Casey faces yet another CIA controversy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Embattled CIA Director William J. Casey, stepping up his fight to keep his job, now faces a new controversy over a CIA covert action plan that sources say he approved in an effort to topple Libyan strongman Moammar Khadafy.

One Republican source said Sunday night that Casey recently presented the House Intelligence Committee with a proposal that the CIA try to undermine the radical Arab leader.

Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., a member of the committee, said Chairman Edward P. Boland, D-Mass., and others on the panel had sent a letter to President Reagan protesting a proposed covert action that Casey had approved.

Zablocki declined to identify the target of the proposed covert action, but the Republican source, who asked not to be identified, said it was Libya.

Also on Sunday, Casey asked the Senate Intelligence Committee to allow him to appear at a committee hearing as soon as possible to try to dispel questions about his past business dealings, his management of the agency and calls for his resignation by three key Senate Republicans.

Casey sent each member of the Senate Intelligence Committee a 20-inch stack of written material Sunday afternoon, one day earlier than he had initially promised.

These responses were in answer to four pages of questions the committee sent Casey last week regarding his role as a director of a failed New Orleans farming venture called Multiponics Inc. and his appointment of Max Hugel, a businessman inexperienced in intelligence, to head the CIA's worldwide spy network, CIA spokesman Dale Peterson said.

Casey apparently speeded up his response when the committee staff indicated it would finish writing a preliminary report on its inquiry into Casey today for presentation to a closed committee meeting Tuesday morning. Casey had said Friday that his responses would lay the entire controversy to rest.

Newsweek magazine reported the covert operation was designed to overthrow Khadafy through a "disinformation" campaign to embarrass him, creation of a counter government to challenge his leadership and a paramilitary campaign.

The magazine said the CIA's goal was Khadafy's "ultimate" removal and that House committee members read this as code for assassinating him. The magazine said the committee members mistrusted Casey's denial of any intent to kill Khadafy, described by Reagan as a premier supporter of international terrorism.

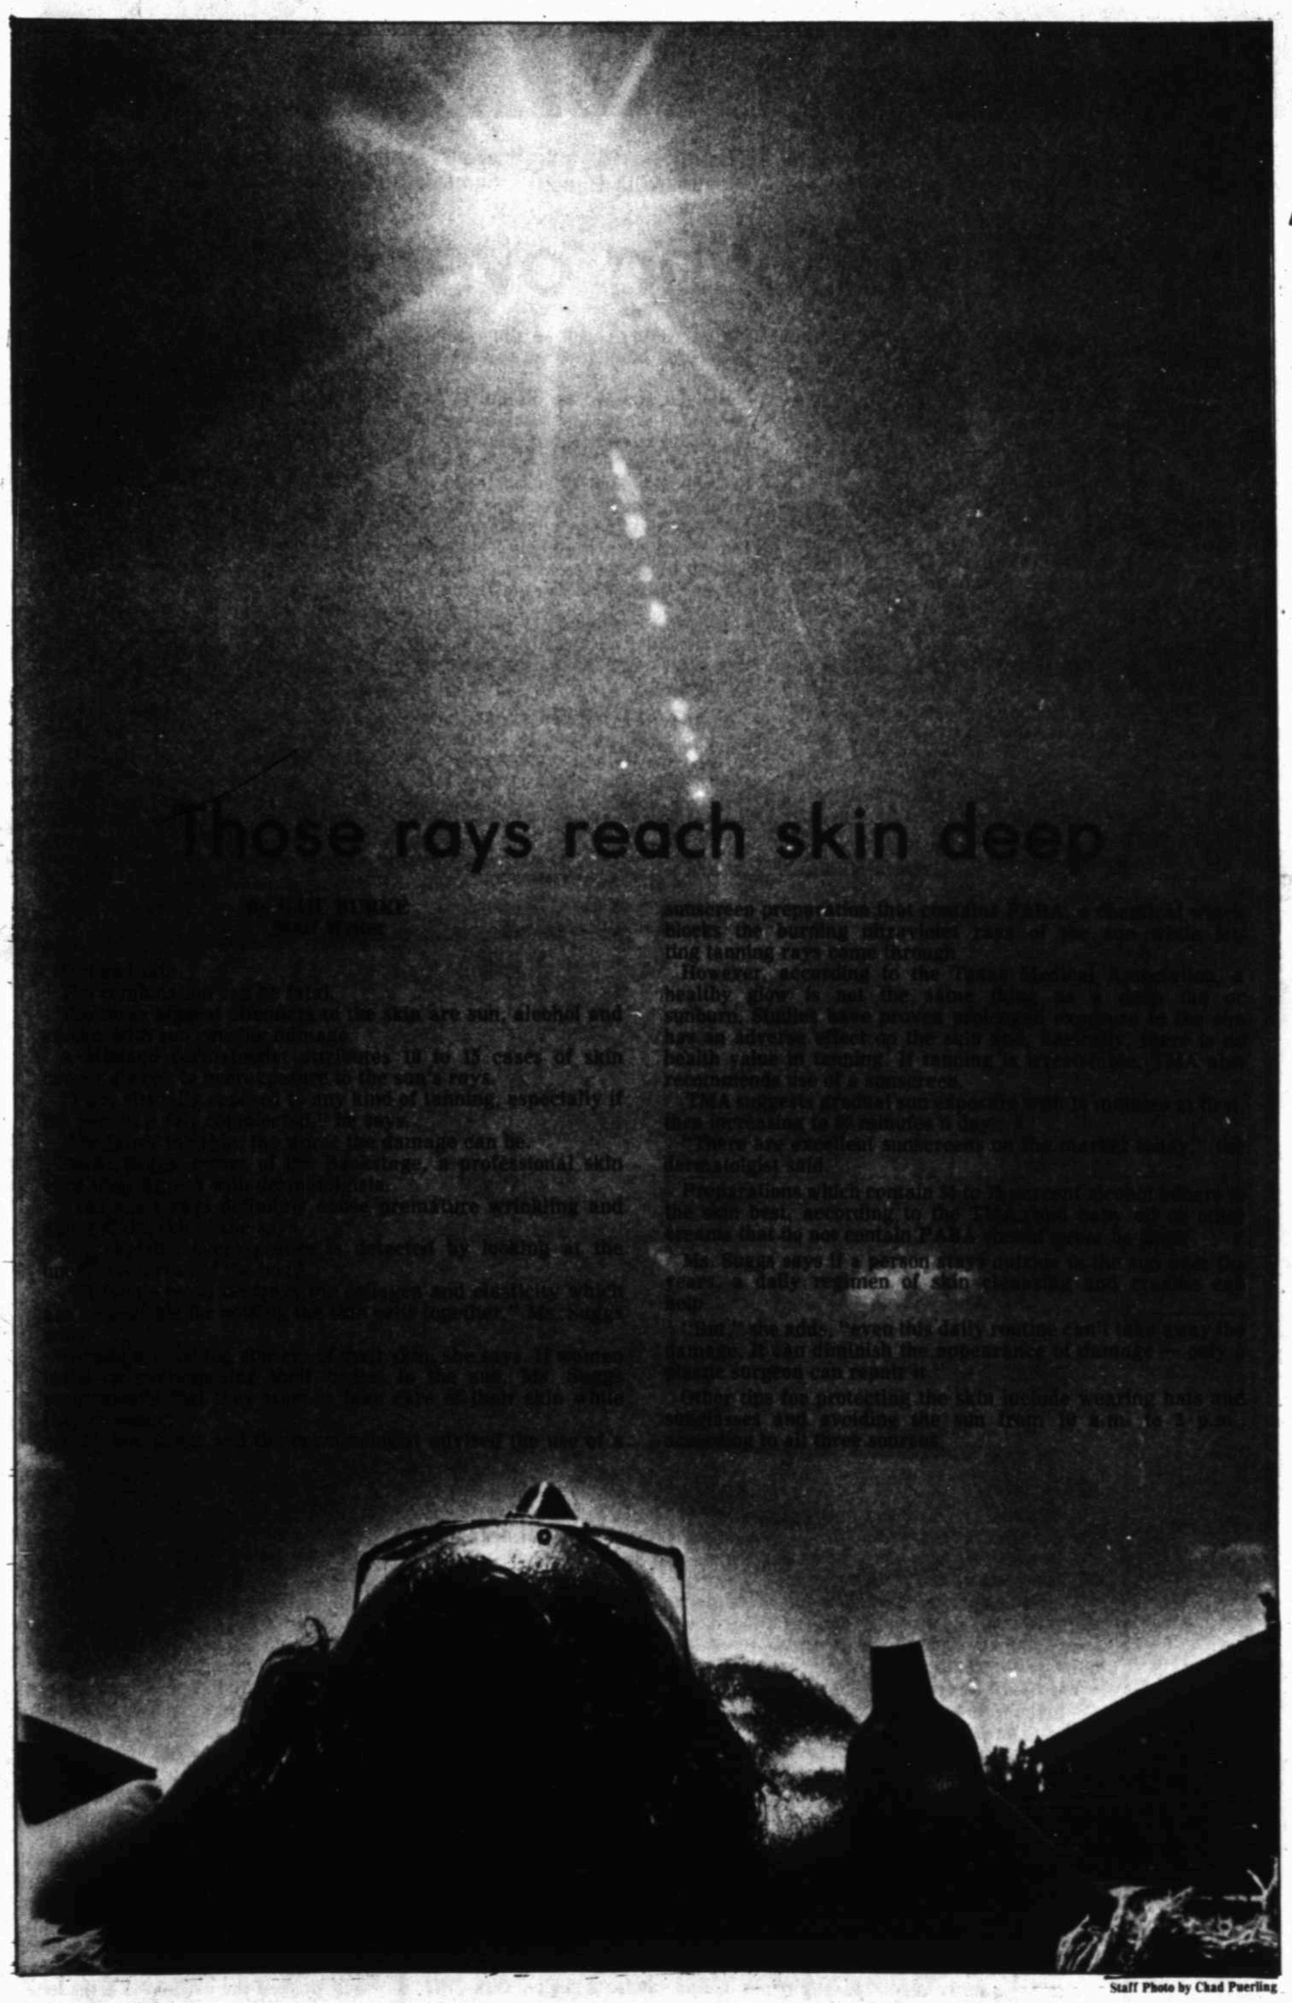

Rep. C.W. Young, R-Fla., a committee member, declined to discuss the Newsweek report but said, "It is definitely against our policy to engage in any termination of any individual." Assassination is barred by an executive order issued by former President Carter.

"There was some reservation about the covert action," Zablocki said. "I think the committee has a right to voice its concern."

One source close to the committee said the letter to Reagan did not mention details of the action involved, but that anyone familiar with the plan would have understood it addressed the Libyan proposal.

The source added that there has been no indication Reagan decided to call off or alter the covert action because of the committee's criticism.

One Senate Republican source familiar with intelligence practices said professional intelligence officers would interpret "ultimate" removal as meaning assassination and that the whole effort sounded "juvenile, out of a comic book."

Rockets again break Mideastern cease-fire

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Palestinian guerrillas fired rockets and artillery into the pro-Israeli Christian militia enclave in southern Lebanon early today, breaking a fragile cease-fire for the fourth time since it took effect Friday, the Israeli military command said.

Israeli jets cracked the sound barrier in flights over the Lebanese capital today that drew Palestinian anti-aircraft fire, Beirut Radio said. The Palestinian guerrilla command said the overflight, the second reported in as many days, were a violation of the cease-fire.

No casualties were reported in the shelling and neither Israeli nor Christian gunners returned the fire, the Tel Aviv command said.

The guerrillas fired from the Palestinian-held market town of Nabatiyeh, about eight miles north of the Israeli-Lebanese frontier, toward Christian villages west of the Israeli border kibbutz, or collective farm, of Misgav Am, an Israeli spokesman said. He said none of the shells fell inside Israel.

There was no immediate comment on the report from the Palestinian guerrilla command in Beirut.

Israel and its Christian-militia allies in the "Free Lebanon" border enclave reported three salvos of Palestinian artillery and rocket fire Friday and Saturday.

A maverick Palestinian guerrilla group, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command headed by former Syrian army Capt. Ahmed Jibril, said it was responsible for the earlier shelling, and vowed it would ignore the truce.

A spokesman for the Libyan and Syrian backed command, a tiny, well-armed guerrilla faction under the Palestine Liberation Organization umbrella, refused to comment on today's firing.

After the earlier shelling, an unidentified PLO spokesman condemned the attacks as a "violation of responsibilities and of the pledges upheld by the Palestinian resistance," the Palestinian WAFA news agency said.

Lebanese Christian militia chief Maj. Saad Haddad, commander of the Free Lebanon preserve, said Sunday he would break the truce if his zone came under attack again.

"If they will shoot again I will retaliate and I am going to retaliate hard," Haddad said in a Radio Israel interview.

While Israel and its Christian militia allies protested the border shelling the PLO complained about two reconnaissance flights over Beirut Sunday by Israeli jets, claiming the overflights violated the cease-fire. Guerrilla gunners in the Lebanese capital fired on the intruders, apparently without success.

"Israel has blamed the PLO for having unruly elements that violate the cease-fire, but what about the uncontrolled Israeli flights over Lebanon, isn't that a violation?" said Mahmoud Labadi, spokesman for PLO chief Yasser Arafat.

Two more hunger strikers near death at Maze Prison

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Kieran Doherty today began his 67th day without food, setting a record for the Irish nationalist death fast at Maze Prison, but he was not given much longer to live.

The Irish Republican Army guerrilla was the first of the Maze strikers to survive 66 days without food, surpassing Bobby Sands, who launched the current protest March 1 and died soon after midnight on May 5 at the start of his 66th day of fasting.

The longest IRA fast this century was by IRA leader Terence McSwiney who died after 74 days without food in London's Brixton Prison on Oct. 25, 1920.

Sinn Fein, political front of the outlawed IRA's Provisional wing, said Doherty, 25, was losing his sight and hearing and was in extreme pain.

Kevin Lynch, also 25 and one day behind Doherty on the fast, also was in critical condition in the prison's hospital wing, a Sinn Fein spokesman said.

Doherty is serving a 22-year term for possession of firearms and explosives and was elected to the Parliament of the Irish Republic on June 11. Lynch is a member of the Irish National Liberation Army, an IRA splinter group. He was sentenced to 10 years in 1977 for ambushing British troops, conspiring to steal weapons and taking part in punishment shootings.

Five other Irish nationalists have followed Sands to the grave so far, after fasts ranging from 45 to 60 days.

Eight men are currently refusing food at the prison outside Belfast and have shown no sign they plan to give up their campaign to force Britain to treat jailed nationalists as political prisoners.

Britain has refused the IRA demands, claiming to do so would accord political legitimacy to the guerrillas' war to end British rule in Northern Ireland.

County jail escapee captured

County jail escapee Willie Bustillos Jr., 33, was arrested without incident and returned to jail after being spotted in a car late Saturday.

Sheriff's deputies, Texas Rangers and troopers from the Department of Public Safety joined in the arrest, which occurred shortly before midnight near the intersection of Bankhead Highway and Midkiff Road.

Bustillos was a passenger in a car which had been seen earlier that night and placed under surveillence under additional officers arrived.

Deputies said he was not armed and offered no resistance. The other occupants of the vehicle were released after an investigation disclosed they were not involved in the case.

Bustillos was being held on theft charges when he and two other prisoners overpowered a jailer July 5 and escaped after obtaining keys to a fire escape in the jail and making their way down a stairway in the courthouse.

The other escapees, 33-year-old Wallace Lee Sims and 21-year-old Frank Sidney Smith, were captured earlier in the month. Sims was reportedly picked up at a relative's house in San Angelo, and Smith was arrested following the armed robbery of a super market in Odessa.

Meanwhile, four federal prisoners who escaped from the city jail June 11 are still at large. Police this morning said there are no new developments in that case.

Reagan to plug his tax-cut plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, opening the final round of the battle over his tax-cut program, goes before a national audience tonight to plug his plan and scorn a rival Democratic proposal.

After a weekend of speechwriting and lobbying at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., Reagan planned to address the nation from the Oval Office.

The president will stress that his version of a tax-cut bill is an essential ingredient of the administration's economic recovery blueprint, according to White House chief of staff James A. Baker III.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said the president will "talk about his tax proposal and what it means to the country and why it's desirable that it be his tax proposal rather than the other (Democrats') tax proposal" that wins congressional approval.

CBS, NBC and ABC television networks said they would carry the address live at 8 p.m. EDT.

Democrats will start taking shots at Reagan's speech immediately afterward on ABC, which said it is giving them free time to respond. NBC said it will put them on at 10:30 p.m., and CBS said it is setting aside time Tuesday night for their rebuttal.

The House is scheduled to choose Wednesday between Reagan's proposal for a 25 percent tax cut spread over three years or a Democratic alternate providing a 15 percent reduction over two years.

With the end of the battle in sight, both sides were lobbying heavily for votes.

Reagan sent a helicopter back to Washington to ferry 14 Democratic congressmen to Camp David for a Sunday barbeque. The guest list actually numbered 15 since one congresswoman — Rep. Beverly Byron of Maryland — drove instead of flying.

The menu featured hot dogs and hamburgers and a relish of soft-sell from the president and his treasury secretary. After making his pitch, the president answered questions from his guests.

"I think everytime you meet and eat you try to persuade, but I think it was low key and on a high level," said Rep. Richard Shelby, D-Ala., who declared he would support Reagan.

Rep. Kent Hance, D-Texas, a supporter of the president's program, said Reagan did not ask anyone to commit himself but merely to give his version careful consideration.

Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., said he remained uncommitted and that Reagan did not tell him anything he had not heard before.

As to the outcome of Wednesday's vote, Regan told reporters: "We're not counting on anything. We're still working. We think we're going to win, yes."

The president returned to the White House Sunday evening with his speech still not in final form, Baker said. Reagan had a light schedule this morning and a clear afternoon to put the finishing touches on the address.

Originally it was to have been a twin-edged speech about taxes and the financial problems of the Social Security system.

However, Republican congressional leaders, worried about the uproar ignited by Reagan's earlier proposals for Social Security cutbacks, called on the president to confine his remarks to taxes.

Rain on the way?

A 40 percent chance of rain tonight and Tuesday may bring some cooling relief from the mild heat wave the area has been experiencing, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The wind is to be southeasterly at 10-15 mph today decreasing to 5-10 mph tonight.

Sunday's high temperature of 98 was seven degrees from the record high of 105 in back in 1944.

Sunday also was the first day in almost two weeks that the temperature has not reached 100 degrees. The string of 12 straight days, which tied a record set in 1964, was broken by Sunday's 98-degree high.

And Tuesday's high should cool down to near 90.

Democrats squabbling over tax bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democratic leaders, already pushed to the wall by President Reagan in a battle over competing tax-cut bills, now are facing a challenge from liberals in their own party who don't like either version.

The intraparty squabble, unless defused, could drain enough votes from the Democratic tax plan to assure a victory for Reagan.

Reagan plans a nationally broadcast address from the White House tonight to whip up support for his plan.

IF ALL GOES as planned, the House and Senate will pass a tax-cut bill Wednesday, which likely would result in getting the finished product to Reagan before Congress begins a month-long recess Aug. 7.

That would allow the first phase on the individual tax reduction to begin Oct. 1, resulting in slightly fatter pay checks for American workers because of slightly reduced federal income tax withholding.

In addition, both houses hope to complete work this week on 1982 budget reductions expected to total $35 billion. Among the issues being settled by more than 50 conference committee working groups are Medicaid for the poor and health grants to the states.

At the heart of the tax-cut fight is Reagan's insistence on a three-year, 25-percent, across-the-board reduction in personal tax rates.

HOUSE DEMOCRATS have written a two-year plan whose benefits would be targeted to persons with incomes under $50,000 a year. A third-year tax cut would be provided only if the Reagan administration is able to cut interest rates and inflation as deeply as the president forecasts.

Since Republicans account for only 191 of the 434 House members (there is one vacancy), a handful of conservative Democrats could hold the margin of victory, just as they did on important budget votes earlier this year.

Reagan stepped up his bid to woo those lawmakers last week by agreeing to add more than $65 billion to the five-year cost of his tax bill, including $13 billion in special relief to the oil industry. Another provision offered by the president — a popular one with conservatives — would automatically adjust personal taxes each year, starting in 1985, to offset inflation.

The president hosted 15 House Democrats Sunday at Camp David, Md., to talk taxes and eat hot dogs and hamburgers.

Some of the changes advocated by Reagan already are in the Democratic bill, which was written by the House Ways and Means Committee. The Democratic Study Group, made up mainly of liberals, is opposed to many of those ideas and wants a chance during the House debate to delete them.

MORE THAN 60 liberals have petitioned for a caucus Tuesday of all House Democrats, and under the rules, a session must be called. Liberals want the caucus to instruct the Rules Committee to allow debate on striking provisions that the Study Group opposes.

The liberals are especially offended by provisions in the two bills that would benefit the oil industry; soften a crackdown on tax-avoidance devices known as commodity straddles; reduce maximum rates of taxation on estates, which would benefit only the wealthy; and authorize a new form of tax-free savings certificates mainly benefitting upper-income Americans.

About 30 liberals are offering their own tax-cut plan, which will be debated by the House, along with the versions proposed by Reagan and the Ways and Means Committee.

The one-year proposal would target relief on lower- and middle-income families but is more concerned with balancing the budget in 1982 than with reducing taxes.

Texas bureaucracy still growing

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Efforts are still being made to do something about the ratio of approximately one state or local government employee to each 20 Texans, but the progress is slow.

State officials, prodded by Republican Gov. Bill Clements, say there is progress in reducing at least some parts of the state bureaucracy but there is no sign of such reduction among local govenments.

"Prospects for keeping the Texas bureaucracy under control are not as good as would be desired," said a recent report from the Texas Association for Taxpayers, based on 1980 Census reports.

"The hefty increase in the number of local (government) employees in Texas substantially outdistances the 0.9 percent increase nationally," according to the report.

THE TAT WAS particularly incensed that the 1981 Legislature refused to reinstate an admonition to state agencies calling for a 5 pecent reduction in state employees, as the 1979 Legislature did.

"No doubt the governor will continue to work on this, but some assistance in the form of continuing work force limitations in the Appropriations Act would have been useful," TAT said.

Recent reports on operations of major state agencies through June show the payroll in those agencies is still going down slightly, according to Paul Wrotenbery, Clements' budget director.

Within the 12 largest state agencies there has been a reduction this fiscal year of about 800 employees, according to Wrotenbery. Coupled with a reduction of about 600 in fiscal 1980, this means the state payroll has been reduced for two straight years, the first time since 1945, he said.

HOWEVER, employee numbers in state colleges and universities are up about 1,000 for this year.

According to the 1980 Census reports there was considerable variation in employees among the various agencies and departments. Welfare workers were down 4.5 percent from October 1979 to October 1980 and health employees were down 7.4 percent, while the highway work force dropped 2.5 percent. Higher education employees were up 0.6 percent for the same period and hospital workers up 5.5 percent. Correctional employees increased 11.1 percent.

"All we can do now is ask agency heads to strive to reduce their employment total as much as possible under present conditions," said Wrotenbery. "I think you will see reductions in the major state agencies for the next year or so."

THE CENSUS reports, cited by TAT, say Texas local government employment increased 2.9 percent from 1978 to 1979 and then grew another 5.5 percent from 1979 to 1980. The last increase, of 27,362 employees, pushed the estimated total local government payroll to 525,997.

Texas school districts accounted for much of the increase the past year with a growth of 12,000 employees or 3.9 percent. Cities added 2,600 employees for a 2.2 percent annual increase. County employment jumped by nearly 10 percent, adding 6,000 for a total of 58,736.

Three Dallas lead plants contaminating air, soil

DALLAS (AP) — Tests conducted earlier this year by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency showed lead concentrations in a 25-mile area around three Dallas smelters were 10 times higher than levels generally recognized as dangerous to humans, a newspaper reported.

The Dallas Morning News, in a copyright article in Sunday's editions, said an independent toxicologist reported lead residues in soil near the three smelters have caused serious illness and brain damage among smelter workers and area residents.

A lawsuit filed in federal court here blames the deaths of three smelter workers on lead poisoning from the alleged contamination, and the Texas Industrial Accident Board ruled last month that lead poisoning contributed to the death of one worker.

The board awarded full benefits under the Workmen's Compensation Act to the widow of 53-year-old Elmer Hancock, who died in September of 1974, the newspaper said.

The two other deaths are under investigation by the board to determine if they were caused by exposure to lead, a spokesman for the board said.

Dallas health officials, however, told the News they conducted 12,000 tests since 1977 without discovering any lead-related health problems.

And officials at the National Lead Industries, Dixie Metals and RSR Corp. smelters deny their plants have produced dangerous levels of lead contamination.

The company officials did say they have told the EPA they will conduct studies to determine the exact lead level in the vicinity of their smelters, the newspaper reported.

The News said at least 110 employees in lead smelters in East Oak Cliff and West Dallas say they have suffered illnesses and disabilities caused by exposure to highly toxic lead dust.

Tests by Dr. Thomas Kurt, a Dallas toxicologist retained by a former smelter worker in his suit against his former employer, show that four children who live in the Cadillac Addition of South Dallas have been contaminated with lead, the newspaper said.

Water bill on Senate agenda

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Perhaps the most far-reaching water proposal ever to come before the Legislature — Speaker Bill Clayton's water fund — was on the Senate agenda today.

A Senate vote also was pending on a compromise bill that continues state regulation of physicians and, for the first time, puts non-doctors on the Texas Board of Medical Examiners. It was approved by the House on Friday, 142-0, and sent back to the Senate for action on amendments.

Senate approval of the amendments could be the sign Gov. Bill Clements is waiting for to open the 30-day special legislative session to other topics. He originally submitted five issues to the session, which began July 13 and is now half over.

Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texarkana, served notice he would ask his colleagues to consider Clayton's proposal, which would set aside half of all future state treasury surpluses for water projects.

The measure cleared the House easily on a 113-19 vote, but opposition surfaced in the Senate Finance Committee before a proposed constitutional amendment was approved 9-3.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, said dedicating so much money to water would lead to what Texans have feared for years — a state income tax.

Dutchman receives real heart

HOUSTON (AP) — A 36-year-old Dutchman clung tenuously to life early today after surgeons transplanted a human heart to replace a mechanical one that sustained him for about 54 hours, a hospital spokesman said.

Willebrordus A. Meuffels remained in critical condition, more than a day after the transplant and three days after Dr. Denton A. Cooley connected an artificial heart in a desperate effort to save the patient's life, said Texas Heart Institute spokeswoman Hazel Haby.

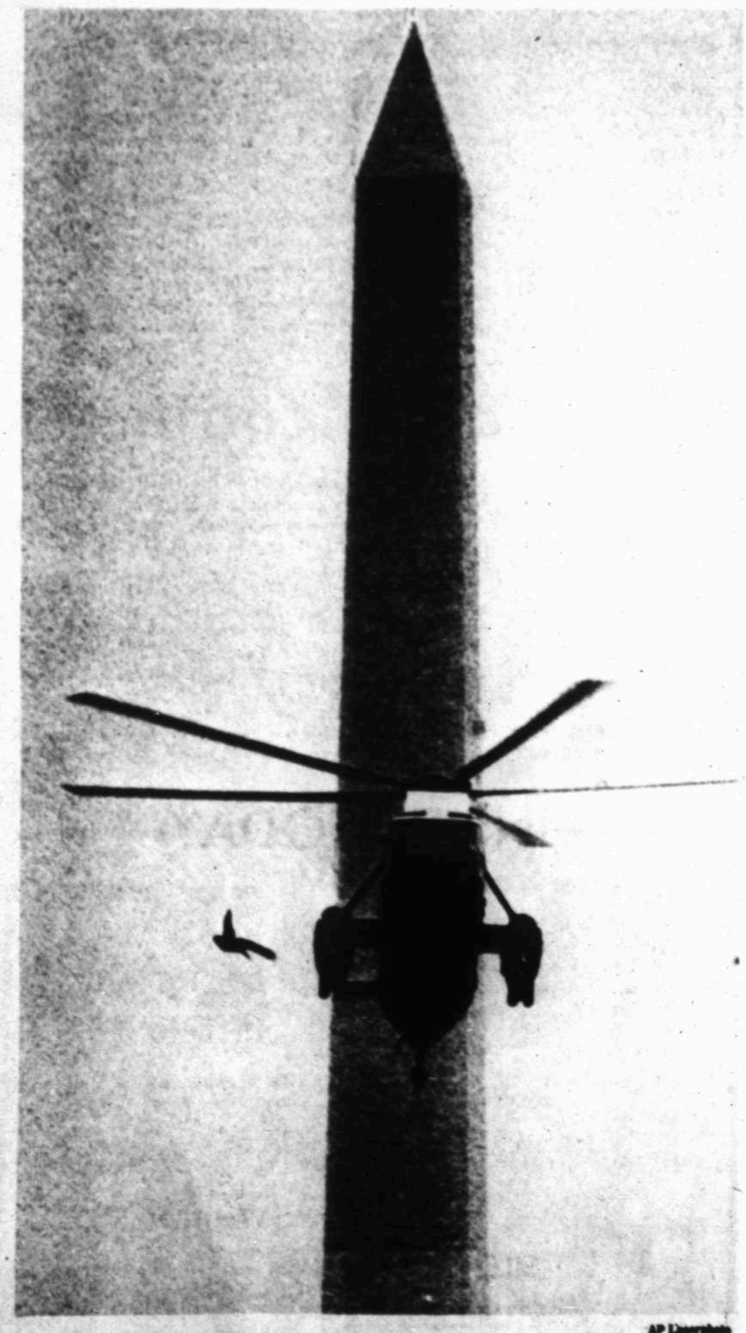

"Doctors are guardedly optimistic, but it is going to be touch and go for the next 48 to 72 hours," said Ms. Haby.

"His heart is performing beautifully, and Mr. Meuffels' blood pressure is good," she said. "But we are still having some problems with his blood coagulation. It is a little difficult to control the bleeding."

She said doctors told her clotting difficulties can develop any time there is major trauma, and "any major surgery like this has to be considered trauma."

Cooley decided to use the plastic, mechanical heart Thursday after Meuffels' heart stopped three hours after a triple bypass operation.

The artificial heart, a small pump attached to wires and tubes outside the body, sustained Meuffels from about 6 p.m. Thursday until about midnight Saturday.

High incidence of illness, death in babysitter's charges 'coincidental'

Fallings

PERRY, Fla. (AP) — In the past 17 months, many of the infants and small children attended by babysitter Christine Fallings have contracted serious illnesses and four have died, according to health officials, who call it an apparent coincidence.

Two died of myocarditis, an inflammation of the heart muscle, health officials said. Another died of encephalitis, a brain inflammation, and the other died in Mrs. Fallings' arms after receiving inoculations against polio, diptheria and tetanus.

"There's something wrong somewhere, but I don't know where," said Georgia Strickland, nursing supervisor at the Taylor County Health Department.

Dr. Flora Wellings of Tampa ran tests on Mrs. Fallings, 18, and concluded "she's not carrying typhoid. As far as we can tell, she's not carrying any viruses. It seems to me this kid is just a victim of circumstance."

A 3-year-old boy she was babysitting contracted meningitis and survived, officials said, and a pair of brothers she cared for went into convulsions and recovered in a hospital.

One Atlanta youth still missing

ATLANTA (AP) — A special police task force investigating the slayings of 28 young blacks has been stymied in its efforts to find Darron Glass, a 10-year-old black boy who disappeared more than 10 months ago.

But police say they haven't forgotten the 4-foot-9, 75 pound youngster. They've just run out of leads to investigate.

Almost all of the 28 victims in the series of slayings came to the attention of the task force after they were reported missing. In the two years since the slayings began, however, the names on the task force's list of missing black youngsters slowy were tansferred to the list of victims.

Will state take strangler case?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — District Attorney John Van de Kamp reportedly has asked the state officials to take over the case of Angelo Buono, charged in the Hillside Strangler murders.

The Los Angeles Times reported today that Van de Kamp sent the state attorney general's office a letter and transcripts of proceedings before Superior Court Judge Ronald M. George.

George last week refused a request by Van de Kamp to drop 10 homicide charges against Buono.

FBI believes Hinckley acted alone

WASHINGTON (AP) — With an indictment anticipated later this week, the FBI has concluded that John W. Hinckley Jr. acted alone in a March 30 shooting of President Reagan.

FBI spokesman Roger Young said Sunday that within the last week or 10 days the FBI sent its second report on the investigation of the wounding of Reagan outside the Washington Hilton Hotel to Charles F.C. Ruff, U.S. attorney for the District of Columbia. Ruff is preparing the government's prosecution of Hinckley on charges of attempting to assassinate the president.

Jean Harris, another inmate fight

BEDFORD HILLS, .Y. (AP) — Jean Harris, convicted of murdering Scarsdale Diet Dr. Herman Tarnower, has been confined to her cell after a fight with another inmate, prison officials said.

A spokesman for the state Department of Correctional Services said Mrs. Harris and the other inmate, who was not identified, had an altercation Saturday morning at the Bedford Hills Correctional Center.

Spokesman Lou Ganim said a hearing will be held "within the next few days" on whether to discipline either or both women.

Medfly battle back in backyards

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The focus of the battle against the fast-breeding Mediterranean fruit fly was switched back today to the gardens of homeowners, who are under orders to strip their fruit trees and dig up vegetables the fly's maggots feed on.

California Conservation Corps workers were mobilized Sunday to renew the ground attack against the fly. They were told to cover 770 square miles of rural and residential areas to enforce orders that some 200 varieties of fruits and vegetables be destroyed.

Woman literally scared to death

Barginde

CHICAGO (AP) — Hard of hearing and nearly blind, Sigrid Barginde lived the last two months of her 87 years in terror, pleading with police to believe her story of telephone taps, assault and strangers lurking in her darkened house.

One officer on the beat said police had just begun to believe her tales and had beefed up their checks on her small brick home on the South Side when her body was found face down on her bed, her hands bound behind her back with a scarf.

There was no sign of forced entry, police said. There are no suspects and her death remains a mystery.

The police theory is that Miss Barginde may have died of natural causes after an intruder bound her and left her on the bed.

Miss Barginde said the terror began in April after she awoke on the living room couch one night after falling asleep watching television, which she could see only through thick glasses from 10 inches away.

She made out the shadowy figures of three strangers as she moved through the dark house toward her bedroom, she told police. She said she screamed, they threw a sheet over her, hit her on the head and threw her in a closet.

She showed officers Bill Melmine and Larry Viles the bloodied sheet and her black eye the next morning, but they found her story hard to believe, especially her whispered fears that the phone was tapped and the house bugged. They found no signs of forced entry.

Later, Miss Barginde complained she had to go across the street and use a neighbor's phone because no one could hear her when she talked into hers. When Melmine and Viles took the phone to be repaired, they were told pieces of the receiver had been ripped out.

"That's when I started to at least half-believe her," Melmine said. "My partner and I got her a new phone and screwed the receiver on so tight even I couldn't get it off. A week later, she called us from the neighbor's house and sure enough, the parts were missing again. So we used super-strong glue to stick the receiver cover on. After that, someone pulled the receiver and the cord out of the phone altogether."

On June 18, Miss Barginde was mugged on her way home from the bank. But she held onto her purse, refusing to give in.

"It started to get to her," said Viles, who with Melmine befriended the old woman and began cruising by several times a week, spraying the rays from a spotlight around the bungalow.

"She would be sitting there talking and happy, and then she would sit down and cry. She was just scared to death," Viles said. "She was living in terror all the time. But she wouldn't move."

"We told her, 'If you don't get out of here, you're going to die here,' " Melmine said.

A few days after the mugging, nothing was heard from the old woman. The telephone man, who also had befriended her, got no answer when he stopped by for a visit.

On June 26, police found her body.

"It's still under investigation at this point, and there's no indication" that the intruders who tied her up killed her, said Sgt. Thomas Ferry of the police violent crime unit. An autopsy revealed nothing, Ferry said Sunday, so the body went to the Cook County medical examiner's office for chemical analysis.

Racial violence risk evaluated

WASHINGTON (AP) — A growing number of police brutality complaints, rather than federal budget cuts, poses the greatest risk of racial violence in the cities this summer, the nation's chief race relations troubleshooter says.

"Some of the old mistakes that were made are being made again," said Gilbert G. Pompa. "Police-community relations units have been disbanded. Almost across the board, local administrations have been lulled into a sense that things are better than they are."

Despite those attitudes and the largest domestic spending cuts in history, Pompa said there is less risk of violence this summer than last.

The conclusion is based on the annual survey of racial tensions in 100 communities around the nation conducted by the Justice Department's Community Relations Service, which Pompa heads.

Since 1965, between mid-May and mid-June, the service has assessed where to send its 11 mediators and 60 conciliators during what Pompa calls "the critical period between J7ly 4 and Labor Day."

In an interview with The Associated Press last week, Pompa said, "We are not as much at risk as last year." But he emphasized that the conclusion is based primarily on the absence of any violent racial disturbances so far this year in the United States. By this time in 1980, nine of the year's 10 recorded violent racial confrontations had already occurred.

But Pompa, 49, said he is worried by growing complaints of police brutality, or "police use of excessive force" as it is known to federal officials. Complaints to the service about police brutality are up 35 percent, and police brutality cases taken on by the service are up 18 percent over last year, Pompa said.

"The assessment this year reconfirmed that police-minority friction is still the No. 1 race relations problem in the United States," Pompa said.

A 13-year veteran of the service, Pompa is not worried about President Reagan's budget cuts triggering summer violence.

"We worry more about the police-minority friction variable than we do any problems regarding budget cutbacks ... because it's been our experience that people in general and minorities in particular have been able to tolerate bad housing, have been able to tolerate disproportionate levels of attainment in education and a high dropout rate.

"They've been able to tolerate lack of jobs," Pompa said. "The one thing that we find that they will not readily tolerate is the manner in which they are dealt with by the police because it strikes at the very dignity of the perso."

Pomp noted that racial violence did not increase after sharp cuts in the war on poverty in the late 1960s, nor did it rise in California after passage of the tax-cutting Proposition 13.

"If economic hardship were a catalyst for civil disorders, then the Depression would have been a holocaust," Pompa said.

But his evaluators still weigh a community's racial problems in employment, education and housing, because "if the state of the police-minority relations is not good, then all the other problems that you may have in those other three variables will surface as a result of a confrontation precipitated by a conflict between minorities and police," Pompa said.

Pipeline to what?

The "iffy" Russian gas pipeline project that has been tempting some of our European allies for months may meet a new snag soon. The Reagan administration is considering revoking the export license the Carter administration granted in its dying days to Caterpillar Tractor.

The pipeline deal is a huge one, lately estimated at $15 billion, with West German banks to provide the financing, and gas purchases by Germany, Austria, France and others to repay the cost. The ailing German steel industry would furnish the pipe, and Russia would gain more hard currency income that gives it flexibility in its spending — including the competition of military costs with consumer desires.

Already there has been some hedging by the bankers, unsure they would really have a good deal. Meanwhile a Japanese firm has been making known its availability to furnish pipe-laying machinery if Caterpillar's authority is yanked.

It is good that the new administration is looking hard at use of United States high technology equipment to build a 3,000-mile economic link which would put Western nations additionally at the mercy of Russia. Fifty members of Congress in a letter to President Reagan, say that the energy dependency implicit in the pipeline is a danger to Western security, and suggest alternatives including American coal, a point urged on West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt by President Reagan at the recent Canadian economic summit.

That might not be good news for Caterpillar but it might well be the right position to take unless and until the Russians quit financing global revolution. The Reagan administration is viewing the pipeline equipment question as part of its broader review of the new East-West trade guidelines due for issuance later this month.

Is linkage in order? You bet.

Input is needed

In five meetings beginning today, Midland County Commissioners are seeking input from county residents on redistricting commissioners' precincts.

The meetings, planned today at Lee High School for Precinct 4, Tuesday at Greenwood School for Precinct 2 and Alamo Junior High School for Precinct 1, Wednesday at Midland Freshman School for Precinct 3 and Thursday at Lee Freshman School for Precinct 2, will be important because of their expected impact on future elections in the county and operation of county business.

It is through this type of public comment that residents of an area can make their support or concerns known, and can shed light on the potential effects of actions being considered by their elected representatives. All too often, though, residents of an area will wait too long before speaking up and making their feelings known to officials.

It really shouldn't be that way. Elected officials need all the information they can get before making decisions that affect the lives of us all. Every citizen of a community has the right and the responsibility to take part in the governmental processes of this nation at the national, state and local levels.

Midlanders have that opportunity in the coming week. They should take the time and make the effort to make their feelings known. Many Midlanders will be affected by the redistricting of commissioners' precincts. We should all take part in shaping our futures.

CHARLEY REESE

Doomsayers' ideologies hiding facts

If you are an old Johnny Carson fan, you probably remember Paul Erlich, a personable if arrogant young professor who was oh such an expert on population matters. He wrote a 1968 best-seller, "The Population Bomb," which he plugged on the "Tonight Show." In it he said, "the battle to feed all humanity is over. In the 1970s the world will undergo famines — hundreds of millions of people are going to starve to death."

Charley Reese

Well, they didn't. Erlich was just plain, dead wrong. Is he just not as smart as he thought or is there a reason why he and so many other smart people keep insisting that the world is doomed? Erlich is just part of the crowd that includes the United Nations, the Environmental Fund, and a collection of individually brilliant people who continue to cry doom and gloom for our poor old planet.

There is plenty of evidence that lack of food production does not now and will not in the foreseeable future threaten the world's population with catastrophic famines. Julian Simon, a University of Illinois professor, gives an excellent account of the facts in an article in the July issue of "Atlantic Monthly." He takes the reasonable view that while drought and famine occur, these conditions are neither inevitable nor permanent and that with effort and confidence they can be reversed. Per capita food production has stayed ahead of population growth.

Simon doesn't go into the question of why so many smart people keep asserting a proposition which the evidence does not support. I will hazard a guess. Nearly all of the doom and gloom crowd (ecological variety, not the Armageddon folks) seem to be socialists. When you analyze their gloomy reports, the gloom is always used as a justification for more government control.

When you hear them talk about the "spaceship Earth" concept, just remember that spaceships have commanders, disciplined crews, and passive, obedient passengers who have no say in the running of the ship.

That is an old political trick: to pose the problem and to offer your solution as the only solution. Ah, yes, mankind faces destruction unless — there is always an "unless" — we put an end to this unplanned, wasteful capitalistic system and accept a lowered standard of living and centralized planning and control.

That's really a nasty trick to play on people. Give up your freedom or lose your bowl of porridge when the supply of porridge is really not in jeopardy. I am generalizing naturally. I'm sure some of the people who predict disaster are quite sincere and have no ulterior motive, but I'm also just as sure that many of these people are more politician than scientist or academic. Barry Commoner, Paul Erlich and Ralph Nader all share an undisguised dislike for capitalism as does the United Nations.

It's sad but true that you have to examine people's motives carefully these days. Scholars and scientists have become politicized and often use their expertise in one field to further their political or ideological goals. The best clue to their motives is usually the solutions they propose. Another clue that they may be more ideological than scholarly is the vehemence with which they assert their positions. True scholars and true scientists are too keenly aware of how tentative all knowledge is to be vehement or dogmatic. Furthermore, they rarely offer political solutions.

I remain confident that man will manage to feed himself and to find the energy he needs, but if I am wrong about that, then I still prefer to be cold, hungry and free than a warm, well-fed slave. I don't think men like Paul Erlich would be any better at governing than they are at predicting world disasters.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Refugee tells of threats against him, family

WASHINGTON — When I reported last month on Tscherim Soobzokov, a resident of Paterson, N.J., who was accused of Nazi activities in Europe during World War II, it stimulated protests by anti-Nazi activists outside his home and threats against him and his family.

Jack Anderson

Although my associate Bill Gruver interviewed Soobzokov and his lawyer extensively before our first report on him, and obtained information from immigration authorities and the Justice Department, I feel Soobzokov is entitled to more space to tell his side of a complicated story.

The controversy over Soobzokov centers on statements he made when he applied for entry to the United States in 1953 from Jordan, where he had fled after World War II. A native of the Soviet Union, Soobzokov, now 57, became an officer in what was allegedly a Caucasian unit of the Waffen SS — the combat arm of Hitler's storm troopers.

Soobzokov acknowledged this questionable past when he applied for immigration to the United States. But he insists, vehemently, that the SS unit he joined actually existed only as a cover and only on paper, and was organized by a former Albanian colonel who befriended him. Soobzokov says he used his SS officer's uniform and travel documents to go to Hungary with a group of stateless refugees who were fleeing both the Nazis and the oncoming Russians in the closing months of the war in Europe.

He blames his troubles on an attempt to discredit him by a political rival in the Circassian refugee community in New Jersey, where he settled on arrival in the United States.

Soobzokov claims, with some justice, to be the most investigated individual in the country. Yet the Immigration and Naturalization Service dropped its case against him last year, and the Justice Department ended its investigation last January, informing Soobzokov that it intended to "take no further action against him."

One Justice Department official expressed the opinion that too much time and effort had been expended on the Soobzokov investigation, when there are many ex-Nazis living in this country with far more damaging evidence against them.

For Americans, it is hard to figure out the truth in the charges and countercharges that seem to fly continually among members of the European refugee communities who found haven in this country after the nightmare of World War II. Memories fade after 36 years, and dry official documents are not always reliable.

Perhaps the most striking thing about Tscherim Soobzokov is his determination to seek public vindication. Most of those who have been accused of having Nazi skeletons in their closet are only too happy to keep a low profile. But Soobzokov insists that the allegations against him are totally false, and he aims to prove it, no matter how long it takes.

HEADLINES & FOOTNOTES: The latest government figures on handgun-related deaths show that in 1979, 10,728 Americans were killed by handguns, compared to 52 such deaths in Canada, 48 in Japan, 42 in West Germany, 34 in Switzerland, 21 in Sweden and eight in Great Britain. Meanwhile, the National Rifle Association reports that in the two months following the attempted assassination of President Reagan, it had enrolled 111,550 new members, bringing its total membership to 1,954,552.

What the AVMA attorneys didn't realize was that the FTC had already called off its investigation.

— Members of the National Organization for Women had more than Supreme Court decisions to get upset about recently — a new tenant in the building where their national headquarters is located. The new tenant, a newsstand, had sold pornographic materials at its former location. A NOW staffer circulated a warning memo and petition deploring the presence of a smut dealer on the premises. The news dealer cleaned up his act before moving in, but the building managers are keeping a close watch on him for NOW.

— With drug prices going up along with everything else, one pharmaceutical manufacturer — Merck — has found a way to increase income without directly raising prices. Merck has simply eliminated its 5 percent discount to wholesalers. On $300 million in wholesale trade per year, that will put $15 million in Merck's pocket. The company claims it is merely trying to increase its direct distribution to retailers. But industry officials say the move will ultimately result in higher costs for consumers.

Today is Monday, July 27, the 208th day of 1981. There are 157 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 27, 1953, an armistice was signed at Panmunjom, ending the Korean War after more than three years.

On this date:

In 1588, the Spanish Armada was in a running fight with the British up the English Channel.

In 1789, the U.S. Congress established the forerunner of the State Department, the Department of Foreign Affairs.

In 1909, Orville Wright set a record by staying aloft in an airplane for more than 72 minutes over Virginia.

And in 1965, U.S. airplanes carried out their first attacks against antiaircraft missile sites in North Vietnam.

Ten years ago: The Sudanese government announced that the leader of the nation's Communist Party had been sentenced to death for his part in a plot to overthrow the government.

Five years ago: A powerful earthquake shook a wide area in northern China, including Peking. The extent of damage and casualties was not disclosed.

INSIDE REPORT:

Farewell to 'Taxachusetts' is song Bostonians sing

BOSTON — Dwarfing in importance the nationally-publicized state fiscal crisis concluded recently is a political transformation making Massachusetts the unlikely vanguard of the national tax revolt.

Rowland Evans

No longer is this "Taxachusetts," the nation's most heavily-taxed state where government prospers as the economy languishes. Oppressive property taxes are mandated to fall, and unconscionably heavy income taxes may come down next.

Robert Novak

More than the level of taxation has changed. Confidence in government has fallen while business confidence surges, unemployment drops and economic growth accelerates. In what may be a transcendent political development of the 1980s, Massachusetts rivals California as a laboratory for supply-side economic theory.

The source of this shock was populistic, a spontaneous rage against bloated bureaucracy and unbearable tax rates. When voters last November voted overwhelmingly to cut property taxes 41 percent by adopting Proposition 2½ (limiting property taxes to 2.5 percent of market value), politicians were opposed or in hiding.

Threats from those politicians that chaos would result from reduced government services are proving as empty here as they did in California after Proposition 13. Passage of a state budget two weeks ago, after antics that produced a payless payday for state employees, means that towns will have about half their revenue loss made up by the state, which in turn also has tightened its belt.

Politicians agree that if Proposition 2½ were voted on again today, it would again pass. The sharp drop it required in the prohibitively high auto excise tax pleases voters, but not so much as the first of three phased reductions in property taxes will later in the year. What little residual griping persists by politicians about 2½ may soon be gone.

That the politicians were dragged kicking and screaming into an era of reduced government only contributes to anti-goverment hostility. "I am sure that the people want the government off their backs and out of their lives," State Senate President Bill Bulger, architect of the relatively austere new budget, told us.

Strains of class conflict add a dimension to the tax revolt not found in California. It is rebellion by working-class neighborhoods in Boston and industrial towns, led by South Boston's astute Billy Bulger, against the establishment: the rich suburbs, Beacon Hill, Harvard.

This ought to yield a windfall for maverick Democrat Edward King, a former professional football lineman who in 1978 was elected the state's first Irish Catholic governor since 1950. Instead, his unpopularity seems without limit. Unable to fulfill tax-cutting campaign promises, Gov. King joined the political pack criticizing Proposition 2½ while the people enacted it.

His performance in this year's budget fight was a fiasco, aligning himself against erstwhile ally Bulger and with bureaucrats desperate to save their jobs. Polls show the governor running far behind two liberal Democrats: former Gov. Michael Dukakis and Lt. Gov. Thomas P. O'Neill III (son of the speaker).

But can Dukakis retain his suddenly-revived popularity in today's political climate? A lecturer at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government since his upset loss to King, Dukakis repudiates 2½ and disputes public alienation toward government. "I still think government can help make the individual's life better," Dukakis told us in confessed admiration for Joseph Califano.

If future state revenue is needed because of Reagan's cuts in federal grants, Dukakis opposes the sales tax as regressive. But regressive or not, it seems the wave of the future advocated by thoughtful liberals — such as State Rep. Gerald Cohen, chairman of the Joint Taxation Committee. Influenced by a supply-side study of Massachusetts finances by Professor Arthur Laffer, Cohen proposes substantial income tax relief while expanding the sales tax.

King, seeking to regain leadership of the new Boston Tea Party, vows to veto any net revenue gainer. But more revealing of this state's political metamorphosis is Cohen's belief that state income tax cuts coupled with Reagan's federal cuts will further invigorate the state's revived economy. When liberals embrace supply-side doctrine in the only state carried by George McGovern, farewell to "Taxachusetts" seems at hand.

Castro blames United States for outbreak of plague, crop failures

MIAMI (AP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro says the United States is engaged in "a bacteriological war" that caused plagues on Cuban sugar and tobacco crops and an outbreak of Dengue Fever that has killed more than 100 people.

"In the last two years, four harmful plagues have hit our country — the African swine fever, the 'roya' of sugar cane, the blue fungus of tobacco and Dengue Fever," Castro charged Sunday in an address marking the anniversary of the start of the Cuban revolution in 1953.

"We share the convictions of the people, and we keep the deep suspicions that the plagues which have hit our country — especially the hemorrhagic Dengue — could have been introduced into Cuba by the CIA," Castro said.

Castro also said the United States is maintaining "an ominous silence" while exile groups plot his assassination and the destruction of Cuba's government and economy.

Castro said 113 people, including 81 children, have died from the Dengue Fever during the past two months and that more than 273,400 cases have been reported on this communist island 90 miles south of Key West, Fla.

The United States has further demonstrated its role in the disease outbreak and its indifference toward anti-Castro exile activities through its "economical blockade" of Cuba, Castro said.

"Imperialists not only tolerate (the exile activity), but intensify their actions of economical blockade against our country," he said. "The North American authorites have used all their influence to impede the sale of nickel in the capitalist countries. The Yankee blockade interfered in our efforts to get the necessary products to fight the epidemic.

"Why would it be strange that imperialism goes again to the temptation to use treacherously biological arms against Cuba?" Castro asked. "What can anyone expect from a government whose policy is known for its cynicism, its lies and its absolute lack of scruples?

Castro's 2½-hour speech was broadcast on Havana radio and monitored in Miami.

In Washington, a U.S. State Department spokesman said comment would be withheld until the speech could be analyzed.

The Cuban president lashed out at the Miami-based exile organization Alpha 66, which said it has sent some 40 commandos to Cuba bent on assassinating him and sabotaging Cuban commerce and industry.

Talks to begin on Poland's food shortage

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Government officials and leaders of the independent labor federation Solidarity are meeting today to discuss food distribution and rationing problems that have stripped the shelves of markets in many Polish cities.

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa was not expected to take part in the talks. Union sources said he had been ordered o bed for a week because of fatigue.

Representatives of the 10-million-member labor organization were especially concerned about a government proposal to cut the monthly meat ration from 7.7 pounds to 6.6.

The government, severely strapped for foreign currency and plagued by a $27 billion foreign debt after a year of labor unrest, claims it hasn't got the cash to pay for enough meat to fill the current quota.

Solidarity has threatened a national strike over the meat cuts, but union spokesman Janusz Onyszkiewicz said the labor federation might accept a shortage if it is limited to August.

"If it goes on much longer, then we will have to make a decision," he said Sunday as natonal unio leaders ended a three-day meeting in Gdansk, the Baltic seaport.

Solidarity also demanded full public discussion of the government's plans toincrease food prices as much as 400 percent. It said any increases must be part of a plan for general economic reforms.

"The union cannot accept the price increases without first putting the issue of compensation to public discussion and without them being tied into general economic reform," Onyszkiewicz said.

A government attempt to raise meat price hikes last summer touched off the historic national strike wave that resulted in the creation of Solidarity, the first legal union in the Soviet bloc independent of Communist Party control, and a liberal grass-roots reform movement within the Polish party.

Food shortages prompted the first organized "hunger march" in Poland Saturday when more than 1,000 people walked through the central city of Kutno. Similar marches are planned this week by bus drivers, women and children in Lodz, Poland's second largest city.

British rioting erupts again

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Rioting youths stoned a taxi cab and battled police with bricks and gasoline bombs early today in Liverpool street violence that ended 10 nights of calm in British cities, police said.

The cab driver and two bobbies were injured.

Police said they came under a hail of stones, bricks and gasoline bombs when about 70 youths went on the rampage in the Toxteth district. But they said the disturbance was far less serious than the bloody rioting in the same area three weeks ago.

The turmoil earlier this month in the district, where many West Indian immigrants live, was one of the fiercest outbreaks of the urban violence in major British cities for 13 straight nights.

Police equipped with riot shields sealed off the area as reinforcements from neighboring districts were called in to help quell the upheaval today, two days before the wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer in London, 180 miles to the southeast.

The renewed rioting came midway through a two-week inquiry into the earlier Toxteth violence by Environment Minister Michael Heseltine. He stressed on arrival in the northwest port city that he was unlikely to find a "magic formula" to prevent unrest.

The Times of London reported that Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was givena report by a cabinet "think tank" on the problems of the Liverpool area shortly before the Toxteth rioting. The newspaper said the study warned of a danger of increasing social tension and "threat to law and order" because of high unemployment and poverty.

Rajai votes outnumber ballots cast for Bani-Sadr

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Prime Minister Mahammad Ali Rajai won Iran's presidency with about 2 million votes more than ousted President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr received in his election 18 months ago, Iran's official news media says.

With counting from Friday's election nearly complete, Rajai has amassed more than 13 million votes, compared with about 11 million votes for Bani-Sadr in January 1980 when Iran held its first presidential election after 2,500 years of monarchy, Tehran Radio and the Pars news agency said Sunday.

Rajai has 89 percent of the nearly 14 million votes counted, according to figures released by Pars. There were three token opponents.

Meanwhile, the media reported 10 more executions of alleged dissidents in the continuing crackdown launched with the June 22 ouster of Bani-Sadr by the Islamic regime. Scores of opponents of the ruling fundamentalists have been put to death in the campaign.

Bani-Sadr, reportedly hiding among rebellious Kurdish tribes in northwest Iran, had urged his countrymen to boycott the elections in a clandestine election-eve broadcast. The fugitive leader vowed to return to power.

Iranian leftists in Turkey had predicted a bloody uprising on election day but only scattered violence was reported as Iranians flocked to the polls. Tehran Radio and Pars said more than 165 leftists were arrested on election eve and election day.

Eight members of unidentified outlawed groups were executed Saturday night and Sunday morning for "armed revolt against the Islamic republic" and "armed sedition," Pars said. The executions occurred in the southeastern city of Kerman and in the Caspian sea towns of Babol and Sari, Pars said.

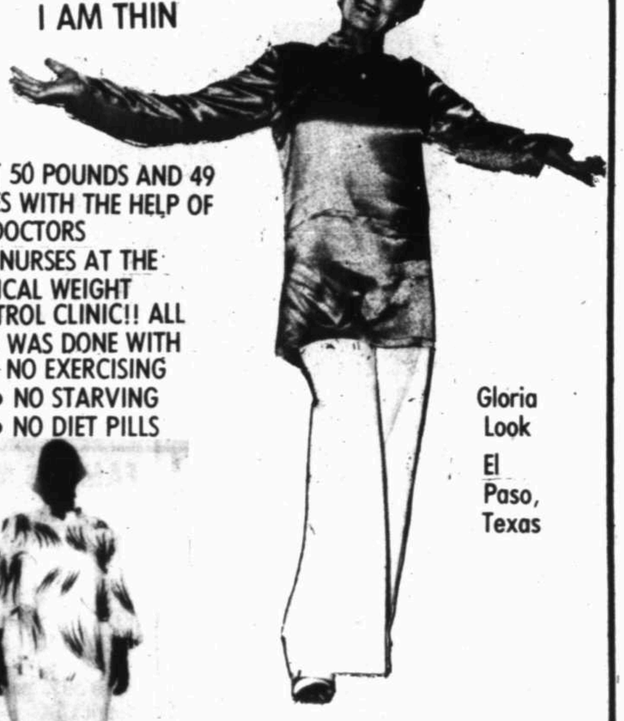

And Tehran Radio said two "international Zionist elements" were executed Sunday in the northeastern city of Kashmar. Both were accused of membership in "a Zionist spying organization" and of working for the Israeli government.

In another development Sunday, Iran denied a report that Israel has been sending Iran American-made tank spare parts and ammunition in an arrangement uncovered by the crash of an Argentine cargo plane in the Soviet Union.

Tehran Radio called the report by the Sunday Times of London a "fairy tale" and "yet another plot against our revolution." Israel made no comment.

Thousands flee burning toxic chemical

By ROBERT WADE
Associated Press Writer

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A railroad car loaded with a toxic chemical caught fire early today near Newark International Airport, forcing the evacuations of thousands of people from Port Newark, an airport terminal and motel, officials said.

In addition, seven nearby businesses and a number of highways were cleared of personnel as a precaution.

No injuries were reported in the blaze, but firefighters worried that the burning ethylene oxide, which was releasing toxic fumes, could explode.

"If that blows, we're down wind," said Port Authority police Sgt. Anthony Vojnick. "The fumes are drifting over here (to the airport). People should just stay away."

There are no homes in the area, on the southern outskirts of this city of 330,000 people.

The chemical, which is used in the manufacture of other chemicals, is "highly toxic," said fire department spokesman Lonnie Tucker.

The chemicals were in a 55,000-gallon tanker sitting on tracks owned by Conrail at the Oak Island Freight Yard, Tucker said.

The fire broke out as rail workers were hooking trains together, said Fire Chief Thomas Boyle. "One of the knuckles jumped and punctured the side of the car," he said.

Yellow flames shot 50 feet into the air from the punctured car.

"We're just going to let it burn, because when that thing stops burning, we've got trouble," said Boyle. "We'll have an explosion."

Firefighters sprayed water over the top of the tanker in an effort to cool it. The chemical has a low flash point and boils at 51 degrees, said officials. Ethylene oxide is an irritant and could burn skin and nasal passages, said Fire Director John Caufield.

More than 150 guests at the airport Holiday Inn were bused from the area. The customers gathered in the lobby, sitting on their suitcases as they waiting for transportation away from the noxious fumes.

The evacuated North Terminal at the airport serves the operations of People Express and World Airways, air cargo operations, the National Weather Service and the U.S. Post Office air mail offices.

Port Newark was closed, along with Routes 1 and 9 between Elizabeth and Jersey City and the Pulaski Skyway, said city police.

Man holds police at bay

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who shot his wife after an argument, then fired on an ambulance when it came to pick her up, held police at bay outside his northeast Houston home for several hours Sunday afternoon, police officials said.

A police spokesman said the man held the couple's four children in the house for two hours, but released them unharmed after a police department psychiatrist talked with him.

Brand sues

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — McAllen Mayor Othal Brand has filed a $2.5 million libel and slander suit against his defeated opponent in a hard-fought mayoral election.

Brand alleged that Dr. Ramiro Casso, a McAllen physician, recklessly and negligently said and published false statements from Feb. 20 to the May 9 runoff election.

Brand contends in the suit filed in state district court that Casso has accused him of criminal actions and says the statements have humiliated and embarrassed him.

The mayor also blames Casso's statements for adversely affecting his nomination to the state prison board.

McElrath baby marks first month of life

By BRIAN O'SHEA
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Gary McElrath says his tiny premature daughter looks "fantastic" and seems to be responding well in the Augusta Hospital where she has spent her first 30 days of life.

Tiny Stephanie, who attracted national attention last month when Florida officials could not find hospital space for her, remained in critical but stable condition Sunday at Talmadge Memorial Hospital.

Born almost three months premature in a Florida medical center, Stephanie is 1 month old today. She still weighs less than two pounds.

"Every day and every week that you can gain time with a baby this premature is significant," said hospital spokesman Alex Vaughn.

The baby still is being fed intravenously and requires the help of a respirator to breathe. McElrath said he and his wife, Carleen, believe the baby will survive.

"We know in our hearts she's going to pull through," he said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press. "If she wasn't, she wouldn't have gone through all she had to go through."

Before Stephanie arrived in Augusta on an Air Force plane, officials at the Southeast Medical Center in North Miami Beach, Fla., made a frantic but fruitless effort to find a bed for her in a Florida hospital with facilities for premature babies.

The infant's plight drew an outpouring of donations and letters from people across the country, and it also sparked a controversy in her home state of Florida over neonatal care. Some hospital officials said Florida's entire health care system for critically ill infants is insufficient because of a shortage of funds, while others claimed the state's neonatal program is the nation's best.

Guess who's coming to dinner?

If you're Gretchen Poston, White House social secretary during the Carter years, it might have been anyone from Menachem Begin and Anwar Sadat to a group of school children picnicking on the Whit House lawn.

Whatever the occasion, Gretchen planned and coordinated the myriad details that go into making every party a success. One rule, however, was always uppermost in her mind: "Your prime concern should be the happiness and satisfaction of your guests."

Gretchen Poston

And Gretchen should know. She has been planning special occasions for the past 15 years as co-founder of Washington Whirlaround, a convention and special-event planning organization, with four years "off" to work as the White House social secretary.

Gretchen's greatest challenge at the White House was coordinating the events celebrating the signing of the Middle East peace accords by Menachem Begin and Anwar Sadat. With only five days to arrange everything, Gretchen enlisted much of the White House staff and her own friends to help with all of the details. Each guest had to be invited by phone, and each in turn had to pass security by calling back with his or her name, birth date and Social Security number.

Protocol seating for the morning signing ceremony had to be established for each of the 3,000 persons attending, including the Supreme Court justices, the Cabinet and Congress.

The dinner party for 1,800 that evening required a tent larger than the White House itself; building platforms for bands and performers; puttting up smaller tents for use as dressing rooms; and arranging for catering to the special dietary restrictions of the Jewish and Moslem guests.

Most people don't have to deal with dinner parties for 1,800, but planning ahead is a requirement for any successful event. "Start planning about three weeks before the party," Gretchen advises. "Keep your guests uppermost in your mind, plan your menu, entertainment, if any, and the kind of atmosphere you want."

Special holidays or seasons can be the basis for a good party, according to Gretchen. George Washington's birthday can be celebrated with coffee and cherry pie served at the traditional British "tea time." The Fourth of July can feature fried chicken and sparklers.

"I always supplement my dinners with prepared foods," Gretchen says. "I don't feel I have to cook everything in my own kitchen. You are far better off not doing that because you tire yourself out just preparing, cooking and cleaning up, and you can't enjoy your guests."

And Gretchen practiced what she preached — even for an authentic Gospel "sing-in" on the White House lawn. "The menu included fried chicken, potato salad and banana pudding," she recalls. The meal was catered.

In planning parties in your own home, Gretchen says the comfort of your guests should be your first consideration. At the White House that meant researching the food preferences, hobbies and attitudes of foreign dignitaries visiting the President. The first step was a discussion with the appropriate foreign embassy official. When all of the information was gathered, the event was planned around the guest.

Sometimes, however, the system backfired. When Chinese Premier Deng Xiao Ping visited Washington, a communique stated he did not like beef or very spicy food. Accordingly, veal was served at the White House dinner for him.

During the next 10 days, he dined at various embassies, and came back to the White House the night before returning to China. At the reception, he rose to offer his thanks to his American hosts, and added, "There is one thing I have learned about America — you all love veal."

For the preceding 10 nights, he had been served veal at every dinner!

Embarrassing moments can happen to any host or hostess and Gretchen's advice is not to make a fuss about it. If the premier of China can accept a misunderstanding with grace and humor, any guest can overlook an honest mistake.

Over the years, Gretchen has amassed a repertory of party-planning tips that have helped her make every occasion a success. Some of them are:

— Plan ahead to ensure your guests' comfort and satisfaction.

— Be sure your hall closet is empty and hangers ready for coats.

— Have a seating plan ready for a sit-down dinner to avoid confusion.

— Serve cocktails for no more than 30 minutes before dinner.

— Pre-set the dining table, with dinner plates in front of the host and salad plates next to the hostess. Each can then fill and pass a plate to the guests.

— Consider the seasons of the year in your planning. Use foods that are bountiful, fresh and less expensive at that time of year.

— For a personal touch to your invitations, ask a high school art student to design one for a nominal fee and have them printed by an instant print company.

— Make use of whatever resources are available, from your own garden's fresh flowers for a centerpiece, to quick-service prepared foods for you menu.

"To have a truly memorable party," Gretchen says, "you must be true to yourself. Do whatever you feel most comfortable with and relax with your guests. The greatest compliment a hostess can receive is the recognition the she was a guest at her own party."

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Removing oil stains from driveway

DEAR HELOISE:

HELP! How can I remove the oil and grease left by my son's car on our cement driveway?

The car leaks oil continually, and I've tried and tried to remove the ugly stain, but it's still there.

I've even considered getting rid of my son, and his car, but this is rather drastic since he's a good boy and I love him.

Any other suggestions? — M.E.G.

\+ + +

There's a fairly simple solution, and you can keep both your son and his car. (Well, the son, anyway... and have you ever considered putting an old shower curtain or flattened cardboard box under the leak to catch that oil?)

To remove the oil itself, just sprinkle cat litter, or something absorbent to soak it up. Then just brush it up.

The remaining stain can be removed by wetting the driveway, then spraying the stain with a pre-wash spray.

Let it stand a few minutes, then sprinkle a powdered detergent on the spot. Scrub it with a broom, hose off, and your driveway should be presentable once again. If it's really bad, it may be necessary to repeat.

There are commercial cleaners available, so you might check an automotive store or department if your driveway's in pretty bad shape. — Heloise

GIFT WRAPPING

Dear Heloise: When I purchased a crystal wine set for a wedding gift, I found that the store had packed the box inside very carefully with white tissue paper, then wrapped each piece in white tissue paper.

Since there were so many pieces to the wine set, I decided to rewrap each piece in a different color tissue paper. Then, when the bride and groom unwrap the gift, they can easily see each piece in among the white tissue paper.

Three or four different colors would work fine, alternating the colors to distinguish one piece from another.

So much easier than thinking you're picking up one individually wrapped piece, when in fact you've gotten ahold of two. — J.B.

SPLASH! SPLASH!

Dear Heloise: For a quick solution to entertaining preschool age children on a hot afternoon, there is nothing like a little water to jump in and out of.

An old plastic tablecloth or shower curtain placed over an old tire (with the metal rim removed) makes an excellent little play pool and will keep the children occupied for a long time.

When finished, just hang the plastic on the line to dry and put away the tire until next time.

Great for temporary visitors and grandchildren. — Susan Treidel

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: When in a hurry to get the charcoal fire going (like when the hungry brother-in-law pops in!), use a hammer to crack up the charcoal briquettes into smaller pieces.

Add the lighter fluid, and in less than half the usual time, the grill is ready for cooking. Seems like less charcoal is needed, too.

My brother-in-law is always happy with this idea — especially if we have t-bone steak! — Garland Nicely

SHAMPOOING TIP

Dear Heloise: My daughter developed an ear infection right after Easter, so between her medicine and chocolate bunnies making a mess, her hair was getting very sticky.

I put her hair up in braids and washed just the braids over the sink so the water would not run into her ears.

When I took her hair down that night, it was surprisingly clean and shiny. — Cathy Zanetich

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Heloise: In a book on the Middle Ages, which I read recently for a Humanities course, a chapter on knights' equipment contained the following information:

To de-rust a hauberk (coat-of-mail) put it into a leather bag with sand and vinegar, then toss it around for exercise, like a medicine ball.

Do you suppose you could have written a household hints column in a former life? — Alice Wright

\+ + +

Maybe so, especially since vinegar is mentioned! Have to admit, though, that even I hadn't heard of that use for it, but it must have worked! Thanks for a chuckle. — Heloise

DOUBLE DUTY

Dear Heloise: Just the other day when taking my clothes out of the dryer, I started to discard my dryer fabric softener sheets when I thought of a thrifty idea.

The used sheets could serve as interfacings in cuffs, pocket flaps, etc!

Now, I put them in my sewing drawer instead of the trash! — Buns Miller

RENEW IT

Dear Heloise: Do your toothbrush bristles "sprangle" out and look unsightly?

Wrap a twist-tie around the bottom of the wet toothbrush bristles, then push it up to the top.

Bristles are back in shape next day when dry. It only takes a second to put the twist-tie on. — F.G.

\+ + +

THIS COLUMN is written for you... the homemaker. If you have a hint or a problem write to Heloise in care of this newspaper. Because of the tremendous volume of mail, Heloise is unable to answer individual letters. She will, however, use your hint or answer your question in her column whenever possible.

DEAR ABBY

Girl should keep her jeans on

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have been told by friends that it is possible to get pregnant through your jeans. I can't believe this!

I am a virgin, just turned 15, and I know I am going to be more involved with guys now that I'm dating. If this is possible, I am scared to death to get very close to any guy. I need to know as soon as possible.

I hope you won't think this is a dumb question. — WORRIED IN EL PASO

DEAR WORRIED: It is not a dumb question. It's a very intelligent one. A lot of kids get aroused by just lying close to each other while kissing. Then they just naturally proceed to the next step, which is petting.

It's not possible to get pregnant THROUGH one's jeans, but sometimes kids remove some of their clothing because it's "in the way," or they burrow underneath it to explore each other's bodies with their hands. This is known as heavy petting, or "doing everything else BUT."

The technical (and legal) definition of sexual intercourse is "penetration." (The male's sex organ must penetrate the female's.) However, as impossible as it may sound, in the medical literature can be found cases where there has been NO penetration — the girl REMAINED A VIRGIN, but after heavy petting, she found herself pregnant.

DEAR ABBY: My son works long hours, so when he wants to buy his wife something for her birthday, Mother's Day, Christmas or their anniversary, he asks me to please buy something for him to give her.

Although it's not easy for me to get around, I'm happy to accommodate him, but have yet to select a gift his wife has liked well enough to keep. I know her size, and I also know what colors she likes. but for some reason nothing I select has ever pleased her, so back it goes to be exchanged for something she picks out herself.

Abby, since shopping for my daughter-in-law's gifts is a total waste of time, I finally told my son to give her money and let her buy what she wants. He said his wife didn't consider money a proper gift — lacked warmth and sentiment. Now what do I do? — KENTUCKY CHICKEN

DEAR CHICKEN: Resign as your son's personal shopper. Tell him if his wife wants warmth and sentimentality, to send her a gift certificate with a warm, sentimental card.

DEAR ABBY: How do I get through to my in-laws? I have a two-year-old daughter who has a favorite doll she carries wherever she goes. When Tina goes to Grandma and Grandpa's house, they take her doll away from her, which is bad enough, but then they pretend to beat it up! This gets Tina so upset that she cries and carries on. Then her grandparents laugh at her.

Abby, I have tried to explain that Tina doesn't understand their actions, but they insist on doing it every time we visit them. They call it "teasing" and say Tina should learn how to take a joke. I love my in-laws, but I don't like their teasing my child this way. What should I do? — YOUNG MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Tell them that they may view this kind of teasing as a joke, but if it moves a child to tears, it's cruelty. Furthermore, if they don't discontinue that cruel practice, you will discontinue your visits.

Handy hints for lawn tool care

By AL CARRELL

By now you have become well acquainted with all your lawn and garden tools. If you don't take proper care of them, however, you'll soon be saying "goodbye" to these old friends. Today I have a collection of super good ideas for lawn tool care from some of you creative readers. Maybe one will allow you to get extra miles out of your rake, hoe or dibble.

\+ + +

Dear Al: Here's another way to use drained motor oil. I keep a bucket of sand in the entrance to my tool shed. The sand has been saturated with drained oil. Each time I bring a yard tool back in, I stick the metal part down into the sand. The sand is sharp enough to clean most dirt off of the blade. The oil leaves a film on the tool to prevent corrosion. — D.D.S.

\+ + +

Dear Al: Metal objects in the lawn can do damage to your power mower and are also very dangerous. I installed a bar magnet that was made to be a knife holder on the front of my mower. It picks up the nails and other items before I roll over them. — W.C.

In addition to a close visual inspection before mowing, this is a good idea.

Folk singer Guthrie ready to return to road

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Folk singer Arlo Guthrie says he's still feeling a little weak after a brief hospital stay for treatment of an inflamed pancreas. But he said he's looking forward to returning to his concert tour.

Guthrie, reached at a motel Sunday after his release, said he was feeling generally well.

He said he expected to be back on the road "probably about a week from Wednesday" after resuming his recuperation at home in Washington, Mass.

Guthrie

Guthrie, 34, son of the late folk singer and balladwriter Woody Guthrie, was admitted to the Health Sciences Center Hospital at the University of British Columbia after acute pain forced him to quit halfway through a concert Wednesday night.

Hoffman

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Yippie leader Abbie Hoffman has discovered that having money is not always an asset.

Hoffman, convicted on cocaine possession charges and currently in a work-release program, broke a rule forbidding him to have money and has lost his weekend freedom, the Daily News reported Sunday.

When Hoffman returned to the Lincoln Correctional Center Friday night after a day of working at a drug treatment facility, a guard checked his living quarters and found $144.07 in a briefcase and $10 in a shirt pocket, according to the News.

"No one is allowed to have money here," a state Correction Department spokesman said. Hoffman reportedly will be given no more free time, pending a hearing.

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, still in a hospital recovering from gunshot wounds, says he's praying for peace in Lebanon and other places "where destruction, mourning and suffering upset the peaceful coexistence of the people."

In a taped message played Sunday for about 10,000 people gathered in St. Peter's Square, the pontiff also asked for prayers for kidnap victims. His message singled out Roberto Peci, whom Italy's Red Brigade terrorists have threatened to kill.

John Paul has been in Gemelli hospital recovering from wounds he suffered in an attack May 13 and a virus doctors have linked to blood transfusions.

Baez

NEW YORK (AP) — Joan Baez, recently returned from a six-country tour of Latin America that she says was marked by hostility from ruling right-wing regimes, says she wished she would hav been arrested to amplify her message on human rights.

"I had really planned to enter these countries quietly," Ms. Baez told People magazine after her return home to Woodside, Calif. "I'm softer now than in the '60s. I didn't feel compelled to be strident in Latin America."

But in parts of Latin America, Baez said she was met by tear gas, harassment, police surveillance and death threats. She was tracked by police in Argentina, and Chilean officials confiscated film and audio casettes. Brazilian officials canceled a concert, but she was allowed to sing in Mexico, Nicaragua and Venezuela.

"Sometimes I felt like a pariah," said Ms. Baez, who set up Humanitas International in 1979 to focus attention on Vietnam prisoners. Recently the group has turned its attention to Latin America.

Public finds Diana's tears endearing on Di-Day Minus 2

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles finds his blushing bride's pre-nuptial jitters "hardly surprising" and Lady Diana Spencer's nervous tears have endeared her even more to her doting public two days before the royal wedding.

Clamoring cameramen forced the 20-year-old bride-to-be to flee weeping from Charles' polo game on Saturday. On Sunday, she hovered in the background at another match while the lensmen focused on her future mother-in-law and Nancy Reagan.

Diana's display of vulnerability brought only encouragement from the admiring British press.

"Chin up, cheer up, we're all behind you Lady Di," said Daily Express columnist Jean Rook.

As royal wedding mania mounted, the tabloid Sun called today "Di-Day Minus 2" and reminded Lady Diana of the "enormous reserve of love and respect" for her in the land.

It was a hectic weekend of royal activity and the pace picks up tonight when Queen Elizabeth II gives a glittering party at Buckingham Palace for the kings, queens, princes and other official guests — including Mrs. Reagan — attending Wednesday's ceremony at St. Paul's Cathedral.

The polo match at Windsor Great Park drew a crowd of 10,000 spectators Sunday instead of the usual few hundred. Wearing a special visor to protect his face, Charles scored a goal in the England reserve team's 10-5 victory over Spain.

In a TV interview at the polo ground, the 32-year-old prince explained his fiancee's sudden departure from the match the day before:

"It isn't much fun, actually, watching polo when you are being surrounded by people with their long lenses, poking them at you from all directions almost the entire time and then taking photos, which is quite easy to do, and saying 'looking bored.'

Lady Diana also was interviewed, replying to questions submitted by the British Press Association, and said she was fond of polo despite reports that she has asked Charles to give up the game. The prince dismissed that notion as "absolute rubbish."

A quiet young woman who shared a London flat with three other girls before royal romance made her an international celebrity, Diana admitted she was having difficulty adjusting to the glare of publicity.

"It has taken a bit of getting used to the cameras," she said.

Her pre-wedding nerves were "the same as any would-be bride," she said, adding that her goal is "being a good wife after July 29."

Meanwhile, thousands journeyed to the heart of London before 8 a.m. Sunday to watch the troops and the horse-drawn carriages rehearse the two-mile wedding procession from Buckingham Palace to St. Paul's Cathedral. No members of the royal family took part in the dry run.

The procession route bloomed in red, white and blue flags and bunting. One storefront displayed copies of the crown jewels.

Mile-long Oxford Street, the capital's best known shopping thoroughfare, was closed to all traffic for the first time in 40 years Sunday as 866 tables were laid end-to-end for a children's party. More than 5,000 disabled and disadvantaged children were treated to a royal wedding fun fair. The youngsters all signed a wedding card for Charles and Diana, a former kindergarten teacher.

'Uncle Dickie's house' to house honeymooners

By MARK S. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

ROMSEY, England (AP) — Prince Charles and his bride will spend their wedding night in a magnificent Georgian mansion filled with rare art works and antiques with more than 5,000 acres of Hampshire countryside to help give them privacy.

It's "Uncle Dickie's house" to the royal bridegroom and his father, Prince Philip.

The royal honeymoon will begin Wednesday at Broadlands, the country estate of the late Earl Mountbatten, Charles' great-uncle who was killed by an Irish Republican Army bomb in 1979.

Charles often went there as a boy to visit the dashing soldier-statesman who became a surrogate grandfather to him. The prince spent hours fishing for trout and salmon in the river Test, which meanders through a copse of trees a hundred yards from the mansion. It is said he first learned to love polo and horseback riding on the estate.

That he and Diana decided to spend their wedding night at Broadlands did not surprise the estate staff.

"They're looking for a little privacy, and here is the place to get it," said one member.

Charles' parents, Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip, also stayed at Broadlands on their wedding night in 1947.

Three months before his death, Earl Mountbatten opened the estate to the public to help pay the mounting maintenance costs. Charles paid the first admission.

"It is a treasure trove of beautiful things," said Mountbatten. "It is a pity not to let them be seen."

Broadlands, now owned by Mountbatten's grandson Lord Romsey, has become a popular tourist attraction. When the royal couple announced their honeymoon plans, the stream of visitors turned into a flood.

Many of these pre-nuptial visitors hurried past the four Van Dyck portraits in the dining room and the memorabilia of Mountbatten's military career and his tenure as India's last viceory.

They were mostly interested in the three state bedrooms — the Portico Room, the Green Room and what used to be known as the Lord Palmerston Room before a painting of the 19th-century prime minister who lived there was moved downstairs.

Asked which one the royal couple would occupy, a polite guide said: "Oh, Prince Charles will find a room. He knows this place very well, you know."

The estate was closed to the public Sunday evening so it could be readied for Wednesday.

Americans also playing royal souvenir game

By JANE SEE WHITE
Associated Press Writer

You can wash in soap imprinted with the pictures of Prince Charles and Lady Diana. You can dress in a wedding T-shirt and slip an imitation royal-engagement ring on your finger. You can eat off a commemorative plate and take a swig from a mug featuring the ear of his royal highness for a handle.

He's not our prince, and she's not our lady, but so what? A little royal romance and a lot of pomp and circumstance have stirred up the frustrated monarchist in many an American consumer's heart.

Like their British counterparts, Americans are madly buying souvenirs to mark the wedding Wednesday of Lady Diana Spencer and His Royal Highness Prince Charles.

"We're going crazy with this," said Brian Clewer, who owns the Continental Shop in Los Angeles' Ambassador Hotel. On sale are books, three different royal wedding T-shirts, soap imprinted with the royal couple's picture and imitation royal-engagement rings.

Most of the buyers are Americans, and Clewer says, "I guess they're frustrated monarchists."

Both British-made and American-made wedding souvenirs are on the market.

The British are exporting an estimated $156 million worth of memorabilia, ranging from Wedgewood commemorative plates to pencil cases, according to Judy Hyde at British Information Services in New York.

One thing the British aren't making is T-shirts with pictures of Charles and Diana. The British government judges that use of the royal faces "indiscreet," Ms. Hyde explains. So the British-made T-shirt shows "an enthusiastic crowd of wedding sightseers."

But other British memorabilia is more playful: a mug bearing a cartoon of the prince, with one of the prominent royal ears forming the handle. Also "C Loves D" stickers, "an extremely noisy football rattle" decorated with pictures of the royal couple and the British Union Jack and a $1,000 cannon with a 36-inch barrel, inscribed with their names and their wedding date.

For $2,300, Macy's will send you an imported yew wood dining table with inlay that shows Lady Diana and Prince Charles in profile with the prince of Wales' crest in the background. It's a reproduction of a mahogany table made by British cabinetmakers James Read and Bob Creighton as a royal wedding gift.

Royalty buffs have been reading up, and American book publishers are reporting hundreds of thousands of sales.

The books range from the "first time, the exclusive inside story" variety to elaborate geneologies with prices from $2.95 to $19.95.

Romance novelist Barbara Cartland, whose daughter is Lady Diana's stepmother, is already in print with "Romantic Royal Marriages," a $9.95 softcover handled by Beaufort Books in the United States.

"Debrett's Book of the Royal Wedding," by Hugo Vickers, a $19.95 hardcover, is being handled in this country by Viking. It was on bookstore shelves six weeks after the February announcement that Charles had chosen a bride.

Dance honor

NEW YORK (AP) — George Balanchine, director of the New York City Ballet, received awards from the Austrian Government and from the Jewish National Fund recently. He was honored by the Austrian government in recognition of his interest in choreographing to music by Austrian composers. The Jewish National Fund gave Balanchine its first annual Tarbug Award for his achievements in expanding the scope of dance throughout the world.

Odessan among four given alcoholism awards

AUSTIN (AP) — Bill Masterson of Odessa was among four Texans receiving awards Sunday from the Texas Commission on Alcoholism for "exemplary service to the people of Texas."

Other recipients were Jim Kimmel of Lubbock, Lidia Romero of Harlingen and R.E. "Tex" Ryan of Huntsville.

Kimmel took the lead in establishing the first alcohol detoxification center in Lubbock, according to Ross Newby, executive director of the Commission on Alcoholism.

Masterson recently completed his sixth year as a member of the commission, Mrs. Romero is director of Midway House for women in Harlingen, and Ryan recently retired after 12 years as director of the alcoholism-drug programs for the state prison system.

Five wildcats have been staked by area operators in Mitchell, Pecos, Reeves, Tom Green and Stonewall counties.

MITCHELL WILDCAT

Sun Oil Co., Abilene, will drill the 7,150-foot wildcat, No. 3 W.L. Ellwood Trust "B", 8 miles north of Silver.

They will sink the well 1/2 mile north-northwest of H.L. Hunt's dry hole, No. 1 Ellwood, abandoned September 8, 1948, at 7,454 feet. The Ellenberger formation was found at 7,134 feet in the Hunt well.

The project spots 1,980 feet from the south and west lines of section 13, block 12, H&TCRR survey.

PECOS PROSPECT

Tamarack petroleum Co., Inc., Midland, will sink a 3,100-foot wildcat 8 miles southeast of Fort Stockton.

Known as the No. 1 Crawford "28", it will be located 1 1/4 miles southeast of the dry hole San Jacinto No. 1 Wade et al, abandoned June 13, 1955, at a total depth of 4,507 feet.

The location is staked 660 feet from the north line, and 760 feet from the east line of section 28, block 131, T&STLRR survey.

Members of the Greenpeace organization cruise near the exploratory oil-drilling rig Zapata Saratoga on Georges Bank Saturday off the Massachusetts coast. The oil-drilling rig is operating for Shell Oil to determine if there are commercially viable quanitites of petroleum or gas beneath the fishing grounds. The inflatable boats were launched from the organization's nearby trawler.

Hance sticks neck out

By MARGOT HORNBLOWER
(c) 1981, The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Poor Kent Hance. His face has broken into a rash again and even a visit to the Oval Office didn't seem to help.

"I've stuck my neck way out there," the Democratic congressman from Texas who is co-sponsoring President Reagan's tax bill said last week, before heading to Camp David to discuss the bill this weekend. "I don't like being on the other side."

The last time Hance broke out in a nervous rash was six weeks ago when he defected to the Republican side, deserting his fellow Democrats in Congress and risking his political future to lead what he hoped would be a Southern conservative stampede to endorse the president's tax package. "Making that decision was a traumatic experience," he recalls.

Now, with Wednesday's House vote too close to call, the lanky Texan is plainly worried. The Democrats have loaded their bill with sweeteners to appeal to oil-state and business-oriented conservatives and, although the administration has responded in kind, it is still questionable whether Reagan can attract enough Democrats to achieve the kind of dramatic victory on taxes that he managed on budget cuts.

Much has been written of late about the "boll weevils," those 40-odd Southern Democrats who are said to hold the balance of power in the House of Representatives. But the story of Hance, until just recently an obscure second-term congressman from Lubbock, indicates that life in the limelight isn't always as comfortable as it seems.

A slender, balding man with an eager smile and a nimble wit, Hance, 38, won a seat on the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee this year by portraying himself to House Democratic leaders as a team player. When he turned around and lent his name to the Reagan tax bill before the Democrats had drafted their own legislation, fellow party members were furious.

"Disloyal, perfidious, treacherous apostates," fumed Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, of Hance and his colleague, Phil Gramm, who sponsored Reagan's budget bill. Leland and several other Democrats asked that Hance and Gramm be stripped of their committee assignments. Some Democrats have snubbed Hance in the elevator.

Industry officials say

Report shows nuke regulations work

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nuclear industry officials say the fact the nation's atomic power plants reported 3,804 incidents of equipment problems, design flaws and human error during 1980 does not mean nuclear reactors are unsafe.

They say the reporting of even miniscule problems shows that a complex regulatory system is working well to insure the public's protection.

For the second year, Critical Mass, an anti-nuclear group associated with Ralph Nader, has compiled a scorecard for each of the country's 69 licensed reactors based on reports power companies are required to file with the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

The 3,804 reported incidents ranged from "the relatively minor — such as improperly calibrated monitoring devices, to the very serious — such as leaks of thousands of gallons of radioactive coolant," Critical Mass said.

This year's total is a 20 percent increase over 1979 and provides a picture of an industry relying on a system "fraught with frequent cases of human error, chronic defects in essential safety equipment, unresolved design problems and countless equipment failures," the study charged.

The report said 57 percent of the incidents were caused by equipment failures, 20 percent by human error, 16 percent by design flaws and 7 percent by other causes.

The Tennessee Valley Authority's Sequoyah plant had the highest number of incidents at 238 even though the plant only operated for 11 percent of the year. Georgia Power's Hatch II was second with 157 incidents, followed by Toledo Edison's Davis Besse reactor with 121.

The nuclear industry attacked the report as a meaningless numbers game, saying that since the NRC requires a wide variety of things to be reported, simply adding up totals is not a proper indication of how safe a particular plant is.

But Richard Udell, author of the study, said: "There is no such thing as an insignificant mishap involving nuclear technology. The stuck valve that precipitated the accident at Three Mile Island was originally diagnosed as a minor event."

Paul Turner, a spokesman for the Atomic Industrial Forum, an industry group, said the high number of incidents was proof the regulatory process works.

"I think the industry's safety record stands on its own. There was no nuclear-related injury to the public or operators. That is the bottom line," he said.

The NRC also took issue with the Critical Mass study, calling it "seriously flawed by an inconsistent use of data."

Carl Michelson, head of the NRC office that examines the incident reports, said half the increase came from four new plants which were not operating in 1979. He said the newer plants are required to report even more to the NRC as a result of tighter regulations passed in the wake of Three Mile Island.

NRC officials said they planned to release their own scorecard of nuclear reactors in about a month which would give a much truer picture of performance because it would assess not only the number but the types of problems the reactors are experiencing.

The Critical Mass study said two of the most serious incidents — failure of control rods to work at the Browns Ferry III reactor in Alabama and loss of 43,000 gallons of radioactive water at Crystal River III in Florida — might have been prevented if lessons learned from operating experiences had been acted on.

Other specific 1980 incidents listed in the report included release of radioactive iodine-131 during refueling of Fitzpatrick I in New York; an employee at Oyster Creek I in New Jersey disabling a cooling pump by improperly standing on a pipe; and tests showing mussels near the Pilgrim I plant in Massachusetts with high concentrations of radioactive Cobalt-60.

Other plants reporting more than 100 incidents included Georgia Power's Hatch I unit, 119; Arkansas Power & Light's Arkansas II unit, 118; Carolina Power & Light's Brunswick II, 118; Virginia Electric Power's North Anna I, 117; Power Authority's Fitzpatrick I in New York, 105; and Duquesne Light's Beaver Valley I in Pennsylvania, 102.

Shell drill stuck at 120 feet

HYANNIS, Mass. (AP) — Shell Oil temporarily halted drilling for oil and natural gas on Georges Bank after a drill bit on the rig Zapata Saratoga became imbedded in rock at 120 feet into the ocean floor, a company spokesman said.

Shell spokesman Norman Altstedter said the problem Sunday was a common one in offshore oil exploration. He said it could take several days to free the bit and resume drilling.

Shell and Exxon both started drilling Friday in the Georges Bank, located about 175 miles southeast of Cape Cod. Each well can take up to 200 days to complete.

The start of drilling came after years of legal delays sought by environmental groups worried about the impact of drilling on the rich Grorges Bank fishing grounds.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠83 ♡Q872 ◇AK53 ♣1063
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Not only do you have a maximum no trump response, but in support of hearts your hand is worth 11 points. Slam is a distinct possibility, and you must tell partner about your newfound zeal. Cue-bid four diamonds, then support hearts next.

Q.2—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♡J1097532 ◇KQ52 ♣93
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	4 ♠	Dble
Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Partner's double of four spades is not for takeout—had he wanted you to bid, he could have overcalled with four no trump. Partner is simply showing a good hand, not a spade stack. However, your hand is so offensively oriented and will probably mesh well with partner's high cards that we recommend that you take out to five hearts.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ87543 ♡95 ♣A843
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	2 ◇
Dble	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 NT	3 ◇	Pass	Pass
Dble	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—When you removed partner's double of two diamonds to two spades, you warned him that you had a weak defensive hand with a long spade suit. Despite the fact that he is armed with this information, he has elected to double three diamonds. Trust partner—after all, you have an ace more than he has a right to expect.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK1073 ♡9863 ◇8 ♣AKJ
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ◇	Dble	2 ♡

What action do you take?
A.—It is obvious that the opponents are in trouble. You have more than your quota of defensive tricks and, even though you have only four low trumps, East is going to have trouble managing the hand. Partner's double is a warning that he is short in spades, so don't rebid your suit and risk turning a large profit into a small loss. Double.

Q.5—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠9 ♡85 ◇KQ1085432 ♣J6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
3 ◇	3 ♡	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠	Dble	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Don't tell your story twice! Your first bid described a hand with long diamonds and little or no defense. Nevertheless, your partner elected to double four spades. He must be able to defeat that contract in his own hand, and he won't appreciate it if you let the opponents off the hook by pulling to five diamonds. Pass.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South with 60 on score you hold:
♠AK982 ♡J76 ◇A105 ♣Q9
The bidding has proceeded:

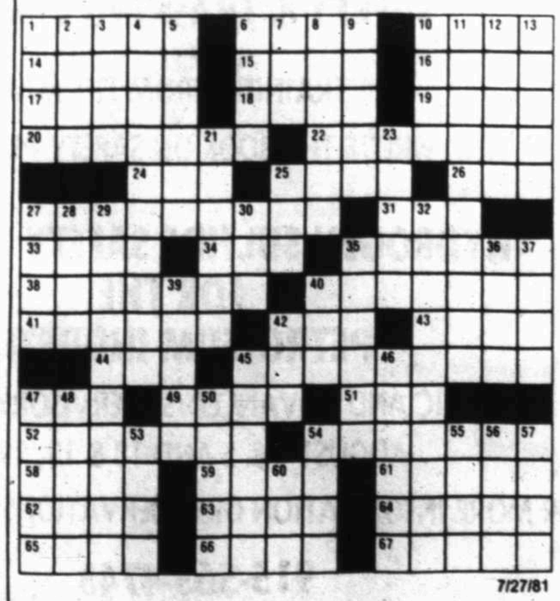

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Despite your 60-point part score, partner has forced you to bid again. If you bid three no trump now, partner will assume that you have substantial values in diamonds and little in his suits, which is not the case. Your hand is better for suit play than no trump, so we suggest you give preference to four clubs. Since you did not raise immediately, partner will not expect more trump support than you have.

Record performance earns Bradley Open

Whitworth disappointed; but leaves as first lady millionaire

LA GRANGE, Ill. (AP) — Pat Bradley left the U.S. Women's Open holding the trophy as champion, and Kathy Whitworth left disappointed but holding her head high as the first millionaire on the women's golf tour.

The 41-year-old Whitworth failed for the 23rd time to win the U.S. Women's Open, as two comparative youngsters, Bradley and Beth Daniel, put on one of the most torrid battles in the tournament's history.

BRADLEY, 30, breezed over the La Grange Country Club course Sunday with a closing 6-under-par 66 — the lowest score ever shot by a woman on the 6,204-yard layout — and shattered the women's open 72-hole scoring record with 9-under-par 279.

Daniel, 24, took second place with birdies on the last two holes for a 68 and a 280 that matched the former women's open record set last year in Nashville, Tenn., by Amy Alcott.

WHITWORTH, WHO had three subpar rounds in a dedicated attempt to capture the only title to elude her throughout her career, began wilting with successive bogeys on the No. 3 and No. 4 holes. Finally, when her chances already had drained away, she hit the water on the 155-yard 17th for a double bogey-5.

She finished third with a 74 for a 284, good for $9,500, which boosted her career earnings to $1,008,469.

Bradley's $22,000 first prize put her first on the 1981 money-winning list with $154,182. She replaces Nancy Lopez-Melton, who did not start the final round because of a painful right shoulder problem.

Whitworth entered the finale Sunday with a 1-stroke lead over Bonnie Lauer, who shot a 76 for 287 to share fourth with Cynthia Hill, who finished with 72.

Tying for sixth with 290s were Marlene Floyd, JoAnne Carner, Donna Caponi and Patty Sheehan.

BRADLEY BROKE into tears as she left the 18th green as champion, saying, "It is the greatest moment of my life."

She chipped into the hole from six feet for a birdie on the 13th, and sank a 70-foot birdie putt on the 15th.

Holding a 1-stroke ede over Daiel going to the par-5 18th, Bradley pitched her third shot within 2½ feet of the cup. Daniel, in the rough, pitched six inches from the cup.

The two approaches were typical of the golf that the pair shot in their bid for the crown.

Daniel had battled back from a 2-stroke deficit after 16 holes by dropping an 8-foot putt for a birdie-2 on the 17th.

"BETH AND I battled from No. 1 through No. 18, and it was just incredible," Bradley said. "It was fortunate it rained and the condition was good for playing a good round. But when I started on the first hole with the gloomy windy weather, I was just hoping for a par. But as it turned out a par wouldn't have done me any good."

Whitworth said she was disappointed in not winning the title, but "because of the overnight rain, the course played long for me and it was an uphill battle."

"I'm glad I reached the million-dollar milestone in the U.S. Open, but it is just a consolation really," she said. "I'm glad it's over with. I've been on the tour a long time, and I think I will make some more money. There are a lot of good players out there who will take far less time than it took me to make their million."

Baseball talks still going in circles

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The executive board of the striking Major League Players Association met in Chicago today to discuss the owners' latest proposal. But it was unlikely they would find much of that proposal to their liking.

"It's just a smokescreen on the old proposal," said Detroit Tigers player representative Milt Wilcox about the owners' latest offer. That offer would require professional player compensation for ranking free agents in the upper 20 percent of the performance criteria on a two-year average, rather than 25 percent, as previously proposed by the owners. The players walked out June 12 solely over the issue of free agent compensation.

"It's just a bunch of propaganda and the owners don't state what the long-term effects of it might be," added Wilcox, a pitcher.

ONE OF the owners, Texas Rangers boss Eddie Chiles, was thinking about the long-term effects of the strike, which is in its 46th day, with 552 games lost.

"The future of baseball is on the line, to a certain extent," said Chiles. "How we handle this is going to determine if we come out of it and continue to get better ... or get worse. A phony, fictitious settlement really wouldn't do anybody any good. It would be a step in a downhill plunge.

"If we don't address the real problems, then sooner or later we're going to have to say adios to baseball.

"We have two major forces here, the owners and the players, and we have to learn to live together because we're dependent on each other. We're all in the same boat. You can't sink half a boat and expect the other half to float on ahead. Right now we're both going down together."

The player reps of the 26 teams got together to be briefed on the owners' latest proposal by Marvin Miller, executive director of the union. Though a few players have voiced dissatisfaction with the situation, support for Miller is very solid among the players.

AND MILLER has said the executive board won't recommend acceptance of the newest offer.

"I think it's a showdown right now," said Braves pitcher Phil Niekro, who was to be in Chicago for the meeting. "We are going to have to come up with something pretty exciting to get fans back in the ball park."

While the players stand behind Miller, the owners haven't broken ranks either and are backing their Player Relations Committee and its head and chief negotiator, Ray Grebey.

"We're behind Ray Grebey and the PRC 100 percent," said Detroit General Manager Jim Campbell. "I think the offer proves that the owners have tried to get something on the table that is palatable to both sides. "There undoubtedly are things in it that they (the players) don't like and there are things in it we don't like.

"But I think it's a real honest effort to get something on the table that both sides could accept."

As the impasse continues — no further negotiations have been scheduled — the possibility that the season will not resume looms larger.

"HOW LONG can we stay out on strike," asked Chiles. "and still have any meaningful baseball the rest of this year? I think we've only got about a week or 10 days left to settle our strike. If we don't settle it by then, we'll have no baseball."

Hi-Jr tourney opens tonight

Midland Magcobar faces Crane in 1st clash

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

With the Midland Cubs out of town, Cubs Stadium usually sets empty. That will not be the case for the next three days as the District Hi-Junior baseball tournament gets underway tonight with the Midland Magcobar Lions and Crain in the opening game of the double elimination meet which also features Odessa El Paso Product.

Crane will send its top hurler, righthander Johnny Fox, against Manager Dell Trollinger's Lions. Trollinger is expected to counter with Adam Montgomery or Eddy Najar.

FIRST PITCH is set for 7:30 p.m. with the winner of tonight's contest taking on the Odessa squad at 6 p.m. Tuesday. The loser Tuesday will be faced with playing against Monday's first round loser at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The championship will be determined Wednesday night. Two games could be played since the tournament is double elimination, but it could be decided in the 6 p.m. contest. The second contest, if needed, will begin at 8:30 p.m.

Crane, 8-3, builds much of its attack around Fox, Tomy Aguilar and Nayo Carrasco, a pickup player from McCamey. Fox and Augilar lead Crane in the hitting department — hitting around .420. Fox has crashed out two homeruns and has driven in 10 RBIs while Aguilar, a slick fielding shortstop, has knocked in 12 RBIs to lead the club in that department.

CARRASCO IS a stablizing factor in the outfield and is also a capable pitcher said manager Sammy Rodriguez.

Crane suffered a serious blow in the final regular season game. The Golden Cranes lost their starting catcher when he broke his leg sliding into third base. Rodriguez said the injury hurt his club some defensively but was sure the replacements he had would do a fine job.

Rodriguez commented on his team Sunday, saying, "We play real good defense in the infield but our outfield is a little shakey." He added that he is counting on the players from McCamey to bolster the outfield's defense.

FACING CRANE, will be a Midland team has carries a team batting average of .318 into the opening fray. Dell Trollinger's troops are lead in hitting by Midland High's sophomore sensation Tim Davis with 14 RBIs and a .444 mark. Right on Davis' heels, is Lee High's young flash Barry Blackwell, a pickup player from the MWL Cowboys, with a .400 average. Additional hitting support comes from first baseman Rene Payan with 11 RBIs and a .385 batting average while third baseman Mike Mercurio hit a solid .397 with 10 RBIs. Bruce Sears, a fine defensive catcher, has plated 10 runs for the Lions.

Magcobar comes into the tournament with a 10-6 record including a playoff win over the MWL Tool Cowboys which gave the Lions the league championship.

Pitching should be a strong suit for the Lions. Heading the Lion hill crew is Montgomery and Najar, who have won four games each while Davis has pocketed six saves. For additional pitching depth, Trollinger has picked up Kerry Robertson, four wins, from the Mustang Mud Mustangs and Blackwell, four wins, from the Cowboys.

EXPECTED TO start for the Lions tonight are Sears behind the plate; Payan at first; Dennis Matta at second; Davis at shortstop and Murcuiro at third. In the outfield, Blackwell and Jose Carrasco, pickup from J.I. O'Neill Shamrocks, are solid defensive performers with a third outfield starter to be determined at game time. Tony Carrasco, Mark Schneider and any of the pichers could see duty in the outfield.

Waiting in the wings to play Monday's winner is a young Odessa club. Manager A.N. Timmons says, "We are real young; mostly 15 year olds." Even though Odessa is young, they put an experienced team on the field. Most of the youngers players were on the team that captured the Pony League title in Odessa last season.

TIMMONS ADDED that he has five young right handed hurlers who will all be back next season. Pitchers on the Odessa squad are Fred Mills, Kevin Timmons, Craig Steen, Tommy Tyler and Boyd Cowan.

Odessa comes into the meet with the best record, 10-2, but Timmons noted, "We have had to scratch to get here." He added, "We don't have a superstar. I wish we did."

The three teams are battling for a berth in the State Hi-Junior tournament to be played in Tyler starting Aug. 3.

Two runs in 10th lift Cubs

JACKSON, Miss. — The Midland Cubs scored two unearned runs in the 10th inning here Sunday night to take an 8-6 victory over the Jackson Mets and maintained a firm hold on the Texas League's Western Division second half lead.

In the 10th, the Cubs handed Jose Rodriquez (0-2) his second loss in two nights since signing with the Mets out of the Mexican League.

JACK UPTON opened the 10th with a single, Dave Owen walked and Joe Carter lined a shot off the glove of third baseman Greg Pastors for a two base error, scoring Upton. Randy LaVigne completed the scoring with a sacrifice fly as Owen scored from third.

The Cubs now lead the series by a 2-1 margin and have defeated the Mets in six of the eight games the teams have played against each other.

As has been the case in this series, Jackson jumped to a 2-0 lead in the second inning. Rusty Tillman, who has a 13 game hitting streak going, doubled to open the second, Pastors singled to bring in Tillman and Al Pedrique later singled to score Pastors.

The Cubs came back to knot the score when LaVigne hit a shot that cleared the left center wall for his eighth homer of the year and Upton followed in the top of the fourth with his 15th homer of the season. Upton has homered twice in this series.

JACKSON BOUNCED back for a 4-2 lead in the bottom of the fourth when Marvell Wynne singled and scored on Ed Cuervo's fifth homer of the year. Wynne's single gave him a 16 game hitting streak, tying the Mets' club record.

The Cubs tied it again in the sixth on singles by Dave Pagel, Javier Fierro, Mel Hall and a sacrifice fly by Upton. Then the Cubs led 5-4 in the seventh when LaVigne scored on a throwing error in the infield.

The Mets then got two more for a 6-5 lead in the bottom half of the seventh while chasing starter Mike Thompson and relief pitcher Phil Nastu. Cuervo and Pedrique singled to chase Thompson and Shake Moore greeted Nastu with a single to score Cuervo. Nastu then walked Rick Poe and the Cubs then brought in Randy Clark, who walked Sergio Beltre with the bases loaded.

THE CUBS tied it in the ninth when Pagel scored pinch runner Owen with an infield single and won it in the 10th.

Clark (6-8) went on to win the game. It marked the third time in this series that a starter has not figured in the decision.

The two teams play again at 7:30 p.m. today with Craig Lefferts, who has won his last two outings, going against 0-5 Chuck Davis. Lefferts is 9-9 on the year.

The series ends Tuesday before the Cubs travel to Little Rock, Ark., to face the Arkansas Travelers for a five-game series. The Cubs then will return home Aug. 4 for a key series against first half champion San Antonio.

Saint ace playing in fear of health

ByThe Associate Press

Wes Chandler is one of the most feared wide receivers in the National Football League. But Wes Chandler is playing in fear.

The ace receiver of the New Orleans Saints has suffered severe headaches, dizziness and nausea throughout training camp. He has been thoroughly examined by doctors, who found nothing seriously wrong with him. And, Sunday, Chandler said he felt much better than after recent workouts.

"I FEEL very fragile," Chandler said. "It's like fighting a shadow. I thank God for giving me the strength to be here. I want to be part of it all.

"If by chance something unfortunate stops me between now and the end of the season, it's just one of those things."

Chandler said the symptoms began about three weeks ago as he prepared for preseason camp. He reported to camp a day late after awaiting the results of medical examinations and checked in at 180 pounds, about 10 pounds under his playing weight.

In the offseason, after he ballooned to 201 pounds on home cooking, Chandler dieted and took off 23 pounds. But he couldn't stop losing the weight.

THEN THE headaches and dizziness began, he said.

"About three weeks ago I started getting the dizziness and a lot of migraine headaches. The headaches would last two or three seconds, then go. Moments later, I'd start getting dizzy.

"It made my eyesight real bad. The dizziness and the headaches became more rapid, and a week and a half ago they became all-day. I was expecting to have the headaches all day. I was trying to train and they were pounding and pounding.

"I'd stop to rest and a moment later I'd get dizzy. When I push myself, and I stop to rest and catch my breath, everything turns bleach white."

Despite the problems, Chandler continues to work out and has looked as awesome as usual in beating defensive backs in practice, even though doctors told him to take it easy.

Nehemiah, Foster put on class show

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A gusty wind blew away any chance for a world record, but that didn't stop Renaldo Nehemiah and Greg Foster from putting on a world class show Sunday at the National Sports Festival.

The classic confrontation in the 110-meter high hurdles stole the spotlight during the rain-punctuated third of six days of action at the Festival, a non-Olympic year forum for American athletes in 33 winter and summer Olympic sports.

Foster, who badly beat his archrival on May 10 at the UCLA-Pepsi Invitational at Los Angeles, refuses to talk to either Nehemiah or the media. But Nehemiah wasn't holding anything back after tying his own world record of 13.00 seconds.

The wind reading for the dramatic meeting, run on the rain-softened track at Sunnycrest Park, was 3.41 meters per second. The allowable wind speed for a possible record must not exceed 2.00 meters per second.

In another top performance Sunday, Pete Pfitzinger of Ithaca, N.Y., took the marathon in a course record 2:15:20.

Laura DeWald of Arlington, Va., was 14th overall in the 42-runner field and the top woman finisher, at 2:47.06, in the first official marathon for women under the auspices of the U.S. Olympic Committee. The women's marathon will be included in the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles.

In the women's 800 meters, Madeline Manning-Mims, the 1968 Olympic champion, beat 17-year-old prep sensation Kim Gallagher of Upper Darby, Pa., in 2:01.99. Gallagher came home second at 2:02.99.

The unheralded East team clinched the Festival water polo championship with a 6-6 tie against the favored West squad.

The second day of ice hockey competition saw the Central team wallop New England 8-5 behind two goals apiece from Bill Rothstein of Grand Rapid, Mich., and Bruce Aikens of Rochester, Minn.

Great Lakes defeated the Midwest 6-4 in the second game, setting up a gold medal confrontation Wednesday night between the unbeaten, 2-0, Great Lakes and Central teams.

In the basketball tournament, the South beat the East 94-93 on Jim Master's 20-foot shot from the left corner with two seconds remaining.

Both team are 1-1 in the round-robin competition.

The Midwest baseball team had its first victory in three starts, coming from behind to beat the previously unbeaten West 4-3.

Hanauer's hydroplane wins

KENNEWICK, Wash. (AP) — Chip Hanauer and his Squire Shop, hiding in the spray of Miss Budweiser, slipped past the frontrunner in the final turn to win the Columbia Cup Regatta for unlimited hydroplanes.

In Sunday's final heat, Hanauer crossed the finish line one-half second ahead of veteran pilot Dean Chenoweth in the Miss Budweiser, officials said.

From the start and nearly to the finish, it appeared that Bill Muncey's Atlas Van Lines would handily beat the other thunderboats.

In the first lap of the final heat, Muncey tied the course one-lap record, 133.730 mph, which he had set last year.

He led for four of the five laps in the final heat until his boat blew an engine. He managed to creep around the course to finish fifth, ahead of the Tempus, piloted by Bob Maschmed.

Finishing third was Milner Irvin in the Frank Kenney Toyota-Volvo, followed by Scott Pierce in the Oh Boy Oberto.

Brenda Jones, 23, the first woman driver in modern unlimited racing history, failed to qualify for the final championship heat. She finished one preliminary heat in the Miss KYYX, finishing fifth among five boats.

Wyoming Oil Leases To Be Awarded in August

CARSON CITY, NV — Hundreds of average citizens will acquire oil lease rights in upcoming public awards conducted by the State of Wyoming. Some may achieve overnight wealth by selling their rights to oil companies and retaining lifelong royalties on any oil or gas production.

Incredibly, most will risk no more than $25 and a minimal filing fee to enter the little-known program that offers every American the opportunity to compete on an equal basis with giant oil companies for leases of public lands.

Information and entry details are available from The H. Kirk Sanders Co., Public Lands Division, 607 E. Spear St., Carson City, Nevada 89701. Enclose $1 for postage and handling.

Official entry cards will be rushed by return mail to permit the timely filing of entries before cut-off date.

Four to enter pro football shrine

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Willie Davis and Jim Ringo will join five former Green Bay Packers and their late coach, Vince Lombardi, in the Pro Football Hall of Fame before the Cleveland Browns and the Atlanta Falcons open the exhibition season Saturday.

DAVIS AND Ringo, along with George Blanda and oldtimer Morris "Red" Badgro, will be inducted into the sport's shrine in ceremonies on the steps of the Hall of Fame.

Their enshrinement will raise the number of former greats in the Hall of Fame to 110.

For the first time, two defending divisional champions will be matched in the accompanying preseason game that will attract a sellout of more than 22,000 in Fawcett Stadium, with millions more watching on ABC-TV (2:30 p.m. CDT).

THE BROWNS, led by NFL Player of the Year Brian Sipe, won the American Football Conference's rugged Central Division last season. Meanwhile, the Falcons grabbed their first National Football Conference Western Division crown behind Steve Bartkowski.

This will be the Browns' third appearance in the Hall of Fame game. They lost to the Pittsburgh Steelers 16-7 in 1963 and four years later bowed to the Philadelphia Eagles 28-13. The Faclons fell to the Packers 38-24 in 1969.

Of this year's enshrinees, only Blanda, who played pro football longer than anyone else, is being inducted in his first year of eligibility, five seasons after he ended his career as a place-kicker with the Oakland Raiders.

IN HIS 26 NFL seasons, the 12th-round draft choice out of the University of Kentucky, a Youngwood, Pa., native, became the leading scorer in the game's history. He also threw more than 4,000 passes in his 840-game career that ended just before his 49th birthday.

Davis, a native of Lisbon, La., and another Grambling College product, will become the third member of the great Packers' defensive teams from the 1960s to join the shrine.

Davis was Green Bay's regular defensive left end for a full decade, winning all-league recognition for five years. He also played in six NFL Championship contests and the first two Super Bowls.

RINGO, A durable center, participated in the Packers' first two NFL championship seasons. The graduate of Syracuse, a seventh-round selection in 1953, spent his last four years with the Eagles. When he retired in 1967, the native of Orange, N.J., had appeared in 183 straight games, a record at that time.

At 78, Badgro becomes the oldest person to join the Hall of Fame. The 45 years between his final game in 1936 and his enshrinement also marks the longest waiting period for any of them.

The product of the University of Southern California, from Orillia, Wash., was outstanding on both ends of the field with the New York Giants in the 1930s. Still, he specialized as a big-play receiver, helping the Giants into the 1933 title game.

Special Effort wins 2nd leg of QH triple crown

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Special Effort, the brilliant 2-year-old with seemingly unmatched speed, is on the verge of making quarter horse racing history.

Special Effort ran his winning streak to six straight races Sunday with an impressive victory in the $668,340 Rainbow Futurity at Ruidoso Downs.

COUPLED WITH his victory in the Kansas Futurity last month, Special Effort becomes only the second horse ever to win the first two legs of the quarter horse industry's version of the triple crown. The next and toughest challenge will be the $1.5 million All-American Futurity on Labor Day.

No horse has ever won all three futurities and only one other, Tiny's Gay in 1974, won both the Kansas and Rainbow. Tiny's Gay, however, was beaten in the All-American by Easy Date and since then no horse has come close to taking all three races.

IN WINNING the $232,-169 first place purse in the Rainbow, Special Effort upped his earnings to $496,195. A victory in the All-American, with a first place prize of more than $500,000, also would make Special Effort the first quarter horse ever to earn more than $1 million in racing.

Johnie Goodman, the trainer of Special Effort, is understandably impressed with the colt, but isn't about to get overly confident.

"We'll do everything we can to win it and take home the triple crown," said Goodman after Special Effort had sped to a one and a half length victory over Winkum and Summer Encounter in the Rainbow. "But you can't predict what will happen in horse racing."

AND JOCKEY W.R. Hunt, who says Special Effort is getting tougher with each race, is starting to feel the pressure of having an unbeaten and potentially history-making horse on his hands.

"Any horse can get beat," said Hunt, "and if you go into a race thinking you can't be beat, you usually do."

IN THE Rainbow, he broke on top in the 400-yard sprint and was never seriously challenged, with Winkum and Summer Encounter.

Mistrail motion denied by judge in Raider trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A National Football League motion for a mistrial in the antitrust lawsuit brought against the NFL by the Oakland Raiders has been denied by the presiding judge — during a Sunday session with only attorneys on hand in federal court.

Most of the three-hour, 22-minute hearing was devoted to discussion of the instructions Judge Harry Pregerson will give to the jury, which is expected to begin deliberations Wednesday. The jury has heard 50 days of testimony in the trial that began May 11.

The Raiders and the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission brought the lawsuit after the Raiders were blocked in an attempt to move from Oakland to Los Angeles in 1980 — the same year tht Los Angeles Rams vacated the Coliseum to relocate 35 miles away at Anaheim Stadium.

It was not until the final seven minutes of Sunday's court session that Pregerson dealt with the mistrial motion, NFL Attorney Patrick Lynch said.

On Friday the judge issued a partial directed verdict to throw out the NFL's contention that it is a partnership — a single entity — and not 28 separate corporations.

Swimming star feels it's about time to retire

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Swimmer Jill Sterkel, the 50-meter freestyle world record-holder who was the first American to win three gold medals at the World University Games, says she is not sure she will be competing much longer.

A WINNER of four national titles and 1976 Olympic medalist, the University of Texas star said she has been swimming since she was five years old and knows that it is a young person's sport.

"I've been at it a long time and I don't know if I can swim this well for a lot longer," she said.

"I'll be 23 for Los Angeles," she added, referring to the 1984 Olympics Games. "I'm not sure I'll be that good then."

IN APRIL she clocked a 25.79 in the 50-meter freestyle to set a world record.

Earlier in the week Sterkel won gold medals here in the 100-meter freestyle and the 100-meter butterfly, but she says she still wasn't happy with her times.

"This is more like sprint work for the nationals," she said.

Sterkel captured her third gold medal and set her third meet record at the student competition Sunday, winning the women's 200-meter freestyle in 2 minutes 3.90 seconds. The Hacienda Heights, Calif., swimmer also set records in the 100-meter butterfly and 100-meter freestyle earlier this week.

IN BASKETBALL, the United States and Soviet Union each battled their way into the medals round. The Americans downed Mexico 88-58, and the Soviets eliminated Canada 77-73 in a bitterly fought game which the Canadians protested.

JOHN PINONE of Villanova paced the American victory with 18 points. The United States, which edged the Soviet Union 113-107 in double overtime on Saturday, will play either Yugoslavia, Cuba or Romania next.

"I think it will be a heck of a test; not so good for the coaches, but great for the fans," U.S. Coach Dr. Tom Davis of Boston College said of a possible rematch with the Soviets.

It was a rematch for which the Soviets nearly did not qualify. They had to beat Canada by more than three points in Sunday's game, and they pulled out all the stops to do it, including some that Canadian Coach Jack Donohue did not like.

Donohue was particularly angry over a play in which he alleged that Ivan Iovaisa of the Soviet team elbowed Canadian Howard Kelsey. Kelsey wound up with a bloody lip and was called for a foul.

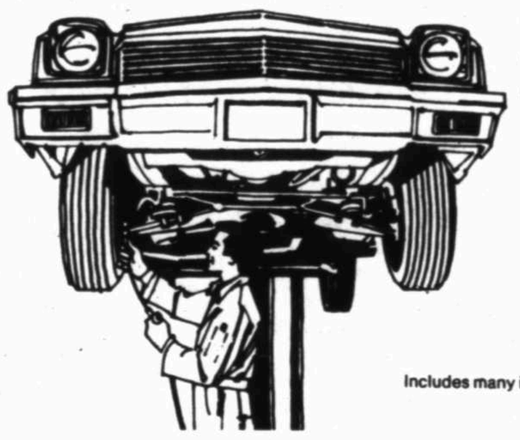

U.S. RUNNERS added three gold medals on the final day of track and field competition at the 23 August Stadium, highlighted by Douglas Padilla's victory in the 5,000 meters in 13:49.95.

Americans also captured both the men's and women's 400-meter relay events behind sparking anchor legs by Calvin Smith and Benita Fitzgerald.

Also in track, Italy's Sara Simeoni continued her domination of the women's high jump, winning with a leap of 6 feet 5¼ inches. Romania's Diona Melinte won the women's 800 meters, while Andreas Hauck captured the men's 800.

China denounces Soviets over border dispute

PEKING (AP) — China declared in a sharp denunciation of the Soviet Union today that Soviet "expansionism and gunpowder" are to blame for the failure to solve the Sino-Soviet border dispute and normalize relations.

"The Soviet military threat and hegemonic policy directed against China constitutes the key obstacle to the settling of the Sino-Soviet boundary question as well as to the normalization of the two countries' state relations," said the foreign language weekly Peking Review.

The magazine reprinted the first installment of a article entitled "The Crux of the Sino-Soviet Boundary Question," by Li Huichuan, former deputy head to the now-defunct Sino-Soviet normalization talks and a former member of the Chinese Embassy staff in Moscow."

It accuses the Kremlin of refusing to accept the old Czarist treaties in which China gave up more than 900,000 square miles of disputed border territory to the Soviets. China, the article said, made a major concession in its willingness to accept those treaties as the basis of a negotiated boundary settlement.

The article claimed the Soviet Union is trying to grab more Chinese territory, and it denounced the Kremlin for stationing one million troop along the Sino-Soviet frontier.

"History has been mangled beyond recognition by the Soviet Union," the article said.

It said Soviet rhetoric of historical claims to the border "is not only vilainous but dangerous, and reeks of expansionism and gunpowder."

The article already was published in a Chinese journal and excerpts were published last month by the official Xinhua news agency and the People's Daily newspaper.

The first appearance of the article prompted specualtion by a few observers that China was trying to offer an olive branch to the Soviet Union in a bid to reopen the border talks. But today's repetition of the hard line appeared to rule out such a move.

"The common thread is that China will not negotiate under threat," said one Western diplomat, who asked not to be identified. "There isn't one glimmer of optimism in the article. It's very cold, icy."

Police rescue kidnapped boy

TOKYO (AP) — The 7-year-old son of nightclub hostess was found unharmed today a week after he was kidnapped near his grandfather's home. Police said they arrested an Okinawan butcher and claimed he confessed to the crime.

The boy's safe return and apprehension of the admitted abductor were the latest proof that kidnapping does not pay in this nation of dogged police and a cooperative press.

Police said fingerprints on a public telephone where ransom calls were placed led to the arrest of Kimio Neho, 39, a week after he allegedly snatched Yasuyuki Soeishi, who was found unharmed in Neho's apartment.

A National Police Agency spokesman said it was the 111th kidnapping in Japan since the end of World War II. Only four kidnappers have escaped apprehension and not once has a criminal walked away with ransom money, the spokesman said. However, 22 victims were killed before their abductors were captured.

Police said Neho grabbed the child July 20, and in the next few days made 25 phone calls to his mother, Sachiko Nohara, 31, demanding she pay $21,700 "if you want to see your son alive."

They said Okinawa police traced the 21st call to a public phone booth and found fingerprints there that matched Neho's. Neho had been arrested previously on theft charges.

Authorities said Neho, seized after emerging from another phone booth, confessed to the kidnapping, saying he needed the money to repay debts on his bankrupt meat shop.

The kidnapping was the fifth in Japan this year — all unsuccessful — and the first ever to occur simultaneously with another abduction. A government office worker in central Japan was arrested last week on charges of kidnapping and killing a 58-year-old woman. He allegedly asked for $217,000 in ransom.

"In Japan, the families of kidnap victims always contact the police before they think about paying ransom money," the police spokesman said in explaining why police have been so successful in thwarting kidnappers.

Peaceful memorial marks Shah's death

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Muffled sobs filled a theatre as more than 1,000 Iranians marked the first anniversary of the death of Mohammad Reza Shah Pahlavi.

Los Angeles police with dogs swept the Wilshire-Ebell Theater for bombs before Sunday's three-hour ceremony, watched by 10 plainclothes and uniformed officers. But the precautions against anti-Shah demonstrators appeared unnecessary.

No bombs were found, and no confrontations arose. The only outburst came from a disconsolate woman who threw herself against one of several flower-draped portraits of the Shah. She was guided away.

The memorial, a traditional Iranian custom, was "not a political thing so much as respect for a man who gave his life for the benefit of his country," said Kamran Hakimi, a spokesman for several groups sponsoring the service.

Organizations like the Guardians for a Constitutional Monarchy have "some people on the (Iranian) frontier and inside Iran fighting" for a restoration of the Pahlavi monarchy, he added.

The 1,300-seat theater filled to capacity and resounded with shouts of "Long Live the Shah!" as the ceremony began. Men and women dabbed at their eyes as a portrait of the ousted royal couple flashed on an oversized television screen.
