Don's Value King sells to Fleming Foods

A major supermarket in Snyder has changed ownership for the second time in less than two years.

Don's Value King in Snyder has been sold to Fleming Foods Inc. of Oklahoma City and will reopen as Heartland Supermarkets Inc.

Don's Value King closed at the regular time Tuesday night and was to remain closed today for inventory. Inventory was to be completed by noon today, and representatives of Heartland were to be at the store this afternoon to interview employees.

John Tolle, a Fleming representative in Lubbock, said the decision as to when the store would reopen had not been made.

Kent Newsom of Big Spring said that Don's IGA in Big Spring is also being sold to Fleming Foods, a major food wholesale warehouse and parent company of Heartland Supermarkets Inc.

Don's has been in business in Big Spring for more than 60 years, and Don's purchased the Snyder store from Furr's Supermarkets in July, 1993.

Newsom said the new owners will have the store open as soon as possible. The store must be restocked and staff hired. Newsom said it is his understanding that the new owners will retain most, if not all, of the current store employees.

Newsom said they had been in negotiations with Heartland for almost three months. "It was a good business opportunity for us," Newsom said. "Although we will be sad not to be selling groceries in Big Spring and Snyder, it is time to move on."

Jack Newsom started the first store in 1933, and there has been at least one store in Big Spring since that time. The company also once operated a supermarket in Lamesa.

Newsom said his father, Don Newsom, will be retiring and that he will be moving into other business opportunities. "Don and I want to thank all the folks in this area for supporting us over the past 60 years. We've enjoyed doing business in this community."

Prior to the purchase of the store in 1993, Furr's had operated in Snyder for 43 years, seven years in the location at College Avenue and 30th Street.

Hostages seized in Russia

MOSCOW (AP) — Dozens of gunmen said to be Chechen rebels took as many as 300 hostages and seized government buildings today in what appeared to be a well-planned attack on a southern Russia town.

During the assault, some of the gunmen reportedly ran through the streets, firing at city residents and apartment buildings. Others apparently tried to force their way toward the airfield in Budyonnovsk, a town of 54,000 people about 120 miles north of Chechnya. Russian television reported houses on fire.

Officials in Budyonnovsky said they could see dead and wounded on the central square and in residential areas, reported Sergei Yushenkov, the head of parliament's security committee.

The ITAR-Tass news agency cited various reports of at least 10 police officers killed, dozens of civilians killed and wounded and four servicemen injured in a helicopter downed by the gunmen. A number of the gunmen were said to be killed or captured.

A duty officer at the Federal Security Service headquarters in Moscow, Alexander Korcheba, said the gunmen seized up to 200 hostages, most of them civilians.

Other security sources said there could be as many as 300 hostages. The attackers numbered about 100.

Democrats split over Clinton plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats, not Republicans, are reacting most bitterly to President Clinton's 10-year balanced-budget plan in a stark display of the conflicting priorities that exist between the administration and its erstwhile congressional allies.

Clinton unveiled his budget package Tuesday night, proposing to pull $1.2 trillion in savings out of Medicare, Medicaid and dozens of other programs. Seeking to draw a contrast with Republicans, his cuts would be gentler than those in GOP plans that already have passed the House and Senate. Clinton's plan includes tax cuts for families with children that are smaller than those in the Republican plans, while also protecting education.

Accompanying this was a modest health-care reform package, including provisions allowing people to carry health insurance from job to job, providing coverage to the short-term jobless, and providing grants for home-based care.

Other items on the agenda include:

—A request for summer office help;

—Purchase of a power supply;

—Consideration of a retirement program;

—Consideration of a business reply card form;

—Consideration of a third-party consultant contract form.

Representatives from Freese & Nichols will present a preliminary engineering report on industrial park development. The board will also consider the next phase of study for the park.

Approval of bills and previous minutes are also on the agenda.

Ira ISD hires teacher

Ira public school trustees approved a personnel request, a bank depository and a calendar change Tuesday evening.

The board approved the hiring of Theresa Daniel, a May graduate of Texas Tech University, as junior high and high school math teacher.

In other action, trustees voted to accept a bid from West Texas State Bank as the district's depository.

In a calendar change for the 1995-96 school year, trustees shifted a staff development day from Aug. 10 to Aug. 9. The board also approved budget amendments to cover for repairs from storm damages, offset by insurance.

Payment of bills and approval of minutes were also handled by trustees, all of whom were present.

Roemisch appointed to HISD board

Hermleigh ISD trustees filled a vacancy on the board Tuesday by naming Jay Roemisch to serve until the next regular election.

The appointment of Roemisch, an employee of ESP and a former board member, was unanimously approved by the board. The seat became vacant earlier this year with the death of Andres Rodriquez.

In other action Monday, the board accepted the resignation of aide Lynda Baldwin, who has taken the position of deaf ed interpreter with Snyder ISD.

Trustees took no action on setting pay for 12-month employees of the district, pending a June 20 meeting at the District 14 Service Center on new legislation.

The board adopted a calendar for 1995-96. First day of classes will be Aug. 14 with Christmas holidays set for Dec. 20 through Jan. 1, 1996. The second semester will begin Jan. 2 and end May 23, with graduation set for May 24.

Trustees also voted to retain Snyder National Bank as the district's depository for the next two years.

The SDN Column — By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "You can always claim to be an artist, and these days nobody can prove you aren't."

Everybody has their price, even ole conservative Rush Limbaugh.

Limbaugh, who does double-crust ads for Pizza Hut, retracted criticism of a U.S. Education Department reading program that rewarded kids with a pizza.

Rush, who actually seems to thrive on criticism, had a number of listener complaints — including the advertising department at the pizza place.

So far, parents have survived a couple of weeks of kids being at home for summer vacation.

One mother is said to have started a count-down calendar. Each day she puts another "X" over the day. Now there is only 60 more carefree days (two months) until school starts.

A couple of the women in the office were talking about the importance of summer camp. We listened in long enough to learn they weren't talking about a camp for the kids.

Shoplifting is a growing problem in America - even right here in Snyder. It's serious for a number of reasons. People should know that stores do prosecute and that the fines are stiff. A conviction can be a permanent blight on a person's record.

Also, shoplifting makes goods and services more expensive for the honest customers.

We once remember a story told during a civic club program on shoplifting.

The store manager had caught a young woman pilfering a watch from an exclusive jewelry shop.

"Listen," said the thief. "I know you don't want any trouble. What do you say if I just buy the watch and we forget all about this."

The manager was only interested in his merchandise and readily agreed. He rang up the sale. The shoplifter stared at the sales slip.

"Wow, this is a little more than I intended to spend. Can you show me something less expensive."

Wilson attacks community that supported him the past

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — When Gov. Pete Wilson added his damaged voice to the chorus of attacks on Hollywood, he failed to mention that he had received substantial political contributions from the entertainment industry.

Making his first public speech in more than a month after undergoing throat surgery, Wilson echoed Republican presidential rival Bob Dole by excoriating movie companies for exploiting sex and violence.

"There is little doubt that they have done much to corrupt our culture," Wilson said Tuesday at a Burbank conference on fatherhood. "It's wrong, simply wrong, to profit from selling this trash to children."

But an Associated Press review of Wilson's 1994 report of political donations and spending — a 4,600-page document — showed the governor took hundreds of thousands of dollars from Hollywood last year when he was locked in a tough re-election campaign.

A partial list of donations includes:

—$35,000 from Walt Disney studios. Disney subsidiary Miramax distributed "Priest," about sexual misconduct by Roman Catholic priests, and the unabashedly gory "Pulp Fiction."

—$35,000 from Albert Broccoli, who has produced 16 James Bond films.

—$25,000 from several cable television interests, including Time Warner, which Dole attacked for distributing violent rap music through a subsidiary.

—$20,000 from top Warner Bros. executive Robert Daly and $2,000 more from the Time Warner subsidiary's political action committee. Warner Bros. distributed "Natural Born Killers," which Dole singled out as reveling in mindless violence.

—$131,000 from Hollywood executive Jerry Perenchio.

—$53,500 from the Edwards Theatre Circuit.

Other industry executives, including Lew Wasserman, Brandon Tartikoff and Lawrence Kuppin, also donated to Wilson's campaign. The report covering the period since Wilson formed his presidential exploratory committee in March is not yet available.

Wilson, whose political supporters include "Terminator" actor Arnold Schwarzenegger and "Die Hard" star Bruce Willis, met Monday night with top industry executives to discuss "a higher level of individual and corporate responsibility for their product," said Wilson spokesman Dan Schnur.

Former Fox Inc. chairman Barry Diller, Disney Co. chairman Michael Eisner and more than three dozen other executives were present at the meeting, said Wilson campaign aide Sean Walsh. Reporters were excluded.

Wilson said Tuesday that he asked the executives: "Do you want your kids — your kids — listening to songs that glamorize rape and violence against women, or the killing of police officers?"

Chronic diarrhea needs diagnosis

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I suffer from chronic diarrhea, as often as five times a week. Do you have suggestions for control?

DEAR READER: Chronic diarrhea has many causes, including bowel inflammation, disorders of the pancreas, parasitic and bacterial infections, and intolerance to milk sugar, to mention a few.

Before treating your diarrhea, I'd have to know its cause. Therefore, you need blood and stool analyses, X-rays and (perhaps) an examination of the lower colon (flexible sigmoidoscopy) performed by a gastroenterologist.

Once the test results are known to be normal, you might try dietary manipulation (avoidance of specific foods that seem to cause the diarrhea), or over-the-counter anti-diarrhea drugs, such as Immodium AD. Your physician can advise you.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Constipation and Diarrhea." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a Physician's Assistant in California and I have a patient with severe rheumatoid arthritis. She's 12 years old and started on Certo on your advice. She has improved 30 percent and is actually better on Certo than she was on methotrexate. Do you take people off medicine when they improve on this or are the two taken in unison?

DEAR READER: When I reported on a reader's finding that Certo relieved the pain of arthritis, I wasn't prepared for the avalanche of letters I received from other readers who had also been helped by this harmless constituent of homemade jelly.

To my knowledge, no scientific studies have shown that Certo is an effective therapy for arthritis. Nonetheless, it is cheap, readily available, devoid of any risks, and works in some cases.

The usual dose is about two tablespoons of Certo in a glass of unsweetened grape juice twice a day. (The amount can be varied, according to the severity of symptoms.)

I see no reason why Certo couldn't be used in conjunction with other treatment, even in children. However, it is probably best to check this out with your patient's doctor.

Methotrexate, an antimetabolite, is one of the drugs used to treat rheumatoid arthritis. Although it is often effective, it is frequently the cause of serious side effects, such as liver inflammation and low blood counts. If your patient is better on Certo, bravo! But make sure that the doctor agrees with this combination.

Young man said 'too smart' to qualify for heart surgery

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Thomas Talbot's brain may prevent him from getting a heart.

Though his IQ of 73 indicates borderline mental retardation, the state says Talbot, 22, is too smart to qualify for aftercare. His lawyers say that without that care, Children's Hospital in Boston will not go ahead with a needed heart transplant.

"I've never seen a case where the stakes were so high. The heart transplant hinges on this," attorney Joanne Petito said Tuesday before an emergency hearing on Talbot's latest appeal.

Petito wants the state to help Talbot with day-to-day tasks after his surgery — making and keeping doctor's appointments, taking his medicine and making sure he gets other help he needs. Earlier this year, Talbot became short of breath, but did not seek help even though he has a congenital heart condition, Petito said.

Talbot, of Tilton, suffered heart failure two weeks ago and is being evaluated at Children's Hospital for the transplant, which would be covered by Medicaid.

Neither his family nor the agency that helps him live by himself in low-cost housing are equipped to see him through recovery from such a major operation, say his lawyers at the nonprofit Disabilities Rights Center.

One of the lawyers, Ronald Lospennato, said he believes the hospital won't bend its rules for Talbot because then it might have a difficult time saying no to others.

"I think there's going to be a lot of incentive for them to be rigid about the application of these criteria," he said.

Children's Hospital spokeswoman Dinah Vaprin would not say Tuesday what the hospital might do if Talbot doesn't win his appeal in New Hampshire. A decision from a state hearing officer is expected by Friday.

A key issue is whether Talbot is retarded. The state maintains he is not.

"We feel very badly for Thomas," said Robin Kenney of Region IV Developmental Services, a nonprofit agency handling the case for the state under a contract. "For a year now, we've been talking to him, and try as we might, we have not been able to find him eligible."

Officials from the state and the nonprofit agency said they are bound by strict eligibility requirements. But Petito insisted the law is flexible enough to cover Talbot easily.

She said Talbot has been rejected because the state arbitrarily rules that anyone with an IQ above 70 is not retarded.

We've got that hometown spirit and we're passing it around!

MCA approves big 'Dreamworks' deal

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — The Seagram Co. gave its newly acquired entertainment company MCA Inc. a creative infusion Tuesday by signing a 10-year deal with the DreamWorks alliance.

Director Steven Spielberg, record mogul David Geffen and former Disney studio chief Jeffrey Katzenberg formed DreamWorks last October and have been bargaining for financing, marketing and other support.

"People with this much talent could have made this deal anywhere," said Tom Pollock, chairman of MCA's Motion Picture Group. "They made it with us for a number of reasons. One is that we're very good distributors." Also, he noted, Spielberg has been directing movies at MCA for 26 years.

Under the deal, MCA will buy 2 percent of DreamWorks for about $50 million. MCA and its subsidiaries will distribute DreamWorks' movies internationally and its records and home video releases worldwide.

But as expected, DreamWorks will retain domestic motion picture distribution rights. The agreement gives MCA rights to characters and concepts created by DreamWorks at MCA's theme parks.

The deal could yield MCA $1 billion in revenues, mostly in distribution fees, over 10 years, the parties estimated.

The deal also is an important expression of faith in MCA only a week after Seagram President Edgar Bronfman Jr. failed to lure talent agent Michael Ovitz to head the studio.

Bronfman offered Ovitz $250 million to leave his Creative Artists Agency to run the entertainment giant, which Seagram, the Canadian liquor maker, bought 80 percent of for $5.7 billion.

MCA President Sid Sheinberg, who was to be replaced by Ovitz, will remain in charge of MCA indefinitely, Bronfman said.

DreamWorks may also build its studio on the lot of MCA's Universal Pictures, although no final decision has been made. "Edgar has invited us to be here if we want to," Geffen said in an interview.

Universal Pictures will produce any Universal sequels Spielberg is obligated to direct or produce, including follow-ups to "Jurassic Park" and "Casper." Universal and DreamWorks will co-produce and co-finance some 30 movie projects now in development at Spielberg's Amblin production company. Any new films will be financed by DreamWorks alone.

Tricks of the trade

The third book recently republished by Devyn Press is the most advanced. "The Tricky Game" by Hugh Kelsey ($14.95; 800-274-2221) highlights deceptive plays by both declarer and the defenders which may generate tricks out of thin air.

Today's deal is a good example of what to expect from this book. Defending against four hearts, West cashed his two top diamonds before switching to the club jack.

Declarer, having to avoid two trump losers, won with dummy's ace and called for the diamond queen. He hoped that East would ruff. But South had picked on the wrong customer. Sitting East was Martin Hoffman, an Englishman who spends a lot of time in the United States. If South wanted him to ruff the diamond queen, Hoffman realized he would do better to discard.

Now South, who knew West had the heart king from his one-diamond opening bid, continued with the ace and another heart. If Hoffman had played the nine on the second round, South would have had no choice but to play low. Down the king would have tumbled and home the contract would have romped. However, Hoffman didn't play the nine. Instead, he put up his jack!

This gave the declarer just enough rope to hang himself. Thinking West must have started with K-9-2 of hearts, South covered with the queen. But now West, after winning with the king, led a diamond, which promoted East's heart nine as a trump trick, and the fourth in total for the defense.

Any time the regular play won't work, try something irregular.

Busey pleads innocent to charge

The 50-year-old actor, who was found unconscious in his home last month from a drug overdose, was released Tuesday after posting $10,000 bond. A pretrial hearing was set for July 17. He could get up to three years in prison if convicted.

Busey will ask to be placed in a drug-diversion program, combining rehabilitation and counseling as an alternative to prison, said his attorney, Harland Braun.

He was nominated for an Academy Award for the 1978 film "The Buddy Holly Story." His recent credits include "The Player," "Point Break," "Under Siege" and "The Firm."

Gonzalez' homer ends Astros' losing streak

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The recent struggles of both the Houston Astros and outfielder Luis Gonzalez may finally be coming to an end.

Gonzalez ended a 4-for-27 slump when he hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning Tuesday night which gave Houston a 6-5 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

The win snapped the Astros' six-game losing streak and ended the Phillies' four-game winning streak.

"That was a good win for us," Houston manager Terry Collins said. "It should be a big boost for Luis and for the whole ballclub. Hopefully he'll get going now, and when he does, we're a different team."

Gonzalez's homer came off losing pitcher Curt Schilling (4-1), who had struck him out in two of his previous three at-bats.

Gonzalez said the Astros are much better than their record (20-22).

The score was tied 2-2 after five innings, as Schilling and Astros starter Mike Hampton both pitched effectively. Hampton, just off the disabled list, allowed two runs and four hits over his five innings. He was relieved in the sixth by Doug Brocail, who was greeted by Darren Daulton's fifth home run of the year.

Schilling's two-run single later in the inning gave the Phillies a 5-2 lead, before Houston rallied in the eighth.

Dave Veres (3-1), the fourth of six Houston pitchers, got the win with 1 1-3 scoreless innings. John Hudek got the final four outs for his seventh save.

Schilling accepted the blame for the loss.

Rockets need win to sweep NBA Finals

HOUSTON (AP) — It has taken an unprecedented playoff run and a 32-year-old player with a yearning for a championship for the Houston Rockets to get a little respect and admiration.

Beating the New York Knicks last year for the NBA title didn't do it. Trading for Clyde Drexler in February didn't do it. And entering the playoffs as the Western Conference's sixth seed certainly didn't do it.

But with a win tonight in Game 4 of the NBA Finals, the Rockets can sweep Shaquille O'Neal and the Orlando Magic and enjoy the recognition that didn't come their way during a year's reign as champions.

"I think the country loves this team, and what we represent and the way that we do things," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said Tuesday. "Being down and sticking together and coming back, we should be admired for the way we do things."

The Rockets can set NBA records by becoming the first sixth seed to win a championship and by getting past four teams with 50-plus wins. They've already made history by winning a record seven consecutive playoff games on the road.

What the series between the veteran Rockets and the youthful Magic has shown more than anything else isn't that you have to pay your dues. It's that the process of paying them makes you stronger.

Now Orlando knows.

"We can take something from this," said John Gabriel, the team's vice president of basketball operations.

The Magic's talent has gotten them further than most thought. But talent, it seems, is no match for experience when the experience is not all happy memories.

The Rockets are still stinging from the heat they took in last year's finals for playing the Knicks' low-scoring, grind-it-out kind of game. And when they played it well enough to win, it was dismissed as a fluke.

"It's something I don't understand," Tomjanovich said. "We took on all the good teams last year. I know how hard it was, I know where we came from, I know the personnel we had. To come out on top of a great league and have people say it was an off year, that (Michael) Jordan wasn't there, that bothers me."

The unpopular finals was followed by the unpopular trade of Otis Thorpe for Drexler, a deal even most of the Rockets didn't like. And by the time Houston got to the playoffs with all of 47 wins, the team found it had a lot to play for and a lot to prove.

"It's been so much fun kicking all those doubters," forward Robert Horry said. "Now they can't say anything, because we weren't even supposed to be here."

After missing an NCAA championship with the University of Houston and missing two chances at an NBA title with Portland, he quietly has picked up the Rockets every time they were in danger of hitting a lull. He's rebounded and led the fast break, leaving behind the twentysomething Magic players.

"I think he's the guy that's really given them the spirit and the energy to carry the team through this whole playoff run," Orlando coach Brian Hill said.

Perhaps if the Magic had been playing another team, one without so much to prove, things would have been different. Now they have a sense of the Rockets' mission, O'Neal and his teammates are showing little sign of the exuberance that carried them past Chicago and Indiana.

A deflated-looking O'Neal acknowledged that youth hasn't given Orlando resiliency.

"We haven't played well and I don't think that we have recovered from the first loss," he said, referring to a game in which the Magic led by three with 10 seconds left in regulation.

Rangers' streak halted by Brewers

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Brewers needed Ricky Bones to pitch well with Cal Eldred facing season-ending elbow surgery. Slumping Greg Vaughn was equally aware of the need for him to start supplying some power for the punchless Brewers.

Both players contributed in Tuesday night's 14-2 rout of Texas that halted the Rangers' six-game winning streak and provided a respite for the reeling Brewers, who had fallen a season-high six games below .500.

"I'm going to enjoy this one," Milwaukee manager Phil Garner said as he lit a victory cigar and relaxed in his office.

"It seems like it's all or nothing for us, and we got it all tonight. I sure would have liked to save some of those runs and hits for a few other nights, but it felt good to put them on the board tonight."

Bones allowed two hits over seven innings and Vaughn ended an 0-for-18 drought with a 412-foot, three-run homer, his fifth, off Ed Vosberg in the eighth.

"Let's hope that's a good start for Vaughn right there," said Garner, who contemplated pinch-hitting for Vaughn, who was hitless in his first five at-bats.

"I was toying with the idea of giving B.J. Surhoff an at-bat right there and then I just decided to go ahead and let Vaughn hit. I'm glad I did. Maybe this is what it takes to get him out of his struggles."

Vaughn's average had dipped to .201.

Bones (4-3), pitching for the first time since taking a Kirby Puckett line drive off his right kneecap Wednesday, gave up a single to Otis Nixon leading off the game, then shut down the Rangers until Rusty Greer's double with two outs in the sixth.

Doctors rule out cancer in Graham

TORONTO (AP) — Doctors gave the Rev. Billy Graham a battery of tests Tuesday and said the world-famous evangelist does not have cancer. But they offered him some advice: Relax.

Doctors at Toronto's East General Hospital have advised the evangelist minister to take a break from the pulpit — perhaps as long as three months.

"The man needs a long holiday. He's got to get away," said Dr. Michael Bentley-Taylor, head of cardiology at the hospital. "We're dealing with a very human man — a 76-year-old man dealing with 76-year-old diseases."

Doctors worry that Graham uses all his strength when he preaches, leaving vulnerable a body weakened by Parkinson's disease. Tests have not determined what caused Graham to lose blood and collapse last week.

"We've ruled out cancer," said Dr. Frank Dicum, a gastroenterologist.

Graham's five-day Mission Ontario drew 266,500 people to Toronto's SkyDome despite his absence during the first three days of the crusade.

He collapsed June 6 while giving a speech in Toronto and was hospitalized for a bleeding colon.

Kindergarten student goes back to class

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A 6-year-old suspended from kindergarten for bringing a butter knife to cut his cookies will be allowed to return to school, state officials ruled Tuesday after determining his punishment was too severe.

The 10-day suspension, which would have kept the boy from attending his kindergarten graduation at Agnes Little Elementary School in Pawtucket, outraged state Child Advocate Laureen D'Ambra, who asked the state Department of Education to intervene.

"There was never any evidence that boy wanted to hurt anybody," D'Ambra said. "He was just an adorable little boy who had no idea what he had done wrong."

Principal Audrey Cunha called police and suspended the boy June 6 after the knife he said he brought to cut his cookies with fell from his pocket. Cunha did not return calls for comment Tuesday.

The suspension was made under the Pawtucket school district's "zero-tolerance" weapons policy.

Education Commissioner Peter McWalters defended the policy but said it needs to be enforced with flexibility and on a case-by-case basis.

"We want schools to have a policy of pulling all students out of class if they have a weapon," McWalters said. "But then you have to decide if the student should be kept out for a day or 10 days or not at all."

Rescued pilot's feet undergoing hospital treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scott O'Grady, the fighter pilot shot down over Bosnia, is suffering from a foot ailment and has been hospitalized for tests, officials said.

The F-16 pilot said in a statement issued Tuesday evening that his feet had been "over exposed to water and cold" during the six days he was hiding from Serb pursuers.

"This afternoon my feet started hurting," O'Grady said in his statement. Earlier, he cancelled a scheduled news conference at the Pentagon so that a flight surgeon could examine his feet. Shortly afterward it was announced he was being hospitalized.

"The doctors have directed that O'Grady stay off his feet for 24 hours and rest," said a Pentagon statement. It said doctors "indicated that this condition is not unusual, considering the circumstances of his ordeal."

Doctors put O'Grady on an anti-inflammatory drug.

O'Grady entered the hospital at Andrews Air Force Base in suburban Maryland late Tuesday afternoon "for routine tests and observation," the statement said.

Texans make final public pitch for eight bases

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the final verdict on base closings drawing near, Texas lawmakers have made their last public pitches to save eight Texas defense installations from the base-closing commission's hit list.

Republican Sens. Phil Gramm and Kay Bailey Hutchison, joined by 12 House members, appeared Tuesday before the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission to argue the Texas case. The testimony marked the final public input by the Texans, who will continue to lobby the commissioners privately up until the last minute.

The congressionally mandated commission will vote next week on which of 178 candidate bases nationwide should be closed or realigned. By July 1, the commission must forward its recommendations to President Clinton and Capitol Hill.

Congress must approve or reject the panel's recommendations in their entirety, without change.

The six Texas bases being reviewed for closure are Kelly and Brooks Air Force bases in San Antonio, Reese AFB in Lubbock, Red River Army Depot in Texarkana, Laughlin AFB in Del Rio and Bergstrom Air Reserve Base in Austin. Two others, Corpus Christi Naval Air Station and Naval Air Station Fort Worth-Joint Reserve Base, are being examined for realignment.

The Texans joined the parade of more than 200 lawmakers appearing over two days before the eight-member commission — most stressing that their bases are too important to close and that any job loss would do substantial harm to the local and state economies.

The Texas contingent repeatedly referred to the state's strong support both at home and on Capitol Hill for the armed forces — drawing attention to the fact that other delegations have voted against increased defense spending while urging that their bases remain open.

"Our Texas delegation comes to you, Republicans and Democrats, we support the military," Mrs. Hutchison said. "We have done it on the merits for years and years and years."

Concurred Gramm: "Our love affair in Texas with our military bases didn't happen the day they went on the base-closing commission list."

Perhaps most troubling to the Texans is the economic fallout that closure would have on the communities of San Antonio and Texarkana.

The Air Logistics Center at Kelly AFB employs about 10,400 civilians and 1,600 military personnel. Another 4,100 civilian and military personnel work at nearby Brooks AFB. Closure of Red River would cost more than 7,000 direct and indirect jobs to the Texarkana area — causing unemployment to skyrocket from 8 percent to a projected 22 percent.

The four-state corner from which Red River draws its work force would suffer proportionately more than any other community with a base being reviewed for closure, said Rep. Jim Chapman, whose district includes Red River.

Chapman and others argued that Letterkenny Army Depot in Pennsylvania, ranked lower by the Pentagon than Red River, should take the hit instead. The Texans are fighting a transfer of Red River's functions to Anniston Army Depot in Alabama, contending that the Army needs both Red River and Anniston.

Gov. Bush signs bill overhauling welfare

AUSTIN (AP) — Personal responsibility is a key part of a new law overhauling welfare in Texas, Gov. George W. Bush says.

"You're responsible for the children you bring in the world, and you're responsible to the taxpayers of Texas," said Bush, who signed the welfare measure into law Tuesday.

Under the law, needy Texans face new limits on welfare benefits, parents who don't pay child support can lose state licenses and some ex-spouses can get alimony.

But the measure still needs some finishing touches.

Bush said the state must ask the federal government for 27 waivers from rules to fully implement the measure. Federal approval isn't expected until next year, he said.

"So long as the federal government has got its clutches on the capacity of Texans to run Texas, we must ask for permission to do this," said the Republican governor, who made welfare reform a priority of his campaign.

Provisions that need a federal OK include a requirement for welfare mothers to identify the fathers of children receiving benefits and a three-year maximum limit on benefits.

Bush also said if Congress approves changing to a block-grant system for divvying up welfare funds among the states, Texas lawmakers may have to take another look at the program.

"I would hate to have to call a special session (of the Legislature), but that might be one reason why," he said.

Bush didn't get everything he wanted in the law. It doesn't cap benefits for families who have additional children while on welfare, one of his chief campaign issues.

But he got many of the changes sought, saying the law represents an effort to make Texans less dependent upon government while weeding out fraud and taking care of "those who truly need help."

Sen. Simpson sparks probe into AARP's financial deals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Association of Retired Persons collects millions in federal grants while it lobbies the government, gets subsidies for mailings that hawk insurance, and earns more from its business than it collects in dues.

Sen. Alan Simpson, a Republican from Wyoming who is investigating the AARP, says something has gone awry with the 33 million-member seniors group.

"We are here not only because AARP has drifted from its stated mission of representing senior citizens," Simpson said Tuesday, "but also because I believe the evidence is clear that AARP has also drifted considerably from any reasonable description of a non-profit organization that should enjoy a tax exemption and unlimited lobbying privileges."

The AARP's executive director, Horace Deets, was attending a long-scheduled board meeting in Portland, Ore., Tuesday and missed Simpson's opening hearing.

Deets is scheduled to testify next week, as Simpson continues his investigation into an organization so large and influential that few lawmakers have dared to cross its path.

In a statement, the AARP said Simpson's goal is to divert attention from its efforts to protect Medicare and Social Security and to "silence its advocacy on these and other issues."

Simpson acknowledged that Senate colleagues are worried about being "tainted" by his questions, saying: "Hell, the AARP's a bunch of tough cookies. They smile and tack your hide on the wall."

The AARP had total revenue last year of $382 million.

Motorcyclist killed in Tuesday accident

A fatal Tuesday afternoon accident in Lubbock which involved a Snyder family is still under investigation, Lubbock police officers said this morning.

Juan Rodriguez, 121 25th St., was the driver of a 1979 GMC Suburban which was in collision with a 1977 Honda 400 motorcycle driven by 23-year-old Daniel Merrbach of Lubbock.

Merrbach, who was thrown about 55 feet according to police, died at the scene of the accident.

Lubbock officers said Merrbach was heading west on 66th Street while Rodriguez was going south on the service road of Interstate 27.

The accident occurred shortly after 2 p.m. Tuesday.

Seven people were reported to have been in the Suburban and four were taken to University Medical Center where they were all treated and released.

Treated at the hospital were Juan Rodriguez, Olga Rodriguez, Augistina Perez and Juanita Perez.

Leader of cult rearrested in Japan today

TOKYO (AP) — The cult leader charged with 12 murders in the Tokyo subway nerve gas attack is also suspected of ordering the strangling of a cult member who angered him, police said today.

Shoko Asahara, 40, was rearrested today for the suspected lynching. He has been in custody for nearly a month, and the new arrest signals that a new murder charge may be added to the case against him.

The suspected lynching is just one of several deaths, disappearances and other violence to which police have turned their attention since formal charges were filed June 6 against Asahara and other senior cult members in the subway attack.

In the new case, Asahara is suspected of ordering the strangling of Kotaro Ochida, 29, a pharmacist at a hospital run by the Aum Shinri Kyo cult.

U.S. House votes to revive stealth bomber, freeze aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House staked out a hawkish stance in its first defense budget votes by reviving the B-2 Stealth bomber and freezing aid to the former Soviet Union.

Both votes Tuesday evening, propelled by Republican majorities, were rejections of President Clinton's policies. Debate continued today on a bulked-up defense spending bill.

As anxious lobbyists for Northrop Grumman Corp. waited in the wings, supporters of the bat-winged bomber evoked images of Saddam Hussein, Capt. Scott O'Grady, and the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor in defending what could grow into a $31 billion weapons investment.

The House voted 219-203 against an amendment by Reps. John Kasich, R-Ohio, and Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., that would have stripped $553 million in B-2 money from the Republican version of the defense budget bill.

If enacted, the bill would provide the down payment on the $15 billion tab for increasing the fleet of radar-evading B-2s to 40 planes. It would mean a huge order for Northrop and thousands of jobs in Southern California and at subcontractors across the country.

Opponents said it will cost an additional $19 billion to equip, maintain and operate the planes. And they emphasized that Defense Secretary William Perry, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and the military commanders who would lead U.S. troops into battle unanimously oppose building more B-2s.

"I can't find anybody in a uniform who's in any kind of ranking level who says they want more of the planes," said Kasich, who, as House Budget Committee chairman, calls himself a "cheap hawk."

Eighty Republicans voted with Kasich to kill the plane while 146 supported the B-2; 121 Democrats and one independent voted to kill the B-2 while 73 voted to keep it.

Opponents of the B-2 said the $750 million price for each plane is too high. Guided weapons fired from outside of enemy territory could save lives and still do the job of the B-2, they said.

But Rep. Randy "Duke" Cunningham, R-Calif., a former fighter pilot, said, "Not one single lawmaker who has flown in combat supports this (Kasich-Dellums) amendment because they know the costs in human life and they know the risk."

Rep. Norm Dicks, D-Wash., dismissed a Pentagon report that concluded no more B-2s were needed, based on the assumption that the United States would have two-week's warning time of a military emergency.

"We didn't have 14 days when in Pearl Harbor, or in Korea, or when Saddam invaded Kuwait," Dicks said.

from within his own party. "When you're getting criticized from both sides of the spectrum, that's often a pretty good sign that you're on the right course in the direction most Americans want to travel," Gore said on ABC's "Good Morning America."

White House press secretary Mike McCurry said Clinton and House Democrats have only a tactical disagreement.

"We would say to House Democrats that we understand your anger, we understand your desire to score political points at the expense of the Republicans, but the president lives in a different house," McCurry said. "The president has different responsibilities and the president can't always say no to the Congress."

In a nationally televised White House address that lasted just over five minutes, the president gently slapped Republicans, saying the deficit could be wiped out in seven years, as Republicans propose, but insisted "the pain we would inflict on our elderly, our students and our economy just isn't worth it."

Mostly, though, he portrayed himself as transcending partisanship by offering a tough plan that would break through partisan gridlock — something voters have consistently signaled they've wanted since the 1992 elections and that he is eager to demonstrate for his re-election campaign.

But House Majority Leader Dick Armey said today he didn't hear any such effort to break through partisan politics.

"I was a little disconcerted by the tone," the Texas Republican told "CBS This Morning." "We've got our budget balancing train moving down the track and he's running to catch up and it seems to me he could have had a little bit more courteous tone. But nevertheless, we're welcoming him aboard."

The Emu Report

By Shirley Pate, Pate Emu Farm

A "parade" of agribusiness leaders and experts heralded the emerging "commercial" phase of the Texas emu industry June 2-3 during the Texas Emu Association annual convention, giving the state's 3,000 emu ranchers confidence during the bumpy transition from the "breeder phase" to meat, leather, oil and feather products from the big flightless birds.

Mark M. Ellison, Assistant Commissioner for Industry Development, Texas Dept. of Agriculture (TDA), said this "new American livestock (emus)" will have a definite role in the "21st frontier" of agribusiness. The Rosebud native and former international marketing specialist said, "To develop an agricultural industry that is responsive to consumer needs and demands and committed to competing in a global economy, we must make Texas a world recognized leader in the research and development of agricultural technologies as well as a world class leader in creating new business enterprises."

The expanding emu industry is on the right track, Ellison said, outlining TDA initiatives that will foster a international focus, innovative business structures, financing options and consumer responsive agenda well into the next century.

Jay Botter of Alvin, newly elected TEA president for 1995-1996, said he is encouraged by the fact U.S. emu ranching has grown to about 10,000 families and 1.2 million to 1.5 million birds in 48 states. (Based on a June 1994 Southern Methodist University census.)

"Texas accounts for about 30 percent to 35 percent on the ranchers and birds, with the industry expanding moderately in Canada and Mexico. Interest has been shown by agribusiness and government officials from China, Korea, Thailand and Chile as these nations seek a livestock that is environmentally sensitive and capable of efficiently converting grain to low fat, low cholesterol red meat. They also seek economic opportunities for other value-added products, such as fashions, cosmetics and healthcare products."

Botter acknowledged the recent drop in the price of emu chicks, yearlings and breeder pair, but said, "The current buyers market opens the door to many young farmers, retirees, suburbanites and even "backyard breeders" who can now afford to get into the industry and who desire to produce emus for long-term commercial processing.

Along with Botter, other new officers include Sally Schoenfeld, Karnes City, vice-president; Rebecca Mobley, Prairie Hill, secretary-treasurer; and directors Tom Thorn, Palestine; John Eaton, Plano; Vonnie Tucker, Lometa; R. Scotty Flowers, Lubbock; and Juanita Seales, Midland.

You can now purchase emu meat at Lowe's Marketplace in Lubbock. Dieticians, nutritionists and health care professionals are excited about this "other red meat." It is heart-healthy, a change for your heart, and your doctor will thank you. Anyway you slice it, it is tasteful! You get the flavor without the fat. Try it; you'll like it! For further information, call Pate Emu Farm, 573-5340.

Entomology Report

By Mark Logan, County Entomologist

The Scurry County area received some much needed rainfall over the past seven to ten days. This should allow all producers to begin to plant this year's crop. As you know, our crop yields are for the most part solely dependent on rainfall, and trying to estimate yields this early in the growing season is next to impossible. We can, however, look at previous years rainfall records and try our best to predict yields by comparing rainfall patterns and yields.

I believe last year's crop gives us an idea of what cotton plants can produce on two to three inches of pre-season or planting rainfall, with no additional pre-season, or in season moisture. In general, last year's crop produced 70 to 100 lbs. of cotton lint/acre on two to three inches of planting rains.

The 1995 crop closely resembles the 1994 crop so far, with very little pre-season moisture stored in the soil profile.

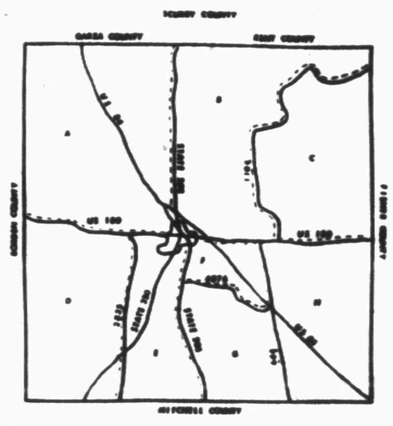

Each year the Scurry County Producers Association provides funds to monitor boll weevil traps and operate a cotton scouting program.

Boll weevil traps have been monitored for approximately four weeks this year. Because so few boll weevils had been caught for the month of May, I thought there was a possibility our pheromone was not active, but we received a new package of pheromone and compared trap catches with new and old pheromone and saw no differences. So we have concluded we had very little boll weevil emergence through the month of May. But the first week of June we caught several boll weevils and averaged 34 boll weevils per trap.

The weevils will not survive until cotton starts to square so we will need to monitor the next few weeks closely. The graph shows the average number of boll weevils per trap per week for Scurry County, which is conveniently divided into eight sections.

GRANT WRITING WORKSHOPS

There will be two workshops sponsored by Big Country RC&D for individuals and organizations. Grant Writing Basics scheduled for June 21-23, is designed as a writing intensive course providing participants with personal attention so they will leave with a proposal draft. Day one concentrates on researching funders: who they are and how to locate them; psycology of funders; rank potential funders; develop funder relationships; compete to win. Days two and three focus on helping participants draft a proposal. Each participant will write reader-based proposals; judge proposals through reviewer's eyes; learn secrets of successful writing; and master key proposal elements.

Grant Writing Plus scheduled for Aug. 9-11, will teach participants to write successful fund-raising presentation proposals. Participants will draft and present proposals. Training will include strategic planning principles and healthy organization finances; capital campaign, operating expenses, program monies; writing the presentation proposal; role playing fund meetings and power of negotiation.

This is an excellent opportunity to learn the basics of successful grant writing, or to hone your current grant writing skills. Each seminar includes a 100-page workbook, small class size and personal attention.

If you are interested in one or both seminars please give us a call at the Natural Resource Conservation Office (NRCS, formerly the Soil Conservation Service) at (915) 573-6317, or come by the office at 5309 Big Spring Highway.

Programs and services of the Natural Resource Conservation Service are offered on a nondiscriminatory basis without regards for race, color, national origin, age, sex, religion, marital status or handicap.

FINANCIAL ADVICE FOR EXECUTIVES

Q. I'm in my 30s with a good job but a lot of my older friends are facing layoffs. What can I do to protect myself financially?

A. Save. Save. Save. If you save 10 percent of what you earn, you will be prepared for life's little emergencies. Save as much as possible from the moment you start working, and don't touch it except in an emergency. For more advice on savings options, contact your financial adviser. If you don't have an adviser, call the international Association for Financial Planning, 1-800-945-IAFP, for a free listing of financial advisers in your area.

Q. I think I might lose my job soon. What can I do to prepare financially?

A. Cut back on all unnecessary expenses immediately. Pay down credit cards, but don't cancel your cards, because you may need the credit to tide you over. Once you're unemployed, contact all your creditors and tell them you've lost your job, but fully intend to pay your bills. Ask if you can arrange a payment plan you can afford. A financial adviser may be able to help you further. If you don't have an adviser, contact the International Association for Financial Planning, 1-800-945-IAFP, for a free listing of financial advisers in your area.

Mother of dead boys charged with murder

McMINNVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — As police took Jennie Bain to jail on murder charges, they drove past the motel where she had partied with friends while her two toddlers were trapped in a sweltering car parked outside.

The motel's flagpole had a blue bow tied to it, in memory of Dustin and Devin Ducker. They died a week ago, side by side, buckled into their seats in the back of Bain's car.

Bain, 20, cried when she was met with hordes of television cameras as she turned herself in Tuesday, accompanied by her parents and her lawyer. She was released on $75,000 bond. Arraignment was set for June 23.

A grand jury indicted Bain on two charges of first-degree murder, punishable by life in prison. Prosecutors cannot seek the death penalty because the deaths do not include aggravating circumstances needed for a capital case in Tennessee.

Investigators believe Bain went to the motel about 3:30 a.m. on June 6 and was drinking with four male friends whom she once worked with at a factory. Her lawyer, Michael Galligan, said Bain fell asleep inside the motel and never intended to harm her children.

"There will never be in her life a day that she doesn't wake up in the morning with this and go to bed at night with it," he said.

The four men told police that Bain went out to the car periodically, presumably to check on the boys. They said they didn't know the boys were in the car.

Autopsies showed that Dustin, 1, and Devin, almost 2, died of hyperthermia, or overheating. The estimated temperature inside the car when Bain found them about 1 p.m. June 7 was 120 degrees. They had been inside for up to 10 hours.

Police said Bain's blood alcohol level, taken several hours after she had been drinking, was 0.06, less than the 0.10 legal limit for driving in Tennessee.

The boys' father, James Ducker, 23, said Bain was neglectful. Ducker had recently filed for divorce.

"This is just the beginning of it," he said of the murder charges from his home in Marshall, N.C. "If that sticks, I feel like justice will be served."

Octogenarian's Birthday Wish: Keep Cards and Letters Coming!

DEAR ABBY: I just turned 80 and had the most wonderful birthday in my life!

At 80, folks don't need presents — they need attention, and this year, my daughter saw to it that I got plenty. She wrote letters to many of my friends telling them my 80th was coming up, and I did not want gifts, but it would be wonderful if they sent me a card with a personal note or a snapshot, and to pass along the word to others.

Abby, the response was overwhelming! I heard from friends, relatives, people I had worked with many years ago — even a few friends from grade school! I can't describe the lift it gave me to know that these people are still alive and remembered me. They offered congratulations, compliments, a special memory and expressions of love. Each and every message was a precious gift.

I highly recommend this way of saying "Happy Birthday — I Love You" to anyone near and dear. My sincere thanks to my daughter for having thought of it — and a bigger thank-you to everyone who responded.

STILL SMILING

DEAR STILL SMILING: I have seen many such requests. Some were works of art, and most included a stamped envelope addressed to the honoree. I can't imagine a more rewarding gift!

• • •

DEAR ABBY: You sometimes warn people about dangerous practices, and this is certainly the time of year to issue this warning.

I am appalled when I see young children mowing the lawn with power rotary lawn mowers. And worse yet, even younger children running alongside the mower!

Parents, wake up! Power mowers are extremely dangerous. They can pick up rocks, small toys and other debris and propel them out with the speed of a bullet!

No one should ever be on the discharge side of a mower; I don't even want to think about what could happen if a child should slip and fall in the path of the sharp whirling blade!

Abby, it happens every year — even to adults who are trying to be careful.

CAL S. HOLM, THIENSVILLE, WIS.

DEAR CAL: Thanks for the wake-up call. Readers, listen to Cal. The accident you may prevent could be your own.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I've gotten myself into a situation I don't like. I seldom lie because liars are usually found out in the end, but I foolishly told a lie, and I can't seem to get it out of my head.

I recently started to date a wonderful guy I met through the personal ads in the newspaper. I was afraid my family and friends would ridicule me for being so desperate, so I told them we met on a blind date set up by a co-worker. (I also told some other people I met him at church.)

How can I come clean without sounding like a total jerk for lying in the first place? And in the future, how can I answer the common query, "How did you two meet?"

SORRY IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR SORRY: Congratulations for wanting to "come clean." Confess to those to whom you lied that you met this wonderful guy through the personal ads in the newspaper. And don't apologize for it. Many decent (and lonely) people have met others through personal ads.

Son of convicted couple may be adopted by aunt

FORT WORTH (AP) — The parents serving 99-year prison sentences related to the starving death of their oldest son have given up their rights to their youngest son, allowing him to be adopted by relatives in Idaho.

Douglas Hill, who watched his brother Stephen go without food while chained to a pole in the family's White Settlement trailer home four years ago, was the star witness at his parents' trial.

His testimony led to Jay and Linda Hill being convicted of injury to a child. They received the maximum sentence.

Since the trial, Douglas has been living with Jay Hill's sister Yvonne Langford and her husband, optometrist James Langford, in Pocatello, Idaho. They have four children.

"He's doing great," Mrs. Langford said Tuesday. "He eats normally and he's 5-foot-2 now — his doctor's thrilled."
