

Teen injured in fight at park

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

A teenager was treated at the emergency room late Sunday night after he claimed someone shot at him during a fight at a local ballpark.

According to Big Spring Police Department Sgt. Victor Brake, two groups of juveniles and adults decided to meet at the American Little League ballpark to fight.

Witnesses stated they saw people with several small-caliber handguns and some were fired at random during the fight.

An 18-year-old male was apparently hit by fragments of a ricocheted bullet during the fight and went to the hospital for treatment shortly before midnight. A hospital employee contacted the police department to report the incident and officers began investigating.

Officers were able to determine a fight had occurred shortly before the teenager went to the hospital and guns were used.

"Because we can't prove the guns were fired intentionally at any particular person and was random, it is being handled as a third-degree felony," Brake explained.

He adds an investigation into the incident continues, and no arrests have been made at this time.

Sands school district adopts new schedule

By MARY McATEER
Staff Writer

ACKERLY - Students at Sands High School will come back to a whole new ballgame Aug. 14.

Officials of the Sands Independent School District have decided to adopt an alternate block schedule for the 1995-96 school year.

On this type of schedule, according to Sands Principal Billy Barnett, class days are designated "A" and "B."

On "A" days, students attend periods one, two and three in the morning, and periods four and five after lunch. On "B" days, students attend periods six, seven, and eight in the morning and periods four and five after lunch.

The three morning periods are reserved for academic classes, and will run 90 minutes each instead of the usual 45 to 50. The two afternoon classes are designated activity periods for Texas Achievement of Academic Standards (TAAS testing) and University Interscholastic League competition preparation, and athletics.

The afternoon class times are very structured and permit the school to maintain high standards in TAAS and UIL coaching without detracting from other classes, noted Barnett.

He said the longer class time presents a challenge to teachers, in that they must present more material while retaining students' interest, adding it gives students a chance to spend more time on tasks and get more hands-on help from teachers.

Students can also appreciate the block schedule because they only have homework from three classes a day instead of eight, allowing more time for other activities without decreasing study time. It also allows more time to work on individual subjects.

The biggest drawback of the block schedule, according to Barnett, is the problem caused by absences - since classes meet on alternate days, a student absent from school two days could conceivably miss a week's classes in a given subject.

In addition to more in-depth and hands-on instruction, the block schedule lets the district offer eight credits for the school year, instead of the seven credits allowed by the standard schedule, and will allow a greater variety of classes. Barnett says district officials are considering more computer classes, environmental and other science classes, and more junior high math classes.

The block schedule was proposed for the 1994-95 school year, but the district was committed to Spanish classes offered over a satellite link, which didn't allow any flexibility in class scheduling.

To overcome that hurdle, district administration decided to hire a Spanish teacher for the coming year and drop their subscription to the satellite classes.

Questioned about the sometimes controversial foreign language requirements, Barnett responded that the business world is rapidly becoming multilingual, and in most other countries high school graduates are required to be at least bilingual.

City Council to meet

The Big Spring City Council will meet in regular session Tuesday at 5:30 p.m. in the Conference Room of Building 1106 at McMahon/Wrinkle Airpark.

Among the items to be discussed will be the final reading of a resolution approving an agreement with Moore Development For Big Spring Inc., concerning the new city/county grant writer.

High school welcomes new band director

By KELLIE JONES
Staff Writer

People attending Big Spring Steers football games will see a new look to the high school band come this fall. School board members recently approved the hiring of Rocky Harris as the new head band director.

Harris graduated from Texas Tech University in 1985 with a bachelor of music education degree.

He was head band director in Petersburg and in Nixon for two years each before moving to Pearsall. At Pearsall, a 3-A school, he was assistant band director and specialized in directing the junior high bands.

Not only will he direct the high school band in Big Spring but oversee the bands at Runnels Junior High and Goliad Middle School.

"I have always liked music and associate with it. You hear music on the radio, in the car or elevator and because of this I wanted to learn more about music.

"I was in band in school and liked the family and community of being in a band and I never wanted to lose that feeling," said Harris.

He is not new to the area, having attended junior high in Odessa before moving to Louisiana to attend Vanderbilt Catholic High School.

Although he can play all instruments, he specializes in the trombone. Harris also was in charge of the color guard in Pearsall and brings that experience to the local group.

He says when his band hits the field this fall, people will notice a difference and see the change he has brought about.

"I've heard good things about the band and Big Spring and that was the reason I accepted this job. The opportunities are wide open for me and my students."

Stenholm office staffer to visit Big Spring June 20

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

Congressman Charles Stenholm was recently honored by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce for his consistency voting in favor of policies important to American business.

The U.S. Chamber, made up of more than 215,000 businesses, 3,000 local and state chambers of commerce, and 1,200 trade and professional associations, presented Stenholm the Spirit of Enterprise Award for his pro-business voting record of 70 percent, which was based on 12 key votes cast during 1994.

Big Spring residents will get a chance to ask questions about Stenholm's award as well as other issues on June 20 when Jayne Schoonmaker, a representative of Stenholm's San Angelo office, visits the Dora Roberts Community Center at Comanche Trail Park from 10 a.m. to noon to meet individually with local citizens.

The June 20 visit is designed to make Stenholm's office more accessible to constituents in Big Spring and the surrounding areas.

The purpose of Schoonmaker's visit is also to offer an opportunity for anyone having problems with governmental agencies such as the Social Security Administration, HUD, Department of Veterans Affairs, and other agencies, to seek assistance.

According to Stenholm's office, this is also an opportunity for people to express their opinions on current political and governmental issues.

Nicole Simpson's death haunts battered woman

DALLAS (AP) — Nicole Brown Simpson was still alive when Angel's enraged husband threw her against the rock fireplace and broke her arm.

She was still alive when the man smashed Angel's nose.

She was still alive when he beat Angel with a telephone receiver, taking care to confine the purple bruises to her breasts and arms and not leave tell-tale marks on her face.

The night he hurled a dresser drawer across the bedroom, hitting Angel's arm, Nicole Brown Simpson was eight days dead.

That night, as they lay together in bed — he insisted she always sleep with him, whether he'd beaten her or not — he told her, "You know, if you ever told anybody, I'd kill you."

That was one year ago. Angel couldn't sleep that night. She went downstairs and read the newspapers scattered on her kitchen table.

O.J. Simpson, famous football running back, rental car salesman and actor, was the No. 1 suspect in his ex-wife's murder. The newspapers said he had a history of abusing her.

"I was thinking, this could happen to me," says Angel (her last name withheld to ensure her safety) as she sits in the locked offices of a women's shelter, the second time in a year she's sought refuge here.

"My husband could be an O.J. in this town."

He seemed like the perfect gentleman when they met four years ago, a "dream come true," she says.

He was a handsome, 6-foot-2 graduate of Southern Methodist University.

She was an attractive, articulate bank teller, a full foot shorter than her husband, with long black hair and almond-shaped eyes.

"I could be gone and no one would even know he did it. I had to get out because no one would even believe me. They still don't believe me."

Two people died in the frenzied stabbing outside Ms. Simpson's condominium, but Ronald Goldman was all but forgotten in the attention paid to O.J. and Nicole Brown Simpson, and the abuse that punctuated their marriage. In the weeks after the murders, print and broadcast stories looked at domestic violence in several dozen different ways.

State legislatures stiffened penalties against abusive spouses and allocated money for women's shelters and domestic abuse programs. Later in the year, Congress passed the Violence Against Women Act.

In the quick aftermath, calls tripled to crisis centers across the country. A year later, calls are back to "normal" levels in many places. But battered women still mention the Simpson case when they call for help — including Angel.

She says she identifies with Nicole Brown Simpson, a woman who kept her battering a secret.

If she picked up the phone later than the first ring, he accused her of having a man in the house. More than an hour at the grocery store? She was having an affair.

He bought her a pager and demanded she call him immediately when he beeped.

When she was four months pregnant with their son, he called her "fat" — every day. Once, he pushed her to the ground, sat on her belly and pummeled her upper body. Neighbors called police. He spent the night in jail.

On May 18, he beat her again. A few days later, she attempted suicide.

"Nicole wouldn't let anyone know O.J. might kill her. I want people to know he would kill me," Angel says.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Food stamp fraud, look out - the card is here

DALLAS (AP) — Food-stamp fraud has dropped dramatically in Dallas since the state introduced an experimental electronic card.

Homeless people have stopped selling the coupons for 50 cents on the dollar. Thieves have been stymied, since the cards are useless without a personal identification number.

It has also curtailed a variety of miscellaneous petty fraud many poor Dallasites used to generate loose change for unauthorized purchases, officials said.

One of those clients was Rodney Woods, a 37-year-old homeless man who said he sometimes used change from food-stamp transactions to buy beer in cigarettes. That stopped when he was issued his "Lone Star" card.

Former Baylor president dies at 80

WACO (AP) — Abner V. McCall, a former president of Baylor University and one-time Texas Supreme Court justice, has died at his home. He was 80.

"Abner McCall was truly a great Texan and great president of Baylor University," said Robert B. Sloan Jr., the school's president. "His life exerted great influence in three spheres: Baylor University, Texas politics and Baptist life. All who were privileged to know him will deeply miss him."

The university said McCall died of a massive heart attack about 9 a.m. Sunday, one day after an on-campus celebration of his 80th birthday, which was Thursday.

Former board chair says downfall was planned

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Reports of fiscal mismanagement at Via Metropolitan Transit were all part of a plan, says the former chairman in a copy-right story.

Arturo Sanchez, in the first interview he has granted since leaving VIA three months ago, told the San Antonio Express-News that his downfall was planned by those who thought he was too powerful and independent.

"You pick up enemies," he was reporting as saying in Sunday editions of the paper, adding his detractors used a sexual harassment complaint filed by a VIA worker as leverage to force his resignation.

The FBI, Federal Transit Administration and Bexar County district attorney's office are looking into the money management at VIA.

Roy Orbison celebrated by hometown

WINK (AP) — Students at Wink High School during the 1950s remember one boy who, when singing, never opened his mouth wide enough to suit his music teacher.

"His voice really made him famous," said Bill Beckham. "But the choir teacher always told him to open his mouth when he sang."

The choir teacher made the boy put three fingers in his mouth while sang, said schoolmate Barbara Slaughter.

"He never would open his mouth. He would always sing real tight-lipped," said Beckham, now publisher of Wink's weekly newspaper, The Wink Bulletin.

Legislature leaves $27 million in claims

HOUSTON (AP) — Businesses and former state workers who have won judgments against the state may have to wait another two years before the Legislature pays off the amounts.

Among those waiting is former state architect George Green, who was awarded several million dollars in a "whistle-blower" suit.

Green was fired by the Department of Human Services after alleging improper conduct by some agency employees. He won a $19 million judgment, including interest.

Disagreement between the House and the Senate over how much money Green should be paid caused the Legislature to kill an entire claims bill.

WEATHER WEIRDNESS

Several areas hit by storms, tornadoes

HOUSTON (AP) — A storm slashed across much of Texas late Saturday night and early Sunday morning leaving in its wake power outages, property damage and three injured.

Lightning struck two people while they were attending Scarborough Faire Renaissance Festival near Waxahachie.

Their injuries were minor, according to the Ellis County Sheriff's Department.

At least one person was injured in Stafford when extremely high winds did major damage to a motel.

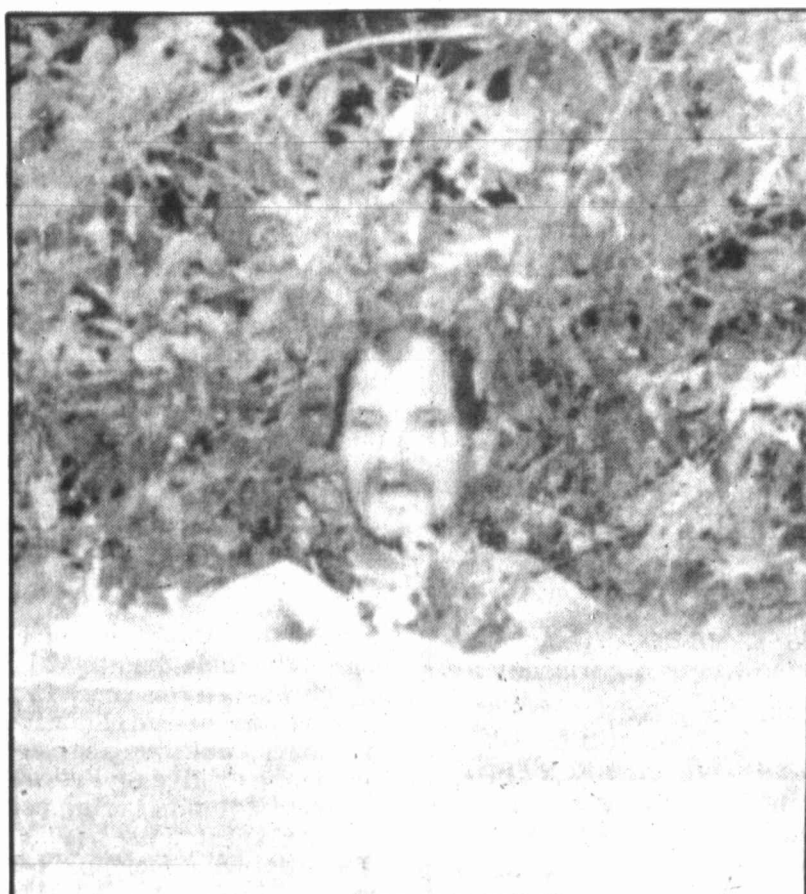

As many as 150,000 homes near Houston lost power when rains, high winds and lightning descended on that region.

About 22,000 homes were still without power Sunday afternoon as Houston Lighting and Power crews worked to restore service, according to radio station KTRH-AM.

Power also was cut near Wise when wind gusts blew down three telephone poles.

Doppler radar spotted tornadoes in Southwest Texas, but there were no reports of touchdowns. Some baseball-sized hail was reported.

Hail nearly 2 inches in width was reported in Cisco, and Burleson County reported

Winds gusting up to 75 mph were reported in Eastland

County, where an 18-wheeler was blown over near Ranger. No injuries were reported.

Five killed, five injured in El Paso car accident

EL PASO (AP) — Five people were killed and five were injured Sunday in a two-car collision east of El Paso, officials said.

The accident occurred at 3:53 p.m. MDT when a Chevrolet Nova on two-lane U.S. 62-180 crossed the path a Ford Thunderbird containing eight people, the Texas Department of Public Safety and a medical examiner's official said.

Gloria Martinez, 30, and driver Blanca Martinez, 28, were killed when the Thunderbird they were in broadsided the Nova.

Killed in the Nova were the driver, Antonio Malcolm, 24; Ray D. Ashworth, 21; and Robert J. Nabhan, 17, said Manny Diaz, chief investigator of the medical examiner's office.

Alva Martinez, 3, and Christina Martinez, 6, were in fair condition and Kevin Martinez, 3 months, was in guarded condition, all at Thomason General Hospital.

They were traveling in the Thunderbird, DPS spokeswoman Lauren Chernow said.

Sergio Saucedo, 25, of Juarez, Mexico, and Jesus Torres, 26, of Juarez, were in good condition at Beaumont Army Medical Center, a Beaumont spokeswoman said Monday.

Both were traveling in the Nova, said Ms. Chernow.

It was unclear the relationship between the Martinezes, Diaz said.

A trail of six beer cans, some still unopened, trickled from the Thunderbird and was mixed with auto parts from both vehicles, witnesses said.

Former NAACP chief declares meeting a success

HOUSTON (AP) — A new group led by the Rev. Benjamin Chavis will try to recruit 1 million black men for a march on Washington in October, the former NAACP chief said at the end of a three-day conference.

Chavis, who was fired by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People last August, declared Sunday that the weekend meeting of the National African American Leadership Summit "fruitful and successful."

The group adopted a constitution and bylaws at the gathering.

"The NAALS has taken on more of a sense of permanence in terms of building our organizational infrastructure that can help galvanize and focus the vast energy and talent and resources (of blacks)," Chavis said Sunday.

Representatives from more than 100 organizations attended the summit, designed to unite black leaders across religious and political lines.

The new entity includes the Nation of Islam, the National Black United Front and several NAACP chapters.

One goal, Chavis said, is to mobilize blacks for the Million Man March, scheduled for Oct. 16 in Washington.

There, the group will encourage participants "to take responsibility for raising our families, to take responsibility for ending the drugs and violence that plague our communities and to move forward in terms of our economic empowerment," Chavis said.

Other issues discussed at the conference were protesting the scheduled execution of black

Associates call bomb hoax suspect arrogant

DALLAS (AP) — Peter Koh, the teen-ager accused in a Fort Worth truck-bomb hoax, is known among classmates as a quiet, studious, arrogant youth who sometimes showed contempt for authority.

In interviews with The Dallas Morning News, adults close to the Koh family expressed shock that the 18-year-old might be behind a truck-bomb hoax at a Fort Worth school district building. But some teen-age acquaintances were less surprised.

"Peter wanted to be smart so that he could work around the system and thwart authority," said Robert Gleason, a classmate since grade school. "He likes to try and get away with stuff just to prove how smart he is."

More than 40 people were evacuated twice on May 16 after someone called and said an explosives-packed truck was parked outside the building, then called back and said a bomb was inside the building.

The incident came about one month after a truck bomb destroyed the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City, killing more than 160 people.

If convicted on bomb-threat charges, Koh could face up to five years in prison and a $5,000 fine. Such punishment, his defenders said, would be a waste of Koh's talents and an overreaction to what was merely a prank.

"I'm hopeful that we can work something out with the government that will take advantage of his tremendous potential rather than just crush him and cast him out on the road to continuing problems," said Koh's attorney, Tim Evans of Fort Worth.

The eldest son of a family prominent in Fort Worth's Korean-American community, the National Merit Scholar finalist is viewed by his peers as intellectually gifted and relentlessly ambitious.

Koh and his brother Michael, 17, "would always study a lot. They didn't want to go out and have fun," said Allen Cummings, 17, who grew up next door to the Kohs in a wealthy south Fort Worth neighborhood. "Those kids would never do anything but read and play with their computer."

Schoolmates said Peter Koh grew increasingly interested in the trappings of wealth.

"Money and getting computer equipment, that's what seemed to interest him," said Bryan Curtis, editor of the Paschal High newspaper. "He seemed kind of opportunistic."

The Koh brothers; Steven Pedro, 18; and a 15-year-old juvenile disappeared in the wake of the bomb hoax, and all were detained 11 days later near Greenville, about an hour's drive from Dallas. Only Peter Koh was charged in the hoax.

Teacher kills ex-girlfriend, shoots self

COPPELL (AP) — A gym teacher fatally shot his former girlfriend in front of her two young sons before shooting himself, police said.

Patrick Trueblood, 38, was obsessed with Pamela Draper, 35, and had grown obsessed with her seeing another man, said Draper's parents and neighbors.

"I don't think she thought it was this serious," said Draper's mother, Barbara Hodges. "She always told me, 'I can take care of myself.'"

Police found the body of Draper, a Coppel High School science teacher, in the foyer of her Coppel home, police said.

She had been shot four times in the chest before Trueblood, a physical education teacher at Pinkerton Elementary School, shot himself once in the right temple, police said.

Her 2-year-old son was found trapped in his high chair. Her 5-year-old son ran from the house to get help after the 9:40 a.m. Sunday shooting.

"He was screaming, 'Help me! Help me!'" said neighbor Gayle Hightower.

Draper had dated Trueblood for several months before their breakup about two months ago, Hodges said.

Draper had become concerned about Trueblood's behavior in the aftermath and recently sought a restraining order against him before reconsidering, Hodges said.

Quote of the Day

"First learn, then form opinions."

The Talmud

Be careful what you want, because you might get it

We all want tax reform. We all want to pay less money to our state, federal and local governments.

One the flip side, though, we expect the same level of services to which we have become accustomed.

One way to pay less is for cities, counties, states and federal governments to trim their budgets. Right now, local governments are running tight ships. Of course, that doesn't mean there isn't room for cutting. What has to be considered when downsizing is how far do we go before there is barely enough to do what needs to be done.

The main point is - we want good roads, we want good water service, we want good police and fire protection, we want good schools. Somehow that has to be paid for.

It is usually paid for through ad valorem taxes. Our local governments have been good about not raising taxes unless absolutely necessary. At many points, to meet certain requirements of the state, school districts have been forced to raise taxes in order to meet simple basic requirements.

Tax reform is needed, at all levels. In Texas, there are few alternatives for the state to raise the money we demand it spends: sales tax, licenses and fees. We refuse to even consider an income tax!

Ad valorem taxation may not be the best answer to taxes, which like death is the only certainty in life. It is the one that usually goes up to make up for any losses in other areas such as mineral values.

The main thing to think about as tax reform becomes an issue locally with the formation of the Citizens For Tax Reform, is what do we want from our government, how much we are willing to pay for it and prepare ourselves to do without services we have become accustomed.

1995 Prognosis for Progress

What a time to be alive!

Tomorrow is rushing toward us at warp speed! Already, the newest refrigerator for your home provides more efficiency for $30 a year less.

In our White House, the newer, more efficient light bulbs reduce light bills by 70 percent.

I'm privy to research and development in the electricity industry through the longtime sponsorship of the Electric Information Council, so I can promise you that within 24 months, there will be a microwave clothes dryer. It will be 60 percent faster and 15 percent more energy efficient - and more gentle than ever.

And that's not all. Now "in testing" is further refinement of the new washer called "ozonated laundering," where by electricity produces ozone gas that, mixed with the water, removes insoluble soils through a harmless chemical reaction requiring no soap, no detergent, no hot water and no bleach.

The future is here today.

The newest flash-bake ovens are providing really fast food! They can cook a pizza in 60 seconds without drying it out, using only one-fifth the electricity required for a conventional oven. Restaurants now - you are next.

Heat pumps are available now for heating and cooling your home as much as five times more efficiently than traditional boilers and air conditioners.

Within 36 months, I can promise you a beautiful, streamlined automobile, powered only by electricity, which will go zero to 60 in 10 seconds, travel 70 miles between recharges, recharge in five hours - and have a top speed of 100 miles an hour!

You could have that miracle car today with only the slightest improvement in battery technology. You will have it within 36 months.

You can walk into a modern factory where things are painted - where thousands of products, including completed automobiles, are being painted - and you will breathe nothing but pure air. The fine paint spray is "sucked onto the car body" and cured with ultraviolet light.

And, if your lights sometimes go off during a thunderstorm, you will appreciate this: Ultra-capacitors and advanced batteries will someday allow you to purchase electricity for less (during off-peak hours) and maintain your home's power supply even when high lines go down.

The most polluted waste water can be disinfected electrically - the bacteria is destroyed in seconds, 3,000 times faster than chlorine - and at less cost.

Government and industry are chewing their fingernails up past the second knuckle worrying about what to do with all the waste civilization creates.

Hospitals and medical labs each year generate 500,000 tons of infectious waste. While gas-fired incineration produces pollution of other kinds, new electric technologies promise to reduce that harmful, infectious waste with microwave disinfection, plasma pyrolysis and electron beams to a sterile stuff that you can place in a landfill or mix with asphalt to build roads.

And tomorrow?

Tomorrow you will be using in your everyday life scores of innovative "things" that aren't even in the dictionary yet.

Happy new years!

PTA appreciates HEB's donation

Washington Elementary PTA would like to say thank you to HEB.

For the past two years HEB had adopted the elementary schools in Big Spring.

Each school was given $500 in HEB bucks for the students. HEB provided a coke and hot dog wagon for all schools to use as a fundraiser. They also provided the drinks and part of the hot dogs. Washington PTA used the wagon to make money for a special TAAS party this summer.

We appreciate HEB for their support to education.

Another view of the clean-up

I would like to respond to all the negative criticisms toward the clean up effort by the prisoners in the canyon between Lancaster and Pennsylvania Streets.

I have lived in the area for over two years and saw all the trash, brush, animals, transients, mosquitoes, and teens partying in the so called beautiful canyon behind my house.

I for one was happy to see the clean up effort in the canyon area and understand the need to clear the underbrush for the grass to grow and the trees to be thinned out so they will grow much healthier.

I was really surprised to hear people complain about the area being cleared so it could be used and appreciated. Anyone who lives in this area during the rabid animals, and mosquito nights should be able to see the good come from this clean up effort.

My understanding is that if people would mark some of the trees the prisoners would not cut them down. The problem is some people want the whole canyon marked including the brush, trash, etc.

To really understand the scope of the problem in the canyon, try and walk through the area. I have talked to some of my neighbors who did not sign any petition, and they feel as I do. Before the work is totally stopped I hope the rest of the people living around the canyon who feel this way, would call or write the city manager and ask that the work continue.

If you have not decide, try and take a walk through the canyon. I for one would like to thank the Colorado City Prison system for the use of the prisoners, the city manager for allowing the work to be done, the church for requesting the site be cleaned and cleared, and finally to the prisoners themselves for the clean up. I think it's good to finally see that our tax money is drawing some benefits.

Chiapas peace talks recess without agreement until July

SAN ANDRES LARRAINZAR, Mexico (AP) — A third round of peace talks in Chiapas has ended without major progress, but both guerrilla and government negotiators promised to open a new round on July 4.

In talks ending late Sunday, the sides agreed to adhere to a broad agenda that will include tackling the sensitive issue of federal and rebel troop movements in the Chiapas mountains, where rebellion began 17 months ago.

The rebel Zapatista National Liberation Army rose in arms Jan. 1, 1994, demanding social and political reforms for poor Indians they claim to defend. At least 145 people died in 12 days of fighting before a cease-fire.

There has been no major fighting since, but the simmering rebel has given President Ernesto Zedillo lingering political tensions atop the headaches of a nationwide economic crisis he inherited soon after taking office Dec. 1.

Gustavo Iruegas, a government negotiator, said he had offered to withdraw army troops from 11 villages sympathetic to the rebels and allow the Zapatistas to enter those towns and maintain order.

He characterized the government offer as a generous proposal in the just-concluded third round of talks, a series that has met with little progress since they opened earlier this year in this central Chiapas town.

"It is highly unusual for a government to make such an offer, that they (the rebels) continue with their weapons, with their organization, taking on a role of maintaining security," Iruegas told reporters.

But the government balked at a counteroffer by the rebels to allow Zapatista fighters re-enter just one town: the highly prized village of Guadalupe Tepeyac, a guerrilla bastion overrun by the army in February.

The village is the gateway to mountainous territory where the rebels now roam and was considered a key headquarters of the rebels.

Early in the conflict, Guadalupe Tepeyac was the southern base for the masked rebel leader Marcos, who used the town in a bid to launch a civilian movement for political and social justice spreading beyond Chiapas.

But that effort was blocked by army troops who swept into that area on Feb. 10, forcing the guerrillas and about a thousand villagers to flee.

Hundreds of soldiers still occupy that village and surrounding zone.

Iruegas said the greatest disappointment was "the refusal of the Zapatistas to take real measures that would reduce tensions, such as we had proposed" - namely moving the rebels from the jungle and into specified villages.

But a rebel negotiator known only as Comandante Tacho said the opposing side was pushing too fast for progress.

"They are pressured by their own government," said Tacho, wearing a black ski mask and olive drab field hat.

"We see pressure because they asked that we accept something here, as if asking for a favor."

He did not elaborate.

U.S., Japan open auto dispute talks

GENEVA (AP) — Two days of technical talks between Japan and the United States began today, with both sides hopeful that a bitter dispute over automobiles can be resolved before a June 28 U.S. deadline to impose sanctions.

Booth Gardner, the U.S. ambassador to the World Trade Organization, remained optimistic that an 11th-hour agreement was possible.

But Japanese representatives seemed less upbeat as officials from the two countries met today at the WTO's Geneva headquarters.

Japan requested the bilateral talks as a preliminary step before filing a formal complaint to the WTO about threatened U.S. sanctions.

"We don't want to negotiate under the pressure of sanctions. The aim of the two-day meeting is to have America withdraw the sanctions," said a Japanese official, Jun Yokota.

Washington has refused to do this.

The United States threatened $5.9 billion in sanctions against 13 luxury Japanese automobile imports after talks on opening Japan's car market broke down in early May. The sanctions are scheduled to go into effect June 28.

The United States has proposed a second round of talks June 20 in Washington. The issue is expected to dominate a meeting between President Bill Clinton and Japanese Prime Minister Tomichi Murayama during the G-7 summit in Halifax, Canada.

Under WTO rules, both sides have 60 days to try to resolve the issue bilaterally. Japan began the process May 17.

If they cannot come to terms, the WTO then appoints a panel of independent judges, which has six months to issue its findings.

The dispute stems from the United States' $65 billion trade deficit with Japan, almost 60 percent of it in automobiles and auto parts.

The Clinton administration blames the deficit on Japan's closed markets and wants Japanese car makers to accept voluntary purchase plans to boost sales of American-made auto parts.

Israel wants to test new peace, ties with Syria

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel is demanding a test period of peaceful relations with Syria before it completes any withdrawal from the Golan Heights, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Sunday.

A day after the two countries announced a resumption of direct peace talks, Rabin stressed that Israel expects open borders and diplomatic relations immediately after a limited first stage of withdrawal.

"Our demand, as a vital demand, is that after our very limited withdrawal... a symbolic withdrawal, we would like a period of years as a test of full normalization, of embassies, of open borders for movement of people and goods," he told Army Radio.

"Without this, it is definite we cannot agree to any peace treaty," he said.

The former bitter enemies announced Saturday that their military chiefs will meet June 27 in Washington. In addition, their ambassadors to Washington will resume negotiations on non-security issues, Secretary of State Warren Christopher said after meeting with regional leaders.

Despite recent progress - including a broad agreement on security arrangements - wide gaps remain.

Rabin earlier has indicated Israel was ready for a first-stage pullback that includes dismantling at most one Israeli settlement. Syria wants a much faster timetable.

Cabinet ministers indicated that Israel is coming to terms with Syria's demand for a total withdrawal from the strategic plateau, which it occupied in 1967 and annexed in 1981.

Polls show about two-thirds of Israelis asked oppose total withdrawal even for full peace.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Clinton, Gingrich trade jokes, barbs

CLAREMONT, N.H. (AP) — In an unprecedented joint appearance, President Clinton and House Speaker Newt Gingrich sparred politely over Medicare and a host of other issues Sunday and shook hands on a deal to launch a bipartisan commission on lobbying and political reforms.

Sitting outdoors against a backdrop of flags, the Democratic president and Republican speaker fielded questions for an hour from a crowd of about 250 people at a senior citizen's picnic. Never before, Gingrich said, had a president and speaker appeared together at a town hall — never mind leaders of different parties.

"This is a historic moment," Gingrich said. The two men ended the largely congenial discussion with a handshake.

The two leaders, seated in front of several flags, opened by accepting a suggestion from a man in the audience: name a bipartisan commission to propose lobbying, campaign finance and other political reforms. Congress would have to vote the proposal up or down, with no amendments.

Lotus agrees to buyout by IBM

NEW YORK (AP) — Lotus Development Corp. agreed to be bought out by IBM on Sunday after the two companies arrived at a $64 per share price, $4 higher than what IBM offered when it began a hostile takeover attempt last week.

The deal, valued at $3.52 billion, is the software industry's largest merger.

The companies announced the agreement Sunday afternoon, turning IBM's first hostile takeover bid into a friendly one.

"Our intention is to move as quickly as we possibly can to start bringing the value of this combination to the marketplace," Lotus chief executive Jim Manzi told reporters in a telephone conference.

The deal has the potential to reorder the personal computer software industry by putting IBM in a strong position to challenge Microsoft Corp., which has come to lead the industry through its dominance in operating system programs that run the basic functions of a PC.

Toddler calls 911 on cell phone to save mom

MIAMI (AP) — Mary Graves has always thought her 3-year-old daughter was something special.

The toddler proved it by talking to a 911 operator and leading police to the car where an armed robber had locked her mother in the trunk.

When the robber told Ms. Graves he was going to lock her in the trunk of her car, she dialed 911 on her cellular phone, slipped it to the little girl.

The girl, who isn't being identified at the family's request, told emergency operators Friday afternoon that her mother was locked in the trunk and gave them some important clues: She could see airplanes and sky, according to 911 transcripts.

The operators called Tampa International Airport police, who searched the top floor of the airport parking garage where the car was parked.

Stuck ship delays wedding, three honeymoons

BOSTON (AP) — Todd and Lisa Green made it to the church on time — it was their honeymoon ship that didn't show up.

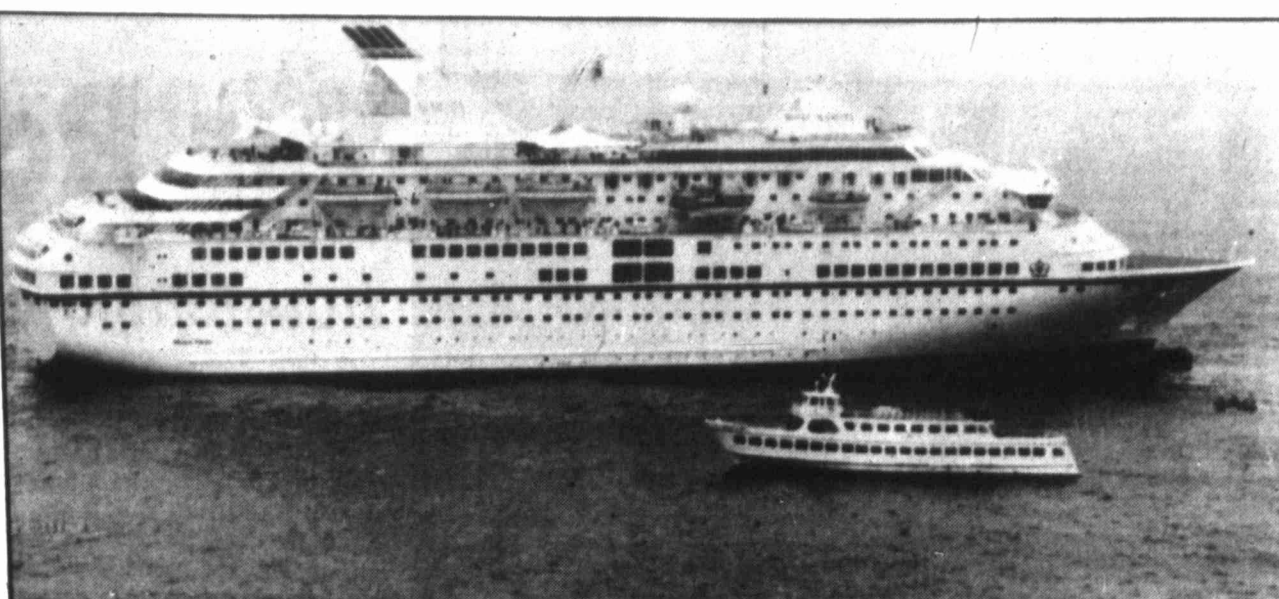

The 600-foot Royal Majesty, hung up for more than 24 hours on a sandy shoal off Nantucket Island, was finally freed by a high tide and six straining tugboats.

The ship and its 959 passengers, returning from a cruise to Bermuda, were idling in deeper water this morning. Officials planned to check the hull for damage before it returns to port, Coast Guard Petty Officer Zach Zubricki said.

Majesty Cruise Line tried to notify the more than 1,000 passengers who were booked on Sunday's departure that the ship would not be leaving until Monday afternoon at the earliest. About 200 people didn't get the word.

"It's a rough start to a honeymoon, but we'll be all right," said Todd Green, after the couple showed up at the terminal Sunday.

In all, at least three honeymoons and a wedding got knocked off course when the luxury liner foundered late Saturday.

A Hyline ferryboat of Hyannis, Mass., approaches the cruise ship Royal Majesty in an unsuccessful attempt to evacuate some of the ship's nearly 1,000 passengers. The ship ran aground late Saturday night off the coast of Nantucket, Mass., on its way back to Boston from a Bermuda cruise. Efforts by the ship's crew and tugboats late Sunday night were successful in freeing the ship from the sandy shoal on which it went aground.

urday.

Among them were Carl and Lynn Wehrfritz of Mount Desert, Maine, just married and ready for a honeymoon cruise to Bermuda.

"I expected to fall down the aisle, but I didn't expect the boat not to show up," Lynn Wehrfritz told the Boston Herald.

Carl Wehrfritz said the taxi driver tried to tell them the ship was not at the dock, saying, "No boat. No boat."

The Royal Majesty ran aground 10 miles east of Nantucket Island, while heading back to Boston with nearly 1,500 people aboard, including crewmembers.

While the ship was stuck, strong currents, rain and high seas delayed early efforts to evacuate passengers onto ferries.

No one was injured, and the ship's hull was not ruptured, said the Coast Guard and the ship's owner, Majesty Cruise Line.

The Coast Guard was investigating how the ship ran aground.

"Sometimes these (shoals) develop after charts are plotted out," said Coast Guard spokeswoman Phyllis Kay.

The ship ran aground five years to the day after another cruise ship, the Bermuda Star, foundered on rocks in the same area. The Queen Elizabeth 2 damaged its hull when it hit another rocky shoal nearby in 1992.

James and Joan Lang of Billerica, Mass., booked a spot on this week's cruise — their first ever — to celebrate their 30th wedding anniversary.

"We were just out having lunch and a good cry," James Lang said Sunday. "It's a let-down (but) it's kind of funny, really."

U.S. pilot returns to hero's welcome

ANDREWS AIR FORCE BASE, Md. (AP) — Air Force Capt. Scott O'Grady, who survived six days in the Bosnian countryside after his jet fighter was shot down, came home to a hero's welcome Sunday from top military officials, family and friends.

O'Grady's plane landed shortly before 2:30 p.m. EDT at this base just outside Washington.

The crowd let out a cheer and waved American flags as O'Grady stepped to the top of the plane's stairs. He saluted and strode down, where an Air Force officer and his family waited.

An Air Force band played as O'Grady hugged family members in turn, crying.

On the runway, admirers held up a huge sign that read: "Basher 52 America's Been Praying: Welcome Home, Scott O'Grady."

The honors will continue Monday when O'Grady and his family lunch with President Clinton before a Pentagon ceremony for the 29-year-old pilot.

O'Grady was shot down June 2 by a Serb surface-to-air missile as he and another F-16 pilot enforced NATO's "no-fly zone" over Bosnia.

O'Grady relied on his military training to survive after parachuting to the ground as Serb soldiers searching for him passed within a few yards of him.

O'Grady said he moved around only at night, never ranging far from where he landed. "Most of the time, my face was in the dirt, just praying that no one would see me," he said.

Online runaway found safe in Hollywood

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — When 13-year-old Tara Noble disappeared, her parents didn't search her bureau drawers or look in her pants' pockets for clues. They went straight for her e-mail.

It was in Tara's computer correspondence that they found an invitation from someone named George to come stay with his parents in San Francisco.

"We can run around our room naked all day and all night,"

George wrote.

Tara's mother, Lisa Noble, also found a series of sexually explicit images that had been transmitted through the computer's modem.

Tara was picked up Sunday in Hollywood after she called the FBI and told them she wanted to go home.

Mrs. Noble was going to Los Angeles to pick up her daughter.

"She sounded like my little girl. She's scared and she's hungry and she wants to come home," she said.

The Nobles said they believe Tara was lured to California by George's messages.

"This case ... demonstrates the need for parents to provide oversight and guidance to their children in the use of computers," the FBI in Louisville said in a statement.

Tara disappeared from her Louisville home May 30.

Two firefighters killed battling fuel tank fire

ADDINGTON, Okla. (AP) — Sheppard Air Force Base investigators are looking into the deaths of two firefighters who were killed when they were caught in a wall of flames as they tried to extinguish a fuel storage tank fire.

Lt. Col. Mike Laughlin, a spokesman for the Wichita Falls, Texas, base, said civilian Richard Hogan of Wichita Falls and Airman 1st Class Christopher Rezac of Mesa, Ariz., died early Sunday when a burning 55,000-barrel fuel oil tank exploded.

The firefighters, in a base pumper truck about 150 yards away from the tank, were discussing how to battle the flames when the container blew up about 2 a.m., Laughlin said.

"It was awful," Waurika Fire Chief Ed Keith said. "They were in the truck when the flames hit them — they tried to jump out and run, but they didn't make it very far."

The fire destroyed the pumper truck, valued at $175,000. Losses, not yet totaled Sunday night, will be extensive, Keith said.

Waurika, about five miles southwest of Addington and 35 miles northeast of Wichita Falls, requested assistance from Sheppard Air Force Base and the Oklahoma cities of Ryan, Walters, Ringling, Healdton, Comanche, Duncan, Ratliff City.

Sheppard first responded to the fire about 10 p.m. Saturday with four firefighters and a small truck towing a trailer with 1,000 gallons of liquid foam, Laughlin said.

Two more firefighters arrived an hour later with a truck equipped with a high pressure pump and a tank carrying 1,000 gallons of water and 130 gallons of foam.

Keith said crews tried to contain the blaze while the owners transferred oil from the burning tank to surrounding facilities.

Little League

Winners' bracket final tonight

Rangers, Astros meet in crucial game at NL park

By STEVE REAGAN
Sports writer

It's been awhile since a National League team has played for the city Little League title. A win tonight, however, and the Rangers won't have to wonder what it's like anymore.

The Rangers, three-time defending NL champion, will try for that elusive championship-game slot tonight when they host the Coahoma Astros at 7:30 p.m. in the winner's bracket final of the tournament.

Two other games, all 7:30 p.m. consolation bracket contests, are scheduled for tonight. The AL Astros host the Coahoma Reds, while the IL Indians and IL Rebels meet at the International Park.

The Rangers finished third in last year's tournament, but manager Kyle Ditto said the team has bigger goals in mind this time around.

"Their No. 1 priority since the first game of the season was to win the city championship," Ditto said. "I knew they could win the league, but what they really want to do is win the tournament."

Unlike the Rangers, the Astros had little success in last year's tournament, going two games and out. Manager Steven New got almost everyone back from that team, however, and that experience has paid off this season. The team has lost just one game this year.

"These kids want to win," New said. "They definitely don't want to quit."

The Astros will pitch New's son, Thomas, who already has a no-hitter during the tournament, while Ditto is unsure who he'll go with on the mound.

Not that pitching is a problem for the Rangers.

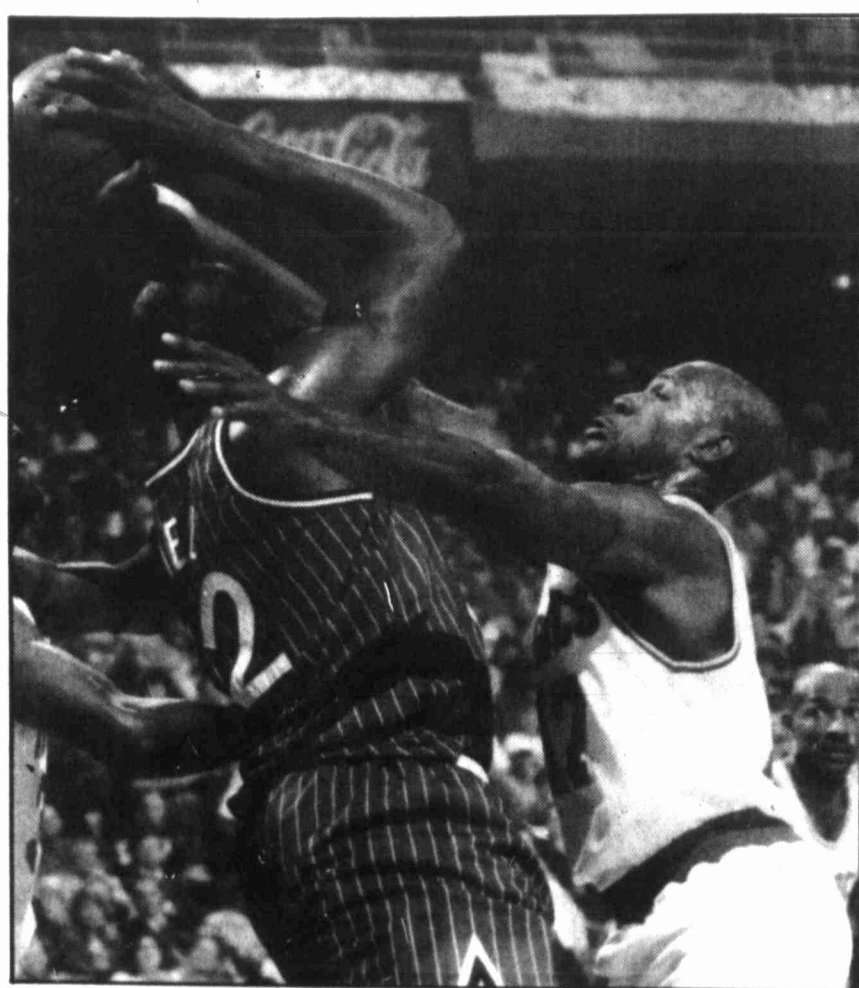

"We've got eight boys who can pitch," Ditto said. "I'm not scared to put any of them out there."

Both teams have shown they can hit, averaging more than 10 runs a game during the tournament.

"If we continue to hit the ball, we'll do pretty good. That's our key," Ditto said. "I think we're playing the best defense in the tournament, so if we hit the ball, we'll be all right."

New differs, however, from his counterpart.

"The big key is pitching and defense," New said. "We've been hitting the ball real well, and I think we can continue to do that, but the big thing is pitching and defense. You've got to score to win, but you've also got to keep the other guy from scoring."

Orlando Magic center Shaquille O'Neal (32) looks for an open teammate as Houston Rocket guard Mario Elie applies defensive pressure during the first quarter Sunday. Houston won 106-103 to take a 3-0 lead in the NBA Finals.

THE ROCKETS HAVE IT

Houston perched on the brink of another title

HOUSTON (AP) — It's only a matter of time now.

Even Houdini at his best probably couldn't conjure up a way to escape from the mess the Orlando Magic are in now. Hakeem, Clyde and the rest of the Houston Rockets seem destined for a happy ending to their fairy tale ride through the NBA playoffs.

Forget magic. Orlando needs a miracle.

This remarkable Houston team that climbed from the No. 6 spot in the West is one victory short of an NBA Finals sweep after its 106-103 victory over the Magic on Sunday night.

No team has come back from 3-0 to win any NBA playoff series, let alone the finals, and the Magic seem stunned to find themselves so thoroughly handled by these Rockets.

"When you look at them on paper, you don't see how they could win," Anfernee Hardaway said, "but they've just got huge hearts. They just don't seem to let the pressure bother them at all."

With a victory at home Wednesday night, Houston would be the first team to sweep the finals since Detroit did it to the Los Angeles Lakers in 1989.

Hakeem Olajuwon had his usual game — 31 points, 14 rebounds. Clyde Drexler had 25 points, 13 rebounds and seven assists.

Elie and Robert Horry each sank crucial 3-pointers. Elie scored 17 points, Horry 20.

Drexler's biggest play came when he grabbed a long rebound and drove the length of the court for a dunk that put Houston up 98-94 with 1:46 to play.

Drexler's layup with 1:13 to go put Houston ahead 100-95.

Orlando's Nick Anderson emerged from the shooting funk that followed his 0-for-4 free-throw shooting fiasco in the final seconds of regulation in Game 1 to sink a 3-pointer that made it 100-98 with a minute to go.

After Horry made one of two free throws, Horace Grant's jumper made it 101-100.

Horry sank a 3-pointer with 14 seconds to go and Drexler made one of two free throws to make it 105-100. Anderson bombed in a 3-pointer from 28 feet with 2.7 seconds to go to cut the lead to two and, after Houston's Sam Cassell missed one of two free throws, Orlando had a last chance to tie.

But Hardaway's 3-pointer under pressure didn't reach the rim.

Shaquille O'Neal led Orlando with 28 points.

Mantle moves out of intensive care

DALLAS (AP) — Since he was a rookie with the New York Yankees, countless fans have asked Mickey Mantle for his autograph. His doctor wanted a different kind of endorsement.

"He (Mantle) said that when this all over and done, he told me I could ask him for anything I wanted. He would do anything I wanted to do," Dr. Goran Klintmalm said. "I did not ask him for an autograph."

"I asked him to help us spread the word about the awareness of donor necessity, and he said he would be very committed to help."

Mantle celebrated his first day out of intensive care Sunday by walking for the first time — from the bed in his Baylor University Medical Center room to a chair.

The steps, along with treatments to keep fluid from building in his lungs, are the initial part of an extensive physical therapy program Mantle will undertake after receiving a transplanted liver Thursday.

The next phase of Mantle's recovery is fighting off a "60 to 65 percent risk" that his body will attempt to reject the new organ.

Only 1.7 percent of liver transplant patients must get another liver because of rejection complications, he added.

Rejection will become more of a concern in the middle of the week, and the chance of Mantle's system rejecting his liver will remain a concern for seven weeks afterward.

Klintmalm added that rejection can be fought with drugs, antibiotics and steroids.

Current therapy is designed to ensure that Mantle's lungs expel fluid to prevent pneumonia.

Decades of alcohol abuse had taken a devastating toll on Mantle's liver. Cirrhosis was followed by a malignant tumor that blocked his bile duct, which forced the transplant.

A dormant case of hepatitis C, possibly a result of a blood transfusion during one of the operations on his injury-tattered legs during his playing career, was also found.

Mantle had one treatment of chemotherapy during the transplant operation, and will continue the treatment because of the possibility of cancerous cells breaking free from Mantle's original liver.

which forced the transplant.

Janzen jets past pack at Kemper

POTOMAC, Md. (AP) — Lee Janzen was rather pleased with career victory No. 6, particularly because it sets him up to claim lucky No. 7 this week.

If momentum means anything, then Janzen should be considered one of the favorites when the U.S. Open begins Thursday at Shinnecock Hills in New York.

Janzen had Sunday's only bogey-free round, then made a 12-foot birdie putt on the first playoff hole to beat Corey Pavin and win the Kemper Open, his second victory of the year — he also won the Players Championship — and sixth of his career.

About the possibility of making the U.S. Open No. 7 ...

"I played there a few years ago. I remember it being very tough," said Janzen, who had a final-round 4-under-par 67 for a 12-under 272 total.

Janzen had only one bogey over the final 54 holes. The $252,000 first-place check made him the leading money winner on tour this year.

"He played great," Pavin conceded. "I'd much rather have someone beat me than for me to beat myself."

Jim Dent ends year-long drought

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Jim Dent has been the Senior PGA Tour's longest hitter for the past seven years. He knows that distinction has its limits.

"The only advantage you have is when you finish and you're the winner," he said. Dent ended a year's drought Sunday by winning the BellSouth Senior Classic by two strokes over Bob Murphy. Dent shot a 4-under-par 68 and finished with a 203 total, two strokes ahead of Murphy, who closed with a 69.

Dave Stockton had a 68 Sunday and finished one stroke behind Murphy.

Hale Irwin, who just turned 50 and was making his Senior Tour debut, had a 69 and tied at 207 with Dave Hill.

Austria's Thomas Muster kissed the victory cup while America's Michael Chang walks away bowing his head after the men's final Sunday at the French Open in Paris. Muster defeated Chang 7-5, 6-2, 6-4.

French Open

'Muster Mash' rolls on

PARIS (AP) — Sunday, Thomas Muster beat Michael Chang to take the most coveted clay-court title, winning 7-5, 6-2, 6-4 on the center court of Roland Garros.

The men's final began well for Chang, but it ended with Muster dominating.

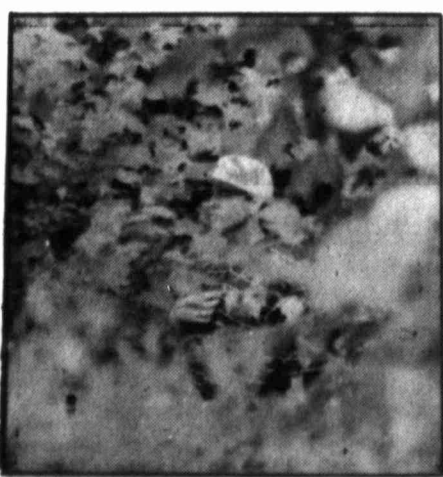

Chang blew four break points for a 5-1 lead, but still led 5-2. Muster stormed back to win 11 of the next 13 games to win the first two sets.

When the American dropped his serve to give Muster a 5-4 lead in the third, he clinched the title on his second match point after a backhand by Chang went wide.

Muster has now won 22 straight finals on clay since 1990. He is the first Austrian to win a Grand Slam title.

The women's final Saturday saw Steffi Graf take a 7-5, 4-6, 6-0 victory over Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario.

Broadcasting legend dies

ATLANTA (AP) — Hall of Fame sportscaster Lindsey Nelson died Saturday night. He was 76. Nelson, the voice of the Cotton Bowl for 26 years, was a longtime Notre Dame football broadcaster and covered major league baseball for more than two decades — 17 with the New York Mets. Nelson died of complications from Parkinson's disease and pneumonia.

HOROSCOPE

FOR TUESDAY,
JUNE 13, 1995

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your impulses side comes out, and you could cause a lot of flak if you use your high energy improperly. Maintain a sense of humor, and face your problems. You feel as if you are on top of the world. Recognize that there are changes going on around you. Tonight: Work late. ***

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Question your choices, and be sure of what you want and what you need to do. If you understand where you're going, you will feel better. Unexpected things happen, so pay attention to what's going on, and be more fun-loving. Seek an expert's advice. Tonight: Go out on the town. **

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): One-to-one relating is highlighted. You really want to have things more your way. An optimistic thought process will help you with immediate problems. Discuss your long-term goals, but be careful with a feisty friend. Tonight: Have fun at your pad. ****

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Rein in your high energy. Remain directed, and recognize your limits. A positive approach opens a new door for you. Listen, and you'll understand where others are coming from. Try a fun-loving approach. Tonight: Be happy going out with friends and co-workers. ****

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your happy personality comes out. Others are under enormous pressure. A friend's communication is meaningful. Laugh instead of getting uptight. A family member is in a sour mood. Nothing you do will change this. Stay secure. Tonight: Go with your whim. ***

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You might be overwhelmed by your own enthusiasm and some choices you need to make. Ask for what you need. A friendship flourishes. Your high energy draws others to you but could cause friction when you least expect it. Tonight: Be your frisky self. ****

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You must make important decisions. Be aware of what life offers. A calm approach will work, especially when anger flares unexpectedly. A change in your domestic situation is long overdue. Seek unusual solutions. Open up to risk taking. Tonight: Entertain at home. ***

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be 'diplomatic' with others.

Friends may not agree with what you are doing. Be goal-directed; know what you want in the long run. You are facing a financial decision. Curb a tendency to take care of others. Solve problems through in-depth thought. Tonight: Your treat. ****

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Money matters are highlighted; you will make positive choices. Restraint is needed as you decide which way to go in key situations. A positive approach helps you face your problems. Listen to feedback, and discuss situations positively. Tonight: Give someone a call. ***

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your happy-go-lucky side comes out. With your high energy, you get a lot done. News from a distance has a big impact. Communications are sour, but you solve problems. Accept responsibility gracefully. Tonight: Ask and expect to receive. ****

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are more in sync than you've been; as a result, you overcome an obstacle. Take time to pull back and analyze what is going on. Some news is confidential. Gather information today; hear the real message behind what someone is saying. Tonight: Curl up with a good book. **

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Zoom in. If you keep a steady course, you will do very well. Listen carefully to what a loved one wants. Focus on success, but don't push someone too hard. Listen to your inner voice. A partner or a co-worker could be testy, so keep your cool. Tonight: Be out and about. ***

IF JUNE 13 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You might feel as if you either give too much or not enough. Often you might wonder whether to do what you want or what you think. Define your values, and evaluate your goals. You have an inordinate amount of energy, which could cause angry outbursts if you aren't careful. If you are single, you are unusually attractive this year. However, don't count on a new relationship being a long-term one just yet. If attached, you might find that passion runs unusually high. Avoid making long-term decisions in this climate. CAPRICORN helps you with money.

Save 'cutting up' for wedding cake

DEAR ABBY: I am concerned about a new trend in society. I recently became aware of it when I watched "America's Funniest Home Videos."

It seems that there is a wedding custom centered around the bride and groom pretending to feed each other a bite of wedding cake — then smearing each other's faces with the cake and icing!

Recently I attended the wedding of a fellow employee. The waiters brought a cake covered with whipped cream. The bride began to feed the groom a piece of cake, then she pressed the whipped cream up his nose! Everyone thought it was hilarious.

I thought it was crude and disgusting. Is this a new trend? And how did it get started? — SAN FRANCISCAN

DEAR SAN FRANCISCAN: You are not alone in your feelings, with which I happen to agree. Personally, I think the cake-in-the-face tradition is anything but funny and should be retired.

However, the significance behind the cake-cutting ritual is interesting. According to the book "Curious Customs" by Tad Tuleja (Stonesong Press, 1987):

"The cake-cutting at modern weddings is a four-step comic ritual that sustains masculine prerogatives in the very act of supposedly subverting them. Until early in this century, the bride cut the first slice of cake herself, because of the belief, as Lillian Eichler commented in 1924, that 'if anyone else cuts into the cake first, the bride's happiness and prosperity are cut into.'

"Now, in the first step of the comedy, the groom helps direct the bride's hand — a symbolic demonstration of male control that was unnecessary in the days of more tractable women. She accepts this gesture and, as a further proof of submissiveness, performs the second step of the ritual, offering him the first bite of cake, the gustatory equivalent of her body, which he will have the right to 'partake of' later.

"In the third step, the master-servant relationship is temporarily upset, as the bride mischievously pushes the cake into her new husband's face, leaving him with a chin full of icing. Significantly, this act of revolt is performed in a childish fashion, and the groom is able to endure it without losing face because it ironically demonstrates his superiority: His bride is an imp needing supervision.

"That the bride herself accepts this view of things is demonstrated in the ritual's final step, in which she wipes the goo apologetically from his face. This brings the play back to the beginning, as she is once again obedient to his wiser judgment. Thus the entire tableau may be seen as a dramatization of potential marital tensions and a theatrical resolution of the tensions in favor of the dominance of the male."

For everything you need to know about wedding planning, order "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)
