Accident kills two

Two Midland residents died early Thursday after the motorcycle on which they were riding crashed, according to police. Patrick Ruben Ramos, 32, and Mary Evelyn Von Rosenberg Olgin, 21, were traveling north in the 6100 block of North State Highway 369 at approximately 12:30 a.m. when the motorcycle hit the center median and became airborne, according to the report. The motorcycle landed about 240 feet from the point of impact, the report said. Officers who were dispatched to the accident found both Ramos and Ms. Olgin dead at the scene, according to the report. An investigation continues.

Bentsen disciplines six for botched Waco raid

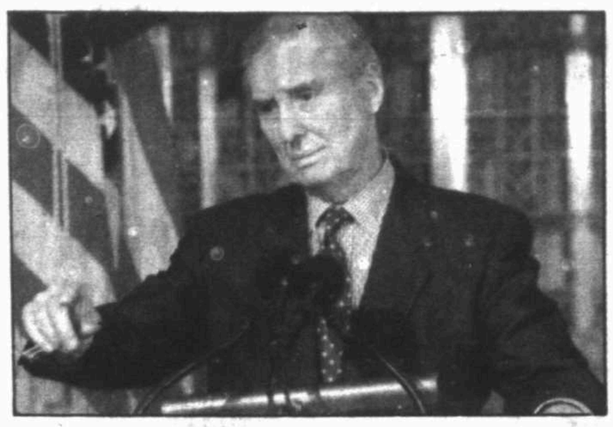

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen replaced the head of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms on Thursday and suspended five other top officials after a scathing report faulted the agency for the raid on a Texas religious cult in which four agents died.

Field commanders "obviously ... should not have" proceeded with the Feb. 28 raid on the Branch Davidian compound near Waco upon learning that cult leader David Koresh knew they were coming, Bentsen said.

He announced that he was immediately replacing the agency's director, Stephen Higgins, with John Magaw the head of the Secret

Quake devastates India, kills 16,000

■ Authorities fear death toll will rise substantially in country's worst temblor in a half century.

Associated Press

UMARGA, India — A major earthquake shattered the dawn quiet Thursday, collapsing mud and mortar homes onto sleeping families in villages across southern India. More than 16,000 died and many more cried for help from the wreckage.

Authorities feared the death toll would rise substantially in India's worst quake in a half century.

'Rising sun created darkness for us this morning, swallowed up our villages, made our houses into tombs.'

— one survivor

Many villages were leveled so quickly as the earth shook violently and opened crevices that people were crushed inside their homes while sleeping, news agencies reported.

"The rising sun created darkness for us this morning, swallowed up our villages, and made our houses into tombs," a survivor told a reporter.

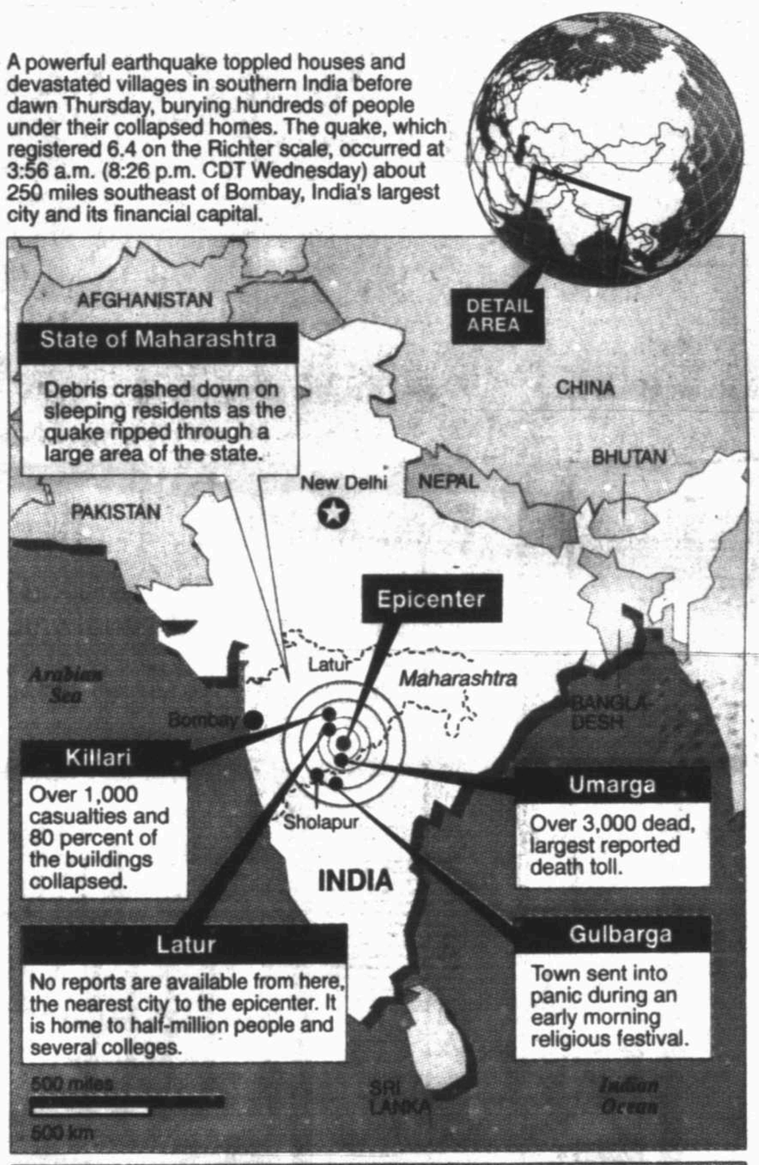

Some survived when frantic rescuers heard them shouting for help beneath toppled walls and roofs or saw a hand reaching out from the wreckage.

Friends, neighbors and police strained to lift stone, brick and wood by hand to free victims.

Soldiers and policemen rushed to the remote area of southwestern India, bringing stretchers, tents, medical supplies, earth movers, bulldozers and mobile hospitals. But relief workers had trouble reaching some villages that recently lost their roads and bridges to heavy monsoon rains.

A powerful earthquake toppled houses and devastated villages in southern India before dawn Thursday, burying hundreds of people under their collapsed homes. The quake, which registered 6.4 on the Richter scale, occurred at 3:56 a.m. (8:26 p.m. CDT Wednesday) about 250 miles southeast of Bombay, India's largest city and its financial capital.

Riot police step up pressure outside the besieged parliament building in Moscow on Thursday.

Yeltsin, holed-up foes cut tentative deal to ease siege

MOSCOW (AP) — Moving toward easing their tense standoff, negotiators for Boris Yeltsin and his hard-line foes tentatively agreed today to restore services to the besieged parliament if the lawmakers put down their arms, officials said.

It was not immediately clear if the accord would be approved by all the lawmakers inside the building. Some lawmakers have opposed a peaceful settlement of the crisis.

But if implemented, the tentative agreement would help resolve the bitter 11-day-old standoff between the Soviet-era parliament and the president trying to pursue his agenda of reform.

The hard-line lawmakers and a few hundred volunteer defenders have been in the parliament building, known as the White House, since Yeltsin

Government urges early flu shots to ward off new strain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Public health officials appealed to older Americans Thursday to get their flu shots early, before an especially virulent strain of influenza begins spreading. For the first time, the government announced, Medicare will pick up the costs for the elderly and disabled.

"Today, we think of the flu more as a nuisance than a plague," said Health and Human Services Secretary Donna E. Shalala. "This misconception costs lives."

This year's flu — known as A-Beijing — already has caused three outbreaks in Louisiana and is expected to hit hard. The strain has been associated with more sickness and death among people 65 and older, according to Dr. Philip R. Lee, assistant secretary for health.

Senate rebuffs effort to kill SSC

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Thursday to give President Clinton all $640 million he wants for work next year on a giant atom smasher in Texas, rebuffing foes who said killing it would be a good way to trim the budget deficit.

The 57-42 vote, which was expected, rescued the superconducting super collider from extinction because the House voted in June to terminate the multibillion-dollar program. The next battle will be waged when negotiators from the two chambers try thrashing out a compromise.

"We may have some more fights, but this is it, I think," supporter Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., said after the vote. "I hope it will be fairly easy sailing from now on."

Officials: Bosnian winter may be catastrophic

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — With a second winter of war approaching following the failure of the latest Bosnian peace plan, U.N. officials gave a stark warning Thursday of impending human catastrophe.

"Humanitarian prospects for literally millions of people have never looked so bleak," said U.N. civil affairs chief Cedric Thornberry. "We are looking into an abyss."

Thornberry spoke in Zagreb, Croatia, a day after the Bosnian parliament, for the second time in a month, rejected demands that the Sarajevo government concede military defeat and accept partition of the republic.

U.N. officials have been warning for weeks that the lack of a peace deal will hamper their efforts to reach 2.7 million needy people this winter.

But Bosnian officials maintain they don't believe the international plan would bring lasting peace and are determined to continue pressing for more land in eastern Bosnia. Bosnian leaders also insist that, on moral grounds, the Bosnian Serbs should not be allowed to keep land they took by force.

U.N. officials acknowledged those arguments, but said they didn't change reality.

"The idea of breaking up Bosnia into three countries ... has been criticized as morally repugnant," said Thornberry. "But it is a lot less morally barbaric than the slaughter we have seen for the past 18 months."

He said it was essential for the peace talks to continue.

In Sarajevo, spokesman Ray Wilkinson for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, also suggested that there may be tactical motives for politicians' actions.

"For some, it's better to have a political symbol than having their people living on a slightly higher level," he said.

International mediators Thorvald Stoltenberg of the United Nations and Lord David Owen of the European Community met in Geneva to decide on their next steps. Stoltenberg said he did not know if there was any hope for progress after the Bosnian parliament vote.

U.N. officials said they feared a new outbreak of fighting, especially in the most recent hot spots in central Bosnia where Croats and the Muslim-led Bosnian army are fighting for land.

Three tank rounds crashed into downtown Sarajevo on Thursday, and hospital officials said 16 people had been wounded during the day in the Bosnian capital by shelling and mortar fire.

The commander of the Bosnian army, Gen. Rasim Delic, announced he was calling a unilateral cease-fire to begin Thursday in central Bosnia, and said he expected the Croats to reciprocate.

British treaty to give Hong Kong to China stirs debate

HONG KONG (AP) — Hong Kong's leading pro-democracy group said the British government had lost its nerve in talks with China on the colony's future and was "on the brink of total capitulation to Beijing."

The accusations came in a strongly worded letter to British Foreign Minister Douglas Hurd on the eve of a meeting Friday with his Chinese counterpart, Qian Qichen, at the United Nations in New York.

The letter, made public Thursday, was from Martin Lee, leader of the United Democrats, and seemed to reflect fraying tempers in Hong Kong. It follows a year of largely futile Anglo-Chinese jousting over how Hong Kong is to be ruled after it reverts to Chinese sovereignty in 1997.

"It is now widely suspected in Hong Kong that the British government does not have the backbone to follow through on its moral and political obligations to us and is on the brink of a total capitulation to Beijing," Lee wrote.

Libya stalls on terrorist deal at deadline time

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Libya showed no new sign of cooperation Thursday in turning over two suspects in the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Scotland, just 24 hours before today's deadline to surrender the pair.

But the United States, Britain and France eased pressure on Tripoli, saying they planned to circulate a draft resolution today to toughen sanctions against Libya but would not press for its immediate adoption.

"We're not pressing for its adoption but we're putting it there for discussion," said France's ambassador, Jean-Bernard Merimee.

Asked when France would start pressing for the resolution's adoption, Merimee told reporters, "We haven't set a time limit."

The three nations had set a deadline of today for Libya to surrender the suspects.

Merimee explained the delay by citing "good will" and "encouraging words" from Libya, which said Wednesday it was urging the suspects to agree to a trial in Scotland.

The two are charged with carrying out the December 1988 bombing over Lockerbie, Scotland, that killed 270 people. They are also wanted in connection with a 1988 French airliner bombing.

The Security Council imposed an air and arms embargo and diplomatic sanctions on Libya in 1992 to pressure it to turn over the suspects.

The new sanctions would ban some Libyan oil equipment purchases — except for oil drilling equipment — and freeze some Libyan assets abroad. The new sanctions would also bar sales of equipment used in Libya's terminals and other transportation facilities.

No outright ban on oil imports from Libya was planned, because of objections from Europeans who buy much of Libya's 1.5 million barrels a day in exports. In addition, the freeze on Libya's assets abroad does not apply to the proceeds from future oil sales.

The new sanctions would be unlikely to have much affect on Libya's $9 billion a year in revenue from petroleum exports.

The North African country's foreign minister, Omar Mustafa al-Muntasser, said he would meet with Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali on Thursday to discuss the timing and place of the suspects' surrender. But by late Thursday no meeting had been scheduled. The delay was not immediately explained.

Al-Muntasser told reporters after meeting Boutros-Ghali on Wednesday that Libya would not be able to deliver the suspects by today's deadline, although it did urge the men to agree to a trial in Scotland.

Intelligence agents Abdel Basset Ali Megrahi and Lamen Khalifa Fhimah are charged in Britain and the United States with carrying out the bombing.

U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher said Thursday that whatever the Libyans tell the secretary-general, "We ought to go ahead and table the resolution to sort of keep the pressure on."

He expressed skepticism that the Libyans would cooperate, telling reporters in New York, "We've been disappointed in this arena before, and we would want to look at the fine print."

Japanese leaders struggle with severe shortage of rice

TOKYO (AP) — Edgy officials struggled Thursday to shut the door on growing demands for the opening of Japan's rice market, describing plans for rice imports this year as a one-time emergency measure.

The government announced it will import at least 200,000 tons of rice to make up for the worst harvest since World War II.

For decades, Japan has banned almost all rice imports, a policy that other nations including the United States have criticized as a symbol of closed markets.

"Self-sufficiency in rice is Japan's fundamental policy," declared government spokesman Masayoshi Takemura.

"This is absolutely, positively an emergency measure to cope with an unusual situation," added agriculture minister Eijiro Hata, referring to the cool, rainy summer weather that devastated Japan's rice crop.

But Washington immediately dissented. A U.S. Embassy official said Japan should open its rice market permanently and shift from rice to "crops where it makes economic sense."

Nationwide, the government's rice harvest index, announced Thursday, stood at 80 compared with 100 in an average year, breaking the postwar low of 84 set in 1953.

Official: Iraqis hold key that could free oil

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The chief U.N. official monitoring Iraq's weapons programs told Iraqis Thursday they could be "floating in cash" within six months if they cooperate.

Rolf Ekeus, a Swedish disarmaments expert who heads the U.N. Special Commission, spoke in Bahrain on the eve of his departure for Baghdad, where he is to hold talks with Iraq's deputy prime minister, Tariq Aziz.

The meeting could lead to an accord clearing the way for eventual lifting of the U.N. oil embargo imposed on Iraq three years ago when it invaded Kuwait.

Ekeus hopes to work out details of long-term monitoring of Iraq's nuclear, chemical and ballistics weapons programs — the sticking point in Iraq's efforts to get the embargo lifted.

The Gulf War cease-fire resolution says Iraq must destroy its weapons of mass destruction and meet other conditions, including long-term monitoring.

The embargo has stifled Iraq's economy. Ekeus said it could be lifted within six months if Iraq cooperates.

"It will be a big deal for Iraq," he said. "Iraq exported roughly 4 million barrels (of oil) a day before the war.

"So we're talking about a large amount of money which will influence oil prices and market ... Iraq will be floating in cash,"

Ekeus and Aziz held a first round of talks in New York in August after Baghdad agreed in principle to monitoring.

Iraq said it had already complied with the cease-fire terms.

Kasparov finds victory closer after game 11

LONDON (AP) — Garry Kasparov inched closer to victory Friday in the Professional Chess Association championship, surviving time trouble and playing to a draw with Nigel Short in the 11th game.

The half-point gave Kasparov, the highest-rated player in chess history, an 8-3 lead. They play again Saturday, with Kasparov needing only four points in the remaining 13 games to clinch the title.

Short has yet to win a game in the match. There have been six draws.

Playing white, Kasparov used the rarely used Scotch opening with which he had beaten Short in the past. By the 20th move, English grandmaster Tony Miles said Short was "stone-cold lost."

But Kasparov let the position slip, as he had 16 minutes to make 15 moves in order to meet the two-hour limit for the first 40 moves.

Short had faced time pressure in previous games but played briskly on Thursday. "It was a conscious decision to play a little faster," he said.

The Times newspaper of London and Teleworld Holdings, based in Rotterdam, Netherlands, are sponsoring the match, which has a $2.55 million purse.

The players have pledged 10 percent of the purse to the Professional Chess Association, which they formed in February to rival FIDE, the world chess federation.

West Texas sun to shine on

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies, becoming partly cloudy in the afternoon, with a high in the mid-80s and south winds at 10-20 mph, becoming north and gusty by noon. Tonight should have increasing cloudiness with a low in the lower 50s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should have considerable cloudiness with a 20 percent chance of rain and a high in the mid-70s.

After an overnight low of 51, Thursday's high reached 85, compared to the record high for that date of 104 set in 1977. The record low was 42 set in 1966.

NATION

Record cold resulted in an early freeze in parts of the Midwest and Northeast on Thursday, and even lower temperatures were on the way.

Temperatures dipped into the 30s early Thursday across much of the northeastern quarter of the nation, with morning lows in the 20s in Michigan, Wisconsin and northern Illinois.

The low of 31 in Cincinnati was the city's earliest freeze on record, while the 24-degree reading in Marquette, Mich., was 5 degrees lower than the previous record for the date.

Strong northwesterly winds were ushering even colder air into the northern and central Plains and much of the East.

Frost was expected Thursday night and this morning in much of New England, parts of New York and New Jersey, much of Pennsylvania and as far south as parts of Virginia and North Carolina. Temperatures in northern New England were expected to dip into the mid-teens.

Strong southerly winds prevailed from Texas to the Upper Mississippi Valley, pushing midday temperatures into the 70s and 80s in the South Central region.

Morning lows were in the 60s and 70s in the valleys and deserts of Arizona and Southern California. Otherwise, overnight lows above 60 degrees were mainly confined to the western Gulf Coast region and southern and central Florida.

Phoenix, Ariz., and Key West, Fla., reported lows of 78 degrees.

At midday, showers and a few thunderstorms were along the Middle Atlantic Coast. Showers over eastern Pennsylvania produced more than half an inch of rain at Wilkes-barre during the six hours ending at 1 p.m. CDT.

A few showers associated with a cold front in the North Central United States were over north central Montana and northeast North Dakota. A few showers were also over the lower Rio Grande Valley of Texas and the Florida Keys.

Dry weather prevailed across the rest of the nation, with sunny skies over much of the area from California to the southern Atlantic Coast.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

CHARGES: O'Bryant loses his commission

eliminate injured officers.

"They're letting me put in for jobs knowing I can't meet the qualifications," he said.

Today, O'Bryant loses his commission as a police officer and becomes a civilian employee of the department.

On Thursday, O'Bryant and several other officers, at a news conference, renewed their allegations that the city is circumventing the American Disabilities Act by civilianizing some police positions and not "reasonably accommodating" the officers in job placement.

Those allegations were spelled out in a lawsuit filed earlier this month. The lawsuit seeks to stop the civilianization.

On Wednesday, the city filed a legal answer stating that 13 of the 15 officers don't have any legal basis because they are not disabled, and O'Bryant and another plaintiff named have not performed as police officers in two years.

O'Bryant claimed he has remained certified as a police officer since being disabled with a back injury a couple of years ago. He was not allowed to wear a gun or display his badge, by chief's orders, but remained a licensed officer nonetheless, he said.

"By civilianizing their positions, they are put out to pasture," said attorney John Gunter. "The city should not be doing this, they should be protective of their officers ... The city can reasonably accommodate every officer."

O'Bryant said the city's actions send a message to other officers: that an injury will cost them their jobs.

Because of that, attorney Glen Aaron said, uninjured officers are included in the lawsuit, making it a class action. "Every police officer has an interest in this action."

Some of the officers named in the lawsuit claimed that such manipulations by the police chief have caused low morale among officers.

"Our department is in total turmoil," O'Bryant said.

Those officers also claimed the Police Department has retaliated against them for filing the lawsuit. That retaliation includes placing a disabled officer — missing the lower part of a leg — on patrol, O'Bryant and the attorneys said.

"You might ask them if they will hire one-legged people now?" O'Bryant said.

And the officers pointed to other alleged problems with the civilianization, other than circumventing the American Disabilities Act. For example, replacing officers with civilians at the front desk is grave safety concern, they said.

Attorneys for the city could not be reached for comment Thursday evening.

FLU: Government officials urge early shots

(From 1A)

The chronically ill, including children with asthma and people with AIDS, are also particularly vulnerable to complications from the flu.

"It will strike suddenly, sending victims to bed with very high temperatures and very low energy," Shalala said.

As the Cabinet assembled for a meeting with President Clinton, Shalala exhorted her colleagues to "call your mothers" with a reminder to get a flu shot. As Clinton arrived, Shalala offered the same advice to him.

Because the flu season is expected to begin earlier than usual, the government is urging at-risk Americans to get their shots before the end of October, rather than waiting until mid-November.

"This is a year when it's of even greater importance than ever to have those flu shots," said Lee, who is 69 and plans to get his flu shot soon. "I can't stress enough the seriousness of this potential epidemic, the urgency of getting the immunizations, and getting them in October."

Medicare will now pick up the costs of a flu shot for Americans 65 and older and the disabled. Most of those who take advantage of the new benefit won't have any out-of-pocket costs, HHS said. They would otherwise have to spend anywhere from $8 to $40 for a shot.

Public health officials believe the new coverage should prompt more seniors, particularly low-income Americans, to get their flu shots.

"It gives them incentive to actually seek out the shots and it will prevent illness that potentially can cause death to this population," said Jeff Jacobs, director of congressional affairs at the American Public Health Association.

Medicare expects to spend about $50 million to cover the costs of the flu shots, but believes it will save at least that much through reduced hospitalization and treatment costs.

Influenza affects 25 million to 50 million Americans every year. During many years, more than 10,000 Americans die from the flu and its complications.

Groups at risk of influenza complications include:

—Those 65 and older.

—Residents of nursing homes and other chronic-care facilities.

—Adults and children with chronic disorders of the cardiovascular or respiratory systems.

DEAL: Yeltsin, hard-liners ease standoff

disbanded parliament on Sept. 21 and called new parliamentary elections.

Conditions inside parliament, called the White House, are increasingly unpleasant. Lawmakers, their food supplies and patience dwindling, have been forced to debate by candlelight, and many have been carrying sidearms. Scores have defected to Yeltsin's side.

Negotiators from both sides agreed to restore electricity, heat and some telephones to the building if the lawmakers ratify a plan to surrender their arms, said government officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

This would lead to a gradual lifting of the government blockade of parliament and a joint guarding of the facility by police and volunteers guards from inside parliament, the officials said without elaborating.

It was not clear if lawmakers would leave the building.

Hundreds of troops and police continued to surround the building early today.

The accord came after Yeltsin met with Patriarch Alexy II, head of the influential Russian Orthodox Church, and agreed to let the patriarch mediate in talks between the two sides.

Yeltsin said the closed-door talks were to start today at the 13th-century Danilov Monastery in Moscow.

But talks between the two sides began almost immediately after Yeltsin ended his meeting with the church leader. It was unclear whether the monastery talks would go ahead.

The government was represented by Sergei Filatov, the president's chief of staff, and Oleg Soskovets, a first deputy prime minister. Parliament was represented by Ramazan Abdulatipov and Veniamin Sokolov, both high-ranking parliament officials, government officials said.

Sokolov said on Thursday that lawmakers would surrender their weapons if the police blockade ends and the government gives "firm guarantees" not to punish the hard-liners.

On Wednesday, Yeltsin gave lawmakers until next Monday to surrender their weapons and leave or face "serious consequences."

QUAKE: Workers pull survivors from ruble

(From 1A)

The quake, which measured at least 6 on the Richter scale, ripped through southwest India at 3:56 a.m. It was felt at least 400 miles from the epicenter and caused a wide swath of damage.

The death tolls given by state officials and news reports varied from 6,200 to 16,000, and all appeared to be based on confirmed statistics and estimates.

By nightfall the death toll was more than 6,200, said N. Raghunathan, chief secretary of Maharashtra, the hardest-hit state, adding that more than 2,000 bodies had been recovered.

State-run Doordarshan TV raised the toll to more than 10,000 and said more than 12,000 people could still be trapped. The United News of India news agency later put the death toll at 16,000.

About 10,000 people were injured, said Raghunathan. Telephone, electricity and water lines were cut in many areas.

The epicenter was near Maharashtra's southeastern border with Madhya Pradesh and Andhra Pradesh states.

Only after dawn broke hours later did survivors realize the magnitude of the quake and the number of people it had killed or maimed and left stranded in the rubble.

One of the worst hit towns was Umarga, 270 miles southeast of Bombay. Some 3,000 people died and 60 percent of the town's buildings were destroyed, Raghunathan said.

"Those few seconds seemed to last forever," said Solani Bhagwat, 35. "I didn't know how it happened. It was dark and I could hear people shrieking and howling. Only when the sun came out did I realize they were all trapped in their houses."

Inside the town's small, overcrowded hospital, hundreds of injured people lay wailing on floors or in a tent set up in a courtyard.

"We don't have enough drugs and bandages," Dr. Ahiwin Solekar said as he rushed from one patient to another.

About 80 percent of the village of Killari, which has 18,000 people, was flattened, said senior police officer S.P. Wathore in Bombay, the capital of Maharashtra. About 3,000 people died in Killari.

In shattered villages, crowds of people roamed through the debris, praying for lost relatives. Many others lit funeral pyres in the streets to cremate their friends and families.

REBUFFS: Senate votes funding for collider leadership in scientific research and technological development that is energizing our economy and creating careers of the future.

"This hard-won victory would not have been possible without the leadership of President Clinton and Vice President (Al) Gore. Gov. Ann Richards contacted key senators in support of the super collider and worked closely with the White House," he said.

"Texas Sens. Kay Bailey Hutchison and Phil Gramm and Sen. J. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana also provided leadership in this effort. The solid support of Minority Leader Robert Dole and many other Republican and Democratic members of the Senate was essential to our success.

"I am confident that after careful consideration, ultimately a majority of both houses of Congress will agree that the super collider is a critical investment in America's scientific, technological and economic future," Perry said.

Opponents said the issue was decided by lawmakers' desires to protect the thousands of jobs and billions of dollars' worth of contracts that the huge research project is generating. The collider, an underground tunnel 54 miles in circumference, is one-fifth complete. It is located about 30 miles south of Dallas.

"Minds are made up weeks before the debate starts," complained the chief detractor, Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark. "The log-rolling has taken place, the commitments have been made, the contractors have gotten commitments from people."

Shortly after the Senate vote, the Clinton administration immediately began lobbying for the program.

"This project is worthy of full funding support by the House-Senate" negotiators, Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary said in a statement.

Funds for the super collider were included in a bill providing $22 billion for water and energy programs for the federal fiscal year that began Friday. The Senate approved the bill by an 89-10 roll call, setting the stage for negotiations between that chamber and the House.

In another fight, senators voted 53-45 to preserve more than $30 million the legislation contained for work in Illinois and Idaho on a nuclear fuel research program. The advanced liquid metal reactor is designed to burn plutonium, the chief ingredient of nuclear weapons.

FAULTS: Bentsen replaces agency chief, disciplines 5

(From 1A)

Service who will serve as acting head of ATF. Higgins had announced plans Monday to retire on Oct. 30.

"Corrective steps are necessary," Bentsen said.

He released the report of an investigation, ordered by President Clinton, that said the agency's plan for the operation was "based on seriously flawed assumptions" about Koresh and his followers.

The report found "disturbing evidence of flawed decision making, inadequate intelligence gathering, miscommunication, supervisory failures and deliberately misleading post-raid statements about the raid."

Three of Higgins' top deputies were placed on paid administrative leave along with two Houston-based agents who commanded the operation at the scene.

The two field commanders made false statements to their superiors and Treasury Department investigators and altered their original planning document "in a concerted effort to conceal their errors in judgment," the report asserted.

"And top ATF management, perhaps out of a misplaced desire to protect the agency from criticism, offered accounts based on those raid commanders' statements, disregarding evidence that those statements were false," the report said.

Higgins, who the report concluded was misled by his top deputies, had joined other agency officials in describing the raid's failure as an unexpected ambush.

In those public statements, agency officials blamed a loss of secrecy for the raid's failure. But they had ample evidence that when the raid began those in command already knew Koresh was expecting it, the report said.

"The story ATF top management told the American people bore little resemblance to what had been told to the shooting review team" that conducted an internal investigation after the raid, it said.

Higgins, who said Monday he would retire after 11 years as director, had assured Treasury Department officials that the raid would be aborted if the element of surprise were lost, Bentsen said.

But Charles D. Sarabyn, the lead agent at the scene, ignored a report from an undercover agent who told him 40 minutes before the raid that Koresh had been warned, the report said.

Some 60 agents at the staging area heard Sarabyn say that "Koresh knows we are coming," it said.

Sarabyn and Phillip J. Chojancki, his second in command, both denied in initial statements to their superiors that the undercover agent, Robert Rodriguez, had provided definitive information that Koresh had been warned. Sarabyn also denied telling agents that the cult knew of the plans and stuck to this story during repeated questioning.

"It took months, or certainly weeks, before he admitted knowing" that Koresh has been warned, said Ronald K. Noble, the assistant treasury secretary for enforcement who oversaw the five-month investigation.

Asked about Sarabyn's decision to proceed, Bentsen said: "I don't know what went on in the man's mind when he made the decision" that was "in absolute violation of the instructions."

Asked if any agents would face criminal charges, Bentsen said the matter would be reviewed by the inspector general, who would decide whether to refer any cases to the Justice Department.

Besides Sarabyn and Chojancki, the secretary placed three senior agency officials on paid administrative leave: Daniel M. Hartnett, associate director of law enforcement, Edward D. Conroy, deputy associate director, David C. Troy, chief of intelligence.

Those in charge in Texas failed to consider other methods of arresting Koresh on illegal weapons charges, such as capturing him when he was outside the compound and away from his heavily armed followers, the report said.

ATF failed to systematically collect and analyze intelligence about Koresh and his habits, therefore concluding incorrectly that the cult leader never left the compound, it said.

In fact, there were a half dozen sightings of Koresh in the Waco area in a four-month period leading up to the raid, the report said.

The officials' decision to raid the compound when Koresh and his followers were separated from their weapons was "a plan whose window of opportunity was much smaller than they realized."

WHAT TO DO IF YOU THINK YOUR CHILD IS ON DRUGS.

The Telltale Signs

Chronic eye redness, sore throat or dry cough.

Chronic lying, especially about whereabouts.

Wholesale changes in friends.

Stealing.

Deteriorating relationships with family members.

Wild mood swings, hostility, or abusive behavior.

Chronic fatigue, withdrawal, carelessness about personal grooming.

Major changes in eating or sleeping patterns.

Loss of interest in favorite activities, hobbies, sports.

School problems - slipping grades, absenteeism.

Take a deep breath.

You're not a failure as a parent. You're not helpless. And you're not alone.

If you think you're a failure, consider this: There are many kids with neglectful parents who never use drugs. There are also children with seemingly model parents who do use drugs.

So the first thing to accept is that drugs, while indeed dangerous, are one more problem for youngsters to handle. And they'll do it better and faster if you're aware, involved, and don't stick your head in the sand.

THE AWARE PARENT IS THE GOOD PARENT.

Part of awareness and a major deterrent to experimentation is to talk to your kids about drugs.

But even with a lot of parental involvement, there are no guarantees. So it's important to know the symptoms of drug use and to take action if you see your youngster displaying them.

THE WARNING SIGNALS.

There are no symptoms that are absolutely reliable. But there are clues (see box).

Most of these symptoms tend to be gradual which is why parental awareness is so important.

But don't jump to conclusions.

Many of the warning signs for drug use are the same as those for depression or for the ups and downs of being a teenager. There's also the possibility it's a physical or emotional problem.

But whatever the problem, we're talking about a child who needs help. Right now.

START WITHIN THE FAMILY.

Nothing beats the power of love and family support. That has to start with a frank discussion.

Don't make it an attack. And don't try to talk with your child if he or she seems under the influence.

Wait for a calm moment and then explain that you're worried about certain behavior (be specific) and give your child every opportunity to explain. That means really listening, not doing all the talking.

At the same time, it's important to speak frankly about the possibility of drugs. And it's particularly important to talk about your values and why you're dead set against drugs.

If your youngster seems evasive or if his or her explanations are not convincing, you may want to consult your doctor to rule out illness and to ask for advice.

You may also want to have your child visit a mental health professional to see if there are emotional problems.

FURTHER ACTION MAY BE NECESSARY

If your child seems non-responsive or belligerent, and you suspect drugs are involved, immediate action is vital.

First, you'll need an evaluation from a health professional skilled in diagnosing adolescents with alcohol or drug problems.

You may want to get involved with an intervention program to learn techniques that will help convince a drug user to accept help.

For the user, there are self-help, outpatient, day care, residency, and 24-hour hospitalization programs.

The right program depends entirely on the circumstances and the degree of drug involvement. Here, you'll need professional help to make an informed choice.

Another point: If a program is to succeed, the family needs to be part of it. This can mean personal or family counseling. It may also involve participating in a support group where you learn about co-dependency and how not to play into the problems that might prompt further drug use.

If you don't know about drug programs in your area, call your family doctor, local hospital or county mental health society or school counselor for a referral. You can also call the national helpline – 800-662-HELP – for advice and a referral.

WHATEVER YOU DO, DON'T GIVE UP.

That child who upsets you so much is the same little boy or girl who, only yesterday, gave you such joy. They're in way over their heads, and they never needed you quite as much as they need you now.

No matter what they say.

For more information on how to talk with your kids about drugs, ask for a free copy of "A Parent's Guide to Prevention." Call 1-800-624-0100.

PARTNERSHIP FOR A DRUG-FREE AMERICA

An Abkhazian female fighter with an AK-47 assault rifle, wearing a home-made bulletproof vest marches with her fellow soldiers down a street in Sukhumi this week. Rebel forces captured the port city from government troops under Edward Shevardnadze. The rebels now claim control of most of the Georgian state.

Rebels take most of Georgian state

TBILISI, Georgia (AP) — Separatists took control of nearly all of Abkhazia Thursday, and government troops fought to keep a toehold in the region.

The losses in Abkhazia are a humiliating defeat for Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze, who has said the region's fall could enflame secessionist movements across Georgia and the whole Caucasus region.

On Thursday, his leadership also came under renewed attack from his arch-rival, former President Zviad Gamsakhurdia.

Abkhazian forces, who drove government troops from the regional capital of Sukhumi on Monday, marched southward along the Black Sea coast Thursday into the port cities of Ochamchira and Gali, Georgian officials said.

The tiny Gali district was the last government stronghold in Abkhazia.

Separatists clashed Thursday around Ochamchira with joint forces trying to retake the city on behalf of both Shevardnadze and Gamsakhurdia, who have joined military forces because both oppose the breakup of Georgia. The separatists seek either total independence or annexation to Russia.

The Georgian Defense Ministry said the joint force had entered Ochamchira, 35 miles south of the capital. Fierce street battles were underway as Georgians attempted to retake the port, the ministry said.

Sukhumi's airport, south of the capital, was abandoned Wednesday night by thousands of government soldiers and armed civilian volunteers who fled into the nearby mountains and toward Ochamchira.

They were hoping to be evacuated by Russian and Georgian ships and trains, but it was not immediately known if any were picked up.

The fall of Gali and Sukhumi gave the separatists near-complete control of the region.

Georgian officials claimed Abkhazian forces were committing atrocities against the fleeing Georgians.

El Paso border blockade creates stir

By Tim Golden
N.Y. Times News Service

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico — For years, as thousands of undocumented workers floated openly across the Rio Grande each day from this sprawling border metropolis to jobs in El Paso, illegal immigration became a symbol of tolerance, even brotherhood, between the two cities.

That immigration agents stopped relatively few of the nannies and gardeners and busboys was taken as a sign that Ciudad Juarez and El Paso understood each other's needs.

Then, on Sept. 19, the U.S. Border Patrol began what it calls Operation Blockade. By deploying hundreds of agents along a 20-mile stretch of the international boundary, the patrol has all but stopped a human traffic that it estimated at more than 10,000 people a day.

While some impetus for the operation may have come from Washington, where the Clinton administration has promised a tougher stand on illegal immigration, it has been received with clamorous applause in the tract homes and shopping malls that sit beneath El Paso's grey-brown hills.

"People here seem to think that all of their problems — welfare, health care, crime, you name it — have been solved," said Cheryl A. Howard, a sociologist at the University of Texas El Paso.

Across the border, however, the blockade and the stepped-up immigration checks that have accompanied it have brought a wave of outrage. Protesters have blocked the traffic on international bridges. Angry politicians and business executives are calling for a boycott of El Paso stores.

And in a cross-border community that is often cited as a model for the cooperation that is supposed to flower if the U.S. Congress approves a North American Free Trade Agreement, the conflict has shattered old assumptions about how well the two cities know each other and how well they get along.

"We were very much brothers," said Isabel Delgado, a jewelry store clerk who was born in southern Chihuahua state, raised in Ciudad Juarez and has lived in El Paso for the last 15 years. "But with this, we are going our own ways."

The border crackdown has affected two kinds of migrants. Border Patrol statistics on apprehensions suggest that it has nearly halted the flow of illegal undocumented workers who have usually waded, walked, or floated on rafts across the border.

Second, there have been stricter checks to root out Mexicans who walk or drive across the international bridges here with temporary permits but who then work without permission. Many of those Mexican border residents have stayed home, some out of fear and some complaining of harassment.

On the U.S. side of the border, many people say approval for the blockade has underscored how the trade agreement has heightened fears of job losses even in American communities where integration with Mexico is a familiar reality.

Mexico recalls '68 massacre on anniversary

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The 25th anniversary Saturday of the 1968 Mexico City massacre that killed hundreds of people has prompted an outpouring of newspaper articles and soul-searching about the "Generation of '68." The government, long reticent about its role in the killings, has endorsed an investigation.

"This was our blackest hour, our dark night in modern history when our political system showed its violent side and the people died," said novelist Homero Aridjis, an outspoken social commentator.

Aridjis said the massacre was a watershed event in that the system subsequently allowed public protests and criticism. The ruling Institutional Ruling Party now tolerates freedom of expression — as long as it does not seriously challenge its 64-year lock on power.

On the night of Oct. 2, 1968, just days before the Summer Olympics opened in Mexico City, some 10,000 students and sympathizers gathered on the Plaza of the Three Cultures in Tlatelolco.

They were demanding more freedom from the government of President Gustavo Diaz Ordaz. Instead, they were met by bullets.

"The army was firing on us. It seemed like a war, just a horrendous massacre," said Heberto Castillo, then an engineering professor among the movement leaders, and now a 65-year-old opposition politician.

The students were demanding greater freedom of speech and protesting the money lavished on the Olympics while many Mexicans were going hungry.

"There was a real sense among Mexican army and political leaders that this movement had legs and could quickly grow out of control," said Douglas Payne, a Mexico expert.

General Powell retires with cascade of honors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Colin Powell stepped down as the nation's top military officer Thursday amid pomp and pageantry, hailed by President Clinton simply as "first and foremost, a good soldier."

At a retirement ceremony under sunny autumn skies, Powell saluted the troops, then bade an emotional and eloquent farewell.

"I loved every single day of it and it's hard to leave," the outgoing chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff told a crowd of hundreds assembled on reviewing field at Fort Myer in suburban Virginia.

"I have never wanted to be anything but a soldier and my dreams have been fulfilled for almost four decades."

Clinton awarded Powell the presidential Medal of Freedom — the general had received the same award earlier from President Bush — as Powell was feted with a cascade of awards, 21-gun salute and military flyover. Bush and his wife, Barbara, were among the honored guests.

'I have never wanted to be anything but a soldier and my dreams have been fulfilled for almost four decades.'

— Colin Powell

"As a young soldier and a not-so-young soldier, he was always first and foremost a good soldier," Clinton said of Powell.

"His remarkable balance of prudence and courage . . . and his unfailing sense of humor have been there through the difficult times of now two presidencies," Clinton continued. "He clearly had the warrior's spirit and the judgment to know when it should be applied in the nation's behalf."

Queen Elizabeth II, adding accolades from afar, approved an honorary knighthood for Powell.

The 56-year-old chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is retiring with sky-high popularity ratings at an age when many political careers are just taking off, prompting speculation that Powell may run for the presidency.

Taking note of Powell's popularity, Defense Secretary Les Aspin joked that his ground-breaking accomplishments included becoming the first chairman of the joint chiefs "to appear as a full-size cardboard cutout" on capital streets so tourists can get their pictures taken with him.

Powell's reticence about matters political has been part of his allure.

Acknowledging that he still feels "an obligation . . . to do something in public life," Powell has kept quiet about his political designs.

Clinton mentioned only that Powell had "a bright future."

Powell spoke movingly of his 35-year military career — college days in ROTC, cold nights in Korea, terrifying days in Vietnam, warm reunions with family — and ended with an emotional tribute to his wife, Alma.

"Thank you, darling," he told her, as she blew him a kiss.

When it was over, Powell was mustered out by Army chief Gen. Gordon Sullivan, who saluted his colleague and then embraced him.

As a private citizen, Powell plans to write his memoirs — for a reported $6 million.

'Blue Eyes' earns Hall of Fame honor

There are plenty of rivetting, emotional issues for editors to address on their opinion pages — the plight of the war-ravaged Bosnians, President and Mrs. Clinton's plans for national health care, the upcoming constitutional amendment election in Texas, even the staggering national deficit and its potential consequences — but, then, it isn't every day that ol' "Blue Eyes Crying in the Rain" gets inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame.

It was time. The Red-Headed Stranger has been around country music for four decades and during that time he's been villified by people who a few years later praised him for his music or his movies or his down-to-earth style of entertainment. Willie Nelson isn't one of those individuals who fails to evoke opinion.

The point is that the 60-year-old Nelson became a music legend in a state known for making or breaking musicians and singers — and he hasn't changed his style noticeably since he was playing "in the trenches" of Austin's progressive country music industry back in the late 1960's. But Willie Nelson is Willie Nelson.

He was his typical joking self during the Wednesday evening affair in Nashville, responding to the honor by noting, "I really thought you had to die to get here."

Wearing formal attire instead of his customary bandanna, T-shirt and jeans, Nelson added, "So I went ahead and dressed up just in case."

And Willie wasn't just saying that to be nice!

Willie Nelson deserved the induction into the Country Music Hall of Fame. He is a music legend and in his own right is as worthy a musician as Johnny Cash, Minnie Pearl, Roy Acuff, Tennessee Ernie Ford, and the other stars who occupy the Country Music Hall of Fame.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Let's carefully examine health-care pill

The scene in "The Fugitive" comes to mind as the nation, frantically studying Bill and Hillary's health-care plan, stands poised hundreds of feet over the raging river. To jump or not to jump? In the movie, Harrison Ford leaps successfully — though he didn't know he would be successful — because staying behind would have landed him in the clutches of Tommy Lee Jones.

Murchison

It's different with health care. No one is aiming a pistol at us, and the drop into eternity is deeper and darker by far.

Talk about leaps of faith! The worst of it is, we don't even know whether there's a bottom down there. The president says there is. Whoopee! A lot of good that does. Will he paddle out personally and save us if, contrary to prior claims, his plan lengthens the unemployment lines and stimulates the mortuary business?

Commentators on the presidential plan, and doubtless the presidential couple, agree that what is proposed for health care is extraordinary. You would think, wouldn't you, that, where an extraordinary measure was on the table, caution and deliberation would enter into the proceedings. But no. We can't wait, we have to do this thing next year. We are going to finance the Clinton plan through a specific level of savings in Medicare and Medicaid.

The president's advisers have specified the number of dollars to be saved, as they have specified the savings business will experience in health costs. Better and better: The plan will not destroy jobs, it will create them. Health care will not deteriorate, it will improve. Nobody will fall between the cracks of the system; there will be no cracks. Rarely these days does one encounter such certainty. It would be fun to visit Las Vegas with the Clintonites. They could tell us exactly what number to lay one's chips down on, whether to call, raise, or fold. Imagine the possibilities at Belmont or Louisiana Downs.

Even in the midst of uncertainty, the Clintonites are certain. "It's hard to know what the effects would be in the short run, although they're likely to be small," according to Laura Tyson, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers. But then Tyson brightens up; confidence surges through her veins. "But the beneficial effects of the plan would strengthen over time."

Ira Magaziner, head of the health care task force that wrote the plan, says the proposed changes will provide short-term job gains, "and then on net balance we think there will be some gain in the long term as well."

"We think"! Who wants to go to the bank on Ira Magaziner's thoughts? Does anyone? The president has called, even so, for volunteers — 265 million of them.

There are numerous things to say against the Clinton plan. Not the least or lightest thing is that the plan is founded on hubris — that vast, overreaching pride to which the Greek tragedians attributed so many of life's woes and sorrows.

With no crisis at hand in health care, and guided only by his instincts, the president would have us junk our present medical system and embrace the one he advertises as the best thing since automatic transmission. The Clintons know because they know that their plan to rework one-seventh of the domestic economy, in a way never tried before by anyone, is sound, sensible, and, if you give it a chance, you'll love it.

Clinton aims medical plan at opera fat lady

And speaking of Clinton's health plan — we have a saying in Washington, "The opera isn't over until the fat lady sings." By coincidence, it is the fat lady that President Clinton's program is aimed at.

Buchwald

One of Clinton's spear carriers told me, "The President wants everyone, including the fat lady, to have decent health care at a price he or she can afford."

He held up a plastic health card that would guarantee equal treatment. "Let's say that the fat lady gets sick and can't appear in the second act. This card would permit her to go to any hospital in the area and receive treatment regardless of the kind of medical plan her opera company carries."

I asked, "Will the fat lady be required to fill out a 20-page health form?"

"No, under Clinton's plan she would only have to give her name and address and write 'Sick' in the middle of the one-page form. The fat lady could see any doctor she chooses and he would treat her at a very competitive price.

"Suppose her doctor tells her that she's overweight? Can she seek a second opinion from Weight Watchers?"

"Of course she can. She can even get a third one from Jenny Craig if she wants to. Another benefit is that if the fat lady is transferred to another opera company in the middle of her aria, she will still have health coverage."

"Can the fat lady charge her prescriptions under the Clinton plan?"

"Yes. But he's asking all fat people to take generic drugs wherever possible."

"I have a cousin who is not obese, but he is short. Will short people have the same benefits as fat singers?"

"The President says that he wants everyone to be protected. The only question is who would be treated first, the short person or the fat one?"

I asked the spear carrier, "What if a dentist wanted to take out my wisdom tooth at a price over and above the one indicated in the Blue Book — could I call Hillary Clinton for a waiver?"

"No," he replied. "But you can call Attorney General Janet Reno."

"I keep hearing the phrase 'top-of-the-line coverage.' What exactly does that mean?"

"You will be picked up by limousine and taken to your own private waiting room with a free bar. You would also be given hot towels before a light meal prepared by the HMO of your choice. If the doctor keeps you waiting for more than 10 minutes, he must turn over his Redskins tickets to you for the game of your choice."

"If we can keep the fat lady healthy, she will continue singing and be gainfully employed. We don't want to pay medical costs for an opera singer after her legs give out."

"Who is going to pay for all this?" I wanted to know.

He looked around to see if anyone was listening and whispered, "Luciano Pavarotti."

CHARLEY REESE

Nuclear weapons continue to haunt world

The subject no one likes to think about has been brushed aside completely in recent months by the current cliches about the Cold War being over and the nuclear threat with it.

Reese

In fact, of course, the great apparatus of nuclear warfare is still in place on both sides. Both sides still have nuclear-armed missiles aimed at each other. Both sides still have round-the-clock surveillance of the other. Both sides still have thousands and thousands of nuclear warheads and the means to deliver them.

What changed were politics. Most of the Russian elite, faced with a collapsing economy, abandoned — formally, anyway — their peculiar religious belief in socialism that had come to be called communism. Most of our elite, about half socialist themselves, have always thought making money was more important than making either love or war.

Nevertheless, just as confrontation had its dangers, disengagement is also a dangerous process. The key is in the morbid numbers of mutual deterrence.

As long as both sides have thousands of nuclear warheads, the probability that either could strike the other without suffering unacceptable damage was virtually zero. A sneak attack, even 80 percent effective, and that's optimistic, would still leave enough warheads to devastate the other side.

To make it simple, say each side has 10,000 warheads. Take out 80 percent in a sneak attack, and 2,000 thermonuclear warheads remain to create Hell on earth. But suppose you get down eventually to 1,000 warheads on each side. Then, in theory anyway, a winning strike becomes possible. Take out 80 percent of 1,000 and you only have 200 to deal with. Only 200, some of which would misfire and some of which would be neutralized by defensive systems, probably couldn't devastate the other side.

In this insane game of nuclear war planning, the threshold is not measured in lives or environmental damage, but in the minds of political leaders and how those minds define "unacceptable" damage.

I'm not suggesting that the Russians are planning a nuclear attack. I'm simply pointing out that the disarmament process now underway must be done carefully and rationally by both sides so that, during the process, no tempting imbalance is created on either side.

The changes in the former Soviet Union came swiftly, like a summer storm. The winds of change caught by surprise most of the West's politicians and their intelligence and analysis wizards as well as that lesser breed of pundits of which I am a reluctant member. All I'm saying now is that we should not forget that unexpected political winds can blow from any direction at any time. We were surprised by positive changes we didn't expect; we can be surprised by negative changes we don't expect, too.

Some Americans seem to have dismissed the notion that we should even care about what is going on in Russia. This is unwise. For years yet to come, whoever emerges on top of the political heap in Russia will command a nuclear force larger than ours, according to recent reports.

And if you think our politicians are nutty, you should look at some of those engaged in the political battles in Russia. One character, who got some six million votes in the last presidential election, openly advocates nuclear blackmail as the solution to Russia's economic ills.

Our influence as far as determining the political outcome is Russia is limited at best, but at least, we'd better try to make sure that our political hacks, incompetents, and demagogues don't make matters worse rather than better.

We have miles to go before the night of the nuclear threat ends.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Oct. 1, the 274th day of 1993. There are 91 days left in the year.

On Oct. 1, 1908, Henry Ford introduced the Model T automobile to the market; each car cost $825.

On this date:

In 1800, Spain ceded Louisiana to France in a secret treaty.

In 1885, special delivery mail service began in the United States.

In 1936, General Francisco Franco was proclaimed the head of an insurgent Spanish state.

KMID represents 'scary trend'

I disagree with KMID manager Steve Dant's decision to not air the new show "NYPD Blue." I believe he has robbed me of my right to decide for myself what I'll watch or not watch.

I may not have liked "NYPD Blue" or I may have found it to be too violent for my taste, but in that case I would have been able to exercise my right to use the on/off button that comes on every television set. There is a scary trend creeping into the lives of Americans that, if we are not careful, will change what we base our Constitution upon — freedom. That, to me, is more frightening than the issue of violence in television.

Let's debate new air terminal

I'm tired of being told that "no tax dollars would be funneled into the $29 million" new airport terminal (Midland Reporter-Telegram, Sept. 24, page 1). I guess we're supposed to believe the $29 million will come from Mars.

Sure, no sales or property taxes will be used. You won't pay a dime. . .unless you want to fly somewhere (or unless the airport's revenue doesn't cover its debt payments). To the tens of thousands of West Texans who use the airport each year, those "user fees" will look, smell, and taste just exactly like taxes.

After Congress allowed airports to tax passengers $1, $2, or $3 per trip for terminal improvements, our airport was one of the very first in the nation to start charging the maximum. This local tax would pay for nearly half of the new terminal, and most of the rest would come from the federal excise tax on tickets.

Maybe the new terminal is a good idea, but if so why did the city renovate the terminal, and build a massive parking garage only a few years ago? Now they want to tear down the parking garage and build a new one next door. Who was responsible for that bonehead decision?

Let's have a factual debate on the pros and cons of a new terminal. It will cost 29 million real dollars. Is it worth it?

Why serve trashy TV program?

Regarding the "censorship" cries concerning TV stations not offering "NYPD Blue" because of content, what is the fuss? We allow our restaurants to decide what is on the menu. They have standards. I haven't been to any that offer dishwater soup, three-bug salad or cow dung patties along with the other food.

Medical services censor the use of dirty, used needles and soiled tongue depressors.

If a TV program is trash, dirt or soil, why shouldn't the station decide they won't serve it?

Some things make our bodies sick. Some things harm our minds and spirit.

Denny beating case goes to mixed jury

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Reginald Denny beating case went to the jury Thursday, with lawyers for the two defendants describing them as scapegoats and the prosecution calling them vicious thugs.

The anonymous, racially mixed jury of 10 women and two men was sent home at midafternoon and was to return this morning to begin deliberating the fate of Damian Williams and Henry Watson.

Both men are accused of attempted murder and other felonies as the 1992 Los Angeles riots broke out after four white police officers were acquitted in the videotaped beating of black motorist Rodney King.

As Williams left the courtroom for jail, he blew a kiss to family members and supporters in the spectator section. They applauded, and one woman said, "Right on, brother."

Deputy District Attorney Janet Moore delivered a scathing final rebuttal, accusing the defense of resorting to deception in saying videos of the beating of the trucker portrayed someone else besides Williams and Watson.

"Do not decide this case on trickery," Moore told the jury. "Decide this case on truth."

Moore flatly stated that Williams was the man seen on video hurling a brick at Denny's head. Williams' lawyer, Edi Faal, had contended that that wasn't proven beyond a reasonable doubt.

Moore also rejected a contention by Faal that people at the scene of the beating were caught up in a mob mentality and acting irrationally because of the acquittal in the Rodney King case.

"Damian Williams wanted to take Reginald Denny out, to bash in his brains," Moore said. "Damian Williams took his time, had his objective, took his turn in line, weighed the pros and cons of what he was going to do, and could not wait to do it."

Faal had argued that the emotional climate on the streets was so volatile after the acquittals in the King beating that no one could rationally plan and attempt a murder.

Judge strengthens ruling on military gays

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A federal judge Thursday strengthened his earlier ruling that the Pentagon's ban on homosexuals is unconstitutional. He specified that the military cannot discharge or alter the status of service members because of their sexual orientation.

U.S. District Judge Terry Hatter Jr. also warned that if the Defense Department is found to be in contempt of his order "there will be substantial sanctions," including monetary penalties "at a minimum of $10,000 per day."

Attorneys for Navy Petty Officer Keith Meinhold have asked that the Defense Department be held in contempt of Hatter's November 1992 ruling that Pentagon policy calling for the discharge of homosexuals was unconstitutional.

In that ruling, Hatter also ordered reinstatement of Meinhold, 31, who was discharged last year after acknowledging on national television that he is homosexual.

Hatter said Thursday he wanted to amend the January ruling "so perhaps the military is more clear of what is intended by this court."

A jubilant Meinhold said the order would allow him to return to his job as a sonar instructor at Moffett Field Naval Air Station without fear of persecution or reprimand.

"The Navy and the rest of the Department of Defense can go back to its job of defending the Constitution and the nation. No longer will the Defense Department have to fight any of its citizens including gays and lesbians," Meinhold said.

Hemophiliacs sue drug firms over HIV claim

CHICAGO (AP) — Hemophiliacs sued five medical companies and the National Hemophilia Foundation on Thursday on behalf of thousands they said were infected with the AIDS virus because of HIV-tainted blood-clotting products.

The class-action lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court accuses the companies and the not-for-profit foundation of providing or endorsing the products' use even after the defendants should have known they were tainted.

"It's the largest scandal in the United States' medical history," said Corey Dubin of Goleta, Calif., one of those suing.

Baxter Healthcare Corp., one of the defendants, countered: "The allegation is absurd."

The lawsuit contends the National Hemophilia Foundation continued in the 1980s to advise hemophiliacs it was safe to use the products "in order to preserve its relationship with the manufacturers." The foundation was financially dependent on those manufacturers, the lawsuit says.

A telephone message left with the foundation's New York office after business hours wasn't returned.

Chicago attorney Leonard Ring, representing the plaintiffs, said the exact number of hemophiliacs who used the tainted products isn't known but is in the thousands. "It may reach as much as 10,000," he said.

Echoing an allegation in the lawsuit, HIV-infected hemophiliac Jonathan Wadleigh of Brookline, Mass., said the manufacturers "chose for profit, for the purpose of selling off their existing inventories," to sell these products.

Veterans' leader asks for Brown's resignation now

WASHINGTON (AP) — Public criticism of Commerce Secretary Ron Brown mounted Thursday as the head of a group representing 350,000 Vietnam veterans called for his resignation and Republican lawmakers met on Capitol Hill to discuss the case.

"We no longer have confidence in Mr. Brown," J. Thomas Burch, chairman of the National Vietnam Veterans Coalition, told reporters. "The Vietnam veterans of this country call for his resignation."

The lawmakers emerged with a letter to President Clinton asking him to halt normalization of U.S. relations with Vietnam while the FBI and a federal grand jury in Miami investigate claims that Brown accepted $700,000 to help lift the U.S. trade embargo against Vietnam.

Attorney General Janet Reno said she has no plans to appoint a special prosecutor to probe the allegations because it might appear she has a conflict of interest.

At the White House, communications director Mark Gearan said Clinton would not take steps to have an independent counsel look into Brown's case.

"The president is comfortable with where things stand now both in terms of the investigation that is ongoing and Secretary Brown's commitment to comply," Gearan said. Clinton has expressed support in the past for the independent counsel statute.

Officials unveil legislation to shore up troubled pension plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration unveiled legislation Thursday designed to shore up financially troubled pension plans that threaten the retirement security of millions of workers and retirees.

"The financial security of thousands of Americans covered by single-employer pension plans is at risk because their pensions are underfunded," Labor Secretary Robert B. Reich told reporters.

An underfunded plan does not have the assets necessary to pay for its promised benefits.

Reich said the underfunding has grown from $27 billion in 1987 to an estimated $45 billion last year and "poses an unnecessary and unacceptable risk for workers and retirees."

The underfunding also jeopardizes the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp., the government insurer. It already faces a $2.7 billion deficit, which could grow with the failure of additional plans.

The proposal would double the insurance premium for the most troubled plans, which Reich said "would guarantee increased financing of underfunded pension plans" at the same time it reduces the PBGC deficit.

It also includes requirements for faster and more certain contributions to underfunded plans.

Despite the deficit, Reich and others maintained the agency is not near the kind of crisis that led to the savings and loan bailout.

"PBGC's responsibility for benefit payments under those plans is spread out over a number of years," Treasury Assistant Secretary Leslie B. Samuels told the news conference. "So we still have time to reverse the trend of ever-increasing deficits before the PBGC becomes a crisis."

Director Karen Ferguson of the Washington-based Pension Rights Center said the non-partisan consumer advocacy group was encouraged by the reassurance the PBGC was not on the brink of crisis.

"The big news is that there is no crisis, the sky is not falling," she said.

Clinton to meet Chinese leader in Seattle for talks

NEW YORK (AP) — President Clinton will meet in November in Seattle with Jiang Zemin, the president of China, in an effort to extricate relations between the two countries from "some rough waters," Secretary of State Warren Christopher said Thursday.

It will be the first visit to the United States by a Chinese leader since the crackdown on dissidents in Tiananmen Square in Beijing in 1989 sent relations between to the two countries on a downward spiral still marked by controversy over nuclear weapons testing.

Clinton will be in Seattle with Asian leaders attending a conference designed to foster economic development.

Christopher's announcement followed an assertion by Chinese Foreign Minister Qian Qichen that China would not be deterred from setting off underground nuclear weapons tests even while Clinton drives for a worldwide test ban.

"Nuclear testing will not constitute an obstacle to discussions" of a test ban treaty, Christopher said.

The secretary did not take the statement lightly. "We still entertain hope China will not resume testing," he said. But he said the United States would pursue the international agreement nonetheless.

In another development, Christopher said John Shattuck, the assistant secretary of state for human rights, would go to Beijing for talks Oct. 10-12.

Christopher, summing up his talks with Qian Qichen, said "the foreign minister felt our relations were in some rough waters, a judgment I concur in."

2 diet giants vow to battle allegations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three diet programs settled government charges of deceptive advertising Thursday, but the two giants of the weight loss industry said they will fight the allegations.

In its campaign against false weight loss claims, the Federal Trade Commission got signed agreements from Diet Center Inc., Physicians Weight Loss Centers, Inc., and Nutri-System, Inc.

"The guilty have signed," said Charles Berger, chairman of Weight Watchers International, one of the challengers. "And since Weight Watchers has never done anything wrong we will not sign a consent order."

The other holdout, Jenny Craig Inc. of Del Mar, Calif., issued a statement saying it is also is already in compliance with FTC requirements.

"We look forward to debating this issue in court," said Ronald Gerevas, president and chief executive of Jenny Craig.

The FTC alleged that each of the five companies failed to provide evidence in its ads to back up promises of dramatic weight loss or claims that customers would be able to keep weight off long-term.

Consumer testimonials and program comparisons have been misleading, pricing deceptive and rates of weight loss unmonitored, the commission said.

"The bottom line is that losing weight is hard work," Christian White of the FTC's bureau of consumer protection, said at a news conference.

The commission wants weight loss programs to make sure their promotions acknowledge that there is no easy fix, he said.

Weight Watchers officials, at a news conference immediately following the FTC announcements, vigorously objected to being grouped with the others.

It and Jenny Craig will battle the FTC before an administrative law judge, probably early next year.

The settlements between the FTC and the three other companies are not admissions of guilt, but rather agreements to avoid certain claims in advertising.

Diet Center, Inc., for example, said it voluntarily adopted new advertising standards during the course of the FTC's investigation.

Nutri-System Chairman and CEO Michael Heisley said his company signed the agreement to show consumers it is committed to ensuring accountability in the weight control industry.

Essentially, the two orders and three settlements require companies to tell the truth and have data to back up any claims.

Extraordinary diet success stories would have to be accompanied by a disclosure of average success rates or a statement that the experience is not typical, said White.

All five of the companies had asked the FTC to develop industry-wide standards directed specifically at the diet business. But the commission said traditional rules on truth in advertising have been used successfully for 70 years to root out false diet claims.

Gasoline tax increases today

■ As part of the deficit reduction package, motorists will be paying an extra 4.3 cents per gallon in federal taxes.

By Jesse Washington
Associated Press writer

The gasoline tax is going up, so Stan Raciborski's sign can come down.

For the past week, a sign outside his gas station in Norfolk, Va., has read "Deficit Reduction Starts Here on Oct. 1." It was a warning to his customers that today they would be paying an extra 4.3 cents per gallon in federal taxes.

"I don't have any choice, and the normal motorist doesn't have any choice," Raciborski said Thursday. "It's kind of a shoved-up-your-throat tax."

The increase, which also covers diesel fuel, raises the federal gas tax to 18.3 cents per gallon. It is expected to raise $23 billion over five years as part of President Clinton's five-year, $496 billion deficit reduction package.

"I'll gladly pay it. It'll reduce the debt, won't it?" asked Simon Ulcickas, as he stopped at a highway rest area near Albany, N.Y. "If it's too much for you, you probably shouldn't use a car anyway."

Others believe the new tax will affect the deficit about as much as a glass of water in Lake Michigan.

"If they cut spending, they wouldn't need it," said Don Cochran, an independent trucker from Largo, Fla. "I don't believe the fuel tax is going to cut the deficit. They'll just find somplace else to hide it."

"To one person two to three dollars may not seem like a lot but when you're barely making ends meet, it may be the difference between a loaf of bread and milk in the house," said Ellen Bonnet of Martinsburg, W.Va., as she filled her car up Thursday.

On Sept. 24, the average price at self-serve and full-serve pumps — including all grades and taxes — was $1.1321 per gallon, according to the Lundberg Survey of 10,000 gas stations nationwide.

Today also is the second annual implementation date for the federal oxygenated fuel program, which requires about 40 metropolitan areas nationwide to use the clean-burning fuel to help clean the air. Oxygenated fuel costs a few cents more per gallon than regular gas.

The blow to consumer pockets only starts at the pump. The prices of food, retail goods and hundreds of other commodities that are shipped by truck will probably rise as well.

"If fuel prices go up, you've got to charge more for everything because it costs more to get it there," said Mark Hollowell as he filled the twin 100-gallon tanks

Alexis Dunham, 8, admires Pancho the horse as "Cowboy Sam," also known as S.F. Flores, explains about the western heritage of West Texas to third-graders at Santa Rita Elementary School Thursday afternoon.

Students hear Cowboy Sam's Old West tales

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

Sitting tall in the saddle, "Cowboy Sam" rode into Santa Rita along with the horse he just rustled before he jumped off the back of Pancho and related his experiences of the Old West to about 100 wide-eyed young'uns.

No, this is not a scene from an old western movie, but an on-campus field trip for the Santa Rita Elementary School third-graders Thursday afternoon.

"Cowboy Sam" — whose alias is S.F. Flores — rode his horse, Pancho, and brought along another horse, Bullet, to tell the students all about life on a ranch to coincide with the children's social studies lessons on frontier life.

Flores, decked in his old straw cowboy hat and worn-out blue jeans complete with a bandana in the back pocket, strolled before the students with the spurs on his well-worn cowboy boots jingling as he walked.

The rancher explained to the youngsters about horses, while answering their questions.

Flores showed them how to approach a horse without scaring him. One anx-

Czech: Department to get favorable recommendation

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Although the Midland Police Department will have to wait until November for official word, it looks like the four years of work toward accreditation will have paid off for the department.

Midland Police Chief Richard Czech said the department will be given a favorable recommendation by the Commission for Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies (CALEA) assessment team to the commission at its Nov. 20 meeting.

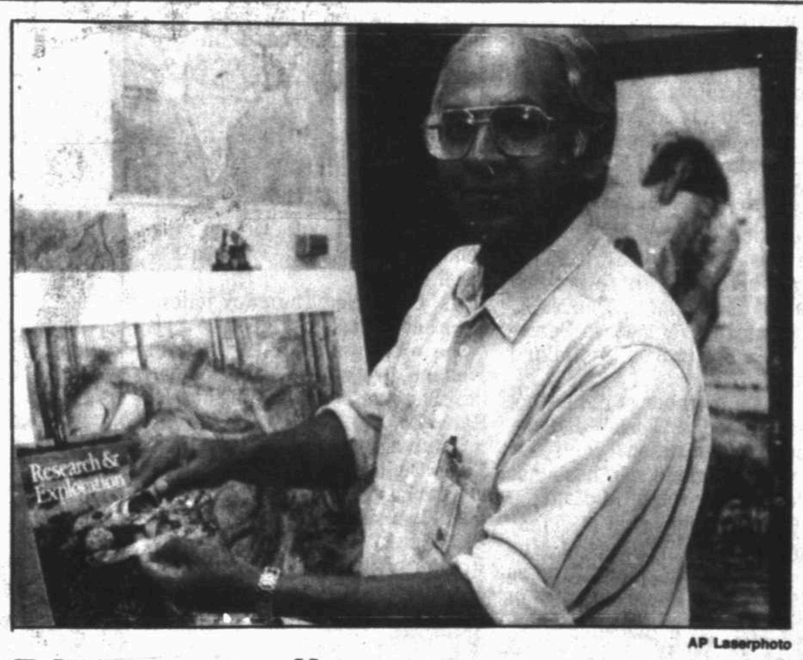

"Late last night (Wednesday), the team stated that the department would be given the recommendation for accreditation," Czech said. "Although it still must go through the commission, it is really just a formality. We expect to be fully accredited."

The accreditation will put the Midland department in the law enforcement elite nationwide. Of the 38,000 departments across the nation, only about 270 are accredited through CALEA.

"This is great accomplishment for the department, one of the best things to happen at this police department," Czech said. "The team leader said that this is one of the finest police departments he had assessed. I have always said that the department is one of the finest in the nation. The city and its citizens can be proud of their police department."

The three-member assessment team included team leader Police Chief Thomas J. Sexton of Mount Pleasant, N.C.; accreditation manager Lt. Casey S. Swope of Newport News, Va.; and Lt. Jimmy W. Soblotne of Kokomo, Ind. Each of the officers' police depart-

Personnel changes at MPD open 8 positions to civilians

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Although the civilianization of eight Midland Police Department positions will require a change in personnel and training and has already generated a lawsuit, the police chief believes the changes will not adversely affect the department.

"We won't miss a stroke," Police Chief Richard Czech said. "It is a good business practice that will save the taxpayers money and enhance the department."

The changes, which go into effect today, will put four civilians at the department's front desk and one in crime analysis. Other civilianized positions will be the property supervisor, the physical fitness coordinator and a property and evidence clerk.

"We did a study of every position in the department and determined if it needed a sworn peace officer," Czech said. "A peace officer has to have law enforcement and driving training, know how to use firearms and be able to make arrests. We decided that if a certain position did not need those abilities, that a civilian should be put in that position."

The chief said the department has slowly been civilianizing jobs over the past four years, but this is the largest number of jobs to change over at one time.

"A presidential commission came out and said that all departments should begin this process for jobs that didn't need officers," he said. "Departments nationwide have probably been civilianizing for the past 25 years. We are just really trying to increase professionalism and these officers can't be professionals if they are stuck at a desk."

Although a few more positions at the department are going to be looked at and possibly civilianized, Czech said today's changeover will be the last major civilianzation at the department.

The eight positions that were civilianized sparked a lawsuit by a group of 15 named officers and other "John Does" earlier this month. The lawsuit claimed that putting civilians in those eight positions will circumvent the federal American Disabilities Act and the officers would lose their jobs, their law-enforcement certification and the opportunity

Officials to present kickoff rally for Midland Night Out program

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Midland residents can learn more about crime prevention Saturday during the Midland Night Out Kickoff Rally, which is designed to promote the Midland Night Out next week.

"It is basically a big media event to get people out and informed about Neighborhood Watch and Crime Prevention month," said Debra Atwell, president of the Midland Crime Commission.

The event, sponsored by the Midland Police Department, the Midland County Sheriff's Department, the Midland Crime Commission and the Midland Park Mall, is to begin at 10 a.m. at the southwest corner of the Midland Park Mall parking lot, near J.C. Penney, and conclude at 3 p.m.

Included in the day's events will be a demonstration by the Midland County Sheriff's office helicopter at 10 a.m., a Midland Police Department canine unit demonstration at 11 a.m., a S.W.A.T. team demonstration at 1 p.m., and another canine demonstration at 2 p.m.

The Confederate Air Force Sky Divers are to perform at noon, weather permitting.

The Police Department, the Sheriff's Department and the Midland Fire Department will all have various law enforcement and fire trucks on display throughout the day. Canine officers, the Police Department Bike Patrol, McGruff the Crime Dog, the D.A.R.E. Bear, Sgt. McCrime and Trooper Bud will all make appearances during the rally.

In addition to demonstrations and booths by law enforcement agencies, booths are to be set up by the Allison Cancer Center, the American Cancer ious little girl walked toward Pancho with her hand extended, but the cowboy told her to put her hand down while she moved toward the animal.

WEST: Students learn of cowboy's frontier life

He explained that the horse becomes frightened when someone approaches with a hand up; instead he instructed her to walk to the animal and then stroke it from the side.

He also told the students how to put a saddle on a horse, explaining that horses aren't particularly fond of the idea but grow accustomed to it. He said it takes time to train a horse for riding.

One of the school marms asked Flores if his horse ever "pushed its stomach out" so he couldn't tighten the saddle.

"Why, yeah. It's called swelling. They swell up ... so you don't want to put the saddle on too tight," he said. "You gotta treat them kind of like you want to be treated yourself. They're sensitive animals."

Flores also showed the shoes on the horse — much to the amazement of the children — and told how they are put on to protect the horse's hooves. He said the shoes are made out of cold rolled steel, which is molded without heat, and then nailed into the animal's hooves.

One of the children asked him how the horse's teeth indicate the animal's age and he replied that horses are born with a set of teeth that they will lose and then replace with a certain number of teeth each year.

As he tried to open Pancho's mouth to show his teeth, the horse whinnied and wiggled his nose, much to the delight of the children, who began giggling.

The students crowded around Pancho and Bullet, offering fresh grass for the horses and petting, patting and stroking the horses' heads. The teachers stepped in to scoot the overzealous horse lovers back and made them stand in line for a chance to pet the horses.

The presentation moved from the horses to the accessories of a cowboy, including his lasso and his leggings or chaps.

The lasso is used to rope cattle, but because there were no cattle in sight, no demonstration could be done. However, a couple of overanxious youngsters were quick to volunteer. Flores said the chaps were used by cowboys to protect their legs from the brush in rough terrain.

After almost an hour of getting a feel for the pioneers of West Texas, the students returned to their studies back inside the classroom. Flores received a couple of hugs and thank-yous from the students before heading for home.

A true cowboy in every way, as Cowboy Sam mounted his horse he tipped his hat to the women-folk and rode off into the nearby field heading for his stables to corral his horses and head for his homestead.

RALLY: Agencies sponsor Midland Night Out

Society, Blockbuster, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, Casa de Amigos, Midland Park Mall, Midland Rape Crisis Center, Mothers Against Drunk Driving (M.A.D.D.), Muscular Dystrophy Association, 911, Permian Basin Regional Blood Center and radio station KCHX.

This is the second year the Police Department has sponsored a kick-off rally for Midland Night Out. Last year's rally was conducted in conjunction with a Midland Angels baseball game.

The Midland Night Out is Tuesday, almost two months after the National Night Out, which was held in August. Ms. Atwell said the Midland event is held later so its is in conjunction with National Crime Prevention Month.

Midland police Officer Phyllis Blair said that more than 100 Neighborhood Watch Groups are currently operating in Midland, about three times what it was last year.

"The Neighborhood Watch is really just a network system you set up with your neighbors," she said. "You become the eyes and and ears for your neighbors."

City residents interested in starting a Neighborhood Watch Program may contact Officer Phyllis Blair at 685-7131. For residents in Midland County, contact Sgt. Pat Bostick at 688-1015.

ments is similar in size to the Midland department.

The three arrived at the department Sunday and toured the entire police facility. The team, which left Thursday, spent the rest of the week talking to and riding with officers, questioning personnel and going through every file on hand at the department.

Czech said the team was impressed with the department's dispatch and communications center and would present it as one of the department's exemplary areas.

Other areas that will receive exemplary mention are the Citizen's Police Academy, the Invest in a Vest Program, the training of the communication's staff and the department's relationship with local media.

The team also heard public views on the department during a forum conducted Monday at City Council chambers.

The department began working on the accreditation process in October 1989 and had to comply with 897 standards in order to become accredited.

In addition to ranking the Midland department with the nation's best law enforcement agencies, accreditation will also will set guidelines for fair promotional possibilities for officers and fair disciplinary procedures. The requirements also outline active community involvement by the department, which is already being practiced in the department's Problem-Oriented Policing (POP) practices.

In July, Texas Accreditation officials assessed the department's progress and offered comments and suggestions for changes that would improve the department's chances of becoming accredited.

Dimension Cable to broadcast Habitat for Humanity program

Staff report

A television program highlighting the work of Habitat for Humanity is to air from 3-4 p.m. Sunday on Dimension Cable Channel 40 and will feature celebrity appearances by Habitat supporters Paul Newman, Bill Cosby and Willie Nelson, according to the Midland director of the organization.

Ted Miller, director of the Midland Habitat for Humanity said the show — "Habitat Housewarming '93," hosted by CNN's Judy Woodruff — will also include documentary footage and an interview with Habitat's most famous volunteer, former President Jimmy Carter.

Habitat for Humanity is a nonprofit, ecumenical Christian housing organization. It works in partnership with people in need throughout the world building simple, decent housing that is sold to them through no-interest loans.

Midland's Habitat was established two years and has completed three houses this year alone. The Midland Habitat for Humanity is an affiliate of Habitat for Humanity International, which was founded in 1976.

"Housewarming '93" will include homeowners and volunteers sharing their stories of how Habitat changed their lives.

for advancement in their police careers. The lawsuit sought to stop the civilianization of the jobs today.

On Wednesday, the city of Midland responded that 13 of the 15 plaintiffs can continue to be police officers, but two others are physically unable to be officers.

Czech did not comment on the lawsuit, saying only that the civilianization "was a good business practice and I think the courts will uphold that."

The changeover is in conjunction with internal transferring and promotions that occur on a regular basis at the department. Thirteen sergeants, lieutenants, corporals and officers will be transferring to different bureaus within the department.

Sgt. Dusty Land will be promoted to the rank of lieutenant in the Field Operations Bureau.

TAX: Gas prices to increase

on his 18-wheeler off I-95 in Falmouth, Va.

And what about gas stations, where a penny per gallon often is the difference between a fill-up and a drive-by?

"I'm just an unpaid tax collector," said Raciborski, the Norfolk station owner, who sells about 7 million gallons a year. "And in my opinion, I don't think this nickel will amount to a hill of beans."

Former cult leader escapes from Big Spring State Hospital

BIG SPRING (AP) — George Roden, the former leader of the Branch Davidian cult, has walked away from the Big Spring State Hospital, police said Thursday.

Police Sgt. Scott Griffin said Roden left the compound Monday morning. While he didn't characterize the search as a manhunt, Griffin did say the Odessa Police Department and Texas Rangers were assisting.

Roden was charged in 1989 with the murder of a 56-year-old Odessa man. The following year, he was found not guilty by reason of insanity and sent to a state mental hospital.

Roden had a shoot-out with David Koresh in 1987 over leadership of the cult. The 77 acres where the compound was built belonged to Roden's mother, whose will named Koresh as trustee of the property.

Koresh had become president of the Branch Davidians in 1984 among unsubstantiated allegations that he, at age 26, raped and impregnated Roden's 67-year-old mother.

Odessa Detective Sgt. Snow Robertson said he believes a number of West Texas law enforcement agencies had been notified about Roden's disappearance and possibly every agency in the state.

During the siege by federal agents surrounding Mount Carmel, Roden said of Koresh: "He's no Jesus Christ any more than Satan is."

Roden also referred to Koresh as a deluded rapist, arsonist and embezzler.

The roots of the Branch Davidians date back to 1934, when a disgruntled Seventh-day Adventist split with the church over interpretations of biblical teachings. Dissidence and even violence have continued in the group over the years.

Roden's father, Ben Roden, formed the Branch Davidians in 1959 when the new kingdom failed to materialize as predicted by Florence Houteff, leader of the Davidian Seventh-Day Adventists. She believed the restoration of David's kingdom in Palestine was imminent.

When Ben Roden died in 1978, his wife, Lois, took over leadership. She led the Davidians until another split in 1984, when members were torn between Lois Roden's son, George, and an up-and-coming leader, Vernon Howell, who later changed his name to David Koresh.

Koresh later took most of the members with him. Continued rivalry between the two men led to violence, including a 1987 gun battle at the group's compound that led to attempted murder charges against Koresh and seven others. The seven others were acquitted, and a mistrial was declared in the case of Koresh.

Charges against him were later dismissed.

Roden is described as a white male, 60 years old, 235 pounds, with heavy build, salt and pepper hair and brown eyes.

Odessa Detective Sgt. Snow Robertson said he believes a number of West Texas law enforcement agencies had been notified about Roden's disappearance and possibly every agency in the state.

"I've checked locations where he frequented before the murder charge," Robertson told the Odessa American. "We don't have any information that would lead us to believe he's in the area."

"Roden is a dangerous person. He's killed once and was in a firefight at Mount Carmel. He is dangerous and people should report if they see anyone with his description," Robertson said.

Waco residents express mixed views

WACO (AP) — The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms has lost the support of some Waco residents in the wake of a review that showed some agency leaders lied and falsified records following the tragic raid on the Branch Davidian compound.

The review leveled several sharp criticisms against the ATF for failing to follow its own raid strategy and then attempting to rewrite its plan after the fact to cover up deficiencies.

"This town threw its support behind the ATF," said Brad Frost, a 24-year-old Baylor student. "I think this will change that quite a bit. The ATF made mistakes that cost those agents their lives and then lied to cover it up. It makes you wonder who you can trust, if you can't trust the people trying to protect you."

Thursday, Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen replaced the head of the ATF and suspended the agency's top five officers.

Four ATF agents and six Branch Davidians were killed Feb. 28 in a raid that began one of the worst episodes in U.S. law enforcement history.

After a seven-week standoff with federal agents, cult leader David Koresh and as many as 85 religious followers died April 19 in a fire after the FBI shot tear gas into the compound in a final assault.

Several Waco area residents who wholeheartedly supported the ATF through its botched attempt to arrest Koresh on illegal weapons charges said they feel betrayed.

Other residents defended the bulk of ATF agents who participated in the raid, but criticized those who were reprimanded in the review for continuing on with a plan to storm Koresh's compound with 100 agents despite knowing the element of surprise had been lost.

Dorene Adams, who has lived in Waco for more than 60 years, said she continues to stand by the ATF, saying its agents were the victims of an unpredictable and dangerous man.

"They did the best job they could considering the circumstances they had," Ms. Adams said. "You can't expect people not to make mistakes in a highly volatile situation like that."

John Hatchel, assistant city manager in Waco, said all the agents can't be blamed for the actions of a few.

"The fact that members of the public sector tried to cover up their mistakes is disturbing," Hatchel said. "But there were a lot of agents here doing what they were supposed to do. Those agents are good friends of this city."

Attorneys for the 11 Branch Davidians charged with murdering four ATF agents said the review may help their case and seriously cripple the government's view that only the cult members were to blame for the tragedy.

"We hope the public's view of what has gone on will change to our benefit," said Douglas Tinker, who is representing Branch Davidian member Brad Branch.

"We are always leery of law enforcement in these situations," Tinker added. "They are constantly doing this kind of thing, and if they get caught fabricating evidence or falsifying records, they should be indicted or arrested."

Attorney Joe Turner, who is representing Davidian member Ruth Ottman Riddle, said, "It's been our position all along that the ATF was not without blame in this, and now we have their own people saying it."

Meanwhile several Branch Davidians said Thursday they feel God is vindicating Koresh.

"If God was trying to show people that David Koresh was a bad person, as many have said, then why is the ATF and FBI in trouble?" asked Sheila Martin.

Local/Area Reports

Suspects sought

Midland police are searching for two suspects in a robbery that occurred at the Midland Park Mall parking lot late Wednesday.

Maxcine Roweh, 70, was walking to her car at about 11:45 p.m. when a male approached her, knocked her and down and fled with her purse to a waiting vehicle, according to the police report.

Ms. Roweh was treated and released from Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, according to the report.

The first subject is described as a black male, 16-19 years of age, 5-feet, 10-inches to 6-feet tall, with a medium build. The driver of the vehicle is described as a Hispanic male, 16-19 years of age.

Aggravated robbery

BIG SPRING — Big Spring police are investigating an aggravated robbery that occurred Wednesday evening.

Officers were dispatched to the 1900 block of South Goliad Street at approximately 8:42 p.m. Wednesday, according to a police report. A couple in their mid-60s was at home when an Hispanic male entered their residence, according to the report. He displayed a handgun and fired one round while inside the house and then demanded money, police said.

A female fled the scene and called 911 from a neighbor's house. The subject left with a purse and other unknown property. No one was injured during the robbery, police said.

The subject is described as a Hispanic male, 5-feet, 5-inches tall, 120 pounds, with a medium complexion and a mustache, according to the report.

Student indicted on capital murder decides against going to school

AUSTIN (AP) — A teen-ager indicted on a capital murder charge in connection with the slaying of a motorist has decided against returning to classes at his high school, his attorney said Thursday.

Earlier, Patrick Greg Chatham, 18, who is out on bail, was planning to go back to Bowie High School while awaiting trial. School officials said they had to allow him in.

But on Thursday, Chatham's attorney, Raymond Espersen, said Chatham would not be returning.

"I feel that there is too much possibility of it being disruptive for him and other students," said Espersen.

Chatham was released from jail Aug. 12 when his parents posted $10,000 cash bond on a $100,000 bail, according to Travis County jail records.

He and two other teen-agers are charged in the July 10 attempted robbery and slaying of 31-year-old Mark Long, who was killed when he apparently came upon roadblocks in northeast Austin. Two juveniles also were arrested in the case.

Nearly a week after Chatham's release, he enrolled in the Rio Grande School for students with emotional problems. An Austin Independent School District committee met Monday to decide whether Chatham should return to Bowie High School.

Interim AISD Superintendent Terry Bishop said that Chatham, a 10th-grader, was going to return to Bowie High School next Wednesday.

"He wanted to come back to his school," Bishop said. "What our lawyers are telling us is he has the right to do that. He hasn't been convicted."

But Espersen said Chatham may instead take correspondence courses until his case is resolved.

The earlier decision to allow Chatham back in Bowie had prompted mixed reactions.

James Cavallaro, an English teacher, said: "It's a scandal. I really don't think him coming back is healthy for everybody involved. When I first read about it in the school newspaper, I was absolutely shocked and appalled."

But Fulmore Middle School Principal Vicki Baldwin, who is also a member of the Texas Juvenile Probation Commission, said Chatham's rights must be considered.

"If you believe in the civil rights of an individual, you have to believe they are innocent until proven guilty," she said.

A grand jury indicted Chatham, Ramont Taylor, 18, and Duane Johnson, 17, Sept. 1 on capital murder charges, according to the Travis County district attorney's office. Chatham is the only one of the three who has been released from jail, according to Travis County records.

Chatham has a previous arrest for resisting arrest. He pleaded no contest and was given probation and community service.

State District Judge Bob Perkins said he agreed to accept 10 percent of $100,000 bail for Chatham's release because an affidavit charging him with the crime stated that Chatham was not present during Long's death.

Professor's son finds ostrich fossil

LUBBOCK (AP) — A paleontologist and his young son have found the remains of a toothless theropod believed to be the world's oldest known ostrich dinosaur.

Sankar Chatterjee, a geosciences professor at Texas Tech University, named the dinosaur "Shuvosaurus inexpectatus," after Shuvo Chatterjee, 10.

The fossil came from red mudstone near Post, about 35 miles southeast of Lubbock.

"This is a fantastic site in Post; we have found so many things there. This dinosaur is a very, very exciting discovery," Chatterjee said, crediting his son with uncovering the bones and skull in 1989 from a plaster block.

"He was with me one day at work, and he kept asking if he could help," Chatterjee said. "I just said no."

But the boy tinkered with the plaster block anyway.

"He told me he was sure he had found something — maybe a dinosaur," Chatterjee said. "He kept begging me to take a look, and when I did, sure enough, there it was."

The skull shows typical features of ostrich dinosaurs, such as toothless jaws and enormous eye sockets.

The seed-eating, nut-cracking theropod is thought to have lived 225 million years ago, which would predate the previously earliest-known ostrich dinosaur by 140 million years.

Bergstrom, Carswell air bases close

AUSTIN (AP) — Bergstrom Air Force Base, which opened early in World War II and later served as "the president's airfield" for Lyndon B. Johnson, became a piece of history Thursday.

In a late afternoon ceremony, the air base southeast of Austin was transferred to the city, which plans to convert it to a new civilian airport.

Bergstrom was among those the U.S. Defense Department in 1990 placed on a list of 75 facilities to be shut down as the military scaled back for the post-Cold War era.

With the last 150 active duty personnel leaving the base, the only military activity remaining will be the 924th Fighter Group reserve unit. The base motel and gymnasium are to remain open for their use.

"Throughout the past 50 years, the men and women of Bergstrom, both active duty and reserve, have responded when the nation called," Col. Richard J. Eustace, the 924th's commander, said in an Austin American-Statesman column published Thursday.

"From the last days of World War II to the first major U.S. involvement in Korea, through the Cold War to Desert Storm, Bergstrom airmen had never hesitated to be ready," Eustace said.

In 1942, the City of Austin purchased 3,000 acres and turned control of it over to the federal government. Del Valle Army Air Field was opened in September.

In March 1943, at the urging of then-Congressman Johnson, the base was renamed for Travis County's first World War II casualty, Capt. Earl Bergstrom, who was killed Dec. 8, 1941, in a Japanese air attack on Clark Field in the Philippines.

In the 1960s, during Johnson's presidency, Air Force One frequently brought him to Bergstrom, en route to the LBJ Ranch in the Hill Country west of Austin.

Few military bases had such powerful political guardians over the years.

"It was the president's airfield," recalled U.S. Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle, D-Austin, who often hitched rides home with Johnson.

"It's just like when one of the men said, 'Mr. President, which one of these is your plane, which one are you going to ride on?' And that's when he said, 'Son, they're all my planes'."

The president's frequent use of Bergstrom could cause the base commanders headaches, Pickle said. But it also "gave them considerable excitement because, militarily speaking, the nerve pulse of the nation settled on Bergstrom.

Man gets 30 years for child molestations

DALLAS (AP) — The father of an Irving minister has been sentenced to 30 years in prison for molesting several children at a day-care center affiliated with his son's church.

Billy Dean McKissick, 60, who had faced a possible life sentence, must serve at least 7 years before he is eligible for parole, a judge ruled Wednesday.

McKissick pleaded guilty Monday to six counts of indecency with a child and one charge of aggravated sexual contact with a child.

"I'm proud that the judge decided to do something to get these people off the streets," the father of one victim said. "I feel that justice was served today."

The molestations occurred last fall at the Skybow Day Care center, which is now closed. The center was connected with First Assembly of God Church, where McKissick's son, Bill McKissick Jr., was an assistant pastor.

The victims were boys and girls between 3 and 8 years old. McKissick said he had become sexually aroused while playing with the children at the center.

FAMILY MATTERS

'Friendship' comes between husband, wife

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: My husband has this "friend" who he has had ever since they started to work at (company) together out of college. When I met my husband, they had already been "two wild and crazy guys" for several years. At first I did like Larry (not his real name), and until we started having children, I didn't really have too many problems with him. I did sometimes resent that my husband would still go out drinking with him on most Thursday nights, but a lot of the men from their office went too.

May

When Larry got married, I thought that things would bet better, and they did for a while. But when Larry and his wife stated having problems, then my husband had to spend hours "helping" Larry deal with the problems. They finally got a divorce. By then we had one child and another on the way. My husband kept insisting that Larry "needed him" to get through the divorce. I'm sure that my husband did help Larry, but what about me and the family?

Then Larry got transferred to (another city) and I was so happy! I just knew that this would take care of the problem, and it did for a while. Then before I knew it they started arranging football games and deer hunting. I just found out that they have leased a place to go hunt together without him telling me! I couldn't stop the sacred Cowboys trips so I didn't even try, but I think the hunting lease is too much.

When I confronted him with the deer lease, he said that he didn't tell me because I "hated Larry" and that I was jealous because I didn't have a good friend like he has. I have lots of friends plus two children to raise without his help, "Thank you very much!" We are barely speaking now and deer season isn't even here yet. I don't want things to be like this, but I am mad. Why should he spend all that time with Larry and barely spend any time at all with me or his two daughters? I just want to know how I'm supposed to feel when he would rather be with Larry than me? NOT INCLUDED

DEAR NOT: Not being included in an important part of your mate's life is very painful. The main issue seems not to be how he spends his time, but that you two have not been able to reach an agreement on the subject. Communications may have broken down completely, since he is making arrangements without your knowledge and is unwilling to discuss the decision with you.

First, write how you feel about his relationship with Larry. This writing — which is not to be shared with your husband — is to help you express your real feelings. You make good points about the time spent away from the family, but first address your own issues about the relationship. After you have written — and you will know when to stop — review these writings.

After you can name your feelings other than anger, write out what actions you could take, and what actions you think your husband might take, to help soothe your feelings. Review and revise these suggestions, and then make an appointment to discuss this matter with your husband. Try to keep the discussion in a positive problem solving mode — use "I" messages, be specific, stick to the one topic, express your wants directly and openly, and ask for his feedback. Try to agree on a specific course of action and implement that course. If it works, stick with it; if it does not, meet again to modify the course together.

THE CENTERS FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES OFFER THE FOLLOWING OBSERVATION ON DISCIPLINING ADOLESCENTS:

Helping adolescents learn to do the right thing is not a pleasant experience for many families. Commands, excessive control, harsh verbal and physical punishments, threats and other types of negative and abusive strategies rarely get the desired results.

- Harsh and abusive interactions only encourage the adolescent to be defensive and to respond with hostility.
- Adolescents who do not have any say in managing and being responsible for their own behavior usually engage in conflict and rebel against their parents because they feel they are being treated like children.

DEAR ABBY

Colors omitted from shower invitations

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My sister is getting married. She lives in Pennsylvania and I live in California. Because of the distance, I agreed to work on the shower invitations while the other bridesmaids planned the rest of the shower. The invitations went out a few days ago.

Van Buren

When my sister saw that I didn't put her "colors" or where she was registered on the invitations, she freaked! (I forgot.) She decided to correct the mistake by mailing out additional postcards saying, "Oops, we forgot: 'Beth' is registered at ( ) and her colors are ( )."

I told her I thought the idea was tacky and that when people called to RSVP, we could mention where she was registered if they needed a gift idea. She wouldn't hear of it. So then I told her if she did mail out the postcards, I didn't want my name on them. Well, she hasn't talked to me since.

What do you think? I think it gives the impression that she's only out for the gifts. If you publish this letter, please do not use my name or where I live. My family already thinks I am overreacting. I look forward to your response. — LONG-DISTANCE BRIDESMAID

DEAR BRIDESMAID: I don't blame your sister for being miffed. According to custom, the shower hostess provides the guests with necessary information about the bride's preference in colors, patterns, etc. — as well as the names of the stores at which the bride is registered.

Since you erred and omitted them for the invitation, it was your responsibility to rectify the mistake with a short note of apology to the guests.

DEAR ABBY: I was a minister, calling on the sick in the hospital. I noticed a lady at the bedside of her husband who was very ill. She asked me to pray for him, which I did, but he died anyway. She had outlived two companions; I outlived one.

I thought such a faithful companion who was constantly at the bedside of her husband would make a fine wife, so I called her on the telephone and asked her if I could call on her. She was very receptive and forthright and revealed to me that she had prayed thus:

"Lord, if you would have me marry again, send me a good Christian man — preferably Brother Brown."

The Lord heard her prayers and we were married two weeks later in the church. We have had 13 happy years together. I am 81 and she is 83. — MR. AND MRS. ARVIL CLINTON BROWN, A SMALL TOWN IN MICHIGAN

DEAR ABBY: I just read about "Unhappy," who complained because her husband gave her another unsigned birthday card in a paper sack.

I have to tell you about one of my favorite birthdays (which is right after Christmas). We were visiting our daughter's home in another state. My husband and I went shopping together and bought something I wanted, then went to a card rack for my card. He picked out a very special one, put his arm around me and read it to me. We admired it, joked about the sentimental message and hugged each other; then, since we didn't need the card any longer, put it back in the rack and left the store laughing about our "economy card."

Who needs a signature! It was a special memory for both of us. — DORIS FREVERT, ORANGE, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Going about the daily routine in this '90s "me" generation, I've observed that too many of us have fogotten the Golden Rule and much of what we learned in kindergarten. Suggested here are a few rules adapted to '90s technology:

10 Rules for the '90s

(1) Be on time. This includes responding to RSVP invitations (except junk mail ones) and canceling appointments you aren't going to keep.

(2) Include your phone number when leaving a message on someone's answering machine, in case he's getting his messages from a car or pay phone.

(3) Ask: "May I have ...?" instead of telling people, "I need ..."

(4) Carry a pen or pencil so you don't have to borrow one.

(5) Don't call anyone at home before 9 a.m. or after 8 p.m. unless it's an emergency.

(6) If you have call waiting, don't make the person you were talking to first wait on "hold" if you get another call.

(7) Be quiet in libraries, in theaters after the movie starts, and in hotels and hallways after 8 p.m. and before 10 a.m.

(8) "Closed" means closed.

(9) Don't violate people's privacy by giving their name, address or phone number to salesmen or anyone else without each person's prior permission.

(10) You are responsibile for your children and their behavior. — ROBERT ALAN SOLTIS, ESQ.

DEAR ROBERT: May I add to your list: Remember to say "thank you" for each and every kindness.

DEAR ABBY: For some time now, it has been the practice in some doctors' offices to address individuals by their first names.

I am in my 70s, and resent it when someone comes into the waiting room and calls, "Richard!" Whatever happened to Mr., Mrs. or Ms.?

I have discussed this with others in my age group, and the consensus is that they don't like it either. When I asked about it in a doctor's office, I was told, "We're all on a first-name basis here." (That may have been the case, but the doctor was always called, "Dr. So-and-So.") Another nurse's aide said that using the first name helped to avoid mistaken identity between patients in the waiting room. That explanation is just plain stupid. There would be a greater chance of finding another "Richard" in the waiting room than a "Mr. Larson."

Recently, when I bought something with my credit card, the clerk handed me my receipt and said, "Thank you, Richard." I asked why "Mr. Larson" wasn't good enough, and she replied, "The company policy requires us to personalize our comments." I asked to see the manager, who informed me that the employee was correct, and employees who did not do so would be subject to discipline!

Is this a legitimate gripe, or do you think I'm too cranky? — R.C. LARSON

DEAR MR. LARSON: You, cranky ... no way! You have a legitimate gripe.

Pizza man on job for 62 years

By Glenn Adams
Associated Press

AP Laserphoto

Pat Farnsworth, with his trademark white shirt, red suspenders and cigar, stands outside Pat's Pizza in Orono, Maine. Farnsworth, who will be 84 in November, still works seven days a week in the vintage cafe that he has owned and operated in this college town for 62 years.

ORONO, Maine — Decades have barely touched Pat's, the pizza parlor savored by generations of University of Maine graduates who found it vital to their education.

Yes, many elbows have rubbed the Formica counter down to the wood. Countless shoes left grooves in the slate footrests. The varnish is long gone from the wood benches and booths. The white pressed-tin ceiling looks tired.

But the orange neon sign in the window still beams invitingly "Farnsworth's Cafe." The pizzas taste the same.

Perhaps most remarkable among the eatery's enduring fixtures is Pat Farnsworth himself, the 83-year-old proprietor who in his starched shirt, suspenders and constant cigar, is still feeding young people after 62 years. More, if you count the years he worked here in high school.

Re-visiting alumni notice.

"They come back and say it hasn't changed a bit — it feels just like home," Farnsworth said on a recent, typically busy day.

He's amused when alumni come in and ask if Pat's still alive.

Alive, and how.

"They call it a disease — workaholic," said Farnsworth, who turns 84 on Nov. 3. "I can't set still."

HE TICKS off the rare days off: 10 days when he married Frances in 1937, time for back surgery in the 1950s, the odd hunting or fishing trip.

It's not just a life of pizza. This robust, portly man slightly shorter than the average with silvery hair swept back has owned the biggest pig farm in Maine, a canoe factory, a potato-hauling firm, a construction company and a beer hall.

From his college town cafe he has spun out a chain of 14 restaurants across the state called Pat's Pizza. It's all recorded in a black, dog-eared diary of his work life he keeps handy like the pens and pencils jamming his shirt pocket and his ever-ready smile behind wire-rimmed glasses.

But the heart of this son of a chef belongs in his landmark pizza joint.

MOST OF the year, Farnsworth can be found here 12 hours a day, or more, seven days a week, circulating with the customers, keeping the books in his downstairs office and, of course, making pizza.

Summers, he cuts back to eight hours a day, working mostly nights.

That allows him daylight hours in his beloved vegetable and flower gardens at his lakeside home in Orono, a town in central Maine of 10,573 inhabitants, double that if you count the students.

Many are fans of Pat's tangy pizzas that always arrive steaming hot on the coldest winter nights.

Farnsworth has sternly resisted suggestions he update the decor.

"I don't want to change it," he said firmly. "It's just like an antique."

Like his pizzas, Farnsworth resists change and keeps everything dear close to home.

Born in the coastal town of Harrington in 1909, Farnsworth was a toddler when his family moved to Orono.

His daughters, Ann Rosebush, 52, and Pam Savoy, 50, work here fulltime. It's also the headquarters of the restaurant chain run by his son, Bruce Farnsworth, 45.

EVERY ONE of Farnsworth's dozen grandchildren have earned money waiting tables, rolling dough, stirring sauce, grating the cheese.

As a young man, Farnsworth wanted a college education. He drove to Earlham College in Indiana in his Model T Ford, but homesickness drew him back home. A year at the state university failed to keep him.

So despite a life in the shadow of Academe, it seems the cracking spine of a college text never excited him like the clatter of commerce.

Back in Orono he returned to the ice cream parlor that employed him in high school. It was the Depression and hard times and soon the owner, eager to sell, let Farnsworth have the place for $1,000 plus $50 rent. It was 1931 and Farnsworth was 21 years old.

In two years he added meals and beer to the bill of fare. Pizza came much later, in 1955, and only because a hotel in town had discovered college kids liked the then-novel treat tantalizing America.

"I thought 'It's a fad, it'll go away,'" Farnsworth recalled.

SKEPTICISM EVAPORATED when he saw his own customers using his phone to order pizzas out and bring them back to his cafe. Fad or no fad, it was time to act. "We said we'll have to put in pizza."

Farnsworth sent his wife to Portland's best pizzeria for 10 days to learn the pizza art.

"I said if I could sell 50 pizzas a night I'd be happy," Farnsworth said. "The first night we sold 100."

He still makes about 250,000 a year, hooking freshmen on his 9-inch pies. Thus begins a lifelong hankering for many.

"I've had people say they came back here from California to say they wanted a pizza," said Farnsworth, sipping a cup of coffee and reaching for a cigar.

Long-distance care complicated

DENVER (AP) — People on the leading edge of the baby boom generation turn 47 this year, and more of them are faced with the responsibility of caring for an older parent or relative.

This issue is compounded by the mobility of U.S. society, forcing many of these children of older parents to manage their parents' affairs from a distance.

"A primary goal of many people in this situation of caring for an older person is to help the parent remain independent, staying in his or her home as long as possible," says Jan Walsh, who specializes in retirement planning for the Denver-based College for Financial Planning.

Walsh said that whether you manage your parent's affairs or merely assist in the process, it is important — particularly if there is some geographic distance involved — to have professional help. While a financial planner can help organize the financial aspects of an older person's life, the critical areas can also benefit from qualified advice and counsel. These include estate planning, incapacity and lifecare planning, said Walsh.

Some of the medical, estate and financial issues can be planned for by drawing up certain documents, including a durable power of attorney, a durable power of attorney with health care provisions, a health care proxy and a living will. The vehicles available to you will depend on your state law — which can vary significantly, cautions Walsh.

"This is particularly true if you live, for example, in Los Angeles, and your parent lives in Miami. Your local attorney may have a perfectly good grasp of the ins and outs of California estate law, but may not be aware of some critical component of Florida law that governs your parents," she said.

"The goal of the power of attorney with heath care provisions is to help manage the financial and medical care of an older person when he or she becomes unable to make decisions," said Walsh. This legal tool allows a person to appoint an agent who is authorized to make financial and medical choices in cases of incapacity.

Walsh also recommends taking the time to find a lawyer who specializes in elder law to help with this planning effort. Areas of specialty you might ask your prospective attorney about include durable powers of attorney, wills, trusts, and Medicare and Medicaid planning.

In addition, there needs to be somebody on your team who understands health care issues, is knowledgable about local services and resources for the elderly and can coordinate the day-to-day needs of the parent. A relatively new professional called a geriatric care manager can help with these issues.

The care manager (some of whom are private, while others are connected to a hospital) will need some idea of the individual's financial resources and the family situation, i.e., the availability of help from family members, to define the potential solutions, said Walsh.

The ideal geriatric care manager will coordinate the elderly person's financial planner, attorney, doctor or family members to develop a plan of action. A typical mistake, for example, is to wait until an older person suffers an injury before thinking about these planning issues.

Often a care manager can begin the process by facilitating a family conference to assist relatives in identifying issues and opening lines of communication. To start researching the process, the following telephone numbers may be of help:

- The National Association of Private Geriatric Care Managers 602-881-8008.
- The National Academy of Elder Law Attorneys 602-881-4005.
- The U.S. Administration of Aging's Elder Care Hotline 1-800-677-1116.
- Your state's department of aging.

Mavs on TV

DALLAS — Longtime Chicago Bulls announcer Jim Durham will serve as play-by-play announcer for the Dallas Mavericks on HSE telecasts this season.

Durham joins returning color commentator Bob Ortegel on HSE, which will carry 40 Mavericks home games in 1993-94.

Durham ended an 18-year run with the Bulls after the team's first championship in 1990-91. He was selected as the 1989 Illinois Sportscaster of the Year.

Known as the "Voice of the Bulls" during his tenure in Chicago, Durham has national experience calling Chicago White Sox games on WGN and 1993 NBA playoff action on TNT.

Falcon freed

ATLANTA — Rape charges against Atlanta Falcons defensive back Bruce Pickens were dropped Thursday.

Pickens was arrested Tuesday after a 26-year-old Birmingham woman filed a complaint saying Pickens had assaulted her at his apartment Sept. 17.

Rebs try to avoid deja vu

■ Midland Lee hopes to avoid a repeat of last season's loss to San Angelo tonight.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

Midland Lee's No. 6 state-ranked Rebels are staring into a mirror and the face looking back is indeed ugly.

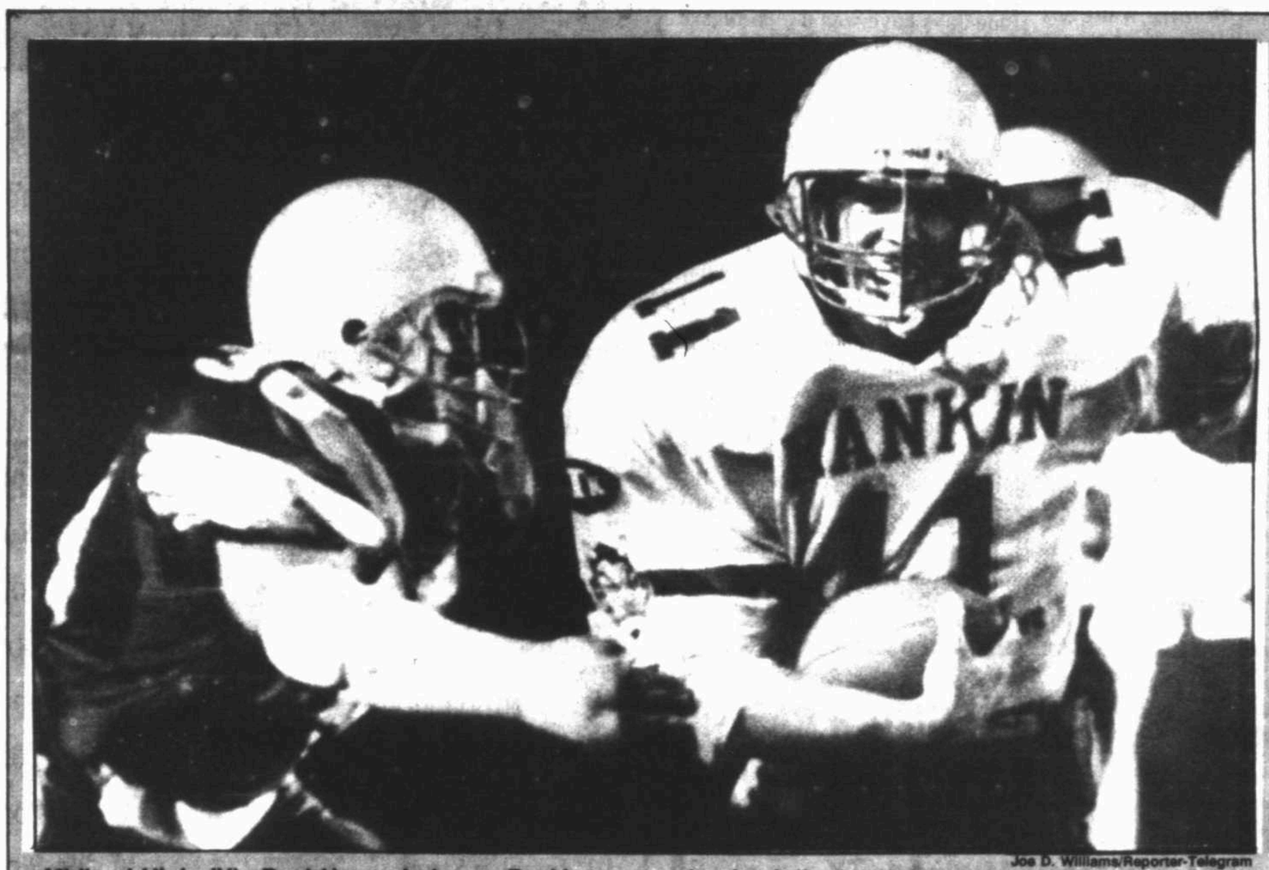

Lee hosts the San Angelo Bobcats at 8 p.m. today at Memorial Stadium that will have a major bearing on the District 4-5A playoff picture. And the mirror image? Well, look back to only a year ago when the Bobcats shocked Lee 44-34 in a game that had as much to do with Lee staying home from the playoffs for the first time in a decade as any game of the season. Lee coach Earl Miller says it best.

"It's really scary," Miller says. "It's the same situation as last year. We're 4-0 just like last year. We're ranked just like last year. And it don't mean nuthin'. All it means is that you better go out and play hard or all that ranking business is out the window. You can talk about the rankings all you want, but San Angelo is as good as we are. I hope our team realizes that. Hopefully, we'll do a better job than we did last year."

Well, this year-long nightmare has arrived to the haunting stage as Dan Gandy's Bobcats arrive with memories of where their playoff berth got its jump

Red Devils too tough for Dawg's JV

By Mike Butts
Staff writer

Rankin's Red Devil came to Midland Thursday with enough first-place votes to carry the number one Class 1A ranking in the state.

And after the Red Devils handed the Midland High Bulldogs junior varsity a 43-0 defeat, it's a good guess no one on the Bulldog side will soon be casting any desenting votes regarding that No. 1 ranking.

The Red Devils (5-0) stacked up 24 first downs and 405 yards rushing to overwhelm the Bulldogs (1-4). The senior-laden, playoff-hardened Red Devils proved way too much for Midland's all-sophomore squad to handle.

"(Rankin) just played the wheels off us," Midland JV head coach Roy Blair said. "It was quite evident we weren't prepared to play that quality of a football team."

The difference in maturity between high school sophomores and seniors is substantial. And Rankin demonstrated that on the Memorial Stadium turf Thursday. It scored in every quarter of the game and shut Midland's offense down to 18 net yards and eight first downs.

Police arrest Tech receiver after incident

■ Donald Marshall suspended, will not play in Saturday's Texas A&M game.

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech senior flanker Donnie Marshall has been charged with unlawfully carrying a 9mm handgun after he told police he fired three shots at someone firing at him.

Marshall

Coach Spike Dykes indefinitely suspended Marshall on Thursday "for disciplinary reasons."

If convicted of the Class A misdemeanor, Marshall, 21, could be sentenced to up to two years in jail and fined $2,000.

Dykes has declined to comment on the allegation, citing Marshall's right to privacy as a student.

A police report dated Sept. 19 says officers responded at 3:43 a.m. to a call of shots being fired south of downtown.

Officers pulled over Marshall's 1988 Pontiac Fiero and found the weapon under the passenger floor mat, according to the report.

He was arrested and also cited for driving without headlights or insurance. He was released after posting $300 bond.

The Grand Prairie native has caught seven passes for 104 yards this season. Against Baylor in Texas Tech's 28-26 loss last week, he was flagged for unsportsmanlike conduct, for celebrating.

TERRY WILLIAMSON

San Angelo vs. Midland Lee: The rut in the road that caused the Rebels' playoff wheels to fall off a year ago. San Angelo 44, Midland Lee 34.

Williamson

That's a score that doesn't sit too well with Lee coach Earl Miller. It's still his nightmare, one he would like to shake in a hurry.

There is no question that Lee's loss to the Bobcats last year was a key cog in the fact that Lee ended it's nine-year playoff run. After that emotional game, Lee came back home flat and lost to Odessa High. It was trouble the Rebels could never climb out of even though they were inside the Permian 10-yard line later in the year with a chance to get back in the playoff hunt.

Still, the 1992 downfall started with San Angelo and Miller sees the game as key again.

"This game is critical," Miller says. "You can say what you want, even if it's early in the season, but the winner will have a leg up on the playoffs. You can't put all your eggs in one basket. If we lose, we aren't out of it, but you sure are in a fight if you do lose. There is no question that this is a key game."

Last year's game was a drama within a drama. Lee got down early, came back to obtain a lead and then lost late.

"In years past we were pretty good at winning the close games, but we didn't do that last year," Miller said. "You've got to win the games where you have the chance, and that's what we have to do this year."

Both offensive units have been explosive this year, leading most to believe that this year will be little different than last.

"I hope we have a better game plan than we did last year," Miller said. "They put a lot of pressure on your defense and we have to rise to the occasion better than we did last week against Midland High."

You can talk all you want about a future meeting with Odessa Permian, but in the scheme of the District 4-5A playoff run, few games will be bigger than the one that unfolds at Memorial Stadium tonight.

With an 18-7 record overall in picking the games of District 4-5A, here's how it will go this weekend.

Midland Lee 38, San Angelo 28: A wild one is set for Memorial Stadium tonight. Lee has a 17-15 overall mark against the Bobcats after winning 13 of the last 15 meetings. The Bobcats have not won a game at Memorial Stadium since 1983, the year Lee went to the state finals.

Odessa Permian 56, Abilene High 6: The Eagles haven't beaten old Mojo since 1964 and own the worst record of any team in the district at Ratliff Stadium with a 1-9 mark and a meager 3-29-2 record against Permian. The one win was against Odessa High in 1986 and that first win against Permian won't be tonight since AHS is on a 10-game losing streak and the Panthers are unbeaten and No. 1 in the state.

Abilene Cooper 32, Odessa High 14: This was supposed to be a key game in the playoff scheme, but it's looking more like a rout for the Cougars as game time approaches. Cooper leads the series 18-12-2.

Amarillo High 28, Midland High 14: This non-conference Saturday game in Amarillo normally wouldn't draw much attention, but the Bulldogs showed some spark last week and might make a run at the Golden Sandies, a team that went to the state semifinals last year.

Astros stop Braves rally, 10-8

Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

ATLANTA — The Atlanta Braves blew another chance to move closer to their third straight NL West title, losing to the Houston Astros 10-8 Thursday night when their ninth-inning rally fell short.

The loss cut Atlanta's lead to one-half game over San Francisco. The Giants played later at Los Angeles in the opener of a season-ending, four-game series.

Atlanta scored three runs in the ninth off Doug Jones. But with runners on first and third and two outs, Otis Nixon fouled out to third.

Atlanta, the two-time NL champion, finishes its season with three games at home against Colorado.

The Braves lost two of three games to Houston. They had won 14 straight series since dropping two of three to Montreal on Aug. 6-8.

Mets 3, Cardinals 2

NEW YORK — New York, who started this season with two wins at Shea Stadium before falling apart, closed their home schedule with a victory over St. Louis.

Eddie Murray homered and Eric Hillman scattered 10 hits as the Mets finished 29-53 at Shea, their worst home record since they had the same mark in 1979. The victory made the Mets 56-103, the poorest record in the majors.

A crowd of 17,567 saw the Mets' last home game. Mets fans who have endured the long season saw New York win the finale in a fast 1 hour, 54 minutes.

The Mets began this year at home with 3-0 and 6-1 wins over Colorado. Dwight Gooden, one of many Mets who wound up on the disabled list, and Bret Saberhagen, one of several Mets who wound up in off-the-field trouble, were the winning pitchers in those first two games.

Hillman (2-9) ended his five-game losing streak with his first win since July 25. He struck out three and walked one in his third complete game of the season and fourth of his career.

Rookie Allen Watson (6-7) lost his seventh straight decision. He allowed three runs on six hits in six innings.

Watson hit an RBI double in the second inning for a 1-0 lead. Jeff Kent doubled home a run in the Mets fourth.

Pirates 5, Phillies 0

PITTSBURGH — Philadelphia was shut out for the first time in more than a year, ending the longest NL scoring streak this century at 174 games with a loss to Tim Wakefield and Pittsburgh.

The NL East champions hadn't been blanked since a 3-0 loss to Doug Drabek and the Pirates in Pittsburgh on Sept. 19, 1992. The previous modern NL record of 150 games was set by the Pirates from July 4, 1924 to June 29, 1925. The major league record of 308 was set by the New York Yankees from August 1931 to August 1933.

Wakefield (6-11) pitched a four-hitter for his second consecutive shutout, walked six and struck out one. He beat the Chicago Cubs 1-0 with a five-hitter on Sunday.

Philadelphia's best scoring chance came in the eighth, when it loaded the bases with two outs before Todd Pratt lined to left.

Tommy Greene (16-4) lost for the first time in 12 starts since July 16, giving up four runs over four innings in his final start before the NL playoffs.

Expos 5, Marlins 3

MIAMI — Curtis Pride, who has 95 percent hearing loss, hit his first major league homer with two outs in the ninth inning, giving Montreal a victory over Florida.

Marlins third baseman Gary Sheffield, who signed a $22.45 million, four-year contract on Wednesday, made three errors that led to three runs. With the score tied 3-3 and two outs in the ninth, Sheffield made a high throw that pulled Orestes Destrade off the first-base bag. Pride, batting for Jeff Shaw, followed with a drive to right off Rich Lewis (6-3).

Sheffield also made a fielding error in the first and a throwing error in the sixth that led to another run.

Shaw (2-7) got the final out of the eighth, and John Wetteland pitched the ninth for his 41st save, tying the Expos record established in 1985 by Jeff Reardon.

Gonzalez blasts 45th in win over A's

Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

ARLINGTON — Juan Gonzalez hit his major league-leading 45th home run as he returned to the lineup from a back injury, leading the Texas Rangers over the Oakland Athletics 6-2 Thursday night.

Gonzalez, who hadn't played in nine games since Sept. 19 because of a strained muscle in his lower back, hit a 420-foot drive to left field in the third inning off Todd Van Poppel (6-6), who was starting for the first time in his hometown.

Kenny Rogers (16-10) pitched a six-hitter, struck out three and walked one in his fifth complete game this season. He didn't allow a hit until rookie Henry Mercedes lined off his glove with two outs in the sixth and beat out his throw in the dirt.

Van Poppel allowed six runs and nine hits in 7 2-3 innings, walked three and struck out two.

Texas took a 3-0 lead in the third when David Hulse walked, Doug Strange hit an RBI double and Gonzalez homered. Hulse added an RBI single in the fourth.

Scott Brosius hit his sixth home run of the season in the eighth, but Dean Palmer hit a two-run homer on a 441-foot drive in the bottom half.

Mariners 2, White Sox 1

CHICAGO — Mike Blowers hit a run-scoring single in the 11th inning as Seattle beat the White Sox in Chicago's final regular-season home game.

Greg Litton led off the 11th with a double off Kirk McCaskill (4-8). Rich Amaral sacrificed Brian Turang to third and Blowers singled.

In the eighth, Blowers doubled and scored the tying run on Mike Felder's two-out single off Tim Belcher, who allowed one run and six hits in eight innings, struck out six and walked three.

Twins 4, Angels 3

MINNEAPOLIS — David McCarty led off the seventh inning with a bunt single, stole second and scored the winning run as Minnesota beat California to pass the Angels and go into fifth place in the AL West.

Greg Brummett (2-1) allowed seven hits in a career-high 7 2-3 innings, helping the Twins to their first six-game winning streak of the season. Rick Aguilera pitched the ninth for his 34th save.

Blue Jays 6, Orioles 2

BALTIMORE — Al Leiter (9-6) won his third straight start as Toronto won for the 16th time in 18 games and dropped Baltimore into fourth place in the AL East. The Blue Jays have won a club record nine straight on the road.

Jack Voigt and Lonnie Smith homered for the Orioles, who have lost 11 of 14. Arthur Rhodes (5-6) was tagged for six runs and 10 hits in five innings.

Tigers 7, Red Sox 4

BOSTON — Danny Bautista drove in four runs, including the go-ahead run in the eighth inning, as Detroit beat Boston for its seventh victory in eight games.

Detroit is assured of finishing ahead of the Red Sox this season. The Tigers lead Boston by four games with three to play.

Kurt Knudsen (3-2) struck out four in two innings, and Joe Boever pitched the ninth for his third save.

Scott Taylor (0-1) was the loser for the Red Sox, who have lost 9 of 13.

NEW YORK (AP) — The NBA Expansion Committee unanimously recommended Thursday a Toronto group for the league's 28th franchise — and it wasn't the one that included Magic Johnson.

A group headed by John Bitove Jr. was chosen by the five-member committee and now will be voted on by the 27-member Board of Governors. A three-quarters vote is needed to make the franchise eligible for the 1995-96 season, and approval is fully expected for the league's first team outside the United States.

Bitove, who oversees his family's food service business, is part of a group that plans a 22,000-seat downtown arena that won't be shared with the NHL's Maple Leafs. The team is expected to play its first season in SkyDome as the arena is completed.

NBA deputy commissioner Russ Granik cited the arena and the group's strong financing.

"We're excited about the ownership, the city of Toronto, and the country of Canada becoming a part of the NBA family," he said.

Johnson was one of 12 partners in a group led by music promoters Michael Cohl and Bill Ballard. The former Los Angeles Lakers star was most visible, though, as he repeated his dream to own an NBA team.

The third Toronto group was backed by Labatt's, the brewery that owns baseball's Blue Jays.

The committee said it has not yet decided whether to recommend a Vancouver group led by Canucks owner Arthur Griffiths for a second expansion franchise.

Johnson relayed his disappointment through his agent, Lon Rosen.

"But one day, I'll own an NBA team, if not in Toronto, somewhere else," Johnson said. "I congratulate the Bitove Group, but I especially congratulate the fans of Toronto."

RANKIN: Red Devils live up to billing

From 1C

"We had nine seniors starting today and they had a group of sophomores and we knew execution-wise and experience-wise we had the advantage," Rankin coach Raul Sanchez said. "I thought their two-platoon system would wear down our kids but it didn't. They excecuted better in the second half."

The Red Devils offensive success came mostly from the running of senior backs Roy Abalos and Baylor Walker. Walker, who is playing running back this year after making all-state at center in 1992, and Abalos combined for 388 yards. Walker scored two touchdowns and Abalos finished with 219 yards on 21 carries.

The Red Devils also showed big-play ability in their passing game. Quarterback Jo Jo Guerra completed only five of 13 passes, but three of those spirals went for 141 yards, including a 59-yarder to Robert Guadarrama for a first quarter score. Rankin exploited the Bulldogs defense several times with over-the-middle, quick slant pass routes.

"They were even playing us inside and trying to take the slant away, but our ends and quarterback made good reads," Sanchez said.

Midland had a good chance to start off well when Guerra fumbled on Rankin's first series and Russell Pendleton recovered for the Bulldogs at the Red Devil 27 yard line. But Midland's Ricky Cunningham, who completed three passes in the game, threw an interception to Guerra on third and four from the Rankin 21.

Early in the second period with Rankin up 13-0 Guerra ran back a David Leaverton punt 58 yards for a touchdown.

"That punt return to me was as big a momentum swing as anything in the first half," Blair said.

Midland's Leighton King ran for 35 yards on 18 carries, but three sacks of Cunningham for minus 53 yards left the Bulldogs with only eight net yards running.

Guadarrama's 25-yard field goal made the score 22-0 at halftime.

Walker and Abalos battled for the game's high rushing numbers. At one time in the second half Abalos had 145 yards and Walker 147. But Abalos broke away for a 49-yard TD in the fourth quarter to secure game-high honors. Rankin's Jo'El Armendarez caught two passes for 82 yards.

The Bulldogs didn't manage a first down until their last possession of the first half. Midland then marched to the Rankin 24 on two first down runs by Demetrius Lee and a face mask penalty. But the drive ended with a Red Devil interception.

Bruins quell Faulk, Aztecs in runaway

SAN DIEGO (AP) — J.J. Stokes, held in check in the previous three games, caught five passes for 164 yards and three touchdowns and UCLA held Marshall Faulk to only 53 yards in a 52-13 victory over San Diego State Thursday night.

The Bruins (2-2) improved to 16-0-1 against San Diego State (3-2). Thursday's game was the last of a 10-year contract, during which UCLA outscored the Aztecs 400-153.

San Diego State, of the Western Athletic Conference, is 0-16-1 against Pac-10 teams since beating Stanford in 1985.

Faulk, the two-time national rushing leader and 1992 Heisman runnerup, was held to his second-lowest output in three seasons, excluding two games cut short by injury. He scored on a 3-yard run 3:44 into the third quarter, and didn't carry the ball in the fourth. He had 19 carries for the game.

Stokes, who turned down the hometown Aztecs four years ago because they wanted to make him a tight end, had only 188 yards and two touchdowns on 16 catches in games against California, Nebraska and Stanford. He broke out against the Aztecs by catching TD passes of 36, 16 and 50 yards from Wayne Cook.

Stokes caught four passes for 114 yards in the first half, including one for a 36-yard touchdown seven plays into the game. He juked cornerback Leonard Jones after making the catch, then twice evaded free safety Darrell Lewis.

He burned cornerback Eric Sutton on a 48-yard reception to the Aztecs 15 early in the second quarter, then beat him again on a post pattern three plays later for a 21-0 lead 10:58 before halftime.

Undefeated teams spawn NFL players of the month

NEW YORK (AP) — Record-setting kicker John Carney of San Diego and linebacker Renaldo Turnbull of New Orleans, the only 4-0 team in the NFL, are among six players selected by the league as players of the month for September.

Carney, chosen as the AFC's special teams player, was 13-for-13 in field goal attempts, extending his two-season perfect streak to 29, an NFL record. He scored all of the Chargers' points in an 18-12 victory over Seattle and an 18-17 triumph over Houston.

Turnbull, who replaced the departed Pat Swilling in New Orleans' defense, was picked as the NFC's defensive player. He had seven sacks, tying for the league lead, along with 21 tackles, four forced fumbles and one recovered fumble.

Prep gridder dies following football injury

PARKERSBURG, W.Va. (AP) — A high school football player died of head injuries Thursday six days after collapsing during a game.

Senior linebacker Chuck Schofield, 17, died at 11:35 a.m. CDT at Camden Clark Hospital after his family decided to disconnect life supports, coach Kenny Wright said. Schofield's family and friends were with him when he died.

"This is my 35th year of coaching, and me and my coaching staff are absolutely devastated," Wright said from the hospital.

Schofield, the team's leading tackler, collapsed during the Sept. 24 game with Wirt County, apparently within 30 minutes of sustaining a blow to the head, the coach said.

"Our community, our coaching staff and our fans have been in a state of shock, so we haven't had time to look at the films," Wright said.

Schofield developed blood clots in his lungs after immediate surgery for a torn artery in his brain. The player underwent surgery Sunday, but swelling worsened in his brain Wednesday.

Doctors determined Thursday that all of Schofield's brain activity had ceased. Wright said life supports were halted after a conference between Schofield's doctors and his family.

Students were not told of Schofield's death at school.

He said classes will be held at the school today, but tonight's game against Ravenswood will be rescheduled.

REBELS: Lee battles San Angelo

start a year ago.

"Lee is one of the best in the country," says San Angelo coach Dan Gandy. "They may be as good offensively as they have been ever. We'd like to be 4-0 just like them, but we feel like our people are where we want them to be. We've played a lot of teams with good skill people and that's the reason we like to schedule those kind of teams because we face so many of them in our district. Lee is loaded in the skill positions."

San Angelo enters the game with a 2-2 mark, but the losses were to Killeen and Temple, games in which the Bobcats played well.

"The first district game is always important and this is our first district game, but it could be tougher this year because I'm sure Lee will probably remember what happened last year," Gandy said. "Still, this is another season with different players. Every year is different and you don't play a game by what happened in the past."

Quarterback Elliott Bowman has passed for 634 yards and six touchdowns and rushed for another 129 yards and three more touchdowns to rank second in the district in total offense. Also, Bobcat receivers Bennie Dupre (18 catches for 291 yards and four touchdowns) and Bryan Bode (10 catches for 179 yards) make San Angelo an explosive team from anywhere on the field.

"San Angelo gives you a lot of sets and we will have to make adjustments," Miller said. "We had 18 misalignments last week against Midland High. You make that mistake against San Angelo and they score."

But Lee, too, has offensive punch, ranking second in the league in offense with 445.7 yards per game and is the leading scoring team in the league with 215 points in just four games. That already ranks this Lee team as the 13th best scoring team in Lee history.

Lee quarterback Courtney Turner is having a career year, passing for 409 yards and four touchdowns while leading the team in rushing with 276 yards and two more TDs. In addition, four Rebel running backs also have over 200 yards rushing with Phillip Sims having already scored 54 points this year. Lee can come at you in quick-striking infantry manuevers or with Air Force lightning.

"Lee throws a little more than in the past, but it's the same offense that can score in a hurry. And they have a tough defense. They must be outscoring opponents by a 12-1 margin, so they aren't doing too badly on defense," Gandy said. "Last year's game was one of the best high school games I've ever seen and I think this might be another one just like it. At least, I hope we're close enough to say that when it's over."

It may come down to the team who decides to play the best defense, but offensive fireworks are expected.

"It could be the last team that has the ball will win the game," Miller said. "We've got to convince our kids that they are going to have to play over their heads in this one."

Courier upset at Salem Open; Fendick advances

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Jacco Eltingh of Holland pulled off a major surprise Thursday, upsetting Jim Courier, 6-4, 6-3, in the second round of the Malaysia Salem Open tennis championships.

Eltingh, will next meet seventh-seeded Jonas Svensson of Sweden, who advanced to the quarterfinals by beating American Kenny Thorne 6-2, 6-4.

Two other seeded players were also ousted in the $300,000 tournament Thursday: third-seeded Wally Masur of Australia and No. 6 Brett Steven.

However, No. 8 Michael Chang survived a gruelling test against fellow American Robbie Weiss, winning 6-1, 2-6, 6-4.

Volkswagen Cup

LEIPZIG, Germany (AP) — Patty Fendick of the United States and Conchita Martinez of Spain on Thursday struggled into the quarterfinals of the Volkswagen Cup.

Germany's Barbara Ritter ousted Stephane Rottier of the Netherlands 6-2, 6-3, becoming the only unseeded player to make the quarters. She will face Austria's Judith Wiesner, a 2-6, 7-5, 6-4 winner over Andrea Strnadova of the Czech Republic.

Sicilian Open

PALERMO, Sicily (AP) — Second-seeded Thomas Muster advanced to the quarterfinals of the Sicilian Open Thursday by defeating Renzo Furlan 6-1, 4-6, 6-3.

Muster, an Austrian ranked 12th in the world, dominated the net play to drop Furlan, Italy's top-ranked player.

Meanwhile, Alex Colletja of Spain defeated fifth-seeded Javier Sanchez of Spain 6-1, 6-2.

Fans balk at name of Arlington ballpark

By John Austin
and Laura Vozzella
N.Y. Times News Service

ARLINGTON — From Richard Sancillo of Fort Worth who called it a four-bit name to Jill Wilkin of Arlington who thinks it makes the Texas Rangers look like weenies, those who hate the new name of the ballpark in Arlington — The Ballpark in Arlington — drowned out those who think the name is pretty neat.

Nearly 1,000 callers voted in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram's unscientific one-day call-in poll Wednesday, with 707 against the new name and 265 for it. That's nearly a 3-to-1 ratio.

Some of the name's bitterest critics turned out to be the new park's biggest fans. They had hoped for a name worthy of the edifice. For them, The Ballpark in Arlington isn't it.

"You spend $176 million on a ballpark and give it a 50-cent name," said Sancillo, 40, a telephone repairman. "Doesn't make any sense."

Some even said they believe the name detracts from the park.

"I think it's a silly name and it's an unfair burden on an otherwise very attractive and very impressive stadium," said Ken Gross, 35, of Arlington, a certified public accountant.

For folks who weren't crazy about the park in the first place, or the half-cent sales tax increase that is paying for much of it, the name is something new to complain about.

"Not only did they take my taxes from this thing, not only did they ban smokers from the ballpark, now they didn't even get the public to vote on this and chose a stupid name for this park," said Elizabeth Palmer, 48, a nurse.

But for many, The Ballpark in Arlington was love at first sound.

"It reminds me of the song, 'Take Me Out to the Ballgame,'" said Nancy Harrison, 32, of Grapevine.

Said Paul Kennedy of Burleson: "The name doesn't look so great on the wall, but I think that 'Welcome to the 1994 All-Star Game in The Ballpark in Arlington' sounds really great."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Once you reach a firm agreement with your boss or a family member, a financial matter should take care of itself. Approach 1994 with high hopes! Unusual business and career opportunities beckon next February and March. New social or professional contacts bring unexpected gains. Send off a manuscript in early spring and you could reap big monetary rewards in June. Others are deeply interested in what you have to say.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Julie Andrews, actor Tom Bosley, 39th President Jimmy Carter, actor Walter Matthau, slugger Rod Carew.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Confidential information helps you launch a pet project. Your ESP and understanding heart let you make the right choices. An older person heads your cheering squad.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): If romantic feelings trouble you, a candid chat could restore your confidence. A special request or inquiry gets a response that makes you happy. A brief encounter with an older person proves thrilling.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): This dynamic day features romance, good luck and a brilliant plan. Dress with flair to make a positive impression on someone who is interested in fashion. Your gift for witty conversation impresses others.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your optimistic attitude and imaginative ideas gain valuable support for a new venture. Carefully planned domestic changes will work out just fine. Reduce clutter.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You have many irons in the fire now and feel unusually creative. A fresh approach will smooth out a domestic snag. Talk with mate before firming up social plans for the weekend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You do not have to be an overachiever to impress others. Just relax and talk about what you value most. Your obvious sincerity makes you a hit with those who really count.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A new project is enhanced by your imagination or research. A decision-maker echoes your feelings and can help you refine your plans. Indulge a romantic mood tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Problems impacting on the future may catch you off-guard. Avoid guessing; gather and evaluate data before making vital decisions. Family will follow your lead in social matters.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Money and career matters should be on an upward curve. If a first attempt did not succeed, try again. Your persistence will win you accolades. Do not move too quickly in romance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A good day to discuss key changes at work. You drive a hard bargain. Socializing with VIPs could land you a starring role at a public event. Choose your words carefully.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your spending habits receive new attention. A budget revision is a step in the right direction. Rising expenses could complicate certain social plans.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Focus on one project at a time and your productivity will rise. An attractive member of the opposite sex is sympathetic to your moods. A new serenity graces the domestic scene.

Most of us cherish our high cards even though, at times, they can be an embarrassment. France's Michel Lebel found a dramatic way to disencumber himself of an unwanted asset on this deal from France's match against Slovenia at the recent European Championship.

North's two diamond response was a transfer to hearts. The jump to three no trump described a balanced hand with a five-card heart suit and the values for game, either in the suit or no trump.

West led a low diamond and East's queen won. Declarer held up again when East continued with the king of diamonds. A diamond continuation probably would have defeated the contract (declarer can survive by endplaying West, but that requires perfect card-reading), but East decided to make use of being in hand for what might be the last time to shift to a heart.

The queen of hearts lost to the king and West reverted to a diamond. It seemed there was no way for declarer to set up and establish the heart suit, since there was only one entry to dummy and to force a spade entry would give the defenders at least five tricks. However, Lebel showed that one entry was all that was needed. On the ace of diamonds he discarded the ace of hearts from hand!

Now it was a simple matter to continue with the ten of hearts, forcing out the jack. With the ace of clubs as an entry and suits breaking normally declarer had tricks to burn.

Supreme Court justice Thomas says he resists temptation to hate

ST. LOUIS — Clarence Thomas says he has resisted the temptation to hate.

"I have had many, many reasons to hate and to resent: poverty, racism, segregation, discrimination, unfairness," the Supreme Court justice told a gathering of lawyers Wednesday night.

Thomas

"With God's help, I have been able to overcome the temptation to do so."

The hotel where Thomas spoke to about 1,000 people at the Missouri Bar Association convention was picketed for several hours by the National Organization for Women.

Thomas dismissed criticism that bitterness over his "life's experiences" has spilled into his court opinions.

"I have seen many who have suddenly become experts on me. . . . They all tend to be consistently and unanimously wrong."

Thomas' confirmation hearings in 1991 became a television spectacle after a former aide, Anita Hill, accused him of sexual harassment.

FRANKFURT, Germany — A politician said Madonna's stage show wasn't fit for young eyes, but in the end it was technical difficulties that scotched her performance.

Norbert Geis, spokesman for Chancellor Helmut Kohl's conservatives in parliament, said the show "exceeded the bounds of decency" and should be off-limits for children under 16.

It turns out Madonna won't be singing, stripping and slinking around her topless male dancers on Saturday night because her set was too complicated to put up in time, concert organizer Marek Lieberberg said.

Setting up the pyrotechnics would take at least 21 hours and there wasn't enough time, so 12,000 tickets will be refunded, he said.

The show sold out twice last weekend at London's Wembley stadium, where critics said it was "raunchy as usual," but not as brash as some previous tours.

ATLANTA — Writer Lewis Grizzard spent an extra day in a hospital Thursday as he recovers from minor surgery.

Grizzard

The humorist was to be discharged Thursday, but doctors decided to keep him a little longer for observation, said Emory University Hospital spokeswoman Lee Jenkins.

On Wednesday night, doctors removed a pouch they put in Grizzard's chest in March, when he had heart surgery to replace an aortic valve, Ms. Jenkins said.

The pouch and some wires were implanted in case he later needed a pacemaker, but an infection developed in the chest area and doctors removed the pouch since a pacemaker wasn't necessary.

Grizzard's artificial valve has functioned well. He was likely to leave the hospital today.

In addition to his syndicated newspaper column, Grizzard has written several books and recorded comedy albums.

NORTH PLATTE, Neb. — More than 50 years ago, when celebrities were supposed to be perfect, Nanette Fabray acknowledged she was going deaf.

The actress and former dancer said she began using hearing aids after friends confronted her about having to shout and repeat things all the time.

"Your hearing problem is yours," Fabray told a Town Hall crowd Wednesday during a lecture. "Don't make other people responsible for it."

Fabray was a teen-ager when she was diagnosed with otosclerosis, which causes the bones in the ear to calcify.

"I'm now literally wired for sound," she said, referring to surgical procedures that replaced the bones with wire and restored her hearing.

Until the procedure came about, she wore hearing aids to help discern the orchestra's sound during musical performances.

Barbra Streisand used to be such a fervent collector of arts and crafts furniture that in 1989, she paid a record $363,000 for a Gustav Stickley sideboard. But that was before she got involved with Bill Clinton.

According to the New York Observer, "All those visits to her new best friend Bill Clinton's White House have set the singer to collecting Early American pieces."

She has purged her house of all its Stickley furniture, sending it all to storage at Christie's. The Observer says she had planned to put it up for auction next month but has postponed the event until March.

NEW YORK — A judge refused to drop charges Monday against Marla Maples' former publicist, noting that prosecutors have a 25-minute videotape of him stealing her high-heeled shoes and underclothing.

Chuck Jones, 50, was arrested in July 1992 after he was videotaped rifling the bedroom and closets of Maples, a sometime Broadway actress who is now eight months pregnant with companion Donald Trump's child. Jones faces charges including burglary and possession of stolen property.

Jones argued he was denied a speedy trial, has no arrest record.

Prices gain

Crude oil futures extended Wednesday's gains on the New York Mercantile Exchange on further buying linked to the new OPEC production agreement. Strong early gains were trimmed late in the session amid talk that the UN oil embargo against Iraq could be lifted within six months.

West Texas Intermediate for November delivery rose 12 cents to $18.79 a barrel.

Local crude purchasers raised their posted price 25 cents to $17.25 a barrel.

November contracts for natural gas fell 3.8 cents to $2.28 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Taco Bell moves

IRVINE, Calif. — Taco Bell Corp.'s fast-food comes from south of the border, but is the company itself headed south?

Atlanta, North Carolina and Dallas were among locations mentioned by the PepsiCo Inc. subsidiary Thursday in an announcement saying it's evaluating its options when its lease here in Orange County runs out in November 1996.

Those options also include leasing expanded space in the 12-story high-rise at Koll Center Irvine where the headquarters of the national Mexican fast-food chain occupies 280,000 square feet.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK — The dollar rose against all major currencies Thursday after the release of better-than-expected monthly data on U.S. personal income and consumption. The dollar reached its highest level in six years against the Canadian dollar.

Gold prices rose. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery closed at $355.10 a troy ounce, up $2.40 from Wednesday.

The dollar finished at 1.3338 Canadian dollars in New York, up from 1.3288 on Wednesday.

In New York, the British pound was trading at $1.4968, cheaper than $1.5110 on Wednesday.

Stocks sink

NEW YORK — The stock market meandered to a mostly lower close Thursday after a session marked by maneuvers associated with the quarter's end.

Weakness in bond prices put a damper on activity in the equity market.

The Dow Jones industrial average finished off 11.18 at 3,555.12 and several other market indicators also ended the session in the minus column.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines in the late tally on the New York Stock Exchange with 1,124 stocks rising in price, 870 falling and 637 remaining unchanged.

Income, job increases offer hope

■ Economy's got some get-up, not a lot of go, but some, one economist says.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans' personal income rose strongly in August and joblessness edged down last week, two indications the economy, while not in great shape, is at least doing better than during the first half of the year.

However, in a jarring note, sales of new homes unexpectedly declined in August.

Incomes jumped 1.3 percent last month to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $5.43 trillion, following rare back-to-back declines during the two previous months, the Commerce Department said Thursday.

It was the largest rise in four months and a rebound from July, when incomes were depressed by crop and property damage from flooding in the Midwest and drought in the Southeast.

Incomes had fallen 0.3 percent in July and 0.1 percent in June, the first consecutive monthly drops in 39 years.

Meanwhile, the Labor Department said the number of Americans filing first-time claims for jobless benefits fell by 11,000 last week, to 329,000. Analysts said that level is consistent with modest job growth.

Both reports were taken as positive signs that the economic growth rate during the second half of the year was improving from the moribund 1.4 percent annual rate during the first half.

"I think we're on the verge of a breakout from the siesta we went into in the first half," said economist Robert G. Dederick of Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. "The economy's got some get-up, not a lot of go, but some."

He and other analysts are looking for growth in the range of 2.5 percent to 3 percent during the second half — an improvement, but still well below the pace of past recoveries.

"There's no recession on the horizon, but growth certainly will continue to be disappointing," said economist Norman Robertson of Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh.

Income gains — which largely track improvement in the job market — are crucial to the economy's future. They're the underpinning of consumer spending, which represents two-thirds of the nation's economic activity.

In August, Americans' personal consumption spending rose a moderate 0.4 percent to a seasonally adjusted $4.42 trillion annual rate. That marked the fifth consecutive increase and was the same as July's.

However, another Commerce Department report showed a 3.1 percent drop in sales of new homes to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 616,000 in August. That marked the second consecutive decline and the fifth this year.

Analysts had expected low mortgage rates would produce a sales increase, but sales fell everywhere except the Northeast, pushing the inventory of unsold homes up to 288,000 at the end of August, the highest since October 1991.

Economist David Seiders of the National Association of Home Builders said the housing report was "troubling if true." But he noted that the government frequently revises its initial estimate of new home sales. He said the latest report doesn't square with other signs that housing is responding to low mortgage rates.

Martin Marietta cuts 7,500 jobs, to slash 3,500 more

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Martin Marietta Corp., citing cuts in the federal defense budget, said Thursday it has eliminated more than 7,500 jobs this year and will let another 3,500 workers go over the next 15 months.

The announcement by the defense contractor came as several other companies announced major layoffs, including USAir, which said it was eliminating 2,500 jobs after a slow summer. Chemical Waste Management Inc., which specializes in hazardous waste disposal, said it would cut a fourth of its work force, affecting 1,200 people.

Martin Marietta said its layoffs of about 11,000 workers were "across the board" — though mostly in its defense programs — at facilities in eight states from Daytona Beach, Fla., to Burlington, Mass., and Glen Burnie, Md.

The defense industry giant acquired General Electric Co.'s aerospace division last April. About 2,000 of the layoffs are mostly aimed at eliminating duplication created by the merger, company officials said.

The company still employs about 94,000 workers. Its work force now is about 46,000 fewer than both Martin Marietta and GE Aerospace had in 1987.

"Today's announcement meets our commitment ... to act quickly and decisively in strengthening the competitive posture of Martin Marietta. These actions recognize the realities of a tough marketplace," said Chairman Norman Augustine.

At a news conference at the company's suburban Washington headquarters, Augustine said layoffs and consolidation were necessary because of "the very serious reductions in the defense budget" in the aftermath of the Cold War.

The additional 1,500 layoffs this year were caused by the tightening Pentagon budget, he said. The company depends on defense contracts for about two-thirds of its business.

The company announced defense-related layoffs in Colorado, Florida, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and Tennessee. Because of jobs transfers, employment is expected to increase at some facilities, officials said.

Augustine said the consolidation will save Martin Marietta $1.5 billion over the next five years.

For example, the company will close its former corporate headquarters of GE Aerospace in Valley Forge, Pa., and consolidate its activities at the main headquarters, eliminating 40 percent of the headquarters staff positions.

Company spokesman Phillip Giaramita said the company expects to reduce its work force by 9,000 this year; about 7,500 of those workers already have left.

Clinton eases computer exports

SAN FRANCISCO (NYT) — By easing export controls on the sale of computers to Europe and much of the developing world, President Clinton has handed a bonus to high-tech industries in California's Silicon Valley.

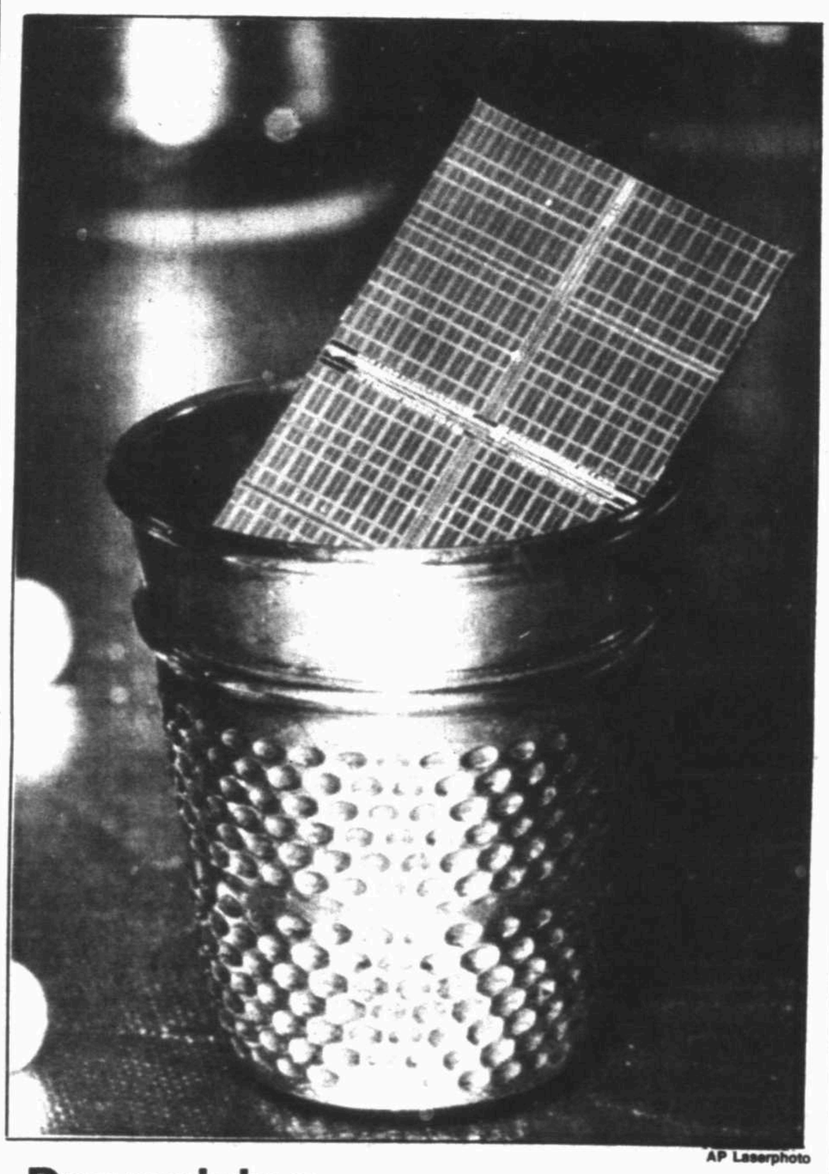

Clinton's new National Export Strategy calls for sweeping changes in U.S. export controls that will sharply reduce controls on telecommunications technologies and computers.

Directed by Commerce Secretary Ron Brown, the strategy will tie some foreign aid to the sale of U.S. goods abroad, and take other steps to boost exports from the present level of $700 billion a year to $1 trillion by 2000 — supposedly creating 6 million new jobs in the process.

Silicon Valley executives praised Clinton for easing export rules. Today, computer makers need a license to export any computer, even to Europe, if the machine performs more than 12.5 million calculations per second — a level exceeded by fast 486 PCs.

Clinton raised that threshold to 194 million transactions per second, thus freeing $24 billion a year in computer and workstation exports from the need to obtain export licenses from the Commerce Department.

Computer industry executives convinced the administration that nations like Taiwan were building fast machines and selling them worldwide, undercutting U.S. manufacturers who need to get licenses that can take weeks or months to obtain.

Mercedes adopts a Southern strategy

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Mercedes-Benz became the latest automaker to find a home in the land of cotton.

On Thursday, it unveiled a Southern blueprint for making sport-utility vehicles in the Alabama countryside.

Germany's largest car conglomerate will build an American company from the ground up on 966 acres in the hamlet of Vance, where two sawmills are now the major employers for about 250 residents.

"The company will have full global market responsibility," said Helmut Werner, president and chief executive officer of Mercedes-Benz. "Even the German market will be served from here."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Mutual-fund contractual plan is bad investment

By Bill Doyle

Q: I have been involved in a 15-year mutual fund systematic investment plan for almost four years. I was told that their dollar cost averaging method was the best way to invest.

Doyle

My concern is that, after investing $100 monthly for 44 months, I show a profit of less than $10. I now own 442 and a fraction shares currently worth $9.97 per share.

They now take a $5 sales and creation fee and a $1.50 custodian fee out of each monthly investment. For the first year, they took $50 out of my $100. They stated this was the only way of ensuring there would be no short-term investors.

I plan to use this money for retirement. Is this a wise investment?

A: NO! And that is a flat-out statement. No ifs, ands or buts.

You were conned into signing up for a mutual fund contractual plan with a 50 percent front-end load. That's where $50 out of each of the first 12 $100 payments you made went. A contractual plan is just about the worst way to invest in a mutual fund.

With such a plan, up to 50 percent of the first year's investments can disappear in commission charges. After that, the commission is much lower. But, even now, the charges you are being nicked for take $6.50 out of each $100.

It's true that dollar cost averaging — putting the same amount of money into stock or mutual fund shares at fixed intervals — is an excellent investment method. But you don't have to use a contractual plan for dollar cost averaging.

You can dollar cost average with a level-load mutual fund, on which the commission is never more than 8.5 percent. Most funds with "loads," another word for "commission," charge less.

Better yet, you can invest a fixed amount monthly in one of the many no-load mutual funds, on which there is no commission charge. That way, all the money you send to the fund will be used to buy full and fractional shares.

With that contractual plan, the $1,200 you invested the first year bought only $600 worth of fund shares, and every $100 you invest now purchases $93.50 worth of shares.

Q: A dear friend of mine who is in her 80s has asked me for advice about investing in one or more of a family of no-load mutual funds. The prospectus shows their annual management fees ranges from 0.45 percent to 0.62 percent and other expenses from 0.25 percent to 0.68 percent. She understands the levels of risks in all the mutual funds.

She receives Social Security benefits, a teacher's pension and interest from $300,000 in certificates of deposits at various banks. She owns her home and car, and is not hurting for her needs. However, because low CD rates have drastically reduced her income, she wants her money to earn more. She intends to start investing with $10,000 when her first CD matures.

What would you suggest for her?

A: That she stay away from mutual funds and all other investments where her to invest, she should not take on any risk at her stage in life.

If she is bound and determined to invest, steer her toward a conservative mutual fund, such as an income fund, where the risk is not great.

All mutual funds — load and no-load — have annual management fees and other expenses. The expenses you cite are reasonable.

Q: A mutual fund prospectus I read says, in part, "These securities have not been approved or disapproved by the Securities and Exchange Commission or any state securities commission."

Should I be concerned about that?

A: Not at all. That statement appears in every prospectus. While neither approving nor disapproving the securities, you can be sure the SEC went over the prospectus with a fine-tooth comb.

Baby Bells may angle for Paramount deal role

By Edmund L. Andrews
N.Y. Times News Service

While Viacom and QVC Network race to line up money in their battle to buy Paramount Communications, all eyes are now turning toward the Baby Bells as potential partners.

Investment bankers and industry executives familiar with the battle say that several of the huge phone companies — Southwestern Bell in particular, but also Bell Atlantic and BellSouth — have all shown intense interest in the Paramount deal.

"There's a lot more interest than I would have predicted," said one investment banker who has spoken with the telephone companies. "When you get calls on Sunday, when people start canceling trips to faraway places, that's a sign there's a lot of interest."

Until the Paramount deal, few would have expected the phone companies to go so far afield as to try to buy a movie studio, despite their burgeoning interest in developing two-way voice, video and data services. But a partnership with either QVC or Viacom could make sense.

With revenues of more than $10 billion each, the regional Bells have enormous financial power. But they have no experience in entertainment. Thus, they may be better off seeking alliances that allow them to put their cash to work and let more experienced hands run the show.

Each of the seven Bells has a different interest and strategy, part of which is dictated by demographics.

Southwestern Bell Corp., based in Austin, Texas, is believed to be most aggressive in seeking a part of Paramount because it wants to move outside its traditional geographic region, which is less densely populated and less affluent than other parts of the country. Southwestern recently bought two cable television systems near Washington, and many cellular telephone properties.

US West, based in Denver, is in much the same position. But it has already teamed up with Time-Warner in a bid to modernize cable networks that will all be outside its traditional domain of the mountain states.

The Pacific Telesis Group, the Bell company serving California and Nevada, is eagerly seeking to enter the video marketplace. Company officials say they are negotiating a new partnership to provide video services that may well include a cable television company. Because of that, and because Pacific Telesis is preoccupied with spinning off its cellular properties, the company is making no move toward Paramount.

Bell Atlantic Corp., which serves the mid-Atlantic region from New Jersey through Virginia, is arguably the most aggressive of the Bells in competing against cable television companies.

The company has already announced plans to build advanced fiber networks in New Jersey and in Alexandria, Va., and it is the only Bell company to embrace a new technology that makes it possible to deliver a single television channel over traditional copper wires.

Perhaps most important, Bell Atlantic won a federal court ruling last month that overturned a law prohibiting a telephone company from owning a cable television system.

The missing ingredient, however, is programming. While Bell Atlantic can license popular channels from CNN to MTV, it must still compete against entrenched cable companies that already provide those services.

Fisher Controls International mulls worldwide consolidation

MARSHALLTOWN, Iowa (AP) — Fisher Controls International — Marshalltown's largest employer — said today it is considering a consolidation of worldwide operations that could cost 370 jobs in central Iowa.

The plan, which could take two to three years to implement, is in the discussion stage, said Jim Orso, a spokesman. No immediate layoffs are planned, he said.

The company said it is considering consolidating the product line made at its Center Street plant in Marshalltown with operations at McKinney and Sherman, Texas; Toluca, Mexico; and in its Asia-Pacific region.

Fisher makes and designs control room equipment for factories and is a subsidiary of Emerson Electric Co. Both are based in St. Louis, although Fisher was founded in Marshalltown in 1880. It still has about 1,800 Marshalltown workers, despite several rounds of earlier reductions.

Orso said the company began meetings with its Iowa workers Wednesday night to discuss the proposal and was continuing them today.

"Employees in Marshalltown were told in May that consolidation options were being evaluated which would help Fisher maintain a globally competitive position in the markets it serves," said a statement released today by the company.

Pizza Hut slices delivery deals with 2 hotel chains

DALLAS (AP) — Pizza Hut said Thursday that it had reached exclusive agreements with two hotel chains to deliver piping-hot pizza pies to more than 6,000 hotels nationwide.

Pizza Hut will offer guest room delivery from local restaurants to customers of Hospitality Franchise Systems Inc., which franchises more than 3,700 Days Inn, Howard Johnson, Park Inns International, Ramada and Super 8 hotels.

In a separate pact, Pizza Hut has agreed to a strategic marketing alliance as well as delivery rights with Choice Hotels International, which has more than 2,500 U.S. franchises for Comfort, Quality, Econo Lodge, Clarion, Rodeway, Friendship and Sleep Inns.

"We see this as a huge opportunity for us," Pizza Hut spokesman Rob Doughty said. "It's a great way for us to expand our distribution to customers where they are, when they want their pizza and where they want their pizza."

Hospitality and Pizza Hut will do some joint marketing of their program. Parsippany, N.J.-based Hospitality, which says it is the world's largest hotel franchisor, also said it would consider letting Pizza Hut build restaurants on its hotel properties.

"It's a convenience for our guests, and it also generates revenue for the franchisee and of course for Pizza Hut. It's a matter of convenience," Hospitality spokesman A.B. Albritton said of the deal.

Some money from the initiative will go to franchisees, Albritton said, although he would not say how much.

The Choice chain said virtually all its U.S. hotels will offer pizza delivery service beginning in November, with international expansion expected early next year.

Part of the revenue from the agreement will go into a joint marketing pot, which is expected to hold $5 million to $6 million within the next 12 months, the companies said.

Executives said they had not yet hammered out joint marketing details, but said it will include coupons and possibly also movie promotions and advertisements in print and broadcast media.

"We'll be doing advertising that benefits both companies due to the similar customer base that we have," said Choice president Gerald Petitt, in Dallas for Choice's annual convention. "It's picking the right spots where our consumers and their consumers overlap."

Petitt said the companies also are considering on-site hotel restaurants, including possible smaller Pizza Hut Express at Clarion and Quality.

Choice Hotels International, a subsidiary of Silver Springs, Md.-based Manor Care Inc., has more than 3,000 hotels in 30 countries worldwide.

Pizza Hut, a subsidiary of PepsiCo Inc., has more than 7,600 restaurants and delivery carryout units worldwide

Doughty said he did not have an exact figure for revenue growth Pizza Hut expects from the two agreements, but said it would be "in the tens of millions of dollars," with "well in excess" of $20 million from Choice alone.

Scotland lures Houston firms

HOUSTON (AP) — Scotland is rapidly attracting U.S. manufacturers, including Texas computer maker Compaq and oil companies and contractors such as Baker Hughes and Brown & Root.

The new Scotland, becoming known as Silicon Glen, is racing neck and neck with Ireland to build foreign-owned computer manufacturing and distribution nerve centers for Europe's 340 million-person, $4.83 trillion market.

"We have Houston-based Compaq, IBM, Digital, Hewlett Packard and NCR," said Martin Togneri, director of Locate in Scotland, the Scottish Development Agency's recruiting arm. "Ireland is our strongest competitor (in Europe) in the electronics industry. They have Apple, Dell and Intel."

For some of the 154 U.S. manufacturers with Scotland operations, proximity to the North Sea was the most important selling point. For others, nearness to Europe and a savings of up to 25 percent on labor costs are central issues.

There are about 313 manufacturers of foreign-based investors in Scotland, according to Locate in Scotland, which has offices in North America, including one in Houston's Galleria area.

"Scotland would be an industrial wasteland without these companies," said Malcolm Clark, a Scotsman and president of Houston-based valve manufacturer Keystone International.

About 10 of those companies are Houston-based. Most qualify for the Fortune 500 list, but some are small, young enterprises.

Many Houston companies say their Scottish operations supply 10 percent to 20 percent of total revenue.

Still, Togneri claims this trend is nothing that will generate the kind of fear surrounding the North American Free Trade Agreement — that companies will pack up jobs and leave the U.S.

Brits ready to duke it out for title

CARDIFF, Wales (AP) — Lennox Lewis' heavyweight championship homecoming could be his farewell because of boxing economics.

Lewis, London-born and Canadian-raised, is scheduled to make his first championship appearance in Brtain when he defends the WBC title against Frank Bruno.

It will be the first heavyweight title match between British boxers this century.

"They will talk about it forever," Lewis said of the British fans' reaction to the fight.

They might have to. And they might have to wait until Saturday night to see it.

Co-promoter Dan Duva said that if rain makes the ring unsafe, the British Boxing Board of Control could postpone the match until 11 p.m. Saturday.

The weather forecast for the period of the fight is for light to heavy rain, with the temperature around 45.

"When I become undisputed heavyweight champion of the world I'm going to want to fight in Britian," the 25-year-old Lewis said. "Because of the casinos and television, however, I might be forced to fight in the United States."

For several years, most major matches, especially involving heavyweights, have been at Las Vegas and Atlantic City casinos. They now are shown on pay-per-view, which means the bout usually doesn't start until after 11 p.m. in the eastern United States to give the undecided fan a last-minute chance to buy.

Lewis' scheduled defense against Tommy Morrison in March and his anticipated match against Riddick Bowe, the WBA and IBF champion, certainly would be on U.S. pay-per-view.

An 10 p.m. CDT start means the fight wouldn't begin until 4 a.m. in Britain, which would devastate the live gate.

The Lewis-Bruno fight is scheduled to start at 12:55 a.m. in Cardiff Arms Park and be seen live on in the United States on HBO at 6:55 p.m. CDT today.

The Battle of Britons came about, Lewis said, "because the Tommy Morrison fight was pushed back and it seemed to be the best fight at the time. Frank Bruno realized the value of comming back."

Bruno will get $1.5 million for only his fifth fight since being stopped in the fifth round by Mike Tyson on Feb. 25, 1989. Under the contract, Lewis could make as much as $6 million, but probably will earn about $3.5 million.

"He's very strong and always in shape," Lewis said of the 31-year-old Bruno, "but when it comes to the big ones he can't turn it over."

Bruno, 36-3 with 35 knockouts, was stopped in the 11th round by Tim Witherspoon at London in a bid for the WBA title July 19, 1986, then lost to Tyson in a challenge for the undisputed title at Las Vegas.

"Third time lucky," Bruno said.

"Good fighter, Lewis. Nice uppercut, useful right hand, moves very well; all that stuff. He's got an Olympic gold medal, and you don't get them out of the sweet shop."

Hallet holds early lead at Southern

PINE MOUNTAIN, Ga. (AP) — Jim Hallet shot a 5-under-par 67 for the first-round lead Thursday in the $700,000 Buick Southern Open at Callaway Gardens.

■ Golf Roundup

Hallet, playing early in the day, birdied his first two holes on the 7,057-yard Mountain View course. He holds a one-shot lead over nine golfers, with eight others within two strokes of the lead.

"I didn't do anything outstanding today," Hallet said. "I just hit it solid."

Loren Roberts, Neal Lancaster, Brandel Chamblee, Bill Kratzert, Larry Mize, Fred Funk, Blaine McCallister, Perry Moss and Billy Andrade all shot 68s. Seven golfers are two shots back at 3-under 69.

Andrade missed a 2½-foot putt on No. 18 that would have given him a share of the lead.

Hallet made a 10-foot birdie putt on the par-4 first hole. On the par-5 second hole, he hit his second shot in a trap guarding the green but was able to blast out a foot from the hole and tap in.

Hallet had been struggling entering this week. He has missed eight cuts since finishing sixth in the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic in July. He has entered 30 tournaments this year, making the cut 10 times.

Hallet attributes his problems to a left wrist injury suffered during a pro-am in San Diego early in the year.

"I pulled some ligaments in my left hand," he said. "For a while, it was nine or 10 Advil a day. I should have taken some time off, but I tried to play through it.

"It hurt my game. I wasn't able to practice. I was just playing. Now it is about 90 percent. It feels a lot better."

German Masters

MONSHEIM, Germany (AP) — David Frost of South Africa fired a 6-under-par 66 Thursday to take the opening-round lead in the German Masters.

Nine players trailed Frost by two strokes, including New Zealand's Frank Nobilo and Australian Rodger Davis.

Players from last week's Ryder Cup competition played poorly, with the exception of Spain's Jose Maria Olazabal, who had a 69.

His teammates, defending champion Barry Lane of England and Germany's Bernhard Langer scored 73s, while the U.S captain Tom Watson took a 74. Spain's Seve Ballesteros was tied for 19th after shooting a 70.

The $900,000 tournament is being played on the 6,839-yard, par-72 Stuttgarter Solitude Golf Course.

National Businesswomen's Week
October 18-24, 1993

PHOTO

(Sample of ad)

Join us in honoring our area business women! If you know a special woman worthy of recognition for a job well done, (or if you ARE ONE YOURSELF) let us and the rest of Midland know about her.

On Sunday, October 17th, we will feature photos and biographical information of some of Midland's most successful women. It's something you will want to be a part of!

To make sure you or that special business woman you know is included in this year's section, simply provide the information needed below and send it in by Thursday, Oct. 14th.

A special time will be designated to take photos of those women who may need a more current one for this feature.

National Businesswomen's Week
October 18-24, 1993

(Sample of ad)

Join us in honoring our area business women! If you know a special woman worthy of recognition for a job well done, (or if you ARE ONE YOURSELF) let us and the rest of Midland know about her.

On Sunday, October 17th, we will feature photos and biographical information of some of Midland's most successful women. It's something you will want to be a part of!

To make sure you or that special business woman you know is included in this year's section, simply provide the information needed below and send it in by Thursday, Oct. 14th.

A special time will be designated to take photos of those women who may need a more current one for this feature.
