German Sailor Crosses Atlantic Alone In Boat No Longer Than Gangplank

SEAMAN CALLS AT CUBAN PORT IN SEA FLIVVER

22-Foot Life Craft Carries Adventurer Safely To Western World

SAIL AND OARS USED

Paul Muller Shocks Customs Men so Thoroughly He Is Detained

GIBARA, Cuba, May 5. (AP)—Paul Muller, German sailor, has arrived here after a safe crossing of the Atlantic in a 22-foot life boat called the "Aga."

He used a sail as well as oars to propel his craft.

So unexpected was his appearance that he was detained yesterday because of lack of papers.

He continued toward Havana today.

To Visit New York

He left Hamburg, Germany, July 6, 1928, and cruised down the coast of Europe and Africa until at Tenerife in the Canary Islands he took aboard supplies and pointed his small craft toward the opposite shore of the Atlantic. He reached the Canary Islands on Feb. 2, 1929.

Muller, 43, expects to reach Havana late this week and then will sail for New York. He already is planning a return trip to Germany over a more northerly route that would bring him to England.

Earlier Attempt Failure

Although Muller had shown sufficient foresight to provide him with necessaries that brought him safely to the end of his long cruise, he had neglected to provide himself with official papers for entry to Cuba. It appears that he had at the outset no intention of visiting the island. He was held by immigration authorities until the German ambassador extricated him.

Paul Muller is not the first mad to attempt to cross the Atlantic alone in a small boat. Captain Franz Romer disappeared in a hurricane off the Bermudas last September in a boat 21 feet long. He had negotiated the voyage across the open Atlantic to the Virgin Islands and Porto Rico only to lose his life almost within sight of the mainland.

Famed Two-Gun Texas Sheriff In Jail After Slaying Okla. Chinaman

Winkler County Officer 'Gets' Twelfth Man in Row Over Bill in Oklahoma City Cafe

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., May 5. (UP)—John Northcutt, famed two-gun sheriff of Winkler county, Texas, tonight "got" his twelfth man—a Chinaman named Eng Jo, employe in the Kingman Chinese cafe here.

According to witnesses, an argument over payment of a bill of a drunken party in the cafe led to the shooting. Northcutt interceded in the argument, and in the melee shot the Chinaman twice through the heart.

After the shooting Northcutt stood the crowd in the cafe at bay with his six shooters for some time before he was finally taken into custody by police.

Northcutt was arrested by Officer J. T. Webb, who told officials that the sheriff had been drinking and that he had been forced to shoot under him to make him surrender his famed guns.

Northcutt is being held in the county jail tonight, pending filing of charges. The shooting occurred at 8 o'clock.

OWEN D. YOUNG PLAN WINNING

Disgruntled French May Accept Debt Term

PARIS, May 5. (U)—The world war reparations settlement shoe now is on the other foot, and it is chafing the French press. Germany England and Japan have accepted the compromise evolved by Owen D. Young just as failure appeared to stare the committee of experts in the face. Two weeks ago the fate of the conference rested on the Germans. Now on the verdict of the French and Belgian delegations on Tuesday depends whether the knotty question is settled.

The French press, where it was not definitely opposed to any dimunition of the French claims, was in the rather bitter mood of feeling that "one bird in the hand is worth two in Berlin."

The proposal of Mr. Young was concluded in all its details late today. Tomorrow together with the German note indicating acceptance of it with certain reservations, it will be distributed to all members of the experts committee. Each delegation then will begin separate study so as to be in position to discuss both documents Tuesday.

The solution proposed by Young and the American delegation means another appreciable concession and loss to both France and Belgium as compared with their lowest figures presented to the conference chairman some weeks ago.

Blatant Atheist Rioters Explode Fireworks as Moscow's Devout Pray

MOSCOW, May 5. (UP)—The most intense Atheist demonstrations in Russia since 1923 marked the observance of the night before Easter in Moscow. Today is Easter Sunday in the Orthodox church calendar.

The entire population of the city remained awake far into the night, last night, some to pray and others to mock.

The sounds of "anti-religious" fire crackers mingled with the tolling of church bells. The churches were crowded to capacity by the faithful and the open air motion picture shows nearby were equally attended.

Street carnivals lasted until 3 a. m. today with the sound of music ringing through the streets. Many of the persons in the crowds were dressed in costumes ridiculing priests.

The anti-religious propaganda had been intensified in the period preceding Easter and theaters started performances at 10 p. m. for the purpose of keeping the populace from prayers. The outdoors radio loud speakers kept up the noise all night.

Similar demonstrations were reported from other cities. All true proletarians were exhorted to stay away from church.

MASS MEETING ENDS WEEK OF APPRECIATION

Junior C-C Closes Program With Sunday Rally At Auditorium

CLINE GIVES ADDRESS

"Community Competition" New Development in U. S., Says Speaker

The closing event of an eight-day program carried through by the Junior chamber of commerce as period of civic appreciation was held at the Memorial auditorium Sunday afternoon when a large crowd attended a meeting which concluded with an address by Walter D. Cline.

Commending the junior commercial organization for adopting as its first contribution to the future building of this city a constructve analysis of its many assets, Mr. Cline styled their function that of "pathfinders." After enumerating the numerous visible assets, and the advantages of location, the speaker cited the fact that the public school system and many local churches are facing the necessity of early enlargement in order to keep pace with the numerical expansion which is rapidly taking place.

Keen Competition

"Competition is no longer between individuals and firms," Mr. Cline said. "Competition between communities has replaced the former status, and it is through the chamber of commerce that the community now wages its campaign for expansion and for internal development."

"Appreciation means rendering correctly the net value of the thing or principle in question," the speaker continued."

"In application of that meaning to Wichita Falls assets, as to those of any community, none has the significance of the men and women who make up the citizenship. That fact places a great responsibility and a high value upon the numerous character - building organizations which we have: The churches, the civic clubs and the many young peoples' organizations."

Mr. Cline expressed the belief that, despite a marked lull in the crude oil industry during the last two or three years, Wichita Falls is in comparatively good condition, and fortunate in the degree to which commercial and industrial activity has been maintained. An improvement in the oil market for this section will probably be effected in the next few months, he said.

Praises C-C Directors

The speaker spoke briefly in commendation of the different business and processional men of Wichita Falls "who have given unreservedly of their time and energy and thought" during the last 10 years as directors of the chamber of commerce in order to build the city as it has been built during that period.

Neal Powers presided at the meeting Sunday afternoon, which opened with a 30-minute concert given by members of the Municipal and Lions club bands, directed by Paul Secds. Misses Mary Virginia Barron and Lometa Smith, representing the Girl Reserves, sang "The Quest," and a chorus of about 50 members sang the national song of the organization, "Follow the Gleam." R. E. Shepherd, with Mrs. Shepherd accompanying, sang "My Old Home Town," "Texas," by W. J. Marsh of Fort Worth, and "Wichita Falls."

Rev. Alvin F. White, pastor of the Grace Methodist Episcopal church, pronounced the invocation, and dismissed the meeting with prayer.

Debenture Plan Issue To Test Administration

WASHINGTON, May 5. (AP)—The senate strength the administration can command will be tested this week when a vote is taken on the export debenture plan which President Hoover opposes as a part of his farm relief program.

Whether the plan is to be retained or eliminated hinges on one or two votes and both sides claim victory if their ranks hold firm to the last.

Slain Amarillo Youth's Widow Too Grief Stricken to Leave University

AMARILLO, May 5. (AP)—Prostrated with grief over the death of her young husband, Thomas Walton Jr., at the hands of her father, R. H. Hamilton, here yesterday, Mrs. Theresa Hamilton Walton, 19-year-old University of Texas student, was too ill today to return to Amarillo from Austin, said a telegram received today by Howard Dees, friend of Walton's from Alice Pierson, a chum of the girl.

The young widow lived with her mother while attending the university this year. No intimation was given that Mrs. Hamilton or her daughter would return to Amarillo.

Mrs. Grace Walton, mother of the slain youth, today was reported in a serious condition at her home here.

The mother had been worried because Walton had kept secret his wedding to Theresa Hamilton, 19, which occurred Feb. 10 while the two were students at Texas university. "Go and see the judge," she told her son. "He'll be sensible and everything will be all right."

So Walton walked into the office yesterday, saying carelessly to Miss Evelyn Watley, a stenographer, "If you hear some shooting you'll know I've been shot." A few minutes later Hamilton shot him four times, surrendered and made only this explanation: "I had rather die than kill a man but I had to protect my family."

The lawyer, one of the prominent men in Amarillo, was released under $20,000 bond, waived preliminary hearing and will be taken

RAILROAD WAR SPEEDS TRAINS

Lines Battle for Business Of Vacation Land

DENVER, Colo., May 5. (UP)—A "railroad war," reminiscent of the early days, when competing interests fought for a foothold in the virgin west, is being fought out along new and modern lines.

Using every weapon in their possession, the roads are engaged in a speed war. Just as the "empire builders" of the early days supplemented their appeals to congress for land grants with burly razorbacks, known as "claim jumpers," who battled the razorbacks of competing companies, the roads of today have gone about conducting the war with "practical" methods.

Schedules Clipped

They have chopped their running schedules, announced new summer trains, and added airplane flights to their service arrangements, even freight schedules have been speeded up. And now, as if the lure of aviation were not enough, the suggestion of a "price war" is contained in the Union Pacific's announcement that it will eliminate extra fares on its Los Angeles limited.

The prize at stake, aside from the prestige and advertising value of operating the fastest trains in the rich revenue of the summer vacation travel. Every railroad running into the western vacation lands this summer will do its best to beat its competitors.

Price War Probable

Whether a "price war" will develop to the advantage of the traveller is uncertain. But the Union Pacific's intention to eliminate extra fares has indicated that such a thing is probable. Roads claim to be practically unrestricted by outside authority in establishing excursion rates.

The war which had its inception with the Great Northern's speeding up of service between Chicago and Portland, has involved the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific, the Union Pacific, the Southern Pacific, the Burlington, the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, the Rock Island, and now has spread to branch lines. For instance, the Colorado and Southern, a Burlington subsidiary, last night clipped the Dallas-Denver running time to 28 hours, 45 minutes, and service between coast cities has been speeded up.

Passengers on Rock Island trains between Chicago and Los Angeles can make the whole trip in a day and a night by availing themselves of airplane service between Kansas City and El Paso.

The acceleration of public freight schedules by eastern roads has put Denver 24 hours closer to the Atlantic seaboard.

Staten Island Resort Suffers Big Fire Loss

NEW YORK, May 5. (US)—Fire threatening the destruction of the entire summer resort swept through Midland Beach, Staten Island, this afternoon while the first big crowd of the season cheered the combined forces of firemen and police in their efforts to check the flames.

The old mill, the barrel of fun and the scenic railway were destroyed and occupants of bungalows along the board walk were ordered from their homes.

Sparks, carried by a high south wind, ignited the office of the lumber yard several blocks from the ball park. Citizens joined the fire department in restricting the blaze and saving the lumber yard.

Several volunteer firemen escaped injury when the burning stands fell at the park.

The Southland company warehouse adjoins the park, and the flames spread to it from the stands.

Loss at the park, estimated at $11,000; at the Southland warehouse, estimated at $4,000, and at the lumber office, estimated at $6,000 was covered partially by insurance.

RAILROAD HEAD REVEALS PLANS FOR EXTENSION

Williamson Says Company Will Seek Permit For New Road

LINE LONG PLANNED

New Denver Project Would Represent Rail Outlay Of $3,500,000

That the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad intends to support its claim to the territory south of Amarillo in the Panhandle with action was seen Sunday in the report from Chicago that F. E. Williamson, president of the Burlington, had announced his road is prepared to proceed with a new line from Childress to Pampa.

The Burlington, or Denver, plans to construct the new road as soon as permission to begin the work is obtained from the Interstate Commerce commission, Mr. Williamson's announcement said. He said the company will ask the commission's permission, according to the Associated Press story which carried the announcement.

The estimated cost of the new trackage is between $3,500,000 and $4,000,000. The line will be 110 miles long.

This projected addition to the Burlington system will serve a rich agricultural territory in Wheeler and Gray counties in the upper Panhandle and will give that fast developing area a new rail outlet to Childress, Wichita Falls, Fort Worth, Dallas and other Texas centers.

The Fort Worth and Denver is known to have contemplated this extension for years and the route has been surveyed. Recently, however, the matter was again revived when the Rock Island applied for permission to tap the territory with a new line. This resulted in the assertion by Denver officials that "any development in that territory logically belongs to the Fort Worth and Denver."

The Rock Island plans call for a new line from Shamrock through Wellington to Quanah, there to connect with a projected line into Fort Worth. The Rock Island also proposes to build a line from Dallart to Pringle, cost of the two lines to approximate $7,000,000.

FORMER WICHITAN EXPOSES INTERNATIONAL FORGERY RING

KNICKERBOCK'R WINS PRAISE

Magazine Tells How He Trapped Pair in Fraud

His work in exposing a forgery fraud of international scope and importance, covering at least 10 years of diplomatic history, has won national recognition and praise for Hubert R. Knickerbocker, Berlin correspondent for the New York Evening Post, the son of Rev. and Mrs. H. D. Knickerbocker, formerly of Wichita Falls, and the brother of Mrs. J. A. Heyman, 802 Grace street.

Magazine Tells Story

A recent issue of the Editor and Publisher carries a picture of the newspaperman and an account of the activities which led to the uncovering of a string of false diplomatic documents. Among them were papers purporting to show that United States Senators Borah and Norris accepted $100,000 from the Soviet government. The arrest in Berlin of four Russians, two of whom were later released, followed the exposure. Officials believe that the men held have manufactured other forgeries in the past which have brought about events of international importance, the publication adds.

Mr. Knickerbocker's investigations began several weeks ago when he reported to his paper in New York that documents exposing the fake Borah bribe had been offered to him for sale. Following instructions, he paid a $25 installment of the $2,000 asked for the papers and started an inquiry into their source. He secretly photographed the papers and turned them over to the German police. The arrest of the four men followed.

In the rooms of the two men still held, Vladimir Orloff and Michael Sumarakoff, three trucks full of fake soviet stamps, papers, and a number of forgeries awaiting purchase were discovered. Berlin police believe the ring has been in operation through several years, and that it had a part in the Zinoviev forgery which led to the downfall of the Ramsey McDonald ministry in England, as well as in other events of the historical significance, according to the account in Editor and Publisher. In the story young Knickerbocker is credited with "extraordinary tact and shrewdness." Personal telegrams from Senators Borah and Norris acknowledged his service.

Native Texan

Mr. Knickerbocker is 31 years old, and a native Texan. He was first known to Wichita Falls during the years in which his father served as pastor of the First Methodist church here. Rev. and Mrs. Knickerbocker now live in Oklahoma City. The young man's newspaper career began in Newark, N. J., 10 years ago. He went from the Newark Morning Ledger to the New York Evening Post, and from there, in 1922, he went to the Sun as rewrite man. Later he returned to Texas where he conducted a journalism course in Dallas.

His foreign service began with the Evening Post-Philadelphia Public Ledger service in Berlin. He was with the International News Service in Moscow for two years. His education includes studies pursued in Munich, Vienna, and Berlin, and he speaks both Russian and German fluently.

Solons to Delay Final Action On Pen Bill as They Attend C-C Fete

AUSTIN, May 5. (AP)—The house tomorrow likely will dispose of the Mauritz income tax bill while the senate committee on penitentiaries takes some action on the prison concentration measure as passed almost unanimously in the house Friday.

The legislature will spend Tuesday in Bryan at the East Texas Chamber of Commerce convention and indications are that there will be a disposition to wait until after that trip to get down to serious work.

However, with only a few bills on the calendar the house is in a position to consider the income tax, reported favorably by a narrow margin out of committee Friday night.

The senate penitentiaries committee tomorrow will discuss the bills by Senator Holbrook of Galveston, which would give a commission free rein to centralize the system, and the measure which represents the compromise views of factions in the house, restricting concentration to any of the lands now owned by the state.

Senator McFarlane of Graham, chairman of the committee, has said he will favor the house bill, withdrawing one of his own.

Commissioners Court to Plan For District Convention Here

Bundy to Inquire Into Terms of Compromise on Bridge At Meeting Monday

Plans for the entertainment of about 30 county judges and commissioners of the 13th congressional district, to convene here on May 25 will be completed during the regular meeting of the county commissioners court Monday. John P. Marrs, county judge, and members of the court have been put in charge of the program for the all day session, with authority to choose topics and speakers. Judge Marrs has indicated that some aspect of the problem of oil land tax equalization will probably become the principal theme of the meeting. Sessions are to be held in one of the district court rooms in the courthouse.

The court is also expected to take some official action Monday on a $31,200 suit against the court filed last week by W. R. Anderson. Mr. Anderson claims the money was due him through the terms of a contract, alleged to have been made in 1923, giving him a commission on the collection of delinquent taxes. The court is expected to contest the suit and the employment of a special defense attorney may be completed at the Monday session.

M. A. Bundy, commissioner from precinct 1, which is meeting two-thirds of the cost of the new Scott avenue bridge, said Sunday that he expected during the Monday session to investigate the terms of the recent compromise between the builders of the bridge and the Northern Texas Utility company, by which the company was allowed to leave a gas main across the river, running through one of the middle piers. Mr. Bundy said he was out of the city during the controversy which developed last week when work on the bridge was halted because of the gas main obstruction, and he said Sunday that he would probably ask the court to take some definite action on the agreement now in effect.

'Cheap' Train Fare Bared as Forgery

FORT WORTH, May 5. (AP)—The railroad ticket to Lancaster, Pa., that Angel Lira, Mexican, had bought from a man on the street looked good, for it read "good on any road." So Lira got ready for the trip and went to the depot. He was told he had no ticket, but only a worthless piece of paper, for which he had paid $20.

Yesterday M. Hendricks Brown, assistant district attorney, filed a forgery complaint against Joe Loraine in county court.

Loraine is alleged to have met the Mexican in March and to have promised him a job in Lancaster, Pa. He then sold Lira two tickets to the place, for a total of $40.

The "tickets" included berth accommodations.

Clarendon Doctor Injured in Accident

CLARENDON, Texas, May 5.—Two car accidents that proved to be more serious than at first thought happened to Clarendon citizens late Saturday. Dr. H. L. Wilder, while returning from a call in the country, turned his Dodge sedan over about a mile west of town and suffered serious injury about the head and side. He was rushed to Harris sanitarium at Fort Worth after local doctors failed to ascertain the nature and seriousness of the injury.

Mr. Carl Saye and wife and little daughter of this city returning from Wellington turned their Buick sedan over on the road west of Hedley, completely demolishing the car and did not injure either of the occupants. The car was a total wreck and according to the driver the escape without injury was miraculous

HATER OF CATS WAXES WARM

Bird Lover Denounces All 'Nasty Felines'

CHICAGO, May 5. (UP)—Who kills a cat, kills trash, a spreader of disease and a deadly enemy to little babies and lovely song birds, in the opinion of Roscoe P. Sayre, internationally-known bird lover who announced today he had reached the half-way mark in his goal for a beautiful, catless world.

And to whomever kills the last "nasty cat" in the world, the final feline menace to birds and children, Sayre is offering a grand prize of $100. To everyone he offers a bounty for each animal killed in his "war to the end" on the cat.

"Kill a cat and you save dozens of children and song birds," is Sayre's slogan.

Kitties Half Gone

He estimated that since he began his cat extermination campaign a few years ago that half the population of catland had been killed. Ten yers ago, he said, there were approximately 20,000,000 cats while the number today would not go beyond half that number.

To encourage cat killers, Sayre offers the following bounties and prizes:

"Ten cents each for the first 100 cats killed.

"Five dollars to the persons killing the largest number of cats.

"Two dollars to the person killing next largest number.

"One dollar to the person killing the next largest number in order as reported.

"Three dollars each to the next 10 dirty women, who clean up, deodorize, disinfect and quit trying to breed and sell nasty cats for money; quit killing song birds with cat fangs; quit spreading disease; regain respect of clean women, who keep no cats, mice or vermin about the house or barn.

"And $100 to the one who kills the last nasty cat on earth," the end of the list reads.

Sayre, a Chicago realtor, who is sincere in his campaign for the safety of song birds and children, was bitter in his denunciation of those who keep a house cat.

"The cat is the worst disease spreader in existence," Sayre told the United Press. "No decent person would have a cat around the house. They bring measles, typhoid fever, mumps and numerous other contagious diseases into the house.

"Cats are sneaky. They slink around the house and while the family is eating they sleep on the floor. Immediately the family arises and goes out of the room, up jumps the cat on the table and paws over the food.

Disease Infested

"Mothers should never allow their children to play with a nasty cat as their paws and hairs are infested with disease. They will suck the breath of life from a sleeping baby. Remember several years ago when even doctors had cats in their homes. You can't find that today as physicians have learned that cats carry disease."

Sayre said he had received hundreds of letters from all sections of the country encouraging his campaign. Only a few, he added, are opposed to it.

"Those who oppose it are leaders of cat organizations interested only in making money," he said.

His throat filled and he could scarcely continue as Sayre told of driving through a park near his office and describing how cats sneak up on robins, blue birds, meadow larks and other song birds which he loves. In a small book he has written Sayre asks:

"When you call a woman an old cat, could you shame her worse? Would any clean woman, detesting the name, touch or fondle the thing itself? Could she look on starving young in the next, without remorse, when her cat had killed the mama bird?

"When she chose the cat, and sacrificed the bird, did she not shut out sweetness from her soul forever? Is there anything higher than a pure woman, or lower than a cat woman?"

Sayre says that since his campaign was started there are several catless towns and in a few years he hopes to see a catless world.

Weather Chief Sees Nothing Unusual In Epidemic of Devastating Storms

U. S. Bureau Chief Says Tornadoes Are Simply to Be Expected and Explains Movement of Winds

WASHINGTON, May 5. (UP)—Charles F. Marvin, chief of the United States weather bureau, sees nothing unusual or remarkable about the epidemic of storms which took such a heavy toll in life and property in the last week.

He appeared somewhat hurt, as if an old friend were being maligned, when he asked today for an explanation of the "erratic" weather.

"There is nothing erratic about this weather," he said. "It is not unusual at this time of year. The recent storms were not unexpected. They were inevitable and followed a perfectly logical course."

Low Pressure Movement

He demonstrated with the pile of weather maps on his desk, showing how a low pressure area formed Tuesday night over southwestern states and moved in a northwesterly direction. The area centered early Thursday over Evansville, Ind., moved on to Erie, Pa., later in the day and continued into Canada Friday.

"See the sweep of these isobars," he said, pointing out the atmospheric whirlpool on Thursday's map which covered almost the entire eastern half of the country. "A condition of this kind at this time of the year always brings heavy and sometimes disastrous winds."

Marvin explained that air, like water, seeks its own level. Consequently, when a low pressure area forms, the atmosphere in surrounding high pressure areas moved toward it, producing winds, sometimes of high and sometimes of low velocity, depending on the degree of differences in pressure.

"This is an endless process," Marvin continued. "Today a low pressure area is forming over Cheyenne, Wyo. It will produce a storm but we can't tell yet how severe it will be. We must watch it develop."

The worst of the storms occurred in the southeast, due to a horseshoe shaped high pressure area beginning at Atlanta, Ga., and extending above Knoxville, Tenn. The rush of warm air from this section into the colder atmosphere of the low pressure area to the north produced the tornadoes.

Ideal for Tornadoes

"I am surprised there were not more tornadoes," the forecaster said. "Conditions were ideal for them. Had the skies been clear and the temperature consequently higher, there would have been even more twisters.

There is no danger of damage from the storm now that it has moved to the north, it was said, because winter temperatures prevail there.

Marvin said spring weather would be somewhat later this year than it has been in years past.

"Although I have made no careful comparison of the records," he said, "I believe it is true that winters have generally been milder during the last five years than previously and the springs correspondingly later. Recently winters seem to have been prolonged into March and April.

Marvin is head of the vast organization in the agriculture department which compiles weather reports from all sections of the country and upon them bases its forecasts. It warns ships at sea of approaching storms and tells farmers what weather to expect for their crops. Recently it has extended its activities to include an elaborate service to aviators.

MEMPHIS PLANS ANNUAL FAIR

Early Start Made to Insure Good Exhibits

Special to The Record News

MEMPHIS, Texas, May 5.—Although several months off, plans are already being laid for the Hall County District Fair, according to George A. Sager, secretary of the association. A nice profit was realized from the fair last year, but it is the object of the fair officials to make this year's fair still more profitable.

Secretary Sager says farmers are being urged to plan their exhibits early, and has requested that he be notified when the second cutting of alfalfa is ready, and when their oats, rye and barley may be obtained. He says if the products are sent to him early they will be adequately cared for until time for the fair, and will be on hand and will not have to be collected at the last moment, which will enable them to get much better exhibits.

County Agent H. R. Ellis says he is working on exhibits for the fair, and expects to have this work well in hand long before the fair opens. Miss Ruby Adams, county home demonstration agent, is also planning for the fair, and is talking it among the various clubs of the county which she visits each week.

According to Mr. Sager, the reason for getting plans started early for the fair this year, it gives the county a much better chance to compete in the Tri-State Fair at Amarillo and at the State Fair at Dallas. Good showings were made at each of these fairs this past year, but it is hoped by getting an early start this year a much better showing will be made.

West Texas Youths Take Many Prizes

Albert Dickenson made a perfect score in judging market eggs. PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

A woman of seventy-one, lately graduated from the University of Chicago, plans to return later to study for an advanced degree. A week before this woman received her diploma, another of the same city, marked her eighty-first year by finishing a grade course. Age doesn't count against developing brain cells. It is the will to learn! You see many people in middle life who sit placidly aside taking it for granted they know more than youth because they have had the experience. But in these progressive days, there's always something to learn that experience doesn't teach.

That turtle we met on Eleventh street was a tortoise after all our argument as to whether he was a turtle or a terrapin. If we had only thought, we'd have remembered it was a tortoise that raced the hare. We wonder if he was going out on a race when we met him. He originally raced with a cotton tail; we know no tortoise could win in a race with a Texas jack rabbit.

At last England's chancellor, Winston Churchill, has abolished the tax on tea; the very tax that brought about the tea party in Boston harbor. America, rebelled against it in the middle of the seventeenth century. England suffers more patiently than we do.

They build a little planked in detour to protect pedestrians where a new building is going up on a main business street. And those detours are the spots where human nature is demonstrated. They are just wide enough for people to pass single file but there are detour hogs just like there are road hogs.

Germany's Schack is no diplomat. He is said to have a "God given ungraciousness" of manner. We suppose that he believes it takes that to make an "iron man." At any rate, it takes a square head.

Somewhere we read in the American magazine "few of us have more judgment than we need on our own premises." Yet we consistently use our judgment to guide some other person's path.

We look through our kitchen window and see in a neighbor's back yard a wilderness of larkspur, purple, lavender, white and pink, and, blooming in its center, pink roses. It gives even dishwashing a thrill!

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, May 5.—"Hello, is this Babbie 2222?

"Hello, is this you Grace? I intended calling you yesterday, dearie, but I've been so rushed with important things, I just couldn't get to it. I got up terribly early yesterday. We had breakfast about 8:10 and then I decided to walk down town with Jack. It was raining. Not really raining, you know, but just a mean drizzle, but I decided we'd better drive.

"We stopped to look at some ties for Jack, and bought one. Then we saw a handkerchief sale and bought him a dozen beauties. I went to the office and thought at first I would wait and have luncheon with him, but I remembered I had said I'd have it with my sister, so I grabbed a cab and went over to her house.

"Then I got a shampoo. I have to have one every week, you know, to keep my hair fit.

"I was going to drop in after that, but I decided to walk home. I haven't been sleeping so well, and I thought perhaps I didn't get enough exercise. I walked, and, O my dear, I saw the cutest little table bell, of silver, just the kind you're looking for.

"No, I didn't get it for you, because I ran into Mary Louise and she wanted me to stop in and see the new gown she bought. She looks terrible in red, and she always gets red dresses. Isn't it awful?

"Then I strolled over home, taking my time because I knew Jack wouldn't be home until 7.

"I heard about a woman who darns exquisitely and I tried to find her by phoning some people who had her, and she worked for friends of theirs, but she seems to have disappeared.

"Then Jack came and we had some of that gorgeous home-made caramel cake for dinner, the kind Tessie makes so well. Then we sat and read until I got sleepy. I get sleepy earlier every night. No wonder I am putting on weight, and me a bride! I'm going to get one of those funny machines that enable you to take off weight where you want to take it off.

"I was down in a beauty parlor yesterday to see about a new wave. They say it's grand. And I saw one of those funny things and tried it. They don't treat you, they simply sell them, and I decided that I'd go in for one and get slim. Maybe they don't do anything for you, but I always think it pays a woman to do everything she hears about, to keep slim and pretty and graceful. Don't you?

"Hello, are you there, dear? Hello?

"Oh, yes, as I was saying—but dear, what have you been doing, where have you been? I haven't seen you for three days. Sick? Oh, were you? Well, come over some time. Bye bye."

That night at dinner: "Jack, Grace has been sick. I wonder what with? I forgot to ask her."

We Women

By BETTY BRAINERD

The Passing of the He-Man

I note with much satisfaction and no regret whatever that that male monstrosity, the He-Man, no longer looms large as an actuality or as an influence in contemporaneous life of literature. It would seem that he is fast being prepared for interment if, indeed, he has not already been embalmed and lowered into a grave which, as I assay the matter, was altogether too slow in the digging.

Ordinarily I am disposed to speak kindly of the dead or dying on the theory that nobody is so thoroughly evil in life as not to merit some measure of mercy and forgiveness when the spirit has gone hence.

But the He-Man was no ordinary mortal. He was an unmitigated nuisance; and if he gets what is coming to him I am sure no houseboat on the Styx will open its hospitable doors to him and bid him enter to fraternize and make merry with the shades of those who, while mundane, were at least occasionally kindly.

The He-Man was not such.

He was a fake, a brute and a swaggering braggart, and the tragedy is that many women feel for him—the poor saps!

The only redeeming thing about him was that, like the sheik before him, he was a vogue; and that, by the same token, is also unfortunate.

Women, it seems to me, do men an injustice—a grave injustice, no less—by setting them up as mere fashions, to use and discard with the seasons, according to our whims and tastes. But perhaps we have learned our lesson. Let there be no more Sheiks or He-Men or such. Let there be just men. And if ever it is necessary for us to have men who are "different" let nature, instead of Zane Grey, make them.

I could never understand why the He-Man should leave his wide open spaces, anyhow, and intrude upon the allegely sterile and vapid urban scene if his precious wide open spaces were everything they were represented as being.

But let us be fair to Zane Grey, who, though by no means without ponderable guilt, was not the only culprit. Douglas Fairbanks offended, too, and did much to give the He-Man his vogue. And there were many others.

I didn't like the He-Man from the start. I thought he was a poseur and it depressed and infuriated me additionally to learn that some men were referring to other men whom they held in high regard as "he-men." R-r-r-rrr! What a compliment! Suppose women had spoken affectionately of other women as "she-women," or even "he-women"?

How would men have liked that?

Mrs. C. Joline Gives Report On D. A. R. Meeting

In connection with the final meeting for the year of the Major Francis Grice D. A. R. chapter, Mrs. C. Joline's report of her impressions at the Thirty-eighth Continental congress of the D. A. R. is of special interest. The report as given follows:

The Thirty-eighth Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution met at Washington, Monday, April 15, with about 6,000 in attendance.

Dogwood blossoms, both white and pink are abundant this time of year and the cherry blossoms vied with tulips in their beauty to welcome the D. A. R..

During Mrs. Brosseau's administration, $6,250,000 was handled for the society; it has no outstanding debts and the assets amount to more than $5,000,000, in buildings and property. There are 2,335 chapters with a membership of more than 170,000. A total of 2,316 passed away during the past year. There are 350 boys and girls using the student loan fund at a cost of $132,456.67. The remaining debt on the administration building, $45,000, has been paid.

The placing of twelve "Madonnas of the Trail" in honor of pioneer mothers in each state through which the National Old Trails highway passes from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, is a work of the D. A. R. The trail starts in Maryland, passes through West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona and California. The latest marker to be placed was at Bethesday, Md., April 19. They are alike and stand 18 feet high.

The waterworks at Tilloloy, France, given by the D. A. R. as a war memorial, have been repaired. Two Philippine girls have been placed in American colleges and pensions have been given to dependent Spanish war nurses set out by the D. A. R. These pensions are taken care of by the interest from Liberty Loan bonds, of which they own $100,000. Dependent real daughters of the American revolution are also pensioned.

Constitution hall is nearing completion and was dedicated April 19, a beautiful building that connects with the administration building; this is a large auditorium with a seating capacity of about 4,500.

Much attention is being paid by the D. A. R. to reforesting Maryland claims, the first D. A. R. forest at Fort Frederick, Md., to which a pilgrimage was made April 27, and appropriate dedicatory service held for planting trees this year. Massachusetts has 1,070 acres, at a cost of $5,000. Texas is the third state to establish a forest and recreation park. Texas D. A. R. has 136 acres in Jasper county, one-half mile of which fronts on the highway between Dallas and Nacogdoches. The land is rolling and part of it has long leaf pine trees 16 to 18 feet high.

'How to Train Husbands' Is Book World Needs Badly, Sage Writes

"The Husband Pattern of a Man Is Settled During the First Year of Marriage, and Ever After He Treats His Wife as She Has Taught Him During that Time."

You are going to be married, daughter, and your happiness and wellbeing for the next 30 or 50 years depends upon how you train your husband. It is a great pity that there isn't a husband book that is a manual for brides to follow on how to bring up a husband as there is a baby book that is the law and gospel to young mothers on how to rear their children. For in a way, young husbands and young babies are much alike. They both come into a world of which they know nothing and in which they have had no experience and they do not know what to expect or what is expected of them, and when they are new they are soft and yielding and easy to mold. They are both even as dough in the hands of the wife or mother to whom they look for sustenance and material comfort, but they soon harden into form and in six months they can both be irretrievably spoiled and turned into grinding tyrants.

Behaviorists tell us that the life pattern of a child is fixed in the first year or two of its existence. Certainly the husband pattern of a man is settled during the first year of marriage and ever afterward he treats his wife as she has taught him during that time to treat her and observes the customs, manners and habits that she has impressed upon his plastic bridegroom soul.

Most husbands' faults are the result of sheer ignorance. Men don't marry women deliberately to make them unhappy, and when they are selfish and inconsiderate and overbearing and ill-mannered and trample roughshod over their wives' feelings, it is not because they are malevolent, but simply because they have not been taught any better.

So, daughter, if you want to be happy though married start on your wedding day to bring your husband up in the way he should go and, when you celebrate your golden wedding he will not have departed therefrom.

Begin while he is still in a melting mood during the honeymoon by settling the allowance question and getting your fair share of the family income for running the house and for your own personal behoof and benefit. That will save 365 breakfast-table fights a year and do more than any other one thing to keep him from looking upon you as a hold-up artist and to prevent you from regretting that you ever swapped off a good-pay job for a wedding ring.

Few men count the cost of a family in dollars and cents before marriage. They have a vague and romantic idea that every woman is a sort of miracle worker who can run a house and set a good table on air, and they get the shock of their lives when they find out that matrimony is mostly one darn bill after another.

Brides sense this, and wishing to wear their halo as long as possible and hating to discuss such a sorbid thing as finances with a man who is still a lover, they let the money question go by, with the disastrous result that they have fixed in their husbands' minds the idea that they are nothing but upper servants who don't even have to be paid wages and who are expected to work for such board and clothes as their lords and masters see fit to give them. They could just as easily have established their status as partners with their husbands if they had insisted on that when they were first married.

Next, teach your husband to treat you with respect. A man puts the woman he asks to be his wife on a pedestal, and if she has a grain of sense in her head she never climbs down off it. She stays there and keeps him burning incense before her as long as she lives.

Every husband treats his wife exactly as she demands to be treated. If she insists on being treated as a lady, even though she is his wife, he will show her courtesy and speak to her politely. But if she will stand being cursed and sworn at and abused, many a man will vent upon his wife the ill-temper and rudeness he dare not show anybody big and strong enough to thrash him. And the formula for securing a husband who will treat you with deference and respect is just the same as that for securing deferential and respectful children. Never let them start talking back to you.

Teach your husband to respect your individuality and to know that you have as much right to personal freedom as he has. There are a lot of women who might just as well be locked up in a harem for all the freedom they have. They are nothing but rubber stamps of their husbands and have to echo husband's opinions and wear the kind of clothes husband picks out for them and can't even cut their hair or powder their noses or do a single thing on their own initiative. They have to have husband's O. K. on everything first.

It is all because they made the wrong beginning by asking their husbands what they thought they thought when they were brides and their husbands got into the way of bossing them, and that is a habit that can never be broken. Therefore don't cultivate an arrogant spirit in your bridegroom. Don't begin by asking husband's permission to do a thing about which you know a lot more than he does and of which you are a better judge. Don't consult him about everything.

Use your own mind. Do your own thinking. All that concerns him is the results. He will have a lot more respect for you if you are a self-starting human being than he will if you are a dummy for which he has to supply the motive power and the brains.

Be good to your husband, but don't pamper him too much. Be unselfish toward him, but don't make all of the sacrifices. I have known wives who stayed at home and never went anywhere or had any pleasure until their husbands got the idea that it was a crime for them to go out anywhere farther away than the market and that they got all the kick out of life they wanted in cooking and sewing and scrubbing. And I have known women who did without pretty clothes and went shabby until their husbands thought they preferred to be dowdy.

Therefore, daughter, never let your husband sidetrack you. Begin by stepping out with him and keep it up. Dress just as well as you can possibly afford. Remind him that being married hasn't drawn your sweet tooth and that you like to have a box of candy brought you, now and then and that a vacuum cleaner as a birthday present doesn't thrill you as much as a bunch of violets would.

You can even teach your husband to say "thank-y" and to pay you compliments and to be affectionate if you will start training him when you first get him, while he is young and impressionable. Try it, daughter.

NEW DIVORCE MECCA OPENS

Soviet Law, or Lack of Law Quite Convenient

MOSCOW, May 5. (US)—Traveling 15,000 miles for a soviet bargain-counter divorce, a Chilean diplomat has tooted the first horn in what may be a big world parade to the red capital of those countless husbands and wives who want to rid themselves of their mates quickly and painlessly.

On the record books of "Zaks," the bureau of vital statistics, there is inscribed the name of Caesar Alvarez de la Rivera, who said he was Chilean consul general in Peru. He spent 18 minutes of the first day of his visit to Moscow recently getting a divorce. It cost him 15 kopeks (8 cents). For propriety's sake he waited until the next day, taking a look about the fascinating city, and then spent another 18 minutes getting married to the sister of his divorced wife. His bride is the mother of his six-year-old child, Marta Amelia, who was born in Barcelona. Not only that, but in another few minutes he had legally adopted the child as his own.

There were no questions asked. He had no absurd legal conventions to comply with. The soviets were immensely honored at being able to assist him in straightening out his domestic troubles. And the consul general was immensely pleased at having found one spot on the globe where laws didn't interfere with the natural desires of the human heart. He said the long trip to and fro from his native Chile was worth the money and the time.

Incidentally, it may be noted, that a soviet divorce is recognized by the United States and Great Britain. There is no publicity attached to such a divorce, because in Russia domestic affairs are not news—only foreign correspondents may find out about it and write it.

Luncheon and Program Finish Year's Work for D. A. R. Chapter

A program on colonial life featured the luncheon of the Major Francis Grice chapter, D. A. R. at the Forum clubhouse Saturday at noon. A dining room beautiful with an abundance of roses and the table decorated with a row of baskets of pink roses, the handles topped with pink tulle bows and honeysuckle trailing between combined with the American flags made a lovely setting for the interesting meeting.

During the luncheon, the officers reported in order. The recording secretary, Mrs. Borland, made the first report; Mrs. Sanford, corresponding secretary, stated that two new volumes of lineage books had been placed in the library; Mrs. Louis Gould made the treasurer's report and the registrar, Mrs. J. Mrs. Joline said that in the annual memorial service, 2,316 members were named and she told also of her visit to the unknown soldier's grave and to Lee's home.

Mrs. S. H. Burnside's daughter, Mrs. Margaret Lowry, lives in Washington and goes as a delegate from Francis Grice chapter and her letter about the meeting was read by Mrs. Whitney.

Mrs. Duff made a most interesting report; she stated there are in the United States, 2,325 chapters; that there has passed through the hands of the treasurer, $6,250,000, and the organization does not owe a cent. She stated that 350 girls and boys have benefited by scholarships and over $100,000 has been used in the scholarship fund.

Mrs. Carrie Wilcox was chairman of hostesses for the afternoon and hostesses with her were Mesdames D. K. Wilson, N. H. Martin, Perry Wilson, Claude Woods, Clark Wilcox, Dudley Golding and M. M. Garrett.

Mrs. S. H. Burnsides was leader of the program and introduced the numbers, featuring colonial days, as follows:

Mrs. D. G. Whitney, "Talk on Colonial Food." Mrs. Whitney spoke of the original cooking and eating utensils used, of the chief articles of diet in colonial times; told of mugs being brought from Holland and how the salt cellar was the feature of each table. As a mark of honor it was always next to a guest.

Mrs. Eleanor Pace was next with "Inns and Taverns of Colonial Times." Mrs. Pace took the chapter on a trip in old colonial days; told of the origins of names of the old inns and gave some interesting character sketches.

The program was closed with group singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" and "God Be With You," with Mrs. Luke McCrory at the piano and Mrs. D. G. Whitney leading.

Covers were laid for Mesdames Ben C. Ackerman, J. E. H. Railey, E. B. Bailey, T. M. Granberry, Eleanor Pace, Perry Wilson, J. E. Hall, G. Taylor Buchanan, J. L. Jackson, S. Y. Ferguson, Carey J. Daily Editorial

THE relaxation of immigration laws must wait upon a fuller absorption of present alien groups into our body politic.

Nations cannot regardlessly open veins and hearths to all-comers without detriment to character and conscience.

Races are only safely digested into each other by process of time and selection.

The too sudden dilution of national strains confuses inherent purpose, mongrelizes traits, and aborts fundamental trends.

All peoples are benefited by blood transfusion. History testifies to that; just as science will verify the value of certain alloys in elemental metals.

But unregulated transfusion and incautious blending of ores are fraught with dubiety.

These United States have not yet socialized millions of folk who remain in America, not because they admire our institutions of their homelands—they are here chiefly because they can make more and take more, live better and enjoy advantages to which they neither contribute by deed nor thought.

Numbers of them do not even bother to learn English. Others cannot read or write the language in which our laws are sealed and the constitution and declaration of independence are inscribed.

THEIR children are born and developed against backgrounds that reflect nothing of patriotism or republican understanding.

They prefer to huddle in assimilation—resisting neighborhoods. Their views are formed and their information is secured from a Trojan-Horse press, filled with foreign propaganda and vaccines against democratic infection.

They reject the invitations of schools and community centers to qualify for citizenship, and thereby deny the country a fair opportunity to interpret its codes and goals.

Consequently, their theories of life and principles of conduct are often at odds with our own and frequently conflict with civic progress.

Rome warns us to keep a close watch on the ports of entry. She had a hundred and twenty so called emperors—more than one a year—within a single century.

The greatest power of antiquity began to demoralize and speed to ruin, when racial incoherence dominated the empire, and the ballot passed to men whose naturalization was anempty gesture.

She crowded the land with unfit servants of destiny and they destroyed her. Had she profited by the courses of earlier emperors, the sons of Caesar might still be in command in Italy.

In the days of Claudius, a subject, originally of Asia Minor, "sent on a deputation by his compatriots, could not discuss his mission in Latin." Claudius took away his privileges, saying, "He is no Roman who is ignorant of the language of Rome."

Tojan decreed that every candidate for office was bound to have a third of his fortune invested in Italian land, "in order," writes Pliny the Younger, "that those who sought the public dignity should regard Rome, not as an inn to put up at in travel, but as their home."

It's well to glance back occasionally as we move forward. Some of the mile-posts to safe routes lie behind us.

Today in Texas History

MAY 5

1836—Citizens of New Orleans had sent food and supplies to Beaumont where hundreds of refugees in the "Run Away Scrape" had stopped hearing of the victory of San Jacinto.

1837—Congress of Texas assembled in Houston heard an address by President Houston, enumerating the problems to be met.

1839—A ball given by the Washington Light guards of Houston was attended by distinguished visitors to the Democratic convention then in session.

1910—R. V. Davidson was in Navasota in the interest of his campaign for governor.

1917—Snow fell at Abilene.

Looking at Prosperity From a New Angle

THE WAY a thing looks to you depends largely on the angle from which you look at it.

If we could get a different viewpoint on certain familiar things we would hardly recognize them.

For instance: the Welfare council of New York City, in a report just issued, points out that the number of jobless "down-and-outers" given free shelter by the municipal loadging house has been rising steadily during the last few years of our "prosperity," and is now higher than at any time since the hard winter of 1915-16.

In 1920, for example, the average daily registration at the lodging house was 69. In 1921 it rose to 251, by 1927 it had gone up to 375, last year it stood at 434, and during the first three months of this year it has been 672.

All of which suggests that this present era of mass production, stock exchange flurries and high profits may look somewhat different if viewed from the angle of New York's free lodging house.

The report does not try to fix a reason for the great increase in the number of applicants for free lodgings. It points out that there are a good many possible explanations. The number of cheap commercial lodging houses may have decreased, the increase in automobiles may have made it easier for job seekers to come to New York, and social agencies may send more applicants to the municipal institution than formerly. But it adds:

"There remains the economic theory that fewer and fewer men are required in manufacturing, owing to the great increase in industrial efficiency, and more and more men become destitute in the process of readjustment before they can be absorbed into other occupations."

To those of us who have jobs, comfortable homes and money in the bank the present era looks very fine. We can buy more things than we ever before dreamed of possessing, and the taste of prosperity is so all-pervading that we feel rich even if we are not. We tell ourselves that this is a great age in which to live—and, from our angle, it undoubtedly is.

But how about the men who people New York's free lodging houses—672 of them every night this year? Mass production and prosperity have meant only misery and hardship to them. From their point of view the year 1929 must look terribly out of joint.

And, from their point of view, it is. Never think that our new industrial era hasn't brought some unpleasant problems along with it. Whenever you begin to feel too optimistic about it, remember that it would look considerably different if viewed with the eyes of the man whose job it has destroyed.

Choking Off Discussion

IT IS DIFFICULT to agree with the action of the University of Pittsburgh authorities in preventing the student Liberal club from holding a meeting to discuss the Mooney-Billings case.

Mooney and Billings are the central figures in one of the most unusual criminal cases in American legal history. They have been in prison for 13 years and each year it becomes more and more apparent that they are being kept there unjustly. To date, however, they have not been able to gain their release.

Now if this is not a proper subject for discussion by college men, what, in the name of sanity, is? To assemble a group of young men for the purpose of getting a complete education and then forbid them to talk about one of the leading issues of the day is a policy that the university authorities may find rather hard to defend.

Service in Public Office

THE UNIVERSITY of Southern California this summer will hold a special course in public service for the benefit of city, state and county public officials.

This course will undertake to show the duties, powers and responsibilities of public officials, and is designed to put more efficiency into the work rendered by the holders of public offices.

It's a step in the right direction, undoubtedly. Heaven knows there is hardly a municipal, county of state government in the country that couldn't stand more efficiency and snap. But, unfortunately, the road is a long one. So long as the majority of politicians look on public office as an opportunity for personal gain or personal aggrandizement, instead of an opportunity for public service, efficiency in government will continue to be a rare quality.

Padded Payrolls at Sea

ONE REASON why the United States government's venture in the merchant shipping world was conducted at a financial loss may possibly be seen in an announcement recently made by the business men who took over the Leviathan and 10 other ships, that 300 men would be lopped from the payroll forthwith.

William L. Bunker, vice president of the new line, said that at least 100 men could be cut from the crew of the Leviathan without in any way impairing the efficiency of that vessel. Cuts in other crews, he added, would be made in proportion.

Anyone who has ever had experience with municipal governments is aware that padded payrolls are a common feature of government business. If such a phenomenon existed on the government's merchant ships, it is small wonder that they operated at a loss.

"The Republican party, that rose with Lincoln and fell with Grant, that was auctioned off by Mark Hanna and given away by Roosevelt, has been operated as a private enterprise for several decades. The Democratic party of Jefferson and Jackson fell to pieces in the Civil war; and neither the tar public plunder nor the glue of noble words has ever been strong enough to stick Humpty Dumpty firmly together again."—Donald R. Richberg, counsel of the National Conference on the Valuation of Railroads.

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, May 5.—Most New Yorkers are more ignorant of their city than most of the visitors, I think. The average citizen here knows very well only two places—one where he makes his living and one where he hangs his hat.

But like the visitor he also may be familiar with brilliant Broadway, Fifth avenue, the skyscrapers of the financial district, the public library, Central park and Coney island—but these things do not comprise New York. Beyond Manhattan, yet a corporate part of the city, is lonely Throggs Neck, looking out upon raging waters. People live silently there, as though in a wilderness far removed from any city. There is the homely peacefulness of College Point, miles removed in actuality and atmosphere from the bustling life of the city. Staten Island remains rural in spirit, well off the beaten tracks; Williamsburg, Brownsville and West Farms, little towns all an integral part of the big scene.

The city, in fact, is compounded of almost every sort of civilized human life to be imagined. That is why, I think, that those who thoughtlessly denounce it or ridicule it are imitating the squirrel looking up and poo-hooing the mountain.

Amusing indeed is the movement on foot sponsored by the League for Sensible Clothing, to abolish headgear in Manhattan as far as the male citizens are concerned.

Physicians, dematologists and cultists have amassed evidence to show the deleterious effects of wearing a hat. But I fear the hat will stay. Men are not guided in dress by dictates in sense, any more than are women—else why do they wear stiff collars and shirts with evening dress?

But it is a reminder of how foolish a man looks in Manhattan without a hat. He is a rarity, indeed.

The drive of the "Sensible Clothing" league also recalls that every year Paris announces new styles, usually issuing the "dictum" that skirts must be lower. But from my impartial observation on Park avenue, Fifth avenue and Broadway, and even Second avenue, for that matter, the skirts continue on the upward movement and the ladies seem to pay no attention to Paris except for amusement.

In recent years there has been adopted a regular custom by stars and producers of the stage and screen. It is the "reception," "tea," "dance" or party—the latter, perhaps, is the most accurate designation—for stage and screen critics of the daily newspapers. One day last week at least four of these parties were given, quite a field day for the critics.

The purpose, ostensibly, is to have the critics meet the stars. The purpose, actually, is to appease and flatter them and get them on the "right" side.

To the credit of the critics, however, let it be said that all these parties do to most of them is to appease their palates and to amuse, rather than to flatter, their egos.

They tell of the strange tragedy of Charles Ruggles, the actor. To know the man is to know how genuine is his chagrin.

It seems he appeared in the role of a juvenile comedian in a number of plays, notably "Queen High" and "Battling Butler." Lately he has played the part of elderly father in "Rainbow" and again in "Spring Is Here." Many on Broadway were amazed at the transformation and inquired if the Charles Ruggles in "Spring Is Here" were not the father of the juvenile Charles Ruggles in "Rainbow."

What makes Ruggles mad is that Broadway is too prone to pigeonhole its favorites. It consigned Charles Ruggles to a one-role portrayal, that of a juvenile comedian, and it becomes stupefied—is a better word—when an actor essays an unfamiliar role. To an actor, the play's the thing. To Broadway, it seems the actor's the thing.

Eighth avenue at last is nearing completion, which is to say that its long period of upheaval, due to the construction below of a new subway, has left it in what Ring Lardner called a mountainous state, is passing.

With its completion, however, it will be about the widest thoroughfare in the city and, according to the wise men of Gotham, more important in time than Broadway. Land values are quietly going up about Eighth avenue and within another year it may be expected that the long deserted and maligned street will be experiencing a great boon.

Popularity of liver in Virginia has caused that meat to supplant the Old Dominion's famous hams.

Mr. Twitchell on the Press and the Crime Wave

"President Hoover is doing a smart thing when he calls on the American newspaper publishers and editors to help suppress crime," declared Elmer Twitchell today. "The newspaper publishers have the solution in the hollow of their hands. If they would refuse to run any notices about crime unless the criminals took out paid advertisements the crime wave would be knocked in the head."

PHILLIPS

◆ ◆ ◆

Mr. Twitchell seemed quite serious. "As a matter of fact," he continued, "it would be a good thing if the publishers refused to print any free notices about crimes anyway. If the crooks want to get space in the newspapers let them pay for it!

◆ ◆ ◆

"It's the glamour thrown about lawlessness by many newspapers, particularly the tabloids, that's responsible for much of the shooting now going on in this country. A lot of people are going in for crime just to get their pictures on the front page.

◆ ◆ ◆

"Walk into a newspaper office and announce that you are 72 years old, never broke a law in your life and would like a little mention of the fact on Page One and you will be handed over to the loving care of the janitor while the editor phones for a doctor. Walk in and announce that you have just held up a bank and killed two tellers and you will get all the space originally reserved for Lindbergh.

◆ ◆ ◆

"One of the troubles today is that you can't get any publicity through a minor offense. In the old days the local paper would publish a photograph of a man and his entire family if he tapped a gas main, stole a horse, got off a trolley without paying his fare, threw a brick through a window or cheated the landlord out of a month's rent. Today that's piker stuff in any editorial room. The only way to get a big first-page spread is to go in for arson, robbery and murder.

◆ ◆ ◆

"The publishers should confer with their business managers and editors at once and let the word go out that there will be no more free notices even for major crimes.

◆ ◆ ◆

"Yes, sir, it's up to the press to help Hoover. If a child-bride wants to get before the public the news that she has murdered her mate, as the headlines say, let her take out a full page ad. If a couple of nuts want the public to know they have held up an armored truck and shot the guards, make them take out a page advertisement.

◆ ◆ ◆

"If I was an editor I would go even further," concluded Mr. Twitchell. "I would not pay any attention to any criminal unless he took out a year's contract at the highest advertising rate."

Revenge

The collier T. A. D. Jones, named after and owned by "Tad" Jones, former Yale football coach, was shelled by the coast guard recently for no apparent reason. There is, of course, just the bare possibility that the guardsmen had wagered on some of these Yale teams of the past few years.

Perhaps Marion Talley will buy a farm where the soil is rich enough to raise two crops of debentures every year.

Mr. John D. Rockefeller Jr., his own car disabled, tried in vain to get a ride as a hitch-hiker the other day. Probably the drivers of the cars were willing to give him a lift but were restrained by their timid wives, who said, "Don't take a chance, Willie; I don't like his looks."

Do you remember when "trousers for women" were thought to be a joke.

PEOPLE'S GAS, LIGHT AND COKE COMPANY

5-Year Record

The Insull interests control the People's Gas, Light and Coke company which supplies Chicago with gas under a perpetual charter and without competition. The corporation acquired the Chicago By-Products Coke company in 1928, increasing the daily capacity of owned plants to 160,000,000 cubic feet of gas a day. An additional 170,000,000 cubic feet a day is available under contracts. The non-public utility activities of the company are in the hands of subsidiaries of which there are eight.

The company has 2,681 miles of gas mains and 905,273 meters. Gas storage capacity totals 108,000,000 cubic feet. Coal properties are owned by subsidiaries in Kentucky and West Virginia which furnish 90 per cent of the parent company requirements. The concern has control of a railroad which serves its plants and a 20-story office building in Chicago.

Net income in 1928 amounted to $6,371,397. This compares with $5,678,363 in 1927 and $5,240,325 in 1926. The company's earning power reestablished in 1921 after some bad periods and, with the exception of one year, gains have been continuous since. Funded debt totals $75,056,005, of which $13,500,000 are guaranteed bonds of subsidiaries. Capital stock outstanding consists of $56,479,700 in common shares of $100 par each.

The present dividend rate is 8 per cent per annum which rate has been maintained since 1925. As of Dec. 31, 1928, total current assets were $16,432,383. Total current liabilities amounted to $9,422,966 and net working capital was $7,009,907. Book value applicable to the outstanding capital stock amounted to $83,519,142 or $146.88 a share.

Hamlin Men Inspect Olney School Building

Special to The Record News.

OLNEY, Texas, May 5.—The superintendent of schools, the principal and several school trustees from Hamlin were in Olney Sunday to inspect the high school building with a view to copying it for their town. The visitors were accompanied by a Wichita Falls architect and Supt. B. C. Schulkey conducted them on a tour of the building. The men stated that they had visited a number of schools all over West Texas but were more impressed with the Olney school building than any other as suiting their needs and desires.

Vitamins Are Abundant

In spite of all of the recent publicity about vitamins, very little is actually known about what they are or how they produce changes in the body. Such small quantities of the actual substances containing vitamins are required and the effect of their absence is so pronounced that they may be said to exert as action as powerful as some of the human ductless glands.

Many years ago before vitamins were discovered, certain German "Nature Cure" doctors stated that from their observations upon patients, certain vital elements were present in fresh raw foods which were not present in cooked and prepared foods. These statements were made even without the complicated laboratory tests available to scientists today. The first conjecture of vitamins as defined substances came from the observation that the oriental disease, beri-beri, resulted from the use of polished rice, and could be prevented by the use of rice bran, and that scurvy could be prevented by the use of lime juice.

The knowledge of vitamins is by no means an exact science, even yet. The terminology is continually undergoing changes. At present, vitamins are classed by most authorities about as follows:

Fat Soluble Vitamin A

Furnishes resistance to tuberculosis, rickets and deficiency diseases. Promotes growth, prevents keratomalacia and xerophthalmia (inflammatory diseases of the conjunctiva of the eyes).

This vitamin is destroyed by rancidity and excessive cooking. Is present in: Codliver oil, egg yolk, cream, whole milk, carrots, yellow corn, beef fat, liver, butter, yellow corn oil, olive oil, spinach, alfalfa, yellow turnips, lettuce and probably all green leaves.

Water Soluble Vitamin B

Prevents beri-beri, and is antineuritic.

Is destroyed by excessive salt or soda. Is present in: Yeast, germ of wheat, leaves and growing parts of vegetables, cabbages, spinach, carrots, nuts, and glandular meats.

Water Soluble Vitamin C

Prevents scurvy and certain subcutaneous hemorrhages.

Destroyed by heat (except when in an acid medium), drying or freezing. Is present in: Oranges, lemons, grapefruit, tomatoes, sprouting grains or legumes, green leaves, celery, lettuce, spinach, cabbage, etc.

Fat Soluble Vitamin D

Prevents rickets, stabilizes the use of phosphorous and calcium, thence very useful in most bone diseases, such as: Pigeon breast, bowlegs, and swollen joints.

Is found in all yellow or green foods, especially those listed under vitamin A, which have been acted upon by sunlight or the ultra-violet ray. An excess of the ray may, however, destroy the vitamin. The same effect of this vitamin is also produced if after these foods are eaten, the skin of the body is then exposed to sunlight or ultra-violet.

Fat Soluble Vitamin E

Its absence causes sterility, or inability to produce offspring. Its presence assists in a larger milk supply. The evidence of this vitamin is probable, but not conclusive. Is found in the oils from all vegetable foods, wheat germ, nuts and possibly beef fat.

You will see from reading these lists that there is an abundance of vitamins included in my daily menus published every Friday. If you follow these menus, you need not worry about vitamin deficiencies.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(Abscessed Tooth)

Question—Mrs. A. M. A. writes: "My dentist discovered from an X-ray of my teeth that one of my gold-crowned ones was abscessed. This tooth has never given me any trouble, but my dentist wants me to have it out and have some bridgework done. I would appreciate your advice as to whether or not a condition of this kind can be cleared up with a proper diet."

Answer—If the gold-crowned tooth upon which the abscess has developed is dead, the best policy would be to have the tooth removed, but if the nerve is still alive, and the abscess is on the side of the tooth, it is sometimes possible to have the abscess drained by a puncture and irrigation. After this, a fasting and dieting regime could be used to advantage. Get the opinion of several dentists if this seems advisable.

(Spells During Night)

Question—R. J. L. asks: "What, in your opinion, could be the matter with a young man having some kind of spells at night, when he chews his tongue and seems to be having sort of convulsions during his sleep. He has them every few months. After having had one, he wakes up in the morning with a headache, and vomits. Twelve doctors have examined him—one said bad tonsils, and he had them removed; another said trench mouth, and he had treatments until his mouth was pronounced all right. Otherwise, all these doctors claimed his general health couldn't be better. Still, they couldn't find the cause of these spells, and they continue at intervals. Will it ever be safe for him to marry?"

Answer—Judging from the symptoms described in your letter, the young man is probably suffering from nocturnal epilepsy. This can usually be corrected by using a fasting and dieting regime, instructions for which I will be glad to send you. If the young man is cured this way, I feel sure that he will be quite safe in marrying.

CHICK GALERIA ROUTED EARLY

Galloways Open Two-Day Stand Today at Waco

Special to The Record News

BEAUMONT, Texas, May 5.—Young Chick Galeria spotted the Exporters to a lead which they never relinquished and the locals took their first series of the season this afternoon by handing the Spuds a 7-to-5 defeat in a well played game.

Galeria was nicked for four hits and as many runs before Jim Galloway replaced him in favor of big Ed Taber. The latter hurled great ball until the Spuds turned on Denny Burns and drew within striking distance, then wavered sufficiently to let the Exporters score the two runs which gave them victory.

Akers, first up, started the fireworks against Galeria by singling to right to open the game. Philbin drove a hit past Swenson and Lamb trying to sacrifice, laid down such a perfect bunt that it went for a single, loading the bases. Galeria then fanned Easterling on four pitched balls and matters looked even darker for the 3,500 fans when Huber lined to Sullivan but the outfielder dropped the ball and Akers came home. With the bases still loaded Hanson cleaned the bags with a triple, the ball taking a lucky hop over Sullivan's head and rolling to the fence. Taber here, took the hill and fanned Petrie, after which Robertson skied out to Sullivan.

Akers Hits Home Run

Akers again became troublesome in the second when he lifted a low pitch over the left-field fence for four bases. It was the only score of the inning, however, and the only one the Exporters were to get in the next four innings.

The Spuds didn't score until the third when Sullivan crossed up the opposition by doubling down the left-field foul line. Crouch walked and then Taber came through with a single to center, the ball dropping between Petrie and Akers after it appeared certain it would be caught. This filled the bases. Benton sent a sacrifice fly to center and Petrie turned it into a double play by throwing Crouch out at third after the catch, Sullivan scoring. Eldred then flew out to Lamb.

In the fifth Sullivan walked and went to second on Taber's single to center after Crouch had skied out to Petrie. Benton walked to fill the bases and Eldred nearly took Burns' head off with a hard smash through the box, Sullivan and Taber scoring. Fitzgerald ended it by fouling out to Robertson.

Exporters Increase Lead

The Exporters increased their lead to three in the sixth on Easterling's scratch hit to third, Huber's sacrifice and Petrie's single to left after Hanson had gone out, but the Spuds came right back in the seventh and threatened again by driving around two runs.

This inning started with the first two men going out, Sullivan and Crouch being easy victims. But Taber walked and loped home on Benton's triple to left, the ball taking a hop over Easterling's head. Then Eldred clouted a double into left and Benton scored. Fitzgerald drew a pass but Bennett was thrown out at first by Philbin.

The final Beaumont run came in the seventh through singles by Akers and Easterling mixed with a walk to Lamb. In the eighth with one away Swenson singled to center and went to second on Petrie's errors but Sullivan and Crouch retired on infield outs.

Tonight the Spuds left for Waco for a two-day stand.

Sharkey Draws $2,500,000 In Five Years of Boxing

BOSTON, May 5. (UP)—Jack Sharkey, Boston heavyweight, has attracted more than $2,500,000 in gross gate receipts during his five years as a professional fighter, according to figures published today by his manager, Johnny Buckley.

These figures, Buckley claims, constitute a worlds record for any fighter in the first five years of his career.

Sharkey's record fight was that with Jack Dempsey in which the gate totaled over a million.

The Great Man Is Himself

Babe Ruth, baseball's famous bridegroom, clouted another home run for the wife yesterday at Chicago. His second circuit smash in two days and fourth for the season and a pair of singles helped the Yanks trim the White Sox.

The great Bambino was slow in starting hitting but now apparently is himself again.

Hagen Defends British Crown

22 Americans in Tourney Starting Today

By ARCH RODGERS

MUIRFIELD, Scotland, May 5. (UP)—Walter Hagen, British open champion, will begin the defense of his title against a field of 242 professional and amateur golfers in the first qualifying round of the 1929 tournament tomorrow.

Included in the field are 15 holders of amateur and professional championships, ranging from Belgian to Italian open champions, and 10 former British open titleholders.

Twenty-two American golfers are among the entrants. Of Uncle Sam's representatives Hagen, Horton Smith, young Joplin, Mo., professional, Gene Sarazen, and George von Elm, the Californian amateur, are considered the leading contenders.

Odds of 8 to 1 are being laid against Hagen and Smith, while 10 to 1 is the price quoted against the others. Even money is offered that no American-born player wins.

Stars for the British Open

The struggle for the British open golf championship at Muirfield, this week, should be one of the classics of golf.

The British, naturally, are all steamed up over their victory in the Ryder cup matches, and if they can't win they are hoping that one of the native-born stars—Mac Smith, Tommy Armour, Bobby Cruickshank or Jim Barnes—will check the march of the American homebreds.

The 10 Ryder cup Americans will be further strengthened by the presence of Bill Mehlhorn and George Von Elm, two star golfers, giving them an even dozen to face the field.

This 72-hole medal play test at Muirfield is an entirely different matter from the match play test at Moortown. In the first Ryder cup matches in England the British won by 11½ to 1½, but they lost the British open. Last year Compston crushed Hagen by a killing margin at match play, but Hagen won the open a week later. I believe the American homebreds have at least an even chance at Muirfield, even with Mac Smith, Armour and others to be considered with Compston, Duncan, Mitchell, Cotton, etc.

The 12 men they can throw into the field are all capable of setting a fast pace, and at least two or three of them should come through with low scores for the open test.

Hagen is always a factor. Farrell and Sarazen haven't been playing up to their best, but they are about due. Horton Smith is almost sure to do well if he can slip through his first qualifying experience on the other side. And if Leo Diegel can have part of his miraculous timing and touch from a week ago he will be close around the front. And there is Bill Mehlhorn to consider, after the best winter campaign the Wild One has ever known. Mehlhorn is keener to win the championship than he ever was before and he is good enough to get there if he can duck one of his bad rounds.

Who Will Win?

If I had to pick one golfer with the best individual chance it would be Mac Smith.

This may sound a trifle insane when you figure that Mac Smith is getting on and that after 20 years' trying he has never won a British or a U. S. open. But he is still a great golfer, one of the greatest of all time, and he is at home on Scotland turf. He was still good enough to win the $10,000 Los Angeles open this winter, for the second time in succession, and he was hitting the ball better than ever when he went across several weeks ago.

Mac Smith, now around 40, is one of the soundest of all swingers, one of the easiest, one of the steadiest in golf. He is almost certain to be close to the front, even if he doesn't win, and the odds against this man winning should be 6 or 7 to 1.

The Smiths will be an interesting feature of this tournament, for Horton Smith, just half of Mac Smith's age, will carry more good wishes from this side than any other entry.

There is a general belief among veteran golfers that Horton Smith will need more experience on the other side to have a chance, and this may be true. But Horton Smith has a fine, sound golf swing, and he also has a winning temperament, and any one who carries these clubs in his bag always has a good chance.

The high spots this next competition are about as follows in the Muirfield sector:

1. Can Hagen win his fourth British open?
2. What showing can Horton Smith make in his first British attempt?
3. Will Mac Smith win a big title at last, after 20 years?
4. Where will Wild Bill Mehlhorn finish on his "go it alone?"
5. Have the British recovered enough confidence to keep their cup at home?

DAILY DOPE

A FRIEND of mine who is an ardent boxing devotee grew enthusiastic the other day over the hard punching of a local boy named Henry Adams. It seems that young Henry has knocked out several boys recently, one of whom was the veteran Kid Murdock. My friend describes Henry as a knockout, and ready to meet Tommy Scott and boys of like caliber.

It seems I recall glaring at Henry Adams in the ring one night several weeks ago. In fact, it was Henry. But my glimpse of him was too brief to give an insight into whatever fighting ability he has. The reason was that Henry's opponent went away from there in the second round, I believe it was. Or maybe it was the first. Anyhow, our youthful Mr. Adams did all he was called upon to do that night, he won by a speedy knockout.

SINCE THAT occasion my attention has been distracted from boxing by baseball, much to my regret. I have missed seeing Henry Adams and his knockout punch. I have missed the rapid improvement as a boxer attributed to Henry Adams. But perhaps I shall have opportunity to see him again soon. I hope so. His admirers have said so many kind words about him that my curiosity is aroused. Can he be all that is said of him?

Now I have no doubt that Adams is a hard-hitting youngster. He may have a promising ring future. But the road ahead of him is long and rocky. He has so much to learn. I doubt if Henry Adams knows how and where to hit an adversary. That must be learned by experience and training. Does he know vulnerable parts of the anatomy to hit—the point of the jaw, under the heart, in the solar plexus, the kidneys? Does he know how to hold his hands, to give him the greatest power in his punches to eliminate risk of hurting or breaking his maulies?

ALEX ROSS can give Henry proper instruction on how to hit. The rest is up to the young man himself. If he has natural aptitude and if he works hard, he may go far as a fighter. Assuming he has more than average natural ability as a fighter, Henry must spend long hours punching the light bag and heavy bags, to acquire hitting accuracy and power; he must spend long hours on the road, to develop his legs and wind; he must spend long hours sparring with other boys to perfect his boxing skill. Then he must apply what he learns in the gym to his boxing in actual combat. He must not be overmatched, but he must always meet boys of sufficient class to test his mettle.

It's a tough game, this boxing. And only by strict adherence to the rules of clean living, and gruelling and patient work, can one make it worthwhile. If Henry, provided he has the natural ability, will set about his chosen profession (if boxing is to be his profession) in the manner set down above, he'll be boxing for real money within a year or two.

My interest is aroused over Adams by what my friend, the ring worm, tells me. Every young boxer who shows some native talent is a potential champion. I hope to see Henry Adams box a capable opponent soon.

FIRPO TO FIGHT AGAIN

BUENOS AIRES, May 5. (UP)—Luis Firpo, Argentine heavyweight, has resumed training again and announced that he expects to go to New York before the end of the year to return to the ring. He has no matches here.

SPECIAL NOTICES

Building Steady In Lockney Area

Special to The Record News.

LOCKNEY, Texas, May 5.—Building permits in this city will seek a new high level should Floyd county's large wheat acreage produce a fair yield, is the forecast recently made by local contractors and builders. Permits issued since Jan. 1 total more than $300,000 and preparations are practically completed for the paving of two streets in the resident section that will involve an expenditure of approximately $60,000. City officials are giving serious consideration to other civic improvements that they say should materialize within the next two months.

Farm improvement in Floyd county has made rapid progress during the past winter as many new farm homes have been built and a large number of farmers have provided their livestock, hogs and chickens with a better place to live. Implement dealers report a large acreage of new land now being placed under the plow, increasing the county's farm acreage by approximately three per cent.

EXHIBITS PLANNED

GRANDFIELD, Okla., May 5.—The manual training and home economics department of Grandfield high school are planning for their annual exhibit which is to be held May 22 at the high school, according to Harold Hildebaugh and Mrs. E. L. McKee, instructors of the department. Exhibits will be given of all projects made during the year—two home economics clubs presenting exhibits.

Daniel Urges Support Of U. S. Statutes

KAY BIBLE—8 RESPECT FOR ..

Because of his recent frequent appeals to the people of the United States for more complete obedience to the law, and his declaration that disrespect for law is this nation's gravest problem, Herbert Hoover was likened to Josiah of ancient Judea by Roy J. Daniel Sunday morning in his address before the Kay Bible class of the First Methodist church.

Daniel

"The president stood in our seat of national government and declared that the law shall be obeyed, and that he would set the example himself," said Mr. Daniel. "If a law is wrong, its rigid enforcement is the surest guarantee of its repeal. If it is right, enforcement will compel quick respect for its provisions."

The situation described by President Hoover as facing the United States, Mr. Daniel said, resembles that described in the Bible which resulted in many reforms under the leadership of King Josiah. The chance discovery by a scribe of the popular transcript of Moses' laws, which became the book of Deuteronomy, occasioned the king's becoming more familiar with their requirements, the speaker stated. The newly-discovered text of the Mosiac law was said to have had an inspirational effect upon the ruler, the priests and the people, and a period of great reforms followed.

"Life and property are more unsafe in the United States today than in any other civilized nation of the world. More than 9,000 people are killed lawlessly in this nation annually. Less than one-sixth of their slayers are convicted. Crime costs this nation $13,000,000,000 every year. The great danger is the possibility that respect for law is fading from the hearts of the American people."

The full test of Mr. Daniel's address follows:

The lesson today is the interesting story about the finding of the book of Deuteronomy, and the reforms that were made in Judah by King Josiah, resulting from the discovery of the lost book of the law. Deuteronomy is the law of Moses told in an interesting manner—told in a way that has an appeal to the masses and in a way that the people can understand and appreciate. King Solomon's temple in Jerusalem had been neglected for many years and was badly in need of repairs. So the king ordered the repair work done under the supervision of the high priest named Hilkiah. The scribe or secretary of the temple was a man named Shaphan. While searching around in some neglected part of the temple Hilkiah found this scroll or book. It was short and he read it and found the book intensely interesting. He carried the book to the scribe. The scribe read it and it gripped him too. Then Shaphan carried the book to the king. Josiah had become king at the early age of eight and he ruled for 31 years. The king was so impressed by reading the book that he called a meeting of the heads of all the leading families of Judah and read the book to them. The effect of the book was likewise electrical upon the leaders of the nation and the people. This newly discovered book was the first book to have the same inspirational effect alike upon the king, the high priest and the people. They took the book to Huldah a very wise and capable woman of that day serving in the capacity of court prophet. Huldah told them that the destruction of the nation foretold in the book would not come to pass while Josiah lived because he had tried to walk in God's paths, but that the terrible destruction would come to the nation. And what she told them came true. But King Josiah stood up in his place in the temple and made an agreement with God to obey all the laws and covenants and called upon his people to do likewise. Then he set about making certain reforms throughout his kingdom. He destroyed the heathen altars, he uprooted the worship of the heathen gods, he drove out the wizards, and he restored in Solomon's temple the worship of the true God. But these late reforms did not save his nation. The evil seed had long been planted and the time of harvest had to come. The Egyptians swept across Palestine to fight the Assyrians and Josiah attacked them in battle but was defeated at Megiddo. His soldiers carried his body from the battlefield in his own war chariot to Jerusalem and buried it in his own sepulchre.

Bible as Literature

A great man has said, "The Bible is the one book that no intelligent person can afford to be ignorant of. All modern literature and all art are permeated with it. It is not all a question of religion or theology or dogma, it is a question of general knowledge." In our great country today we need to rediscover not only the book of Deuteronomy but the entire Bible! How many of us systematically read and study God's word? If we fail to study a passage each day from the Bible we are losing that which cannot ever be regained. How can we come to know God if we do not study His revealed word?

The Bible is a source of inspiration to any man who reads its sacred pages. The accounts of the deeds of great men there recorded reminds us of the words of the poet who wrote:

"The lives of great men all remind us
That we can make our lives sublime,
And departing leave behind us
Footprints upon the sands of time."

No history records a greater lawgiver than Moses. No history tells of a braver warrior than David. No literature recounts a more beautiful love story than Ruth. Was ever there a greater builder than the builder of the Temple of Jerusalem? Was ever there a wiser man than Solomon? When told he could have anything he wanted he wished for wisdom from on high. Has there ever been a greater missionary than Paul? Has there ever lived in the world another perfect man like the Christ?

Hoover Modern Josiah

The Bible is the progressive revelation of God to man. The theme throughout the Bible from Genesis to Revelations is God and man's relation to Him. Moses was a great man of God but he never attained the spiritual growth of Paul—the growth that Paul experienced. Abraham the patriarch and father of his great race did not have the high standard of chastity set up in the New Testament. God in the person of His Son gave the perfect revelation of Himself to man made in His own image.

In President Hoover today we have a modern Josiah. He said recently that our gravest problem in America is disrespect for law. He is seeking to bring back the American people from a worship of false idols. In a recent address to the members of the Associated Press he called upon every citizen of the United States to obey the law and help enforce the law. How can I best help to enforce the law? Here's how—obey the law myself. Did you know that life and property in the United States are more unsafe than in any other civilized country in the world? More than 9,000 human beings are lawlessly killed in the United States each year. Little more than half of the slayers are arrested. Less than one-sixth of these are convicted. In proportion to population 20 times as many people are lawlessly killed in the United States as in Great Britain. Fifty times as many robberies in proportion to population are committed in the United States as in the United Kingdom each year. Crime costs our country $13,000,000,000 every year. The great danger is the possibility that respect for law is fading from the hearts and sensibilities of the American people. In the president we have a modern Josiah who stood up in his place of power and said that the law shall be obeyed and enforced and he would set the example himself. If a law is wrong its rigid enforcement is the surest guarantee of its repeal. If a law is right enforcement will compel quick respect for it.

Let each of us this morning become another Hilkiah or another Shaphan and rededicate our lives and our hearts to law obedience and law enforcement. A turning again to the Bible on the part of the American people will help more than any thing else. No problem in national or personal life can arise but what the solution of it may be found or helped in God's book of life. President McKinley said, "The more profoundly we study the Bible and the more closely we observe its divine precepts, the better citizens we will become and the higher will be our destiny as a nation."

Woodrow Wilson said to the American soldiers in the World war: "When you have read the Bible, you will know that it is the word of God because you will find it to be the key to your own heart, your own happiness and to your own duty."

"I Feel That Orgatone Is Most Wonderful Medicine I Ever Heard of," Says Wichita Man

"Anyone Couldn't Ask for Better Results, It Ends Troubles," He Says

Daily, citizens of Wichita Falls are testifying to the astonishing results accomplished by Orgatone.

"I have been run down and have suffered from stomach trouble for almost two years," said J. W. Cauble, of 2502 Buchanan, Wichita Falls, Texas, while talking with the Orgatone nurse recently. Mr. Cauble is employed by the Ball Bros. Fruit Jar factory. "My teeth poisoned by system, for they were in bad condition. Then, everything I ate soured on my stomach, and caused gas to form and press up against my heart, which caused heartburn and palpitation. At times it seemed as if I would choke to death, and frequently felt dizzy and bilious. I would bloat up after every meal, and would be uncomfortable for several hours afterward. My condition seemed to be getting worse in spite of all I could do.

"Since taking Orgatone, I'm like a different man. I couldn't have asked for better results, for all of my troubles are gone. I eat anything I want, and am never bothered with gas or heart palpitation any more. I am relieved of all those blasting spells and my head never aches or pains me at all now. I sleep fine every night, and in fact I really don't know what to say to express my appreciation for Orgatone. I thing Orgatone is the most wonderful medicine I have ever taken or heard of and I'm certainly glad to recommend it to everyone."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called patent or secret remedy but a new scientific bile preparation, and is sold in Wichita Falls exclusively by the Allison's Drug stores, under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative, who is assisting the public daily.—Adv.

Today { At the Theaters

MAJESTIC: Jeanne Eagels in "The Letter," all-talking. Three Vitaphone vaudeville acts. Paramount news.

STRAND: "Simba," showing the experiences of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson among the wild animals of Central Africa. Movietone vaudeville and Movietone news.

OLYMPIC: "Show People," with William Haines and Marion Davies. Comedy. Pathe review.

GEM: Bob Custer in "West of Santa Fe." Comedy.

A box-office rush at the Strand theater Saturday and Sunday demonstrated for the film "Simba," (native for lion), the popularity which the two hours of thrills which it contains amply justify. The experiences of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, who are said to have spent almost four years in the wilds of central Africa "camera hunting," are put together skillfully to afford a realistic excursion among the animals with which circuses try to make us familiar.

The elephant and noble lion reverse the biblical truth descriptive of prophets, who "are not without honor save in their own country," for the view of these beasts at home in their native haunts begets a full measure of honor and respect for their prowess. The general carriage and demeanor, the facial expression and gesticulation of "Simba" when prowling about in African hay seeking a corpulent black man or a fattened calf, differs in several particulars from those displayed in Hollywood or in the circus tent.

The little boys who crowded the front rows screamed with delight—not loud enough to smother the adult laughter behind them—when the graceful impalla, of the antelope family, repeatedly broke all existing broadjump records, clearing 30 foot stretches with a jack rabbit motion as though propelled by steel springs.

And the giraffe, which must kneel to drink, can actually run without being overbalanced by his superabundance of larynx.

Judge to Hear Tax Suit Pleas

Arguments on motions for judgment in the suit of M. L. Tittle, former tax collector, seeking approximately $13,000 from the county for commissions on delinquent tax collections, will be heard before Judge W. W. Cook in the 78th district court Monday morning. The case was tried early in March and both sides claimed the victory upon the basis of certain answers to special issues submitted to a jury. Each side has entered a motion for judgment and the argument will be submitted to Judge Cook Monday.

Mr. Tittle claims that the sum is due him for collections made between December, 1919 and January, 1923, according to the terms of a law recently held valid by a ruling of the supreme court. The jury trying the case decided that B. D. Sartin, then county judge, had agreed to return the money to Mr. Tittle if the law were upheld. On the other hand, the verdict of the jury said that the county commissioners did not make such an agreement. Attorneys agree that the decision in the case will probably hinge upon whether the county judge has the authority to bind the county in such matters.

A similar suit, brought by Guy C. Raley, present collector, and asking around $18,000 was also tried in March and resulted in a hung jury.

Choral Club Spring Concert on May 13

The spring concert of the Woman's Choral club will be given at the First Baptist church on Monday, May 13, instead of on May 3, as announced Sunday, leaders in the organization have explained. The concert, heralding the spring, will include only music appropriate to the season. A group of negro spirituals has been added to the program.

The evening has been divided into three song groups, opening with Swedish, Norwegian, and Finnish folk songs, descriptive and gay. Four negro spirituals, chosen from the finest and most stirring of their kind, make up the second group. The concert will be concluded with two numbers accompanied by violins, the instruments to be played by Mesdames J. E. Hall, F. B. Sharp, J. V. C. T. Christensen and Jouette Bonner.

"The Morning of the Year," a cycle of spring words and modern poets, will be sung by a mixed quartet, including Mesdames A. G. Holmes, Luella B. Thompson and Messrs. R. E. Shepherd and L. Aldrich.

The sermon, together with a congregational song service, was broadcast through station KGKO.

Visiting members were entertained following the service Sunday night with a lawn party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Leucke 900 Brook street. Dinner for the entire assembly was served at 6 p. m. in the basement of the local church by members of the St. Paul's Lutheran society.

A special "Builders' Service," marking the closing day of Appreciation Week, was given at the First Christian church Sunday night, before a large crowd including many Masons and Kiwanis club members, to whom special invitations had been extended.

Using the subject of "Temple Building," the service was designed to teach the principles of character building. The sermon delivered by Dr. Floyd Allan Bash, pastor, was on the subject, "Using the Plumb Line."

The use of colored lights and a cross of ruby lights formed an atmosphere for the singing of "The Old Rugged Cross." Members of the Kiwanis club sang the "Builders' Song" of that organization, and a male chorus lead the congregational singing. R. E. Shepherd sang "Open the Gates of the Temple," (Knapp).

George Lawler, L. E. Fawks, John A. Mayer, M. C. Sherman, H. N. Bennett, Charles Pogenpohl, Roy Wilhite and others assisted in the building ceremonies used in connection with the service.

Moreland Scores "Pet" Sins in Talk To Record Crowd at Revival

"The man who lives his life for himself is a diseased man in the sight of God," Rev. Patrick Dacus Moreland told his congregation at the Grant Street Methodist church as the third week of the revival he is holding opened Sunday night.

The church was packed with the largest crowd that has yet attended any of the meetings and 100 extra chairs, which had been placed in one of the wings, were all taken.

"Disease is a terrible thing," Rev. Moreland said. "A disease transmitted by an evil father to an unborn child is the result of sin. But a disease that affects the soul is an even more terrible thing. For a diseased body dies and suffering ends, but the torture of a diseased soul goes on forever.

"No man can ever recover from one sin. That is the sin that leaves an abiding scar across the soul, like the crimson trail of a scorpion. It is that particular, pet sin which a man secretly harbors in his heart, knowing that he will commit it whenever the opportunity presents itself.

"The dying thief was forgiven on the cross by Jesus because the thief had never before had a chance to be saved. But you my friends will have no such alibi when lying on your deathbed, facing eternity, because God has given you more than 1,000 chances to accept him.

"It takes a magic cleanser, it requires that savior of men, Jesus Christ to remove that dark, black stain from your soul."

There will be no day service Monday but evening services will be held at 7:45 p. m. each day this week. The Woman's Missionary society will meet at 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Sheriff's Sale of Three Rivers Ranch to Close Notorious Oil Deal

ALAMOGORDO, New Mexico, May 5. (US)—Harry F. Sinclair, Edward L. Doheny and Albert B. Fall—principal figures in the Harding administration oil scandals—will close their books of account in that notorious series of government "black gold" transactions here tomorrow.

Fall's famous Three Rivers ranch will be sold by the sheriff under foreclosure proceedings.

It will be bid in by Doheny.

The sale will wipe out Sinclair's one-third "interest" in the 700,000-acre property which the multi-millionaire sportsman and oil man told a Washington jury last spring he "purchased" from Fall for $233,000 in Liberty bonds a few days before Teapot Dome was leased to Sinclair in December 1922.

The auction itself will take place at approximately the same time that Washington officials complete plans for receiving Sinclair at the District of Columbia jail—to which he was committed when he refused to tell a senate committee how he obtained the navy's oil reserve when Fall was secretary of the interior.

Sinclair also will be out the additional $35,000 in cash which he gave Fall while the Sinclair companies were negotiating the Salt Creek, Wyoming, $50,000,000 royalty oil contract. This money, Sin attorneys always contended to the juries, was sent to the Three Rivers ranch to improve the trails for horseback riding. The jury believed the story and acquitted the oil baron.

Even the "six or eight cows" which Sinclair "sold" to Fall about the same time will go under the auctioneer's hammer.

Sinclair lawyers always insisted that the ranch was worth $800,000—and a good bona fide purchase on that valuation.

It will be sold subject to a $170,000 mortgage held by the M. D. Thatcher estate of Pueblo, Colo.

Mr. Doheny's planned action to buy the property was said today by his lawyer, Mark B. Thompson, of Phoenix, Ariz., to be a move to protect a lien of $124,000 he has on the property—the lien grew out of the well-known $100,000 "loan" transaction which Doheny packed in a "little black bag" and sent to Fall shortly before the then secretary of the interior signed away the Elk Hills naval oil reserve to Doheny's companies.

ARCHER COURT OPENS TODAY

Grand Jury to Investigate Seizure of Still

Evidence developed since the seizure of a 300-gallon still and the arrest of five men in Archer City 10 days ago will be laid before the 30th district grand jury for Archer county to be impaneled by Judge Allan D. Montgomery Monday morning.

Except for the charges growing out of the raid, the criminal docket for the May term is unusually light, Sam Spence, district attorney, declared Sunday. He expects the grand jurors' work to be completed late Monday.

Judge Montgomery will call the civil docket for the county as soon as he has charged the grand jury Monday. The trial of criminal cases will begin Monday, May 13.

An Italian priest put the fatal question to a bridegroom and the man shouted "No!" He accused the girl's father of withholding her dowry.

Lawyers Organize Against Jones Law

CHICAGO, May 5. (US)—Chicago lawyers have organized to protect poor citizens from the Jones "five-and-ten" prohibition law.

The organization will be known as the civic defense league, according to the announcement today of Attorney Harold Jackson, and it will offer to defend free of charge in the federal courts any person indicted under the Jones law who is unable to pay for proper legal assistance.

"The Jones law is nothing but legislative lunacy," Jackson declared, adding:

"The only ones who are being made to suffer under it are those poor, ignorant defendants who cannot afford proper legal aid."
