Truckers seek protection from militant strikers

By JOHN DANISZEWSKI
Associated Press Writer

A Milwaukee brewery cut back operations and California growers warned that Valentine Day roses might wither because of the nationwide strike by independent truckers, whose working counterparts demanded federal protection from snipers, arsonists and vandals.

Officials reported more than 300 trucks have been damaged, one driver slain and 27 people injured in violence stemming from the shutdown, which was called by the Independent Truckers Association on Monday to protest higher fuel taxes and fees.

Food shipments to some Eastern cities were curtailed Wednesday, and some produce prices rose.

Bennett Whitlock, president of American Trucking Associations, sent a letter to Attorney General William French Smith, demanding the Justice Department and the FBI play a greater role in fighting the widespread bloodshed and intimidation.

"There's an absolute need for strong federal leadership. ... Federal law enforcement officials must make their intentions known and their presence felt," he said.

U.S. attorneys across the country have been told "to be on the alert" for any violations of federal law, said Justice Department spokesman John Russell, who said he was not aware of Whitlock's letter.

Meanwhile, Florida offered Highway Patrol protection to truckers if more requests are received and if truckers can organize convoys of 15 to 25 trucks. And Alabama said Wednesday it would use state liquor agents, revenue agents and game wardens to help state troopers patrol the highways during the strike.

"It looks like war out there," said Chief Deputy Edmory Rush in Colleton County, S.C., who urged sheriff's departments in surrounding counties to step up patrols of major truck routes. "We don't want this to be a bloodbath."

Mike Parkhurst, head of the ITA, called the strike to protest scheduled increases in fuel taxes in April and highway use fees in 1985. The association claims to represent 30,000 of the 100,000 truckers who own and operate their own rigs — a claim that is disputed by other trucking groups.

While the independents make up about a fifth of the nation's truckers, they haul about 90 percent of its fresh food and much of the steel.

Drivers who idled their trucks, either out of sympathy with the strike or from fears for their safety, caused anxiety for produce growers.

California flower growers desperate to reach East Coast markets in time for Valentine's Day scrambled Wednesday to find trucks, and some shipments were being sent on more costly railroads and planes.

If the flowers don't reach their destinations on time "we would have to absorb the total loss. Just like other perishable agricultural crops, our product has a limited life," said David Ninomiya, a rose grower from Richmond, Calif.

The availability of trucks at Florida vegetable packing houses was off 80 percent, with packers "concerned" about being able to make their shipments, said Steve Hull, a spokesman for Gov. Bob Graham.

"Many truckers are now into a daylight-only schedule," said Terry Rodes, president of the New England Produce Center.

In Tennessee, truck traffic on five major interstate highways rose 46 percent Wednesday, and state police Sgt. Dale Page said he thought truckers were "running a little more legal and are trying to stick to the primary routes for safety."

Some Pabst Brewing Co. workers in Milwaukee were told to stay home today because a shortage of trucks had caused a lag in the company's beer shipments.

Officials at the giant Hunts Point Terminal Market in New York City said shipments of produce slowed to a trickle after remaining near-normal during the first two days of the strike.

Mike Pfluger of the U.S. Department of Agriculture station at the market said wholesale prices had already jumped as much as 30 percent.

Pfluger said supplies of beans, cauliflower, celery, eggplant, green peppers and tomatoes have dropped. He noted that 70 percent to 75 percent of the area's fruit and produce arrives by truck.

There were numerous new reports of illegal efforts to shut down truck traffic across the country.

At the trucking hub of Breezewood, Pa., power went out for 1½ hours Wednesday and nails were dumped on ramps to the Pennsylvania Turnpike. An anonymous caller told The Associated Press that "unhappy local truckers" were responsible for the problems, but West Penn Power Co. spokesman Bob Van Atta said the outage probably was caused by a storm.

Officials in 32 states confirmed 166 trucks have been hit by gunfire and 167 damaged by rocks and bricks in the strike, with a few trucks torched, tires slashed, nails and glass scattered on highways and other scattered sabotage.

A member of the Teamsters Union was shot in the neck and killed while driving near Newton Grove, N.C., late Monday night. Another driver was seriously wounded by a gunshot while unloading his truck in Utah and a 14-year-old Pennsylvania girl suffered a fractured skull when a brick bounced off a truck into her family's car. She remained in guarded condition.

U.S. Marine halts three Israeli tanks

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — U.S. Marine Capt. Charles B. Johnson said today he told an Israeli commander, "You're going to have to kill me" to stop the Israeli from trying to move three tanks farther into an area under American control.

The 30-year-old leatherneck told reporters that he pulled his .45-caliber pistol, jumped onto the officer's tank and grabbed him to halt the tanks' drive on Wednesday.

The armored vehicles had crashed through a white fence and barbed wire only a quarter mile from Johnson's Marine company headquarters near Beirut International Airport, the captain said.

It was the most serious of a half-dozen recent incidents between the Israelis and the American peacekeeping forces.

An Israeli general met with an American diplomat in Beirut today to defuse the situation and they agreed to set a north-south railway line as the demarcation border between Israeli forces to the east and the Marines to the west, the Tel Aviv command said. It said the zones will be marked by colored barrels "to prevent any future misunderstanding...."

In other Middle East developments today, Israeli and Lebanese negotiators resumed their talks aimed at getting all foreign troops out of Lebanon.

In Beirut, a bomb shattered the currently unused offices of Syria's official news agency SANA. The offices have not been used since last summer.

The force of the blast hurled a 65-year-old woman out of her bed onto the floor in the apartment directly under the SANA office. Doctors suspect she has a broken rib, the woman's daughter told reporters.

Police said there were no other casualties from the bombing. There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the attack.

In Damascus, the government-controlled Syrian news media claimed Israel was moving reinforcements of troops and armor into eastern Lebanon to attack Syria.

Johnson, a native of Neenah, Wis., said he told the Israeli lieutenant colonel "he was in Marine lines and he could not come across Marine lines."

After a five-minute standoff, Johnson told reporters, the Israeli "started to get up on his tank and I said you're not coming through. You're going to have to kill me."

The Israeli officer then started to rev his engines, Johnson recounted. "I pulled my pistol out, locked and loaded it and carried it at the ready and said again to him, you can't come through."

Johnson said the first Israeli tank peeled off and he followed it on foot for a short distance. Then two other Israeli tanks that had been circling behind the lead tank made a dash up the road in the direction of the Marine company position.

"I just ran up onto his tank and grabbed him and said stop those something tanks," said Johnson. "He didn't say anything, he just stopped them."

The standoff ended shortly after that, he said.

When asked about U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's statement in Washington that he had recommended him for a commendation, Johnson replied: "I think it's lot of fuss over not that much big of a deal."

Israeli army commanders relayed a request through Lebanese liaison officers to have a meeting to discuss the incident.

"There has been a request to clarify some issues and find out what turf who was in and coordinate a little bit better that position, which is fuzzy at best," Col. Thomas Stokes, commander of the 1,200 U.S. Marine peacekeepers, said.

'Dedicated, disciplined' captain 'gave 100 percent,' father says

NEENAH, Wis. (AP) — Marine Capt. Charles B. Johnson, credited with single-handedly blocking the path of three Israeli tanks, "always gave 100 percent" and he hasn't changed, his father says.

"He's a very dedicated, disciplined guy and if you tell him to hold the point he's going to hold it," Don Johnson of Neenah, Wis., said after hearing of his son's actions Wednesday.

"He's the kind of guy you'd want there, no question about that."

When three Israeli tanks tried to drive at "battle speed" into a U.S. Marine-controlled area Wednesday, they were turned back by Johnson, who pulled his gun on an Israeli tank commander, the Pentagon said.

The leatherneck told the Israelis that "if they were coming through, they'd have to do it over his dead body," said Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger.

The Israeli military command disputed the Pentagon version of the confrontation, saying the area in question was under Israel's jurisdiction.

Work begins on city sewer projects

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Most people consider the Bible passage "My cup runneth over" to imply good fortune. City officials think otherwise when it refers to the town's sanitary sewer and water lines.

To remedy the problem of overflowing sewage lines and insufficient water lines that seeped into the public's attention during the boom of 1981, the city is beginning a $6 million construction program that will see installation of new lines. With $3 million to be diverted to each area, the city also is completing an upgrading of the Paul Davis Well Field to supply more water for city residents.

A sewer study released recently by the engineering firm of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., uncovered $26 million worth of work needed on the sanitary sewer system to meet Midland's needs up through the year 2000. The engineer noted that not all is needed immediately, although some lines today are severely overloaded. It's those areas which the city is attacking first.

The first site of a new line will be east Midland where a 42-inch main is being installed. The line was approved by the City Council in November 1981. Delay in getting started grew out of time needed for designing plans and specifications and then seeking bids on the project.

According to Fred Baker, director of public works, a 42-inch line will start at the sewage treatment plant southeast of the city, run north to Scharbauer Drive and Parkway Drive.

The next project was approved Jan. 25 when the council instructed the staff to proceed with preparation of plans and specifications on three large sewer lines.

The No. 1 priority in that group is a line that will start at Parkway Drive, extend westward to Wadley and I Street, then flow along Wadley to Godfrey and branch into the Northwest Drainage Channel. It will run along the channel and stop at a point 1,500 feet west of Midland Drive, said Baker.

The lines will vary in size, starting with 36 inches and tapering down to 21 inches at the northernmost point, he added.

Most of Panhandle still icy...

By The Associated Press

Most of the Texas Panhandle remained in the chilling grip of ice and snow today as forecasters warned of the possibility of another winter storm reaching the area tonight.

A winter storm watch was posted for the area tonight, raising fears that the snow and ice from a storm earlier this week would not melt in time.

All major highways in the Panhandle were open today, but the Department of Public Safety said many were barely passable. Many secondary roads remained closed.

A sunny day Wednesday diminished 10-foot snowdrifts by half, but many schools and businesses remained closed.

"Most people can't leave their houses without some kind of help," said Randall County sheriff's dispatcher Randy Rogers.

...and Midland may get another dose

Thrice struck by winter storms already this season, the Permian Basin is bracing itself for a possible fourth onslaught tonight through Saturday.

The National Weather Service has issued a 30 percent chance of rain, possibly mixed with snow, through Friday and is outright predicting snow flurries on Saturday.

The low in the upper 20s expected tonight would freeze any moisture already on the ground. Winds of 5-15 mph also are anticipated through Friday.

The high Wednesday of 53 was 26 degrees off the all-time record for the date established in 1932, while the low of 26 was well above the 10 of 1972.

No rainfall was recorded in the 24-hour period ending at 6 a.m. today, leaving the yearly total at 1.14 inches.

Snow, rain, wind still sweep nation

By The Associated Press

More snow moved into the Midwest today and a new Pacific storm hit Southern California with rain and high winds, raising fears of mudslides in coastal areas battered by four storms last week.

Florida, meantime, was recovering from a series of tornadoes that knocked out power to thousands and left three people dead. The state was hit by 26 tornadoes Tuesday and Wednesday that overturned cars and mobile homes before heading out to sea.

Snow was expected to spread from Michigan and Wisconsin into northern Illinois today, with another 6 to 15 inches of accumulation predicted in parts of Michigan, Minnesota and Iowa.

Workers stand in the background, waiting for the machine to finish "eating" pavement on Wadley Avenue before they can proceed with installing a new water line. This is one part of a $6 million package of water and sewer improvements being implemented by the city.

Second priority out of that package is a line that — again — starts at Parkway and Scharbauer and follows the Northwest Drainage Channel until it stops at the southwest corner of Midland Country Club. Baker explained that a lift station is being built in the Saddle Club development to keep the sewage flowing along the line.

This second line should intercept needs of Plantation Hills, Polo Park and other nearby subdivisions, along with tying in Saddle Club. Eventually, when a Canadian subdivision north of that area and Green Tree North develop, the line will handle those loads, Baker said.

This line also should relieve overloading problems that are occurring at Wadley from Ward to Whitney streets where a 12-inch line exists. Several apartment complexes and subdivisions such as Northgate and Fairmont Park have been constructed since the line was put in, the public works director noted.

Third major project will cover downtown. As new office buildings rise so, too, does the load of sewage. Baker explained the proposed line would run from U.S. Highway 80 at Scharbauer Draw into the downtown area. However, before work proceeds on this project, Baker said the line will be monitored to determine its need.

"We're not to a crisis stage yet," he said.

Residents living north of Loop 250 who have complained in previous City Council meetings about low water pressure should be getting some relief in the near future. Baker said plans are being drawn for installing 24- and 16-inch water lines that will start at the water treatment plant on Midland Drive and run east along Mockingbird Lane to Lamesa Road.

"That's six miles of major water line," he commented. "This will provide additional service to an area developing along Midland Drive and eastward."

As with the sewer line, this should serve numerous apartment complexes in that area along with Plantation Hills and Polo Park subdivisions and planned retail areas.

The line will run across Lamesa Road eastward to serve Adobe Meadows and 349 Ranch Estates, Baker added.

"Eventually, we'll provide service to a section of land being developed by the Midland Homebuilders Association."

Already, the city is installing a water line in Wadley Avenue. "This was made necessary by the development of Clay-Desta Plaza and other office buildings in that area," Baker said of the "suburban" office development in north Midland.

A major line is being installed from Paul Davis Well Field to McMillan along with a pump station to increase capacity of water coming into downtown, he noted. Additionally, more wells are being drilled at the Paul Davis Field to handle Midland's increasing demand for water.

While some areas of the economy in Midland may have slowed down and a cork put on some new office building plans, Baker views this breathing space as a chance to get these projects completed to avoid another "cup runneth over" situation in the future.

Congressmen hear hints of compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget Director David Stockman has indicated to members of Congress that the Reagan administration may be willing to compromise on defense spending and a jobs program.

In testimony before the Senate Budget Committee on Wednesday, Stockman indicated some willingness to add a recession-relief program to the president's budget proposal now being debated in congressional committees.

"If this committee comes up with something that is reasonable in its cost and is targeted (to hard hit parts of the country), I'm sure there is room in the budget for it," Stockman said.

Sources, speaking on the condition that they not be identified, said talks had begun between Republican Senate leaders and President Reagan's top advisors about proposals for dealing with the recession, even though Reagan has publicly opposed any large-scale public works projects.

Democrats, led by House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., are planning an emergency package expected to cost at least $5 billion to combat unemployment, now at 10.8 percent.

Stockman, before the committee, also hinted that compromise may be within reach on Reagan's $238.6 billion military budget for next year, which would boost defense spending by $30 billion.

Referring to attacks on the defense budget, Stockman said: "The differences between us are far less than they would appear in the extreme rhetoric of the last few days."

Although there have been both Democrats and Republicans in Congress voicing support for a lowered amount of increase in the Pentagon's budget, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger did not offer compromise when he appeared before the House Armed Services Committee.

He contends reductions in the spending request would endanger American security. He said cuts in defense requests last year "reduced the security of the nation in a way that we much rather would not have had."

In the House Budget Committee, members asked Treasury Secretary Donald Regan why the president was not willing to negotiate on tax policy, including the third year of the Reagan tax cut scheduled to take effect in July. Democrats have eyed the scheduled tax cut in their search for ways to trim a projected $189 billion deficit in fiscal 1984.

"If you show us your cards, we will show you ours," Regan said. "This might be possible when we see what you want to compromise to."

A Treasury Department spokesman later said Regan was not willing to delay the final reductions of the tax package enacted in 1981, however.

Elswewhere on Capitol Hill, President Reagan's plan to overhaul the way health bills are paid was under fire from Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., who said the administration proposals would "cut the heart out of Medicare benefits."

Baucus, a member of the Senate Finance Committee, made the charge during an appearance by outgoing Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker before the panel's health subcommittee on Wednesday.

Schweiker was preparing to defend the administration's health care package before the House Ways and Means Committee today, the secretary's final day on the job.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, meanwhile, scheduled more questions for Arms control nominee Kenneth L. Adelman.

Eugene V. Rostow, fired by Reagan last month as director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, declined an invitation to testify.

Some violence toward truckers reported in Texas

By The Associated Press

A truck driver says he escaped injury when a bullet was fired at his rig in the fifth violent incident directed against truckers in Texas since the start of the national strike by independent truckers.

The shot was fired by the occupant of a station wagon in rural Haskell County in West Texs, according to driver James Hambrick, who reported the attack Wednesday night.

Hambrick, who was hauling sheetrock, told authorities the bullet shattered the rig's windshield.

A sheriff's dispatcher who asked not to be identified said officers failed to find the bullet after searching the truck.

Texas authorities said Wednesday they cannot confirm that the incidents are related to the strike by independent truckers.

A gravel truck driver told authorities six shots were fired at him from a station wagon on the access road to Interstate 10 in Fort Bend County near Houston about 5:20 a.m. Wednesday.

One of the shots hit the truck's radiator, but the driver was not injured, said David Wells of the Texas Department of Public Safety in Austin.

Holes were shot into the radiators of two gravel trucks that were parked on the side of U.S. Highway 90A in the South Texas town of Altair about 9:30 p.m. Tuesday, Wells said. No one was in the trucks at the time, he said.

A St. Louis, Mo., trucker escaped injury about 6:30 p.m. Tuesday when three shots were fired at his rig near Pecos in West Texas, according to the Reeves County Sheriff's Department. Two of the shots went through the passenger window and the third lodged beneath the truck, authorities said.

John Everett Hargrove, 47, filed a complaint of assault with a deadly weapon with the sheriff's department after the shooting on Interstate 20. He said he did not see where the shots came from.

The first incident was reported Tuesday when three unidentified men fired three shots at a gravel truck near Sealy in Southeast Texas.

Authorities said they had no suspects in any of the cases.

Independent truck drivers have called for a nationwide strike to protest higher fuel and road use taxes.

Three arrested in North Carolina for allegedly firing shots at truck

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Two men and a woman were arrested after they allegedly pulled up alongside a moving truck and fired several shots at it, officials said today.

The Wilkes County Sheriff's Department said the three were charged in connection with shots fired from a car late Wednesday night at a truck driven by Warren Pope of Jonas Ridge. The driver was unharmed, but the truck sustained minor damage.

Authorities said they had no idea if the shooting was related to a nationwide strike by independent truckers protesting rising fuel taxes and fees.

The shots were fired at the rear of the truck from a car which passed Pope on U.S. 421 in northwestern North Carolina.

Fate of Florida's first black U.S. district judge in hands of jurors

MIAMI (AP) — The career of Florida's first black U.S. district judge was on the line today after a a 12-member federal jury began deciding whether Alcee Hastings sold light sentences in return for a $150,000 bribe.

The jury of five men and seven women, who began hearing testimony Jan. 19, was to resume deliberations this morning. They took the case at 4:51 p.m. Wednesday and were excused by U.S. District Judge Edward T. Gignoux about an hour later.

Hastings, 46, is charged with conspiracy to solicit a bribe and obstruction of justice. He is the first sitting federal judge ever tried for crimes allegedly committed while on the bench.

The defendant and defense attorney Patricia Williams waited Wednesday in Hastings' chambers, from which he has directed his defense.

Hastings' friend, attorney William A. Borders Jr. of Washington, D.C., was convicted on similar charges last year and sentenced to five years in prison. Justice Department attorneys Reid Weingarten and Robert Richter also prosecuted that case.

Hastings, appointed to the bench in 1979, has said he won't resign if convicted on the indictment issued Dec. 29, 1981. He could face impeachment proceedings by Congress or suspension by the chief judge of the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Maximum penalty for each count is five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

The prosecution maintains that Hastings and Borders teamed up to solicit a $150,000 bribe from an FBI agent posing as one of two men convicted of racketeering before the judge.

In return, the government charges, Hastings was to reduce the defendants' three-year prison terms and return some of the $1.2 million in cash and property he ordered seized by the government.

In closing argument Wednesday, Miss Williams criticized the government's case as "riddled with reasonable doubt."

"They haven't shown that there was any knowledge (of the conspiracy) on his part, ever," she said. "You're supposed to surmise it, infer it, feel it, because it helps the government's case."

Weingarten said the judge's charming exterior hid a man who committed a crime, then lied on the witness stand to cover it up.

"It's his word vs. the circumstances," Weingarten told the jury, noting that a government witness had contradicted Hastings' story about what he did after learning Borders had been arrested on Oct. 9, 1981.

"If you find him in one lie, his whole defense collapses around him like a house of cards," Weingarten argued.

He said Hastings needed the money to satisfy his expensive tastes.

Court ruling may ensure farm work compensation

AUSTIN (AP) — An $800,000 lawsuit against a Rio Grande Valley produce company could push legislators to approve worker's compensation benefits for farmworkers this session, says the bill's sponsor.

Rep. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen, said farmworkers were excluded from coverage under a 70-year-old law that requires employers to carry insurance to provide benefits when workers are injured on the job because agriculture work was considered so safe.

"With the advent of farm equipment, pesticides and herbicides, farm work has become one of the most dangerous occupations in the United States," said a release issued by Hinojosa.

Hinojosa recalled a 1982 Texas Supreme Court ruling allowing the family of a farmworker who died as the result of job-related accident to sue his employer for wrongful death.

Hinojosa said the worker's family would have gotten $48,000 in benefits if he had been covered by the workman's compensation law.

The suit is pending in state district court, Hinojosa said.

Electric co-op strikes agreement

AUSTIN (AP) — Lower Colorado River Authority directors voted 10-4 Tuesday for an agreement with Texland Electric Cooperative of Austin and its owners, Pedernales and Bluebonnet Electric Cooperatives.

The LCRA board recommended changes in the agreement which are subject to approval by Texland's board of directors. The settlement then must be approved by a majority of LCRA's wholesale customers.

LCRA plans to build jointly with Austin a 400-megawatt third unit at the Fayette Power Project near La Grange, to be in operation by mid-1988. Texland plans to construct three 500-megawatt units near Rockdale in Milam County, with Houston Lighting & Power as a primary customer.

Both projects will be lignite-fired.

Whitmire has mayoral competitor

HOUSTON (AP) — Bill Wright, who quit his job as partner and vice president of an oil and gas company this week, says he will challenge Kathy Whitmire in this year's mayoral election.

Wright, 38, formally filed notice Wednesday that he would run in the November race.

The former partner and vice president of the Warren-King petroleum interests said Mrs. Whitmire has failed to listen to plans which he says would bring more businesses and jobs to Houston.

He also criticized her for placing civil service reform above transportation as a legislative priority and for dismissing projections that the city would overrun its budget by $30 million.

Wright said his top priority would be transportation, followed by crime prevention and jobs.

Judge named to appeals court

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White on Wednesday appointed State District Judge Joe Spurlock II of Fort Worth to the 2nd Court of Appeals.

Spurlock, 45, would replace Justice Joe Spurlock Sr., also of Fort Worth, who resigned.

Spurlock was appointed last year by lame-duck Gov. Bill Clements, but the Senate in January returned his name to White for review.

Ida Frazier of Palestine holds a picture of her son, Weldon, whose remains were buried in East Texas Wednesday. Frazier and 21 others were killed in 1944 when the plane they were in vanished over New Guinea.

East Texas soldier comes home 38 years after disappearance

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

PALESTINE — For 38 years, his remains lay entombed in the debris of a B-24 bomber lost during World War II in the jungles of New Guinea.

But Tuesday, 1st Sgt. Weldon Frazier came home.

A military honor guard lowered his flag-draped coffin into East Texas ground while his mother, Ida Frazier, wept for the son who had been missing in action since 1944.

"These are tears of joy," said Mrs. Frazier, 87. "I've waited all my life for this — it means everything to me."

Frazier's remains were recovered from a B-24 Liberator bomber that vanished March 22, 1944, over the Owen Stanley mountain range in New Guinea. Army investigators believe the fog-bound bomber strayed off course and crashed into an 8,400-foot mountain, killing three crewmen and 19 passengers.

"Only the skeletons remained when we found them," said Lt. Col. David Rosenberg, who headed the six-man Army team that recovered the bodies in April.

Frazier, who was stationed in New Guinea, was returning from leave in Australia when the bomber went down. On the day he died, Allied bombers were striking Berlin, the Italian campaign had bogged down at Cassino and the Japanese were launching an offensive in northern Burma.

In his last letter home, dated March 22, 1944, the 23-year-old Frazier told his mother not to worry. "Just a few lines to let you know I'm alive and kicking," he wrote.

Frazier lied about his age to join the Army, quitting school to enlist in 1937.

"He was only 16 years old," said his brother, William, 57, of Buffalo, Texas. "It was the middle of the Great Depression and times were tough. Mom agreed to sign the papers so Weldon could get in the Army."

The Army officially gave up the search for the plane in 1946. But Frazier's family waited until Tuesday to hold a funeral.

"Mom didn't feel right about doing it, not with the body still missing," William Frazier said. "She never thought it would be found in her lifetime."

Suction cups give crane new hold on life

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A sandhill crane named Bonaparte that lost both its legs has taken some sprightly steps in new shoes — gray suction cups fashioned from plumbers' equipment.

"He is just doing fantastic," said the bird's caretaker, Debbie McReless. "He even drank and ate with those plungers.

"None of this would be possible if it weren't for the attitude of the bird," she said Wednesday. "He wants to live and he wants to walk."

Bonaparte was fitted with artificial limbs last week in Sherman, but could not stand up on them.

John Karger, director of the non-profit Last Chance Forever Inc. in San Antonio, brought the suction cup "shoes" here, fitted the crane Wednesday and said he would return later this month with more permanent walking implements.

"There will be a long period of physical therapy, but at least we know at the end of it we have a bird who can walk. He has a long way to go before he can do anything as far as breeding or anything," Karger said.

"Right now we're looking at a bird that's going to be much better than it is walking around on its stumps," he said.

Aliens could cost $1 billion yearly

WASHINGTON (AP) — If 10 percent of the aliens working illegally in the United States eventually draw Social Security, the retirement system would have to pay out $1 billion annually, according to a preliminary congressional report.

The cost could reach $2.4 billion if 25 percent of the illegal aliens and other aliens not entitled to work qualify for Social Security benefits, the General Accounting Office report said.

The draft GAO report was released today by Rep. G. William Whitehurst, R-Va., who has introduced a bill to restrict Social Security payments to aliens living here or abroad.

The report's estimates are based on an estimate that 3.5 million illegal aliens are in the United States, and about two-thirds of them are believed to be paying Social Security taxes. The possible costs to the system are based on the average alien family benefits of $4,160 for aliens living abroad in 1981.

Currently, aliens who pay into Social Security can qualify for benefits after they have worked a certain number of years, even if they are in the United States illegally.

Under Whitehurst's bill, aliens would get credited for Social Security only if they worked legally in the United States.

The GAO report also examined 313,000 Social Security beneficiaries residing in foreign countries, who received almost $1 billion in benefits in 1981. Some of them are retired U.S. citizens. But the report said 62 percent were aliens who moved abroad.

"Alien retirees abroad generally have worked less time...paid less taxes to Social Security and have more dependents than the average retiree, frequently adding such dependents after retirement," the report said.

It cited the case of one alien living in a foreign country that was not identified who retired at age 62 "and one year later began living with his 15-year-old granddaughter in a common-law marriage. He fathered two children by her during the succeeding six years."

Dispute over raising retirement age threatens Social Security rescue plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fragile support for a bipartisan Social Security rescue plan is threatened by a dispute over raising the retirement age, with a key congressman saying he will oppose the entire package if that is done.

That issue and other problems facing a $168 billion package drafted by the National Commission on Social Security Reform have cropped up during House Ways and Means Committee hearings which began Tuesday.

Outgoing Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker and Social Security Commissioner John A. Svahn were testifying today on the retirement system's financing crisis, which the administration has said will leave Social Security without enough money to cover benefit checks after June.

The reform commission's proposal calls for payroll tax increases, a six-month delay in July's cost-of-living increase, a levy on benefits going to middle- and upper-income retirees and other steps to produce $168 billion over seven years, as well as wipe out two-thirds of the system's long-term deficit.

However, the commission was divided on how to close the remainder of the financing gap. A Republican majority on the 15-member panel recommended raising the retirement age from 65 to 66 by 2015 then indexing it to longevity. But five liberal Democrats urged instead an increase in the payroll tax in the next century.

The dispute flared Wednesday at the Ways and Means Committee as Rep. Claude Pepper vowed to drop his support for the compromise plan if Congress adds a provision to raise the retirement age in the next century.

"Raising the age of eligibility is nothing but a cut in benefits," the 82-year-old Florida Democrat told the tax writers.

"If you put one item in there cutting benefits I cannot support this bill," declared Pepper, the chairman of the House Rules Committee and a key member of the reform commission.

Schweiker defends health care package

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard S. Schweiker, on his last day as head of health and human services, is defending the Reagan administration's health care package that would raise consumers' out-of-pocket expenses.

Schweiker is scheduled to appear before the House Ways and Means Committee to outline the administration's plans for overhauling the way Americans pay their health bills.

A former Pennsylvania senator, Schweiker is leaving as secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services to enter private business. Margaret Heckler, a former Massachusetts congresswoman, has been nominated to succeed him.

Two of Schweiker's predecessors, Arthur S. Flemming and Wilbur Cohen, called the administration package, which is aimed at cutting federal payments for Medicare, both "indefensible and unfair."

Flemming headed the old Department of Health, Education and Welfare under President Johnson, and Cohen was secretary during the Eisenhower administration.

Their criticism was directed at a series of changes in Medicare, the health program for the elderly which is expected to cost $64.7 billion this year.

President Reagan wants to charge Medicare patients part of the hospital bill during each of the first 60 days they are hospitalized. In exchange the government would pick up the tab for the cost of catastrophic illnesses, those lasting longer than 60 days.

Under current law, a patient pays hospital charges the first day and after the 60th day. Seven million Medicare patients are hospitalized for relatively short stays each year and about 200,000 suffer catastrophic illnesses requiring hospitalization.

Flemming and Cohen said: "The purpose of this proposed change is not to insulate Medicare beneficiaries against long-term illness. The purpose is to cut Medicare expenditures."

The administration also wants to collect higher rates from beneficiaries who buy Medicare insurance to cover doctors' bills, and offer optional Medicare vouchers where beneficiaries could buy health care coverage in the private sector with Medicare dollars.

The American Public Health Association also criticized the plan. Karen Davis, speaking for the association, said the changes are "the unfairest tax of all."

Consumer agency needs money to perform job

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission must be given enough money if it's going to do its job of protecting Americans from unsafe products, the chairman of a House Appropriations subcommittee says.

"We don't intend to see this commission destroyed, because its mandate is a very serious one," Rep. Edward P. Boland, D-Mass., said Wednesday. But he said the commission needs enough money to carry out its duties.

Since President Reagan took office, the commission has experienced a 25 percent reduction in funds and a 28 percent reduction in personnel.

For fiscal year 1984, Reagan is calling for an additional 6 percent reduction in the agency's budget authority and further staff cuts.

A majority of the commission has expressed concern that Reagan's proposed $32 million in budget authority is insufficient.

"We are certainly sensitive to the state of the current economy; however, we are acutely aware that preventing tragedies in the first place is a lot cheaper for government and industry than paying for them after the fact," Commissioners Edith Barksdale Sloan, Stuart M. Statler and Sam Zagoria said in a letter to Boland.

Boland said he believed the concerns expressed by the three commissioners were "justified and legitimate." He added, however, "All of us must recognize the fiscal problem this government has...and must share the burden."

Commission Chairman Nancy Harvey Steorts was the only member of the commission to support Reagan's budget proposal at a hearing before Boland's subcommittee.

"I'm very comfortable with the budget...realizing it's a very tight budget year," she said.

"I am confident, as one commissioner, that we can fully fund our priority projects and continue many other important safety programs with $32 million in fiscal 1984."

Arms control nominee returns to Capitol Hill for more questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arms control nominee Kenneth L. Adelman is returning to Capitol Hill to answer more questions from skeptical senators, but the veteran diplomat he would succeed is passing up a chance to come with him.

Eugene V. Rostow, fired by President Reagan on Jan. 12 as director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, declined an invitation to testify today at a Senate Foreign Relations Committee confirmation hearing on Adelman.

"It seemed to me I couldn't help Mr. Adelman or anyone else if I appeared and re-opened all the circumstances of my departure in that setting," Rostow said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

Adelman got a cool reception from both Republicans and Democrats in his first appearance before the panel last week.

Stockman: Compromise possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget Director David Stockman is hinting compromise may be possible in the proposed $30 billion spending boost for the Pentagon that the defense secretary says is essential for the nation's security.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger was called to testify today before the Senate Budget Committee, which is searching for ways to trim a projected $189 billion deficit in the upcoming fiscal year and may make the defense buildup a target.

As he had before the congressional Armed Services committees earlier in the week, the secretary was expected to stress that reductions in the Pentagon's $238.6 billion outlay request would endanger America's security.

But administration budget director David A. Stockman suggested to the budget panel it would listen to compromise suggestions.

"If you can find things in there that you can persuade the administration aren't needed, I'm sure people will listen," Stockman said.

FBI needs to re-examine policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Parents of two missing children, urging the FBI to re-examine its policies, say agents refused to get involved immediately in the search for their youngsters who have never been found.

And two senators said Wednesday the FBI lacks a clear-cut policy on when to enter a missing child case.

Oliver B. Revell, assistant director of the FBI's criminal investigative division, told a Senate subcommittee on juvenile justice that the bureau needs to "re-examine our statement of policy and disseminate it to agents in the field."

But, he said, "We have very limited resources. We cannot respond to every missing-child report." When the agency believes a child has been abducted and taken across state lines, he said, "We work these cases at top priority."

Congress wants to probe FBI 'scam'

NEW YORK (AP) — Congressional investigators want to learn more about an FBI "scam" in which agents looking for corruption were fooled into paying bribes to people falsely claiming to be Cleveland judges.

A House subcommittee that has been investigating FBI Abscam tactics for three years will reopen hearings Feb. 24 in Washington to take testimony from real judges about the Cleveland case, subcommittee chairman Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., said Wednesday.

Edwards said in a telephone interview that the hearings will focus in the hearings on undercover probes besides Abscam, including those that have led to lawsuits against the FBI.

Undercover agents paid thousands of dollars in bribes during Operation Corkscrew to people investigators thought were Cleveland municipal judges, The Associated Press reported in December.

Passenger shoots city bus driver

CLEVELAND (AP) — A city bus driver was in critical condition today after being shot by a passenger whom she had ordered off the bus, authorities said.

Hattie M. Smith, 40, a Regional Transity Authority driver for five years, was shot in the hand and forehead Wednesday afternoon, police said.

Sgt. Dennis R. Kochmit said a man boarded the bus on Detroit Avenue and handed Ms. Smith a 10-day-old transfer pass. She told the passenger that she would have to keep the transfer because it had expired, Kochmit said.

The officer said the man began to curse, while another passenger tried to calm him.

Ms. Smith ignored the man and resumed driving, but when he began making obscene threats, she ordered him off the bus, Kochmit said.

When the bus stopped, the man pulled a gun from his pocket, shot the driver and fled, police said.

Guard's vacation abruptly ended

NEW YORK (AP) — An armored car company guard charged in an $11 million theft, the largest cash heist in U.S. history, was "sunning himself by the pool" in Puerto Rico when FBI agents moved in, authorities said.

Although a second man was also taken into custody in New York, none of the money from the Dec. 12 theft at Sentry-Armored Car-Courier Co. has been found, the FBI said Wednesday, adding that a search was continuing for more suspects.

Christos Potamitis, 24, a guard at Sentry, was arrested Wednesday by FBI agents at the Holiday Inn in San Juan's Condado beachfront district.

George Legakis, 21, a student and part-time cook, turned himself in to the FBI Tuesday night in New York.

The pair, charged with larceny in the theft from the Sentry building in the Bronx, were "two of the more important players" in the heist, said Lee Laster, assistant director in charge of the FBI's New York office.

"We spoiled (Potamitis') vacation," Laster said. "He had been sunning himself by the pool most of the afternoon."

Legakis, described as Potamitis' "associate," was arraigned Wednesday.

"My client is a scapegoat in this matter," William Spanakos, Legakis' lawyer, told U.S. District Judge Lee P. Gagliardi. The attorney said Legakis had "an absolute alibi" on the night of the robbery.

Legakis was ordered held on $1.5 million bail. Potamitis was awaiting extradition proceedings in Puerto Rico.

Laster said the two men were "not acting alone," but did not elaborate.

Three Sentry executives have been charged with skimming $100,000 from deposits at the firm in a separate scheme. Asked if they were implicated in the $11 million heist, New York chief of detectives James Sullivan replied, "We are dealing with two separate cases."

Advisors consider jobs program

WASHINGTON (AP) — At the urging of Republican congressional leaders, President Reagan's top advisers are considering a federal jobs program and emergency relief for homeless victims of the recession.

White House Chief of Staff James Baker held preliminary meetings with members of the White House staff earlier this week, but no specific proposals have been agreed on, Republican sources say.

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee and Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., chairman of the Republican National Committee, also talked about proposals for dealing quickly with the recession with presidential counselor Edwin Meese III, according to the sources, who spoke on condition that they not be identified.

The discussions reportedly took place with Reagan's blessing, despite the president's continued public opposition to any large scale public works projects intended to reduce the 10.8 per cent unemployment rate.

The president's economic spokesman testified on the administration's 1984 budget blueprint again on Wednesday, and said the quickest way to reduce unemployment was to reduce the federal deficit by enacting Reagan's program.

"What we are striving for is to get the economy moving again," said Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan.

The president said on Tuesday he opposes a federal public works program, but without elaboration added: "That doesn't mean that there aren't things that need doing."

The most likely jobs program would involved federal projects already planned like repair of federal buildings, highways, bridges or water projects already planned but lacking money.

House Democrats led by Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill are planning an emergency package of their own, expected to cost at least $5 billion.

O'Neill, of Massachusetts, said although the administration's most recent economic report issued Wednesday "rejects the need for jobs legislation, its dismal employment forecast is itself the best argument for a Democratic jobs bill."

O'Neill said Senate Republicans are "already eyeing the next election" and predicted they would not only back a jobs bill, but would attempt "to sell the president...they're the one's who have to turn the president around."

Senate leader Baker has asked Republican committee chairmen to assemble a program designed to show congressional concern for the more than 12 million people out of work.

In testimony before the Senate Budget Committee, Budget Director David Stockman indicated some willingness to add recession relief to the president's program.

"If this committee comes up with something that is reasonable in its cost and is targeted (to hard hit parts of the country), I'm sure there is room in the budget for it," he said.

Stockman was also publicly conciliatory to critics urging deeper cuts in Reagan's $238.6 billion military budget for next year.

He said White House officials will listen to proposed spending reductions. Noting the attacks on Reagan's defense budget, Stockman said, "The differences between us are far less than they would appear in the extreme rhetoric of the last few days."

Bill would funnel surplus food to nation's needy next year

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than $1 billion in surplus dairy and grain products would be funneled to the nation's needy next year under legislation outlined by a bipartisan group of senators.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., the bill's main sponsor, said the idea expands on the government's recent cheese giveaway program, designed to unload massive stockpiles threatened by spoilage, while helping the poor.

"We've got a lot of surpluses, especially in the dairy area, and we're paying storage costs. And we've got a lot of hungry people, needy people, people out of work," Dole said at a news conference Wednesday. "It just seems to us that this might be a way to approach it."

He said the surprising demand for government cheese during last year's giveaways "dramatically revealed a real and growing need in our society that the other lifelines such as welfare, elderly feeding programs and food stamps are obviously not either reaching or satisfying."

Dole said he came up with the idea while watching a television report on areas which had food to give away but could not because they had no money for distribution. The bill makes available $52 million to states to aid in getting food to recipients.

Any such expense would be likely to draw objections from the Office of Management and Budget, Dole said. But he added the administration has not taken any position on the bill.

The bill would make available any government-owned commodities to eligible non-profit state and local agencies, including food banks, school lunch programs, soup kitchens, disaster relief agencies, child care centers and charities.

The Commodity Credit Corporation would receive requests and pay for initial distribution and processing of the bulk commodities into usable form. Monitoring would prevent stockpiling or black market trade, Dole said.

Reagan listens to Afghan guerrillas.

Soviet Union denounces Reagan's 'provocative' talks with Afghanis

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union today denounced President Reagan's White House meeting with six Afghan guerrillas as a "provocative" move.

The official Tass news agency also repeated accusations that the Reagan administration is trying to "increase instability in the southern border of the U.S.S.R." by expanding what it called an "undeclared war" against Afghanistan.

Reagan received six guerrillas in the Oval Office on Wednesday. He called them freedom fighters "from behind the curtain of silence" and said they came to Washington to tell what was happening in Afghanistan.

More than 100,000 Soviet troops are believed stationed in that country, aiding the pro-Moscow government in Kabul fight anti-Marxist rebels.

Fathers check on search for sons

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — The fathers of two kidnapped Americans came to Harare today to check on the progress of the search for their sons and the four other tourists abducted with them last July 23.

William Ellis, a Seattle hotel executive, and Brooks Baldwin, of Walnut Creek, Calif., had meetings scheduled with U.S. Ambassador Robert Keeley and government officials involved in the hunt.

A receptionist at Meikles Hotel, where Ellis and Baldwin are staying, refused to connect a reporter to their room, saying: "They have specifically asked not to have to speak to the press."

Kevin Ellis, 24, a hotel worker from Bellevue, Wash., and Brett Baldwin, 23, of Seattle, were kidnapped by gunmen on a highway 40 miles north of the Matabeleland provincial capital of Bulawayo.

Two Australians and two Britons also were abducted. The group was on the last leg of an overland African safari.

Austrian leader, president meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky was meeting with President Reagan today amid strains in relations between the two countries over Austrian high technology exports to the Soviet bloc.

With Austria's national elections on April 24, Kreisky's visit is being viewed here as his response to opposition critics who claim his policies have needlessly damaged Austrian-American relations.

One sore point has been Kreisky's recognition of the Palestine Liberation Organization and his friendship with Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy.

The most divisive issue, however, centers on U.S. allegations that Austrian sales of electronic technology to the Soviet bloc have helped those countries enhance their military capability.

Kreisky has denied the American claims and said he has no plans to alter Austria's trade policies.

Vacant news agency offices bombed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A bomb exploded early today in the vacant west Beirut offices of Syria's official news agency SANA, police said.

Police said a bomb estimated to have weighed 22 pounds wrecked the entrance to the agency's offices on the fifth floor of a seven-story apartment building in the Moslem-populated Zukak Al-Balat neighborhood.

There were no casualties among the tenants, authorities added.

SANA's offices in Beirut have been closed since late last summer, during the Israeli invasion to rout Palestinian guerrillas from the capital.

Early election called for Australia

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser today called an early general election for March 5, citing threatened strikes and labor opposition to a government-proposed freeze on pay hikes as reasons for his decision.

His announcement of the early election came only hours after the Australian Labor Party leader in Parliament, Bill Hayden, announced he would resign as opposition leader to avoid a split in his party.

Fraser's election decision was seen as a move to capitalize on the apparent division in the Labor Party's ranks.

Fraser, 53, has been prime minister since 1975.

Water strike creates change in Welsh community's lifestyle

By MAUREEN JOHNSON

ABERDARE, Wales (AP) — Six times a day, 68-year-old Margaret Evans packs her rusty pram with a couple of two-gallon buckets, wheels it to an emergency hydrant a block away, fills the buckets and struggles back to her row house with a fresh load of water.

Like her neighbors in this south Wales coal mining town, Mrs. Evans is learning to live without running water during the nation's first strike by water and sewer workers.

"It's all I can manage at one time," said Mrs. Evans, whose husband Charlie is 82.

"Last week I kept telling him not to go to the toilet so often. We're trying to keep it to twice a day. Now I'm almost afraid to give him a cup of tea."

Charlie and Margaret Evans and their 120 neighbors, most retired miners, railmen and their wives or widows, are served by a water main that broke and went unrepaired because of the strike. They are among 21,000 families, more than 5,000 of them in Wales, with no running water in their homes.

The strike by 29,000 workers is nearing the end of its second week with management and unions deadlocked. Refusing to work are the manual laborers who normally provide service and repairs when water mains, automated pumps, chlorination systems and sewage plants break down.

About 6.6 million people out of the 49 million in England and Wales have been advised to boil water because of the threat of contamination.

Wales, a traditional breeding ground for tough labor unions, is among the worst-hit of the 10 government-controlled regional water authorities.

Local union leaders halted emergency services for hospitals and old-age homes this week, accusing the Welsh Water Authority of strikebreaking after managers and technicians opened several major plants and restored water to 60,000 people who had been cut off for about 12 hours.

Quebec leaders weigh strike action

QUEBEC (AP) — Province Premier Rene Levesque claimed an anarchistic "fringe" was behind union leaders' rejection of a tentative agreement covering 85,000 hospital workers, and renewed threats to take punitive action if they go back to the picket lines.

The 800-member governing council of the Federation of Social Affairs, a labor organization, voted Wednesday to reject a government offer which resulted in suspension of a 24-hour strike by the non-medical hospital workers.

The council was to meet today to decide the union's next step.

Nigerian order threatens refugees

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of West Africans have been expelled from Nigeria and are struggling to return to their homes in Ghana and other nations. Some are dying in the process, relief agencies say.

The exodus is the result of an order announced by the government Jan. 17, under which an estimated 2 million or more foreigners living and working in Nigeria were given two weeks to get out. The deadline expired at midnight Monday.

The order caught the aliens by surprise and has forced them to take to ships, boats and cars and set out on foot to return to homelands that are suffering economic problems of their own.

Question: Why did Nigeria issue the order?

Answer: The official reason was that aliens — most from Ghana but also from neighboring Niger, Cameroon, Chad and Benin — had stayed longer than the 90 days allowed under a regional economic agreement. Many also were in violation of the 1963 Immigration Act, which prohibits private-sector employment of non-Nigerians.

Internal Affairs Minister Al-Haji Baba said religious disturbances involving Moslem sects in northern Nigeria occurred because of the influx of aliens. Aliens also were blamed for an increase in crime.

Nigeria's economy, booming only a few years ago as oil revenues soared, is under severe strain because of the world oil glut. The construction industry, which employed mainly aliens, has been hard-hit by the recession. Aliens agreed to work for less than the official monthly minimum wage of $200.

AP Laserphoto

Question: Why did the aliens come to Nigeria?

Answer: Since Nigeria became a major oil exporter in the mid-1970s, hundreds of thousands of West Africans have flocked into the country to take jobs as teachers, doctors, technicians, clerks, domestic servants, construction workers and merchants.

With an estimated 90 million inhabitants, Nigeria is black Africa's most populous nation. But it lacks skilled and semi-skilled workers, particularly for teaching and construction jobs. There were an estimated 35,000 Ghanaians teaching in Nigerian schools before the expulsion order.

Question: Why were so many of the aliens from Ghana?

Answer: After gaining independence in 1957, Ghana was the most prosperous and developed nation in West Africa. But its comfortable standard of living eroded through a series of military coups, widespread corruption and falling world prices for cocoa — the main source of export revenue.

For thousands of professionals, skilled laborers and unemployed youths seeking work elsewhere, oil-rich Nigeria was the answer.

Question: Since West African nations achieved independence 20 years ago, have other governments ordered large-scale expulsions of aliens?

Answer: On Dec. 2, 1969, President Kofi Busia of Ghana signed an order expelling African foreigners from the country. Exact figures are not available but several hundred thousand Nigerians were known to have been expelled, including influential traders and businessmen. Many Nigerian families had lived for several generations in Ghana.

In May 1981, rioters in another oil-rich African nation — Gabon — attacked and burned neighborhoods where Cameroonians lived following the defeat of a Gabon soccer team in Cameroon. The Gabon government suggested the aliens would be wise to leave, and about 50,000 returned to Cameroon.

Question: Are there other West African Nations with large alien populations?

Answer: The Ivory Coast, with 8 million inhabitants, depends on migrant labor from Upper Volta to produce its coffee and cocoa. There are an estimated 2 million Voltaics living in the Ivory Coast. At least one-third of the 2 million residents of Abidjan, the capital, come from other African countries, mainly Senegal, Mali, Guinea, Ghana and Upper Volta. In 1969, there were riots in Abidjan against African foreigners.

Bush seeks accord for NATO allies

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Vice President George Bush conferred with NATO officials today, seeking renewed solidarity among the Western allies in U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms reduction talks.

Bush was greeted at NATO's sprawling headquarters here by alliance Secretary General Joseph Luns and Canadian Adm. Robert H. Falls, NATO's chief military adviser.

Officials preparing for the talks said Bush would stress the importance of strong defenses against a Soviet buildup of conventional and nuclear weapons.

He was meeting today with the ambassadors to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, and with the alliance's civilian and military staff.

Besides discussing the missile issue, Bush was expected to present again the Reagan administration's case for cutting back Western financial and trade relations with the Soviet Union.

The American vice president arrived Wednesday in Belgium, the third nation on a seven-country European tour.

Bush said on landing here that cracks in the Western defense alliance would hurt efforts to negotiate an end to "the chilling Soviet nuclear threat."

"If our unity and our resolve persuaded the Soviets to negotiate in the first place, to lessen our resolve now would only convince Moscow that we are not serious allies and thus that it need not negotiate in good faith," Bush told Belgian Prime Minister Wilfried Martens and a group of officials and reporters at Abelag Airport.

He is trying to assure American allies that the Reagan administration is doing all it can to reach agreement with the Soviets to eliminate or reduce the number of medium-range missiles in Europe.

U.S.-Soviet talks aimed at cutting the number of such medium-range missiles are under way in Geneva, Switzerland, parallel to talks on long-range strategic forces.

Bush has said U.S. negotiators are willing to listen to new Soviet proposals — even if they differ from the "zero option" plan proposed by President Reagan last year.

That plan calls for NATO to give up the planned deployment of 572 new U.S.-made nuclear missiles in Europe beginning in December — if the Soviets dismantle their SS-20 missiles at Western Europe.

Foreign Minister Leo Tindemans told reporters Wednesday that Belgium would live up to a promise to deploy its share of 48 cruise missiles, but only if there is a breakdown in U.S.-Soviet negotiations over medium-range missiles.

"If the Geneva talks do not succeed, deployment will follow," Tindemans told reporters on Bush's arrival.

Belgium is one of five NATO countries that agreed in 1979 to provide sites for the 572 new cruise and Pershing 2 missiles.

El Salvador fears U.S. will withdraw support

By WILLIAM GIANDONI
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Salvadorans are wondering if the United States is going to go on helping them fight leftist guerillas, members of the Reagan administration told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday.

Debate in the U.S. Congress and in the media over whether or not El Salvador should be aided in its prolonged struggle against insurgents supplied and encouraged by Nicaragua, Cuba and the Soviet Union only heightens the concern in El Salvador, the same officials said.

Appearing before the committee hearing on the Reagan administration's certification of El Salvador's progress on human rights, land reform and creation of democratic institutions, Assistant Secretary of State Thomas O. Enders told the committee that the hearings themselves "can threaten the morale of our friends in the (Central American) area who fear that (U.S.) aid may be suddenly withheld."

The State Department's top human rights specialist, Assistant Secretary Eliott Abrams, said that Salvadorans "are confused whether we are going to stick with them."

Nestor D. Sanchez, deputy assistant secretary of defense for inter-American affairs, testified that "we have them confused, totally confused.... What they are concerned about is are we going to cut them off."

Lt. Gen. Wallace H. Nutting, U.S. commander in Panama, told the senators that the United States "lacks credibility" all over Latin America because of its record of terminating military aid to governments that were fighting insurgency.

Although they agreed that the certification process that Congress wrote into law as a condition for continued military assistance has some value, each pointed to objectionable side effects.

Sanchez, for example, said that the Salvadoran high command "has been distracted from the principal task of fighting the guerrillas" by the demands put on it to act as guarantor of the political, economic and social reforms launched since the 1979 coup in El Salvador drove former president, Gen. Carlos H. Romero, from power.

Sanchez said that the Salvadoran "armed forces lack sufficient force to secure and hold enemy-infested areas and are short on mobility assets and firepower." He said that "a limitation in funding" has kept the United States from training another quick-reaction battalion.

Abrams said that Salvadorans have a right to be confused about U.S. steadfastness. "We are pushing them out on some very thin limbs," he said, "and they are not sure we are not going to cut them off.

"They are confused because they hear a lot of Americans who come down and say 'I will devote myself to cutting you off. I will dedicate myself to cutting you off.' Including members of Congress," Abrams said.

His comment came in response to questioning by Sen. Christoper Dodd, D-Conn., who was among the 17 delegations of concerned Americans who visited El Salvador in January.

Enders said that Congress should not be surprised at the divisions within Salvadoran society. "They question how constant we are," Enders said. He noted that an "enormous number" of Americans, including administration officials, army representatives, congressmen, TV personalities, doctors, missionaries and others were visiting El Salvador and voicing, often contradicting, opinions on what is going on and what should be happening.

According to Enders, the Salvadoran government forces, numbering some 32,000, are fighting against guerrillas who have 5,000 to 6,000 "front-line troops." The guerrillas are better coordinated, better equipped and better performing than a year ago. Their mortars are "clearly of foreign origin," Enders said of their new equipment. But they have not been able to operate effectively nationwide. They are strong, but regionalized, Enders, the State Department's top Latin American specialist, said.

The Defense Department's Sanchez said that "Salvadoran armed forces will likely make moderate progress in 1983 against the guerrillas who will probably continue protracted war tactics."

Gen. Nutting noted that there is a consensus in El Salvador that "we" are not striving to achieve military victory. He said that a military win is not achievable in El Salvador, but that there can be no political solution there unless the military is able to restore public order and security.

Leftist guerrillas begin slow, bloody withdrawal from Berlin

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas are slowly leaving the agriculture center of Berlin, but are battling government troops in the surrounding mountains to make their return to the city as bloody as possible, rebel spokesmen said.

The guerrillas' clandestine Radio Venceremos acknowledged in a midnight broadcast Wednesday that the rebel forces, estimated at 500-strong, had withdrawn from the center of Berlin.

It did not make clear how long they would continue skirmishing with at least 1,200 troops advancing from the hills to retake the city 70 miles east of San Salvador.

Journalists returning Wednesday from Berlin also said the rebels had left the center of the town of 30,000 and were attacking troops on the outskirts.

Guerrilla leaders were quoted as saying their goal was not to hold the city but to inflict as many casualties as possible on government troops before leaving the area.

The rebels captured Berlin Monday night, overwhelming less than 100 troops, police and militiamen with powerful salvos of bazooka fire and rocket-propelled grenades. The two-day battle left much of the city in flames and ruins.

Col. Rigoberto Blanco, commander of a battalion approaching Berlin from the north, said two of his men were killed and six wounded in heavy fighting at villages on their route.

Blanco told The Associated Press that rebels attacked army positions with 81mm mortars and automatic weapons, while the government troops used 105mm cannon to drive off the attacks.

Nearly 5,000 refugees have fled Berlin since the fighting started, relief workers said, including many who earlier had left homes elsewhere to find safety in the coffee and sugar cane center.

In Washington, Assistant Secretary of State Thomas O. Enders said the capture of Berlin, the largest city the rebels have seized in their 39-month-old war against the rightist government, was "a significant psychological action ... but not a significant military action."

He criticized Salvadoran troops for failing to react more quickly to the attack.

The rebels struck the Usulatan province city while thousands of government troops were conducting a 17-day sweep of Morazan province, which the government claimed killed 220 guerrillas. The guerrillas claim to have killed 307 soldiers since mid-January, but have not said where.

One Cuba is enough

The brutal political killings now afflicting Surinam on the northern coast of South America are distressing by any standard.

More is at stake in this tiny country, however, than the barbaric methods chosen by Lt. Col. Daysi Bouterse, Surinam's military strongman, to eliminate political opposition.

The 15 respectable citizens who were tortured and murdered by Bouterse's private armed force had strongly opposed their nation's growing ties with Cuba and other Marxist regimes. Their outspoken alarm, for which they paid with their lives, should ignite some real concern in the United States.

An effort by Cuba to establish the first communist beachhead on the South American continent since the demise of the Allende regime in Chile a decade ago should not be tolerated.

The United States has taken an appropriate first step by stopping the $1.5 million aid program for the country, once known as Dutch Guiana. And the Netherlands has suspended payment of $100 million annually to its former colony.

Pressure now must be kept on Bouterse to mend his ways. He should be told in unmistakable terms that the United States will not abide subversion of his nation by Cuba and the Soviet Union.

Moreover, Havana and Moscow should be put on notice that this Marxist penetration into the Western Hemisphere, which is of primary concern to the United States, will invite consequences.

With the brutal butchery of his opponents, Bouterse has demonstrated his affinity for Fidel Castro's philosophy.

But one Cuba in the Western Hemisphere is more than enough.

Stranger than fiction

It is the stuff of science fiction. Genetically engineered hybrid cells, potential cancer fighters, disappear from a laboratory on a California campus and end up in Japan.

But it is not fiction. It happened on the University of California at San Diego campus, and it dramatically demonstrates a need to clarify who controls genetic engineering breakthroughs and who profits from them.

No regulations, or legal precedents, exist to settle the controversy at UCSD where a researcher from Japan brought tumor tissue taken from his mother. The tissue was used to produce the hybrid cells known as human hybridoma.

But the researcher, Dr. Hideaki Hagiwara, returned to Japan, taking without permission some of the hybrid cells to treat his mother's cancer. The researcher's family, which operates an Osaka health research institute, now asserts part ownership of the cells, citing the origin of the tissue that produced them.

The UC patent office is negotiating with the Hagiwara family in an effort to avoid litigation. Obviously, court decisions, government regulations, and possibly international agreements ultimately will be needed to settle such troublesome issues.

Scientists traditionally share material for research purposes. But fast-moving genetic research has produced life forms with great commercial potential. Without guidelines, bitter and protracted struggles over control of these life forms will proliferate.

A complicating factor in the UCSD controversy is that Hybritech Inc., a firm in La Jolla, Calif., has helped finance development of human hybridoma at UCSD.

Theoretically, Hybritech could profit from its investment. Yet, the UC patent office has no formal agreement with Hybritech.

Regulations governing control of genetic research are inevitable, but some steps should be taken now. Donors of tissue and other body material should be required to waive ownership rights. Written agreements should cover participation of private firms in UC research.

Genetic research promises enormous benefits for mankind. They should not be delayed by avoidable litigation.

Another View:

Budgetary 'fine print'

The administration has struck a considerably more conciliatory tone than it sounded a year ago, but when you get down to the budget details, the differences from last year's budget are far less marked.

One major difference is that, thanks to the Social Security commission, the administration can present a credible program for tiding Social Security over its near-term financial difficulties. That compromise has given administration planners a good excuse for proposing a temporary freeze on federal civilian pay and on cost-of-living adjustments in other entitlement programs. If Congress will go along with the freeze — which is hard to justify in cases such as food stamps — it will produce hard savings of several billion dollars.

The administration has also put flesh on its long-promised proposals for curbing Medicare costs. The changes won't be popular with either the medical professions or the elderly, but they represent a reasonable attempt to put some measure of control on this runaway program. It's worth noting, however, that as administration planners have become more familiar with the difficulties of medical cost control, they have scaled back expected savings from the $4 billion level that the administration claimed last year for its then unspecified program.

There is a good bit of unrealism in other claimed savings. The $9 billion to be saved in agriculture subsidies is an example. So is the sharp cutback in federal retirement benefits. Reform is needed here, but not on the scale proposed. And Congress isn't likely to go along with the plans for job training programs either. Some fancy budgetary footwork in administration summaries makes it look as though an increase were planned in this area. But in fact spending is scheduled for another drop.

The part of the budget least changed from last year deals with programs for the poor. Once again, these programs — welfare, nutrition, social and legal services and so on — are scheduled for substantial cuts in purchasing power. Leaving aside housing programs, which will continue spending for past commitments but will ultimately drop sharply, programs for the poor would buy 18 percent less than in 1981. Take account of the facts that unemployment has made more people eligible for these programs and that soaring medical costs have absorbed an ever greater part of the money available, and you will find that the average poor person already receives far less real help than he did a few years ago.

Essentially the new budget presents Congress with the same bleak prospect: having to persuade powerful middle-class lobbies to relinquish some part of their substantial interests in federal spending and requiring the poorest and least defended of the nation's citizens to give up a still larger share of their meager claims.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Wilson aide says Thurmond accepted bribe

WASHINGTON — Ex-CIA agent Edwin P. Wilson is a preternaturally suspicious man. He let his guard down once, was tricked into the FBI's hands and is now in jail — convicted of smuggling arms to Libya.

Jack Anderson

But when Wilson was still wheeling and dealing in the murky world of international intrigue, he never trusted any of his employees or business partners to do what they were supposed to do. And that is why, after a lapse of several years, a former Wilson hireling has emerged to claim that he personally saw bribes passed to Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C. The witness was assigned, he avows, to make sure the alleged bribe was passed.

The Justice Department's investigation of these astonishing charges might understandably be a bit gingerly. Thurmond is the chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, with awesome power over the department. But fortunately, the investigation is being handled by assistant U.S. Attorney E. Lawrence Barcella, who has earned a reputation as a tough, honest prosecutor. Thurmond vigorously denies accepting any bribe.

The new witness said he was assigned by Wilson to spy on other Wilson associates, including the middleman who allegedly passed the bribe money to Thurmond. The witness said he hadn't come forward earlier because he was wary of Wilson, who had threatened him and who seemed to be operating with the CIA's blessing.

He has told his story to Justice Department investigators. Here are excerpts from a sworn statement obtained by my associate Dale Van Atta:

"I do swear I was in the employ of Edwin Paul Wilson. Wilson casually introduced me to (the middleman) at (Wilson's office in Washington, D.C.).

"(The middleman) would regularly come to (the Arlington, Va.) office of Delex International Inc..., a Wilson-sponsored company. On three separate occasions (a Delex employee) handed (the middleman) thick manila envelopes stuffed with money. It was a specific procedure that these envelopes, No. 10 size, were not marked in any way...

"I witnessed (the employee) counting the money out on a (card) table ... They were particularly memorable episodes, because Delex had to have money in Riggs Bank on the same days to cover checks, and cash was counted out for that as well. To the best of my recollection, the amount I witnessed on each of these three occasions was $10,000 even...

"(The employee) handed these envelopes to (the middleman) ... Each time, soon after he left, I followed him, as I had been instructed to do by my employer, Wilson. He told me that whenever (the middleman) had an important delivery to make, I was to follow him and verify what (he) did with each delivery. Wilson didn't trust any of the employees at Delex with his money ... I followed him in my own car."

The first time the middleman left with the boodle, the witness lost him in traffic. But the next two times, he tailed him to the Capitol Hill Club, where the middleman met Thurmond, "whom I know by sight," the witness stated.

"On each occasion, shortly after they greeted each other and sat down," the sworn statement continues, "(the middleman) would pass the envelope during conversation to Sen. Strom Thurmond. It was done casually, and over the top of the table. Each time, Sen. Thurmond came alone. He accepted the envelope casually. Shortly after this each time, I left.

"As soon as it was feasible, I would place a call to Wilson wherever he was ... at home ... office or in London or somewhere else abroad. In the course of the conversation about other business matters, I would tell him I had followed (the middleman) from Delex International to the Capitol Hill Club, where the delivery was made to the 'same man.' I did not identify the senator or the nature of the delivery item on the phone."

On the advice of his attorney, the former Wilson aide has not taken a lie-detector test. However, he has agreed to testify under penalty of perjury before a grand jury.

Sen. Thurmond told me he, too, is ready to testify before the same grand jury and deny the story.

UNDER THE DOME: Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., has his eye on the White House, but he has the drawback of coming from the Deep South, like the unlamented Jimmy Carter. Hollings feels this is unfair, and suggests that guilt by regional association should also be invoked against a rival for the Democratic nomination, California Sen. Alan Cranston. The Golden State's three presidents, Hollings notes, were Herbert Hoover, Richard Nixon and Ronald Reagan.

— When the new Hart Senate Office Building was completed last year, senators vied with each other to denounce its high cost. But that hasn't stopped them from moving into its elegant environment. Such senior senators as Howard Baker, R-Tenn., Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., Alan Cranston, D-Calif., Robert Dole, R-Kan., Henry Jackson, D-Wash., Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., and William Roth, R-Del., have claimed offices in the marble palace.

— Members of Congress traditionally decorate the walls of their outer offices with photographs of themselves posing with former or incumbent presidents of the White House, regardless of party affiliation. Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd is no exception. One snapshot betrays a hint of wishful thinking, though. It shows President Reagan, Vice President George Bush and Sens. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, seated together — with Byrd at the head of the table.

GEORGE F. WILL

Democrats' movie shows distaste for 'facts'

WASHINGTON — Consider, for what it reveals about the Democrats' fitness to govern, their party's telecast "response" (a movie made before the President's message was written) to the State of the Union address. Consider especially what the Democrats saw fit to have Rep. Thomas Daschle of South Dakota say about the gravest issue, defense:

George F. Will

"The examples of waste are unbelievable. One, for instance, the Pentagon spent more than $3 million last year for shots and veterinary care for the pet dogs of generals."

Jeepers! That is $2,798.50 for every general's pet. When I called Daschle's office for substantiation, I was referred to remarks printed in the Congressional Record by Rep. Les Aspin (D-Wis.), who has made a career of hectoring the Defense Department. Daschle's statement turns out to have been an inaccurate gloss on what Aspin said, and what Aspin said was wrong.

Aspin said, "The Pentagon is spending more than $3 million a year to subsidize veterinary care for dogs and cats owned by people in the services." Daschle said "generals" just to add an icing of demagoguery to Aspin's cake of demagoguery. Eighty percent of personnel using veterinary services are of the rank sergeant or below.

Aspin concocted the figure $3,328,831 as "the taxpayer bill for providing pet care" by erroneously estimating the amount of time military veterinarians spend dealing with privately owned animals; by missing the fact that such care is offered only on a "space available" basis; by not allowing for the fact that so little time is devoted to such care that eliminating it would not make possible reduction of the number of military veterinarians; by multiplying the number of veterinary services by the difference between what private sector veterinarians charge and the lower fees charged by military vets.

Actually, the Pentagon makes money on pet care.

The principal duties of Army and Air Force vets (the Navy has none) are food inspection and care for animals (such as horses and guard dogs) used in military functions. Clearly, it is proper for military vets to provide services relating to disease prevention (registration, examination, immunization, quarantine, administering stray dog pounds, etc.), and emergency humanitarian service to prevent undue suffering, among animals owned by persons living on military installations. Elective surgical procedures such as spaying and nutering (spelling)? are performed only when civilian services are not reasonably available.

Pet owners pay the full cost of supplies and drugs, plus an additional charge to help defray the general overhead of veterinary services. Yes, of course, there is a difference between fees charged by private sector vets and military vets. This difference that scandalizes Aspin and Daschle is explained by the fact (I'll say this slowly, fellows) that military vets are not allowing full play to the profit motive.

But the veterinary service for private pets is making a profit. In 1981 the Air Force made $647,000 on such services, and the money was used to support morale, welfare and recreational services. The American Veterinary Medical Association has concurred in this policy of prophylactic medicine.

Oh, yes — one more thing. Aspin's remarks filled about a page-and-a-half of the Congressional Record, costing taxpayers about $1,000.

This "generals' pets" canard, which figured in some Democrats' campaigns last autumn, suggests the depths of anti-defense bigotry in the Democratic Party, which selected the canard for prime-time television. The virus of McGovernism is still in the party's system. And it was not just regarding defense that the Democrats' movie was, well, relaxed about facts.

An AFL-CIO operative denounced as administration "proposals" ideas that were never proposed. Someone identified only as a "retired businessman" took a silly statement by a middle-level official concerning civil defense, distorted the statement, and falsely attributed it to "the head of Civil Defense." And a congresswoman said:

"We have proposed the Byrd-Wright Interest Rate Bill. It directs the Federal Reserve Board to make sure interest rates are lowered and lowered automatically in relation to inflation, to a level that has been our historic policy for more than 30 years." Actually there was a Byrd bill and there was a Wright bill and they, like the Synoptic Gospels, contained small differences that some people consider important. Anyway, a bill can "direct" the Fed to fine-tune rates, but it is beyond the Fed's capability to do so.

The message of the Democrats' movie was that the party will not let facts be a killing frost in its garden of fantasies.

ART BUCHWALD

Redskin fan couldn't have done it alone!

It's hard to imagine what happens to a person who lives in a town that has won the Super Bowl. For Washington, D.C., a city that never gets any respect, you have to be very careful so all the adulation doesn't go to your head.

Art Buchwald

I am happy to report as a Redskin fan I've kept the greatest football victory in modern history in its proper perspective.

It hasn't been easy, because ever since the final whistle of Super Bowl XVII blew I've been taking calls from all over the country from friends congratulating me on the championship.

On Monday, when the first one came in, I resorted to what I now realize was false modesty. When the caller said, "Congratulations, you were magnificent," I responded, "I had nothing to do with the win, though of course I am happy with the results."

"What do you mean you had nothing to do with it? You've been a Redskin fan for years. Jack Kent Cooke, the owner, and Joe Gibbs, the coach, said on nationwide television they couldn't have won the championship without the fans."

"We were always there when they needed us," I admitted. "But just because you root for a team doesn't mean you can take any credit when it wins."

"It's typical of someone like you to play down your role," he said. "But I want you to know I am proud I have a friend in Washington who never lost faith that his team would win all the Super Bowl marbles."

The calls kept coming in — from Oklahoma City, Chicago, Los Angeles, and even Dallas, congratulating me on the magnificent victory I had achieved.

By early afternoon I decided to drop the pose that I had nothing to do with the Redskin triumph.

When a call came in from an old college schoolmate in San Francisco, I changed my tune.

"I never thought when we roomed together that someday you would be a Super Bowl champion," he said.

"I couldn't do it alone," I told him. "There were 49 other guys on the field that I have to share the triumph with. The thing that did it for us is that we played together as a team."

"But you were a believer from the beginning. It was your inspiration that defeated the Miami Dolphins."

"I only did what any Redskin fan would do under the circumstances. I yelled my heart out."

"I know you're just saying that, but I'm sure you had a lot more to do with it than that."

"Let's just say it was a team effort and let it go at that. I don't want any of the other Redskins to think I'm getting more than my share of the credit."

By late afternoon I decided I had been protesting too much.

When Bob Markay, a Jet fan from Long Island, called to say if anyone deserved towin the Super Bowl it was me, I told him,"After my game against Dallas, I was sure I could beat the Dolphins. Their defense was overrated and I knew if I could open a hole for John Riggins, he would do what he was paid to do. In the fourth quarter when we were down 17 to 13, I told Joe Theismann, my quarterback, 'The game isn't over until the fat lady sings.' It gave him new life, and the kid took it from there."

Bob said, "Nobody deserves a Super Bowl ring more than you."

"The ring is important," I told him. "But what really counts is that I'm finally going to get some respect."

That night when I got home I asked my wife if there were any calls.

"Why? Were you expecting any?"

"I thought President Reagan might call to congratulate me on my victory."

"Why would he call you?"

"Well, he telephoned the Redskin coach, Joe Gibbs, after the game. The least he could have done is call me."

"It's still early," she said. "Maybe he'll ring you after he gets a reaction to his budget."

"It really doesn't matter," I said. "I know I'm number one and he knows I'm number one, and that's the only thing that really counts."

Saigon's Caravelle Hotel survived bomb's blasts

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

Mulligan's Stew

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Putting away the tree ornaments and light sets the other day, I came across an old Christmas card that has since haunted my dreams like nightly visits from the Ghost of Christmas Past.

On the face of the card was a color photograph of the nine-story Caravelle Hotel in downtown Saigon, where I spent more time than in some of the apartments and houses I lived in during a lifetime of roving.

Inside in gold letters was the inscription:

"Ninh Chuo Tan Nien
"Phuc Loc Tho Khang Ninh."

PRESUMABLY THIS means "Best Wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year," because such was the sentiment spelled out in French and English on the facing side and — for all I know — that is probably what the Chinese characters, only four of them, spelled out at the bottom.

The card was signed, in red ink (as if anticipating the denouement of that tragedy), "the management, Hotel Caravelle, Saigon-Vietnam" and dated Dec. 25, 1972. So Christmas a decade ago was calling me back. On the 10th anniversary of the Paris peace accords. I parked myself on a stack of old National Geographics in the cellar, among the scattered boxes of Christmas impediments, and let my memory traverse the years and miles.

Among my souvenirs of months, years, really, I suppose, spent in the Caravelle Hotel are a handsome baby blue ceramic ash tray ornamented with figures of full masted sailing ships (caravelles, in French), five jagged sticks of shrapnel, which my wife has inserted in a bowl of pebbles like a weird flower arrangement, and a black lacquered sign imprinted in gold with the wheel of Rotary International and the inscription:

"Rotary Club Gia-Dinh Meets Here
1st Wednesday - Lunch - 12:30
2nd Wednesdays-Tea - 19:00"

THE ASH TRAY was liberated from the Caravelle's rooftop bar, where you could sip a citron-presse or a gin and bitters and watch the war, see the slow-diving Skyraiders bombing suspected enemy supply hideouts south of the city, watch a helicopter assault on a village under attack and occasionally witness a freighter being blown up by Viet Cong sappers on its way up the winding Saigon River. One day near the end of the war saboteurs blew up a government ammo dump on the outskirts of the city. The resulting incendiary display was the best I had ever seen until the fireworks in Hyde Park on the eve of Prince Charles' wedding.

The silvery and white shrapnel shards wound up on my balcony amid a blizzard of broken glass when a 122 M Soviet rocket hit the National Assembly building just across the street, tearing an enormous hole in the roof and wall of what had been the old French opera house. The sound was deafening, and our hotel shook so much I thought it had been hit.

But the Caravelle led a charmed life, escaping the terrorists blasts that wrecked other hotels where Americans were billeted and suffering its only war damage from occasional drunken brawls among its military and journalist guests. There was a recurring rumor that the hotel was off limits to enemy attack because it was jointly owned by Air France and the Catholic archdiocese. I had an office on the ground floor and the morning after the rocket attack on the assembly building broke some hotel windows a little Vietnamese priest wearing a French cure's shovel-shaped chapeau came with a clipboard and inspected the damages.

The Rotary sign was slipped into my luggage by some colleague-prankster on the morning of my final departure from Saigon. When I found it upon arrival in London, I knew it wasn't a farewell gift from the hotel management.

ALTHOUGH THE CARAVELLE had a marvelously efficient housekeeper, a no-nonsense French matron from Normandy who kept the room boys on their toes by lining them up for uniform inspection like a drill sergeant. The hotel was not distinguished for its service. One night a bat flew into my room and I called down to the front desk.

"That is not part of my job," the Indian night manager informed me in the clipped accents of his native Bengal.

I raced down to the lobby and insisted that I had booked a single room and was not prepared to share it with Dracula's younger brother. Finally, he dispatched an elderly Vietnamese cleanup lady who attacked the visitor with a broom, caught up with it in the draperies and slipped the carcass into her shopping bag.

"She will have that for her soup tomorrow," the desk clerk told me.

Another night Bob Considine was hosting a cocktail party for his visiting boss, William Randolph Hearst Jr., and was having trouble getting ice for the drinks. The roomboy kept bringing a saucer with two or three cubes.

Exasperated, Considine got in the phone to room service, shouting, "I need a large bowl of ice, a large bowl of ice." He was informed the kitchen was closed, but they would see what could be done. Presently a waiter arrived with a large bowl of steaming rice.

A FRIEND AT Pan Am called me one day and told me if I went down to the lobby I might find someone interesting. There was Charles Lindbergh, the elusive lone eagle traveling with the Pan Am board of directors, and I cornered him for a rare interview. Not that celebrities were all that rare at the Caravelle. John Steinbeck had the room upstairs from me and used to drop by regularly for a wee drop at a time when his wife was trying to keep him on the wagon. James Jones, who really had sworn off, sometimes came by for a can of PX orange juice. I had dinner with Bernard Fall in the Caravelle the night before he was killed by a booby trap along Route 1, which he made famous as "The Street Without Joy."

Mostly I remember Wednesdays at the Caravelle Hotel, when all those Vietnamese and Chinese businessmen, along with a few Indian money changers, showed up in jackets and ties for the weekly Rotary Club meeting.

Now that peace and the North Vietnamese have come to Saigon I wonder who sits in the rooftop bar these days and what has become of the Gia-Dinh Rotary Club.

Telephone company gives bluebirds a home

FLORENCE, S.C. (AP) — A special class of transients will have plenty of new accommodations along South Carolina interstate highways by the end of February.

The travelers are eastern bluebirds, and their new facilities will be boxes installed along highways near the wooded areas where bluebirds like to nest and feed.

They used to nest in abandoned holes in fence posts that had been hollowed out by woodpeckers. But creosote and other preservatives made the posts useless to the woodpeckers, leaving the bluebirds with a housing shortage and dwindling numbers.

Pioneers of the Telephone Industry, a civic group of telephone company employees, will do the building and installing between now and the end of the month — 556 boxes in all.

Flirting good for soul, lifelong flirt says

SEATTLE (AP) — Go ahead, bat those baby blue eyes. Smile that cute, crooked little smile. Flirting is good for your soul and your social life, says a woman who teaches a "How To Flirt" workshop.

"Flirting is not a promise of sexual encounter. It's just being friendly and making friends," Cynthia Kline, 27, instructor and a lifelong flirt, said with a wink.

"To flirt correctly, you have to feel good about yourself. It's good for you. You can't be depressed and flirt," she added, smiling and twirling a curl of brown hair on her fingers.

Flirting can be a look, a smile, a gentle touch. A rudimentary knowledge of body language is vital, she said. For instance, if you fold your arms in front of you, you probably don't want to be bothered.

"A natural flirt will flirt with anybody, men, women, cats, dogs," said Ms. Kline, who is single. "I think Marilyn Monroe probably walked into a room and flirted with tables and chairs."

Ms. Kline, who has a master's degree in business administration from the University of Puget Sound and works as a sales representative in a downtown Xerox outlet, spent six months "flirting and observing" to prepare to teach.

Homework took her to bistros, elevators, stores, bus stops, hotel lobbies. She went to the University of Washington library, where she found material listed under "Flirting."

"At self-service gasoline stations, I didn't have to pump my own gas most of the time because those guys are suckers for flirting. They're sweethearts," she said.

Census data incorrect

From Wire Reports

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Census Bureau has issued revised per-capita-income data for about 400 of the nation's 3,100 counties after finding that some of its clerks made errors when they took information from the forms in the 1980 census.

The corrections, which indicate that the data first reported for some localities was too high, will cause changes in revenue sharing and other federal grant programs where the money distributed is tied closely to census information.

Correcting the errors also is expected to hold up new reports by three or four months, officials said, in a census that cost more than $1 billion and already is about a year slower in issuing much of its data than the count conducted in 1970.

Although the mistakes have little effect on national statistics or those for large counties and states, their impact on some smaller places is substantial. For example, the bureau has cut $1,413 from the $6,574 per capita income reported for Appomatox, Va., and $1,065 from the $7,978 for Petersburg, Va.

"When you have large numbers of people doing repetitive clerical work, something's bound to happen," said Peter Bounpane, assistant director of the Census Bureau for demographic censuses. "We're correcting all those things that are wrong. But next time (in 1990), we're trying to make the census far more automated than this one."

All the mistakes were in one direction, Bounpane said, making reported incomes too high.

Bounpane said the mistakes occurred as clerks pored through the long forms, containing detailed information, filled out by about 15 million of the nation's 80 million households.

On the questions asking income in 1979, he said, clerks were supposed to round off amounts to the nearest $10 and take off the last zero before filling in circles that could be read by optical scanners and fed into computers.

"Unfortunately, sometimes they kept in those last zeros," Bounpane said, "or they filled in the circles from the left so the amounts are too large by (factors of) 10 or 100 or 1,000."

Bounpane said the Census Bureau believes the mistakes affected only about 0.5 percent of the forms nationwide. But where they occurred is very uneven, depending on what particular clerks did. The greatest number of mistakes, he said, seem to be in the South.

In the worst case found so far, 8.6 percent of the forms were incorrectly coded in Treutlen County in rural Georgia. The Census Bureau has lowered its reported per capita income by $3,843. In Taylor County, Ga., the mistake came to $3,602 per capita.

"It hasn't made much difference for big places where you have enough good data to keep the errors from changing the results," said Paul Manka, an offical of the census data users service. "But if you put a millionaire in a small town, it can really distort things."

Malnutrition worsens in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Unemployment and rising prices are worsening the problem of malnutrition in Mexico, nutrition experts say.

Marta Guerrero Belmonte and Adrian Quintero Gutierrez, president and vice president of the Mexican Nutrition Association, said 80 percent of Mexicans do not have a proper diet and 60 percent have suffered malnutrition or hunger at some point during their lives.

"Mexico is already a nation of rampant malnutrition," they said during a ceremony on Nutritionist Day last week.

Fact: Lady Rebs can secure state playoff berth against Abilene

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Life seems easy for the Lady Rebels of Midland Lee these days.

Fact: Lee needs a victory at 8 p.m. tonight over Abilene High at Chaparral Center to earn a District 4-5A state basketball playoff berth.

Fact: Abilene High has not won a district game in 11 tries and don't appear capable of beating anyone after a big portion of the players were kicked off the team earlier this year.

Fact: If Midland High should fall to Abilene Cooper tonight in Abilene, the Lee Rebels can officially hang a district championship banner in the Lee gym to go with the four others they have won or shared.

Fact: Despite the fact that Midland High is the only team with any kind of chance of catching the Rebels, the Bulldogs have now become Lee's best friend and probably would just as soon see Lee win the rest of their games.

In addition to Abilene High tonight at the Chap, Lee has games left with Odessa Permian and Big Spring, both of which are playoff hopeful teams with 7-4 marks. Midland High won, for the time being at least, sole possession of second place Monday with a win over Big Spring with an 8-3 record.

That means Lee can help MHS gain the district's second playoff berth with victories over Permian and Big Spring while the Bulldogs would only then have to worry about an outing against San Angelo to end the season next Thursday.

Lee is coming off an impressive victory over San Angelo and owns a big nine-game winning streak.

"We can rest a little easier after the win over San Angelo," noted Lee coach Shirley Stephenson. "That was a big game for us and this one tonight is a big one since we can get in the playoffs with a win."

Midland High easily defeated Cooper at home in first half action, but MHS coach Jane Young isn't taking the game lightly. "I'm glad that one's (Big Spring) out of the way, but I won't be happy until we get in the playoffs. Cooper can be tough and we can't take them lightly. They would love to upset someone. We still have our work cut out for us," said Young.

Midland High's Rebecca Caton is the hottest scorer in town right now with 65 points in her last three games with outings of 22, 23 and 20 points while Shelia Christian continues to pace the city scorers with a 14.0 per game average.

Felicia Farias (13.6), Yshun King (12.9) and Stacy Harmon (10.5) have given Lee consistent point production this year. Harmon is suffering from a bad ankle, but she is expected to play.

Lee's Queen Sanders (6.2) gives the Lady Rebs depth in the front line.

Raiders' 'Senor Sack' honored

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — This city is steeped in history and accustomed to landmarks, but it is taking time to honor one of its legends.

This South Texas city that is the home of the Alamo, the HemisFair needle and the River Walk also wants it known Wednesday it is the home of Gabriel Rivera — all 285 pounds of him.

Townspeople lifted a margarita and crunched a taco in honor of "Senor Sack," who gave quarterbacks the quakes and centers the headaches.

It was "Gabriel Rivera Day," in honor of the hometown hero who made The Associated Press All-America first team as a noseguard for the Texas Tech Red Raiders.

Rivera was following in the lofty tradition of such San Antonio All-Americans as Texas' Tommy Nobis and Rice's Tommy Kramer.

"It's a proud day," said Rivera, who was joined in the celebrations by his mother and two brothers.

He slipped into his size 56 coat for the busy day, but promised not to consume 27 tacos for lunch as he did one time.

Once he ate 14 hamburgers after practice at Thomas Jefferson High School.

"I've been rubbing elbows with the professional scouts and I want to be trim," said Rivera, who can run an amazing 4.7 seconds in the 40 despite his massive frame.

Rivera recently played in the Blue-Gray game where he was the object of much oohing and aahing by the scouts.

The plaudits Wednesday included lunch at The Plaza Club with Mayor Henry Cisneros and Texas Tech President Dr. Lauro Cavazos, Tech Athletic Director John Conley, Red Raider Coach Jerry Moore and others.

There was a 1:30 p.m. visit to City Hall for the "Gabe Rivera Day" proclamation.

At halftime of the San Antonio Spurs' National Basketball Association game, Rivera was to receive his AP All-America plaque.

At Texas Tech, as a 315-pound freshman, his first jersey was handmade by a seamstress because the Red Raiders couldn't order one big enough.

When the Southwest Conference press tour came through, Rivera got his nickname of "Senor Sack."

After his freshman year, he went on a diet. His mother fixed him nothing but tuna while the rest of the house had tortillas and tacos.

The running joke was that Rivera ate tuna, a school at a time.

Someone said he would go to McDonald's just to watch the numbers change.

The highlight of his career was when he made AP national lineman of the week in a 14-7 loss to Washington.

The Husky players were awed by his size, strength and speed.

Anthony Allen of Washington told him, "Hey, if you ever come back to Seattle you can stay at my home any time."

Gerulaitis expects to be charged in cocaine deal

NEW YORK (AP) — Vitas Gerulaitis, the world's fifth-ranked tennis player, says he expects to be charged with being involved in a conspiracy to buy cocaine.

Gerulaitis, in interviews with New York newspapers, said Wednesday he had been told that federal charges are about to be filed by the U.S. Attorney in Manhattan, but, the 28-year-old tennis star insisted there was no basis for any indictment.

"I'm totally innocent of all these charges. I'm definitely going to plead not guilty if they go ahead and indict me," he said.

Gerulaitis expects the charges to contend that he was involved in a conspiracy to buy approximately $20,000 worth of cocaine while he was playing in last year's Volvo Masters tournament in Madison Square Garden.

Professional tennis players found guilty of a felony or conduct "severely damaging to the sport" can be suspended for up to three years and fined as much as $20,000, said M. Marshall Harper, administrator of the Men's International Professional Tennis Council.

Gerulaitis, who earned more than $400,000 in tournaments last year, has maintained that his game has been affected by the cocaine controversy as well as his reputation.

"This has been a very difficult period," he said. "This could be very damaging to me."

He said he had lost two product endorsements since his name was mentioned in a drug trial last summer.

The New York Daily News in today's editions quoted sources close to the case as saying that U.S. Attorney John Martin was moving to indict Gerulaitis in the face of opposition from some members of his staff.

"We expect that an indictment will be returned," said Thomas P. Puccio, Gerulaitis' lawyer.

Puccio, who recently returned to private practice after serving as chief prosecutor in the Abscam investigation into political corruption, said Gerulaitis was not being accused of planning to sell any of the cocaine.

The expected charges were based on allegations made against Gerulaitis by Tony Goble, 36, a champion backgammon player who was convicted on cocaine-conspiracy last September.

The News said it had been told by its sources that Goble had agreed to testify against Gerulaitis in exchange for a substantial reduction in the 15-year prison term he was facing. In sealed proceedings last month, Goble was sentenced to a year in jail, the newspaper said.

The case against Goble stems from an undercover Drug Enforcement Administration investigation last year. It began when agents posing as traffickers "put the word out" that they were willing to sell high-quality pharmaceutical cocaine at low prices.

Gerulaitis' name surfaced when Goble boasted to the undercover agents that he was buying the cocaine for the tennis star, whom he described as a close friend. He told the agents that Gerulaitis would bankroll the deal with $20,000 after he finished the Volvo tournament.

The deal was never consummated.

Chaps travel to Hobbs, will face NMJC's best this time around

Midland College's last two games were billed as "serious" challenges for the Chaparrals and wound up blow outs. Again tonight, MC is faced with a foe labeled as "formidable", but before you start laughing, consider one big difference.

The Clarendon College and South Plains College floor mops occured at Langford Chaparral Center. Tonight Midland College must travel to Hobbs, N.M., to play New Mexioc Junior College. The Thunderbirds will not only be playing at home, but will have their best player in the lineup. The first time around, he was not eligible.

Game time is 9 p.m.

Going into this week's games, it was felt that first place would be at stake tonight, but Clarendon College took some of the pressure off the Chaps by shocking the Thunderbirds, 84-80, Monday night. That leaves NMJC with three league losses and MC with a two-game cushion.

"We thought we would be going over there to determine first place," Stone said, "But their loss gives the game a different perspective. Now we need to win in order to put some daylight between us and several other teams. This is one we need to win, since we still have to face Amarillo and we get Howard over at Big Spring. Frank Phillips is another toughie, and we have to go on the road to play Western Texas."

MC won 92-71, bad enough, but at one point MC led by 29 points before the steady stream of substitutions caused the Chaps' to lose some of their continuity and the offense slowed down to a walk.

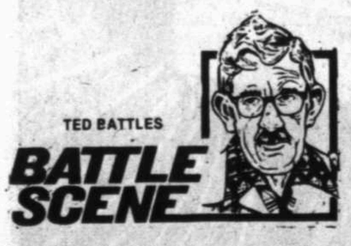
After the Chaparrals got through with South Plains Monday, all that remained was a few charred embers. MC scorched the Texas with searing shooting streaks by Nate Bufford, Jerome Crowe and Chester Smith while Spud Webb dazzled them with his sleight of hand and fancy foot work and then kicked them with a 15-point last half.

The win gives MC a 10-1 Western Junior College Conference record and a 21-3 mark overall.

"One of the best things about it was the crowd," said Stone later. "It was a good crowd and a responsive crowd, which always makes us play better."

MC will travel to Roswell Monday to play New Mexico Military Institute....Amarillo College moved into a tie for second with NMJC by defeating Odessa College, 60-39 Monday.

Riggins is not your typical NFC back



Super Bowl victories by the National Football Conference come just a little more frequently than American League All-Star victories over the National League.

Sunday the NFC notched one of those rare victories and, it could have been coincidence, although it more probably reflects the difference in inter-conference philosophies, but it was the first time an NFC back had gained more than 100 yards in a Super Bowl game.

John Riggins not only surpassed the century mark, but set a Super Bowl record with 166 yards, which is perhaps belaboring the point.

Riggins is not an NFC type back. The NFC goes for the finesse back, the one-play game breaker. The AFC is equipped with those too, but usually there's a Franco Harris in the lineup, a guy who can block, catch passes, but, most of all, can gouge out short chunks of real estate without fumbling and while consuming large segments of time.

John Riggins

Thoroughbreds are for show. Their day is short. The Morgan horse is still lugging logs after dark. Teams that win Super Bowls generally are equipped with Morgan Horses. In the AFC, everybody seems to have one.

THANKS to the NFLPA strike that forced a jackknifed season, the National Football League may have stumbled on something by accident.

With a history clanging with clunkers, this year's game turned out to be one of the better games in Super Bowl history. Could it have been that with only one week between games instead of the media-deluged two weeks, the teams were better able to retain the momentum and competitive edge honed over a regular season and successive playoff games? It's something NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle might address.

AS FOR the game it self, Washington's 27-17 victory was unexpected in some quarters, but once the game began, the biggest surprise was that the margin wasn't more decisive.

From the outset, the Redskins were quite obviously the superior team and Joe Theismann's experience plainly gave him a decisive edge over a tentative David Woodley, playing in his first big money game.

The Dolphins made a game of it on the basis of an early bomb from Woodely to Jim Cefalo and that 98-yard kickoff return by Fulton Walker. And if Theismann hadn't earned defensive honors for the day when he tipped away his own deflected pass on what could have been a gimme touchdown late in the third quarter, the Dolphins could have wrapped it up with another stroke of touchdown lightning.

DESPITE their apparent superiority, the Skins looked for much of the day like a natural disaster in the process of happening.

First, the play selection was suspect. On the opening drive, three rushes by Riggins produce a first down, then the offensive board of strategy decided it was too much work and got cute...drive aborted.

On the Skins second drive, with a third and one after two Riggins rushes, Theismann is sacked for a loss... abort drive.

After driving from their six to the Miami 14 in less than a minute, the Skins, out of time outs and with only 14 seconds left in the half, eschewed a field goal to go for a possible TD. The pass is complete, but not to the sidelines and time runs out with Washington on the three-yard line.

In the second half, in view of Washington's offensive domination of the proceedings, the Skins offensive bungling was giving them more trouble than the Miami defense, until Riggins, who, if he had been a Thoroughbred, would have been through for the day, after 35 carries, broke that 42-yard go ahead TD on a fourth and inches for the go-ahead TD.

Midland visitor will run in London Marathon

Paul Taylor, a Londoner who has been visiting his wife's family in Midland, has announced that he plans to return home March 1 and run in the third annual London Marathon on April 17.

The London Marathon is the largest marathon in the world with over 18,000 runners entered for the event.

The race covers 26.2 miles with runners passing landmarks such as the Old Royal Observatory, the Royal Naval College, Tower Bridge, St. Paul's Cathedral, Buckingham Palace and Trafalgar Square.

While in Midland, Taylor is visiting the home of Aaron and Betty Giebel, his wife's family and is continuing to train.

But why is Taylor entering the mass run? "Well, because it's there," is one of his reasons. "Last year it really was 'there' for me. The race starts a few hundred yards from my front door in Blackheath and the bug bit me then.

"Since then I have trained and made plans to raise money for two charities while running in the marathon."

The charities are Guide Dogs for the Blind and the Kidney Unit of King's College Hospital in London.

Taylor has set up a charity fund with the proceeds to go to the two charities. Midlanders may join in Taylor's quest by making contributions to the Paul Taylor London Marathon Charity Fund, Claydesta National Bank, P.O. Box 3090, account No. 300-952-1. Receipts will be provided.

The marathon route starts in Greenwich Park by the Old Royal Observatory, which overlooks Queen's House and the Royal Naval College. The spot is famous for the Greenwich Meridian, the zero line of longitude that divides the eastern and western hemispheres. The course then takes in Shooter's Hill and back to riverside Greenwich, past the old sailing clipper Cutty Sark.

Then it's own through Deptford while following the river to the halfway point of Tower Bridge and the old dockland area. St. Paul's Cathedral, Fleet Street (home of the big national newspapers, Buckingham Palace, Trafalgar Square, Whitehall and Parliament Square follow. The finish line is on the Westminster Bridge.

Not even the famed Boston Marathon can claim such an historic race route.

Tigers almost ruin Tar Heels' return to basketball's elite

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

If 18-3 equals No.1, how come 7-14 doesn't equal 1-A?

Don't ask North Carolina Coach Dean Smith.

"If you look at the way Clemson played, they should be right behind us," Smith said Wednesday night after his defending national champion Tar Heels "celebrated" their return to the No.1 position in The Associated Press poll by coming from behind to nip Atlantic Coast Conference rival Clemson 84-81.

Six other members of the Top Twenty were in action and three of them also struggled. Tenth-ranked Missouri nipped Colorado 68-65 in a two-overtime Big Eight game, No.12 Louisville staved off a late Cincinnati rally to post a 79-73 Metro Conference victory and No.17 Minnesota needed two overtimes to turn back Ohio State 89-80 in Big Ten action.

Meanwhile, in Southwest Conference routs, eighth-ranked Houston trounced Baylor 86-69 and No.9 Arkansas whipped Rice 70-43, while No.20 Syracuse wiped out Connecticut 89-69 in a Big East contest.

In winning its 15th consecutive game, North Carolina erased a three-point deficit at Clemson with less than five minutes remaining. Sam Perkins, the game's high scorer with 30 points, led a rally that took the Tar Heels from a 75-72 deficit to a 79-75 lead with one minute left. Clemson had erased a 49-41 halftime deficit and led by up to five points in the second half.

North Carolina boosted its ACC record to 7-0, while Clemson is 1-7. Murray Jarman kept the Tigers in the game in the first half and finished with 19 points before fouling out.Jarman and freshman Warren Wallace, who had 18 points, led Clemson to a 69-64 lead before Perkins and Michael Jordan, who had 24 points, paced North Carolina's rally.

"We've still got a lot of work to do, but we're a pretty good team," Smith said.

Top Ten

At Houston, Clyde Drexler scored 29 points, hitting 13 of 16 from the floor, to lead the Cougars, 17-2 overall and 8-0 in SWC play, over Baylor for their 12th straight triumph. Drexler hit his first 11 shots and the Cougars used a full-court press during a five-minute stretch to sprint to a 42-31 halftime lead. Substitute Benny Anders added a season-high 15 points, while Houston's shot-blocking specialist, Akeem Abdul Olajuwon, rejected nine shots.

Drexler told Coach Guy Lewis before the game that he was ready for a big night. Besides his sharp shooting, he grabbed 12 rebounds and dished out two assists.

"He was ready to start playing well, he told me that the other day," Lewis said.

At Fayetteville, Ark., Darrell Walker led a balanced Arkansas attack with 14 points, while Joe Kleine had 13 and Leroy Sutton and Alvin Robertson 10 apiece. The Razorbacks jumped to a 23-9 lead in the first nine minutes and boosted it to 38-19 at the half. It was 63-30 with 6:19 left.

Arkansas improved its record to 18-1 and remained in second place in the SWC at 7-1. The Razorbacks' only loss was to Houston.

At Boulder, Colo., Jon Sundvold scored 25 points and Steve Stipanovich added 17 as Missouri edged Colorado. Colorado led by eight with 5:20 remaining but Missouri caught up on two free throws by Stipanovich with 1:14 left. In the first overtime, Missouri built a four-point lead, but Colorado's Kevin Cornish tied it with a tip-in at the buzzer.

Second Ten

At Cincinnati, Milt Wagner scored 22 points and Rodney McCray added 18 to lead Lousiville over the Bearcats. Louisville, 6-0 in the Metro Conference and 17-3 overall, took a 42-30 halftime lead. But Cincinnati, winless in six conference games, was led by Dwight "Jelly" Jones with 16 points and reserve Marty Campbell with 15.

Louisville stretched its lead to 67-47 midway through the second half. But Cincinnati trimmed the deficit to 75-72 before Louisville's Charlie Jones sank two free throws and Lancaster Gordon scored on a slam dunk as time ran out to complete Louisville's 14th straight victory over the Bearcats.

At Columbus, Ohio, Roland Brooks' four points starting the second overtime gave Minnesota the lead and the Gophers, paced by 7-foot-3 Randy Breuer's 26 points, went on to take over the Big Ten lead with a controversial victory over Ohio State. Tommy Davis sank two free throws with no time left on the clock after the first overtime to pull the Gophers even at 72-72.Minnesota, 6-2 in the Big Ten and 14-3 overall, broke a first-place tie with 5-2 Indiana.

Ohio State appeared to have the game won when Troy Taylor hit two free throws with four seconds left in the first overtime. But, Davis, who scored 20 of his 24 points after halftime, was fouled on a three-point field goal attempt just before the buzzer ending the first overtime. Despite the boos of the partisan Ohio State crowd, Davis sank both free throws to force the second overtime.

"I've been in coaching 21 years and I haven't seen many like that one," Miller said of the personal foul call against Ohio State guard Larry Huggins. "They may ban me from this league, but that's a farce."

Minnesota's Jim Dutcher saw it differently. "We've got the best officials in the country," he said. "Of course he was fouled. Seriously, I've got the poorest seat in the house. But if it hadn't been a foul, they wouldn't have called it."

At Syracuse, N.Y., Erich Santifer and Tony Bruin sparked an early surge as Syracuse crushed Connecticut.Santifer and Bruin each scored six points as the Orangemen bolted to a 14-4 lead, which also happens to be their record. They finished with 18 and 14, respectively. Leo Rautins had 15.

Congressional fight over pugilism to begin in subcommittee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress will take another look at the sport of boxing because of the long history of ring tragedies, including the recent death of Duk Koo Kim, who was fatally injured while fighting for the World Boxing Association's lightweight championship.

Rep. James J. Florio, D-N.J., chairman of a House subcommittee that has jurisdiction over professional sports, said Wednesday his panel will open hearings on boxing reform on Feb. 15 with such witnesses as former heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson and ABC sportscaster Howard Cosell.

Florio, a former amateur boxer who had a record of 14-3, said he was interested in reform because of the rapid growth of the sport in New Jersey, which last year was the stage for 138 professional fights, most of them in Atlantic City.

That total put New Jersey No. 1 in the country, ahead of Nevada and New York.

Florio said he was concerned because there were 432 deaths as a result of action in the ring between 1918 and 1982. "That figure is documented," he said. "There is no way we can tell how many serious injuries have occurred."

He said, "The large number of deaths and permanent injuries that have occurred over the years raise profound questions about the ability of the states to adequately police boxing.

"The lack of uniform regulations, particularly in the medical area, has grave implications for further needless tragedies," he continued. "Imposing uniform national standards may be the only way for professional boxing to survive as a sport."

Florio said he did not want to prejudge what the committee's investigation would produce, but "a reasonable conclusion is the establishment of a commission or a body to look at boxing and report back to Congress in six months with legislative recommendations.

"A minimum recommendation could be that there be national uniformity," he said, "so that the rules are the same in every state."

In answer to a question, Florio said the congressonal investigation would go beyond safety. As an example, he said there should be some standards for boxing promoters.

Asked if he then favored the creation of a federal boxing commission, he replied, "That might be the answer. But let's make the body the Congress creates come back with specific legislative recommendations."

It was suggested to Florio that Congress has investigated boxing previously — a House labor subcommittee conducted one within the last 10 years — but nothing came of them.

Florio will conduct the hearings as chairman of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on commerce, transportation and tourism.

A little over 10 years ago, Mexico's Laké Guerrero was introduced to American bass fishermen. Let's say Texas bass fishermen, because they are the anglers who make most of Guerrero's bounty.

Many anglers have experienced some of their best catches at Lake Guerrero, even those who couldn't get the hang of it at Toledo Bend or Possum Kingdom. At Guerrero, limits are attained day after day. It's not uncommon to boat more tha 100 bass per day.

When the lake first opened, it was not uncommon to fish any king of bait and come up with a full stringer of five and six pounders. Today, it is different. The 50 or more four to six pounders aren't as plentiful, but there's no dearth of Mexican largemouth bass. As for lures, practically anything will do the job.

In the early days, Guerrero accomodations were still primitve. Boats and motors were hard to get. Today, accomodations are superb and boats and motors are readily available. Some boats even sport electric trolling motors.

Now is the time of year to visit Guerrero, to get away from the Texas cold and take advantage of the big bass time. Those bulging sow bass ready for spring spawn are on the prowl for food and spawning sites and can be taken in shallow waters.

Duck season also will run until March 1 (better check for sure). Waterfowl limits are generous in Mexico.

If interested in a mid-winter trip, contact Haciena Alta Vista, P.O. Box 2186, Harlingen, Texas, 78550.

SURPRISING INKS lake below Lake Buchanan may be a 1983 fishing hotspot. Wade Butler, Texas Parks and Wildlife Dept. biologist from San Marcos, said a recent net survey showed an apparent abundance of striped/white bass hybrid and white bass. Five gill nets produced 26 hybrids from 1½ to 2½ pounds and 48 white bass averaging ½ pound.

Also taken in the survey was six-pound, five-ounce largemouth.

Inks is located between Buchanan and Lyndon B. Johnson on the Colorado River. It offers good access with several boat ramps and overnight camping facilities along the east shoreline at Inks Lake State Park.

Clarke having one of best years ever

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

When Bobby Clarke shines, so do the Philadelphia Flyers.

"It doesn't seem to matter who you throw Bobby Clarke in with, the line plays well," said Philadelphia Coach Bob McCammon after watching his elder statesman lead the Flyers to a 6-3 National Hockey League victory over the Winnipeg Jets Wednesday night.

Clarke, at 33 the oldest player on the Philadelphia team, collected a goal and two assists while playing on a line with Ray Allison and Lindsay Carson. The Flyers, who have only lost once in 19 games, improved their record to 34-13-7 and moved 10 points up on the defending Stanley Cup champion New York Islanders in the Patrick Division.

"I don't really care about statistics," said Clarke, having his best season in many years with 20 goals so far. "I've had a lot of personal success over the years. I feel good. Maybe at my age you have to have a good year or they'll get rid of you."

According to Winnipeg Coach Tom Watt, the Flyers simply were too much for his team to handle.

"We've played three games against the Flyers (all losses) and we've only scored a total of seven goals," he said. "That's no fluke. We have to say they were a little too strong for us tonight."

Other scorers for Philadelphia were Carson, Mark Howe, Brad Marsh, Darryl Sittler and Ilkka Sinisalo.

Blues 4, Red Wings3

Brian Sutter scored his 30th goal of the season midway through the third period to lift St. Louis over Detroit.

With the score tied 3-3, Sutter took a pass from Bernie Federko at the top of the face-off circle and beat Red Wings netminder Corrado Micalef with a slap shot low to the stick side at 9:17 of the third period.

The Blues, who had won only once in the previous eight games, tied the score 3-3 late in the second period when defenseman Tim Bothwell backhanded Sutter's passout by Micalef for his third goal of the season.

Sabres 2, North Stars 2

Craig Ramsay scored his third shorthanded goal of the season for Buffalo with 6½ minutes left to boost the Sabres into a tie with the North Stars.

After two scoreless periods in which the Sabres outshot the North Stars 21-9, Willi Plett and Mike Eaves scored on breakaways to put Minnesota up 2-0.

Maple Leafs 7, Whalers 1

Rick Vaive, Danny Daoust and Walt Poddubny scored two goals apiece to lead Toronto over Hartford.After being held to a 1-1 tie through 20 minutes, Toronto put the game away with three goals in each of the second and third periods.

After Daoust scored his first goal of the game in the initial period, Vaive's two goals in the second period boosted the Leafs into a 4-1 lead. Poddubny's two goals keyed the third-period Toronto burst. Vaive increased his season's output to 34 goals, including 21 in the last 18 games.

Black Hawks 7, Penguins 4

Doug Crossman and Denis Savard each scored two goals in the first period to trigger Chicago over Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh is now winless in its last 14 contests. In that span the Penguins have lost 13 and tied just one. The loss also marked the first time since January 1969 that the club has lost seven consecutive games.

The Black Hawks, meanwhile, won their 33rd game against 14 losses and seven ties as they opened up an eight-point bulge over Minnesota in the NHL's Norris Division.

Sadri pushes McEnroe in U.S. indoor

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — John McEnroe won his opening match in defense of his U.S. Pro Indoor tennis singles title, but it wasn't the type of victory he preferred.

McEnroe, the top seed, needed six straight points in the first set tiebreaker and a couple of service breaks in the third set to defeat John Sadri, an unseeded player with a big serve who got into the tournament through qualifying rounds.

After the 7-6, 4-6, 6-3 triumph Wednesday night, McEnroe came to a press session with his left elbow wrapped in a large ice pack.

"I would have preferred an easier first-round match here, because I was forced to dig down tonight," said McEnroe, who actually was playing in the second round against Sadri, having received a first-round bye like the other seeded players.

Asked about the ice pack, McEnroe said he probably has tennis elbow, but the injury hasn't been bothering him that much.

McEnroe said it was the fifth time he had played Sadri, including the 1978 NCAA singles finals when McEnroe was at Stanford and Sadri was at North Carolina State.

Although he has won every time, McEnroe said several of the matches were tough, including a "very close match" in the U.S. Pro Indoor three years ago.

"It was tough to break his service," he said of Sadri. "In the third set I picked up on my service returns. Earlier, I couldn't get going, and he caught me off-balance."

The feeling of being off-balance was mutual.

Sadri said, "I didn't know where John was going to hit the ball, and I was on my heels."

Ivan Lendl, the tournament's No. 2 seed, had an easier night, downing amateur Scott Davis 6-4, 6-4.

Lendl, who is hoping a title in the tournament will make him the world's No.1 player, built up a 5-2 lead in the first set before Davis got a service break and closed to 5-4.

In the second set, Davis battled back from 1-3 to trail by only 4-5. But Lendl soon ended the match with a service ace near the center stripe.

Tonight, Lendl's third-round opponent will be 15th-seeded Henri Leconte of France, who defeated qualifier David Carter of Australia, 6-7, 7-5, 6-1.

McEnroe will play Mike DePalmer, a second-year pro who ousted 14th-seeded Mel Purcell, 4-6, 6-4, 6-1.

In other second-round matches, No. 6 Steve Denton downed Jeff Borowiak, 6-7, 6-3, 6-4; fifth-seeded Peter McNamara of Australia defeated Guy Forget of France, 6-3, 6-3; 11th-seeded Brian Gottfried edged Lloyd Bourne, 6-4, 7-5, and 13th-seeded Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia beat Alberto Tous of Spain, 6-4, 6-4.

'Sweet Georgia Brown' also means Globetrotters

The familiar strains of "Sweet Georgia Brown" usually mean the Midland College Chaparrals are back in town, but Saturday night it will single the annual appearance of the Harlem Globetrotters at 7:30 p.m. in the Langford Chaparral Center.

No, the Trotters didn't steal the Chaps' theme song. The touring pros have been around since before World War II and they still hold the record for the largest crowd ever to see a basketball game, 75,000 on Aug. 22, 1951 in Berlin's Olympic Stadium.

The Trotters over the years have become an American institution and right now they are working on the World. The unit that appears in the Chap Center is the International club that tour Europe and Asia starting in April.

No team has played more games in more places before more people than the Trotters. Saturday is just one of 300 stops for the two touring teams. Yet, they never play a game at home.

The opposition will furnished by the Washington Generals and an all-star variety show will spice the halftime.

James "Twiggy"Sanders, 6-8 175-pounder from Johnson C. Smith University in Raleigh, N.C., leads on to the floor. Former Texas star Jimmy Blacklock, NC State's Tiny Pinder, 6-8; Ovie Dotson, 6-4 from UT-Austin, and 6-7 Albert Culton, 6-7, UT-Arlington, are other members of the unit.

Tickets are $8-$7-$6 with children under 12 receiving a $2 discount. Ticket outlets are the Chaparral Center and Sears in Midland and Odessa.

Mavs have time to beat Lakers; San Antonio falls to Knicks

The Dallas Mavericks have the Los Angeles Lakers' number this season. It's 00:00.

The Mavericks beat the Lakers 122-120 Wednesday night when Jay Vincent's 12-footer went through the net at the buzzer. On Nov. 17, Mark Aguirre hit two three-point shots in the final 10 seconds, the second one with no time left on the clock as Dallas beat the defending National Basketball Association champions 118-117.

Both games were in Dallas in front of capacity crowds.

Lakers sparkplug Earvin "Magic" Johnson said the two Dallas losses, along with a defeat at Philadelphia, were the toughest of the season for Los Angeles, which is 34-10 compared to Dallas' 22-23 mark.

"Some teams you can't get by, and others you handle," said Johnson, who finished the game with 14 points, nine rebounds and six assists.

Vincent, a teammate of Johnson's when Michigan State won the national collegiate championship four years ago, made the game-winning shot over the outstretched arm of Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar after rebounding a miss by Dallas' Brad Davis.

"I'll talk about this one for months to come, especially when Magic and I go back to Lansing," said Vincent. "After Brad's shot, I went to a spot where I didn't see Kareem, and the ball came straight to me. It felt pretty good when I shot it, and it went straight through."

Los Angeles has now lost two in a row after winning seven straight. Lakers Coach Pat Riley said the Dallas setback, which came after a 110-95 defeat to Boston Sunday, should not affect his team.

"We are a championship team. We cannot let two losses get us down," said Riley. "We'll regroup as professionals and come back."

Aguirre, the hero of the first Laker defeat, led Dallas with 31 points, while Mavericks center Pat Cummings added a season-high 25. Vincent finished with 15 rebounds and 15 points, including a three-point play with 3:45 left that cut a six-point Los Angeles lead to 117-114.

Abdul-Jabbar hit 14 of 16 shots for 34 points to lead Los Angeles.

Knicks 109, Spurs 98

Len "Truck" Robinson scored 14 of his 21 points in the third quarter to keep New York ahead of San Antonio after the Knicks held the Spurs to a season-low 40 points in the first half.

Bill Cartwright had 25 points to lead the Knicks, who have won five of their last six games. Robinson helped New York extend a 12-point halftime advantage to 75-55 with his third-period burst.

George Gervin led the Spurs with 33 points.

Rockets 135, Nuggets 128

Allen Leavell scored 18 of his career-high 42 points in the third quarter as Houston rebounded from Tuesday's 53-point loss to Chicago by beating Denver.

Leavell hit three of five three-point goal attempts for the Rockets and also had nine assists and four steals. His big third quarter helped Houston extend a 64-60 halftime lead to 102-92.

Kiki Vandeweghe led Denver with 29 points.

Sonics 117, Bucks 114

Jack Sikma scored 21 points, four of them on two free throws and a baseline jumper in the final 1:07 as Seattle held off Milwaukee.

The Sonics, who had dropped 13 of their previous 15 games, took the lead for good early in the fourth quarter by scoring 10 straight points for a 96-89 advantage.

Sidney Moncrief topped all scorers with 34 points for Milwaukee, while Marques Johnson added 33 for the Bucks. David Thompson paced Seattle with 22.

Celtics 120, Clippers 110

Larry Bird scored 30 points and Cedric Maxwell 28 as Boston rallied from a 12-point halftime deficit to beat San Diego.

The Celtics outscored the Clippers 37-24 in the third quarter to take an 83-82 lead as Maxwell had 11 points and Bird 10 in the period. Boston never trailed in the fourth period.

Terry Cummings led the Clippers with 28 points.

Pacers 141, Pistons 135

Indiana got 22 points and 21 rebounds from rookie Clark Kellogg and withstood a Detroit rally in the final minutes.

The Pacers had a comfortable 133-117 lead with 3:20 to go, but the Pistons scored 15 of the next 17 points to cut the deficit to 135-132. Indiana then hit six of eight free throws in the last 43 seconds to get the victory.

Kelly Tripucka had a game-high 40 points for Detroit.

Nets 118, Cavaliers 105

Buck Williams scored 22 points and Otis Birdsong 21 to lead New Jersey to victory over Cleveland.

Eight straight points gave the Nets a 96-83 lead with 7:11 left and they never led by less than 10 the rest of the game.

Kings 117, Bullets 115

Kansas City broke a six-game losing streak as Ray Williams made a three-point play with three seconds left.

Mike Woodson scored 28 points to lead the Kings, who trailed 65-50 at halftime and still were behind 95-72 with 1:16 left in the third quarter.

Suns 112, Jazz 96

Phoenix shot 69 percent from the field and outscored Utah 36-16 in the third quarter before coasting to victory.

The Suns trailed 53-49 at halftime, but they scored eight of the first nine points of the second half and never were behind thereafter.

Walter Davis scored 24 points to lead Phoenix, while Dan Schayes also had 24 to pace the Jazz.

Spurs added to NBA roster

NEW YORK (AP) — Seven players, including George Gervin and Artis Gilmore of the Midwest Division-leading San Antonio Spurs, were selected Wednesday to fill out the Western Conference roster for the National Basketball Association All-Star Game.

Also chosen by conference's coaches were Jack Sikma and Gus Williams of the Seattle SuperSonics, Jamaal Wilkes of the Los Angeles Lakers, Kiki Vandeweghe of the Denver Nuggets and Jim Paxson of the Portland Trail Blazers.

They join the five starters chosen by the fans: Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Earvin "Magic" Johnson of the Lakers, Alex English of the Nuggets, David Thompson of the SuperSonics and Maurice Lucas of the Phoenix Suns.

Pat Riley of Los Angeles will coach the team.

The starters for the East will be Moses Malone, Julius Erving and Maurice Cheeks of the Philadelphia 76ers, Larry Bird of the Boston Celtics and isiah Thomas of the Detroit Pistons, with Philadelphia's Billy Cunningham as the coach.

The reserves will be announced later this week.

Oilers hire offensive coordinator

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Kansas City Chiefs offensive coordinator Kay Dalton accepted a similar position with the Houston Oilers Wednesday and immediately started making plans for unleashing the Oilers' most valuable commodity — Earl Campbell.

Dalton, 50, fired at the end of the National Football League season with the rest of the Kansas City staff, said his first priority would be to find out if Campbell, the former three-time NFL rushing champion, was a "bouncer" or a "slasher."

"If he's a bouncer, we'll just put a hat on people and start pushing and shoving," Dalton said. "We'll let Earl find the daylight. I like the one-back, two-tight end offense and you can run it with a bouncer."

If Campbell is a slasher "we'll adjust," Dalton said. "We'll use what best suits our personnel. We're not going to discard Earl Campbell."

Campbell gained only 538 yards rushing last season as the Oilers tried to get away from heavy dependence on the former Heisman Trophy winner.

Oilers head Coach Ed Biles said more use of Campbell next season did not mean he would junk the diversified offense he has tried to install the past two seasons as the Oilers spiraled to the bottom of the NFL in offensive statistics.

"Kay feels, and I feel, that we've got to utilize Earl a little more in our offense than we did last season," Biles said. "But I don't think you are talking about any major changes. We're still headed in the direction like everyone else of using a lot of formations and movement."

Dalton replaced Jim Shofner, who resigned at the end of the season to go into private business.

The Oilers earlier hired defensive coordinator Chuck Studley, who left Bill Walsh's staff at San Francisco. Biles still must hire an offensive line coach to complete his staff.

Dalton said he would have a free hand to run the Oiler offense.

"I'm going to run the offense," Dalton said. "It's going to be my job to put in the plays and to call the plays on Sunday, then hope they work. At least that's what I was told. I'm going down there to take charge."

Biles, who acted as defensive coordinator last season, said he was pleased to get two strong, take-charge coordinators.

Hog fans celebrate super win

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington rooters by the thousands ignored a noontime downpour Wednesday to declare "Hog Love" for their Super Bowl championship football team, the Washington Redskins.

Politicians got in the act, too, with a resolution adopted by the city council thanking the team "for bringing to the city a sense of identity and common cause, which the District of Columbia has not enjoyed for a considerable time."

About 10,000 fans gathered under umbrellas at the District Building — Washington's city hall — and police said that 30,000 to 40,000 people lined stately Constitution Avenue for a parade to the foot of Capitol Hill.

A truckload of hogs was among the units in the parade, honoring the offensive linemen known as "Hogs" for their ability to block for running back John Riggins and quarterback Joe Thiesmann.

"Who would have thought Washington, D.C., would have been the hog capital of the United States?" asked Charles Robb, the governor of Virginia.

In the ceremony, Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs commended the fans for their turnout in the rain and said it was testimony that the city had the greatest fans in the country.

Displaying the Super Bowl trophy, he said each of the fans owns a little bit of it. On Sunday, the Redskins beat the Miami Dolphins 27-17 for their first National Football League championship in 41 years.

"Hog Love" read a banner across the street. Another, posted on a construction site, said, "Plumbers Love Skins."

Walter Fauntroy, the district's non-voting delegate to Congress, serenaded the crowd with the team fight song, "Hail to the Redskins," and it was played, over and over, on the loudspeakers in the city's subway stations.

President Reagan allowed federal workers here to take two hours off without loss of pay to attend the celebration.

Schoolchildren in Washington and the Maryland and Virginia suburbs were permitted to play hookey if they had a note from their parents.

Jenner blames boycott for decline of decathlon

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer

One of the most memorable scenes of the 1976 Summer Olympic Games at Montreal was Bruce Jenner clinching the gold medal in the decathlon with a world record 8,617 points. As soon as the determined Jenner completed the final event in the 10-event test of endurance and strength — the 1,500-meter race — his wife at the time, Chrystie, came leaping out of the stands at Olympic Stadium and embraced$him warmly.

"We did it, honey, we did it — it was a team effort," the excited Jenner said to his sobbing wife.

Jenner was the eighth American to win the Olympic decathlon, and with it, the unofficial title of "World's Greatest Athlete." He joined such outstanding athletes as Bob Mathias, Rafer Johnson, Bill Toomey and Milt Campbell as Olympic gold medalists. Mathias was the only two-time winner.

Now, the decathlon is on the decline in the United States, with no American ranked in the world's Top 10, and Jenner is saddened.

"I'm waiting to see someone come out of the woodwork and assert himself," said Jenner, who has divorced himself from track and field competition — but still is an active skier and auto race participant — since that remarkable victory on July 30, 1976. "But if someone doesn't do it this year, I don't know if anyone will do it before the Games (the 1984 Olympics at Los Angeles).

"You have to show a year before the Games that you can compete with the best in the world, guys like Daley Thompson (the world record holder from Britain) and Jurgen Hingsen (the former record holder from West Germany).

"I didn't get much recognition until I broke the world record in 1975."

Jenner blames the United States' boycott of the 1980 Games at Moscow for the Americans' decline in the decathlon.

"The boycott definitely hurt," he said of the Americans' refusal to participate because of the Soviet Union's military intervention in Afghanistan. "The event got very little exposure (on television) here."

The American decathlete most affected by the boycott was Bob Coffman. Ranked No.1 in the world in 1979 and fifth in 1980, he was the nation's major hope for a medal, perhaps even a gold. But the boycott so distressed Coffman that he never again was a major threat in the decathlon, and shortly thereafter, he retired from competition.

"He left the sport with a bad taste in his mouth," Jenner said of Coffman, the last American to be ranked in the world's Top 10.

Jenner deplores the lack of recognition for the decathlon.

"There's no real recognition for it, except during Olympic years," he said. "The Olympic Games makes it go from a very small event to a very big event."

Jenner thinks the nation's best bet in the 1984 Olympic decathlon is Mark Anderson of UCLA.

"He has tremendous potential," said Jenner, "but he's had knee problems. So far, the best he's scored is between 8,100 and 8,200 points. He could score between 8,500 and 8,600. He seems to have all the tools, but he hasn't done it yet."

Even if Anderson reaches 8,600, he would have a difficult time beating Thompson, the world record holder with 8,743 points, and the towering, 6-foot-7 Hingsen, who has the second best total, 8,723.

"I expect Daley to reach 9,000 points before he's finished," said Jenner. "He's that good. He's consistent, he's dedicated, he has the speed, he has the jumping ability and he works very hard. He will be tough to beat in 1984."

Jenner said he has no regrets about leaving track at the peak of his career.

"I accomplished what I wanted," he said. "The fun was in climbing to the top. But when you reach the top, it is not as exhilarating as you think.

"Then I looked over my left shoulder and said I've had enough."

Since leaving the sport, Jenner has been far from idle. He runs the annual Jenner Classic, to be held this year May 28 at San Jose, Calif. He does color commentary for NBC-TV on track meets, including last weekend's Millrose Games in New York. He skis regularly at Lake Tahoe. He does commercial work. He has produced two TV movies, and acted in one, and is producing and acting in another, the story of the late race car driver, Peter Revson. And he races cars and go-karts.

PUC's new rule 'more illusionary than real'

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission's new rule barring electric companies from automatically charging customers for increased fuel costs is "more illusionary than real," says a lawyer who fights utility rate increases.

"If one wished to abolish the fuel adjustment clause, it didn't take a 15-page rule to do it," said Don Butler, lawyer for the Texas Municipal League.

PUC Chairman Moak Rollins defended the new rule as valuable, but conceded it would not lower rates.

PUC members voted 3-0 Wednesday to replace the automatic fuel adjustment clause with a complicated process in which companies must estimate fuel costs one year in advance.

The process, however, still allows for adjustments if electric companies face changing fuel costs. The big difference is that, with the new rule, those changes would have to be approved by the commission.

Rollins said Texans still will pay the fuel costs.

"I think people will see differences in their bills, but only in the manner the costs are expressed. They'll know in advance what those costs are going to be. They will know that those costs have been examined in public hearings," said Rollins.

Commissioner George Cowden asked the PUC staff to draw up the new rule after Gov. Mark White made the fuel adjustment clause a major plank in his 1982 campaign. But White, in a brief statement issued by his office Wednesday evening, questioned the changes.

"I am glad to see the problem has at last gotten the attention of the Public Utility Commission. I am concerned, however, about whether the new rule does enough," the governor said.

Butler said the PUC effort was worthless.

"I think the governor got their attention. But it's obvious they didn't abolish the fuel adjustment clause," he said.

The Austin lawyer's complaint is that the new rule still allows companies to seek periodic rate changes to reflect fuel price fluctuations. Butler wants the PUC to set a rate and leave it in force until the electric company seeks an overall increase.

He opposes periodic reviews of a specific business expense, such as fuel. Under similar logic, utility companies could seek increases when it costs more to buy a vehicle, according to Butler.

"We might have the 'pickup truck adjustment clause,'" he said.

Several lawmakers joined White in calling for an end to the automatic fuel adjustment clause, which is often more than half of a customer's bill.

"I certainly hope it will satisfy many of the concerns legislators have expressed to us. That's been our objective," Rollins said.

"All of today's action was a result of that political rhetoric," he said.

The new rule includes a formula for bringing the charge to customers in line with the actual cost to companies. The utilities would add surcharges if the estimate turned out to be too low, and would make refunds if the estimate were high. Refunds would be made with 12 percent interest.

Rollins said there had been "no substantial abuse" of the automatic pass-through system that was banned Wednesday. He said there was "legitimate concern" from ratepayers upset that the old system prevented them from knowing the cost of electricity until after they used it.

But Rollins said customers should continue paying fuel costs because "the cost is a cost of producing electricity."

T.L. Baker, Dallas Power & Light vice president, said the automatic pass-through system "is the best for both the company and our customers."

"This may not be the lowest cost method of doing things for the customer," he said of the new rule.

The rule was adopted on an emergency basis, effective immediately. Another hearing will be held before it becomes permanent.

Under the new system, electric companies must come to the PUC in April, with fuel estimates for the year starting Sept. 1.

Public Utilities Commissioner George Cowden gestures during discussion of the Fuel Adjustment Charge Wednesday. The Texas PUC voted to ban electric companies from automatically passing on to customers increases in the cost of fuel to produce power.

J.C. Penney going 'soft;' Other retailers likely to benefit from planned changes

By JIM PRESNELL
Energy-Business Writer

New York-based retailer J.C. Penney Company Inc. is now changing merchandising strategy at its Midland Park Mall store. The change is part of a nationwide program of revamping and upgrading their stores.

Penney's stores are going to get back to basic "soft lines" of apparel and leisure-time goods. They will pretty much stop carrying the catalog lines of big appliances, car parts, and hardware, in all the chain's stores.

Donald V. Seibert, Penney chairman and chief executive, has said the changes represent "An acceleration of the company's efforts to reposition these department stores in the retail marketplace."

The change won't be drastic at Penney's Midland and Odessa stores, though, because they are limited-line stores which concentrate on soft goods: apparel, home furnishings, and leisure lines (sporting goods, toys, etc.)

The only thing that will make the change perceptible here will be the elimination of the adjoining Penney Auto Center at both stores. All car repair lines will be eliminated (Mainly tires, batteries, and accessories). The auto repair space will be used to expand the aforementioned "soft goods" lines at the store.

Local limited-line J.C. Penney stores never have carried big appliances, garden tools, or hardware, so the total removal of these lines from full line stores won't affect Midland or Odessa. Catalog sales of auto parts and refrigerators and all the rest of the Penney's menu will continue through local catalog outlets.

Penney's emphasizes soft goods at Midland already. "If you want to pinpoint it, our strengths (at Midland Park Penney's) are going to be clothing, furniture, and leisure items. These would be considered our 'strong lines,'" local store manager Walt Sunday said.

In a telephone interview, Sunday confirmed that the 60,000 square foot, medium-sized, J.C. Penney store is in the process of making the merchandising change. The Odessa store, he said, is similar in design and is making the same fairly minor adjustments.

The Midland Penney car care section employs about six or seven people at a time, Sunday said. "We'll redirect some of the six or seven automotive employees. We will place the remainder of the emploees at area businesses, to the best of our ability.

"We're preparing for disposal of the (car care) merchandise — ultimately there will be an advertised sale in the newspaper, and this ad will state when service is included, as it is with tires," the store manager said Wednesday.

"Our research indicates people don't come to a regional shopping center (like Midland Park Mall) to get automotive service," he noted.

One store in Midland Park Mall that does a lot of car service is Sears. During the Sixties and Seventies, as well as now, national ads by Penney have not hit the security-and-protection trigger that is pressed by the award-winning Sears campaign for its DieHard Battery.

The current theme in this long-running "field test" of performance of this battery (one of the main draws of the Sears Auto Center) is "We Install Confidence." Then Sears shows a lot of automobiles starting up. In all kinds of predicaments — especially cold and rain.

"We're tickled to death," about Penney exiting the car care business, said Sears Manager Mike Milligan. He added, though, that the move would probably benefit both Sears and Penney's locally, by helping both to shore up very different strong areas: Penney in clothing and Sears in car repair. The Sears car center has been larger and has more mechanics than Penney, and Milligan says they service "40 to 70 cars" in a typical day.

"The idea we try to get across is, trust your car to Sears and we will take care of you. Plus, we do the work fast, with a money-back guarantee, and there isn't a waiting list like some car dealers have."

At competing local retailer, K-Mart, K-Care auto repair manager Bob Yasko said, "I don't know about their (Penney's) location being any worse than ours. What I do know is, if you give people good service, they become your best advertising."

"K-Care promises to do the work to your satisfaction, and we install parts made for us by major manufacturers," and checked twice for quality, Yasko said. In contrast to Penney's move out of auto repair, K-Mart has begun a heavy television and print promotion for this auto service subsidiary, with locations at K-Mart stores all over.

The K-Care program began two years ago under a separate division, K-Mart Enterprises Inc. The program was started to revitalize and unify the services of the auto care "outbuildings" that K-Mart had franchised out to garage operators across America.

In buying back the stores and promoting K-Care, the chain is providing long guarantees and low-cost service "specials" to lure more customers to this area where Penney's stores are trying to make their exit.

House committee plans hearing on independents

By Vic Ostrowidzki
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The powerful tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee plans to hold hearings soon into special tax breaks enjoyed by the independent oil and gas producers.

Rep. Charles B. Rangel, D-N.Y., chairman of the panel's Oversight Subcommittee, said Tuesday the review will focus on the "differences in tax treatment between integrated oil companies and independent producers."

Democrats have complained for a long time that the independent producers have become a major source of contributions to the Republican party and its candidates and that they field their own slates even against those Democratic incumbents who vote with the oil industry.

To qualify as an independent, a producer can refine no more than 50,000 barrels of oil a day, and can sell in the retail market no more than $5 million of oil a year.

Prior to 1975, the tax law treated income from domestic oil and gas extraction essentially the same regardless of whether that income was received by a major (integrated) company or an independent producer, or by an individual or a corporation.

Since then, Congress has enacted in a piecemeal fashion a series of tax laws that distinguish between various types of oil and gas producers.

Rangel said the subcommittee will inquire into the extent to which the present law "favors certain kind of oil and gas producers relative to others, whether tax treatment which is not uniform is good tax and energy policy, and whether the specific provisions to provide differing treatment work as they were intended."

Among special tax breaks enjoyed by the independents is a provision allowing them to write off 100 percent of intangible drilling costs. Major oil and gas companies immediately can write off 85 percent and the remaining 15 over a three year period.

Another break gives independents the right to claim percentage depletion on up to 1,000 barrels of oil or the equivalent amount of natural gas a day while major producers receive no favorable tax treatment.

Independents pay far lower rates under the windfall profits tax than the majors and pay no windfall tax at all on oil from stripper wells that produce at a very low rate.

Majors are also required to deposit their windfall profit tax faster than other taxpayers.

Legal change throws leases into limbo

By LESLIE HAINES
Energy-Business Writer

By signing a bill Tuesday that closed a loophole discovered in state law, Gov. Mark White threw into legal limbo the hopes of several West Texas oil and gas prospectors.

State Land Commissioner Garry Mauro was evidently surprised by the number of last-minute applications for oil and gas leases on state lands which were filed before White signed the bill. News stories revealed the loophole late last month, which Mauro said resulted from a clerical error in 1975.

The loophole allowed citizens to prospect for minerals on state land for a $100 filing fee, a $2-per-acre bonus payment, and one-eighth royalty to the state.

Normally, state oil and gas leases require much higher bonus payments and give the state up to one-fourth of the proceeds.

Mauro said this morning the applications involve about one million acres of state land and would cause Texas to lose at least $1 million in royalty income.

Mauro rejected the applications and threatened to back up his position with court action if necessary.

Mauro gave the 32 applicants, 22 of them from Midland, until Friday, Feb. 4, to withdraw their applications.

"I consider it part of my oath of office in rejecting these applications," Mauro said.

"I will not accept any re-submissions, and will take legal action to prevent any trespass to state lands."

The state land lease snafu stems from what Mauro called "an inadvertent loophole" which resulted "through a clerk's error in 1975," when state laws were recodified. Apparently by accident, a provision permitting prospectors to obtain state land for $100 and then pay lower than normal royalties was inserted into the law when it had been repealed in 1939.

At least one Midland energy company is looking into the possibility of taking legal action to uphold its oil and gas prospecting applications filed with the General Land Office in Austin last week.

Natura Energy, a small publicly-held Midland firm, announced late Wednesday it has an interest in several oil and gas prospecting applications covering approximately 180,000 acres, mostly in Andrews County. The applications were filed on behalf of several principals of the company Jan. 31, a few days before the Governor signed Senate Bill 183, repealing the loophole in the Texas code.

The company issued a statement saying it participated in the applications on the belief they were permitted by law. Natura "believes that continuing action will be in the best interest of Natura stockholders, even though Natura is unable to predict the outcome of this matter, or whether the permits will ever be awarded."

Mauro refused to accept the applications, and indicated they will not be accepted without protracted court action.

Natura Chairman Larry Stapp would not comment further except to say the company's attorneys are researching the situation.

Earlier this week, Mauro threatened to embarass the applicants by publishing their names if they did not withdraw. He described the last-minute applications as "an attenpt to willingly rob the school children of Texas by taking their royalty money." Money from state lands is used to fund public education.

The names of the 32 oil and gas prospectors were released by Mauro Wednesday under pressure from United Press International, The Dallas Morning News and Harte-Hanks News Service under the Texas Open Records Act. The list appeared Wednesday and today in several Texas newspapers.

Of the 32 applicants listed, 22 were from Midland.

"I didn't voluntarily make public this list," Mauro said this morning. The commissioner's attorneys decided the media request for the list was valid.

Mauro sent letters to the applicants and returned their application checks. In the letter, he said the applications will not be filed because that part of the Natural Resources Code is invalid and of no force or effect.

Mauro said today he sent the letters to three categories of applicants: those who have since agreed to withdraw their applications, those who filed them with the local county clerk but not with the General Land Office in Austin, and those who have filed with both their local county clerk and with Austin.

Some of the companies involved, including West Texas Mineral Interest of Eastland, had already withdrawn their applications today.

Ford recalls trucks

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. is recalling more than 45,000 heavy- and light-duty trucks and vans because of problems with brakes, accelerators and fuel pumps.

None of the problems with the 45,760 vehicles caused accidents or injuries, the company said in a statement Wednesday.

WTGS to hear of lake basins

Thomas D. Fouch, research geologist, U.S. Geological Survey, and a distinguished lecturer sponsored by the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, will address a meeting of the West Texas Geological Society, Tuesday, 11:30 a.m., at Midland Center.

Reservations should be made by calling the society at 683-1573. The cost is $6.50.

Fouch, a former exploreation geologist, will present a paper titled, "Character of Ancient Petroliferous Lake Basins of the World."

Planning deductions

Sixth in a series of "tax tip" articles provided by the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants.

Q. I support one daughter in college who is working part time. My widowed father who has some income from stocks and a savings account also lives with me. Can I claim either of them as a dependent?

A. You can claim an exemption of $1,000 for your daughter if she is a full-time student no matter how much she earns, as long as you provide more than half her support. However, if you want to claim your father as a dependent, he cannot earn more than $1,000 per year. Also you must provide more than half of his support.

If you can see that your father will earn over $1,000 this year, you might advise him to transfer some of his investments to a child in the family who has no tax liability. Then you well be able to claim the exemption and your father will not have to pay any tax on the income. This way, you both get a break.

If you and your brothers or sisters together pay more than 50 percent of your father's support, but no one individually pays more than 50 percent, make sure you all have agreed on who will claim the exemption. The IRS requires this agreement on Form 2120.

Q. My husband and I invested in a 10-year trust for our young children. The income from that trust will be taxable to them. Are they required to file a tax return if this is their only income?

A. If the annual income for each child from the trust is $1,000 or more, each will have to file a tax return. However, a dependent child with taxable income triggers a double deduction situation. If the children can be claimed as dependents on your return, you're entitled to a $1,000 dependency exemption for each. Each child may also claim a $1,000 exemption on his own return. In this way, up to $1,000 of the child's income is sheltered from tax. Income above that amount is taxed at rates beginning in the lowest tax brackets. The result for the family as a whole is double exemptions for each child and a portion of income taxed at substantially lower rates. The dependent must file a Forum 1040 and itemize deductions.

For more information on this and other income tax questions, attend the "You and Your Income Tax" class sponsored by the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants. The class, scheduled for Tuesday, February 8th, from 7:00 to 10:00 p.m. is presented as a public service.

Classes will be held at Midland College in the Allison Fine Arts Building. To register send $2.00 with your name and address to Taxpayer Education, P.O. Box 151, Midland, Texas 79702. Pre-registration is encouraged, but walk-in registration will be accepted.

DOT lifts durability rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Transportation Department has lifted a two-year-old requirement that tire companies advise consumers of comparisons in tire durability.

In a statement issued Wednesday, the department said the treadware standards were lifted "to avoid dissemination of potentially misleading information" about tires.

The treadwear information was part of a broader tire-grading system announced with much fanfare during the final days of the Carter administration in late 1980. It was supposed to help consumers select the best tires.

Two other standards showing a tire's traction and the ability of tires to withstand high temperatures will remain in effect, said Hal Paris, a spokesman for the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

With the exception of one manufacturer, the tire industry has vocally opposed the treadwear standard, arguing that tests are imprecise and vary widely depending on test conditions.

Uniroyal, which fared well in the treadwear comparisons and used the standards in its advertisements, was the only manufacturer to argue in favor of the standards during public hearings last summer.

The Reagan administration suspended the treadwear requirement last July to conduct further tests. NHTSA Administrator Raymond Peck said then, "Our own treadwear test results vary to such a degree that the standard cannot be enforced in its present form."

Hi-tech industry leaders told to lobby harder

By the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Leaders of high-technology industries, who have been pushing for tax breaks and tougher trade negotiations to retain their competitive edge, were warned by government officials Wednesday that they must increase their lobbying despite President Reagan's call last week encouraging their industry to drive the nation's economic recovery.

"If you pit yourself in a fight with steel or the automobile (industries) ... you're going to lose," said George Eads, a former member of the Council of Economic Advisers who recommended their pursuit of as much "neutrality" in tax measures as the industry can muster to reward investment and entrepreneurial effort.

Rep.James M. Shannon, D-Mass., who has sought tax-break and trade measures on behalf of high-tech constituents, told approximately 300 industry leaders and government officials attending the two-day conference here that political maneuvering motivated passage of a tax break 18 months ago for research and development, but that even with presidential support, future gains may not come easily.

"I wouldn't think (the political) climate is as favorable (to high technology) ... as you might think or as we may like," Shannon said.

Some conference participants expressed dismay over setbacks for some measures they thought they had won less than two years ago.

High on their list of concern is the research and development tax credit passed in mid-1981 which allows companies to take a tax credit of 25 percent of their incremental increase in R&D spending. Legislators tacked on a provision terminating the credit after 1985, and to compound the industries' uncertainty, the Treasury Department did not publish proposed regulations until last week.

A third of the measure's short life span has already expired, said William Thurston, president and chief executive of Gen Rad Inc., a Massachusetts manufacturer of electronic test equipment.

Industry executives also have discovered that the proposed regulations bar software research and development from the tax credit — even though "software (principally computer programs) was included by the original legislation," according to Robert N. Noyce, vice chairman and founder of Intel Corp., a manufacturer of microprocessors.

Noyce, who was charged with the task of summing up the conference's two-day results, acknowledged a political rule in Washington that "industries which are divided are ignored." He called for:

—Support of tougher trade-negotiating tools embodied in a Senate bill introduced last month, the reciprocal trade and investment act, intended to improve access to foreign markets.

—Extending the 1981 research and development tax credit, and certainly expanding it to include software.

—Retention of a program which allows deferral of taxes on export earnings.

—Permanent extension of a regulation which requires U. S. companies to put some of their domestic R&D expenditures into foreign operations. (The measure has been suspended by Congress for the past two years and is due for reconsideration this year.)

Shamrock joins price cutters

SAN ANTONIO (SWN) — Diamond Shamrock Corporation Tuesday lowered the price it will pay for crude oil by $1 per barrel in its purchasing areas. The company was joined Wednesday by Atlantic Richfield, which lowered its prices by $1 also.

The company will pay $31 per barrel for 40 degree gravity sweet crude from the Texas Panhandle, Oklahoma Panhandle and Oklahoma, West, West Central, and South Texas, Southeast Colorado, Wyoming, Montana, and North Dakota. The company will pay $30 per barrel for sweet crude from Southwest Kansas.

Robert J. Mehall, vice president domestic crude and natural gas liquids for Diamond Shamrock's Refining and Marketing Unit, headquartered in San Antonio, said, "The price reduction was made because current crude oil prices are not supporting depressed refined product prices."

Diamond Shamrock, a fully integrated oil and gas company based in Dallas, purchases approximately 80,000 barrels of crude oil per day to supply its refineries near Dumas in the Texas Panhandle and in Three Rivers in South Texas.

Reporter experiences the other side

Meeting sixth-grade press a bit unnerving

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

My palms were a little sweaty, I admit. It's been quite a while since I've sat on the other side of the notebook during an interview.

I guess my mind has blocked out the cold defensiveness of secretaries when I identify myself on the phone. On other occassions, I've tried to ignore the fidgety, reluctant manner of the person across the desk from me.

Although I try to put my interviewee at ease, I now understand how frightening the situation can be — no matter how friendly or formal the setting.

Visions of rude contacts from past interviews crossed my mind. But surely, some of the hostile nervousness they felt must have stemmed from fears of being misinterpreted or misquoted.

I knew I wasn't nervous about reading misconstrued statements in the newspaper. Still, there was no way around it — I was nervous.

I tried to fake it with a trembling smile as I faced the room full of eager faces and anticipatory pens posed above pads of paper.

I cleared my throat and, amazingly, the rows of determined journalists in front of me simultaneously raised their hands into the air.

I gulped and blindly pointed, bringing on the first question of what would seem to be an hour of intense grilling.

Actually, the "press corps" consisted of sixth grade language arts students of Joan Sipko, Washington Elementary School teacher.

The students, who grasped lists of questions firmly in one hand while heads were cocked in concentration, were studying the art of interviewing during a unit on newspapers.

If a city councilman held a press conference in front of such an intent and considerate group, he might never again be satisfied with the professional media.

When a student was called on to pose a question, the others politely lowered their hands. Either standing or remaining seated, students asked questions in a direct and honestly curious manner. And the answers appeared to be appreciated.

Questions ranged from which qualifications are required to obtain a job as a reporter on a newspaper, to the most exciting story personally covered, to the social life of a reporter.

As the tape reel rapidly turned, every answer, followed immediately by the firing of another carefully considered question, was recorded for future reference for articles assigned to follow.

Wednesday's press conference with a reporter was the first in a series of interviews which will include Midland Independent School District trustee Joe Golding and District Judge Pat Baskin.

The students' career in communications began with studies of different newspapers. According to Ms. Sipko, every child took a different segment of papers from major cities such as New York, Los Angeles and Dallas to compare with local newspapers.

Although comments ranged from the price of stereos advertised to the value of beachfront houses in California, Ms. Sipko said students also paid attention to newspaper design.

Previous lessons introduced students to terms such as layout, display and the difference between publishers and editors.

"I felt they really should know the meaning of the terms used before we began the unit," Ms. Sipko explained.

Task cards pertaining to headline writing and other aspects of print journalism were made by the students over the Christmas holidays, she added.

Creative writing was one of two reasons the study was instigated, according to Ms. Sipko. The other was to provide a more entertaining way in which to practice handwriting skills.

The class plans to begin publishing a school newspaper later this spring which will include a gossip column and articles about teachers and school activities.

Besides campus coverage, students will write articles on different aspects of the community. Sources for these stories will come from scheduled field trips to the post office and a bank. Students also plan on getting the inside scoop on The Midland Reporter-Telegram during a tour of the newspaper plant.

Jury discussion of parole ends in mistrial ruling

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Vern Martin

Jury misconduct has resulted in the mistrial and dismissal of a 1980 Midland robbery case.

But the defendant, who was a former college weightlifting instructor and an ex-Green Beret, was a suspect in a series of holdups and remains in prison on another conviction.

The misconduct issue arose after a Midland juror's initial vote for a five-year prison sentence for the defendant was changed to 10 years and finally to 20 years following the jurors' prohibited discussion on parole.

Jurors in the case of Kennis Earl Grismore, who was charged with the aggravated robbery of a 7-Eleven food store in April 1980, apparently discussed the actual time a prisoner might serve in the penitentiary versus the number of years of the sentence.

The verdict was reversed by an appellate court in El Paso due to jury misconduct. State law prohibits a jury from considering how much time a defendant might spend in prison. In general and barring misconduct, an inmate generally serves about one-third of his sentence before he is considered for parole by the Texas State Board of Pardons and Paroles.

IN AN OPINION rendered by Chief Justice Stephen Preslar, the justice wrote that "any discussion of parole law is jury misconduct" and that the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has ruled that "if even a single juror votes for a harsher sentence as a result of the misconduct, then the defendant has been harmed."

The three El Paso appellate court justices — Preslar, Max Osborn and Charles Schulte — concurred in their decision and cut Grismore free of the 20-year sentence.

However, Grismore, who was 31 when he was convicted of the 7-Eleven robbery, was not released from the Texas Department of Corrections. He is serving a 10-year sentence for violation of his probation in a theft case.

In the Grismore case, juror Douglas H. Peddy testified in a post-trial hearing that "the parole discussion made it 'easier' for him to vote for a higher sentence," Preslar wrote in the decision.

In the decision, Preslar noted that the juror's first vote on paper ballot was for a five-year sentence for Grismore. But following the jury's parole discussion, juror Peddy's second vote was for 10 years, and his third vote, which the 12 jurors in Judge Vann Culp's 238th State District Court unanimously agreed upon, was for 20 years.

In arguing against the opinion, the state contended the parole discussion only affected Peddy's vote for 10 years and not the ultimate 20-year verdict.

"THE STATE'S argument is tantamount to an assertion that a faulty building foundation caused the collapse of the first 10 floors but not floors 11 through 20," Preslar wrote.

The chief justice's opinion noted that "numerous jurors in the Grismore case" confirmed that parole was discussed in the jury's deliberations on sentencing and that one juror noted that "parole could occur upon completion of one-third of the sentence."

While the district attorney said he appreciates the "energy and sincerity" behind the appellate court's decision, District Attorney Vern Martin said he disagrees with the ruling.

"I respect what the judges do," Martin said, "and I can't really fault them."

However, Martin noted that:

—The issue of parole is a "very common problem." A legislative bill which would have made a jury privy to parole laws while setting a sentence died due to its complexity, since parole laws are so complex. Martin noted that there's "no way" anyone can tell a jury that a defendant will serve "X number" of years for any given sentence. "It's possible to serve 20 years of a 20-year sentence," he said. And just because an inmate is eligible for parole "doesn't mean he's going to make it." The degree — if any — of a prisoner's rehabilitation and his behavior have direct bearings on whether or not a prisoner is paroled.

—THE TREND AMONG appellate justices is toward more psychological analysis of the court records. "If you're going to psychoanalyze, you need to know more cerebration," said Martin. He noted that appellate justices, unlike a court's presiding judge, such as Culp, are working from court records and therefore miss the flavor and mood of a trial and any hearings and inflections.

—"The appellate judges are really changing the law," noted Martin. "This is a new trend for them...to make this kind of decision based on no more than what was in that record.

"I think he was right," Martin said of Culp's decision not to declare a mistrial based on alleged jury misconduct.

The appellate court was "going by the letter of the law" in making its decision, according to Martin. In the past, the appellate court had left such matter to the discretion of the trial judge.

"This was a borderline case," Martin said.

Grismore was defended by Midland lawyer Mike Morgan. Martin's first assistant, David Joers, headed up the prosecution.

Charges filed in labor dispute

ClayDesta walkout subject of petition

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

Carpenters Union Local 1428 has charged Midessa Construction Co. with unfair labor practices in its handling of a Jan. 25 walkout by about 30 employees at the ClayDesta Bank construction project.

The charge, dated Jan. 28, was filed with the National Labor Relations Board regional office in Fort Worth.

The union has also filed a petition with the NLRB to hold an election among Midessa employees. A 51 percent vote in favor of union representation would force Midessa to recognize and negotiate with the union.

In the charge, Jim Purcell, carpenters union business representative, stated that Midessa terminated the employment of 16 employees on Jan. 25 "because of their membership and activities in behalf of" the union. Purcell stated that "at all times since such date it (Midessa) has refused and does now refuse to employ the above-mentioned employees."

About 30 Midessa workers, interior mechanics and laborers, walked off the job to protest the less-than-union scale wages being paid by the company. Although Midessa employees are non-unionized, the company had kept pace with union scale wages until January 1982.

During discussions at the job site, Max DeVilbiss, company president, told the workers that the company was unable to meet two subsequent increases in union scale wages.

After failing to reach an agreement with DeVilbiss at the job site Jan. 25, the workers sought assistance from the carpenters union. They voted to accept union representation in negotiations with Midessa.

The afternoon of Jan. 25, DeVilbiss said he declined to meet with a five-man negotiating committee and two union representatives selected by the strikers. He said the strikers were asked to pick up their final paychecks that afternoon.

Subsequently, union representatives sent a telegram to Midessa officials offering to meet and negotiate a settlement. Charles High, Midessa's attorney, said the company declined to voluntarily recognize the union representation.

Purcell said another petition in which the employees offered to return to work unconditionally was also declined by the company.

Midessa called employees to a Sunday meeting and gave those in attendance letters, dated Jan. 28, offering "immediate and unconditional reinstatement to the job and pay rate you held on Tuesday, Jan. 25."

Purcell said he did not learn of the letter until Monday, after the charge was submitted to the NLRB.

The letter states that although replacements were hired for some striking employees who failed to return to work, the striking employees were not fired for their activities.

The letter states that the National Labor Relations Act prohibits an employer from discharging employees who go on strike for higher wages or because of complaints over wage increases.

"In such cases, an employer can lawfully hire permanent replacements for the strikers but cannot 'fire' them," the letter adds.

High, explaining the difference between "firing" and "replacing" striking employees, said that under the NLRA, strikers would not necessarily be guaranteed a job upon their return, but would be entitled to reinstatement as job openings occur.

"We clarified in a letter to the people what their rights were and what our rights were," High said.

Although some striking employees are now back at work, it is unclear how many walkout participants have been reinstated.

Sharon Boles, an NLRB field officer, said the board will investigate the charge and determine whether or not the complaint should be handed over to an administrative law judge for a ruling. Ms. Boles said about 85 percent of such charges are settled prior to reaching a judge's decision.

She said the charges will be investigated and settled prior to initiating the administrative proceedings that might lead to a vote on union representation among Midessa employees.

"We're perfectly willing to have an election. That's the way it should be resolved," said High. He said Midessa declined to recognize the union representation voluntarily because it would deprive all the company's employees of the chance to vote for or against the union.

Ms. Boles said that within about a week, an NLRB representative should begin investigating the unfair labor practices charge.

Improving road quality goal of state group

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Grassroots support for two proposals which would raise money for maintenance and construction of state highways — an area facing a major shortfall — is being sought by the Texas Good Roads Association. And the organization is using a study compiled by The Road Information Program in Washington, D.C., to support its contentions.

Holding a news conference Wednesday afternoon at Midland Regional Airport to present these ideas were Charles Kirkham Jr. of Dallas, a member of the Texas Good Roads Association, and Sally Thompson of Washington, D.C., who compiled the study.

Basically, one proposal calls for a percentage gasoline tax, rather than the standard 5 cents a gallon which has been in effect since 1955, said Kirkham. The Legislature could change the percentage each year, and that percentage would be translated into cents per gallon for the consumer.

"Each extra penny would give another $70 million to the fund," said Kirkham.

The second proposal calls for a change in motor vehicle registration fees. According to Kirkham, the switch would follow the line taken by Oklahoma, which charges a percentage of the vehicle's cost rather than basing it on weight. For example, if a $36,000 Mercedes-Benz and a $6,000 Chevette weigh the same, the buyers now pay the same fee. Under the proposal, it would be a percentage — such as 1 percent — of the cost of the car.

"There is $165 million generated now from the fee," he said. "If we make it one-half of 1 percent, it would bring in $200 million; 1 percent would be $400 million; 1½ percent would be $600 million."

Vehicles are getting smaller and lighter in weight, causing two problems. Kirkland said there are less monies coming in on vehicle registration since it is based on weight. And because these light vehicles run farther on less gasoline the gas tax fund is getting smaller.

Meanwhile, they noted, the need for more maintenance funds is increasing.

The Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation has estimated it needs $2.55 billion per year over the next 20 years to catch up on a growing backlog of highway needs and to improve the system to meet future demands.

Agreeing with that was Bill Lancaster, district engineer with the State Highway Department. "Anybody who has traveled the highways in West Texas can see maintenance is not what it should be. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

"Our biggest problems are with the Farm to Market systems. They were county roads at one time and we took them in the FM system. Oilfield traffic is tearing them up. We've lost some roads in the north part of Martin County because of heavy oilfield trucks," Lancaster said.

Adding to that line of thinking was Ms. Thompson. "We're trying to show a direct dollar benefit to the consumer" with fewer vehicle repairs and less need for new tires. "A driver can save close to $200 a year" by paying enough to keep the roads maintained.

Kirkham noted the State Highway Department gets $1.4 billion a year as compared to the $2.5 billion estimated it needs. The shortfall, he contended, should be made up by users of the highway system through the two proposals.

These additional monies, reasoned the two speakers, also would generate more construction jobs and thus reduce the unemployment benefits.

Mrs. Mark Metzger holds her 7-pound, 14½-ounce baby boy, the first Midland child born after a reversal tubal ligation. Dr. Atilano Diaz, obstetrician and gynecologist, reversed Ms. Metzger's tubal ligation 13 months ago with a traditional procedure using fine suture material, and delivered Baby Metzger Wednesday at Midland Memorial Hospital. Diaz said reversals are successful if women avoid the band-aid tubal ligation, a burning technique that destroys the fallopian tubes.

Park fund could go up in smoke

AUSTIN (AP) — Senators considering various proposals to continue an urban parks fund paid for by cigarette smokers were told that even with the fund, Texas has too few urban recreational areas.

Three senators have introduced bills to continue the fund, which was created in 1979 and scheduled to expire on Aug. 31. One cent of the 18½ cents-per-pack state cigarette tax currently goes into the fund, contributing about $19 million a year to it.

"Recreational areas for urban residents is a necessity, not a frill," Madge Gatlin of the Sierra Club told the committee after reading them news clips about traffic jams and fist fights in crowded Dallas parks over a holiday weekend.

Another penny of the cigarette tax would go to parks under a bill sponsored by Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas. The bill also would change the fund so it would not be restricted to urban areas.

Sen. Don Henderson, R-Houston, wants to simply extend the fund in its current form.

A bill sponsored by Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, would expand the fund to cover rural as well as urban counties, but would not change the allocation of the tax.

Henderson said rural areas originally were excluded from the bill because state parks officials spent most of their funds on rural acreage, which is cheaper.

Jim Bell, director of the parks division of the Texas Parks & Wildlife Department, testified Texas has only about 150 acres of parkland per 1,000 residents. The national average, he said, is more than 1,400 acres per 1,000 people.

Committee Chairman Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, expressed concern that Mauzy's proposal would take $19 million a year out of general revenues, to the detriment of various programs that also receive funds from the cigarette tax.

Houston, cops sued by ACLU

HOUSTON (AP) — Officers rescued one man from two jail inmates who attacked him, but another was beaten and raped after he was left at the mercy of the assailants, according to a $2 million negligence suit against the city and the police department.

The American Civil Liberties Union filed the action Wednesday on behalf of Melvin Roy Wells, a liquor store employee who said he was victimized by his cellmates after being arrested Dec. 26 on a public intoxication charge.

Wells, 25, was one of four inmates in the cell. The two cellmates tried to assault the fourth prisoner but he screamed for help and was moved to another cell, Wells said.

"Without making inquiry as to the cause of the disturbance, the officer transferred the fourth prisoner. The officer, however, did nothing to safeguard Wells, who was left behind," the suit said.

The two "nearly asphyxiated" Wells by holding his head under water in a toilet, then sexually assaulted him and beat him unconscious, the suit said.

"Notwithstanding Wells' calls for help, he received no assistance (from officers) either as a result of the fact that the jail was understaffed or that those officers on staff failed to make adequate patrol," the suit said.

White urges immediate action on teachers' pay

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says raising teachers' salaries is an emergency matter to be handled immediately, but legislative leaders are not as enthusiastic.

White sent the Legislature a special message Wednesday designating teachers' pay hikes as emergency legislation.

The message will allow the House to set aside its rules against committee consideration of a bill for the first 30 days or for debate of a bill the first 60 days.

"I talked with the governor about it Tuesday," said Sen. Bill Presnal, D-Bryan, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee. "This is just to emphasize his interest in the issue. It does not name a special bill. So far as I know, there have been no separate (teachers' pay raise) bills introduced.

"The governor did not indicate if he planned to have a separate bill introduced," he said.

White told a joint session of the Legislature last week that he favors a 24 percent increase in state money for improving the teacher program during the 1984-85 spending period.

TSTA spokesmen said the various teacher pay raises proposed by the State Board of Education, the Legislative Budget Board and the TSTA could not be compared on a percentage basis because each contained different elements.

The State Board of Education would increase current minimum salaries to $13,940 the first year.

Investigation results in four arrests for marijuana delivery

Four persons were being held in the county jail this morning for felony delivery of marijuana after their arrest on the parking lot of Albertson's Super Market, 1002 Andrews Highway, about 9:20 p.m. Tuesday.

Under $25,000 bond each set Wednesday by Justice of Peace Robert Pine were 21-year-old Coy Guy Finley and Danny Lee Fairbanks, 20, both of 4201 N. Garfield St., No. 254; and Robert Scott Holt, 20, of 2434 Whitmire, No. 36-G.

Under $5,000 bond was 19-year-old Judy Lynn Scheid of 2400 Whitmire, No. 16. Authorities said she received a lower bond because she was already under $10,000 bond for each of two drug-related indictments recently handed down by the grand jury.

According to the Midland County Sheriff's Department, the arrests capped a month-long undercover investigation that resulted in the confiscation of six pounds of marijuana. Police department officers assisted sheriff's deputies in the arrests.

Chagra's fate rests in jury's hands

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The question of whether Jimmy Chagra ordered the murder of a U.S. district judge or was framed by a convicted hit man faced a federal jury today in Chagra's murder trial.

In closing arguments, the government planned to repeat its claim that Chagra, 39, paid Charles V. Harrelson $250,000 to murder U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. of San Antonio because he feared a stiff sentence from Wood in a 1979 narcotics case.

The defense contends Chagra never ordered Wood's murder, but was blackmailed by Harrelson, who threatened to falsely implicate him in the May 29, 1979, assassination.

Defense attorney Oscar Goodman said any talk of murder on Chargra's part was merely boasting to create a "tough-guy" image as an inmate at Leavenworth Penitentiary, where he was sentenced to 30 years for operating a continuing criminal enterprise after Wood's death.

Goodman called just two defense witnesses, including one alleged to be dead, before resting his case Wednesday afternoon.

The first was Jerry Ray James, a former Leavenworth Penitentiary inmate who turned informant and tape-recorded Chagra's prison conversations.

James testified as a government witness that Chagra told him he had arranged Wood's murder. Wednesday, he said Chagra also told him he shot and killed a "Mark Finney" in the presence of a man named Jack Stricklin.

Before resting its case earlier Wednesday, the government called 87 witnesses and introduced more than seven hours of tape-recorded conversations related to Chagra — a convicted narcotics dealer and former Las Vegas gambler — and Wood's death.

William S. Busby of 4614 Floyd Court said his home was entered Wednesday. Missing were clothing and assorted stereo equipment valued at $2,153.

Diners hide as man wields gun against ex-wife

KERRVILLE (AP) — Patrons in a crowded restaurant hid under tables as a man with a .12-gauge shotgun opened fire on his ex-wife and her boyfriend, killing three people and wounding another before turning the gun on himself, police said.

Ronald Young, 39, of Kerrville, was in critical condition today after undergoing surgery at Peterson Memorial Hospital for a self-inflicted shotgun wound to his abdomen, said nursing supervisor Cleo Meadow.

"It was a family squabble with his ex-wife," said Peace Justice Betty Burney of Center Point. "We don't know if they had any recent arguments."

Police said they would release no information until a 9 a.m. CST news conference. No charges have been filed against Young.

Acapulco Restaurant manager Joe Hernandez described the scene in his 178-seat establishment as "bedlam."

"We all hollered to hit the floor and everybody hit the floor," he said.

MC writing contest entries due Feb. 9

Entry deadline for Midland College's annual Creative Writing Contest has been set for Feb. 9. Current students, or those who have attended Midland College within the past two years, are eligible to enter. Either present or past full-time or part-time students may enter and need not be enrolled in an English class.

Categories are poetry, fiction-short story and essay. There is no limit on the number of entries in any category.

Prizes and awards for each category are $60 cash and certificate of award for first place, $40 cash and certicates for second and $20 cash and certificates for third.

Judges will be from area universities and/or published writers.

"We opened the contest to previous students because we felt that many of them did not begin to write seriously until after they had completed college," noted contest director Rebecca Tillapaugh. "Results of past two years have proven this to be true to a large extent."

Format requirements and entry instructions may be obtained from Larry Griffin, Mari Nell Hurst or Rebecca Tillapaugh.

Awards will be announced and entries critiqued by the judges at a ceremony March 9.

Man alleges chief discriminated in suit

HOUSTON (AP) — Police Chief Lee Brown considered the personal problems of two black recruits who were allowed to repeat a training program they failed but ignored those of a white cadet who was fired, a federal suit charges.

James William Christopher, who was fired last May, filed the reverse discrimination suit against Houston, Brown and another police official Wednesday. He was terminated after failing a 16-week training course.

But Brown, saying he was looking into charges of racial discrimination, ordered that Isaac Boney and Claire D. Phillips be allowed to repeat the program about the same time.

Christopher said Brown made allowances for Boney and Phillips' personal problems, but did not consider his. Christopher said a fire in his condominium forced him and his pregnant wife to live in a motel room for three months and he found it difficult to concentrate.

Boney and Ms. Phillips failed the training course a second time, but Brown allowed them to resign and immediately re-enter the police academy.

Christopher is asking the court to allow him to re-enter the field operations training program and award him $1.3 million in damages from the city, Brown and field training officer R.D. Perry.

Ian Smalley, right, and his attorney, Richard Haynes, leave federal courthouse in Dallas Wednesday after hearing testimony that Smalley offered to sell a witness weapons-grade plutonium.

Smalley offer to sell plutonium described

DALLAS (AP) — British arms dealer Ian Smalley once offered to sell weapons-grade plutonium, a highly radioactive element used to make nuclear weapons, to the highest bidder, a government informant has testified.

Gary Howard, a government witness who worked undercover during a 15-month investigation of Smalley's dealings, testified Smalley told him he knew of a cache of plutonium that he could sell to the highest bidder.

"He said some ex-Portuguese mercenaries wanted to sell it for $70 million to $90 million. I don't remember the exact price," Howard told jurors here Wednesday.

"He wanted to know if anybody wanted to buy it," said Howard, a former international trader.

Smalley is on trial in federal court here on charges he conspired to ship tanks to Iran and anti-tank missiles to Iraq while the two countries were at war.

Defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes of Houston is scheduled to cross-examine Howard today.

Howard also testified that while he was working undercover for the government, Smalley told him of dozens of deals he had engineered that violated the laws of several countries.

Over Haynes' objections, Howard said Smalley shipped U.S. tank engines from this country to Iran during the hostage crisis at the U.S. Embassy.

Ex-professor refused hearing

ODESSA — The United States Supreme Court has refused to hear a case filed by a former Odessa College professor in 1976 against the college.

The Supreme Court entered an order denying Jaroslav Piskacek's Application for Writ of Certiorari, which he filed in December 1982.

A U.S. Court of Appeals in August 1982 upheld a 1981 ruling in favor of OC in a suit filed by the tenured professor, who was dismissed in 1975. The decision against Piskacek was handed down by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 5th Circuit, located in New Orleans, La.

Piskacek, a foreign languages professor, sued the college in June 1976, alleging that he had been denied due process of law in being dismissed. Piskacek, who began teaching at OC in 1969, was notified in September 1974 that his contract for the 1975-76 school year would not be renewed.

Subsequently, a college tenure committee and the board of trustess had hearings on the matter. Trustees voted to affirm the college president's decision to dismiss Piskacek.

In the lawsuit Piskacek filed against OC, it was alleged that the college trustees and president, in dismissing Piskacek, used "capricious" conduct and that the plaintiff was denied due process. The suit further contended that Piskacek's rights under the 14th Amendment to the Constitution were violated.

Piskacek asked for reinstatement to his teaching position and about $200,000 in damages and back pay.

In September 1981, United States District Judge Harry Lee Hudspeth of El Paso ruled in favor of the college and said that Piskacek had not been denied due process and that the decision of the board of trustees "was based upon substantial evidence." Hudspeth also ruled that Piskacek was not entitled to damages or reinstatement to his teaching position.

Guadalupe Park will have new trail built

PINE SPRINGS — In response to increased backcountry use of the craggy slopes and forested canyons of Guadalupe Mountains National Park, the National Park Service has awarded a contract for the construction of seven miles of trail to Trio Construction Company of Priest River, Idaho.

Trio, which was lauded for the trail it completed up 8,751-ft. Guadalupe Peak in January 1980, bid $58,574.65 for the new project. Included will be construction and renovation of a trail along McKittrick Ridge to its junction with Lost Peak Trail, as well as the improvement of two backcountry campgrounds containing approximately 15 campsites each.

Work is expected to begin early this month and be completed within 90 days.

Superintendent Bill Dunmire noted that the successful bid was the lowest of 10 received, with the high bid amounting to $134,237.

Figures just released by NPS officials indicate a continued increase in visitor use at the park, which celebrated its 10th anniversary last year. During 1982 18,300 day hikers trod the backcountry and more than 2,000 backpackers spent at least one night somewhere along the 70-mile network of trails. The statistics represent a 3 percent increase over 1981.

Most popular trails were McKittrick Canyon with 7,791 users; Smith Springs, 3,623; Pine Canyon, 2,974; and Guadalupe Peak, 2,873.

The drive-in campground at Pine Springs registered 16,224 campers, with 1,599 making use of facilities at Dog Canyon. Those figures represented increases of 18 percent and 58 percent, respectively, over 1981.

New district Ranger of the Pine Springs-Frijole area of Guadalupe Mountains National Park is Douglas G. Raeburn, a supervisory ranger at Shenandoah National Park the past two years. A 7-year veteran of the NPS, Raeburn previously served at Kennesaw Mountain National Battlefield Park, Cumberland Island National Seashore and Blue Ridge Parkway.

Editors Note: This is the last in a series on the San Francisco Examiners Common-Sense Diet.

The most significant new trend in today's thinking about weight control is that diet alone may not be enough and that cutting calorie consumption may be the worst thing a person can do.

"Never go on a diet to lose weight," says Dr. Martin Katahn, director of the weight control program at Vanderbilt University and author of "The 200-Calorie Solution." He recommends a combination of diet and exercise, with the emphasis on exercise. "If you're less than 50 pounds overweight, I can almost guarantee it's because of a sedentary lifestyle," says Katahn.

To varying degrees, other weight control specialists also are putting more emphasis on exercise. That's the other half of the equation. The inflexible rule is that, to lose a pound of fat, the body must run up a 3,500-calorie deficit, using up that many more calories than it takes in.

According to Dr. Joan Saxton, director of the Obesity and Risk Factor Program in San Francisco, there are two almost fail-safe predictors of ultimate success: Starting some kind of exercise program and keeping accurate records of eating and exercise.

"The object is to get started with any kind of exercise, even if it's just walking around the block, and building up from there," Saxton said. Saxton's program is the one on which I lost 63 pounds. She got me walking — an average of three to four miles a day.

"I TELL MY GROUPS about all the health benefits you can get from exercise, and how much better it will make you feel," said Patty Koledo, a behaviorist and counselor with the San Francisco Obesity and Risk Factor Program. "But the most effective thing is that you can eat more when you exercise more. That usually does it."

"We know that people who exercise can speed up their metabolisms," Saxton added. "And we know that people who don't exercise have a much harder time of it."

Katahn is convinced he knows the reason why. The explanation goes like this:

Theoretically, if you eat 500 calories a day less than you do now, you should lose one pound a week, but anyone who has ever dieted knows that's seldom what really happens. The reason is that the body plays a nasty trick. It interprets the cutback in calories as a threat to its existence, so it starts using calories more efficiently. At least that's the theory behind Katahn's work.

"Your metabolism can slow down as much as 45 percent on a low-calorie diet," Katahn said over lunch in a San Francisco sushi bar (all you can eat, about 350 calories without beer). "When I wrote the book, I thought the average must be around 25 percent. It's actually closer to 35 percent, according to work by Jean-Pierre Flatt of MIT published in 1980."

TO PUT IT INTO graphic terms, you could cut your daily calorie consumption from 2,000 to 1,000 calories, expecting to deficit 7,000 calories a week and lose two pounds. But if your metabolism slows by 35 percent, the actual net deficit is not 1,000 calories a day but 300. Instead of using 2,000 calories to keep itself going, the body is using 35 percent less, or 1,300 calories. That works out to a pound every two weeks, instead of two pounds a week.

On top of that, Katahn says, there's an additional slowdown because the body is digesting less food — thus using even fewer calories.

No wonder low-calorie diets can be so frustrating. If metabolism is slowed down by 35 percent, the body registers every 100 calories of food as 135. So the pounds go back on even faster than they came off.

Worse yet, Katahn suggests, "The next time you try to diet, the body gets even more efficient. It gets into the slower metabolic rate sooner, and may use even fewer calories. And if you keep going on diets every few months, it never has a chance to recover. It even gets better at it."

The good news is that a little bit of exercise can go a long way toward reversing that situation.

"You will lose weight and keep it off, because you haven't triggered any drastic metabolic change," says Dr. Charles Kuntzleman, author of "Diet Free: The No-Diet Way to a Beautiful Body." Kuntzleman is among a growing number of diet doctors and nutritionists who agree with Katahn that a diet without exercise has two strikes against it.

EXERCISE IS ALSO tied into another weight-control theory currently in vogue: Dr. William Bennett's setpoint theory. As outlined in "The Dieter's Dilemma: Eating Less and Weighing More," Bennett and Joel Gurin suggest that everyone has a metabolic setpoint, a weight that the body wants to be. It tends to return to that weight no matter how much dieting the body endures. The only way to lower the setpoint, Bennett and Gurin insist, is through exercise.

Exercise, then, is the foundation of the San Francisco Examiner Weight-Control Plan:

1. If you're not already doing some kind of exercise, start now. Check with your doctor to make sure there isn't a reason why you shouldn't, then try walking at least two miles a day. Swim laps for a half hour. Run in place for 15 minutes. Anything, but get into some kind of activity.

How can a busy person work in 45 minutes to an hour of exercise a day? If possible, walk instead of driving to work. Take time after lunch or dinner to walk. Buy an exercise bike and ride it while reading or watching TV.

Katahn suggests writing down your daily schedule as it is now. See where you can fit in a few minutes of exercise. I know mothers who deliver their children to nursery school and head directly to the gym for a workout. Instead of that being an energy drain, they find they have more energy to do the other things.

2. CUT OUT FAT where possible. Eat less red meat and more fish, shellfish, chicken and poultry. Fill up on complex carbohydrates — fruit, vegetables, rice, pasta and bread — instead of high-fat snacks such as pastries or candies. Eat baked or boiled potatoes instead of French fries.

3. Eat a balanced diet, but cut down on calories. The consensus seems to be that 1,200 calories is about as low as you should go without constant medical supervision.

The best way to trim calories is to cut down on fat. The mathematics are dramatic: An ounce of fat has 2 1/4 times as many calories as an ounce of protein or carbohydrate (252 to 112). The average American gets 40 to 45 percent of his calories from fat. For the average obese American, the figure is probably higher.

"A lot of people who come into our program are getting 60 to 70 percent of their calories from fat," said Saxton, whose program accepts only patients who are at least 50 pounds overweight. The U.S. Dietary Guidelines suggest that 30 to 35 percent calories from fat might be a practical figure for Americans to shoot at.

How to keep weight off successfully

By HARVEY STEIMAN

If your experience with weight control has had its ups and downs, welcome to the club.

The success rate for most diets is about 5 percent. The weight comes off, but the tricky part is keeping it off. After a year's maintenance, the experts estimate that 95 percent of dieters gain most or all of the weight back.

That would be pretty depressing if it were the whole story. What about the 5 percent who do succeed, who do manage to maintain a healthy weight after losing a bundle?

"All the evidence we have is that most of the people who succeed in our program do two things — they keep accurate records and they start doing some kind of exercise," says Dr. Joan Saxton, director of the Obesity and Risk Factor Program in San Francisco. The records reflect every bite of food, every bit of exercise and a daily weight.

"The records are a tool," explains Patty Koledo, a behaviorist and a group leader in Saxton's program. "If your weight is edging up, you can look back and see what's going on. Then you can solve the problem before it gets out of hand."

TO HELP SOLVE the problems, we offer a baker's dozen tips, psychological hints and nuggets of information about weight control. These are strategies I have been using to maintain my weight loss last year of more than 60 pounds. I weigh the same today as I did Oct. 1, when I reached my goal weight.

1. Don't panic if you're not perfect. If you indulge in a doughnut, a plate of fried chicken or anything that's "not on your diet," forget about it and jump right back into the diet. The most dangerous words anyone serious about losing weight can utter are, "Oh, well, I blew my diet, I might as well have another."

"Has this ever happened to you?" asks Koledo. "You're driving at night and you feel sleepy. You nod off and suddenly you're steering off the road. What do you do? Say, 'Oh, well, I blew it; I might as well crash the car.' Of course not. You steer it back into the road."

2. Be conscious of what you're eating. If you're watching TV and you find your hand reaching for the peanuts automatically, pause first. If you're cooking and there's a little left in the bowl after you've measured the right amount, think before you slurp it up.

If you're really hungry, maybe a piece of fruit or even a glass of water might be better than the handful of peanuts. If you're just bored, maybe a walk around the block or a change in activity might perk you up. Either way, you might decide to spend the calories more effectively on something else.

3. Every bite counts. No one might have seen you eat that cookie, but your body knows. The pat of butter you slather on the toast counts. The mayonnaise you put on the turkey sandwich counts. The "sample" of Grandma's cookies you down as you sail out the door counts. The glass of wine you have with dinner counts.

EVEN IF IT'S NOT part of a meal, everything you eat contributes calories to your diet. You may want to have that pat of butter on the toast. That's OK. Just remember to add it into the day's total.

4. Beware the phantom portion size. If you think you're eating a 4-ounce hamburger and it's really an 8-ounce hamburger, you could be eating 400 calories more than you bargained for. If you think you're eating 1 teaspoon of butter and it's really 1 tablespoon, that's 67 extra calories.

How can you tell the portion size? If it's a packaged food, check the label. At home, you can measure it. At a restaurant, ask whomever is serving you.

5. Beware of hidden fat. You can banish butter, margarine and oil from your pantry and still serve yourself more fat than you bargained for if you don't know what foods are high in fat.

These foods derive 75 percent or more of their calories from fat: beefsteaks and roasts, hamburger, luncheon meats, sausage, spareribs, untrimmed pork, cheesecake, cream, nuts, seeds.

These foods derive more than half their calories from fat: corned beef, chocolate, hard cheese, eggs, "gourmet" ice cream, tuna in oil, cream soups.

DOES THIS MEAN you should never eat all these foods? Of course not. Just know what you're eating.

6. If you know that something leads you to overeating, avoid it. The psychological term here is "environmental control" — a fancy way of saying if you know you have trouble resisting high-calorie snacks, don't keep them around "just in case" someone comes to visit. You know who really gets them.

If you know you always want to eat at certain times of the day, try to plan something else at those times. If you tend to nibble off the plates that come back to the kitchen after meals, try to get someone else to clear the table. Or try my wife's trick: Drown it quickly in hot water before you have a chance to eat it.

7. Keep records of everything you eat and every bit of exercise you do. Aside from the problem-solving aspects described above, this forces you to think about what you're doing before you do it. Carry around a little notebook and write everything down. Often, patterns emerge that give you valuable information about what your eating habits really are.

8. Weigh yourself every day, but don't panic if the scale doesn't move, or moves in the wrong direction. Track the results on a chart.

EVERYONE'S BODY WEIGHT fluctuates. Mostly, it has to do with whether or not your body is retaining water at the moment. If you happen to step on the scale when you're retaining water, you will weigh more than when you are not.

Keep that in mind when the needle registers two pounds more than it did yesterday. Remember that to gain two pounds in one day you would have to eat 7,000 calories. If you didn't, it's probably water.

Also, if you are exercising, you are building muscle. Muscle weighs twice as much as fat. You could be losing fat and slimming down, but not having it show on the scale. That's why the standard diet advice, which holds that a weekly weighing is best, can be terribly discouraging. If you happen to stand on the scale on a day when you are retaining water, it could seem as if a whole week's work has gone for naught.

Don't panic; stay with it. If you're sticking to the program, you will be losing fat. That's what counts.

9. Try to take the emotion out of food. This doesn't mean that you cannot love to eat. What it means is that you don't eat because you are guilty, angry, or to please your mother. And if you do overeat, it's not the end of the world. If you eat too much, just compensate for it by eating less for a while.

"The worst thing you can do is get into the kind of cycle where you feel guilty about how much you ate, so you get depressed and eat more," Koledo explains. "That's why we reduce food to numbers, calorie counts. Numbers are less emotional and easier to deal with."

10. DROP OUT OF the clean plate club. It won't help any starving children elsewhere in the world if you finish everything on your plate. Save leftovers for omelets or soups. Give them to the dog. Give them to the neighbor's dog. Or throw them away.

11. If you know you retain water easily, avoid high-sodium foods. When you take in a lot of sodium, it can cause your body to retain fluids. Not only can that tip the scales several pounds, but it can make you feel lousy.

Aside from pickles, sauerkraut, soy sauce and anchovies, other foods relatively high in sodium include most cheeses, breakfast cereals, quick breads, packaged puddings, pancake mixes, canned and dehydrated soup mixes.

Most packaged processed foods contain salt. But sodium comes in other forms: sodium saccharin in diet sodas, sodium bicarbonate in cakes and quick breads, monosodium glutamate (MSG) in Asian foods.

12. When you go off a low-calorie diet, ease back into regular eating gradually. On a low-calorie diet, metabolism slows down, by some estimates as much as 45 percent. It takes a while for metabolism to speed up again when calorie restrictions come off — as much four months. So take it easy. Don't eat everything in sight. Add a few more calories at first, then a few more, until you achieve a balance. This strategy has the added benefit of preventing a binge.

13. Memorize this phrase: "I'd love to, but I'm so stuffed I couldn't eat another bite." This is the gracious way to decline that huge piece of Aunt Helen's double chocolate cake.

Besides, if you follow this plan, it probably will be true.

Significant advances made in treating diabetes

By MICHAEL UNGER
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Diabetics and their relatives, as well as people whose families have a history of diabetes, should know about a number of significant advances in the treatment of diabetes and its complications in recent years.

The advances include laser eye surgery, the development of smaller, more reliable insulin pumps, home glucose self-monitoring and other new tests, improvements in insulin, and experiments with pancreas cell transplants.

And although the incidence of diabetes is increasing, medical experts say that more progress in fighting the disease can be expected in the near future. Diabetes specialists and researchers are talking seriously about the possibilities of preventing or, at least, forestalling insulin-dependent diabetes mellitus with genetic engineering techniques, by manipulating the body's immune system or by using a vaccine.

It was 60 years ago that a diabetic at the University of Toronto in Canada received the world's first injection of the life-saving hormone, insulin. Until 1922, few diabetics lived for more than a year or two, and the most devastating type of diabetes that strikes children frequenty claimed their lives in weeks.

WHILE INSULIN was no cure, most people thought it was, a mindset that caused diabetes research to languish for years. In effect, the discovery of insulin allowed diabetics to live long enough to devleop the complications that eventually killed them. Long-term complications can involve virtually every organ and system of the body, particularly the eyes, kidneys, blood vessels, heart, and nervous system.

Now, there is a renewed scientific and medical interest as well as a need to combat a disease that, in the United States, is expanding at the rate of 600,000 new cases each year and that already afflicts more than 10 million Americans.

More than 85 percent of diabetes cases consist of the less severe Type II that usually occurs after age 40 and usually does not require patients to take insulin shots. It is managed by careful dieting, prescribed excercise and, sometimes, oral medication. But Type I diabetes, which requires insulin to sustain life and which is known as juvenile diabetes, causes the most complications and most of the estimated 150,000 annual diabetes deaths. (Doctors want the name abandoned because Type I diabetes can occur at any age.)

"In recent years, remarkable progress has been made in both basic and clinical diabetes research," said Dr. Lester B. Salans, director of the National Institute of Arthritis, Diabetes, Digestive and Kidney Diseases, which is part of the National Institutes of Health, or NIH.

"SIGNIFICANT ADVANCES range from a better understanding of the development of diabetes, to the sophistication of (laser) photocoagulation treatments to reduce the risk of blindness from diabetic retinopathy," Salans said. "Advances have also been made in the field of pancreas transplants, and in our basic understanding of how insulin works."

Moreover, Salans reported, "research has yielded new and exciting information about the roles in interaction of genetics, viruses, and the immune system in causing diabetes. It has also produced insulin through recombinant DNA technology, and the development of insulin infusion devices."

Here are some major advances and promising areas of diabetes research:

VIRUSES AND ENVIRONMENT — Scientists have shown that a viral infection can cause insulin-dependent diabetes. In 1979, coxsackie B-4 virus was isolated rom the pancreas of a Virginia boy who had died during the onset of acute insulin-dependent diabetes. The virus from the child's pancreas grew when cultured and caused the same form of diabetes in mice. The virus may trigger Type I diabetes in young people who are genetically predisposed to get it, frequently at puberty. But viral infections alone are not the cause of most Type I diabetes, and other factors are necessary to produce the disease. Can young people be shielded from such environmental triggers?" said Dr. Stuart Brink, senior staff pediatrician at Joslin Diabetes Center in Boston. Obesity is another factor linked to diabetes, as are severe emotional stress or physical trauma such as major surgery.

GENETICS AND AUTOIMMUNE RESPONSE — Disorders of the body's immune system probably play a role in some forms of diabetes and genetics certainly does. Recent advances in mapping genetic susceptibility to diabetes makes it clear that it is a heterogeneous group of disorders and that almost all have a genetic basis. The hereditary nature of diabetes appears stronger in mature-onset Type II than in juvenile-onset Type I disease. Findings leave little doubt that a pre-diabetic state exists among high-risk family members.

SOME INVESTIGATORS believe that abnormal alterations in people's immune systems may be genetically determined. They contend that insulin-dependent diabetes is an autoimmune disorder, much as some forms of cancer and arthritis. "Traitor" antibodies have been shown to attack insulin-producing beta cells in the Islets of Langerhans of the pancreas. Research teams in this country and Europe says that immunosuppressive treatments might halt diabetic damage and insulin dependence if they can be started within a year after onset, when many patients still produce some insulin.

INSULIN IMPROVEMENTS — Better manufacturing techniques make it possible to reduce the contaminants present in commercial insulin. Newer, highly purified insulins available have reduced allergic reactions, insulin resistance, and other side effects. Insulin for diabetics has always come from the pancreases of pigs and cattle, but human insulin has been manufactured synthetically through genesplicing or recombinant DNA technology and promises a limitless worldwide supply. Human insulin also is being produced chemically from pork insulin. Although at this point no additional benefits are being claimed for biosynthetic insulin over animal insulin, "Humulin" is the first over-the-counter product devised through genetic engineering. It may be available next year.

INSULIN PUMPS — Still controversial, insulin pumps are not yet for most Type I diabetics. But for "brittle" diabetics, whose blood glucose levels fluctuate widely, and those who must take three or more injections a day, these sophisticated electronic pumps provide a programmed, constant insulin dose under the skin. The pumps have been getting smaller and smaller. One 13-ounce version is no bigger than some radio-cassette recorders and is meant to be strapped to the waist. But it costs $1,695 with accessories. A smaller version is in the works. The pump can be used manually and to give extra doses before meals and snacks. Wearers can also program the pump at bedtime to deliver a supplementary dose during sleep to minimize pre-breakfast hyperglycemia. Doctors warn that pump failures can occur and that hyperglycemia reactions are common, but believe their use will grow as improvements are made.

HOME GLUCOSE SELF-MONITORING — This recent development allows diabetics to adjust their insulin doses and determine blood sugar levels more precisely, allowing tighter control. Chemically sensitive plastic strips are either compared on a color-coded chart or inserted into an electronic meter to produce a digital readout. Blood testing is a more precise tool than urine testing. In non-diabetics, glucose levels most often range between 80 and 120 milligrams per deciliter of blood, depending on the test used. Among diabetics, however, the range may fluctuate between fewer than 50 milligrams to more than 500 milligrams during the day.

IN ADDITION to avoiding the potentially fatal effects of precipitous swings between extremes, tight control of blood sugar levels helps diabetics feel better, allows them to be more active, and is still the only available strategy for controlling complications. But, as with insulin pumps, users have to be highly motivated. And the equipment costs about $400, plus supplies, including automatic finger-pricking lancets that make collection of a droplet of blood almost painless.

Another important new test measures blood glucose levels over four-month periods of time, not just at the moment. Called the hemoglobin A-1C test for a special component of the blood, it is used with home self-monitoring to adjust diet or drugs.

LASER EYE TREATMENT — Research has shown that a procedure called pan-retinal photocoagulation, a technical term for laser beam surgery, reduces the risk of blindness by 50 percent in diabetics with moderately advanced retinopathy. In this procedure, finely focused laser beams converted light into heat to seal bleeding retinal vessels and destroy diseased tissue. Several treatments may be needed. A topical anesthetic is used.

Ophthalmologists increasingly use the technique, although it is not a cure and can only slow progression of diabetic retinopathy, the leading cause of blindness in the United States. Studies have begun to determine if earlier use of laser treatment can halt damage to the retina. Diabetic glaucoma also can be treated with a laser.

An important new, non-laser eye treatment, called vitrectomy, also has been shown to be effective in maintaining or improving the vision of many diabetics with serious eye damage.

VIETRECTOMY ENTAILS the surgical removal of clouded vitreous eye fluid that results from massive blood vessel hemorrhage and replacement with a saline solution. Eventually, the eye produces a clear fluid to replace the saline. Ophthalmologists trained in these procedures point out that these treatments do not help everyody and carry risks, as in any surgical procedure. Their use must be weighed against the fact that 90 percent of diabetics contract retinopathy after 20 years, and 50 percent after 10 years.

TRANSPLANTS AND IMPLANTS — Still in the experimental stages, neither pancreas transplants nor "artificial pancreas" implants are available for routine treatment. Scientists have successfully transplanted healthy pancreas cells from rats into diabetic mice and reversed their disease without rejection. Transplants of pancreatic tissue in humans have been accomplished in this country and in Europe with mixed results. Tissue rejection is the big problem. But doctors in Sweden announced recently that three of six diabetics were living for as long as a year with transplanted pancreas tissue from dead donors. One was able to stop taking insulin. The other three patients rejected the donor organs.

DEAR ABBY

Husband's table manners have gone to the dogs

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Our dining area is near a sliding glass door that opens onto the patio. We eat all our meals there. My husband continually opens and closes the door while we're eating to feed the dogs from the table and tend to their needs. He's up and down constantly. It drives me crazy.

I have told him and told him how annoying it is to have him feed the dogs from the table, but he pays no attention to me. Every mealtime is a nightmare, and it's very hard on my digestive system to eat while I'm aggravated.

What's the matter with this man? And what should I do about it? — FED UP

DEAR FED UP: If his inconsiderate behavior is something new, he should see a doctor to determine whether he's sick or just plain ornery. If he's ornery, tell him (in a loving way) how upset you are. If that doesn't work, set a place for yourself in another room where you can enjoy a calm and peaceful meal. Tell him he's in the doghouse, and let him eat with the dogs!

DEAR ABBY: What can a mother do when she knows her son cannot afford to get married but his girlfriend keeps nagging him to marry her?

She has not finished school, she's not trained for anything, and she's very childish for a girl of 20. My son is 22 and up to his neck in debt — he owes me money and also owes the bank. He knows he can't afford to get married now, but this girl is constantly trying to get him to change his mind. I tried to talk to the girl, but you can't tell her anything. They would like me to help them. What should I do? — THE BOY'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Make it plain that they can expect no help from you. A man has no business on the sea of matrimony unless he can paddle his own canoe.

DEAR ABBY: I do not have sex very often with my husband, but on one of those rare occasions, he infected me with herpes. I didn't know what I had until I started having trouble and visited a doctor.

When I confronted my husband with this news, he swore up and down that he hadn't been with anybody else and must have gotten it off a toilet seat. Is this possible? Or is it a lot of bunk?

Now, the problem: I am having an affair with a wonderful married man I once worked for. Should I tell him about my herpes? I think the world of him and don't want to lose him. — HAS HERPES IN CHICAGO

DEAR HAS HERPES: Recent studies show that the Herpes Virus II (affecting the genitals) can survive on a toilet seat, hands, clothing and elsewhere for hours, and theoretically can be transmitted to an innocent party, so your husband could be telling the truth.

About your "wonderful married man," TELL HIM! He should be examined immediately by a physician. It is imperative that he use protection during any future sexual encounters with you.

AT WIT'S END

Entering computer age

By ERMA BOMBECK

"Be not the first by whom the new are tried, Nor yet the last to lay the old aside."

I don't care what Alexander Pope said, computers aren't for everyone, and there's no doubt in my mind that I will be the last person in the world to acknowledge a terminal as anything more than where you catch an airplane.

There are maybe a dozen or so throwbacks to the gaslight era roaming the earth today and I am one of them. I can't load a cassette into a camera. I could break into a bank easier than I could follow instructions for the 24-hour teller. I manually lift old dirt out of the sweeper bag rather than replace it with a new one. I once poured $2 worth of gasoline on my feet because I had the wrong nozzle in a self-service station. And I will only say this once, my ironing board has been up since 1953.

It's nothing I'm proud of, it's just that I don't know how I am going to survive the computer age. I have had only one computer experience in my lifetime. I carried on correspondence for three months once with a computer in Columbus, Ohio, that insisted I had not made my quarterly payment for my cleaning woman's Social Security when in fact I had.

The computer wrote a nice letter. It should have been. It was the same one every time. We didn't seem to be communicating, so one day I called and asked to speak to it personally. The person told me that computers don't talk. (I understand that since then they have found a voice.) I figured anything that didn't talk couldn't testify so I wrote the computer one final letter and said, "Stop bothering me with all this crappo," and that was the last I heard from it.

Mercifully, my children did not inherit these inept genes from their electronic klutz of a mother. It's a certainty that their children will be educated by computer, attend church electronically, write books and letters by machine, order their groceries from a terminal, be diagnosed and treated by computer, mate and date by machine, be married by a series of belches, pay bills, shop and have their menus planned by machine and depend on it for their social life.

Their computers will duly note that their grandmother never bought a battery, never owned a chip, and went into the 20th century kicking and screaming, "I don't trust anything that can't laugh or cry or acknowledge that the check is in the mail!"

Make Saturday luncheon spinach, tuna casserole

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

SATURDAY LUNCH
Spinach Tuna & Rolls
Fruit Compote & Coffee

SPINACH TUNA

Satisfying and attractive.

10-ounce package frozen leaf spinach
Two 7-ounce cans tuna in olive oil
3 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 pint half-and-half
2 ounces grated (½ cup loosely packed) Swiss cheese
2 tablespoons butter
3 slices (each ⅜-inch thick) bread, decrusted and finely crumbled (1 cup)

Cook spinach according to package directions, omitting salt; drain. With a kitchen scissors cut spinach into short lengths; arrange over the bottom of a buttered shallow round 1½-quart broiler-proof baking dish. Drain oil from tuna, reserving 2 tablespoons. Make a white sauce of the reserved tuna oil, flour, salt and half-and-half; stir in cheese until melted, then tuna. Pour sauce over spinach. Melt butter and mix with crumbs; sprinkle over sauce. Broil until heated through and browned. Serve at once. Makes 4 servings.

Beat a little water into eggs when making an omelet, instead of milk or cream, for a more tender result.

AT WORK

Getting used to new job

By DR. ADELE M. SCHEELE

Q — I have a new job but it's a terrible fit. Should I tell my boss and relieve the tension or play the game of pretending that everything is fine?

A — Being the new kid on the block is always tough, no matter how experienced you are. Newness pushes all the buttons that transport us back to grade school, with all the pain we felt and none of the problem-solving techniques we have learned along the way. Time does help. About six months' worth of getting acclimated is usual.

In the meantime, play both ends of the emotional spectrum. Concentrate on what is positive about the tasks involved and the people with whom you are in contact. Take the initiative and befriend them. Ask them about their backgrounds, experiences, interests and share your past too. Remember most people are shy and need a catalyst.

On the other hand, try to isolate what bothers you about the work or your boss. Define for yourself what needs to be changed to make you feel easier. In a casual conversation with your boss, ask how he or she felt when they first came to work at the company.

Reveal that you're troubled over one aspect and ask if it might be reconciled. Be moderate. Don't show anger or hurt, only concern. It may be that you can work it out and become the wiser for it. Or, you may find out that you did make a mistake. In that case, you will have the opportunity to learn what is wrong and what is right for you — a powerful lesson no matter the cost.

Q — This past month I began a new job in cable television. Previously I worked in theater (seven years) and various other things since 1962. In addition, I completed my M.B.A. this past June from one of the country's top ten schools. I see so many things wrong with the company that could easily be corrected. How do I make suggestions without looking like a know-it-all?

A — You're right in thinking you can't start issuing suggestions. Pick one that you can implement yourself and simply do it. Find an ally who also has the president's approval (tricky since you're new) and explain the next plan you'd like to experiment with, and ask for advice. If the plan works, try the same maneuver again. If it doesn't work, figure out some possible solutions and ask which seems more likely; and do it. In this way, you demonstrate your concern for the company and the team as well as being smart and experienced. The combination is critical.

Q — I had a heart attack last fall on my 56th birthday. I feel fine now but I need to do something different with my life. My experience is in marketing. How do I go about changing?

Crises like heart attacks are often the prime catalyst for changing what was not so bearable before. This time, look to your heart — metaphorically — to guide you. What do you wish you had done? What activities, events, kinds of people have you had the most pleasure from?

If you find it hard to pinpoint, here's a guide. Sit down with a large sheet of blank paper and "map" your life. Include hobbies and volunteer pursuits. Starting at the left side, recall activities from your childhood and move to the present, which should take you three-fourths of the way across the paper. Let yourself dream about how you'd like the last quarter to be lived.

Then ask all your colleagues and friends for leads. You could have a brainstorming party and ask your most trusted friends or co-workers to outline some possibilities. The idea might just work — and if it does, each of your friends will want a brainstorming evening of their own.

Cutting through plywood requires care, planning

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — There must be some knack to cutting plywood that escapes me. I have worked with plywood only a couple of years and have always had the same trouble. When I cut through the plywood, I seem to split or damage the last sheet of veneer; that is, the one at the bottom. The rest of the cut usually is perfect. I use a crosscut handsaw, which I have been told is best. What am I doing wrong?

A. — To avoid splintering or damaging the last layer of veneer, place a piece of scrap wood under the plywood. In that way, when you cut through, the saw will cut the scrap wood last and whatever damage occurs will take place on the scrap. Of course, when you saw in that fashion, you will have to hold the two pieces of wood together with a clamp.

Q. — I read your recent article about the different kinds of lumber and the reference to plywood. I am somewhat confused by interior and exterior plywood, since it seems to me, having worked with plywood for some time, that they are exactly the same. I have examined them carefully and can find no difference. What kind of wood is used for outside and which kind for inside?

A. — Plywood is designated by the kind of wood used for the veneer on the surface. If the surface or face is birch, the plywood is called birch even though the other layers may be a different kind of wood. The principal difference between exterior and interior plywood is the type of adhesive used to bond the layers together. In exterior plywood, a waterproof adhesive is used so the layers will not come apart in wet weather. There are other, more subtle differences, but it is the adhesive that determines whether the wood should be used outside or inside. All exterior plywood is clearly marked.

VA doctors evaluating air mattress

HOUSTON (AP) — Doctors here say they are evaluating an air mattress that puts less pressure on the skin than a standard bed, thus reducing the incidence of bedsores in bedridden patients.

The English-made Mediscus air bed in use at the Veterans Administration Medical Center here is the only one of its kind in the United States, a representative of the bed's distributor said.

Bedsores, known as decubitus ulcers or pressure sores, can cost a patient as much as $50,000 a year for treatment, physicians say.

"Even with extensive preventive efforts, many patients develop pressure sores, and once they have them, treatment can be very difficult," said Dr. Michael Krebs, chief of the spinal cord injury service for the VA facility.

The bed, which sells for about $20,000, is made up of 21 brown air sacs that are divided into five sections and can be used to alter the position of a patient's head, trunk, seat, thigh and calf.

Bedridden patients in standard beds are turned to different positions to alternate the pressure on different points of the skin, doctors said.

"Our usual practice with spinal cord injured patients is to turn them about every two hours," Krebs said.

Krebs said the first man to use the bed at the Houston VA hospital last summer had a complicated spinal injury that meant "no matter how often we moved him he still had some points of irritation." The man developed multiple sores that would not heal in spite of plastic surgery.

But, by using the bed, the patient was well enough to be discharged to a nursing home before Christmas, Krebs said.

The bed, developed about 10 years ago in England, is being evaluated here as part of a program with The Institute for Rehabilitation and Research at Baylor College of Medicine. The program began in 1975 and is aimed at preventing bedsores.

"Of more than 600 patients participating, we've reduced the (bedsore) recurrence rate to approximately 5 percent," said Dr. Thomas Krouskop, the program's director.

No bridge tournament is without its share of amusing hands. Consider this example from the recent Fall North American Championships in Minneapolis.

We were not given an explanation of the bidding, in particular of North's cue-bid of three hearts. Suffice it to say that neither South nor North was reticent at any stage of the auction. The result was a slam that was distinctly against the odds. And the only thing we can say about West's vulnerable weak jump overcall is don't even look at it. But it did play a vital part in the outcome of the hand.

West led a spade, and as soon as dummy hit the table, declarer remarked: "Well, I'm off the two top clubs, but obviously they're 1-1." Declarer could be sure of that, for had either defender started with both trump honors, he would have doubled six clubs!

Declarer won the ace of spades and ruffed a spade. To make the hand, he had to eliminate diamonds as an exit suit for the defenders and hope for an end play. So he cashed his three top diamonds and exited with a trump, and was delighted to find that it was West who had to win the trick while East's king came tumbling down.

Since a spade would give declarer his contract via a ruff-and-sluff, West exited with a heart. Confident that he knew the heart position because of West's overcall, declarer played the queen from the table. Unfortunately that fetched the king from East—down one!

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Although invited to join a coveted social group, you decline. Your interests revolve around your work.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your enthusiasm returns and you operate in top form. Travel could strengthen a love relationship. Friends will be sympathetic. Fulfill your current obligations before accepting any new ones.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You feel self-assured today and it shows in your work. Increased effort could earn you a bonus. Go all out to make a good impression. Keep the stakes low if gambling.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): When you are tired, your job performance shows it. Cut back on your social activities. Try not to get involved in problems children want to handle for themselves.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Reward someone who has served you long and loyally. A secret admirer may try to move in on you. Go all out to impress an attractive stranger who appears at work.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Secret deals surface now. A long-sought goal seems easier to attain. Work harder to make your dreams come true. A new friendship is important to your future happiness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A promotion or raise is in the works. Ask influential people to back pet projects. Romance will be happiest if you move slowly. You benefit financially when loved one shares a secret.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You need to concentrate on artistic and creative projects now. Keep a close eye on spending. Your loved ones help you find ways to conserve your energies. Show your gratitude.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stop wasting time and energy on worthless projects. End an unsatisfactory relationship. A shopping trip produces fine bargains. Take responsibility for your life and others will show greater respect.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You will soon enjoy greater success in business and finance. Create a whole new image for yourself. You gain in prestige and popularity by associating with successful people.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An investment can be recouped. Work hard, but spend plenty of time with loved ones. Avoid making too many changes at once or confusion will reign. Patience works wonders.

Public Notice

In order to implement prior orders of the Public Utility Commission of Texas in Docket No. 3957, notice is hereby given of Southwestern Bell's proposal to implement a new schedule of intrastate long distance rates, effective April 1, 1983, unless otherwise determined by the Commission.

It is expected that the proposed rate schedule will not increase the company's net intrastate revenues, but rather, the increased rates will offset increased settlements paid to certain other telephone companies.

A complete copy of the new rate schedule is on file with the Public Utility Commission at Austin, Texas, and is available for inspection in each of the company's public business offices in Texas.

Notice to Customers of Other Telephone Companies

Changes in intrastate long distance rates would also affect customers of other telephone companies because such companies provide intrastate long distance service in accordance with rates specified in Southwestern Bell's tariffs.

Aviso Público

Southwestern Bell, con el objeto de cumplir con el decreto previo del Public Utility Commission (Comisión de Servicios Públicos) del Estado de Texas, Acta No. 3957, por la presente hace saber su intención de establecer un nuevo arancel de tarifas para servicio intraestatal de larga distancia, con vigencia a partir del 1o de abril de 1983, a menos que la Comisión haga otra determinación.

Se espera que el nuevo arancel de tarifas que Southwestern Bell se propone establecer no aumentará sus ingresos netos intraestatales, sino que servirá para compensar el aumento de los ajustes que se les paga a algunas otras compañías de teléfono.

Una copia completa del nuevo arancel de tarifas se ha archivado en las oficinas del Public Utility Commission (Comisión de Servicios Públicos) en Austin, Texas, y esta disponible para inspección pública en todas nuestras oficinas en el Estado de Texas.

Aviso a los Clientes de Otras Compañías de Teléfono

Cambios en las tarifas para servicio intraestatal de larga distancia tambien afectarían a clientes de otras compañías de teléfono porque dichas compañías proveen servicio intraestatal de larga distancia en conformidad a tarifas especificadas por Southwestern Bell.

Cowboy Artists exhibition at Museum of the Southwest

"New Western Images — the Hillin Collection of the Cowboy Artists of America" is currently on display at The Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave. The exhibition closes Wednesday.

The Hillin Collection of 112 works by 40 artists, all members of the Cowboy Artists of America, is a unique collection of art. It is through the generosity of Bobby and Margaret Hillin and the support of the Priddy Foundation, that this exhibit has been made possible.

Works in the collection are limited to major artists in the Cowboy Artists of America, an organization founded in 1965 to preserve the integrity of the western art tradition. In addition, only works that reflect the artist's own specialty were chosen, except in the event the artist is proficient in more than one area, in which case representative works from the different mediums were included.

Artistically, the collection represents the various techniques and styles inherent in the art of Cowboy Artists of America. These range from straight forward representation to hints of impressionism in the works of such artists as Jim Reynolds, Fritz White and Ned Jacobs.

Thematically, the collection presents a colorful documentation of the history of the West, dramatic episodes in Native American history, the golden age of range cattle industry, the life of the cowboy and contemporary figures in the western landscape.

As the style and themes vary, so does the medium for expression. New Western Images consists of oils, watercolors, drawings, pastels and bronze and wooden statues.

The museum is open, free of charge, Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m.

M*A*S*H characters carry on

NEW YORK (AP) — There will be life after "M*A*S*H."

Three characters in the current "M*A*S*H" series — Col. Sherman Potter, played by Harry Morgan; Cpl. Max Klinger, played by Jamie Farr, and Father Mulcahy, played by William Christopher — will star in a fall series, Harvey Shephard, CBS senior vice president for programs, told The Associated Press in a recent interview.

The series, set in a U.S. veteran's hospital, will focus on how the three "M*A*S*H" regulars and their patients adjust to peace, while struggling with their emotional, social and physical war wounds.

"M*A*S*H" ends its 11th season Feb. 28 with a 2½-hour movie. "Whatever happens to the characters at the end of 'M*A*S*H' will be continued in the new series," said Shephard.

The new comedy, tentatively titled "After M*A*S*H," will be blessed with some creative talent from "M*A*S*H," including executive producer Burt Metcalfe and series creator Larry Gelbart, who also was co-writer on Dustin Hoffman's hit movie, "Tootsie."

"M*A*S*H," in reruns, is currently the most popular syndicated program, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co.

Big-name stars making TV movies

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The appearance of Robert Mitchum and Ali MacGraw on ABC's "The Winds of War" this Sunday signals a growing trend: Movie stars are coming to television.

Until recently, stars who were considered "bankable" for theatrical films avoided TV movies so their bankability wouldn't be endangered. That has changed.

"There is a lack of activity in theatrical films," says Steve Mills, head of CBS movies for television. "Stars don't like to sit around and let the years creep up on them. Also, the level of material in television has risen. Stars can find first-rate scripts in television."

They also can find a broad audience for pet projects that could not be made as movies for theaters. Jane Fonda will appear on CBS in "The Dollmaker," a saga of an Appalachian family that moves to Detroit in 1944.

"Jane told me that she couldn't get it made as a theatrical motion picture," says Bill Finnegan, who is producing "The Doll Maker."

"On the other hand, if I took the script to the networks without Jane Fonda, it would be handed back to me. Her name makes it happen."

Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward will make "The Scandal" for ABC. Newman hasn't appeared in dramatic TV since his beginnings in live drama of the 1950s. He and Miss Woodward realize that "The Scandal," which concerns the life of Walter Lippmann, couldn't find a home at a movie studio.

Gregory Peck made his TV drama debut as Abe Lincoln in "The Blue and the Gray" last fall and was seen this week on CBS's "The Scarlet and the Black."

"I can't very well appear in 'Porky's,' and there's nothing for me in 'E.T.' It seemed a natural transition for me to become partly a television actor and partly a motion picture actor," he said. "If better parts are in television, why should I sit and wait for movies to come along — or worse, take a movie that turns out badly?"

Other longtime stars, faced with a film industry ever conscious of the youth market, have moved into television. Besides "The Winds of War," Robert Mitchum appeared in a CBS drama, "One Shoe Makes It Murder." George C. Scott and Ali MacGraw will make "China Rose" in Hong Kong for CBS.

The same network has other projects in the works, including Peter O'Toole in "Svengali"; Candice Bergen, Dyan Cannon and Malcolm McDowell in "Arthur the King"; Maximilian Schell, Michael York and Jane Seymour in "The Phantom of the Opera"; and George Segal in "Trackdown."

Also planned are: Ann-Margret in "Who Will Love My Children?" for ABC, and Barbara Stanwyck in "The Thorn Birds," also for ABC. Kirk Douglas recently appeared in "Remembrance of Love" on NBC.

"There's no much difference in salaries for theatrical features and telelvison nowadays," comments CBS's Mills. "Faye Dunaway could get $1 million for the Eva Peron movie, which was four hours. Salaries of a half-million or $750,000 are not uncommon for top names."

But he added that movie superstars are not first choice for TV movies: "When we get a good script, we first shop it among stars like Suzanne Pleshette and Tom Sellick, people who have made their names in television and can guarantee a certain audience."

Hallmark's shows aired before holidays

NEW YORK (AP) — In a more perfect and sentimental world, Cupid's arrows always land in the right place and Hallmark's viewer Valentine, "Thursday's Child," would be on tonight, and not two days ago.

That was the preference of Hallmark, the card company that has offered warm, mushy greetings and full sponsorship of exemplary television programs for over three decades.

Hallmark believes the best time for its commercial messages is 10 days before the holiday. If an advertisement is going to inspire somebody to buy Christmas or Valentine's Day cards, it should be closer to the weekend shopping period, the cardmaker reasons.

Since CBS generally broadcasts movies on Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday nights, Thursday, actually, was not a strong possibility. But Wednesday night probably would have meant more "I love yous."

Joseph Curran, Hallmark's corporate vice president, understands, however, that television accommodates advertisers, when possible, but not at the expense of larger station profits.

"Thursday's Child," about a courageous 17-year-old with a degenerative heart condition, is the kind of sentimental family entertainment that appeals to Hallmark and establishes the right climate for cheerfully solicitous prose.

But it was judged too sweet by CBS to attract the heavy viewership required in the February sweeps, when ratings fix local stations' advertising rates for the next three months.

"If we had a choice, we'd want to position ourselves at the beginning of a peak selling period," says Curran.

The last "Hallmark Hall of Fame" presentation also came too early for Hallmark. "Witness for the Prosecution" was on Saturday, Dec. 4, too late in the weekend for viewers to hit the stores, and a full three weeks before Christmas.

Gutenberg Bible, Chagall etchings display ends Sunday

The last day for viewing the Gutenberg Bible and the etchings by Marc Chagall, currently on display in the McCormick Gallery in Midland College's Allison Fine Arts Building, is Sunday.

Entitled "The Gutenberg Bible: The Beginning of the Printed Word," this exhibit of historical importance is made possible by The University of Texas at Austin, as part of its centennial celebration. UT acquired this two-volume Gutenberg Bible in 1978 at a cost of $2.4 million. Only one of the two volumes is on display.

The 40 plates of etchings illustrating the Bible by Marc Chagall are the property of Perkins School of Theology at Southern Methodist University.

Viewing hours remaining for this special exhibit are today from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday from 1 to 4 p.m.

Pianist to play with string quartet

The Thouvenel String Quartet will be joined by pianist Karen Follingstad during its Saturday 8 p.m. concert slated for the Allison Fine Arts Building at Midland College.

The all-Czechoslovakian program includes Bedvich Smetana's String Quartet No. 1 in E-minor: "From My Life" and Antonin Dvorak's Piano Quintet in A-Major, Op. 81.

Miss Follingstad holds a bachelor of arts degree from Philadelphia's Curtis Institute and a master of arts in music from Indiana University.

She is married to Jeff Levenson, cellist with the Thouvenel String Quartet. Other quartet members are Eugene Purdue and Edmond Stein, violin, and Sally Chisholm, viola.

Tickets may be purchased at the door.

Oscar nomination ballots mailed

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The envelope, please. To be exact, 3,900 of them.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has mailed its nomination ballots for the Oscars to its members around the world.

Academy voters will select nc more than five nominations in each of 18 categories. The nominations will close Friday. Those selected will be announced on Feb. 17 and the 55th annual Academy Awards presentation will be telecast live from the Los Angeles Music Center by ABC on Monday, April 11.

Actress learns craft from Olivier

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Victoria Tennant, who stars in the ABC miniseries, "The Winds of War," learned about acting at the knee of Laurence Olivier.

Her father was Cecil Tennant, Olivier's manager, and the actor was her godfather.

"Having Uncle Larry around the house so much when I was young was a great lesson, because it was obvious to me even then that he didn't just get up and act," she said. "He went to the gym with his voice coach and worked his guts out preparing for every role he played."

In "The Winds of War," based on Herman Wouk's best-selling book, she plays the daughter of a British correspondent and the love interest for Robert Mitchum.

Arthur's bare feet get attention

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Bea Arthur, television's "Maude" and star of the upcoming ABC series, "Amanda's," arrived recently at the Polo Lounge and found that she was barefoot.

"I love to drive barefooted and I keep my sandals on the floor of the car," she said.

But when she arrived at the front entrance of the Beverly Hills Hotel the sandals weren't there. She was wearing Arabian Nights pants which made her bare feet even more obvious. The parking attendant told her, "I'm not even going to give you a ticket. They won't let you in."

The maitre d' at the Polo Lounge stopped her at the door.

"I explained to him that this was not my normal mode of dress," Miss Arthur said. "I said I was coming back in a week and I promised that I would be wearing shoes. The maitre'd relented and let me in. But a lot of people were looking at my feet."

Fifth 'Airport' sequel planned

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The fifth in the "Airport" series is ready to take off on Runway One.

It's called "Airport 2000" and George Kennedy will return as Petrone. An all-star cast will be named later.

Larry Cohen will write the script from a story he co-wrote with producer Jennings Lang. Lang also produced three of the earlier "Airport" pictures.

Burma censorship board scrutinizes films

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — On movie screens in Burma, lovers do not kiss, soldiers do not curse and children do not argue with their parents.

Movie censors make sure that there are no scenes contrary to "the ideologies, policies and beliefs as specifically mentioned in 'the system of correlation of man and his environment' of the Burma Socialist Party."

But such government restrictions haven't stopped the Burmese movie industry from churning out 50 to 60 feature films a year, including love stories, minus all but the vaguest allusions to sex; comedies, but never political satire; and some combat films, provided the government side is shown in a good light and wins over the bad guys.

Films, both local and foreign, are very popular in Burma, a country which for the past two decades has been ruled by a military-dominated government which insists on promoting traditional morality and keeping out foreign influences.

While handing out Burma's Academy Awards last New Year's, Culture Minister Aung Kyaw Myint reminded his audience that the censors were scrutinizing films with some 20 points in mind. He also urged that outside influences on movies and other arts must be "Burmanized" and not directly copied.

Censorship rules, he said, included everything from eliminating incorrect Burmese spellings from film titles to barring scenes which would "arouse the profit motive." Heading the list of 20 was anything in films that went against the country's sole political party and its doctrines.

Even in the relatively free days between Burma's independence from Great Britain in 1948 and the 1962 coup by General Ne Win, the trend in the Burmese cinema was conservative. But apparently less so than today.

One Burmese censor from the pre-1962 era recalls passing a scene which he says would unquestionably be chopped today since hand-holding is about the limit when depicting love between the sexes.

The scene involved some banter between a young couple who soon disappear behind a bush. No uncompromising positions were shown, he said, but the bush itself was seen to shake vigorously.

Today's censorship board includes officials from the Foreign Ministry, Culture Ministry, military intelligence, police and the government film department.

Foreign films are sometimes cut, but censors are said to apply more lenient standards, allowing such things as kissing and a rude word here and there.

Entertainment in Burma is restricted to movie-going, watching the 2½ hours of television programming each night and, most recently, home video for the very few who can afford expensive smuggled sets.

Although Rangoon's 35 movie theaters have long been nationalized, like just about everything else in Burma, the production companies remain free market operations, albeit under very watchful government eyes.

A shortage of hard currency also makes it difficult to bring in first-class foreign films. Some do make it to Rangoon, but for the most part, the fare is a mix of kung fu, Indian imports, Franco-Italian "spaghetti" westerns and older American films.

Embassies sometimes donate films for public showing, such as "Oh Sport, Thou Art Peace," a Soviet portrayal of the 1980 Moscow Olympics.

Even third-rate Western imports are avidly received, with long lines forming in front of box offices and black marketeers hawking tickets at two to three times the official price of between 25 cents to $1 for especially popular offerings.

Top film stars demand and get astronomical salaries by Burmese standards, a range between $4,000 and $6,700 a movie. The prime minister's monthly salary is $470.

Burmese fans, as in many countries, eagerly follow the lives and loves of their stars and try to catch glimpses of them. Since night spots and glittering premiers are taboo in Burma, favorite star-gazing occasions are funerals. These are formal, highly ceremonial and held at public Buddhist temples.

Many Burmese complain about the poor quality of local films. The films suffer because of outdated equipment and a shortage of raw film stock, which must be imported. Only black and white films are made, and usually there is only one take of a scene.

Young actress stars with Duvall, Newman

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The name Ellen Barkin may not register with the average moviegoer, but wait until the end of 1983.

By that time, she will have been seen in four films: "Tender Mercies," with Robert Duvall; "Eddie and the Cruisers," with Tom Berrigan; "Daniel," with Timothy Hutton and Ed Asner; and "Harry and Son," with Paul Newman, Joanne Woodward and Robby Benson.

Not bad for the young New Yorker whose previous credits were mostly limited to "Diner," a few television movies and a soap opera.

Miss Barkin is bright and animated, with lively eyes that crinkle winningly when she is amused, which is often. She is not married, but says she would like to be. During an interview she seemed perfectly open, except about her age, which she says is in her 20s.

She studied nine years before auditioning for plays and slogged through off-Broadway and television before the film studios noticed her.

"I really wanted to be an Egyptologist," said Miss Barkin, who was born in the Bronx and grew up in Queens. "I went to Hunter College and left after three years, much to my parents' dismay. My older brother was the bright child, I was the personable one, and I went to college to prove something. I got all A's except for one B in psychology. 'Now I know I'm not an idiot.'

"I waited tables through college and into the time I was working in plays," she said. "I quit only when I was hired for the soap opera. My father, who is a salesman, wanted to be sure I had a contract. Even so, he said, 'Don't give up your waitress job.'"

She played "a boy-crazy girl from the other side of the tracks" in the television soap, "Search for Tomorrow," and enjoyed the bizarre plotting.

Her performance in a Phoenix Playhouse play, "Shout Across the River," brought her an agent, always the critical step in an acting career. Television movies followed: "Kent State," "Fighting Back," "Parole," and "Murder, Inc." Finally, she did "Diner."

"I hated the script," Miss Barkin recalled. "My first reaction was, 'How dare they send me something that bad?' But then a friend read it and thought I was wrong, so I took another look at it."

Jay Rockefeller to pay more taxes if West Virginia tax hike approved

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Gov. Jay Rockefeller already pays hundreds of thousands of dollars in taxes, but he'll have to pay a lot more if his proposed state tax hike is approved.

Rockefeller paid $15,912 in state sales tax alone in 1980 — nearly twice as much as West Virginia's per capita income.

J. Rockefeller

The information came from a financial disclosure statement filed with the U.S. Senate Commerce Committee. The panel is holding confirmation hearings this week on the nomination of Sharon Rockefeller, the governor's wife, to the board of directors of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

The statement puts the governor's gross income for 1981 at $2.7 million, and his federal taxable income at just over $2 million.

Under current law, the state would impose $186,637 in income tax on the $2 million, although the figure might vary because of different state deductions, said state Tax Commissioner Herschel "Ned" Rose.

Rockefeller has asked the Legislature to approve hiking the personal income tax for those in higher income brackets. Under the proposal, Rockefeller's state income tax on the same salary would be $265,360, Rose said, an increase of $78,723.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Civil rights leader Ralph D. Abernathy is "doing fine" following his release from a hospital but still faces the possibility of brain surgery to prevent another stroke.

R. Abernathy

Abernathy, 56, suffered a mild stroke two weeks ago. Doctors at Johns Hopkins Hospital want to give him more time to recover before deciding whether surgery is needed to prevent "a massive stroke in the future," said Dr. Mel H. Epstein.

Abernathy, former president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and a close associate of the late Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., was released Wednesday from Johns Hopkins after almost a week of tests.

Doctors believe the mild stroke was triggered by a blood clot lodged in a cerebral artery, depriving the brain of oxygen and affecting Abernathy's speech.

If surgery is performed, doctors would graft a blood vessel around the blocked artery to restore the blood flow.

Abernathy is taking the prospects of surgery calmly, according to his wife, Juanita.

NORTH OAKS, Minn. (AP) — Former Vice President Walter Mondale and wife, Joan, have bought a secluded house, described as a place they can use as a retreat.

The home is in a wooded area near Pleasant Lake in this suburb north of St. Paul. A family spokesman said the Mondales "plan to use the dwelling as a retreat, a location for meetings and as a place to entertain friends."

W. Mondale

The purchase price was put "in the neighborhood of $200,000."

The Mondales live in Washington, but their son, Teddy, a student at the University of Minnesota, will live in the home while attending classes.

Neighbors describe the house as modest in size but an "architectually interesting" rambler.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Tubal ligations can be reversed

Dear Dr. Solomon: I had my tubes tied a few years ago, but I never expected my husband to pass away. Now I am planning to remarry and I would like to be able to have a child with my new husband. Could I have the operation undone? — Mrs. L.W., Albuquerque, N.M.

Dear Mrs. W.: Women who have had tubal ligations and then have them reversed are reported to have a 70 to 80 percent pregnancy rate. You do not indicate your age, but a successful reversal is more likely in women under 35 years of age. An interval of five years or more since the sterilizatin procedure was performed may also have an adverse effect.

Keep in mind, however, that reversal is not an all-or-nothing proposition. Even women over 35 years of age may have a 25 percent chance of conceiving.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Some guy I work with seems to fall asleep at odd times. One minute I'll be talking to him, and the next minute he'll be asleep. Because of this he doesn't drive a car. Have you every heard of anything like this? — Dominick, Salt Lake City, Utah

Dear Dominick: You appear to be describing a condition known as narcolepsy, which is characterized by involuntary sleeping attacks. As you indicate, these attacks are an obvious danger to anyone who drives, but they can also pose a risk while the individual is swimming or even cooking a meal at home. There may also be psychological effects of narcolepsy if the patient is subject to frequent attacks while at school, at work, or during social gatherings.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband was in an automobile accident a few months ago. He is getting along nicely but his doctor is giving him medicine to prevent seizures because my husband was unconscious for a while after the accident. I don't like him to take pills if he doesn't have to. Can I have your opinion. — Mrs. N.K., Charlottesville, Va.

Dear Mrs. K.: A number of physicians recommend anticonvulsant medicatin as a preventive measure for patients who were unconscious for a prolonged period following a head injury. I assume the medication your husband is taking was prescribed with this in mind. Your husband's situation illustrates a case in which the benefits of medication outweight its risks.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My doctor says that amniocentesis may be a good idea for me, but he's not pushing it. If I do have amniocentesis, how long will I have to wait until I get the results? — Donna, Chicago

Dear Donna: Chromosomal analysis of the amniotic fluid generally takes about three to four weeks.

Dear Dr. Solomon: There's a lot of talk and publicity lately about herpes. Would using a condom keep the disease from being spread? — Ron, Portland, Ore.

Dear Ron: Herpes can be transmitted even when a condom is being used.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column).

Workers charged in theft of stamps slated for fire

NEW YORK (AP) — Five sanitation workers and three others have been accused of selling huge quantities of postage stamps instead of burning them in a Coney Island incinerator.

U.S. Attorney Thomas Roche said Wednesday that the total value of the stolen stamps was unknown, but added that postal officials had delivered about $20 million worth of stamps to the incinerator in recent months.

"And these people have stolen a substantial part of that," he said.

Roche said the scheme involved a trap door in a chute leading to a furnace. As the stamps were put down the chute under supervision of a postal official, the sanitation workers would open the trap door and pull out the stamps just before they hit the fire, he said.

The Postal Service destroys stamps for a variety of reasons, Roche said. For example, temporary issues resulting from price increases are destroyed when the new stamps comes out, 18-cent stamps are destroyed when first-class postage increases to 20 cents, and commemorative issues are destroyed when demand fades.

He noted, however, that "a stamp is good forever" and is always negotiable.

All eight defendants were charged with theft of government property, which carries a maximum sentence of 10 years.

The sanitation workers, who have been suspended, were identified as Fred Amodeo, 50; Floyd Freeman, 52; Joseph Daprile, 63; Joseph Brando, 58; and Richard Cambareri, 54.

Others charged were the alleged fence for the stamps, Joseph Steinfeld, 68, of Hallandale, Fla.; Lore Engel, 61, of New York, described as an associate of Steinfeld, and Amodeo's wife, Anita, 49.

Amodeo, released on $250,000 bail, is cooperating with the investigation and implicated the others, authorities said.

Stivers claim 'Baby Doe' confident he's their baby

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Ray and Judy Stiver returned home to claim and rename "Baby Doe," confident the 3-week-old boy born with a birth defect is their child — not the son of a man who hired Mrs. Stiver as a surrogate mother.

"For now, I do feel he is my son," said Stiver after he and his wife came back from Chicago, where it was announced that blood tests proved the child could not have been fathered by the sperm donor, Alexander Malahoff, 46.

"We want to bring him back home," Stiver said.

The child is in a temporary foster home. The Stivers are scheduled to appear Monday in Ingham County Probate Court for a custody hearing.

The baby was born with microcephaly — an unusually small head which often indicates mental retardation.

Mrs. Stiver, 26, gave birth Jan. 10 at Lansing General Hospital after being hired for $10,000 by Malahoff, of Middle Village, N.Y., to bear his baby through artificial insemination.

Mrs. Stiver said she apparently got pregnant by her 41-year-old husband before she was artifically inseminated.

Barney Clark pedals exercise cycle

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Artificial heart recipient Barney Clark has pedaled an exercise cycle and taken a few steps with a walker, but a hospital spokesman cautions "it will take many good days" for Clark to recover.

Clark, in his 64th day of life on the Jarvik-7 artificial heart, remained in serious but stable condition at the University of Utah Medical Center today.

With help from physical therapists and nurses, Clark "walked approximately 10 feet with his walker" on Wednesday, said a statement released by hospital spokesman John Dwan. Clark also pumped the pedals of an exercise cycle for five minutes, Dwan said.

The 62-year-old retired dentist from the Seattle area then went for a wheelchair ride through the hospital, stopping for a visit with his surgeon.

Fleming ordered to undergo exam

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Groucho Marx's female companion was ordered to undergo psychiatric examination after she shoved a sheriff's deputy during the trial of a suit by Marx's estate to recover more than $400,000 from her.

Erin Fleming also screamed at Deputy Sharon Melancon when the officer tried to search her Wednesday, at the request of a lawyer for the estate who said he had been threatened.

Superior Court Judge Jacqueline Weiss then confronted Miss Fleming with the jury absent, but the 42-year-old former actress refused to answer affirmatively when the judge asked her if she could take the stand and "answer questions in an appropriate manner."

The judge then ordered Miss Fleming to be examined by a psychiatrist before the trial resumed today.

HOUSTON (AP) — Don't expect Mayor Kathy Whitmire to exhibit the calm, iron-willed demeanor of Chicago's Jane Byrne or the showy, politically ambitious style of San Francisco's Dianne Feinstein.

The 36-year-old mayor is a no-nonsense, fiscal watchdog who, like any typical accountant, is more concerned with the bottom line than a high profile.

She says she's not disturbed by the unflattering remarks of fashion designer Richard Blackwell, who says she's one of the world's 10 worst dressed women and looks like "Tootsie," the movie character portrayed by Dustin Hoffman in drag.

"The main thing I'm interested in is having the image of a mayor who is successful in managing the city services. I think that's really what people are concerned with more than image. They're concerned with basic city services at a reasonable cost," Mrs Whitmire said in an interview on her first year in office.

Mrs. Whitmire stormed into office one year ago, knocking off incumbent Jim McConn and tough-talking Sheriff Jack Heard to become the first female mayor of the nation's fourth largest city.

SHE WAS NOT a member of the established political machinery and she did not use charismatic speeches or political wheeling and dealing to carry her into the $81,500-a-year job.

She created somewhat of a stir by accepting the endorsement of the gay community, a move that once might have been considered a political liabilty.

"In 1982, Houston became the nation's fourth largest city and the mayor was one of the 10 worst-dressed women in the world. I'm not sure which brought more acclaim, but somehow I suspect it was the latter."
— Katherine Whitmire

But she sold the voters on the idea that way to curb the city's runaway growth, traffic jams, pollution and crime was to capitalize on her experience as a certified public accountant and not hire a back-slapping good ol' boy.

"She's almost made a believer of me," said Louis Macey, an investor, former city councilman and among a dozen candidates in the 1981 mayoral race.

"She has a good working knowledge of the office and she probably has more of a feel for what the mayor should do than she probably can do, and she's picked up a lot of support," Macey said. "She's a good city manager. She's not vulnerable. I don't think she can be beaten."

Mrs. Whitmire refuses to describe 1982 as easy or difficult, choosing instead "busy and challenging."

IN HER ANNUAL State of the City address to the Chamber of Commerce, Mrs. Whitmire summed up the year:

"In 1982, Houston became the nation's fourth largest city and the mayor was one of the 10 worst-dressed women in the world. I'm not sure which brought more acclaim, but somehow I suspect it was the latter," she said.

Mrs. Whitmire said she has grown accustomed to the way national news reports about her sometime dwell on her height (5 feet), her hairstyle (short and curly), her personal life (a widow) and her wardrobe. She would rather they focus of her work as mayor.

Since moving into the third-floor office at City Hall, she has set out to streamline the city's 24 departments and to get legislation passed revamping the state Civil Service system governing police and fire departments. She wants less emphasis placed on seniority and written test scores and more on performance and wants the police chief to appoint his own deputies.

Her biggest accomplishment, she said, was getting a city budget drawn up and approved before the fiscal year began for the first time in 25 years.

Without a budget, the city operated under personnel freezes and department heads had no authority to initiate programs and to make staff expansions, Mrs. Whitmire said.

"BEFORE, THE YEAR always started Jan. 1 and maybe sometime in May or June or July the city council would finally adopt a budget for the current year. So it operated half of the time without any kind of formalized plan.

"So we went to city council to change our accounting year so that it now begins July 1. That gave us time to put together a budget, take it to council, have it considered and get it adopted before July 1," she said.

Mrs. Whitmire also lured away talent from other cities to head top-level management positions.

Among them was Police Chief Lee P. Brown, who spearheaded the investigation into the deaths of 28 black youths in Atlanta. He was chosen to try to erase the police department's tarnished image and poor morale.

Alan Kiepper, who built Atlanta's rail system, was tapped to rebuild the Houston Metroplitan Transit Authority's broken-down bus fleet and to help design a $16 billion mass transit plan for the automobile-oriented city.

Most didn't question the ability of her choices, but some were unhappy she looked outside the city and Texas to fill the posts. Mrs. Whitmire said it should have come as no surprise.

"WE SAID WE would approach the management of this city in a business-like manner. Anyone who is operating a business of this magnitude — a billion-dollar-a-year business — certainly is going to select their executives from as large a pool as possible," she said.

This year she has set her sights on improving the city's financial planning and on capital improvements programs for street widening and a new drainage systems. And she has vowed to keep the budget balanced during a period when unemployment sits at 8 percent and economic activity wanes.

Mrs. Whitmire said she has not decided whether to seek a second two-year term as mayor.

While she refused to grade her performance in the first half of her term, Macey didn't hesitate.

"On management of the office of mayor, she'd get an A minus. That's an area that most mayors had have trouble with, but she's done a remarkable job.

"On managing the city departments, a C-plus. That's what really needs the most attention...I don't think she has total confidence in the people who work for her and I don't think they have total confidence in her," Macey said.

"ON LEADERSHIP, she gets a C minus. Sometimes she seems afraid to speak out or move forward on crucial issues, like she doesn't want to step on anybody's toes," he said. "She's very intelligent, very articulate and she has a greater ability than she gives herself credit."

Macey also said he thought Mrs. Whitmire needed to become more visible.

"She needs to be out attracting new business to the city, showing them that Houston has open arms, is a friendly city and has the ability to solve its problems," he said.

But Mrs. Whitmire may have been a little too visible.

Blackwell placed her in a 10th-place tie with Hoffman on his annual fashion swipes, saying both looked like they were wearing "Betsy Bloomingdale's discards."

Mrs. Whitmire said she noticed the resemblance between her and "Tootsie," the character Hoffman portrayed, complete with curly wig and large glasses, in the movie by the same name.

"I SAW A newspaper ad one day and looked at that and said, 'That person there looks just like me' and that was before I knew it was Dustin Hoffman. I was just thumbing through the paper one day and it caught my eye. I didn't think anyone else would notice," she said.

World's Fair will add new dimension to New Orleans

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

NEW ORLEANS — I's Mardi Gras season here — a time of boisterous excitement in this tradition-burdened city.

Everyone is involved: The socially prominent families watching their daughters make their debuts at the high-society balls; the well-connected husbands and sons hoping to be named king of their krewe (club); the workers feverishly trying to get the massive floats decorated and ready for the many parades preceding Ash Wednesday; the wives and girl friends who are putting the last touches on their men's elaborate costumes; the college students from the North who are planning to invade New Orleans and use Mardi Gras as an excuse to get drunk and talk dirty; the little kids who lie awake at night thinking about catching that special trinket or — even better — a doubloon thrown from the float of Rex himself; the merchants and restaurateurs and tavern owners who are already counting the profits claimed from the crowds bulging into Bourbon Street; the hookers and the pimps and the strippers (both male and female) who are ready to take some poor rube for his wallet and more; and the cops who are dreading every minute of it.

Mardi Gras and New Orleans: It's hard to separate the two in the mind, and even harder to imagine anyone in this unique city ignoring the events swirling around at this time of year. Yet, in a building just a few blocks from the French Quarter, there is a whole group of people doing just that.

These people have a higher purpose, they believe, one that will bring not only tourists, but culture, worldwide respect and positive publicity to New Orleans. They are the people planning the 1984 World's Fair, a $350,000 million exposition officially called "The World of Rivers...Fresh Water as a Source of Life," a natural theme for this nation's busiest port.

THAT A WORLD'S FAIR will open in the United States barely 18 months after the 1982 World's Fair was closed in Knoxville is surprising enough. That it is being held in New Orleans is shocking.

New Orleans would seem to be the least likely city in the United States in need of more tourists or more tourist attractions. Between the Sugar Bowl, Mardi Gras, jazz and bluegrass festivals, spring flower festivals, periodic world championship fights and Super Bowls, New Orleans has a pretty fair lock on the big events in the South.

Add to these events attractions such as the French Quarter, marvelous restaurants, the country's best jazz, great shopping, the lovely homes of the Garden District, the lure of the Mississippi, and, of course, a most tolerant attitude toward sin and you can understand why so many people pack the sidewalks of Bourbon Street night after night, year after year.

Pittsburgh might need a World's Fair, or Cleveland, certainly, or Birmingham, Ala.; but New Orleans?

Yes, says David Bruce, vice president of administration for the fair, New Orleans does need a World's Fair in 1984.

"This Fair will be leaving a great legacy for New Orleans: a new tax base, a new inner-city residential neighborhood, a new convention center and new hotels. This is the biggest thing to happen to New Orleans in a hundred years."

THE 82-ACRE PLOT on which the 1984 World's Fair will be held is hard on the Mississippi, just a block from the Hilton Hotel. For years, this area was a collection of old warehouses, shacks and slum-quality buildings of all types.

Already, the shacks have been demolished and a new convention center, the 10th largest in the United States, is looming against the gray Louisiana sky. When it is completed, the new center will be crucial in luring large conventions to New Orleans to bolster the state's tourism, already its No. 2 industry.

Although the shacks were pulled down, the old warehouses, some predating the Civil War, are being restored. Concession stands, restaurants and boutiques will be installed on the first floor of the warehouses, offices on the second. After the fair has run its six-month course — May 12 to Nov. 11, 1984 — it is hoped the warehouses will be converted to condominiums, creating a new inner-city residential area. Many of New Orleans' best-known restaurants will open branches on the fairgrounds, and most will stay after the fair has closed.

The Rouse Corporation, the company that developed Boston's famed Faneuil Hall, will turn the international pavilion into a riverfront marketplace, and the Hershey Corporation is going to develop an entertainment center on the site after the World's Fair closes. This part of the river, so long cut off from the public, will live again.

Like all World's Fairs, the one in New Orleans will feature numerous international exhibits (Japan and the Vatican have already signed on; 14 more countries are expected to announce soon) and state pavilions. All will feature the fair's theme by emphasizing the crucial needs and uses of fresh water.

THE GROUNDS THEMSELVES will have dozens of fountains, water walls, lagoons and streams to constantly remind the visitor of the water theme. Tall ships from throughout the world will anchor alongside the fair site and visitors will be able to inspect these magnificent vessels during the fair.

A monorail will carry tourists around the site, and into the state of Louisiana pavilion, which will feature a cruise through mockups of the state's freshwater lakes and swamps of the state. Thankfully, most buildings will be air-conditioned to help combat the sultry Louisiana summer.

Since this is New Orleans, one can't be expected to get too bogged down in educational exhibits. "Most of us who went to Knoxville to see their World's Fair thought it was a little flat, a little devoid of real entertainment," Joan Jacob, manager of media relations for the 1984 fair, said. "You can be sure that won't be a problem in New Orleans."

Here, in The City That Care Forgot, there will be a lot of fun to be had at the 1984 World's Fair. There will be two Mardi Gras parades daily, an ongoing jazz festival, street musicians and, of course, rides. Unlike most World's Fairs, the rides and entertainments will be spread throughout the 82 acres of fairgrounds, rather than concentrated at one spot, thus eliminating, it is hoped, long waits and huge crowds.
