Israel reports base capture

By The Associated Press

Israel said its invading army captured a key Palestinian artillery base at Beaufort Castle today and besieged major guerrilla strongholds in southern Lebanon in a powerful thrust to within 25 miles of Beirut.

The PLO said Israeli warplanes pounded its nerve center in southern Beirut again today.

The Palestine Liberation Organization said waves of jets rocketed and bombed the Fakhani neighborhood, which houses the command headquarters of PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat and was one the primary targets of a massive Israeli air raid two days before Israel launched its invasion to drive the PLO from southern Lebanon.

The privately owned "Voice of Lebanon" radio station said Syria scrambled MiG jet fighters to challenge Israel's raiding fighter-bombers, and claimed an air battle broke out over Beirut. This report was not confirmed officially and could not be verified.

Israel radio said Prime Minister Menachem Begin flew by helicopter for a briefing with Defense Minister Ariel Sharon at Beaufort, the Crusader-built fortress that had been a major Palestine artillery base for shelling northern Israel.

"The Israeli flag now flies from Beaufort," Israel radio quoted an unidentified commander as saying. The radio said an Israeli assault force fought hand-to-hand before dawn to capture the castle from Palestinian defenders.

There were reports of hard fighting, but neither side has mentioned the number of casualties in the ground offensive that began Sunday.

The Palestinian WAFA news agency denied the Israelis had taken Beaufort, but U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., en route to Rome, told reporters that his information corroborated the Israeli claim.

Rockets hit U.S. embassy in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — At least two rockets hit the U.S. Embassy today on the second day of the Israeli invasion of southern Lebanon, an embassy telephone operator said. No casualties were reported.

She said most of the staff rushed to a shelter in the building that is on the Mediterranean Sea in Moslem-controlled West Beirut.

"The damage is not that much," said the operator, who asked not to be identified.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Carolyn Johnson said the attack caused damage, but no casualties.

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the attack which occured while Beirut streets resounded with anti-aircraft fire aimed at Israeli jets high over the city.

The U.S. State Department announced Sunday after Israel launched its attack against Palestinians in Lebanon that 40 percent of the approximately 50 U.S. diplomats in Lebanon would be temporarily withdrawn and all embassy dependents were ordered out.

Mattox claims 'people's lawyer' status to his advantage

By The Associated Press

Jim Mattox, the Democratic nominee for attorney general, said Monday the main difference in him and his Republican opponent, Bill Meier, is that he is the "people's lawyer" and Meier represents special interest groups.

"Bill Meier represents special interest groups — he always has, and clearly my voting record has been anti-special interest," said Mattox, a 38-year-old congressman from Dallas.

Asked what particular special interests Meier had represented, Mattox responded at an Austin news conference, "You name it, and he's been part of it."

Mattox said Republicans had not elected a Texas attorney general in modern times, and "I don't think they will this time."

Mattox captured 51.3 percent of the vote in Saturday's runoff election to defeat John Hannah, a 42-year-old former U.S. attorney in Tyler. "It was closer than we would have liked," he said. "John Hannah is a much stronger campaigner than I thought he would be."

In the runoff for the Democratic nomination for land commissioner, Austin lawyer Garry Mauro defeated state Sen. Pete Snelson of Midland and will face Republican Woody Glasscock in November.

Mauro, rebounding from a second-place finish in the May 1 primary that resulted in Saturday's runoffs, won 53.4 percent of the vote. Mauro, 34, attributed the victory to endorsements from the men who finished third and fourth May 1.

The other two statewide Democratic runoffs Saturday were for nominations to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Austin lawyer Charles Campbell captured 52.6 percent of the vote to defeat Dallas lawyer John Humphreys for the Place 1 nomination. The Republicans do not have a candidate for that judicial seat.

British report they're ready to attack

By The Associated Press

With a heavy fog finally lifting and fresh troops arriving, British forces are ready to launch an assault on the Falkland Islands capital of Stanley "within hours," according to British correspondents at the battle front.

The British spent Sunday consolidating their grip around the town and probing Argentine defenses, according to the dispatches.

On Saturday, for the first time in several days, the correspondents said, the dense, chill fog lifted enough to give them a look at the town, defended by an estimated 7,000 Argentine troops. The British forces, augmented by fresh troops arriving from the beachhead at Port San Carlos, 50 miles from Stanley, number about 8,000.

The weather in the Falklands has been miserable, with high winds, freezing temperatures and driving rain making operations difficult. Correspondent Alastair McQueen of London's Daily Standard reported that supply helicopters had to grope their way across the island with crewmen hanging out the doors to keep sight of the tail lights of the helicopter in front of them.

With the weather improving somewhat, British planes on Sunday dropped more leaflets on Argentine positions urging the troops to surrender. The Argentines responded with sporadic, poorly aimed artillery fire, according to the British reports.

Argentina said its air force and gunners at Stanley bombed, strafed and shelled the British, but the British Defense Ministry was not giving out any information about operations in the Falklands.

Independent Television News correspondent Michael Nicholson reported that the British forces were already carrying out "extraordinarily daring operations" which, if successful, "will bring an end to the war that much closer." He gave no details due to military censorship.

An Argentine communique reported a clash with British marines west of Stanley, and said the British forces were routed. The Argentines said they suffered no casualties from British artillery fire.

The Gurkhas are part of the second wave of British troops on the island. They landed about a week ago at Port San Carlos after leaving their transport ship, the requisitioned liner Queen Elizabeth 2, with the rest of the 3,500-man 5th Infantry Brigade.

High winds in area cause school damage

High winds that peaked at 52 mph swept through the Midland area early this morning, causing damage to a Midland school and power outages in many parts of the city.

Travis Elementary School in Midland suffered damage to three classrooms in the northeast wing at about 1 a.m. today, according to a spokesperson for Midland Independent School District. Details and extent of the damage were unknown this morning, the spokesperson said.

The winds also caused power outages in many parts of Midland, such as Ridge Heights which, in some areas, was without power for about three hours. According to a Texas Electric Service Company spokesman, the outages were caused by a light standard which was blown onto the airport substation. Some spot outages also were caused by lines blowing together.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, the strong winds in Midland were caused by a strong thunderstorm about 30 miles south of the city.

Skies tonight should be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. Winds should be from the south at 10-15 mph and the low temperature should be in the lower 70s.

There should be a 20 percent chance of rain again Tuesday, with the temperatures expected to reach 100 degrees.

Sunday's high of 99 was the warmest temperature of 1982, but it was still five degrees below the record high of 104 set in 1964. The low of 71 was 16 degrees above the record low of 55 set in 1978.

Reagan calls Europe journey 'peace pilgrimage'

VATICAN CITY (AP) — President Reagan, declaring himself on a "pilgrimage for peace," met today with Pope John Paul II at the midpoint of a European tour shadowed by warfare in the Middle East and the Falkland Islands.

The pope urged the United States to "step forward at this crucial moment in history to consolidate her rightful place at the service of world peace."

For 50 minutes the pontiff and the president met alone in the 16th century papal library, talking across a simple wooden desk, each man sitting on a high-backed velvet chair.

Then, in a nationally televised exchange of statements with the pope, Reagan noted he was visiting Europe for the first time as president and said, "I would like to think of it as a pilgrimage for peace, a journey aimed at strengthening the forces for peace in the free West by offering new opportunities for realistic negotiations with those who may not share the values and the spirit we cherish."

Reagan said he came away from the meeting "with renewed sense of hope and dedication."

"We seek the same goals of peace, freedom and humanity that the church pursues," the president said.

Italy tightens security for Reagan's visit to Rome

ROME (AP) - After two weeks of terrorist bombings of American businesses in Rome, Italian authorities banned demonstrations and deployed more than 6,000 security men for President Reagan's six-hour visit today.

Police sharpshooters, paramilitary Carabinieri in bulletproof vests with submachine guns and teargas, and bomb squads were stationed along the president's route from Ciampino Airport to the Vatican, President Sandro Pertini's Quirinal Palace and Premier Giovanni Spadolini's office at the Palazzo Chigi.

Helicopters have been whirring over the city for the past three days in security drills. Extra guards were posted outside U.S. diplomatic offices and American businesses and schools.

The bombing attacks damaged a number of U.S. targets in Rome, including the offices of the Daily American, the English-language newspaper. No one was injured in the blasts.

Leftist extremists said they were reponsible. But the Red Brigades, Italy's best known terrorist gang which kidnapped U.S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier in Verona last December, was not among them.

On Saturday, riot police fired tear gas near the U.S. Embassy to disperse 300 protesters who broke away from an anti-nuclear march by 200,000 people.

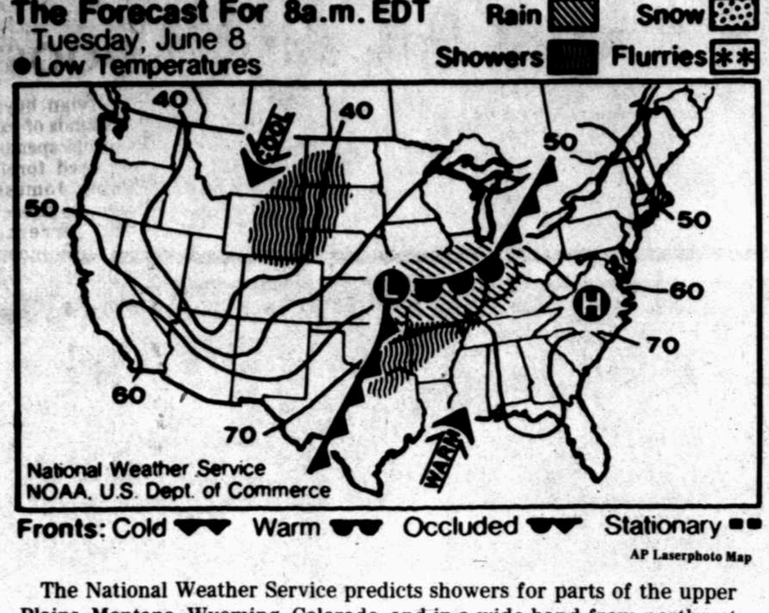

The marchers shouted slogans attacking both NATO and the Warsaw Pact, but the most frequent cry was against Reagan. Many carried a poster with a picture of Reagan and the word "Wanted" written over it.

Police investigate jewelry, coin theft

Midland police are investigating the theft of $9,000 in jewelry and gold coins from a Midland woman's residence.

Ms. Jerry Williamson of 2220 Western Drive told officers a 24-karat gold ring with two and a half karats of diamonds on it and three Mexican gold coins were taken from an upstairs bedroom at her residence between last Tuesday and Sunday.

Ms. Williamson valued the ring at $7,000 and the gold pieces at a total of $2,000.

An Odessa man was burned at Terminal about 3:30 p.m. Sunday when a radiator hose on his vehicle burst.

Midland firemen administered first-aid treatment to Uvaldo Granado of 3817 Henderson in Odessa. He received burns on his left arm in the mishap, fire department reports indicated.

Police investigate hit-and-run accident

ANDREWS — Department of Public Safety investigators say they are searching for the person or persons who struck a motorcycle from the rear early today south of here, causing the motorcycle to leave the roadway and overturn, killing the driver.

Bobby Cleveland Vinson, 25, of Andrews was pronounced dead at the scene of that accident 5.6 miles south of Andrews by Justice of the Peace Jay Williams.

The accident occurred on U.S. 385. DPS spokesmen said Vinson was northbound on U.S. 385 when his motorcycle was struck from behind by an unknown vehicle, causing the motorcycle to leave the roadway.

No other details were available this morning, but the investigation was continuing.

Odessa man killed in drag race

ODESSA — An Odessa man participating in a quarter-mile drag race was killed Saturday evening near Penwell when his car overturned.

Investigators for the Department of Public Safety said Kemp Edward Gibson, 17, was killed about 7:30 p.m. at Penwell Raceway, a mile east of Penwell. He was pronounced dead at 8:30 p.m. at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital by Dr. Mike Simmons.

Gibson apparently lost control of his vehicle which rolled over and came to rest between a guardrail and fence close to the finish line, investigating trooper John Hunt of Odessa indicated.

Arabs arraigned in Argov shooting

LONDON (AP) — A London Court arraigned three Arabs today on charges of attempted murder in the shooting of Israeli Ambassador Shlomo Argov.

Magistrate David Hopkin refused bail at Scotland Yard's request and remanded all three in custody. He ordered them to appear Thursday at the high security Lambeth Magistrates Court in south London for further legal proceedings.

The alleged triggerman, Ghassan Hasan Ahmed Said, a 23-year-old Jordanian student shot by a security officer after the attack Thursday night, was brought into court in a wheelchair with his neck bandaged.

Said and his alleged accomplices — fellow Jordanian student Marwan Al Banna, 21, and Iraqi businessman Nowaf Nagib Miflih Rosan, 36 — were charged with attempted murder in the attack on the 52-year-old envoy.

Argov, shot as he left London's Dorchester Hotel after a diplomatic dinner, remained in stable but critical condition with a bullet wound in the brain, a hospital spokesman said.

Outside the courtroom, a police helicopter hovered overhead and three police cars with sirens blaring escorted their van to and from the courthouse in central London. Police searched spectators entering the court.

Said also was charged with the attempted murder of Detective Constable Colin Simpson, two offenses under Britain's Firearms Act, and with resisting arrest with a firearm. Banna was charged with four Firearms Act offenses, possessing hand grenades and having no firearms certificate. Rosan was charged with four Firearms Act offenses and with having no firearms certificates.

Israeli forces moved against Palestinian strongholds in southern Lebanon Friday, in apparent reaction to Argov's shooting.

The Israeli claim the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) was behind the attack on the ambassador.

But Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher disclosed Sunday that a "hit list" found by police in raids following the attack also named the head of the PLO office in London, Nabil Ramlawi.

Ramlawi has denied the PLO was responsible for the shooting and accused Israel of launching a campaign of genocide against Lebanon.

Britons anticipate Reagans' visit to Windsor Castle

WINDSOR, England (AP) — The sovereign's golden standard flew over Windsor Castle today, signifying that Queen Elizabeth II was in her parlor, ready to receive Ronald and Nancy Reagan, the first American first family to be overnight guests at this most historic of royal residences.

A helicopter was to bring the Reagans directly to the castle grounds after Prince Philip, the queen's husband, met them on their arrival from Rome this afternoon at London's Heathrow Airport.

Located 40 winding miles upstream from London, Windsor seems to float above the River Thames, a dynastic Disneyland of towers and turrets, battlements and ramparts done in virtually every style of architecture since Norman times.

This is the queen's real home, not Buckingham Palace in London. Her dynasty, the House of Windsor, bears its name.

The Reagans will spend two nights in the largest inhabited castle in the world, the seat of sovereigns longer than any other royal residence now in use.

THE PRESIDENT and the first lady will dine in state with the queen — and 80 other guests on each side of the table — in St. George's Hall, the castle's tapestry-hung banquet room, decorated with the shields and suits of armor of the knights of the Order of the Garter. Edward III founded the order in 1348 with the idea of reviving King Arthur's legendary Round Table.

Windsor and the tiny town of Eton across the river, under constant siege from tourists, have long ago come to terms with VIP guests at the castle on the hill.

On Sunday, the tourists as usual gathered in the castle yard to snap photos of the Coldstream Guards on sentry duty, picnicked in Windsor Great Park and watched Eton schoolboys jump into the Thames from a high pedestrian bridge in traditional celebration of the end of term.

The only signs of anything unusual were technicians installing a White House switchboard in the hotel across from the Henry VIII Gate, television trailers parked in the shadows of the Long Terrace and advance security men whispering surreptitiously into walkie-talkie microphones in their sleeves.

Horses exercised in the Home Park, the royal family's private playground, where Reagan will go for a morning gallop with the queen Tuesday.

On the Thames, a tiny American flag fluttered from the yardarm of a rented houseboat moored at Eton — a craft Hollis and Mary Blanchmel of nearby Alford renamed the Nancy R in honor of Mrs. Reagan's visit.

"WE VISITED Maryland just before Christmas," said skipper Hollis, "and paid a call on the White House — just tourists, mind you. But it's nice to see them return the visit so soon."

"I hope Nancy gives us a wave from her window," said Heather Cleland, a mini-skirted young woman from Yorkshire downing a pint at the William IV pub. "She sounds very exciting. The papers say she eats bananas in bed."

"I'd rather have a wave from him," said Nora MacArdle, from Bradford, "I don't think my boy friend will look that good at 71. He already has his teeth on the National Health."

Man kills crippled wife to end misery, shoots self

QUINLAN, Texas (AP) — An elderly man left meticulous instructions for his funeral arrangements and asked neighbors to care for his lawn before he shot and killed his crippled wife and then critically wounded himself with a shotgun, authorities said.

Lee Roy McCree, 76, left a note saying he wanted to end his wife's misery after a long battle with a spinal disease before he shot her at least six times with a .22-caliber pistol as she lay in her bed early Sunday, a Hunt County sheriff's spokesman said.

McCree then walked to his front yard with a short-barrel shotgun and shot himself three times as neighbors watched in horror.

When neighbors reached the wounded man, said Betty Finstad, he asked three men to take the gun and shoot him again.

McCree was in critical condition in the intensive care unit of Citizen's General Hospital in Greenville Sunday after undergoing surgery for shotgun wounds in his left arm and chest. His 74-year-old, bed-ridden wife Grace Kendall McCree was pronounced dead at the scene.

In the suicide note McCree left for police on the kitchen table, he "asked the Lord to forgive him and stated that this was a mercy killing because he wanted to take his wife out of misery," Sheriff's Cpl. Richard Hill said.

Hill said McCree left police a list of relatives and their phone numbers and instructions for the couple's burial, including the names and phone numbers of the florist and funeral home along with his note.

Neighbors described the McCrees as friendly people who always shared their home-grown vegetables with residents of this rural community about 30 miles east of Dallas.

"They were the best little old couple I ever knew," said Mrs. Finstad, who lives across the street from the McCree's frame house near Lake Tawakoni.

McCree's best friend, Lonnie Barringer, said that when he found the retired master plumber lying wounded at about 7:30 a.m. in his front yard, he asked Barringer to take the shotgun and shoot him to "finish the job." Authorities were not sure why McCree shot himself with a different weapon.

"He left me a note wanting me to take care of his garden and grass and left $140," Barringer said. "He just said that he couldn't stand to see her suffer and he wanted to end it all."

Mrs. Finstad, who runs a corner grocery store next to her mobile home, said McCree's health was worsening and "he knew he couldn't leave her and go to the hospital so he just decided to end it."

She said she heard a shot but thought McCree was just trying to shoot some snakes in his yard.

"A few minutes later came a second shot and I looked out the front door and I just couldn't believe what I saw. I never imagined Mr. McCree would shoot himself," she said.

Mrs. Finstad said that while neighbors waited for an ambulance, McCree asked to be shot again.

"His whole guts were blown open but he was still alert and talking. He knew he was alive and he asked three men to finish it for him," she said.

Barringer said he visited the couple Saturday night and "they both seemed fine."

"He gave me a house key and said it was in case he wasn't there to check on the house," Barringer said. "He (McCree) thought maybe she (his wife) might have to go to the hospital soon."

Habib will try to prevent full-scale war in Israel, Lebanon

JERUSALEM (AP) — U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib, with fresh instructions from President Reagan, came to Jerusalem today in an effort to prevent the latest Israel-Lebanon border fighting from escalating into all-out war.

Habib, who negotiated the fragile cease-fire between Israel and Palestinian strongholds in southern Lebanon 11 months ago, stopped to confer with Reagan and other American advisers in Versailles on Sunday en route to Israel.

Reagan took time out from a seven-nation economic summit of the world's major industrial nations to meet briefly with Habib twice and then dispatched him immediately to the war zone.

Administration officials say there is little else the president can do until Habib reports the results of his conversations with the Israelis.

Israeli troops and tanks invaded Lebanon with air and ground forces Sunday in an effort to rout Palestine Liberation Organization strongholds. Syria reported its forces were in "direct confrontation" with the Israelis, but Israel denied its troops had clashed with Syrian forces stationed in Lebanon.

THE PLO, meanwhile, vowed a "fight unto death" to defend its Middle East power base.

Although deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the United States "pulled out all stops" in seeking to halt the fighting, U.S. officials appeared reluctant to criticize its ally.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., traveling with the president, acknowledged the United States was "extremely concerned about the escalating cycle of violence."

Asked whether it was legitimate for Israel to use American-supplied planes and tanks in the fighting, Haig replied: "These are questions of extreme importance, questions on which assessments will be made in the hours ahead." He said the issue was "not unrelated to the discussions Habib will have in Israel."

But Haig refused to say whether the administration agreed with the condemnation of Israeli violence issued by French President Francois Mitterrand on behalf of the seven nations participating in the summit, which ended here Sunday.

At the United Nations, U.S. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick said it would "not be reasonable or balanced or fair to simply point a finger of blame" at Israel for violating the cease-fire if reports of PLO shelling Israeli villages were accurate.

AS A PRECAUTIONARY measure, Reagan ordered the U.S. Embassy staff in Beirut cut from its complement of 50 to 25. He also ordered the 12 American dependents of the staff to leave Lebanon.

Speakes said Reagan and Begin exchanged messages over the weekend and that Reagan had tried to dissuade the Israeli leader from pressing the attack just hours before it began. In his letter, Reagan asked Begin to "seriously consider taking no further action to widen the conflict."

The United States "has made similar appeals" for a halt to the violence "to every government in the area with some influence over the situation or the parties engaged in the fighting," Speakes said. But he refused to name the governments or to say whether any private contacts had been made with Palestinian leaders.

The Israeli government made public excerpts from Begin's letter to Reagan in which the prime minister contended PLO terrorists had been shelling Israeli villages for the last three days, sending "tens of thousands" of civilians into shelters.

"The purpose of the enemy is to kill — to kill Jews, men, women and children," Begin wrote.

"Is there a nation in the world that would tolerate such a situation?" Begin asked. "The question is clearly answered in the most recent action of the United Kingdom which is now waging a full-fledged war 8,000 miles from its shores" over the Falkland Islands in the South Atlantic.

TREASURY SECRETARY Donald Regan said the president, Habib and Haig were shocked by the renewed fighting. "I think the Israelis have a limited objective," he added. "I hope it does not lead to all-out war. I hope it can be contained as a local happening."

Mitterrand, in a closing summit statement on behalf of all participants, condemned Israeli violence and added:

"Lebanon has the right to independence and peace and sovereignty over its national territory, a sovereignty that has often been trodden under foot."

Moshe Arens, Israeli ambassador to the United States, said the Israeli army's sole mission was to push PLO forces "out of artillery range of Israeli settlements and towns in northern Israel."

Arens, interviewed on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley," said Israel had no plans to remain in Lebanon.

'Dreamgirls,' 'Nine' win most awards

By MARY CAMPBELL

NEW YORK (AP) — "Dreamgirls," a flashy Broadway production about the problems of a hit singing trio, and "Nine," the surreal story of an Italian movie director and the women in his life, split the lion's share of the Tony awards for musicals.

"Dreamgirls" won six awards, including best actor, actress and supporting actress in a musical; "Nine" won five awards, including best musical, during Sunday night's award ceremony.

"The Life and Adventures of Nicholas Nickleby," a "great gamble" which cost $100 a ticket and took eight hours to see, received four Tonys in the drama field, including best play.

"Nicholas Nickleby," based on Charles Dickens' novel about a young man maturing in 18th-century London, was brought to New York by England's Royal Shakespeare Company. Roger Rees, who played the bright-eyed and exhausting title role, won a Tony as best actor in a play.

Trevor Nunn and John Caird won as best directors for "Nickleby," and John Napier and Dermot Hayes won for best scenic design.

Nunn said, "When we did it in London, it was a huge gamble. It was a slow starter.... The public made it take off. We had a dream that we could bring it to New York. Having got it here, it is a great thrill that the show won a Tony Award for us."

The "Dreamgirls" awards included best actress for Jennifer Holliday, the belting lead singer of the trio; best actor for Ben Harney, the trio's opportunistic manager; best supporting actor for Cleavant Derricks, as a rhythm 'n' blues star; best book for Tom Eyen; best choreography for Michael Bennett and Michael Peters; best lighting for Tharon Musser.

"Nine," based on Italian director Federico Fellini's "8½," won five awards, including the big one — best musical; best supporting actress for France's Liliane Montevecchi as a Folies Bergere dancer turned film director; best director for Tommy Tune; best score for Maury Yeston; best costumes for William Ivey Long.

Zoe Caldwell saluted the theatre after winning the Tony for best performance by an actress in a play for "Medea."

farm-ranch roundup

Del Rio to be Ranchers Roundup site

DEL RIO — More than 100 of the ranching industry's experts and policymakers will impart their expertise at the second annual International Ranchers Roundup (IRR) Aug. 10-12 here.

Theme of the roundup is "Effective Ranch Management."

Keynote speakers will include Raymond D. Lett, executive assistant to U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block; Charles G. Scruggs, vice president and editor of Progressive Farmer magazine; Susan McBee, Texas state representative; Stan Parsons, Savory Grazing System consultant; Bob Bliss, Friona Industries representatives, and Terry Mitchell, Australian Department of Agriculture representative.

In addition to the talk sessions, a tour of Southwest Texas ranches will be on Aug. 9 and a tour of Mexican ranches will be conducted Aug. 13.

Quarter-horse yearlings to be sold

RUIDOSO DOWNS — Following a stringent evaluation, 100 regal-bred quarter-horse yearlings have been approved for the second annual Ruidoso Super Select Sale here at 7:15 p.m. Aug. 29 in the Ruidoso Downs Chaparral Convention Center here.

Sisters and brothers to six champions, including two-time world champion Dash For Cash, are among those catalogued for the sale. Also on the bid list are yearlings from $100,000 producing mares.

"Once again, we're going to offer the finest quarter horse yearlings available in one night of bidding," said Richard Thompson, president and general manager of the sale. "The response to this year's sale was tremendous, and it was extremely difficult to limit the field."

More than 300 applications were processed by the Super Select Sale earlier in the year. After a pedigree evaluation by a panel of experts, 135 yearlings were chosen for conformation inspection by horseman Jerry Wells. Using Wells' evaluations, the sale panel cut the list of yearlings to 100.

A $20,000 return to the consignor will be guaranteed.

In the inaugural mixed sale last year, 54 yearlings passed under the gavel for an average of $63,685, which is four times higher than any other sale's average highest average selling price for yearlings of any stallion. A share in Dash For Cash now is worth $750,000. Dash For Cash will have 11 yearlings in the sale.

This year's Super Select Sale has been expanded to two dates. Yearlings will be offered in the Aug. 29 sale at Ruidoso, while broodmares, weanlings and stallion shares will be sold Oct. 16 at Jerry Wells Ranch near Purcell.

The leading consignor in the Aug. 29 sale is Lynne and Marshall Jelderks of Arroyo Grande, Calif.; they have three yearlings entered. Consignors with three yearlings each include Breakaway Farms of Dallas, Frontera Farms of Sunland Park, N.M., Green Pastures of Purcell, Okla., Meadow Creek Ranch of Auburn, Calif., and Warren and Vickie Wylie of Buna.

Manufacturer offers replacements

NEW HOLLAND, Pa. — Sperry New Holland, the nation's leading manufacturer of specialized farm machinery, is offering a two-year or 5,000-bale "replacement policy" covering the upper apron chain on its round balers purchased as of May 17, 1982.

Round balers are used by farmers and ranchers to produce hay bales weighing up to 1,500 pounds. The bales have become increasingly popular among farmers and ranchers, as they can be left outdoors for cattle to feed on. Conventional square bales must be stored inside to prevent spoilage.

Replacement of the upper apron chain normally costs about $900.

Swine evaluation clinic to be held

FREDERICKSBURG — Southwestern pork producers are invited to a Swine Evaluation Clinic July 19 and 20 on the Gillespie County Fairgrounds off Texas Highway 16 south of this central Texas town. The opening session begins at 9 a.m.

Among the swine experts at the clinic will be Dr. Lauran Christian of Iowa State University, Dan E. Hoge of Black Hawk College, Kewanee, Ill., and Jim Rucker of Lexington, Okla.

Clinic participants will be visually appraising live hogs and later will examine their carcasses for quality.

Screwworm spotting leads to caution

AUSTIN — Livestock producers in the Hidalgo-Starr County area should delay dehorning, branding and castrating animals due to the spotting of screwworms in the area.

"This is a precautionary measure to prevent the possibility of any undetected screwworms from finding a place on which to lay eggs," said Dr. John W. Holcombe, executive director of the Texas Animal Health Commission. "Screwworms lay their eggs on open wounds," he explained.

Three confirmed screwworm cases were reported within a four-mile area about 35 miles north of Mission.

Holcombe suggested that livestock producers within 100 miles of the Mexico-Texas border check their animals for possible screwworm infestations.

Meat production will be down in '82

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans may not spend any more on meat and poultry than they did last year, although prices will be up for some items, says the Agriculture Department.

That is because production and consumption of meat and poultry, overall, will be down in 1982. Much of the decline will be due to cutbacks by hog producers.

According the department's Economic Research Service, per capita consumption of red meat and poultry is expected to drop 5 to 7 percent from 1981, including declines of 1 to 2 percent for beef and poultry, and 14 to 16 percent for pork.

The figures, published in the agency's latest livestock and meat situation report, showed that on a per capita basis Americans spent $329.75 on meat and poultry last year, up from $320.17 in 1980.

"Total expenditures on red meat and poultry are expected to remain stable in 1982," the report said. "Declining per capita consumption of red meat and poultry, coupled with only slightly higher retail prices, should further reduce the proportion of income spent on red meat and poultry."

Last year, it said, Americans spent an average of 3.72 percent of their disposal income to pay meat and poultry bills, compared to 3.97 percent in 1980.

But the report said the forecast for 1982 could be altered by economic developments, particularly in the second half.

"The net result of a combination of modest economic growth, a July tax reduction and a moderating inflation rate will be a slight increase in consumer purchasing power for this year," it said.

Per capita consumption of meat and poultry averaged 207.9 pounds last year, down slightly from 208.4 pounds — computed on the basis of retail weight — in 1981.

Beef consumption was up for the first time in some years, averaging 77.3 pounds per person against 76.5 pounds in 1980.

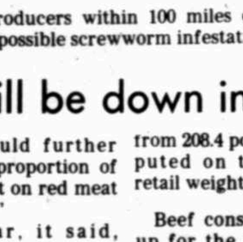

Pork, on the other hand, averaged slightly less than 65 pounds, down from 68.3 pounds in 1980.

Lamb and mutton consumption showed a slight gain to an average of 1.5 pounds per capita from 1.3 pounds in each of the three previous years.

Veal consumption, reflecting the decline in calf slaughter the past several years, was unchanged at 1.7 pounds. In 1977, by comparison, per capita veal consumption was 3.4 pounds.

Bentsen: Insurance has 'gaping holes'

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Federal Crop Insurance program, hailed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture as the "safety net" of the American farmer, has some "gaping holes," says Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

"The Department of Agriculture has loudly hailed the Federal Crop Insurance program as the 'safety net' of the American farmer," he said. "But they have put it into place very hastily, and they are using it as an excuse to drop other, proven disaster programs. Texas farmers tell me, in fact, that this 'safety net' has some gaping holes."

Citing a "gaping-hole" example, Bentsen noted that an FCI advertisement advised farmers to "Go ahead, expand your operation with more land and new equipment. Go ahead, borrow more money. With All-Risk Crop Insurance, you have a sure source of replacement in bad years, as well as good."

Noting flaws in that reasoning, Bentsen said that "most Texas farmers are just trying to hang on, and, in too many cases, are not succeeding. The program further adds to farmers' cash-flow problems," Bentsen said.

The senator called the crop insurance system "a management nightmare."

"If the Department of Agriculture is going to expect farmers to rely on Federal Crop Insurance as their 'safety net,' then it is imperative that they deliver a workable, effective program," Bentsen said.

"Many farmers are fast approaching the end of their rope and little or no help is in sight," the senator said. "Department of Agriculture farm policies must be judged by the bottom line — by results and not by rhetoric or intentions. I, for one, will insist that the Federal Crop Insurance program be made to produce better results than it has to this point."

Feed horses for maximum growth

COLLEGE STATION — Feeding young horses for maximum growth and sound skeletal structure is vital, particularly when the horse is being developed for strenuous events such as racing, jumping, cutting, roping and polo.

"Major concerns of the horseman should be toward developing sound skeletal and muscular tissue," said Dr. Gary Potter, professor and horse program leader in the Department of Animal Science at Texas A&M University.

"Horsemen should not be concerned with trying to develop fat on young horses because they develop this on their own if they get enough feed," noted Potter.

Some reports have indicated that young horses fed for maximum rates of growth and development are destined to become unsound late in life, but Potter said that no conclusive scientific research supports this claim.

Agricultural financing seen as key export boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commodity groups, which consider expansion of U.S. farm exports a key to agriculture's economic recovery, are bolstering their own foreign market development programs, their leaders say.

But they also say full development of America's export potential rests with increased government credit to foreign buyers at affordable interest rates, mainly through the Agricultural Export Credit Revolving Fund.

Agriculture Secretary John Block, although saying he supports the concept, has refused to endorse federal financing of the fund because of the government's budget woes. The commodity groups say at least $1 billion should be put into the fund next year to augment their own increasing efforts to expand overseas sales.

"American farmers know that demand development will be a key to boosting depressed commodity prices with which they are now trying to cope," says Darwin Stolte, president of the U.S. Feed Grains Council.

Figures compiled by the U.S. Agricultural Export Development Council show that from 1971 to 1981 producers and others with interests in farm exports nearly tripled their financial commitment to market development, pumping more than $51 million into the effort last year.

The money is used for promotion and advertising programs, trade fairs, educational services for potential foreign buyers and various kinds of exhibits. The groups spending it say increased foreign sales bolster domestic market prices, thereby increasing currently-depressed farm income and reducing the need for federal price supports.

Infant fire victims identified

The three infants who perished in a trailer house fire at 1:13 p.m. Saturday in the 2500 block of Copus Street east of Midland have been identified as William Lee "Billy" Reedy and Cynthia Kay "Cindy" Reedy, each 2½ years of age, and David Shannon Reedy, 9½ months.

They were the children of Mr. and Mrs. Nick E. Reedy of 2500 Copus.

Peace Justice Charlie Sprayberry ruled the deaths "accidents, by asphyxiation, with contributing cause, house fire."

Midland Fire Marshal Jerry Petree said the blaze which engulfed the trailer house in Rex's Trailer Park resulted from the ignition of a couch by a cigarette lighter with which the children were playing.

According to Sprayberry, the mother was visiting a nearby house and the father was asleep in a bedroom when one of the twins apparently climbed up on a kitchen cabinet and obtained the lighter.

Nine firemen fought the blaze one hour and forty minutes and used 2,000 gallons of water before containing it, according to a Midland Fire Department spokesperson. The home sustained heavy damage to the kitchen and to a northside bedroom, where the infants' bodies were discovered.

Doctor gives new image of Hinckley

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new psychiatric image is beginning to emerge from the trial of John W. Hinckley Jr. as prosecutors attempt to prove the young man was sane the day he shot President Reagan.

Dr. Park Elliott Dietz, who returns today, said the man who shot President Reagan suffered from common personality disorders that afflict millions of Americans.

The assistant professor of psychiatry at Harvard Medical School testified Hinckley was not out of touch with reality when he shot President Reagan and three other men March 30, 1981.

Triplets, quadruplets take lot of getting used to

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Residents could hardly be blamed for seeing double — or worse — after 48 sets of triplets and four groups of quadruplets swarmed over a quiet residential street in North Hollywood.

"I never had any idea there were this many triplets," said one amazed father as he surveyed a sea of faces and baby strollers of all shapes and sizes, including a double-decker.

"It takes a lot of getting used to," admitted Sue Fishman of nearby Canoga Park, who has 3-year-old triplets and a 7-year-old boy.

Organizers billed Saturday's get-together as the largest of its kind.

Participants all had different tales about the joys and woes of multiple babies and look-alike siblings, but the parents had one common comment — it's not easy taking care of three or four at once.

"We had four in diapers at once, and that's a lot of work," said Richard Warner of Palos Verdes, referring to his triplets and a brother who was two years older. "When you go into the kitchen, you don't have one high chair and one mess like most parents. You have four high chairs and four messes. You can go through this once, but that's enough."

Aileen Keeter, who drove from Bakersfield with her husband and three 1-year-olds, agreed. "Never again. We don't want to take any more chances," she said.

Marjorie Tayloe arranged the party to help celebrate the 18th birthday of her own daughters — triplets, of course.

Marsha Hill, 32, of Goleta, who gave birth to quadruplets four years ago — although one later died — said she began taking fertility medicine because she could not ovulate after she stopped taking birth-control pills.

"The doctor said the chances of multiple births were remote and he had a very good reputation. So we tried it. Now I think the doctor would like to forget us," she said.

Janna Wagner, 30, of La Mesa, had the same problem and tried the same solution. She also had quads.

Ron Gunther, 47, and his wife Sheila, 32, of Highland, already had six children from previous marriages when they tied the knot.

"We decided we wanted one more of our own," Gunther recalled, motioning to their latest additions — two boys and a girl. "It helps that I'm an obstetrician."

The day's biggest challenge was getting 160 triplets and quadruplets — ranging in age from one month to 34 years — to stand still long enough for a group picture.

A bill to reject

The U.S. Senate should reject the Intelligence Identities Protection Act just approved in a 315-32 vote in the House. The act has good intentions, but would only impede the work of journalists while setting intelligence agents up as a class of people virtually untouchable by public scrutiny.

Similar to the first legislation introduced in 1975 following the assassination of Richard Welch, the CIA station chief in Athens, the legislation is intended to protect intelligence agents from public identification.

But as it is written, the bill merely restricts the use of information available from public sources, thus restricting the free flow of information and abridging the First Amendment protections afforded journalists.

Speaking following the House's action on the bill, Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., said, "For the first time in American history, the publication of information obtained lawfully from publicly available sources would be made illegal."

There is no question that intelligence agents should be afforded as many protections as possible without compromising the vital public information role of the media. In some instances journalists serve the public good by the publication of agents' names in connection with illegal acts, agency corruption and inefficiency and so forth.

But under provisions of the House bill, journalists could be sentenced to as much as three years in jail for such publications. What the bill would do as it is written now is to free agents to do basically anything they want without fear of public exposure.

The reason such legislation is even being sought is due to the excesses of renegade publications, which have in the past printed the names of agents, putting the agents in great danger and compromising them. Actually, though, most publications act responsibly in such instances.

Legislation probably is needed to prevent such public disclosures in the future. But this type of bill that impedes the work of the media and abridges First Amendment rights of the press is not what is needed.

The Senate should quickly reject the ill-conceived measure. It's not in the public's best interests.

Misusing the courts

The number of Americans filing for bankruptcy is growing at an alarming rate, and the blame cannot be placed entirely on economic recession and widespread unemployment.

Other reasons why so many are going broke include "easier terms" offered by the 1981 federal Bankruptcy Reform Act, the commercial exploitation of "easy credit," the nationwide desire to spend beyond income, and the fact that declaration of bankruptcy no longer carries the stigma it once did.

The legal profession isn't helping. Many attorneys advertise for bankruptcy clients. One firm in Southern California offers help for a fee of $99 on "credit terms."

Nationwide, almost 500,000 persons filed for bankruptcy in 1981, and the filing pace is much faster this year.

Most of those declaring bankruptcy are young wage-earners who could manage to pay a large portion of their debts over a five-year period. Many chose bankruptcy as a convenience and not as a last-resort financial necessity.

Many file under Chapter 7 bankruptcy statute, in which the court cancels debts, sells the debtor's property and distributes assets among creditors. Debtors tend to shun Chapter 13, the bankruptcy section that sets up a plan for repayment of debts and at the same time allows continuation of credit.

At this time, a concerned Congress is examining ways to change bankruptcy laws. One proposal would deny bankruptcy to individuals with ability to work out payment of debts and would force most debtors into a five-year repayment plan.

Something must be done to stop those who use bankruptcy courts for the easy way out.

Time for NATO update

It's becoming ever more clear that among the peoples of the Western alliance the fear of a nuclear war in Europe requires a major shift in thinking about mutual defense. Since the end of World War II, European security has depended primarily on the U.S. strategic nuclear umbrella and on tactical nuclear weapons designed to counter the Soviet Union's numerically superior tanks and ground forces.

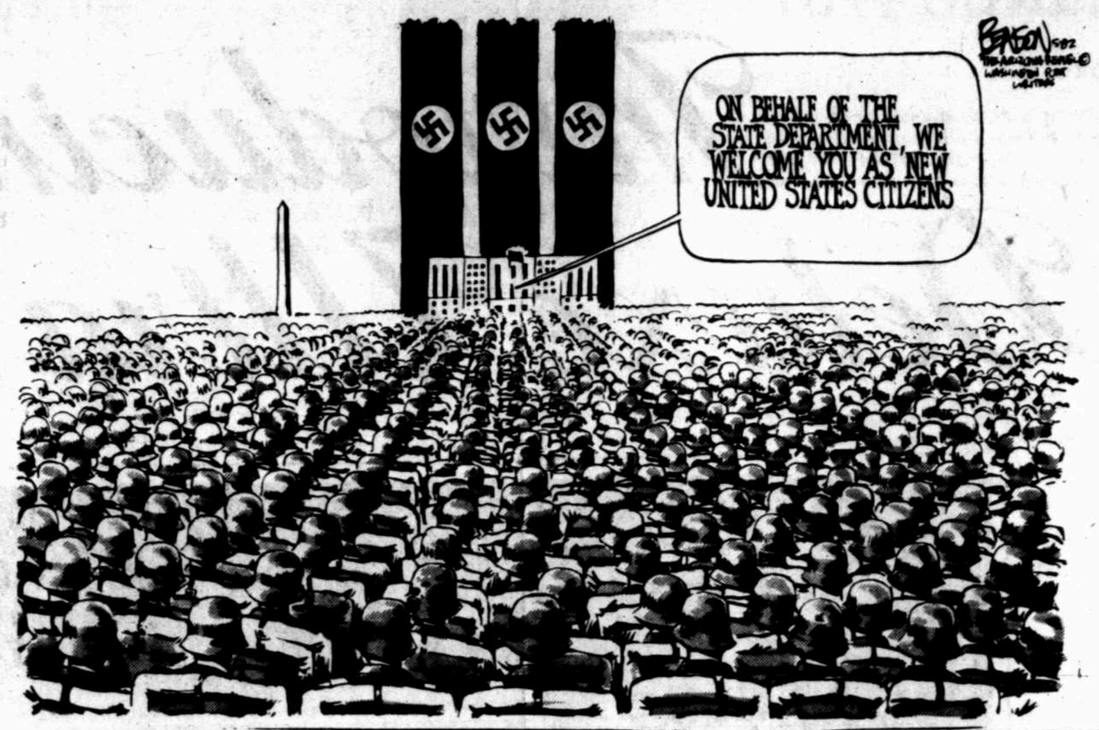

Now that Russia has succeeded in largely neutralizing those protections by deploying its own ICBMs and theater-range nuclear missiles, the impulse of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization has been to deploy more and more nuclear arms in Europe. What growing numbers of West Europeans and, lately, Americans fear is that the multiplication of those missile systems raises the threshold of devastating nuclear war. A firm consensus has emerged that no matter how limited the tactics for which the nuclear weapons are intended, the first one fired will quickly escalate the exchange to all-out nuclear war, incinerating much of Europe, Russia and the United States.

Attention in the West has turned increasingly to the realization that if Europe can no longer safely rely on nuclear protection, the alliance must strive to match the superiority of the Warsaw Pact nations in conventional arms. The trouble with that rational alternative, however, is that the cost of enlarging NATO's forces will be far more than any of its members have shown any disposition to pay. It's also questionable whether the alliance possesses the economic resources to afford it, even if the political willingness were there. What's certain is that that course will be both politically and economically impossible unless the NATO allies can agree to pool their material and manpower resources far more coherently than the 14 partners have managed until now. Such improved coordination has been discussed often, but without effective result.

U.S. Senators John Glenn, Sam Nunn and William V. Roth Jr. have drawn attention to that disarray in NATO in a resolution that calls upon President Reagan to carry to next month's NATO summit in Bonn a proposal that the alliance finally begin in earnest to pool its financial, technological and human resources in order to rebuild defenses at an acceptable cost. They point out that although NATO looks good on paper, its lack of an integrated command and communications structure and its disparate weapons systems fall short of the coordination necessary for an effective conventional military counter to the Soviets. Their resolution urges the Europeans and the United States to devise a major overhaul in NATO's training and tactics and the integration of weapons and ammunition.

The wisdom of that proposal needs no underscoring. Whatever the costs to the allies of upgrading their conventional forces, in terms of genuine Western security, it is far preferable to continuing on a course that risks nuclear incineration. President Reagan should make the proposal a first priority in Bonn.

Argentina getting ready to join nuke club

WASHINGTON — In 1951, Juan Peron announced that Argentina had harnessed the atom, and a tremor of apprehension rippled around the world. Would this most terrifying of all sabers now be rattled by a strutting, second-rate dictator?

Jack Anderson

But it turned out that Peron's boast was based on the work of an erratic Austrian physicist who had worked for Nazi Germany before fleeing to Argentina. The apprehension turned to ridicule, and for a while Argentines became the butt of nuclear jokes.

The jokes are no longer funny. Argentina has some world-class nuclear scientists, all the necessary technology and soon will have enough nuclear material to make the belated bomb.

Some time before the Falklands crisis, a secret State Department report warned: "Argentina's capability in the nuclear field, announced plans for a national nuclear industry and prospects for nuclear growth, including eventually a nuclear weapons capability, remain a source of concern for the United States."

In fact, Jimmy Carter was so alarmed that he stopped all nuclear sales to Argentina. This didn't slow down the Argentine program. The Canadians, West Germans and Swiss were eager to provide assistance.

To become energy-independent by the year 2000, Argentina figures it needs six nuclear-power plants. The first one, built with West German help, is already in use; the second, a Canadian venture, is due to open this summer; and the third, another West German project, will open in the mid-1980s.

The Swiss, meanwhile, have agreed to build a heavy-water plant for Argentina that has U.S. intelligence experts worried. Combined with the materials and knowhow they already have, this plant will enable the Argentines to control the full cycle of technology needed to produce nuclear bombs.

In fact, a plant to be built near Buenos Aires will be able to reprocess spent nuclear fuel into plutonium. This is the stuff of which nuclear bombs are made.

Equally disturbing is the fact that Argentina's nuclear program is run by the navy. And although the head of the program, Adm. Carlos Madero, has repeatedly stated that Argentina does not plan to build a bomb, the country's refusal to join international nonproliferation and inspection programs is ominous. Madero contends that Argentina has had the technology to build a bomb since December 1970, but hasn't done so.

The CIA has estimated that 1979 was the "earliest technically feasible date" that Argentina could have had a nuclear "device" in hand, and reckoned it would take a much longer time to produce nuclear weapons.

The CIA added that "any attempt to actually fabricate and-or test a nuclear device will come only after the country has considered the political and strategic situation and is desperate enough to accept the consequences ..."

Intelligence sources told my associate Dale Van Atta that the CIA now estimates it would take Argentina three years to build a bomb. But they added that the Defense Intelligence Agency thinks it could be done sooner. Argentine officials, questioned privately, agree; they could do the job in six months, they say.

The big question, of course, is whether the Falklands situation has made Argentina "desperate enough" to forge ahead with a nuclear weapons program. There are some indications that they're at least getting ready to make a decision.

For example, the CIA reported last year that there were signs Argentina was planning to trade raw uranium to China for enriched weapons-grade uranium. South Africa, which has an active nuclear-weapons program, has a secret arms-cooperation agreement with Argentina. And the Soviet Union agreed in April to sell Argentina at least 45 pounds of enriched uranium to the Argentine junta.

EXECUTIVE MEMO: One of the things bureaucratic fatcats like about flying first-class is that the seats are roomier than in economy-class. But consider the case of Sherman Unger, the Commerce Department's general counsel, who flew to Los Angeles on official business, then paid for his own three-day visit to a San Diego weight-reduction clinic before flying back to Washington. Yet he flew first-class both ways. The fat farm apparently failed.

— Trying to achieve a "new look" for its rather drab environmental image, the administration is considering appointment of a Sierra Club board member to the White House Council on Environmental Quality, which supposedly sets government policy on environmental issues. The prospect is Marty Fluharty, a Republican who is vice chairman of the Michigan Environmental Review Board. What makes this doubly interesting is that Fluharty was turned down for the job by Interior Secretary James Watt because of some strong anti-Watt statements she has made. But the White House may overrule the secretary.

— Despite judicious leaks to the press on the grand job William Clark is doing at the National Security Council, White House sources say all is not serene at the NSC. Clark has miffed some people by quietly sacking a number of staffers, and he reportedly takes little interest in the foreign policy issues that are supposed to be the NSC's specialty. This, of course, delights Secretary of State Al Haig, who doesn't mind making the policy decisions.

INSIDE REPORT:

'Uncle Gringo' becoming part of problem

GUATEMALA CITY — In the decline of U.S. influence and prestige throughout Latin America, not only is military aid to Guatemala non-existent in the precarious battle against leftist guerrillas but leaders here actually doubt whether Washington's help would be worth the trouble.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

U.S. hesitancy over trying to keep Central America's most important country out of the Castro-communist net can be traced to liberal House members and Carter administration holdovers in the State Department. Latin American leaders who danced in the streets in November 1980, when Ronald Reagan was elected, have glumly resigned themselves to the reality that very little has changed.

What Latins view as an exuberantly-insensitive tilt by Secretary of State Alexander Haig toward Britain over the Falklands finally turns Uncle Sam into Uncle Gringo. During a two-week, four-nation reporting trip through Central America, we found anti-communist Latins feeling they must seek their own salvation without help and, hopefully, without interference from Washington.

The prospects are not all bad. El Salvador's new democratically-elected government is winning the guerrilla war. Honduras has its first elected government in 10 years. Unrest grows in Marxist-Leninist Nicaragua. An unbelievably corrupt and brutal military regime in Guatemala has been supplanted by a vastly more honest and decent junta.

Nevertheless, Guatemala is Central America's worst trouble spot. Government plans to clear out some 800 communist guerrillas near the Mexican border in the northwest are impeded by poorly-trained, poorly-equipped troops. The junta would at least like a few U.S. helicopters, but nothing is in prospect.

One reason is the verdict by visiting aides of Reps. Stephen Solarz (N.Y.), Gerry Studds (Mass.) and Tom Harkin (Iowa) that the army still commits human rights violations in the countryside. Could the unpublished judgment of aides to three super-liberal Democrats condemn this important country to communism? Not without help from staffers in the State Department's Latin American division who are holdovers from the Carter administration and maintain its human rights dogmatism.

Actually, sympathetic officials in the U.S. Embassy here wonder whether the aid is worth the kind of congressional scrutiny now threatening retaliation from Washington because El Salvador's elected representatives amended the land reform law. Many Guatemalans feel the same way. Gustavo Anzueto, a thoughtful conservative leader, has proposed seeking military aid from South Africa, Israel and Argentina — but not the U.S.

Honduras wants U.S. military aid to counter the massive buildup across the border in Nicaragua but is pessimistic, considering Washington's slow pay on economic aid. A high-ranking Honduran official recently wrote a heated letter to the U.S. Embassy noting that a flying visit to Moscow by a Nicaraguan commandante brought $200 million in Soviet aid; one year of negotiations still has not produced a promised $35 million for democratic Honduras.

U.S. support for Britain in the Falklands has created disillusionment throughout Central America about "our big brother." Whatever the logical value, Hondurans claim this makes U.S. aid unlikely in a land war against Nicaragua. "I have been anti-communist all my life," one Guatemalan air force officer told us, "but I wonder now whether we can make a deal with Russia."

He will not turn to Moscow. But officials in all four countries told us the next time the gringos ask for a vote at the United Nations, the answer from the Latins will be no. That petty reprisal is a symbolic statement that in the minds of Central Americans committed to democracy and capitalism against a communist offensive, Washington — even under Ronald Reagan — has become part of the problem rather than the solution.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, June 7, the 158th day of 1982. There are 207 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 7, 1975, the United States withdrew its last combat aircraft based on Taiwan.

On this date:

In 1494, Spain and Portugal signed the Treaty of Tordesillas, agreeing to divide the New World between themselves.

In 1862, the United States and Britain signed a treaty suspendng the slave trade.

In 1921, the first Parliament of Northern Ireland opened.

And in 1970, voters in Switzerland rejected a proposal to force almost one-third of one million aliens to leave that country.

Ten years ago: American jets battered a North Vietnamese railroad yard only a few miles from the Chinese border.

CHARLEY REESE

Socialists only selling trickery

Zev Jabotinsky, an early Zionist who broke with the mainstream, propounded the principle of monism. By that he meant that Zionism should not be diluted by other ideologies, especially socialism.

Charley Reese

The more I look at the world, the more I realize what a smart guy Jabotinsky was in recognizing the weakness of any movement infected with socialism.

A socialist seems to be unable to separate his ideology from any other activity or duty or mission. In other words, a socialist puts socialism ahead of his own country, ahead of his own union, ahead of his own trade or craft.

We in this country suffer a great deal because of this. A socialist who happens to be an economist will slant his economic writings to further his ideology; a socialist who happens to be a sociologist will always somehow have his studies come out in support of socialism; a socialist who happens to be a journalist will slant the news to reflect his ideology.

Apparently, once you become a believing socialist, you lose your ability to be objective about anything. Fabian socialists, of course, believe in slipping socialism into a society in a piecemeal fashion. The Fabians originated in England and were a group who realized that, in their day at least, the British people wouldn't buy socialism if it were offered out in the open, fair and square.

A lot has been written about liberals who are sympathetic to communists but outraged by rightists. I think the explanation is that many of the people who call themselves liberals are really believers in socialism and communism is a variation of socialism so they are naturally sympathetic.

Hannoi's favorite American actress, Jane Fonda, said when she refused to condemn North Vietnamese oppression that she would never criticize a socialist state. She and her husband, Tom Hayden, are peddling socialism under another name.

If someone wishes to be a socialist, he ought to call himself socialist and run on a socialist platform and make it clear, when he pretends to be a journalist, economist, foreign policy expert or whatever, that he is talking from a socialist point of view.

What these folks like to do, however, is refer to socialists as democratic folks and to capitalists as rightwingers or fascists or some other derogatory term. They like to present their socialist interpretation of events as an objective interpretation.

Socialist apologists for the communist guerrillas in El Salvador don't say that they back the guerrillas because they believe in the same economic system; they like to say they back the guerrillas because the guerrillas represent the people and the other side is repressive. (Remember, however, it was the other side which held elections and abided by the results.)

What Jabotinsky was saying was that if you're going to be a zionist, be a zionist; if you're going to be a union man, be a union man; if you're going to be a journalist, be a journalist and don't use your occupation or profession or position as a vehicle to carry extra baggage.

Take a guy like William Wimpisinger, head of the Machinists Union. You never know if he is speaking as a union leader, an American or a socialist. If I were a member of his union, I would want to know.

I'm opposed to socialism because it doesn't work and because it's inconsistent with political freedom. The historical record of socialism failures, however, apparently doesn't make a dent in a socialist skull which leads me to believe it is the favorite "ism" of the less intelligent portion of the population.

It's too much to ask that these dummies wise up, but at least they could be honest and quit trying to trick people. I suppose, however, that when you have a bad product to sell, it's trickery or nothing.

Story told about Britain's secret Special Air Service

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following rare glimpse into operations of the Special Air Service, Britain's most secret army unit, is a pooled dispatch by Max Hastings of The Standard newspaper of London. It was passed by British military censors and made available to The Associated Press by the British domestic news agency, Press Association.

By MAX HASTINGS

WITH BRITISH FORCES ON THE FALKLAND ISLANDS (AP) — Earlier this week I had the unusual privilege — indeed I think it is almost unique for a reporter — of being the guest of the men of the Special Air Service on an operation, our brilliant initial landing last week on Mount Kent, a key hill overlooking Port Stanley.

In normal circumstances, no publicity of any kind is given to their activities. But in the tragic Sea King helicopter crash on May 19 in advance of the British landing at Port San Carlos, 18 of their NCOs (non-commissioned fficers) and men were killed...

The 22nd SAS Regiment has decided that it owes it to the families of these men, if to no one else, to tell the story of some of the extraordinary things they have been doing since this war began ...

The 22nd SAS' war began in earnest on the night of April 21... 15 men were flown by helicopter from a Royal Navy cruiser onto the Fortuna glacier on the island of South Georgia, 700 miles east of the Falklands.

THEIR MISSION was to move into positions from which they could observe the Argentine garrison. But the conditions in which they found themselves defy description. Besides the paralyzing cold, they met winds of more than 100 miles an hour... Movement was unthinkable, they could achieve nothing.

Reluctantly, they were obliged the next morning to ask to be withdrawn to try again by another route. A Mark IV Wessex helicopter flew through a total whiteout to recover them. The troops piled aboard. Within a few seconds of take-off, they had crashed. A second helicopter flew in. The survivors clambered in. A few minutes later, it too had crashed.

Lt. Cmdr. Ian Stanley, commander of the cruiser Antrim's helicopters, was left to bring in a third Wessex. By brilliant flying he took aboard a gross overload of 17 men, including the aircrew from the crashed helicopters, and lifted them away to the ships.

Yet only a few hours after that epic series of mishaps, the SAS' amphibious troops went in to try again.

Fifteen men set out in five Gemini rubber craft... One Gemini suffered almost immediate engine failure and whirled away with the gale into the night...the crew paddled ashore a few hundred yards from the last point of land between themselves and Antarctica.... They were rescued and those men are on the hills of the Falklands today.

Another Gemini also was swept away...its beacon signalpicked up the following morning... The remaining three boats reached Grass Island and established observation posts...

ON APRIL 25, naval helicopters engaged the Argentine submarine Sante Fe en route to reinforce the South Georgia garrison...

By mid-afternoon, 30 of the SAS, commanded by Maj. Guy Sheridan of the Royal Marines, and followed up by marines from the warships, landed three miles from Grytviken and dashed for the Argentine positions. No resistance was offered.

The SAS men ran up their Union Jack from the flagpole while a bewildered Argentine officer complained: "You've just run through a minefield."

SAS and SBS operations on the Falklands mainland started at the beginning of May. The SAS parties endured weeks on end of living motionless under foul weather conditions within sight of Argentine positions...

On the night of May 14, eight men landed by canoe on the Falkland mainland opposite Pebble Island, a key Argentine air base, crossed the channel and...marked a landing zone for 45 SAS men who came in and in half an hour destroyed 11 Argentine aircraft while the original squad provided covering fire...

On the night of the big British landing at San Carlos, SAS men carried out vital diversionary operations. South of San Carlos, 40 carried out harrassing attacks around Darwin and Goose Green ...

AFTER GOOSE Green was recaptured May 28, the Argentine commander said that he believed that night he was being attacked by a battalion. These days, SAS men are in action around Port Stanley most nights.

Soldiers get bit of cheer

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — A New Zealand man, feeling compassion for the British troops preparing for the final battle with Argentina forces in the freezing Falkland Islands, has dispatched a bit of native cheer.

George Pearson said he felt he and his wife Dawn had to show support for the British servicemen so he sent a check to Prime Minister Robert Muldoon with a request that it be used for "comforts."

Argentine journalists observe 'Day of the Journalist'

By TOM FENTON

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentine journalists reporting on the Falkland Islands fight with Britain congratulated themselves today for putting aside their objectivity and supporting their country's war effort, the government news agency Telam said.

The agency reported on a proclamation issued by journalists whose duties involve war coverage as Argentina observed a national "Day of the Journalist."

"These special circumstances...move war correspondents and journalists accredited by the armed forces to abandon their traditional role as objective relators of facts and to commit their opinion in the face of a reality that affects us all.

"With this commitment, and aware that in war situations the work of informing is subject to understandable security requirements,...news media are keeping the Argentine people informed of developments," the story said.

Argentine reporters officially are barred from reporting war news other than that contained in the terse communiques the government has cranked out at an average of about two a day, at all hours of the day and night, since the Falklands were seized by Argentina April 2. A news agency and a newspaper have suffered temporary shutdowns for violating the war coverage guidelines.

THE COMMINIQUES leave much unsaid. For example, the government has yet to inform the public the British have recaptured South Georgia Island, a Falklands dependency that Britain said it recaptured April 25-26.

Although Argentine officials prefer to maintain tight control over the flow of information, they are aware that their methods are giving the British an advantage in reaching world opinion because editors in many countries trust the information coming from Britain.

For example, Telam, in another story, complained Sunday that the predominant use of information from London by Chilean news media was causing concern in the border province of Mendoza, where residents can tune in to Chilean radio stations.

Chilean media "repeatedly give absolute priority to information from London while mostly ignoring information originating in Buenos Aires," Telam said.

The journalists' proclamation also referred to the information battle:

"Argentine authorities have preferred to maintain a sober silence when there are no events that merit special mention, as opposed to falsifying information as the English have done," the proclamation said.

MEANWHILE, IN London, former Irish Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald on Sunday announced the formation of a worldwide committee to press Argentina for the release of three British journalists who have been imprisoned in Argentina for eight weeks on spy charges.

FitzGerald said the committee would send a telegram to Argentine President Gen. Leopoldo Galtieri, urging him to free Simon Winchester of the Sunday Times and Ian Mather and Tony Prime of the Observer.

Also in London, British Broadcasting Corp. correspondent Robert Fox, in a dispatch from the Falklands, said he knew of no basis for reports that L. Col. Herbert Jones, the hero of the British assault on Goose Green, had threatened to sue the BBC for manslaughter for disclosing prematurely the British plans to attack the airstrip. Jones died in the assault.

Fox said he traveled with Jones and "at no time did Col. Jones, a man I came to regard as a close friend, utter, in my presence, any kind of threat to take action against the BBC."

The BBC on Sunday said it has not broadcast any information that was not readily available in London and repeated its call for an inquiry into the British Defense Ministry's handling of information about the war.

Concern exists over spread of revolution

By The Associated Press

Israeli's military thrust into Lebanon comes at a time when the Arab world is divided on a number of key issues in the Middle East.

There are differences over the Iran-Iraq war, Egypt's peace treaty with Israel and a general peace plan to end 34 years of Arab-Israeli conflict.

There also is concern over the possible spread of Iran's Islamic revolution into the more moderate Arab nations, especially those on the oil-rich Persian Gulf.

Here is a rundown of the problem areas:

IRAN—IRAQ WAR

This conflict appears to be going in the favor of predominantly non-Arab Iran after 20 months of fighting that began with Iraq reinstating its claim to the Shatt al-Arab, a waterway that gives the Iraqis their only access to the Persian Gulf.

With the Arabs now preoccupied with the Israeli drive against Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon, the possibility looms that Iran, which has pushed the Iraqis back toward their own territory, might try to invade eastern Iraq.

Iran's Islamic revolutionary government has said it would not discuss peace with Iraq until its president, Saddam Hussein, is removed from office. Iranian leaders have hinted at an invasion of Iraq in pursuit of that goal.

Although Iran publicly opposes Israel and voices support for the Palestinians, it has received $25 million worth of weapons from the Israelis, according to Defense Minister Ariel Sharon of Israel and Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, the exiled ex-president of Iran.

THE PERSIAN GULF

Iran's military successes against Iraq has spread concern through the Arab nations of the Persian Gulf, including Saudi Arabia, that Iran's Islamic fundamentalist revolution will spread to their Arab masses.

The fear is that an Iranian victory will ignite traditional antipathies between the Shia Moslems, followers of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini who are dominant in Iran, and the Sunni sect, which prevails elsewhere in the Middle East. Shiite minorities exist in the Persian Gulf nations which provide the Western world and Japan with 40 percent of their imported oil. They form a 60 percent majority in Iraq and are the largest Moslem sect in Lebanon, where they number almost a million.

THE SYRIANS

The Syrians, who have joined with Libya in support of Iran in the Persian Gulf war, are a critical factor in whether the Israeli strike becomes a broader conflict.

Syria has 30,000 soldiers in Lebanon as a peace force to police the cease-fire in the 1975-76 Lebanese civil war between leftist Moslems and rightist Maronite Christian forces.

President Hafez Assad of Syria has said his troops would fight in Lebanon if they are threatened by the Israelis.

The Israelis said Sunday their mission is the crush Palestinian guerrilla bases and had no intention of attacking Syrian positions, unless the Syrians attacked them.

DEAR ABBY

Lovesick woman needs doctor

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: To make a long story short, I am in love with my gynecologist. Other than for routine checkups, I keep finding excuses to make an appointment so I can see him. I did have cancer of the uterus, but I had surgery for that and am completely cured now.

I'm divorced and have teen-age children, but I don't know anything about my doctor. One day when I was in his office, we happened to look at each other and our eyes just locked! He didn't look away until I did, and neither of us said anything, but I know it was an electric moment for both of us.

I've been alone for nine years and own my own home. I don't know if he's married or not. He won't offer a word of encouragement during my visits, but he is very friendly and seems to enjoy talking to me. After he looked at me that way, I can't help wondering if there's a chance for me. It says on my chart I am not married, so I'm sure he knows I'm available.

After every appointment, before I leave, he says, "Is there anything you want to ask me?"

Would it be terrible if I said, "Yes. Would you like to see me outside the office"? — GOT A CRUSH ON MY DOCTOR

DEAR GOT: It wouldn't be "terrible," but it would be inappropriate. There's an unwritten law that doctors do not date their patients. If the "crush" becomes too crushing, find another gynecologist. This one is off limits.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 14 years old and I like to talk on the phone a lot with my friends. I want to get a phone of my own so that my parents won't have to yell at me for tying up the line or getting too many phone calls.

I am willing to buy the phone and pay the phone bills myself with the money I earn from baby-sitting, yard work and so on. All of my friends have their own phones, and over half of them bought the phones themselves and pay their own phone bills the same way I want to.

My parents say "No!" Why, Abby? Please tell me why. And if you have any good ideas on how I can change their minds, please tell me. — WANTS MY OWN PHONE

DEAR WANTS: I suspect that your parents are fearful that if you have your own phone you will spend more time talking and less on homework and chores. Try to make a deal with them. Agree to keep your grades at a level that they consider acceptable if you can have your own phone. And if you fall below that level, the phone will be removed without a whimper.

DEAR ABBY: I usually agree with your advice 100 percent, but not this time. I know you meant well when you told your readers to ring up an elderly person who lives alone and say, "I am coming to visit you on one condition — that you do not lift one finger. I am bringing the refreshments, all you have to do is open the door!"

Abby, I am old and sick, and if someone were to call me with that message I would struggle to my feet and try to straighten up the place. Most old ladies who live alone are ashamed of their casual housekeeping. It is fine for them, but not for company. I used to be an excellent housekeeper, but not anymore. I just don't have the strength.

I love my friends, but I wish they would stay home and leave me alone. My entertaining days are over. Old ladies pushing 90 should be left in peace.

If you print this, don't use my name. Sign me ... AN OLD LADY

DEAR LADY: I realize that you are speaking only for yourself, but I have a hunch you are speaking for many.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MY READERS: If a member of your family has been diagnosed as "mentally ill" and is living at home, please write and tell me what problems this has created for you. Your firsthand experiences are needed for an important mental health study.

(Problems? Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Creating an updated country look

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. We have a small older home in a very desirable downtown location and we are embarking on a fix-up project. We are going to remove some walls to make fewer, larger rooms. Since the house has few windows we are adding some skylights. I want to replace the floor which is painted wood, adding a lot of personality to the house.

Starting first with the living room, I'd like some suggestions for things we can do ourselves that won't destroy our limited budget. I want to create a country look — but an updated, crisp interpretation. What ideas do you have? We will be buying new furniture. — W.P.

A. Certainly, fresh paint is the least expensive and most logical place to start working decorating wonders. Another relatively inexpensive decorative treatment is applying a spectacular fabric to your walls and applying the same fabric to upholstered pieces in your room.

For a country look, why not select a pair of short sofas with exposed wood frames? Put on those frames an elegant cotton chintz or polished cotton fabric in a variety of colors. Buy extra fabric and apply it to one wall. Repeat the fabric in draperies or laminate it to window shades.

Take a pleasing light color from the print and paint the other walls that color. For the floor, consider laying wood squares to give you a parquet-look. This would be an easy solution if your painted floors are old and unattractive.

Before you apply the wood squares, however, you might try removing some paint from the existing floors to see what the condition of the wood is underneath. Removing many coats of paint is a chore, but you might find fabulous wood underneath.

But, either way, exposed wood floors would add to a country look.

You might complement the wood with a soft, handcrafted rug between your sofas to create a seating area. Add country accessories, paying close attention to detail.

A provincial sideboard might provide the proper focus in a room when filled with mellow pieces of pewter, brass or copper as well as country ceramics you might collect from secondhand shops. Select end tables, a coffee table and lamps, too, with an informal appearance, contrasting interesting materials such as wood, ceramics, wicker, basketry and leather.

Q. We have a rather traditional house that I would like to make more contemporary. I am about to buy some occasional chairs for our living room. I rather like some chairs I have seen with buttoning on the seat and back. They are in gold velvet and would blend with our sofa which is in greens, golds, blues and ivory. Would these chairs give me a more modern look? — R.B.

A. Buttoning or deep tufting on a chair usually gives a traditional look to a piece of upholstered furniture. It was extremely popular in Victorian and Edwardian furniture. Usually, it is associated with the period between 1880 to 1910. I think if you want a more contemporary look you should choose a plainer upholstery design.

Q. We have a condominium living room that is reasonably small but has a great view of the city. To keep furniture to a minimum but have maximum seating, we are buying a light beige modular sofa that will be arranged in a U. I am trying to decide how to reupholster our dining room chairs. I want a very subdued fabric because I want the view and the accessories in the room to be spotlighted. With medium-brown walls, lighter-brown carpeting and the beige sofa, what should I put on the chairs? — P.W.

A. If you are attempting to play down color and pattern in the room and the room in small, why don't you cover the dining chairs in the same fabric as the sofa? If that same fabric is not available, choose a fabric in about the same tone of beige but with a different texture — perhaps a nubby woven fabric or a silky, shiny one. The contrast in texture would be interesting but the color would blend to enlarge your space.

Furniture sales decreasing

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Bought any furniture lately? Chances are the answer is "no."

Nationally, retail furniture sales are down about 13 percent compared to the third quarter of 1979 — the last time the industry enjoyed good sales results, according to the National Association of Furniture Manufacturers.

With unemployment up, housing starts down, and many businesses and individuals curtailing plans until the economy improves, home furnishings retailers are finding it tough going. A number are reporting much greater losses than the national average.

As a result, some stores have gone out of business. Many of those which remain are working harder for each sale.

AT THE RECENT NATIONAL furniture market in North Carolina, for example, retail-store members of Retailers' Marketing Guild, a cooperative advertising and marketing syndicate, met daily to discuss ways and means of boosting sales and efficiency.

According to Al Levy, president of RMG, independent stores such as the 1,500 belonging to his organization do about 40 percent of the retail furniture business in the United States. He said increasing advertising and promotional activities, offering better values and scheduling special events to get customers into the stores were helping some independent retailers to keep going.

The fact that furniture retailers are trying harder may add up to greater convenience or other benefits for consumers. For example, Goldberg Furniture in Aberdeen, Wash., has set up an "unemployment insurance" program. For a small added fee, the "insurance" will pick up the payments if an individual is laid off, reports Market Place Magazine, a home furnishings trade publication.

Goldberg's also offers workshops in home decoration. The workshops are free, but a contribution of canned goods must be deposited in a local food bank. Some of the store's decorating programs carry a fee which the store donates to charity.

OTHER RETAILERS ARE holding special events to attract customers. A promotion for a new line of Walt Disney character-inspired children's furniture at L. Bee Furniture in Jacksonville, Fla., attracted 800 who came to see Mickey House. Even though "700 of the 800 were aged 5 and under," owner Charles Moskovitz said the promotion was well worth the effort and expense because of the good will it engendered.

Retailers are also studying their customer's needs more carefully than may have once been the case. One retailer in Connecticut, for example, has started the "Sofa Works System." The store, with branches in several states, stocks only sleep sofas, recliners and related accessories such as tables, lamps and area rugs.

J. William Elliott, Sofa Works System owner, said he was not merely selling furniture. Instead, he is providing solutions for singles with one-room apartments and families who need extra sleeping room.

A RETAIL STORE in Milwaukee has figured out a way to cut costs and prices by eliminating a costly delivery service. Cashway Furniture lends customers, for a $25 refundable fee, a trailer to tow their furniture purchases home themselves. The same store has changed its hours to conform with its customers' shopping habits. The store is open only four days a week — Friday, Saturday and Monday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Sunday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Sunday shopping hours have become commonplace in most parts of the country, as have late evening hours to accommodate those who work full time.

Other retailers are cleaning up their stores and putting more space to work. Newport Furniture in Newport, R.I., converted a former conference room into a baby-furniture department, and a warehouse space in the back was turned into an outdoor-furniture shop. Owner Gerald Rubin hired art students to paint a mural on the white concrete walls and carpeted the cement floor to improve the looks of the space.

Some store owners are becoming more efficient. "We cut costs by reducing our staff from 44 to 12," said Frank Mazza, owner of two retail stores in Hammonton, N.J.

One of the most effective ways to keep customers happy is to offer lower prices and better values. Consequently, greater emphasis is being placed on closeouts, floor samples and sale merchandise by many retailers.

Apparel stores offered sales know-how

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Apparel retailers throughout the country call on the services provided by the new Center for Apparel Marketing and Merchandising at Oklahoma State University.

The center offers educational assistance for retailers in regional apparel markets such as Minneapolis, Denver, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, Miami, Atlanta, and Dallas, says Dr. Kathryn M. Greenwood, center director and OSU professor of clothing, textiles and merchandising.

Besides conducting research of interest to small retailers, the center provides information needed to operate stores successfully, such as:

—Simplified inventory control.

—How to maintain good vendor-retailer relations.

—Ways to promote and sell apparel.

—How to improve merchandise management and profits.

—Seasonal merchandise plans and open-to-buy.

The center, the only one in the United States, is an integrated program of OSU home-economics research and extension, in cooperation with the department of clothing, textiles and merchandising.

Mrs. Greenwood explains the center is an expansion of similar services provided the past five years at the Dallas Apparel Mart. More than 1,000 retailers representing 30 states have participated there in workshops, seminars, and consulting services.

"Many small apparel retailers said the information met their needs and helped them solve problems," she adds.

Mrs. Greenwood and another OSU faculty member, Deborah P. Strickland, initiated the first workshop in the Dallas market. Both provide leadership and develop programs for the new center.

In the Dallas Apparel Market, the center is sponsored by the American Fashion Association, an organization representing apparel manufacturers having showrooms in the mart. "Similar groups in other apparel markets will sponsor the center," Mrs. Greenwood says.

She notes that the failure rate is extremely high for women's and children's stores within the first five years of operation.

George Bellows

NEW YORK (AP) — "Homage to George Bellows," an exhibition of lithographs with selected drawings and paintings, is being shown at the Metropolitan Museum of Art through July 4.

The exhibition contains about 75 of Bellows' works and is in honor of the 100th anniversary of the artist's birth.

Take care with plants in moving

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Will your plants survive the move? That's one question to consider if you're moving soon, advises an expert in the moving industry.

"Moving plants is more of a challenge than growing them," said Elaine DeShong, manager of customer service for U-Haul International, headquartered in Phoenix.

"But with proper care and know-how, plants can be moved successfully," she added, suggesting these packing and moving tips:

—Before you move, check with the department of agriculture for border inspection stations along your route. Since harmful pests found in some household plants may spread to valuable crops, some states maintain border stations to keep plants out.

—The key to moving plants is to securely wedge them in place. This keeps them from shifting and bumping into other objects. One of the best ways to do this is to lay a metal utility shelf unit on the floor of the truck or trailer. Place smaller plants between the shelves with the pots touching the floor. Stuff newspapers between the plants. This protects them from highway jolts and lessens temperature fluctuations.

—Newspapers also come in handy for holding soil in place. Pack the newspaper down firmly, between the rim of the pot and soil surface.

—Place the larger and taller plants in wicker baskets, clothes hampers or cardboard sleeves. Stuff containers with newspapers for protection.

—Thoroughly water and drain plants before packing. Load the plant last to make watering easier en route.

—Temperatures in the back of a truck or trailer can fluctuate tremendously, so periodically open the doors to give the plants fresh air and water. Misting the plants keeps the humidity high inside the van box, and gives plants a better chance for survival.

—When moving plants in your own vehicle, load pots on the floor. Hanging plants may be hung on a clothes rack across the back seat or on individual coat hangers, but make sure that they don't block the driver's rearward view; and avoid making sudden stops.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Regular checkups best aid for avoiding cancer

Dear Dr. Solomon: It seems to me that I'm hearing more and more about cancer of the prostate. I don't smoke so I'm not worried about lung cancer. But what's the best way for me to protect myself against cancer of the prostate? I am 62 years old. — Mr. T.N., Skokie, Ill.

Dear Mr. N.: Early detection is of course the best way to reduce the number of deaths from prostatic cancer. The best way to detect it is through a regular painless finger examination of the prostate by a physician.

Such examination is particularly important in men over 50 years of age.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have tried to stop smoking several times, and I mean really tried, but with no luck. Now I think I may be pregnant. You once wrote that babies born to mothers who smoke weigh less than other babies, and this isn't good. Can't you recommend a diet that would take care of this? — Annette, Pa.

Dear Annette: Any diet you are placed on will have to be recommended by someone much closer to the situation than I am. I can tell you, however, that what you are looking for is probably not available.

Studies have shown that a baby's weight at birth is not related to the amount of weight gained during pregnancy by the mother if she smokes. Apparently, it is the smoking itself that produces the low birth weight.

If your pregnancy is confirmed, possibly that fact will provide the additional motivation you need to kick the cigarette habit once and for all.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have just turned 65 and I can accept the fact that there are certain things that I could do when I was younger that I can't do now. I don't shovel the snow off my walk any more and I don't have sex. My wife is the same age but becomes annoyed when she wants to make love and I push her away. What would you suggest? — Mr. B.R.

Dear Mr. R.: I would not ordinarily think of equating shoveling snow with having sex. For most people, one is a chore while the other is a pleasurable activity, and I hope I don't have to be specific about which is which.

You do not indicate whether you have some underlying medical problem that prevents you from having a sexual relationship. If this is the case, your personal physician is going to have to advise you on what you can and cannot do. But if there is no underlying disorder, why assume you are too old, especially when you have a wife who would be a willing partner?

It may be that you require more stimulation than you did 20 years ago, but that's no reason to abstain completely. Let someone else shovel your walk, but don't let the calendar determine your sex life. Turning 65 is not the end of the world, and it certainly does not have to be the end of a mutually satisfying sexual relationship.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Isn't it true that by following the Pritikin diet, I can increase the blood flow into my limbs? — Grace, Akron

Dear Grace: No. According to a study carried out at the University of Alberta in Edmonton, there is no evidence of increased blood flow into the limbs of people who follow the Pritikin diet.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've been using some of the behavior modification techniques you describe in your book "Stop Smoking, Lose Weight," and they have been very helpful. Would they also work for children? — Mrs. B.A., Detroit

Dear Mrs. A.: Behavior modification can definitely play a role in helping obese children lose weight; however, it is not possible at the outset to predict who will and who will not benefit from it. In any event, a number of studies have documented the effectiveness of behavior modification in weight control for both children and adults.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I don't understand why men don't live as long as women. Men are stronger than women and they usually are more active. Shouldn't this make them even healthier than women? — Roy, Burlington, Iowa

Dear Roy: Your argument may be sound as far as it goes, but it doesn't go far enough. There is some evidence that, biologically speaking, men and women are not created equal. For example, platelets (which are found in the blood) seem to age much faster in men than in women between 40 and 80 years of age.

You also ignore the fact that men generally have more of the risk factors associated with the leading causes of death, such as heart disease and cancer. Even among teen-agers, boys are more likely than girls to smoke cigarettes and use alcohol. And when they are older, men are more likely than women to work at jobs where they are exposed to harmful substances or to the risk of injury.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother had three children and all were delivered at home. I had one child and I was in the hospital for eight days. Now my daughter is pregnant and she says her obstetrician told her she could go home within a day after having her baby. I may be old-fashioned, but it seems as if this is rushing things a little bit more than is good. Wouldn't you agree? — Mrs. V.M., St. Petersburg, Fla.

Dear Mrs. M.: Some comments by Dr. Lamar Ekbladh, an obstetrician at the North Carolina Memorial Hospital, put the issue you raise in a proper context. He points out that if a mother has a normal delivery and a healthy baby, she should have as few restrictions as possible placed on her. The approach today is to be flexible within the bounds of good medical care.

Any decision about when a mother and her newborn can leave the hospital has to be an individual matter, with the baby's health the most important consideration. No doctor would permit a baby to be taken home if there were any problems, and no mother would be asked to leave the hospital after a day if she were not comfortable with the idea and confident about her ability to care for her infant.

If your daughter does return home shortly after giving birth, you can relax with the assurance that neither she nor the baby will suffer as a result.

For Mr. W.T. (Fort Worth): In most of the patients that I have treated with kidney stones, they were found to be calcium. After a complete evaluation I determined why the stones were forming and then prescribed specific therapy. With proper diet and therapy, very often you can prevent additional stone formation.

An estimated 8,000 ERA supporters gathered in Tallahassee, Fla. Sunday for the Capitol March for ERA. About 35,000 people marched nationwide for ratification of the amendment, whose time runs out in three weeks.

Weekend ERA rallies draw over 35,000

By The Associated Press

At least 35,000 supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment marched in four state capitals, beginning a last-ditch three-week drive for ratification, while their leaders considered a novel effort to place the amendment on the North Carolina ballot.

Florida Gov. Bob Graham and his wife, Adele, led 10,000 marchers Sunday in Tallahassee, and North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt addressed another 10,000 in Raleigh.

FROM 5,000 TO 8,000 people marched in Springfield, Ill., and Gov. James R. Thompson — who had been criticized for "lukewarm" support of the ERA — said in Chicago he would personally call every state senator opposed to the amendment and seek votes for approval. Another 10,000 supporters marched in Oklahoma City.

Graham and many other marchers wore green and white — the colors of the National Organization for Women's ERA campaign. White also was worn by suffragettes of the early 1900s, seeking women's right to vote.

The amendment, which would ban discrimination on the basis of sex, needs ratification by three more states by June 30 to become part of the U.S. Constitution. Five of the 35 states that have ratified the amendment have attempted to rescind their ratifications, but that action is being challenged in the courts.

The demonstrations were held Sunday in states where ratification is considered most possible.

In North Carolina, where the Senate voted last week to table the ERA, Hunt and key supporters planned a meeting today with the head of the state Board of Elections to discuss placing the amendment on the June 29 primary ballot.

Alex K. Brock of the state Board of Elections said, however, that the Legislature would have to suspend 12 to 15 technical requirements to put the measure on the ballot and get voting rights approval from the U.S. Justice Department, which normally takes 60 days.

"It's not a feasible alternative or workable," he said. "It's totally off the wall."

Approval by plebiscite apparently would not count as ratification, because the U.S. Constitution requires ratification by state legislatures if that method is selected by Congress. If North Carolina voters approved the ERA, the Legislature would have only one day to act if it wished to ratify the amendment.

Betty McCain, Hunt's personal lobbyist for the ERA, said the proposal had merit.

"I don't think even the hardest anti-ERA person would object to letting the people cast their votes on the issue," she said. "I am convinced it would win in all 100 counties."

IN FLORIDA, LIZ Carpenter, former press secretary to Lady Bird Johnson, promised ERA supporters would "let every cotton-picking, tobacco-chewing legislator know what sexual harassment is" if they didn't ratify the measure.

Graham estimated the ERA has 17 or 18 supporters in the 40-member Florida Senate. It is expected to pass the Florida House.

In Springfield, former First Lady Betty Ford told the crowd, "It's time for the Illinois Legislature to wake up and become part of the 20th century."

Thompson, however, criticized the tactics of ERA supporters who have been on hunger strikes and chained themselves inside the Illinois Capitol. "So long as the fasting and the chaining go on, it's hurting the ERA," he said.

Four women have been on a pro-ERA hunger strike for 21 days. And last Thursday, a group of 17 supporters chained themselves outside Senate chambers.

Secretary of State Jim Edgar said he may might have to seek removal of the chained women if they block the Senate when it convenes today.

POSITIVE THINKING

Faith aids player's game

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Ever since I was a boy, I've been a baseball fan and, consequently, I'm proud to have a number of major league ball players among my friends. We aren't accustomed to thinking of professional athletes as religious people, but many of them are profoundly religious.

One well-known baseball star credits his success in the game to practicing his religion. He became interested in God's way of living as a youngster, but, as he grew older, began to wonder if it was really practical. Then he met a minister who showed him a new approach.

"If you will believe the Bible and actually practice its teachings, you will find that it will work. God will go out there on the baseball diamond with you and will help you to do your best," the pastor told him.

"Do you really mean that God will be in the ball park with me?"

"Yes, I do," came the answer.

Because my player friend is one of those great souls with a genuine capacity for faith, he believed what he had been told. And, more, he acted on it. Every day, when he comes out on the field for the game, he says, "Hello, Lord." A little familiar, perhaps, but there's never any disrespect in love and sincerity. "Hello, Lord. I want to thank you for this beautiful day, this wonderful game of baseball and all the players in it, even those on the other team."

He began to feel his efficiency increase each day and became sure that his prayer was being heard and granted. He even got to the point where he could add to his daily prayer: "I want to thank you for the umpire, too."

One hot day, the temperature out on the field rose to an unbearable degree. About the fourth inning, my friend felt utterly depleted and exhausted; he thought about asking to be taken out of the game. Then suddenly a Bible passage he'd read passed through his mind. And he stood there in the pitcher's box, mopping his brow and repeating these words: "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not grow weary; they shall walk and not faint."

"Pretty soon," he told me later, "I felt cool and fresh. I could feel strength coming back to me. I lost nine pounds in that game. But, I finished with energy and vitality to spare. Nothing could knock me out of that box."

Religious faith isn't something theoretical. It is a practical technique of living when you actually practice its formulas. If you conceive of God as a source of energy and vitality and draw on that source, you will learn the secret of fresh strength, greater vitality and renewed energy. When you begin to feel run down, when your energy is depleted, when your vitality begins to run out, just turn to God and say: "God, you are the source of all energy. You are the source of the energy in the sun. You are the source of the energy in the atom. You are the source of vitality in my body, in my mind, in my life. I hereby draw energy from you as from an illimitable source." Paraphrase the Scripture by personalizing it. "In Thee I live and move and have my being."

Having done this, believe that you do receive this transfusion of power. It's as simple as that. "They that wait upon the Lord" with absolute faith, get new energy in such measure that they "mount up...as eagles." The essence of this technique is to be simple and to have absolute belief that you can get a renewal of energy. And you can, if only you will believe and practice being renewed.

Have faith in God as your source of energy and vitality. Draw upon it in the manner suggested above and you will have adequate power in your life.

Illinois ERA hunger strikers unchained

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Fifteen women occupying the third floor of the Illinois Statehouse in a demonstration in support of the Equal Rights Amendment were dragged out of the area early today by armed secretary of state's police.

More than 20 officers swarmed out of elevators on the Capitol's third floor rotunda shortly after 4 a.m. while the women were asleep on sleeping bags outside the doors to the Senate.

The women were given 10 minutes to leave on their own, but refused.

The occupation began Thursday, when 17 women chained themselves together, blocked the Senate doors, and called on lawmakers to "break our chains" by ratifying ERA.

Three subsequently left, but one returned over the weekend.

None of the women, many from the Champaign-Urbana area, resisted removal. Each of the women refused to get off the marble floor and had to be carried out by at least two guards.

David C. Watkins, director of police for Secretary of State Jim Edgar, said the women were not under arrest. He said they were being taken to the nearby Centennial Building in the Capitol Complex and allowed to continue their protest.

"We simply have to have this (Senate entrance) open," Watkins explained. The secretary of state's office polices the Capitol and surrounding buildings.

Late Sunday night, Edgar told the Associated Press the women might have to be forcibly removed, and that he did not want them camped out in front of the Senate when lawmakers return this afternoon.

But he specifically ruled out any such overnight action, saying, "We want to get back together in the morning. We're trying to figure out the best way to handle it."

As the women were being carried out, they sang quietly, recited the lines of the proposed ERA, and complained that the action was unfair.

"They rush us out in the secret and dark of night," one of the protesters said aloud as the officers carted her away.

The guards came equipped with chain-cutters to snap the metal chains with which the women had bound themselves.

Marriage pickings slim for Amish sect

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — A dwindling Amish group in central Pennsylvania has become so closely interrelated that members are almost forced to marry second cousins — with unknown genetic consequences, says a Penn State researcher.

The "White Buggy" sect, named for the horse-drawn carriages which members use for transportation, does not use radios, televisions or telephones. James P. Hurd, a Penn State anthropology instructor who studied the group, said the sect is down to 902 members and does not mix with other religious groups, or even other Amish sects.

"A church will not share ministers with another church and also will not allow or share communion with another church," Hurd said. "So these barriers go up among churches, and they also include excommunication if people marry outside their church."

The result is that members of the White Buggy sect, most living in Mifflin County, with other groups clustered in Centre, Snyder and Union counties, are almost inevitably forced to marry second cousins, Hurd said.

"Engaged men and women find they are related to each other six different ways," he said.

Hurd said that over the years, schisms have reduced the numbers of the sect, who are also called Nebraska Amish, after a minister from Nebraska who organized the church.

First cousins who intermarry have a greater chance of producing offspring with various genetic defects caused by recessive genes, Hurd said. But research on the effects of intermarriage by second cousins — people with a common great-grandparent — is inconclusive, he said.

Insurance policy deviations OK'd

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Administrative Council of the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System, has approved an application by the University of Texas System to deviate from the board's standards for group insurance policies for employees of higher education institutions.

As a result, Midland College was granted authority to provide $750 in annual benefits rather than the required $1,200. The deviation will be offset by providing dental coverage, increased life coverage and accidental death and dismemberment coverage.

The UT System was granted permission to have a $200 deductible on its group health coverage rather than the required $100 deductible.

The deviation was approved because the UT System provides full dental and long-term disability coverage, which are not required. The system also has a $1 million lifetime maximum recovery limit, compared to the $250,000 limit required by the board.

The council also approved a request by Midland College to deviate from the requirements for outpatient psychiatric coverage.

Disposal site hearing set

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Department of Health will hold a public hearing at 10 a.m. June 24 on an application by the city of McCamey for a permit to operate an existing municipal solid waste disposai site in Upton County.

The 50-acre site is located southeast of McCamey, 1,000 feet east of FM 305, 1.25 miles southeast of the intersection of FM 305 and FM 1901.

The site receives approximately two tons of solid wastes per day.

The hearing will be held in the Council Room at McCamey City Hall.

'Peace Sunday' concert draws over 80,000

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A sellout crowd of more than 80,000 packed the Rose Bowl for a marathon rally and rock concert to hear dozens of Hollywood's biggest names sing and speak against the nuclear arms race.

Braving hot sun and nighttime chill, the audience for the Peace Sunday rally, on the eve of the opening of today's United Nations disarmament conference, was rewarded with entertainment by a star-studded cast that included Dan Fogelberg, Linda Ronstadt, Stevie Nicks, Stephen Stills, Graham Nash, Stevie Wonder, Joan Baez and surprise guest Bob Dylan.

MANY invited the audience to sing or chant along, and Wonder set the stadium ringing with the cry, "We demand an end to war."

Between songs, there were scores of brief speeches by anti-nuclear activists, religious leaders such as the Rev. Jesse Jackson, and dozens of film and television stars including Ed Asner, Martin Sheen, Jane Fonda, Howard Hesseman, Eileen Brennan, Margot Kidder, Shelly Duvall, Michael Douglas and LeVar Burton.

President Reagan's daughter, Patti Davis, also gave a brief speech that avoided mention of her father, who was harshly criticized by several other speakers.

Several other observances were held Sunday around the world to focus on the U.N. conference. More than 100,000 demonstrators jammed Hyde Park in London, with smaller rallies in Antwerp, Belgium; and Copenhagen, Denmark.

In New York, Cardinal Terence Cooke prayed for peace around the world during Sunday mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral. At the Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine, Coretta Scott King — widow of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. — urged the United States and Soviet Union to end the arms race.

Organizers of the 11-hour Rose Bowl show had sold fewer than 60,000 tickets at the start of the weekend and were elated at the last-minute turnout. Police estimated 20,000 people who had hoped to buy tickets were turned away.

Area CRMWD deliveries dive in May

BIG SPRING — The question of how much of the phenomenal increase in municipal consumption for 1982 was due to dry weather was partially answered in May deliveries by the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

May was cooler and wetter, and deliveries to cities took a nose dive to 1,254,884,000 gallons of water, or 8.42 percent below that of May a year ago. In contrast, deliveries for April were up 25.55 percent. The increase in municipal consumption dropped from 20.39 through April to 12.63 percent through May, or 5,729,259,000 gallons for the five-month period.

Oil companies took 221,813,936 gallons in May, a modest 3.12 percent more than for the same month in 1981. This made the total delivery figure through May 6,738,314,361 gallons, or 11.10 percent over the same five months in 1981.

During May, Midland — which receives only part of its supply from the water district — took 342,910,000 gallons, which was a decline of 12.69 percent, and 3.41 percent down for the initial five months of 1982.

Odessa required 596,994,000 gallons, down 6.63 percent from May 1981 but up 23.56 percent for the first five months of this year. Big Spring took 229,674,000 gallons, down 2.26 percent from May 1981, but up 15.92 percent for the first five months. Snyder received 70,026,000 gallons in May, a decline of 24.57 percent for the month and up 4.75 percent through May.

Many of the members of this club reside in Odessa where the club meets every other month at the Ector County Library. The club won't meet during July or August.

Members and all persons interested in philately are welcome to attend.

Group seeking area nursing homes

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — HH Holding Co. Inc., of Tacoma, Wash., has applied to the Texas Health Facilities Commission for authority to acquire five Midland-area nursing homes.

HH Holding Co., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Hillhaven Inc., is seeking a declaratory ruling that a certificate of need is not required to acquire Ridgeview Nursing and Convalescent Center, Wichita Falls; Deerings West Nursing Home Center, Odessa; Deerings Nursing Home, Odessa; Terrace West Nursing Center, Midland; and Terrace Gardens Nursing Home, Midland.

All five facilities presently are owned by Nursing Homes of Midland and Odessa Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of National Health Enterprises Inc.

HH Holding plans to acquire the facilities on or after July 23.

Persons wishing to protest the applications may do so by filing as formal parties in the matter.

If protests are received, a public hearing will be held on the applications. If no protests are received, the applications may be referred to a THFC voting session without a hearing.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, June 8, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Two longtime screen and stage favorites celebrate their birthdays today: Robert Preston and Alexis Smith. Also born on this date: the late-great American architect Frank Lloyd Wright. A streak of cunning does not endear you to your competitors, but it does help advance your career. Guard against acting too independent in romance or marriage. Although you are generous and compassionate, you sometimes forget those sentimental gestures that mean so much to your loved ones. Be on the lookout for bargains and business opportunities in the months ahead. Even a modest investment could bring large rewards.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Political operatives have an excellent day. Ask pointed questions to get complete answers. Those who work for themselves or free lance receive great news.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Postpone signing legal document until you can get another opinion. A promotion will remain up in the air until the profit picture clears.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Financial backing suddenly becomes available. You are able to move forward with a creative project. New business ventures thrive. Romantic doubts disappear.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Take action to improve your financial situation, but accept only expert advice. Avoid becoming involved in the marital problems of your friends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Romance flourishes. Devote more attention to your personal affairs. Visit a parent or relative confined to hospital or home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A business trip proves highly profitable. Friendship is very important to you now and helps to ease an old heartache.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Write letters and make any important phone calls. A midday schedule change frustrates you but could ultimately work to your advantage. Seek the company of successful people.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Unconventional behavior could frighten away a timid admirer. Do not let your competitors steal a march on you. Showcase your talents in a unique way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Carefully consider loved ones' views before making long-term personal decisions. Ignore the elaborate promises of unreliable people and stick to traditional methods.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Self-improvement projects result in more confidence and a greater earning potential. Inspirational writings give you new insights into a personal relationship.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not force issues at work. Financial affairs need careful handling. Consult experts. Real estate deals can be highly profitable. Correct timing is the key to success.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Exciting events could lead to disputes. Influential person is impressed with the way you perform when under pressure. Romantic partner needs more breathing room.

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ7 ♡KQ52 ◇QJ5 ♣QJ2
You are the dealer. What action do you take?
A.—Although you have 14 points in high cards, you do not have an opening bid. Your hand has two serious flaws — it is aceless and absolutely flat. You should deduct one point for each flaw, in effect reducing your holding to 12 points. And you should not open a 12-point hand unless you have two full defensive tricks and a long suit. Since you have neither, pass.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ4 ♡A10 ◇Q98 ♣AKJ98
What is your opening bid?
A.—You have 18 points in high cards and a balanced hand, but the combination of a good five-card suit and fine intermediates makes your hand too strong for a one no trump opening bid. Our choice is to open one club and jump rebid two no trump if partner responds with one of a suit — just as though we had a balanced 19 points.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K9 ♡KQ1054 ◇A83 ♣KJ9
What is your opening bid?
A.—The fact that you have a five-card major suit is no bar to opening one no trump. You have a balanced hand of 16 HCP with stoppers in every suit. A one no trump opening bid describes your hand exactly. Should you open anything else, you might find that your rebid will force you to decide between an underbid or an overbid.

Q.4—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠8763 ♡Q962 ◇A5 ♣954
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Though you have close to a minimum raise to two hearts in terms of points, partner's game try in diamonds improves your hand enormously. You should not shirk your duty — bid four hearts. Had your minor-suit holdings been reversed, you would be correct to sign off in three hearts.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠9762 ♡10932 ◇J854 ♣6
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What action do you take?
A.—This is a hand for the Stayman Convention — bid two clubs. Normally, you should have 7-8 points to probe for a major suit after partner opens the bidding with one no trump, but this is the exception. At no trump, your hand is unlikely to produce a single trick for partner; in a suit contract, it should be good for a couple of club ruffs. Naturally, you intend passing any response that partner makes, including a bid of two diamonds to deny possession of a major suit. Note that you can afford this action on such a weak hand only if your short suit is clubs.

Q.6—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠83 ♡K1076 ◇K5 ♣AQ1095
The bidding has proceeded:

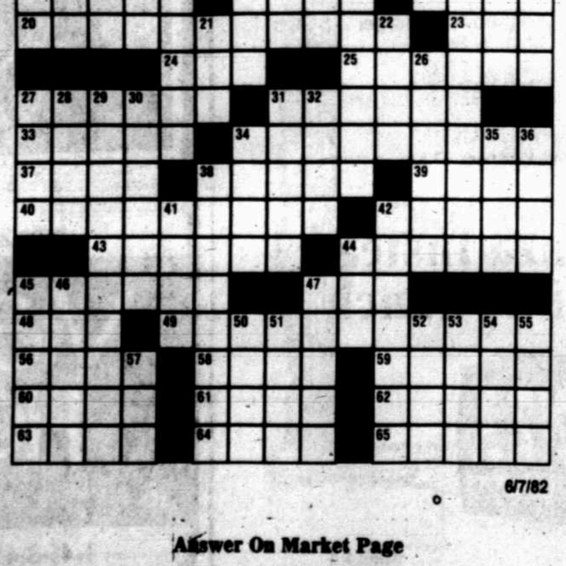

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner has reversed the bidding, and your hand is worth 15 points in support of hearts. If partner has a spade control, you could easily have a slam. You are too strong for a simple raise to three hearts. Jump to four hearts — that shows full values for your initial response, trump support but no first-round control to cue-bid outside of your suit.

Mesa bids $544.5 million for Cities

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Mesa Petroleum Co. has bid up to $544.5 million in a cash tender offer today to acquire 15 percent of Cities Service Co. stock, as a week-long takeover battle continues.

The tender offer could give Mesa an additional 15 percent interest in the 77.9 million outstanding shares of Tulsa-based Cities Service. Mesa officials said Sunday they would try to buy up to 12.1 million shares of Cities Service stock and would file "definitive offering documents" today with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Each company has offered to buy the other's outstanding stock for the purpose of a merger.

The announcement came after Mesa filed a $1.6 billion federal lawsuit last week, accusing Cities Service of malice and deception in attempts to prevent the merger.

Mesa said it would seek additional financing in the tender offer to buy up to 12,100,000 shares of Cities Service common stock, at $45 net per share. The company already owns 4,100,000 Cities Service shares or about 5 percent of the outstanding stock.

"There can be assurance that such additional financing for the offer will be obtained," company spokesmen said.

The Amarillo-based Mesa said it also plans to file suit in federal court to challenge the constitutionality of takeover statutes in six states and to seek injunctions against their enforcement against the offer.

Actions would be brought in Delaware, Louisiana, Nebraska, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Utah, the release said. Cities Service is incorporated in Delaware.

Mesa, in a written offer last Tuesday, said it wanted to acquire a majority of Cities Service stock at $50 a share in what analysts said was a proposal worth more than $1.6 billion.

"Our proposal is still open," said Mesa Chairman T. Boone Pickens Jr., adding that he hopes "that the board of directors of Cities Service will accept it."

Cities Service countered by announcing its intentions to try to acquire Mesa. It said it has $1.7 billion in credit available to purchase Mesa shares.

"The proposal contemplates that Mesa acquire approximately one-half of the outstanding Cities Service common shares for 50 dollars per share in cash and that the remaining Cities Service shares be exchanged for Mesa equity and-or debt securities," Mesa said.

Court refuses to halt regulation of intrastate gas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to halt federal regulation of prices for natural gas that never leaves the producing state.

The court turned away, without comment, arguments by Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and an Oklahoma-based oil company that such federal regulation is invalid when applied to natural gas that never enters interstate commerce.

At stake, as is usually the case in legal battles over pricing controls, are natural gas costs to consumers.

At issue is a 1978 law passed by Congress, the National Gas Policy Act.

Congress first moved to regulate the natural gas industry in 1938, but federal regulation was limited to the transportation and sale of natural gas in interstate commerce.

Wholly intrastate gas — that which was produced, sold and consumed within one state — was not regulated under the 1938 law. That resulted generally in higher prices for intrastate gas.

The energy crunch of the 1970s moved Congress to act again, especially because gas producers had a financial incentive to sell in intrastate markets — causing natural gas shortages in non-producing states.

The 1978 law was aimed at encouraging production and exploration of new natural gas sources and maintaining adequate interstate market supplies.

In part, the law established price ceilings for all first "wellhead" sales of natural gas, whether interstate or intrastate.

Other sections of the law also have the effect of regulating the intrastate marketing of natural gas.

The three states and the Marlin Oil Corp., engaged in the exploration, production and sale of natural gas in Oklahoma, contend that federal regulation of such intrastate markets is unconstitutional.

Their challenge, presented in a 1978 lawsuit against the federal Energy Regulatory Commission, was rejected by a federal trial judge in Oklahoma and by the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last Sept. 22.

In seeking Supreme Court review, lawyers for the three states argued, "The act effectively compels states to administer a federal program."

They added: "At the time of the passage of the act no federal agency possessed the facilities, personnel, or expertise necessary to make the determinations of various natural gas categories required by the law. Rather than attempt to establish a federal agency which could make those determinations, Congress drafted the act so as to compel state agencies ... to make the determinations."

The appeal said past Supreme Court rulings have forbidden such federal coercion on the states.

Justice Department lawyers urged the court to reject the appeals.

Dorfman to chair TPRC

AUSTIN — Dr. Myron H. Dorfman of the University of Texas at Austin has been named director of the Texas Petroleum Research Committee, the research arm of the Texas Railroad commission.

Dorfman is the H. B. Harkins Jr. Professor and chairman of the Department of Petroleum Engineering at UT. He succeeds Dr. John C. Calhoun Jr., executive vice chancellor of engineering at Texas A&M University, who has resigned.

TPRC research, which is conducted by UT and A&M faculty and graduate students, emphasizes reservoir geology and engineering for enhanced oil recovery from existing fields in Texas. Research also deals with such allied fields as geotherman energy, coal and lignite.

Dorfman said he plans to enlarge the scope of TPRC to include the revision of regulations for drilling, completion and production of petroleum, and the consideration of the environmental effects of drilling fluid disposal.

The new director also hopes to disseminate widely research results to petroleum operators and landowners in the state by holding conference. Noting that a recent TPRC conference on the Austin Chalk formation drew 900 participants, Dorfman said:

Because the research committee works within the universities, TPRC can provede the Railroad Commission with a "cadre of potential engineeers when they are in sort supply, as they are now," Dorfman said. He reported that A&M has the largest petroleum engineering department in the world with 1,450 students. UT Austin has the most petroleum engineering graduate students worldwide with 100, and the second largest number of undergraduates, 995.

"At a time when we are being outstripped in output of energy engineers by eight to one in the case of the Soviet Union and foru to one in West Germany and Japan, the funding and close association of the universities and the Texas Railroad Commission is extremely important to both Texas and the nation in our quest for imporved recovery of oil and gas in our need for highly trained energy technologists for the future," Dorfman said.

Rural area gas prices may soar as supplies dwindle

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline may cost more and be less available in rural areas as major oil companies retreat from small and isolated markets, says oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg.

His weekly Lundberg Letter said oil companies are quickly moving toward elimination of traditional discounts to compensate wholesalers for the expense of hauling gasoline long distances.

"What we have been dealing with for some time is a structured retirement of almost all big oil companies from this or that territory as they ... have been getting out of unprofitable classes of trade," Lundberg said Saturday in an interview.

He said companies are aiming for more profitable urban areas which have more customers and fewer transportation headaches. Sparsely populated regions often are marginally profitable — if at all — and transportation costs from refineries add to the problem, he said.

When the prime goal of oil companies was to expand markets, they developed a system of discounts called jobber hauling allowances. That evened out transportation costs so their retailers would remain competitive regardless of distance from their supply.

The discounts meant that a dealer whose supply was shipped 300 miles could sell a gallon of gas for about the same price as a competitor whose supply came from a refinery 10 miles away. Without the allowances, companies with nearby supplies and lower transportation costs could easily undersell their competitors.

Friday's Lundberg Letter, however, said, "Jobber hauling allowances are disappearing fast."

Noting that more than half the nation's gasoline supply is distributed by jobbers, Lundberg said, "The longer range effect will be to reduce the number of independent marketers in most markets of the nation ... If allowances were to dry up entirely, perhaps only one or two suppliers would be left in a typical remote community where today there might be six."

Japanese seek to buy 10 percent of Alaska oil

NEW YORK (AP) — The Japanese government would like to buy 10 percent of Alaska's oil and 10 million tons of steam coal a year from the United States, according to a report in Newsweek magazine's international edition.

In an interview in the current issue of Newsweek, Japanese Trade Minister Shintaro Abe said Japan wants U.S. oil and coal in order to diversify its sources and because trade is important for his country's relationship with the United States. Japan currently depends on the Mideast for oil and on Australia and Canada for coal, he said.

Abe also said that trade measures designed to ease Japan's "trade friction" with its Western allies are now "final."

However, he said those measures seem to be falling on deaf ears in Europe. Abe said he was pleased with the United State's reaction, "but the Europeans don't seem able to grasp the significance of our actions. The European community, unlike the United States, has protectionist aspects of its own, especially against Japanese products."

Among the trade measures, his country has "abolished or sharply cut tariffs on 198 manufactured goods and 17 agricultural products ... and even hired 200 consultants to help foreign firms do busisness in Japan," Abe said.

SPE plans short course

The Snyder Section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers of A.I.M.E. is pleased to announce that it will sponser a three-day short course on artificial lift. The course will be held at Western Texas Junior college in Snyder on June 23, 24 and 25.

Topics to be covered include rod pumping, electric submersible pumping, gas lift, and plunger lift. The course will be presented with emphasis on providing each participant with information they can apply in their day-to-day activities. A practical approach will be stressed. With this in mind, we have obtained an excellent group of fully qualified speakers.

The course will be particularly helpful to young engineers and field personnel who have a basic understanding of the operations involved in artificial lift but could learn more about the mechanics and the installation design criteria. A binder containing all pertinent information and reference materials will be included.

The course fee of $90 per student will cover lunch each day at the college and class materials, but does not cover lodging.

For further information, contact Mike Sellers or Paul Vita at (915) 573-2668.

Company to acquire well interests

DENVER (AP) — Energy Methods Corp. of Denver has signed a purchase contract with three other companies to acquire interests in more than $25.8 million in producing oil and gas properties in six states.

Energy Methods president C. Andrew Graham said last weekend the contract was signed with three Houston-based firms — Enterprise Products Co., Enterprise Oil Co. and Enterprise Gas Co.

He said Energy Methods, by the end of July, will purchase working interests in 131 wells in Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Montana and Utah.

The wells are between 1,000 and 17,000 feet deep, Graham said.

Motorists should know rights before filing insurance claim

By LINDA TRUITT
Better Business Bureau
of the Permian Basin, Inc.

Dented automobiles and cracked windshields are often the result of a hail storm. Since the hail was so intense a few weeks ago, many Permian Basin residents probably have been filing claim forms reporting damaged automobiles to their insurance companies.

According to Bob Burns, owner of Burns Paint and Body, an insurance adjuster will determine how much the insurance company will pay for the repairs. In the past, a few adjusters have tried to force the car owner to deal with a specific repair shop because their rates were cheaper. Uninformed consumers may have ended up with a poor repair job as a result.

In an effort to assist consumers in handling a claim with their insurance company, the Independent Automotive Service Association has recently published a Texas Motorist Bill of Rights. Read the following carefully:

1. Do I have the right to take my car to the shop of my choice?

Yes — Only you may select the repair facility.

2. Should my insurance company be notified before repairs?

Yes — Your policy states that you must file a sworn proof of loss, and if requested, exhibit the damaged property and submit to examination under oath.

3. Do I need to contact more than one shop for an estimate?

No — Only one estimate from the shop of your choice is required of you. Securing any additional estimate would be the obligation of your insurance company.

4. Am I responsible for the cost of repairs?

Yes — You are responsible to the repair facility for payment of repairs. If you are insured, your insurance contract states that the insurance company will pay you for the loss, less any applicable deductibles or depreciation. Any arrangements for payment by your insurance company are your responsibility.

5. Is the repair facility responsible for the repairs performed on my car?

Yes — The repair facility is responsible to you for proper care and repair. If the vehicle is not repaired to your satisfaction and according to an agreed estimate, then you should contact the shop owner to arrange settlement. If this is not satisfactory, then contact your insurance company claims department manager. You also have the right to contact the Better Business Bureau or the state Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office. Most of the time, any dissatisfaction can be settled quickly with the owner or manager of the repair facility.

6. If I am having difficulties with my insurance company, do I have recourse?

Yes — First, consult with your insurance agent or broker. Then if your problems still have not been resolved, consult with the Texas State Board of Insurance.

7. If my insurance company does not agree with the amount of loss, do I have recourse other than Number 6.

Yes — Your policy could provide that when the insured and insurer fail to agree on the amount of loss, both parties are entitled to arbitration.

David Garland, owner of Garland's Body Shop, recommends the customer explain exactly what he wants the body shop to repair and then obtain an itemized estimate of the cost. By following this procedure, the estimate should equal the final bill unless part of the damage is not visible. In this circumstance the owner should be notified before any work is completed.

Once the car is ready, the owner should inspect the car. If it is not presentable or the repairs were not made, the repair shop should be willing to correct their mistakes.

By using a well-established repair shop, obtaining an itemized estimate, and inspecting the finished job, you should be satisfied with the repairs made to your car. And, by following the suggestions outlined in the Texas Motorist Bill of Rights you should be satisfied with the amount received for the repairs from your insurance company.

To obtain your copy of the Texas Motorist Bill of Rights write BBB/Permian Basin, P.O. Box 6006, Midland 79701.

Senate panel to consider state legislators' tax break

By JIM LUTHER

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Congress voted itself a $75-a-day special tax deduction, now likely to be repealed, the reaction from angry voters was loud. But state legislators got basically the same tax break and nobody seems to care.

It's unfair, says Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, who is vowing that if Congress has to give up most of its tax deduction, so will the state lawmakers.

"We should be treated equally," Dole, whose committee handles tax legislation, told reporters last week.

Spurred by an outpouring of mail and widespread criticism in the news media, the Senate already has voted to wipe out the new congressional tax deduction. The legislation has yet to be considered by the House, although dozens of bills to repeal the deduction are pending.

Until now, no attempt has been made to wipe out the tax break for state legislators. But at the June 18 hearing where several bills affecting the congressional deduction will be considered, a Senate Finance subcommittee will take testimony on the state legislators' tax break.

The state provision was passed by Congress last August as part of the largest tax-cut bill in history after virtually no public discussion. The liberalized congressional tax break was approved separately later in the year with little debate in the Senate and none in the House.

The two provisions allow lawmakers to deduct a fixed amount for living expenses in the capital (state or federal) without having to prove the deduction to the Internal Revenue Service. Also, both deductions are available even on days when a member does not attend a legislative session.

The state provision, which will cost an estimated $33 million in federal taxes over the next five years, is retroactive for 1978, 1979 and 1980. People who served in a legislature during any of those years may amend their tax returns and get a refund. But for 1981 and later years, the special break will be available only to lawmakers who live more than 50 miles from the state capitol building.

The congressional provision was retroactive only for 1981 taxes. It could cost $9 million a year or more, although a considerably lower figure is anticipated because many members are refusing the liberalized deduction.

Special tax treatment for state and federal lawmakers has long been provided to help offset the costs of living away from home while conducting public business.

For tax purposes, home to a member of Congress is the district or state he or she represents; thus, when members are in Washington they are considered away from home on business and their living expenses become deductible. Before last year's change, the limit on that deduction was $3,000.

Under the new law, a member of Congress may deduct $75 per day to cover all Washington living expenses (a total deduction in 1981 of about $19,600), or $50 per day plus the interest and taxes on his or her Washington home. In either case, the member need not prove that the expenses were incurred. A third option allows a member, like any businessman, to deduct all expenses that can be substantiated.

Under action taken by the Senate last month, all that would be wiped out and the $3,000-per-year limit restored.

The old law allowed state legislators to deduct expenses incurred while attending to business in the capital — but only if they were away from home overnight.

The liberalized law waives the "overnight" rule and permits all state legislators to claim a deduction of up to $75 per day for 1978, 1979 and 1980. The deduction for each state depends on how much daily allowance the federal government provides its employees who are visiting that state on business; it can be as low as $50 per day.

For 1981 and future years, the state deduction is available only to lawmakers living more than 50 miles from the capital. Members qualify by designating their district homes as their homes for tax purposes — meaning that food, lodging and miscellaneous expenses connected with the capital become deductible.

Tax error increases property value

BAYVIEW, Texas (AP) — Edward Lawrence says his three-acre plot here looks good but admits he'd "sell in a minute" if he could get what tax appraisers say it's worth.

Lawrence recently received a notice that set the value of his property in this north Galveston County community for the 1982-83 year at $224,927 — nearly 65 times more than last year's value of $3,468.

"I've lived on my property all my life and it looks good. But if the county wants to buy it for $75,000 an acre, I'd sell in a minute," said the retired pipefitter.

Lawrence, 63, said the figures were "so out of line" he almost didn't notice them.

"I thought somembody had gone off their rocker when I read the bottom line of the statement.

Philadelphia 76er Darryl Dawkins, right, is 6-foot-11½ inches tall, but still looks small against the towering Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Lakers. Still, Jabbar was held to under 10 points as the Sixers rolled to a 135-102 victory in the fifth game of the NBA championship series.

76ers on 'mission improbable'

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers took the first step in mission improbable.

The 76ers, down 1-3 in their best-of-seven series against the Los Angeles Lakers for the National Basketball Association championship, routed the Lakers 135-102 Sunday to stay alive.

Alive but not still not well. No team ever has climbed out of a 1-3 hole in the 36-year history of the NBA, and the Sixers have to play Game 6 in Los Angeles Tuesday night where the they haven't won since 1980. If Philadelphia should win Tuesday night, the seventh and deciding game would be here Thursday.

The key to the Philadelphia survival victory was the ineffectiveness of 7 foot, 2 Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, and a 76ers' defense described as obsessed by Lakers coach Pat Riley.

Abdul-Jabbar scored just six points, the first time in 420 games he failed to collect 10 or more. It was the first time in 109 playoff games that he totaled less than 11, and the seventh in which he was under 20.

What happened to Abdul-Jabbar, recognized as on of the best ever to play in the NBA?

Riley said, "I've never made any excuses and I won't start now. You get a man in foul trouble and he can't play his game. It makes a difference."

Abdul-Jabbar's explanation was limited as his scoring.

He offered mostly one word answers on his lackluster performance.

He was asked if the 76ers did anything different to him Sunday.

"They just pushed and shoved," he replied.

The 76ers took advantage of the fact Abdul Jabbar played just 28 minutes. With those long arms not around to intimidate the trajectory of their shots, six scored in double figures, four over 20.

Andrew Toney, the prolific scoring 6-3 guard, led the 76ers with 31 points. He shot 13 for 18 from the field. Julius Erving, blanked in the first period when he missed his first seven shots, wound up with 23 — 18 in the second half.

Bobby Jones contributed 21 and Darryl Dawkins 20 before a roaring, sellout crowd of 18,364, which chanted, "see you Thursday."

"Nobody said it was going to be easy," said Lakers' coach Pat Riley. You'll see a heck of a different effort on our part Tuesday.

"It was Philadelphia's last chance. You knew what their motivation was. We played a good game until the third period. Then they became obsessed.

"Our guys got in foul trouble and became tentative, while Philadelphia was very aggressive."

As for Abdul-Jabbar, Riley predicted his superstar would deal with the 76ers Tuesday.

Coach Billy Cunningham said the key to his team's victory was excellent defense.

"I can't stress it enough. It's our whole concept.

"We were quick mentally. We picked up loose balls and this generated energy," Cunningham said.

Bob McAdoo led the Lakers with 23 points, while Norm Nixon collected 20, but just two in the second half. Earvin "Magic" Johnson had only 10, but gathered 10 rebounds. Mike Cooper scored 18 and Jamaal Wilkes 13.

Erving said of the blowout, "a one point or 30 point win ... it's the same thing. I think the series is already turned around."

Abdul-Jabbar said grimly: "We lost our poise, but I doubt if there will be a carryover of this to Tuesday night."

The 76ers opened a 7-2 lead, but the Lakers snapped back with a 10-3 spurt, and tied the game 20-20 at the first period buzzer on a fastbreak layup by Nixon.

In the second quarter, the score was tied seven times, the last at 54-54 on a slam dunk by Erving 14 seconds before the end of the half.

The crucial period was the third. Los Angeles led 68-64, and then was outscored 27-13 as the 76ers took a 91-81 lead into the final 12 minutes.

Dawkins contributed 14 points and Toney 8 in the second period for Philadelphia, while Nixon and Cooper each had 10 for the Lakers.

In that third period, Los Angeles turned the ball over 16 times, which led to 14 Philadelphia points. Erving and Toney, each with eight, led the 76ers' onslaught.

The closest Los Angeles came after that was eight on a layup by McAdoo at the start of the fourth quarter. From there, the Sixers outscored the stunned Lakers 30-13, and it was all over.

Erving and substitute guard Clint Richardson each had 10 in the quarter.

The 81 points scored by Philadelphia in the second half, was the most by a team in one half of a playoff game since the Boston-Los Angeles game of April 18, 1965.

Malone due to become a rich Rocket

HOUSTON (AP) — Big money, big reputations and big talk of other National Basketball Association clubs won't undermine the Houston Rockets' efforts to keep All-Star Center Moses Malone, says General Manager Ray Patterson.

"I've heard all the rumors about what (New Jersey owner) Joe Taub is gonna do and how much (Lakers owner) Jerry Buss is gonna offer Moses. They can offer $2 million or they can offer $3 million or they can offer $4 million. We'll still be here in the end of the negotiating," Patterson said.

"If they think they are dealing with San Diego or Kansas City or Milwaukee or some other club that has limited funds and can't afford to go out and get in the running for the high-priced talent, then they are making a mistake," he said.

Malone, the league's second-leading scorer with 31.1 average per game and the leading rebounder with 14.7 per game, becomes a free agent after the NBA's championship series.

In New York, Rockets' owner Gavin Maloof told ABC Radio Sports on Sunday that Malone has been offered the richest contract in the history of professional sports.

Maloof refused to disclose the figures, but said the Rockets were determined to keep Malone.

"We've made a substantial offer, the highest in the history of pro sports. We'll do whatever it takes to keep Malone in Houston. We're optimists. I think he likes the city. He's told us he wants to return," Maloof said.

Malone hopes to have a decision within 30 days, said his agent,

Malone is considered more important "than any other single part of the Rocket organization," Patterson said.

"I don't care what anybody says in New York, New Jersey or Los Angeles," Patterson said. "I am going to sign Moses Malone and keep him in the Houston franchise. And I want everybody in the NBA to know that this ball club will not be intimidated by the big money or the big reputations or the big talk of the Knicks, the Nets, the Lakers or anybody else."

Oklahoma St., Maine advance in NCAA baseball

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Jim Traber, Stan Baughn and Dale Rath each knocked in a pair of runs as Oklahoma State outlasted seventh-ranked South Carolina 10-8 Sunday and eliminated the Gamecocks from the College World Series.

In the first game of the round, Maine's Joe Johnson tossed a four-hitter as the Black Bears blanked third-ranked Cal-State Fullerton 6-0, ending the Titans dreams of winning college baseball's biggest title.

After fourth-ranked Oklahoma State built an 8-0 lead after four innings, South Carolina unleashed a seven-run outbrust in the fifth inning. John Sullivan crashed a grand-slam and Greg Morhardt added a three-run blast in the big inning.

Oklahoma State advances to Wednesday's 5:10 p.m. elimination contest against the loser of Monday night's Miami-Wichita State game. Maine will face the loser of Tuesday's Stanford-Texas game.

Kanwisher, 13-1, setup Sullivan's blast with three straight walks. Sullivan then blasted a full-count pitch well over the right field fence. An error and another walk preceded Morhardt's blast.

The 57-15 Cowboys had built an 8-0 cushion on consecutive four-run innings in the third and fourth on the RBI hits by Traber, Baughn and Rath.

The Cowboys added single runs in the seventh by Glenn Edwards' single and in the eighth on an RBI double by all-American catcher Robbie Wine's double.

In the first game, Johnson held the 51-23 Titans hitless until David Wilder singled to lead off the sixth. Fullerton was unable to advance a runner past second base in the game.

Johnson's performance was the second straight standout pitching effort against Fullerton in the tournament. The Titans were shut out on a five-hitter by Wichita State's Bryan Oelkers Friday night 7-0.

First baseman Kevin Bernier went three-for-four and scored three runs to lead the Maine offense. The 33-13 Black Bears picked up a pair of runs in the first inning and added single runs in each of the third, fifth, sixth and eighth innings.

Prize dishes prepared by Midland County 4-H'ers Stacey Leigh Hillis, 14, left, and Cindy Triplitt, 16, won first places in a 4-H District Food Show. The dessert, strawberry baumkuchen torte, prepared by Cindy will be entered in the nutritious-snacks-and-desserts contest at the annual Texas State 4-H Round-up this week at Texas A&M University. Cindy's cake was prepared with the new sugar substitute, Aspartame, as the sweetner. Stacey, whose main dish was beef burgundy, was not eligible to enter the state contest due to her age — 13 — but she'll be eligible next year.

First lady touches all the bases in Paris visit

By NANCY KENNEY

PARIS (AP) — The French press all but ignored her and the opera audience didn't know she was there.

But from the Normandy beaches to the dazzling Monet gardens, first lady Nancy Reagan touched all the bases during her hectic four-day French visit — patriotism, protocol, culture and social conscience.

Mrs. Reagan shook hands with 300 eager Americans at a museum reception, watched blind children somersault on trampolines at an institute and spoke of "nuclear peace" at a D-Day anniversary ceremony in Normandy.

Perhaps her most dramatic moment came Sunday. Gazing at rain-soaked Omaha Beach from atop a cliff, she honored the thousands of Allied soldiers who lost their lives establishing the beachhead which liberated Europe.

The first lady paid a visit to the huge American cemetery there where 9,386 American war dead are buried under white crosses and occasional Stars of David. Most of them were killed in the landing operations on June 6, 1944, or in the fighting on the beach.

Flanked by U.S. Brig. Gens. Christian Patte and John Willson Donaldson, she entered a semi-circular colonnade dedicated to U.S. soldiers whose remains were never identified. She laid a flowered wreath at the base of a bronze 22-foot statue entitled "The Spirit of American Youth Rising from the Waves."

"If my husband were here today, he would tell you how deeply he feels the responsibilities of peace and freedom," Mrs. Reagan told a crowd of about 100 people in a light rain.

"He would tell you how we can best ensure that other young men on other beaches and other fields will not have to die. And I think he would tell you of his ideas for nuclear peace," she said.

Mrs. Reagan told reporters later that her tour of the cemetery and brief stop at the grave of a female American Red Cross volunteer gave her "goose pimples."

But she seemed most at home while relaxing with longtime friends such as Gerald Van der Kemp, curator of the gardens and sun-filled workshop where Impressionist painter Claude Monet painted his waterlilies, or with film actress Olivia de Havilland, who came to a reception at the Petit Palais museum to chat about old times in Hollywood.

Mrs. Reagan appeared to regard such outings as a respite from the protocol of embassy dinners or luncheons at the Elysee Palace.

The French press seemed rather blase about the first lady's visit, providing little or no description of her activities and focusing virtually all of their attention on President Reagan and other chiefs of state at the seven-nation summit at nearby Versailles.

When Mrs. Reagan viewed a performance of "Romeo and Juliet" at the Paris Opera on Saturday night, the audience seemed unaware of her presence in a dark red plush balcony box at the rear of the theater.

It was the transplanted Americans in the French capital who showed the most appreciation for the first lady's visit.

Former trackster has new hurdle to overcome

BALTIMORE (AP) — He was called the nation's top high school intermediate hurdler, with the potential for going all the way to the 1984 Olympics.

Adrian "Birdman" Ward was "pound for pound...the best athlete I have ever coached," said James B. Ward Jr., track and football coach at Northwestern High School, which has won the state track championship six out of the last nine years. He is no relation to his former star hurdler.

Today 20-year-old Adrian Ward sits in a state prison in Baltimore after being sentenced last week to life plus 60 years for raping and stabbing a woman who lived on his newspaper route. He was a high school senior at the time.

SAID SUPREME BENCH Judge Paul Dorf, when he handed down the sentence Tuesday, Adrian Ward was "an extreme threat to public safety...a substantially dangerous person."

'We're looking at a young man who had the world by the tail and now faces the loss of any opportunity to show his talents," said Ward's attorney, Ronald Kowitz.

When Adrian Ward was convicted April 27 of rape, assault with intent to murder, and robbery with a deadly weapon, the young hurdler held three Maryland high school track records.

Nicknamed "Birdman" because he flapped his arms when he was first learning to run hurdles, Adrian Ward was rated by Track and Field News as the top high school intermediate hurdler.

Before graduating from high school last year, he won a full athletic scholarship to Villanova, where he was considered a freshman standout by Coach Charles Jenkins.

His college track career was cut short last fall when he was arrested in Baltimore while visiting his parents during the Thanksgiving break.

James Ward stood by his former star hurdler after the youth's arrest in November 1981. He attended each court appearance and testified as a character witness at the trial.

"I have been there all the times; I'll be there whenever Adrian or his mother and father need me," James Ward said.

"I CARE FOR him. He's more than an athlete, he was a kid I worked with four years, a kid I'm fond of," the coach said. "The things I heard in court I never saw in Adrian. There is no question that the woman was raped, (but) although they passed a guilty verdict, I still can't believe Adrian did it."

Prosecutor Glenn Klavans says the attack was typical of many sex offenses.

"Rape is primarily not a sexual crime, it's a power and control crime. He wanted to exercise complete control over another human being," said Klavans. "This was a very careful stalking of the victim and a very calculated attack."

Klavans noted that the 40-year-old rape victim has not returned to her home since the incident, which occurred in September 1980.

"She never set foot in the house after she was taken away in an ambulance, even to go back and pack," the prosecutor said.

Klavans said charges against Adrian Ward stemming from a second rape and an unrelated burglary case, in which a television, a tape set and $120 were taken, will be dropped because of last week's sentencing.

For James Ward, the arrest, trial and conviction of the star hurdler is a nightmare he is trying to forget.

"I found myself even blaming myself to a certain degree...Is there something I didn't do?," he said.

"To me coaching doesn't just stop at the athletic field; it really starts when you teach a man how to be a young man, to accept responsibility. Maybe that's where I failed as a coach with Adrian, maybe I failed my part," the coach said.

Whatever the courts have decided, the coach says Adrian Ward will always be a star in his eyes.

"THERE WERE SOME moments when Adrian was scared; he had a healthy fear of opponents. He was a hard worker, I guess that really comes with being a champion."

Kowitz said his client has a good chance of being sent to the Patuxent Institute for mentally ill prisoners in Jessup, Md., pending approval by the facility or an order by the judge.

But, said Kowitz, "The likelihood is he would serve a minimum of 15 years in prison. The fact that the sentence was so severe shows the parole board something and has a lot to do with (its) decision."

Children ostracized in Vietnam, can't get to U.S.

AP News Special

By DENIS D. GRAY

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam (AP) — They are freckled or blue-eyed — starkly different from the other children of Vietnam, these youngsters whose fathers left them years ago to return home to the United States.

Bureaucracy, politics and prejudice are insuring that many of these Amerasians — born of liaisons between American men and Vietnamese women during the Vietnam war — will probably remain outcasts in Vietnamese society and never find homes in America.

"Our policy is to let them all go," Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach told a group of visiting American Vietnam war veterans last week.

But as the two sides got down to talking details, it became clear that the children and their mothers seeking exit from Vietnam would be subjected to the same complex, case-by-case process that has existed since 1979.

Here in what was called Saigon before the Communist victory in 1975, a dozen Amerasians and some Vietnamese mothers gathered outside a municipal building where a female official was giving the delegation from the Vietnam Veterans of America a stern lecture on maternal love and fractured families.

The youngsters and mothers trailed the veterans when they emerged from the meeting, pressing identity and emigration papers on them and begging for help.

One woman broke down in tears. Another said that her four children — fathered by three Americans — sold the contents of garbage cans and movie tickets on the streets to eke out a living.

"My father in America. You buy peanuts," repeated a girl with brownish hair, freckles and a disarming waif-like smile, offering peanuts for one dong (10 cents) a packet.

THE AMERCIANS could make few promises to them.

The United States does not automatically grant citizenship to Amerasians. Washington's Indochinese refugee policy provides for the admission of Vietnamese who used to work for the U.S. government, for those with next-of-kin already in the United States and for those who face persecution in Vietnam. But being ostracized for being half-American isn't the kind of persecution that Washington recognizes.

Several bills before the U.S. Congress relate to Amerasians but none is comprehensive.

One would deal only with offspring of U.S. servicemen. But the large majority of Amerasians in Vietnam were fathered by civilians, most of them working on contract with the U.S. Defense Department, according to a U.S. Embassy source in Bangkok, Thailand.

An unknown number have escaped aboard boats. About 100 to 200 others have left under complex provisions of the United Nations-sponsored Orderly Departures Program, which began in 1979. Only 11 have emerged from Vietnam carrying U.S. passports.

Donald Colin, who heads the program at the U.S. Embassy in Bangkok, says there are documents now on about 2,000 Amerasians in Vietnam. Of these, some 1,100 are considered "possible Americans" because some claim to U.S. citizenship may be established. Seventy-five Amerasians still in Vietnam are now documented Americans.

The U.S. government believes there are perhaps 4,000 Amerasians — averaging 12 years of age — who are "unassimilated" and would want to go to the United States, which has no diplomatic relations with Vietnam. There are no statistics on those who accept Vietnam as a permanent home.

The Vietnamese government denies it discriminates against the Amerasians. But many mothers of Amerasians claim the children encounter deep prejudice, sometimes hostility, in day-to-day life.

One woman told the American delegation she had a son by a U.S. Navy man who left Vietnam in 1972 and has now married in the United States.

Her son, now 10, was allowed to attend school, Mrs. Bich said, but she withdrew him after the teacher consistently berated him for being an American. Squatting on the pavement here, she displayed photographs of her son, the man she said was the American father and an application asking the U.S. government to display "the spirit of philanthropy toward the half-breed."

"TRADITIONALLY VIETNAMESE have felt a cultural and racial superiority toward persons who are not pure ethnic Vietnamese," says an information sheet of the U.S. Embassy in Bangkok. "This is compounded by the view of the present government that Amerasians are simply the children of former enemies and of women who consorted with them."

Colin believes that complex administrative procedures on both sides and meager Vietnamese resources for tackling their side of the departure program are to blame for the slow movement of Amerasians to the United States.

Both sides must unravel the complicated human dimensions. Who besides the mother should go with the child to the United States? Does the American father want the reunion? Will the mother regret it if she lets the child go without her?

On the American side, the cooperation of the father is often necessary to initiate the process.

Hunt representatives will go to court over hotel purchase

DALLAS (AP) — Representatives of the wealthy Hunt family of Dallas go to court in Los Angeles Tuesday in an attempt to purchase an exclusive Los Angeles hotel.

The action will be in probate court when the Caroline Hunt Schoellkopf trust fund will attempt to prove they should be able to purchase the Bel-Air Hotel for $18 million.

The sale is being contested by officials of the Beverly Hills Hotel Co., which has offered $20 million for the Los Angeles hotel.

Caroline Hunt Schoellkopf is a daughter of the late Dallas billionaire H.L. Hunt.

The trust had announced plans to purchase the 37-year-old Bel-Air Hotel for $18 million from Joseph Drown, founder and developer of the hotel. Drown died last April following open heart surgery, but a spokesman for the trust says the Dallas trust had reached an agreement in principle with Drown prior to his death.

The board of trustees of the Bel-Air Hotel have since agreed to finalize the sale to Mrs. Schoellkopf, a spokesman for the trust said.

The trust is attempting to buy the 66-room California hotel through Rosewood Hotels Inc., a firm owned by the Hunt trust.

Rosewood Hotels Inc. owns the luxurious Mansion Hotel in Dallas and will open a 248-room, $50 million hotel, called The Remington on Post Oak Park, in Houston's exclusive River Oaks-Galleria area later this year.

The Hunt trust's purchase price for the Bel Air, about $300,000 per room, could possibly be the the highest amount ever paid for hotel proprty, according to Robert E. Zimmer, president of Rosewood Hotels Inc.

Zimmer said the attempt by Beverly Hills Hotel Co. was made at the "11th hour" of negotiations between the Hunt faction and Bel Air officials and is contrary to instructions given by Drown prior to his death.

Zimmer said Drown wanted to sell the hotel to the Hunt trust because of his (Drown's) desire "that the Bel-Air continue to be operated according to the high standards he had set."

Drown made the decision to sell the hotel to Mrs. Schoelkopf's trust after he visited The Mansion Hotel in Dallas.
