Wal-Mart finalizes mall deal

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

A contract was signed Thursday for purchase of Highland Mall, to be razed in March and a four-acre Wal-Mart Supercenter built by fall, according to Wal-Mart.

The news, coming six months after Wal-Mart Stores Inc. first announced plans to build a Supercenter at Wasson and Thorpe streets.

"It's a win-win situation for all parties involved," said Brenda Brooks, who joined a group of about 50 citizens to oppose the Wasson location - not the Supercenter itself - because of its proximity to residential areas. "I'm real pleased with the way things turned out."

"As far as traffic and detrimental activity to the neighborhood, this is a better site for a store of this magnitude," said City Manager Lanny Lambert, who in March asked Wal-Mart to reconsider other locations. "However, we certainly have concerns for the businesses that are affected by Highland Mall and we will certainly do everything in our power to work with them and help them."

Mall merchants, many renting without leases for three years as mall owners tried to sell the property, now worry about getting a 30-day eviction notice without being ready to move into another location.

"I feel like I've lived under the gun for so long it doesn't please me," said Greg Brooks, manager of Blum's Jewelers Inc., who's remaining at mall for now but is negotiating a lease at Big Spring Mall.

Only three businesses hold leases at Highland.

Of those, Furrs Bishop's Cafeteria Inc. recently signed a lease termination and expects loose ends to be tied up today. The agreement will allow Furrs to build a new restaurant, about the same size, between Pizza Hut and the Exxon gas station, expected to be open Feb. 15. Wal-Mart will pay some construction costs.

"By sundown today it will all happen," said Randy Egenbacher, Furrs vice president of real estate. "We're frantically trying to wrap up all the loose ends so we can successfully conclude the transaction."

Brown's Shoe Fit Manager Bret Allen said he agreed to a lease termination and is finalizing details, including how much Wal-Mart will assist in renovation of a Gregg

Street or Big Spring Mall location.

"It's just a matter now of how much and when," Allen said. For now, Brown's Shoe Fit is still at Highland Mall. Dunlaps reportedly will remain at the location in the parking lot.

The 179,920-square-foot Supercenter will more than double the 69,985-square-foot Wal-Mart now across the street, but is not quite as big as the 199,000 square feet originally announced, according to a Wal-Mart press release. It will employ 265 more than about 350 now locally employed by Wal-Mart. The employment projection is up from the 134-plus jobs Wal-Mart anticipated in March.

A decision has not been made on whether the Supercenter will be open 24 hours, contrary to the March announcement. "It probably won't be made until closer to the grand opening," a spokeswoman in the Bentonville, Ark., office said.

The Supercenter will have a full-line of grocery products complete with meat counter, produce and frozen foods, as well as a wide variety of general merchandise. Please see WAL-MART, page 7

Former Davidian leader recaptured

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

Former Branch Davidian cult leader George Roden, who escaped from the Big Spring State Hospital Monday, was captured in Abilene early this morning and is being returned to the institution.

Roden led the cult before a violent confrontation with and later succession by David Koresh, who burned alongside other Branch Davidians in a fiery final confrontation with federal authorities outside of Waco last spring.

Roden left the hospital Monday morning, Sgt. Scott Griffin of the Big Spring Police Department said Thursday. Several law enforcement agencies, including the Texas Rangers, were looking for the 60-year-old throughout West Texas.

He was charged in 1989 with the murder of a 56-year-old Odessa man. The following year, he was found not guilty by reason of insanity and sent to Vernon State Hospital. The Vernon institution has facilities for housing the criminally or violently insane, whereas the Big Spring facility does not.

Law enforcement agencies from the Big Spring Police Department to Texas Rangers and U.S. marshals were alerted to Roden's disappearance.

Several agencies, including Department of Public Safety state troopers, coordinated a search along the Interstate 20 corridor.

With no results from the search, Taylor County sheriff's deputies located Roden at a home in Abilene.

TCSO officers acquired the name and address of a person thought to be a friend of Roden's in Abilene, according to TCSO Capt. Ray Portalatin.

Officers also had the description of a late-model, white pickup truck Roden may have been using, which was found parked at the residence. Roden was taken into custody without incident early today.

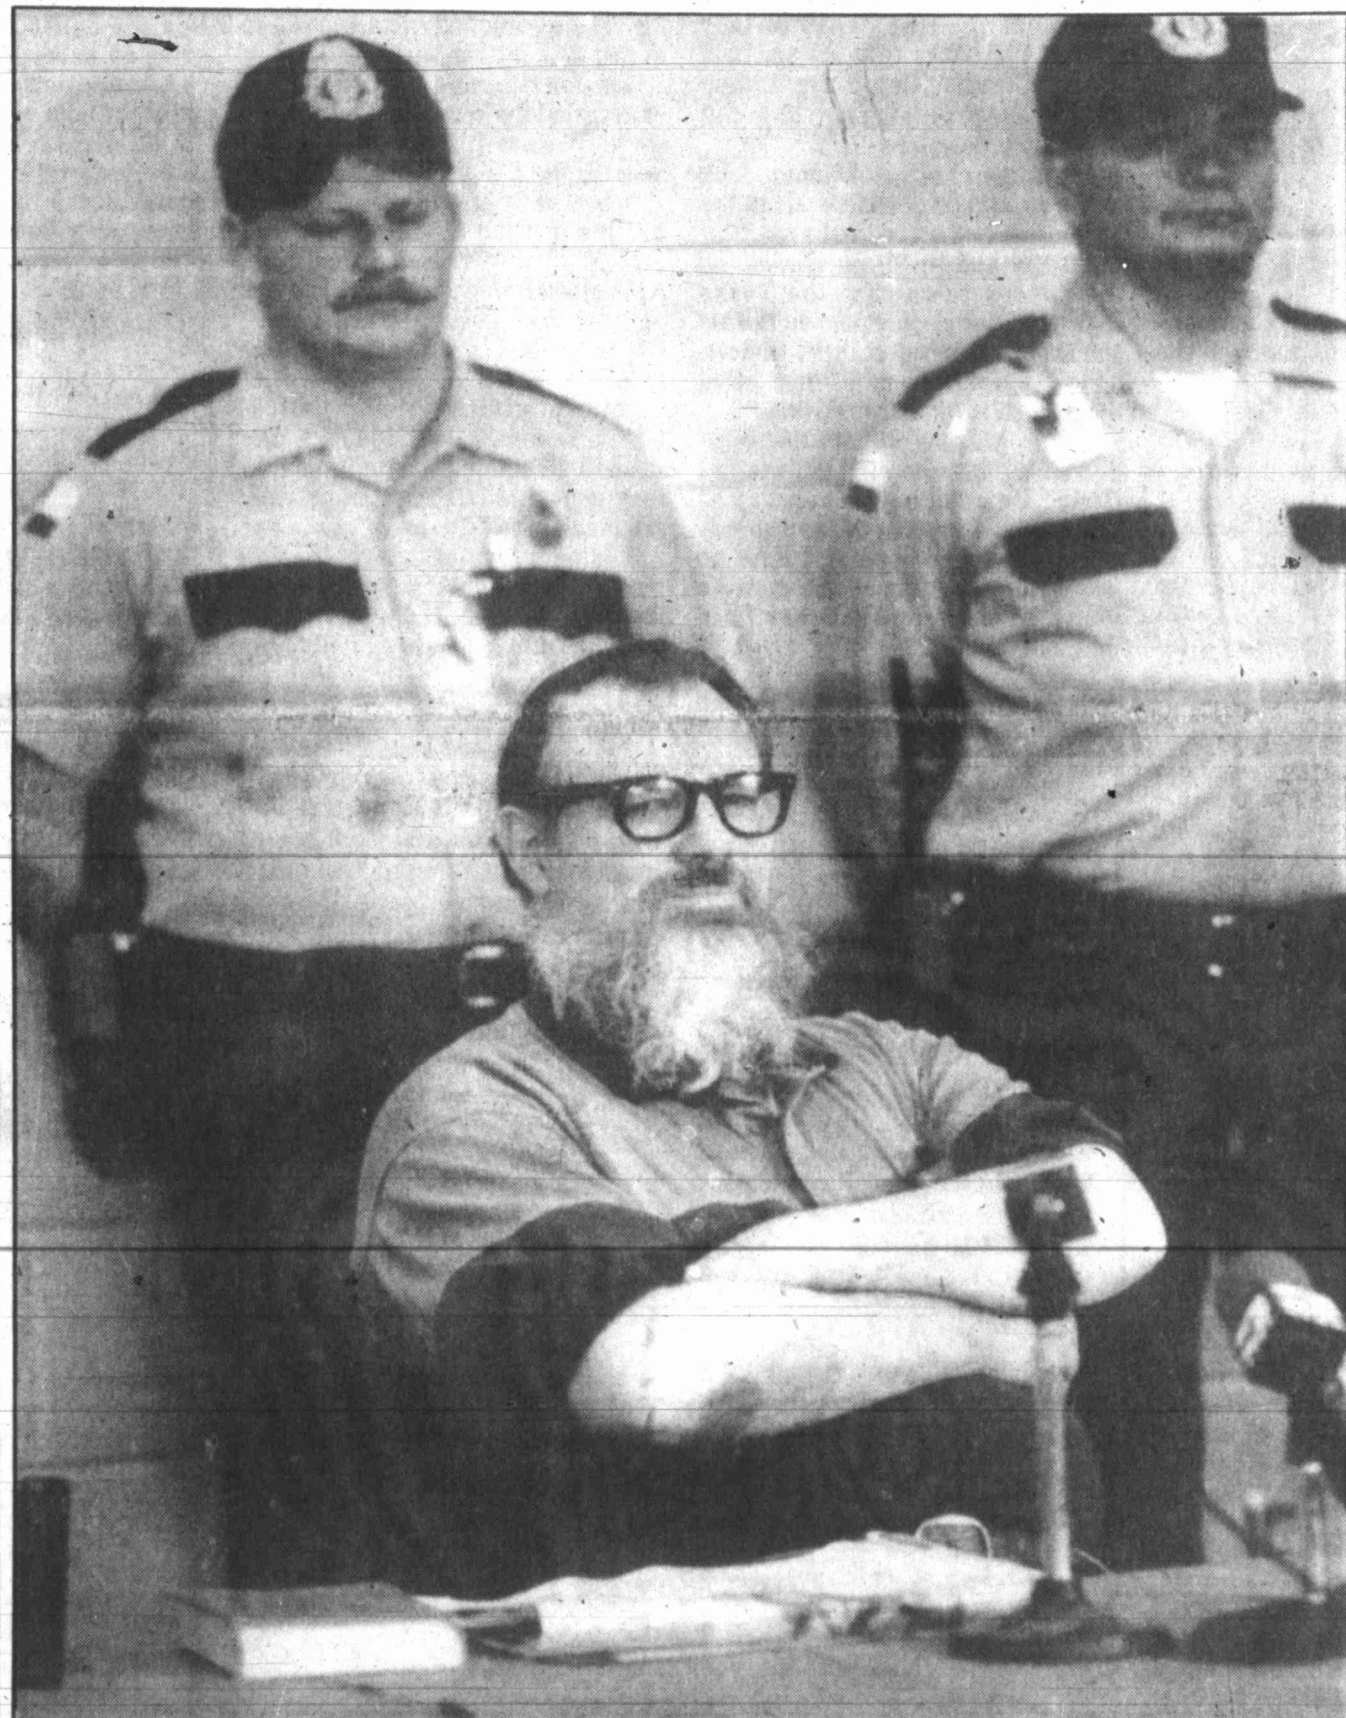

Roden is expected to be transferred back to Big Spring later today, according to area Texas Ranger John Billings who assisted in Abilene.

The 77 acres where the cult compound was built near Waco belonged to Roden's mother, who in her will, named Koresh as trustee of the property, according to Associated Press reports.

Federal agents raided the compound on Feb. 28, trying to arrest Koresh on weapons charges. Four agents and six cult members died in a shootout. After a 51-day standoff with federal agents, the wooden compound burned to the ground; Koresh and as many as 85 followers were killed in or shortly before the blaze.

Koresh had become president of the Branch Davidians in 1984 amid unsubstantiated allegations that he, at age 26, raped and impregnated Roden's 67-year-old mother, according to AP reports.

The power struggle between Roden and Koresh led to violence, including a 1987 gun battle at the group's compound that led to attempted murder charges against Koresh and seven others. The seven others were acquitted, and a mistrial was declared in Koresh's case. Charges against him were later dismissed. Please see RODEN, page 7

George Roden, predecessor of Branch Davidian cult leader David Koresh, shown in a March 3 file photo, reportedly walked away from the Big Spring State Hospital Monday. He was charged in 1989 with the murder of a 56-year-old man. The following year, he was found not guilty by reason of insanity and sent to the Vernon State Hospital.

St. Lawrence's festival makes for fun Sunday

ST. LAWRENCE - Carol Balta grew up knowing that a great way to start October is the St. Lawrence Fall Festival.

Balta's family, long time residents of the small German community in Glasscock County, participated each year in the festival. Balta's childhood memories are laced with fun she had at the festival, helping the St. Lawrence Catholic Church.

As a young child, Balta ate as much sausage as she could and frolicked about the festival grounds at the game booths. As she grew older, she became more actively involved. As a teenager, she helped seat and serve the several thousands of people making a pilgrimage the first weekend of October to the festival.

Today, Balta is the reporter for the church's Women's Society and is still actively involved in preparations for

For more than 51 years, the St. Lawrence Fall Festival has been taking place with the help of 155 parishioners helping making 8,500 pounds of sausage and serving about 3,000 people who come from all over West Texas.

ATF agent says government fired first

Judge delays Davidian trial until January

The Associated Press

WACO — Early in the investigation of the government raid on the Branch Davidian compound, one of the first agents on the scene told Texas Rangers he "assumed" the first shots came from federal officers.

However, the Treasury Department report into the failed Feb. 28 raid released Thursday concludes that the first shots came from inside the compound and Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen said "all the evidence" shows cult members fired first.

In the days immediately following the raid, cult leader David Koresh insisted the first shots came from Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents, a contention still held by surviving Branch Davidians.

Government officials have steadfastly denied ATF agents shot first.

Attorneys for surviving cult members say they will use ATF special agent Roland Ballesteros' statement to the Texas Rangers as they defend their clients against a variety of criminal charges, including murder.

In a statement given by Ballesteros to the Rangers, now released to defense attorneys through discovery proceedings, he "assumed" ATF agents fired first as part of a plan to neutralize the cult's dogs so they wouldn't interfere with the planned arrest of leader Koresh. He said he did not think agents were firing at the Branch Davidians.

Bentsen's chief spokesman Jack DeVore referred questions about the statements to the Treasury report. But, he added: "I am advised by the review team that the Texas Rangers, the people to whom this agent gave this report, have indicated to the review team it's their belief the Branch Davidians fired first."

"Well, I can say without any question at all that the ATF did not fire first," Bentsen said Thursday in releasing the report. "Now, who was inside the compound, I have no way of knowing. But all the evidence we've seen shows that they fired first, not the ATF."

DeVore said he was unfamiliar with Ballesteros' early statement and questioned whether it had been taken out of context.

The Treasury report said some agents thought the first bursts of gun fire from inside Koresh's compound came from the teams assigned to cover the dogs because during training. The agents had been warned to expect that, the report said.

Houston attorney Dick DeGuerin, who visited the compound during the siege as Koresh's lawyer, said he believes the ATF fired first.

"They've (the cult members) all told me that the ATF fired first. The evidence I saw indicated that. (The ATF) killed five Malamutes. That was part of the agents' attack plan," DeGuerin said in a telephone interview.

Defense attorneys said Ballesteros' statement will be key to the Branch Davidians' contention that they were fired on first and simply retaliated in self defense.

"It's very helpful that he (Ballesteros) thought the ATF started shooting first," said Joe Turner, attorney for Ruth Ottman Riddle. "That's what our clients have been saying all along."

Members of the honor guard from Randolph Air Force Base wait for the flag to be lowered during closing ceremonies at Bergstrom Air Force Base in Austin Thursday. Gergstrom was among those the U.S. Defense Department in 1990 placed on a list of 75 facilities to be shut down.

Bergstrom closes; Carswell becomes base for reserves

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Bergstrom Air Force Base, which opened early in World War II and later served as "the president's airfield" for Lyndon B. Johnson, became a piece of history Thursday.

In a late afternoon ceremony, the air base southeast of Austin was transferred to the city, which plans to convert it to a new civilian airport.

Bergstrom was among those the U.S. Defense Department in 1990 placed on a list of 75 facilities to be shut down as the military scaled back for the post-Cold War era.

With the last 150 active duty personnel leaving the base, the only military activity remaining will be the 924th Fighter Group reserve unit. The base motel and gymnasium are to remain open for their use.

"Throughout the past 50 years, the men and women of Bergstrom, both active duty and reserve, have responded when the nation called," Col. Richard J. Eustace, the 924th's commander, said in an Austin American-Statesman column published Thursday.

"From the last days of World War II to the first major U.S. involvement in Korea, through the Cold War to Desert Storm, Bergstrom airmen had never hesitated to be ready," Eustace said.

In 1942, the City of Austin purchased 3,000 acres and turned control of it over to the federal government. Del Valle Army Air Field was opened in September.

In March 1943, at the urging of then-Congressman Johnson, the base was renamed for Travis County's first World War II casualty, Capt. Earl Bergstrom, who was killed Dec. 8, 1941, in a Japanese air attack on Clark Field in the Philippines.

In the 1960s, during Johnson's presidency, Air Force One frequently brought him to Bergstrom, en route to the LBJ Ranch in the Hill Country west of Austin.

Few military bases had such powerful political guardians over the years.

"It was the president's airfield," recalled U.S. Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle, D-Austin, who often hitched rides home with Johnson.

"It's just like when one of the men said, 'Mr. President, which one of these is your plane, which one are you going to ride on?' And that's when he said, 'Son, they're all my planes.'"

The president's frequent use of Bergstrom could cause the base commanders headaches, Pickle said. But it also "gave them considerable excitement because, militarily speaking, the nerve pulse of the nation settled on Bergstrom airfield."

In Fort Worth, meanwhile, 7th Bomb Wing commander Col. Gary Barber officially furlled the unit's flag in ceremonies Thursday closing Carswell Air Force Base as a strategic facility.

Carswell opened in 1942 and was an anchor of the Cold War-era Strategic Air Command with its long-range, nuclear-armed B-52 bombers. When Hollywood wanted a location for the 1955 Jimmy Stewart movie "Strategic Air Command," Carswell was chosen.

The 7th Bomb Wing has been transferred to Dyess Air Force Base at Abilene under the Air Combat Command. Carswell will become a training facility known as Naval Air Station Fort Worth-Joint Reserve Base.

By next year, it will have 2,000 full-time officers that will train some 8,000 reservists and National Guard members on weekends. Dallas Naval Air Station operations will be shifted to Carswell, along with reserves from Memphis and Detroit.

"It's the end of an era," says former base commander Col. Andrew Rivera of Fort Worth, now city aviation director. But he said the base is luckier than most, to get a new military mission.

Report critical of Davidian raid

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Cover-ups and misleading statements by Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms officials regarding the deadly raid on a Texas religious cult could lead to criminal charges.

A scathing report Thursday on ATF's handling of the Feb. 28 assault on the Branch Davidian cult near Waco details contradictory and inaccurate statements by some ATF managers and agents.

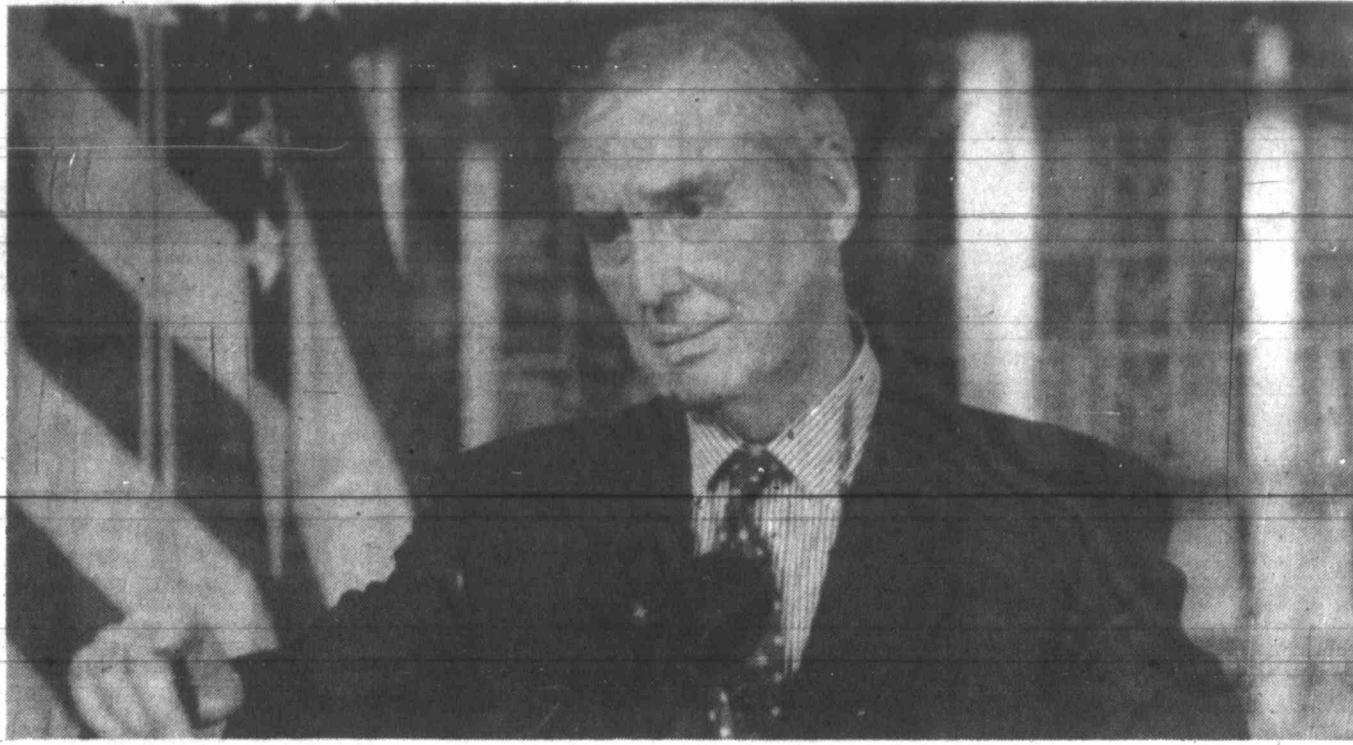

Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen, whose department includes the ATF, replaced ATF's director, suspended five other top officials and said the matter would be reviewed by the inspector general, who would decide whether to refer any cases to the Justice Department.

"There were some serious misrepresentations made, no question about that, and that's why I have put these people on administrative leave," Bentsen said Thursday on PBS' "MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour."

The report blasted the planning, execution and follow-up to the raid in which four agents and six cult members were killed. The disputed statements included denials that the ATF knew before the raid that cult leader David Koresh had been tipped off to it.

"It is now clear that those in charge in Texas realized they had lost the element of surprise before the raid began," Bentsen said at a news conference releasing the report. "They erred by failing to abort the mission."

The report found "disturbing evidence of flawed decision-making, inadequate intelligence gathering, miscommunication, supervisory failures and deliberately misleading post-raid statements about the raid."

Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen meets reporters at the Treasury Department in Washington Thursday to discuss a report on the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms' raid on the Branch Davidian compound in Waco last Feb. 28. Bentsen also announced that Secret Service Director John Magaw will replace Stephen Higgins as ATF director.

Two field commanders, the report said, made false statements to their superiors and Treasury Department investigators — asserting that an undercover agent did not tell them Koresh knew in advance of the raid — and altered their original planning document "in a concerted effort to conceal their errors in judgment."

Top ATF managers, it added, "perhaps out of a misplaced desire to protect the agency from criticism, offered accounts based on those raid commanders' statements, disregarding evidence that those statements were false."

On Capitol Hill, Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., and Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., also urged Treasury to refer its information to Justice.

"It seems to me, having looked at the report, that it's very possible criminal activities occurred, and those involved should be fully prosecuted," said Schumer, chairman of the House Judiciary's crime panel.

DeConcini, chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee that oversees the Treasury Department, said Treasury "has taken disciplinary action, and that's really all they have jurisdiction to do, so it's up to Justice to decide whether or not to proceed."

Sam Dash, the former Senate Watergate counsel and one-time federal prosecutor, said possible federal crimes could include obstruction of justice, false statements to government agencies and conspiracy.

"When a hard-hitting report identifies this kind of conduct, there's only one thing to do: Send all of that material to the agency with the responsibility for enforcing the law, the Justice Department," said Dash, who is now a professor at Georgetown University Law Center.

In addition to the 10 deaths in the shootout, 20 agents were wounded. The report found cult members shot first, having been alerted to the impending raid by an unwitting television crewman who had asked a postman for directions to the compound. The postman was a cult member.

Cult survivors say report vindicates Koresh

The Associated Press

WACO — Disciples of David Koresh took the scathing report detailing the botched raid on their cult compound as vindication from the Lord.

It could also be a boost to 11 cultists awaiting trial, their lawyers say.

"If God was trying to show people that David Koresh was a bad person, as many have said, then why is the ATF and FBI in trouble?" Sheila Martin said Thursday after the release of the Treasury Department report on the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Ms. Martin, who left the compound before the blaze that killed her husband and four children, added, "Why did God just make it so plain that the ATF is being brought before everyone to answer for their mistakes?"

Another member of Koresh's Branch Davidian cult, Annetta Richards, said: "God keeps his own record. They (ATF) are not fighting against him. They are fighting against a higher power."

Four ATF agents and six Branch Davidians were killed Feb. 28 when 100 agents raided Koresh's headquarters to arrest the 33-year-old religious zealot on weapons charges.

Federal agents waited 51 days for the Davidians to surrender before the FBI assaulted the complex with tear gas. A fire blazed on the cultists engulfed the compound, and Koresh and as many as 85 of his followers died.

On Thursday, Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen released a highly critical review of the ATF and immediately replaced the agency's director, Stephen Higgins, and suspended five other top ATF officials. ATF is part of the Treasury.

The report found "disturbing evidence of flawed decision making, inadequate intelligence gathering, miscommunication, supervisory failures and deliberately misleading post-raid statements about the raid."

Bentsen said the raid supervisors knew they had lost the element of surprise but went ahead anyway, violating orders from Higgins to abandon the mission if Koresh knew about it.

The two field commanders made false statements to their superiors and Treasury Department investigators and altered their original planning document to conceal their errors in judgment, the report said.

In addition, the report said, those in charge in Texas failed to consider other methods of arresting Koresh, such as capturing him when he was outside the compound.

Any criminal charges that might be filed in the case will be left up to the inspector general and Justice Department, Bentsen said.

Attorneys for 11 Branch Davidians accused of murdering the ATF agents said the report is a boost to their case, which will depend heavily on the defendants' claim that the agents fired on them first. The trial is set Jan. 10.

Joe Turner, a lawyer for cult member Ruth Ottman Riddle, said, "It's been our position all along that the ATF was not without blame in this, and now we have their own people saying it."

Bentsen contradicted that claim, saying, "I can say without any question at all that the ATF did not fire first."

But Dick DeGuerin, Koresh's lawyer, said the report's findings will cast enough of a shadow over such assertions to make the defense work.

"What this does is call into question the entire prosecution that is going on now in Waco," he said. "It casts doubt on anything the ATF said."

Many Waco-area residents said the report had shivered the affection they had for the ATF. During the standoff, some held barbecues and made T-shirts in support of the agency.

"There will probably be a considerable backlash here," said Linda Drake. "If the ATF wasn't supposed to go in, and then it did and caused all this carnage to happen here, then you bet there will be some ill feelings."

Others said they stand behind the ATF.

"The fact that members of the public sector tried to cover up their mistakes is disturbing," said John Hatchel, assistant city manager. "But there were a lot of agents here doing what they were supposed to do. Those agents are good friends of this city."

Group stages protest over lack of bonding

AMARILLO (AP) — About 30 people have marched to protest the lack of bond for four drug suspects who want out of jail to attend the funeral of a friend killed during a raid in which they were arrested.

The four men were arrested Tuesday night during a raid in which Frederick Dion Espy was shot and killed. Federal agents said Espy was shot after aiming a gun at them.

Federal charges were filed Wednesday, but a bond hearing isn't scheduled until Monday, said Shonda Flowers, the husband of suspect Kenneth Flowers.

Flowers said the group Marched Thursday in hopes of getting bond set for Flowers; James Earl Cofer, 24; George Dean, 23; and Kenneth Dewayne Smith, 22, all of Amarillo.

Dallas council offers manager's job to Ware

DALLAS (AP) — A man with 20 years of municipal government experience has been chosen to replace Jan Hart as Dallas' city manager.

Council members said the selection Wednesday of First Assistant City Manager John Ware was unanimous. His appointment will be confirmed formally at the council's next meeting Wednesday.

John Ware has our complete confidence," Mayor Steve Bartlett said. "We have informally asked John to be our new city manager."

Ms. Hart resigned effective Nov. 1, when she will begin working for an investment banking firm in Dallas.

Ware, 45, said he was pleased with the unanimous decision and expects to have a good working relationship with the council.

"The council and I agreed that it takes 16 of us to make a team, and we're all going to focus on the issues facing the city," Ware said. "I think this represents a new day in Dallas, and I really appreciate being a part of it."

Ware has worked in various capacities of local government for two decades and in Texas for more than eight years.

He has been Dallas' first assistant city manager since May 1990. Also in Dallas, he was director of streets and sanitation for slightly more than a year.

In Austin, he was acting city manager from November 1987 to March 1989, and an assistant city manager for four years.

He also gained professional experience in Newport News, Va., and New Rochelle, N.Y.

Hart, who resigned to take a job in the private sector, said: "As a citizen, I feel fortunate that John Ware will be the next city manager. The only advice I will give John is not to take any advice from his predecessor."

Ware will be paid $142,641 annually, including health benefits.

Two police officers wounded by gunfire

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Authorities arrested a man accused of wounding two police officers who were trying to serve a drug warrant at his home, police said Thursday.

Police spokesman Sgt. David Ramos said 52-year-old Fred Ball was expected to be charged with attempted capital murder.

Narcotics detectives Teri Meal and Ralph Hollar suffered gunshot wounds not expected to be life-threatening, police spokeswoman Sandy Perez said.

After the shooting, a SWAT team surrounded the home in southeast San Antonio during a 2 1/2-hour standoff.

A negotiator spoke with Ball over a loudspeaker, and he eventually was arrested without incident, authorities said.

Ball has a history of weapons violations, Ramos said.

Audit cites significant quasi entity problems

AUSTIN (AP) — The state auditor's office has recommended that the Legislature enact tighter controls for quasi-state entities, describing them as institutions that have become a powerful fourth branch of government.

"Reviews of quasi-state entities identified significant problems due to inadequate direction and oversight provided by their boards," State Auditor Lawrence Alwin said in the report released Thursday.

He said the problems had the effect of "potentially putting billions of dollars at risk."

Quasi-state entities refer to the numerous institutions established by the Legislature to accomplish long-term projects, the report said.

The list of quasi-state entities in the report ran more than three pages long and did not include all of them. The entities include dozens of advisory bodies, river authorities, task forces, soil and water districts, and other institutions.

They range from the little-known — Select Poet Laureate of Texas — to the more high-profile — the Texas High Speed Rail Authority, which is in charge of overseeing a proposed $5.8 billion "bullet" train system.

The report to state leaders says quasi-state entities have evolved into an economically and politically powerful fourth branch of state government, a hybrid between public agencies and private companies. The entities control billions of dollars and administer numerous federal and state programs.

"Unlike private corporations, quasi-state entities are not accountable to stockholders, and unlike state agencies, they are not accountable to the Legislature," the report said.

This needs to change, Alwin said. He recommends the Legislature require all quasi-state entities be subjected to financial and performance audits and legislative review. Their financial books should be open to inspection, he said.

He also calls on making board members more responsible for developing policies and oversight. The report says that existing legislation provides little guidance to board members in monitoring the performance of the agency.

"It is critical that the state ensure that adequate controls are in place to hold these entities accountable," the report said.

Hunting and the manlyman

Ahhhhh! It's time to eat raw, bloody bison meat and howl at the moon!

Be gone! ye faint-hearted vermin. Only the blessed of testosterone and furry back may gather round this sacred circle!

Away thou offending girlmen — scurry into the shadows like tooth-grashing ferrets!

Manlymen! Gather round the fire ye archetypes of the warrior sage. Here, through flatulence and eructation, we Manlymen shall extol the mystery and majesty of the "Y" chromosome and all things musky and hairy.

As Gary makes out a check to Save the Marmosets or some such wimpy organization, we will discuss today's topic, that manifest of Manlyman activities: Hunting.

Everyone turn off The Ren and Stimpy Show for a bit and open your Manlymanuals to chapter 2, page 47.

Hunting. It is now time for all Manlymen to enter that closet off the master bedroom and dig out those blue-steel tools of the hunter.

With the heady scent of gun oil permeating the room, gingerly disassemble each firearm and lovingly stroke their silky smooth surfaces with an oiled cloth. Anoint their beautiful walnut stocks and reassemble them. Speak softly to them and kiss their receiver assemblies...

I'm sorry, I get carried away. In addition to firearms kept for home protection, each Manlyman must own at least one well-made shotgun and high-powered rifle.

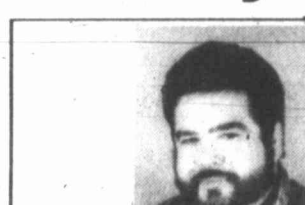

Hunting is the ancient right of all Manlymen.

From the age when the first Manlyman scratched his buttocks against a tree, hunting has been the staff by which Manliness is measured.

Unfortunately, the days are gone when Manlymen walked the earth wearing animal skins to protect them from the bitter cold — stalking 12-ton mammoth with only spears to bring them down. Ahhhh those were the days.

We now have only limited time to commune with Mother Nature, and blow her head off.

Pack your Manly four-wheel-drive vehicle to overflowing with about

Gary Shanks

$2,500 worth of tents, lanterns, guns, ammunition, Coleman® stoves, insect repellent, knives, coolers, guns, ammunition, spare tents, rain slickers, pots, pans, suitcases, shovels, axes, guns and ammunition.

When you drive into the wilderness to your hunting destination, crushing small vermin under the tires of your Manly vehicle, it should be dark.

Spend the next two hours setting up camp as if you were going to be there for a month. Dig a latrine and build a great big fire for no particular reason.

Give your firearms a final cleaning and caressing — they'll have work to do come morning.

A note here: All true Manlymen know the muzzle velocity, impact energy and projectile-flight characteristics of whatever caliber weapon he is using. He will be able to tell you the rifle is sighted dead on at 300 yards and six-inches high at 100 yards (depending on the parabolic trajectory of a particular caliber and scope sighting).

If you ask a man the caliber of his rifle, and he holds out a cartridge and says, "whatever this is," he is a girlman. He must be beaten, stripped of any weapons and camouflage clothing and forced to tend the camp.

As the hunting continues, exhibit no pain at 10-mile walks through thorny vegetation. All natural events such as scorpion stings must be treated as trivial and part of the whole grand experience of hunting.

If a man screams at a scorpion or snake bite, he could find himself bruised, wearing high heels and sweeping dirt back at the camp.

Don't let this be you. Next lesson: How to treat your own gun-shot wound without acting like a pansy.

If it fails, who'll follow Hillary?

Suppose, just suppose, that Hillary Clinton's health-care reform is a ruinously expensive failure.

I know it's hard to believe, but this sometimes happens with government programs.

So, assume health-care reform fails. The doctors hate it, the patients hate it, employers hate it. Insurance-dodgers are burning their health cards in front of the White House.

A delegation of top congressional Democrats asks for a private audience with President Clinton.

After some initial throat-clearing, House Speaker Tom Foley opens the meeting:

"Mr. President, health-care has been a horrible mistake. We'll clean up the legislative mess and pass a few goodies to calm the public, but the fact is, somebody has to take the fall."

For the sake of brevity, I'm leaving out the president's 45-minute greeting to the lawmakers, but after a while, Clinton asks, "What do you mean 'take the fall'?"

"Hillary," says the speaker. "She has to go. Health-care was her baby, and the public identifies her with it. She's killing your chances of re-election, but, more importantly, she's killing ours. Put simply: If she stays, you go."

The congressional delegation quickly explains that this doesn't mean that the Clintons have to get divorced, just that Hillary has to step down as first lady.

Foley growls, "Not now," when Sen. Joe Biden, D-Del., chairman of

Watch your language

SIR: On network television this morning, an interviewer discussing a new Woody Allen movie asked a reviewer about the interest of the public "in him and Diane Keaton." What do you think of that? — Curious.

A: It's scandalous, with or without Diane. When even network interviewers, whose language influences thousands, don't have enough sense to say "in him," the collapse of intelligible speech may be almost at hand. And to think, this is the language of Thomas Jefferson and William Shakespeare. Alack.

SIR: President Clinton said: "I have long since given up the thought that I could disabuse some of you of turning any substantive decision into anything but a political process." Would "dissuade" be more appropriate than "disabuse"? — Lorena F.

A: He said that? Gee whiz. Yes, I do think "dissuade ... from" is more appropriate than "disabuse ... of." Maybe he was being abused so badly that what he really wanted was to dis-abuse the abusers.

SIR: A commercial for one brand of headache pills tells us that it is "different than" another one. I think it should be "different from." Which is correct? — Mrs. J. P. M.

A: Both are correct. I make no apologies, though I know you may be outraged, because whenever this question is raised people usually demand a flat one-or-the-other answer. I will add, for whatever comfort it may provide, that "different from" is more popular in the everyday talk of people in this country at this time. That still doesn't change the fact that both are correct.

the Judiciary Committee suggests that future first ladies be subject to Senate confirmation.

In the event, Hillary Clinton moves a couple of blocks down Pennsylvania Avenue to a residential hotel catering to transient government workers and does what others burned by Washington have done before her: She begins writing a book and plotting revenge.

Thanks in part to Hillary Clinton, the post of first lady had become essential to running the White House, much like the chief of staff and the chief counsel, and the job could not be left unfilled.

How best to fill it?

The nation could follow the 1947 law of succession, as amended, in which case Tipper Gore, the wife of the vice president, would become first lady.

Heather Foley, the wife of House Speaker Tom Foley, would then become second lady.

That would leave the speaker in the lurch, because Heather Foley is his chief of staff, though unpaid because of congressional nepotism rules.

Still hewing to the law of succession, the next in line is the president pro tempore of the Senate, currently

Fooling with health care

I totally agree we need to do something about the health-care crisis in this country. Anybody with my medical history knows not being able to get the proper doctoring can even be fatal.

But I, like others, wonder how we're going to pay for the new Bill and Hillary Health Package. I may have a solution.

You probably have already heard about using a possible "sin tax" to help defer the costs. Specifically that idea is to add another tax on cigarettes and possibly hard liquor. But why limit the tax to the sin of smoking? And smoking most certainly is a sin because it is pleasurable, and a lot of people frown on it.

Practically every sin has the same characteristics.

I suggest we also enact a sex tax to help pay for the new health program. Or, more specifically, a "fooling-around" sex tax. You wouldn't be taxed on sex that is not particularly pleasurable and a lot of people don't frown upon. Like sex with your spouse.

I'm talking about that other kind of sex—extramarital sex, premarital sex, sex that will get you on the Oprah Winfrey show, like sex on a UFO or with a famous politician.

I know you're asking, but how would the government be able to collect a fooling-around tax? People simply wouldn't admit to such a thing.

OK, I don't have all the details worked out yet. Maybe we could appeal to people's egos. You put out a tax form that says, "How much illicit sex did you have last year?" and what stud wannabe, or otherwise, is going to put down "I went scoreless."

Some might even exaggerate in an attempt to advertise their sexual prowess at their local IRS office.

Whatever, it's an idea that has merit because, I firmly believe, a lot more people fool around these days than smoke. You never see a sign in an office building that says, "Thank you for not fooling around."

You probably could have sex at a hockey game and get away with it, but light up in a federal building and they'll call the SWAT team.

Of course, there are different levels of recreational sex and different ways of engaging in it.

Under my plan, how much fooling-around tax you pay would depend on these differentials.

For example:

If you did it in a mobile home, you obviously didn't get filthy rich in the Reagan-Bush era, so you don't have to pay as much as, say, someone who was able to pop for a suite at the Ritz and designer condoms with polo players on them.

If you did it in a private jet you would be taxed at a higher rate than someone fooling around in a van with a bumper sticker that reads, "If this van is rockin', don't come knockin'."

If your partner dressed up like a duck it would cost you more if he or she actually made quacking sounds.

If you used whips and/or chains you would pay a 10 percent surcharge, but you would have your health card to get treatment for any injuries incurred.

If any video equipment was employed, there would also be a 10 percent surcharge, but you would be free to sell any tapes to Oprah, her highest-bidding competitor, or the famous politician you have on tape chasing you around the room while quacking like a duck.

If Heidi Fleiss was involved in any way, you'll be taxed 15 percent of what you gross out of your next movie, docudrama, or presidential haircut.

If Conan O'Brien was involved, who cares?

Members of the American Association of Retired Persons would receive reduced rates, as well as no charge for vibrating mattresses at motels.

Faked orgasms are on the house. Ask not who you can do, my fellow Americans, but who you can do for your country.

Super collider glides through Senate

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Super collider backers, fresh from their strong victory Thursday in the Senate, predicted they will be able to set aside the House's earlier vote to kill the controversial program.

The Senate's 57-42 nod of support for the giant atom smasher is at odds with a decisive vote by a deficit-conscious House earlier this year — setting up a possible battle when negotiators for both chambers meet later to forge spending compromises.

"We have one last battle to fight, and now we have a fighting chance to win the war," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

Gramm and other supporters, buoyed by their bigger-than-expected margin of victory in beating back an attempt to ax the multibillion-dollar program, aren't expecting any serious problems.

"I have very high hopes we will win both in the conference ... and on the (House) floor," said Sen. Bennett Johnston, the Louisiana Democrat who led the pro-collider floor debate and whose state has the greatest financial stake in the massive project after Texas.

Echoed Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas: "I have every confidence the House will accede to the Senate wishes."

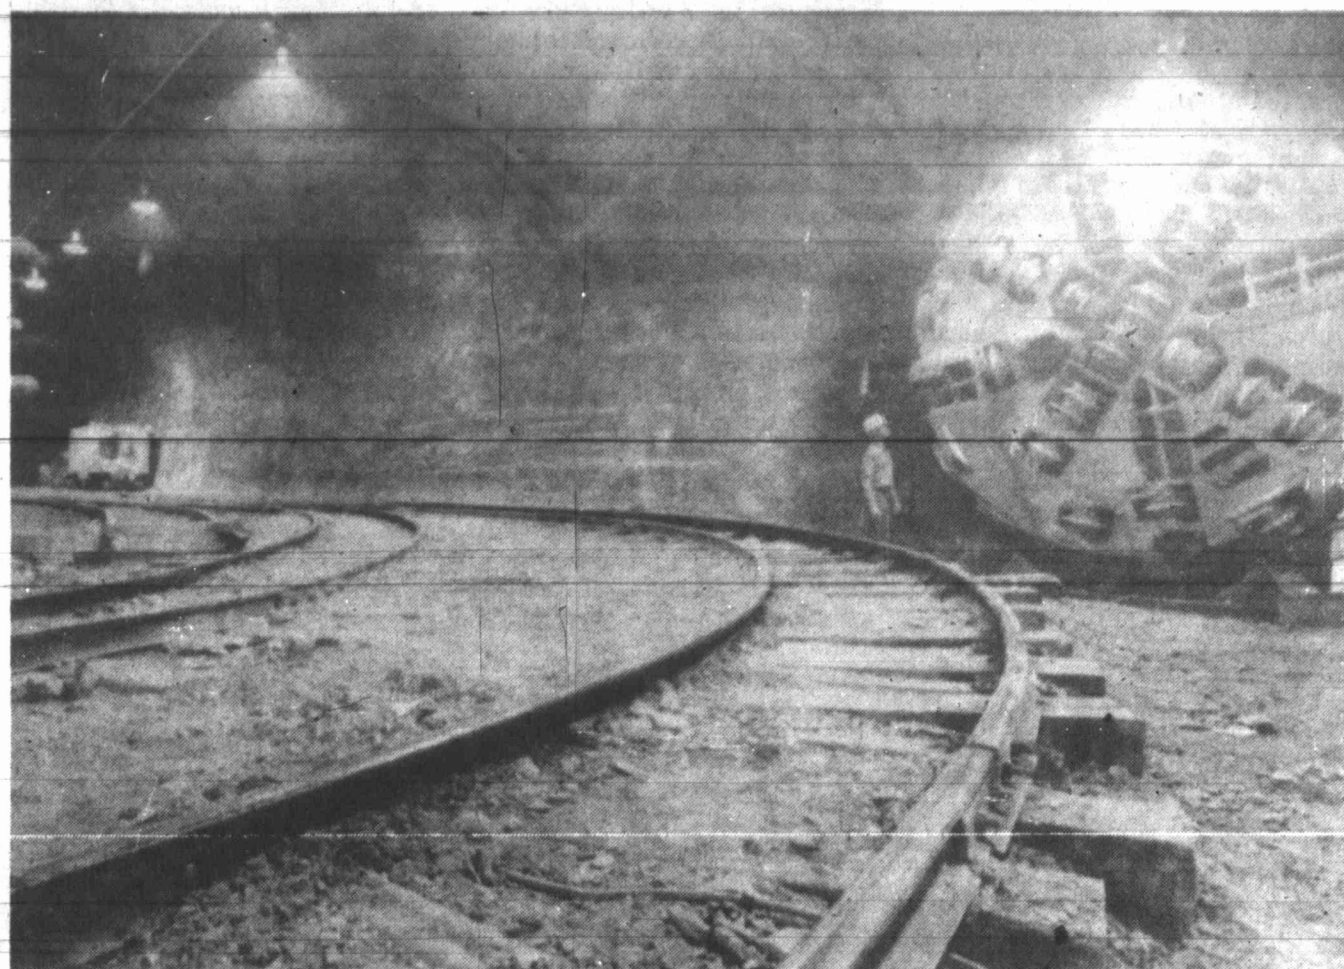

A resigned Sen. Dale Bumpers, who led the charge against the collider, conceded that the proponents are probably right.

"I think one of the three reasons this body drives me up the wall is it makes no difference what you say," the Arkansas Democrat said. "The evidence is all presented and minds are made up weeks before the debate starts. The logrolling has taken place, the commitments have been made."

"The politics is always with spending, not cutting," he told reporters after the Senate endorsed the Clinton administration's $640 million funding request for the collider.

Bumpers, who suggested he will renew his fight next year, did pick up 10 votes from a year ago, when senators rejected his amendment on a 62-32 vote.

The Clinton White House apparently wasn't much of a factor in this year's pro-collider lobbying effort, unlike a year ago when President

Superconducting Super Collider project manager Ricky Richards poses with a giant boring machine in the tunnel of the high-tech project near Waxahachie. The Senate on Thursday agreed to fund the controversial program for another year.

Bush and his staff worked the Senate.

Bumpers cited Texas Gov. Ann Richards as his biggest obstacle. "She called every single Democrat, every single one," Bumpers said.

Twenty-six of the chamber's 56 Democrats and 31 Republicans voted to save the project; 29 Democrats and 13 Republicans voted to terminate it.

Richards said Thursday's vote "means the Senate has shown support for a critical scientific research and technology project that translates into thousands of good, high-paying jobs not just for Texas but for the nation."

"I look forward to my visit to Washington next week, where I will continue our efforts to secure full funding for the super collider," she added. "Before it is all over, I hope we will have good news to report from both houses of Congress."

Charles R. Perry, chairman of the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission, the Texas agency that oversees the collider, said: "Today, the Senate sent a clear message that even during challenging economic times, America cannot afford to forfeit its leadership in scientific research and technological development that is energizing our economy and creating the careers of the future."

During a lengthy and often esoteric floor debate that began Wednesday afternoon, Bumpers and other critics beseeched their colleagues to live up to their budget-cutting rhetoric and ax "this slab of pork."

"The meter is running on the national debt every day," said Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn. "We can't pull the plug on the debt, but we can pull it on the super collider."

Advocates countered that death of the collider, which is under construction near Waxahachie, would deal a devastating setback to future scientific and technological development.

Scientists hope to discover new particles and learn more about the origin of matter by colliding beams of subatomic particles at near-light speeds in the collider's 54-mile underground tunnel.

"We cannot turn our back on this, our finest and most profound scientific project," Johnston said. "This nation is on the verge, if we follow through with this project, of finding out about the origins of mass, about why things have weight, about how it all fits together."

Despite opponents' claims that the collider's price tag could swell well above $13 billion, supporters reiterated their contention that it remains on budget.

Proponents also charged that termination of a scientific program that is 20 percent complete would do nothing to reduce the deficit. "The debate here is not about the deficit," said Gramm, who noted that Bumpers' measure didn't dedicate savings for deficit reduction. "The choice is about investing in the next generation or investing in the next election."

Panel seeking 'reality check' on health plan

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A key Senate Democrat grumbled anew about White House cost estimates on health care savings Thursday, asking Hillary Rodham Clinton if they could pass a "reality check."

Daniel P. Moynihan wasn't the only senator expressing misgivings about the plan's financing as the first lady wrapped up a three-day marathon of hearings before Congress.

"No rosy scenarios, no smoke and mirrors, no juggling the books," said Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., saying he meant for Republicans to follow that edict, too.

As in her previous appearances this week on Capitol Hill, whatever lawmakers' reservations about President Clinton's plan, Mrs. Clinton seemed to impress them with her straightforward style and command of detail.

Moynihan, a New York Democrat, stood and led the room in applause after her final three-hour session — a rare salute from a congressional panel but the second for Mrs. Clinton this week.

The Clinton plan's cost estimates have brought scoffs from some Democrats as well as Republicans. Many lawmakers doubt that Clinton can really look to cuts in waste and restraints in Medicare and Medicaid to get the $350 billion in new federal funds the plan will cost over five years.

Moynihan called it "fantasy" last week. On Thursday, he noted that the Clinton plan projects that medical costs won't go up much more than inflation in general. How could that be, he asked, when medical prices have grown 875 percent since 1960 while consumer prices rose 375 percent?

"How would that survive the reality check?" Moynihan asked Mrs. Clinton, noting that Clinton had pledged to build "a continuing reality check" into his health overhaul.

The first lady said the administration was setting "zero growth as a budget target this country should be moving toward." She also contended there is as much as $200 billion in waste in the current $1 trillion system.

Later, Moynihan said Mrs. Clinton "was straight with us on everything. ... She didn't in any way say 'mumble, mumble.' She said, 'yep, that's our proposition.'"

Yet he didn't exactly give a ringing endorsement for the administration's numbers. Asked if he thought their estimates on zero growth were fantasy, Moynihan put up his hands.

"End interview," he said. Asked if he now felt more confident about the numbers, he said: "I feel very confident about what the administration's position is."

He noted lawmakers are still awaiting a bill that will include all the figures.

On other topics, Mrs. Clinton gave her endorsement to a call by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., for a 25 percent sales tax on handguns and a $2,500 license fees for gun dealers. "Speaking personally, I'm all for that," she said.

Bradley press secretary Eric Hauser said the senator has argued "it's a good idea to pay for health care with the things that are unhealthy."

Dole, meanwhile, reiterated his statement that "Republicans stand ready to work with the White House."

Dole said Clinton's mandate on employers to pay most of their workers' health costs "bothers us," and he cautioned, "We don't want to bury the American people under an avalanche of bureaucracy."

Rains hamper rescue of quake victims

The Associated Press

KILLARI, India — Funeral pyres flickered around dozens of villages today in southwestern India where a violent quake killed more than 20,000 people, many of them crushed by collapsing roofs as they slept.

Rain hampered efforts to claw through the rubble overnight in a search for survivors. An aftershock early this morning rumbled across the plains and sent rescuers and survivors scurrying into the open in panic.

The quake, India's worst in a half century, measured at least 6 on the Richter scale as it ripped through southwest India early Thursday.

Only when dawn broke hours after the quake did survivors begin to realize its severity: In addition to the thousands killed, at least 10,000 were maimed and countless others were trapped beneath rubble.

Police in Bombay, the capital of Maharashtra which was the worst-hit state, said 6,513 bodies were recovered before rescue efforts slackened at nightfall.

Press Trust of India news agency, quoting official sources in Killari, put the death toll today at 21,000 and said the figure could rise by thousands.

The acting U.S. consul general in Bombay, Thomas Furey, also said the toll had crossed 20,000. "They're finding more and more death and destruction as the rescue operations go on," Furey said.

Reporters criss-crossing the quake zone saw village after village reduced to piles of black stones interspersed among yellow fields of sunflowers.

Sahib Rao Patil, a 20-year-old farmer, was one of only a few survivors in Tarni, a village that had 5,000 residents. Under a gray dawn sky today, he wiped his eyes as he watched the cremation of his father. He would be back in the evening with the bodies of his wife, two daughters and two sisters-in-law.

"All my family is gone. Who will I talk to now?" he said.

Bodies were brought to hospitals in jeeps, buses and bullock carts. Others were burned near the homes. In some cases, bodies were stacked on top of each because of scarcity of firewood for cremation.

Officials in the state capital of Bombay said 3,000 people were killed in Killari, a village of 18,000 people 50 miles north of the epicenter.

Hard-liner lawmakers reject deal

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Hard-line lawmakers rejected an agreement today to ease the tense standoff around parliament, saying they would not lay down their weapons first as negotiators for President Boris Yeltsin had demanded.

The rejection appeared to scuttle the chance for a quick conclusion to the confrontation. The government had pinned its hopes on negotiations to resolve the crisis, which began when Yeltsin disbanded parliament on Sept. 21.

Under the deal, reached by negotiators from both sides, the lawmakers would have given up their weapons in exchange for a restoration of electricity, heat and some telephones to parliament and an easing of the government siege.

The agreement would have been a prelude to negotiations.

But in a defiant statement, Yuri Voronin, first deputy parliament speaker, said that all services should be restored to the building "immediately and without any conditions."

The lawmakers demanded a complete removal of the government blockade as well as live television transmission of their debates as a precondition for negotiations with the government.

Parliament said its representatives who signed the agreement had exceeded their authority. Veniamin Sokolov, one of the delegates, said he realized he should not have signed the agreement.

Lawmakers, looking calm, met in a large meeting room of parliament to review the deal. They rejected the proposal by a voice vote.

Electricity was restored to parts of the building earlier today to allow weapons to be collected, officials said. But presidential spokesman Anatoly Krasikov said it would be turned off again if the lawmakers rejected the deal.

A government official earlier estimated that lawmakers had 800 firearms inside the building.

The government was represented by Filatov, the president's chief of staff, and Oleg Soskovets, a first deputy prime minister. Parliament was represented by Ramazan Abdulatipov and Veniamin Sokolov, both high-ranking parliament officials.

Red Cross depends on United Way help

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

American Red Cross operates on a local budget of about $10,000, about half coming from United Way.

When a major disaster like a tornado hits, the emergency service brings in help from outside, but the smaller disasters, like house fires or the dozens of roofs lost in a hailstorm this spring, are taken care of with local funds.

"If we did not get our funding from United Way I don't think we could maintain our chapter here," said Troyce Wolf, chairman of the local Red Cross board.

Without the local chapter, many such as the the low to moderate income families that got new roofs after the hailstorm, won't get help, he said. "If we weren't there to help them, I think they would fall on their faces."

The local chapter next year will get $5,700 of $8,867 asked for from United Way, down from $5,902 they got the past year, Wolf said. Hopefully, the rest of the budget will be met through other donations and annual fundraising efforts.

Neither the local or national Red

Cross gets any government money, he said. It all comes from donations.

Those helped by Red Cross include disaster victims who cannot get help from insurance, governmental or private social services or lack personal resources. They are never charged for reimbursement.

Also, educational materials, counseling and referrals are available. Emergency communications for immediate family of active duty military personnel are available at no cost.

Festival

Dinner will be served from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. with tickets sales ending at 1:45 p.m. Tickets are $6 for adults and $4 for children. Sausage sandwiches, dessert and tea will be served from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. Uncooked sausage will be sold for $3.50 per pound throughout the day.

Other activities include game booths, bingo, an auction and a raffle.

Evening entertainment will be provided by Prairie Fire, a country and western band. The dance will be from 7:30 to 11:30 p.m. with a $5 admission.

The funds raised go toward the church's daily operating expenses.

the festival, taking place Sunday.

"I have lived here all my life and I remember going and having fun all day," she said.

The church was established in 1947, and four years later, the first festival took place. Fifty-one years later, the festival is still going strong with 155 parishioners helping make 8,500 pounds of sausage and serving about 3,000 people who come from all over West Texas.

On Saturday before the festival, sausage makers converge at 5 a.m. in the church's parish hall working until every pound and every link of sausage is prepared.

"Everybody helps out, from elementary kids to senior citizens," Batla said. "The parish council, women's society and men's society are involved and just about every-

Christian living

Ellis Inspires women

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Knowing about the Bible is one thing. Living as a Christian is another - and a challenge in today's world.

"This is no time to be fake. We must be real. If we are Christians, we must be who we say we are," said Robbie Ellis of Dallas, who this week presented two-hour daily seminars for women at Midway Baptist Church. The last seminar was this morning.

Modern Christians face a big challenge, Ellis said during a breather between a Wednesday morning seminar attended by 15 and the church luncheon that followed.

"Our children today have no real role models. Kids today pattern themselves after Madonna and Michael Jackson," she explained. "Today, more than ever, we need to stand firm and be who we say we are. Armed with the slogan, "I'm so glad to be alive," Ellis talked of the Bible and gave suggestions on how to live it. Themes included forgiveness, self esteem, parenting and knowing yourself.

Robbie Ellis of Dallas, left, makes her points at a seminar for women at Midway Baptist Church Wednesday. The two-hour daily seminars dealt with

On forgiveness, she said, "You cannot live with unforgiveness, it will destroy you as a person. It's a bridge you will one day have to cross yourself for salvation. Unforgiveness will make you old, sick, ugly, give you headaches and probably hemorrhoids."

On self esteem, "Self esteem as a Christian is knowing who you are in Christ and it can be built upon. It's not being a Christian snob. It's knowing you can get out of yourself and help other people."

On parenting, "Get a vision for your kids. What you do for your kid today, you're not doing for today, you're doing for 20 years from today."

themes of forgiveness, self esteem, parenting and knowing yourself, giving participants ideas on how to live as Christians.

On knowing yourself, related to self esteem, it "gives you the freedom in your heart to not get caught up in pettiness and mundane things and to experience the true joy of serving the Lord."

The seminars left many participants smiling. "It's just been absolutely glorious," said Cookie Elliott after the Wednesday session.

"We go to another church but I just had to be here," said Dian Griffin, who's heard Ellis and her husband, Perry Ellis, speak at retreats in Lamesa. "I'm just blessed every time I hear them."

Ellis' husband is chief executive officer of Bread for Life. Both served as missionaries in Brazil for 15 years and have three grown children.

Robbie and Perry Ellis may be back here in February for a local rally being planned. She said she doesn't know the nature of it yet.

Longtime VA volunteer honored at 90

By DEBBIE LINCEUM
Features Editor

Martha Moody's first volunteer job was during World War I. Barely a teenager, she rolled bandages for the war effort.

Nearly eight decades later, Moody is still volunteering two days a week at the Big Spring VA Medical Center, representing the Red Cross and American Gold Star Mothers.

Hospital staff, patients and fellow volunteers turned out Wednesday to honor the 38-year volunteer on her 90th birthday.

"Once you've started helping somebody, you just don't want to quit," Moody said.

For years she has played the piano two or three times a week for chapel services, visited hospitalized veterans and delivered care packages.

But Moody said almost 40 years ago, she was reluctant to take on the work.

Martha Moody's piano playing entertains VA patients every week.

"I had lost my son, Charles, in Korea," she explained, "and I didn't like to be around the hospital because it reminded me.

"I used to make lots of excuses," Moody said. "I'd tell Nan Phillips (another volunteer at the time) my car wasn't working, and she'd say, 'I'll be there to get you.' None of my stories worked."

"I'm sure glad they didn't." Once she started going to the hospital regularly, Moody was hooked.

"When you're a volunteer, you learn to think of the other fellow," she said. "You see there are two sides of everything."

"They always say the youngest in a family is selfish, but I'm the ninth of nine, and I've had none of that."

Moody gives credit to volunteerism for extending her enjoyment of life.

"You get more interested in life than if you were just at home by yourself," she said. Besides visiting the medical center twice a week, Moody likes to garden and sew. Playing the piano is her favorite job at the medical center. She prefers the old songs - from the World War I era - as well as hymns.

She said things at age 90 are just about like they were at 70 and 80. "For years, when you do a hard day's work, you're just give out," she said. "It's the same now. But a hard day's work is longer, it seems."

Fred Cox, director of voluntary service for the Big Spring VA, said Moody is the hospital's longest-serving volunteer. With a total of 23,200 hours to her credit, she's received the director's commendation and a plaque from the Department of Veteran's Affairs at a national meeting, among numerous other honors.

"She's provided the patients with a quality of life they wouldn't otherwise have," Cox said.

But the veterans have given something to her as well, Moody said.

"You learn something every day," she said. "I learn from them all the time."

Are you a prisoner?

Acceptance of forgiveness can set you free

By TOM FULLER
First United Methodist Church

In San Francisco one summer we took the boat to Alcatraz Island.

When it was in operation, Alcatraz was considered the most terrible prison in America. Only the worst, most incorrigible criminals were housed there.

We walked through the prison itself. The tour guide shut me for one minute in the total darkness of a solitary confinement cell. It was a chilling, awful feeling.

But that afternoon we witnessed another prison, worse than the first. In San Jose we toured through a house with 160 rooms!

Sarah Winchester, daughter of the inventor of the Winchester rifle and heiress to its fortune, built the house out of desperation. It seems that Sarah felt deep guilt over the death and destruction caused by the Winchester rifle. She felt that after she died, God would punish her personally.

One day she consulted a fortune teller, asking how she could achieve immortality, so she would never have to face the judgment day. "Start building and never stop!" was the seer's advice. "The noise of the hammers and saws will frighten off the demon of death!" she said. So, for 36 years Sarah kept carpenters working on this eight-acre monstrosity.

Walking through it, we saw closet doors that opened onto blank walls, stairways that stopped at the ceiling, closets with windows on three walls...Millions and millions of dollars spent expanding onto this one house, building ANYTHING, in order to avoid death...and facing God.

Poor, sad Sarah. What a tragic waste of money, of time...of a life. If only someone had told her about the complete forgiveness that can come through Jesus Christ.

The most terrible prison in the world can be seen when one looks upon people who do not know themselves to be forgiven. They usually are hostile, or arrogant, or bitter or cold. They numb their senses with alcohol. They are often depressed or angry. They cannot say "Thank you" or "I'm sorry."

Because they refuse to accept God's unconditional love for themselves, they cannot give themselves in complete love to any other person.

Because they reject a forgiving God, they cannot ever admit personal fault or imperfection. It's everyone else who makes all the mistakes! Personally, I would rather be a prisoner in Alcatraz with the Lord, than a millionaire in a mansion without Him. Are you in the prison of unforgiveness? I know Who can set you free.

God October 9, 10 a.m.-3 p.m. All district churches have been invited to attend. Talents will be on display and lunch will be served.

Women's seminar

Terry Kinard will be the featured speaker for a Women's Seminar to be held on Saturday, 1:30-4:00 p.m. at the Living Water Church at 1008 Birdwell. A Nursery will be provided for children ages 0-5.

TERRY KINARD

Terry's husband, Mike Kinard, will be ministering at a men's worship workshop on Saturday also from 6-8 p.m. at Living Water Fellowship Hall.

Terry Kinard will also be ministering at the Big Spring Outreach Aglow meeting, Monday, Oct. 4, at La Posada Restaurant. Optional buffet will be at 6:30 p.m. with the meeting at 7:30 p.m. Men are welcome.

The programs are sponsored by Big Spring Christian Women. For more information, call Sonshine Christian Bookstore, 267-6442.

Revival Oct. 10

Hillcrest Baptist Church, 2000 W. FM 700, plans a revival with Steve Hardin, Evangelist and Jeff Lynn, Music Evangelist, Oct. 10 at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m., Oct. 11-13, 7 p.m. Nursery will be provided.

JEFF LYNN

Praise and worship serves as the centerpiece for the music ministry of Jeff Lynn. A contemporary singer and songwriter, Lynn has spent the last 10 years sharing a message throughout the United States. In 1990, Jeff responded to well over 100 ministry opportunities in revivals, youth camps, concerts, singles conferences, retreats and many other events.

He lives with his family in Denton, serving as minister of music and worship leader at North Metro Church, a mission of First Baptist Church in Denton.

Car wash Saturday

Youth of College Park Church of God will sponsor a car wash Saturday at the Do It Center, 10 a.m.-3 p.m. The youth also will be selling two-year planning calendars door-to-door during the month of October. Youth have a project of buying doors for the church foyer. They just bought a new vacuum cleaner for the church.

College Park's most recent men's prayer breakfast had 22 in attendance. The next breakfast will be Oct. 23 at 8 a.m. All men are invited.

Wednesday at 7 p.m., the church welcomes Brother Charles Harrington as speaker.

FBC Round-Up

Sunday will be "Round-Up Day" at First Baptist Church. The special emphasis of the day is to "round-up" all church members. A western theme provides a more casual atmosphere, and everyone is invited to wear boots, jeans, or casual clothes.

There are several special activities planned for the day, including a 9 a.m. brunch for the Pastor's Class and a barbecue meal following the morning service.

During the 10:50 a.m. service, the church will honor Dr. and Mrs. P.W. Malone for over 60 years of outstanding service.

The special musical guest for the day is Jody Nix, playing old time gospel music in both the Pastor's Class and in the worship service. Along with Nix will be Jason Roberts, a member of his band, who is considered one of the finest young fiddle players in Texas. Ryan Walker, a member of the church, will accompany the two on the piano.

Members and visitors are invited to attend this special event.

Renewal services

First Church of God plans Spiritual Renewal Services, Oct. 6-10, 7 p.m. each evening, 10:45 a.m. & 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

Special guest for the services will be evangelist Roy Dobbs, Clinton, Okla. The church is at 2009 Main. For information call 267-6607. Pastor is Darrell Hendrickson.

Special Sundays

Sunday, First United Methodist Church will observe World Wide Communion Day and will also begin their Sunday School Attendance Campaign which will conclude on Nov. 21, with a churchwide Thanksgiving Dinner. Sherry Honeyman is the chairperson for the campaign.

Ann Honea, Stephanie Wilkerson and their committee are preparing for the colossal Rummage Sale, set for the Youth Hall on Oct. 9. Proceeds will go to purchase new equipment for the Children's Day Out program.

At the 10:50 a.m. service Oct. 10, the historic Boy Scout Troop One will be rechartered. This troop, which is sponsored by FUMC, will be led by Frank Broyles with Stan Partee, Tom Wegner and Steven Honea assisting.

Oct. 17, Dr. Tom Nesbit of Lubbock will begin a 7-part Disciple Maker Series. At noon that day will be the Fall New Members Luncheon.

Also on this Sunday, a new class for Young Married Couples will begin at 10:45 a.m. with Murray and Diane Murphy as teachers.

and discuss projects for the coming year. The next meeting will be held in the home of Ima Dell Williams on Oct. 26.

Walking for robes

Walkers, from left, Richard Thompson, Kathy Green, Stephanie Green, Elecia Simpson, Roxann Simpson and Frankie Green, were among those who made the rounds on the Big Spring High School track Wednesday. The Baker's Chapel AME youth choir was trying to raise money for uniforms.

Coats for kids

The annual Big Spring Women's Club coat drive began today with collection sites at Don's IGA at College Park, Sun Country Realty, 600 S. Gregg St., and Harris Lumber, 1515 FM 700. Coats are distributed to the Big Spring State Hospital, Spring Tabernacle Church, Northside Community Center, Westside Day Care Center and elementary schools. Pictured are Don's manager Frank Brooks and club president Donna Tune.

Friday football forecast

Compiled by Herald Sports Staff

MONAHANS (2-2) at BIG SPRING (3-1)

Last week, we picked against the Steers based mostly on the Steers' poor play at Lubbock High. We got burned, but we'll stubbornly look at past performance again this week.

The Steers played terrific on both sides of the ball at Snyder last Friday. Big Spring should slow down Monahans' strong running game, and it should be able to pass the ball against the Lobos. If the Steers can establish their passing game, the rest should fall into place.

Pick the score close, though. You know how Big Spring-Monahans games are. All District 3-4A teams open district play tonight except Sweetwater, which has an open date.

BIG SPRING 20, MONAHANS 14

COAHOMA (2-2, 0-0) at ELDORADO (1-3, 0-1)

The Coahoma Bulldogs find out tonight if they are contenders or pretenders for the state football playoffs as they travel to Eldorado for their District 6-2A opener.

Both teams go into the game hurting. Coahoma is without leading rusher and receiver Edward Dunn, while Eldorado's star running back, Reagan Bounds, has been hobbled with a leg injury. The good news for Coahoma, however, is that the Bulldogs are a lot deeper at the skill positions than the Eagles.

The feeling here is that the 'Dogs are tired of pretending and ready to start contending.

COAHOMA 21, ELDORADO 18

WATER VALLEY (0-4) at FORSAN (2-2)

The Forsan Buffaloes have been the most pleasant surprise among area teams, having won more times through four games this season than in the previous two years combined.

Tonight, they'll seek to pad their win column against the Water Valley Wildcats, who have played a killer schedule: their opponents have a combined 16-0 record.

It'll get a little easier for Water Valley, but not that much easier.

Can we say 3-2, Buff fans?

We knew you could.

FORSAN 24, WATER VALLEY 6

COLORADO CITY (1-3) at MULESHOE (1-3)

The last thing the C-City Wolves want is a long trip up the Panhandle, but the Wolves have been getting a lot of unwanted things lately.

Like beatings. After an easy win over Hawley, the Wolves have lost their last three games by a combined score of 119-16.

Muleshoe finished 2-8 last season, but the Mules lost just eight players off last year's team. Whether that's good or bad, we really don't know. All we know is, C-City is having a bad season.

MULESHOE 29, C-CITY 20

GREENWOOD (2-1-1) at LUBBOCK COOPER (2-1)

Lubbock Cooper was off last Saturday, and Greenwood has to be a bit road weary.

The Rangers tied at Denver City two weeks ago and lost at Alpine last Friday. At Alpine, Greenwood running back Indavong Phonasa separated a shoulder, and he'll be out of action for the next few weeks.

Greenwood will have to slow down George Salas, a running back who has a big offensive line in front of him. Cooper's wins came against Muleshoe and Dimmitt.

Phonasa is a big loss, but he's not the only star the Rangers have. Greenwood will break through this week - barely.

GREENWOOD 17, LUBBOCK COOPER 16

McCAMEY (1-3, 0-1) at STANTON (2-2, 0-1)

Stanton's been a thorn in our side. We've picked its game right just once so far.

Bad news, Stanton fans - we're picking the Buffs this week. It's homecoming, the Buffaloes still have Jerrel Lee and Ricky Lucas and McCamey is the doormat of Stanton's district, 6-2A.

McCamey did beat Wink, a good Class 1A team, but who cares?

STANTON 31, McCAMEY 18

GARDEN CITY (0-4) at STERLING CITY (4-0)

Two teams going in separate directions meet tonight when the winless Garden City Bearkats visit undefeated Sterling City.

The Bearkats have played fine defense as of late, but have been unable to put together a consistent offense.

The Eagles have no such problem.

STERLING CITY 24, GARDEN CITY 8

GRADY (4-0) at HERMLEIGH (1-3)

No one should have to spend much time thinking about this one.

Grady could get caught looking ahead to next Friday's showdown with District 5 foe Klondike, but we doubt it. Sands beat Hermleigh 46-12 Sept. 3, and Klondike blanked the Cardinals 46-0 two weeks later - just to give you an idea.

Looks like 46 is a magic number.

GRADY 46, HERMLEIGH 12

BORDEN COUNTY (1-3) at KLONDIKE (3-1)

The area game of the week for six-man fans will be in Patricia tonight, when the Klondike Cougars have their homecoming game against the Borden County Coyotes.

Borden finally broke into the win column last week against Loop, while the only blemish on Klondike's record is a loss to New Home. The Cougars have the advantage in experience and numbers plus the desire to play well in front of the exes.

Not to mention they want revenge for two losses to the Coyotes last year.

KLONDIKE 44, BORDEN CO. 22

THREE WAY (0-4) at SANDS (3-0-1)

The Sands Mustangs, coming off a tie with New Home last week, look to regain their winning ways tonight when they have their homecoming against the winless Three Way Eagles.

The Mustangs should be fired up for this one, even with the Eagles record. Sands knows it should have beaten New Home, and with homecoming, the team will want to put on a good show.

It will be a good show. A short one, but good.

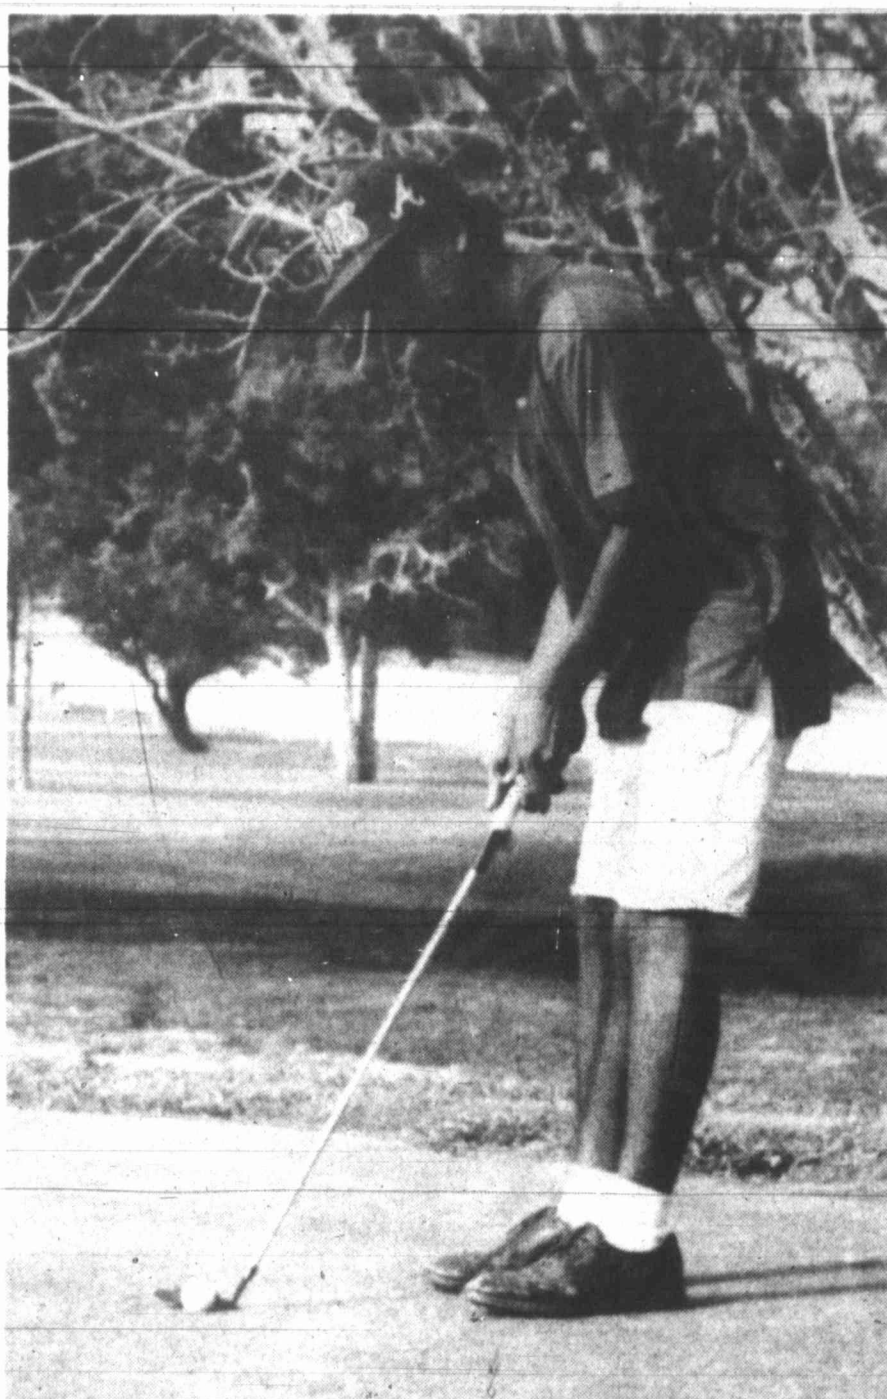

SANDS 46, THREE WAY 0

Practice is key for city champ

Charlie Garcia works at his putting game Thursday at the Comanche Trail Golf Course. Garcia, who won the city championship Aug. 28-29 at Comanche Trail, is going to play for the Texas Tech Red Raiders next semester.

By DAVE HARGRAVE
Sports Editor

Charlie Garcia is 19. He doesn't go to college. He doesn't have a job. He spends most of his days at the Comanche Trail Golf Course.

Think he's wasting his time? Yeah, right. And Thomas Edison was wasting his time tinkering in the basement inventing the light bulb.

Garcia won Comanche Trail Golf Course's city championship tournament Aug. 28-29 by 10 strokes, shooting a blistering 131 (64-67). Since then he's just gotten better. Soon after Garcia won the championship, Al Patterson, the club professional at Comanche Trail, helped arrange for Garcia to play at Lubbock's Hillcrest Country Club in front of Texas Tech's men's golf coach.

Garcia's brother, Ben, drove Charlie to Lubbock.

"Charlie went up there and birdied the first two holes, then almost birdied the third, and then the coach just left," said Ben, 32. "We figured the coach had just said he'd watch but never had any plans for Charlie. We planned for the worst."

"Then, to our surprise, the coach called later on. I guess he saw what he needed to see."

Garcia is going to Texas Tech next semester to play for the Red Raiders. He doesn't have a scholarship yet, he said, but he has every chance to play his way into one.

Garcia played four years on the varsity golf team at Big Spring High School, where he graduated in 1992. Garcia was second medalist in District 3-4A his junior year, but winning the city championship has been his highlight.

"I really wanted to win it," Garcia said. "My brother's won it three times, so I wanted to win it, too."

Ben Garcia's last city title came in 1991 when he shot a course-record

61. He said his accomplishments are nothing compared to his little brother's.

"He's gone beyond whatever I did, just because he has a lot more talent," Ben said. "I told him a few things, and everybody puts in their two cents worth, but nobody can really help him anymore. That's how good he is."

"When I started playing, I was 12 years old, and that's when he was born, so ever since he was born he's been messing around with golf clubs."

"Charlie was one of those guys that beat the practice tee to death," said Patterson. "His junior and senior year, he didn't do as well as he should have, but he wasn't beating the practice tee to death, either."

"Now he's been out of school for almost two years, he plays every day and he's developed into quite a player. He knows how to turn threes into twos."

Dewey Byers, who golfs with Garcia often, said no one around Big Spring can beat Garcia anymore.

"I think the city championship gave him the confidence he needed to be the great player that he is," Byers said. "He's shot 16 or 17 rounds in the 60s since that tourney."

You can ask Garcia all kinds of questions about his secrets to success, his hopes of becoming a professional golfer and his goals at Texas Tech, and he'll always come back to one thing: Practice. Like many champions, Garcia started at a young age, and what used to get him in trouble could possibly make him a PGA golfer.

"We had a pretty big backyard, and I'd always hit the ball back there when I was a kid, so when I came out here I already knew how to hit a ball."

"There's a bunch of dents in my Dad's truck. I got in trouble a lot."

Giants climb into first-place tie with Braves

By The Associated Press

The schedule seems to favor the Atlanta Braves. The momentum might favor the San Francisco Giants.

Only one thing is for sure: With three days left, the Braves and Giants are tied for first place in the NL West with 101 victories.

The Giants again drew even Thursday night, winning 3-1 in Los Angeles after Atlanta lost 10-8 at home to Houston.

The Braves finish the regular season with three games at home against Colorado. Atlanta is 10-0 against the Rockies.

The Giants close with three games at Dodger Stadium. San Francisco is 4-6 against Los Angeles.

Billy Swift (21-8) pitched the Giants to their eighth victory in nine games. In Atlanta, John Smoltz (15-11) was hit hard as the Braves fell to 4-4 since taking a 3 1/2-game lead on Sept. 21.

In other games, Pittsburgh beat Philadelphia 5-0, New York defeated St. Louis 3-2 and Montreal beat Florida 5-3.

Swift, tied with Atlanta's Tom Glavine for the league lead in victories, held the Dodgers to two hits and one run in seven innings. Rod Beck pitched 1 1/3 innings for his 46th save.

Tom Candiotti (8-10) pitched well, too, but two errors set up two unearned runs.

Astros 10, Braves 8

Atlanta's three-run rally in the ninth inning fell short when Otis Nixon fouled out with runners on first and third to end the game.

The Braves lost two of three games to Houston. They had won 14 straight series since losing to Montreal on Aug. 6-8.

Trailing 10-5 in the ninth, the Braves tried to come back against Doug Jones. Terry Pendleton hit an RBI single with one out and Damon Berryhill followed with an RBI single.

Mark Lemke grounded into a forceout that scored one run and pinch-hitter Ryan Klesko singled. Nixon ran the count full before fouling out to third base.

Rangers 6, Athletics 2

Juan Gonzalez hit his major league-leading 45th home run as he returned to the lineup after missing nine games because of a strained muscle in his lower back.

Kenny Rogers (16-10) pitched a six-hitter, struck out three and walked one at Arlington Stadium in his fifth complete game this season.

Todd Van Poppel (6-6), starting for the first time in his hometown, allowed six runs and nine hits in 7 2/3 innings.

In other American League games, Seattle beat Chicago 2-1 in 11 innings, Minnesota beat California 4-3, Texas beat Oakland 6-2 and Detroit beat Boston 7-4.

Briefs

Booster Club forms fan line

The Big Spring Steer QB Booster Club will be forming a fan line Friday night to support the Steers against Monahans.

The football team will be arriving at 7 p.m., and fans need to come in time to park and join the line before 7 p.m. The fan line will begin at the South entrance of Memorial Stadium and extend toward 11th Place. Quarterback Club officials ask members to bring their Steer banners, flags and rally towels.

Howard announces October show

The Howard College athletic department will present the first Autumn Show and Dance, featuring Jody Nix and the Texas Cowboys. The event is scheduled for the evening of Saturday, Oct. 23, at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Tickets will soon be available for this night of entertainment. For more information, contact the HC athletic department at 264-5040.

Country club plans tournaments

The Big Spring Country Club will have a two-man combination tournament Saturday and Sunday. The first day will be a scramble, the second will be low ball.

A two-man scramble is slated for Oct. 30-31. Combined team age must be more than 80.

For additional information and tournament registration, please call the Big Spring Country Club pro shop at 267-5354.

YMCA offers aqua aerobics

Now is the time to register for aqua aerobics classes at the Big Spring Family YMCA.

YMCA members can try one class at a time for $3 per class; non-members for $5 per class. Members can sign up for the full four-week course for $16, and non-members can sign up for $25.

Aqua aerobics classes meet Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays from 5:15 p.m. until 6:15 p.m. at the YMCA's new pool.

Call 267-8234 for more information, or come to the YMCA, at 801 Owens.

MDA run comes to Big Spring

The Big Spring H.O.G. Chapter's Annual MDA Run will be Oct. 9-10.

The first bike will leave at 10 a.m., and the last one will leave at 1 p.m. The Poker Run starts at the Big Spring Harley Davidson shop and goes to the Water Valley Park outside San Angelo. Last bike in at 4 p.m.

Camping and RV facilities are available. There are bathrooms at the park but no showers.

That Saturday night at Water Valley there will be a barbecue, a band, field events and a 50/50 drawing.

The cost for the trip is $15, $10 of which goes to the MDA. Riders and non-riders are welcome.

Joe Owen (24) of Goliad's Black team picks up a blocked punt and runs it in for a touchdown Sept. 23 against Snyder. Jake Turner (32) and Josh Ontiveros (33) were the ones that got to Snyder's punter in Goliad's victory. Last night, Goliad Black lost 12-8 at Monahans, while the White team beat Monahans 6-0. The Black team is 2-2 and the White Team is 3-1. Monahans visited Runnels in eighth-grade football action last night but wishes it hadn't. Runnels won the "A" game 31-0 and the "B" game 34-0. Junior high game reports will be in Monday's Herald.

Big Spring splits with Monahans; Coahoma JV shuts out Eldorado

MONAHANS - Ray McGee's two touchdown runs were about the only bright spots for Big Spring as Monahans rolled to a 42-22 victory in junior varsity action Thursday. Big Spring fell to 2-3 with the loss. McGee's scoring runs both came in the first half. In the first quarter, he tallied from 8 yards out, and added a 5-yard TD run in the second quarter. Big Spring's final touchdown of the evening came on a 96-yard kickoff return by Manuel Cervantes in the fourth quarter. The Steers return to action Thursday at home against Andrews. Game time is 7 p.m.

Big Spring 9th 16 Monahans 9th 6

Tyler Murphy only threw about five passes Thursday night, but two of them went for touchdowns as the Big Spring freshmen downed Monahans at Memorial Stadium. Big Spring improved to 4-1 with the victory. The Steers struck first in the opening quarter when Murphy connected with Gabriel Rubio for a 20-yard scoring pass. Toma McVae added the two-point conversion to make the score 8-0. Murphy struck again in the third quarter, this time on a 40-yard scoring pass to John Smith. Chad Warren added the two-point conversion. Big Spring coaches praised the play of the offensive line and the entire defensive unit. The Steers freshmen return to action Thursday when they travel to Andrews. Game time is 6 p.m.

Coahoma JV 47 Eldorado JV 0

COAHOMA - Chris Arguello, Gerardo Armendariz and Brian Fontana each scored two touchdowns to lead the way in the junior varsity Bulldogs' romp past Eldorado Thursday. The win improves Coahoma's record to 5-0. Arguello started the scoring in the first quarter on a 20-yard touchdown run. Quarterback Adam Tindol then passed to Kevin Dunlap for the two-point conversion and an 8-0 lead. Later in the quarter, Armendariz made it 15-0 on a 14-yard scoring run. Fontana got into the scoring act in the second quarter, tallying from 7 yards out. Armendariz scored his second TD of the night on a 20-yard run later in the quarter and Tindol added a 58-yard touchdown pass to Ronnie Grant to make the halftime score 34-0. Arguello and Fontana scored on runs of 11 and 1 yard, respectively, in the second half to close out the rout. Coahoma coach Kim Nichols singled out the play of Michael Lopez, Jonathan Miller, Joel Hernandez and Eli Sanders. The Bulldogs JV returns to action Thursday when they travel to Wall. Game time is 6:30 p.m. Eldorado's freshmen beat Coahoma's freshmen 27-0. The Coahoma freshman team is 3-2 and plays at Wall Thursday.

Stanton JV 20 McCamey JV 6

McCAMEY - Stanton halfback Chris Carroll passed for one touchdown and ran for another to lead the Stanton JV to victory Thursday night. The Buffalos improved to 4-1 with the win. Stanton did all of its damage in the first half. Quarterback Taylor Looney started things off in the first quarter with a 12-yard touchdown pass to James Villa. In the second quarter, Carroll accounted for his two TDs. The first came when he took the pitch from Looney, stopped and fired a 35-yard touchdown pass to Francisco Garza, making the score 14-0. Carroll then scored the traditional way, running in from 3 yards out. Defensively, Stanton coach Doug Gordon praised the play of nose-guard Ernesto Olivas, linebackers Carroll and Mark Carillo and corner-back Looney. Stanton returns to action Thursday at home against Ozona.

Klondike, Borden County bump heads in 'friendly' 6-man rivalry

By STEVE REAGAN
Sportswriter

The Klondike Cougars and Borden County Coyotes are such good friends. Two or three times a year they get together and ... beat up on each other?

For the third time in less than a year, the Cougars (3-1) and Coyotes (1-3) meet in six-man football action. And if familiarity does not exactly breed contempt in this case, it does make for an interesting matchup.

Tonight's game begins at 7:30 p.m. in Patricia.

The game brings a little extra into it, in that it is Klondike's homecoming and the Cougars are looking for a bit of revenge after dropping two games to the Coyotes last year.

"Our kids haven't forgotten (last year)," Klondike coach Ed Wilson said. "They beat us soundly both times (64-18 and 63-20) ... I think the kids will be up for it. I don't think that will be a problem."

The teams enter tonight's game with opposite records, but Wilson said that's a bit misleading, at least as far as Borden County is concerned.

"They've improved quite a bit since the year started," Wilson said. "We've seen film on them and they've gotten better each week. We're going to have to play great defense. I think they're going to score. We just have to hope we can slow them down."

To counter Borden's rushing attack led by senior Cody Cox (94 rushes, 452 yards), the Cougars will need strong performances by quarterback Tanner Etheredge and running back Mike Lee, Wilson said.

In other six-man action tonight, Sands hosts Three Way and Grady hosts Hermleigh.

Three Way at Sands

The Sands Mustangs (3-0-1), who had their perfect record marred slightly by a 14-all tie with New Home last Friday, hold homecoming tonight vs. the winless Three Way Eagles.

Sands coach Bob Keyes said the Eagles are playing a lot better than their record indicates.

"They're probably better than their record shows," Keyes said. "They've got real good size ... and their tail-back rushed for 300 yards against us last year."

At the same time, Keyes is also hopeful his team is ready to make amends for last week's near-miss with New Home.

"I think that got their attention," he said. "I think they realize that we have have to stay focused and play a full ballgame - that we can't let down."

Game time is 7:30 p.m. at Ackerly.

Hermleigh at Grady

Grady coach Roger Smith is hoping he's not seeing a repeat of last year.

In 1992, the Wildcats started strong (4-1), but injuries decimated the team in the second half of the year and Grady ended the season with a 5-5 record.

This season, the 'Cats are again on a roll (4-0), but the injury bug is starting to bite again. Lineman Michael Madison is already out with a strained knee ligament, and now Smith must make due without defensive mainstay Scottie Welch, out with a shoulder injury.

Tonight, the 'Cats face a 1-3 Hermleigh squad that played Grady close last season.

"They haven't won a whole lot of games, but they're a fairly solid team," Smith said. "They are a whole lot better than last year ... They're capable of winning on any Friday night."

The same can be said of the Wildcats, injuries or no.

"This is what we've been working toward for the past couple of years - to put the thing together," Smith said. "And we're getting closer all the time. This team doesn't have any superstars, just six kids playing together as a team."

Game time is 7:30 p.m. in Lenorah.
