

But, he wants clean sweep

White delighted by two PUC panel resignations

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White, delighted that his criticism of the Public Utility Commission helped persuade two members to quit, now wants the lone remaining commissioner to leave.

White took only four hours to find replacements for George Cowden and T.G. Smith, who told the governor Tuesday they will leave PUC on March 1.

"There's an old saying about heat and the kitchen and maybe that's what happened," White said of the resignations. His initial reaction was, "I think it's delightful."

The two new PUC members will include one old one and the housewife White promised during his campaign.

Al Erwin, 38, of Houston was an original member of PUC, appointed by Gov. Dolph Briscoe when the commission went to work in 1975.

Erwin, a former reporter, quit in 1979 and has written a book and worked in public relations since then. He will replace Cowden, also a Briscoe 1975 appointee.

Smith will be replaced by Peggy Rosson, 47, an El Paso housewife who serves on that city's Public Utility Regulatory Board. Last year, White slammed Gov. Bill Clements for saying there was not a housewife in Texas qualified to serve on the PUC. White promised to find a housewife for the panel.

The governor said he called PUC Chairman Mosk Rollins and asked him "if I should wait for the mail or did he have something to tell me."

"I'd like to be batting 3-0 today. That would be fine," White told reporters.

Rollins said he's not ready to go now, but would not talk about his future plans.

"I don't believe the governor asked me to resign. I did have a conversation with him today and he asked what my intentions were. I responded I didn't think it was necessary for me to make any choices at this time," said Rollins, who has 2½ years remaining on his term.

Asked if he would quit before his term ended, he said, "I won't respond to that question."

The governor blames the commission for Texas' increasing electric, water and telephone rates. In January, he asked lawmakers to change the PUC to an elected commission. He said the appointed commission has become a "captive handmaiden" of utility companies.

"We're going to tighten the reins on these utility companies and let them quit running roughshod over the people of Texas," he said after the resignations.

After announcing his appointments, White would not promise lower rates, but said, "We're going to have honest utility bills."

At Cowden's surprise announcement, made at an Austin Rotary Club luncheon, the commissioner defended his efforts:

"Those who think it's easy to work out these problems, those who froth at the mouth to be appointed to this commission will have that opportunity," said Cowden.

"I can hardly wait for our rates to go down," he cracked.

Cowden later said he was quitting because he is "tired of irresponsible statements, of folks saying things they don't know what they're talking about."

"I've decided the best thing to do was let somebody else try to do it for a while," he said. "I guess it's an accumulation of a lot of things. I just have kind of grown tired of it. I decided it was time to go."

Smith, appointed last year by Gov. Bill Clements, said he was leaving because there (See PUC, Page 2)

see. Speakers on all areas of vegetable farming updated growers on latest production trends. The conference was sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Deaf Smith County Extension Vegetable Crops Program Planning Committee, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and Texas Tech University.

Soviet missile test fuels debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The test of a new Soviet intercontinental ballistic missile, reported by U.S. intelligence sources, seems likely to kindle debate over whether Moscow is trying to cheat on the unratified SALT II nuclear arms limitation treaty.

The intelligence sources said Tuesday that a small missile, powered by solid fuel and launched Feb. 8 from Plesetsk, appears to be a new weapon with a number of characteristics different from what they described as a Soviet medium-sized solid-fuel missile tested last October.

The medium-sized missile was reported to have failed in the October test.

According to the sources, who spoke on condition they remain anonymous, a preliminary analysis suggests the Feb. 8 launch may have been the first successful test of a second new Soviet ICBM.

"It was a missile we haven't seen before," said one of the sources.

The missile propelled four warheads, the sources said. It was not known how many warheads were aboard the missile that failed in October.

The text of a letter signed by then-Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, submitting the SALT II treaty to President Carter on June 21, 1979, says the treaty "permits each party to flight test and deploy only one new type of ICBM."

Last December, State Department spokesman Alan Romberg said that if the Soviets "begin to test another new type of ICBM, this would conflict with the terms of SALT II."

While there was no formal comment from either the State or Defense departments, officials cautioned against jumping to the conclusion that the Soviets have violated the SALT agreement, to which the Reagan administration has said it will abide so long as the Soviets do likewise.

Speaking privately, State Department officials said they were not "aware of any charges that the Soviets may be preparing to violate the agreement."

Intelligence sources said late last year the United States had evidence that the Soviets were developing four types of advanced land-based missiles.

Two were described as probably improved versions of current Soviet weapons, the powerful and highly-accurate SS-18s and SS-19s.

A third missile mentioned by the intelligence sources at the time was the medium-sized solid-fuel missile tested in October. The fourth missile they discussed was identified as a small solid-fuel weapon, which appears to fit the description of the missile reported tested last week.

The Soviets long have powered their land-based and submarine-launched strategic missiles with liquid fuel while the United States switched to solid fuel about 20 years ago.

Missile specialists say solid fuel is more reliable, less corrosive, safer to handle and requires less maintenance.

Motion seeks dismissal of murderer's indictment

KERMIT, Texas (AP) — The state's attempt to strengthen a capital murder case through a re-indictment of Michael Eugene Sharp in the June 11, 1982 stabbing death of a Kermit woman has brought a protest from Sharp's attorney.

Glen Williamson, appointed last month to represent Sharp, filed a motion seeking dismissal of the latest indictment on grounds it violates the state's Speedy Trial Act.

Williamson, an Andrews lawyer, noted that the Winkler County grand jury action last Nov. 24 came more than 120 days after the offense.

District Judge James Clack set a pre-trial hearing on the motion for 9 a.m. Friday.

Sharp, 26, is accused of killing Brenda Kay Broadway after abducting her and her two daughters from a Kermit car wash.

The former toolpusher was convicted in Lubbock on Nov. 17 and sentenced to life in prison for the murder of Christie Elms, 8. The bodies of Ms. Broadway and her daughter were found in shallow graves near the Winkler-Ector County line.

Iranian winner in scuffle, hijacks jetliner to Mexico

By CAM ROSSIE Associated Press Writer

NUEVO LAREDO, Mexico (AP) — A former Iranian Air Force pilot who blamed America for turmoil in his homeland calmly threatened to blow up a Rio Airways plane he commandeered but had to scuffle with soldiers before he took control, passengers said.

"Everybody was pretty calm because he was pretty calm after a while," said Sgt. Baron Liggins, 24, of Indianapolis, one of those aboard during Tuesday's hijacking.

Hussein Shey Kholya, 37, demanded to be flown to Cuba, but Liggins and 15 other passengers, two flight attendants and two pilots were freed unharmed several hours later, after the plane had been diverted to the airport at this Mexican city, just across the border from Laredo, Texas.

Rio Airways Flight 252 was seized Tuesday morning halfway through its one-hour flight to Dallas from the Army town of Killeen in Central Texas.

The hijacker assembled a submachine gun after taking it from a briefcase and appeared to be carrying a Molotov cocktail-type bomb in the pocket of his "jungle-like" pants, the co-pilot said.

Kholya, accompanied by two immigration officials, flew on a Lear jet late Tuesday afternoon from Nuevo Laredo to Mexico City, where officials said they were seeking to have him accepted by one of the countries he wanted to go. They said they had guaranteed him safe conduct out of Mexico.

A statement from Mexico's Interior Ministry identified Kholya as a former Air Force pilot and an Iranian activist who had opposed the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

The hijacker told Rio Airways chief pilot Michael McNeil and co-pilot Frank Flores he hijacked their plane because he wanted Americans to be made aware of what was going on in Iran.

Kholya produced three copies of a statement that said 26,000 Iranians "have been killed for no cause" and said he would blow up the plane unless the statement was distributed to the American news media, Flores said.

Iran has been in turmoil since the overthrow of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in January 1979 and it has been fighting a border war with Iraq since September 1980.

"He wanted to prove his point. He was an Iranian, he said. He asked for no money. He made it clear he had no regard for his own life," Flores said.

"He threatened to blow up the plane if his demands were not met, but I didn't think he'd do it," the co-pilot added.

The flight was above Lake Whitney, about 75 miles north of Killeen, when trouble began aboard Rio Airways' DCH-7, a turbo-prop De Havilland.

Liggins, a soldier stationed at Fort Hood, near Killeen, had just been transferred to Germany and was on his way to Dallas for a connecting flight to St. Louis.

Liggins, sitting two rows behind the man later identified as Kholya, was unaware that the man had just told flight attendant Katie Springer, "I have a bomb." But he and two other Army men leaped to their feet and began fighting the man after they saw him strike the other attendant, Corina Hallmark, on the head when, after alerted by Ms. Springer, she turned to move quickly to the rear of the Woman battles 'dozer, and wins

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — When Dorothy Richter saw what a bulldozer had done to her beloved pecan tree, all she could think of was stopping it in its tracks, which she did.

She planted herself in front of the bulldozer and refused to budge.

"I told the foreman that I was not going to let them work," Mrs. Richter told the Austin American-Statesman Tuesday. "I told them, 'You're not going to take another cupful of dirt away from here.'"

"When they kept coming, I got in front of the machine. I said, 'I mean what I say. You'll have to scoop me up, too.'"

The workers were building a parking lot Monday on the east side of Fire Station No. 9 at the corner of 43rd Street and Speedway as part of a renovation project. While preparing to pour asphalt, the workers cut into the tree's roots.

The huge tree, listed on the City Registry of Trees, is the biggest pecan tree in Hyde Park and perhaps the city, Mrs. Richter said.

Mrs. Richter, 62, one of the founders of the Hyde Park Neighborhood Association, learned of the parking lot construction Monday and went to investigate.

"It just made me ill to see what they had done," said Mrs. Richter, who fears the tree may have been irreparably damaged. When she realized the workers intended to pour asphalt, she decided to stop them.

"How was the tree going to get its future nourishment?" she said. "I am concerned about the future of that tree."

While workers took a lunch break, she convinced several city officials to meet her at the fire station to talk about the situation.

But by the time she returned to the construction site, the crew was preparing to begin work once again. That's when Mrs. Richter made her stand in the bulldozer's path.

"I didn't know what else to do," she said. "It wasn't very dramatic."

The foreman "was very nice," she said. "He kind of kidded me. He asked me if I would feed him when he was out of work."

When city officials arrived, they decided to call off work on the parking lot until they had studied the matter.

"I hope we haven't damaged the tree," said James Petty, assistant administrator of the Fire Department. "That certainly wasn't our intention."

At Mrs. Richter's suggestion, city planners are examining cost estimates of alternative parking lot surfaces that might be acceptable to her and her neighbors, Petty said. The woman led a fight in the early 1970s to stop the city from closing the fire station.

"The station and that tree are a rallying point for the entire Hyde Park area," said Mrs. Richter. Every October, the neighborhood holds a festival underneath the tree to celebrate the victory in keeping the fire station open, she said.

But if the city decides to proceed with construction of the parking lot, it won't be without a fight.

Mrs. Richter, who says the incident illustrates the need for an ordinance to protect trees, said she won't be the only one standing in front of the bulldozers if they show up again.

"I wouldn't have been the only one out there Monday if we had realized what was going on," she said.

NRA opposes ban on bullets

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill to prohibit possession of "cop-killer" bullets should be rejected by Texas lawmakers because the legislation also would encompass ammunition used by sportsmen for hunting and target practice, a legislative panel has been told.

A spokesman for the National Rifle Association testified Tuesday that his organization agrees with the danger that teflon-coated bullets pose to policemen, even with bullet-resistant vests.

Herb Chambers of Granbury said the bill should include the brand name of the bullet that law enforcement officers are most concerned about.

Two bills being considered by the House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee refer to ammunition which can penetrate a specific thickness of bullet-resistant material.

"The writing of the bill is the danger here. It includes an awful lot of other ammunition that is around. Birdshot will go through a (bulletproof) vest at five feet," Chambers said.

"I don't know of any sportsman that wants to kill a police officer," added Richard Behan, director of the Texas State Rifle Association.

The bills by Reps. Lloyd Criss, D-La Marque, and Bill Ceverha, R-Richardson, were sent to subcommittee. A similar bill has been approved by a Senate committee.

Richardson Police Sgt. D.E. Golden told the committee that teflon-coated bullets can penetrate bullet-resistant vests worn by police, and "we do not get paid to take unnecessary risks. This is a very real threat to our safety."

Jerry Spain, representing a policeman's organization, said "The bullet simply does no good for anybody."

Austin Police Chief Frank Dyson, who showed results of tests on the teflon-coated bullets, said the ammunition is a dangerous threat to officers. "It's made for one purpose and one purpose only," he said.

Shots followed manager's screams

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A nightclub manager's screams for help triggered the gunfire that seriously injured a military policeman during a Monday robbery at Fort Bliss, an Army spokesman says.

Eugene Hilliard, manager of the Del Norte Club for non-commissioned officers, was told by three masked men to "get rid" of a military policeman who had just driven up. Instead, Hilliard "ran out the door hollering 'robbery, robbery,'" Lt. Col. Dave Stewart said.

Hilliard and military policeman Edward Muszkiewicz were hit by the same blast from a shotgun, Stewart said.

Army surgeons spent several hours Tuesday trying to reconstruct Muszkiewicz's left arm, which was shattered by the point-blank blast.

Hospital spokesman Jim Bryant said Muszkiewicz, 21, underwent 10 hours of surgery Monday, where a section of vein from his leg was transplanted to his arm. Additional surgery Tuesday was to "straighten out the bones" in his arm and to remove bone fragments.

Hilliard, 37, underwent surgery Monday for wounds to his hand, arm and side. He and Muszkiewicz were in stable condition Tuesday, Bryant said.

Wife discovered missing

Husband freed after three weeks in connection with disappearance

ANGLETON, Texas (AP) — A man jailed for almost three weeks on charges of murdering his wife has been released because authorities were unable to find the body.

Brazoria County officials Tuesday dismissed murder charges against Herman E. "Cowboy" Bennett, a 47-year-old oilfield worker, because they have no proof the women was murdered, said Assistant District Attorney John Davis.

However, sheriff's investigators refused to call off the search.

"A woman doesn't leave her makeup, her personal papers and pictures of her child (from a previous marriage) behind," said Sgt. Glyn Gibbs.

Bennett was arrested Jan. 27 and held in the Brazoria County jail on $50,000 bond, Davis said.

While Bennett waited in jail, Brazoria County sheriff's investigators used a back-hoe excavator to dig up the half acre lot of his home in a search for Jackie Lucas Bennett, 39, his wife of only three days. They found nothing.

Davis said he presented "substantial probable cause" that Mrs. Bennett had been killed when he requested a judge to issue the arrest warrant. Davis said Bennett made statements to "various associates" during "bar talk."

Davis said the statements claimed the woman had been killed and buried near the Bennett home.

The arrest warrant was issued because authorities thought Bennett was preparing to leave the county, Davis said. But since no body has been found, he said, Bennett could not be kept in jail.

"We have probable cause to look for the body. But since we haven't located it yet, we decided to dismiss the charges," Davis said.

Bennett and his bride knew each other only two weeks before they were married last September. Three days after the wedding, Mrs. Bennett disappeared. A few days later, a woman friend notified sheriff's deputies that Mrs. Bennett was missing.

Investigators started digging near Bennett's rented home after getting permission from the owner.

"The more we dug, the more nervous he became," said Davis. "If we didn't think there was a good chance of his leaving, we never would have filed an arrest warrant."

Rollins blamed White for making the battle over utility regulation a personal battle. Rollins said the resignations gave White an "opportunity to demonstrate" the governor's ability to pick better commissioners.

Rollins, who has 2½ years left on his six-year term, said White has been "totally dishonest" in his public com-which marijuana was discovered, but he maintains it was not his and that he was unaware of its presence.

May 23 hearings set for Brazos River claims

WACO, Texas (AP) — Hearings will be held May 23 on claims by people concerning water rights within the Brazos III segment of the Brazos River basin, officials of the Texas Water Commission have announced.

A list of claimants and the time and place for each hearing will be sent to each claimant on record. Claimants who do not appear and present evidence in support of their claims will, "in all probability," lose any rights to which they may be otherwise entitled, officials said.

Anyone claiming the right to impound, divert and use state water within the Brazos III Segment for purposes other than domestic or livestock uses is required to file a sworn claim of water rights with the department before May 16.

The hearings are part of a one-time statewide evaluation and inventory of water rights required by the Water Rights Adjudication Act.

After all hearings are completed, the commission will issue its ruling, which will be filed in a district court for court approval.

The Brazos III Segment includes all or portions of Johnson, Hill, Bosque, McLennan, Limestone, Falls, Bell, Robertson, Milam, Brazos and Burleson counties.

Passive solar energy system explained at Realtors' meeting

The use of passive solar energy in homes was outlined to members of the Hereford Board of Realtors during a regular monthly luncheon meeting Tuesday at the country club.

James Gulde, owner of Gulde Block & Brick Co. of Amarillo, was the guest speaker and used slides to explain the use of radiant heating and cooling in homes of the future. He claimed the use of passive solar systems are simple and relatively inexpensive in contrast to active solar systems.

The passive solar system for heating and cooling uses a solarium, masonry blocks, and other conventional building materials to cut energy costs by as much as 30 to 75 percent. The system requires a "collector" wall facing south, insulated exterior walls.

The temperature control is based on mass, so it is not feasible to convert current buildings, said Gulde. The collector wall is made of concrete block turned on its side and glazed on both sides with tempered glass.

This wall collects, exchanges, and circulates heat through a simple network of "air paths" around the base of the structure and throughout the interior walls. The heat then radiates slowly and evenly into the interior space.

Gulde said students at Caprock High School in Amarillo selected the system for use in the construction of a medium-price solar home, a project endorsed by the Amarillo Board of Realtors and the Panhandle Home Builders Association.

In the Caprock house, reports Gulde, the inside temperature only varies one and a half degrees over a 24-hour period. He said the construction cost is only slightly higher in a medium-priced home, while a savings can be projected on a large, expensive home.

This system was designed by Joe and Buddy Beard of Xenarcx, Inc., and is listed under the trade name of Xen-Wall. The system is licensed exclusively through masonry block manufacturers.

The use of a greenhouse, built around the solar collector wall, is an important part of the system. Sunlight through the greenhouse strikes the collector wall, heating the trapped air. Warm air rises, zig-zags up and down the wall and into a duct that runs around the base of the house. A small fan forces the air into the space between the drywall and the block wall. The other insulated walls create a "thermal mass", trapping the warm air and radiating it throughout the inner space.

The collector wall is so constructed that summer sunlight does not strike the wall. Blinds may also be used to block the sun's rays. The low-horsepower fan that circulates warm air in winter also moves cooler air or conventional refrigerated air through the walls, keeping them cool in the summer.

Melvin Jayroe introduced the program for the Realtors Tuesday. Charlie Hill presided over the meeting in the absence of board president Pat Ferguson.

Two new members were installed to the board. They were Carol Sue LeGate of Top Properties, Inc., and Glen Phibbs of HCR Real Estate.

Earnings up $61.5 million after Pioneer's special charge

AMARILLO, Texas -- Pioneer Corporation (NYSE) earned $61.5 million, or $1.66 per share, in 1982 after a special charge, the Amarillo-based energy resources corporation reported today.

The special charge made to provide for future losses on uranium properties, and taken at mid-year, amounted to $29.7 million after taxes, or 80 cents per share. Without that charge, Pioneer would have earned $91.2 million or $2.46 per share, in 1982, K.B. Watson, chief executive officer and chairman of the board, said.

Additionally, there was a year-end write-down of tubular goods inventory of approximately $10 million, or 14 cents per share after provision for income tax.

The corporation's consolidated revenues for the year amounted to $1.1 billion. The comparable figures for 1981 were net income of $110.2 million, earnings of $2.96 per share, and revenues of $1.2 billion.

In announcing the 1982 results, Watson attributed the decreased earnings to the special charge, to lower demand for natural gas because of the recession and to the inventory write-down.

bomb could have been triggered by remote control.

After McNeil told passengers to remain calm, the hijacker dashed into the cabin and began assembling what appeared to be an automatic weapon. He then kicked the cabin door shut and the passengers never saw him again until the plane arrived in Nuevo Laredo, Liggins added.

Ms. Springer said the man settled on Nuevo Laredo as a destination after the flight crew told him the plane could not reach Mexico City or Havana. She said she never saw a bomb, but the man indicated the explosive device was in his hip pocket.

Liggins said when the hijacker went into the cockpit and the plane landed, everyone remained calm. He said he read a book and slept for awhile.

The other passengers also remained calm while on the plane, Ms. Springer said, although "emotions were running high," she said, when some of the passengers and their families were reunited later in the day at Killen.

Rio Airways flew six of the passengers on to Dallas Saturday night. They arrived at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport at 11:22 p.m., 12 hours and 27 minutes after their scheduled arrival. The airline put them up for the night at a hotel at the airport.

Rio officials said Kholya was able to get aboard the plane with the submachine gun and the other devices he had because their airline has no metal-detection device at airports. Commuter airlines are not required to screen passengers, the officials added.

He died Saturday at Ranger General Hospital following a lengthy illness.

Mr. Marlow is survived by a sister, Mrs. Bessie Story of Hereford.

He was born Jan. 31, 1924, in Eastland and married Lou Underwood Feb. 13, 1969. He was a member of First United Methodist Church in Ranger and the American Legion Post in Monahans.

Mr. Marlow was a veteran of World War II. He had served as circulation manager for several newspapers in Texas until his retirement due to ill health in 1980, when he moved to Ranger.

Other survivors include his wife of Ranger; a son, Bill Jr. of Tyler; a stepson, Gary Gregory of Knoxville, Tenn.; a stepdaughter, Mrs. Jen Simmons of Vian, Okla.; and five stepgrandchildren.

Reduced demand for natural gas and a substantial decline in hydrocarbon drilling activity during 1982 limited the revenues of some Pioneer operations that have been among the most profitable in recent years, Watson said. Gas sales from production which Pioneer owns, special contract sales by the gas transmission division to other pipelines, and contract drilling services were particularly affected.

"The most encouraging developments for Pioneer in 1982 were the increased sales of natural gas liquids and the economic strength of the West Texas region served by our gas distribution division," Watson said. Revenues from gas liquids were 11.1 percent higher than in 1981. The distribution company achieved higher volumes and revenues in gas sales to residential and commercial customers in West Texas, where 1982 construction activity reached a record level and unemployment remained well below the national average.

Police ask to ban marriage rule

HOUSTON (AP) — Two suburban police officers who plan to get married have asked a federal court to strike down two rules which would require one of them to resign if they wed.

Gail Mahaffey and Larry Kello filed a lawsuit Tuesday against the director of the Civil Service Commission of Pasadena, three members of the commission, the city of Pasadena and the Texas Civil Service Commission.

The suit challenges a 1969 ruling by the Pasadena commission, stating that relatives could not serve on the police force together.

The suit also asks the court to strike down a 1974 commission ruling specifying that married couples could not stay on the force and that the spouse with the least time on the force would have to resign.

Ms. Mahaffey and Kello said the two rulings by the have caused them "grave mental distress."

The couple also asked that their complaint be certified as a class action suit because "several members" of the department who want to marry have been forced to give up a job or live together.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor:

I am writing to ask Hereford area residents to do themselves and their neighbors a favor; check with the telephone company before digging near posted cable warning signs.

Last year, Southwestern Bell telephone cable repair costs in Texas totaled almost $5 million for more than 6,000 incidents of cable cuts and damage.

Sometimes, cable damage affects only a few people and can be repaired quickly. All too often, however, cable damage means loss of telephone service to major sections of cities or even entire communities. Cable cuts sometimes isolate hospitals, police and fire departments.

A large number of long distance transcontinental coaxial cables run through Texas. These cables carry vital long distance telephone messages and data communications to millions of businesses and people. When those cables are cut, long distance calls are routed in other ways if possible, but a jammed network can result, affecting many callers.

A suggestion for anyone planning digging activities: before plowing, building fences or terraces, installing sprinklers, landscaping or digging, please look for telephone company cable warning signs. Also, please watch out for aerial cable when working with tall equipment.

The cable warning signs display a telephone number that may be called to notify the telephone company of any work planned near cable routes.

When we receive a call, we will promptly send someone to pinpoint the exact cable location. We do bill for damage to our cables, and the repair bills can be quite costly.

Please call before work begins near telephone cables. In Texas, ask the operator for the Enterprise 9800 number to report digging activities. If a sign is posted for AT&T Long Lines cable, the number to use is COLLECT (214) 825-4400.

A simple free phone call is the best insurance to help us protect the most convenient and reliable telephone network in the world.

was no chance the Senate would confirm his nomination.

"Rather than just prolong this thing I thought now would be time to go ahead and leave," said Smith.

He said dealing with the criticism was "not easy" but "tolerable."

The criticism, led by White, has come from legislators and others. White wanted the PUC to get rid of the fuel adjustment clause, which allows utility companies to automatically pass fuel costs on to consumers. Cowden said he tried to satisfy White, a longtime friend. The commission recently passed a rule aimed at changing the fuel clause, but White said the new rule merely hides the charge.

"I tried diligently to work something out that would be satisfactory with him from the standpoint of the fuel rule," said Cowden. "We haven't been able to do that. He told me personally what he wanted. Then his staff told me on the second try what he wanted. That didn't work. I do not know what they want."

Cowden said he still considers White a friend.

"I haven't been happy with (White's) criticism, but he has not made me quit. There are some members of the Legislature that have joined in that and there are some lawyers and some activists who have joined in that. It's just gotten to be tiresome," Cowden said.

Rollins blamed White for making the battle over utility regulation a personal battle. Rollins said the resignations gave White an "opportunity to demonstrate" the governor's ability to pick better commissioners.

Rollins, who has 2½ years left on his six-year term, said White has been "totally dishonest" in his public comments about utility regulation.

"I think it's been personal for a long time," he said of White's attacks on the commission.

PUC General Counsel Allen King said, "We can take criticism," King said, adding, however, that White's attacks have left the commission in "chaos and turmoil."

Smith, a retired Army general, said he would move back to San Antonio. Cowden said he would go to work in the Austin office of a Waco law firm, and would not be involved in utility cases.

Distributing Valentines

Hereford High School students in Julia Helms' office duplicating practices class distributed handmade Valentine cards to residents of King's Manor Retirement Home and Westgate Nursing Home Monday. Earlier in the school year, the students made coloring books and distributed them to children at Hereford Day Care Center.

Hospital Auxiliary hosts doctors' tea

The Deaf Smith General Hospital Auxiliary hosted a Valentine Tea for local doctors and their wives on Sunday afternoon at the Community Center.

Following a Valentine motif, an intricate lace tablecloth covered the serving table where sandwiches, cookies, mints, coffee and punch were served. Silver and crystal appointments were used. The centerpiece, courtesy of Flowers West, was a white daisy floral arrangement accented with red ribbon bows.

In attendance were Dr. and Mrs. David Baddour, Dr. and Mrs. Nadir Khuri, Dr. and Mrs. Duffy McBrayer, Dr. A.T. Mims, Dr. and Mrs. M.W. Noble; Mr. and Mrs. Jim Bullard, hospital administrator; and auxiliary members, Juanita Bennet, Lupe Cerda, Olivia Denning, Bertha P. Dettmann, Mildred Guinn, Baxter and Gwen London, Theda Seiver, Anna Stindt, Jane White, and Mary E. Williams.

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Feb. 16, the 47th day of 1983. There are 318 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 16th, 1959, Fidel Castro became premier of Cuba.

On this date:

In 1804, a force of U.S. Marines slipped into Tripoli harbor and burned the U.S. Navy frigate Philadelphia, which had been captured by pirates.

In 1871, the Franco-Prussian War came to an end with France's defeat.

In 1873, a republic was proclaimed in Spain.

In 1945, massive U.S. air raids on Tokyo began during World War II.

Ten years ago: The murder conviction of 1st Lt. William Calley for his role in the My Lai killings in South Vietnam was upheld by the U.S. Army Court of Military Review.

Five years ago: Japan and China signed a $20 billion trade pact in Peking.

One year ago: Sen. Harrison Williams of New Jersey was sentenced to three years in prison and fined $50,000 for his conviction on bribery and conspiracy charges in the Abscam investigation.

Today's birthday: Film director John Schlesinger is 57.

Thought for today: "Few people get up bright and early, but most of us just get up early." — Anonymous.

Ann Landers

New breed callous, uncaring

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A while back I read a letter in your column about how a young man drowned in a swimming pool because the lifeguard said it wasn't "my territory." I was shocked. This morning I read a United Press International story that convinces me we are growing a new breed of human that is very different from my generation.

water was too cold. Will you please explain what goes on in the hearts and minds of such people? I am at a loss to understand. — Disgusted In Missoula

DEAR MISS: Several readers sent the same clipping and asked similar questions. I have no answers. Perhaps the new breed is a result of a mobile society that has emerged since World War II.

Economics are such that millions of families move every three to four years. They don't wish to put down roots or get to know their neighbors. They have grown callous, uncaring and suspicious. It's every man for himself.

Happily there are many exceptions, and I wish the media would give more attention to acts of generosity and heroism. We need to believe in brotherly love again.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Can you suggest a tactful way to approach in-laws (widows and widowers) concerning family heirlooms after the death of a spouse?

Even though they may be only trinkets (watches, rings, bracelets), should they not be passed down to bloodline relatives? This can be a delicate subject when one feels strongly about it and yet wishes to maintain a friendly relationship. — Bothered In Spokane

DEAR SPOKE: There is no tactful way to tell a widow or widower to come across with the family heirlooms because they rightfully belong to blood relatives. My advice is to keep quiet, or you will damage the relationship beyond repair.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Will you please check this out with one of your medical authorities? Since such great things are being done now with plastic surgery, is it possible to change the eyes of children with Down's syndrome and to restructure their tongues? These children are so lovable and willing. If they looked more normal, people might be less fearful of them. Could restructuring the tongue enable them to talk normally? I don't know who to ask but it seems like an important thing to try. Thank you. — R.R.

DEAR R.R.: Dr. Joseph G. McCarthy, director of the Institute of Reconstructive Plastic Surgery at New York University Medical Center, says victims of Down's syndrome (also known as Mongolism) can be helped to look more normal in appearance by undergoing surgery around the eyes and ears. Surgery can also be performed on the jaw to alter the relationship between the upper and lower teeth. This, along with tongue surgery, enables the child to eat with less difficulty and to speak more distinctly. Many Downs syndrome children have benefited greatly from these surgical procedures.

Anyone who wishes additional information should write to the Society for the Facially Disfigured, 550 First Ave., New York, N.Y., 10016. They do splendid work.

Some bargain clothing should be labeled "wash 'n' swear" wear.

Little rules of life: If it's important, it will fall unnoticed into the wastebasket.

Club holds Valentine supper Monday night

Members of Young Mothers' Study Club celebrated Valentine's Day with a Valentine supper for their husbands Monday night. Each member brought a dish and the main course was catered by Caison's Bar-B-Que.

After dining, all present enjoyed a game of charades.

Members and guests present included Kathy and David Boyd, Dee Dee and Jerry Coker, Tracy and Phil Coker, Pam and David Wagner, Jeanne and Larry Lomsas, Lisa and Robbie Blakely.

Also, Carla and Gerry Hollinger, Janie and Shawn

Poland, Karla and Donald Vasek, Rochelle and David Hutcherson, Becky and Gary Stovall, and Alice and Corky Lockmiller.

The digital computer came into being when first man learned to count on his fingers.

If whatever it is makes someone else feel well, it'll probably be much less expensive for you to go on feeling poorly, as usual.

Whitefaces nip Palo Duro for initial District 3-5A win

BY LES GILES
Sports Editor

AMARILLO — It's often been said that going winless in a district season is about as difficult as going undefeated.

Hereford's boys proved that Tuesday night here, tripping Palo Duro, 60-59, in an exciting District 3-5A basketball game before fewer than 500 fans.

The victory snapped an 11-game losing streak by the Whitefaces, and it marked their first league triumph, after 14 straight setbacks.

The contest was close throughout. It was tied 11 different times, and the lead changed hands 19 times, before Hereford went ahead for good (56-55) with 2:50 left to play.

Palo Duro got within a point (58-57) with 47 seconds to go, but Terry Shelton scored five seconds later to give the Herd a three-point (60-57) cushion.

Then, Gene Polley dropped in a short jumper with 27 seconds remaining to bring the Dons within a point (60-59) again, but then missed two shots from close range in the final dozen seconds as Hereford preserved its first district victory this season.

Hereford, now 1-14 in league play and 6-21 overall, enjoyed the biggest lead of the game (11-6) with 2:38 left in the opening period.

But, the Dons scored six unanswered points to go in front by one (12-11) with 25 seconds to go in the stanza, and it was nip and tuck the rest of the way.

After that, the widest margin for either team was four points (37-33) by Hereford midway through the third period. But, again, PD came back to knot the count.

After a 31-31 standoff at the half, Hereford slowed things down in the third period, and when the final stanza began clinged to a 41-39 lead.

PD tied the game quickly on a Doug Butler stuff with four seconds gone in the final period, then rapidly moved out to a 45-42 lead on jumpers by William Freeman and Butler.

But, again, Hereford rallied.

Four straight points by Terry Shelton (a basket and two foul shots) pushed the Herd in front, 48-47, with 5:12 to play.

Palo Duro then caught fire, hitting four of five baskets during the next two minutes (two by Butler and a pair by Freddie Taylor) to grab a 55-52 lead with 3:03 remaining.

Brian Taylor's two-pointer, off a rebound, brought the Herd to within a point. Then, when he missed a chance to complete a three-point play Steve Welch grabbed the missed attempt and put it back in to give Hereford a 56-55 lead.

THE HEREFORD BRAND SPORTS

Page 6—The Hereford Brand—Wednesday, Feb. 16, 1983

Jeff Streun was fouled following a PD turnover, and canned both ends of a one-and-one situation with 2:12 to go, giving Hereford a 58-55 lead .. an advantage it never relinquished.

For the game, Hereford was 25 of 47 from the field for 53 percent. Palo Duro canned 27 of 53 attempts for 50.9 percent.

Hereford actually won the game from the charity stripe, hitting 10 of 17, compared to five of seven by the Dons, now 8-7 in district play and 13-12 overall.

For Hereford, last night's game was a marked turnaround from the Jan. 14 meeting, when PD prevailed, 54-48. In that contest, the Whitefaces hit just 32 percent (18 of 56) from the field, while the Dons were 24 of 52 for 46 percent.

While Hereford substituted only once Tuesday, the Dons played 10 different players.

Four Herd starters found the range for double figures, led by Welch with 16 and Streun with 15. Taylor chipped in a dozen markers and Shelton added 11, including seven of 10 foul shots.

Welch did most of his damage in the second half, scoring 10 points. Streun, meanwhile, scored 13 of his 15 points in the first half — 11 of them in the second period when he was five of six from the field.

For the game, Welch was eight of 13 from the field; Streun six of nine and Taylor six of 11.

The Dons were led by Butler's 18 points and eight rebounds. William Freeman added 10 points, while Eugene Sims and Taylor each chipped in eight.

Elsewhere Tuesday, Plainview kept a one-game lead over idle Caprock in the chase for the loop title.

The Bulldogs, led by a 41-point performance by Gil Wright (the district's leading scorer), rolled past Lubbock High, 81-72.

So, with only Friday remaining in the regular season, Plainview is 12-3 in district play, while Caprock is a game back at 11-4. And, those two meet Friday night in Plainview. A Caprock victory would leave the two tied for first place, and possibly force a one-game playoff to determine the league champion. Both are already in the playoffs.

Amarillo High and Tascosa won Tuesday, leaving the two deadlocked at 9-6 in the district standings. The Sandies rolled past Coronado, 78-51, while the Rebels nipped Monterey, 64-63, thanks to 28 points from James Dawn.

In addition to the Caprock at Plainview clash Friday, other contests find Lubbock at Hereford, Palo Duro at AHS and Coronado at Tascosa.

Boston College upsets No. 6 St. John's, 92-75

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP
Sports Writer

Boston College forward Jay Murphy takes his best shots against the St. John's basketball team. At least it seems that way to Lou Carnesecca.

"We seem to be his tonic," said the St. John's coach after Murphy scored 30 points Tuesday night to lead the 18th-ranked Eagles to a 92-75 basketball upset over the sixth-ranked Redmen.

It was the second time this season that Murphy helped the Eagles upset Carnesecca's team. The first time, the Redmen were 14-0 when they were shocked by B.C.

"The last time he hurt us inside," Carnesecca said about Murphy. "Normally, when you see a big guy shooting from the outside like that, you let him have the shot. This guy, you can't. He's a very deceiving player. Now that I think about it, he also hurt us last year."

Murphy, a 6-foot-9, 220-pounder with a 16.6 average coming into the game at St. John's Alumni Hall, hit 11 of his 15 shots from the floor, many of them from long range.

"I wanted to try to play away from the basket," Murphy said. "For the last two years, I've been playing the post. I had a 15-to-17-foot range when I was in high school. Even though I was playing the post, I continuously worked on my jump shot."

The Redmen led by 38-35 at the half, but let the game get away from them in the last 20 minutes.

"Our defense broke down for 4-5 minutes in that second half," Carnesecca said. "We just totally disintegrated. It was just their game — they made us look terrible."

The game involved some pressure for the Eagles, who just entered the Top Twenty for the first time this season and had something to prove.

"But we can't let this win get us carried away," said Boston College Coach Gary Williams, in his first year at B.C. "We have to stay realistic — keep it in perspective. You can have that tendency to get carried away after a big week like this."

"The one thing this win has probably done for us, it's given us confidence we can win on the road."

Murphy also had a team-high 11 rebounds and John Garriss had 20 points, 10 rebounds and four blocked shots as the Eagles improved their record to 18-4 overall and 8-4 in the Big East. The Redmen, 20-3, lost for the third time in 12 Big East games.

In the only other game involving a ranked team, No. 4 Houston crushed Texas 106-63 in a Southwest Conference game as Clyde Drexler scored 21 points. It was the Cougars' 20th consecutive conference victory and the 17th straight win at home.

Houston had a 53-26 at the half behind the shooting of Michael Young, Akeem Olujuwon and Reid Gettys. Olujuwon, the Cougars' 7-foot sophomore, also blocked 10 shots to set a season record for the school with 127 blocks. He broke a record set by Dwight Davis with 125 during the 1970-71 season.

The Cougars' victory over the Longhorns had a revenge motive attached to it. They had been asked by some of the university's football players to avenge Houston's humiliating 50-0 football loss to the Longhorns in Austin last season.

"The football players really wanted us to run it up. They wanted us to score 100 points because of what happened to them at Austin," Olujuwon.

"The game meant a lot to the football players. They wanted us to win by 50 and they were sincere about it," added Drexler.

In other action, Mississippi State defeated Georgia 73-64 in a bizarre game that included four Bulldog fouls at the end — three of which were technicals on Coach Hugh Durham.

Mississippi State hit seven times from the free throw line in the final second of the game to turn a two-point lead into nine points in a hurry. Jeff Malone, the SEC's leading scorer, sank five of those free throws.

With 47 seconds left, Malone, the game's top scorer with 30 points, hit a jumper for a 64-62 Mississippi

State lead. Kelvin Hildreth then fouled James Banks with 26 seconds left and Banks sank both free throws to tie it at 64.

Georgia's Terry Fair was then called for charging after Hildreth was knocked to the floor. Durham argued with officials, and continued his protests until he was charged with three technicals.

Hildreth shot his 1-1, making them both, and Malone followed with five of his six attempts for the final margin.

In other action, Terrell Schlundt scored a career-high 28 points as Marquette whipped Loyola of Chicago 97-85; a slam dunk by Mark West gave Old Dominion the lead for good with 2:25 left and the Monarchs held on for a 76-73 victory over Virginia Tech; Butch Graves scored 27 points as Yale stopped Brown 91-79 and Horace Owens scored a game-high 21 points and made the winning basket with one second to go to give Rhode Island an upset 64-63 victory over St. Joseph's.

Oilier coach breaks leg

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers Coach Ed Biles says he slipped on an oil slick and broke his right leg when he stopped for coffee at a convenience store.

Doctors told Biles his leg would be in a cast for about six weeks.

Decision time Friday

Penn State star eyes pro ranks

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Todd Blackledge says he will know by Friday if the lure of professional football is enough to draw him away from the university he guided to the national championship.

And Penn State Coach Joe Paterno said he will be happy for Blackledge no matter what road his quarterback chooses.

Blackledge, honored Tuesday night as the 1983 recipient of the Davey O'Brien award as the nation's outstanding quarterback, said he will soon end the suspense on whether he will use his final year of eligibility with the Nittany Lions.

"I can't afford to say anything until then (Friday)," said Blackledge. "It's a back-and-forth thing but I need to clear the air."

Blackledge, hero of Penn State's 27-23 victory over Georgia in the Sugar Bowl, said he believes he will be a No. 1 pick in the National Football League draft in April.

"There's no question I'll go in the first round because the (1982) season and the Sugar Bowl solidified that for me," he said. "There is no question about that. The question is where do I want to play next year."

He said he had also chatted with the United States Football League about "the options that might be open."

Blackledge said he just wanted to "clear the air and protect his relationship with Coach Paterno."

Paterno, who was also in Fort Worth for the honor which included a $10,000 scholarship for Penn State, said "I'll be happy for Todd either way."

Blackledge will graduate in June but still has another year of eligibility if he chooses to use it.

"I've tried to impress upon Todd that he has to do what is best for him and that he has no burden or obligation to Penn State fans," Paterno said. "He has already had a tremendous career."

"I do want him to graduate. He has too much potential as a human being not to. He could never play pro football and still make $1 million by the time he was 40."

Paterno said he wasn't certain whether he will be at Friday's press conference in State College.

He joked, "I know one thing I've got to stop being his buddy. We've been buddy, buddy since the Sugar Bowl. I've got to put him back to work."

Blackledge said, "It's a win, win situation for me no matter what I do. There are a lot of benefits each way."

"As far as college is concerned I haven't accomplished everything in my growth as a person. Penn State is a great place. A great environment."

He added, "I think I know what I'm going to announce. I'll just sleep on it a couple of more days."

Blackledge received the honor named after O'Brien, the late Texas Christian quarterback who won the Heisman Trophy in 1938.

"Winds of War" wins six of top 10

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC's "The Winds of War" has grabbed the first six places in the television ratings' Top 10, giving ABC a margin of victory twice that of nearest rival CBS.

The seven-part, $40-million saga was second only to "Roots" as the highest-rated miniseries ever, but ABC said it drew a bigger audience.

It was the second straight win in the February ratings for ABC.

ABC estimated that 140 million people saw all or part of "The Winds of War," while the audience for "Roots" was 135 million. A ratings point now represents more people because the television audience has grown since 1977, when "Roots" was first broadcast.

Sunday's seventh and final episode was the highest-rated of the miniseries. It had a rating of 41.0 and a share of 56. Overall, the series had an average rating of 38.6 and a share of 53.

"Roots," telecast by ABC in January 1977, had an average rating of 45 and a 66 share. The ratings measure the percentage of all TV sets that are tuned to a show and a share measures the percentage of sets in use that are tuned to the show.

ABC won the week ended Feb. 13 with a rating of 32.1 in the survey compiled by the A.C. Nielsen Co. CBS was second with 15.7 and NBC was third with 13.4. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute 32.1 percent of homes with television were tuned to ABC.

ABC's victory margin of 16.4 points over CBS was the second highest ever. "Roots" gave ABC a spread of 19.3 points for the week ended Jan. 30, 1977. In that week ABC had a rating of 35.5 and CBS had 16.2.

Seven of the 10 highest-rated miniseries were ABC shows. Here are the rankings: "Roots," ABC; "The Winds of War," ABC; "Shogun," NBC; "How the West Was Won," ABC; "Holocaust," NBC; "Roots: The Next Generations," ABC; "Pearl," ABC; "Rich Man, Poor Man," ABC; "79 Park Avenue," NBC; "Masada," ABC. The highest-rated CBS miniseries was "The Blue and the Gray" in 12th place.

Other programs in the weekly Top 10, after "The Winds of War," were CBS' "60 Minutes" and "Magnum, P.I." and ABC's "The Love Boat" and "The Fall Guy."

Here are the Top 10: "The Winds of War," Part VII, a rating of 41.0 or 34.1 million households, ABC; "The Winds of War," Part II, 40.2 or 33.5 million, ABC; "The Winds of War," Part IV, 39.0 or 32.4 million, ABC; "The Winds of War," Part III, 38.7 or 32.2 million, ABC; "The Winds of War," Part V, 36.1 or 30 million, ABC; "The Winds of War," Part VI, 35.2 or 29.3 million, ABC; "60 Minutes," 26.4 or 21.9 million, CBS; "Magnum, P.I.," 21.7 or 18 million, CBS; "Love Boat" and "The Fall Guy," 21.5 or 17.9 million, tied, both television were tuned to ABC.

Convicted killer gets third life sentence

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Marion Albert Pruett sat virtually motionless, his eyes fixed on the nine men and three women who were about to convict him of murdering his wife with a ball-peen hammer almost two years ago.

Pruett, who faces two death sentences and two life in prison terms for murders in Arkansas, Mississippi and Colorado, Tuesday night was found guilty of a fifth slaying — that of his wife Michelle Lynn Pearson.

The state district court jury deliberated about five hours before returning the guilty verdict that carried a mandatory life sentence from District Judge Thomas Mescall.

Pruett, the self-proclaimed "mad dog" killer, shook his head from side to side when the jury foreman read the verdict.

After an alleged multi-state crime spree, the Gastonia, N.C., native was arrested Oct. 17, 1981, in Amarillo, Texas.

The prosecution contended during the trial Pruett had killed his sleeping wife in March 1981 by smashing her skull with a ball-peen hammer while she slept. The 25-year-old woman's burned body was discovered west of Albuquerque on April 16, 1981, about six weeks after she was reported missing.

In closing arguments Tuesday, prosecutor Rick Shane said Pruett was "nothing more than a cold-blooded killer who would do anything to get what he wants."

Pruett's attorney, Ron Koch, reiterated the defense's argument that the state's chief witness, William Sherman, had lied and it was Sherman who committed the murder.

Sherman testified for the prosecution last week that he saw Pruett strike Ms. Pearson repeatedly with a ball-peen hammer at the couple's mobile home north of Albuquerque. He said he then helped Pruett move her body to Albuquerque's West Mesa, where it was doused with gasoline and set afire.

Koch said Tuesday, "I've never seen a worse witness in my life than that man."

Sherman was "the crux of the case," Koch said. "Bill Sherman has perpetrated a great injustice in this entire proceeding by getting up and lying."

The final prosecution witness was Shelley Watkins, a friend of Pruett's who said that Pruett confessed to killing Ms. Pearson during a stop in Albuquerque while he was being sought for the slaying.

Ms. Watkins said Pruett told her he struck his wife in the head with a hammer as she lay sleeping in the mobile home, and then forced Sherman to help strangle her with a belt.

Throughout the trial, Pruett insisted he did not kill his wife, although he admitted that he had killed others and committed robberies to support a cocaine habit he said cost $3,000 to $4,000 a week.

Pruett was in the federal government's witness protection program when he lived in Albuquerque. He had been given the identity of Charles "Sonny" Pearson.

Check soil, conditions before installing tank

COLLEGE STATION — With more and more people moving to rural areas and building homes and businesses in the country, more attention needs to be given to the installation of septic tank systems.

"There's more to a good working septic tank system than just digging a hole and installing the unit," says Dr. Bobby Carlile.

"The first step to satisfactory performance by a conventional septic tank system involves studying the soil and the site for the system before it's installed," points out Carlile, a soil specialist in waste management with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Failure to adequately evaluate soil and site conditions prior to construction is the main cause for failures of conventional septic tank systems, notes the specialist. Soil properties will determine the success or failure of a system. A percolation test is not sufficient.

Highest Council Award

Betty Drake, a member of the Camp Fire program recognition committee, presents the Luther Halsey Gulick award to Sid Killough at a recent Camp Fire board meeting. This is the highest recognition in Camp Fire council. Killough has served on numerous committees, the board of directors, and as a counselor for ski camp and resident camp.

Awards were presented and new board members installed at the Camp Fire board of directors annual meeting held recently at the Community Center. Dinner was catered by El Monterey Restaurant. In attendance were adult members of Camp Fire, leaders, board members, members-at-large, sponsors, and spouses.

The program was presented by the Ma-Kah-Wee, Tawa-Ni-Li and Wa-Can-Ke-Ya Horizon Clubs.

Buddy Peeler installed the following new board members: Temple Abney, David Emerik, Larry Pagett, Mrs. Troy Don Moore, Mrs. Tim Hammond, Mrs. Cherie Zinek, Bob Reinauer, and Duann Rettman.

The program recognition committee presented special awards to outstanding members of Camp Fire. Council awards included the Leader of the Year award given to Mrs. Ann Cummings for outstanding leadership in her group and service to the council as day camp, ski camp, and resident counselor.

Other council awards were the Fledgling award, designed to give special recognition to outstanding leadership within a new group. Mrs. Mary Riley was the recipient of this award. The Sponsor of the Year recognition went to Hereford Iron & Metal Co. for special service to the council for a number of years and for sponsoring a group. Mr. and Mrs. Anson Dearing received this award.

The Timanous award was presented to Mrs. Judy Baker for outstanding service to the council by an adult volunteer. She served as school organizer in the fall and was tremendously successful.

National Camp Fire awards included the John Collier award designed to recognize outstanding contributions in the field of business and finance, presented to Troy Schuder and Aaron Hutto. Don McNeese received the Sebago award, named after the first camping program. This award is given to those who are especially active in the camping program.

The Luther Halsey Gulick award, presented to Sid Killough, is considered to be the highest form of recognition in a council. It is named in honor of the founder of Camp Fire. Killough served for several years on many committees, chaired the camping committee and the transportation committee, and served on the board of directors. He has also been a counselor for ski camp and resident camp.

Sponsor of the Year

Mary Hamby, chairman of the Camp Fire program recognition committee, presents a plaque to Mrs. June Dearing for special service to the Camp Fire council for a number of years and for sponsoring a group. Mrs. Dearing and her husband, Anson, of Hereford Iron & Metal Co., were named Sponsor of the Year at the Camp Fire board of directors annual meeting recently.

CowBelles recognize Joseph Diller Tuesday

Joseph Diller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Diller, was introduced by Sue Sims, Hereford CowBelles beef promotion chairman, at the noon luncheon of the CowBelles held Tuesday at The Caison House.

Diller, who was recognized as a special guest, won the CowBelle showmanship trophy at the recent junior livestock show.

During the business meeting, the Bob Sims family was nominated as the Hereford CowBelle candidate for "Family of the Year." Also, Peaches Reinauer was nominated as the representative from the group as the West Texas Outstanding Woman of the Year.

Darlene Fields announced, in the absence of Glenda Hansen, Ag Day chairman, that Ag Week begins with Ag Day March 21. There will be a beef casserole sale in connection with Ag Day.

State Ag Day chairman, Sandra Lane of Plainview, was introduced by the president, Charmayne Klett, who announced that during the recent National convention in Las Vegas, the Oregon State CowBelles suggested each CowBelle give up one meal during Ag Week. It will be called "Lunchless Wednesday." In its place each person will donate $3 to be given to the Salvation Army.

This day will be observed to demonstrate that the beef industry is concerned about the needy and would like to see everyone have a balanced diet. The money is to be sent to the National CowBelles by March 31.

First vice-president, Elaine Mies, gave a report from the National CowBelle meeting. She explained the many ideas for beef promotion which were given and the various suggestions for beef certificates presented. The National CowBelle spring meeting has been scheduled March 21 in Austin.

It was announced that Lubbock will be hosting the National Cook-Off next year. The motion was made and carried that Hereford CowBelles offer to assist Caprock CowBelles with the event.

Presenting the program was Frosty Blaylock of Frosty's Meat Market. He explained the various cuts of beef and gave a demonstration on how to make "Fajitos."

Fajitos have been made and known in the ranching industry and the Mexican-American population for a long time but in recent years have become more popular.

Flowering gardens is topic

"Gardens That Will Flower Forever" was the program topic presented by Helen Spinks when members of Garden Beautiful Club met Friday morning in the home of Louella Cowser, 301 Westhaven.

The speaker also showed slides of her yard and flower garden at her Mississippi home.

Mr. Spinks presided at the business meeting in the absence of the president, Bessie Story.

Refreshments were served to members, Louise Axe, Bruce Carter, Dottie Darden, Rosalee Gilbreath, Cornelia Jones, Dorothy Noland, Ms. Spinks and Inez Witherspoon. The next meeting was scheduled March 4 at the Texas Gallery and Frame Shop. Serving as co-hostess will be Ms. Spinks and Ms. Witherspoon. Jean Lyles will present the demonstration.

Outstanding young women are honored

Carolyn Canon, Cindy Norvell, Katherine Barnard Thurber, and Connie Vaughn Gragg are among approximately 23,000 women from across the country who have been selected for inclusion in the 1982 edition of "Outstanding Young Women of America."

This awards program is designed to honor and encourage exceptional young women between the ages of 21 and 36 who have distinguished themselves in their homes, professions, and communities.

Women are nominated for the honor by women's organizations, college alumni associates, and public officials. Serving as chairman of the program's advisory board this year is Mrs. Dexter Otis Arnold, honorary president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Carolyn Canon served as president of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division this past year. In prior years she served on the Women's Division board of directors, as vice-president of the organization, and as chairman of the Little Miss Hereford Pageant and community Christmas tree ceremony committees.

She has also been active in the Hereford Medical-Dental Auxiliary. She and her husband, Dr. Dennis L. Canon, and their three children recently moved to Canyon.

Cindy Norvell has served as chairman of the Deaf Smith County Extension Homemakers Council for the past two years. She has been a member of Palo Duro Extension Homemakers Club for 12 years, and is a member of the extension council family living committee and 4-H committee.

She is program director of Camp Fire, has been a Camp Fire leader for about 12 years, and is a member of the Camp Fire Association of Professionals. She is also a member of the Women's International Bowling Congress and has served on the board of directors of Kids Inc. She and her husband, State Norvell, and their three children reside northeast of Hereford.

Katherine Barnard Thurber, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Barnard of 212 Avenue B, is the assistant director of the Leukemia Society of America in Atlanta, Ga. In the four years she has been employed there, she

ALLEY OOP by Dave Graue

The Newspaper BIBLE

DON'T SUE; THERE'S A BETTER WAY

How is it that when you have something against another Christian, you "go to law" and ask a heathen court to decide the matter instead of taking it to other Christians to decide which of you is right? Don't you know that some day we Christians are going to judge and govern the world? So why can't you decide even these little things among yourselves? Don't you realize that we Christians will judge and reward the very angels in heaven? So you should be able to decide your problems down here on earth easily enough. Why then go to outside judges who are not even Christians?

I am trying to make you ashamed. Isn't there anyone in all the church who is wise enough to decide these arguments? But, instead, one Christian sues another and accuses his Christian brother in front of unbelievers. To have such lawsuits at all is a real defeat for you as Christians. Why not just accept mistreatment and leave it at that? It would be far more honoring to the Lord to let yourselves be cheated. But, instead, you yourselves are the ones who do wrong, cheating others, even your own brothers. [1 Corinthians 6:1-8]

Texas Demo wants to ignore Reagan ag plan

THE HEREFORD BRAND

FARM NEWS

Ag conditions good, overall, says USDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is continuing attacks on congressional proposals to defer repayment of federal farm loans, contending that "overall, the agricultural financial health of this country is good."

Agriculture Undersecretary Frank Naylor, who heads federal rural credit programs, says repayment deferrals would amount to an across-the-board moratorium that won't help the vast majority of farmers with commercial loans and could jeopardize American agriculture's integrity as a credit-worthy risk.

"The administration will most assuredly oppose any moratorium or deferral," Naylor told the House Agriculture credit subcommittee Monday after its members asked that compromise on the issue not be ruled out.

They claim that a reprieve from making monthly loan repayments for a year or so is the only way many farmers will be able to stay afloat until farm prices, depressed by huge crop stockpiles, rebound.

But Naylor said most farmers can and want to keep up with the debt payments and that despite mounting reports of farm foreclosures and forced sales, less than 5 percent of the nation's producers actually face serious financial problems.

"There are 50,000 to 100,000 farmers out of 2.4 million who are legitimately in some financial difficulty," Naylor said. "That number is small and we intend to keep it small."

"We believe most if not all of them will receive help," he added.

The Farmers Home Administration, USDA's credit arm, is using all the procedures available to it, including repayment deferrals, to help tens of thousands of struggling farmers, he said. FmHA, providing about 12 to 14 percent of all farm credit, serves the highest-risk producers who can no longer qualify for commercial loans.

Supporters of the deferral legislation said all they wanted to do was put into law what the FmHA is already doing. But Naylor argued the bill would shift the decision on whether a deferral is allowed from the discretion of the lender to the demand of the borrower.

"When that happens, your borrowers quit paying, and that's dangerous for the reputation of agriculture in this country," Naylor said.

Officials of the Farm Credit Administration, a commercial lending system holding about a third of all farm credit, warned that deferral legislation could dry up many private credit sources for agriculture.

The Independent Bankers Association of America, whose members provide much of the commercial farm credit, also backed the administration's position, contending that farm credit problems can be adequately handled if enough federal money is available to the Farmers Home Administration to meet current loan demands in agriculture.

Naylor said the agency will have enough money not only to meet the needs of its current borrowers but also to pick up new borrowers who are just now falling from the ranks of acceptable commercial credit risks. The Farm Credit Administration estimates that about 3 percent of its 1 million borrowers will not qualify for commercial credit this year.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House Agriculture Committee says it's time to stop cutting money for federal food and farm programs and, backed by some Republicans, wants to ignore President Reagan's proposed reductions for 1984.

Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, says the administration's plans for a 22 percent cut in the 1984 Agriculture Department budget "deal with figures on the ledger instead of faces on the people."

With de la Garza at the helm Tuesday, a special panel, drafting recommendations for USDA's new budget, agreed without dissent that Congress should:

—Restore nearly $700 million in direct spending cuts Reagan proposed for a range of programs including crop price supports and land conservation.

—Add $500 million more than Reagan wants for overseas commodity sales.

—Exceed Reagan's credit ceilings by as much as $5.1 billion for loans issued by the Farmers Home Administration and the Rural Electrification Administration.

It also left the door open for rejection of Reagan's proposed billion-dollar cut in food stamp spending, which "may be very well cutting benefits to people at a time when hunger and nutrition problems are mounting."

The recommendations of the special subcommittee, made up of ranking Democrats and Republicans on the full committee, are expected to be endorsed by the full Agriculture Committee next week.

"We have taken the brunt of the budget reductions twice," de la Garza said of the administration cutbacks the committee has endorsed over the past two years.

"Justice and equity demand (now) that we do otherwise," he said. "If there isn't any food, there isn't any ball game."

Reagan's budget proposal, submitted to Congress two weeks ago, sets 1984 USDA spending at $35 billion, more than $10 billion less than the department will spend this year. It also recommends major reductions in the lending authority of FmHA and REA since lower commercial interest rates should make commercial credit affordable again for borrowers who have been relying on those agencies.

The 1984 spending recommendations will be combined with those of other committees into a blueprint for overall 1984 federal spending. That blueprint must squeeze the various spending priorities into a budget that doesn't aggravate the already massive deficit problem. Its development has prompted major congressional battles during Reagan's first two years in office, resulting in lower spending levels than originally recommended by the committees.

But Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., a member of both the Agriculture and Budget committees, said higher domestic spending levels for 1984 could possibly be retained this time if Congress votes to raise tax revenues and make major reductions in Reagan's defense program.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says the Reagan administration is "moving aggressively on several fronts" to stimulate American farm exports and regain overseas market shares.

"We are committed to getting U.S. agricultural exports moving upward again," Block told the House Foreign Affairs Committee Tuesday.

"These are difficult times for exporting in general and particularly for U.S. agriculture," Block said.

"Besides global recession and the strong dollar, which affect all U.S. exports, agriculture's problems are compounded by huge commodity supplies ... and by a number of special problems that affect our competitive position," he said.

"Even more troubling than the export slump is the fact that not only are the export totals declining, the U.S. share of the world market for agricultural products also has turned down," he said.

He said the U.S. market share for coarse grains has dropped from 71 percent to 59 percent in two years, while America's share of the world wheat market, which was almost half in fiscal 1982, is "declining rather sharply."

In addition, "we are concerned about our share of the market for cotton, soybean meal and oil, rice and poultry," he said.

Block said that, to help counter this situation, the administration has started a "blended credit" program designed mainly to increase exports to cash-short developing countries.

The program combines interest-free direct credit with credit guarantees in a single loan package, to produce an interest rate below prevailing commercial levels.

Block said credits under the new program were approved this week for sale of corn, rice, soybeans and lumber to Jamaica, and "more approvals will soon follow."

Other countries where the blended credit program has shown promising results include Morocco, where "we captured virtually all of the almost 2 million ton wheat market, which has been dominated by subsidized wheat from France," he said.

Kremlin cuts imports, relying on U.S. competitors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is cutting back overall imports to the lowest level in four years and relying heavily on America's international competitors to meet that reduced demand, the Agriculture Department says.

In its monthly update on the Soviet grain situation, the USDA says imports for 1982-1983 will plunge to 34 million metric tons from the record 46 million in the previous year. A metric ton is 2,205 pounds.

The analysis said the Kremlin already has contracts or commitments for 28 million metric tons, most of it from non-U.S. suppliers.

"Based on Soviet purchasing patterns to date, they appear to be maximizing their buying of non-U.S. grain," the analysis said. It pointed out that the Soviets fulfilled the minimum requirements to purchase 6 million metric tons of American corn and wheat under a long-term trade agreement during the last three months of 1982 and have showed no inclination for more purchases since then.

Many Farm Belt congressmen, contending that the Soviet market is crucial to American farmers faced with huge surpluses, are complaining that the Kremlin is steering clear of U.S. grain because of the Reagan administration's refusal to negotiate a new long-term grain agreement. The president has suspended any such negotiations until conditions in Poland improve.

In another analysis issued Monday, the department said continued weak world demand and lagging U.S. sales and shipments has prompted a reduction in the 1982-1983 export outlook for corn and wheat. As a result, ending stocks for the year will be well above those of the previous year with grain in the long-term, farm-owned reserve about double the level at the end of the 1981-1982 year.

The analysis said corn exports should now hit just over 2 billion bushels, down from the January projection of 2.1 billion. Wheat exports will likely drop to about 1.5 billion bushels, 75 million below last month's projection and 250 million lower than the previous year.

Corn in long-term storage as a result of the situation should double to over 2.6 billion bushels at the end of the marketing year, the report said, while wheat under long-range storage will jump to over 1 billion bushels, a 500 million-bushel increase.

The increase in grain under long-term storage, which insulates it from day-to-day market activity, should help stabilize and possibly bolster falling market prices, the report said, but prices are still expected to run behind last year's depressed levels.

Rule change on pig feed asked

WASHINGTON (AP) — An advisory panel wants the Agriculture Department to reconsider its regulatory recipe for cooking garbage fed to swine.

The Swine Health Protection Advisory Committee has recommended exempting certain food waste products from federal requirements that garbage be cooked before feeding it to pigs. The intent is to prevent the spread of swine diseases.

Kenneth Hook of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service said Wednesday the committee recommended exempting such items as "rendering plant products, dairy wastes, bakery products, candy, poultry and fish originating from waters other than the Pacific Ocean."

Hook said the Pacific Ocean restriction was included because of the presence of San Miguel sea lion virus, which is virtually identical with the virus of a serious disease of swine, vesicular exanthema.

The committee agreed that the proposed exemptions would not result in transmitting contagious diseases that would threaten the swine industry.

Awards made for Texas 4-H fashion show

Cloth World, Inc. of Amarillo will sponsor four $300 scholarships for the 1983 Texas 4-H Fashion Show.

Cloth World has assisted with the show and has provided awards to top winners for 10 consecutive years, notes a 4-H and youth specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The Texas 4-H Fashion Show is a statewide event for 4-H members who have been involved in the 4-H clothing project.

THE TRADE GAP

Wider Than Ever and Getting Wider

SOURCE: Department of Commerce

The United States ended 1982 with a record deficit in its foreign trade, topping the previous high set in 1978 and $3 billion more than in 1981. But that may be the relatively good news when the figures for the current year are in. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige warns we could end 1983 out as much as $70 billion in our exchanges with trading partners.

Grade changes in lamb, mutton benefit consumers

COLLEGE STATION — Recent grade changes for lamb and mutton carcasses will result in several benefits for consumers.

"Consumers will find the grade changes beneficial, not only in relation to price but also palatability and cutability," says Dr. Gary Smith, interim head of the Department of Animal Science at Texas A&M University. Cutability relates to yield while palatability has to do with tenderness, juiciness and flavor.

Steak, potato supplies up from 1982

WASHINGTON (AP) — Steak and potato eaters are getting some good news from farmers about supplies of their favorite foods.

The Agriculture Department reports that producers marketed 8 percent more cattle on feed in January than a year ago and major potato producers had stocks 6 percent bigger on Feb. 1 than 12 months earlier.

Marketings of fed cattle last month totaled 1.64 million head in the seven top producing states while potato stocks hit 6.57 million metric tons in the 15 major fall producing states.

Feathering (fat between the ribs) is no longer a quality factor in grading. Quality grading is now based on flank fat streaking (fat in and out on the flank muscle) in relation to maturity (flank color).

"The decreased emphasis on feathering will decrease over-fattening of lambs during feeding," Smith says. With greater emphasis being placed on muscle color, lambs will be moving to market at an earlier age, Smith explains. And young lambs are usually more tender.

The grading changes for lamb and mutton carcasses recently adopted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture are based on a comprehensive study of lamb quality and palatability conducted by the Texas Agricultural Experiment station scientist at Texas A&M in the late 1960s.

IN APPRECIATION TO THE CITIZENS OF HEREFORD

Please accept the sincere gratitude and appreciation from the family of Floyd A. Tucker for the many gifts and actions of support after his passing. From the police escort for the memorial service, to the many gifts of food and flowers, we are grateful.

Floyd invested a great deal of his life in Hereford. He painted much of the town. Through his Lions Club and First Baptist Church affiliations, he tried to stay involved. He had a great deal of pride in Hereford, and in its citizens. Through your actions of love and help after his passing, we can understand why he was so proud. You have now touched our lives, as you touched his.

HEALTH Taking care of corns

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I wish you would tell us what to do for corns. I have one on each of my little toes that will not go away. I have soaked them and trimmed them month after month and they just return. I have tried corn pads and plasters to no avail. They always come back. Sometimes one or both are quite painful. And when I trim them with a razor blade sometimes I cannot get the root of the corn out. Is that why they come back?

DEAR READER — Corns are a response to irritation of the skin. The little toe is a common place for one because the shoe commonly rubs that area. You can have some imbalance or imperfection of the foot that makes ordinary footwear rub and cause irritation. But in many instances the problem is the footwear itself. Unless you correct the problem you can expect the corns to come right back regardless of what you do.

Contrary to what you may think corns are not always caused by shoes that are too tight or too short, which certainly can be the cause. Slip-on moccasins can be loose and as you contract the toes to hold them on, the top of the toe rubs against the shoe and starts the irritation.

I am not enthusiastic about home surgery. And I'm not enthusiastic about caustic corn plasters that many people use. It is too easy to cut yourself. Remember that corn surgery should be bloodless. And it is too easy to get your

Gruff Texan lives in paradoxical world of wealth, used cars

DALLAS (AP) — He is, to be sure, a successful, self-made Dallas businessman with all the proper trimmings — Cadillac, a house in affluent Highland Park and friends in high places.

But that's where the comparisons end.

Gene Goss, better known as Goss on Ross the Tradin' Hoss, is incomparable.

And he knows it. For 40 years he's built his world by selling cheap used cars to the down-and-out. He'll trade almost anything and sell you a car if you've got the $95 down payment and a bright four-month future in his mental crystal ball.

On a 1.8 mile strip on the east side of Dallas' downtown, 34 lots proclaim "We Finance" and "No Credit Checks." There's Pay Day Motors — "The Walking Man's Friend" — Bout-Nu Auto Co., Ride Out Motors — "We Carry The Note" — and Chihuahua Motors.

And then there's Goss on Ross, where all of the 100 or so battered and bruised cars sold each month leave the lot with a bumper sticker offering "Hope You Get Home" and a guarantee of free jumper cables.

Gene Goss, the self-proclaimed mayor of Ross Avenue, doesn't hide anything. Even though he's been a used car dealer for most of his life, he won't try to give you a hard sell.

"I break my cars into two categories," Goss grumbled while standing in front of the junk-cluttered, dusty shack that is his office. "There's get-to-work-slow cars and there's get-to-work-late cars."

Goss, whose wrinkled face and spreading nose mark years of doing business in a tough neighborhood, claims he can't ever stay away from his work. At 65, he's on his lot seven days a week and continues to be the entire sales and buying force. His wife, Betty, handles the bookkeeping department.

"I come down here on Sunday and don't even open up. I feed my dogs and talk to my cars. Every car has a story, you know. And I figure out their history just by looking at 'em."

Goss on Ross, who says he's been known to spin a few yarns, has settled down now from his days of drinking and carousing. He's kept his gruff exterior, and still wears a grimy cowboy hat. He claims to have had 2,000 fights, many of them in barrooms, and says every bone in his body has been broken.

"I feel like I've been through three bodies. This one is worn out and so is this place. You can't turn the miles back on this body like you can on those cars."

"I've been up and down and broke more than anybody. But I never worried about it. When you haven't got anything, you've got nothing to lose."

Goss, gravel voice booming, boasts to a visitor that "I'm just an old outlaw."

Betty Goss, who says she would rather be working in a nicer office in a safer part of town, assures the visitor that her husband is not an outlaw.

"He has a rather unusual way of doing business. He's kind of gruff but he's always fair," said Mrs. Goss, who is as genteel as Gene is rough.

"To stay in this business for 40 years you have to be a little good at it or you wouldn't stay," she said. "I realize that he's a very unusual person. ... He just likes the run-down trader image."

On his wall are pictures and business cards of friends — lawyers, home building tycoon David Fox, entertainers, and former football coach Darrell Royal. Dallas corporate lawyer Clinton Foshee said he drops by Goss on Ross to visit his old friend, and he brings a seat cushion to keep his suit clean.

"I just enjoy him. He's a very interesting person," Foshee said.

Out back are piles of junked cars — "Death Row" Goss calls it. "It's my parts department."

Hanging under his desk is a shotgun. Next to that is a pistol. He's been robbed three times, a crime rate he says is much lower than his competitors'.

Lawyers and shotguns. Businessmen and outlaws. Cadillacs and '71 Fords. It's all the paradoxical world of Goss on Ross.

"Ninety percent of my customers haven't got enough credit to buy a pair of roller skates," Goss said. "I finance my own cars. It gets down to fortune telling, to psychology. I look into his (the buyer's) future for four months and see if I think he can pay. I ask him questions about his situation and see if it all adds up."

"It all comes down to this: short profits, short contracts and large volume."

The psychology seems to work. Mrs. Goss said that most of their customers finish paying for their cars.

In the past six months, Mrs. Goss said, volume has been higher than ever.

"We're seeing an awful lot of people right now from north coming down and trying to get some money out of their cars. A lot of them come from Detroit and a lot of them are refugees from Vietnam and Cambodia and Cuba and even Iran," she said.

"The tougher it gets," Goss said, "the better it is for me. I sell a lot of $895 cars. There's a lot of people right now in that bracket."

Not all of Goss' money came from cars. When he first set out in business at the end of World War II, his lot was in downtown Dallas, set on property he later sold to Dallas Cowboys owner Clint Murchison for a $50,000 profit — "and I spent it in two months on that booze."

He's most proud of his children — three sons who together operate a growing chain of restaurants called The County Line, which are found in Austin, El Paso, San Antonio, Lubbock and Oklahoma City.

Goss rattles off the stories, like the time he went to repossess a car and came away with a couple of chickens, or the time he traded for a hog that wouldn't get off of his hood so he left the car in front of a Cadillac dealership.

Goss said he won't retire, he'll continue to "survive."

"I don't want to quit. I enjoy these old cars. That's my life."

He said he started out downtown, sold the place and moved a bit to the east. "My next move," he said, "is the graveyard."

He's had the time of his life on Ross Avenue, he says.

"Most people haven't spent most of their days on one street," said the Ross Avenue mayor. "And I have. I've spent all my boozing days, all my church days, and all my romancing days, and all my working days right here."

At 80, female pilot still flying

AUSTIN (AP) — Edna Gardner Whyte says she set out in 1926 against all odds to prove that a woman could fly an airplane just as well as any man.

Now, with 57 years of experience and more than 30,000 flight hours without an accident, she has made her point. But the 80-year-old pilot continues to fly daily.

"I still have a competitive spirit," she said. "I am grateful that I've been able to spend my life doing something that's been so much fun."

Ms. Whyte lives at her own Fort Worth airfield. She was in Austin to address the Texas Agricultural Aviation Association convention.

The Mankato, Minn., native said she caught the flying bug while listening to stories about the exploits of the early aviators. She took her first airplane ride in 1926.

She says she faced more than her share of discrimination from male pilots.

"I don't know if they felt I was stealing their glory or what," she said. "One time some guy told me that I should be in the kitchen or having babies."

"I had to beg the instructor to issue a license even after I passed the course. He told me, 'I've never given a woman a license before, and I don't know if I'm going to start now.'"

Ms. Whyte trained pilots in the early 1930s, since there were no opportunities for women to fly for the military or commercial airlines.

"They were taking my students with one-fifth of the flying time I had and making them pilots," she said. "That hurt me. It hurt a lot."

Ms. Whyte said she always wanted to own her own airport, so at 70, she sold her home, two planes and a car to buy land between Dallas and Fort Worth. But she was rejected by the U.S. Small Business Administration when she applied for a $3,500 loan.

"They told me, 'You're too old, you're a woman and you're in a man's game,'" she said.

Undaunted, she went to a bank for a loan. Today, Aero Valley Airport Inc. stands as a tribute to her determination. More than 300 planes are based there, including the seven she uses daily for training.

Although she's logged more than three years in the air, Ms. Whyte said she still gets a thrill every time she leaves the ground.

"It's relaxing," she said. "Sometimes I'll be so tired from working on the ground. Then I'll go up for a while and feel so refreshed."

After 57 years, there are still new horizons. Last month, Ms. Whyte piloted her first jet.

"I can finally say that I've flown everything from a biplane to a jet," she said.

As for retirement, Ms. Whyte said she'd consider it "as soon as I can find an old ladies' home with a runway in front."

Wallpaper removing

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — I want to remove the wallpaper in three rooms, but I don't want to go to the expense of renting a steamer. Is there a cheaper way? — MRS. D.C.

DEAR MRS. D.C. — Steaming is the ideal method for quick removal, but soaking the paper well with hot water should do the job almost as well. Add a little vinegar to the water, which will help dissolve the old paste. Roll a paint roller well-saturated with the hot water and vinegar over the paper to thoroughly soak it (do only a small section at a time), then scrape and peel away! If the paper proves stubborn even after this treatment, score the paper at three or five inch intervals with a matte knife, then rewet the paper. This lets the water penetrate more thoroughly. A messy job, but not too difficult, and well worth the effort! — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — My elderly (89) mother's main enjoyment in life is speaking to family and friends on the telephone. To help her in this, I gave her an electronic index for her phone. I programmed into it all the numbers she needs for everyday calls to family and friends, and added the fire department, police and her doctor, as well. Since dialing is very confusing to her, this is a real help. All she has to do now is push a button alongside the person's name and her call goes right through. These devices cost under $30, and the pleasure it gives her is immeasurable. — LOIS

DEAR LOIS — I think this is a wonderful idea and a really thoughtful gift for an elderly person or an invalid of any age. (I certainly don't think I'd have thought of it myself.) I'm very pleased to print your suggestion as the Pointer of the Week. Your autographed copy of Polly's Pointers: 1081 Helpful Household Hints for Making Everything Last Longer is on its way to you. Many thanks. — POLLY
