Iraq have agreed to receive a top-level Islamic goodwill mission. The mission reportedly will include Shahi, chairman of the Islamic conference; Pakistani President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq; and Chatti. (AP Laserphoto)

Fighting continues in 'oil heartland'

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq's warplanes bombed western Tehran and a nearby oil refinery, and Iran retaliated early today with a night air raid on Baghdad. Fighting raged in the Iran-Iraq oil heartland.

There were intense efforts at the United Nations to end the Persian Gulf conflict. Iran and Iraq agreed to receive a goodwill mission from Islamic countries as "the first preliminary step," Islamic diplomats said.

But statements from both capitals indicated they were setting conditions for mediation and Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai of Iran said "we will not accept any goodwill mission.... We are not prepared to utter a word about negotiations."

With the war in its fifth day, Iraq announced it had cut off all oil exports, including oil sent by pipeline to the Mediterranean coast. Baghdad Radio said Saudi Arabia had offered to supply Iraq with weapons.

Pillars of smoke rose from the burning Iranian oil center of Abadan and Iraq claimed the city's fall was imminent. But reporters who reached the disputed Shatt al-Arab waterway on the Iraqi side said the sound of Iranian artillery shells pounding Iraq was deafening and that oil installations on both sides of the waterway were afloat.

Iran reported "very heavy" civilian casualties in the oil port of Khorramshahr, which Iraq claimed to have captured on Thursday. Iran conceded that part of its huge Abadan refinery was burning and out of operation but denied nearby Khorramshahr had fallen and said the city's "brave people" were fighting Iraqi invaders in the streets and from rooftops.

The Iranian news agency said Friday night that Iraqi attackers had been wiped out in the region of Khorramshahr, but offered no elaboration.

Both sides reported the Friday raid on Tehran and the refinery and Iraq said it was in retaliation for repeated Iranian air strikes on "economic and civilian targets." Iran responded by attacking southeast Baghdad. Witnesses said they believed the strike was aimed at a military base and said the attackers were met by anti-aircraft fire.

"There were flashes on the fringes of the city accompanied by loud explosions," a witness said. "The Iraqis responded with anti-aircraft fire that lit up the sky."

Following the Iraqi attack, Tehran Radio broadcast orders for civilians to evacuate the area around Tehran's airport, in the western sector of the city.

There were reports from Tehran that despite the war, Iranian Parliament members were continuing to consider the issue of 52 American hostages held since Nov. 4. Ayatollah Hussein Ali Montazeri, a religious leader, said the war "forced on Iran by America will be crushed and will not solve the problem of the American hostages."

Islamic nations launch Iran-Iraq peace initiative

Conference leader says nations will accept 'goodwill mission'

By O.C. DOELLING

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Islamic nations, embarrassed by the latest split in their ranks, launched a peace initiative Friday to seek a halt to the undeclared war between Iran and Iraq.

Pakistani Foreign Minister Agha Shahi said Iran and Iraq would accept the goodwill mission, but Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai said in an interview later over Radio Tehran: "We will not accept any goodwill mission. We are not prepared to utter a word about negotiations."

The announcement that a top-level Islamic "goodwill mission" was being dispatched to Baghdad and Tehran came several hours before a meeting of the 15-nation Security Council.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and delegates from Norway, Mexico and Iraq made statements at the meeting, which lasted 35 minutes, but no action was taken. Norway and Mexico have prepared a resolution calling on Iran and Iraq to "refrain immediately from any further threat or use of force and to settle their dispute by peaceful means," council sources said.

The resolution also urges Iran and Iraq to "accept any appropriate offer of mediation or any assistance that may be forthcoming that would permit the fulfillment of their (U.N.) Charter obligations."

The resolution — which was not introduced — would basically reaffirm the council's cease-fire call adopted without a vote Tuesday, and ignored by Iran and Iraq. Iran did not attend the council meeting.

Private consultations among council members were scheduled for Saturday.

Ismat T. Kittani, undersecretary of the Iraqi Foreign Ministry, asked the council for time to allow Foreign Minister Saadoon Hammadeh to be present when the council opened substantive discussions of the conflict.

An Islamic diplomatic source said his group wanted the council to delay any vote until the Islamic goodwill mission had been carried out, fearing council action would lead the Iraqis to rebuff the initiative.

The Security Council meeting followed a letter from Waldheim to council President Taieb Slim of Tunisia, saying the Iran-Iraq conflict threatened world peace.

"I therefore feel obliged, in the exercise of my responsibilities as secretary general of the United Nations, to suggest that the Security Council consider this matter with the utmost urgency," Waldheim said.

Shahi, acting as chairman of the 40-nation Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers, told newsmen after a three-hour extraordinary meeting that the goodwill mission will be headed by President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq of Pakistan. Zia is to be assisted by Habib Chatti of Tunisia, secretary general of the Islamic Conference.

"We are not going to receive any mission as a goodwill mission," Tehran Radio quoted Rajai as saying. "Obviously, should certain foreign figures wish to visit Iran to inspect the signs of crimes committed by the Iraqi Baathist government, we shall not object."

"We are even prepared to express our views on problems between Iran and Iraq, but we are not prepared to utter a word about negotiations."

Rajai added, "We do not care whether the Iraqi government is going to accept this or not: within the issue of goodwill or negotiations we will not under any circumstances accept anyone."

Chatti told newsmen he was prepared to leave New York Friday night to meet Zia in Islamabad, Pakistan. The mission can begin by Sunday, although timing and itinerary had not yet been worked out, the Tunisian diplomat said.

Carter, Reagan get 'mixed reviews' in AP-NBC poll

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans say Jimmy Carter would do the best job of the presidential candidates in keeping this country out of war, but they judge Ronald Reagan the best able to solve the nation's economic problems, an Associated Press-NBC News poll says.

That's bad news for Carter, for those likely to vote in November say domestic concerns, like the economy, outweigh foreign policy as they consider their presidential ballot.

The AP-NBC News poll taken Monday through Wednesday didn't have much good news for independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson.

Anderson's long-awaited debate with Reagan last Sunday did not give Anderson the boost he hoped for, leaving him still trailing far behind the two major-party candidates. Carter refused to join that first debate, a stance that drew disapproval from many.

But the debate, the "war and peace" issue and the other events of the first weeks of the fall campaign left the candidates about where they were in mid-August. Reagan has gained slightly, while Carter and Anderson are essentially unchanged.

The "war and peace" issue has been a theme of the campaign as the candidates have traded barbs about each other's reliability and accomplishments, with Carter generally launching the toughest comments against Reagan on the topic.

Asked to pick the best candidate for keeping this country out of war, 41 percent of the likely voters named Carter. Only 16 percent named Reagan and 7 percent Anderson. Twenty-nine percent saw no differences among the three and another 7 percent of the 1,512 likely voters interviewed nationwide by telephone were not sure.

But handling of the nation's economy evoked just the opposite response. Reagan was picked as best able to solve the nation's economic problems by 40 percent of likely voters, while only 18 percent named Carter. Anderson was mentioned by 10 percent. Twenty-six percent saw no difference and 6 percent were not sure.

Even on the traditionally Democratic issue of alleviating unemployment, Reagan got the nod by a 33-20 edge over Carter.

Domestic issues far outweigh foreign policy at this point in the voter's minds. Sixty-three percent of the likely voters said the candidates' positions on the economy and domestic issues were more important, while only 24 percent said foreign policy was the top priority. Thirteen percent were not sure.

This edge to Reagan translates into an edge in the likely voters' current preference for president.

The AP-NBC News poll asked each likely voter whom he or she would vote for if the presidential election were held today.

Reagan was named by 42 percent and Carter by 33 percent. Anderson was chosen by 13 percent. One percent mentioned others and 11 percent said they were undecided.

In the AP-NBC News poll taken Aug. 15-16, Reagan was the choice of 39 percent; Carter, 32 percent; and Anderson, 13 percent.

Because these figures are based on error margins of either 3 or 4 percentage points, the changes in Reagan's and Carter's figures are not significant.

Other surveys taken before the debate showed Carter and Reagan about even. It is possible public opinion shifted in the five weeks between the AP-NBC News surveys, but now stands where it did in mid-August.

But these current standings say little about the outcome of the election on Nov. 4. Many voters may change their minds.

About three of five likely voters said they have now made up their minds whom to vote for in November.

Strauss opens state convention

HOUSTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter's chief campaign director Bob Strauss called on Texas Democrats Friday night to carry the state for the Carter-Mondale ticket, saying "this state will make the difference."

Strauss, a Texan, was a keynote speaker at the opening session of the second State Democratic Convention.

"In this room tonight," Strauss said, "there's enough power and influence to determine if Texas goes Democratic or Republican.... We will win and this state will make the difference."

Meanwhile, a bitter fight between Mexican-American and black Democrats over the vice chairmanship of the state party attracted the attention of most of the 3,900 delegates.

Almost as hot, but without the racial element, was the controversy between representative Luther Jones, D-El Paso, and Sherman attorney

Bob Slagle, to succeed state Democratic chairman Billy Goldberg of Houston.

Both sides of the vice-chairmanship battle turned down compromise efforts that would have given Texas Democrats two vice chairmen — one black and one brown.

Both sides also pledged they would not bolt the convention if they ended up on the losing side.

"There is not going to be any walk-out," said Marc Campos of Houston, chairman of Mexican-American Democrats. "We all know this has been a fair process. If we lose, we'll be out registering voters on Monday."

Campos said neither side wanted any part of the compromise preferring to make it a straight-up vote between Deralyn Davis, a Fort Worth black and the current vice chairman, and Margaret Gomez of Austin.

"We have the votes if we do our homework in the next 24 hours," Mrs.

Davis told the Coalition of Black Democrats. "We are not going to have anyone taking a walk, but this is show-and-tell time for everybody."

"We have the biggest caucus here and we're going to win this thing because the Democratic party is an open party," Mrs. Gomez told the MAD caucus.

Goldberg spoke to both black and brown caucuses urging them not to let their intra-party fuss make them forget that Ronald Reagan, the Republican presidential nominee, was a common enemy.

"In these two rooms lies the difference between winning or losing this election in Texas," Goldberg said.

The fight over the vice chairmanship began shortly after the June Democratic convention when three blacks were selected to be on the Democratic National Committee, which previously had two black and two Mexican-American representatives from Texas.

Bush to visit in Midland

Republican vice-presidential nominee George H.W. Bush will be in Midland Oct. 7 for a noon political rally.

The announcement of Bush's expected visit was made Friday afternoon by Bob Monaghan, district committeeman for the Republican Party and Region 5 chairman of the Reagan-Bush Committee in Texas.

Monaghan said the itinerary for the event has not been formulated, but Bush is expected to make a major address at the rally, which will be held in Midland Center.

Bush, running-mate of presidential nominee Ronald Reagan, is a former Midlander. He and his family lived in the Tall City in the 1950s and Bush was engaged in the oil industry here. Bush and his wife Barbara now reside in Houston.

Action on railroad bill to proceed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Key House Republicans agreed Friday to permit a railroad deregulation bill to move toward final congressional passage after Transportation Secretary Neil Goldschmidt promised not to solicit campaign funds from railroad executives.

"The meeting that was going to take place was cancelled," Rep. Edward Madigan, R-Ill., said of a scheduled Oct. 2 breakfast at which Goldschmidt and Robert Strauss, a top-Carter campaign official, intended to address railroad executives on "the needs of the Democratic National Committee."

"Mr. Goldschmidt promised me last night he would not be involved in fundraising efforts involving the railroad industry" for the current campaign, said Madigan. The congressman said Goldschmidt checked with "people at the White House" before making the pledge.

Madigan, the chief House Republican backer of the rail deregulation bill, said he has declined campaign contributions from the railroad interests for his own re-election bid.

Rep. James Broyhill, R-N.C., another GOP congressman who protested Goldschmidt's plans, said a conference report sending compromise railroad deregulation legislation to a final vote in the House and Senate would be signed next week. The measure is supported by the Carter administration as well as many of the nation's major railroads, including the Union Pacific Corp.

The Republicans threatened to hold up the bill Thursday when they learned of Goldschmidt's fundraising plans. The breakfast meeting had been organized by officials of the Union Pacific Corp.

A company spokesman, Dick Anthony, said it was called off because "we didn't want to offend anyone. We'd be happy to meet with Republicans, Democrats or Mr. Anderson, the independent. Nobody wanted this to be partisan."

But noting that the fundraising appeal came at a time when the railroad

Registration period ends October 5

Voter registration for the Nov. 4 general election ends Oct. 5, according to Janice Buita, Midland County voter registrar.

Since Oct. 5 is a Sunday, those wishing to register at the Midland County Courthouse will have until 5 p.m. Oct. 3, which is a Friday.

The voter registration office in the courthouse basement will remain open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. next week, and this includes the lunch hour.

All Midlanders age 18 and older can vote in the general election even though they did not vote in the Democratic or Republican primaries, she added.

Those holding white voter registration cards will be eligible to vote in the November election, she said. The yellow voter registration card which some Midlanders have won't be accepted.

These yellow cards expired Feb. 29 and those holding the yellow voter card must re-register by Oct. 3, she said.

Mrs. Buita noted Midlanders also can sign up to vote from 1 to 5 p.m. today and next Saturday at Furr's Supermarkets, 2208 N. Big Spring St., and M System Supermarkets, North A and West Scharbauer streets.

Latest settlement doesn't settle lawsuit question

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Cabinet departments have fired the latest verbal shots in a dispute over which federal agency approves settlements of big lawsuits, but it's not clear what the latest agreement between the government and an oil company will mean to consumers.

On Thursday, the Justice Department announced it had approved a financial settlement the Energy Department has reached with Phillips Oil Co. to end four suits between the government and Phillips against alleged price overcharges. One suit was filed by the government against Phillips and the other three were filed by Phillips against the government.

The claims and counterclaims in the suits totaled $262 million.

The Energy Department, when it had announced the consent agreement last November, said it would cost Phillips $200 million.

But the Justice Department disputed that figure. John Shenefield, assistant attorney general, told a news conference Thursday that the settlement would only cost Phillips $62.5 million. He could offer no explanation for the difference.

Shenefield also said his agency would not endorse several collateral agreements included in the settlement concerning government rights to company records. The Energy and Justice departments have been feuding for months over their respective roles in handling more than $10 billion in overpricing charges lodged against U.S. oil companies.

Paul Bloom, special counsel to the Energy Department, called Shenefield's statements "gratuitous advice. The rule is: free advice is worth every penny you pay for it."

Cosmonauts return to Earth

MOSCOW (AP) — The first Cuban in space and his Soviet flight leader returned to Earth on Friday after seven days aboard the Saljut 6 orbiting lab, where two other Soviet cosmonauts are closing in on the space endurance record, the Soviet media reported.

Friday's last minutes aboard the Saljut by Arnaldo Tamayo Mendez, a 38-year-old Cuban air force pilot, and veteran Soviet cosmonaut Yuri Romanenko were shown in color on Soviet television.

They hugged their hosts, Valery Ryumin and Leonid Popov, and exchanged jokes with them. Just before the hatch to their re-entry vehicle was closed, Popov was heard to say, "Good Luck, Men. Go on."

If Ryumin and Popov are still in orbit on Oct. 1, they will break the mark of 175 days and 36 minutes set last summer. Ryumin set that record with another Soviet cosmonaut.

The official news agency Tass said Tamayo and Romanenko touched down at 6:54 p.m. — 11:54 a.m. EDT — near Dzhezkazgan in the Central Asian Soviet republic of Kazakhstan. They were reported in good condition.

Upon their return, both cosmonauts were awarded titles of "Hero of the Soviet Union" for their "courage and heroism."

Tass said Tamayo and Romanenko returned aboard Soyuz 38, the same ship in which they were launched. According to Western specialists, this suggests that either Popov and Ryumin expect more visitors or they plan to return within the next month.

The specialists said the Soyuz craft has a lifespan of about 90 days, and visiting cosmonauts usually swap transport craft, leaving the newer ship behind. The Soyuz 37 currently attached to the Saljut was launched July 23 with Pham Tuan of Vietnam and Viktor Gorbakho of the Soviet Union, the last pair to visit Popov and Ryumin.

Unless a new ship docks at the space station, the two Soviet cosmonauts probably will have to return in Soyuz 37 on or about Oct. 21.

Tass said Tamayo and Romanenko brought back results of their own

Marshals seek to subpoena gambler in investigation of Wood's death

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Federal marshals are attempting to subpoena a Las Vegas gambler to testify before a grand jury that has been investigating the 1979 assassination of U.S. District Judge John Wood Jr.

Jack Strauss Jr. was subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury at its Aug. 20 meeting. But federal marshals in Las Vegas returned the subpoena unserved, saying they were unable to locate Strauss who had moved out of his apartment the previous weekend.

"It's a logical assumption we are still looking for him," said a government attorney, who did not want to be named.

The grand jury's next meeting is scheduled for Oct. 15.

Reportedly the FBI interviewed Strauss previously and the grand jury wants to question him about convicted murderer and heroin dealer Roert F. "Comanche" Riojas' story that three men planned Wood's ambush.

Wood was slain on May 29, 1979, outside his San Antonio apartment as he prepared to drive to work. Riojas subsequently told investigators three men were in the car with the killer who fired a .243-caliber rifle bullet that struck the federal judge in the lower back.

DEATHS

C.W. McCarroll Fred E. Berry

SAN ANGELO — Charles W. McCarroll, 89, of San Angelo, father of A.L. "Ike" McCarroll of Midland and a former civic and business leader in Junction, died this morning in a San Angelo hospital following an illness.

Services will be at 9:30 a.m. today in Johnson Funeral Home Chapel here with the Rev. Sam Coffee, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Junction, officiating. Burial will be Mereta Cemetery.

McCarroll was born Oct. 11, 1890, in Wise County, and lived in Tom Green County from 1906 to 1928, when he moved to Junction. He was associated with McCarroll Lumber Co. from 1925 to 1932 and with Cameron Lumber Co. from 1932 to 1952. He became associated with Junction Warehouse Co. in 1952.

McCarroll was a former mayor of Junction and was past president of Junction Independent School District's board of trustees, deacon of the First Baptist Church, past president of the Rotary Club, past president of the Junction Chamber of Commerce, and was a member of Masonic Lodge of Junction. As a booster and leader of the Boy Scouts of America, he was awarded the Silver Beaver Award. He was an organizer and director of The First State Bank of Junction. He moved to San Angelo from Junction 3 1/2 years ago.

McCarroll was married to Ethel Motley on June 4, 1916, in Mereta. He was a member of the First Baptist Church of Junction.

Other survivors include his wife, a son and two sisters.

OGDEN, Utah — Services for Fred Eugene Berry, 59, of Ogden, Utah, brother of Pansy Lewis of Midland, will be at 11 a.m. Monday at Lindquist and Sons Colonial Chapel in Ogden with burial in Washington Heights Memorial Park.

Berry died Thursday at his home here following an illness.

He was born June 29, 1921, in Cement, Okla. He was married to Geraldine Davies on Jan. 21, 1972 in Nevada. He was a retired oilfield worker. He moved to Friona in 1928 from Cement. He then moved to Odessa in 1935 and to Ogden in 1971. He was a veteran of World War II and the Korean War.

Other survivors include his wife, a stepson, four stepdaughters, three brothers, four sisters and 13 grandchildren.

Senate votes to block grain embargo funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Friday to block funds for President Carter's grain embargo, despite a warning that its action would "humiliate the nation and embarrass its president."

The action was taken by voice vote after a series of parliamentary maneuvers in which the anti-embargo amendment was first rejected 41-40 and then revived by a 43-39 margin.

The amendment became part of a $9 billion appropriation bill providing funds for the Justice Department, Commerce Department, State Department and other federal agencies.

The House passed the bill in July after overwhelmingly defeating moves to attach a similar anti-embargo provision. The question is expected to be resolved by a House-Senate conference committee.

White House press secretary Jody

Powell said the administration viewed the vote as "a clear mistake."

"The arguments that the grain embargo is not having an impact on the Soviet Union are false," he said. "The arguments that the embargo is hurting American farmers are false. Our grain exports have gone up significantly this year over what we projected before the embargo."

"If you want to check with someone who welcomes the vote, I suggest that you check with the spokesman of the Soviet embassy," he said.

For the present, the Senate set the overall bill aside and took up other business after becoming embroiled in an argument about another amendment barring the Justice Department from filing suits to require busing for school integration.

That amendment was adopted by a vote of 49-42 on Thursday. It had been Rex is a graduate of Midland High School. He has since left for Lackland AFB Texas to undergo six weeks of basic training, and will work on Automatic Tracking Radar.

Marine Pvt. Daniel F. Hallmark, son of Loy Hallmark of Crane, has completed recruit training at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego.

During the 11-week training cycle, he learned the basics of battlefield survival. He was introduced to the typical daily routine that he will experience during his enlistment and studied the personal and professional standards traditionally exhibited by Marines.

He participated in an active physical conditioning program and gained proficiency in a variety of military skills, including first aid, rifle marksmanship and close order drill. Teamwork and self-discipline were emphasized throughout the training cycle.

A 1980 graduate of Crane High School, he joined the Marine Corps in May, 1980.

Marine Lt. Col. Herb Currie, son of Herbert H. and Dorothy S. Currie of Crane, is participating in exercise "Team Work 80."

He is an officer assigned to Headquarters, 4th Marine Amphibious Unit, based in Norfolk, Va., and embarked aboard the amphibious command ship USS Mt. Whitney.

The exercise, being conducted in the North Atlantic, English Channel and the North and Norwegian Seas, involves more than 60,000 personnel, 170 ships and 400 aircraft from Canada, Denmark, Germany, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, the United Kingdom and the United States. It is designed to demonstrate and improve the capability of the NATO Alliance to reinforce and resupply shipping from North America across the Atlantic and from the U.K. to northern European ports. The ships will defend against simulated attacks from surface ships, submarines and aircraft.

The field training phase of the exercise involves an amphibious landing in Central Norway by 16,800 troops from the Netherlands, Norway, the U.K. and the U.S. Aircraft providing cover to the ships and infantry will be operating from bases in Germany, Iceland, Norway, the U.K. and the U.S.

A 1957 graduate of Crane High School, and a 1962 graduate of Texas A&M University, with a bachelor of science degree, Currie joined the Marine Corps in January, 1962.

Navy Lt. Joe D. Watson, Jr., son of Gloria and J. D. Watson, Sr. of 211 N. Eisenhower Drive, Midland, recently participated in exercise "Sandgroper 80" off the southwest Australian coast.

He is the supply officer of the destroyer USS Turner Joy, homeported in San Diego and operating as a unit of the U.S. 7th Fleet.

His ship participated in the one-week exercise with Australian and New Zealand naval and air forces after visiting Hedland, Australia. During the exercise, the units practiced anti-ship, anti-air and anti-submarine warfare tactics.

While in Hedland, Watson and fellow crewmembers were involved in a variety of activities including sporting events, sightseeing and a barbecue and dance sponsored by a local civic group.

The remainder of the ship's Western Pacific cruise will involve additional training exercises with other 7th Fleet units and those of allied nations.

A 1967 graduate of Robert E. Lee High School, and a 1972 graduate of Creighton University, Omaha, Neb., with a bachelor of arts degree, Watson joined the Navy in October, 1971.

Pvt. Gerald W. Adams, son of Howard Adams of Big Spring, recently completed One Station Unit Training (OSUT) at Fort Benning, Ga.

OSUT is a 12-week period which combines basic combat training and advanced individual training. The training included weapons qualifications, squad tactics, patrolling, landmine warfare, field communications and combat operations. This qualifies the soldier as a light-weapons infantryman and as an indirect fire crewman.

Soldiers were taught to perform any of the duties in a rifle or mortar squad.

His mother, Mrs. Golda L. Adams, lives in Wichita Falls.

Pvt. John L. Oberdorf, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Oberdorf of Big Spring, recently completed training as an armor crewman under the One Station Unit Training (OSUT) Program at the U.S. Army Armor School, Fort Knox, Ky.

OSUT is a 13-week period which combines basic combat training with advanced individual training.

During the training, students learn the duties of a tank crewman, including the firing of the tank's armament and small weapons. They also receive instruction in field radio operations, map reading and tank maintenance and repair.

Capt. Stephen R. Sellers, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Norris Sellers of Lamesa, is now wearing U.S. Air Force silver wings following graduation from pilot training at Reese Air Force Base, Texas.

The fully-qualified pilot will now fly the F-15 at Kadena Air Base, Okinawa, Japan.

Pvt. John L. Oberdorf, son of Mrs. Addie S. Oberdorf of Big Spring, recently was assigned as a tank driver with the 4th Cavalry at Fort Riley, Kan.

Pvt. Lonnie R. Green, son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Greene Sr. of Big Spring, recently completed One Station Unit Training (OSUT) at Fort Benning, Ga.

OSUT is a 12-week period which combines basic combat training and advanced individual training.

The training included weapons qualifications, squad tactics, patrolling, landmine warfare, field communications and combat operations. This qualifies the soldier as a light-weapons infantryman and as an indirect fire crewman.

Rockwell settles discrimination charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rockwell International, one of the nation's largest defense contractors, agreed Friday to a $1 million settlement of Labor Department charges it rejected 42 qualified women and minority candidates for jobs at its Dallas plant.

While consenting to correct what the Labor Department called "various problem areas," the company did not admit to the alleged equal employment opportunity violations.

Rockwell's Dallas facility, which employs 6,800 workers, has been awarded about $85 million in federal contracts since 1978 and is required to comply with the government's equal employment regulations.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said Rockwell has agreed to expand job opportunities for qualified applicants and will expand the company's affirmative action program.

About $700,000 will be set aside to create a total of 53 job slots and $300,000 will go toward expanding training and career development programs, Marshall said.

Friday's settlement resolves issues raised by a Labor Department investigation begun in November 1978. The alleged discrimination occurred between October 1977 and September 1978.

CAB charges two major airlines with 'bumping'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board's bureau of consumer protection charged United Airlines and Capitol International Airways on Friday with violating passenger rights and recommended that both be fined.

The bureau said that in 1979 and 1980 United denied no smoking section seats to 20 passengers, who requested them. It urged the board to fine the carrier $1,000 for each violation.

Capitol was charged with numerous violations of the board's bumping rules on its New York-Brussels route during 1979, and the bureau recommended a fine of $86,000.

The bureau said the airline bumped passengers without first asking for volunteers to relinquish their seats in exchange for monetary compensation. It also said the carrier did not pay the bumped passengers denied boarding compensation, nor give them a written notice of their rights.

Houston area residents return from battle-torn Iraqi plant

HOUSTON (AP) — Raymond Delunna says you don't stop to count when planes are strafing you. Doug Guillot says bombing is not his favorite sport.

And Scott Morgan, just 13, says "It was scary." The three are among about 20 Houston area residents who have returned home from an Iraqi petro-

"I was in the petrochemical complex and we were beginning to start up when the Iranian planes came in," one worker said. "I really didn't see how many there were. When somebody is strafing you, you don't look to see how many there are. They hit our motel pretty bad too. But I don't know how many were injured. I just hurt my arm and my left leg and kind of got shocked."

chemical complex at Basra following a bombing raid by Iranian planes Tuesday.

Guillot, 35, an instrument technician from Mauriceville, said he was in a mess hall when the early morning bombing began.

"I was going to get a cup of coffee and the roof fell in," he said. "I tried to get up and then I got knocked down again. Then I found my way out."

With nothing but his "dirty laundry," Guillot said he and others made their way to Kuwait, from where they were evacuated Wednesday to Amsterdam.

Delunna, from The Woodlands, had shrapnel wounds and escaped with only the clothes he was wearing.

"I was in the petrochemical complex and we were beginning to start up when the Iranian planes came in," he said. "I really didn't see how many there were. When somebody is strafing you, you don't look to see how many there are. They hit our motel pretty bad too. But I don't know how many were injured. I just hurt my arm and my left leg and kind of got shocked."

Young Morgan was met at the Houston Intercontinental Airport by his mother, who had returned home earlier for medical reasons. His father, Michael Morgan, was still seeking evacuation, having been stranded when Iranian bombs forced the closing of the airport at Baghdad. The boy said he was asleep at the Basra camp when the bombing began.

Sharon Johnson and her 11-year-old son Barry slipped out a side door at the U.S. Customs terminal upon arrival in Houston and did not talk with newsmen. Her husband, Harvey Johnson, 33, Dickinson, is among the missing and presumed dead.

Johnson's father, L.H. Johnson, expressed hope his son still will be found alive.

Braniff cutting fares on flights in Texas, two other states

Braniff International has announced it is cutting fares on flights within Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana to as low as $24 one-way, matching the lowest unrestricted fares of Southwest or Texas International.

Braniff calls this "Good News Fares," which represent 31 to 74 percent discounts. There are no requirements for advance purchase or length of stay. Seats will be available on all Braniff flights linking Midland Regional Airport to Dallas-Fort Worth, Oklahoma City, San Antonio, Tulsa, Houston, Austin, Brownsville, New Orleans and Corpus Christi.

These new low fares are in effect now.

Braniff President Russell Thayer noted, "Braniff wants the traveling public to know that neither Southwest nor Texas International offers lower fares than Braniff. With the added service benefits Braniff has to offer, these new low fares are particularly 'good news' for the consumer."

Fares from Midland Regional Airport to other cities one-way are as follows:

To Dallas-Fort Worth, $37 weekdays, $24 weekends.

To Oklahoma City, Tulsa and San Antonio, $55 weekdays, $40 weekends.

To Houston, $53 weekdays, $40 weekends.

To Austin, $45 weekdays, $35 weekends.

To Brownsville, New Orleans and Corpus Christi, $70 weekdays, $50 weekends.

Mike Jolly, Braniff

sales director in Midland, said, "We've matched their fares, let's see them match our service."

Ribbon-cutting ceremony today at rose garden

Midland Rose Garden will become official with a ribbon-cutting ceremony at 2:30 p.m. today at the garden located in Crier Park, 1500 W. Texas Ave.

This ceremony will culminate eight months of work donated by members of the Midland Rose Society and other citizens.

Work on the project started last January when Midland City Council approved the concept for a rose garden behind the Central Fire Station on the basis that they had promised nearby residents something nice would be done with that area. Joy Butts with Midland Rose Society worked out the plans for the rose garden and a rose company in Oregon promised to donate all roses that would be needed.

The city parks department put in the sidewalks according to Mrs. Butts' plan. And with the help of various organizations and private individuals, the Rose Society planted all the rose bushes.

Certain areas of the garden have been designed for the handicapped with wider sidewalks and roses with a stronger scent. The garden, in its final form, will have benches for resting and trellises covered with roses. Another area will be designed for outdoor events, such as weddings.

Shah's memoirs tell his 'horror of war'

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE

LONDON (AP) — The late Shah of Iran, in memoirs published Friday, says his country had to live in peace with Iraq. He said he made the border settlement — torn up in this week's warfare — because, "like all thinking soldiers, I had a horror of war."

In his autobiography written in exile before he died in Cairo last July 27, the deposed monarch said that because he wanted to modernize his backward nation, he could not afford to be on bad terms across his borders.

He said that none of his aims to develop Iran "could have been realized had we been unable to keep the nation at peace with its neighbors, in an essentially strategic part of the world where Iran's position is of primary importance."

His book "The Shah's Story," (Michael Joseph publisher), went on sale in London bookshops Friday on the fifth day of Iraq's undeclared war with Iran.

The 230-page book recalls that the border dispute that sparked the current fighting was peacefully settled in 1975 in Algiers, in face-to-face negotiations between the shah and Iraq's current President Saddam Hussein. Hussein was vice president at the time of the settlement.

The two rulers agreed that a line down the middle of the Shatt al-Arab waterway should be their common border. Hussein abrogated the treaty days before this week's fighting escalated into war.

The Iraqis attacking Iran this week claimed they invaded because the Iranians fired on shipping in the waterway, which gives Iraq its only access to the sea in the Persian Gulf. The gulf is the world's most important oil shipping route.

Iran has made air and sea attacks on Iraq and heavy damage to oil installations of both sides has been reported.

Having seized disputed territory inside Iran, the Iraqis now say Iran must recognize their sovereignty over the Shatt al-Arab as a condition for ending the war.

The shah wrote that he earlier settled a disputed waterway border with the Soviet Union by agreeing under international law the middle of the River Aras should be their common frontier.

Of his meeting with the Iraqi leader, the shah said: "We agreed that our old quarrels should disappear and, as I believe, giving proof of equal good will, we managed to put an end to the misunderstanding that the colonial interest had long nurtured between our two countries."

"For my part I stated that in principle the happiness and prosperity of Iraq, as of all our neighbors, was important to the security of Iran."

The shah's memoirs were first published in Paris in French last October. The updated English edition adds a chapter on the shah's exile. They have since been published in the United States by Stein and Day as "Answer to History."

He described Iran under its present leaders as "marching toward the abyss."

He wrote: "A nation I had led to the threshold of progress, power and self-confidence lay torn and bleeding. A worn, fanatic old man was telling the Iranian people over and over how mean, miserable and poverty-stricken they were. The women's rights I had so painfully established on a basis of dignity and pride were ground into the dust of the Middle Ages."

"The many projects I had begun but been unable to complete lay fallow. But then what interest could the mullahs — religious leaders — have in the nuclear power reactors I was planning and building?"

Carter would host talks on oil supplies

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has offered to convene a meeting of key allies for discussion of ways to keep oil supplies flowing through the Persian Gulf during the war between Iraq and Iran, his chief spokesman said Friday.

However, White House press secretary Jody Powell sought to play down the president's offer to host such a conference and said supply routes remain open.

He said traffic through the vital Strait of Hormuz "from non-Iranian or Iraqi ports is virtually normal. Insurance is available. These ships are being sent and traffic is moving."

Carter said in an interview with Milwaukee television station WITI that the straight would be kept open.

"I don't want to go into specifics, but I've been in touch with the leaders of our allied nations, both in the western world and the Islamic countries directly concerned, and whatever is required to keep the straight open will be done," Carter said.

Powell said that although Iranian and Iraqi ports in the Persian Gulf are closed, other ports remain open.

And he reiterated Carter's statement on Wednesday that "there is no reason for any rapid escalation in prices or concern about tremendous shortfalls based on the actual experience of the last few days."

The press secretary added that "scare stories about shortages" are "not only inaccurate at this point but they are probably counterproductive."

Meanwhile, there were these other developments in Washington:

— Energy Secretary Charles Duncan met with leaders of the 21-nation International Energy Agency and told reporters later that no serious oil shortages are anticipated through the end of the year, even if the Iran-Iraq war continues.

— Britain's energy secretary, David Howell, told reporters that the war has forced the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to shelve, at least temporarily, its plan for a 10 percent cutback in crude oil production.

— The Energy Department said petroleum stocks in the United States are at an all-time high, hitting 1.36 billion barrels a week ago. That figure does not include the 91 million barrels in the nation's strategic reserve.

The White House issued a statement early Friday about the U.S. offer to host a conference of allies for discussion of the oil situation. But in his daily briefing for reporters, Powell refused to give details of talks so far or of "diplomatic activity" aimed at ending the war.

"I am not going to get into the details at all about what's being discussed," Powell said. "The general nature of those consultations is positive."

The White House statement said Carter and Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie "have exchanged views with key friends and allies on a wide range of issues related to the conflict between Iran and Iraq" over the last few days.

"In view of the importance of minimizing the economic effects of the conflict on the international shipping and world petroleum markets, the United States has indicated that it would be willing to host a meeting to review these issues if that should seem desirable," the statement said.

Navy ships at anchor, under orders to 'avoid involvement' in dispute

BAHRAIN (AP) — United States Navy ships are under orders to anchor in the Persian Gulf and avoid any involvement in the Iran-Iraq war, informed sources said Friday.

The United States usually has four frigates and one command destroyer in the gulf. Two of the frigates are stationed in this island nation. One of them, the Thomas C. Hart, is docked at the port of Mina Sulman. The other apparently was anchored elsewhere.

The frigate and its crew appeared unaffected by the war situation just a few miles to the north.

Nearby were tugs, freighters and medium-size tankers undergoing minor repairs. Workmen were painting some of the freighters.

"Indifference is the name of the game at this stage," one Bahraini source said. "The Americans were instructed by their political command to stay aloof and avoid any action that could be misconstrued by the warring sides."

Bahraini port guards, also unaffected by the war situation and the partial alert among gulf armed forces, readily ushered reporters to the docks where the U.S. frigate was moored.

"Journalists are not dangerous to us," one guard said. "They want to see the American ship, and we have nothing to hide here."

'Pearl Fishers' opens at opera

NEW YORK (AP) — George Bizet's first full-scale opera, "The Pearl Fishers," was presented for the first time by the New York City Opera on Thursday night.

The opera probably was a first seeing for most of the audience in the New York State Theater, too, since the Metropolitan Opera only has given it a few times and not since 1916.

When "The Pearl Fishers," sung in French, begins, one instantly is reminded of "Carmen." Girls in bare midriff dresses dance around, singing, sounding like the little boys who open "Carmen." Then older women sing, sounding like Carmen's coworkers in the cigarette factory. But then one forgets the more famous opera.

This one isn't nearly as interesting, musically or dramatically. However, the scenery and costumes by Robert O'Hearn, who designed many successful Met Opera productions, were very good. O'Hearn now is one of the heads of the Greater Miami Opera Association and this production originally was done there. Scenery is spare without looking skimpy.

The Manhattans stay with love songs

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The Manhattans aren't planning to jump on any musical bandwagons that come rolling along in the near future. They have the next album — to follow their current "After Midnight" — just about recorded and they're working on the one after that.

The Manhattans will be singing love songs, as they have been doing for a long time.

Winfred "Blue" Lovett says, "We are about love songs. We didn't change to disco. We refused to, more or less, and that hurt us on pop and rhythm. In blues radio stations. There were a lot of R and B stations where we'd been top five for years. They didn't play us the past three years. They turned completely disco. You can't sell records unless you get airplay."

But the Manhattans believe there'll be a demand for love songs as long as there are men and women in the world and they kept singing them. Kenneth Kelley says, "We figured there was going to be a trend change. You try to sustain until it comes around."

The group's two biggest hit singles have been "Kiss and Say Goodbye" in 1976 and "Shining Star," which was No. 7 on the best-selling pop charts the first two weeks in August 1980. It had been No. 4 on the best-selling rhythm 'n' blues charts in early June.

Another single, "Girl of My Dream," had climbed to No. 32 on the rhythm 'n' blues charts on Sept. 20. It also is from "After Midnight," the Manhattans' seventh album for Columbia Records.

Lovett expected the Manhattans' singles to cross over from the R and B charts to pop after "Kiss and Say Goodbye" did it.

He says, "I thought it would be easier for us to get pop airplay after 'Kiss and Say Goodbye.' Instead, it was like starting again."

"Most rhythm 'n' blues records have to be No. 1 with a bullet before they cross over. Our next single after 'Kiss and Say Goodbye' was 'I Kind of Missed You,' and it didn't go to No. 1."

"You feel like it takes you so long to get your foot in the door. It was 11 years before we got 'Kiss and Say Goodbye.' You feel once your name is established in pop stations, it should be easier for you the next time around."

"But we're like a new group, four years later, coming out with 'Shining Star.'"

What did they do about their disappointment when "I Kind of Missed You" and succeeding singles didn't cross over into the much larger pop market? Edward "Sonny" Bivins Jr. says, "We just put our belts in and kept going. It was disheartening but that's how the business is."

Bivins adds, "There is a basic soul sound. With 'Shining Star' there was pop flavor, R and B flavor and country-western flavor. There was a catchy title and speaking positively about a lady. I find the most positive love songs really get over."

Lovett mentions another paradox of groups like the Manhattans trying to sell records to pop buyers. Pop buyers like a pop tune with country-western flavor, he says, but the Manhattans, long known as a doo-wop, ballad-singing, rhythm 'n' blues group, has to have a record become a rhythm 'n' blues hit before pop radio stations are interested in it.

The Manhattans once put out a country-flavored pop single. Black buyers didn't like it so it didn't become a rhythm 'n' blues hit. Pop buyers, who might have liked it, never heard it.

This summer the Manhattans toured, doing some dates with Natalie Cole. Their biggest following, they say, is in the South and Detroit. This fall they'll play Japan, where some records have been hits, for the first time.

The Manhattans got together in Jersey City, N.J. One singer, who attended rehearsals then didn't go on with it, named them the Manhattans because the word was known and had recognition value.

They date their professional life from 1964, the year of their first record contract. They were on Carnival Records for four years, King Records for four and have been on Columbia for eight.

At first there were five of them. Lovett says, "The type of music we sing is easier with five — two tenors, baritone, bass and lead singer. For four, somebody has to switch or you leave out a between voice."

In 1970, the group went on a tour of southern colleges. Its lead singer, George Smith, was dying of a brain tumor. At a college in Kittrell, N.C., Gerald Alston was one of the local people sharing the bill. Bivins says, "We liked how he sounded." For the past 10 years, he has been a member.

Second tenor Richard Taylor left to become a Muslim in 1976. Just as "Kiss and Say Goodbye" was No. 1. They'd had so many lean years, the group decided not to bring in a newcomer just as they entered good years, so they went on as four.

Alston says, "I had a group when I was in college. I always wanted to be a professional. I wanted to sing, it didn't matter whether with a group or solo. I came in for some of the lean days. Sonny and I did the driving."

Bivins says, "We paid our dues. I think it was worth it all. We appreciate the good things that happen to us now. If it had never happened to us the way it did, success wouldn't mean a thing."

Lovett agrees. "We survived through all the different trends. So many groups zoomed past us and went to the top and now you never hear of them."

Reagan accepts offer for briefing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ronald Reagan, citing a "threat to world peace" posed by the Iran-Iraq war, said Friday he has accepted President Carter's offer of an intelligence briefing on the Middle East.

"With this conflict going on there was only one way to have access to the information, and, not wanting to inadvertently say anything that might be harmful, we decided it's proper to get briefed on that," the GOP presidential candidate said as he arrived in California for a weekend at home.

He said the briefing would be held "some time late next week."

Reagan said that he declined earlier briefings on the "entire foreign policy situation," but said he felt this briefing on the Middle East fighting was "a different situation."

Earlier in a prepared statement distributed to reporters, Reagan said he and running mate George Bush both would attend the briefing.

"Amb. Bush and I are accepting this offer because of the current delicate world situation and the threat to worldwide peace and civility that the conflict poses."

"I have determined to do and say nothing to exacerbate the situation or hurt in any way our efforts to bring about a satisfactory end to the fighting," he said.

Reagan issued his statement in California as new poll figures bolstered his decision not to accept the latest conditions for a one-on-one debate with President Carter.

An AP-NBC poll taken after last Sunday's debate between Reagan and independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson showed the Republican presidential candidate with a nine-point lead over the Democratic incumbent president.

The poll figures gave Reagan 42 percent, Carter 33 and Anderson 13.

In the AP-NBC poll taken in August, Reagan was the choice of 39 percent, Carter 32 percent and Anderson 13 percent.

Reagan campaign aides have made it clear that they see little to be gained from a Carter debate so long as their candidate is leading in the polls.

Upon arriving in Portland, Ore., Thursday night, Reagan read a statement rejecting a new debate invitation from the League of Women Voters.

That proposal called for Reagan and Carter to debate each other followed by a three-way debate that would include Anderson.

"I cannot in good faith agree to its (the League's) latest proposal for a series of debates which would preclude John Anderson from debating President Carter in the same or a similar way that I debated Mr. Anderson," he said.

What looks like a "fishy" endorsement is actually a little campaign gift for GOP presidential candidate Ronald Reagan. Following a Friday breakfast rally in Portland, Ore., Reagan was given the 50-pound salmon by state

Reagan-Bush campaign chairman Diana Evans and Republican national committee member Peter Murphy. (AP Laserphoto)

Debate debate not dying down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan and John B. Anderson all jockeyed for tactical advantage Friday in the campaign debate on debates, dimming prospects that they would ever actually meet before the nationwide television audience they all say they want.

With the League of Women Voters now offering a Carter-Reagan debate to be followed by a three-way affair, the White House accused Reagan anew of hiding behind Anderson in turning down the offer.

The Reagan campaign retorted that Carter was being unfair by not agreeing to include Anderson in its debates.

Anderson, expressing regret at being excluded from one proposed debate, said he was willing to debate anyone he could.

"If I could afford it I would love to have a hall and put a couple of empty chairs up there and televise it to the nation, and have my own debate," the independent candidate told the Cleveland City Club.

A league spokesman said the group has gone as far as it can in trying to accommodate the candidates and can only "try to make every effort to make them change their minds."

The league offered its new debate package on Thursday in an effort to break a logjam that has stymied its attempts to arrange any more than the Anderson-Reagan confrontation of last week-end.

Carter boycotted that debate, insisting that he wanted his first encounter to be one-on-one with Reagan.

Now the GOP nominee has said he would debate Carter one-on-one only if Carter would face Anderson alone as Reagan already has done.

Aide James Baker III said if Reagan agrees to debate Carter alone there was no "assurance whatsoever that President Carter would show up for the three-way debate. His track record on debates is one of arrogance and broken promises."

In a meeting with reporters, Baker said Thursday, "We still have the option of debating the president but the numbers (in public opinion polls) are such that we don't feel that way now. We'll keep an eye on the polls and keep that tactical option open."

Baker told league officials that Reagan and running mate George Bush will not join any further debates until the Anderson question is resolved.

At the White House, press secretary Jody Powell said Reagan's refusal to debate based on concern for Anderson "would seem to be a rather transparent position" because Anderson has accepted the new format which would delete him from one of the presidential meetings.

"Their duplicity is obvious in the extreme," Powell said. "We are ready to meet Governor Reagan one-on-one, virtually any time, any place."

Carter signs infant nutrition bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter signed legislation Friday requiring minimum nutrient levels in infant formulas, but he had to compete with youngsters who picked up his telephone, played with a toy dog, and brought laughter to an otherwise serious ceremony.

The bill was passed after congressional hearings determined that two commercially produced soybean-based infant formulas had been marketed with an insufficient amount of chloride, a critical nutrient. There were reports in 1979 that more than 100 infants whose sole source of nutrition was the soybean-based formulas, Neo-Mull-Soy and Cho-Free, had become seriously ill.

The bill requires all infant formulas to include specified minimum amounts of listed nutrients and authorizes the secretary of health and human services to establish quality control procedures, including periodic testing, to assure that the nutrient requirements are met.

Formulas that fail to meet the standards would be barred from distribution.

It goes into effect in 90 days.

The bill, said Carter, sets "very rigid standards for the quality and adequacy of infant formulas."

"Some of the infant formulas sold to the trusting parents were lacking in certain food ingredients and caused damage to their children's health," he said.

One of the parents whose child had been given the formula said he became lethargic, constipated, and continued to lose weight. Some of the children who attended the ceremony had suffered illness after being given the inadequate soybean-based formulas.

While several children fidgeted in their parents' arms, complained, or talked behind him, Carter continued with his brief speech, finally concluding that with the protection of the new law, children "can be healthy and they can indicate their strength and their health even in the presence of the press and a president."

Patricia Roberts Harris, the secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services, tried to talk seriously, but then Carter was fondling a fuzzy, stuffed toy dog that belonged to 18-month-old Benjamin Laskin.

As she turned to Carter, she spied him holding the brown and white toy.

"Not only are we serious about things in this administration, we have fun sometimes."

Anderson denies

'failure' report

CLEVELAND (AP) — Rep. John B. Anderson challenged on Friday a published report saying his independent quest for the White House is failing and that top aides and strategists have abandoned hope that he can win on Nov. 4.

"I could not disagree more," Anderson said as he sought votes in Cleveland. "This campaign will go forward."

Anderson was finding fault with a report in Friday's editions of the Washington Star, which said that with some exceptions, the candidate's top advisers and campaign strategists have given up the idea of his winning the White House.

The report said these advisers have lowered their expectations for Anderson's candidacy, to the point where they now hope that he can at least be a major factor in determining who does win the election.

Anderson, asked about the report following a speech to the Cleveland City Club, noted that statewide polls in Connecticut and Wisconsin show him gaining on Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter.

He cited a Connecticut poll which Anderson said showed him in a virtual three-way dead heat in that state.

Texas officials applaud judge's order to upgrade census counts

By The Associated Press

Texas city officials Friday hailed an order to adjust the 1980 census figures as the only fair way to deal with what a Detroit judge called a "known undercount," and some promised legal action if the recount fails to meet their expectations.

U.S. District Judge Horace Gilmore, saying blacks and Hispanics were four times as likely as whites to be undercounted, responded to a suit brought by Detroit Thursday by ordering the government to correct the figures.

"The action by the court and the litigation was appropriate," said Fort Worth Mayor Woodie Woods.

Legal action "is one of our considerations, and we are prepared to do whatever it takes to get a correct count," said Woods, who estimated "there's conservatively 40,000 or 50,000" people who weren't counted in his city.

"When they tell us we have 30,000 fewer people than we did in 1970, then those figures just shouldn't even be counted," he said.

Mayor Lila Cockrell predicted the Detroit ruling could increase San Antonio's population by another 35,000.

San Antonio filed a friend of the court brief in the Detroit suit, along with several other cities who joined the U.S. Conference of Mayors in supporting the action.

City Attorney Jane Macon noted higher courts must uphold the trial court decision, and said she would be in a better position to comment when she receives a copy of the ruling.

If the ruling does apply on a broad basis, it could have substantial impact on San Antonio because of its large Hispanic population, Ms. Macon said.

Preliminary counts of 748,000 for the nation's 10th largest city were 100,000 below local projections, and

San Antonio filed more than 100 challenges claiming a severe undercount that could affect federal grants.

Challenges also were filed by Brownsville, McAllen, Corpus Christi and Houston, and city officials expect a final preliminary count from the Census Bureau by Oct. 15.

Ed Taylor, assistant director of planning for McAllen, called the ruling "a message to the census bureau that the undercount will not be tolerated."

"If the final census figures are not higher than the preliminary figures, I think we have reason to believe that minorities are not going to be represented when Texas is reapportioned," said Taylor, who estimated 6,000 residents were missed in McAllen's count.

"If the bureau fails to correct the undercount, this may precipitate some sort of lawsuit," he said.

Houston's preliminary census of more than 1.4 million was about 300,000 below the city's estimates but officials point out the preliminary count did not include about 100,000 residents of areas annexed in 1978 and 1979 that will be included in the final count.

Houston Mayor Jim McConn said if the new figures do not approach city estimates, "we would demand a recount."

Bernie Peterson of the planning department said he agreed with Harris County Judge Jon Lindsay that the Detroit suit was an effort by some of the nation's older cities to postpone the reality they are losing populations to Houston and other Sun Belt cities. He said Houston has thousands of new housing units that are occupied "by people who left those cities."

Peterson said the federal court ruling could create tremendous accounting problems across the country.

"What they're doing is asking the census people to enter into the area of politics," he said. "It might make people happy, but it has nothing to do with what is right or wrong."

He said the end result would be two sets of numbers, the original count and the adjusted count, without any idea of which to use for different purposes.

"What you end up with is funny numbers," he said. "The can of worms you would be opening up would be incredible."

Peterson said any minority population adjustments could help Houston in that the city has a heavy minority population.

"If other cities get an adjustment, well, fair is fair, we would expect to get an adjustment," he said.

Hispanic leaders are scheduled to meet with census officials next month. They will ask the bureau to increase population figures for areas with large Hispanic populations by about 7.5 percent, said Arnoldo Torres, congressional liaison for the League of United Latin American Citizens.

"We think our community suffered more of an undercount than the black community because of INS (Immigration and Naturalization Service) raids and other problems," he said. "We don't have an adjustment figure set in stone, but we are sure there was an undercount and the figures need to be adjusted."

Census officials have maintained they cannot adjust for an undercount or subtract illegal aliens before Dec. 31, the deadline for delivering the figures to the president.

Civil rights enforcer hired to represent state in dispute

By CHRIS CONNELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The state of Texas has hired a former top federal civil rights enforcer as its lawyer in what looms as a major dispute over desegregation in the state's colleges and universities.

F. Peter Libassi, formerly with the Department of Health Education and Welfare, is in private practice in Washington. He said he accepted the case to help hammer out "mutually acceptable solutions," and "not to launch warfare on the department."

Texas has been waiting for months for the results of an investigation that civil rights investigators conducted in 1978 on its public colleges and universities, previously segregated by law. A draft report indicated that investigators found most of the institutions remained overwhelmingly white or black.

Cynthia G. Brown, assistant secretary for civil rights in the new Department of Education, this week said her office is "very close" to finishing a letter of finding that will show that Texas "has not eliminated the effects of the dual school system in higher education."

Ms. Brown, commenting on Libassi's role, said she finds it "encouraging that the state of Texas realizes they have a problem."

Any action on the Texas case must be approved by Secretary of Education Shirley M. Hufstедler. Two months ago, she said the department was likely to act before the Nov. 4 election.

Aides declined to predict Thursday when she would act.

Libassi was the Office for Civil Rights' first director from 1966 to 1968. He returned to HEW as general counsel from March 1977 to June 1979. He helped draft the criteria that HEW and its successor, the Education Department, are using to judge whether southern states have eliminated the remnants of segregation from their college systems.

Former HEW Secretary Joseph A.

Califano Jr. reached agreements with five states — Georgia, Florida, Virginia, Arkansas and Oklahoma — on plans to upgrade their traditionally black colleges and to recruit more black students and faculty for their white institutions.

HEW's negotiations with North Carolina broke down and that state is currently in an administrative law hearing and faced with the threat of losing up to $100 million in federal education funds.

Libassi said in an interview that Texas Attorney General Mark White "basically asked me to open conversations with OCR (the civil rights office) now to find out what OCR sees as the major problems and issues."

Libassi said he took the case with "a clear understanding that my skills and talents are useful in finding solutions...and avoiding unnecessary and unproductive litigation."

"There is an absolute determination to find a constructive solution that is mutually acceptable," said Libassi. "I am not involved in preparing this case for litigation. Once you get started on that track, you get very defensive in your maneuvering."

Libassi said he would not take part in any legal challenge to the desegregation criteria.

Betsy Levin, the Education Department's general counsel, said that at Libassi's request she is checking whether a federal ethics act restricts his involvement in the case. Libassi said a private attorney has assured him it does not.

Libassi said he was never personally involved at HEW in the Texas case. Lawyers under his supervision in Dallas may have been, but since a year has passed the federal ethics law does not restrict his activity, said Libassi who quit a month before a somewhat stricter law took effect.

Libassi is a partner in the prominent firm of Verner, Lipfert, Bernhard and McPherson. He practices here and in his hometown of Hartford, Conn.

Defense attorneys decline to cross-examine informant

HOUSTON (AP) — In a surprise move, defense attorneys on Friday declined to cross-examine FBI informant Joseph Hauser, the key witness in the Texas Brilab trial of three men accused in a governmental insurance kickback scheme.

Hauser had been on the stand for about 10 days as the prosecution played scores of tapes of conversations involving defendants Billy Clayton, the speaker of the Texas House of Representatives, and Austin lawyers Donald Ray and Randall Wood.

The three, along with labor official L.G. Moore, were indicted June 12 by a federal grand jury on charges of extortion, bribery, racketeering and conspiracy. Moore will be tried later.

Clayton, who has served in the Legislature for 20 years, is charged with taking a $5,000 bribe to reopen bidding on the $76-million-a-year state employee health insurance package.

The speaker said he accepted the money from Moore but thought it was only a campaign contribution.

During the 10-month Brilab — or bribery-labor — investigation, Hauser posed as a representative of Prudential Insurance Co.

Hauser's last taped conversation was with Ray on Nov. 19, 1979, just 10 days before the informant began serving a 30-month sentence in a federal prison.

With Hauser off the stand, the prosecution turned its attention to wiretaps placed on the Moore's telephone. Moore is regional director for the International Operating Engineers Union.

The federal court jury of seven women and five men heard telephone conversations between Moore and two FBI undercover agents who worked with Hauser.

The tapes also include Moore's mention that "We must drop a little money on Garrett," referring to John Garrett, a Port of Houston commissioner.

Moore also told the undercover agents that Clayton expected some financial help for those state representatives running for re-election and pledged to support him in a bid for a fourth term as speaker.

In Hauser's last tape recording he spoke with Ray. This was part of the conversation:

Hauser: Do you need any money to operate, to see some people?

Ray: We may.

Hauser: How much?

Ray: A couple of thousand.

Hauser: Would $3,000 be all right?

Ray: Yeah.

Effect of rule on bidding feared

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The director of purchasing for Texas A&M told a state commission Friday the competitive bidding process could be undermined by a rule giving an advantage to Texas companies.

The State Purchasing and General Services Commission last month approved the Texas Preference Rule on an emergency basis after some businesses in the state complained they were not getting the break the Legislature voted for them.

Under the rule, expected to be finalized in October, Texas companies whose bids are within 2 percent of the low bid can submit a second bid. The idea is to keep state money in the state.

Morton Myerson, president of Ross Perot's National Heritage Insurance Company, has cited the rule in the battle over the state Medicaid contract.

W.E. Donaldson of Texas A&M, who oversees $26 million a year in purchases, said the Preference Rule complicates the bidding system.

"The preference granted to Texas and U.S. bidders is very likely to discourage to some degree out-of-state and foreign vendors from bidding, and to the degree that these vendors are discouraged, the competitive pressure on price is relaxed," Donaldson said.

He said the rule could cost the state some money, but his major concern is the kinks it could throw into the system.

"Granting preferential treatment to any special group of suppliers establishes a precedent which will

Running Texas' whitewater

58-mile Pecos canoe trip provides boating thrills

BY BRANDON BATTLES
R-T River Editor

The city limits sign proclaims "population varies," all depending, presumably, on how many are in the small country store at any given time. It's the only building in town. But once in remote Pandale you are on the threshold of a 58-mile canoeing adventure as the Pecos River winds its way through one of Texas' last remaining wilderness areas.

Last June marked our fifth trip and, depending on the water level, it's a little bit different each time and, of course, you always discover something missed before along the way.

This time there were eight Austin College students paired off in four canoes. The usual procedure is to park one car at Pandale and cross your fingers and park another car at the state park on Highway 90 at the Rio Grande for the trip back.

It's a canoe journey that can take 3 1/2 days, but a four or five day excursion is more fun. It gives you time to stop, swim, fish and explore caves along the way. In fact, there's one cave we camped overnight in. If you take the time to explore, there's a canyon where you'll find evidence of an old Indian grounds.

WHY DO we keep going back? Well, the Pecos at this point on its long journey through New Mexico and Texas, is sometimes mild-mannered and inviting and at others fast and furious, almost hostile. Most of all, it's a just a chance to get away from the city and relax. While on the river, you are out of communication with the outside world and time really stands still. There's no rush to do anything.

It's not a trip to be taken lightly. You've got to be well-equipped and once you are in the canyon, there is no way out except down river.

And, of course, there are certain safety precautions to be taken. For example, it's imperative to stay within sight of another canoe. It's not a trip to make in one canoe. The rapids aren't perilous. In fact, life preservers aren't really necessary on most of the swift water areas. There are just a couple that run swift and deep.

Another must is a snakebite kit, although the only time we ever saw rattlers was on the recent trip, and they were in the water, not where we camped out.

In five trips, the water level really hasn't varied much over a foot. They say the best time to go is October through March, but all of our trips have been April through August.

IN PLANNING ahead for meals, first decide on how many days you'll be on the river. Breakfast usually is a quick meal of canned fruit, peaches or pears. Lunch of peanut butter and jelly sandwiches is standard. Dinner is the big meal and it can consist of ranch style beans, chili, spaghetti, stew, macaroni and cheese or even catfish caught on the river. You can catch perch, but they are too small and usually are thrown back.

We found one clear pool where there were 20 catfish. We tried to seine them and catch them by hand, but without luck, so you need a pole.

Each canoe carries a five-gallon jug of water and some time the second day you'll find a spring that comes out of the rocks and you can refill your jug with fresh, fast, cool water.

Your worst enemy on the river is not the rapids, but the sun. Take a hat and plenty of lotion for protection. The rapids as a rule are not deep and there is little danger of drowning.

but a canoe can catch on a partially submerged log and tip. A canoe upset even in water that is only waist deep is a problem, since the current is so swift that you can't stand up. Two people just can't get a canoe off a rock.

AT NIGHT, campout is under the stars on an air mattress and sleeping bag. Good camp sites abound. Deer, wild goats and sheep are seen once in a while, but the only signs of wildcats and coyotes are the tracks along the water's edge in the morning.

People! Once in a while a rancher may be fishing, but for the most part, if getting away from it is what you have in mind, the Pecos is the place.

Bed rock crossing, a few miles out of Pandale, is one of the significant landmarks and requires the traditional Toast to Neptune.

At night, the wind picks up, but during the day, it's very hot and one river life's little pleasures is to float in the fast-moving water and cool off.

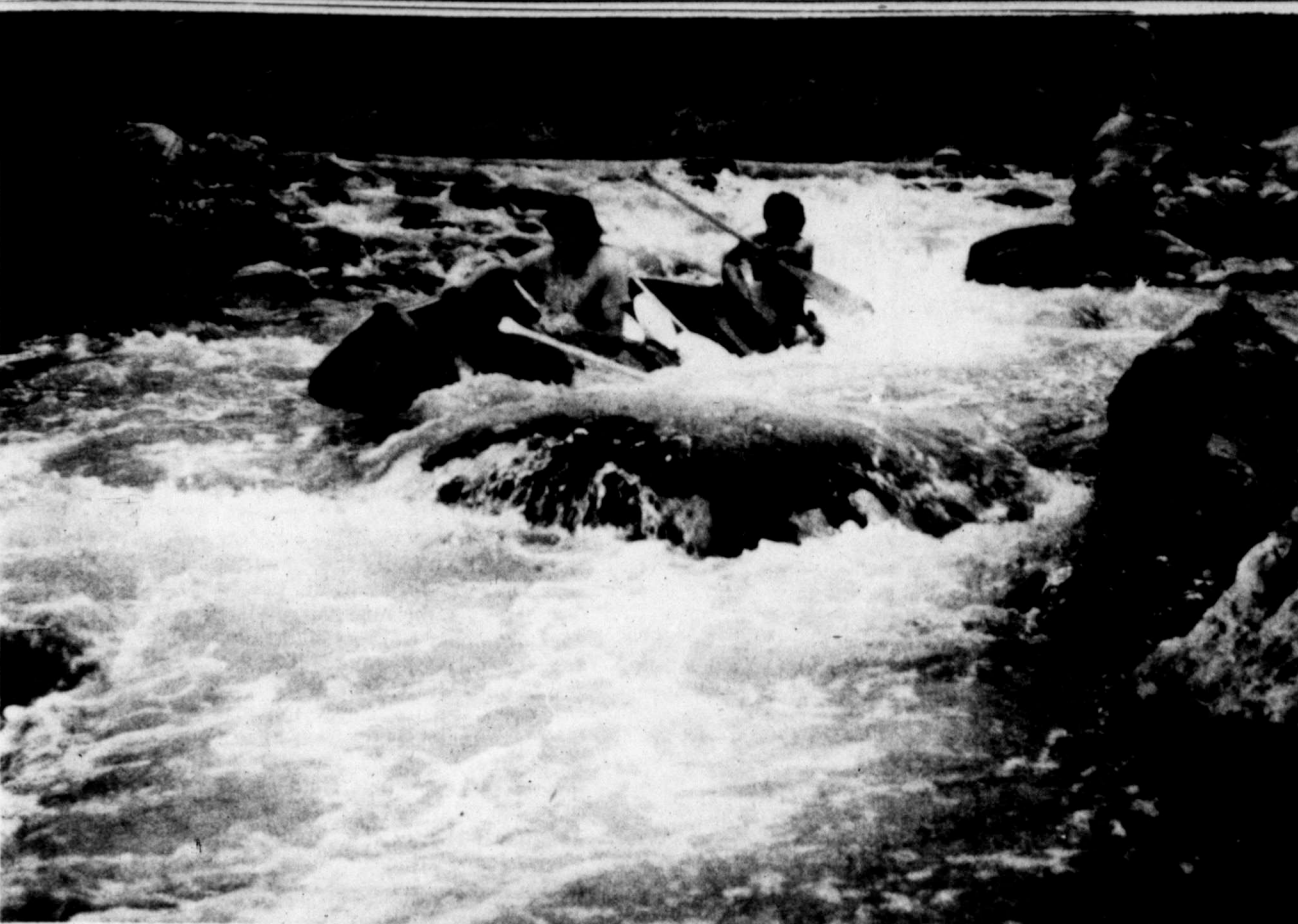

It's a welcome respite, particularly welcome after a stretch when the river runs south into the wind. It takes some strenuous paddling to negotiate these stretches. When the river bends west, there's no wind, and a canoe will glide along with the current.

AFTER PASSING Spring, Oppenheimer, Cedar and Evert canyons, another high point on the trip is Pat Rose Canyon, or maybe low point is more accurate. The long parallel ridges just below the surface are the worst part of the trip, partly, perhaps, because by this time you are tired.

The rapids aren't that bad, but it's here that the there are deep grooves in the rock bottom and canoes must be kept in their proper channels or risk running aground.

Probably the worst rapids of the trip are at Cold Water Canyon, but by then it isn't far to the Southern Pacific Railroad bridge that spans the Pecos 300 feet above, plenty of overhead for clearance. After that it's the back waters of Amistad where winds can make for some back-breaking paddling at a stage of the trip when all you want to do is get back. This last time out, the wind was so strong, we had to hitch a tow from a passing boat.

A few days after the trip is over, you begin thinking about the next one. Five trips down the Pecos isn't nearly enough.

Running the Pecos River rapids below Pandale aren't normally dangerous but sometimes they can get a little contrary and a guy can get wet. (Photos by Brandon Battles)

Missouri would like to drop San Diego State

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Most people welcome a trip to the sunny climes of San Diego this time of year, but Missouri Athletic Director Dave Hart is trying to find a way to keep his Tigers a little closer to home.

So while Missouri puts its 2-0 record on the line at San Diego State Saturday, Hart plans to talk to Aztec officials about discontinuing a four-game, home-and-home series between the schools that runs through 1982.

San Diego State is guaranteeing Missouri $100,000 in revenue, but the Tigers estimate that more than $70,000 of that will go toward transportation, lodging and other trip expenses.

"At the time the contract was entered into, we did not have inflation in the air market like we do now," said Missouri Business Director John Rawlings.

Under a contract drawn up while Mel Sheehan was the Missouri athletic director, San Diego State is scheduled to come to Columbia next fall, then the Tigers are slated to visit San Diego again in 1982.

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Ben Crenshaw knocked in a 55-foot putt for one of his five birdies, avoided bogeys while posting a 5-under-par 67 and took a four-stroke lead Friday after the second round of Napa's $300,000 golf tournament.

The Texan's 36-hole total was 133. Johnny Miller, one of Crenshaw's playing partners for the first two rounds, was second at 137 after posting a 69 on the Silverado Country Club South course.

Crenshaw made the 55-foot putt on his 11th hole of play, the South's par-4 second, and he said, "Johnny almost hit me when he saw that one go in." Miller, whose home is alongside one of Silverado's North Course greens, is a two-time winner of the tournament. He headed into Saturday's third round one stroke ahead of five other golfers.

Tom Weiskopf, Gary Hallberg, John Cook, Mike Reid and Lindy Miller were at 138. At 139 were Chip Beck and Jack Renner. Beck, who was tied with Crenshaw for the first-round lead, took a 73 on the South Course Friday and Renner had a 72 there.

Tom Watson, making his final tour appearance of the year which has brought him almost $600,000 in tournament winnings, fell to a 72 Friday after opening the tournament with a 68.

Palmer shares second place

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Though still not sure on his future participation, Arnold Palmer made his first appearance Friday on the individual Seniors' Tour in the $150,000 World Seniors Invitational in Charlotte.

He went around the Quail Hollow Country Club course with a steady round of 2-under par 70, good enough for an opening day, second-place tie.

The leader in the inaugural event was 1958 PGA winner Dow Finsterwald, who shot a 3-under-par 69 for a 1-stroke lead.

Melton, Carner share lead in Dallas LPGA

DALLAS (AP) — Nancy Lopez-Melton opened defense of her Dallas Ladies Professional Golf Association title Friday with a 3-under-par 69 to tie veteran Joanne Carner after one round in the 54-hole tournament.

Lopez-Melton, a three-time winner on the 1980 tour and fourth on the LPGA money list, recorded five birdies as she carded a 35-34-69 on the wind-swept 6,309-yard Bent Tree Country Club.

Carner, who finished at dusk, also recorded five birdies but missed a 12-foot putt on the 18th to fall into a tie for the lead in the $150,000 event.

"I found it hard to club the course because of the wind," said Lopez-Melton, who bogeyed one hole on each nine. Her birdies were on the 6th, 9th, 12th, 14th and 18th hole. Last year, she bogeyed the 9th three times when the tournament played 72 holes.

Carner had birdied the 6th, 7th, 11th, 13th and 16th.

LPGA rookie Myra Van Hoose, who finished a stroke behind the leaders with a 2-under-par 33-37-70, was bitten on the right foot by an insect and was taken to a hospital for treatment after she completed her card. It was the second time in two days she had been bitten.

Nancy Lopez-Melton ...blasts out of trap

She returned to the course later with a badly swollen ankle and complained of intense pain. Kathy Postlewait was another stroke off the pace with a 36-35-71, only the fourth sub-par round of the day.

Donna Caponi Young, a five-time winner this year and top money winner with $207,766, carded a first-round 74 with Beth Daniel, the No. 2 money winner, a stroke away at 75 going into Saturday's second round.

Silverdome suit filed

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The operators of the 5-year-old, 80,000-seat Pontiac Silverdome have filed suit against their architects and contractor for reimbursement of repairs, charging poor workmanship.

"Most of these corrections have already been made. What it's now down to is who's going to pay," Charles McSwigan, executive director of the Pontiac Stadium Authority, said Friday. He said there is no danger to visitors to the plastic-topped stadium, which is home for the Detroit Lions' professional football team and the Detroit Pistons' professional basketball team.

The suit, filed Tuesday in Oakland County Circuit Court, seeks reimbursement from Barton-Malow Co. of Oak Park

Hogan Park hosts U.S. Open qualifying round

BY REX WORRELL
Hogan Park Golf Pro

The United States Golf Association Sectional Affairs representative John Farquhar has arranged with Hogan Park to host the local qualifying round for the 1981 U.S. Open Championship May 18, 1981. This will be a 36-hole stroke play round. We are extremely proud to be chosen to host this qualifying tournament and will be doing all we can to have the golf course in perfect condition.

The recent rains have been really good for the course. The rain did, however, cancel the Doodlebug Open scheduled for Friday. The Doodlebug has been rescheduled for Friday Oct. 24.

If nothing else, Ali's voice is in top form

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Muhammad Ali showed up at Larry Holmes' training session Friday and got into a shouting match with the World Boxing Council champion.

Ali, trying to become champion for the fourth time, watched Holmes spar with Marvin Stinson and shouted, "You're in trouble."

"Kings get old and kings die," Holmes hollered at the 38-year-old Ali.

"I'm gonna eat you up," said Ali.

"You're gonna spit me out," replied Holmes.

"I want you," shouted Ali.

"You're gonna get me," shouted Holmes.

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — A bomb exploded Friday night as merrymakers were crowding through an exit at closing time of the Oktoberfest, killing at least 10 people and wounding 115, authorities reported.

"We are assuming it was a terrorist attack," a police spokesman said.

"I saw the bodies lying all around," said Andrea Rohloff, a Munich resident. "The entire street under the arched entryway at the main gate, the one that is decorated with garlands, was bathed in blood."

Other witnesses said:

"People were torn in pieces. I saw parts of bodies flying through the air."

"I saw people with arms and legs blown off. Blood was everywhere."

"I saw a flash, and then people were hurled through the air. It was horrible!"

"It's gruesome chaos here," the driver of one of the first fire trucks on the scene reported to the central station by radio. "A terrible catastrophe."

A police spokesman said the blast apparently was caused by a powerful device in a trash can near an exit from Theresien Meadow, site of the annual festival, and exploded as crowds of merrymakers from the beer tents were leaving the grounds. The bomb went off at about 11:30 p.m.

Bavarian Interior Minister Gerold Tandler offered a $5,600 reward for information leading to those responsible for the explosion.

Despite speculation about a terrorist motive, police said they knew of no threats or warnings prior to the blast.

West Germany has been plagued by urban terrorism since the late 1960s when the left-wing Red Army Faction, under the leadership of Andreas Baader and Ulrike Meinhof, began a wave of terrorist attacks, kidnappings and robberies. They and many of their key followers eventually were arrested.

Baader and Meinhof committed suicide in jail in 1977, and terrorism appeared seemed to subside in recent years.

Private doctors were called to the scene Friday and personal cars were used as emergency vehicles in addition to ambulances, fire and police cars.

Many of the wounded were waiting for streetcars and cabs near the site of the explosion, and "that's why the catastrophe was especially great," a fire department spokesman said.

Police were examining the remains of the trash can to determine what caused the blast. A spokesman for the fire department said: "It must have been a very powerful bomb."

Officials of the Oktoberfest, which began a week ago in this Bavarian city and runs through Oct. 5, said about 100,000 people were on the grounds Friday night.

Visitors from all over the world flock to the festival to drink the famous Munich brew from liter-sized mugs and sing traditional German songs, accompanied by brass bands.

It was not known if any foreigners were among the casualties.

10 killed in Oktoberfest bombing

FORT CHAFFEE, Ark. (AP) — Efforts to bring all 6,600 Cuban refugees without sponsor families to one relocation center continued Friday at Fort Chaffee as some officials questioned whether they had the authority to arrest refugees who might try to escape from the facility.

The final 325 Cuban refugees housed at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., were flown to Fort Smith, Ark., and then bused to Fort Chaffee on Friday.

Also, refugees from resettlement center at Fort McCoy, Wis., began arriving Friday night. The first flight Friday of 120 refugees was delayed six hours by a flat tire on the chartered aircraft before making the journey. The rest of the Cubans at Fort McCoy were to be brought here Saturday, while the remaining resettlement center — Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa. — will transfer its refugees between Oct. 11 and 15.

About 3,500 Cubans already have arrived at Fort Chaffee.

Meanwhile, the State Department announced steps it was taking after state Attorney General Steve Clark's said the refugees' "undefined status" leaves authorities powerless to arrest or detain them for merely leaving the post without permission.

"I am unaware of any law of this state that makes it a crime to leave the base," Clark said Thursday in an opinion requested by Gov. Bill Clinton.

Clark suggested that the federal government take the burden of defining the Cubans' legal status. Clinton agreed, and said he would forward a copy of the opinion to federal authorities.

Sylvia Spencer, a State Department spokeswoman here, said Clark's opinion has little effect on Fort Chaffee.

"We are operating just like we always have," she said Friday. "The state attorney general has no jurisdiction over the federal officials who are operating this camp."

"The attorney general of the United States and the Justice Department have determined that we have legal jurisdiction and authority here."

But State Department spokesman Van Rush announced later that the federal Immigration and Naturalization Service would deputize all of the U.S. Park Police at Chaffee this weekend so they can arrest refugees who get off the base.

Officials in northwest Florida expressed pleasure that the Eglin Air Force Base camp was shutting down.

"No one is sorry to see it end," said Air Force Maj. John Toner, referring to the "tent city" erected on the fairgrounds adjacent to the base last spring when the "Freedom Flotilla" from Cuba began.

Toner said the Cubans "could not have been happy with the arrangement of living in tents in the heat of the Florida summer."

Other than a riot on May 24 when about 100 refugees jumped the fence at Eglin, there were no incidents at the Florida relocation center, said Mayor Bob Gates of neighboring Fort Walton Beach, Fla.

"We're glad to see it go," Gates said. "Nobody wanted them to be here permanently."

Federal officials chose Chaffee as the place to house the sponsorless Cubans primarily because of the relatively mild winters in western Arkansas and since Chaffee was better equipped to handle them.

'Poison pickle' case ends

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A federal jury convicted a man Friday who was accused of putting a jar of poisoned pickles on a store shelf in an extortion scheme for diamonds.

The U.S. District Court jury deliberated about five hours before returning guilty verdicts on two charges against 62-year-old Paul R. Baillieux.

He was charged with extortion and impersonating an FBI agent to obtain carrier pigeons to bring him the diamonds, estimated to be worth $250,000.

Judge Helen Frye set sentencing for Nov. 3. The trial began Wednesday.

Baillieux also has been charged in similar schemes in three San Diego, Calif., suburbs. He has pleaded innocent to all the charges.

Defense attorney Stephen Crew of the Federal Defender's Office did not dispute the prosecution charges but attempted to show Baillieux suffered from mental disease at the time of the crime.

The bizarre incident began March 22 when a man told police that a jar of pickles at a food store in suburban Portland contained cyanide.

Officers found the jar and a note demanding diamonds be sent by carrier pigeon. In return, the note said, information would then be released about other foods that might be poisoned.

The diamonds specified were estimated to be worth $250,000.

The demand went unfulfilled because the extortionist later called the wrong branch of the chain and talked with someone who knew nothing of the incident, police said.

Baillieux was charged after the FBI issued a public appeal for information from any carrier pigeon trainer who knew of any suspicious incidents.

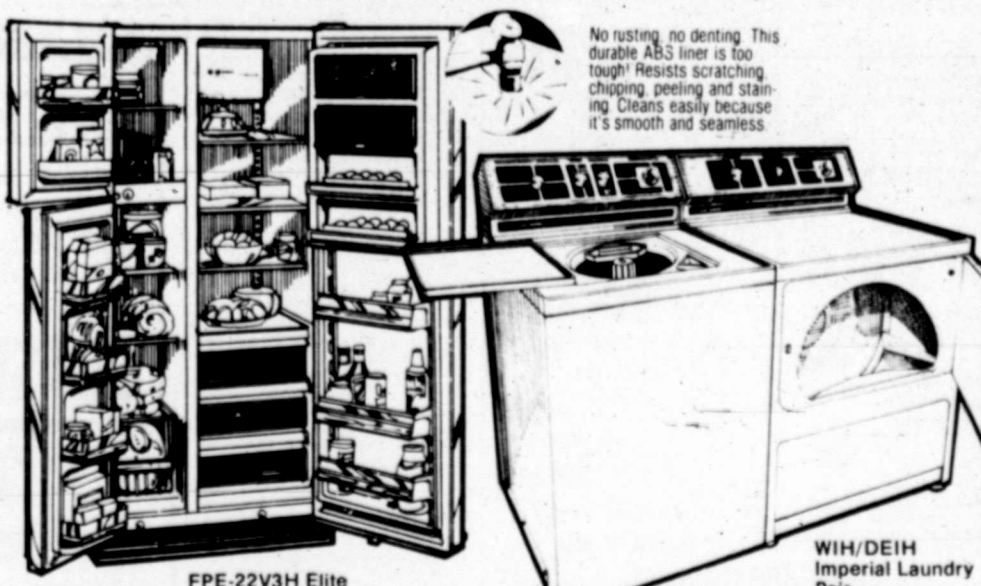

James Rennick identified Baillieux as the man who claimed to be an FBI agent and wanted to borrow the pigeons, the federal agency said.

Crew said Baillieux had brain damage as a result of repeated head injuries, affecting his ability to think, reason and realize the consequences of his acts.

COULD YOU USE $8100 TO FURTHER YOUR EDUCATION?

With tuition costs at colleges and vocational/technical schools at an all-time high, many high school graduates are finding themselves able to meet admission standards, but unable to afford the tuition.

The Navy wants all qualified candidates to achieve the goal of higher education. And we can help, through a dramatic new program called the Veterans Educational Assistance Plan.

Under this plan, Navy men and women can save from $50 to $75 each month, and their savings will be matched 2 for 1! If you save $2700 over a three year period, the Government will match* this with $5400—for a combined saving of $8100!

Get all the facts. Just call your nearest Navy recruiter. He can tell you how to get ahead in the Navy. And how easy it is to save $8100.

A LONG WAY

They've come a long way. They were married in this same church fifty years ago, when she was just twenty and he was twenty-two. Youth seemed eternal. Life promised a succession of sunny days.

But, it wasn't to go on that way forever. Their first child died at birth. Then financial troubles, a business failure, the loss of a home when they couldn't meet the mortgage payments. Sometimes it seemed as if the clouds outweighed the sunshine.

But there were good times, too. Times of joy and laughter, success, wonderful children, wonderful grandchildren. Through it all, their faith and love for each other never faltered.

Throughout our own life, can we all say as much?

Southern Baptists are appalled at their leader

Dr. Lester McAllister

Dr. McAllister to give series of lectures

Dr. Lester McAllister will be giving a three-day series beginning Sunday at the First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana Ave.

The themes for McAllister's lectures include "Origins of the Movement," "Why Be a Disciple in an Ecumenical Age?" and "Disciple Tales, Myths and Legends."

McAllister is a professor of modern church history at Christian Theological Seminary in Indianapolis, Ind. He and William Tucker are the authors of "Journey in Faith, A History of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ)."

He has appeared regularly on the television program "Focus on Faith" and for two years has served as moderator for the weekly program "Lessons for Living."

The evening programs will be held in the parlor of the First Christian Church at 7:30 p.m. and the public is invited.

NEW YORK (AP) — Many Southern Baptists, incensed by some key officials and theologians, are appalled at statements of the denomination's president, the Rev. Bailey Smith, that God doesn't tar the prayers of Jews.

Expressions of shock and distress have come from leaders in many quarters of the nation's largest Protestant body, including its missionaries in Israel.

"Presumptuous arrogance," some Baptist reaction went. "Heresy...self-righteous bigotry."

Smith's statements "are not only untrue, unscriptural and unkind, they are far removed from the teachings and spirit of Jesus," says the Rev. J. William Angell, professor of religion at Wake Forest University in North Carolina.

While Christians believe their "salvation is only in Christ," Smith goes "too far" in presuming to circumscribe God's attentiveness, says the Rev. Edward Humphrey of Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary in San Francisco.

Smith, pastor of First Baptist Church in Del City, Okla., and elected president of the 13.4-million-member denomination at its convention in St. Louis in June, reaffirmed his month-old statement.

"It is true," he told Baptist Press service. "I was emphasizing the distinctive nature of Jesus Christ."

"We make a mistake when we try so hard at public relations we lose our missions thrust."

Smith originally made the statement at a National Affairs Briefing of conservative Christians in Dallas last month, with his remarks recorded and since widely circulated. He said:

"It's interesting to me at great political rallies how you have a Protestant to pray, a Catholic to pray, and then you have a Jew to pray. With all due respect to those dear people, my friends, God Almighty does not hear the prayer of a Jew."

"For how in the world can God hear the prayer of a man who says that Jesus Christ is not the true messiah? It is blasphemous. It may be political expedient, but no one can pray unless he prays through the name of Jesus Christ."

ally expedient, but no one can pray unless he prays through the name of Jesus Christ."

150th semi-annual conference slated

The 150th semi-annual General Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints is scheduled for Oct. 4-5 in Salt Lake City, Utah.

All conference sessions will start at the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square. The general sessions will be held at 11 a.m. Oct. 4 and 3 p.m. Oct. 5.

Church president Spencer W. Kimball, 85, will be presiding over the meetings.

Speakers at the conference sessions will include Kimball, Ezra Taft Benson of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles and other general Mormon authorities. Topics will include topics dealing with the home, individual, family and the nation.

Singing at the meeting will be the Mormon Tabernacle Choir.

Women set new night to meet

The United Methodist Women of the First United Methodist Church has a new night circle for working women.

The group meets the second Monday of each month at 7:30 p.m. and is open to all Midland women.

Local organizations like the Salvation Army, Home for Battered Women, Meals-on-Wheels and others will be presented information on various services offered to the community.

Officers for the "Betty Matthews Circle" are Marylou Harper, chairman; Mrs. L.E. Purvis, vice chairman; and Kay Holder, secretary-treasurer.

For more information about meetings places and times, persons can call 682-3701.

Roloff trial rescheduled for Nov. 17

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State District Judge Charles Mathews has rescheduled the trial of the state's newest licensing suit against evangelist Lester Roloff for Nov. 17.

The trial was postponed indefinitely last month after officials of the Texas Department of Human Resources said they had not had enough time to prepare for it.

Roloff went through the motions of closing his Rebekah Home for Girls, Lighthouse for Boys and Anchor Home for Boys in mid-1979 rather than get licenses from the department.

Since then, he reopened the homes under the auspices of his People's Baptist Church of Corpus Christi.

Roloff has maintained since the early 1970s that licensing would violate the constitutional rule that church and state must be kept separate. But a series of court decisions, including one by the U.S. Supreme Court, have upheld the constitutionality of licensing of church-related child care institutions by the state.

Attorney General Mark White filed the latest suit this year, seeking an order compelling Roloff to get licenses for the children's homes and his Park Avenue Christian School in Corpus Christi.

Dr. M. Jack Suggs

Dr. Suggs to give lectures

Memorial Christian Church announces a series of lectures by Dr. M. Jack Suggs, professor of New Testament and dean of Brite Divinity School at Texas Christian University.

The lectures will be held in the church parlor at 1001 Andrews Highway with the topic "Who is This Jesus?" starting today at 5:30 p.m.

On Sunday during the morning service, Suggs will be speaking about "Who do Men Say That I Am?" and "What will be the Sign of Your Calling?" at 5:30 p.m.

Suggs has given lectureships at church conventions in Texas, Colorado, Kansas, North Carolina, Missouri and Tennessee.

He is the author of many books including "The Layman Reads His Bible," "The Gospel Story: Studies in the History and Text of the New Testament" and "Wisdom, Christology and Law in Matthew's Gospel."

Suggs has served as a classroom teacher for 24 years prior to becoming a dean.

The public is invited to attend the lectures.

THE NEWSPAPER BIBLE

It is usually best to be married

NOW about those questions you asked in your last letter: my answer is that if you do not marry, it is good.

But usually it is best to be married, each man having his own wife, and each woman having her own husband, because otherwise you might fall back into sin.

The man should give his wife all that is her right as a married woman, and the wife should do the same for her husband.

For a girl who marries no longer has full right to her own body, for her husband then has his rights to it, now, and in the same way the husband no longer has full right to his own body, for it belongs also to his wife.

So do not refuse these rights to each other. The only exception to this rule would be the agreement of both husband and wife to refrain from the rights of marriage for a limited time, so that they can give themselves more completely to prayer. Afterwards, they should come together again so that Satan won't be able to tempt them because of their lack of self-control.

I'm not saying you must marry, but you certainly may if you wish.

I wish everyone could get along without marrying, just as I do. But we are not all the same. God gives some the gift of a husband or wife, and others He gives the gift of being able to stay happily unmarried.

So I say to those who aren't married, and to widows—better to stay unmarried if you can, just as I am.

But if you can't control yourselves, go ahead and marry. It is better to marry than to burn with lust.

Bishop to arrive in Midland today

Bishop and Mrs. Robert C. Harvey will arrive in Midland today to celebrate Holy Communion at 11 a.m. Sunday in St. Paul's Anglican Church, 5200 W. Illinois Ave.

The first bishop of the Diocese of the Southwest, Harvey was consecrated in Dallas April 19, 1980.

Rev. Harvey presides over parishes in Arizona, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas and Christ's Church in New Orleans.

He serves as president of the board for "The Christian Challenge," a monthly publication. Harvey was a former writer of the publication's editorial page.

MCWU

to meet

Midland Church Women United will have an expanded board meeting and workshop Tuesday in the parlor of Memorial Christian Church at 1101 Andrews Highway.

West Texas CWU Area Coordinator, Doris Seutoka, will be conducting the workshop which is slated to begin at 1 p.m.

"Everything You Ever Wanted to Know About Church Women United in Midland, in Texas and in the World" will be presented in Memorial Christian Church's parlor.

Earlier at 11 a.m., a slide presentation about the South Pacific will be presented by Mrs. Seutoka.

A salad luncheon will follow the presentation.

A nursery will be provided and the public is invited to attend.

Pope opens synod with homily on family values

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, opening a month-long synod of Roman Catholic bishops Friday, reaffirmed his strong opposition to divorce and called on Catholic families to preserve the church's "fundamental values."

"The church looks toward spouses who promise to love one another through the course of their whole life, even to death," the pontiff said in his homily, delivered in Latin.

Some of the bishops told reporters they believed the church should re-examine its opposition to artificial birth control at the synod dedicated to "the Christian Family in the Modern World."

In a keynote address, Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger acknowledged that "traditional forms of family life are in contrast with the technical civilization of the Western world," according to a summary released by the Vatican.

But the West German prelate went on to present a strongly worded defense of monogamous marriage and premarital virginity. He attacked "chemical means" of contraception, saying they are "in contrast with the natural order of things," the summary said.

Council urges rabbis to protest television film

NEW YORK (AP) — The Synagogue Council of America has urged U.S. rabbis and their congregations to flood CBS-TV with protests against the scheduled Sept. 30 program, "Playing for Time," starring Vanessa Redgrave.

The complaint was not against the program itself, dealing with a Jewish heroine of the Nazi persecution of Jews, but at Ms. Redgrave, characterized as a sympathizer and supporter of the anti-Israel Palestine Liberation Organization.

WE BELIEVE

We believe in calling ourselves by a Bible name. Further, we believe that denominational names are sinful and divisive. Christ is a name that was given to the believers early on. (Acts 11:26) The original Greek in this verse indicates that God gave this name. We do not maintain that we are the only Christians, but we will be Christians ONLY.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TO-DAY: Both Brigitte Bardot and Marcello Mastroianni share this birthday with you. In the months just ahead, a determined effort should be made to increase savings. Income will permit this, if you are thrifty. Look forward to spending a great deal of time with some very interesting, exciting individuals! Romance should be mostly happy. If thinking of marriage, be sure to choose a partner who shares your idealism and dedication to justice.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Let mate set the pace today where social activities are concerned. This could be an excellent time to return a neighbor's hospitality. Call an old friend who lives alone. Someone else's vacation plans can sound very attractive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are in the mood for adventure, but could find more surprises than anticipated if you go off half-cocked. A romantic interlude puts added sunshine in the day. A quiet supper for two would end the weekend on a note of contentment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A new spiritual awareness may come to those who have previously expressed a lack of belief. Do not press your new views on those who are indifferent. Mate, spouse may not yet be ready to consider a change in lifestyle.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Develop better defense mechanisms for dealing with an irritating relative or in-law. An urge to create could be overpowering. Work at developing a natural talent. Mate, friends are supportive where a pet project is involved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If on vacation, be sure to get the most for your money. A new appreciation for the laws of nature could be one result of time spent outdoors. Too much isolation can put your nerves on edge. Get out and about more, and make some new friends!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Special family interests are in the spotlight. Now is the time to reach an important financial decision. Do not hold a loved one responsible for the failings of someone else. Look beyond the surface of a social invitation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): There should be scarcely a ripple to disturb the peace and quiet of this pleasing day. Set aside some time to catch up on your reading and personal chores. Worldwide trends demand attention. Spending should be kept to a minimum.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You could be doing a loved one a favor by refusing a demand. It is not necessary to go on a spending spree to have a good time. Plan a small get-together at home to celebrate a friend's recent success.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A responsibility involving an older person could be uppermost in your thoughts this morning. A loved one will not be rushed. Realize the futility of pushing too hard. An afternoon outing is a source of delight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A romantic interlude is on the horizon. You feel more relaxed now, and happiness comes easier. Consult an influential friend about a business matter. An unusual invitation could be forthcoming.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Send a small remembrance to a friend living at a distance. You may be very much in love and quite impatient! If planning a major purchase, shop carefully and get expert advice. Real estate deals are under favorable auspices.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Put past disappointments out of your mind or a family rift will not heal. Spend part of the day with a close friend who shares your hopes and doubts. A picnic could be more fun than a formal meal in an expensive setting.
