Reagan doesn't press for sanctions

U.N. council hears tapes

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States today played for the U.N. Security Council what it said were tape recordings of radio transmissions by Soviet pilots responsible for the downing of a South Korean jetliner.

"The United States government, in cooperation with the government of Japan, has decided to spread the evidence before this council and the world," American U.N. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick said in introducing the tape to the 15-member council.

"....On this tape you will hear the voices of pilots of Soviet interceptors which included three Su-15(s)...and one MiG-23...including the Su-15 pilot who pulled the trigger which released the missles which destroyed the Korean Air Lines Flight 007."

Mrs. Kirkpatrick prefaced her remarks by renewing U.S. charges that the attack on the Korean Boeing 747 last Thursday was "calculated."

The attack, she said, had "shocked the world" and only the Soviet people had not been informed of the shooting down of the plane, with the loss of 269 lives.

The Soviet government, she said, has "not been silent about the plane, it has merely lied."

President Reagan played a brief portion of the recordings during his national televised address to the nation Monday night.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick scheduled a news briefing after her speech to the council, which was resuming a debate begun last Friday.

Russian vodka sale outlawed

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — The New Hampshire Liquor Commission today voted unanimously to stop selling Russian vodka at state liquor stores.

The 3-0 vote to stop selling Stolichnaya vodka was to protest the Soviet Union's downing of an unarmed Korean airliner last week.

Commissioner Costas Tentas, who made the motion, called the act barbaric and said the Soviets "have no love of people."

"I feel it's the least I could do," agreed Commissioner Lyle Hersom.

In mourning

Crying as she throws flowers into the sea near Sakhalin Island is Charlotte Oldham, 19, a student at Wesleyan University, Wesleyan, Conn. Her brother John, 27, was one of 269 people presumed killed when a Korean Air Lines jet was shot down in the area last week. She is accompanied by another brother, William, 29, a New York City police officer. They were among about 60 mourners touring the area aboard a ferry based at Wakkanai, Japan. Continued U.S. strength urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, avoiding tough economic sanctions in the wake of what he says "can only be called the Korean Air Line Massacre," called for U.S. strength to deter the Soviet Union's "inhuman brutality."

With a tough vote coming up in Congress on the MX missile and possibly others on U.S. military involvement in Central America and Lebanon, the president worked a reminder about the Soviets' "massive military build-up" into his nationally broadcast address Monday night.

"Until they are willing to join the rest of the world community, we must maintain the strength to deter their aggression," he said.

Reagan, turning to Congress for a condemnation of the downing of the Korean jumbo jet that carried 269 people, decided not to delay arms negotiations, reimpose a grain embargo or try to halt high technology shipments to the Soviets.

In his speech, he sought to present the United States' case against the Soviet Union for what he said was "the savagery of their crime," and used a tape recording of a Soviet pilot reporting to a ground controller that "the target is destroyed" two seconds after a missile was launched.

At the White House this morning, spokesman Larry Speakes confirmed that the Korean plane "was very close if not out of Soviet airspace" when it was hit by one of two missiles fired by the Soviet fighter. Speakes said the United States did not know whether the first or second missile hit the airplane.

One administration official, who asked to remain anonymous, said Sunday that the plane "may have actually been a mile outside of their (Soviet) airspace when they shot it down."

Speakes said that the United States had moved search and rescue operations to the vicinity, and these units were still on duty in international waters of the Sea of Japan.

In Moscow today, the Soviet Union accused Reagan of making an "aggressive, hateful speech" about the downed South Korean airliner and claimed he was trying to exploit the tragedy to bolster his military policy.

Radio Moscow, in an English-language broadcast, said Reagan "made bitter, slanderous attacks against the Soviet Union in a bid to armuse anti-Soviet sentiments in the American nation."

Two more American Marines killed in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two U.S. Marines were killed and two wounded in a rocket attack at Beirut airport today, and Druse-Christian mountain fighting left 134 more dead and 345 wounded, authorities said.

The Marines were killed in a barrage of rockets and mortar shells fired from a Shiite Moslem neighborhood near the airport, U.S. spokesmen said. They were the third and fourth Marines killed in Lebanon in eight days.

Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan announced the casualties as Christian forces conceded the fall of the central mountain highway town of Bhamdoun to what they called Syrian and Palestinian-backed Druse attackers, the first major Druse victory in the fighting touched off by the Israeli army's pullback to the south.

Police said the latest casualties in the mountain fighting raised the toll to 216 killed and 561 wounded since Sunday when the Israelis evacuated the heights and redeployed to safer positions in the south.

Israeli officials in Jerusalem said Israeli forces have no intention of re-entering the Lebanese mountains unless Syrian or Palestinian forces move into areas captured by the Druse. Meanwhile, U.S. presidential envoy Robert C. McFarlane flew from Beirut to Damascus in an attempt to get Syrian officials to put pressure on the Druse to stop the fighting.

"They (Druse) have entered Bhamdoun. They are committing massacres and crimes unprecedented in the history of humanity," said the Voice of Lebanon radio station of the rightist Christian Phalange Party in admitting the fall of Bhamdoun, 12.5 miles east of Beirut.

Communiques from both warring factions claimed combatants fought hand-to-hand and house-to-house during the battle for the town. A Druse statement claimed the Christians suffered "hundreds of casualties," and that the Druse suffered 10 killed. It said no Syrian troops or Palestinian guerrillas were fighting with the Druse.

Jordan said the airport bombardment started at 4:05 a.m. (10:05 p.m. EDT Monday), forcing the Marines to scramble for cover. The source of the barrage was unclear, but Marines responded by firing 155mm illumination rounds as a warning.

Another Marine spokesman, Warrant Officer Charles Rowe, said the Marines did not shoot back because the fatal barrage came from a densely populated Shiite Moslem neighborhood northeast of the airport.

Names of the Marine victims were withheld until relatives could be notified. Rowe said one wounded Marine was in guarded condition for a shrapnel wound in the abdomen and the other suffered wounds in the back and legs.

It was the first deadly attack on the Marines since Aug. 29 when two leathernecks were killed during intensified fighting between Christians and Druse, who have been battling for dominance in mountains near Beirut. Those were the first Marine combat deaths in Lebanon in the year since the Reagan administration deployed them at the Lebanese government's request.

The 1,200 Marines are part of a multinational peacekeeping force sent last fall after the Israel's June 1982 invasion to rout Palestinian guerrillas from Lebanon. The peacekeepers oversaw the evacuation of Palestinian fighters from Beirut and have been patrolling the capital.

Weinberger says U.S. troops strengthening defensive stance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said today that U.S. Marines in Lebanon are "firing back" and trying to improve their "defensive positions" following the death of two more servicemen.

Weinberger, interviewed by CBS News as he left Washington on a three-day trip to Central America, also said the Marines are in a "very difficult military situation" because of the various factions fighting in Lebanon.

Weinberger is going to Central America to confer with officials and talk with American military men there. After a night in Panama, he will spend a day in El Salvador and then go to Honduras for a day before returning home Thursday night.

In Lebanon today, two Marines were killed and two wounded in a rocket attack at the Beirut airport. A U.S. spokesman said the Marines died in a barrage of rockets and mortar shells fired from a Shiite Moslem neighborhood near the airport.

There have now been four Marines killed in Lebanon in eight days. Two others died Aug. 29 in fighting between Christians and Druse Moslems, who have been battling for control of mountains outside Beirut.

At the White House today, spokesman Peter Roussel said President Reagan was told about the deaths of the Marines by national security adviser William P. Clark.

Parties, protests mark summer's last long weekend

By DEBORAH ZABARENKO
Associated Press Writer

Hundreds of thousands of workers rallied against President Reagan and "Bonzo economics" on Labor Day, while some employees made peace with management and millions of others took a break from their work to revel in summer's last long holiday.

Americans thronged beaches, parks and backyards, dousing the 90-degree heat that swamped much of the country in pools, lakes and ocean surf. At least five drownings were reported.

The three-day weekend proved deadly on the nation's highways, where 436 perished between 6 p.m. Friday and midnight Monday, 14 less than the 450 fatalities safety officials had predicted.

For construction workers in Michigan, autoworkers around the nation and symphony musicians in Utah it was a time of harmony, as they moved away from confrontation and towards contract settlements.

Workers paraded through America's cities by the thousands, but in New York City, the 425,000 marchers far outnumbered the 50,000 spectators who sparsely lined Fifth Avenue.

"It's a disgrace," said Mrs. Paul Gutenstein. "I'm ashamed that people would rather swim than come to the parade, after what kind of government we've got."

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland, who reviewed the New York parade, lashed out at the Reagan administration's economic policies, saying the recovery "has bypassed working people and benefited only a handful of corporate entrepreneurs and corporate profits."

"The current occupants of the White House have so identified the general welfare with enriching the rich and pandering to the powerful that everything else strikes them as 'special interests,'" the nation's foremost labor leader said.

For laborers in about 150 U.S. cities, Labor Day was renamed Solidarity Day III to show the strength of the nation's unions.

The Solidarity Day bash in Austin, Texas, drew 10,000 people to a march starting at the state Capitol, bearing picket signs with slogans such as "Bust the Union Busters Today" and "Hallelujah, I'm a bum, thanks to Reaganomics."

In Cleveland, about 15,000 union members joined in a 350-float parade through town, as some marchers hefted signs reading "C'mon, Ron, stop the Bonzo economics." One of Reagan's films was called "Bedtime for Bonzo," about a chimpanzee.

Tragedy marred the holiday for members of a Houston church when four children drowned in swift currents in the Gulf of Mexico at a church outing in Galveston, Texas, on Sunday.

New York City's Canarsie Bay Park was the scene of another drowning on Monday when a man died after he waded into a deep channel. His wife was in critical condition.

In a TV address to the nation, Reagan spoke of the "Korean Air Line Massacre," urging condemnation of the Soviet Union for the downing of a Korean jumbo jet Thursday carrying 269 people.

"Our immediate challenge to this atrocity is to ensure that we make the skies safer and that we seek just compensation for the families of those who were killed," Reagan said.

United Auto Workers President Owen Bieber said Monday was "one of the nicest Labor Days that I've celebrated in a long time," as the union reached agreement with Chrysler Corp. on a tentative contract for 56,000 workers. Chrysler workers, who granted the No.3 automaker wage concessions when its outlook was grim in 1979-81, had been clamoring for a pay raise since the company announced record profits the first half of 1983.

A coalition of Detroit-area building trades unions agreed to end picketing at a non-union Port Huron, Mich., construction site where violence has brought 11 arrests and a legal action by the contractor.

"We agreed to drop our legal charges we had pending and they agreed not to picket us or harass us or interfere with our work for the rest of this job down there," said contractor Gerald Bartow, referring to the U.S. Manufacturing Co. site in Port Huron, Mich.

In Salt Lake City, 79 Utah Symphony musicians abandoned picket lines and tuned up to return to the rehearsal hall today after ratifying a new three-year contract.

Screen Actors Guild President Ed Asner told 10,000 people who gathered at Los Angeles's Solidarity Day rally that "labor will not be crucified on a cross of corporate gold."

Sunny skies and warm weather are forecast for most of the nation Wednesday, according to the National Weather Service. Temperatures are expected to be close to seasonal normals only in the northern tier of states.

Cooler temperatures predicted

Permian Basin residents can expect a break from the heat. After some Midlanders received the last sunburn of the season over the Labor Day weekend, the National Weather Service is predicting cooler temperatures for tonight and Wednesday.

The forecast tonight calls for fair skies with temperatures dipping down into the mid 60s. Yankee winds from the northeast will be blowing in at 5 to 10 mph.

Wednesday is expected to be partly cloudy with highs in the upper 80s, accompanied by southeast winds of 5 to 10 mph.

Labor Day's high of 101 was just three degrees below the record 104 set in 1948. The overnight low of 76 was 20 marks above the chilly 56 recorded 10 years ago.

Skies clearing

By The Associated Press

Fair to partly cloudy skies were the rule across Texas today, although thunderstorms rumbled across Southeast Texas before dawn.

The shower activity, which extended from near Matagorda Bay to Galveston Bay and to just west of Beaumont, was triggered by the combination of an upper air disturbance and moist, unstable air from the Gulf of Mexico.

A weak cool front extended across the Panhandle, but did little to change the weather.

Temperatures before dawn were mostly in the 70s and 80s. Winds were mostly from the south at 10 to 15 mph.

Response 'measured, appropriate'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats and Republicans in Congress are welcoming President Reagan's limited moves against the Soviets after the downing of an airliner, but the widow of the congressman on board wants proof the United States "has not become a milquetoast nation."

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Armed Service Committee, called Reagan's response to the Soviets "measured and appropriate and calculated to rally the support of the international community."

"He properly called for congressional backing for the modernization of our military deterrent capability," Tower said. "That is an action that will impress the Soviet Union far more than words or sanctions."

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said Reagan gave a "a rational and unemotional response. It will be largely supported by Congress and the American people."

But in Atlanta, Kathryn McDonald, the widow of Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga., who was one of the victims of the lost plane, called on Reagan to "prove the United States has not become a milquetoast nation."

"Once again, we get a lot of rhetoric signifying absolutely nothing," she said, her voice shaking. "I'm angry and I want some action."

She called on Reagan to prohibit the sale of grain and pipeline equipment to the Soviets and to ban American tourism in the Soviet Union.

And, Howard Phillips, chairman of the Conservative Caucus, said: "It was the president's moment of truth, and as far as I'm concerned he flunked the test. The president is sending them a signal of weakness. He is saying even if we do build up our weapons ... we simply lack the political courage to take effective action."

Reagan, in a television address Monday night, ordered no tough economic sanctions but said the United States would break off transporation-related agreements with the Soviets while pressing for a full explanation and apology for the downing of the Korean Air lines jet with 269 people aboard.

He played a tape recording of intercepted radio transmissions by Soviet fighter pilots to back up the U.S. contention that the jumbo jet was gunned down by a Russian pilot's missile. At least 61 of the victims were Americans.

There was disappointment among some conservatives that Reagan did not go further in imposing sanctions. Phillips said he wanted Reagan to break off nuclear arms control talks, place restrictions on Soviet diplomats in the United States and close off U.S. ports to Soviet shipping.

One Democratic senator, Walter "Dee" Huddleston of Kentucky, suggested the U.S. attempt to ban Soviet athletes from the Olympics here next year "until they can make proper amends."

"The responses he suggested are not adequate for the nature of the offense," Huddelstons said.

There was also dissent from Richard A. Viguerie, publisher of the Conservative Digest.

"The American people want the president to take action, not just make nice speeches. This is a slap on the wrist," Viguerie said. "If U.S. action is not stronger, it will send a clear message to the world — that the Soviets can do whatever they want and no power on earth can punish them."

But among leaders and others in Congress, Reagan found more support than opposition.

Rep. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said: "Clearly the president recognized there are limits to what we can do acting individually. The president was wise in not taking action that appeared blustery but in reality imposed more cost on Americans than on the Soviets."

Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia called Reagan "tough in tone but restrained in actions." He said he supported Reagan as far as he went, but repeated his call for a suspension — at least temporarily — of grain sales to the Soviet Union.

"I would have hoped the president would have suspended the grain deal at least until the Soviets admitted shooting down the airliner and said they were willing to compensate the families of the victims," Byrd said.

One Democrat after Reagan's job, Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., also found room to agree, calling the president's actions "the right response." He welcomed Reagan's reaffirmed commitment to nuclear arms control talks, but warned against using the episode to spur production of new weapons.

"It is apparent he now understands the basis for arms control negotiations is not reward or penalty for soviet behavior but to reduce the chance of nuclear war," Hart said. "However, the president was misguided in drawing a link between this atrocity and production and deployment of the MX missile. This missile would further destabilize U.S.-Soviet relations and lead us closer to a hair-trigger use of nuclear weapons in another crisis."

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Budget Committee, said the president "keeps the pressure on the Soviet Union to face up to their responsibilities for the massacre."

Rep. Norm Dicks, D-Wash., on the Armed Services Committee, called Reagan's actions "temperate but responsive."

Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill. said, "He (Reagan) presented a preponderance of evidence that this barbaric, outrageous act was done in a purposeful, deliberate way."

Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., who called last week for sanctions against the Soviets, said Reagan "expressed the outrage of this country and its people towards the tragedy caused by the paranoia of the Soviet Union."

"I am sure he'll have the bipartisan support of Congress in dealing with the Russians on this issue," Biaggi added.

Communist Party reveals details on U.S. charges

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union today accused President Reagan of making an "aggressive, hateful speech" about the downed South Korean airliner and claimed he was trying to exploit the tragedy to bolster his military policy.

In an English-language broadcast, Radio Moscow said Reagan "made bitter, slanderous attacks against the Soviet Union in a bid to arouse anti-Soviet sentiments in the American nation."

It said Reagan, in his nationally televised speech Monday night, "stressed the need to further rearm America."

Also today, the Communist Party daily Pravda told its public for the first time of the details of U.S. charges that a Soviet fighter shot down the Korean plane last Thursday. Pravda said Soviet forces "could have done so" if they deemed it necessary and did not explicitly deny the accusation.

The newspaper said "possible dangerous consequences of such a provocative flight were ignored," and spoke repeatedly of the risks of entering Soviet air space without permission.

It said the Kamchatka peninsula, transversed by the Korean Air Lines Boeing 747 last week, is a closed area, "intrusion into which may draw the opening of fire."

The West, Pravda said, is "putting forward the version that the plane went off course because of technical trouble and was shot down by a Soviet fighter. ... But facts give different evidence."

It was the first time the state-run press has told readers of the Western accusation that Soviet warplanes shot down the jetliner, killing 269 people. Previous accounts only have implied the charge by speaking of what the Soviet government called a vicious Western campaign of slander.

"On the contrary," Pravda said, "the Soviet anti-aircraft units displayed utmost restraint. If their purpose was to destroy the plane ... They could have done so many times over and with a guarantee when the plane was flying over Kamchatka, without even lifting fighters in the air but using anti-aircraft missiles within the range of which the intruder plane was passing."

Pravda failed to mention, however, that the plane was apparently shot down as it flew several hundred miles southwest of Kamchatka over Sakhalin Island, another sensitive Soviet military area.

Pravda admitted that Soviet fighters were not scrambled until "the violator approached Sakhalin Island."

The article said "the U.S. president is now voicing his 'indignation' over what happened and talking about 'the brutality of the committed action.' But was it the Soviet side that planned and accomplished that flight?"

"As is known the leading circles of the Soviet Union deplored the human casualties and at the same time strongly condemned those who, deliberately or through criminal disregard, permitted the death of people and are now trying to exploit the incident for their dishonest political aims."

U.S., South Korean and Japanese officials have said the Korean Air Lines plane strayed over Soviet airspace by mistake. Pravda charged the plane did so deliberately "to test practically the possibility of making unhindered reconnaissance flights over Soviet territory under cover of civil planes."

The article said U.S. military planes have violated Soviet airspace 12 times this year and claimed the Soviet Union has "trustworthy information" that the United States uses civilian aircraft for reconnaissance missions.

$30.7 million pledged during MD telethon

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Joking about his recent double-bypass heart surgery, a fit-looking Jerry Lewis attracted nearly $30.7 million in pledges for muscular dystrophy research and treatment in his annual TV appeal for "Jerry's kids."

The comedian, still smiling after 21½ hours of fund raising at the 18th annual Muscular Dystrophy Labor Day Telethon, said research by the Muscular Dystophy Association is partly responsible for his surviving a heart attack Dec. 31.

The telethon Sunday and Monday drew $30,691,627 in pledges, the third highest total in its 18-year history. Telethons in 1980 and 1981 surpassed $31 million.

The Midland-Odessa area surpassed its pledge goal, according to a spokesman for KMID-TV, which carried the telethon. Confirmed figures are to be released soon.

Many celebrities in the 1983 entertainment extravaganza made references to the once chain-smoking Lewis' heart attack. He gave up smoking after the heart attack and today is reported in excellent health.

When co-host Sammy Davis Jr. tossed aside an unlit cigarette, saying he was trying to give up smoking, Lewis joked, "I can tell you how I did it."

"Yeah, but you always do things the hard way," Davis retorted.

About 100 celebrities participated in the telethon, which was broadcast live from Caesars Palace in Las Vegas with feeds from New York City and Atlantic City, N.J.

They included Ed McMahon, Wayne Newton, Tony Orlando, Andy Williams, Pearl Bailey, Larry Gatlin, Cliff Robertson, Dolly Parton, Merle Haggard, David Hartman, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Joe Namath.

Two hundred television stations carried the show.

Lewis said the MDA — the benefactor of the telethons and his other volunteer efforts for three decades — has been contributing to cardiovascular research for 25 years. Although MDA conducts year-round fund-raising activities, the telethon is its major source of income in fighting neuro-muscular diseases.

Journal presents new theory on formation of sun, planets

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — A University of California astronomer says he has evidence supporting a theory that the sun and its planets were formed in a single, furious wink of energy — as astronomers measure time — over 100,000 years.

Martin Cohen's theory, outlined in the latest issue of the Astrophysical Journal, differs from the traditional view of the birth of the solar system and commencement of life on Earth.

That view holds that the sun and its family of planets took millions of years to form, and that the Earth took millions more years to create an environment fit for life.

Cohen said his theories indicate that the birth pangs of the solar system ceased quickly, within 100,000 years, and that accompanying violent bursts of radiant energy quieted enough that planetary evolution could have begun in less than 10 million years.

A longtime student of young stars, Cohen said he has been observing for several years a class of young astronomical objects known as "T Tauri" stars, so called because many are found in the constellation Taurus.

Cohen said that in 1975, he used a telescope with infrared capability to observe a star nearly 500 light-years away called HL Tauri.

Utility firm's linemen reach for new heights

By MALCOLM JOHNSON

MARSHALL, Mich. (AP) — It looks like a spindly Stonehenge built to honor electricity, but the 15-acre field bristling with utility towers and wires is a school.

Its students are line workers for Consumers Power Co., who hope to rise to the top of a profession in which rising to the top is critical.

"The biggest hurdle they've got to overcome is the fear of climbing," said Morris O'Brien, a supervisor at the Electric Distribution Training Center. "You can't have a one-handed lineman, with one arm around the pole."

More than 300 of Consumers' 650 linemen, both trainees and veterans upgrading their skills, have attended the school since it opened four years ago. Before that, trainees were taught at the utility's regional offices, often on the job.

"It's a good place for people to make a mistake. They get a second chance here," Raymond Rayl, an instructor, said recently while supervising an eight-man crew of veterans practicing how to replace insulators on the utility's biggest line, which carries 345,000 volts.

For some initiates, the most important lesson is that they just aren't cut out for working around high voltage lines 45 to 90 feet or higher in the air.

"There's no disgrace to somebody who can't cut line work," said Rayl.

But in one class, "we lost half the people the first day," said Clare Appel, the school's supervisor. "They realized that climbing a pole was not for them."

Still, up to 80 percent of the trainees — including one woman so far — complete the basic eight-week courses, according to Appel. And except for lots of splinters, there have been no injuries, the utility said.

The students spend most of their time on old wooden poles, digging in their spikes and leaning back against a strap that encircles the pole. Piles of wood chips are put around the base of the poles to cushion the landing for recruits who "cut out," losing their footing and sliding to the ground.

All but one of the practice poles and towers can be "energized," to let workers practice around lines actually carrying power. But new linemen work around dead wires.

Drunken driving, speed blamed for many of holiday's deaths

AUSTIN (AP) — The highway slaughter continued in Texas on the last day of the Labor Day holiday weekend, raising the state's traffic death toll near the 51 fatalities that had been predicted by the Department of Public Safety.

At least 44 deaths were reported by midnight Monday. During the same 78-hour period last year, 50 people were killed on Texas highways and seven others died of injuries suffered over the weekend.

Of the fatalities reported by Monday night, 27 were victims of one-car accidents, including three people who were killed when a car struck trees in Travis County and two people who died when their car hit a bridge abutment near Waxahachie.

Among the deaths reported Monday were Kimberly Peden, 21, of Houston; David Todd Graves, 20, of Austin; and Clay Trailer of Austin, who died after their car ran off the road west of Austin, and was sheared in half when it hit two trees.

Wendy C. Campbell, 21, of Kerrville, was killed when two vehicles collided Monday afternoon just east of Ingram in Kerr County.

Patsy Pallas, 40, of Austin, died when her car ran off the road and into a pond Monday afternoon near Austin.

Yvette Valadez, 9, of Weslaco, was killed in a two-vehicle accident three miles west of Harlingen Monday. The accident also injured eight people.

James Coleman, 45, Mount Pleasant, died when his car ran off the road Monday north of Pine Mills in Wood County.

Damon Hughes Williams, 31, of Houston, was killed in a three-vehicle accident west of Austin on Monday. Six other people were injured in the accident.

Wanda Goldwin Lamphere, 60, and her 80-year-old mother, Peggy Connon Hicks, both of Phoenix, Ariz., died after their vehicle went out of control and flipped over 3½ times about 11:30 a.m. Monday on Interstate 20 two miles west of Stanton in Martin County.

Douglas Wesley Williams, 17 months, was killed about 2 a.m. Monday in a one-vehicle rollover three miles south of Garden City in Glasscock County.

Prosecution expects to rest case this week

HOUSTON (AP) — A prosecutor says he wants to call five more witnesses to testify against former San Jacinto County Sheriff James "Humpy" Parker and three deputies who are accused of using water torture to get prisoners to make confessions.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Scott Woodward said he expects to rest his case later this week. The trial, which was recessed until today for the Labor Day weekend, began Wednesday before U.S. District Judge James DeAnda.

Parker and former deputies Carl Lee, Floyd Baker and John Glover were named in a six-count federal indictment that accuses them of violating the civil rights of jail inmates and of depriving people of liberty without due process of law.

Federal authorities say at least 15 people may have undergone water torture between 1976 and 1982.

Last week, two victims testified they gave false confessions because they were tortured. A third said he was told the ordeal could have been avoided if he confessed to a crime, while another man said he was handcuffed while deputies poured water over his towel-wrapped head and warned not to mention the torture to anyone.

Solidarity rally draws 10,000

AUSTIN (AP) — A Labor Day rally in downtown Austin attracted an estimated 10,000 people in a show of solidarity for labor unions and disdain for the Reagan administration.

Many in the five-block-long procession Monday carried signs with slogans such as "We Will Be Heard, Equal Rights For Everybody," "Bust the Union Busters Today, Not Tomorrow," and "Hallelujah, I'm a bum thanks to Reaganomics."

The march, which began at the Capitol, was one of about 150 such rallies held across the country as part of Solidarity Day III.

Organizers said the Solidarity Day parade was to show that despite dwindling membership and recent concessions to management, organized labor in America is alive and well.

Hundreds chanted, "Hey-hey, ho-ho, Ronald Reagan's got to go."

"Ronald Reagan has put a bunch of right-wing, anti-labor reactionaries in power," said Jim Booe, executive assistant of the Communications Workers of America.

Booe said most of Reagan's appointments, including Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan, are unsympathetic to the needs of workers.

"We've got the biggest bunch of union busters in power since the Calvin Coolidge administration. We intend to change that in 1984," Booe told a crowd that included former Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall, Attorney General Jim Mattox, Texas Agriculture Secretary Jim Hightower, State Rep. Wilhelmina Delco of Austin and state Sen. Lloyd Doggett.

"Mr. President, the weak need the help of the strong," Booe said. "The strong, including your rich pals, can take care of themselves."

Other speakers praised the quality of union workmanship, calling union members the best workers in their professions, who must often go through rigorous training and apprentice programs to enter the union.

"Employers don't pay us top dollar because they like us, but because they know we can get the job done," said Gene Evans, 26, a member of Austin's Carpenters Local 1266. "I studied four years as an apprentice and I feel I'm as qualified in my field as a doctor or lawyer."

G.O. Chipman, 75, told the throng that he went to work for Texas Power and Light Co. in 1925 and helped organize a union to make sure that workers got a day's pay for a day's work.

Driver's game kills teen-ager

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The Labor Day weekend started off on a good note for 16-year-old Stephen M. Self, whose "whole life revolved around football," but ended tragically when he became the victim of a dangerous game a teenage driver wanted to play, police said.

Self died instantly when he was struck by a car early Sunday in Westworth Village, authorities said. Police said they were studying possible involuntary manslaughter charges against the 17-year-old driver.

The youth was not a natural center for the football team at Brewer High School, located in the Fort Worth-area community of White Settlement, but devoted himself to weightlifting and running during the summer in a successful bid to move to the first string, his coach said.

Self was at the starting center position Friday night when Brewer opened the season with a 20-12 win over Azle.

Less than two days later, Self was killed as the result of a 17-year-old driver who apparently wanted to play "tag," said Westworth Village Police Chief Noel Lewis.

Self's friends and relatives contend the youth was killed deliberately.

Self was returning home early Sunday from Fort Worth with a friend, Kevin Martin, and the boys' dates when a Volkswagen bumped Self's car, forcing it off the road twice, according to Martin's stepfather, David Griffith.

The Volkswagen contained two boys whom the couples did not know, Griffith said.

The pursuit continued until Self got out of the car, Westwood Village police said. Self was struck after the Volkswagen accelerated toward the parked car, according to investigators.

"It wasn't a drinking situation and it wasn't a tag situation," said Griffith, who had no explanation for the strangers' behavior.

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — A Dallas-based corporation interested in subscription television is buying Worcester's WSMW-TV, Channel 27, for $8 million, according to the station's general manager.

Brian Higgins confirmed on Monday night that an agreement had been reached between Central Massachusetts Television, Inc., of Dallas and Sybos, Inc., which owns WSMW-TV.

Papers were filed last week with the Federal Communications Commission. The sale is subject to the commission's approval in the next 30 to 60 days.

Shuttle's crew rests, celebrates 'fabulous' flight

By PAUL RECER
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Happy with Challenger's "fabulous" flight and eager to do it again, the five shuttle astronauts rested at home today and tried to readjust sleep schedules turned upside down during their six-day mission.

The astronauts, who returned to earth Monday, praised their "wonderful machine" which now gets a breather as its sister ship, Columbia, prepares for a flight next month with a European research facility in its payload.

On the nearly flawless eighth shuttle flight, the Challenger's success with a variety of experiments and with launch and landing in darkness prompted the crewmembers to speak of a hopeful future for the space plane.

"It will be doing some very good work over the next 15 years," said mission specialist Guion S. Bluford Jr., the first American black in space, who said the flight was "a fabulous experience."

Said 54-year-old Dr. William Thornton, the space traveler, "It's a wonderful thing. More and more people will be going where we went in the future."

President Reagan, who welcomed the Challenger crew home with a telephone call, said the flight showed the shuttle "will be the dependable workhorse for all space applications."

Mission commander Richard Truly brought the 100-ton Challenger drifting out of the night sky to a featherlight touchdown at 3:40 a.m. EDT on a pool of light on a concrete strip at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. The flight started Aug. 30 at Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

"That was fun," said Truly as the spacecraft rolled to a halt. "Let's do it again."

Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, boss of the shuttle program, called the flight of the Challenger "the cleanest mission yet."

The crew launched a communications-weather satellite for India, used Challenger's robot arm to move a four-ton weight about in space, completed a complex series of medical tests, processed live pancreas cells in a pharmaceutical process that may help conquer diabetes, and successfully checked out the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite that is vital to the Oct. 28 flight on Columbia of the European Spacelab.

The astronauts were welcomed at Edwards by a crowd of invited guests and again at the Johnson Space Center by about 300 fellow astronauts and space workers.

The astronauts start five days of debriefing Wednesday that conclude Sept. 13 with a news conference.

Reagan said the nighttime launch and landing showed the craft "is capable of operating under most any condition."

Reagan also joked that when the shuttle lands in California, "why don't you on the last lap pick me up on the way by Washington."

"Yes, sir," replied Truly with a grin, "we do keep promising that, don't we?"

"I don't know if we could get the South Lawn ready," said Reagan.

At ceremonies at Edwards, Truly called the Challenger "the real hero." He said the craft was in a hangar being prepared for a ferry ride Thursday or Friday atop a 747 jet back to the Kennedy Space Center.

Thornton, who made his first flight after 17 years as an astronaut, observed, "once in a while, life treats us even better than we think we deserve to be treated."

The other two crewmen, Dale Gardner, a mission specialist, and Dan Brandenstein, a pilot, thanked Johnson Space Center workers.

"Every time we put our hands on a switch...it was with every confidence that it would work," said Gardner. He praised "the wonderful machine and the great training" the crew received.

436 killed in holiday traffic

CHICAGO (AP) — Traffic accidents around the country killed at least 436 people over the long Labor Day holiday weekend.

The Chicago-based National Safety Council had forecast between 450 and 550 deaths on roadways during the three-day weekend, the last big holiday of summer.

For counting purposes, the holiday period began at 6 p.m. local time Friday and ended at midnight local time Monday.

Over the three-day weekend last year, 483 people died in traffic accidents.

The worst traffic death toll for a three-day Labor Day weekend was 637 in 1971. Over a four-day weekend in 1967, traffic deaths took 732 lives.

Over a three-day non-holiday weekend at this time of year, about 370 deaths would be expected, the council said.

Principal pleads for swimmers

George Tribeau

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Ten teen-agers have been accused of taking a costly swim in a 2.5-million-gallon city water storage tank — leading to a $9,700 disinfecting job and criminal charges.

However, a school principal pleaded for his students among those arrested, saying Monday they were only following a "well-worn path" that youths have taken to the tank for as long as a year and asking that the charges be dropped.

The teen-agers were accused of criminal mischief, a misdemeanor, and impairing the operation of a vital public facility, a felony.

Municipal workers found bacteria in the water after the Aug. 30 swim, and the tank was drained and disinfected. George Allen, Water Works department manager, said the job cost $9,700.

FBI spied on Henry Wallace

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Suspicions that Henry A. Wallace had "communist or pro-Soviet ties" prompted the FBI to spy on him, open his mail and tap supporters' phones while he was vice president and when he ran for president in 1948, a newspaper says.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover disliked the liberal Wallace and was quick to investigate him — even during Wallace's vice presidency under Franklin D. Roosevelt and when Wallace was Harry S. Truman's commerce secretary, the Des Moines Sunday Register reported in a copyright story, citing FBI records.

The Truman White House, the State Department and the U.S. attorney general's office also were involved in the surveillance, the paper said. During Wallace's 1948 presidential bid against Truman on the Progressive Party ticket, Attorney General Tom Clark ordered a secret FBI investigation of Wallace and his alleged ties to the Soviet Union, the records show.

The extent of the surveillance, which included using informants and agents to trail Wallace, was revealed in 539 pages of documents released last week under a Freedom of Information Act request. Many of the papers were heavily censored and some material was withheld.

Hmong urged not to move

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Just as hopes of a better life spurred the Hmong people to flee their native Indochina, many who settled in Minnesota are now heading to California in search of jobs — but are learning that the West can no longer guarantee the American dream.

As many as 3,000 Hmong refugees — one-quarter of Minnesota's unemployment-plagued Indochinese community — have already resettled in California, where about half the nation's 68,000 Hmong live. However, most who have gone west have found jobs scarcer than ever, community leaders say.

"I am trying every way possible to discourage Hmong from coming to California," said Chau Thao, executive director of the National Lao Association in Santa Ana, Calif. "Many who move here miss the town they used to live in. They have spent all their pennies to get here and now they are stuck."

Thao said unemployment is 95 percent among the Hmong in California, who congregate mostly in Fresno, Merced and Stockton. There are few special training or work projects, he added.

Man's motive 'down-to-earth'

NORWALK, Calif. (AP) — After a record-breaking 14 months in a treehouse, unemployed actor Timothy Roy has a down-to-earth reason for descending: he hopes to land a job.

Roy, 31, said he plans to abandon his elaborately furnished 8-by-6-foot shack 15 feet above ground at 11 a.m. Thursday, adding in an interview from his pay phone aloft: "That will make a total of 431 days.

"That would make me the world's champion of any category, any event of staying above the ground — tree, pole, billboard, pillar, bridge or tower," he said Monday.

The current treehouse-perching record, set in the same Golf 'n' Stuff Amusement Park treehouse in 1978, is 182 days, according to the Guinness Book of World Records.

Radical to be Brinks witness

GOSHEN, N.Y. (AP) — When a state court trial resumes in the fatal $1.6 million Brink's armored car holdup, lawyers for three self-styled "freedom fighters" say they'll call as a witness a radical newly convicted on related federal charges.

Orange County Judge David Ritter said he does not expect to convene court before Wednesday and possibly not until next Monday because of the Labor Day weekend and the upcoming Jewish holidays.

When the robbery-murder trial resumes, the defendants expect to call Sekou Odinga, a reputed Black Liberation Army soldier, to testify.

'Broken heart' kills monkey

GLEN BURNIE, Md. (AP) — A pet monkey that bit a man and then was snatched by animal lovers determined to save it from health authorities has died of what its owner says was "a broken heart."

Missy, a 13-year-old spider monkey which had spent 14 days in quarantine in an animal shelter, died Monday at a veterinarian's office where its owner had taken it for intravenous feeding and shots against fever.

A judge who had ordered Missy into 28-day quarantine on Aug. 18 let the monkey go home Friday after shelter officials reported it was "pining away."

Voices of the past

Nothing exactly seismic emerged from the recent World Forum at which former President Ford presided but the Colorado gathering of ex-leaders of the major Western industrial democracies was an inspiring idea and one worth continuing in the years to come.

Incumbent presidents and prime ministers of this major segment of civilization can always profit from the wisdom and experience of their predecessors.

As it happened, the British, French, West German and Australian former leaders who met with Mr. Ford at his lavish Beaver Creek home under auspices of the American Enterprise Institute and the Vail Foundation were kindred souls. Like Mr. Ford himself, all had departed their high offices involuntarily.

One of the more interesting sidelights of the conference was Mr. Ford's explanation for the absence of former Presidents Nixon and Carter who were in office during the 1970s like the foreign leaders. Mr. Ford said he had decided to limit attendance to those whose terms were contemporary with his own. Obviously, Mr. Ford decided it was his party so he would invite guests he personally liked.

One of the principal accomplishments of the meeting was the build-up of good will among the nations who have the most to gain by hanging together. The guests were unsparing in their criticisms of the way the world is going but there were no antagonisms.

The foreign ex-leaders expressed concern over the Reagan administration's involvement in the Central American problems and even Mr. Ford professed shock at the Reagan budget deficits which have tripled since he left office.

All of that was to be expected, however, for, as former U.S. Secretary of State Kissinger, another guest, remarked:

"One of the professional diseases of former officials is that they inevitably believe that the world has gotten worse since they left office."

New ghost town

There probably is no valid reason for six adults and one child to continue to regard themselves and their residences and businesses as an incorporated municipality with its distinctive laws and regulations. That the seven residents of Carter, S.D., have done so for quite a few years is a tribute to their historical and civic pride.

But Carter has now been forced to throw in the towel — for motives as saddening in themselves as the disappearance of yet another name from the nation's roster of municipalities.

Carter's town board, which has been supervising its two street lights, issuing its two beer licenses and removing snow from its gravel road, has voted to "unincorporate" because of encroachment of state and federal agencies on its destiny. One example: It had to pay 15 cents every three months in state unemployment taxes.

Between that and being badgered to fill out all kinds of baffling forms for the state and federal governments, Carter, which was founded 75 years ago and once had a population of 300, decided it would be better off as just another section of an adjoining township and the surrounding county.

In the last year of its municipal status, Carter discovered it had overspent its annual budget of $1,300 by $600. To the town's everlasting glory, it had the $600 in the bank as a reserve and did not have to go begging to Washington.

Carter went out with its head high — and solvent.

Another View: Starting the clock

The U.S. Marines are in Lebanon for a good reason. But the death of at least two Marines, the wounding of others and the continuing assault on Marine positions dramatizes the fact that their mission is dangerous. They are in a combat zone where they probably will be fired on again and again. The time has come for President Reagan to start the clock ticking under the War Powers Act of 1973.

The force of 1,200 Marines has been in Lebanon since last September as part of an international peacekeeping force that also includes French, Italian and British troops. Their purpose is to support the efforts of the Lebanese government to maintain order and unify the country — important prerequisites for an overall peace in the Middle East.

The international peacekeeping force has not been entirely successful. The warring Christian and Moslem forces within Lebanon are still at each other's throats, and the Lebanese army is obviously not yet capable of maintaining the peace.

But without the moderating presence of the international peacekeeping force things would almost certainly be worse. Thus the calls from Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and some others for withdrawal of the Marines is premature at best.

However, it is ridiculous for the administration to deny, as it continued to do Tuesday, that the fighting constitutes a "combat situation." The Marines came under heavy fire again, and Washington felt compelled to move the aircraft carrier Dwight D. Eisenhower into the area.

Under the War Powers Act, the president is urged to consult Congress before committing U.S. forces to hostilities or situations in which hostilities might be imminent. Such a commitment, once made, must be ended within 60 days unless Congress declares war or specifically authorizes the troop commitment to continue. Without such action by Congress the U.S. forces must be withdrawn.

The administration is making a puzzling — perhaps one should say stupid — mistake in trying to define its way out of an obligation to invoke the War Powers Act. With or without such a law, no president can keep U.S. troops in harm's way for very long without the support of Congress and the American people.

The case for a continuing U.S. role in Lebanon is strong. If Reagan will go to Congress with a straightforward explanation of why it is essential to maintain the American participation in the international peacekeeping force, he almost certainly will prevail.

But the War Powers Act was passed for good reason. Before events in Lebanon move further, it is essential to have a full-scale debate in Congress on where U.S. interests lie. If the administration does not invoke the War Powers Act on its own, Congress will be obliged to force the issue.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Rebel forces lead to confusion

WASHINGTON — Polls show the American public is, to put it mildly, confused about the situation in Nicaragua. No wonder. The Reagan administration tells them one thing; the press tells them another. Is Nicaragua a battleground between communism and democracy, or a quagmire the United States should avoid?

Jack Anderson

To get the situation sorted out, to find out what's really going on in President Reagan's "secret war," I sent my roving reporter Jon Lee Anderson on repeated trips to the area. He is the only American correspondent who has visited all the warring factions. He has interviewed the commanders and marched with the combat troops in the field.

There are four identifiable groups involved: the Sandinista regime in Managua; the CIA-backed counterrevolutionaries of the FDN; the MISURA coalition of Miskito, Sumo and Rama Indians and black Creoles; and the independent rebel force under the charismatic former Sandinista, Eden Pastora. As the flamboyant "Commander Zero," he played a major role in the overthrow of the American-backed dictatorship of the late Anastasio Somoza.

Here is my associate's assessment of the four groups, all fighting for their own hopes and dreams of what Nicaragua should become:

• • •

THE SANDINISTAS: The Marxist-oriented regime in Managua is determined to hang onto the power it seized from Somoza four years ago, and has put the entire country on a near-hysterical war footing. "We'll arm every single Nicaraguan if that's what it takes to defend ourselves," said Interior Minister Tomas Borge, a power on the nine-man Sandinista ruling directorate.

The regime has been helped immensely in its militarization of Nicaragua by the hard-line rhetoric coming out of Washington, the Reagan administration's open support of the FDN "contras" and the Big Stick deployment of American troops and ships in the area.

"We have to be prepared for an eventual invasion by the U.S. Marines," junta chief Daniel Ortega told one of the many mass rallies held to keep revolutionary enthusiasm at fever pitch. It's a shrewd line to take: There are still Nicaraguans alive today who remember earlier invasions by the Marines, who occupied the country for years and installed the hated Somoza family dictatorship before they left.

The "counterrevolutionary threat" theme has gone beyond the inflammatory speeches and anti-gringo propaganda. At the besieged garrison town of Jalapa, a few miles from FDN strongholds along the Honduran border, my associate saw homemade air-raid shelters in every peasant's backyard.

If the U.S.-supported rebels fail, they will still have provided the Sandinistas a vital service: justification for the regime's consolidation of power as defender of the country against foreign intervention.

• • •

THE FDN: Despite their millions in CIA aid — or possibly because of it — the largest anti-Sandinista group has failed to make significant progress in its guerrilla war. Rebel sources told my associate in Honduras last month that the CIA has exercised too little control over the arms and supplies it gives the FDN. The result is rampant corruption in the top military leadership — which is composed almost entirely of former Somocista national guard officers.

"The Somocistas are growing fat," one disgusted FDN rebel said. "They are taking life easy in Tegucigalpa (Honduras) while we die and starve in the jungle."

The sources said much of the CIA's largesse is stolen by the middlemen of the Honduran army before it ever reaches the guerrillas. They accuse some FDN bigwigs of not only condoning but participating in the theft of CIA supplies for sale on the black market.

The FDN civilian leadership is without real power. Though the FDN's inroads have done damage and forced the Sandinistas to assign militia to protect peasants at harvest time, the organization's internal dissension and lack of any wide popular appeal could be fatal.

• • •

EDEN PASTORA: Cunning, streetwise, macho and colorful, Pastora is the only individual rebel leader with international stature. Yet despite his denunciation of his former Sandinista buddies for letting the Cubans and Soviets in, he is viewed with uneasy suspicion in Washington. "Pastora wants to be a new Fidel Castro," a high-level State Department source said.

Unwilling to join with the FDN — because of its Somocista taint, he says — Pastora has been forced to operate in the militarily impossible swamps and jungles of the south, where there are few worthwhile military targets.

Although his "pure" anti-Sandinista movement has failed to catch fire, he is still the only foreseeable replacement to the Managua junta who might capture the Nicaraguan people's loyalty.

INSIDE REPORT:

Soviets shot down Mideast talks

WASHINGTON — When the Soviet MiG-23 shot down the Korean airliner, it also probably shot down plans by Secretary of State George Shultz to confer on Mideast problems with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in Madrid.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Defense Department officials have been apprehensive about Shultz's scheduled talks with Gromyko when he goes to Madrid this week to sign the compromise statement coming out of the human rights conference just held there. Even the Madrid agreement, much less collaboration with the Soviets on the Mideast, is viewed with suspicion at the Pentagon.

At this writing, Shultz is still intent on going ahead with the Gromyko talks. But the Soviet attack on an unarmed airliner surely scuttles new U.S.-Soviet initiatives and could even cancel the Shultz-Gromyko conversations.

CAMPAIGN COYNESS

President Reagan may delay his second-term announcement to as late as mid-January in an attempt to keep up the suspense and gain maximum political leverage for his 1984 State of the Union address a few days later.

White House insiders who privately reported this development also told us that Reagan truly has not yet made up his mind, but that the odds are very high he will run. Particularly noted by presidential intimates is the "reticence" of Nancy Reagan, whose influence on her husband is profound.

The "key element" in Reagan's decision-making is his optimism, these intimates report. The president seems oblivious of damaged Republican chances for retaining control of the Senate as the result of Sen. John Tower's decision not to run for re-election. The worsening Senate outlook is having no influence over his own decision.

NO THANKS, BARBARA

A peace offering from resigned Justice Department official Barbara Honegger was greeted by the Reagan administration with the oldest of political rebuffs: an unreturned telephone call.

She telephoned senior White House aide Michael K. Deaver at the Western White House to set up a peace meeting. Contrary to published reports that Deaver soon will see her, her call was ignored. While President Reagan's political advisers believe administration spokesmen blundered when they referred to her as a "low-level munchkin" last seen wearing a "bunny suit," they want no highly publicized further contact with her.

A footnote: In the absence of detente with Deaver, Honegger is expected to trash Reagan on the Phil Donahue television show. Maureen Reagan, the president's daughter who is consulting the Republican National Committee on her father's political problems with women, turned down a spot on the Donahue show. She has no interest in a coast-to-coast debating series with Honegger.

FRITZ'S RUNNING MATE

Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, so conservative a Democrat that Ronald Reagan's political advisers actually considered him as a running mate in 1980, is a leading prospect to be Walter F. Mondale's vice presidential choice in 1984.

Mondale's managers believe the 55-year-old former vice president's running mate must come from the South and must be relatively young to provide contrast with Reagan, 72, and Vice President George Bush, 59. That probably rules out such respected southern senators as South Carolina's Ernest Hollings, 61, and Arkansas' Dale Bumpers, 58.

The 45-year-old Nunn's drawback is that he does not come from one of the two high-population Southern states: Texas and Florida. The Mondale inner circle is seriously interested in 46-year-old Gov. Bob Graham of Florida and 43-year-old Gov. Mark White of Texas.

GOP FEUDING

Campaign strategists for President Reagan's expected re-election drive have run into major intra-party struggles in two key states: Illinois and New Jersey.

The contest in each state is over which Republican leader or faction should run the Reagan campaign. In Illinois, the bitter fight pits Thompson, not a Reagan-for-president man in 1980, against state Rep. Don Totten, the state's leading Reaganaut. In New Jersey, the contenders are Gov. Tom Kean, a moderate, and Secretary of Labor Raymond Donovan, a key and early Reagan backer four years ago.

Although governors usually have automatic claim, the long intimacy between the president and his earliest supporters in Illinois and New Jersey may force campaign strategists to find some compromise. That could mean finding an acceptable alternative.

CHARLEY REESE

Politics, homosexuals won't mix

Presidential candidates are now actively courting the homosexual vote and non-politician liberals feel as compelled to confess their tolerance of homosexuality as they do to proclaim themselves non-racist.

The compulsive liberal today hardly has time to attend to the needs of nature so long is the list of categories he feels compelled to confess tolerance for.

Personally, I share John Wayne's philosophy about people's sex lives. He remarked when questioned about his own, "It's none of your (bleep) business."

What's queer about the situation today is that some homosexuals feel compelled to organize politically on the basis of their sex lives. This is a quirky idea that already has gotten out of hand. There is now an organization of pedophiles campaigning to legalize sex with children. Next we may have a national organization of peeping Toms and an American League of Adulterers. Sooner or later the necrophiles will organize, not to mention those who have a fetish for feet.

It's really unfair to the politicians. Most politicians these days seem to be of limited intelligence and compulsive caterers to special interests which already number in the thousands.

Some of the pols are having scheduling problems trying to work in grovel sessions before the women, the senior citizens, the blacks, the Hispanics, the Eskimos, the American Indians, the unions, the poor, the youth and so forth before election day. If they have to grovel before the whole range of sexual deviations, too, we shall have to lengthen the campaign — and that is too high a price for the republic to pay.

Another disagreement I have with the militant homosexuals is their campaign to have a law passed making it a crime to dislike them. That is carrying the idea of a liberal society too far. Homosexuals should be content with the Bill of Rights just like the rest of us.

Homosexuality is not like race or sex. It is a form of behavior. People ought to have the right to dislike a form of behavior if they want to. What the militant homosexuals are seeking are not rights, which they already have like everybody else, but government-compelled acceptance of their behavior.

Whether you want to be tolerant, intolerant or indifferent to sexual behavior between consenting adults is a matter of conscience, not of law and public policy. It should not be illegal to be a homosexual but it should also not be illegal not to hire one if you don't want to.

The itch to codify tolerance should be seasoned with common sense lest we fall into the trap of giving government a mandate to legislate human "perfection." The Nazi government was the last one to assume such a mandate. The Nazis set out to create a society of perfect Ayrans. And if you didn't meet their definition of the perfect Ayran you were in deep trouble.

Whether a human being is worthy of affection and respect has to do with his character and judging character should be left to individuals. The government should confine itself to proscribing clear-cut acts of immorality involving force and fraud and to ensuring that all citizens receive those rights outlined in the Constitution.

To proscribe discrimination against a form of behavior in purely private transactions is a dangerous intrusion. For homosexuals to put themselves in the same category as blacks is ridiculous. There is a discernible color to the unemployment lines and to the poor sections of most cities but no visible swish in either.

Homosexuals should get out of the political arena and go back to the bedroom which is the proper place for sex. The federal government has more important things to do than attempt to legislate tolerance for kinky sex.

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1966, South African Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd was stabbed to death during a parliamentary session in Cape Town.

Ten years ago: Former United Mine Workers President W.A. "Tony" Boyle was arrested and charged with murder in connection with the 1969 murder of union rival Joseph Yablonski.

Five years ago: A Soviet prosecutor asked that American businessman Francis Crawford be given a five-year suspended sentence on currency speculation charges.

One year ago: Men claiming to be part of a Polish resistance group seized the Polish embassy in Berne, Switzerland, threatening to blow it up unless martial law was ended in Poland.

More women have chance at Senate

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., says he is talking to a lot of Republican women who want to run for seats in the Senate, and thinks some of them have a good chance, despite the celebrated gender gap.

"One of the ways we think we may make the most headway in this particular year against Democratic incumbents is by identification and recruitment of superior women candidates," Lugar said in an interview.

The second-term senator is chairman of the National Republican Senatorial Committee, which has the job of seeing that the Republicans retain control of the Senate, which they won in 1980 and kept in 1982.

With more GOP seats than Democratic seats at stake next year, the Democrats think they have a much stronger chance than they did last year to regain the dominance they held for 25 years.

Lugar says he doesn't share this view, but he isn't taking any chances.

In an article published two weeks ago in The Washington Post and other newspapers, he said he is prepared to commit the committee to the maximum legal financial support for any Republican woman who is nominated next year, "regardless how Democratic the state or how apparently formidable the Democratic candidate."

In addition, he said, "I am prepared to consider direct assistance to women candidates even prior to their nomination, a sharp departure from our usual policy."

Since the article appeared, said Lugar, "I have got letters from women all over the country" and "have spent some time right here in my office visiting" with women who had read it.

"Every woman candidate I have seen is not as promising as every other one," he said.

Among the prospective candidates who Lugar does think are promising are Rep. Claudine Schneider in Rhode Island and Loret Ruppe, director of the Peace Corps, in Michigan. He says the committee is encouraging both of them, but neither has made a decision.

Ms. Schneider would run for the seat of veteran Democratic Sen. Claiborne Pell, and Lugar said she has so much support among women that she "has developed toward the incumbent a gender gap that is equally as formidable as any the president might be facing."

Ms. Ruppe would be seeking to capture the seat of Democratic Sen. Carl Levin, who won his first term in 1978 with 52 percent of the vote. Lugar said she "is not necessarily going to be a candidate just because we are visiting her," but added that she "does much the same sort of thing toward the race in Michigan that Claudine may do for the race in Rhode Island."

"We are visiting with other women who have not agreed to be surfaced until they really have much more chance to think through whether they want to proceed," Lugar said.

"There is at least one other instance where we have a potential female candidate who could win a Senate race if she decides she wants to do it. In at least two other instances, we have women who would be outstanding challengers. They would start behind, but have a pretty good shot if things go reasonably well for the Republican party as a whole in the election."

Lugar says the committee is not trying "to dictate the nominees in the various states" but does have "an affirmative obligation to identify potential nominees and to recruit them."

The committee has traditionally taken a hands-off attitude until party nominees have been selected, but Lugar argues this may mean starting to help a candidate when it is too late, particularly in states which hold primaries late in the year.

"The risks that are involved, I think, are reasonable ones," the senator added. "It may be that someone would resent the fact that we are visiting with female candidates and may even spend some money prior to the time the nomination is official."

But, he said, "If there is a national difference in support for the Republican party between men and women, it behooves the party to take a look at how that gap might be closed in a hurry."

Opposition tries to woo factions from Shamir

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The opposition Labor Party today tried to woo some of Parliament's small-party factions away from the dominant Likud bloc and thwart Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir's efforts to form a new government.

Three of Shamir's potential coalition factions were reported in contact with the Labor Party, and Israel Television said Labor will seek a no-confidence vote on the government's economic policies if Prime Minister Menachem Begin does not formally resign within a few days.

Begin announced his decision to resign Aug. 28 but has delayed carrying out the move in order to give leaders of his Herut Party time to shore up its coalition in Parliament.

Labor spokesman Yossi Beilin said the four-man, ultra-religious Agudat Israel faction already has held talks with Labor leaders, although the faction's spokesmen said Monday they wanted to remain in the Likud-led coalition.

BEILIN SAID two other partners in Likud's coalition, the National Religious Party and TAMI, which have a total of eight seats in the 120-seat Parliament, had agreed to talk with Labor. The talks with NRP were scheduled for today, while the meeting with TAMI had not yet been set.

Likud's efforts to form a new government were delayed by a contest for leadership in the Herut Party. Shamir won easily, but Labor exploited the delay to further its own chances of taking power, and the jockeying among coalition partners has given Labor more time.

Labor would have problems aligning with Agudat Israel because of vigorous objections likely from Labor's anti-clerical left wing.

The three parties reported talking to Labor joined Likud last week to sign a declaration endorsing Shamir as their choice for prime minister, but the signatures did not amount to a binding coalition agreement.

Six other government members also were talking with Labor about forming a broad "national unity government" which would include Likud and Labor under Shamir's leadership, Beilin told The Associated Press.

DEFENSE MINISTER Moshe Arens has said he favors a broad alliance and would hand his portfolio to Labor if it joined such a coalition.

A six-member team of Likud members headed by Deputy Prime Minister David Levy met for more than six hours with Agudat Israel, TAMI — the initials are from the Hebrew words for National Tradition Movement — and the National Religious Party to try to maintain Begin's 64-seat coalition in the 120-member Knesset.

Begin has promised to resign only after Likud was assured of a working majority under his successor. Because of the delay in negotiations, the 70-year-old prime minister was not planning to sumbit his resignation to President Chaim Herzog until next week, Israel Radio said.

Agudat Israel members were quoted by the daily Maariv newspaper as saying they regarded Likud and Labor as equally receptive to their demands, which include supervision by rabbis of archaeological digs and legislation to give Orthodox Judaism a monopoly on religious conversions.

TAMI, which represents the generally lower-income Sephardic Jews, is demanding that Likud rescind welfare cuts approved last month in a bid to reduce government spending.

Two journalists missing in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two journalists working for ABC television have been wounded, one seriously, and two others were missing in Lebanon's battle-torn central mountains, a spokesman for ABC here said.

Ray Nunn, ABC bureau chief in Beirut, said Monday that Clarke Todd, 39, a Canadian resident of London, was wounded in the chest by shrapnel Sunday during a barrage by Christian militiamen on the Druse town of Kfar Matta 11 miles southeast of Beirut.

Todd, employed by Canadian television but on assignment with ABC, was taken to a Lebanese army clinic where he was reported in stable condition.

Another member of his crew, ABC soundman Nick Ludlow, 22, of London was wounded in the ankle by shrapnel, Nunn said, but made his way to the U.S. Marine base at Beirut's airport and was reported in good condition.

Two other members of the seven-man crew were separated from the others by shelling and have not been heard from, Nunn said. He would not identify them pending notification of their families.

Nunn said the crew was sent to Kfar Matta in the Chouf mountains Friday.

Lawyers want justice barred from hearings

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Opposition lawyers today accused the Supreme Court chief justice of subservience to the government and asked the court to bar him from investigating the slaying of dissident leader Benigno Aquino.

In a petition submitted a day prior to the start of formal hearings on the killing, the lawyers said an impartial investigation cannot be expected from Chief Justice Enrique Fernando, who "like a lackey," even holds First Lady Imelda Marcos' umbrella for her.

Fernando was named by President Ferdinand E. Marcos to head a five-man presidential commission to investigate the assassination of Aquino, Marcos' chief rival, who was gunned down at the Manila airport while under military guard Aug. 21 as he returned from voluntary exile in the United States.

Marcos has denied opposition charges of government complicity in the assassination. The military says the assassin was a notorious hired gun killed by troopers seconds after Aquino was shot.

FERNANDO'S APPOINTMENT to head the commission has drawn widespread criticism here because of Fernando's reputed loyalty to Marcos.

The petition was filed by five prominent Filipino lawyers, headed by former Sen. Lorenzo Tanada, who represent Aquino's People's Power Party and a legal group which acts as counsel for political dissidents.

The lawyers said Fernando's appointment to the commission — a non-judicial body that will submit its findings to Marcos — violates previous decisions by the court and by Fernando upholding the separation of state powers.

They cited a 1971 ruling by Fernando barring judiciary members from performing non-judicial functions. They also said Fernando was unqualified to head the probe because he was appointed chief justice by Marcos.

The lawyers charged that those "on trial" in the Aquino murder are the military and the Marcos government. Since Marcos already has denied government involvement, Fernando "cannot be expected to make any finding antagonistic to his benefactor, the president."

"TO PUT IT bluntly, can respondent (Fernando) dare contradict and embarrass the president?" they asked.

Noting Fernando's presence in past Marcos political functions, the lawyers said his "abject behavior even in public towards Mr. and Mrs. Marcos renders him incapable of rendering a just and impartial report...For instance, respondent, in doubtful taste, even holds the umbrella for Mrs. Marcos like a lackey."

"He does this not as an act of a gentleman towards a lady but in a submissive manner," the lawyers asserted.

Cowboys shock Redskins with miracle rally, 31-30

Dallas quarterback Danny White jets past Washington defender Rich Milot to score the Cowboys' go-ahead touchdown.

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys, a seemingly battered and beaten team at halftime, rallied behind Danny White's three touchdown passes, two of them bombs of 75 and 51 yards to Tony Hill, in the third quarter and his 1-yard scoring sweep with 2:25 to play Monday night and shocked the Super Bowl-champion Washington Redskins 31-30.

White's last touchdown pass was a 1-yarder to tight end Doug Cosbie following an interception by Ron Fellows. It turned out to be the game-winner, offsetting Joe Theismann's second TD pass for Washington, a 1-yarder to Don Warren with 10 seconds to play.

In all, White completed nine of 20 passes for 193 yards while Tony Dorsett ran for 151 yards on 14 carries.

White, literally knocked out of last season's National Conference championship game that propelled the Redskins into the Super Bowl, appeared indecisive and shaken in the first half, when he completed only one of nine passes and was sacked twice while Washington rolled up a 23-3 lead.

But he and the Cowboys were a different team from then on. In the third quarter, on Dallas' first possession, he completed a 90-yard, five-play drive with the longest pass of his career. It was the 75-yarder to Hill, who took the pass on the Washington 31, a stride behind cornerback Vernon Dean and cruised into the end zone.

On the Cowboys' next possession, not yet halfway into the third period, White blasted the Redskins' secondary again, this time from a shotgun formation. He lofted a sideline pattern to Hill, who had gotten behind cornerback Anthony Washington and again found an unhindered route to the goal line.

The Redskins' lead was now only 23-17. They had a chance early in the fourth quarter to widen it to nine points. But Mark Moseley, last year's Most Valuable Player because of his field goal accuracy, missed on a routine 31-yarder.

Dallas was in business again.

From its 20, Dallas moved steadily to midfield, then reserve linebacker Mel Kaufman plowed into White on a late hit and a personal foul gave Dallas the ball on the Washington 35.

Five plays later, Dorsett, who had broken loose on a 77-yard run in the first half, gained 18 yards to the Washington 9.

Ron Springs added eight yards, then White sprinted around right end for the score which tied it 23-23. Rafael Septien, whose 26-yard field goal was all Dallas could manage in the first half, added the extra point that put Dallas ahead.

Then Fellows, a reserve cornerback, and White added the coup de grace.

Fellows intercepted Theismann with 2:03 remaining and ran the ball 33 yards to the Redskins' 4. Three plays later, White passed 1 yard to Cosbie with 1:49 to go.

The first half was almost all Washington as the 'Skins played with all the confidence and tenacity befitting a Super Bowl champion. They controlled the ball for 23½ of the first 30 minutes to roll up their 20-point lead.

Moseley kicked field goals from 23, 30 and 39 yards out and John Riggins, the Super Bowl MVP, bulled for a 1-yard touchdown. Theismann, who finished with 28 completions in 38 attempts for 325 yards in the game, hit on 15 of 19 for 181 yards in the first half and the last one seemed to sound Dallas' death knell.

It was a 41-yard scoring strike to Charlie Brown with 31 seconds remaining in the second period.

It had the sellout crowd of 55,045 in steaming RFK Stadium thundering in ecstasy. They had chanted: "We Want Dallas!" The Redskins wanted the Cowboys, too.

Moseley gave the 'Skins their first three points after they had chewed up the first 6½ minutes of the game with a 13-play drive that included four passes from Theismann to Alvin Garrett, replacing injured Art Monk.

Washington failed to generate a score with its second possession, but when Larry Kubin downed Jeff Hayes' punt at the Dallas 2, it led to Riggins' TD and a 10-0 lead.

The Cowboys couldn't get a first down. Washington took over at their 38, Theismann went to Garrett for 18 and 10 yards, then Riggins carried four consecutive times, plowing over behind the left side of the offensive line for the score 48 seconds from the end of the first period. Riggins finished with 89 yards on 27 carries, but only 25 of the yards came in the second half.

Down 10-0, Dorsett broke loose for his 77-yard run, the third longest of his seven-year career. Only the speed of Washington's No. 1 draft choice, Darrell Green, saved a touchdown. He caught Dorsett from behind at the 6, and when Washington held, the Cowboys had to settle for Septien's field goal.

Moseley's next two field goals widened the edge to 16-3, then Theismann and Brown connected on their touchdown pass play.

Theismann, on a third-and-16 at the Dallas 41, pumped once and fired to Brown, who leaped between cornerback Dennis Thurman and safety Michael Downs, both of whom missed swipes at the ball. Brown came down at the 17 and trotted casually into the end zone.

Cosell comments anger SCLC

ATLANTA (AP) — The president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference said Monday night he wants an apology from sportscaster Howard Cosell for calling Washington wide receiver Alvin Garrett "a little monkey" during the "Monday Night Football" game between the Redskins and Dallas Cowboys.

A review of tapes of the game revealed Cosell to be commenting on a replay of a Garrett pass reception in the second quarter when he said Washington Coach Joe "Gibbs wanted to get this kid and that little monkey gets loose, doesn't he?"

The Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the SCLC, said in a telephone call to The Associated Press here that he had received several phone calls from blacks insulted by the remark and he had wired Cosell demanding the apology.

Lowery said the remark was inappropriate in light of a national history of remarks against black Americans.

Lowery added, "As a sportsman, I would urge him to issue an apology."

"He said it," Lowery responded. "If he doesn't remember saying it he ought to check the tape. I heard it, then I started getting telephone calls. That many people can't be wrong."

Early in the second half, Cosell said on the air that he'd heard AP reporters were "told I called Alvin Garrett a little monkey. Nothing of the sort and you fellows know it. No man respects Alvin Garrett more than I do."

"You had him in the Pro Bowl in the second quarter. I don't know what they were listening to," added co-announcer Frank Gifford.

A statement at RFK Stadium in Washington from ABC spokesman Irv Brodsky said he "spoke to operations people in New York and they also said he (Cosell) never said it. I spoke to Cosell again and Cosell's recollection was: 'I definitely did not call him a monkey. If I used that phrase I may have said he moved like a monkey. It was obviously meant as a compliment to his talent.'"

About a dozen callers to the AP in New York said they had heard Cosell make the comment and an operator at ABC offices in New York, who refused to give her name, said the network had received "a few" calls over the incident.

Huskers claim top spot in AP

Nebraska strengthened its hold on the top spot in the Associated Press' first regular-season college Top Twenty football poll, while defending champion Penn State slipped from fourth place to 20th.

The Cornhuskers, which ripped Penn State 44-6 in the inaugural Kickoff Classic last week, took 44 of 50 first-place votes and 993 of a possible 1,000 points Monday from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Nebraska had 976 points in the preseason poll.

Oklahoma, which opens its season this weekend at Stanford, received three first-place votes and 868 points for second place. Texas, which gets under way Sept. 17 at Auburn, got two firsts and 865 points for the third spot.

Auburn, which opens it season this weekend at home against Southern Mississippi, received the other first-place vote and moved from fifth to fourth with 757 points.

Notre Dame, which opens at Purdue on Saturday, rose from sixth to fifth with 659 points and Michigan, which hosts Washington State in its opener, climbed from 10th to sixth with 593 points. However, Florida State slipped from seventh to 12th after barely beating East Carolina 47-46.

Ohio State, No. 9 in the preseason poll, replaced Florida State in seventh place with 586 points. The Buckeyes open at home against Oregon on Saturday.

Georgia, which knocked off UCLA 19-8, jumped from 15th to 10th with 528 points.

Elway debut not impressive sight

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

So the kid is human, after all.

Hit him and he falls down.

Knock him down and he gets hurt.

Cut him and he bleeds.

John Elway will have to wait a little longer to start working his miracles for the Denver Broncos.

He's got plenty of time.

He had none of it in Pittsburgh. Elway, who enjoyed an occasional Saturday afternoon scamper when he was throwing the ball for Stanford, ran out of fear — and with good reason — against the Steelers on Sunday.

On his first pass as a professional, he let the ball go and Jack Lambert flattened him.

On his second one, Lambert was in his face again.

He never even got to throw his third one before Lambert separated him from the ball — and nearly from his sensibilities.

By the second quarter, Elway's right elbow was ballooning, his left one was bleeding, both ravaged by repeated two-point landings on Three Rivers Stadium's artificial turf. "I guess I'm going to have to learn how to pass with elbow pads on," he said.

He saw the second half from the sideline while Steve DeBerg, whose job Elway had taken in training camp, called the plays.

It was frustrating, Elway said, having to spend the second half of his first pro game off the field. But when DeBerg passed for the winning touchdown in the closing minutes, nobody showed more exhuberance along the Denver bench than this million-dollar-a-year rookie, who waved his bandaged, ice-packed arm in celebration.

His stats were dreadful — one completion in eight passes for 14 yards, four sacks, one interception. "I'm sure anybody reading those numbers would think I had a bad game," he said. "But I think I did everything I could have done."

Well, maybe not. He didn't stand up to the Pittsburgh pass rush by stepping up into the pocket the way he might have, said his coach, Dan Reeves. By the middle of the first quarter, Elway was taking more than the usual five or six steps back. He was taking seven, eight, nine, maybe more.

"Right now," Reeves said, "he doesn't have a great deal of confidence," a reference not so much to Elway himself as to the Broncos' offensive line. It permitted the Steelers to sack Elway and DeBerg seven times. They passed for 49 yards. They lost 48 in sacks. Net gain: one yard.

Afterward, before Elway met the press, DeBerg did, facing dozens of writers and sportscasters. He stared at the crowd. "I could get used to this," DeBerg said.

He probably won't have the chance. Elway is likely to start next Sunday in Baltimore.

"A lot of this game is motivation and John's got to be motivated next week," DeBerg said, "playing the Colts, with their defense."

Not that Baltimore's defense is all that great, mind you. But it could have been Elway's defense. He was drafted by Baltimore but swore he'd never play for the Colts, finally forcing the trade that landed him in Denver. "I guess there's not too many people there that like me," he said.

That power play, and perhaps the size of his contract, did not endear Elway to Terry Bradshaw, the Steelers' "saviour" 13 seasons back. He had a few unkind things to say a while back.

Scanlon upsets McEnroe in U.S. Open marathon

McEnroe irate...

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — John McEnroe's list of complaints was lengthy. There were some controversial line calls and there was some questionable scheduling. The crowd was hooting him and his shoulder was cranky.

But in the end, the top-seeded McEnroe agreed there really was only one person to blame for his sudden exit from the United States Open tennis championships.

Himself.

"I wish I had played better," he said Monday after bowing out to No. 16 Bill Scanlon 7-6, 7-6, 4-6, 6-3. "I'm not blaming anything on the umpires or the people or the scheduling committee. I have no one to blame but myself. He played the type of match he needed to win. I played the type that encourages you to lose. In the final analysis, I didn't play well enough."

That seemed a fair assessment of the situation after McEnroe dug himself too deep a hole by losing tie-breakers in each of the first two sets. Then he was unable to climb out of it against a fired-up Scanlon.

The victory sent Scanlon into the quarterfinals against Mark Dickson, who eliminated John Lloyd of Britain 6-7, 7-6, 6-0, 7-6.

In another men's quarterfinal settled Monday, defending champion Jimmy Connors, the No. 3 seed, meets No. 14 Eliot Teltscher. Connors advanced with a 7-5, 6-4, 6-1 victory over Heinz Gunthardt of Switzerland and Teltscher beat Greg Holmes, 3-6, 6-1, 6-2, 6-1.

On the women's side, top-seeded Martina Navratilova, No. 2 Chris Evert Lloyd, No. 3 Andrea Jaeger, No. 5 Pam Shriver, No. 7 Sylvia Hanika of West Germany, No. 8 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, No. 14 Jo Durie of Britain and unseeded Iva Madruga-Osses of Argentina reached the quarters.

Navratilova eliminated Pilar Vasquez of Peru 6-0, 6-1; Lloyd defeated No. 16 Kathy Jordan 6-3, 7-6; Jaeger beat Bonnie Gadusek 4-6, 6-2, 6-1; Shriver downed Lisa Bonder 6-2, 6-2; Hanika beat Pascale Paradis of France 6-4, 6-1; Mandlikova eliminated No. 10 Zina Garrison 6-3, 7-5, Durie downed Anne White 6-3, 6-0 and Madruga-Osses beat Andrea Leand 6-1, 6-3.

The women's quarter-final lineup matches Navratilova against Hanika, Jaeger vs. Shriver, Durie against Madruga-Osses, and Mandlikova vs. Evert Lloyd.

McEnroe, just $200 away from his fine limit for the year, jousted with the linesmen and umpire Ken Slye of Washington over a number of calls.

"There were some pretty bad calls at key moments and people who say it will all even out in the end, I think that's baloney," he said. "Maybe overall in your career, but certainly not in this match. I think it was pretty one-sided."

And of Slye, McEnroe said: "He first missed a call that was about six inches out and then when a lot of people were yelling, he gave me a warning for a point delay, and then he missed two service calls. Other than that, he did nothing to hurt me in the first set."

Then there was the schedule. McEnroe had played late Sunday and was doubled back early Monday. "I think two matches in two days is a little tough," he said. "I didn't have enough time to prepare mentally for this match."

Then there was his sore shoulder. From a physical standpoint, he said, he was not at his best in this tournament. "I'm rarely at my best," he added.

Then there were the fans. McEnroe asked Slye to control the noise during points and when the umpire's announcement asked for no "oohs and aahs" during play, that's just what the sellout crowd at the National Tennis Center delivered.

Scanlon, the underdog, was clearly the fans' favorite, a fact that irked McEnroe, who is a native New Yorker.

"I'm not going to say that's the reason I lost the match," he said. "Being brought up 15 minutes from here, I get dumped on every time I play here. That's just the way the New York crowds are."

On A High (2) edges the field at Ruidoso Downs and claims a $1 million payoff at the All-American Futurity.

On A High beats odds, courts to take All-American Futurity

By PETE HERRERA
AP Sports Writer

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — On A High, a much-maligned 2-year-old quarterhorse, erased all doubts he belonged in the world's richest horse race.

On A High, who had to survive a court challenge just to get into the race, put on a stirring stretch drive Monday to win the 25th running of the All-American Futurity with a first-place of an even $1 million.

The colt outran a pair of longshots, Mr Suspenders and Racy Roman, in atoning for a reputation of being "on the lazy side." The victory for owner Jerry Rheudasil of Bartonville, Texas, also helped erase the memories of the tragic loss of his filly, Yankee Win, who broke down in last year's futurity.

"I was standing at the finish line, and I knew we had won the race," said Rheudasil in the post-race celebration. "I've picked on this horse a great deal, but he has tremendous ability and he showed it today."

Rheudasil also revealed On A High was sick for several days prior to the trials which determined the futurity field.

"He had a digestive problem, but he overcame it and the closer we got to the race the more confident I became that we were going to win it," said the Texas veterinarian.

In the time trials, On A High was one of three horses that tied for the final two spots in the field. In a special draw, On A High got into the race and the owner of Rubarb Jones, the horse eliminated in the draw, took the case to district court.

The courts decided in favor of On A High and the colt went on to spring the upset victory.

On A High's All-American Futurity victory was worth an even $1 million for Rheusasil and his partners, Preston Carter and B.F. Phillips Jr., of Lewisville, Texas.

The victory was the seventh in 10 starts for On A High, a colt described by Rheudasil as "a little on the lazy side."

On A High followed the trend of his past history of slow starts in the 440-yard dash as the filly Racy Roman outjumped the field at the starting gate.

But On A High and the outsider Mr Suspenders started rolling midway through the race and the two caught Racy Roman about 100 yards from the finish and from there the two matched stride-for-stride. At the wire, On A High, under non-stop whipping by jockey Steve Harris, stuck out his nose to nip Mr Suspenders.

The three-horse entry of Easily A Twelve, Racy N Lacy and Tiny Victory, the overwhelming favorites in the field, were never a factor. Racy N Lacy followed third-place finisher Racy Roman.

With the victory, On A High boosted his career earnings to $1,085,851. Going off at 14-1 odds, He returned $29.80, $16.20 and $7.20.

Mr Suspenders, who came into the race with earnings of only $5,400, picked up $343,500 for owners Sue H. May and Louise H. Morriss of Fort Stockton, Texas. Racy Roman, owned by Morris L. Stephens of Graham, Texas, earned $153,500 for third.

Mr Suspenders paid $8.80 and $5.20 while Racy Roman returned $10.40 to show. The winning time was 22.03.

The victory was a sentimental one for Rheudasil, who had seen Yankee Win meet with tragedy in the 1982 race. Yankee Win, a filly that had won 11 of 12 races, fell just before the finish line and died 13 days later after Rheudasil and several other veterinarians had tried to save her.

Australia II win sets Cup match

By PETER BREWER
Associated Press Writer

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Skipper John Bertrand and Australia II won the right to challenge for the America's Cup Monday, and came ashore to a tumult of celebration at dockside.

Australia II, noted for its secret winged keel, captured the challenge finals, 4-1, with a win over Britain's Victory '83 by a whopping three minutes, 19 seconds.

With a smoky southwest wind of 10 knots, the Aussie yacht sprinted to a lead of 1:18 at the first turn and was never threatened seriously after that.

The competition was over a full six-leg, 24.4-mile course in Rhode Island Sound.

A spectator fleet ranging from inflatable dinghies to 90-foot yachts bobbed and turned near the dock, blowing horns and cheering. The crew got the traditional dunking in Newport Harbor.

Australia II faces cup defender Liberty, skippered by Dennis Conner, in a best-of-seven series beginning Sept. 13. Conner won the cup in 1980.

Aussie Executive Director Warren Jones at a postrace news conference predicted an Australian cup victory, 4-3, in the finals.

Syndicate head Warren Bond said, "We think our yacht has reached somewhere near its performance capability and we're looking forward to some real fun racing with the Liberty guys."

Bertrand added, "I think in the last week we have approached a new level of performance that has not been attained by Australian boats before."

Conner and Liberty were named last Friday to defend the storied old sailing prize for the New York Yacht Club.

Australia II's keel has been controversial since she arrived and her crew has kept it hidden from prying eyes or cameras by draping the boat's underbody in plastic sheets when out of the water.

The NYYC made repeated but unsuccessful efforts to have the winged keel ruled illegal during the summer, and announced Aug. 26 that questions about the design of Australia II had been resolved.

The Aussies have declined to describe the keel, but said that designer Ben Lexcen developed it in long study at the testing tanks of the Maritime Research Institute in Holland.

While the boats were racing Monday NYYC cup committee member Richard Latham released a letter asking for a retraction from the Dutch station's research chief, Dr. M.W.C. Oosterveld.

Latham complained that Dutch scientist Dr. Peter van Oossanen in a report to the Aussies about a conference Aug. 24 said he declined to sign an affidavit from Latham about the boat because it had errors.

Latham said he believed his affidavit was correct based on earlier talks with van Oossanen.

Latham's proposed affidavit said, in part, "Ben Lexcen was the team leader and maintained an office at NSMB (the Dutch lab) for four months. However, the project, from beginning to end, was a team effort and the results represent the combined talents and contributions of all members of the team."

Latham noted that America's Cup rules require that contender 12-meters be designed by nationals of the country they represent.

Jones told the news conference, "As of today, the New York Yacht Club will be sailing against the Royal Perth Yacht Club and Australia II, and...any protest whatsoever, we'd be delighted to receive."

NYYC cup committee member Henry H. Anderson Jr. said the Latham letter was to clear the air in view of van Oossanen's report to the Aussies.

"I think he is trying to straighten the record," Anderson said Monday.

Asked if the NYYC was trying to reopen the legality issue, Anderson said, "I think there were statements made in public about it and he feels it should be made straight."

In the race, Victory '83 under helmsmen Lawrie Smith and Rodney Pattison made up seven seconds on the second leg, a broad reach, and 23 seconds on the fifth leg, a run, but they were still far behind.

Australia II and Liberty are the survivors of seven foreign boats and three American entries which began racing trials for the cup places in June.

The America's Cup, won 132 years ago in a race off England's Isle of Wight, has never been taken away from the U.S. in 24 previous foreign challenges.

NFL director killed in accident

TERRELL, Texas (AP) — Claude "Buddy" Young, the National Football League's director of player relations, was killed in a one-car accident on his way to Dallas to catch a flight to New York.

Young, 57, of Hartsdale, N.Y., apparently lost control of his car, which came to rest in a creekbed about 300 feet off Interstate Highway 20 near this community 30 miles east of Dallas, according to the Texas Department of Public Safety.

The accident occurred at 2:25 a.m. Sunday but was not discovered until 1:45 p.m., when a truck driver noticed a car partially hidden by grass along the creek, said Texas Highway Patrol trooper Joe Rich.

Terrell is 30 miles east of Dallas.

The Dallas County medical examiner's office performed an autopsy Monday on Young's body and concluded that he died from multiple injuries suffered in the accident.

An NFL spokesman in New York said Young had traveled to Northwest Louisiana University in Natchitoches, La., to attend memorial services for Joe Delaney, the Kansas City Chiefs' running back who drowned this summer trying to save some children. Young was driving to Dallas for a flight back to New York, the spokesman said.

Born Jan. 5, 1926 in Chicago, Young played for the New York Yankees of the All-America Football Conference, the Dallas Texans and the Baltimore Colts of the NFL. He was inducted into the National Football Foundation Hall of Fame in 1968.

Young was "well liked and highly respected by the players," said William Murphy of Dallas, an NFL security representative. "He was a super guy. It makes your heart sink the way it happened."

Young stood only 5-foot-4 but excelled in football and track at Wendell Phillips High School in his hometown.

He attended the University of Illinois in 1944 before spending a year in the Navy. He equalled Red Grange's school-record 13 touchdowns during his freshman season.

He returned to Illinois in 1946 and was named the most valuable player in the 1947 Rose Bowl after scoring two touchdowns in Illinois' 45-13 victory over UCLA.

The following summer he was named the MVP on the college all-star team that defeated the Chicago Bears 16-0 before 100,000 fans in Chicago's Soldier Field.

Young holds the Colts' club record for a kickoff return — 104 yards against Philadelphia on Nov. 15, 1953. His pro totals included 2,727 yards rushing on 597 carries and 17 TDs. He also caught 179 passes for 2,711 yards and 21 TDs.

In 1956 the Young became the first Colt to have his jersey number — 22 — retired and he joined the team's front office, working in scouting and public relations.

In 1964 Young became the first black executive to be hired by a major sports league. He was honored in 1970 as the University of Illinois' man of the year.

He is survived by his wife, Geraldine, and three children, Paula, Jeffrey and Zollie. One son, Claude Jr., is deceased.

Viewing of the body will be held Wednesday and Thursday at Rayner & Sons Funeral Home in Chicago. Services will be held Thursday night at Bethel AME Church in Chicago, with burial set for Friday at Lincoln Cemetery in Chicago.

Actor Paul Newman smiles after winning a Sports Car Club of America GT-1 race Monday.

Newman wins race

By PETER S. HAWES
AP Sports Writer

LIME ROCK, Conn. (AP) — Actor Paul Newman, "out for a Sunday drive on a Monday afternoon," took the lead when two competitors dropped out, and calmly drove to victory in the feature race of Monday's VW-Porsche-Audi Nationals at Lime Rock Park.

Newman, 58, of Westport, Conn., moved ahead in his Datsun 280ZX after leader Peter Dus dropped out because of engine problems.

Dus, driving a Corvette, was leading Newman by 3 seconds when the trouble developed on the 10th lap of the 30-lap race.

Four laps earlier, engine trouble also forced third-place Paul Fassler from the track.

Newman, racing in the Sports Car Club of Americas' GT-1 category, won his second race of the year on Lime Rock's 1.53-mile track. On July 4, he shot from behind the pack after his car wouldn't start to win the Kendall Cup Nationals.

Monday, Newman finsished ahead of Scott Quaile of Floral Park, N.Y., by one lap and 12.4 seconds.

"That's what's known as a Sunday afternoon drive on Monday," said the gray-haired, blue-eyed actor and race driver. "I wasn't even pushing it."

Newman said there was little competition left in the race after Dus dropped out.

Dus, entered in the SCCA's A-Sports Racer class, won the Labor Day races at Lime Rock last year and had the best time in qualifiy for this year's race on Saturday. But his bright red Corvette, plagued by engine and brake problems in the past two years, gave out one-third into the race.

"The engines started running on seven cylanders then the oil light came on," said the Richmond, Mass., resident. "Some debris must have got caught in the fuel pump belt.

"I knew the belt was broken before we started. I thought I could keep it together."

Fassler, competing against Newman in GT-1, said he knew before he started that he wouldn't finish the race. His car gave out on the fourth lap.

"We had trouble with the motor all week," said Fassler, of Wellesley, Mass. "We figured it would go real early."

Karl Hoalander of Lakewood, N.J., was the winner in the GT-2 class.

Other winners in Monday's eight races were: Jay Kollins of Caldwell, N.J., Formular Vee; Noel Poduje of Needham Heights, Mass., D-Production; John DeSevn of Macedon, N.Y., E-Production; Thomas Howen of Charlottesville, Va., GT-3; and Alf Zeller of Toronto, Canada, C-Sports Racer.

Also winning were: Alex Miller of Temple, Pa., D-Sports Racer; Louis Rettenmeier of Sherman, Conn., Formular Ford; Paul Hacker or Valatie, N.Y., Rabbit-Bilstein Cup; Oran Bushey, Huntington, N.Y., Formular Atlantic; David Ammen of Lincoln, Mass., Formular Continental; and Samuel Gilliland, Fairfield, Conn., Sports 2000.

Is Gossage's 'Goose' cooked?

By MIKE GEFFNER
For The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — There was a time when Rich Gossage would march into game with a one-run lead and walk away with a save. Swift and simple.

For five years with the New York Yankees, the feared "Goose" was the most overpowering of all short relievers, the best of the late-inning pressure specialists.

But, at the age of 32 with 10 seasons behind him, the hulking right-hander has become, he says, the victim of bad breaks — bloops, tricky hops and broken-bat hits.

"I'm not a Superman," he says. "I've been making good pitches, but somehow the ball's been finding the holes. You've got to have luck in this game. I don't care how good you are. The guy who said he'd rather be lucky than good is right."

In 1983, Goose has turned human.

"People expect too much from him," said former catcher Barry Foote, now a Yankees scout. "They expect him to be invincible. But no pitcher is invincible. If he's lost anything, it's that maybe the hitters have caught up to him."

Through Labor Day, Gossage was 11-5 with a 2.07 ERA. He's not happy. In 74 innings, he has allowed 69 hits, far above his average per inning, and has registered only 16 saves — or 13 blown leads — in 29 save opportunities.

"I've stunk," he says. "I've messed up for everybody."

Witness a game against Cleveland in early June.

With starting left-hander Dave Righetti working on a 1-0 four-hit shutout through 8 1-3 innings, two outs away from his eighth victory of the year, Manager Billy Martin summoned Gossage with a runner on first. The next two batters singled, tying the score, and two more singles in the 10th gave the Indians a 2-1 victory.

In the clubhouse later, Gossage sat on his stool and kept his head down.

"This won't be easy to forget," he said. "That poor kid. He pitched one great game and I ruined it."

On Aug. 22 against Oakland, Gossage inherited a 2-1 ninth-inning lead with a man on first and needing three outs to preserve Ray Fontenot's victory. He recorded two outs but loaded the bases on a single and a walk and then walked in the tying run. Though Gossage pitched a scoreless 10th and 11th, New York lost 3-2 in 14 innngs.

"I don't know what happened out there tonight," said Yankees catcher Butch Wynegar. "I've never seen him do that before. That wasn't Goose."

In those two games, there were no broken bats, no bloops, no bad bounces. Nor were there any when Kansas City's George Brett hit a two-out, ninth-inning homer July 24, starting the whole pine tar affair that eventually ended in a 5-4 Yankee loss.

In recent weeks, local newspaper headlines have blared: "Goose Turns Turkey" and "Goose Is A Vulture," the latter referring to the way a reliever allows the tying run and later swoops up the victory. Gossage has done it five times this year.

"He's not the same pitcher we all knew for so long," Baltimore Orioles superscout Jimmy Russo said in April.

Three years ago, Gossage added a new pitch — a sweeping slider that he calls his "changeup." With each passing year, he has thrown it a little more.

"I wish he'd throw his slider even more," said Wynegar. "When he uses it in the right spot, when they're cheating on his fastball, he can make the hitters look real bad."

From 1978 to 1982, Gossage compiled a 28-23 record with 128 saves and 2.07 ERA. In 251 appearances and 413 innings, he struck out 416 batters and yielded 294 hits.

In the first half of 1981, he sported a 2-1 record and an 0.56 ERA, while collecting 17 saves in 18 save situations.

"He threw so hard that year, I hurt my arm watching him," said Kansas City Royals Manager Dick Howser, who skippered the Yankees in 1980.

In 1982, the opposition batted .193 against Gossage, making him the second toughest pitcher to face in the American League. In addition to a 4-5 record and a 2.23 ERA, he recorded 30 saves in 39 save situations.

Last year, he also strained a muscle under his right shoulder, the most serious injury of his career. He failed to pitch from Aug. 24 to Sept. 20, a period during which the Yankees suffered a nine-game longest streak, their longest of the season. "For us to win, we need the Goose," said Wynegar.

The shoulder tightened again at the beginning of 1983 and, this time, a knot formed underneath the arm. He will not say it has affected his performance.

"I'm as good now as I ever was," says Gossage, who is eligible to become a free agent after this season. "I'm still throwing hard, hard as ever. I'm not going to panic."

Gossage's fastball, which explodes upwards at a steady 95 mph, has been gunned as high as 100 this season and as low as 88.

"Listen, I know there's going to be a day when my fastball just won't be there, when I've lost it," he says. "But that time hasn't come — not yet. I've still got enough juice left in me to last another five years."

White Sox roll on, rout A's 11-1

Chicago stretched lead over Kansas City to 13

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

Even though Tony LaRussa won't admit it, the Chicago White Sox seem to marching toward the American League West crown. And more than 1.7 million people seem to know it.

The White Sox unleashed a 16-hit attack, including home runs by Carlton Fisk and Ron Kittle, to rout the Oakland A's 11-1 Monday. The victory gave Chicago a 13-game lead over second-place Kansas City in the AL West and was watched by 43,014 fans.

Chicago has now drawn 1,714,163 fans this season, setting an all-time attendance record for the city, and needs to average about 22,000 fans for its last 13 home games to reach the two-million mark.

"I figure we've got to win 14 more this month," LaRussa said, when asked if his team had sewn up the division.

"You guys won't get me to say that yet," he added. "No way."

Fisk knocked in three runs, including his 23rd home run, breaking the White Sox team record for homers by a catcher, set by Sherm Lollar in 1959.

"He (Lollar) played here a long time and I sure a lot of people would have liked to see him hold on to that record," Fisk said.

Kittle's two-run homer gave him 31 this season, the most by a White Sox player since Oscar Gamble hit the same number in 1977.

Floyd Bannister, 14-10, won his 11th game in 12 decisions since the All-Star break.

"At this point in the season," said Oakland Manager Steve Boros, "there's no doubt they are the best club in the division."

Brewers 3, Yankees 1

In Milwaukee, Mark Brouhard's three-run homer in the fourth inning was enough for rookie starter Tom Candiotti and reliever Pete Ladd.

Undefeated Candiotti won his fourth start since being recalled from Triple-A on Aug. 6. He held the Yankees hitless through 3 2-3 innings and scoreless until Don Baylor hit his 18th home run in the seventh inning.

Ladd relieved with the bases loaded and two outs in the seventh and struck out Willie Randolph on three pitches to end the threat. Ladd finished up for his 18th save.

Brouhard's home run, his third, came after Yankee starter Shane Rawley, 14-11, hit Robin Yount with a pitch and Cecil Cooper singled.

The game drew a crowd of 30,392, putting the Brewers over the two-million mark in attendance for the first time in their 14-year history.

Red Sox 2, Orioles 0

Bob Ojeda and reliever Bob Stanley cooled off Baltimore's sizzling bats.

The Boston pitchers held the host Orioles to five hits and were helped by four double plays. In 10 previous games, Baltimore had banged out 121 hits and scored 82 runs.

Ojeda, 8-7, gave up four hits in six innings. Stanley got his 27th save.

Jerry Remy and Jim Rice singled home Boston's runs in the fifth inning against Mike Boddicker, 12-7. Rice's run-scoring single gave him 109 RBI, tying him with Milwaukee's Cooper for the league lead.

Blue Jays 7, Angels 0

Jim Gott, a disaster in his last start, made up for it with a five-hitter for his first shutout of the season.

Last week, Gott started against Baltimore and faced just six batters, getting none of them out.

This time, Gott, 8-13, was in complete control in Toronto.

Damaso Garcia drove in four runs, two with his third home run of the season, to lead the Blue Jay attack. Garcia's home run, off Geoff Zahn, 8-11, capped a three-run second inning.

Toronto added three more in the fourth to chase Zahn, who entered the game with a 10-3 lifetime record against the Blue Jays.

Indians 3, Tigers 2

Cleveland ended Jack Morris' personal 10-game winning streak, though the Tiger hurler wasn't around at the end to see it.

Morris, 18-9, took a 2-1 lead into the eighth in Cleveland, but gave up Gorman Thomas' 20th home run to lead off the inning.

George Vukovich, who now has eight straight hits and 20 hits in his last 30 at-bats, then singled. Vukovich went to second on a sacrifice and scored on a close play on Mike Hargrove's single.

Morris, upset at home plate umpire Nick Bremigan's call, tossed his glove into the air and was ejected. Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson, who rushed to Morris' defense, was also thumbed out.

Bud Anderson, 1-4, got the win in Cleveland's fifth straight victory.

Mariners 13, Royals 6

Dave Henderson and Al Cowens each drove in three runs and Steve Henderson belted a two-run homer to pace Seattle.

The visiting Mariners pounded Kansas City for 19 hits. Jim Beattie, 9-12, who had not won since July 13, snapped his seven-game losing streak.

Dave Henderson knocked in his three runs with an inside-the-park home run, keying a seven-run sixth inning.

Rangers 7, Twins 3

Larry Parrish drove in six runs with a three-run homer and a three-run double to lead Texas.

Parrish, who also singled, homered in the second inning and added his double in the sixth to give the Rangers a 7-2 lead.

Parrish had driven in only two runs since Aug. 8. He now has 73 RBI.

John Butcher, 6-5, got the win, despite allowing Tom Brunansky's 23rd homer, a two-run blast that gave visiting Minnesota a 2-0 lead in the second.

Padres foil LA, 5-2

By The Associated Press

Mark Thurmond wanted to give a rest to the San Diego bullpen. As a result, the Padres continued to give no rest to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The victory in Los Angeles marked the ninth time that the Padres had defeated the Dodgers in 15 games this season and it cut their lead in the National League West to 1½ games over Atlanta. The Braves gained ground with a 7-5 decision over the Houston Astros.

Fernando Valenzuela, 13-9, took the loss, giving up one run in the first inning and three more in the third before leaving for a pinch-hitter in the seventh. It was Valenzuela's third consecutive loss and third in five decisions against San Diego.

Braves 7, Astros 5

In Atlanta, Dale Murphy continued his hot hitting with three singles and Rafael Ramirez batted in three runs, including the game-winner, to lead the Braves over Houston.

Winner Len Barker, who pitched in the American League eight seasons, collected his first major-league hit in his second at-bat leading off a clinching three-run rally for the Braves in the seventh.

Cardinals 7-7, Pirates 4-6

In St. Louis, Ken Oberkfell singled home the tie-breaking run with two outs in the eighth inning and pitcher Dave LaPoint followed with a two-run single, leading the Cardinals over Pittsburgh in the first game of their doubleheader. LaPoint, 12-8, took over in the fourth inning and blanked Pittsburgh on six hits the rest of the way.

Dane Iorg drove home Ozzie Smith with a sacrifice fly with one out in the 10th inning, giving the Cardinals their triumph in the second game.

Expos 7, Cubs 3

In Montreal, Al Oliver belted a grand slam home run in the sixth inning to lead the Expos over Chicago.

The Expos trailed 1-0 in the sixth when they loaded the bases with none out against Steve Trout, 9-13. Mike Proly relieved Trout and got two outs before giving up a gopher ball to Oliver, his second grand slam of the season, and seventh of his career.

Gullickson, 14-11, scattered eight hits in 7 2-3 innings before Bob James came on to pick up his third save. Gullickson is now 7-1 in his last 10 starts.

Mets 6, Phillies 5

In New York, George Foster belted a three-run homer with one out in the ninth inning to lead the Mets over Philadelphia.

Foster's 23rd homer followed Mookie Wilson's single off the shoulder of Phillies reliever Al Holland, 8-5, and Keith Hernandez's one-out single.

Jesse Orosco, who gave up two runs in the top of the ninth, boosted his record to 13-5 with his ninth straight victory.

Giants 3, Reds 2

In San Francisco, Joel Youngblood ended rookie Jeff Russell's no-hit bid with a leadoff double in the eighth inning and Dave Bergman followed with a two-run homer, lifting the Giants over Cincinnati.

Russell, making his fifth major-league start, yielded Youngblood's double on a 3-2 pitch. The sinking liner just eluded center fielder Eddie Milner, who tried to make a shoestring grab in right-center.

Bergman then connected on a 1-2 pitch, erasing the Reds' 2-1 lead. It was Bergman's fifth home run of the season and second as a pinch hitter. Russell, 2-2, finished with a two-hitter, having given up an unearned run without a hit in the fourth.

Beaumont takes series lead

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Mark Vanderbush says "throwing strikes" was the key to his four-hit shutout that gave Beaumont the first game of the Texas League championship series over Jackson.

Vanderbush fanned 11 Mets as the Golden Gators posted a 3-0 win Monday night in the opener of the best-of-five series.

"I was throwing strikes. That's the important thing," Vanderbush said. "I had a real good slider early, but later I was getting it up and went to the fast ball more."

The win also ended a victory drought for the 24-year-old hurler. Vanderbush had not won since beating Jackson on July 18. He gave up only one extra base hit, an eighth-inning double by Mike Howard, in twirling the Gators' second straight playoff shutout.

Beaumont's pitching staff also has put together 25 consecutive scoreless innings during the playoffs.

The Golden Gators took a 1-0 lead in the second inning on a double by James Steels and triple by Ozzie Guillen.

Beaumont added two more runs in the third off Jackson's Phil Huffman, who went all the way, giving up nine hits. John Kruk walked with two out and scored on a double by Mark Gillaspie. Steels then singled Gillaspie home.

The Mets had runners at first and second with one out in the sixth. But Vanderbush got Ricky McMullen to foul out and, after walking Kevin Mitchell to load the bases, he retired Mike Bishop on a pop-up.

After tonight's game, the series will shift to Jackson.

Oil, gas lease lotteries bilk hopeful of millions

EDITOR'S NOTE — Every second month, the Bureau of Land Management puts up for grabs the oil and gas lease rights on thousands of parcels of public land. It runs a lottery, not competitive bidding — federal officials acknowledge most of the parcels are worthless.

Yet "filing service companies" are making millions of dollars promising investors they'll win leases and make money. Usually, it's the companies that make money and the investors who lose.

In the first installment of a three-part series, "Oil Lotteries: Taking a Chance," AP Writer E. O'Neil Robinson describes the scam and why law agencies are virtually powerless to halt it.

By E. O'NEIL ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Americans plied with promises of easy money to be made in a federal oil lease lottery lost more than $200 million last year to high-pressure sales companies operating just beyond the grasp of the law.

The lottery, run by the Bureau of Land Management, offers any American citizen who has the $75 entry fee a marginal chance to make money in the oil and gas business by winning the rights to lease federal lands.

But those who enter the lottery frequently spend a lot more than $75, with many gambling thousands of dollars with so-called "filing service" companies.

The filing companies charge about $300 per lottery chance, and officials estimate that in 1982 they raked in somewhere from $200 million to $300 million. The filing services demand the premium payment for "expertise" that securities officials say is of dubious value.

According to investigators in several states and federal agencies, the typical filing company "buys a WATS line and starts dialing." When a potential customer answers, the sales pitch usually comes out of a prepared script book.

Scripts obtained by The Associated Press promise the customer will win a lease and the lease will be valuable. Variations on the theme show up occasionally, but the emphasis is on assuaging doubts investors have about the chances of winning a lease and then making money by turning around and selling it.

THE IDEAL PUSHED BY the telephone drummers is to win lease rights in the lottery, pay the BLM rent of a dollar an acre and then peddle the lease to an oil company for a profit and a slice of the royalties on any hydrocarbons found.

The reality is something else.

First, the chance of winning the rights to a lease in the lottery are slim. Second, the leases won will likely be for essentially worthless parcels of 40 to 10,000 acres on the arid Western plains, land that major oil companies have already rejected.

The BLM cautions those seeking leases that "your offer to lease is strictly a gamble. Since a very large percentage (90 percent) of the tracts won are never drilled on, your parcel may not have any potential for oil and gas even if you win the drawing."

Last year, the BLM collected $102.6 million by selling more than 1.74 million chances on parcels of land it admitted were essentially "goat pasture." For the July 1983 lottery alone, the BLM collected $12,956,000 in fees.

Depending on which of several estimates from federal and state officials is accurate, filing service companies account for anywhere from one-third to two-thirds of the BLM's lottery sales.

WHILE THE BLM IS straightforward in its assessment of an individual's chances of winning lease rights and the chances of making money on it — the agency says the chances in both cases are very slim — the filing companies usually promise success on both counts.

Federal Trade Commission investigators say that despite promises of success in the lottery, the filing companies seldom deliver, a fact that is almost never mentioned in telephone sales pitches. The result is that investors like Lloyd and Lelia Gutierrez of St. Bernard, La., buy into the program believing they are certain to win a lease and make a profit.

The Gutierrezes, a retired couple, lost their life savings by investing in the lottery through a Coral Gables, Fla., company.

Although the Gutierrezes have a tape recording of a salesman guaranteeing them a lease and a profit from the sale of that lease, Louisiana is powerless to act against U.S. Oil and Gas — it has no laws to deal with the situation. Only the FTC has taken action against the company and that was a civil suit demanding that it halt what the agency said were deceptive sales practices.

Enforcement difficulties were compounded by a 1978 federal court decision in New York that removed the filing companies from the supervision of the Securities and Exchange Commission. The decision essentially left enforcement of existing consumer protection laws to the FTC but gave the agency no powers to close filing operations that it felt were abusing the public.

STATE SECURITIES officials say they have taken over enforcement, but their efforts have been spotty and frequently ineffective.

Over the past five years, 11 state securities offices have filed cease and desist orders against lottery filing companies. The states — Arizona, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Montana, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Carolina and West Virginia — have had varying degrees of success with enforcement, but most officials say they feel the problem belongs under federal agencies.

State officials say one reason their efforts have had little effect is that companies hit with cease and desist orders frequently resurface under new names and resume sales in a matter of weeks.

"A lot of the times they'll just turn around and reincorporate and come back doing the same things under different names — same birds, just different names," said R.G. Tucker, chief deputy securities commissioner for Montana.

Tucker said his division investigated 20 concerns and concluded that all made fraudulent statements when selling their "expert services." He said one company had told an investor that only three other people would buy chances on the lot she was trying for. The company sold 900.

BLM records indicate the instance Tucker cited was typical. One West Virginia man who was told by a filing service salesman that only half a dozen people would be competing for a group of parcels was actually up against 3,419 competitors, the records show.

LYNN ENGDAHL, SPECIAL assistant to BLM Director Robert F. Burford, said that although the agency disapproved of the actions of some filing services, it had no power to halt the practices.

"Our job description says to turn it over to the proper authorities," he said, "and that's what we do."

"We don't like the abuse of the system and when we see it, we turn it over to the appropriate authorities," Engdahl added. "Right now, that is the FTC."

The BLM has turned over for prosecution more than a dozen companies accused of fraudulent use of the lottery. The violations have included printing fake lottery registration cards, pocketing money from the sale of lottery filing services and false claims of BLM affiliation.

In those cases, however, the government was able to prove outright fraud.

Controlling the filing services has been difficult since the SEC lost its New York test case in 1978. A federal court ruled then that services offered by the filing companies did not amount to "investment contracts" because they were not selling anything of value, only chances to win something of value. This left the companies outside SEC purview.

ANOTHER CASE FILED that year met the same fate, court records show. The SEC has taken little action since, although William Toomey, an SEC lawyer in Washington, said the agency still believed that the filing service companies should come under securities laws.

Because the court ruled against the SEC, individual states have had to try to develop their own approaches, under a welter of complex and frequently conflicting state statutes.

"It's a shame that we have to spend our resources and time investigating and prosecuting crime that really belongs to Uncle Sam," Tucker said.

Lloyd Gutierrez said he also wondered about the federal government's role in the sale of lottery chances by private companies.

"What I can't get over is how they get away with using the federal government like they do," he said. "It seems like it ought to be illegal."

Federal and state officials say that until filing companies stray into areas covered by consumer or securities laws, they will operate with few restrictions.

Art collecting added millions at InterNorth

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

When Omaha utility executive John S. Merriam persuaded his company to get into the art collecting business 21 years ago, all he was trying to buy was some historic western art to hang in the museum across the street from his firm's headquarters. He had no idea what an investment it would turn out to be.

Then head of Northern Natural Gas Co., Merriam began by persuading his board of directors to shell out $500,000 for a collection of 400 paintings done by Swiss artist Karl Bodner during a visit Bodner and German Prince Alexander Philip Maximilian made to the American West in the 1830s. The paintings, bought through a New York art dealer from Maximilian's descendants, caught Merriam's eye because many depicted scenes on the Great Plains around Omaha.

The utility company chairman, now retired, thought they should be preserved as a collection for local display. In subsequent years, the company added to its holdings of western art by spending another $1 million for 200 additional paintings.

Today, those paintings are worth a staggering $17 million — more than 11 times the company's original investment — making them one of the most valuable art collections in corporate America. And rather than allowing them to hang in Omaha's Joslyn Art Museum for only a relative few to see, the company (now a diversified energy concern called InterNorth Inc.) has hired a full-time curator to care for the paintings as they tour the United States from their permanent home in the Joslyn.

The flourishing business of big-league corporate art collecting no longer is the province of a handful of avant-garde companies, corporate art collections have grown in popularity so rapidly that it is no longer uncommon for the nation's best-known companies to own art collections worth millions of dollars. Art experts say that, despite the recession, the number of corporate art collections has doubled in the past five years.

U.S. corporations own art works worth at least $1 billion and, according to some estimates, perhaps double that amount.

So entwined have the worlds of business and art become that Philip Morris Inc., the New York-based tobacco conglomerate, and Champion International Corp., a wood-products concern based in Stamford, Conn., have branches of the Whitney Museum in their new corporate headquarters. When Security Pacific National Bank imposed a moratorium on acquisition of new pieces of museum-quality art last year, the move shocked the Los Angeles art community because the bank had been spending about $400,000 a year buying art.

Corporation spokesmen generally justify their companies' fine-art collections on the grounds that they give the company a good image, impress clients, generate favorable publicity and boost employee morale, productivity and creativity. "People come down here thinking we're barefoot and ignorant," said Carol Ballard, art curator for Blount Inc., an engineering and construction company headquartered in Montgomery, Ala. "Then they see the art in our lobby and it changes their mind."

There are direct financial benefits as well, including possible tax advantages — though disputed by the Internal Revenue Service — and appreciation that may accrue from collecting art. But, in reality, most corporate art collections are not begun for such reasons. Usually, the motivation for spending hundreds of thousands of dollars on art is that the chief executive simply wants a collection, or that the company just built a new headquarters or branch office and wants to buy high-class art to decorate it, or both.

Although the vast majority of corporate art collections are worth less than $1 million, some exceed $5 million, says Judith Jedlicka, president of the Business Committee for the Arts. And those estimates may be conservative.

Banker worries over horse team

Stagecoach driving part of the job

By JERRY BELCHER
The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LA PUENTE, Calif. — Your typical, up-to-date young banker wears a navy blue pin-stripe three-piece suit and handmade English shoes, drives a BMW to work, plays his computer like Horowitz plays his Steinway, and worries about heavyweight economic problems such as disintermediation.

Not so Douglass L. "Doug" Murphey of La Puente, Calif., although he is an assistant vice president of California's fourth largest bank.

He has not worried about disintermediation (the outflow of funds from banks to other investments) for years and years. But he does worry about why Sparky, his wheel-horse, is off his feed, or whether Bonnie and Clyde, his lead team, need to be reshod.

As for computers, about all Murphey knows is that a microchip is smaller than a cow chip. But in calming a four-up hitch of big horses spooked by, say, a lion in the streets, he has a virtuoso touch as strong and gentle as Horowitz at his best.

Murphey drives a 40-foot tractor-trailer rig to work, and he wears a gaudy Western shirt, faded blue jeans and scuffed cowboy boots on the job.

Maybe his full title explains these unbankerly quirks and talents: Doug Murphey is assistant vice president for stagecoach operations for Wells Fargo Bank.

THAT MEANS THAT he drives a stagecoach for a living, otherwise known in the trade as being a "Jehu," the Biblical charioteer-king.

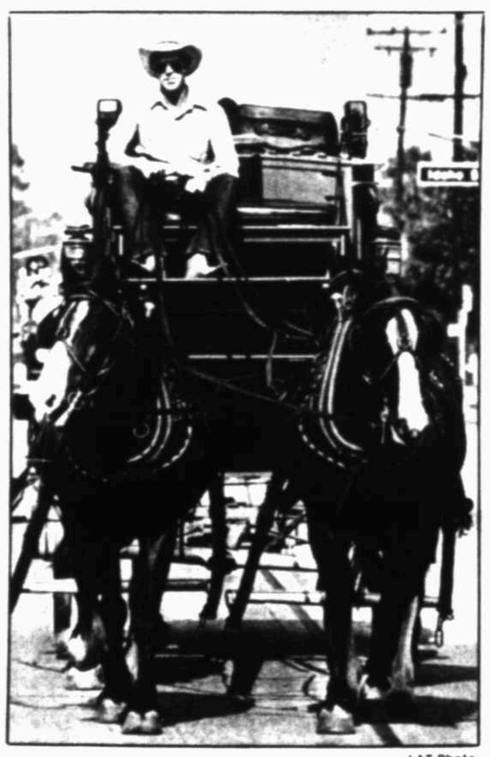
As far as anyone knows, Murphey is the only assistant vice-president of any kind who works full-time as a Jehu.

The stagecoach, of course, is the corporate symbol of Wells Fargo — established in 1852 as a combination passenger-and-package delivery service and gold depository during California's most glamorous era.

Wells Fargo closed down its last passenger and express stagecoach operation in 1918. But the bank began using stagecoaches — custom-built replicas of the original Concord stages — as a public relations gimmick about 25 years ago, contracting with horsewoman Virginia Fellingham in Northern California to drive them in parades and to bank openings. She still does it, but never has been an employee of the bank.

Murphey, a country boy from outside of Santa Rosa, Calif., says he dreamed as a kid of growing up to be a cowboy and rancher. He learned to ride and understand horses. But it also became clear that in the 20th century, buying into a ranch cost more money than he was ever likely to make as a hired ranch hand.

And so he majored in economics at the University of Oregon. He did well enough that after graduation in 1964, he was recruited by Wells Fargo as a management trainee with outstanding prospects.



LAT Photo

Douglass Murphey isn't the typical bank executive. He is assistant vice president for stagecoach operations at California's fourth-largest bank, Wells Fargo Bank. The stagecoach, Wells Fargo says, is public relations. It was the corporate symbol during the California Gold Rush for Wells Fargo's passenger and package service.

BY 1967, HE was working as a credit officer and jack-of-all-banking-trades in Wells Fargo's then-fledgling Southern California operations.

Among other odd jobs, the rising young executive was occasionally asked to ride shotgun for the stagecoach driver (a contract operator) then riding under Wells Fargo colors in Southern California.

The contract driver "just wasn't competent," Murphey says, so in 1970 Murphey's boss, a corporate vice president, suggested that he take over the Jehu job part-time, but still keep working as a three-piece-suit type during the week.

He has been at it ever since. At first it was part-time, perhaps 20 or 30 outings a year, nearly all on weekends. During the week it was business as usual at the El Monte, Calif., office of Wells Fargo. But by 1976, it was clear that Murphey had to choose between a conventional banking career — by then he was assistant vice president for business development — and the unique corporate title he now sports.

He opted for the full-time odd job.

Now 41, Murphey is a lanky, sunburned bachelor with a Marlboro man look. He has a dozen three-piece suits, but they are all in the back of his closet in the neat ranch house on the two-acre La Puente spread that serves as Wells Fargo's Southern California stagecoach headquarters.

THERE HE KEEPS a dozen horses (mares and geldings, three teams of four each); the pomegranate red Wells Fargo stagecoach they haul in parades, celebrations and bank openings from San Luis Obispo to the Mexican border; and the big truck trailer rig in which Murphey and his sidekick, Rod Cooper, haul team and stagecoach.

Murphey, Cooper, the stagecoach and one or another of his teams travel to 70 or 80 events a year. Cooper works part, time, mounted on a saddle horse as Murphey's outrider.

Murphey says he drives the big truck-trailer about 25,000 miles a year, and drives the stagecoach a total of about 200 to 250 miles, the average parade covering two to three miles.

But two or three miles can be challenging, especially when there are thousands of antic parade-goers at curbside whooping, hollering, jiggling balloons and occasionally shooting off firecrackers.

Once, Murphey recalled, a drunken horse hugger leaped out of the crowd to embrace the lead mare. The hugger was arrested. The mare simply snorted in disgust, disdaining to panic or run away.

Sometimes, though, exotic parade animals do spook even the most placid of teams.

"A CAMEL OR AN elephant bothers them," Murphey says. "And once there was a lion walking in the parade, and they didn't like that at all."

But a message conveyed by Murphey's hands through the leather lines, and a few soft, soothing words from the Jehu, and the team calms down, and clops on. He has never had a team run away, never had an accident during a public event, never had to pull out of a parade.

It is not easy work — on a warm day both Murphey and the team sweat, well, like horses. Loading, unloading, harnessing and driving a team is demanding physical labor.

Business to hire a million more people in '83

NEW YORK (AP) — With the economy still showing signs of growing, U.S. businesses plan to hire nearly 1 million more people between now and the end of the year, a new survey shows.

The economy continued to expand in August, other reports show, though at a slower pace than in July.

The business information firm of Dun & Bradstreet Corp. said a survey in July of 5,000 businesses found that hiring plans have picked up since January, when survey results implied a full-year gain of about 2.5 million jobs. That prompted the firm to increase its estimate of job gains for the year to between 3 million and 3.2 million.

Despite the added jobs, however, the national unemployment rate was likely to remain near 9 percent through the end of the year, Dun & Bradstreet said Sunday.

The Labor Department reported Friday that the civilian unemployment rate in August was unchanged from July's 9.5 percent. The rate peaked last December at 10.8 percent.

Meanwhile, the National Association of Purchasing Managers said its survey of executives in charge of corporate purchasing departments showed that the economy continued to surge in August, led by gains in employment and industrial production.

The association said its composite index fell a bit, however, indicating that the economy was continuing to grow last month but at a slightly slower pace than in July.

The index, measuring changes in production, employment, inventories and other items, slipped to 63.6 percent from 67.1 percent. The trade group attributed the decline to seasonal factors, and said the August figure was "still strong."

A reading above 50 percent indicates a growing economy, while a lower reading means the economy is contracting, the association said.

The association bases its survey on interviews with executives in charge of corporate purchasing programs at 250 industrial corporations in 40 states.

The group said its survey for August showed employment gains were the most widespread for any month this year. Also, the percentage of purchasing managers reporting increases in production — 44 percent in August — was the greatest in six years.

The only clear negative trend was in prices. The association said 39 percent of the purchasing managers reported higher prices — the biggest percentage of the year. By comparison, 33 percent reported higher prices in July and 28 percent in June.

Charles T. Haffey, vice president of the corporate purchasing division at Pfizer Inc., and chairman of the purchasing managers association, said the upward trend of prices in August "deserves watching," but added that "there is no reason for concern as yet."

Stock market rallies

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market staged a sharp and broad advance today as interest-rate jitters faded on Wall Street.

More than three stocks rose in price for every one that fell in the midday tally on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, up 8.64 points Friday, shot up another 13.21 points to 1,228.66 at noon.

Hopes rose for a respite from rising interest rates following a Federal Reserve Board report after the close of trading Friday of an unexpected $1.4 billion drop in the basic money supply, known as M1.

The third straight weekly decline in M1 dropped the measure of funds readily available for spending below the upper limits of the growth range the Fed has said can sustain economic expansion without rekindling inflation.

The NYSE's composite index rose 1.08 to 96.36. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.78 to 234.25.

Big Board volume reached 40.12 million shares a third of the way through the session, up from 28.08 million in the same period Friday.

Dow Chemical topped the active list on the NYSE, up ⅜ at 36¾, in trading that included a block of 440,000 shares changing hands at that price.

Chrysler, which reached a tentative agreement Labor Day on a contract for 56,000 U.S. workers, gained ⅛ to 29⅞.

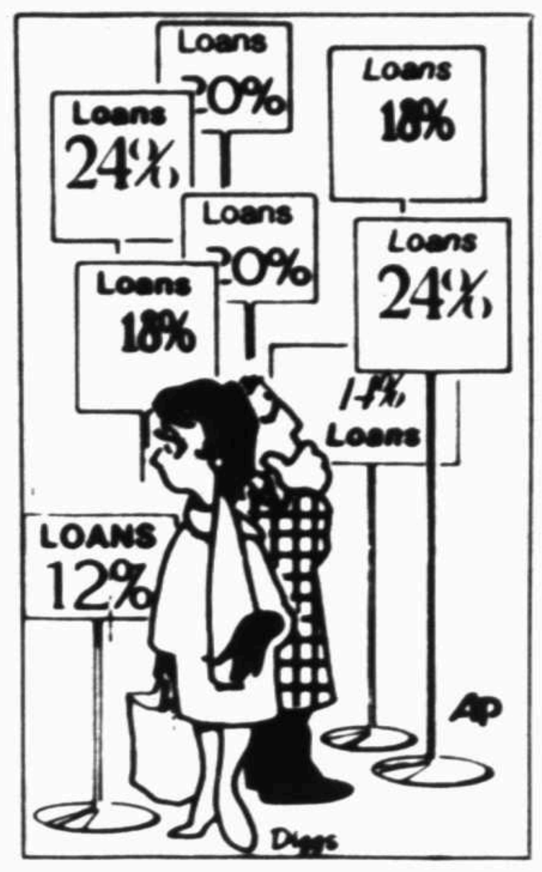
Shop around before borrowing

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer



Shopping around before you borrow can save you money, according to a new study from Purdue University's Credit Research Center which shows interest rates for new-car loans in one state varied by almost 16 percentage points.

The highest interest rate was almost triple the lowest one.

"Deregulation of rates puts more pressure on consumers to be smart shoppers for credit," said A. Charlene Sullivan, associate director of the center at the university in West Lafayette, Ind., and author of the study.

"Without regulations, interest rates will be set by consumer demand, lenders' costs of granting credit and the intensity of competition among the various financial institutions making consumer loans," she added.

Ms. Sullivan and her colleagues looked at rates for different types of loans in two states — Arizona and Illinois. They are among the growing number of states where interest rate ceilings have been eliminated in recent years.

There were two key findings:

—Rates within each state varied widely according to the type of lender involved. In general, credit unions offered the lowest rates and finance companies the highest.

—Despite the absence of restrictions on rates, the charges for loans in both states were in line with the general level of interest rates in the country.

Ms. Sullivan said Arizona and Illinois were chosen for the study both because they have no limits on interest for consumer loans and because they represent different types of bank markets.

Illinois is a heavily populated state with restrictions on branch banking which mean a large number of individual banks — 1,252 banks serving 11.4 million people.

Arizona, by contrast, has a smaller, but faster-growing population and allows statewide branches, meaning fewer banks — 34 banks serving 2.7 million people.

Because there is less competition in Arizona and because the increasing population means an increased demand for credit, Ms. Sullivan said researchers expected to find higher interest rates in the southwestern state and they did.

Rates for new-car loans in Illinois, for example, ranged from 9 percent to 24.9 percent during the period of the study which took place in March. Rates for similar loans in Arizona ranged from 12 percent to 19.9 percent.

Most of the new-car loans in Illinois were made at 12 percent to 15 percent, Ms. Sullivan said, while the bulk of those in Arizona were made between 16 percent and 17 percent.

"It's encouraging that these rates were not out of line with the general level of interest rates in the economy at the time of the study," Ms. Sullivan said, adding that the Purdue researchers estimated that the average market rate for new-car loans at the end of March was about 14 percent.

"The range of rates on auto loans...may reflect fertile shopping opportunities for consumers," the study said.

It compared the price competition in the credit market to competition in the sale of clothing, using a designer shirt as an example. "The shirt...can be obtained at a top price from one of the many department stores that also offer credit, home delivery and other consumer services. Or, the shirt could be obtained from a no-frills discount store that accepts no credit cards and will not accept returned merchandise. The discount price can be as much as 75 percent less than the department store price. The price competition...is determined by the value consumers place on the prestige and extra services provided by the department store and the extent to which consumers shop in both stores."

The Purdue report found similar variations in other types of loans, including used-car loans, unsecured consumer loans and second mortgages. The research center was established in 1974. It is a publicly supported, non-partisan organization whose purpose is to stimulate research in the field of consumer and mortgage credit.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Center collecting entrepreneurial data

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — When you read the business plans of would-be entrepreneurs you may be amazed by the vastness of their dreams, perhaps offended by their audacity and maybe even suspicious of their mental balance.

But read those same plans years later, when almost obsessive persistence and tenacity have paid off in success, and you marvel at the brilliance of concept, the thoroughness of presentation, and the genius of the originator.

Deep in the red in 1972 and seeking to raise $20 million, Frederick W. Smith proposed to "inaugurate a unique type of air cargo service," one that would provide "reliable overnight delivery of small packages."

Movement of air cargo at the time was almost exclusively a function of the big-name passenger airlines. Claiming they were slow and unreliable, Smith proposed to take the business away from them with small jets. He did.

Federal Express Corp. is now a billion dollar-a-year company with about 10,000 employees and several competitors in a newly created industry.

To the Center for Entrepreneurial Management, original business plans such as Smith's are of almost incalculable value in the study of American industry, and it has begun collecting and archiving them for researchers.

"These documents might never be available again and that would be a shame," says Joseph Mancuso, president of the non-profit membership organization, who believes we are in a period of great industrial creativity.

"Maybe it won't be the same in the year 2000 and we'll want to look back to find some of the reasons why," he muses. For one thing, he says, original plans provide insight into the entrepreneurial personality found nowhere else.

Consider this observation from a 1969 plan for Data Storage Devices: "The talent and experience of the founding group (mainly himself) in the type of business to be pursued is superior to any in the industry."

At the time, said Mancuso, it may have sounded cocky. And for good reason: Although the planner was a senior engineer at International Business Machines he had only an idea — no small-business experience and little money.

But from the perspective of 1983, said Mancuso, it shows he had really studied and assessed his competition and had otherwise done his homework. And it shows he believed, an essential quality of any entrepreneur.

The writer of the plan was Jesse I. Aweida, chairman of what has become Storage Technology Corp., based in Louisville, Col., and which last year reported sales of more than $900 million and personnel numbering 15,000.

Mancuso, himself an entrepreneur — and Harvard MBA, consultant, former professor, lecturer, and author of 15 books on business — hopes to gather 700 such documents, which will be available for study but not for reproduction.

He founded the entrepreneurial center in Worcester, Mass., five years ago and moved it here as it gained members — 2,500 in the United States and abroad — and enlarged its activities to include seminars, newsletters and publications.

"Everyone else had membership organizations but nobody seemed to represent the independent person," he recalls.

At the time, his consulting activities took him into close contact with the high-tech entrepreneurs on Route 128, just outside Boston. As he assessed their needs he concluded they could benefit from personal interaction.

Out of that need came not only the center but something of a motto, "It's okay to be an individual, but no reason to be alone." Mancuso reasoned that entrepreneurs, often misunderstood individualists, need each other's support.

Part of the support provided by the center is teaching those with an idea how to join it with money, a topic Mancuso addresses in his latest book, "How To Prepare and Present a Business Plan," published by Prentice-Hall.

Few entrepreneurs, he realizes, know planning and financing to the degree of the fellow who presented a first-class plan four years ago for "Chuck E Cheese Pizza Time Theatre."

As with so many entrepreneurial plans, this one was for an entirely new concept: The combination of pizza, beer and coin-operated video machines in a "mini-indoor amusement experience."

Nolan Bushnell, who earlier was a founder of Atari Inc., got the $5 million he sought, and the company, now called Pizza Time Theatre Inc., which is spreading across the country. Last year its revenues exceeded $36 million.

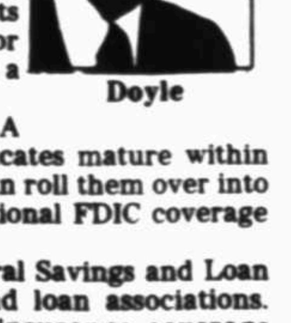
INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Coverage lasts until certificate matures

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I had a $100,000, 30-month savings certificate at one bank and a similar $100,000, 30-month certificate at another bank. Those two banks have been merged into a third bank. Since then, I can't seem to get a straight answer about insurance coverage.

I know the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. covers one of these certificates, up to $100,000. What about the other certificate? I have no other deposits at the merged bank.



Doyle

A. You have $200,000 FDIC coverage until the day one of your certificates matures. On that date, your insurance coverage will drop to $100,000 — the maximum for each depositor at each FDIC insured bank.

When banks at which you have savings certificate and-or other deposit merge, you have up to $100,000 coverage on your deposits from each of the banks that merged. That coverage, on all the insured deposits combined into a merged bank, is good for six months or until some later time when a certificate matures.

There's an interesting wrinkle, here. A FDIC spokesman explains, if your certificates mature within the first six months after a merger, you can roll them over into new certificates and maintain your additional FDIC coverage at the merged bank.

Virtually the same rules apply to Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. coverage at savings and loan associations. However, a FSLIC spokeswoman says insurance coverage reverts to $100,000 no matter when a certificate matures and can't be maintained at a higher level by rolling a certificate over within six months after a merger.

• • •

Q. We have, all at the same bank, one account in my name, one in my wife's name, one in joint name and still another in the name of our family business. Do we have $100,000 FDIC coverage for each account?

A. Yes. Each account is counted as a separate depositor, because of the different way it is registered. Each depositor has $100,000 FDIC coverage.

The insurance coverage applies to all deposits in the same name at the same bank. For instance, if you have $50,000 in savings certificate, $40,000 in a money market deposit account and $10,000 in a checking account — a total of $100,000 — at that bank, all in your name, it's all covered by FDIC. But, if you have a total of more than $100,000, all in your name, in various accounts, the amount over $100,000 is not insured.

The same rules apply to FSLIC coverage at S&Ls.

• • •

Q. You say FDIC and FSLIC covers not only deposits but also accrued interest, even if the interest has not been credited to the account. That wasn't my experience. In the late 1970s, I put $40,000 in a bank savings certificate on which interest accrued daily and was to be credited quarterly.

The bank failed two and a half months after I opened my certificate account — two weeks before interest was to be credited. I got only my $40,000 back — none of the accrued interest. Why?

A. Because, back then, FDIC and FSLIC coverage was $40,000 per depositor. That insurance was raised to the present $100,000 level on March 31, 1980.

Both FDIC and FSLIC were established by acts of Congress in 1934. That was during the Great Depression, when many banks and S&Ls were failing. In the beginning, each depositor was insured for $5,000. As inflation took hold, that coverage was increased, in several steps.

Utah musicians end five-day strike

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah Symphony musicians are putting down their picket signs and picking up their instruments after ratifying a new three-year contract to end their five-day strike.

Members of Local 104 of the American Federation of Musicians voted 76-3 Monday in favor of the contract, which includes a six-month salary freeze and the continued phase-out of part-time contracts, spokesmen for both the union and symphony management said.

The musicians went on strike for the first time in the symphony's history on Thursday after rejecting a contract proposal that called for a one-year moratorium on both salary increases and the discontinuation of part-time contracts.

Union members picketed Symphony Hall on Monday, but planned to be back on the job at today's rehearsal, said Lynn Larsen, chief union negotiator.

Marshall Islands residents to vote on sovereignty

MAJURO, Marshall Islands (AP) — The Marshall Islands, worried by factionalism, American indifference, money woes and the effects of nuclear tests, will vote Tuesday on a proposed new relationship with the United States.

The plebiscite on the Compact of Free Association is a step toward ending America's 36-year stewardship of the 3,750-mile-long string of islands and atolls that is vital to U.S. defense in the Pacific. An estimated 32,000 people live in the Marshalls.

The compact would grant the Marshallese sovereignty, with the United States responsible for security and defense. The Marshalls could conduct non-military foreign affairs with appropriate consultation with the United States.

One of the compact's subsidiary agreements calls for payment of almost $270 million over 15 years to former residents of four atolls — Bikini, Eniwetok, Rongelap and Utirik — that were affected by 66 U.S. nuclear tests from 1946 to 1958. The tests forced the relocation of 800 people from Eniwetok and 1,174 from Bikini.

An additional $45.75 million would be set aside for uncompensated claims. In turn, the Marshalls' government would deny the right of any islander ever to sue again.

The United States would also give the Marshallese government about $1.5 billion over 30 years.

Since 1947, when the United Nations made the United States administrator of the islands, America has financed most of the Marshalls' government operations, including health and education programs.

Earlier this year, a U.S. congressional subcommittee reported the Marshalls were on the verge of bankruptcy. The report by the House Subcommittee on Public Lands and National Parks said that for the fiscal year 1983, the Marshalls' government owed more than $15 million.

"The major issue confronting the government of the Marshalls surprisingly is not one of political instability but pending bankruptcy," the report said.

A separate subsidiary agreement to the proposed compact would give the U.S. Army an additional 30 years' use of its missile test range at Kwajalein, the world's largest atoll, for about $9 million a year.

Under the agreement, land-use fees, which now go directly to the several hundred communal land owners on Kwajalein, would be paid to the government and funneled to land owners.

The land owners, distrustful of the Marshalls' government, want the user fees paid directly to them. Kwajalein land owners are not anti-compact, says a government official familiar with the Marshalls. He says the land owners are anti-central government and anti-President Amata Kabua.

There is, however, more organized opposition to the compact. One opposition group, the Voice of the Marshalls, holds five of the 33 seats in the islands' parliament. The remaining 28 legislators are loyal to Kabua, who favors the compact.

The Voice of the Marshalls opposes the compact and seeks an even closer relationship with the United States.

Another group, the Marshall Islands Atomic Testing Litigation Project, is fighting the compact because its members believe the nuclear compensation package might imperil litigation involving people who had lived on the radiation-affected atolls.

Some $7 billion in claims have been filed by various plaintiffs in federal courts in Washington and Los Angeles. Under the pending compact, all would be settled through the compensation formula.

The U.S. government has acknowledged that about 200 Marshallese were exposed to nuclear fallout in a 1954 test. In the various tests, several thousand others suffered personal or property damage.

President Reagan has endorsed the compact, which could end the United States' trusteeship of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

Under the U.N. mandate of 1947, the United States is obligated to foster self-government or independence in the territories, also known as Micronesia, which cover an area of 3 million square miles.

Villagers begin fast, paper says

From Wire Reports

Six dozen Pentecostal Christians living in a remote Soviet village in eastern Siberia are believed to have begun a mass protest fast in a bid to emigrate to the West, The Los Angeles Times reported today.

Unidentified religious sources said a typewritten statement, hand-carried to Moscow from the village of Chuguevka, appealed to the United Nations Commission on Human Rights and "all international organizations" for "help and support," according to a dispatch from the newspaper's Moscow bureau.

Chuguevka is about 4,000 miles east of Moscow on the Soviet Union's Pacific coast, near Japan.

The villagers said they have suffered "constant repression by the Soviet authorities," including heavy fines and jail terms, for holding unauthorized religious services.

The fast was believed to be the first in which most or all members of a Soviet village have challenged the government in a collective protest in hopes of emigrating.

The two-page statement listed 72 adults and children in 17 families who planned to participate in the fast.

The 23 men and boys of Chuguevka will abstain from food for 10 days, 13 women and girls will fast five days, 16 nursing mothers and pregnant women will fast for three days and 20 children aged 7 to 12 will fast for one day, the statement said.

Seven members of two Pentecostal families in the nearby city of Nakhodka, where sizable numbers of Pentecostalists live, also planned to participate.

The appeal said that since mid-1982, local authorities have handed down fines for illegal religious activity totaling 4,000 rubles, or $5,600, and jail sentences totaling 220 days.

Most of the villagers are ethnic Germans, the descendants of emigrants encouraged by Catherine the Great to settle in Russia's Volga valley during the 18th century.

During World War II, the Volga Germans, as they came to be known, were deported, along with other minorities whose loyalty was doubted, to remote regions of Soviet Central Asia and eastern Siberia.

Future of medical services unpredictable

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The future of medical services in the Permian Basin is much like that of the economy — unpredictable, according to Martin Neill, recently retired trustee and former director of Midland Memorial Hospital.

"You think you're going real strong and all of a sudden the bottom drops out and you have to rearrange your plans," Neill said.

As a longtime Midlander, Neill has watched MMH and other local hospitals provide increased services to the community in the past. But proposed plans for future expansions may be forced to slow with the slack in the economy, he said.

"THERE'S A PROBLEM with trying to predict the future of the hospital, just like there is with everything else," Neill said, "not only for Midland Memorial Hospital, but for other institutions as well — it's hard to predict from year to year.

"Once you think you've gotten a feel for the budget, the economy changes."

Construction of a 77-bed, $15.1 million expansion at MMH and a chemical dependency hospital could be finished in a few years, Neill said he once thought. Now, it could be delayed.

"IT DEPENDS ON THE economy," he said. "Right now, if one had to project, they'll probably have to slow down on some of those projects. In 1981, I thought maybe five years (before the projects would be completed) — now, I'm looking at 10. They were feasible projections at the time they were conceived. But sometimes you have to alter your plans."

Approval of MMH's bed expansion, drug and alcohol abuse treatment facility and other equipment and programs with costs exceeding $600,000, must be approved by the Texas Health Facilities Commission in Austin. Approval is necessary to avoid duplication of services in an area.

But the commission's time schedule also can foul up a hospital's or medical institution's plans, Neill said.

"One of the problems (with the THFC) is they don't allow you much time to alter your situation," he said. "They give you so much time and then you lose it.

"IT MAY BE perceived after the opportunity has passed and then you have to wait. Sometimes you have to wait for the next train when you've missed the first one."

Although many things have changed since the boom of 1981, Neill said he thinks the economy, and therefore, the hospital's finances, will pick up in a few years: "Probably in 1985, we'll see we've moved into another situation — but I don't see another 1981."

Martin Neill

Meanwhile, the generosity of Midlanders and the hiring of Paul Dietz as director of development, a new position designed primarily to head fund-raising campaigns, should keep the hospital on its way in providing sophisticated services and care.

DIETZ'S position, effective May 23, is one that has long been needed, according to Neill.

"We should've had one for years," he said. "The hospital administrator here before (Wayne Urich) used to act in that position to an extent. But it was a secondary job. That's not a really good way to run a railroad — when you have two jobs, the secondary one doesn't get much attention."

The Board of Directors decided last week to sell $2 million in junior lien revenue bonds for the financing of a new CT Scanner, a sophisticated piece of equipment which provides cross section X-ray images of the inner human anatomy, and renovation of the radiology department to house it. With the Board of Governors conducting a two-year fund drive to raise $2 million for the project, directors said the revenue bonds were a form of interim financing.

NEILL AGREED with their decision.

"Under the circumstances, it was the only thing they could do. They really had no option there," he said, adding the CT Scanner was needed.

"(The Board of Governor) probably will have a harder time this year than last year (raising the funds) because everything has tightened up," Neill said. "But people still have incomes that will allow them to be generous with their gifts. And really, a few million dollars for an organization like MMH shouldn't be that much of a challenge. Now, $10 million would be.

"MMH is a pretty big organization," Neill continued. "But sometimes, people think just because you're a big organization, you don't need any volunteer help or any money." He said that is not true.

"ONE OF THE goals — and it is a goal — is for MMH to be a self-sustaining organization. It's a goal and it shouldn't be construed by anyone as anything else. People ask, 'Why can't (MMH) make more money?'

"When you're playing with a non-profit hospital, you don't have much room or leeway to allow for unexpected expenditures. Everyone wants it to be a tax-supported institution, but no one wants to pay taxes."

Neill, who has served on the Human Welfare Coordinating Board of the Baptist General Convention of Texas, which oversees eight Baptist hospitals in the state, said he is familiar with the problems faced by non-profit hospitals.

But all hospitals are facing a challenge with the implementation of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982. Effective Oct. 1, the new system, also known as prospective payment, will limit Medicare reimbursements based on target costs.

A HOSPITAL CAN keep all the money it saves by holding costs below prices fixed by the federal government. But it also will lose money that it spends on a Medicare patient in excess of the amount set by the government.

"It's almost going to be disastrous for some hospitals," Neill said. "In theory, it sounds real good — but like a lot of things, the practical working out doesn't always measure up to the theory."

Medicare spending has increased at an annual rate of nearly 18 percent since 1970. Even with the new system, the cost of Medicare is expected to rise from $50 billion in 1982 to $75 billion in 1985.

"More efficiency is the principle," Neill said. "But whether it can be carried out or not remains to be seen."

MMH WILL BE ONE of 90 hospitals in Texas to begin the program Oct. 1, at the beginning of their fiscal year. The rest of the 400 hospitals in the state will begin the new system Jan. 1, or July 1, depending on when they begin their fiscal year.

Hospitals that begin Oct. 1, "are really at a disadvantage," Neill said. "They don't know what's going to be ruled and so forth. Also, the auditing groups — they're in a process of changing, too. They don't know how it's going to work.

"Bureaucracy makes the rules," he said. "And hospitals are almost going to have to do it on a trial basis for a couple of years."

Lab enhances images taken afar

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Exploring for oil has one thing in common with searching for sunken ships — both are easier with a technique known as remote sensing.

So when Texas oilman Jack Grimm needed help in his search for the Titanic, he called on Texas Christian University's Center for Remote Sensing and Energy Research.

TCU's computerized equipment turned Grimm's fuzzy underwater photos into images of a 38-ton propeller and two statues, signs that Grimm's expeditions may have finally located the Titanic's resting place in the North Atlantic. The find may return half a billion dollars' worth of jewelry and artifacts. TCU charged Grimm a few hundred dollars to cover expenses.

BUT SEEKING SUNKEN treasure is not the main purpose of remote sensing. The technology is useful for many other things. It monitors reclamation at Texas strip mines, fights fires in Australia, and gives U.S. negotiators inside information on the status of Soviet wheat crops.

And at TCU, the remote sensing lab's main use is as a research tool for oil and gas exploration.

"The main thrust of the center has been to educate and demonstrate to industry the use of this tool in exploration," said Ken Morgan, director of the center.

REMOTE SENSING, he said, is simply the gathering of information from a distance — as with aerial photography and radar, for example. More sophisticated remote sensing uses data transmitted from satellites.

NASA's Landsat satellites have been a major source of data for TCU's use, Morgan said. Such satellites, in polar orbits about 600 miles high, record the brightness of patches of the Earth's surface with a complex mirror and prism system. The satellite scans different wavelength ranges, including the infrared region, invisible to the eye.

Brightness levels are recorded as numbers from 0 to 255, corresponding to 256 shades of gray. The numbers are stored on computer tapes, which TCU buys from NASA. TCU's $250,000 computer system than analyzes the numbers, transforming them into multicolored images displayed on a video screen or converted into photographs.

"From 600 miles, you'd be able to see a football field and determine if it's artificial turf or real grass," said Morgan.

THE COLORS PRODUCED by the computer system look nothing like real-life colors. Vegetation appears red or pink; water is dark blue or black. The concrete, asphalt and bricks of urban areas show up as bluish gray. TCU's computer system can combine Landsat data with other information (such as radar images from airplanes or other satellites) to reveal different features of the Earth's surface. Analysis of these features can help pinpoint promising spots for oil and gas drilling, Morgan said.

While many major oil companies have their own remote sensing equipment, few independent companies can afford it. The TCU center will perform analyses for small or large companies, for a fee ranging from $10,000 to $50,000.

Since its inception two years ago, TCU's center has served about 30 companies, Morgan said, most looking for oil and gas. He said the center "has been in on some oil discoveries," but information about them is confidential.

OTHER PROJECTS have included helping mineral companies search for uranium, molybdenum and silver. And the center has attracted international attention from groups contemplating a variety of other uses for remote sensing.

An Australian group visited the TCU center and decided to buy similar equipment for use in fighting fires. Photos taken from helicopters flying over burning buildings can be analyzed to identify hot spots and flames hidden by the smoke.

Officials from China observed TCU's system in preparing a remote sensing program to monitor farming problems there.

REMOTE SENSING can track the spread of plant diseases, look for signs of drought and even spot water pollution or estimate crop yields. The U.S. government uses Landsat data to gauge the annual Soviet wheat crop, Morgan said.

The same techniques have been used by the TCU center to monitor the progress of land reclamation at Texas Utilities Co.'s lignite strip mining sites near Fairfield.

Such acitivites have received less notice than the center's recent assistance in the search for the ocean liner Titanic. A 1981 expedition to the North Atlantic, financed by Grimm, photographed an area of the ocean floor where the ship sunk on April 15, 1912. Grimm's associate Joseph Darlak brought videotape and still pictures from that expedition to TCU's lab for analysis. (Grimm's third attempt to locate the Titanic ended unsuccessfully in July.)

AP Laserphoto

Dave Koger, left, a research assistant to Dr. Ken Morgan, right, at the Center for Remote Sensing on the Campus of Texas Christian University examines a satellite photo. The remote sensing lab's main use is as a research tool for oil and gas exploration. But it has also aided oilman Jack Grimm in his search for the Titanic.

DAVID KOGER, the research associate at TCU's center, developed techniques to enhance the images. The results convinced Grimm and Darlak that they had photographed a propeller of the proper size and type to belong to the Titanic.

In addition, the enhancements revealed what appeared to be two statues, Darlak said. One, beneath the propeller, looked like a dog. The other was a statue of a person.

"It's lying face up on the ocean floor with a pedestal where the pedestal should be," said Darlak. "The legs are somewhat obscured, but the upper body and the face are pretty much easily seen."

Morgan said the work on the Titanic project was of value because it helped develop the TCU system's capabilities for doing different things.

"That was our main objective there," he said. "Our biggest concern here is as a research lab."

Fatalities reported during holiday

Four persons, including an infant, were killed in three traffic accidents Monday in the Permian Basin area, according to the Department of Public Safety in Midland.

A 17-month-old Big Lake boy was killed in a one-vehicle accident occurring at 2 a.m. Monday on Farm-to-Market 33, about a mile south of Garden City in Glasscock County. The accident was not discovered until 10 a.m. Monday.

According to the DPS, a vehicle driven by Lavin Erol Williams, 21, of Big Lake, was southbound on FM 33 when she apparently fell asleep and ran off the road. The vehicle overturned once and both occupants were thrown out. Her child, Douglas Wesley Williams, was pronounced dead by Glasscock County Justice of the Peace J.E. Wooten at 10:45 a.m. at the sheriff's office in Garden City.

Ms. Williams was in stable condition at Reagan County Hospital in Big Lake. The infant's body was taken to Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home in Big Spring.

Two Phoenix, Ariz. residents were killed in another one-vehicle accident on Interstate 20 about 2½ miles west of Stanton in Martin County at 11:30 a.m. Monday.

Peggy Cannon Hicks, 80, and Wanda Goldwin Lamphere, 60, were killed after the west-bound vehicle Ms. Hicks was driving began losing tread from the right rear tire. Ms. Hicks lost control, skidded into the median and the vehicle overturned 3½ times. Both occupants were thrown from the vehicle.

Ms. Lamphere was pronounced dead at the scene by Martin County Justice of the Peace F.E. Kennedy at noon. Her body was taken to Ellis Funeral Home in Midland.

Ms. Hicks died at Midland Memorial Hospital at 2:40 p.m. Monday. Her body also was taken to Ellis Funeral Home.

One person was killed and two injured following a two-vehicle accident at the intersection of U.S. Highway 287 and Farm-to-Market Road 1776 in Pecos County at 4:40 p.m. Monday.

According to the DPS, the accident occurred when a vehicle driven by Gerald Matthew Hubbard, 17, of Houston, collided with a pickup driven by Roland W. Teague, 28, of Pecos. Hubbard was traveling south on FM 1776 when he collided with the pickup, which was traveling northwest on U.S. 285. Both vehicles were thrown into the south bar ditch on U.S. 285. Hubbard was thrown from his vehicle and was pronounced dead at about 8 p.m. Monday in Pecos County Memorial Hospital. His body was taken to Fort Stockton Funeral Home.

Teague suffered minor injuries and was not admitted to a hospital. A passenger in his car, Betty Jo Teague, no age available, was listed in stable condition at Odessa Medical Center with a possible broken pelvis and lacerations to the right knee.

Educators pursue technology dream

DALLAS (AP) — Texas A&M and the University of Texas are leading a move among state colleges to spur high-technology research and teaching in the state despite a low priority given the idea thus far by the Legislature, educators say.

In the past three years, several universities have taken steps to upgrade their high-tech departments, including the physical sciences, computer sciences and engineering.

The sites include:

— Attempts to lure world-class scholars, including Nobel Prize winners, who can build strong research groups.

— Moves to create institutes or labs, including a proposed giant underground tunnel that would be 100 miles in circumference, to lure more pure scientific research to the state.

— Million-dollar endowments for chairs and professorships in pure and applied sciences;

— Increased expenditures on equipment and laboratories; and

City girl not too thrilled with backpacking

I am a city girl: born near Los Angeles, raised in New York City. I thought a sleeping bag was something you used at slumber parties when there weren't enough beds to go around. And a backpack was something to carry your school books in when you had too many to hold.

Until a year ago I'd never had the "pleasure" of using either item. Now, thanks to my boyfriend, who is an avid backpacker, I've become quite acquainted with both sleeping bags and backpacks. But there are times I wish I had never heard of such equipment or heard of the trail.

That's not to say I don't like the great outdoors.

BUT I'D MUCH prefer seeing it riding in an air-conditioned car instead of clomping around on my own two feet. Until I was introduced to backpacking, the farthest I had ever walked was to the 7-Eleven on the corner. Now a veteran of four expeditions in the mountains of New Mexico and Colorado, I have hiked with a full pack as far as 13 miles in a single trip.

That may not sound like much, but after a few minutes — not to mention hours — my shoulders are numb from holding up a pack that contains everything but the kitchen sink and my feet are crying "Let me out! Let me out!" of the heavy, waffle-soled boots I am wearing.

Ever since I was a little girl my mother always told me "It's better to have it and not need it, than to need it and not have it," and so I fill my backpack with more things than I'd ever have use for on the trail. My boyfriend laughs at me when I gather things to stuff in my pack: deodorant; baby powder (you never know who you might meet); set of underwear, pair of socks and shirt for every day we're to be on the trail; body lotion; nail file; toothbrush and toothpaste; and wash cloth — for the off chance we might come upon a stream and I'd be able to wash off some of the dirt and grime clinging to my face and hands.

THAT'S THE WORST part of backpacking — the possibility of not being able to wash my hands and face, take a bath or shampoo my hair for weeks at a time. (Actually, the longest trek I've ever been on is three days, but it seemed like weeks.)

All during the trips I am high with the anticipation of getting home and having the luxury of a shower. I hate being dirty; I wouldn't mind the trail half as much if there were bathrooms along the way.

Another drawback to hiking in the forest is the likelihood of bumping into members of the animal kingdom. Bears are often characterized as cute, cuddly creatures, but I'd just as soon not have to share my supper with one, which I almost had to do in White Mountain Wilderness near Ruidoso, N.M., on my baptismal backpack trip.

AS DARKNESS FELL the first day, my boyfriend built a campfire and I began cooking — if you can call heating up a can of corned beef hash cooking. Suddenly the most awful bellowing I have ever heard erupted from just within the shadows. To calm my fears, my boyfriend said it was a bull (we had seen cattle grazing earlier in the day) and in my ignorance I believed him. But I began to wonder when he kept adding wood to the fire. By the time he fetched his bowie knife from the tent, I was convinced that Smokey's cousin indeed lurked beyond the flames. Anxious moments later, the bellowing stopped. I guess the bear got tired of waiting for us to bring out real food and went off to find another couple of hapless backpackers to scare.

There are some animals, though, that are so darned cute you don't mind sharing your vittles with them. Like chipmunks, for instance. Once we were at a high mountain lake in Pecos Wilderness in New Mexico. My open pack, with a bag of nuts plainly visible, was resting against a boulder. We turned to see that a chipmunk had crawled into the pack and was nibbling on the bag's contents. Not wanting to eat nuts which the little beastie had touched, we tossed the top few to the ground. Soon we noticed the chipmunk scampering back and forth between the pile of nuts at our feet and the boulder behind us. He was stuffing his cheeks and then climbing onto the rock to feast, his mouth working in fast motion.

Despite never knowing who may show up for a meal, this misplaced city girl keeps returning to the trail to endure sore ankles, blistered heels and toes jamming into the front of her boots.

Why?

I suppose I just like to guess who's coming to dinner and experience the agony of de-feet.

Police starting over in death of wealthy woman

HOUSTON — Homicide detectives, who have interviewed almost 50 people and filed enough reports to fill four desk drawers in their unsuccessful search for the killer of a wealthy woman, say they are starting over.

Ruth Kottler, 61, the manager of the Benjamin Franklin Savings and Loan, was found March 1 fully clothed in the bathrub of her westside apartment. She died of asphyxiation after being beaten.

The same week two other women — Bertie Eakins and Elizabeth Faubus, the estranged wife of former Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus — also were found slain in bathtubs in their homes in the same area.

Despite the similarities of the cases, police contended from the beginning the killings were not related. Separate suspects have been charged in the cases of Ms. Eakins and Mrs. Faubus.

Although they said they had thought Mrs. Kottler's murder would be the easiest of the three cases to solve, police still have no suspects in the case.

Detectives Steve Clappart and Jim Binford recently were assigned to the case. They will reinterview the same people and retrace the case.

"I wracked my mind for a novel way to approach this," Clappart said. "There are some more things we're going to do now."

Clappart said Mrs. Kottler apparently was attacked as she opened the door to leave for work. At first, police thought the death was linked to a robbery at the savings and loan. Since no money was missing, police now think the burglar alarm at the bank might have malfunctioned.

"The alarm and the killing are the kind of coincidences that really jump out at you," he said.

Binford said a case containing about $30,000 in jewelry was missing. A check stolen from Mrs. Kottler was cashed at a supermarket about 30 minutes after the victim's body was found, he said.

However, police were not notified until May 21 because of "bureaucratic red tape," he said.

The savings and loan has offered a $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and indictment of a suspect.

Children from church drown

GALVESTON (AP) — A church outing at a Galveston beach turned into a day of horror for members of a Houston church when four children drowned in swift currents in the Gulf of Mexico.

Members of the People's Hope Missionary Baptist Church had gone to the beach Sunday for baptismal services, said the Rev. Jesse Richardson, the church's pastor.

The deaths occurred when several church members went for a swim following the services, Richardson said.

The victims were identified as John Seals, Robert Batiste, Donnie Johnson, all 14; and Delamona Estelle, 10.

The bodies of the boys washed up on the beach at 51st Street and Seawall Boulevard at separate times Monday near where they were last seen, officials said.

The girl died in John Sealy Hospital late Sunday after being pulled from the water about 7:30 p.m. by a surfer.

"The youngsters weren't too far out since we had told them to be careful of the tides and the deep holes the storm had created," Richardson said. "But it seemed like we just looked up and all of a sudden they were way out in the water.

"They struggled to get back to the beach but it seemed like the tide kept pushing them out," Richardson said.

Quarrel results in death

PANHANDLE (AP) — A 35-year-old man shot his wife and brother-in-law before turning the gun on himself after the woman attempted to move out, authorities said.

Kenneth Wayne Meaker shot his 28-year-old wife, Susan, in the back with a shotgun as she was loading her personal belongings into a car about 2 p.m. Monday with the help of her brother, Ralph Ray Vaughan, 27, according to Carson County Sheriff Connie Reed.

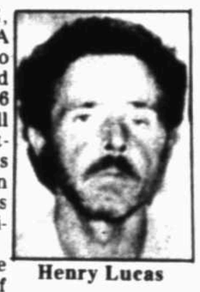
Meaker then shot Vaughan in the head before shooting himself, Reed said.

The deaths were ruled a double murder and suicide by Dr. Ralph Erdmann, a Childress pathologist.

The shootings were witnessed by at least one of the couple's three children, Reed said.

Panhandle is located about 30 miles northeast of Amarillo.

Lucas attempts suicide



Henry Lucas

MONTAGUE, Texas (AP) — A drifter who claims he killed 100 women in 16 states tried to kill himself by cutting his wrists with a broken lightbulb in his jail cell, authorities said.

Montague County Sheriff W.F. Conway said deputies found Henry Lee Lucas bleeding in his cell as they began serving lunch shortly before noon Sunday.

Doctors in Bowie, about 30 miles south of here, stitched two gashes and treated several other cuts on the back of Lucas' left hand, Conway said.

"He took glass from a lightbulb and cut the back of his left hand, wrist and elbow. He was taken to Bowie Memorial Hospital and treated and then taken back to jail," Montague County District Attorney Jack McGaughey said.

McGaughey said the wound was "never regarded as serious" but said he would describe the injury as a suicide attempt.

Escapee turns himself in

LEWISVILLE, Texas (AP) — A prisoner who bashed a hole in a 6-inch cement wall with a pipe broke out of Lewisville city jail Monday but turned himself in to authorities three hours later, police said.

Lewisville Police Sgt. Robert Genova said it was "hard to explain how Maurice Lewis, 25, could escape by pounding a hole in the city jail wall without attracting attention."

Lewis, who was arrested Monday on charges of public intoxication, criminal mischief and retaliation, "had been making a lot of noise all night long," Genova said.

"He had been pretty rowdy," he said.

Lewisville police called off their search for Lewis at noon Monday after he surrendered to the Denton County Sheriff's Department.

Theft, burglary reported

Police Round-up

A Midland man was robbed of $30 after a man he was going to drive home pulled a knife on him early this morning at the corner of Lincoln Street and Mulberry Lane.

The victim told police he had agreed to give the Hispanic male a ride home from Red's Drive In, 1801 E. Front, at about 2:15 a.m., when the man pulled a knife and demanded his wallet.

The wallet contained $30 in cash and miscellaneous papers. The suspect was last seen running south on Lincoln Street.

In other action, Midland police are investigating burglaries of a business, residence and auto and a criminal mischief case.

Several police units were dispatched to Balie Griffith Firestone at 709 N. Big Spring when an alarm sounded at 6 a.m. Monday.

After arriving at the store, police discovered a broken plate glass window in the front. A color television set, valued at $500, was the only item missing. With damage to the window set at $290, the total loss was placed at $790.

Police also investigated a burglary at 3610 Roosevelt shortly after midnight Monday. According to Nancy Chaney, of the same address, a person or persons entered her residence between 8:15 a.m. and midnight Monday through a bedroom window. Taken was a $284 semi-automatic stainless steel pistol.

Patrick Park Look, of Route 3 Box 413 K, reported the burglary of his automobile, parked at Midland Park Mall, at about 9:30 p.m. Monday.

According to police, a window on the driver's side was broken and a 12-gauge shotgun was missing from a rifle rack on the rear window. Damage to the window was placed at $300 and the gun was valued at $75.

Doris Parks, of 1802 E. Maple, reported $800 worth of damage to her vehicle while it was parked at 1301 Lynn about 12:30 a.m. today. A cement cinder block had been thrown on her car and damage was done to the windshield, hood and door. The windshield wipers, antenna and aluminum stripping also had been twisted and broken.

Defense wants trial delay

KERRVILLE (AP) — An attorney for a nurse charged with injecting seven children with a paralyzing drug says he will seek a delay of her upcoming trial.

Genene Jones, 33, is scheduled to be tried on a murder-by-injection charge Oct. 17 in Georgetown, where her trial was moved on a change of venue.

Ms. Jones is charged with the Sept. 17, 1982, death of Chelsea Ann McClellan. She also is accused of causing serious seizures in six other children with injections of a powerful muscle relaxant.

Attorney William Chenault said Monday that he wants the trial delay so the defense has adequate time to analyze the results on toxicology tests peformed on embalmed tissue from Chelsea's body.

Dr. Bo Holmstedt of Sweden reportedly found traces of the muscle relaxant, succinylcholine, in the child's body.

Chenault said the defense also wants to conduct independent tests on the tissue.

State District Judge Murray Jordan will hear the request at a Sept. 15 pretrial hearing called to reconsider Ms. Jones' indigency status.

A Bexar County grand jury is looking into a string of suspicious infant deaths at the pediatric intensive care unit at San Antonio's Medical Center Hospital from 1978 to early 1982.

Ms. Jones worked at the unit during the period under investigation, but has denied any wrongdoing.

Rabbi protests 'Fiddler'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Some members of this city's Jewish community are offended that actor Herschel Bernardi plans to appear in "Fiddler on the Roof" on Yom Kippur, a high holy day, a rabbi says.

Yom Kippur, when those of the Jewish faith normally fast and spend the day in worship, falls on Saturday.

Bernardi begins performing "Fiddler" tonight at the Majestic Performing Arts Center. He plays the lead character, Tevye.

"Bernardi was given the choice of another evening, but he decided to perform on the most sacred day of the Jewish year," said Rabbi Samuel M. Stahl, general chairman of the local Jewish Community Relations Council.

Grand jury to consider case of alleged gunman

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Randall County authorities say a grand jury will consider the case of a 36-year-old man who allegedly held three hostages, saying he could not afford needed medical treatment for a heart conditions.

A man, a woman and a child were taken hostage about 4:30 p.m. Saturday, authorities said. The woman and child escaped about two hours later and called law officers.

The alleged gunman was taken to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, where tests confirmed he had a serious heart condition, Deputy Crosby Hammons said Monday.

Reagan plays tapes of pilots' conversations

WASHINGTON (AP) - It was a striking event: President Reagan letting the nation hear surreptitiously taped conversations of Soviet pilots just before an incident he called "the Korean Air Line Massacre."

The high drama from the Oval Office on Monday night was intended to convince the nation beyond any doubt that the Soviets had fired the missile that destroyed a Korean Air Lines 007 over the Sea of Japan last week, killing 269 people, including 61 Americans.

"The A.N.O. (air navigation lights) are burning. The strobe light is flashing," reported the unidentified pilot of a Soviet SU-15 fighter to Deputat, or the ground station, at 5:18:34 a.m. local time Thursday (2:18:34 p.m. EDT Wednesday).

Twenty-two seconds later, the pilot of a Soviet MiG-23, also unidentified, informed Deputat: "Roger, I'm at 7500, course 230."

At 5:19:02 a.m., the SU-15 pilot notified ground station: "I am closing on the target."

At 1:26:20 a.m., the same pilot radioed: "I have exucuted the launch."

Two seconds later, he reported: "The target is destroyed."

Four seconds after that: "I am breaking off attack."

Reagan had that short segment of the tape played during his nationally broadcast speech outlining sanctions he intended to impose against the Soviets for "this crime against humanity."

Though the recording was in Russian, the White House distributed a translation. Reagan said it was recorded by Japanese ground sites.

The full tape was to be played today at the United Nations Security Council.

But the sound of Russian voices couldn't obscure the fact that the United States still does not know why the civilian airliner was downed. Reagan has demanded an answer from the Soviets, as well as an apology, but it has not been forthcoming yet.

Although Reagan laid out what he called "the incontrovertible evidence" for the U.S. belief that the Soviets knew that the plane was a Korean airliner instead of an American spy plane, there was no positive proof that it wasn't a case of mistaken identity.

The president acknowledged that an RC-135, a U.S. reconnaissance plane, was "on a routine mission" in the area of the Korean airliner in international waters over the Pacific more than an hour before the aircraft went down.

> "The 747 is equipped with the most modern computerized navigation facilities, but a computer must respond to input provided by human hands. No one will ever know whether a mistake was made in giving the computer the course or whether there was a malfunction. Whichever, the 747 was flying a course further to the west than it was supposed to fly; a course which took it into Soviet airspace."
>
> — President Reagan

"At no time was the RC-135 in Soviet airspace," Reagan said. "The Korean airliner flew on and the two planes were soon widely separated."

As further evidence, the president cited a similar incident in 1978, when "the Soviets also shot down an unarmed civilian airliner after having positively identified it as such.

"In that instance," he said, "the Soviet interceptor pilot clearly identified the civilian markings on the side of the aircraft, repeatedly questioned the order to fire on a civilian airliner, and was ordered to shoot it down anyway."

Two people died in that incident as the aircraft made a crash landing.

Reagan said the Korean plane did not realize it had strayed into strictly guarded Soviet airspace.

"The 747 is equipped with the most modern computerized navigation facilities, but a computer must respond to input provided by human hands," he said. "No one will ever know whether a mistake was made in giving the computer the course or whether there was a malfunction.

"Whichever, the 747 was flying a course further to the west than it was supposed to fly; a course which took it into Soviet airspace."

The plane, bound for Seoul, South Korea, was tracked by the Soviets for 2½ hours "while it flew a straight line course at 30,000 — 35,000 feet. Only civilian airliners fly in such a manner," Reagan said.

"At one point, the Korean pilot gave Japanese air control his position as east of Hokkaido, Japan, showing that he was unaware they were off course by as much as or more than 100 miles," he added.

Pilots consider response to shooting

EGHAM, England (AP) — The world organization of airline pilots convened an emergency meeting of its executive board today to consider a response to the downing of a Korean Air Lines jet in Soviet airspace.

A spokeswoman for the International Federation of Airline Pilots Associations said President Robert Tweedy, a captain with the Irish airline Aer Lingus, was meeting with his deputy president and four principal vice presidents at the group's headquarters near London's Heathrow Airport.

The spokeswoman declined to say what measures were under consideration. She said a statement was possible later.

The federation is the principal world lobbying organization and labor association for airline pilots. It has members from 64 countries, including the Soviet Union.

The emergency meeting followed President Reagan's announcement that the United States would continue barring landings by the Soviet airline Aeroflot at U.S. airports and cooperate with other nations in possible further sanctions against Moscow's flag carrier.

Prior to Reagan's statement Monday night, administration sources had said discussions were under way with Western governments about a possible suspension of Aeroflot landing rights for 60 to 90 days, as well as a temporary stoppage of foreign flights into the Soviet Union.

Hours before Reagan's speech, Canada announced it was suspending landing privileges for Aeroflot to protest Moscow's failure to fully explain the Soviet role in the destruction of the Korean Airlines flight 007.

Aeroflot has been prohibited from landing in the United States since December 1981, when a ban was imposed to protest the imposition of martial law in Poland by the Soviet-backed government.

The airline has had two weekly round-trip flights between Moscow and Montreal. Aeroflot also flies to Mexico City.

Besides Tweedy, the pilot federation's principal officers are Deputy President Capt. John LeRoy, of the United States, and principal vice presidents Capt. Otto Lagarhuf of Norway, Capt. Bruno D'Alba of Italy, Capt. Antonio Palma of Portugal and Capt. Reg Smith of Canada.

The West says Soviet interceptors shot the flight down last Thursday with air-to-air missiles after it flew for 2½ hours in Soviet airspace. The 269 people on board presumably died.

The Soviets have said a fighter sent aloft to intercept flight 007 "fulfilled its duty" in protecting the nation but have not acknowledged actually shooting the jet down.

Soviet sources have raised the possibility that the Korean Air Lines 747 may have been shot down by Soviet fighters because it was mistaken for a U.S. reconnaissance plane, the RC-135. But these photos illustrate the difference between the civilian airliner and the military jet.

Soviet pilots couldn't mistake jet for spy plane, Reagan says

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says "there is no way a pilot " could have mistaken the Korean passenger jet he says the Soviets shot down for a U.S. spy plane.

Reagan, in his televised speech Monday night, admitted that the Korean 747 "was for a brief time in the vicinity of one of our reconnaissance planes, an RC-135 on a routine mission."

But the RC-135, part of a wide-ranging U.S. effort to monitor Soviet military capabilities, never entered Soviet airspace, Reagan said, as the commercial jet did. "The Korean airliner flew on and the two planes were soon widely separated."

Reagan's comment was a rebuttal to Soviet contentions that the Korean airliner could have been mistaken for a RC-135 spy plane.

Pentagon officials said Monday that the RC-135 and the Korean plane never came closer than 75 miles to each other and that the RC-135 was 300 miles away at the time it crossed the path of the Korean 747.

He said the RC-135 "was back at its base in Alaska, on the ground, for an hour when the murderous atack took place over the Sea of Japan."

The RC-135 flights don't normally enter Soviet airspace, said one administration official who declined to be named, and "the Korean aircraft's inadvertent entry into Soviet territory should have been an early and strong indication to them that the flight was not a U.S. reconnaissance mission."

"The Soviets traced the Korean aircraft and the U.S. aircraft separately and knew there were two aircraft in the area, so we do not think this was a case of mistaken identity," the official said.

The Korean plane was a Boeing 747 jumbo jet, which is bigger and has a different shape than the four-engine RC-135, a 20-year-old military version of a Boeing 707.

Reagan noted that "the 747 has a unique and distinctive silhouette unlike any other plane in the world. There is no way a pilot could mistake this for anything other than civilian airliner."

The Air Force flies RC-135s from bases in Alaska to sweep along the Pacific coast of the Soviet Union. Packed with sophisticated monitoring devices, some planes try to obtain information about Soviet air defenses while others intercept information about Soviet missile tests.

The Soviet missiles are targeted on the Kamchatka Peninsula, an area flown over by the Korean jet after it wandered into Soviet airspace. In addition, there are Soviet fighter bases on nearby Sakhalin Island.

The RC-135 flights are normally made every seven to 10 days, or more often if there is specific Soviet military activity. U.S. officials want to monitor. The flight paths are generally similar to those of the five commercial flight paths after the Soviet Pacific coast.

The Air Force does have four 747 jumbo jets, but they seldom leave the United States, Pentagon officials said.

Two of the planes are based at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington and two are at Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma. Packed with sophisticated electronic gear, they are traditionally known as the "doomsday" planes because they would be used by top U.S. civilian officials to direct a counter-attack in the event of nuclear war.

Official's wife wants to 'join' lost daughter

WAKKANAI, Japan (AP) — The wife of a high-ranking South Korean official tried to jump off a ferryboat south of Sakhalin island today so she could join her daughter — one of the passengers aboard the jetliner reported shot down by a Soviet interceptor. Several relatives restrained her.

The woman was among 60 people who had come to mourn relatives who were on the Korean Air Lines jet when it went down early Thursday. During the memorial service, a Soviet reconnaissance plane flew overhead six times.

"God, Oh God," said Charlotte Oldham, 19, as she sobbed uncontrollably and scattered chrysanthemums into the Japan Sea. The student at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn., came here with her brother William, a New York City policeman, to mourn their 27-year-old brother John.

Young In-sun, wife of Kwon Jung-dal, the former secretary general of South Korea's governing Democratic Justice Party, repeatedly tried to leap from the chartered Japanese ferryboat. Their daughter, Sung-hee, 19, was returning to Seoul on KAL Flight 007 after a visit to the United States.

Mrs. Young said she wanted to join her daughter. Two other relatives held her arms tightly until after the memorial was finished. Her husband, who is in charge of organizing an international Inter-Parliamentary Union meeting in Seoul, did not come to Japan.

The relatives were the third such group to visit the area. They arrived in Wakkanai, a town on the northern point of Hokkaido, after a flight from Seoul via Sapporo, Hokkaido's main city. Hokkaido is Japan's northernmost main island.

"You murderers, get lost," one relative shouted at a Soviet spy plane overhead. "You damned Russians, why did you shoot down the passenger plane?" another Korean relative shouted.

The memorial was held in the Japan Sea 17 miles south of the Soviet island of Sakhalin. The point was about five miles outside Soviet territorial waters and about 30 miles from where KAL Flight 007 is believed to have crashed.

"No, we can't go any further. The Russians behave like a bad guy these days," a Japanese Red Cross official aboard the ferryboat said, soothing relatives who wanted to get closer to the crash site.

John Oldham, a graduate of Princeton University, was to have visited Seoul on his way to Peking, where he was to begin teaching law at the University of Peking under a Ford Foundation grant, his brother said. Their family lives in Washington, D.C.

"We wish we could at least pick up John's body. This ridiculous search operation cannot be conducted freely," said 29-year-old William Oldman.

His sister added, "I don't know what happened. I don't know why the plane went into Soviet airspace, but why did the Soviets have to shoot it down? For God's sake why don't they (the Soviet Union) let people conduct rescue operations in their waters?"

Chung Il-Soo, 62, of Seoul, threw flowers bearing the name of his daughter Kum-joo, 27, into the sea.

PBS show like town meeting

NEW YORK (AP) — Public television's "MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour," the first non-cable, hour-long nightly network newscast, remained stylish among network news broadcasts for its distinct lack of style.

Monday night's opening broadcast brought to mind a town meeting, where all manner of ideas and opinions could be heard. Like its predecessor, the 30-minute "MacNeil-Lehrer Report," this new program still emphasized dialogue and diversity of viewpoints.

To illuminate the latest developments in the Korean Air Lines tragedy that left 269 people dead, Washington anchor Jim Lehrer interviewed Richard Burt, an assistant secretary of state. Burt's responses fleshed out the day's developments leading toward President Reagan's speech to the nation later Monday night.

Then, to find out how the story had played around the country, editors from newspapers in Sacramento, Calif., Southbridge, Mass., and Grinnell, Iowa, were queried by New York anchor Robert MacNeil. With hook-ups like these, the broadcast will be making a conscious effort to move beyond the New York-Washington news axis.

The exchange of opinions and concerns on the program was given direction by the guiding questions from MacNeil and Lehrer, combining to raise most of the appropriate questions on the reported destruction of the Korean Air Lines jet by a Soviet fighter.

This discussion lasted some 20 minutes — nearly the entire length of the commercial networks' newscasts after commercials and promotional messages are subtracted.

Instead of news correspondents telling viewers what happened, as the commercial newscasts tend to do, the approach of the "MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour" was to enlighten through interviews and discussion. The old one-from-column-A, single-format concept has been expanded and on Monday included a secondary story from Column B about labor, a smattering of the day's other top developments, and one mini-documentary on the Theater for the Deaf.

On Monday, Labor Day night, the secondary story examined labor's potential impact on the 1984 presidential election. Washington correspondent Judy Woodruff, formerly of NBC News, interviewed steel workers about the AFL-CIO's decision to endorse Democratic candidates before the primaries.

With that report as a backdrop, MacNeil and Lehrer then interviewed Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige and Sol Chaikin, vice president of the AFL-CIO.

Bridge should be a partnership game. Yet four people who had never before played together teamed up to win the Master Mixed Team Championship at the recent North American Summer Championships in New Orleans, in the process defeating some very experienced partnerships. The defense on this hand shows why they won.

Note that East's double after North's one no trump response shows the sort of hand that would have made a takeout double of one spade in the immediate seat. Not surprisingly, South retreated to two spades and that ended the auction.

West led a low heart. Declarer played low from dummy and East, Drew Casen of New York, won the queen. The critical point of the hand was reached early in the play. What would you return at trick two?

Casen realized that dummy's heart suit offered declarer a chance to discard one or more losers. The only way to neutralize the suit was to attack dummy's entry, so he found the killing shift to the king of clubs. That meant that the defenders were not going to win any club trick, but it also meant that declarer was faced with the prospect of losing six tricks — a trump, two hearts and three diamonds.

As the cards lie, declarer could still have made the contract on double dummy lines. Not surprisingly, however, he used his one entry to the table to take the trump finesse, and now the defenders simply had to stay away from diamonds until declarer broke the suit to make sure of the set.

DEAR ABBY

Fat lady fed up with 'thin is in'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Please, please print this again:

"DEAR ABBY: Do you know what it's like to:

– "Walk down the street and have a total stranger say, 'You have such a pretty face, it's a shame you're so fat'?

– "Shop in a grocery store and have people watch to see what you put in your cart?

– "Walk into a restaurant and wonder if you'll fit into the booths or chairs? (Or worse yet, go to someone's home and pray there will be a chair that's sturdy enough to hold you?)

– "Squeeze into a theater seat and sit in agony during the entire performance while the sides of the seat dig into your thighs?

– "Lose out on a job for which you are highly qualified because of the way you look? (They never tell you that's the reason, but somehow you know it is.)

– "Be told that someone would like to date you if you would lose some weight?

– "Wonder if maybe you wouldn't be better off dead?

"Well, I do. I know there is nothing you or anybody else can do about my problem, Abby, but it felt good to get it off my chest. Thanks for listening." – FAT, FEMALE AND MISERABLE

DEAR MISERABLE: I know of two solutions to your problem. One is Overeaters Anonymous, P.O. Box 6190, Torrance, Calif. 90504. It has chapters in nearly every city in the nation, and a more loving, caring, understanding and supportive group of people you could never hope to meet.

"The other is The National Association to Aid Fat Americans, Inc., P.O. Box 43, Bellerose, N.Y. 11426. This is a group of frankly fat people who have banded together for the purpose of helping the obese to accept themselves as they are. There is much to be said for both organizations.

"When writing, please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope."

Abby, the above letter changed my life. I was also "Fat, Female and Miserable," so I decided to do something about it. I made a choice. I decided to quit trying to be something I was never meant to be: thin!

For 20 years I had tried every diet that came along. I lost and gained and lost and gained. Finally I could no longer handle the feeling of failure, so I went the other route and joined The National Association to Aid Fat Americans.

I have finally learned to accept myself as I am, and I've never been happier. Sign me ... FAT, FEMALE AND FEELING FANTASTIC

DEAR FEELING FANTASTIC: One of our most cherished rights is the right to be ourselves, so congratulations. There's nothing wrong with being heavy – as long as you're healthy!

(Problems? What's bugging you? Unload on Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dieting epidemic among teenagers

Hearst Feature Service

Dieting has become epidemic among American teenagers, and more than 75 percent of all high school girls are on weight loss regimes, says Laurel Mellin, a nutritionist and an assistant clinical professor in the Adolescent Medicine Unit at University of California-San Francisco.

Over the past four years, Mellin has developed a program for obese teenagers called Shapedown, which offers an alternative to the dieting psychology. "Little is known about the subtle effects of dieting during the important developmental period of puberty," she says. "In the extreme, dieting can cause nutritional deficiencies, cardiac problems, infertility and even death. More commonly, this preoccupation with diet and weight during adolescence sets off lifelong feelings of restraint around food – feelings that you can't eat normally -- and habits of seesawing between stuffing and starving."

Shapedown seems to be working for a lot of teen-agers. Basically, this 14-week weight management plan is geared to help teens develop healthy habits and attitudes toward weight, diet and themselves. The meetings consist of a combination of discussion and exercise. The emphasis is not on a huge weight loss; that would mean over-restricting, instead of learning new habits. Shapedown classes are sponsored by clinics all over the country for overweight teens, and by schools as a preventive program for those who engage in fad dieting.

Mellin has written and illustrated a 185-page self-instructional book called "Shapedown: Weight Management Program for Adolescents," available from Balboa Publishing Co., P.O. Box 26427, San Francisco 94126, $13.95. The book is also a health diary for those who are determine to be "doers" instead of "wanters," recording daily food choices and exercise routines, and a required weekly decision to swap a "fat habit" for a "thin" one.

A "fat habit" is skipping breakfast, eating little or no lunch and then a big dinner, which is more likely to put on weight. A "thin habit" is having a good breakfast, a good lunch and a small dinner and maybe a snack. A "fat habit" is eating junk food, choosing to gobble up 12 Oreo cookies while watching TV. A "thin habit" is opting for two Oreos and a jog to a friend's house to play ping-pong.

One goal is to help direct behavior changes. "You need to decide for yourself whether or not you want to lose weight," says Mellin. "If you do, you need to decide if you are really ready to do something about it."

Here are some weight management principles advanced by the Shapedown program:

STOP DIETING: Diets don't work, and severely restricting foods only becomes an assault on one's well-being, Mellin says. "Starving yourself sets you up psychologically and physiologically to binge. Binges pile on weight and undermine your sense of self-esteem and control. Even if you lose weight while you stick to your diet, when you go off it you return to your old habits and regain every ounce."

CUT DOWN, NOT OUT: It is possible to lose weight and still eat Oreos, pizza and fries. "But have two cookies not a dozen, and eat a pepperoni pizza once a month rather than once a day. Completely denying yourself your favorite foods doesn't work."

SHIFT TO LIGHTER FOODS: Reduce the amount of fat and sugar in your diet. That means sweets, fried foods, and hidden sources of fat – even cheese and meat are about 70 percent fat. Switch from red meats to fish and poultry.

EAT REGULAR MEALS: Skipping breakfast and skimping on lunch encourages the body to respond to pent-up hunger through non-stop eating from the time you get home from school until bedtime.

MOVE YOUR BODY: Some type of aerobic exercise should be a daily habit.

NOTICE EATING CUES: Examine why you eat when you're not really hungry. Common cues are boredom, stress and depression. "Certain times of day, like after school; people, places, foods, or even situations – like babysitting – can be powerful stimuli to eating without hunger."

TREAT YOURSELF WELL: Dwell on the good qualities of your character. "It's important for you to focus on the aspects of your appearance you like, and to back away from only allowing yourself to like your body when you meet the impossible ideal of the emaciated model or the perfectly muscled TV star."

Fear of fat makes children eat less

By VICTOR COHN
By The Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

The fear of getting fat is making some children and teen-agers eat so little that they stunt their growth, according to the leading article in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

The pattern is less severe than the extreme "anorexia nervosa" which makes some persons shun food, but may be far more prevalent.

"What I'm talking about is a boy, say, who doesn't really look terribly skinny. He may in fact look trim and slim, perhaps about 5 percent underweight. But he is underweight during a crucial growth period, and at age 14 or 15 may look like a 10- or 11-year-old," said Dr. Fima Lifshitz, a New York pediatric endocrinologist or specialist in hormones and growth, in an interview.

"I've seen a girl who was 16 when we first saw her and hadn't gained a pound since age 10," he added. "When we rehabilitated her and gave her enough to eat, she began to develop her breasts and other normal sexual and body characteristics for her age. But she has had little growth in height. She has had a permanent loss, because once women menstruate, they fuse their bones and don't grow more than another inch or two."

Lifshitz, Dr. Michael Pugliese and others at North Shore University Hospital on Long Island and New York City's Cornell University Medical College in the past two years have studied 201 Long Island youngsters with short stature or delayed puberty or both.

They found that nine boys and five girls — 14 youngsters altogether, or 7 percent of these patients — had no hormone deficiency or other physical cause of their immaturity.

"All that was happening," said Lifshitz, "is that they weren't eating enough because they were afraid to get fat. Most of them were skipping meals, like breakfast — especially breakfast — and lunch.

"They didn't realize why they weren't growing and developing. Neither did their parents. In fact, some of their parents have refused to believe us when we told them the cause."

The problem, he said, is that a child should grow a couple of inches a year after age 4 "until adolescence, when you might grow even more, three or four inches a year in a growth spurt between ages 12 and 15 in normal boys and 10 and 14 in girls. ... In a child who should be growing, a diet to keep a lean, trim, slightly underweight, a little less than ideal figure may not be sufficient for normal development.

Drug may harm fetus

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal health officials have issued a new warning that a commonly used drug for epilepsy can harm unborn children if taken by their mothers during pregnancy.

The anticonvulsant drugs, valproic acid and sodium valproate, "should be considered" as causing deformities in the fetus, the national Centers for Disease Control said Thursday in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

The report follows warnings in October, based on a French study, that the drugs, if taken in the first three months of pregnancy, were linked to increased instances of spina bifida, a spinal malformation that can cause paralysis.

Further studies conducted from 1980 to 1982 by the Italian Research Centers of Birth Defects have "found a significant association" between valproic acid and spina bifida, the CDC said.

The federal health agency estimates that up to 1,000 pregnant women in the United States may take valproic acid, which is administered in capsule and syrup form.

"We had before one single study, and on the basis of one single study, all one can say it that it's preliminary evidence," said Dr. Jose Cordero, a CDC birth defects specialist.

Study: Diagnosis of hospital heart attacks not improved much in almost four decades

CHICAGO (AP) — Heart attack, the nation's leading cause of death, is correctly diagnosed in hospitalized patients only about half the time, according to a study that calls the accuracy rate "appalling" and little improved in decades.

A study focusing on 100 cases of autopsy-proved heart attacks showed the correct diagnosis was made before death in just 53 cases.

"The failure to diagnose 47 percent of fatal acute myocardial infarctions was appalling," said the study in today's Journal of the American Medical Association. "This is particularly disturbing when it is considered that the (attack) was the cause of death in two-thirds of the cases, and half of the cases were managed by cardiologists."

Cardiologists, however, had the highest level of correct diagnosis — 62 percent, the study said.

All study cases were patients who were hospitalized, although not necessarily for heart ailments.

Although the study focused only on Baptist Memorial Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., the level of accuracy is "presumed to be a nationwide phenomena," says Dr. Edwin Zarling, the report's chief author.

Zarling, now an assistant professor of medicine at the University of Illinois at Chicago, said in a telephone interview that the diagnostic accuracy found in the study is close to rates observed in research 40 years ago.

Although there have been technological advances, Zarling said, "heart attacks are known to be difficult to diagnose."

The study focused on acute heart attacks, defined by Zarling as those diagnosed within one month of occurrence. They are fatal about 20 percent of the time, he said.

The American Heart Association says 1.5 million people suffer heart attacks each year in the United States. Heart attacks are the leading cause of death in the nation, expected to claim 566,900 lives this year.

Zarling said one reason for the low accuracy of diagnosis is that laboratory tests don't always show what isgoing on in the body.

DIET FACTS & FALLACIES

SCHOOL LUNCH IDEAS

It won't be any time before you will need to begin thinking about school lunches again. Need some ideas?

• You can save both time and money by listening to your children . . . listen to what they say about foods they like and don't like.
• Don't hesitate to ask them what they want.

If your children are too young to decide on a nutritious menu by themselves, suggest several items and allow them to choose between those items.

• Take them shopping and let them pick out a fruit they have never heard of or tried before.
• Let them select items and create their own sandwich.
• Let your child call a friend and tell him that he will make a lunch for him the next day—nice surprise for the friend, and fun for your child!

Diet Center recommends keeping nutritious foods on hand to make proper food choices easy for children.

Joan Jett jumps around at Electric Cowboy festival

Joan Jett

COLUMBIA, Tenn. (AP) — Wearing a red and black jumpsuit, Joan Jett led thousands at the Electric Cowboy festival singing one of her big hits, "I Love Rock 'n' Roll" over the Labor Day weekend, although she concedes, "Some people think it's very unlady-like to sweat and run around on a stage."

"It's a natural body function," she says. "If you jump and run around like I do on stage you are going to sweat."

Performers at the weekend festival included Joan Jett and the Blackhearts, Cheap Trick, Joe Walsh, Mitch Ryder, Leon Russell, Gregg Allman, Johnny Van Zant and the Marshall Tucker Band.

"I'm very aggressive and determined," said Ms. Jett, who performed Sunday. "People always mix that up with being mean."

"I'll tell you what's really gratifying," she added. "I get letters from girls who say I inspired them, whether it's to pick up a guitar and play rock 'n' roll — or to go in and ask their boss for a raise. That's inspiring to me."

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Actress Brooke Shields wants no special attention at college — so Princeton University officials are making a special effort to chase away reporters and photographers interested in her move onto campus.

The 18-year-old actress, known for modeling Calvin Klein jeans and starring in the films "Endless Love" and "The Blue Lagoon," began the Ivy League school's week-long freshman orientation program Monday prior to the start of classes Sept. 12.

The university announced that it would respect Miss Shields' request to be treated "like any other student" without press conferences, photo sessions or other fanfare.

University officials instructed security guards to keep an eye out for media representatives, who were promptly ejected from the campus, Princeton spokesman George Eager said Monday.

LONDON (AP) — Speculation that Princess Diana is expecting a second child has started up again in British newspapers after she interrupted her vacation in Scotland with Prince Charles and made a quick trip to London.

Tabloids on Tuesday pminted out that her return coincided with the return to work of the royal gynecologist, George Pinker, after his two-week summer vacation.

The 22-year-old princess had been vacationing at Balmoral Castle in northeast Scotland with Charles, Queen Elizabeth II and other members of the royal family.

Elmer's Barn framed by totem poles, sheep

COOPERS MILLS, Maine (AP) — In this sleepy little town between the capital and the coast, the scene is framed by totem poles.

There, amid old plastic barrels, deteriorating lobster traps and a flock of wandering sheep, stands Elmer's Barn, packed with everything from jewels to junk.

Inside, its proprietor, Elmer Wilson, sits on an old car seat, presiding over four floors crammed with motley merchandise that could put grandmother's attic to shame.

In between zig-zag paths lie chests of glass prisms, boxes of antique post cards, shelves of wooden duck decoys, cradles full of porcelain dolls, bags of shucked corn husks, and whatever else a connoisseur of knick-knacks desires.

Dozens of old violins hang from the ceiling next to the egg beaters. In a pile of books is a 1906 seed catalog. In cupboards under counters are hundreds of wooden eggs and spindles.

There's no cash register, but Wilson gives receipts. The king of castoffs, dressed in a T-shirt and pants held up by suspenders, doesn't take inventory or hit his customers with a high-pressure sales pitch.

"If I had a bigger house, I'd just keep filling it," Wilson says with a chuckle.

He says he loves everything in the barn and deliberately overprices some things so they won't sell. But they do.

"One time I sold everthing in the building to an auction house," he says. Within weeks, he had combed enough barns and garages to fill the four floors again.

"People from every walk of life will drive by and see the totem poles and say 'What...is in that barn?' " Wilson says. "A lot of people say I should charge admission, but I just can't."

His business started by accident, when he held a small sale to clear his first barn.

Quadriplegic holds on to dream of being doctor despite handicap

STREAMWOOD, Ill. (AP) — As he begins the last step toward becoming a doctor, Shane VerVoort brings with him a bachelor's degree, a medical degree and first-hand knowledge of how not to treat quadriplegics.

As a teen-ager, VerVoort wanted to become a heart surgeon. That dream was snuffed when, a week before high school graduation, he was in a car accident that left him almost totally paralyzed.

Instead of giving up, he revised his career plans and now, at 27, is beginning a three-year residency in rehabilitative medicine at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

Along the way he earned a degree in physiology from Southern Illinois University, membership in the Phi Beta Kappa honor society, and a medical degree from the Medical College of Georgia.

VerVoort spent a month in intensive care and a year in intensive rehabilitation after his accident. He regained enough use of his arms to write, feed himself and do other necessary tasks. Later he learned to walk with leg braces and crutches.

"My main goal was to get better so I could go to medical school," he said during a recent visit at his mother's home here.

While in rehabilitation he developed "thousands of ideas about how I'd like to run things as a doctor because a lot of things I saw as a patient were wrong," VerVoort said.

He said some doctors approached him condescendingly during his treatment. And he believes that he, better than others, understands how to "really motivate (the handicapped) because everyone goes through a period when they just don't want to try."

But, he said, "It can be done.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Dangers of smoking are not exaggerated

Dear Dr. Solomon: I will agree that smoking is not the best thing in the world. In fact, I would rather that my own children never got the habit. But it seems to me that doctors have gone to a ridiculous extreme by blaming everything from hangnails to cancer on smoking. Don't you think you're overdoing it a little? — Gary, Dallas, Texas

Dear Gary: On the contrary, the more the subject is studied, the greater the number of illnesses that are found to be associated with smoking. A fairly recent study of more than 300 healthy men in an Israeli military unit has shown an association between cigarette smoking and the development of influenza. Moreover, the illness was found to be more serious in the smokers than in the nonsmokers.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Would you recommend the use of an insulin pump for a child with diabetes? I want to get whatever is best for my daughter, regardless of the cost and I would appreciate your opinion. — Mr. N.C., Pueblo, Colo.

Dear Mr. C.: As you might expect, opinions as to the value of the insulin pump vary, but you may be interested in the view of Dr. Hugo D. Smith, professor of pediatrics at Temple University and director of the diabetic clinic at St. Christopher's Hospital for Children in Philadelphia.

It is Dr. Smith's opinion that an insulin pump may be useful for an occasional patient, but that in general it has no advantage. Many children reject the idea of using a pump because they see it as visible evidence of their illness.

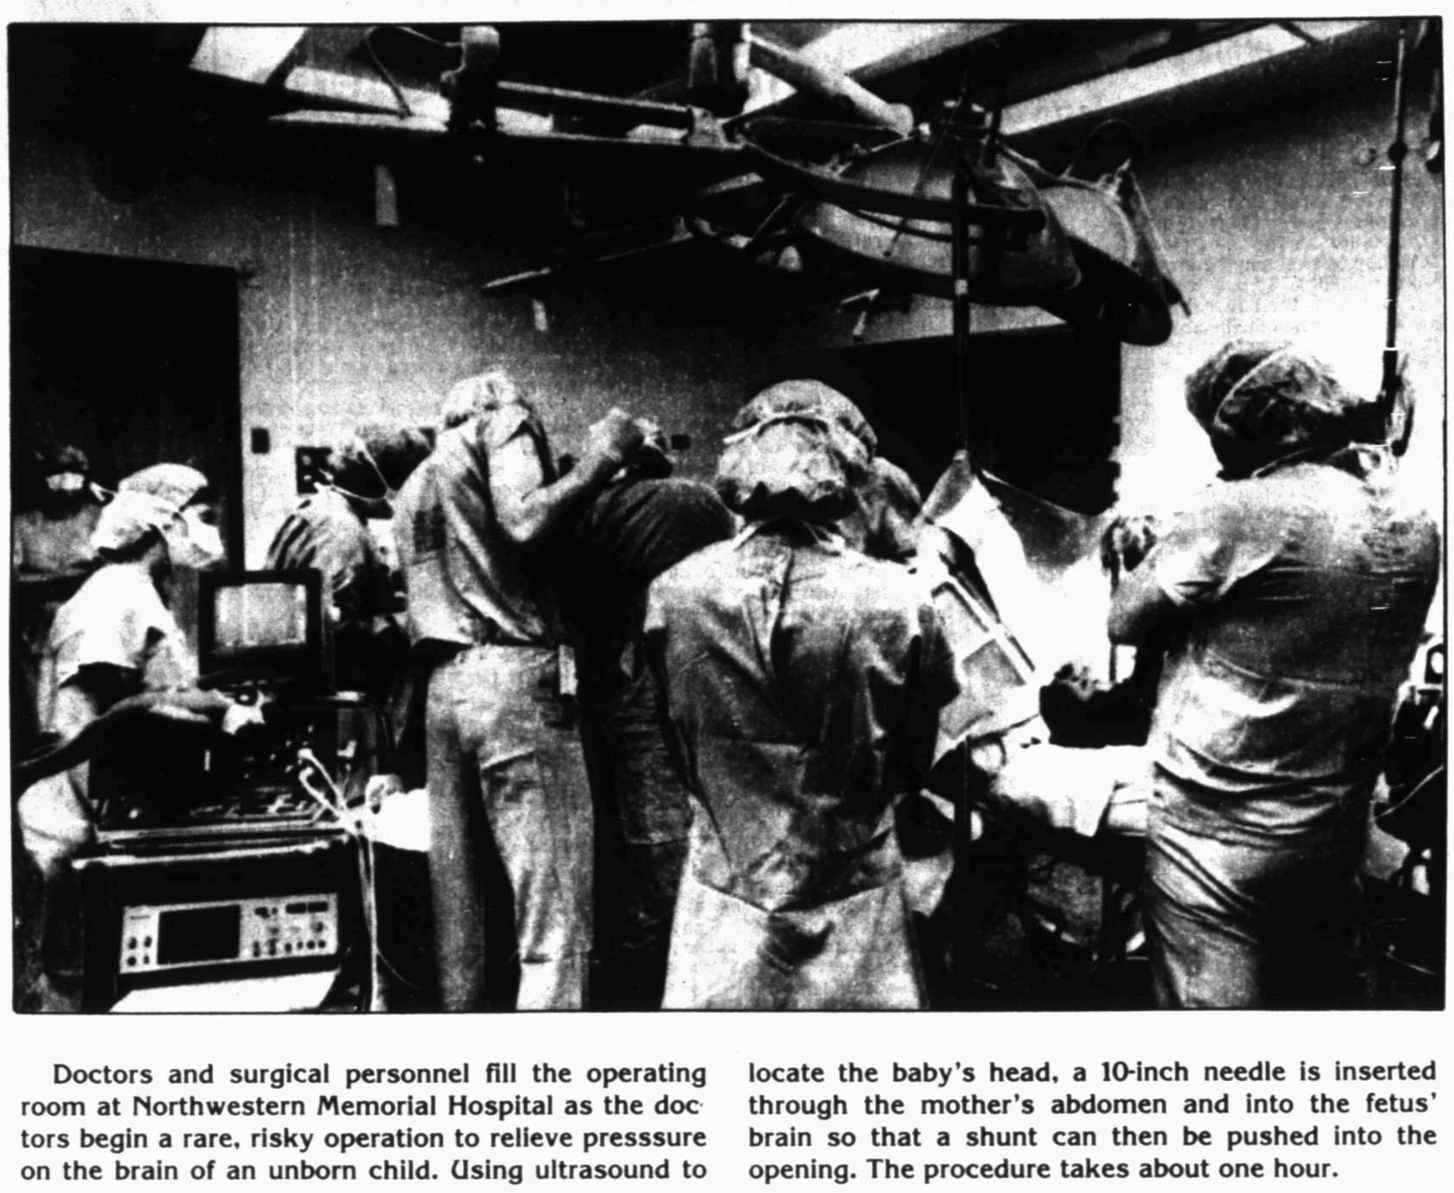
Fetal surgery

...risky business

EDITOR'S NOTE: AP newswoman Sharon Cohen, with AP photographer James Bourdier, observed doctors and nurses as they performed surgery on a fetus suffering water on the brain. Here is her report from inside the operating room.



Doctors and surgical personnel fill the operating room at Northwestern Memorial Hospital as the doctors begin a rare, risky operation to relieve presssure on the brain of an unborn child. Using ultrasound to locate the baby's head, a 10-inch needle is inserted through the mother's abdomen and into the fetus' brain so that a shunt can then be pushed into the opening. The procedure takes about one hour.

Anxious and afraid, Katherine Riley was wheeled into an operating room where ultrasound, a video screen and a little rubber doll were among the tools of life or death for her unborn daughter.

Doctors at Northwestern Memorial Hospital were about to attempt a rare, risky operation on her 6½-month-old fetus, which suffers hydrocephalus, an abnormal amount of fluid pressing on the brain.

They would try to insert a small tube called a shunt into the fetus' brain to drain excess fluid into the mother's amniotic cavity, the protective sac surrounding the fetus, for the rest of the pregnancy.

Only about two dozen operations of this kind have been performed in the United States and the possible complications are many — including the death of the unborn child.

Mrs. Riley, 26, was aware of that when she was taken into surgery Friday.

THE ultrasound machine uses sound waves — like the sonar used to detect submarines — to produce video screen pictures of the inside of the womb without the radiation danger of X-rays.

"See the head, right there," one doctor said. "See, the baby is moving. Do you like that position?"

The doctors consult, then turn to the doll, one team member twisting and turning the head slightly to match the images on the screen.

The doll is "the way we get a three-dimensional projection," said Dr. Richard Depp, chief of obstetrics at Northwestern and head of the surgical team. "It's the way we determine where we are."

"IT'S LIKE bobbing for apples," said Dr. Thomas Brown, a neurosurgeon.

The doctors must know where the fetus is and where they're probing because when they're ready, a 10-inch needle is inserted into the mother's abdomen and worked toward the fetus' brain.

"You can actually see the head indent," Depp says. "The trick is to get it in a straight-down angle."

At first, they're too high. They consult again and the doctor carefully maneuvers the needle.

"You probe until you come to the place where the indentation is satisfactory. We kind of take a vote," Depp said.

WHEN THE needle is inserted into the cavity of the fetus' brain fluid shoots out. It's expected and it looks good. There is no blood, which would be a bad sign.

The shunt is inserted throuh the needle and pushed into the brain.

"There you go," one doctor said. "I think you got it. Great."

"You did great," a happy doctor tells the worried mother.

The successful operation was over in about an hour and there were smiles and laughs from the doctors and a groggy Mrs. Riley, who had been conscious throughout the operation.

ULTRASOUND like that used in the operation also was used about a month ago to determine that the fetus was hydrocephalic.

Untreated, Mrs. Riley was told, hydrocephalus can cause retardation, seizures — even death — through its pressure on the developing brain.

After Mrs. Riley's daughter is born, the child will have another operation to insert a permanent shunt leading from her head to her abdomen.

But for now the tension is over.

"I'm relieved," Mrs. Riley said. "I wasn't nervous. I was more scared."

As she monitored her child's heartbeat in her room, she joked about the surgery and said of her daughter: "I think she'll take it out on me."

Text and photos by The Associated Press

A surgical nurse points out the exact spot on the fetus' head as it is shown on the ultrasound minitor. The doll is used to match the movements of the fetus in the womb to give doctors a closer idea of the position.

Expectant mother Katherine Riley rests after undergoing the operation of the baby she carries. A monitor of the fetus' heart beat shows that it is doing fine after having a tube inserted into it's brain to relieve pressure caused by accumulated fluid.

People wonder how Tarzan got its name

TARZAN (AP) — The name conjures up images of exciting drama, and the postmistress of this tiny West Texas community is almost apologetic in answering that no, Tarzan has no roaring lions or charging elephants.

In fact, postmistress Doris McMorries says, "Don't drive down (Texas Highway) 176 too fast, or you'll miss it."

However, that doesn't mean there's nothing in Tarzan, she insists.

"There's more than it looks like," Mrs. McMorries said. Besides its post office, the small town 50 miles northeast of Odessa boasts a convenience store, a cafe, a cotton gin, two churches, two beauty shops, a crop-spraying service, part of a cattle farm, a few houses and a few trees.

Mrs. McMorries said she does not know how many people live in Tarzan, but she said her post office serves about 500 customers in the western half of Martin County.

EVERY SCHOOL year, she receives two to three requests a week for information on how the unincorporated town got its name, she added.

One of her favorite letters was from a boy in Stockton, Calif., who wrote:

"Tarzan went to Texas and the people tried to drown him but it didn't work. They believed he was a god and named the town Tarzan, Texas."

The second-grader from Stockton, Calif., knew his one-paragraph essay, "How Tarzan, Texas, Got Its Name," was wrong.

"Did my story come close to what really happened?," the pupil, Mike Gray, asked.

"Please write to me and explain the real reason for your town's name," Gray asked.

THE YOUNGSTER got a response, but he was lucky his letter found its way through the jungles of the U.S. mail — Tarzan has no chamber of commerce.

The town was named, Mrs. McMorries said, by "the old fellow that lived here when the town was first established" — Tant Lindsay.

Lindsay, the first postmaster and storekeeper in Tarzan, gave the town its name "because he enjoyed all the Tarzan books," McMorries said.

Lindsay's 77-year-old widow, Viola, said last week she had a part in naming the town, which originally was called South Plains when it was settled in the mid-1920s.

The Lindsays first came to Tarzan in 1926, she said, and opened a general store when the town still was known as South Plains. The store no longer stands.

Mrs. Lindsay said when her husband decided in 1927 to add a post office to his store, the U.S. Postal Service said the town's name would have to be changed from South Plains. She said the post office pointed out that there already was a town near Lubbock by the same name that had a post office.

Perhaps a touch of egotism overcame Lindsay when he learned he had to change the name. Mrs. Lindsay said he first wanted to rename the town "Tant" after himself.

However, she said, postal officials rejected the idea out of concern that a Tant, Texas, would be confused with Taft, Texas, which already had a post office.

After the rejection, Mrs. Lindsay said she and her husband looked around their store one night searching for ideas for a new name.

On a shelf in the store sat a stack of Tarzan comic books her husband had collected. Lindsay said her husband sold the books long before they had any value.

"I was the one who told him, 'Put down Tarzan,'" Mrs. Lindsay said.

TWO WEEKS later, Lindsay received approval to call the town Tarzan — a name that 56 years later still attracts the attention of postmark collectors and students from across the Northern Hemisphere.

Mrs. McMorries, who has worked at the post office since 1956, said she has received requests for postmarks from as far away as Greenland.

Most of the requests, she said, come from elementary school students.

The postmistress sometimes wishes she wouldn't be inundated with requests for information about the town's name, but added, "I don't mind getting them from kids."

Mrs. McMorries' mother-in-law, 81-year-old Nellie McMorries, was the town's postmistress from 1949 to 1969.

"There used to be a lot more people here," Nellie McMorries said, "but a lot of these old-timers have died out or have gone to nursing homes."

But the town will live on as long as its namesake keeps swinging through trees, fighting for a sort of crude jungle justice — and as long as the post office stays open to answer postmark queries.

Segregation extended to fighter bombing, WWII pilot recalls

DELAND, Fla. (AP) — There's no bitterness when Charles Bailey remembers segregation policies in World War II when he flew 133 combat missions as a fighter pilot against the Luftwaffe and protected white bomber crews on sorties against the enemy.

But he proudly recalls that the all-black 99th Fighter Squadron never lost a bomber to enemy aircraft.

"There's no other unit can say that," Bailey says with a smile as he relaxes in the small office of the funeral home he operates in this quiet college town.

The 99th was formed in 1941 although actual training didn't begin until early the following year.

"It was the first all-black squadron in the world," Bailey says, browsing through memorabilia pulled from a desk drawer. Behind him on a wall hang photos of him and five brothers who served in U.S. armed forces in that war. A sixth brother, Carl, flew jets in the Korean War.

Ground school, primary, basic and advance flight training were all concentrated at Tuskeegee Institute in Alabama, he recalls. There, pilots learned to fly in PT-17s, BT-13s and AT-6s.

Bailey joined the cadet program in late 1942 after finishing two years at Bethune-Cookman College.

At 6-foot-2, Bailey still shows the physical strength that earned him a football scholarship to college and carried him through 3,000 hours in the air — most of it combat time.

He received his wings and commission as a second lieutenant in 1943 and went to Casablanca to join the 99th, which was later moved to Tunis in the fight against Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, commander of the German Afrika Korps.

In Africa, the black U.S. Army Air Corps squadron was assigned P-40 fighters and Bailey recalls the transition to that warplane.

"There was no practice. They told us, 'Take that plane and fly it.'"

After Africa, the squadron was sent to Sicily.

"I flew missions all over Italy, to France, Austria, South Germany and Poland," he recalls. His squadron also went with the bombers that made repeated raids on the Ploesti oilfields in Romania.

In Italy, the 99th was given the P-47 Thunderbolt and later the P-51 Mustang. It was then the squadron was nicknamed "The Red Tails."

During the fighting at Anzio, Bailey shot down two German fighters and, by the time the war ended, was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal with four oak leaf clusters.

There were few problems with whites, he explains, because the races seldom came in contact — even at airfields.

"The whites had their landing strip, and we had ours," is his explanation.

After his discharge in December 1946 Bailey returned to Bethune-Cookman for his degree in basic education.

Besides operating his funeral home, Bailey is a fourth-grade teacher at nearby Altamonte Elementary School.

Among his prize possessions is a short military film about U.S. black pilots in World War II in which he appears. It is narrated by Ronald Reagan.
