Church leaders support renaming Front

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

The Midland Association of Churches (MAC) is endorsing the renaming of Front Street after Martin Luther King, and at the same time, taking a stand for the solidarity for all races.

"We tend to sugarcoat it, but Midland has put the nicest face on some of the most severe racism and bigotry," said the Rev. Jo Gay, MAC president. "We pretend like they don't have it, but I think the denial is more substantial."

This perceived attitude is a reason proponents of renaming Front Street after Martin Luther King now have more than the results of a survey to show support for their efforts.

This week, the Midland Association of Churches expressed its support for the survey results, which favored renaming Front Street after the slain civil rights leader. The association even sent letters to each member of the City Council to indicate that support.

"The churches support this martyr, pastor and all he stood for," stated Gay in a written statement to the council. "We feel the street name would be a positive sign of that support."

Gay added the endorsement is a "visible and very peaceful way to express our solidarity with all races" and "it

Businessmen don't favor renaming

By Stewart Doreen

The proposed renaming of Front Street after Martin Luther King has the backing of many in Midland, but that does not include many business owners and others who work along the much-talked-about thoroughfare.

Of the 12 talked to, only one agreed Front Street should be renamed after the slain civil rights leader.

Cost was the reason given most often as a reason for opposing such a name change. Stationery, work orders, business cards, advertising and signage would have to be changed if a name change eventually takes place.

"It would cost me lots of money," said Vernon Syler, owner of S.S. Radiator. "I buy my work orders by the Police nab stabbing suspects

Mother receives answer to prayer

By Dan Bell
Staff Writer

Nearly 60 hours after her son was snatched from her home and transported across state lines, allegedly by her estranged husband, a mother's prayers were answered by a long-distance phone call assuring her the boy was safe and sound.

At about 2 p.m. Friday, Stefani Storey received word from the North Little Rock Police Department in Arkansas that her 5-year-old son, Steven, was in good condition and had been "well cared for" by her husband, Joe "JJ" Storey, following a domestic dispute early Wednesday morning that turned bloody at Ms. Storey's home, situated at 1011 West Griffin. After repeatedly stabbing Cecil Carter, Mrs. Storey's boyfriend, Storey grabbed Steven and fled along with Midland resident Bill Sadler, 24, according to police.

The pair were arrested early Friday afternoon at Sadler's parents North Little Rock, Ark. home on a fugitive from justice charge and remain in Pulaski County Jail awaiting arraignment. Carter has been upgraded from critical to fair condition and could leave the hospital as early as today.

Mrs. Storey was in Carter's hospital room, sitting alongside Carter on his hospital bed, when she received the welcomed news concerning her son.

"Hi sweets," were Mrs. Storey's first words to her son in almost three days. "How are you doing? Were you scared? Did they (police) get your daddy?"

"I'm so relieved they (police) got you back for me," Mrs. Storey said.

Following the brief exchange between mother and son, Mrs. Storey said a tearful, reluctant goodbye to Steven and spoke with Sgt. Larry Dancy of the North Little Rock Police Department. Dancy explained to Mrs. Storey that her son would be placed in a foster home until "paperwork was completed by a social worker." Mrs. Storey then would be free to pick up her son. Dancy said processing by social services would take at least two days and, at least for today, Steven seemed to be adjusting very well to his unfamiliar surroundings.

"I've got several little police cars that Steven can play with and the boy seems to have taken quite a shine to one of our officers who specializes in domestic situations," Dancy said.

By Dan Bell
Staff Writer

Two Midland men, suspects in Wednesday's stabbing of a third Midland man stemming from a domestic dispute, were arrested in Arkansas without incident on Friday. Subsequently, the son of one of the captured men was also taken into custody by Child Protective Services.

Joe "JJ" Storey and Bill Sadler were arrested by a cadre of North Little Rock Police officers at about 1:30 p.m. in Sadler's family home and charged with the crime of fugitive from justice.

North Little Rock is a town of 70,000, separated from Little Rock, Arkansas' capital, by the Arkansas River.

Storey's 5-year-old son, Steven, was reported to be safe and cared for by Arkansas Human Services, said a North Little Rock police official.

North Little Rock Police Sgt. Larry Dancy said he first heard about the case early Friday morning when Midland Police Detective Ricardo Candalaria called him to say he had traced the pair through telephone calls made from the Sadler home by Storey to his mother in Texas.

"There was a Texas felony warrant for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon so we moved quickly, but cautiously, to arrest both Mr. Storey and Mr. Sadler," Dancy said. "We were especially cautious when we heard they were probably armed and even more cautious when we heard they had Steven with them."

Dancy said Sadler and Storey will appear in Pulaski County (Arkansas) courtroom at 9 a.m. Tuesday to answer to the charge of fugitive from justice. Following their court appearance, the two men are expected to be extradited to Midland County to stand tri-

Writer turned artist credits husband for inspiring her

Bridget Dobson, an Emmy Award-winning television soap-opera scriptwriter turned artist, recalled Friday during a luncheon at the Museum of the Southwest the first complete episode she wrote for "General Hospital."

The evening marked the start of more than two decades of collaboration between Mrs. Dobson and her husband, Jerry. At the time, the couple was living on a ranch that was a good 45 minute drive outside town of Vina (near Chico, Calif.).

"Jerry came in to watch it with me, and it (my script) was not so good," Mrs. Dobson said, adding the actors laughed when she had thought her words called

Pure Resources plans 2nd major acquisition

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Just 10 months after its formation, Midland-based Pure Resources Inc. announced a second major acquisition.

Pure Resources signed a merger agreement Friday to acquire all the outstanding shares of common stock of Denver-based Hallwood Energy Corp. at $12.5 per share and all the outstanding shares of Series A Cumulative Preferred Stock at $10.84 per share. The all-cash transaction is planned as a first step tender offer, to be followed by a cash merger to acquire all remaining shares of Hallwood. Total cost of the transaction is about $268 million, including assumed debt.

Officials with the companies were reluctant to discuss the announcement because details will be disclosed in a tender offer expected to be filed in the near future.

The announcement comes soon after Pure Resources completed a $261 million acquisition of

20 years after Reagan attack, victims' lives are scattered

By Deb Riechmann
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The pop, pop, pop of gunfire outside a Washington hotel 20 years ago sent the lives of those at the scene ricocheting in different directions.

Secret Service agent Tim McCarthy, who took a bullet meant for President Reagan, is a police chief in a Chicago suburb. His heroism that day, March 30, 1981, underpinned a campaign for statewide political office a few years ago.

Washington police officer Thomas Delahanty, who was doing crowd control that day, was shot in the back of the neck and sent into immediate retirement at age 45, with enduring pain.

Press secretary James Brady, shot in the head and permanently disabled, carries on his fight for gun control. He appeared in Washington this week to criticize, yet again, the gun lobby.

And Reagan, who has Alzheimer's disease and broke his right hip in a fall at his California home in January, reached his 90th birthday on Feb. 6, a benchmark many people never reach.

"He is up and walking and has been since his birthday," Reagan spokeswoman Joanne Drake said Friday, the 20th anniversary of the shooting. "As for the Alzheimer's, he's doing as well as can be expected for a disease that's progressive."

Reagan was walking out a side door of the Washington Hilton when John Hinckley Jr., a mentally disturbed young man trying to impress actress Jodie Foster, crouched and began firing a .22-caliber revolver.

He'd bought it for $29 at Rocky's Pawn Shop in Dallas five months earlier.

The first shot hit Brady, who was walking beside the president. The bullet entered the left side of his forehead and passed through the right side of his brain.

His speech remains slurred.

"The other day I wanted to go to a pizza place for a bite to eat," Brady wrote in a column for Friday's anniversary. "By the time I was able to get help getting dressed and into my wheelchair and the wheelchair into our van, I no longer felt like going."

"While anniversaries usually are happy occasions to remember, today is one anniversary I wish I could forget. It was 20 years ago today that my life and the lives of three others were changed forever."

In 1993, Congress passed the Brady law, requiring background checks to prohibit gun sales to criminals and others, including people with a history of mental illness.

Reagan, once out of office, endorsed those controls, which he had opposed in office.

Now, Brady is trying to get President Bush to support child safety locks on handguns and background checks on people buying firearms at gun shows.

The second shot hit Delahanty. He lay on the pavement as agents struggled to subdue the gunman.

McCarthy was hit next, in the upper abdomen. He had turned himself into a human target, standing with his arms up and legs spread between Reagan and the gunman.

"I was hit by a gunshot," he said later. "At that point I fell to the ground and realized the confusion that was going on around me."

Secret Service agent Timothy J. McCarthy, foreground, Washington police officer, Thomas K. Delehanty, center, and presidential Press Secretary James Brady, background, lie wounded on a street outside a Washington hotel after shots were fired at President Reagan on March 30, 1981. Twenty years later, McCarthy, who threw himself into the line of fire taking a bullet intended for President Reagan, is now a police chief in a Chicago suburb. His heroism that day underpinned a campaign for statewide political office a few years ago that did not work out.

Nine years after the shooting, he was made Secret Service agent in charge in Chicago, a post he described as the highlight of his career.

He vied for the Democratic nomination for Illinois secretary of state in 1998, using a campaign ad that touted his heroism and featured the sound of gunfire. He lost.

Reagan was hit last, but didn't know it right away.

He thought he'd cracked a rib from being thrown, face down, into the limousine by Secret Service agent Jerry Parr.

On his ride to George Washington University Hospital, Reagan sopped blood in handkerchiefs. Then he couldn't get his breath. In the emergency room, doctors inserted a breathing tube.

The bullet had hit the car, ricocheted and pierced his new blue suit below his left armpit.

"I thought Jerry had broken my rib when he landed so hard on me," Reagan wrote in his autobiography. But "the flattened bullet had hit my rib edgewise, then turned over like a coin, tumbling down through my lung and stopping less than an inch from my heart."

Parr, the former Secret Service Agent who rode with Reagan to the hospital, is now a lay minister in Washington.

"I was walking toward the open door that Tim McCarthy had opened, I heard these six shots actually fired in less than two seconds," he told CNN Friday. "That starts the action for an agent to simply cover first and evacuate."

Hinckley was found not guilty by reason of insanity. He's still confined at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Washington.

His attorney continues to seek permission for Hinckley to make weekly trips, without a hospital escort, to visit his parents. Hospital officials initially supported the trips but changed their minds after prosecutors testified last year that Hinckley still has a penchant for violent movies and books.

Fort Lauderdale says goodbye to wild spring breaks

By Janelle A. Weber
Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — As a flamenco dancer twirled her ruffled red dress in front of a middle-aged audience at BeachPlace, 20-year-old Nate Dunlap wondered whether spring break could get any lamer.

"I guess I always assumed it was a spring break haven. I don't know why I assumed that," said the Cornell University sophomore. "College is definitely crazier, but it's colder."

Fort Lauderdale was immortalized as a spring break destination in the1960 movie "Where the Boys Are." But the city has graduated from the days of overflowing bars, lewd behavior and litter-filled beaches. It has redefined itself as a spot for families, business travelers and well-to-do college students.

On a recent Wednesday, businessmen in ties sipped beers on their lunch break as college students in bathing suits tossed a volleyball on the beach.

"The younger kids that are here now, they're more mature," said Scott Loiselle, a manager at Hooters restaurant. "They're not as rowdy. We haven't had a fight yet."

In the early 1980s, hundreds of thousands of young people descended on the city, turning it upside down. They destroyed hotel rooms, left trash on the beach and scared away locals. In 1986, two spring-breakers died in falls from balconies and a third was killed in a motorcycle crash.

Faced with a record 350,000 students in 1985, business leaders and City Council decided to make a change. Mayor Robert Dressler went on ABC's "Good Morning America" to say that college students were no longer welcome.

The City Council said no to MTV and inflatable beer cans and passed a law forbidding open alcoholic containers on the beach side of U.S. Highway A1A. Overnight parking on the beach was also prohibited.

Police strictly enforced the new ordinances the following year, arresting almost 2,500 people during spring break. The students started staying away. Only 60,000 visited during spring break 1988. About 25,000 are expected this spring.

The city's raucous reputation lingered even after more and more students opted for other party locations, such as Panama City Beach, Daytona Beach and Cancun, Mexico.

A bicyclist passes sailboats and catamarans docked along renovated East Las Olas Boulevard in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Wednesday. Fort Lauderdale has graduated from its spring break days of overflowing bars, lewd behavior and litter-filled beaches. The city has redefined itself as a destination for families, business travelers and upscale college students.

"It probably took 10 years before we could go out and pass the straight-faced test in the marketplace and say we had an alternate destination to sell," said Nicki Grossman, president of the Greater Fort Lauderdale Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Tourism officials are trying to market Fort Lauderdale as an upscale paradise, where Ferraris and Porsches purr down boulevards and sophisticated tourists dine in fine restaurants, as they do in Palm Beach or Miami.

While the marketing efforts have not completely erased the wet-and-wild image — in mid-March, a New Jersey teen-ager died after falling from a motel balcony in Fort Lauderdale's first serious spring break accident since 1986 — the shift away from spring break has begun to pay off.

The $110 million spent by students during spring break in the mid-1980s has been more than offset by the $773 million currently spent by tourists during the same period, Grossman said.

To attract well-heeled tourists, hotels, restaurants and shopping areas have had to undergo renovations, much to the delight of older tourists who first visited the city decades ago.

Ken Johnson, 65, of Westfield, Mass., toured the city 30 years ago during a visit to his parents' home — a trip that coincided with spring break.

"Some places were downhill," said Johnson, after taking an afternoon cruise along the Intracoastal Waterway. "Now this is upscale. It's a lot nicer."

Even the cheapest beachside hotels were too expensive for Dunlap and his friend, Justin Gray, 20, of Union College in Schenectady, N.Y. They decided to stay downtown for $50 a night.

Dunlap, who spent his first week of spring break in New Orleans, said he wasn't sure yet whether the plane ticket to South Florida was worth it.

"New Orleans was kickin'. I haven't seen anything like that yet," he said.

SECOND: Merger expected to create 'minimum number' of jobs producing oil and gas properties, partnership interests and interests under approximately 6 million fee mineral acres throughout the southern Gulf Coast region from International Paper Co. and its subsidiaries.

(From 1A)

"We do feel fortunate to have found both opportunities," said Jack Harper, director of public relations for Pure Resources. "We feel fortunate to, in such a short time, find quality asset deals like these."

Bill Guzzetti, president of Hallwood, said in a statement, "Pure Resources' offer will provide our stockholders with a premium cash value and immediate liquidity for their holdings at prices well in excess of the highest levels at which either the common or the preferred stock has traded. We feel that the offer reflects the proven and potential value of Hallwood. We are very proud of our company's accomplishments and believe that Pure Resources' offer is indicative of our success."

Harper said the merger is expected to create "a minimum number" of jobs, primarily in administration, because the company is already well-staffed. But, he said, the merger will create a stronger company that will benefit the community.

Marvin Wynn, president and chief executive officer of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, applauded the announcement, saying, "One thing that has been of concern was that not only were the majors leaving but some independents were as well. It's good that an independent like Pure is growing. This also attests to the fact that Pure did the right thing in making their acquisitions."

Jack Hightower, chairman, president and chief executive of Pure Resources, said the deal would expand the company's core areas in the Permian and San Juan Basins and in South Texas and increase the company's project inventory and ability to grow production through exploitation and exploration.

Pure Resources was born last May when Titan Exploration Inc. combined with the Permian Basin business unit of Unocal Corp. to create Pure Resources. At its formation, the company had daily production of 230 million cubic feet of natural gas equivalent and owned 1.02 trillion cubic feet of natural gas equivalent of proved reserves with a 12-year average life. The recent acquisition from International Paper added proven reserves of 152 billion cubic feet daily along with ownership in 6 million gross fee mineral acres and participation in several offshore exploration projects.

Hallwood Energy has properties primarily located in the Permian Basin, the San Juan Basin, South Texas and onshore South Louisiana. It was formed in 1999 with the consolidation of Hallwood Energy Partners L.P. and Hallwood Consolidated Resources Corp. and the direct interests of The Hallwood Group Inc.

ARTIST: Couple passed up Julia Roberts for role in 'Santa Barbara'

(From 1A)

for their tone to be serious and delivered funny lines in a somber manner. "I had to learn to put in more stage directions."

But, all was not lost.

"The last scene was a love scene, and it worked," Mrs. Dobson said. She glanced at her husband, who was standing at the podium with her, and said somewhat mischievously, "Suddenly, Jerry got up, angry, and said, 'I told you that in private.'"

Her husband gave the luncheon guests a long-suffering look.

She smiled and added, "Jerry has been my inspiration in almost all my scripts."

He confided to the crowd, "I told her I had to learn how to write this stuff, too."

After five years of writing for "General Hospital," the couple "officially" became a team when they took over the head-writing duties for the soap opera. During their career, they also were the head writers of "Guiding Light" and "As The World Turns" and created and owned "Santa Barbara," which received 36 Emmys during its run.

For "Santa Barbara," the duty of hiring the actors fell to the Dobsons. They hired Robin Wright (Penn) who later went on to a film career in, among others, "The Princess Bride" and "Forrest Gump," and didn't hire another young actress, who has garnered popular acclaim.

"It was the beginning of her career. She didn't appear to be a great actress," Dobson said, drily. "Not then."

The actress was Julia Roberts, who walked away from the 73rd Academy Awards ceremony on Sunday with the Oscar for Best Actress.

Following the luncheon, Dobson said,their decisions in hiring for "Santa Barbara" were based on looking at the ensemble of actors as a whole.

Miss Roberts would have been six to eight inches taller than the person who would play opposite her, Dobson said, adding that Robin Wright seemed better suited for the role of Kelly Capwell.

The Dobsons, who now live in Atlanta, Ga., were in town for the opening of a showing of her work at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave. The Midland museum marks the first stop of eight on the tour. No admission is charged at the museum. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. The show closes here on April 29.

During a Friday evening museum-membership reception at the museum, Mrs. Dobson talked about her art.

"Through painting I've learned something about myself — something that surprised me," Mrs. Dobson said. "I learned that whatever the storms or treacheries or upheavals in my outside world, my inside world holds an invincible summer. For that I'm forever blessed."

The reception honoring her is part of the contemporary artists series the museum began in 1997. This year, the series, which brings six artists to town, is called "Points of Departure" and began with works by Theodore Waddell in January and continues in May with works by Bill Schenck.

"Our receptions have been very well-attended," said Jill Johnson, development officer for the museum. "People love to come in and meet a living, working artist, and they love to learn from them. They can pretty much ask them any question. They can learn from their techniques and see what inspires them."

ARREST: Victim in fair condition al on the aggravated assault charge, said Midland Police Sgt. David Garcia.

(From 1A)

"They can fight the extradition proceedings if they choose, but not many people choose to do so because extradition in this instance is inevitable," Garcia said.

At about 3 a.m. Wednesday morning, Midland police officers responded to a disturbance at 1011 West Griffin. Following a blood-spattered trail from the front yard and into the home owned by Storey's wife, Stefani, 23, police began to assemble pieces of the crime scene puzzle.

According Mrs. Storey's sister — Tammy Vowell, 31, who shared the home with Mrs. Storey, Steven, Mrs. Storey's boyfriend Cecil Carter and Ms. Vowell's 13-year-old daughter, Amber — it was Amber who let Sadler, 24, and Storey, 24, inside the home at 2:45 a.m. after the pair pounded on the front door.

Pushing past Amber, the two men quickly made their way to a back bedroom occupied by Mrs. Storey and Carter, 34.

"I don't know if they were on any drugs, but they were definitely drunk when they showed up to my house," Mrs. Storey said.

"Both of them (Storey and Sadler) had knives," Mrs. Storey said. "After Cecil knocked both Joe and Bill down with his fists, Joe pulled out his knife and stabbed Cecil first and then Bill took his turn (with a different knife)."

Mrs. Storey said although it was her husband's jealousy that supposedly brought Sadler and Storey to her home, it was Sadler who verbalized their reason for the attack.

"You don't know what is going on," Mrs. Storey said Sadler screamed at Carter. "You are (.....) my friend's old lady."

After repeatedly plunging their knives into Carter's chest and back, Storey picked up Steven, who watched the horrific scene unfold from Mrs. Storey's kitchen, and the two men headed out the front door with the boy and into a white Chevrolet truck, disappearing into the night, Ms. Vowell said.

"After Joe and Bill left, I drove at least 80 mph to the hospital with Cecil," Mrs. Storey said. "The emergency room doctor told me if I had shown up two minutes later (to the hospital) there is a real possibility that Cecil wouldn't be alive today."

"First Cecil protected us from my husband and Bill and then we protected him by getting him to the hospital in time," Mrs. Storey said.

Carter has progressed from critical condition to fair condition and may be released from the hospital today.

KING: Business owners cite expense, inconvenience

(From 1A)

thousands. My address is painted on the door of my truck. I don't object to a naming of a street (after King), it is the cost of it. That (the cost) would be terrible for us."

Dwayne Herring owns two businesses — Mid-West Door and Windows and Midwest Glass.

"As an owner of two businesses, we would have it times two," Herring said. "I wouldn't want anyone to suffer the expense it would cost us or any other business that would have to change its physical address."

Monetary reasons were stated over and over as a reason.

"It has nothing to do with the name. You have to change everything," said Kip Woodfin, who runs Midland Tire and Brake Center. "There is no one making a killing in this economy. If they say they are, they are probably lying to you. There are some stores hanging on by a thread as it is."

"To me, it seems crazy," said Manuel Castrellon, owner of Peter's Paint and Body Shop. "I am doing really well and don't want to chance it. I don't want any negative results on business."

The bottom line was the No. 1 reason, and inconvenience was a close second. These are the same reasons name changes to roads or thoroughfares in the past have been so difficult to come about.

When asked about complications a change of address could mean, Midland postmaster Stan Sartain said the post office would work with those affected.

Mail would be forwarded to old addresses for at least a year and maybe up to 18 months from the time any change is made.

"We can make those changes internally where there is not a big hassle," Sartain said. "We give them ample opportunity to use all letterhead and everything. We are lenient."

Still, there are hurdles to clear before any renaming is final.

In August of 1999, former District 2 councilmember Juluis Brooks was unsuccessful in his attempt to rename Fairgrounds Road after King.

Past efforts by current District 2 councilman James Bradford all have been thwarted by lack of City Council support. Bradford's most recent effort has led to the development of a survey, which polled selected Midlanders on three choices — Front Street, a unnamed street that will circle the yet-to-be-built Scharbauer Sports Complex and State Highway 191.

Results of the survey showed Front Street to be the top vote-getter.

Of the Front Street occupants talked to by the Reporter-Telegram, only attorney Edward T. Garza supported such a name change.

"I think because it has the type of visibility and because it is based in the center of town or leads to the center of town, it would be the best option for the community and for the city," Garza said. "Whatever the cost there is, it would be minimal if you weigh it against the ultimate benefit for the town and city."

Right now, it seems the Front Street controversy is only casting a large shadow over conservative Midland. Suddenly, the town, which can produce a president, can't help but squabble over honoring one of the more influential American figures of the 20th century.

"With his (George W. Bush's) philosophy of compassion and unity, what would he think about his city being so slow about recognizing an outstanding American?" Bradford said.

But the same question keeps coming up. To what extent should people be allowed to dictate their will on others despite not owning a business or living on the street in question?

Sometimes that answer goes beyond economics.

"Why not name something on the south side of town after Martin Luther King?" said Dominic Salinas, who works at Chaparral Tire and Supply. "That is where a majority of black population is."

"As far as I am concerned, I don't see that Martin Luther King helped that side of town more than he helped the other side of town," said Odessan James Woodfin. He owns Midland Tire and Brake Center. "We get that stuff pushed down our throats all the time anyway."

Garza believes there is more of that attitude out there.

"People who are questioning the issue are questioning whether they want to have a Martin Luther King Ave.," Garza said. "I have seen a lot of changes come about. People need to live with that. That (the desire to not honor King) may be the catalyst for their feelings as much as anything else."

The street renaming issue has been a topic of the current mayoral race. Of the five running to replace Bobby Burns as Midland's 21st mayor, only Bill Dingus favors the possibility of renaming Front Street.

Dingus has said the city must look at all possibilities and even suggested private funds be raised to help alleviate any burdens Midlanders along Front Street would face.

"It is surprising to me that this is such a big deal," Dingus said. "Actually, there are more people out there who feel Midland is a little backwards because of this than people who object to it.

"You would hope you have some sort of agreement which is hammered out before it comes to the City Council."

There is no date for when the issue will hit the City Council. Bradford is holding a meeting at 7 p.m. Monday, concerning the issue. At that time, a more definite timetable could be announced.

The roadway around the sports complex seemed to be the likely choice of Bradford and a first committee he put together to look at the city's choices. However, opposition in Bradford's district and the African-American community prompted the survey that produced a different frontrunner to come forward.

"If it was my dad, I wouldn't want this street (Front Street) renamed after him," said Joe Ann Birdsong, who works at the Bargain Barn, and who questioned why anyone would pick Front Street as a throughfare to honor anyone. She felt the street looked too shabby. "I think it would be most appropriate to name a street out at the complex after him. It would be more of an honor, more honorable than renaming this street after him."

ENDORSE: Issue likely to come before City Council again

certainly doesn't hurt us to change the name of a street."

The association includes two lay people from every church and also represents Christian organizations, pastors and other organizations that promote Christian ethics. According to Gay, MAC tends to be more "mainline" and "upper class." MAC may not be the only organization to back the renaming of Front Street. An endorsement could come from the Ministerial Alliance by mid-April, according to its president, the Rev. Jose Chavez.

"Front Street has more visibility," Rev. Chavez said. "The stadium would not be visited, but at every sports event."

The backing from church groups offers some much-needed ammunition for those fighting to rename a major thoroughfare after King. Attempts to rename streets in the past have been futile at best. The City Council has repeatedly said it would not rename a street and thus force the street's occupants to bear the costs of such a change.

The proposed name change could once again land in the lap of the City Council in the near future. On Monday, Councilman James Bradford will meet with District 2 constituents and other citizens to address the King street naming.

"I applaud the fact they endorse the idea of naming a street, but the ministers' endorsement will have nothing to do with our timetable," Bradford said.

Other options on the survey distributed earlier this month were the unnamed street around the yet-to-be-built sports complex and Highway 191.

The road that will circle the multi-million dollar sports complex was the next leading vote-getter when the survey results were tallied.

A vast majority of the business owners on Front Street interviewed by the Reporter-Telegram this week didn't favor having the street renamed. Cost is most often cited as the main reason.

There are a number of City Council members who have said they will not rename a street because of those costs. And having opposition from Front Street owners and the City Council might have some thinking about shifting gears and focusing on possibly naming an unnamed street after King, a move that has the support of some council members and mayoral candidates.

But Gay differed.

"We are not just out to please the town. That is not what a peacemaker is," Gay said. "One of Martin Luther King's statements was 'You cannot make me hate you,' and even though there was so much hate and so much abuse, and people wanted him to keep the status quo and never stir up trouble, he said you cannot make me hate you. That is a powerful statement.

"Even though there is a great deal of hate in the town and people are quick to tell you that in something so simple like a street naming. They are full of vengeance about it, and that speaks volumes to be willing to support one."

SON: Mother grateful boy is alive

(From 1A)

"She took him across the street from the police station and bought him some candy. Steven was a little frightened when we first brought him in but we all bonded with him and he does not appear to be too traumatized by the events of the past few days."

Dancy went on to say Steven will be placed in a "clean home with loving parents" until Mrs. Storey arrives in Arkansas to claim her son.

Mrs. Storey said the combined effort among many separate entities played a major role in the safe return of Steven.

"I would like to thank the Midland Police Department, Citizens on Patrol and the media for all of their help in finding my son," Mrs. Storey said. " I cannot express how grateful I am that he is still alive."

Bush builds field of dreams at White House

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Creating his own field of dreams, President Bush pledged Friday to help revitalize interest in the national pastime with regular T-ball games on the White House South Lawn. "We've got a pretty good-size backyard here," said the baseball team owner-turned president.

Bases will be pounded into the president's backyard and wooden bleachers assembled within a fly ball of the Oval Office so boys and girls can whack baseballs off tees, and slow-footed Cabinet secretaries can coach or cheer.

With more than 40 Hall of Fame baseball players at his side, some of them his boyhood heroes, Bush spoke with feeling about a sport he said has fallen on "pretty tough times."

"Baseball isn't just in the stats," he said. "It isn't just the money. It really isn't who makes the Hall of Fame. As much as anything else, baseball is the style of a Willie Mays or the determination of a Hank Aaron or the endurance of a Mickey Mantle, the discipline of Carl Yastrzemski, the drive of Eddie Mathews, the reliability of a (Al) Kaline or a (Joe) Morgan, the grace of a (Joe) DiMaggio, the kindness of a Harmon Killebrew, and the class of Stan Musial, the courage of a Jackie Robinson, or the heroism of Lou Gehrig."

"My hope for the game is that these qualities will never be lost. What ever else changes — even if the same nine innings run longer and the fly balls farther, and the grass isn't always grass like it should be — those values are still what makes the boys and girls into fans, and players into legends," he said.

"In a small way, maybe we can help to preserve the best of baseball right here in the house that Washington built," Bush said. "After we moved in, I pointed out to a great baseball fan, the first lady, that we've got a pretty good size backyard here."

Laura Bush gave her husband the go-ahead, he said, "so long as I wasn't one of the players."

Bush will work with Little League Baseball of Williamsport, Pa., to invite children from 5-to-8 years-old to play in his backyard. They'll come from Washington-area schools and may wear jerseys with such names as the "South Lawn Slammers" and "White House Whammers." Games will take place about once a month.

Cabinet officials and staff will coach some teams, maybe even field a few balls, aides said.

The program will be run by the White House communications team, in charge of political public relations, and the office of community and faith-based initiatives.

Presidents have long associated themselves with star athletes to connect with sports-obsessed voters.

Bush will throw out the first pitch at the Milwaukee Brewers' home opener in their new Miller Park on April 6 in the latest version of a first-pitch tradition established by President Taft more than 90 years ago. He also plans to attend minor league and college baseball games to draw attention to the sport.

The Hall of Famers seemed to enjoy their visit to the East Room as much as generations of fans, including Bush, had enjoyed watching them play years ago. "This is my World Series," Cubs great Ernie Banks said, "and Mr. Bush is the manager."

"I am the grandson of a slave and here I am in this room," said Buck O'Neil a star Negro League player. "You can't beat it."

Aides said the T-ball games are part of a four-year effort by Bush to highlight the sport he loved as a child and profited from as an adult. He bought an interest in the Texas Rangers in 1989 for $600,000, nearly a third of his net worth at the time, and gained a $15 million profit when the team was sold in 1998. He was managing general partner from 1989 to 1994.

The game seems to appeal to Bush's love for order and competition. "The bottom line in baseball is results: wins and losses," he wrote in his autobiography, drawing a comparison to politics. "We succeeded in baseball because we had vision and a message. From baseball, I developed a thick skin against criticism. I learned to overlook minor setbacks and focus on the long haul."

At the Rangers, he pushed for a local tax increase to pay for a new stadium, made what he said was one of the biggest mistakes of his life — trading slugger Sammy Sosa — and raised his public profile in preparation for a successful run for governor of Texas.

A longtime baseball fan, Bush rounded up neighborhood kids for pickup games in Midland as a boy, formed a prep school stickball league in Andover, Mass., and briefly played baseball at Yale University.

Now, he will field teams at the White House.

Investigators work through wreckage of crash that killed 18

ASPEN, Colo. — Investigators picked through twisted debris high in the Rockies on Friday, looking for clues to what caused a chartered jet to crash as it came in for a landing at one of the trickiest airports in the nation. All 18 people aboard were killed.

The National Transportation Safety Board team examined hundreds of pieces of metal from the Gulfstream III that went down Thursday night in light snow a few miles outside this wealthy ski resort town.

The cockpit voice recorder was found and will be analyzed in Washington. The 20-year-old jet was not equipped with a data recorder.

"So what difficulties they had on the approach, I really can't answer," the NTSB's Arnold Scott said.

The plane, carrying 15 passengers and three crew members, was owned by a Hollywood studio. Among those on board were two employees of a Los Angeles TV station who had planned a weekend of skiing.

The twin-engine jet left Burbank and made a stop in Los Angeles before heading to Aspen. Just after 7 p.m., the jet struck a hillside, skidded across a culvert and hit a bluff 500 yards short of Aspen-Pitkin County Airport, which consists of a single runway in a narrow mountain valley.

Witnesses said they saw bodies of passengers still strapped in their seats near a highway that runs parallel to the runway. Other bodies were found on the hillside.

The crew had turned off the instrument landing system and notified tower officials they had the runway in sight just moments before the crash, Scott said. They did not issue a distress signal.

The National Weather Service reported light snow in the area at the time of the crash. Forecasters said visibility dropped from 10 miles to less than two miles in about 20 minutes just before the crash.

Even in clear weather, the airport is one of the nation's most challenging for pilots because of its mountainous setting and the steep descent required to land. The airport urges incoming pilots to use landing lights at all times.

Its 7,000-foot runway is 7,815 feet above sea level. To the west, the land rises 780 feet within a half-mile of the runway. Just eight miles away, peaks tower another 3,500 feet.

"There can be wind shear and turbulence right where the plane hit," said Jim Shaw, a flight instructor at Aspen Aviation.

Glen Davis, a United Express captain familiar with the airport, said approach charts recommend that inexperienced pilots avoid landing after dark.

The plane was managed and maintained by Avjet Corp., which oversees a fleet of Gulfstreams for charter use.

Avjet president Marc Foulkrod said the plane's captain, Bob Frisbie, had 10,000 hours of flight time and regularly flew the jet to Aspen. The company said its crews average 15 years of experience and until Thursday had flown more than 500,000 incident-free hours.

Service and maintenance occurs in Burbank. Company officials would not say if the plane had been checked recently.

The Gulfstream is owned by Airborne Charter Inc. and its parent Cinergi Pictures Entertainment Inc., producer of "Rambo," "Diehard With a Vengeance" and "Total Recall." Hollywood producer Andrew G. Vajna heads both companies. No employees of either company were on board.

Among the dead were Mirweis Tuhki and Marissa Witham, news employees at Fox affiliate KTTV.

"It's an extremely sad day for us here," anchorman Tony McEwing said. "Mir Tukhi and Marissa Witham will be deeply missed here at Fox and our sympathies and prayers go out to their families and friends."

No question too invasive at bankruptcy hearings

By Marcy Gordon
Associated Press

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Your financial life flashes in front of you in a matter of minutes: your mortgage, income, bills, life insurance, taxes. You're being grilled under oath in a room full of strangers, each awaiting a turn under the spotlight.

"Still got the '91 Honda Civic?" attorney Gordon Peyton asked a man while scanning a document listing what the man had and what he owed. "Are you expecting a tax refund this year?"

Watchers sat solemnly in rows of comfortable chairs. Some spoke in anxious tones with their lawyers. A nervous din filled the hallway outside, while on a brick veranda, cement urns were loaded with fresh cigarette butts.

Peyton is a bankruptcy trustee who conducts these one-on-one public meetings with people who want to wipe away their debts under Chapter 7 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code. Mandatory sessions like this take place across the nation.

People come here for many reasons — job loss, medical disaster, divorce, drug addiction. It's the culmination of a financial struggle for many, marked by pressing phone calls from creditors and sleep-starved nights. Some are eager to tell their story to a reporter but are too embarrassed to have their name printed.

Proponents of overhauling the bankruptcy laws say it's too easy to erase credit-card and other debts under Chapter 7, and that the system is being abused. Both the House and Senate this month passed bills to toughen the rules, and President Bush has signaled he would sign such legislation.

Congress proposes a new income-based test for those seeking Chapter 7 protection. If a person were found to have sufficient income to repay at least 25 percent of the debt over five years, debtors generally would be required to file instead under Chapter 13, which requires a court-approved repayment plan, rather than dissolution of unsecured debts.

For about 500 years in England, imprisonment for defaulting on debts was the order of the day. Creditors in ancient Rome were authorized to carve up a debtor's body, according to scholars.

There are no debtors' prisons in this country. The closest this system comes to a public pillory may well be these meetings under Section 341 of the Bankruptcy Code.

In Alexandria, across the Potomac from Washington, dozens of people were interviewed on a recent afternoon. Each was sworn in while sitting alongside his or her lawyer at a large table, and on the other side sat Peyton and his two assistants. Occasionally a creditor's lawyer — from a department store or bank, for example — pulled up a chair.

The filers were young and not-so-young, men and women, whites and African Americans and Asians and Hispanics. Their occupations include postal worker, delivery driver, candy store owner, retail clerk. They live in upscale suburbs like Falls Church as well as rural towns in northern Virginia.

Many were casually dressed. Nearly all had an attorney.

"These people wanted to live the American dream," lawyer Joel Steinberg said. "Their kids have doctor bills, they have car problems, they begin to dip into the credit cards."

Steinberg said many of his Chapter 7 clients have fallen on hard times in an expensive area of the country despite jobs that pay fairly well. That means they likely would fail the means test in the new legislation and be forced into Chapter 13 reorganization.

Peyton and other trustees are private attorneys appointed by the Justice Department. Their job is to clear out the underbrush, to administer a heavy load of cases so most of them don't have to go before a judge. At the federal bankruptcy courthouse, six blocks away in Alexandria's historic Old Town district, some days go by without any cases being heard.

"This is where the rubber meets the road," Peyton said after the grueling four-hour session. He averages 12 interviews an hour and is paid $65 per case, regardless of how simple or complex. He is a bit like a circuit-riding judge, coming to preside at these meetings once every two weeks.

A large, affable man, Peyton wishes several of the debtors "Good luck" with a hint of sympathy when he releases them from the interview.

When he suspects abuse, Peyton's good humor vanishes. He sharply scolds an immigrant woman with an apparent gambling problem who he believes to be less than honest. If she doesn't file her back tax returns in 30 days, he says, he'll recommend to the bankruptcy judge that she be incarcerated.

"Then she's going to be back in front of that judge to explain why she shouldn't go to jail," Peyton told her lawyer and translator. "I want some truthful answers. I want to know how come she owes this casino $2,700."

In return for debtors' clean financial slate under Chapter 7, the trustee legally takes over their property, except for basic necessities such as a car, clothing and work tools.

Property with value is sold to pay creditors. Debtors generally are allowed to keep some personal items and possibly some of the equity in their home, depending on state laws.

"Still got the Olds?" Peyton asked another woman. "They're not going to make those any more — you'd better hold on to it."

Ad campaign featuring American bachelor breaks hearts in Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia — For a few giddy weeks, a rich American bachelor named Bob Harris was the fantasy of legions of Colombian women — and even a few men.

Six thousand sent e-mails and checked him out on the Internet.

Five times that many dialed a toll-free number, pining to meet the blond, tanned executive who raced cars, abstained from vice and sought a Colombian bride to share his lonely mansion in Virginia.

Alas, none of it was true, the heartbroken masses found out this week.

The adventurous gringo whose Web site, television spots and magazine and newspaper classifieds exalting Colombian women's "Latin flavor" was the invention of a deceptive advertising campaign to sell cars.

The campaign drawing attention to the launch of a new Renault sedan has some crying foul. How, critics say, could anyone so callously prey on women's dreams of love, riches and an escape from their war-torn country?

But the young Colombian advertising executives who came up with the idea are patting themselves on the back.

"We've sold more cars in the first three days than we expected to in a month," said Jose Miguel Sokoloff of the Lowe Partners agency in Bogota.

Renault's marketing director in Colombia also defended the campaign, even it did bruise some feelings. "We never meant to make fun of them, far from that," Miguel Rojo y Pinto said in an interview.

The fictional Bob burst onto the scene March 11. Colombia was bombarded with TV spots and print ads laying bare his desire for a Colombian woman between 30 and 35 to form a "loving and affectionate" family.

> 'This is bad taste, to take advantage of people's hopes of forming a family and finding a better life.'
> — Anita Cendales, Colombian resident

"Hi, I'm Bob Harris. I'm 39 years old," read one of the ads, complete with a photo of Bob in a blue blazer and yellow tie. "I'm solvent, faithful, sincere and romantic. I don't drink or smoke and I love to dance merengue and salsa."

At a Web site giving his zodiac sign as Pisces, Bob claims to be a telecommunications consultant who learned Spanish in Venezuela and Costa Rica. But never in his travels had Bob encountered anything like Colombian women, with their special "beauty, Latin flavor and values."

A picture gallery on the site shows Bob in many poses; in his roadster at the track, holding up a cocktail outside a white mansion and posing alongside "my brother Alex, a Mormon missionary."

A week after the campaign began, an editorial in Bogota's El Tiempo newspaper warned there could be a white slavery ring at work. It asked darkly: "Who is this Bob Harris and what does he really want?"

Still, many women went for the bait.

"I am from a very well appointed family in Medellin, raised with values of love and tolerance," read one hopeful e-mail sent to an address listed on the Web page set up secretly by Sokoloff.

"I've got a good body because I go to the gym everyday...my hair is long and intensely black," another of the e-mails said.

On Monday, the truth came out — just as the advertisers planned.

Bob, played by a British oil worker in Colombia who is dabbling in acting, appeared in a new set of ads announcing the Renault car release and revealing that he already has a Colombian wife and family. The campaign was based on a simple idea, said Sokoloff, the advertising executive: building suspense and then tying that to a product.

Some women were aghast.

"This is bad taste, to take advantage of people's hopes of forming a family and finding a better life," said Anita Cendales, a bakery worker who had seen the TV ads while watching her favorite soap opera.

As a consolation prize, one of the thousands of women who wrote to Bob will be awarded a new Renault.

Russia's closeted KGB museum chronicles secret service operations

By Anna Dolgov
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Camouflaged behind its nondescript entrance on a busy central Moscow street, the museum of Russian secret services is shrouded in secrecy — like the agencies whose operations it chronicles.

From outside, there is no sign or hint of what lies behind the forbidding marble facade and the several sets of tinted-glass doors. No visitors are allowed in without an appointment. And no cameras or recording devices can come inside.

The secret service museum stands behind the notorious headquarters of the Soviet-era KGB on Lubyanka Square, in whose cells thousands were tortured during dictator Josef Stalin's purges before being sent to the Gulag.

Many of the museum's exhibits document the U.S.-Soviet Cold War rivalry, a topic recently revived with the worst espionage scandal in years. About 50 diplomats were ordered out of each country over spying allegations in the past two weeks.

On Friday, museum employees seemed proud to show off their achievements to a visiting group of foreign journalists, including Americans.

The museum was created in 1984 as a private exhibition for Russian secret service employees. It started to allow in some general public five years later, amid then-Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's democratic reforms, but even now tours have to be arranged through a small group of Russian travel agencies and other organizations working with the museum.

The exhibits include a flashlight, gun and poison pin seized from Francis Gary Powers, the pilot of the American U2 spy plane shot down over the Soviet Union in 1960. The pin, with which Powers was to take his life if he was tortured, was hidden inside a seam of his overalls, the guide said.

"Since then, all agents who are detained by security bodies are told to undress and are given new clothes before they are transported to their place of detention," the museum guide said.

Powers, who never tried to use the poison, was exchanged for a Soviet spy convicted in the United States.

Several radio transmitters laid out in glass display boxes carry tags identifying them as property of the United States government, the guide, who introduced himself only by first name and patronymic — a derivation of someone on one's father's side.

"We once had a group of American tourists here, and we thanked them all because the museum effectively exists thanks to U.S. taxpayers," Igor Nikolayevich joked.

The museum chronicles scores of counter-espionage operations of the past decades, most of which gained less public attention.

One of the radio transmitters, seized from an American spy in 1986, is still functional, Nikolayevich said.

"The spy masters of course have long known that this agent has been exposed, but when the (museum) janitor lifts the glass to dust, we punch a button on the transmitter and a signal goes out — as a sort of a hello from us," he said.

Other exhibits range from records of the 14th century, when Prince Dmitry Donskoi sent spies into the camps of the Golden Horde, the Mongolian armies that occupied Russia for three centuries — to radio transmitters, cameras concealed inside watches and invisible ink seized from Western spies in recent years.

Nikolayevich, in his late 40s with graying hair, bright blue eyes and military-style straight back, refused to give his last name or tell anything about his past career. However, he repeatedly referred to the Federal Security Service as "our agency."

The exhibits note Stalin-era persecutions. But Felix Dzerzhinsky, the founder of the KGB's dreaded precursor, the Cheka, is treated like a hero. A towering statue of Dzerzhinsky stood for decades on Lubyanka Square before being torn down by pro-democracy protesters in 1991.

Dutch couples prepare for same-sex marriages minutes after law takes effect

By Anthony Deutsch
Associated Press

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands — Anne-Marie Thus and Helene Faasen lead a routine domestic life for a Dutch couple engaged to be wed. Living together for two years, they have a car, a mortgage on a three-story town house and a 9-month-old child.

"We're just a run-of-the-mill couple," said Thus, toweling the baby after his bath. "Two people with a family and a household. The only thing that's different is that we're two women."

On Sunday, they will become the world's first lesbians to be officially married, under legislation recognizing same-sex marriages with full and equal rights.

The law, enacted last year, takes effect at midnight. Moments later, four gay couples — Thus and Faasen and three male couples — will exchange vows and rings at a joint wedding in Amsterdam's City Hall.

Several other countries register same-sex couples and some even call them marriages. But the Dutch legislation goes a step further, eliminating all references to gender in the laws governing matrimony and adoption.

Helene Faasen, left, and Anne-Marie Thus, right, pose for a portrait in their Amsterdam home Thursday. Thus and Faasen are the first lesbian and one of four gay couples who will be the world's first to get officially married, under legislation recognizing same-sex marriages with full and equal rights.

Gays have enjoyed general acceptance for years in the Netherlands, but gay rights groups struggled for 15 years for laws wiping away the last barriers of discrimination. For many, the right to use the term "spouse" is most significant.

"I want to show the world I'm proud of my country," said Dolf Pasker, a 41-year-old social worker, who will marry his partner, 39-year-old Gert Kasteel on Sunday. The two have been together for six years.

"I will be able to say I'm married just like my mother and father," said Kasteel, a medical supplies purchaser, relaxing in their home in an affluent Amsterdam neighborhood.

Both couples said they expected many relatives to attend the ceremony. Thus said her 88-year-old grandmother will stay up to watch it broadcast live on television.

The collective midnight wedding was the idea of Gay Krant, a gay newspaper that had led the campaign for the new legislation.

Under the law, the Dutch constitution and dictionary have redefined marriage, dropping references to "man and woman."

Like heterosexuals, gay couples also may apply for court approval to adopt children after living together for three years. Legal ambiguities on inheritance, pension rights, taxes and alimony have vanished.

Thus gave birth to her son last year after artificial insemination from an anonymous donor. Faasen plans to adopt the child and have her name entered into municipal records as parent No. 2.

Although their marriage may be unusual, the two women live an ordinary life in an Amsterdam suburb. Faasen, 35, is a partner in a downtown legal office; Thus works part time at a nursing home. They share child-rearing responsibilities.

"Helene always made it clear she was a career woman, and I wanted children," Thus said, slicing a tomato at breakfast while her partner made business calls and sifted through a stack of case files.

Both houses of parliament passed the bill with an overwhelming majority, but the marriage and adoption bills were debated for years before a consensus was established. Only extreme religious parties opposed the final vote.

Foreigners expecting Las Vegas-style weddings will be disappointed. Only Dutch nationals or resident foreigners living with a Dutch partner will be eligible for same-sex marriages.

Gay couples also will be barred from adopting children overseas because of potential objections from countries that don't allow gays to marry.

Russian army prepares for spring draft as nation awaits military reform

MOSCOW (AP) — The Russian army says it backs plans to abolish the dreaded draft, but in the meantime is preparing to conscript nearly 200,000 young men this spring. The hard part will be persuading them to show up.

The spring draft kicks off Sunday, just days after President Vladimir Putin appointed a new defense minister who he said would push forward long-promised reforms in the bloated, demoralized military.

Serving as a conscript in the underfunded Russian army is a horrifying prospect for many teen-age boys and parents across the nation. They fear the rampant hazing, squalid conditions and meager food — and the war in breakaway Chechnya, where ambushes by rebel bands and mined roads inflict daily casualties on Russian troops.

The majority of eligible men over 18 receive exemptions from the mandatory service, which lasts at least two years. Many bribe their way out or get fake medical certificates.

On Thursday, new Defense Minister Sergei Ivanov said Russia should switch to an all-volunteer army, but that it should do so gradually.

"This is the great dream of all servicemen, when our army will become completely professional," Gen. Vladislav Putilin, chief of the General Staff, told a news conference Friday announcing the spring draft.

Meanwhile, conscription will continue as usual, with the military aiming to draft 189,995 men between April 1 and June 30, he said. Draftees can be sent to Chechnya after their first six months of service.

Officials have long promised to end compulsory military service and downsize the unwieldy army Russia inherited from the Soviet Union. Last year, Ivanov drafted a plan to cut 365,000 people from the military's rolls, though many analysts say those cuts are unlikely to affect soldiers.

Putilin said the military already is shrinking.

Only 12 percent of men aged 18 to 27 end up in the army, he said. In contrast, 24 percent served eight years ago.

Putilin attributed the decrease to the declining health of young Russians. About 30 percent of draft-age men are turned away for health reasons, he said.

In mass protests, six Palestinians are killed, dozens wounded

By Karin Laub
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Reviving the mass protests of the early stage of their six-month-old uprising, thousands of Palestinians battled Israeli troops with stones and guns in a "day of rage" Friday and drew heavy Israeli fire that killed six demonstrators and injured more than 130.

It was the deadliest day in six weeks.

In West Bank towns, youths taking cover behind garbage bins hurled rocks at soldiers, who fired live rounds from jeeps and fortified outposts. Palestinian gunmen shot at a Jewish enclave in divided Hebron, and Israeli tanks shelled Arab neighborhoods there. At a disputed Jerusalem shrine, Israeli undercover police wrestled stone-throwers to the ground, and the Western Wall, Judaism's holiest shrine, was briefly closed to worshippers.

Elsewhere, marchers burned Israeli flags and effigies of Prime Minister Ariel Sharon. Islamic militants, responsible for two deadly suicide bombings this week, said they would send more assailants into Israel. "Our message to Sharon is that we will not give up," said Hamas' leader, Sheik Ahmed Yassin.

Palestinian anger was fueled this week by Israeli rocket attacks on the West Bank and Gaza and warnings that Israeli troops might re-enter Palestinian-controlled areas. Many Palestinians also felt abandoned by the Arab world after an Arab League summit this week failed to deal extensively with their cause.

Friday's protests capped a tumultuous week of suicide bombings, shootings and rocket attacks. Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat said the Palestinian uprising would continue, and Sharon said Israel was preparing for a long-term confrontation.

Arafat canceled a Cabinet meeting scheduled for Friday evening in the town of Ramallah, saying 12 Cabinet ministers from Gaza had been prevented by Israel from reaching the West Bank.

In all, six Palestinians were killed and 80 wounded by Israeli fire Friday, Palestinian doctors said. Another 55 were hurt by rubber-coated steel bullets, according to hospital officials.

In the deadliest clash, in the West Bank town of Nablus, five Palestinians were killed, including three hit by assault rifle fire and two killed by large-caliber bullets that mutilated their faces, said Dr. Hassan al-Jouhary at Raffidiah Hospital. A 21-year-old died in a clash in Ramallah.

The Nablus confrontation began when about 1,000 Palestinians threw stones at troops south of the city. Throughout the afternoon, the crowd got smaller, and by 5:30 p.m. only a few stone-throwers were left, said Issam Najar, 18.

About 15 demonstrators then threw stones at four Israeli jeeps, Najar said. "At this moment, an Israeli tank opened fire from the east at us," he said. One demonstrator had part of his head shot off, said Najar, adding that he was shot in the arm as he tried to help evacuate the casualties.

The army denied that a tank-mounted machine gun fired at the Nablus demonstrators.

In Hebron, heavy gun battles erupted in the afternoon and lasted into the evening hours, with gray smoke rising from the hills. Palestinian gunmen fired from several different neighborhoods at Jewish enclaves in the downtown area, and Israel responded by shooting tank shells at the Palestinian positions. Tensions have been running high since a 10-month-old Israeli girl was killed by Palestinian fire earlier this week.

In the Gaza Strip, 30 gunmen from Arafat's Fatah group led a large march.

Mohammed Musallam, carrying a Kalashnikov assault rifle, said attacks against Israel would continue. "If Sharon thinks for a second to reoccupy the Palestinian areas, he should prepare black bags for the remains of his soldiers," Musallam said.

Israel's defense minister, Binyamin Ben-Eliezer, has said that Israel would send forces to "any place we feel is endangering us," though Israeli troops have not entered the Palestinian-controlled areas — 40 percent of the West Bank and two-thirds of Gaza — in the past six months of fighting. Under interim peace accords, the Palestinian areas are off-limits to Israeli security forces.

Friday was the deadliest day since Feb. 14, when nine people died — eight Israelis killed by a Palestinian driver who rammed a bus into a crowded bus stop and a Palestinian man shot dead by Israeli troops

In Israel's Arab communities, meanwhile, tens of thousands of people marched peacefully to mark "Land Day," a symbol of Israel's 1.2-million-strong Arab community's struggle for equality. Land Day is the annual commemoration of 1976 protests against land expropriation in which six Israeli Arabs were killed by police.

In the Israeli Arab town of Sakhnin, thousands of Arabs and some Jews joined Land Day commemorations. In a quiet corner of the town's cemetery, relatives laid wreaths on the graves of three Sakhnin residents killed in the 1976 protests. Nearby, others mourned two town residents shot dead by Israeli police in anti-government protests in the fall.

Jacks crush Buzzards in WPHL playoff opener, 7-1

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

ODESSA — If Game 1 of the Western Professional Hockey League playoffs is as hard as it gets, the Odessa Jackalopes are in for a long playoff ride.

The Jackalopes buried the El Paso Buzzards 7-1 at the Ector County Coliseum Friday night, falling just one goal short of the tying the franchise record.

It never was really a game, and for the most part, the 2,584 fans had only two things to consider before this one was quickly over on the scoreboard. 1. Would Mike Sanderson get his hat trick? 2. Would goalie Grant Sjerven record another shutout?

Sanderson did get his hat trick, even though it came late at 17:08 into the third period. However, Sjerven, who had a WPHL and Odessa record eight shutouts in the regular season, gave up an even-handed goal to Jason Tessier 7:41 into the third. If you count things going wrong, at least, for the Jacks, that was about it.

The Jacks, who are making their third consecutive appearance in the WPHL playoffs, actually won this first game of a best-of-seven matchup, in the first period on power play goals by Mike Lankshear and Sanderson. They would need no more.

"This really felt great because we came out like we wanted to," Sanderson said. "We lost our last regular season game against El Paso, so we wanted to get on top early. That first goal (by Lankshear) was the big one. Then we just kept finding the net."

And they found the net in rapid fashion in the second period, scoring three goals in the space of two minutes and seven seconds as John Bossio, Sanderson and Tim Hill chased El Paso goalie Jeff Levy. The Jacks then held a 5-0 lead, and as quick as those three goals had come, the crowd was fully expecting a record scoring night.

The Jacks did get two more goals in the third period. Konrad McKay became the fifth Jackalope to score and

Powerful Colleyville Heritage puts end to best season ever for MHS girls, 5-0

BEDFORD — The girls on the Midland High soccer team knew their opponent in Friday's regional semifinal would be tough. Colleyville Heritage was undefeated and ranked No. 1 in the nation by at least two services.

So there were no tears evident after Heritage's 5-0 win ended the Lady Bulldogs' longest-ever playoff run.

"We played awesome the entire year," said Emily Schigut, Midland High's senior goalkeeper.

"No regrets."

Schigut faced a lot of shots from the high-octane Lady Panthers, who average 5.32 goals per game. CHHS outshot MHS 25-5 in the game. The CHHS duo of Jessi Moore and Amy Van Zandt — two high scoring seniors who have signed to play soccer at Mississippi State — was too much. Moore scored two goals and had two assists, and Van Zandt has a goal and an assist as CHHS improved to 25-0-1.

The game could have been less close. Schigut saved nine shots, and field players Melissa Tinslar and Catherine Wade also made saves. As MHS coach Scott Hodkinson remarked after the game, it's difficult to think of a defense playing well in a 5-0 loss, but the Lady Bulldogs did play well.

Colleyville Heritage is just that good.

"We got a lesson taught to us," said Hodkinson, whose first Region I-5A Tournament qualifier ended the season at 18-7. "I hope for the younger kids that they'll take some of this (lesson) home. The whole experience of playing the No. 1 team is great for us. But I would feel better if we'd scored one goal."

Midland High came close when Amanda Lozano hit the post. With more than 15 minutes left, Lozano got a rebound from a saved shot and just missed putting MHS on the board.

MHS, Lee softball open second half

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland Lee and Midland High are at opposite ends of the District 4-5A softball standings, but today's noon meeting at the Gill Sports Complex carries a lot of meaning for both teams.

For Lee, the Lady Rebels own a 5-0-1 record after the first half of 4-5A play and are in a flat-footed tie with defending champion Abilene High for first place. With that fact in mind, it's no secret how important a fast start in the second half will be since Lee travels to Abilene High next Saturday in a game that could produce a district championship for one of those two teams.

Unlike Lee, the Lady Bulldogs of MHS own a 1-5 record in 4-5A after the first half. On the surface, that looks like a woeful position to be in at this time of the season, but looks can be deceiving.

MHS lost four of those five first half decisions by one run. Its worse loss was 4-1 to Abilene High. Consider, even with a 1-5 record, MHS is only two games behind Odessa Permian, Abilene Cooper and San Angelo Central, all teams that MHS lost to by one run.

"We're not kidding ourselves. We know where we stand," MHS coach Shawnda Vines said. "We've talked about it as a team and we want to finish strong and get into the playoffs."

Despite the difference in the 4-5A records, this game could be another nail-biter. After all, Lee nipped MHS by a 3-2 margin to begin 4-5A play and it took nine innings to decide that one.

Lee's Crista Hargrove stole home with two outs in the bottom of the ninth to win that game. Lee coach Wes Overton expects more of the same today.

"You really can throw out all the records when these two teams meet," Overton said. "They played us tough the first time and I expect the same kind of game this time around. We know we are in for a battle."

Lee is 23-1-1 on the season and has gone 24 consecutive games without losing. Also, Lee's bats and pitching arms are heating up. Lee has won run rule victories of 10-0 in their last two games, bashing out 27 hits over that

Earnhardt Jr. grabs pole at Harrah's 500

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

FORT WORTH — With reminders of his late father seemingly everywhere at Texas Motor Speedway, Dale Earnhardt Jr. got off to a great start Friday in defense of his first Winston Cup victory.

The 26-year-old Little E earned the third pole of his Winston Cup career and first of the season, turning a lap of 190.676 mph on the 1 1/2-mile oval to take the top qualifying spot for Sunday's Harrah's 500.

"It's pretty cool that Junior got this," said Dale Jarrett, the current points leader and third in qualifying. "He and his team needed a boost."

Earnhardt, whose father died in a crash in the season-opening Daytona 500, won twice in the first half of the 2000 season and appeared on the way to a sensational rookie year. Then things turned sour.

In the second half of the season, he struggled simply to finish races and wound up losing Rookie of the Year honors to Matt Kenseth.

Earnhardt admitted there was a burnout factor, bickering between him and his crew chief and confusion within the crew on his No. 8 Dale Earnhardt Inc. Chevrolet. He vowed that things would change this year.

He certainly got off on the right foot, starting sixth and finishing second to new teammate Michael Waltrip at Daytona. But the shock of the elder Earnhardt's death has made everything since a long dark tunnel, with no finish better than 15th and no start better than ninth.

"I feel like I've grown up quite a bit," Earnhardt Jr. said. "I always felt like I had this little bit of brat in me somewhere. That's all gone."

But the youthful exuberance remains. The youngster, wearing a baseball hat backward and a hockey

Early leads don't mean anything to ACC foes

By Jim O'Connell
AP Basketball Writer

MINNEAPOLIS — Shane Battier switched smoothly from player of the year to scout and seer.

Just hours after being presented the Adolph Rupp Trophy as The Associated Press college basketball player of the year, Battier previewed Saturday's national semifinal between top-ranked Duke and Maryland.

His assessment of the fourth meeting of the season between the Terrapins and Blue Devils? The team that falls behind early might have the best chance to win.

"One of the aspects of the game that people really haven't talked about is that the team that won each game had been down by double figures at some point," Battier said.

"In the first game we were down by double figures, in the second game they were down double figures, in the third we started off the game down 11-0 and came back to win. So the winner of this game will be the more resilient team."

So, for the first time in Final Four history, a team might not be trying to race out to a big lead. No matter what happens, there should be a lot of points on the scoreboard.

"Both teams are difficult to defend and I'd be shocked if it isn't a high-scoring game," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said.

Duke (33-4) is second in the nation in scoring at 90.8 points a game and Maryland (25-10) isn't too far down the list at 85.2.

The big difference is how they score. Duke set NCAA records for 3-pointers made and attempted with an average of 10.6-for-27.1 from beyond the arc. The Terrapins take almost two games to reach those numbers.

The three previous meetings all kept the scoreboard operator busy. Duke won the first game 98-96 in overtime, overcoming a 10-point deficit in the final 54 seconds of regulation. Maryland also won on the

Arizona, Michigan State have proven big points

By Eddie Pells
AP Sports Writer

MINNEAPOLIS — Charlie Bell remembers the raised eyebrows, the shoulder shrugs and those looks of dismay when he told friends where he was going to play basketball.

"A lot of people wondered why," he said. Michigan State, after all, wasn't Michigan.

When Eugene Edgerson announced where he was going to school, friends treated him the same way.

"Arizona was soft," Edgerson said, recalling the label the Wildcats couldn't shed in the mid-90s.

National championships and trips to the Final Four have shattered those stereotypes. With the teams playing Saturday in the first national semifinal, it seems like decades, not mere years, since the decision to play basketball at Michigan State or Arizona was such a huge leap of faith.

"I saw the coach was a hard worker," Bell said. "I knew we had a chance to do some great things."

Four Big Ten titles, three Final Four trips and one national title later, Bell looks like a fortune teller. Still, the prospect of four years at Michigan State didn't seem like such a great deal in 1997, after the team went 9-9 in the Big Ten for the second straight year.

An unknown former assistant, Tom Izzo, was still trying to establish himself in the shadow of Jud Heathcoate, whose program remained solid but still second-tier in the 15 seasons after Magic Johnson and the national title.

Across the state, the Fab Five and the era of Michigan dominance was in full swing. It was still largely a state where young kids grew up dreaming of playing for titles in Wolverine maize and blue, not heading to the lesser-known outpost of East Lansing, 65 miles to the north.

"My first couple years, they were rough both on the court and in the recruiting," Izzo said. "It was difficult to get started. I was a new coach,

JACKS: Sanderson leads with hat trick

(From 1B)

Sanderson ended it with a goal against relief goalie Matt Wealick.

"It (the hat trick) feels good, but it feels great just to win a playoff game," Sanderson said. "This is the first (hat trick) for me this year. I think having the home ice really means a lot. And we were really pumped up for this game because we haven't played a game in about a week."

You can only guess what happened after the Jacks rolled off those three lightning strike goals in the second period. Four fights broke out.

After all this is hockey, playoffs or not.

"Things like that always happen when you are beating another team by five or six goals," Sanderson said.

A couple to keep your eyes on when the series continues is El Paso's Mike Rees and Odessa's Jason Disher. They got into two pretty good altercations which could turn into a personal war in this series.

Even though the Jacks skated to an easy win, it wasn't like El Paso didn't get in some quality shots on goal. Sjerven turned in 30 saves, many of which were one-on-one rockets. Sjerven was certainly up to the challenge.

"We left him (Sjerven) in there, even with the big lead," Sanderson said. "Goalies are kind of strange anyway and you don't want to take one out when he's having a good game. You don't want to mess with that. And he had a very good game."

Sjerven did give up that one goal, he probably lost interest in this one long before Tessier got one past him in the third period. The Jacks were leading 6-0 at the time and Sjerven was probably trying to decide where to eat after the game.

El Paso had a 5-5 record against the Jacks in regular season play, but were lucky to get into the playoffs. New Mexico's Scorpions had to forfeit 34 points for playing an ineligible player, moving El Paso in. The Buzzards were 29-33-8 on the season while the Jacks, the Western Division champions (thanks to the demise of New Mexico) had a franchise record 40 wins.

Game 2 will be played at 7 p.m. today, again at the Jack Shack and then Game 3 will move to El Paso on Sunday for a 6 p.m. game. Game 4 will be back at the Jack Shack on Friday, April 6, at 7 p.m. The way this one went, that could be the last game of this series.

The Buzzards, however, are no strangers to the playoffs. They are in the post-season for a league record fifth consecutive time. El Paso won the first two President's Cup titles.

POLE: Earnhardt Jr. takes leading spot

(From 1B)

sweater, both given to him earlier this week during a day spent with players from the expansion Minnesota Wild of the NHL, was obviously enjoying his latest success.

"Normally, winning the pole wouldn't make you feel this good," said Earnhardt, who has been avoiding interviews and public appearances in recent weeks.

"But we haven't got performance the last few weeks, so this is going to help us Sunday and maybe even next week," Little E added.

A huge Friday crowd, estimated at more than 70,000, cheered every move by the third-generation driver, even before he won his first pole since last August in Michigan. With his father's famed No. 3 plastered on signs and billboards both inside and outside the track, and many of the fans wearing Earnhardt shirts, jackets and hats, it was hard to look anywhere without thinking of the beloved seven-time champion.

His lap was quick enough to relegate Bobby Labonte's Pontiac to the outside spot on the front row of the 43-car field with a speed of 190.463. They were followed by Jarrett's Ford at 190.436 and the Chevys of Bobby Hamilton and Steve Park — the third DEI entry — at 190.208 and 189.813, respectively. The Earnhardt team had all three drivers in the top 10, with Waltrip seventh at 189.235.

Labonte, the defending Winston Cup champion, has gotten off to a poor start this season, entering the seventh race of the season 19th in the standings — trailing Jarrett by 249 points. Heading into the Texas event, the younger brother of 1999 race winner Terry Labonte, has only one top-10 finish this season after 24 in 34 starts a year ago.

MHS: Colleyville dominates in playoffs

(From 1B)

But that was nearly all of the offense the Lady Bulldogs could muster, as the Lady Panthers kept them from getting anywhere near the goal throughout most of the game. Two of Midland High's shots came on free kicks from 30 yards out by Claire Brunner, but they weren't particularly difficult saves for CHHS keeper Stephanie Smith. Brunner took another shot from far out which went over the goal, and the sequence that led to Lozano's shot started with another free kick.

The Lady Bulldogs just couldn't work the ball in close against a CHHS defense that had allowed only nine goals all year.

"They threw everything at us," Hodkinson said. "They had speed all over the field. Each one had excellent touch on the ball. They looked more comfortable on the (artificial) turf. I'm not sure of their experience on turf, but they were able to control the ball and keep it on the ground."

Pennington Field, site of the I-5A Tournament, has artificial turf. CHHS has played a handful of games on turf this season, while MHS' experience was limited to two practices this week.

However, CHHS appeared capable of beating MHS or just about any team on any surface.

"They were awesome in the air, and they were quick to the ball," said Hodkinson, continuing to praise the Lady Panthers. "They played really well. I can see why they're ranked No. 1 in the country."

MHS kept the Lady Panthers from scoring for nearly 12 minutes, but Kim Matthews put CHHS on the board by finding the ball in a scrum in front of the net after a corner kick. Only 15 minutes later, though, CHHS led 4-0 as the Lady Panthers put on a clinic and got goals by Van Zandt, Moore and Marisa Schieda.

Only ten minutes into the second half, a perfect pass from Van Zandt to Moore pushed the CHHS lead to 5-0. After that goal, Van Zandt and Moore, who have scored 80 goals between them this season, came out of the game and didn't return.

Even though their top scorers were off the field, the other Lady Panthers never quit trying to score. But the Lady Bulldogs never quit playing, either, despite the deficit.

"We went in with a positive attitude," Tinslar said. "We were nervous at first. That's how they got their first few goals. But we stuck to it. We weren't going to let down."

After the game, Hodkinson didn't look like a coach who had been beaten by five goals.

"I've got to look at the big picture," he said. "This was a big year for us. I thanked the seniors for the leadership they gave us this year. I'm real proud of the team, coming to regionals and representing the district. It's tough to lose, and it's especially tough to lose 5-0, but I'm still proud of the girls this year."

"We got our respect," Schigut said of the Lady Bulldogs' season. "That's all we wanted."

OTHER GAMES: Mansfield will play CHHS in today's final, at 1 p.m., after defeating Abilene High, 3-0, in Friday's first semifinal. Amanda Hawkins scored in the 15th minute for Mansfield (20-2), then Karissa Hill scored in the 31st minute. Ginny Rosario-Tull added a goal with 12 minutes left in the game. Mansfield outshot AHS, 20-9. Keeper Jennifer Zabloudil made 12 saves for AHS, which ends its season at 18-8... In the first boys' semifinals, San Angelo Central defeated Coppell 1-0 in overtime on a goal by Josh Mariano. Coppell finished 20-4. Central (19-4) will meet Flower Mound Marcus today at 3 p.m. Marcus (19-1-1) beat El Paso Bel Air 1-0 in another overtime game, which was decided by an own-goal when a Bel Air defender put the ball in his own net. Bel Air ended its season at 23-3...

two-game span.

What's even more impressive, however, is that Lee also has back-to-back no-hitters from Brandie Row and Mandy Hacker. And they weren't just no-hitters. Row faced the minimum of 15 batters in her 10-0 win over Odessa High in five innings and Hacker faced just one over the minimum in a 10-0 six-inning win over Central.

"We're getting good pitching and good hitting right now," Overton said. "I just hope we keep it up. We still have a long way to go."

MHS is coming off another one-run decision, losing 2-1 to Class 3A Greenwood on Thursday in a non-conference game. No team in the district has suffered tougher losses than the Lady Bulldogs. MHS has had good pitching from sophomore Rachel Cherry, but run production has been a problem for the youthful Lady Bulldogs.

MHS played the entire first half without pitching ace Collin Lange and senior catcher Stephanie Chamness.

Still, it would only take a couple of runs more per game to throw the MHS girls into the state playoff hunt. A win over Midland Lee today would help that cause since you don't figure many of those teams ahead of you in third place are going to produce many victories over either Abilene High or Lee.

The major problem today for MHS, however, is finding a way to keep Lady Rebels off the base paths. Just about everyone in the Lee lineup is hot with the bat. In one recent game, the bottom three in Lee's lineup was a combined 7-for-9.

MHS also must find a way to get runners on base against Row, who is scheduled to go for Lee today. MHS has been scoring a run here and there, but has been relying too much on the bats of Amanda Martin and Crystal Martinez.

Note: Today's game was moved from 2 p.m. to noon since Midland High has other school activities (prom) to deal with today. MHS requested an earlier playing time and Lee agreed to the move.

Mid. Christian routs Denton

The Midland Christian baseball team picked up its first TAPPS District 1-4A win of the season Friday, routing Denton Liberty Christian 9-1 at Christensen Stadium.

Kacy Groves pitched a complete game two-hitter for the Mustangs (10-3 overall, 1-1 in district), striking out 11 and giving up only an unearned run. Groves also excelled at the plate, collecting three hits, including a double and a triple.

Coy Riley was 2-for-2 with a triple and drove in four runs, Chase Feeler had two hits including a double, Brandon Tobias doubled and Drew Scott stole two bases for the Mustangs.

Midland Christian will host Fort Worth Christian in another district game today at 1 p.m. at Christensen.

Seminole rips Greenwood

GREENWOOD —Seminole's Aaron Peel allowed just one hit as his Indians downed Greenwood, 11-1, on Friday.

Shane Moody got the only hit for the Rangers, who dropped to 9-7 overall and 1-2 in District 3-3A. The Indians had 14 hits led by Peel, who had a home run, a triple and a double.

Greenwood next plays at Lamesa on Tuesday.

Rangerettes pound C. City

COLORADO CITY — The Greenwood Rangerettes pounded Colorado City Friday, 16-6, in non-district softball action.

The Rangerettes (20-6) had 15 hits in the run-ruled five-inning contest. Stephanie Wardlaw had four hits, including a double; Ashley Awalt had three hits; Betsy Langdon had two hits; Alexis Vigil had two hits; and Marlene Spain had two hits.

Erin Smith got the win on the mound for Greenwood. Smith didn't even start the game but was brought in to pitch after Greenwood had given up six runs in the first inning.

The Rangerettes next host Lubbock Cooper today at 1 p.m.

Unknown leads at BellSouth

Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

DULUTH, Ga. — Marco Dawson found himself in an unfamiliar position Friday — leading a golf tournament.

For John Daly, it's becoming a little more routine to be in contention.

Dawson, who underwent back surgery only 10 months ago, shot a 5-under-par 67 in the opening round of the BellSouth Classic, giving him a one-shot lead in the final tournament before the Masters. Five players were tied for second, with the combustible Daly part of another group at 69.

"I just feel the hard work's going to pay off sooner or later," said Daly, who bogeyed two of the final three holes to drop out of the lead. "I just need to make a few more putts. It would be great to win again, it really would."

Daly won the BellSouth Classic in 1994, one of four victories in his star-crossed career. Dawson's has never won on the PGA Tour and he's playing this year with a special medical exemption after undergoing surgery last May to repair a ruptured disc.

"I haven't been in this position too many times," the 37-year-old Dawson said. "Usually, I'm four or five shots back, or more."

He must earn $346,785 in 20 tournaments to remain exempt. Dawson has never earned more than $261,661 in a year and was forced to play the Buy.com Tour in 1999 after losing his card.

A BellSouth victory would be worth $594,000.

"I'm not going to worry about the money," Dawson said. "I'm just going to try and play well."

Playing in one of the first groups on a waterlogged course, he sank a couple of long putts but solid irons left him four birdies of less than 10 feet, countered only by a bogey at 9 when he plopped into a creek.

Daly shortened his driver by 1 1/2 inches, cutting off some of his trademark distance but giving him better control. He was able to keep the ball in the fairway while still reaching all but one of the par 5s in two shots.

Opening on the back nine, Daly made a 40-footer for birdie at 16 and grabbed a share of the lead with a tap-in birdie at the par-5 sixth hole. He quickly fell back, three-putting at No. 7 and flubbing a chip at No. 8 before rallying for par on his final hole while an ambulance wailed in the distance.

Daly, whose enormous talent has been countered by alcoholism, gambling problems and a short temper, has shown more consistency this year. He has made the cut in six of nine events and finished as high as ninth.

"I've got to get myself in that position more in order to feel the heat and get used to it again," he said.

Daly won't be playing at the Masters for just the second time since his initial appearance in 1992 (he was in alcohol rehab during the '97 tournament). His problems notwithstanding, he is still perturbed that the winner of two majors can be left at home.

"I haven't played good enough to really be in the tournament," said Daly, who has won the PGA Championship and British Open. "But it just kind of makes me feel the two majors I did win don't mean anything to committees and stuff anymore."

He even spent the previous night scanning the Masters qualifications on the Web, coming to the mistaken conclusion that Augusta National could have given him an invitation.

The BellSouth featured 28 players who did qualify for next week's Masters, about a two-hour drive from the TPC at Sugarloaf. Nick Price also was scheduled to play, but he withdrew after Thursday's round was postponed by rain.

The tournament started anew on Friday, when temperatures warmed into the 60s and the sun broke through the clouds.

The early players encountered an extremely wet course that sliced distance off their shots. By afternoon, the course had dried somewhat, allowing the late starters to get a longer roll but firming up the quick, sloping greens.

The group at 68 included 1997 BellSouth winner Scott McCarron, along with Steve Flesch, Chris DiMarco, Brandt Jobe and Kaname Yokoo. Defending champion Phil Mickelson opened with a 70, as did Davis Love III.

Rain washes out Legends of Golf

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. — Heavy rain washed out play Friday in the Liberty Mutual Legends of Golf team tournament.

Because all of the teams in the Legends and Legendary divisions did not complete nine holes, the entire round was canceled and the event was reduced to 36 holes.

About 1 1/2 inches of rain fell on the course in 45 minutes, forcing the suspension of play at 1:22 p.m. Play was called off for the day shortly before 4:30 p.m.

Bob Lunn and Calvin Peete had the lead 4 under through nine holes on The King & The Bear Course at the World Golf Village. Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer, the designers of The King & The Bear Course, were 1 under through five holes.

In the Demaret division for players 70 and over, Don January and Gene Littler were 3 under through 14 holes. Because all teams in the Demaret completed nine holes, that division will keep its scores and resume today.

Midland Lee vs. Odessa High

When: 2 p.m.
Where: Ernie Johnson Field.
Records: Lee is 11-8 overall and 0-4 in District 4-5A. Odessa High is 8-9 and 1-2.
4-5A Significance: Both teams need a win if they are to entertain any realistic hopes of staying in the playoff picture. A win by Lee and a loss by San Angelo Central to Abilene High would lift the Rebels out of sole possession of last place in the district. A win by Odessa High could put the Bronchos within a half game of third place.
Notes: Lee has already lost as many district games this year as it did all of last season. The latest 4-5A defeat of the Rebels was a 7-1 loss to Abilene Cooper Wednesday in a game which was delayed a day due to weather. Lee's only run came on a home run by Cedric Benson, the leadoff hitter who has hit a pair of homers in district and has driven in eight runs in four games, both of which lead Lee in district... Patrick Smart made his first start on the mound in district and went all six innings and gave up 11 hits, but he wasn't helped much by Lee's defense, which committed four errors. The Rebels have committed a staggering 18 errors in district...Odessa High has neither won nor lost this week. The Bronchos played Abilene High Monday in a game posponed two days due to weather, and the two teams went 10 innings before the game was called due to darkness tied at 2-2.
Next: Lee will go on the road to close out the first half of its district schedule against Central at 4:30 p.m.

Where: Odessa Permian.
Records: Midland High is 17-4 overall and 4-1 in district. Permian is 13-2 overall and 4-0 in district.
4-5A Significance: The most important district game of the season thus far, since the winner will have sole possession of the 4-5A lead. Even with a loss the Bulldogs will still have sole possession of second place, as will Permian.
Notes: After waiting two days due to wet grounds, the Bulldogs finally took the field at home against Abilene High Thursday and got back on the winning track with a 6-2 victory at Zachary Field. Matt Bose was the winning pitcher, throwing a complete game in addition to driving in three runs. Bose got the call instead of Casey Zachery, since the sophomore righthander is being saved for today's key matchup. "We're only one pitcher shy from having everybody on the staff available for the game," said MHS coach Barry Russell... While Midland High has made the playoffs three straight seasons and looks in good position to do it for a fourth, Permian could use a win today over a quality team to prove its outstanding start isn't a fluke. The Panthers have gotten solid pitching most of the way, as was the case in Thursday's 3-0 blanking of San Angelo Central, which beat Midland High 3-1 a week ago.
Next: Today's game will close the first half of the district schedule for MHS, which has a bye Tuesday before opening the second half of district a week from today at home against crosstown rival Midland Lee at 2 p.m.

MC baseball sweeps FPC in doubleheader

Staff Report

BORGER — The Midland College baseball team got back into the win column in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference with a Friday sweep of Frank Phillips College, 7-6 and 8-2.

"To go on the road and get a sweep is certainly what we needed," said MC coach Steve Ramharter. "This was especially good because we've had to battle through the injuries and have had to battle through some of the confidence problems that the guys are having."

In the first game, the Chaparrals came back and scored six runs in the sixth inning to take the lead.

"We weren't hitting the ball at all until that inning," Ramharter said. "We just did what we wanted to do in that inning. Until that inning, we only had one hit going."

Abel Gonzalez and Jim Henderson both had two hits for the Chaps. Matt Overman (5-4) picked up the win.

In Game 2, Joseph Llanas improved to 3-0 on the year with 8 1/3 innings of solid pitching.

The Chaps, who ...proved to 20-15 overall and 4-10 in the WJCAC, also picked up 10 hits, which included a solo home run by Jim Henderson and a two-run blast by Josh Haney. Haney also added two doubles for the Chaps.

"I'm happy with the win but I'm more happy with having certain guys step up and having big performances," Ramharter said. "A guy like Llanas pitched 8 1/3 innings and doesn't do anything to hurt himself. It was a big pick-me-up for us.

"We also had Jim Henderson playing out of position because we have nine injured players. He's usually a first baseman and we had him in the outfield. He threw a runner out at home plate and got some big at-bats for us. You just got to love it as a coach to have a player go above and beyond for us."

Frank Phillips dropped to 17-17 and 5-7.

The two teams have another doubleheader scheduled for noon today.

Notre Dame rallies to defeat Connecticut

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — When all looked hopeless, Notre Dame found a way to extend its season for one last game.

Down 16 points in the first half, its point guard in foul trouble and All-American center Ruth Riley neutralized, Notre Dame stormed back to beat Big East rival Connecticut 90-75 Friday night to earn a berth in the women's national championship game. It was the largest comeback in a game at the women's Final Four.

The Irish got 21 points from St. Louis native Niele Ivey in a balanced offense and denied the defending champions a return to the title game. Instead, it will be an all-Indiana final with Notre Dame meeting Purdue on Sunday night.

"She's so tough," Notre Dame coach Muffet McGraw said. "She's so happy about playing in St. Louis one more round, and so am I."

Alicia Ratay added 20 points for Notre Dame and Riley, limited to two shots and two points in the first half, finished with 18. Erika Haney added 15 points and 10 rebounds.

"The second half is definitely what we wanted to do," McGraw said.

It certainly looked more like the team McGraw had seen all season. But it was tense for a while.

Notre Dame (33-2) never led until Ratay hit a 3-pointer with UConn's Diana Taurasi in her face, making it 61-59 with 12:37 left. Connecticut (32-3) led twice after that, the last time at 65-63 on Tamika Williams' reverse layup with 10:30 remaining.

Then the Huskies went cold and Notre Dame kicked it in.

Ratay hit a jumper, Ivey sank two free throws and Ratay — the nation's most accurate 3-point shooter at 54 percent — hit another from behind the arc. That made it 70-65.

Ivey's steal set up two free throws by Jeneka Joyce, Riley scored on a putback and then sank a free throw. When Haney made two free throws, Notre Dame had scored 14 straight points, the lead was 77-65 and the Irish were on their way to the title game.

Sue Bird led Connecticut with 18 points, while Kelly Schumacher scored 12 and grabbed 17 rebounds — one short of the record for a national semifinal. The Huskies shot only 33.8 percent and were 6-for-30 from 3-point range.

Purdue 81, SW Missouri St 64

ST. LOUIS — Purdue shut down Jackie Stiles and earned a shot at its second NCAA women's championship in three seasons.

All-American Katie Douglas had 25 points and the Boilermakers dominated inside and out in a victory over Southwest Missouri State. Purdue has two starters back from the championship team, Douglas and Camille Cooper, who had 16 points and 10 rebounds.

Purdue (31-6) overwhelmed the Lady Bears (29-6) inside with a 47-29 rebounding advantage, scoring on numerous second-chance shots. The Boilermakers had 21 offensive rebounds.

Freshman Shalicia Hurns had 12 rebounds, Douglas seven and Shereka Wright six. Erika Rante led SMS with five rebounds.

Outside, the Boilermakers put the clamps on Stiles, the NCAA's career scoring leader.

Central keeps small lead over Lee in 4-5A

Staff Report

SAN ANGELO — San Angelo Central's Zach Drennan moved into a first place tie with Midland Lee's Omar Sanchez for the District 4-5A medalist lead on Friday.

Drennan shot a 72 at San Angelo Country Club to tie Sanchez at 146 during the second round of the District 4-5A Boys Golf Tour. Sanchez shot a 74 after opening the tournament with a 72 at The Club at Mission Dorado last week.

Drennan helped the Bobcats take advantage of playing on their home course with a second round 295. Central has a 600 total after two rounds, and is six shots ahead of Lee, which shot a 306 Friday for a 606 total. Midland High and Odessa Permian are tied for third with a 614 total.

Midland High was paced by Daniel Campbell and Jason Lindgren, who are respectively in third and fourth place in the medalist standings. Campbell shot a 74 for a 147 total, while Lindgren shot a 72 Friday for a 148 total.

Central's Ryan Albert had the best round of the day with a 71. Albert is in fifth place in the medalist standings with a 150 total.

The District 4-5A Golf Tour continues next Thursday in Abilene.

Here are the second round results of the District 4-5A Boys Golf Tour played at San Angelo Country Club on Friday.

Battier, Doherty named top player, coach

By Hal Bock
AP Sports Writer

MINNEAPOLIS — The Atlantic Coast Conference scored a rare sweep Friday when Duke All-American Shane Battier and North Carolina coach Matt Doherty were presented with Player of the Year and Coach of the Year awards by The Associated Press.

It marked the first time since 1979 that a single conference won both awards. That year they were won by coach Bill Hodges and senior forward Larry Bird of Indiana State.

Battier, a senior forward, averaged 19.9 points and 7.2 rebounds this season, leading the top-ranked Blue Devils to the NCAA Final Four. He is the reigning two-time national defensive player of the year and is the first player in ACC history to finish with at least 1,500 points, 500 rebounds, 200 blocks, 200 assists and 200 steals.

"This is a long way from six points and seven rebounds in my freshman year," he said. "I was fortunate to play with a program and a coach that allowed me to be myself."

Johnny Dawkins, Duke's associate head coach, called Battier a special player.

"Shane is a gifted young man who is an excellent role model," Dawkins said. "The way he lives his life, the people he touches, somewhat privately, exhibit who Shane Battier really is."

Battier, the fourth Duke player to win the award named for former Kentucky coach Adolph Rupp and started in 1961, received 65 votes in the national media balloting. He was followed by guards Jamaal Tinsley of Iowa State with 14, and Joseph Forte of North Carolina and Jason Williams of Duke, 10 each.

Battier is the fourth player from the ACC to win the award in the past five years and the fifth in the past seven. Last year's winner was Kenyon Martin of Cincinnati.

The other winners from Duke were Art Heyman in 1963, Christian Laettner in 1992 and Elton Brand in 1999.

Doherty, in his first season at his alma mater after one year at Notre Dame, was the first North Carolina coach to win the award. He led the Tar Heels to a 26-7 record and a share of the ACC regular-season title. They lost to Duke in the conference tournament championship game.

"I can list five, probably 10 coaches, off the top of my head who deserve it more," Doherty said of the award. "A coach is only as good as his players. We had fun this year. I wish we were still playing and I could be here with my team now."

North Carolina started its ACC season with 11 straight victories, part of an 18-game winning streak.

Doherty, who played with Michael Jordan, James Worthy and Sam Perkins on North Carolina's national championship team in 1982, received 24 votes in the national media balloting. He was followed by Larry Eustachy of Iowa State (22), Al Skinner of Boston College (21) and Bill Self of Illinois (20).

The last coach to win the award after his first season at a school was Kelvin Sampson of Oklahoma in 1995. The only other coach from the ACC to win the award, which was first presented in 1967, was Norm Sloan of North Carolina State in 1974.

(From 1C)

road, 91-80, to even the regular-season series.

The game most people thought would break the tie for the year was Duke's 84-82 victory in the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament semifinals on a tip-in by Nate James with 1.2 seconds to play.

"I think our players felt this year that we were a good enough team to play against Duke," Maryland coach Gary Williams said. "They shoot the ball a lot more from the 3-point line. We go inside more. We both get up and down the court. We don't hesitate if we're open. Both teams shoot it quickly. I think that provides for some great games when we play each other."

This will be the second year in a row two teams from the same conference meet in the semifinals. Michigan State beat Wisconsin 53-41 in an all-Big Ten matchup. That could be the halftime score of Duke-Maryland IV.

Duke's Jason Williams, like Battier an All-American this season, is averaging 28.8 points in the NCAA tournament. Battier has had at least 20 points and 10 rebounds in all four tournament games.

Defending Williams will be the job of Maryland's Steve Blake, considered one of the most underrated point guards in the country.

Blake fouled out late in the first game before Williams scored eight points in 14 seconds to lead the comeback. Williams had 13 and 19 in the other games.

"I think I've done a good job. I think it's great team defense," said Blake, who like Williams is a sophomore and at 6-foot-3 an inch taller. "What I try to do is stay in front of him. Once he does go up to take a shot, I get a hand up, make him see that I'm there, no open looks."

Williams called Blake a great team leader.

"His wingspan is long, I know that from always trying to shoot over him," he said. "He always has a hand in my face.

"I think our matchups with them are pretty scary to think about. You have Chris Duhon, Steven Blake, you have myself, Juan Dixon, (Lonny) Baxter, Carlos Boozer, the matchups just keep going on and on."

The one that has gotten much of the attention is Baxter-Boozer.

The 6-8, 260-pound Baxter leads the team in the tournament with averages of 17.8 points and 10.0 rebounds. Those numbers are even more impressive considering he had just two points and six rebounds in the opening-round win over George Mason.

Boozer, an inch taller and 10 pounds heavier, broke a bone in his foot in the second Maryland game and returned last weekend, playing a total of 44 minutes in the wins over UCLA and Southern California.

"They have Boozer back," Gary Williams said. "If they go through a period where the 3s aren't going in, they can definitely go back inside now, which they might not have been able to do before."

Pudge returns to old Puerto Rican haunts

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

VEGA BAJA, Puerto Rico — Ivan Rodriguez stepped out of the white limousine parked in right field and walked toward the chunky dirt infield.

More than 100 friends, family and fans were waiting to greet him. As they approached, the Texas Rangers' catcher turned to general manager Doug Melvin and smiled.

"This is where I'm from," Rodriguez said. "Right here."

Rodriguez returned to his roots Friday, touring the park where he fell in love with baseball after visiting his old elementary school and before breaking ground on a new baseball academy he's helping build.

Rodriguez also joined fellow Puerto Rican Carlos Delgado for a brief clinic for kids at Hiram Bithorn Stadium, the site of the major league season opener on Sunday between Rodriguez's Rangers and Delgado's Toronto Blue Jays. The teams also will play an exhibition game Saturday.

The city of San Juan has spent about $600,000 upgrading the stadium to major league standards for this weekend. The playing field was restructured, outfield walls were padded and clubhouses were completely made over. Even as the players spoke, workers were tending to the bullpen mounds.

Back in Vega Baja, the town where Rodriguez grew up, the field known as Parcelas Amadeo lacks amenities. The most recent upgrade was probably the fresh coats of yellow paint and green trim around the concrete bleachers and dugouts.

The infield is a mess. The outfield is practically endless. It's at least 500 feet to the left-field fence and a good whack to the Fenway-high fence in right. There's a hill and a rec center way out in center field.

Rodriguez said the community has changed little since his youth.

"It looked the way it is now," he said. "It's always been like that."

Another thing that hasn't changed is the Little League coach. Julio Pabon has been doing it for so long that the field was dedicated in his honor in 1984.

Now 81, the fungo-bat-thin Pabon wore his Vega Baja uniform to greet his star pupil. Rodriguez smiled again when he saw the old man and pointed him out to Melvin.

Pabon coached Rodriguez at Parcelas Amadeo from around age 5 to 13. Juan Gonzalez, who is from a poorer part of Vega Baja, was in the same leagues while Bernie Williams was growing up in nearby Vega Alta.

Rodriguez played all positions, including pitcher. He began concentrating on catching when he was about 7. Pabon and Rodriguez's father, Jose, both take credit for the switch.

Pabon said it was because Ivan — whom nobody here calls "Pudge" — pitched so hard he scared the other kids. The elder Rodriguez said it was because he could tell his son was going to be built like a catcher.

"I did a lot of good things in Little League," Rodriguez said. "I threw seven no-hitters, two in one day. That's pretty good. A lot of fans would come to see our team play because we were the best in the league."

Rodriguez broke into the majors at 19 and stardom soon followed.

He's started eight straight All-Star games and won nine straight Gold Gloves, including one last season despite breaking his right thumb in July. He was the 1999 AL MVP and is the Rangers' career hit leader.

Now entering his 11th season, the 29-year-old Rodriguez has maintained a child's enthusiasm for the game. It's fun watching him play because you can tell he's having fun.

REGULARS: Spartans, Wildcats return

(From 1B)

unproven. I had to do a lot of selling."

The next great chapter of Michigan State history is still being written. The Spartans have a chance to become the first team since the 1991-92 Duke Blue Devils to win consecutive titles. They're only the ninth team to make three straight Final Fours.

Even those who took the chance are somewhat surprised.

"I definitely didn't expect everything that we've achieved here in my four years," senior forward Andre Hutson said.

At least Michigan State had a title in its past. Arizona couldn't even claim that.

The Wildcats earned the reputation as a soft-as-butter program prone to unsightly losses when the world was watching.

In 1993, they became just the second No. 2 seed to lose to a No. 15 in the opening round of the NCAA tournament. Their first-round flops (1992, '93, '95) defined them better than their single trip to the Final Four in 1994. Common in those days were live TV shots of low-seeded teams celebrating on selection day when they learned Arizona was their first-round opponent.

"A lot of people said, 'Why are you going to Arizona, it's a finesse school?'" said Edgerson, a New Orleans native. "I never saw it as that. I saw it as going to a school with a good coach, good players and a good winning percentage."

Edgerson was on the 1997 team that won the title, shocking a nation of basketball fans who never envisioned the Wildcats moving past the second round. Since then, Arizona has shed its soft image, which has made it easy for coach Lute Olson to sell his program as a national powerhouse.

"You see Duke and, because they're such a nationally known program, they're able to draw kids from all over the place," Olson said. "With us, the guys have been brought into the program because we felt they would fit well in the mix. And then we've had guys that other people overlooked."

Among them are Gilbert Arenas, a North Hollywood kid who barely drew a sniff from recruiters. He leads the Wildcats in scoring.

Another guard, Jason Gardner, approached Arizona from a much different angle. A highly recruited star, he went to the Indianapolis high school where Arizona practiced before it won the national title in 1997. He was desperate to watch practice, but security guards shooed him away.

But clearly, Arizona had caught his eye.

"Obviously, you have something in your favor when you have a national championship under your belt," Edgerson said. "Going to some Final Fours can change a lot of minds."

Shaq paces Lakers over Mavericks by 9

Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

LOS ANGELES — Shaquille O'Neal went 13-of-17 from the line and scored 35 points Friday night as the Los Angeles Lakers made up for Kobe Bryant's absence with well-balanced scoring to beat the Dallas Mavericks 98-89,

The Lakers ended a two-game losing streak, and they haven't lost three in a row since Phil Jackson became their coach before last season. They also snapped a three-game winning streak by the Mavericks, who had just beaten two other Western Conference powers, Utah and Portland, on their road trip.

Brian Shaw added 14 points for Los Angeles, and Derek Fisher, Horace Grant and Isaiah Rider each had 12. Dirk Nowitzki led Dallas with 24 points.

Pacers 92, Celtics 87

BOSTON — Austin Croshere hit the game-winning 3-pointer with 38 seconds left on his way to a career-high 32 points as the Pacers beat Boston and pulled even with the Celtics in the race for the final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.

Paul Pierce scored 23 and had nine rebounds, and Antoine Walker had 20 points for Boston, which had won four consecutive games.

76ers 102, Warriors 89

PHILADELPHIA — Allen Iverson had 35 points and a career-high 11 rebounds as Philadelphia won for just the second time in eight games.

Iverson had nine assists, leaving him one short of his first triple-double. Tyrone Hill scored a season-high 21 points on 9-for-10 shooting and had 14 rebounds.

The victory gave Philadelphia 50 wins for the first time since 1989-90.

Raptors 110, Nets 99

TORONTO — Vince Carter scored 27 points and Alvin Williams added a career-high 23 as Toronto extended its winning streak to four games.

Tracy Murray scored 20 for Toronto. Antonio Davis and Jerome Williams each had 13 and Charles Oakley added 10. Keith Van Horn scored 25 points for the Nets.

Nuggets 103, Hornets 96

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Nick Van Exel returned from a two-game absence to score 41 points as Denver rallied from a 21-point deficit to earn its 10th road win of the season.

Van Exel was 7-for-11 from 3-point range, including a game-tying 3 with 3:13 to play.

Pistons 100, Magic 97

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Jerry Stackhouse scored 31 points and Ben Wallace added 14 points and 21 rebounds as Detroit snapped its five-game losing streak and ended its string of 29 straight losses when trailing at halftime.

Jazz 95, Cavaliers 88

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone scored 33 points as Utah snapped a three-game losing streak.

Malone, who shot 11-for-19 from the field and 11-for-16 from the line, delivered a pair of crucial baskets in the last four minutes.

SuperSonics 94, Clippers 84

SEATTLE — Gary Payton scored 28 points as Seattle won for the 10th time in 11 games and kept its playoff hopes alive.

Vin Baker scored 13 points and Rashard Lewis 12 for the Sonics, who won their fourth straight.

LESLIE WILLIAMS

God sees past our whining to what we will become

Question: Why did God have Abraham take Isaac up the mountain when he was 12 years old?
Answer: Because at 13, it wouldn't have been a sacrifice.

Age 13. When kids are 13, you knock on the door to wake them up in the morning, but you don't know who's going to walk out of the bedroom — the rebel, the grump, or the sweet kid you remember, who still likes the teddy bear. It's a toss-up who they are from day to day.

Williams

I remember being 13. My repertoire of personas was more limited. I was sulky, or sulky, or sulky. Actually, the nadir of my life was the following year. I entered my fourth new school in five years, and the life of a paramecium at the bottom of the food chain would have been better than my life that year.

This last week in Sunday School, we were studying that miserable passage by Paul toward the end of Romans 1, the list of horrors that humans are capable of when we make the choice not to follow God: unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness, envy, murder, gossip — and the list goes on and on. And on and on. We've actually been on this list for a number of weeks.

The temptation for those of us who've chosen Christ is to say, Whew — thank goodness I don't participate in any of those things (except maybe gossip ... but, hey, nobody's perfect). However, as we have scrutinized these lovely items, what we've noticed is how easy it is to slip into, say unrighteousness or envy — even when we're Christians.

Lately, by the end of class, I've been feeling like a terminal adolescent in the faith, complete with acne of the soul — which brings me around to what I learned theologically from adolescence, and what I pray I can teach my own children.

Though my mother many times must have wanted to trade me in for a Chihuahua or a pet rock, she loved me throughout those difficult years. She proved her love through her vigilance over my behavior (which, of cc urse, I compared to that of a prison guard). Still, the message came through, loud and clear.

God, too, loves us, and His message comes through in passages such as the one at the end of Romans 1. God cares about how we act. He cares about how we treat each other. He cares about the state of our hearts.

The fascinating thing about watching a child go through adolescence is this: Just when you think the hormones are going to bounce you out of the house, your teen-ager comes up with a jewel of wisdom that stuns you. You then have a glimpse of the splendid person he or she is growing into, and you have hope.

I pray that God has the eyes of loving parent, that He can see past the whining and petulance of my soul and find a glimmer of the person I will be when — thanks to Christ's sacrifice on the cross — we all come into the Kingdom.

Scott Hahn will lead a mini-conference on the Catholic faith April 7 at the Hilton. A former "anti-Catholic" Protestant pastor, Hahn converted to Catholicism in 1986. He is the founder of the Institute of Applied Biblical Studies and professor of Theology and Scripture at Franciscan University in Steubenville, Ohio.

Presbyterian's research led him to Catholic conversion

■ Scott Hahn will be in Midland to discuss the questions that led to his conversion.

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

A former Presbyterian minister turned Catholic, will be in Midland next weekend to lead a mini-conference on the Catholic faith.

Scott Hahn, who entered the Catholic Church at Easter 1986, will talk on such issues as transubstantiation (changing of bread and wine to the body and blood of Jesus), birth control, Mary's role in God's plan of salvation and other questions that caused him to convert to Catholicism.

Hahn is founder and director of the Institute of Applied Biblical Studies and professor of Theology and Scripture at Franciscan University of Steubenville, Ohio.

In a videotape distributed by St. Joseph Communications Marketplace, he describes his early conversion to Christianity through Young Life as an act that "made a profound difference in my life."

After making his commitment to Christ, he began to read the Bible as well as the writings of John Calvin, Martin Luther and others that convinced him Christianity had been all but lost until the 1500s, when for the first time, lay people were able to read the Bible for themselves.

In an account of actions against Catholics that seem almost Pauline in their zeal, Hahn said he was determined to "help my Catholic friends to see the simple Gospel of Jesus Christ, to show them the Bible. ... You just accept Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord and that's all it takes."

He gave a Catholic friend a copy of Loraine Boettner's volume, "Roman Catholicism," which he now describes as "450-plus pages filled with all kinds of distortions and lies about the C atholic Church."

When his grandmother, a devout Catholic, died, h destr yed her rosary.

Clowning around

Jeni Praigo, 26, of Jeni & Friends Entertainment in Brookyn, N.Y., often donates her time to church events. She says clown ministry "is great. The kids love it. When I went to church with my parents I was bored stiff. If there had been a clown there it would've been a lot more interesting."

Many religions embrace 'clown ministry' as fresh way to interest children, adults in God

By Heather Saucier
N.Y. Times News Service

Percy Praissum's audience gathers not in a comedy club but in the pews of a Catholic church. Dressed in vestment hues of purple and burgundy, Percy makes his appearance on the altar. He puts one foot inside a cardboard box that says, "Come on in." Then he takes it out. Then he puts both feet inside and finds he is stuck.

He ties a rope around his waist and tries to pull himself out. He blows up a balloon to help him float out. Nothing works.

Then, he notices a Bible perched on a pillar and starts reading. Like magic, he steps out of the box and walks away.

The message? Only God can free you from sin.

Percy Praissum, whose real name is Danny Kollaja, performs this routine at St. Cyril's Catholic Church in Corpus Christi, Texas. But hundreds like him are in churches throughout the country. They are the vanguard of "clown ministry" that has been embraced by some 60 religious denominations, including staunch Catholics.

"It is mainstream now in churches from the farthest fundamental to the most liberal," said Cathy Gibbons, who has practiced clown ministry for 21 years and is the former editor and publisher of Laugh Makers magazine, a publication on clowning that has since folded.

Clergypeople say clown ministry is a fresh way to interest children and adults in God.

"It has the ability to touch the head and the heart," said Floyd Shaffer, a Lutheran minister known as the father of clown ministry. "It has had a powerful impact on the Christian church." Shaffer developed the genre in the early 1970s after concluding that "dullness" afflicted many churches.

It's not the bright polka-dotted suits and red rubber noses that keep the faithful in church, but how the clowns present religious messages, devotees say.

Shaffer, who has written four books on the topic, teaches concepts such as forgiveness in his clown costume by using a combination of silence and magic.

He passes out paper hearts soiled by dirt. He motions for the congregation to crumple them and throw them into the aisle. The wadded up hearts are collected and tossed into a garbage can that erupts in smoke. The clown pulls out a giant, white felt heart that reads, "forgiven."

Shaffer said the act works for multiple faiths. "Words are very divisive in society, in politics, in religion. Silently, people can hear in their own faith language," he said.

In Laurinburg, N.C., Big Mac the Clown is turning people on to God, said Kim Clarke, whose family attends Kids Church, which despite the name is for adults also. "With this ministry, the children are involved. They're more open. They're going to comprehend."

Clarke's son, Scott, 14, said he felt bored in church until he met Big Mac, who mimes Bible stories. "It drew my attention," he said. "I felt

CONVERT: Hahn says doubts about his religion began while at seminary

(From 1C)

During his senior year of high school, Hahn wrote a research paper entitled "Sola Fide," the phrase Martin Luther used to launch the Protestant Reformation, arguing that Christians are justified by faith alone, not by any works that they might do.

"'If you say faith plus anything, you have polluted the simple truth of the Gospel,'" Hahn said he wrote. "And so I went into college with this strong conviction."

While obtaining a bachelor's degree with a triple major of theology, philosophy and economics from Grove City College in Pennsylvania, he was also doing ministry with Young Life.

While seeking out unchurched students at the college, he also looked for opportunities to convince Catholics of the error in their beliefs. Hahn now attributes his success in leading young Catholics away from their faith as "some sort of catechetical experiment, that people thought we could bypass instructing them in the doctrines they need to believe and in the reasons for those doctrines."

During his third year, he met Kimberly, the woman who later would become his wife. They were married immediately before leaving for seminary at Gordon-Conwell in Boston, where Kimberly took a two-year degree and Scott took a three-year master's degree.

It was while at Gordon-Conwell that doubts began to assail Hahn's convictions, starting with a Christian ethics class that Kimberly was taking during which they formed small groups, and Kimberly's group studied contraception. Kimberly discovered that until 1930, every existing Christian church prohibited contraception on biblical grounds. She told Hahn of her findings, which led him to embark on his own exhaustive research, and to emerge squarely on her side — and on the side of the Catholic Church.

The next pillar of Protestantism to crumble was Hahn's conception of Sola Fide.

"In the Protestant world the idea of covenant is understood practically as synonymous with or interchangeable with contract. When you have a covenant with God, it's the same as having a contract. You give God your sin; he gives you Christ, and everything is a faith-deal for salvation," he explains in the video.

"But the more I studied, the more I came to see that for the ancient Hebrews and in sacred Scripture, a covenant differs from a contract about as much as marriage differs from prostitution.

"In a contract, you say, 'this is yours and that is mine,' but Scripture shows how in a covenant you say, 'I am yours and you are mine.'

"For Luther and for practically all of Bible Christianity and Protestantism, God is a judge, and the covenant is a courtroom scene whereby all of us are guilty criminals. But since Christ took our punishment, we get his righteousness, and he gets our sins, so we get off scot-free.

"For Luther, in other words, salvation is a legal exchange, but for Paul in Romans, for Paul in Galatians, ... it isn't just a legal exchange, because the covenant doesn't point to a Roman courtroom so much as to a Hebrew family room. God is not just simply a judge; ... Christ is not just somebody who represents an innocent victim who takes our rap, he is the firstborn among many brethren."

Next came the tough communion question. What happens when we are offered "the body and blood of our Lord Jesus Christ?" Hahn says he found the answer in the Gospel of John, Ch. 6: "My flesh is food indeed, my blood is drink indeed." Hahn said after believing for years that the passage was only symbolic, he was suddenly brought up short.

"My research showed me that he turns to the twelve, and he says to them, what? 'We better hire a PR agent; I really blew it, guys.' No! He says, 'Are you going to leave me too?' He doesn't say, 'Do you understand I only meant it as a symbol?' No! He says that the truth is what sets us free, I have taught the truth. What are you going to do about it?'"

Hahn's wife, the daughter of a Presbyterian minister, has also converted to Catholicism. The two of them are co-authors of "Rome Sweet Home: Our Journey to Catholicism." They live with their five children in Steubenville.

Greg and Theresa Perez, parishioners of Our Lady of Guadalupe in Midland, made a Holy Land tour led by a group from Franciscan University in Steubenville. Perez said the trip was an unforgettable one, enhanced by Hahn's insight and explanations.

"I have never had anyone make the Bible come alive the way he did," said Perez. "He had so much knowledge of every place we visited.

"I'll never forget crossing the Sea of Galilee in a small boat, and talking about how Jesus came walking to meet the disciples in their boat. Scott has a way of talking about those events that makes them a part of you."

The conference, scheduled for 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. April 7 at the Hilton, is sold out, according to Mary Diaz at La Promesa Foundation, which is sponsoring Hahn's visit. For more information call Ms. Diaz at 682-1485.

KIDS: Many church clowns learn the art by reading books like I belonged. When a preacher preaches, it just goes over my head."

(From 1C)

Today, Scott dresses as a clown himself and ministers to other youths.

"The very people you think it wouldn't touch, it does," said Big Mac, whose real name is Mackie Swails. "There's a kid in everybody."

Bryan Fite, 31, said he had no interest in church until a friend urged him to attend Kids Church.

"I went that one time and I've been ever since," he said. "It's really changed my life. I'm at peace and everything seems to be falling into place."

Clowns succeed at religion because they are nonthreatening and easy to relate to, said Randy Christensen, a pastor and clown in Green Bay, Wis. "We all know what it feels like to be stupid," Christensen said. "Clowns try to make it so that people can be wise."

Most church clowns learn the art by reading books, watching videos or attending national conferences that draw more than 500 people twice a year. But the key to success lies in the heart rather than in the actual performance, said Brenda Marshall, known as "Flower the Clown" in North Richland Hills, Texas.

"Let them see your heart," she said explaining her philosophy. "I'm amazed at how you can hold a wide range of audiences' attention for a long period of time."

Of course, church clowns don't always leave church feeling accepted. Especially in the early days, Shaffer said, "What I was doing was really upsetting to some people."

Marshall said that some believe clowning "is too irreverent, that service should have more decorum than have a clown walking in and being silly."

She once performed before a man who glared at her every time she took to the altar. One day, things changed, she said. "In his best Texas drawl he said, 'You know, I didn't know if I was going to like a clown being in church but I've seen your heart and you're all right.'"

University gets only U.S. showing of 'first-rate' religious art prints

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — A private collection of religious prints by artists including Marc Chagall and Edouard Manet is making its only U.S. appearance in an unlikely place — libraries and a classroom building at the University of Dayton.

"The University of Dayton is not what I would call a haven of art and artistic culture in the past," says the Rev. Johann Roten, director of the school's Marian Library-International Marian Research Institute.

The private, Roman Catholic school is known more for its engineering and education programs.

"What we're doing here is to show people first-rate art in facilities not originally dedicated or oriented to something like this," Roten says. "It's an opportunity for us to say, 'See, we can do it.'"

The 75 pieces of Expressionist art are from the private collection of Ulrich Scheufelen, owner of the Scheufelen Paper Co. of Lenningen, Germany. The collection has been exhibited in Europe, but has never before been to the United States.

Scheufelen agreed to lend the exhibit to the school at the request of a university supporter who befriended him when he spent a year at the Dayton-based Mead Corp. preparing for a career in his family business. Scheufelen plans to donate the collection to the city of Wittenberg, Germany, after its run ends in Dayton on April 30.

Roten said showing the collection in Dayton is designed to expose it to more people in the Midwest and to bring attention to the Marian institute, which studies the relationships between religion and culture.

Nineteen European Expressionists created the art in the exhibit, which features themes from the Old and New Testaments. The collection includes prints in woodcut, lithography, India ink, charcoal, etching and chalk.

Roten said many of the artworks are also historical documents because they depict Germany during World Wars I and II and how the artists saw Christ during wartime.

"It is the face of Christ that the exhibit highlights mostly," Roten said. "But it is not the glorious Christ. It is the suffering Christ. He became a metaphor through which people tried to deal with their own difficulties and problems."

Expressionism is the movement of art that emphasizes the expression of inner experience and an artist's emotions rather than only realistic portrayal of an object.

Dominique Vasseur, curator at the Springfield Museum of Art, said Expressionism is probably the most important contribution by German artists to modern art.

"Eventually, denounced by the Nazi regime as degrading, Expressionism is actually very engaging," Vasseur says: "It's not only powerful visually, with its high contrast between darks and lights, but it's spiritually and psychologically powerful as well. It gets right to emotional issues. It's certainly not pretty, which is what people had come to expect, especially from religious art."

These '40 days of Lent' are difficult to count

By Susan Hogan/Albach
The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — Christians know where Lent is headed.

They fast, they pray, they repent. When it's over they celebrate Easter.

But when, exactly, does Lent end?

Roman Catholics say it ends just before the Holy Thursday service, what Protestants call Maundy Thursday. That's three days before Easter.

Some Protestants, namely Lutherans, are coming around to that perspective, too, though it's still a minority viewpoint.

But do the math. If Lent begins on Ash Wednesday and ends on Maundy Thursday, then the season doesn't last 40 days.

It lasts either 38 days or 44 days, depending on whether you count Sundays. (In liturgical math, some traditions don't count Sundays because the more festive event of resurrection is being commemorated.)

But isn't Lent supposed to last 40 days? After all, one of the most popular hymns of the season begins: "Lord, who throughout these 40 days for us did fast and pray ..."

"The number 40 is to be understood symbolically, not legalistically," said the Rev. Michael Driscoll, who teaches liturgical studies at the University of Notre Dame.

The idea that Lent had to be literally 40 days started with monks in the fifth and sixth centuries, who imitated the 40-day fast of Jesus in the desert, he said.

Before that, the period before Easter was seen as a time of preparing adults for baptism. By the fifth century, infant baptism had become common so the church began to view Lent as a time of penitence. The penitential nature of the season dominated the church's thinking until the liturgical reforms of Pope Pius XII in 1956. The reforms restored the baptismal connection to Easter, while keeping the penitential character of the season.

"No one slavishly insists on 40 days anymore," said Dr. Robert Hawkins, professor of worship at Lutheran Southern Theological Seminary in Columbia, S.C. "Churches are seeing it from the spirit of the season."

'The number 40 is to be understood symbolically, not legalistically.'
— Rev. Micahael Driscoll, teacher of liturgical studies at University of Notre Dame

Most Christians are still taught that Lent mirrors the 40 days Jesus spent fasting and praying in the desert after his baptism.

Just last week, on Ash Wednesday, the kickoff of Lent, Pope John Paul II spoke of the 40 years of Israel's pilgrimage in the desert and the 40 days of Moses' stay on Mount Sinai.

In other words, the number 40 and Lent seem to go hand in hand. In many traditions, it still does literally.

Most Protestants still say that Lent begins on Ash Wednesday and ends on the Saturday before Easter. That equals 40 days, if you subtract the Sundays.

Catholics used to count it that way, too, until Pope Pius XII's reforms. But with the new thinking, half of Holy Week the week leading up to Easter is in Lent, and the other half is outside of Lent.

And then there's the matter of Sundays. Some Catholic liturgy experts count them, others don't.

"Traditionally, Sundays haven't been counted in the fast," said the Rev. Edward Foley, professor of liturgy in Catholic Theological Union in Chicago. "But you'll find people who say Jesus didn't take Sundays off from his fast, so why should we?"

At present, Holy Thursday, Good Friday and the Easter Vigil are seen as one feast called the Triduum. Services on these days commemorate the central events of Christianity: the Last Supper, the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus.

The Rev. Ralph McMichael, who teaches liturgy at Nashotah House Seminary in Nashota, Wis., said some Episcopalians would agree that Lent ends at the Triduum, but others would say it ends during the Easter Vigil with the prayer: "... now that our Lenten observance is ended."

Lent is also 40 days in Orthodox traditions, only they call it Great Lent or the Great Fast. Orthodox Christians don't have an Ash Wednesday. This year, Great Lent began two days earlier.

Great Lent ends 40 days later on the Friday before Palm Sunday, which is the week before Easter. To arrive at 40 days, Orthodox Christians count Sundays because they are still fasting, except for wine and oil.

"Most Christians participate in church life more during Lent," said Dr. Paul Meyendorff, professor of liturgy at St. Vladimir's Orthodox Theological Seminary in Crestwood, N.Y.

"We may not figure the days in the same way, but we all find it the deepest meaning of our faith in this season," he said.

Gugino didn't have time for strenuous training before 'Spy Kids'

LOS ANGELES — Carla Gugino didn't go through any strenuous training regimen to play an ex-spy and a mother of two in the new family adventure film "Spy Kids."

Director Robert Rodriguez didn't give her any time.

"I sat down and spoke with Robert about this and I was shooting 48 hours later," Gugino told reporters. "I'm a pretty physical person anyway and, given the chance, I love to try doing all that kind of stuff."

Gugino said she overcame fears as a child, just like the young characters do in the movie.

"I had fears of heights, actually, which I did eventually get over, fear of singing which I still haven't gotten over," she said, laughing. "I think that that's sort of a part of growing up."

"Spy Kids," which also stars Antonio Banderas and Alan Cumming, opened Friday.

FORT WORTH — Radio host Bill Mack, who helped launch the career of country star LeAnn Rimes and was known as the Midnight Cowboy by his many listeners, signed off the air for the last time.

After 32 years, Mack decided to leave his overnight country-music show, "The Midnight Cowboy Trucking Network," on Fort Worth radio station WBAP-AM to work on his autobiography, his business manager told The Dallas Morning News.

"This takes a lot out of you. It takes a lot out of your life, even though I'm a young man," Mack, 68, said during a TV interview Thursday as he did his last show.

Before Mack landed at WBAP in March 1969, he had hosted the 1950s "Bob Wills Show" on television and was an announcer on "The Buck Owens Show."

Rimes recorded "Blue," a song Mack wrote in 1959, and made it a Grammy winner in 1997.

Mack signed off as he had for many years with the playing of Connie Smith's version of a song he wrote, "Clinging to a Saving Hand," and his familiar comment, "Thank you for your kind attention and the use of the hall."

NEW YORK — Ashley Judd's lucky number is 27.

That's the number of the racing car her fiance, Dario Franchitti, drives. Judd wore a 27 charm on a chain around her neck when she appeared on MTV's "Total Request Live" on Thursday.

The actress, a big University of Kentucky basketball fan, said she wasn't into auto racing before she met her beau.

"Not at all," she said. "I thought it was stupid and macho."

Does she worry about Franchitti when he's zooming around the track? "Only if he's not gonna win because I don't want him to be in a bad mood afterward," she said.

Judd showed a clip from her movie that opened Friday, the romantic comedy "Someone Like You," as teen-agers cheered and screamed all around her.

"You guys are so festive and cheerful," she said, looking around at the crowd watching the live video countdown.

LOS ANGELES — "ER" doctor Alex Kingston is a new mother.

Kingston, who plays Dr. Elizabeth Corday on the NBC medical drama, gave birth to a daughter Wednesday, publicist Marcel Pariseau said.

Kingston and the baby, who weighed 6 pounds, 11 ounces, are "healthy and happy," Pariseau said Thursday. Kingston's husband of two years is free-lance journalist Florian Haertel.

Her pregnancy was written into "ER." Corday and boyfriend Dr. Mark Greene (Anthony Edwards) are expecting a child.

LEXINGTON, Va. — Virginia Military Institute gave its first humanitarian award for public service to former President Carter in recognition of his lifelong contribution to human rights.

"I'm convinced that the greatest challenge we face this century is overcoming the increasing chasm between the richest and the poorest people in the world," Carter told the crowd of about 2,500 Thursday.

In addition to the award, VMI also donated $25,000 to Carter's international human rights center in Atlanta. Since it was founded in 1981, the Carter Center has overseen dozens of democratic elections, fought Guinea worm disease in Asia and Africa, and lobbied for peaceful solutions to civil conflicts in such places as the Sudan, Bosnia and the Korean peninsula.

VMI named the award for Jonathan Myrick Daniels, the school's valedictorian in 1961. Daniels was killed in Haynesville, Ala., four years later after stepping into a shotgun blast intended for a 16-year-old black girl named Ruby Sales.

Daniels had been registering voters — a practice disliked by many Southern whites. An all-white jury later acquitted his killer.

"I lived in that time," Carter said.

After his speech, Carter called Daniels a hero and embraced Sales, now 52, who attended the ceremony.

"He really was the best choice for this award," Sales said.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, March 31, 2001:

Keep expressing your positive side, rather than getting caught up in problems or negativity. Irritation might be commonplace this year. You might say things you regret later. Curb impulsiveness, if possible. Stay focused on the long term. You will find it a lot easier to stay calm and see the big picture. If you are single, a romance could easily come from a friendship. If you are attached, stay away from the petty and focus on the big picture. Do more together as a couple. Your domestic life needs to take priority. CANCER makes you feel at home.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★ Sarcasm will reign, if you're not careful. Be sensitive to a family member, or you could spend the remainder of the day making peace and apologizing. An offer you make about going out delights all who are involved. Touch base with a parent. Tonight: Happy at home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ Keep the peace, even if friends and a loved one become touchy. Sometimes it is best to stay out of turbulent waters. A must appearance delights you and a loved one. Express your feelings later in the day, when another is sensitive to you. Tonight: Enjoy those around you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ Expenditures could get out of whack. Recognize what motivates you with a child or loved one. Another's temper could be overwhelming. Pressure builds when you least expect it. Make calls and schedule plans for later in the day. Curb a tendency to go overboard, especially with spending. Tonight: Someplace new.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Your smile helps make peace and helps end another's agitation. Do your best to make a partner or friend happy, even if it means rolling up your sleeves and getting into a work project. Later on, someone expresses his appreciation in a nice way. Tonight: You will like this one!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★ The unexpected occurs with a partner or associate. It appears as if this person could be easily annoyed or pressured in the morning. By the afternoon, a white flag goes up. Express your reservations and share your feelings. Make low-key plans, or go along with another's desires. Tonight: Vanish happily.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Aim for what you want, but adapt to a change in plans or a last-minute emergency. Your ability to go with the flow earmarks your success. Someone makes a special overture. Relate on a one-on-one level. Tonight: You are the party.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★ You are in the limelight. You might be unusually testy about work and a project that needs to be completed. A child or loved one goes out of his way to help you relax. Do something special for this person. Tonight: Smile, and you'll get what you want.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ Reach out to another. Examine what you want from someone at a distance. You could be unusually tense or touchy. Listen to your feelings involving a child or loved one. Nurture another and be sensitive to a family member or a roommate. Tonight: Go to a place with music and romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ Deal directly with others. Don't leave anything to hearsay. You could be more touchy than you realize. First, before a problem begins, do something to help alleviate your stress. You will enjoy yourself for the remainder of the day. Tonight: Togetherness works.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Let others make the first move. Screen your calls until you deal with a personal problem. As excited as you are, balance your budget before making a financial commitment. Invite others over if you don't want to go out. Tonight: Let go.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ Pace yourself carefully, as you might have only so much energy. A friend might complicate a money matter. Schedule more relaxation and peace in your life. Get together with a dear friend for a late lunch and maybe a mutual favorite pastime. Tonight: Just go with the flow.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ Do not get agitated by an older parent and what you wish could happen. Allow more open exchanges in your discussions. If single, a new love relationship could be blooming. Get in on some fun. Indulge yourself as well as another. Tonight: Put on your dancing shoes.

STATE IN BRIEF

■ New cutter for Galveston

GALVESTON — The Coast Guard officially gets a new cutter Saturday when an 87-foot coastal patrol boat is commissioned at Galveston.

The cutter, Manowar, will perform search and rescue, law enforcement and marine environmental protection missions.

It's the 30th of the new Marine Protector-class vessels to be delivered to the Coast Guard and is designed to replace the aging 82-foot class of patrol boats now in service.

Among design innovations is the boat's ability to sail with complete crews of men and women. The older ships were not designed to accommodate two genders.

■ Judge wants videotape

AUSTIN — The judge who presides over the yogurt shop murders case ordered an Austin television station this week to surrender a videotape of the crime scene shot immediately after the December 1991 killings.

An attorney for KTBC Austin had tried to block the state's subpoena for the tape, arguing that it was irrelevant to the case.

Attorney Laura Lee Stapleton said Friday that media organizations should not have to serve as an investigative arm of law enforcement agencies.

"The danger is there that the lines between the news media and law enforcement will be blurred," Stapleton said.

Citing the gravity of the pending murder trials, Judge Mike Lynch granted the state's subpoena, which was supported by defense lawyers.

Prosecutors and defense attorneys said they need the tape because no law enforcement agency videotaped the scene that night and because KTBC was the first television station to arrive.

The station has seven days to decide whether to appeal.

Three men have been charged with the murder of Eliza Hope Thomas, 17, Amy Ayers, 13, Jennifer Harbison, 17, and Sarah Harbison, 15, at an I Can't Believe It's Yogurt! store in Austin more than nine years ago. The girls were bound, gagged and shot in the head before the store was set on fire.

The charges against a fourth suspect were dropped.

■ School measure approved

AUSTIN — The State Board of Education on Friday approved a measure that would give charter schools 10 years, rather than the five they have now, to renew their application to stay in business.

The board approved the recommendation after officials from charter schools said they were having difficulty getting bank loans or attracting teachers because of their short-term contracts, said Texas Education Agency spokeswoman Debbie Graves-Ratcliffe.

Under the new rule, the charter schools will undergo an accountability and financial status review after five years, Ratcliffe said.

The board can revoke a charter school for certain contract violations at any time, regardless of the extended renewal period, Ratcliffe said.

Group files lawsuit to block bomber training route

By Chris Roberts
Associated Press

EL PASO — A group of farmers and ranchers has filed a lawsuit intended to stop the U.S. Air Force from using a B-1 bomber training route in West Texas it says is creating a "battlefield environment" on the private property below.

The low-level flyovers, meant to simulate a combat environment in the cockpit, threaten to drive out residents who are protecting cultural, economic and environmental resources, according to the lawsuit filed by the Davis Mountains Trans-Pecos Heritage Association and others.

"This Air Force action will send thousands of heavy bombers flying (over) private properties and residences at speeds up to 630 mph and as low as 300 feet above the ground," association chairman Kaare Remme said Friday. "The Air Force claims that these overflights will have 'no significant impact,' but the true impacts can be felt, seen, heard, and smelled inside family homes."

Capt. Dave Honchul, chief of public affairs at Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene, said he hadn't seen the lawsuit and couldn't comment. However, he said the Air Force had traveled through West Texas taking public comment and plans to be a good neighbor.

Air Force officials have said the lowest flights are 500 feet above the ground although earlier documents describing the route referred to a 300-foot limit.

Ranchers have complained that the overflights can keep skittish cattle from reproducing and stampede them into fences and other obstacles. They say the vibrations from above can pulverize the foundations of old buildings and wind turbulence can destroy windmills.

Remme said the overflights also will destroy the area's reputation as a good place for a peaceful hunting trip and lower property values.

The lawsuit contends the Air Force ignored all opposition to the training route and in the process violated the National Environmental Policy Act, the federal Noise Control Act and the Third Amendment.

According to an environmental impact statement prepared a few years ago by the Air Force when it decided to reconfigure the training route, the flyovers are "not expected to produce measurable impacts on the economic value of the land since this area has been generally overflown since the 1940s."

But Remme said the Air Force has "practiced a game of incremental change on us."

Remme said residents at first assumed they were being buzzed by an occasional bomber.

"They had no knowledge that this route had been created," Remme said.

As the Air Force increased the number of overflights, Remme said, area residents finally realized they were under a training route. At that point the Air Force dismissed complaints by saying that the area had been overflown for many years, he said.

The Air Force contends that the route, including new stretches that will have ground stations to measure the accuracy of computer-simulated bombing runs, is necessary to save money and provide more realistic training.

The new configuration creates a track that allows the crews to more effectively practice evasive maneuvers and other combat tactics, officials have said.

At present, the crews must fly to Utah, South Dakota and Colorado for that specialized training. Dyess officials said modifying the West Texas training route will cut 4,000 hours of flying time.

It will be used by B-1s from Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene and B-52s from Barksdale Air Force Base in Louisiana. The revised route with the scoring stations is expected to be operational in late 2001 or early 2002.

The Air Force already averages six flights each weekday, which officials said won't change when the revised route is used. The new training route, slightly smaller than the old one, encompasses about 14,500 square miles in an oblong shape stretching from the eastern outskirts of El Paso to Abilene.

The association settled a similar lawsuit in 1999. That lawsuit prevented the German Air Force, which has an operation at Holloman Air Force Base in New Mexico, from flying routes that parallel and in some cases overlap the U.S. Air Force routes, Remme said.

Another lawsuit attempting to block the West Texas overflights was filed in March in Lubbock by the Heritage Environmental Preservation Association. It claims the noise would violate the federal Noise Control Act and have an adverse effect on humans and livestock.

Families of bonfire collapse victims have received funds from school

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The families of the 12 Aggies who died and 27 others who were injured in Texas A&M University's deadly November 1999 bonfire collapse so far have received $378,030 from a school fund established to help pay for their expenses.

In addition, the families of the 12 who died received $10,000 each through an insurance policy held by the university. The families of the 11 victims who were students were reimbursed for fall 1999 tuition and fee costs, the Bryan-College Station Eagle reported in its Friday editions. The 12th fatality, Christopher Breen, already had graduated.

Texas A&M released the fund-related documents this week in response to a request from the newspaper filed under the Texas Public Information Act.

The documents show officials have paid families of the deceased students $129,500 from the Bonfire Relief Fund. Each family received at least $10,000 from the fund. Injured students have received $248,530.

A&M students who were relatives of those killed have received grants and scholarships totaling $14,650.

The Association of Former Students — a nonprofit corporation — set up the fund to accept donations to help the bonfire collapse victims and their families.

Nearly $278,000 remains in the fund.

At least one family's request for additional money was not paid, the Eagle reported.

Andrea and Les Heard — parents of victim Christopher Lee Heard — originally asked for $50,000 in April 2000 to help pay for various expenses, including the loss of family income.

They've said publicly the school has not done enough to fulfill the needs of bonfire victims' families since the collapse Nov. 18, 1999.

Last November, J. Malon Southerland, A&Ms vice president for student affairs, wrote them that the university could reimburse families for "actual expenses" related to the collapse. He asked the Heards to provide a total dollar amount in two categories: family travel and funeral expenses.

The Heards' Brownsville attorney, R.W. Armstrong, repeatedly has asked A&M to approve his clients' request.

On Wednesday, the first lawsuit seeking damages from A&M was filed by the mother of victim Jerry Don Self.

Some documents obtained by the newspaper point to A&M's plan to establish a funding source for injured students who need long-term care. The original target for "definite information" on such a fund — December 2000 or January 2001 — has been pushed to May.

One victim survivor, the father of Nathan Scott West, declined Thursday to discuss how much money his family has received from A&M and the relief fund. Richard West, however, said he doesn't feel "shorted" by the university.

There will be about 40 units that have a booth and about 5-10 booths of organizations such as the Blood Bank, Rockhounds and Jackelopes, and others. There will be a concession for lunch and/or snacks!

The Scouts will be around town from Feb. 20th until March 29th selling Scout-O-Rama tickets to raise money for their units. The tickets are a dollar apiece and have great savings at Midland Park Lanes, Putt-Putt, Golden Corral and CiCis! You can also purchase a ticket at the door for One Dollar!

Come out and see what our youth are doing in Scouting and support our future leaders!

Note: Scouts and their parents will be building the Booths on Thursday, March 29th from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. at the Midland County Exhibit Building. Also, Friday, March 30th, from 4:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. they will be decorating their booths.

"Classified is like a good novel, every page has something new and interesting!

GENERAL INFORMATION:

To ensure the integrity of our newspaper, for the benefit of our readers and advertisers, the Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right the revise, reclassify, edit or refuse any advertising. We also reserve the right to convert all advertising into digital and/or audiotext formats within our other products and services.

Please check your ad the first day it appears, and, if you find a mistake, please call our office at 682-6222 so we can correct the error immediately. This will ensure that your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. If an error does occur, you can choose to rerun your ad once for free, or we'll gladly refund the cost of the portion of the ad affected by the error. If an ad is inadvertently omitted, we will assume liability up to the cost of the ad itself – consequently, we will publish your ad in our next available edition or refund the price you have paid.

Rate charges are determined at the time of placement. All ads accepted are subject to credit approval. Some classifications require payment in advance. Credit applications are required for business accounts.

We welcome your suggestions or comments. Please call: Brandi Alexander, Telephone Sales Supervisor, 687-8813.

PLACING AN AD:

Call 682-6222, Monday through Friday, from 8a.m. – 6p.m.

A friendly Advertising Consultant will help you word and schedule your ad for best results.

HOW TO WRITE A CLASSIFIED AD THAT WORKS!

❶ Promote Your Merchandise - The more descriptive you are the more likely your merchandise will appeal to someone.

❷ Check The Market Value - The most common mistake that occurs is over or under pricing your goods.

❸ Always Include The Price - People are more likely to respond when they know the price range.

❹ Keyword Your Ad - Begin each ad with the name of the item such as "Stove" or "Guitar" rather than "Kenmore" or "Gibson". "Ford 1997" instead of "1997 Ford", or by its key reference point such as location or area in real estate ads.

Big little SUV:

2001 Isuzu Rodeo Sport SUV

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

For astute industry followers out there, a bit of free information: The new Rodeo Sport is actually the Amigo, the nameplate's powerful two-door subcompact SUV. Isuzu is focusing buyer perception of the Rodeo as a strong off-road performance brand, combining durability and emphasizing its true off-road character and heritage.

This renaming/reintroduction is also meant to complement the on-road performance product positioning of the all-new 2002 Isuzu Axiom that will be introduced later this year.

Introduced in 1989 and in its second generation, the Isuzu Rodeo Sport is built at Isuzu's shared Lafayette, Ind., plant (with Subaru) and is available in soft or hard top body styles and two- or four-wheel drive configurations.

For 2001, Isuzu is carrying over the Ironman edition introduced last year. This year's Rodeo Sport Ironman is available as an optional package in either V-6 automatic two-wheel drive hardtop or four-wheel drive version.

A five-speed manual Ironman package is available on the four-wheel drive soft top model. This $1,215 optional equipment package consists of Intelligent Suspension Control (ISC), exterior Ironman Triathlon badging and graphics, unique floor mats, color-keyed hood protector, special lower body treatment consisting of overfenders, bumpers, rocker and side steps and moldings finished in Titan Gray paint complete the look. The Ironman Rodeo is only available in Alpine White or Ebony Black exterior paint.

Engine choices consist of a stout 2.2L DOHC 16-valve four-cylinder or a strong 3.2L DOHC 24-valve six-cylinder engine. The standard gearbox is a five-speed manual for the four-cylinder and a four-speed automatic for the upscale six-cylinder.

New for 2001 is the availability of a four-speed automatic transmission for the four-cylinder engine. On the road, the 3.2L V6 delivers a smooth and responsive performance.

A box section ladder frame cross members and box section main rails produce a study rattle-free ride on and off-road. The suspension setup features an independent double wishbone, unequal length A-arm front suspension, torsion bar springs with stabilizer bar and direct double-acting gas-filled shock absorbers combined with a speed-sensing power assisted rack and pinion steering system.

The rear suspension is a five-link setup consisting of two upper links, two lower links, stabilizer bar and direct double-acting gas filled shock absorbers. Bridgestone Dueler 684 P245/70R16 tires round out the suspension package.

Inside the cabin, displays and controls are close and convenient for easy access. The driver enjoys good outward visibility. The rear seating area has decent leg room for two adults. A novel setup is used for the dual cupholder.

The 60/40 split rear seat back is of the standard flip and fold variety. It increases available cargo space. A full service spare is mounted on the rear door to maximize cargo space.

Ratings & Specifications

Engine performance ratings are 2.2L four-cylinder – 130 hp at 5,200 rpm and 144 lb/ft of torque at 4,000 rpm; 3.2L six-cylinder – 205 hp at 5,400 rpm and 214 lb/ft of torque at 3,000 rpm. EPA fuel economy numbers range from 19 city/23 highway for the two-wheel drive, four-cylinder/manual to 16 city/19 highway for the four-wheel drive, six-cylinder/automatic.

Both engines use regular unleaded gasoline. Underhood fluids are easily accessible but not consistently marked. Properly equipped, the Rodeo Sport has a maximum payload of 1,175 pounds and can tow a trailer with a maximum weight of 4,500 pounds.

Standard safety/security features include dual front airbags and side door guard beams. V-6 soft top adds four-wheel disc brakes with anti-lock and limited slip differential (4WD). Optional safety equipment includes limited slip differential ($250) and fog lamps ($70).

The base Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price (MSRP) for the Isuzu Rodeo Sport SUV starts at $15,715 for the two-wheel drive five-speed to $20,360 for the upscale V-6 hardtop four-wheel drive. Destination charge adds $520. Dealers report ample supplies of the Rodeo Sport, so selecting one should not be a problem.

A new direction:

2002 MERCURY MOUNTAINEER 4-DOOR

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

Making a strong and clear break from its mechanical twin, the Ford Explorer, the all-new Mercury Mountaineer SUV spells out what a Mercury is and will be in the future. Individualistic styling accentuated by precise clean lines, machined surfaces and fine attention to detail is combined with a technical, sophisticated appearance. Mercury engineers have also developed a unique driving personality for this new SUV, with all-wheel-drive capability and a long list of standard features designed to appeal to a more urban, independent-minded customer.

Introduced in 1996, the Mercury Mountaineer has offered consumers an upscale choice – a no compromise package brimming with creature comforts and the best technology the nameplate can offer. To date, approximately 170,000 Mountaineers have been sold to discriminating individualists that identify with the Mountaineer message.

Built in Ford Motor Company's St. Louis, Mo., and Louisville, Ky., assembly plants, the Mountaineer is offered in one trim level with a choice of two-wheel or all-wheel drive configurations.

Engine choices include the standard robust 4.0L SOHC V-6 or the refined 4.6L SOHC V-8 ($695). A new five-speed wide-ratio 5R55W5 five-speed automatic transmission bolts to both engines. The new automatic transmission does not have a dipstick – sealed at the factory with 11 quarts of a semi-synthetic blend of specially formulated fluid that should not require service for 150,000 miles. A manual gearbox is not offered.

The overall length of 190.7 inches is just over a half inch longer than the previous model while the wheelbase has been lengthened approximately two inches to 113.7. The stance for the new SUV has also been widened by 2.5 inches for improved balance and smoother ride.

Mercury engineers have worked magic on the new Mountaineer. Larger door openings and lower step in height improve ingress and egress, while ground clearance has been increased for improved off-road capability. A standard third seat increases occupant carrying capacity to seven and is designed to stow flat in the cargo floor for added versatility.

Handling and performance are improved with a all new chassis that is eight times stiffer laterally than its predecessor. This improved foundation works with the independent rear suspension with "porthole-in-frame" design which allows the rear floor of the vehicle to be lowered seven inches. A coil-over-shock and short/long arm (SLA) front suspension, improved turning radius coupled with steering column and wheel enhancements. P245/70R16 all-season tires keep the Mountaineer firmly connected to the pavement.

Inside the cabin, many small improvements add up to big advantages. Displays and controls have been updated for easier viewing and use. Front seats are located closer to wider door openings and a longer front seat travel improves the seating position for taller and shorter drivers. Power adjustable pedals are available as part of the $325 Convenience Group or the $1,685 Luxury Group packages.

A new 40/20/40 second-row seat adds flexibility for carrying cargo and people – allowing easy access to the third row seat. New lower lift over for rear glass makes loading groceries and cargo easier.

Ratings & Specifications

Engine performance numbers are 4.0L V-6 – 210 hp at 5,250 rpm and 250 lb/ft of torque at 4,000 rpm; 4.6L V-8 – 240 hp at 4,750 rpm and 280 lb/ft at 4,000 rpm. EPA fuel economy ranges from 16 city/22 highway for the six-cylinder/two-wheel drive configuration to 14 city/19 highway for the eight-cylinder/four-wheel drive powertrain.

Both engines use regular unleaded gasoline. Properly equipped, the Mercury Mountaineer has a maximum payload of 1,515 pounds and can tow a trailer with a maximum weight of 7,300 pounds.

Standard safety/security equipment includes power four-wheel disc brakes with anti-lock and electronic brake force distribution, speed sensitive automatic locking, anti-theft alarm system, Securilock passive anti-theft system, power liftgate lock/unlock button, fog lamps, dual front airbags, privacy glass – rear quarter, rear door and liftgate windows and remote keyless entry.

Optional safety/security equipment includes side curtain airbags ($495) and reverse sensing system ($255).

The base Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price (MSRP) for the 2002 Mercury Mountaineer four-door SUV starts at $28,630 for the rear-wheel drive model and $30,610 for all-wheel drive. Destination charge adds $600. Dealers are reporting the first deliveries of the new SUV, so supplies will be tight for the next several months.
