Amerika liner St. Louis, docked in Antwerp.

They still faced a long wait before they may get to the United States, which most of them ultimately hope to reach, after being turned back from Cuba, the land for which they sailed from Hamburg May 15.

But all were happy at escaping a return to Germany, the prospect of which during the voyage passengers said had led more than 200 to enter a whispered pact to plunge into the ocean as a last resort.

Passengers reported only one of the passengers took his life, a man who slashed is wrists and leaped into Havana harbor, but said they had been forced to form an anti-suicide committee which kept a 24-hour vigil to prevent any attempts at self-destruction.

Waving greetings to welcoming crowds, the refugees were brought into Antwerp harbor shortly before 7:15 p. m. tonight.

A special train waited to take 250 of them to Old Marness Castle at Liege. 157 will go to the Netherlands by boats; while two groups of 250 persons each, will proceed on another boat to France and Great Britain.

Belgium, The Netherlands, France and Britain agreed to receive the refugees temporarily, while they waited to enter the United States as quota restrictions permit, after the American joint distribution committee furnished a guarantee of $500 each they would not become public charges.

Austin Left For Texas On June 18, 1821

AUSTIN, June 17 (AP)—June 18, 118 years ago, Stephen Austin left New Orleans for Texas. In his mind there were doubts regarding the province of Texas, but in his heart were the ringing words of his father that he push forward the colonization plans.

Unknowingly Stephen Austin was launching again into a brilliant career. His first efforts had been successful, for he was a member of the legislature in Missouri Territory before he was 23 and operator of his father's huge mining interests until he was 27. Collapse of banks ruined the family fortunes and for three years Stephen Austin floundered in efforts to recoup. His journey led him to Arkansas, then a wild territory, and finally to New Orleans where he was associate director of the "Advertiser."

While at New Orleans he received word of his father's expedition to Texas. This was not a new thing to the Austin family. Moses Austin had migrated from Connecticut to Virginia to survey lands, thence to Missouri territory while it was still Spanish owned. Each new journey brought greater wealth and strength to the Austin name. It was natural for him to take a further step west when ruin faced him.

Duty to his mother might have influenced in Stephen's reluctance to support his father's newest venture. Poverty was hard to bear, having once tasted wealth. In New Orleans he wrote: "I have offered myself as a clerk, an overseer, or anything else, but business is too dull to get into business."

When a comparative new acquaintance, Joseph H. Hawkins, offered to support Stephen with room and board and tutoring in law courses until he could support himself Austin wrote his mother: "There are two obstacles in the way. One is that I shall earn nothing to help you with for at least 18 months, another is that those I owe in Missouri may prosecute here. . . ."

It is likely he felt an obligation to 'earn' money rather than enter into a long time adventure that promised no immediate returns. Whatever doubts he may have had, however, were dispelled by his father's prayers which were related to him by his mother's letter:

"He called me to his bedside and with much distress and difficulty of speech begged me to tell you to take his place, and if God in His wisdom thought best to disappoint him in the accomplishment of his wishes and plans for the benefit of his family, he prayed Him to extend His goodness to you and enable you to go on with the business in same way he would have done."

June 26th, Stephen Austin's party of eight had arrived at Natchitoches, Louisiana; on July 3 he had departed for San Antonio. By the 18th he had presented his plan to Governor Martinez and had received favorable comment which later developed to be full authority to settle 300 families in Texas.

After an exploration of his lands he returned to Louisiana to make definite plans. Everything seemed perfect, but he was to return to Texas to find that Mexico had won her independence from Spain and that all agreements must be remade in the Mexican capital. Thus began his first close study of the Mexican people and governments which aided him in keeping his colonists in control for 15 years.

STORIES IN STAMPS

Fremont—America's Pathmarker

JOHN CHARLES FREMONT probably did more to open the vast American west than any other man in United States history. He tramped the western wilderness from Missouri to California in the days when only bear and Indians and buffaloes roamed it. He led party after party across the new country, suffering indescribable hardship.

Fremont made his first historic dash in 1842, going as far west as the South Pass in Wyoming where he plunged deep into the Wind River range, climbing its highest peak and giving it his name. Then he returned to St. Louis. But by May of 1843 he was on the march again, this time to the Pacific to finish exploration of the Oregon trail. Thereafter, the man Fremont was almost constantly on the march.

In 1845 he was headed for California where he arrived after another heartbreaking trip. Once there he encountered Mexican opposition but courageously he retired to his tiny fort, ran up the American flag and outbluffed the enemy. By 1848 he was on still another expedition, this time to find a new and easier route to the Pacific. But this time Fremont nearly lost his own life and a third of his party of 36 died in the snowbound Sierras. This was the only expedition to fail of all that Fremont headed.

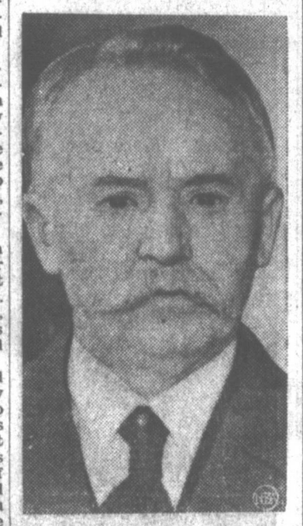

So history reserves a definite niche for John Charles Fremont. He is shown above on a U. S. stamp of the Trans-Mississippi "Omaha" exposition issue of 1898, 5-cent dark blue, enlarged. It shows Fremont on the Rocky Mountains.

SKEPTICAL

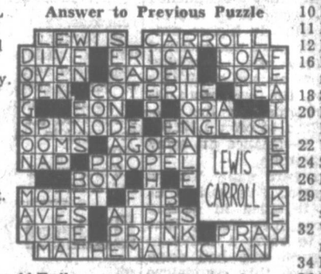

Pat, the new undergardener, gazed wonderingly at the shallow basin containing water in the lawn. "What's that for?" he asked the head gardener. "That's a bird bath." "Now, now, don't ye be a-foolin' me. What is it, really?" "A bird bath. Don't you believe me?" "No," said Pat, with a shake of his head. "I don't believe that there's a bird alive what can tell Saturday from and other night."—(Washington Star.

SERIAL STORY

BRIDE ON A BUDGET

BY JANET DORAN

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday: Bart needs more money, expands his business—on credit. They go on a vacation and honeymoon that Iris graciously demands and Bart buys a diamond, also on time!

CHAPTER IX

IT was a memorable honeymoon, in a way. But then, few honeymoons are ever ordinary or humdrum. Only to Bart, it looked so silly, so phony.

They drove 200 miles that first day and put up at a smart resort shore hotel. There was an orchestra playing to a crowded dance floor of smartly garbed resorters, and Bart was momentarily glad he had given in to Iris' insistence that he buy the white sharkskin suit and sport shoes. Every woman present wore evening clothes, and the men wore smart sports outfits.

There were flowers, too, while they dined. Iris pointed out that every girl present had a corsage. So when the tray came around, Bart bought gardenias, knowing Iris wanted them. Knowing she had wanted nothing else on her wedding day. And a honeymoon was pretty closely linked to the wedding day, however delayed it might be.

"Might as well do it right," he grinned, handing her the corsage. Iris sparkled.

"This is fun, hm, Bart? Aren't you glad you came now, darling? After slaving in that pokey old shop all these months?"

Bart nodded. And dispelled a momentary anxiety lest disaster befall his precious store during his absence.

In the morning, Iris wanted to play golf. Not because she was good at it. She frankly admitted she was terrible. Or because Bart could play any more than the most desultory of duffer's games. But because she had a brand-new sports frock termed the "Golf-girl."

They rented clubs, and hired a caddy, until Iris saw the pro. Then there was nothing to it. She had to have a few lessons. She was terrible. Her slice was something out of a mail order catalog, and her approach was awful. The pro was 28, Latin, dark and handsome. He was also cynical, and hard pushed for money.

Bart paid, watching with seething frustration.

But at the beach, when they went out to swim and sun-bathe, Iris was by far the loveliest lady present. Her thick, powder blue wool suit, and brief little terry cloth cape, and the bright blue cap she tugged down snug over her platinum hair, snapping a narrow strap under her soft little chin, had half the smart resort beach watching her.

It made Bart so proud, so enormously proud of his bride. Of knowing she was his wife, not just his girl. That this was their honeymoon.

They lay on the sand, sun-bathing and watching a lifeguard do stunt dives off the spring-board. Watching, Iris turned away after a while and sighed. She was an excellent swimmer, but had never learned anything spectacular in diving.

"Want to try some of that stuff, honey?"

Iris stared at him, startled. She swallowed carefully and sifted a slender handful of hot white sand over his lean wrist.

"You're kidding, Bart."

"Kidding nothing; you'd have them falling off the sand, at Avalon Beach, back home, honey. And you could do that flip. You're quick at picking up things like that."

"Bart, darling, didn't you see the sign on the lifeguard stand? It says lessons, instruction by the hour, or to suit your purse. Diving extra."

"Sure, I know, honey. Go ahead."

"Bart, it's just the same as a pro, don't you see? You'll have to pay him to teach me." She didn't add, "and you'll hate that; you always hate paying for anything unless it's absolute necessity."

* * *

THEY spent $25 for diving lessons, and the pro was a peach. Married himself, he confided. The little woman was there with him. She worked in the main dining room, and bossed five girls. He gave Bart a reduced rate because they were honeymooners, and because Bart's friendly interest moved him.

"The wife would love to meet you folks, I'm sure," he told them, when the lessons were over. Iris managed to execute an imperfect, but nonetheless fairly authentic single jack-knife dive.

"You're good, Mrs. Whittaker; you could be a pro. Only it's a cinch you won't ever have to worry about working."

Iris explained to Bart, in their room, while they changed to normal clothes again.

"Just a lifeguard, married to a waitress, Bart. Nobody you could afford to cultivate."

Secretly, Bart was disappointed. He liked the ex-college boy, turned lifeguard to eke out a summer's existence. He liked the idea of the girl being five girls in the dining room so she could be near her husband. He thought they were swell. He said so.

"What's wrong with people like that, Iris? They're swell. And if there were more folks like Bingham and his wife, there'd be less dizzy finance in this world. People with both feet down solid on earth like that, earning their own way and not going beyond their means . . ."

"Bart, couldn't you leave your finance and adding machines behind until we finish our honeymoon, please?"

"Sorry," he said gruffly. But he wasn't. He was a trifle mad.

That night, while Iris dressed for the moonlight dance, he went down ahead of her, and hunted Bingham up, offering him a smoke. They sat on the running board of a sports car and smoked and talked. Bart learned that Ted Bingham was an engineer—that is, he had his degree and was waiting for an assignment, and Dotty, his wife, was a singer, with five years at the Conservatory of Music behind her.

"She wants to make grand opera, but if we wangle a radio spot for her, we'll be pretty tickled," Ted explained.

* * *

BART left him with genuine regret. He liked him more than any of the fellows they palled around with at home; John Trent, or Horace Negley, or Don Hammond. He liked him for a realism, a simple, direct honesty that he saw less and less of, around him at home.

The way Bingham surveyed his scuffed crepe sole oxfords and said, "Gosh, have I got to buy another pair of shoes pretty quick, or be on my feet again?" The contrast the simple statement made to the light, sophisticated veneer over everything his friends at home said or did.

"Darn," Negley had said, spilling cafe au lait down his new seersucker suit front, "my favorite Saturday night pants, too." As if he had a dozen at home; as if any one pair of trousers were even half paid for, on time.

"I'm glad," that was Yolanda Negley, laughing shrilly, "I hated that cheap cloth, Ho. I told you it would look awful on you. Seersucker is for flat, thin men. Like Bart."

"Where were you, Bart?" Iris asked, when he returned to get her, 10 minutes late. "Whatever kept you so long?"

"I forgot to lock the car," Bart said gravely. Knowing he'd be censured petulantly for cavorting even conversationally with lifeguards. Ex-college halfback, cub engineer lifeguards. Iris didn't approve.

Merchants Hail Hot Check Law

Action of the Texas House of Representatives in adopting a conference committee bill imposing stiff penalties for writing worthless checks in any amount is being hailed by Pampa merchants as a stride toward saving them from a real menace.

Walter Daugherty, secretary of the Pampa Credit association, declared the bill one of the best ever proposed before the Texas legislature and that when finally passed it will prove a great benefit to Texas merchants. The Pampa Credit association and Pampa Credit Grantors association have been active in support of the bill. In fact the local associations were the first to start the fight for stricter hot check legislation.

The bill, adopted by the house by a vote of 103 to 9, would make a fine or jail sentence possible for the first offense and would make a jail term mandatory on subsequent offenses. Penalty for the second offense would be imprisonment from 30 days to two years, and for the third and subsequent offenses imprisonment from two to ten years.

Persons who file bogus check complaints and then withdraw them after receiving settlement for the check would be subject to a fine up to $500.

LeFors Water Shown Hundred Per Cent Pure

LEFORS, June 17—A five-day test on water from the well being drilled here for the city show a 100 per cent purity and a 13 per cent softness gain which equals in purity and softness any well in or near LeFors, according to Bill Kennedy, local waterworks manager. The well was drilled by Frank Lard of Pampa.

The well tested the last day, 314 gallons of water per minute, which is way above the average test required. This well will be used in furnishing the city and only in emergency will the well now operating be used.

When the work is finished the big tank and all pipes will be drained and refilled with water from this new well. Notice will be made to this effect several hours before the water will be shut off.

A No. 1 System

With the completion of this well the city of LeFors will enjoy one of the best water and sewer systems in the Panhandle, with water sufficient to supply the city on most any kind of emergency, or an increase in population of a much greater number than the present enrollment. The tank has a capacity of 50,000 gallons and is approximately 125-feet high.

Summer Rates

For the conveniences, and to encourage a better yard and home interest, the city has offered a summer rate to all water users. The first 7,000 gallons being $3 with an excess per 1,000 gallons 20 cents will be added. Regular rates for water is: first 3,000 gallons at $2, and an added 5,000 gallon at 40 cents per 1,000 gallons. With added gallons the rate reduces to a much less amount.
