Daniel Unit mobilized to look for Rotan kids

Some 20 correctional officers from the Price Daniel Unit were mobilized Tuesday to aid in the search for two children who were discovered missing around 9 a.m. in Rotan.

"Thankfully, they were found in just a couple of hours," said assistant warden David Sweetin.

Sweetin said the unit had received a call about mid-morning Tuesday about the missing children and rapidly mobilized the officers and a horse-back search unit.

"We had a trailer full of horses about half-way to Rotan when we were notified the children had been located," said Sweetin.

Thankful the kids had been found, the horse-back unit returned to the unit — relieved.

"We didn't know where they were lost," said Sgt. Jimmy Singletary who oversees the unit's horses and dog kennels.

"We were afraid they might have been out on a school outing and wandered off into some rough country," Sweetin said.

Sweetin emphasized that the tracking dogs at the unit are not used in situations like the one Tuesday.

"We would not use our dogs. They are trained to attack once they locate a person," Sweetin said.

"We had two work crews in Rotan at the time, and if the situation had called for it, we would have used those crews in the search," Sweetin said.

The children's father noticed the two missing around 9 a.m., and Fisher County Sheriff Gene Pack said almost the entire community began searching door-to-door for the children.

They were located about 11 a.m., just a few doors down from their residence, said Pack.

"Searchers noticed curtains moving in a vacant house and then saw the children," Pack said.

Pack said a seven-year-old girl and her three-year-old brother had entered the house through an unlocked door.

Pack said the two accidentally locked the door as they entered the house, and they could not get out.

The search did reveal several potential hazards to children, including abandoned cisterns.

In Sweetwater, horses and riders from Colorado City's Wallace Unit are being used to search for a missing 87-year-old Sweetwater man.

Loy Cosby was reported missing around 6:30 a.m. Tuesday from his home on Lake Sweetwater.

SHS choir students earn state awards

Twenty-two choir students from Snyder High School brought home a host of awards from Monday's state contest in Austin.

Those receiving a I for their solos include Erica Arellano, Kimberly McClain, Reid Johnson and Michaelin Huckabee, all juniors; and seniors Lila King, Richard Rodriguez and John Gutierrez.

Those earning IIs include Dallas Jones and Brady Hackfeld, both sophomores; Kara Gowin and Brady Cobb, both juniors; and seniors Melanie Kidd, Jessica Brown and April Baker.

Those receiving a III for their solos include Alesha Miller, sophomore; Jerrod Rinehart, senior, and Laurie Kerley, junior.

Two women's trios also earned II ratings. One trio consisted of April Baker, Kara Gowin and Laurie Kerley.

The other trio included Jessica Brown, Kimberly McClain and senior Christina Bullard.

Ten competed as the Madrigal ensemble, earning a III. They included Erica Arellano, Brady Cobb, Brady Hackfeld, Michaelin Huckabee, Reid Johnson, Jerrod Rinehart; Allison Bowden, Callie Pierce and Josh Burney, all juniors; and Isaac Spoor, senior.

Rhonda Haire, choir director, said this group was the biggest group she has taken to state. "They did very well. Snyder has a talented group of young people."

She noted that the judges, all college and vocal professors, were impressed with Snyder's contestants.

Haire added that some SHS students were even recruited.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Everybody's got a photographic memory, but some don't have film."

To hear the experts prophesy, the year 2000 will bring the end of the world — at least the business world.

Reason has it that if a toronado was coming, a prudent man would take cover. Computer experts say the same precautions should be taken in the Year 2000 to avoid a disaster — replace software so that computers won't go wild at the end of the year.

The computer doomsday scenario seems to be the greatest American fear since bomb shelters became hot items in the 1950s.

Fixing the world's computers will be expensive. Fortune 500 firms alone anticipate spending about $11 billion. The private sector will shell out $50 billion for software updates.

Gloomy forecasters say that information is the life blood of the modern economy. If the flow of information is cut off, the economy would grind to a halt. Since computers are crucial to the flow of information and all computers won't be fixed by Dec. 31, 1999, the economy will grind to a halt and the worst recession since the oil embargo in 1973 will occur.

We finally came across another expert that makes more sense. He doubts that the computer crisis will shut down the world economy or cause a recession, but he does expect some business disruptions. He recalls that Congress once shut down the government for 22 days, and some concluded that we were actually better off.

We might be better off without computers. We read a related article that said computers have actually decreased employee productivity rather than increase it in the past 10 years.

We can believe it. There are more people playing with computers than actually working on 'em.

But one entrepreneur is hoping to capitalize on the Year 2000 problem.

He's selling, for $24.95, a digital clock that counts the seconds remaining 'til the millenium.

Initially, the maker wanted smoke to pour from the clock the instant 1999 ends, just like the tape did on Mission Impossible.

Instead, the clock will flash zeros for 24 hours, and then become a regular clock. Less than 500 days left!

Rescue efforts underway in Germany's worst train wreck

ESCHEDE, Germany (AP) — Using cranes and jackhammers, hundreds of workers lifted chunks of a collapsed overpass off crumpled train cars today, searching for those trapped when the swiftest train on Germany's rails jumped the tracks.

At least 92 people died when the lead locomotive of the Munich-to-Hamburg InterCity Express broke loose at 125 mph Wednesday morning, leaving behind 12 passenger cars and a second locomotive that careened off the tracks and crunched together like an accordion.

A weekly newspaper, the Rheinischer Merkur, reported today that experts from the federal railway office found signs that one of the coaches derailed 3¼ miles before the train reached the overpass.

The coach continued along the rail bed until a bend near the overpass where it swung sideways, the newspaper said.

The federal railway office had no comment on the report.

With few clues to the cause of the disaster, rail officials ordered all 100 InterCity Express trains to slow down to a maximum of 100 mph instead of the previous top speed of 175 mph.

Alisa Cain ends 9-year career

Alisa Cain has ended her busy days of rent collection, budget reports and office operations, opting for a full-time spot at an equally, if not more, demanding job.

"I just want to be a wife and a mom for awhile," Cain said.

After nine years, Cain has left her position as Golden Terrace Village senior housing manager to put all her energy into her family — her husband, David, and their two boys — Zach, 12, and Blake, 8 months.

A reception is scheduled for her at 1 p.m. Friday in the community room at Golden Terrace Village located at 1607 52nd.

"I'm real excited," Cain said of her chance to be a full-time wife and mom. "This is something God had in store for me. I just feel like sometimes in people's lives God blesses you in such a wonderful way with your family, and at this time, I need to be at home to have more family time."

Cain's last day was May 29, a full week earlier than she originally thought.

She explained that she had planned to play it by ear until her replacement, Kathryn Tate, felt prepared to take on the job.

"I didn't want to leave her until she felt comfortable enough to be on her own," Cain said.

The reason being, she said, is that the job is not one a person can learn just overnight.

"It's hard to train someone over two or three weeks what I've learned over the course of nine years. There is just no way to learn it in a few weeks."

Cain said she is confident Tate will do a wonderful job, though, and that she is prepared to assist her anyway she can.

"I think she is going to be an excellent manager. She is personable, and she fits the picture of what Golden Terrace needs. I'll be more than happy to help her with anything she needs."

Cain will remain on call for awhile, filling in for Tate when needed, she said. She added she possibly could help out when the new complex, scheduled to be built later this summer, is completed.

A start date on that project has not been determined.

Asked about her experience over the past nine years, Lisa became a little emotional, "It has been one of the most wonderful things in my life. I am going to leave here with so many memories and friendships that I will cherish for a lifetime."

She added,"I can't say enough about the residents and board of directors. They have just been a great group of people to work with."

Woman escapes serious injury

A Portales, N.M. woman was being evaluated this morning at Cogdell Hospital following a one-vehicle accident around 6:30 a.m. on U.S. Highway 84, about two miles west of Snyder.

Mary J. Martinez was driving a 1995 U-Haul truck when she apparently went to sleep and her vehicle drifted into the median, said DPS trooper Rick Compos.

The truck, and a U-Haul trailer, rolled onto their sides after Martinez over-corrected the vehicle.

The east-bound lane of traffic was temporarily blocked, said Compos.

On-duty Snyder police officers were first to arrive at the scene to aid in traffic control.

FTC finds few privacy rules for children on Internet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hey, kid! What's your e-mail address?

In the latest depiction of the Internet as an unfriendly place for consumers, especially for unsupervised children, a new report by the Federal Trade Commission says the vast majority of sites on the World Wide Web fail to tell visitors how they use personal information they collect.

The FTC was particularly critical of sites that gather data from children, and urged Congress to pass new laws limiting the practice.

At one Web site, the government said, children were asked to give their name, address, e-mail address, age and whether they ever received gifts of stocks, cash, savings bonds or certificates of deposit. But the site "does not tell children to ask permission before providing information."

Experts had warned previously that the online industry's failure to adequately regulate itself on privacy issues could prompt the government to get involved.

"The commission now recommends that Congress develop legislation placing parents in control of the online collection and use of personal information from their children," the FTC said in the report, being issued today. "Such legislation would protect children and ensure parents have knowledge of, and control over, the collection of information from their children."

People who don't use the Internet frequently cite privacy concerns as their primary reason for staying off line. The issue has taken on growing importance as more companies have begun in earnest selling products using the Internet.

"This report should serve as a wake-up call to the online industry," said Rep. Billy Tauzin, R-La., chairman of a House subcommittee on consumer protection. "Either you develop voluntary new privacy guidelines or run the risk that Congress will do it for you."

A consumer group, the Washington-based Center for Media Education, said many commercial Web sites use games, contests and offers of free merchandise to entice children to give information about themselves and their families. Some sites include cartoon characters who ask children for e-mail addresses.

"Self-regulation will not protect the privacy rights of children and their families in the digital age," said Kathyrn Montgomery, president of the center. "We need clear government rules about the online solicitation. collection and distribution of personal information."

Christine Varney, a former FTC commissioner who has been an outspoken critic of industry privacy practices, said: "I hope it does not take legislation, but I think the window is growing increasingly small for the industry without some government action."

The FTC study of 1,400 randomly selected Web sites found that 85 percent collect some form of personal information from consumers. But only 14 percent offered any notice about how the information is used.

"The statistics tell us that self-regulation has not resulted in real privacy protections on the Internet," said Deirdre Mulligan, staff counsel at the Washington-based Center for Democracy and Technology. "What they found is very few Web sites are being honest with consumers about how they're using that information."

The FTC study found an online medical clinic that offers to refer patients to local physicians — but only after they provide their name, postal address, e-mail address and the name of their insurance company.

Suspects in officer's death still at large

CORTEZ, Colo. (AP) — Investigators found pipe bombs while searching the belongings of three fugitive survivalists suspected of killing a police officer and wounding two sheriff's deputies last week.

Alan Pilon, 30, Robert Matthew Mason and John Wayne McVean, both 26, are named as suspects in Friday's shooting death of Cortez police Officer Dale Claxton, whose funeral was Wednesday.

Police said they found three pipe bombs in Pilon's camper and two more in Mason's pickup truck near Durango. The bombs, described as 8 to 12 inches long and 3 inches in diameter, were detonated by a bomb squad.

Claxton was killed as camouflage-clad gunmen raked his patrol car with automatic rifle fire after he stopped a stolen water truck in Cortez, in southwestern Colorado.

Two Montezuma County sheriff's deputies were wounded in the gun battle that followed. The gunmen stole a second truck, then abandoned it and fled on foot into the arid canyonlands near Hovenweep National Monument, north of the Four Corners area.

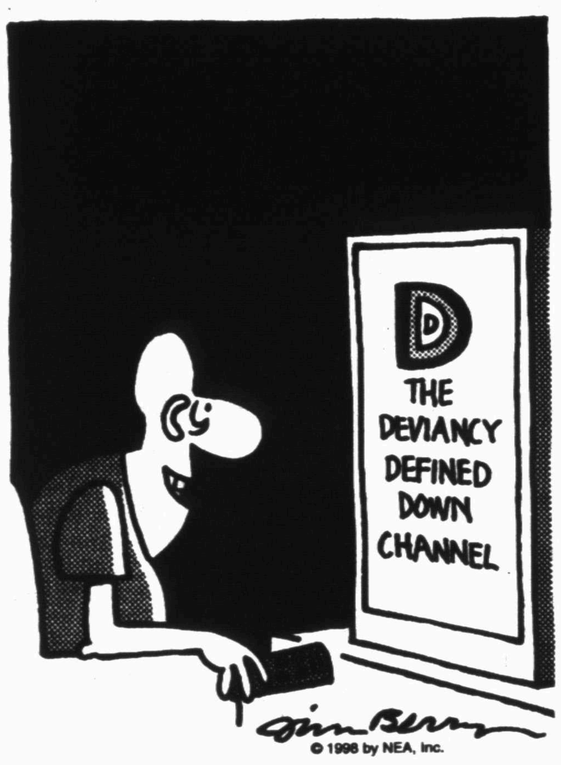

Despite a massive manhunt, searchers have found only two sets of footprints. FBI SWAT teams have joined the search, and National Guard troops are expected to be on hand soon.

More than 2,000 people, including Gov. Roy Romer, attended funeral services at the Cortez High School football stadium.

Police Chief Roy Lane, tears in his eyes and his voice choking, told mourners that Claxton's call sign would be retired as a tribute.

"There will never be another Lobo 11," Lane said. "He was a man of great compassion for the people. He was our John Wayne."

The rules should be etched in stone

By Phillip Alder

Many players use Blackwood when they shouldn't. Wheel out the trusty Old Black only if you are willing to bid six even if one ace is missing.

There are two other "rules" of Blackwood that should be followed:

1. Don't use Blackwood when holding a void.

2. Don't use Blackwood with two (or more) losers in an unbid suit unless you are absolutely certain that partner has a control (ace, void, king or singleton) in that suit.

Suppose you have a void. If you ask for aces and find that one is missing, how do you know if it is in your void suit (which is bad news) or in another suit (when a grand slam is still in the picture)?

When you have two losers off the top in a side suit and you learn an ace is missing, how will you know if the opponents can take the first two tricks in your weak suit? In my experience, partners don't see the funny side when the opponents defeat a slam at trick two.

In both these situations, you need to resort to cue-bidding. Once a trump suit has been fixed in a game-forcing auction, bidding a side suit shows the ace (or a void) in that suit and interest in a slam.

This deal highlights cue-bidding's usefulness. Once hearts were agreed, Blackwood would leave South assuming North's ace was in diamonds, his first-bid suit. But by cue-bidding his spade ace, he heard North cue five clubs, showing that ace. Now bidding seven hearts was easy. And the play was even easier.

Man arrested twice within four hours

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — Four hours after being acquitted of a cocaine possession charge, Tracey Faulkner was back in court — charged with possessing cocaine.

After a jury acquitted Faulkner on Tuesday, he was pulled over by an officer who noticed expired license tags on his car. Police searched the car and said they found cocaine.

Prosecutor Tom Bowers, who handled the first case, said he wasn't surprised that Faulkner was back in custody so soon.

Faulkner, 26, had been acquitted because the evidence, a plastic bag containing a chunk of crack, was found in a field, not on him. He had run through the field as officers pursued him.

Six-run fifth spurs Rangers past Athletics

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Juan Gonzalez and Luis Alicea homered in a six-run fifth inning and the Texas Rangers withstood Rickey Henderson's grand slam to beat the Oakland Athletics 16-10 on Wednesday night.

Lee Stevens had four hits and drove in two runs and Will Clark added a three-run double for Texas, which shelled rookie Blake Stein (1-3) for nine runs on nine hits in 4 1-3 innings.

Domingo Cedeno also drove in three runs with a pair of hits as the teams combined for 32 hits, 19 by Texas.

Aaron Sele, denied in his bid to become the majors' first nine-game winner, took a 12-6 lead into the bottom of the fifth, but gave up three straight singles before Henderson connected for his third career slam and second this season.

Texas pulled away again with a three-run sixth, getting a two-run single from Tom Goodwin and a run-scoring single from Cedeno.

Sele was tagged for a season-high 10 runs, eight earned. He went four innings and gave up 12 hits, including Matt Stairs' third-inning homer.

Tim Crabtree (2-0) got the victory with two innings of one-hit relief.

Gonzalez, breaking an 0-for-11 spell that included six strikeouts, led off the fifth with his 18th homer, driving Stein's pitch into the left-field seats to break a 6-6 tie and ignite the six-run outburst.

Stevens and Fernando Tatis added run-scoring doubles, and after Goodwin was hit by a pitch from reliever Aaron Small, Alicea hit a three-run homer.

Dallas extends series with OT goal

DALLAS (AP) — No NHL team has won consecutive Stanley Cups since Pittsburgh did it in 1992.

Wednesday night's game between the defending champion Detroit Red Wings and the Dallas Stars illustrates just how bumpy the road can be.

A hockey version of a "Hail Mary" pass beat Detroit 3-2 in overtime to keep the Stars alive in their Western Conference finals.

Jamie Langenbrunner's 70-foot slap shot from beyond the blue line sent the series back to Detroit on Friday night for Game 6, with the Red Wings wondering what happened to goalie Chris Osgood.

Dallas is trying to beat tremendous odds to get into the Stanley Cup finals. No team has ever overcome a 3-to-1 deficit in the conference finals.

Langenbrunner's hot shot came just 46 seconds into the overtime. He let fly inside the red line, and the puck took several little hops on the soft ice and beat Osgood on his stick side.

Detroit captain Steve Yzerman quickly rushed to Osgood's defense.

"We're not worried aobut Chris," Yzerman said in the hushed Detroit dressing room. "We have confidence in him. We knew we wouldn't have an easy time playing in Dallas."

Langenbrunner, who was at the end of his shift and getting ready to head to the bench, couldn't believe his good fortune that produced his first goal of the playoffs.

"I was definitely surprised it went in," Langenbrunner said. "I was just trying to get a shot on net. I just crossed the red line and shot."

Langenbrunner said the Stars knew Osgood gave up some long distance goals in earlier playoff games.

"You watch the other series and see what goes in," Langenbrunner said. "Our style against any goalie is to get the puck to the net. I don't know if I've ever had one from that far. It's been a tough playoff for me. I've been robbed several times."

Guy Carbonneau's wrist shot into the upper left-hand corner of the net beat Osgood on his glove side to tie the game 2-2 with 1:25 left.

"I was trying to create a chance. You're desperate in that situation," Carbonneau said. "I was just trying to shoot it at the net. Nobody wanted the season to be over."

"We caught a break with the overtime goal, but we battled hard and that's the way we have to play," Dallas coach Ken Hitchcock said. "Our persistence paid off. Now we get to fight another day."

Igor Larionov's goal at 16:20 in the second period appeared to be the game-winner until the 38-year-old Carbonneau, playing in his 190th playoff game, scored.

"Those two goals saved our life and saved my life," Dallas goalie Ed Belfour said. "It was a breath of fresh air for me. I'd like to have the Lariopov goal back."

Jazz grab Chicago by the horns, 88-85

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — It wasn't about the old MVP, the new MVP, which team was tired or which team was rusty.

Game 1 of the NBA Finals turned out to be about a certain future Hall of Famer, and John Stockton showed he wants to head there with a ring.

Stockton, after missing a desperation jumper at the end of regulation, showed the savvy that has defined his career as he scored seven of his 24 points in overtime Wednesday night and the Utah Jazz defeated the defending champion Chicago Bulls 88-85.

In a sloppy game that seemed to take forever to be decided, the Bulls missed a chance to steal a game and wrest homecourt advantage away from the Jazz.

"You couldn't ever ask for a better opportunity to win on their court," Chicago coach Phil Jackson lamented. "I feel like we let one slip away."

That's because Stockton made all the big plays in overtime and Scottie Pippen missed a tying 3-pointer at the buzzer. And the Jazz walked off leading the series, something they never did in last year's finals.

Stockton ended up shooting 9-for-12 from the floor with eight assists and two steals. Karl Malone added 21 points and Bryon Russell had 15 to help Utah overcome 33 points from Michael Jordan.

Stockton started his overtime flurry with an assist to Malone for a layup that broke a 79-all tie.

Pippen, yelled at by Jordan late in the fourth quarter for rushing a 3-point shot, then had the ball poked away by Jeff Hornacek as he drove to his right. Stockton gathered the loose ball and went in for a three-point play that put Utah ahead 84-79.

Jordan made one of two free throws and a jumper to cut the deficit to two with 2:07 left, but the Bulls would not score for another two minutes.

With 43 seconds left and the ball in Chicago's hands, it ended up going to Luc Longley. He tried going to the hoop and had the ball deflected away for Chicago's third turnover of overtime. Bryon Russell recovered, the Jazz ran the clock down and Stockton made the shot of the game.

Guarded by the slow-footed Steve Kerr, Stockton drove to his right, jumped off the wrong foot and shot from about 10 feet away.

All net.

Toni Kukoc hit a 3-pointer with 5.4 seconds left, and Stockton made two free throws with 3.5 seconds left to give the Jazz another three-point lead.

"They just kept coming back. We're going to have to play better than that if we're going to win this thing," Stockton said.

The Bulls fired the ensuing inbounds pass upcourt and tipped it to Pippen at the 3-point line, but his shot was too long.

"Stock's got the ice water in his veins," Russell said. "You know he wants that ring. Stock took over that game."

Coming off 10 days rest and playing a Bulls team that was extended to seven games by Indiana in the Eastern Conference finals, the Jazz led most of the game but could never pull ahead by more than eight.

They kept Jordan somewhat in check, limiting him to 13-for-29 shooting, and didn't let anyone else hurt them.

Pippen shot only 7-for-19 with five turnovers, Kukoc was 4-for-12 and Chicago's reserves scored only eight points.

The Jazz got 22 points from the bench, including eight by Howard Eisley, outscored Chicago 52-34 in the paint and 21-6 on fast-break points.

ASU advances to title game

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Willie Bloomquist went 5-for-6 and drove in four runs Wednesday night as Arizona State, scoring in all but one inning, beat Long Beach State 14-4 to advance to the championship game of the College World Series.

Richy Leon (4-0) pitched six innings, striking out six, and Aaron Kramer got his second save of the series by closing the final three innings as the Sun Devils reached the title game for the first time since 1988.

Two-time defending champion LSU would advance to the title game with a victory over Southern Cal on Thursday. A victory by USC would force a second game Friday, with the winner taking on Arizona State.

Arizona State (41-22) had 18 hits, including solo homers by Bloomquist, Mikel Moreno and Andrew Beinbrink.

The Sun Devils, who are 10-1 when Leon starts, also were helped by some sloppy play by Long Beach State (43-23-1). The 49ers threw a CWS-record six wild pitches and committed four errors. Shortstop Justin Hall had two of the errors, including a dropped infield pop fly that allowed two Arizona State runs in the second inning.

Freshman Jeff Leuenberger (6-3) took the loss.

Bloomquist's bases-loaded single in the third made it 6-0 and finished Leuenberger.

Dr. Gott

By Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: How is homocysteine related to heart disease?

DEAR READER: Homocysteine is a product of metabolism and can be measured in the blood. The higher the level, the greater the risk of cardiovascular disease.

Elevated blood homocysteine is associated with cigarette smoking, excessive coffee consumption and a deficiency of folic acid in the diet. Therefore, many researchers suggest that homocysteine levels be obtained routinely in healthy adults. If excess quantities are discovered, the patients should stop smoking, reduce coffee consumption and take folic acid supplements.

As yet, doctors have not determined whether the compound itself causes heart disease or if it is merely a marker that indicates a potentially serious metabolic derangement. Further investigation is underway in a number of medical centers.

To tell you more about heart disease, I am sending you my Health Report "Understanding Heart Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is there any medicine available to slow the aging process?

DEAR READER: Normal human cells undergo a finite number of cell divisions and ultimately stop dividing. This state is called "replicative senescence," and is the reason that we all eventually die. Many experts place absolute limits (of about 110 years) on human life.

Therefore, a recent medical report in the journal Science sparked a great deal of interest because the researchers may have hit upon a method to prolong cell division.

The key here is something called telomere shortening. Such shortening, in the genetic makeup of cells, can be blocked using a compound called telomerase, which lengthens telomere and causes cells to divide vigorously. In the study, telomerase-negative cells were exposed to telomerase. In contrast to untreated cells, the treated cells exceeded their normal lifespan by at least 20 doublings. The findings suggest that our genetically-determined lifespan might be prolonged if our cells could be treated with telomerase.

Of course, decades will pass before these lab findings can be replicated and refined to the point where an elixir of youth could be marketed to the general public. However, it's reassuring to know that scientists have taken the first step on the long journey toward modifying the aging process. There will be bumps in the road, no doubt, as well as enormous moral and ethical considerations. For example, what's the point of maintaining life to 120 or 130 years if the person has advanced senility and is confined to a nursing home? Unfortunately, new scientific discoveries (for instance, cloning) often exceed society's ability to cope with them. However, keep your eye on telomerase; it may be the discovery of the century.

Jury still out

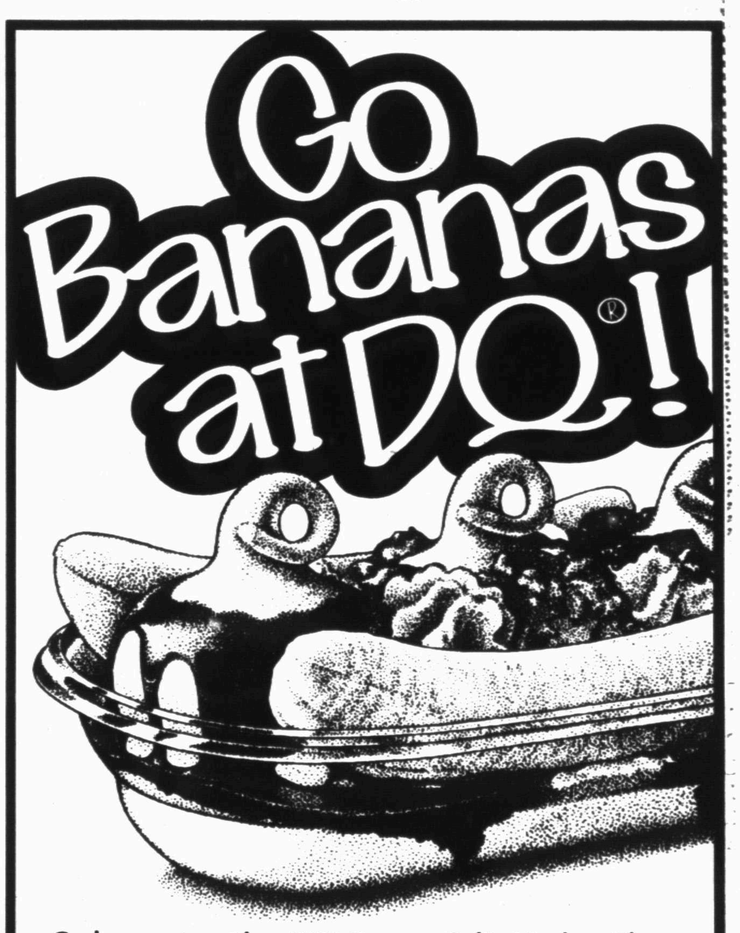

DALLAS (AP) — Jurors resumed deliberations today in the trial of an 11-year-old boy accused of beating and sexually assaulting a 3-year-old girl.

They considered the case for more than 2 hours Wednesday before adjourning without a verdict.

In closing testimony, the fourth-grader said he lied when he admitted to police that he beat and sexually assaulted the girl.

He fidgeted in his seat and repeatedly told a prosecutor in a quavering voice that he did not participate in the April 9 attack with two younger boys.

He lied when he confessed to Dallas police detective Gregory Dugger, he said.

Networks finding memorial rites popular programming

NEW YORK (AP) — Funerals and memorial services are turning out to be popular for national cable news networks.

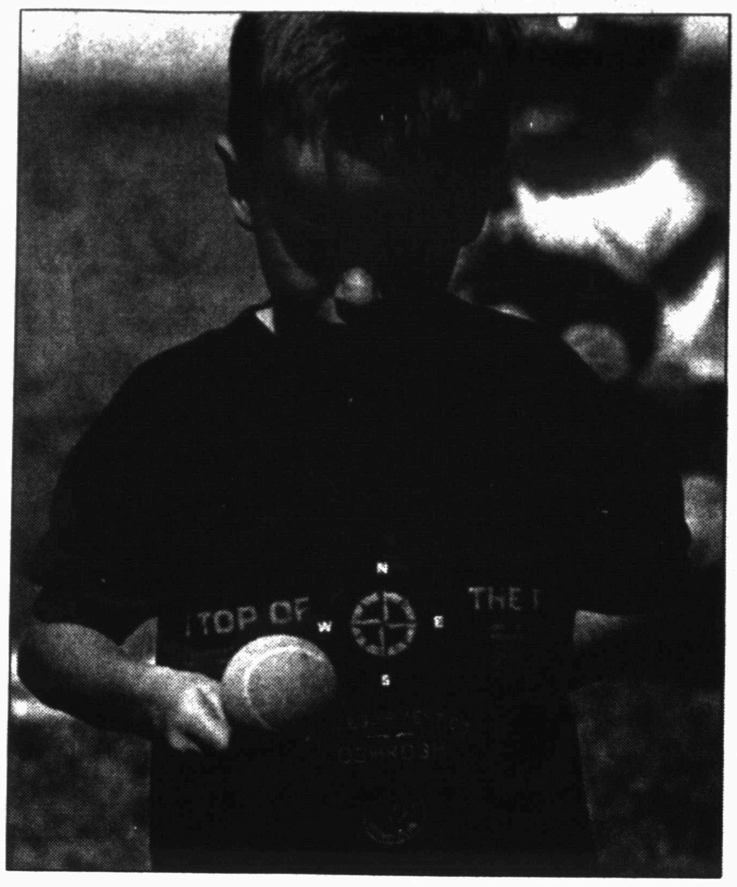

Services for public figures frequently boost the ratings for CNN, MSNBC and the Fox News Channel, which all carried live coverage of former Arizona Sen. Barry Goldwater's funeral Wednesday.

Big audiences weren't a surprise for Princess Diana's funeral, a major news story. But deaths of a lesser magnitude are also big business: memorials for both Sonny Bono and Tammy Wynette each more than tripled CNN's typical audience, for example.

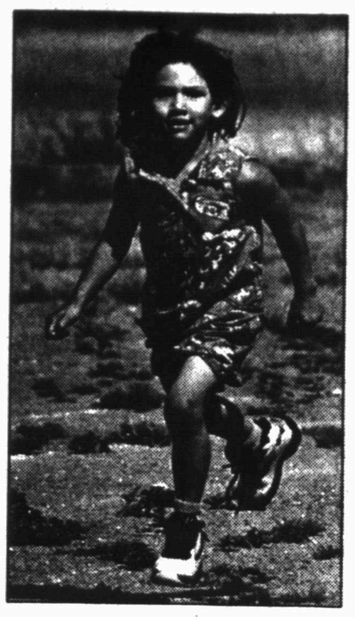

"It becomes a way of communal mourning," said Howard Polskin, CNN spokesman.

Wynette's funeral had a 1.8 rating for CNN, compared to its typical daytime average of 0.5, the network said. MSNBC and Fox also said the country music star's funeral drew a bigger audience than their typical days.

Bono's funeral doubled MSNBC's average audience. The network also ran a special "Time & Again" feature on Bono's life the night after he was killed in a skiing accident and it more than doubled the network's average prime-time audience, a spokeswoman said.

Dear Abby

Mom's Shining Example Still Lights Up Her Children's Lives

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1998 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I had to write after reading the letter from "Mom in Denver," who asked how to be a great mother. She wanted to avoid the mistakes her own mother had made with her and her siblings.

I have no children, but my life was enriched and greatly blessed by my own wonderful mother. She loved unconditionally, whether we were good or mischievous. She taught us humility and respect for our fellow beings by her altruistic example. She encouraged us to learn about the magnificent world in which we live, and gave us the freedom to learn about our place in it. She gave us the courage to explore our gifts and talents. When we failed, she never once said, "I told you it wouldn't work," or, "What a waste of time and money." Instead, she praised our efforts and, in so doing provided us with self-confidence and determination so we could persevere and achieve.

Our mother made mistakes, but when she did, she apologized with her heart and soul. When we made mistakes, she accepted our apologies. Conversations with Mother were never "adult talks and children listen." She taught us to express our emotions and thoughts on issues we faced. In short, we learned that we were valued for what we thought and how we felt, because she listened patiently and sincerely.

There was never a question of who was in charge; all it took was a stern look to know when we were on the outskirts of good standing. She knew what decisions a child could and should make and which were the responsibility of an adult, as well as age-appropriateness in relinquishing those decisions. By example we learned to nourish ourselves properly, value our health, and strive to lead full, balanced lives. We learned about God and were schooled in religion, but were also given the opportunity to question, ponder and disagree.

We shared in laughter and in tears. We told jokes and hilarious stories to each other. We had fun and learned to always have time for a friend. We shared stories and photographs from Mom's childhood and teens, so that we could know who she was before she became our mom. When one of us lost a friend struck by tragedy, she'd cry with us and share our grief.

This letter may be too long for your column, but if you print it, I hope it helps mothers like the one in Denver. Our beloved mom passed away from ovarian cancer at the age of 48 almost 11 years ago. From her, each of her children learned to navigate in a world from which she is physically absent. We celebrate each other's lives because we see her within each of us. Now, after having completed my Ph.D. in neurobiology, I'm finishing my M.D. and pursuing a future in neurosurgery. I have wanted to be a doctor for as long as I can remember, but I wonder sometimes if such would be the case had I not had such an extraordinarily great mom.

MELISSA Y. MACIAS,
ORIGINALLY FROM
EL PASO, TEXAS

DEAR MELISSA: Not only have you provided great insight in what it takes to be a terrific parent, you have written a loving and eloquent tribute to your own mother. Please accept my deepest sympathy for having lost her at such a young age.

I know she would be proud of raising a daughter who is pursuing her dream, and who is already so intellectually accomplished. I hope that someday you can pass on what your mother taught you to children of your own.

Readers: I have received more wonderful letters on this subject than I can print in one, or even several columns. Therefore, I will continue to print them in the coming weeks.

Deciphering tornadoes often guessing game for forecasters

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Strong swirling winds, terrifying funnel clouds, heavy rain and hail. Must be a tornado, right?

Maybe not, though such a destructive storm often look close enough to the real thing to fool even meteorologists. And it is those same experts who are the first to admit that identifying tornadoes isn't an exact science.

Sometimes, the bad weather that prompts the National Weather Service to issue tornado warnings is deemed a few hours later to have been just very strong wind, said Peter Young, a NWS meteorologist in State College.

That happened this week south of Pittsburgh.

Advisories went out Sunday night warning of tornadoes in two counties, but a closer look at the damage — such as trees sent crashing to the ground — revealed those storms were "all wind and hail," said Rich Kane, a meteorologist with Pittsburgh's NWS center.

Eleven more advisories went out Tuesday, warning that possible tornadoes had been spotted in the Pittsburgh area. Of those, Kane said, four turned out to be tornadoes. The strongest one packed 160-mph winds.

Meanwhile, State College's NWS center sent out 17 tornado advisories Tuesday night. Its meteorologists have since confirmed only a lone tornado that touched down in West Salisbury; the same town was hit Sunday by a twister that killed a 13-year-old girl.

"When you put out a tornado warning, you have an 80 percent false alarm rate," said Mark Tobin, a meteorologist with AccuWeather, a private weather forecasting company in State College.

"You don't want to underwarn, because that's when people get hurt," Tobin said. "But when you overwarn, people think you're crying wolf. I don't think there's a happy little medium in there. It's still not yet a precise science."

Already this year, tornadoes and storms have killed more than 130 people, including 17 who died in storms that raked the northern Plains, upper Midwest and Northeast since last weekend. Also included in the death toll are two people in Lake Carey who died Tuesday night when an apparent tornado yanked them out of a mobile home near Scranton.

According to the scale developed by University of Chicago researcher Tetsuya Theodore Fujita, tornadoes can be ranked from F-0 (winds of 40 mph to 72 mph) to F-5, with winds of at least 261 mph.

Police probe allegations of sex between teacher, student

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — An investigation is under way into allegations that a female Wichita Falls junior high school teacher had a sexual relationship with a boy between the ages of 14 and 17.

Wichita Falls Police Department Lt. Dennis Bachman said Wednesday that no criminal charges have been filed against the teacher, who is in her late 20s.

Police expect to give the case to the district attorney's office so that it can be presented to a grand jury by the end of the month, Bachman said.

More interviews will be conducted and more evidence will be gathered, he said.

No one would say how long the alleged relationship had been going on.

Connie Welsh, superintendent of the Wichita Falls Independent School District, said that sometime in the last two weeks a teacher was suspended with pay from her job.

Border Patrol agent slain during arrest, suspected smugglers escape

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Four of five suspected marijuana smugglers accused of killing a Border Patrol agent remained at large early today, and authorities said they believe they may still be in the country.

At least one suspect had been arrested late Wednesday as FBI agents and two Arizona prison dog-tracking teams searched through rugged hills northwest of Nogales.

The smugglers were stopped about 1 a.m. Wednesday by agent Alexander Kirpnick, a 27-year-old Soviet immigrant, and a partner. The men were arresting the five suspects in Potrero Canyon — about two miles north of the border — when Kirpnick was shot in the head. His partner was not injured.

At least two marijuana-stuffed backpacks were found at the scene, Border Patrol spokesman Rob Daniels said.

"It would have been as possible for them to boogie north as it would be for them to go south," Daniels said. "Greed will do such things to people. That would lead us to believe that it's an entire possibility that they did go north as well as (that) they did go south."

Kirpnick was the fifth Border Patrol agent to die in the line of duty in the Tucson sector, which covers most of Arizona. He was the third shot to death but the first since 1926.

Kirpnick and his partner had headed to the canyon after a ground sensor detected a possible illegal entry shortly before midnight.

Daniels said Kirpnick had told two of the suspects to sit down. His partner, who was not identified, was dealing with the other three when he heard a shot. He turned around to find Kirpnick on the ground.

Democrats mull election-year tax cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic Leader Tom Daschle circulated a proposal for an election-year tax cut today to ease the impact of the so-called "marriage penalty" and provide relief for self-employed workers who buy health insurance, The Associated Press has learned.

The provision was drafted as an amendment to tobacco legislation pending in the Senate, and is aimed at countering a tax cut proposal that Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas and many fellow Republicans support.

Congressional sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the Democratic alternative would be less costly than Gramm's proposal, although no final figures were immediately available.

These sources said that Daschle was bidding to give Democrats a chance to vote for a tax cut without jeopardizing chances for passage of the tobacco measure.

Taxes aside, numerous other thorny issues remain unresolved on the tobacco bill, including how to protect tobacco farmers from economic hardship; whether to grant Big Tobacco limited liability from lawsuits and what type of penalties to impose on tobacco firms that fail to meet pre-set targets for reductions in teen smoking.

The tobacco bill would raise billions, largely through a $1.10 per pack increase in the price of cigarettes, and tax cuts would come from those funds.

Iraq says it is not hiding illegal weapons

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Iraq insisted today it is not hiding illegal weapons, despite the chief U.N. weapons inspector's claims to the contrary.

The Security Council met today for a second straight day to hear the chief inspector, Richard Butler, report on the arms inspection program. No details of the meeting were released, but Butler was expected to speak about Iraq's alleged secret program to hide weapons and illegal materials.

France is urging him to outline what steps Iraq must take before the council can lift crippling economic sanctions imposed in 1990 after President Saddam Hussein invaded Kuwait, touching off the Gulf War.

Butler hopes to convince the council that Iraq is wrong when it claims to have complied with U.N. orders. Russia, China and France have challenged some of Butler's conclusions.

In Baghdad, Iraq's oil minister, Amer Mohammed Rashid, accused Butler of bad faith and renewed claims that Baghdad has complied with U.N. orders.

"If they have information (about weapons), let them give it to us," Rashid told The Associated Press. "We will verify it."

He said Butler was trying to raise doubts among council members "to block the lifting of sanctions."

Butler presented aerial photographs and other documents Wednesday to justify his claims that Iraq has failed to comply with U.N. orders, issued after the 1991 Gulf War, to destroy all long-range missiles and chemical, nuclear and biological weapons.

U.S. Ambassador Bill Richardson said Butler's report "dealt a devastating blow to Iraq's credibility".

Clinton urged to delay trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — A day after President Clinton urged renewal of normal trade ties with Beijing, the China bashing began . Capitol Hill with a vengeance on the ninth anniversary of the bloody Tiananmen Square crackdown.

Lawmakers and dissidents, "exiled" to the United States after release from Chinese prisons, said Clinton should cancel his trip to China this month and instead send a wreath to remember those who have died under oppressive rule, including as many as thousands of students in 1989.

"Mr. President, this trip is not in the American interests. It sends the wrong message at the wrong time," Sen. John Ashcroft, R-Mo., said at a news conference, a wreath at his side.

Ashcroft and several other Republican and Democratic lawmakers, who have long opposed Clinton's policy of improving ties with Beijing, noted there are congressional investigations regarding the possible transfer of U.S. missile technology to China and alleged illegal election fund raising that could overshadow his trip and prevent him from accomplishing anything.

The critics also object to the president's being welcomed in Beijing's Tiananmen Square, although the White House said the opening ceremony would actually take place at the edge, in front of the Great Hall of the People.

recover more bodies today from a first-class car and a severed dining car still wedged beneath the ruins of the overpass at Eschede, 35 miles north of Hanover.

"We think the chances of finding further survivors are very small," police spokesman Peter Hoppe said.

The four parallel tracks were strewn with stray wheels, shards of metal and other debris — much of it the result of rescuers cutting and smashing their way into the mangled hulks of train cars.

In Eschede, a red-roofed town of 4,000, residents brought blankets for survivors and coffee and food to exhausted rescue workers.

"How could we know that this horrible thing would happen in this beautiful place?" said Bernd Schlawer, 45, who provided a place to stay for one man from Hanover who had come searching for his wife.

Christoph Kuenkel, the local Lutheran pastor, prepared for a memorial service this evening. Loudspeakers and bleacher seats were installed outside for those who won't be able to crowd into the simple, yellow wooden building.

Twenty-four hours after the accident, there were no firm estimates of how many people were on board the train, or how many survivors might have walked away from the crash.

Officials continued to give varying death tolls. Police said 90 bodies were recovered so far, two more people died in the hospital, and 95 had been treated in hospitals for serious injuries. Lower Saxony state officials earlier said 100 people were killed and 200 people were injured.

The tragedy was the worst on Germany's rails since World War II. Flags flew at half-staff at all public buildings today, rail workers wore black ribbons. Upon hearing the news, many Germans rushed to donate blood.

German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, who cut short a trip to Italy to return home, visited the disaster scene this afternoon, pledging $550,000 in immediate government aid.

At 8:03 a.m., Department of Public Safety troopers arrested an 18-year-old male four miles north of Dermott on U.S. 84 for possession of marijuana, less than two ounces.
