County pay structure to get review Monday

New county employees will be subject to base salaries if Scurry County commissioners establish a pay scale as planned when as they convene at 10 a.m. Monday for their weekly meeting.

Also on the agenda is a request from the county clerk regarding the Nov. 4 election, discussion of the county's law library, line item budget transfers in three departments and a cooperative agreement between the county and state.

The establishing of base salaries for county employees was discussed by commissioners court in August, during budget work sessions. Currently, new county employees can be hired at the same level of pay of another employee in the same position, even if the existing employee has several years of service with the county.

Base salaries would eliminate that situation, and raises, if any, would be considered on a merit level for each employee.

County Clerk Frances Billingsley will request the consolidation of voting boxes for the Nov. 4 constitutional amendment election. The election will feature some 13 constitutional amendments including the addition of a state lottery. Billingsley said the lottery issue could draw a good voter turnout.

Absentee voting for the election begins Oct. 16.

Discussion of the county law library is again on the agenda. In a meeting two weeks ago, a discussion by commissioners and County Judge Bob Doolittle concerning responsibility of the library and possible consolidation of law books used in offices sparked debate between the court and County Attorney Pete Greene and District Attorney Ernie Armstrong.

Also on the agenda are line item budget transfers for Precincts 1 and 2 and 911 and a cooperative agreement between the county and the Attorney General's office.

26th annual...

Fair opens Thursday

Booth construction begins Tuesday morning and art exhibits will begin pouring into the county coliseum that afternoon in preparation for the Scurry County Fair.

The three-day fair, celebrating its 26th year, will officially open to the public at noon Thursday.

A tradition of the fair in recent years has been the domino tournament, which begins at 6 p.m. on Thursday in Room A of the coliseum. Herman Elkins and Carl Stokes are defending champions of the event, which dates to 1981.

Registration for the tournament may be made at Snyder Savings & Loan by Wednesday. Entry fee is $5 per person.

Entries in textiles, handicrafts, agricultural products, educational and community exhibits, canned goods, container-grown plants and open beef, dairy and breeding sheep begin at 1 p.m. Wednesday.

Entries will be accepted for the flower show at 8 a.m. Thursday, as well as educational and community exhibits and livestock. Judging of entries begins at 9 a.m., and the fair opens to the public at noon. The flower show begins at 3:30 p.m.

A carnival will be held nightly in the parking lot adjacent to the coliseum.

In addition to the customary fair entries, other events and contests will be going on throughout the three-day event.

A goat dressing contest will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday. The popular fashion show of fair entries will be held at 5 p.m. on Friday, with the critter parade set for 6:30 p.m. and the mule show at 7 p.m.

A pedal tractor pull is set for 10 a.m. Saturday. Other highlights include a horse show at 1 p.m., a horseshoe pitching contest at 7 p.m. and a teen street dance at 8 p.m.

Entertainment will be held throughout the fair on the coliseum stage.

A side attraction popular with the younger set is the Kiddie Barnyard, each day in the ag annex.

Delao trial set to begin

Jury selection will begin Monday in 132nd District Court in the attempted murder trial of 28-year-old Elisello Usevio Delao.

Delao will stand trial for a June 2 attack on Jose Martinez. Authorities allege Delao struck Martinez with a baseball bat. Martinez was hospitalized for several days in a Lubbock hospital following the incident.

Prosecuting will be District Attorney Ernie Armstrong. The defendant is being represented by Lubbock attorney Jim Aldridge.

Snyder woman killed in two-vehicle wreck

From Local, Wire Reports

HAMILTON — Six persons, including a Snyder woman and her daughter, were killed Friday afternoon in a head-on collision nine miles east of here on Highway 36.

Killed were Wanda M. Lockhart, 67, who lived at 1211 28th St. in Snyder. Also killed was her daughter, 48-year-old Judy M. Hance of Baytown, a former Snyder resident; and 54-year-old Jim Hance, a Church of Christ minister from Baytown and driver of the vehicle.

Mrs. Hance, a graduate of Snyder High School, was secretary at East Side Church of Christ for a number of years prior to her marriage. At the time of their marriage, Hance was a minister in Wichita Falls and later moved to Baytown.

Mrs. Lockhart had been visiting in Baytown and was returning to Snyder when a vehicle driven by Vema Linn, 61, of Holland, crossed into the westbound lane and collided head-on with the Hance vehicle. Another passenger in the Hance auto, 56-year-old James K. Roach, suffered internal injuries and was taken to a Stephenville hospital.

Mrs. Linn and two elderly women in her car were also killed. The passengers were identified as Gladys G. Linn, 87, of Rosebud, and Juanita Woodul, 73, of Temple.

After returning Mrs. Lockhart to Snyder, Hance was scheduled to conduct a revival in the Texas Panhandle starting Sunday.

DPS Trooper Jim Huggins said all were wearing seatbelts except Ms. Woodul.

Services are pending at Bell-Cypert-Seale Funeral Home for Mrs. Lockhart. She is survived by a son, Alvin Lockhart of Tomball; a sister, Lucille Boren of Clarendon; and a brother, Wayne Mears of Stevinson, Calif.

Snyder to celebrate annual homecoming

Preparations are underway for homecoming week in Snyder, which begins with a parade on Thursday and ends with an after-game dance Friday night.

A community pep rally, steak supper, varsity football game and naming of the 1991-92 queen are other highlights. Homecoming reunions for various classes are expected throughout the weekend.

Businesses, clubs or other organizations interested in entering the parade float competition are asked to contact Burnell Hargrove at Snyder High School before 3:30 p.m. Monday. The parade is sponsored by the student council. Prize money includes $150 for first place, $100 for second place and $75 for third place.

Line-up for the parade will begin at 5:15 p.m. Thursday at Kmart. The parade will start at 6 p.m.

A community wide pep rally will be held at 3:15 p.m. Friday in Tiger Stadium. The annual All-Sports Booster Club Steak Supper will follow at 5:30 p.m. in the high school cafeteria. Serving will continue until 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $5 each.

At 8 p.m., Snyder's Tigers play host to the Littlefield Wildcats in the stadium. Advance tickets for the game are on sale at the

Diez y Seis celebration is underway

A coronation highlighting the annual two-day Diez y Seis celebration here was to be held Saturday at 7 p.m. at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church

Everyone is invited to all Diez y Seis activities, celebrating Mexican Independence Day, Sept. 16, 1810.

A dance was scheduled from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. Saturday. Sunday's activities include a 2 p.m. parade beginning at Varsity Square Shopping Center. Games, booths and folkloric dancing will be held throughout the afternoon.

Fifteen-year-old Yvonna Albarez was to be presented as queen during Saturday's coronation. The princess is 15-year-old Liza Alonzo.

The SDN Column — By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "A man with a sense of humor doesn't view life as a joke, but he can recognize the ones that are there."

Rick Hall of Snyder Insurance Agency gave us a copy of some statements submitted to insurance adjustors following an auto accident:

--Coming home, I drove into the wrong house and collided with a tree I don't have.

--I thought my window was down, but found out it was up when I put my hand through it."

--I collided with a stationary truck coming the other way.

--A truck backed through my windshield into my wife's face.

--The guy was all over the road. I had to swerve a number of times before I hit him.

--I pulled away from the side of the road, glanced at my mother-in-law and headed over the embankment.

--In my attempt to kill a fly, I drove into a telephone pole.

--I had been shopping for plants and was on my way home. As I reached the intersection a hedge sprang up and obscured my vision.

--I had been driving for 40 years when I fell asleep at the wheel.

--To avoid hitting the bumper of the car in front, I struck a pedestrian.

--My car was legally parked as it backed into the other vehicle.

--I was sure the old fellow would never make it to the other side of the road when I struck him.

--The pedestrian had no idea which direction to go, so I struck him.

--I saw the slow-moving, sad-faced old gentlemen as he bounced off the hood of my car.

--The indirect cause of this accident was a little guy in a small car with a big mouth.

--I was thrown from my car. I was later found in a ditch by some stray cows.

Panel debates free speech

AUSTIN (AP) — A former University of Texas professor told how he had been the victim of a so-called academic "witch hunt," during a debate on free speech on campus Friday at the 1991 John Henry Faulk Freedom of Information Conference.

Although describing himself as a political moderate, Alan Gribben said he had to leave UT this year after paying "the current costs of academic dissent." Gribben now is head of the Department of English and Philosophy of Auburn University at Montgomery, Alabama.

After 17 years at UT, Gribben changed jobs after he gained national attention for opposing an English department move to include certain works by minorities, women and homosexuals in a required composition course. Gribben said he believed the proposed revision was an attempt to politically indoctrinate students.

Gribben said Friday that he was ostracized by his colleagues and regarded as racist and sexist because he voted against a graduate program in ethnic and Third World studies in 1987. "It was like Soviet Russia," he said.

"I would say to you that academic freedom is under assault by the groups originally set up to protect it, and that not much is left of the non-politicized faculties that once taught composition and literature," Gribben said.

The meeting is followed by the 2nd National FOI Assembly, which ends Sunday.

National scholarship plan is entering its fourth year

ABILENE—The Coca-Cola Scholars Foundation, Inc., is beginning its fourth annual scolarship competition, the largest business-supported college scholarship program in the country. Interested students should see their guidance counselors for scholarship applications and eligibility information. The postmark deadline for applications is Oct. 31, 1991.

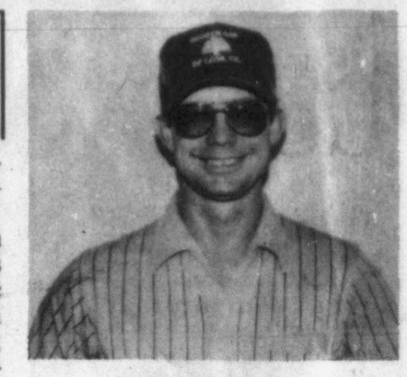

Southwest Coca-Cola Bottling Company, Inc., the sponsoring local Coca-Cola bottler, encourages graduating seniors to apply and compete for the 150 scholarships to be awarded in the spring. Fifty national scholarships worth $5,000 annually and 100 regional scholarships worth $1,000 annually are awarded, and are renewable for up to four years of undergraduate study at any accredited U.S. college and university.

"This is an excellent program that provides education opportunities to outstanding students. We support the efforts of the Foundation to recognize deserving, future leaders, said Charles F. Stephenson, executive vice President and chief operating officer of Southwest Coca-Cola Bottling Company, Inc.

The Coca-Cola Foundation rewards individuals on the basis of personal as well as scholastic merit. Consideration is given to a student's leadership potential, character, and intellectual ability in addition to their academic record.

"Last year, five local students represented our area as semifinalist, and Deron Robinson of Norton, TX, was selected as a Regional Finalist. He traveled to the National Competition in Atlanta, Georgia, with expenses paid by the Foundation, to compete for the title. We are very proud of these fine young people and their accomplishments, and are looking forward to meeting more Coca-Cola Scholars in this year's competition," said Larry Short, vice president and division manager of the bottling company's Abilene division.

House minority leader Gerald R. Ford was sworn in as vice president in 1973, succeeding Spiro T. Agnew.

Local girl selected to model

Kendall Brewster, 7, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Brewster, has been chosen as a finalist in the Cover Contest for Children's Wear Digest, a children's apparel catalog based in Chattanooga, Tenn. and distributed nationwide.

As a finalist, she will appear in the late fall/early winter issue of the catalog modeling a girl's sweater. Winner of the contest will be flown to Richmond, Va. for a photo session and will be featured on the cover of their 6th anniversary issue in spring, 1992.

Kendall is a second grader at West Elementary. Her grandparents are Jack Brewster Jr. and Mrs. C.J. Jinkins Jr. of Snyder and Gert Brewster of Perry, Okla. She is the great-granddaughter of Rena Brewster of Millsap and Eula Jinkins of Snyder.

Reynolds protests

Make that properties.

The actor on Thursday filed an appeal of the value county assessors put on the 147-acre Burt Reynolds Ranch, a tree house, airplane hangars and the house where his parents live.

The ranch alone, assessors say, is worth $2.4 million. Reynolds says it's more like $1.3 million.

Contestants weren't always beauty queens

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The 50 Miss America contestants parading down the runway Saturday night weren't always the picture-perfect image of polished smiles with endless teeth, clear faces and legs without a hint of cellulite.

Many contestants say they were ugly at some point in their lives, but overcame that stage. Most cite the pageant buzzphrases of "self-esteem" and "beauty coming from the inside."

"I think that as long as you're happy with whatever you're doing, then you don't ever feel ugly," said Miss Kansas Robbin Lee Wasson. "It's what's on the inside that counts."

Nobody seems to mention the hours of workouts, the taping of breasts, the use of petroleum jelly on the teeth and the spraying of adhesive to swimsuits to prevent any spillover. When pressed, they estimate it takes them anywhere from 30 minutes to 2½ hours to prepare to go on stage.

The obsession with looks can be dangerous, said Miss Maryland Debra Renea Fries. She overcame bulimia and anorexia while in college at Texas Christian University. "I feel good about myself and I feel confident about the things I do," she said.

Some do retain clear memories of being the ugly duckling teenager.

"When I was a child, I was the kid that mothers would say to their sons, 'She has a great personality,'" said Miss New Hampshire Deborah Jean Howard. "I never had a date in high school."

Miss Texas Rhonda Rene Morrison said she weighed 84 pounds and was 4-foot-11 in high school. The 21-year-old Morrison now stands 5-foot-8 and weighs 118 pounds.

"I was very insecure, but the pageant helped," Miss Morrison said.

Miss Utah Kimberly Anne Johnson is the tallest contestant at 6 feet. She grew eight inches at 12. She also won a swimsuit competition for her group at a pageant preliminary Thursday night.

"I know it's OK to be different," she said.

Miss Tennessee Jill Horn said, "I don't really consider myself a pageant girl. I think we all go through an awkward stage. This is a good statement to show you don't have to be a beauty queen with a perfect body and a perfect face."

Miss Georgia Kimberly Paige Hardee described herself as the "typical high school nerd; in the orchestra, short hair, you name it."

And Miss New York Marisol Montalvo struggled with braces from age 13 to 19 to correct buckteeth. "But I always knew I was going some place," she said.

Miss Washington SoYoung Kwon said she was teased as a Korean immigrant and never considered herself pretty. She doesn't mind the compliment.

"I was voted most brainiest in high school," Miss Kwon said. "I have no problem with people calling me pretty."

Some said they don't think at all about their looks, but Miss Rhode Island Debi Cutler said she works at it.

"Are you kidding me?," Miss Cutler said. "You should have seen me this morning."

Sedeno praises V.A. programs

Speaking at the American Legion Post 181 on Thursday, Veterans Land Board Field Marketing Representative Lorenzo Sedeno told a group of veterans that Texas has the finest state veterans benefits in the United States.

"Our three low-interest loan programs have enabled more than 130,000 Texas veterans to borrow $1.8 billion to buy land, a house or make improvements, Sedeno said.

He said the maximum housing loan increased to $45,000 from $20,000 on Sept. 1, thanks to new legislation. In addition, eligible Texas veterans can borrow up to $20,000 to purchase land and up to $17,500 for home improvements.

The new law also gives the board the authority to boost the land loan from $20,000 to $40,000. However, changes in federal tax law will be required to increase the ceiling. Sedeno said Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, who chairs the VLB, is currently working to accomplish this.

Currently, the land program lends eligible Texas veterans up to $20,000 at 7.99 percent interest to purchase at least five acres of land and the housing program lends veterans up to $45,000 at 8.5 percent interest to purchase a home. The housing loan can be used in conjunction with a conventional, FHA or VA loan to give Texas veterans a lower overall interest rate.

In addition, veterans can receive up to $17,500 at 10.5 percent interest (plus FHA insurance) to make home improvements.

In addition to the regular loan programs, Sedeno said the VLB is currently offering special 3 and 4 percent financing on selected tracts of forfeited state land.

Eligible Texas veterans can receive the 3 percent financing and the general public is eligible for 4 percent financing. Sedeno emphasized that these special rates are only available for the purchase of certain tracts and only for a limited time.

Activities listed at Senior Center

The Senior Center's Kitchen Band will perform for the statewide County Treasurers convention in Abilene on Tuesday. Band members are asked to be at the Senior Center ready to depart for Abilene by 3 p.m.

Senior citizens who have handicrafts to be sold in the Senior Center's booth at the Scurry County Fair next weekend are to bring them to the center by 4 p.m. Wednesday. The items will be delivered to the coliseum in time for the opening of the fair at noon Thursday. Senior citizens who would like to sit in the booth are asked to put their names on a sign-up sheet in the center.

With the opening of the fall semester at Western Texas College, swimnastics for senior citizens has resumed on Tuesday and Thursday mornings from 9:30-10:45 a.m. Senior citizens need a sticker displayed on their car while it is parked on the campus so they will not get parking tickets. These can be bumper stickers from the center or stickers issued by the college. The stickers should be prominently displayed.

42 will be the featured game in the center on Monday, with play starting at 9:30 a.m. Hoss Clayton's band will perform in the dinning room at 11 a.m. Tuesday. The textile painting class will meet at 9 a.m. Thursday. The Sunshine Choir will sing at Snyder Nursing Center at 10 a.m. Friday and will sing at the fair at 5 p.m. Saturday. The Kitchen Band will play at the fair at 3 p.m. Saturday.

The Senior Center will be selling chances on a homemade quilt in its booth at the Scurry County Fair and will continue the sale of tickets through White Buffalo Days. The quilt will be given away during the intermission of the White Buffalo melodrama.

Tickets will be $1 each, with proceeds going to the operating fund of the center. Tickets can be purchased from senior citizens after the fair closes or at the Senior Center, located at 2603 Ave. M.

The quilt to be given away will be displayed in the Senior Center booth at the fair. Handicrafts made by senior citizens will be sold in the booth.

Surplus commodities will be distributed through the Senior Center on Wednesday. Morning hours will be 9-11 a.m. and afternoon hours are 1-3 p.m. Persons picking up the food items are asked to enter through the north doors.

Adam Rich must take drug tests judge orders

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge ordered Adam Rich tested for drugs after the cast member in the '70s TV series "Eight is Enough" fell asleep at a hearing on charges he burglarized a drugstore.

Van Nuys Municipal Court Judge Robert Swasey ordered the test Thursday after Rich dozed off. The hearing was postponed to Oct. 2.

Initial tests showed the 22-year-old actor had taken a drug a doctor prescribed, but an investigation was continuing, said Deputy District Attorney Teri Hutchison.

Democrats say Thomas may be ok'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats concede that Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas is heading toward confirmation despite lingering questions about his views, candor and qualifications.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., a liberal member of the Senate Judiciary Committee who has been critical of Thomas, predicted that the panel would vote to recommend the nominee's confirmation by the full Senate.

"I guess it will go in his favor," Simon said Friday as the panel wound down questioning of Thomas. Simon said Thomas still left him with questions about how he thought about a number of issues.

With the end of Thomas's testimony in sight, a smiling Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C. said: "We're very pleased the way the hearings went."

Thomas, nominated to be the second black Supreme Court justice, has endured four days of often harsh questioning about his extensive record as a conservative spokesman in the Reagan administration.

Democrats have accused him of giving evasive answers to avoid controversy about the views he expressed when he chaired the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

During a discussion Friday about religious freedom cases, Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., the panel's chairman, expressed frustration at what he termed Thomas's unwillingness to give categorical answers.

Biden noted that Justice David H. Souter set a new standard for unresponsiveness to the panel's questions at his confirmation hearings.

The committee is expected to complete its examination of Thomas on Monday. It will then begin hearing testimony from representatives of various interest groups, including civil rights organizations who oppose the nomination.

On Friday, Thomas generally faced milder questions from Democrats, who have failed to pin him down on such topics as abortion.

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., asked Thomas to trace his life story from a boyhood of poverty in racially segregated Georgia to Yale Law School.

Soybeans gains drop

By The Associated Press

Soybean traders were diverted by new crop data only briefly Friday before the Soviet Union reasserted itself as the dominant factor in the bean pit.

Wheat for delivery in September settled ½ cent lower at $3.23 a bushel; September corn was 1¼ cents lower at $2.50½ a bushel; September oats were 3¼ cents lower at $1.18¼ a bushel; and September soybeans were 2¾ cents higher at $5.92 a bushel.

Cattle futures were lower while hogs advanced on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Live cattle futures for delivery in October settled .37 cent lower at 71.65 cents; September feeder cattle were .03 cent higher at 85.30 cents a pound; October hogs were .30 cent higher at 45.70 cents a pound; and February pork bellies were .93 cent higher at 50.70 cents a pound.

Precious metals were mostly higher at New York's Commodity Exchange.

Gold for delivery in December was unchanged at $346.60 a troy ounce; and December silver was 3.5 cents higher at $4.043 a troy ounce.

Energy futures were mostly higher on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Light sweet crude oil for delivery in October was 15 cents higher at $21.68 a barrel; October heating oil was .51 cent higher at 61.68 cents a gallon; October unleaded gasoline was .34 cent higher at 61.69 cents a gallon; and October natural gas was .6 cent lower at $1.590 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Financial Focus

The greatest risk facing individuals aged 50 and over today is the high cost of long-term care. In fact, Americans over age 65 stand a 50 percent chance of requiring nursing home care. Add to that the fact that we are an aging population, and the threat becomes almost critical.

According to the U.S. Senate Special Committee on Aging, the number of Americans aged 65 and over (32 million in 1988) is projected to double over the next 50 years. Already, Americans over age 65 outnumber the total population of Canada.

During this century, life expectancy has increased by more than 27 years. A baby born in 1900 could expect to live 47.3 years. A baby born in 1990 can expect to live nearly 75 years. More than 75 percent of all Americans will reach 65, and those who do will, on average, live to see age 82.

This is good news for millions of Americans, but it can be devastating for millions more. As we live longer, we become more vulnerable to chronic diseases such as arthritis, hypertension, Alzheimer's and Parkinson's diseases, all of which often require long-term care. Unfortunately, only about 3 percent of people aged 65 and over are protected by long-term care insurance, according to the Health Insurance Association of America. Most people are unprepared to face the costs of long-term care coverage.

What are the options? Those with sufficient assets and reasonably good health may assume the potential risk of long-term care costs, but they can be staggering.

The average cost of nursing home care in the United States is $25,000 per year, and people who enter a nursing home typically stay an average of 2.5 years. That means they can plan to pay roughly $63,000 for long-term care alone. This does not include other medical and personal needs.

Another option is to buy adequate and affordable insurance protection. A limited number of reputable insurance companies now offer this protection. No doubt others will soon follow, but the challenge is to select a company with a proven record of paying claims and offering protection options that meet your needs.

Next week we will discuss some of the features of long-term care insurance and options you should consider before investing in any contract.

"From Now On"

By Homer Anderson

In Luke 5:1-11 Jesus told Peter where to cast his net for a great catch of fish. In verse 8 Peter said, "Depart from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord." Jesus told him, "Do not fear, from now on you will be catching men" (Verse 10).

We serve a "from now on" God! Later, on Pentecost, Peter told those whose hearts burned with the guilt of crucifying Christ, "Repent, and let each of you be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the forgiveness of your sins; and you shall recieve the gift of the Holy Spirit" (Acts 2:38).

God is ready to forgive and forget your past, if you will believe on Christ (Mark 16:16), repent and be baptized for forgiveness of sins (Acts 2:38), and serve Him faithfully "from now on" (Revelation 2:10).

Mathis gets 2nd Who's Who honor

Misty Mathis, a junior at Ira High School, recently received her second nomination for Who's Who Among American High School Students recognition. She is the daughter of Nathan and Cindy Mathis.

Her biography will be printed in the 25th anniversary edition of "Who's Who Among American High School Students."

Nominations for this award are received from over 14,500 high school members, scholarship agencies, youth club administrators and similarly qualified educators and advisors.

Only five percent of American high school students are included in Who's Who each year. Less than one-half of one percent are honored for two or more years.

Who's Who honorees are eligible for:

-A list of colleges and libraries subscribing to the publication upon request.

-The opportunity to compete for $75,000 in college scholarships.

-The opportunity to use the College Referral Service which links and refers Who's Who students to the colleges and universities which they are interested in attending.

-The opportunity to participate in the 23rd annual Who's Who Survey of High Achievers.

Lawsuit may be settled

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge has scheduled a hearing to consider final approval of a settlement in a class action lawsuit involving the state schools operated by the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, the department said.

The Nov. 25 hearing scheduled by U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders will consider a proposed agreement that would end a 17-year lawsuit filed on behalf of state school residents.

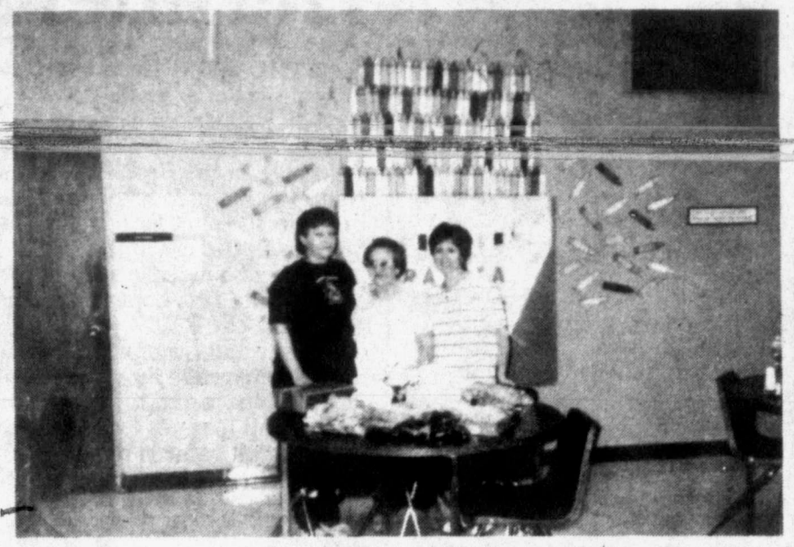

"The terms of the proposed settlement are fair, adequate, and reasonable and fall within the range of possible approval," Sanders wrote.

By the hearing date, court-appointed monitor Linda O'Neall will check compliance at the Austin, Denton, Fort Worth and San Antonio state schools.

She will report to Sanders on the schools' compliance with requirements for improving behavior treatment, medical care, educational and vocational services in reporting abuse and neglect.

ADA urges residents to support fundraiser

The American Diabetes Association, Texas Affiliate (ADA) is recruiting volunteers to participate in the annual Neighborhood Check for Diabetes Campaign in November. The goal of the nationwide campaign is to alert over 8.5 million households to the risks of diabetes and to raise $6 million to fund diabetes research and education.

"We will be calling selected residents of neighborhood blocks in the Snyder area to ask them to send preprinted information to approximately 17 of their neighbors," explains Ralph A. DeFronzo, M.D., spokesperson for the ADA of the Texas affiliate. "We hope that everyone we call says yes, when we ask them to be a Neighborhood Check For Diabetes volunteer. All it takes is a little time and the donation of stamps to mail the notes.

Diabetes affects approximately 830,000 people in Texas, and more than 14 million people in the U.S. It is a serious disease in which the body does not produce or respond to insulin, a hormone needed for daily life. The resulting high blood sugar can severly damage the heart, blood vessels, kidneys, eyes and nerves. If left untreated, diabetes can lead to death.

The ADA is the nation's leading voluntary health organization supporting diabetes research and education. It services the entire diabetes community through the efforts of thousands of volunteers from more than 800 affiliates and local chapters in communities across the U.S.

ACLU sues over Denton band's music and prayers

DENTON, Texas (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union went to court Friday to stop the Denton High School band from using religious music in its performances, including a football game halftime show.

"It promotes Christian religions over other religions, and it's contrary to those people who may not have any religious convictions at all," said Joe Cook, executive director of the North Texas regional office of the ACLU in Dallas.

Cook said in an afternoon news conference on the steps of a Denton County courts building that band director Don Hanna, by leading members of his band in prayer and by using religious songs, is violating constitutional guarantees of separation of church and state.

ACLU attorney Eliot Shavin of Dallas said he will ask state District Judge David White of Denton, in a hearing next week, for a temporary injunction against the use of religious themes in any performances of the Denton band.

The American Jewish Congress joined with the ACLU in pursuing the lawsuit, which was filed in White's 362nd State District Court, Cook said.

"Neither the AJC nor the ACLU is actually a party to a suit, but we are sponsoring the lawsuit," Shavin said. The lawsuit actually was filed by one parent and one student, neither of whom were identified in the legal papers except by pseudonym.

Denton school Superintendent Tim Sonnenberg met Friday afternoon with the school's attorney, Bill Griffin, concerning the lawsuit. Sonnenberg said earlier in the week that school officials would comply with any injunction.

Sonnenberg said he and school board members received several calls from parents concerned about the band's nine-minute routine, which begins with "The Old One Hundredth," better known as "The Doxology," by Louis Bergoues, and is followed by "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God," or "Ein' Feste Burg," by Martin Luther.

The presentation also includes "Precious Lord Take My Hand" by Tommy Dorsey, and a Dixieland version of "Send the Light."

Originally, band members were scheduled to march in a 15-second cross formation at one point in the routine. It was later changed to a flower formation after a parent complained.

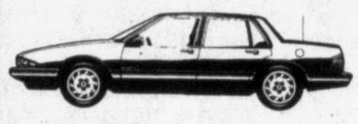

Named as defendants in the lawsuit are Hanna, Sonnenberg, Denton High School principal Milton Wallace and the individual members of the school board.

Cook said the Texas Constitution forbids spending state money for religious purposes.

CAR-STABLE CONVENTION ...
Politics in Texas have always been a little different than in most other states in the Union. The Democratic State Convention, meeting in Houston in August, 1892, fit right into this tradition. It was called the Car-Stable Convention, because the only building in town large enough to accommodate the delegates was the streetcar barn.

Tigers claim soggy 13-0 win

By PHIL RIDDLE
SDN Sports Editor

CLYDE - Thirteen is not such an unlucky number for the Snyder Tigers.

On Friday the 13th, they managed a 13-0 non-district win over the Clyde Bulldogs behind a swarming defense and a junior quarterback making his first varsity start.

The Tiger defense gave up just 91 total yards, 57 rushing and 34 passing, to the Bulldogs' vaunted wishbone attack.

Despite a constant downpour, junior Chris Sutherland completed six of 11 passes for 91 yards and no interceptions, taking Snyder to 1-1 on the season.

"Is that right," said an incredulous coach David Baugh when learning of the dominance of his defense in soggy Bulldog Stadium. "Ninety-one yards. That's a great night."

When looking for standouts following the game, Baugh pointed out his entire defensive squad, and the linebacking corps, in particular.

"I thought or defensive players played well," he said. "Probably our linebackers played better than what we thought they would.

"They were responsible for coming outside and filling gaps," Baugh continued. "I saw them make lots of plays."

The coach was pleased with his new quarterback's debut, as well.

"He had a pretty good game. But he can do better," he added quickly, smiling.

On the rest of the offense Baugh reported, "We have a long way to go, offensively. We busted lots of assignments."

On the positive side, however, the Tigers managed to hold onto the wet football, not suffering a single turnover.

"That's tremendous on a night like this," Baugh said.

While the Tigers were able to maintain possession of the slick pigskin, Clyde which lost three fumbles, began having turnover problems early.

On the second play from scrimmage, the Bulldogs' Jeff Roberts let the ball slip through his hands and to the turf.

Tiger noseguard Brad Williams recovered, setting Snyder in business at the CHS 18.

Snyder's offense sputtered and was put into a fourth and 15 hole at the Clyde 30 following an offsides penalty.

Sutherland whipped a 24-yard pass to tailback Mark King to the six that set up a four-yard TD rumble by fullback Wayland Harrison, two plays later.

Bobby Clinkinbeard added the point-after and with 9:35 to go in the first quarter, the Tigers led, 7-0.

Penalties, a slick field and a tough Bulldog defense kept the Snyder offense on its heels for most of the second quarter.

The Tigers were flagged six times in the half for 45 yards.

Late in the second period, however, tight end Hayward Clay made a one-handed grab of a Sutherland pass at the Clyde 9-yard line to set up a Jay Parker 20-yard field goal with 20 seconds left before intermission.

Defense was the name of the game in the last two quarters as the field and the ball got wetter and slicker.

With 5:48 left in the final stanza, the Tigers started on their last scoring drive as Will Clay carried the ball 24 yards on first down.

Sutherland hit Harrison for five more to the Bulldogs' 24 and King pounded the line for two before Parker drilled a field goal from 36 yards out to wind up the scoring.

Harrison was Snyder's leading rusher on the night, picking up 54 yards and a TD on 12 carries. Will Clay added 46 yards on just four attempts.

Mark King was the Tigers' top receiver, gaining 44 yards on two catches.

Clyde's top ground gainer was running back Jeff Roberts, who only managed 38 yards on 13 tries.

Bulldog quarterback Chris Chorn completed two passes in five attempts for 34 yards. Both catches were made by tight end Richard Drew.

Snyder returns to Tiger Stadium Friday as the hometowners host Littlefield in the 1991 homecoming game.

MCA edges 'Dogs in six-man battle

IRA — Quick, name a football team that has scored 123 points in its first two games and is still 0-2 on the season.

If you said the Ira Bulldogs you're right.

Ira's high-octane spread offense was outlasted by Midland Christian Friday, 60-59, on a 4-yard TD pass from Midland Christian's Andy Autry to Drew Atkins.

The Bulldogs fell in last week's season opener, 71-64, to Guthrie.

Ira had worked to a 46-39 lead against MCA on a six-yard Mike Hughes TD run before Atkins answered for the Mustangs on a 13-yard jaunt.

Ira stormed back for two more scores before the Autry-to-Atkins connection ended the battle.

The back-and-forth contest was hindered by a broken scoreboard clock. Officials kept the game time on the field with a stopwatch for much of the evening.

The Bulldogs will entertain Grady, a 42-12 loser to Borden County on Friday, next week.

Southland dumps Hermleigh, 40-18

SOUTHLAND — Hermleigh, in spite of a Daniel Hermosillo-led 18-point first-quarter blitz Friday night, fell to Southland, 40-18, in a non-district six-man game.

Hermosillo scored on a 12-yard pass from Brendan Blair at the 6:14 mark in the first and followed with a seven yard reception from Blair about four minutes later.

Hermosillo next hit paydirt on an 8-yard run that lifted the Cardinals to an 18-0 advantage.

Southland's defense stiffened in the second, however, and Alex Carrette hit Chris Lopez for a pair of TD strikes to close the gap to 18-12 at the half.

Carrette and Lopez connected again in the third, opening the 28-0 last-half barrage that sent Hermleigh to 0-2.

Lopez, on the night, hit 11 of 17 passes for 175 yards. He also carried the ball 16 times for 178 more.

Hermleigh returns to action Friday at Rule, a team that hammered District 6-A member, Highland, 49-6 Friday.

Adcock leads B.C. to non-district win

GAIL — Borden County got some measure of revenge Friday, pounding Grady, the team that ousted the Coyotes from the six-man playoffs in 1990, 42-12.

Brandon Adcock hauled the football 10 times for 141 yards and three touchdowns for the Coyotes in the win.

Borden County, now 1-1, became the only winner in two weeks of competition within District 6 by piling up almost 400 yards of offense to the Wildcats' 236.

The Coyotes, already holding a 28-6 margin in the fourth period, scored on a two-yard rush by Adcock and a 27-yard scramble by John Paul Harris.

The loss drops Grady to 0-2 on the campaign.

Borden County hosts Wellman as the Coyotes' non-district slate continues Friday.

Dallas-Eagles top Sunday NFL slate

by The Associated Press

This time, Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson won't have Buddy Ryan to kick around when the Cowboys play the Philadelphia Eagles.

Of course, that's not the only difference with the Eagles. For the second straight week, Jim McMahon will be the starting quarterback.

Last week, the Eagles (1-1) lost 26-10 to Phoenix and Washington beat Dallas (1-1) 33-31.

After a 27-0 loss to the Eagles on Thanksgiving Day 1989, Johnson claimed Ryan had a $200 bounty out to injure kicker Luis Zendejas and $500 on quarterback Troy Aikman.

"I didn't think a head football coach would stoop this low," Johnson said at the time. "I would have said something to Buddy but he wouldn't stand on the field long enough. He put his fat rear end into the dressing room."

Ryan denied the charges, but the two continued to trade insults.

After the 1990 season, Ryan was fired after a disappointing playoff loss and replaced by Rich Kotite.

"This is a tremendous rivalry," Kotite said. "All the games are hard- hitting and very competitive."

But this Sunday, the focus will be more on the field than on the sidelines.

With the season-ending knee injury sustained by Cunningham in Week 1, the Eagles and Cowboys may end up in a battle for a wild-card spot.

In losing to the Cardinals last week, the Eagles made six turnovers to spoil a decent performance by McMahon, who was 19-for-34 for 173 yars.

Philadelphia will have to stop running back Emmitt Smith to have a chance at controlling the ball. Against Washington, Smith had his second straight 100-yard rushing game with 112 yards on 11 carries, including a 75-yard TD, and caught eight passes for 42 yards and another score.

Amarillo grid coach glad for second chance

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Losing chunks of hair from chemotherapy treatments didn't bother George Cobb.

But what did get to the 42-year-old Amarillo High School assistant football coach was the thought of not being with his family.

"The thing that bothered me the most was the realization that my kids would be without their daddy as they grow up," Cobb said. "So I really didn't think about if I was going to die."

A year ago Cobb was far from a healthy father to his three children — Ty (16), Brian (6) and Jana (4) — as he began his 17th season of coaching football at Amarillo High.

Cobb, a former defensive lineman at the University of Texas, had been exhausted and losing weight from his 220-pound frame. Yes, he was on a diet. But this was ridiculous.

"I was incredibly weak and tired," Cobb said. "I couldn't do five pushups."

Cobb had been to a doctor in June, but here it was August 1990. His weakness was a mystery. When Cobb became so depleted during two-a-days that he couldn't stand up an entire practice, head football coach Larry Dippel had seen enough and sent him straight to the hospital from practice.

"Of course, I was really concerned," said Dippel, who has been coaching with Cobb at AHS since 1975. "He just couldn't go. But knowing George, I'm sure he was getting frustrated by the doctors."

Doctors continued to run tests on Cobb. By late September his weight had dropped to 170 pounds. None of his clothes fit.

"I lost about 10 pounds from the diet and the other 40 pounds due to the cancer," Cobb said. "They weren't quite sure why I was losing weight. They thought it was colon cancer, which scared me."

It was a form of liver cancer called lymphoma. According to 1991 statistics released by the American Cancer Society, an estimated 10,600 males will die in the United States this year from lymphoma.

The cure for lymphoma isn't a pill. Surgery is a last option. The highest rate of recovery is from chemotherapy treatments. Chemotherapy is a chemical treatment that kills cancer cells just barely faster than "healthy" cells.

Cobb has his own chemotherapy definition.

"Chemotherapy is 24 hours of nausea and vomiting. You try to go home and sleep. But every hour you're at the commode throwing up," he said.

"But they told me chemotherapy is the only treatment they knew that had any success for this type of cancer ... this was a one-shot deal."

Cobb remembers the day his 14 "chemo" treatments began. It was Oct. 13. By this time the Sandies were rolling to a 5-1 record on the field and were well on their way to a District 3-5A championship.

Eight days before Cobb's chemo treatments began he checked himself out of the hospital — against doctors wishes — to attend the Plainview-AHS game. While walking up the stairs to the Plainview press box after halftime, Cobb realized what a struggle life had become.

"I didn't recover from that walk until midway through the third quarter," said Cobb without a hint of regret.

"Psychologically, I needed out of that hospital. Normally, I'm down on the field. But I didn't know it would be so tough to walk up there ... the things you take for granted. Just a walk up some stairs."

While the Sandies would run off to an 11-3 record and their most playoff victories in 50 years, Cobb would run the race of life and death.

He would miss two of the Amarillo High games. But after missing a month and a half of school due to treatments, Cobb was teaching economics shortly after Thanksgiving — with a lot less hair.

"But I didn't have a hint of teasing," Cobb said. "Everybody at Amarillo High, not just the football players, were very supportive. From the administration, to Mr. Cargill (AHS principal David Cargill) to the students."

Late last spring, Cobb's treatments ended.

"Nothing ever felt better than knowing I'd taken my last chemo," Cobb said.

"Not to ever have to do that again was such a relief. Even if it didn't work, I was glad it was over. Anybody who has take that chemo, I have high respect for."

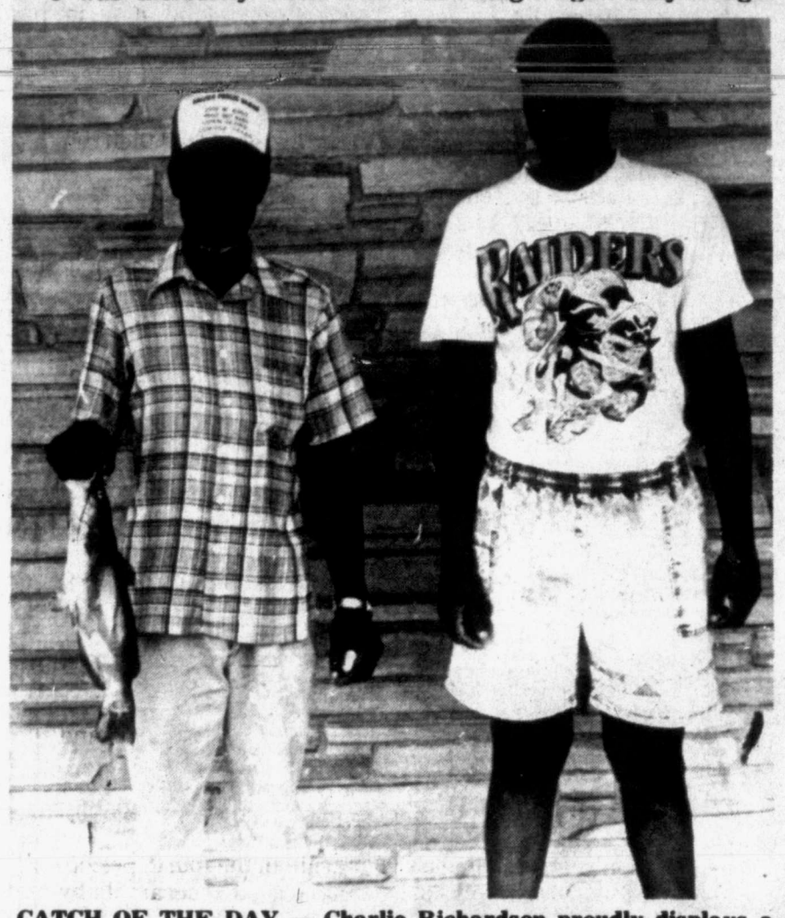

On Aug. 19, Cobb returned to his offensive line duties as Amarillo opened its 1991 season with two-a-day practices. He is a changed man.

"The thing it has made me is a better father," Cobb said. "I'm more aware of how that time is spent when I go home instead of sitting there reading that paper ... I sure do enjoy coaching. I think I'll do the best coaching job I've ever done this year."

"Personally, I think it's just a miracle," Cobb said. "I've been given a second chance."

Benefit golf scramble slated

A golf scramble to benefit the medical fund of Reba Erwin will be held Saturday, Sept. 21 at the WTC golf course.

Entry fee will be $25 per golfer with all proceeds going to the medical fund established for cancer patient Reba Erwin, Snyder school nurse.

The tournament will begin at 8 a.m. and tee-times are being accepted for morning and afternoon play.

To enter, call the WTC pro shop at 573-9291.

Biathlon is scheduled in Abilene

ABILENE — The 11th Annual Gil Harder Memorial Biathlon, featuring a 78-mile bicycle and foot race and a 50-mile bicycle tour is scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 5, here.

The race is named for a former Dyess Air Force Base pilot killed in a mountain climbing accident in 1979.

The event includes a 26.2 mile marathon along with a 52-mile bike ride, both run on a paved course south of Abilene.

The top five finishers will win awards and all participants will get a T-shirt.

Entry fee is $15 for individuals and $60 per team. For more information or to register, call (915) 692-7505.

Twins get by Rangers in 10

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Kirby Puckett hit a go-ahead single in the 10th inning and Kent Hrbek followed with a three-run homer Friday night as the Minnesota Twins beat the Texas Rangers 7-3.

Rookie Lenny Webster singled with one out off Kenny Rogers (9-10), Dan Gladden walked and Chuck Knoblauch flied out off Jeff Russell. Puckett then singled off second baseman Julio Franco's glove and Hrbek hit his 17th home run.

Terry Leach (1-1) got two outs for the victory and Rick Aguilera got the last two outs as Minnesota ended a five-game losing streak against the Rangers.

Reds pound Houston, 13-2

CINCINNATI (AP) — Paul O'Neill drove in five runs with a home run and a pair of doubles, as the Cincinnati Reds routed the Houston Astros 13-2 Friday night.

Jack Armstrong (7-11) allowed five hits and struck out three in seven innings, before Gino Minutelli finished.

Cincinnati scored twice in the first on an error and a double by O'Neill.

The Reds sent 10 batters to the plate in the second, scoring six times off rookie Ryan Bowen (4-4).

Mariano Duncan and Hal Morris had RBI singles, they both scored on O'Neill's second double, and Chris Sabo followed with a homer.

O'Neill drove in two more in the fifth inning with a home run.

TKD CAMP — Over 100 students, instructors and family members gathered at Possum Kingdom State Park recently for the 15th Annual West Texas Taekwondo Campout. Schools from Dallas, Ft. Worth, Lubbock, Snyder, and many surrounding towns attended the event, sponsored by Snyder's West Texas Taekwondo Academy and headed by Greg Gafford. The camp features hand-to-hand combat techniques, self-defense, survival skills and terrain utilization. The camp, which began as a fun weekend and a chance to workout outdoors, has grown into an all-state training camp. (Contributed Photo)

Fire in jail kills four and injures at least 24

FORSYTH, Mo. (AP) — A fire that shut off power at a county jail early Saturday trapped 28 prisoners in their cells, killing four of them and injuring several others, authorities said.

The fire at the Taney County Jail in southwestern Missouri was believed to have been caused by an auxiliary power generator, said county Sheriff Chuck Keithley. A jail dispatcher and at least two firefighters also were injured.

Four inmates were known to have died, said Regional Chief Fire Marshal Investigator Bill Zieres. Hospitals in the area reported receiving about two dozen people, six in serious condition.

The fire was under control about 6:30 a.m., Zieres said.

Keithley said a backup generator caught fire about 3:45 a.m. and pumped smoke into the jail.

"Something cut off our main power and when (the backup) kicked in, something happened in our backup power," Keithley said. Because the power was off, the electronically controlled cell doors couldn't be opened, he said.

"We have an emergency opener in there, but for some reason we had a problem with that," he said.

Sheriff's Investigator Dick Ringler said the dispatcher on duty was able to radio for help before his system went down, and apparently tried to get some of the prisoners out, but the smoke was too thick.

"The dispatcher was taken to the hospital for smoke inhalation," Ringler said. "We don't know what all he did manage to do before that."

The prisoners were trapped in their cells until firefighters arrived with air masks and used a special tool to open each cell.

"We have a lever that fits in to the lock and you have to crank it open, and we did that individually with each cell," Ringler said. "Our maximum-security area was the toughest to get in. We had to use a cutting torch on that."

However, he said those prisoners were not severely injured.

"They seemed to do fairly well," he said. "They packed the doors with blankets. We took everyone to the hospital. I think all of them had some smoke inhalation."

Sheriff's officers cordoned off the lawn outside the jail as medics worked on two people who apparently suffered critical injuries.

At least 23 people believed to be jail inmates were brought by helicopter and ground ambulance to Skaggs Community Hospital in nearby Branson, said hospital administrator Russ Russell.

Most of the injuries appeared to be from smoke inhalation.

He said four people in serious condition were brought to Skaggs, and one was transferred to Cox South Medical Center in Springfield. Russell said the injured include men and women.

Officials at the scene said some of the injured were firefighters.

Forsyth is near Table Rock Lake in far southwestern Missouri, about 35 miles south of Springfield.

3 arrested; police note 5 accidents

Snyder police worked five accidents, took a report of felony theft and made three arrests Friday and early Saturday.

Officers arrested a 25-year-old male at 10:44 p.m. Friday at 30th and Ave. V on an outstanding DPS warrant for speeding and a failure-to-appear warrant from Scurry County. He was transported to the county jail.

A 51-year-old male was arrested at 9:14 p.m. Friday at Kathy's Club and charged with being intoxicated on licensed premises. He was transported to the county jail.

At 10:35 p.m. Friday, officers took a 13-year-old male into custody at Skinney's on the East Hwy. for shoplifting. The juvenile was released to his parents later in the evening.

At 5:44 p.m. Friday, officers were notified by Danny Dennis that property had been taken from 3607 College Ave. A report for felony theft was filed.

Officers worked the first of five traffic accidents at 6:10 a.m. Friday. Involved were a 1991 Mack dump truck driven by Antonio Martinez of 2701 Ave. L and a utility pole owned by Snyder Cablevision. The accident took place in the 1300 block of Ave. R.

At 3:19 p.m. Friday, officers worked an accident at 15th St. and Ave. T involving a 1981 Ford driven by Mary Alexander Gill of 811 28th St. and a 1983 Buick driven by Delia Maldonado of Rt. 3. No wrecker or ambulance was needed.

Police worked a hit-and-run at 5:34 p.m. in the 110 block of 33rd. St. Involved were a 1982 Ford which left the scene, a chain link fence owned by Leslie Brown Forrest of 3207 Hill Ave., and a parked 1976 Chevrolet owned by Mayo Barry Wayne of 112 33rd. St.

Nine minutes later, officers worked an accident in the 1300 block of 27th St. which involved a 1986 Dodge driven by Candelario Martinez of 605 30th St. and a 1988 Ford driven by Anthony Wofford of 4000 Eastridge. No wrecker or ambulance was needed.

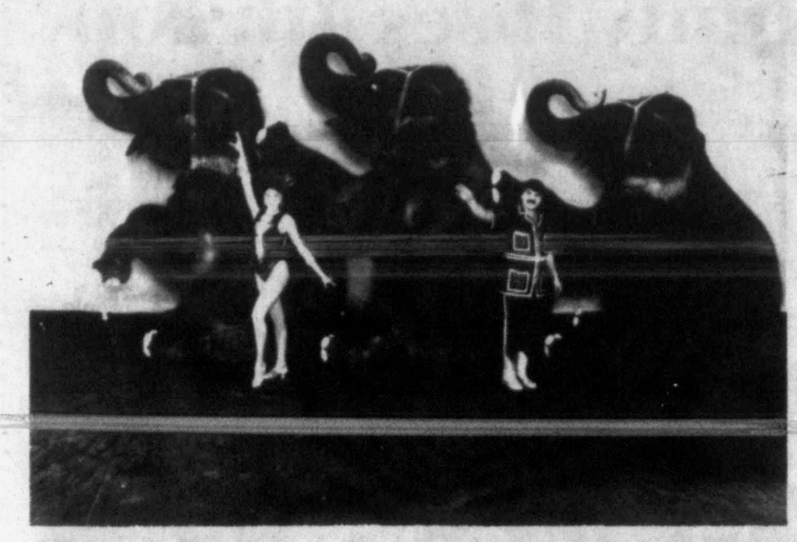

Officers also worked an accident at 3:39 a.m. Saturday at Huffman and Ave. R. Involved were a 1979 Mercury and a utility pole owned by TU Electric. The driver of the Mercury left the scene of the accident and the vehicle was towed.

California S&L shut; depositors may have to wait

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators on Friday shut down California's Columbia Savings and Loan Association. For the first time in closing a failed institution, they will not immediately pay off all insured depositors.

Columbia, based in Beverly Hills, was once the industry's biggest speculator in high-yield, high-risk junk bonds and worked closely with the now-imprisoned Michael Milken, once Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.'s junk bond chief.

The S&L was seized in January by the Resolution Trust Corp., which kept it open while it sought to wind up its business. The ultimate cost to taxpayers of the failure is estimated at $1.2 billion.

CIRCUS ELEPHANTS — Circus elephants will be a part of the Shrine Circus to be held in the Scurry County Coliseum at 2 p.m. and 6 p.m. on Sunday. Tickets in advance are $5 for adults and $4 for youth and senior citizens. Tickets at the door are $6 for adults and $5 for youth and senior citizens. Sunday's event will be the 41st annual Shrine Circus presented by Suez Temple A.A.O.N.M.S., Snyder Shrine Club and Mitchell County Shrine Club. (Circus Photo)

Character wanted to play football

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — John Goodman's character on ABC's "Roseanne," like many American men, is a couchside football player who once dreamed of playing on the college gridiron.

Unlike many American men, the 38-year-old comedian will get a little closer to the action Saturday when he appears in the season opener for the Southwest Missouri State University Bears.

He won't go into the huddle, but they're giving him a team jersey before the game.

Goodman transferred to Southwest Missouri from a St. Louis junior college in hopes of playing football. As a transfer student, he couldn't play, however, so he enrolled in the drama department.

Rocks in Arizona create controversy

SEDONA, Ariz. (AP) — The wheel-like rock formations in the scenic red-rock canyon below Munds Mountain look unnaturally symmetrical.

That's because they've been rearranged several times by New Age mystics who say the pattern of circles helps channel spiritual energy. The Sedonia district ranger, Robert Gillies Jr., says the mystics shouldn't be messing with Mother Nature.

Thousands of years of natural movement by wind and water had arranged the black rocks — from pebbles to 3-foot boulders — into a flowing S-curve on the red ground. Now they lie in a series of interlocking circles, some with spoke-like patterns inside, covering an area some 50 yards across.

After the circles first appeared in 1987, Coconino National Forest rangers repeatedly tried to return the rocks to some semblance of their natural arrangement. But when the New Age people kept rearranging them the rangers finally gave up.

"I have no qualms with people using the resources; it's theirs," said Gillies. "But messing with Mother Nature's fancywork. It's gone. It was a unique formation. You can't duplicate it."

The wheels lie about five miles from Sedona, an artsy enclave in the mountains 100 miles north of Phoenix. The town in recent years has attracted upscale New Agers who believe the energy of the cosmos is strong where the pine forest meets the red-rock spires of canyon country.

New Agers call the circular formation a vortex, something like the American Indians' prayer wheels, and say it helps focus spiritual energy.

"The Indians that settled in Sedona found the power spots and held their ceremonies at the medicine wheels," said Ron Babin, director of Sedona's Center for the New Age.

The town was among several hot spots worldwide for the 1987 Harmonic Convergence, in which New Agers gathered in the belief their combined psychic energy could work wonders. Healings and other such events were enhanced around the wheels, Babin said.

Lawyer sues

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — A lawyer Aretha Franklin hired to act as guardian for the singer's mentally ill son is suing, saying she owes nearly $11,000 for legal bills.

Suzanne Dreifus of Southfield says Franklin owes her $10,728, according to the lawsuit filed Thursday in Oakland County Circuit Court.

Dreifus was hired in 1989 to be legal guardian for Clarence Franklin, 35, according to the lawsuit. A chronic paranoid schizophrenic, Clarence Franklin is in an adult foster home, according to court records.

Astro-Graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

Sept. 14, 1991

Your potential for success could be at a high point in the year ahead. You may have more opportunities to succeed than you've had in the past, but it's imperative you always finish what you start.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're likely to be rather enterprising today — for others, provided they're of the same mind and willing to do things exactly as you dictate. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It might be rather difficult for you to keep secrets today. Before make disclosures to anyone, be certain the individual you're talking to can be trusted.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Financial conditions could be somewhat mixed for you today. However, if you keep a close tab on all the small expenses, you should wind up on the plus side of the column.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It's best not to talk about objectives you hope to achieve today until they are accomplished, because if you fail to do so, it could be embarrassing later.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In order to sway others to your cause today, you might stretch a few facts. You'll accomplish your purpose, but the people may later resent your tactics.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If an enthusiastic friend tries to induce you to participate in a venture today, proceed cautiously. This individual's intentions may be good, but the deal might not.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you're looking for an assistant today, avoid seeking aid from a talkative associate who normally doesn't produce. Enlist the help of a quiet, dependable coworker instead.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you have a difficult assignment to contend with today, listen attentively to instructions and carefully read any related material. Misunderstandings spell trouble.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You might suffer a small loss today due to an oversight by an individual with whom you're closely involved. To be on the safe side, each should double-check the other's procedures.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It's not likely to be the big things that will irritate your mate today and trigger a ruckus. It could be something as insignificant as not putting the cap back on the toothpaste tube.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It might be necessary for you to make an extra effort today to focus your mind on the work at hand. If you're undisciplined, you could knock over your favorite flower vase while dusting.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Beware of the bargain basement today; your sales resistance could be very low, and you might buy silly things for which you have no real need.

Your Birthday

Sept. 15, 1991

Be alert for bigger and better breaks where your career is concerned in the year ahead. It might be wise to begin to prep yourself now for a top spot, even though it may be several rungs up the ladder.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Being too self-involved today could prove to be counterproductive. You may worry so much about the impression you'll make that the actions you'll take will be ineffective. Virgo, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Virgo's Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You might be torn between a responsibility and something you'd really like to do today. Find a happy medium, because you won't be at ease with either extreme.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It might be prudent to play things close to the vest financially today. Your extravagant impulses are stirring, and discipline will be required.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Try to operate within areas where you feel safe and comfortable today, both in social and business settings. If you venture into uncharted waters, you might have to swim among the sharks.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Those you're closely involved with today may be more generous toward you than you are toward them. If you give as well as take, you'll like the face in your mirror a whole lot better.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Keep a tight reign on expenses related to leisure or non-essential activities today. The best things in life aren't measured by their price tags.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you want to move up in the world today, give credit where credit is due. Taking bows for another's efforts is the mark of a chump, not a champ.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try to keep an open mind today and be receptive to sound suggestions, regardless of who is the author. Just because you dislike certain people doesn't mean their ideas are bad.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you base your expectations on an unrealistic premise today, you're likely to be disappointed. Be mindful of the odds: The long-shot odds are high because their chances are low.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Making an important decision today in order to appease another could create complications for both parties. First, to thine own self be true.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Things may still work out for you today in spite of the fact that you'll fail to use the best methods available to accomplish your goals. Nevertheless, this is not a smart way to run your show.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Draw a definite line of demarcation between your business and social activities today. If you try to turn a fun event into a sales call, you won't like the results.

Panel: openness of government is dwindling

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas officials frequently take the easy way out instead of adhering strictly to the state's Open Meetings Act — and the trend is worsening, media advocates and a former state senator said Friday.

Legislative accessibility was the topic of a panel discussion at the 1991 John Henry Faulk Freedom of Information Conference. Some 150 registrants were expected to participate in the conference and the subsequent 2nd National FOI Assembly, scheduled to end Sunday.

Retired Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr. died in Washington in 1935.

Ill-fated wrestling family loses 4th son

DALLAS (AP) — The story goes that the wrestling Von Erichs were so popular, fighting stopped in the Middle East when they were on television.

A father and his sons were the good guys, cocky protectors of all that is right, all to the delight of thousands of screaming fans.

But out of the ring, the Von Erichs, who are really the Adkissons, have been decimated by personal tragedy.

The latest blow came Thursday night as Chris, the youngest of six brothers, died from an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound. He is the fourth brother to die.

"Some families seem to have everything in the world happen to them, while others go along with nothing unusual. A great deal of this is the business they came into, the lives they lived, the pressure they were under," said Bill Mercer, former wrestling announcer for the family.

"The thing that always puzzles me is that all these boys went into wrestling," said Mercer, now broadcast coordinator at the University of North Texas. "I suppose it is like gymnastic or circus families. They all stick together. But I could never convince my three boys to do the same thing."

Chris Adkisson was found shot in the head Thursday night by his mother and a brother at the family's 500-acre East Texas ranch, Peace Justice Bill Lemmert of Tyler said Friday.

Van Zandt County Sheriff Pat Jordan said that Von Erich's wound appeared to be self-inflicted. A 9mm pistol and an apparent suicide note were found by authorities at the ranch in Edom, about 75 miles east of Dallas.

The Von Erichs were popular in the 1980s with their show World Class Championship Wrestling, syndicated in 66 U.S. television markets as well as the Middle East, Japan and Argentina.

They once wrestled in front of 40,000 people in Texas Stadium, and regularly filled the 17,007-seat Reunion Arena.

Tragedy stalked the Von Erichs early when 7-year-old Jack Adkisson Jr. was accidentally electrocuted in 1959.

Mike Adkisson, 23, died in April 1987 of an apparent suicide after a series of health troubles. His death was due to an overdose of a tranquilizer, and authorities found notes at his car and residence.

David, considered the best wrestler, died at age 25 of an inflammation of the intestine during a wrestling tour of Japan in 1984.

"Chris was a teen-ager when his brothers David and Mike died. And, as a younger brother, he was stricken by all of this," said Mercer. "He had idolized the older brothers, the fame and what they attained."

He said an Israeli promoter once told him the wrestlers were so popular that when their show aired, soldiers in Lebanon and Palestine would stop fighting to watch.

"I used to visit the farm where the brothers grew up above Lake Dallas, for promotions," he said. "Chris was the younger brother who was very close to Mike, and when he died, that was tough for him especially."

Family members said they were shocked and hurt by the death of 21-year-old Chris, who was living at the ranch.

"I think Chris felt he would not make it as a professional wrestler. He wanted out," said his father, Jack Adkisson, who wrestled as Fritz Von Erich. "He took the only way out he knew."

At the Sportatorium, the Dallas arena where the family once wrestled, there was no acknowledgement of the tragedy. A telephone recording there touted Global Wrestling Federation matches, but did not mention the Von Erichs.

"I really sympathize with their mother, who is a wonderful lady," said Mercer. "I don't know how she survived this. The same is true for the father, Fritz or Jack. The question is how much more grief can a family bear?"

Jordan said that another brother, 33-year-old Kevin, reported Chris appeared to be distraught before the shooting. The sheriff did not know why.

"But that family has had (its) share of troubles," said Jordan.

There have been lawsuits against longtime promoters, and their Dallas TV show was canceled.

Kevin said that an elbow injury also had been worrying his brother.

"He also felt like he had some really big shoes to fill," said Kevin, who uses the "Iron Claw" as a ring trademark. "And the medicine they gave him for asthma just stunted his growth. It just wasn't there for Chris."

Nicknamed "Buddy" and sometimes introduced at matches as a cousin, Chris entered the sport several years ago, after his brothers' heyday had all but passed.

Brian Earles had a working vacation this summer, but he didn't mind one bit as he was a program counselor at Philmont Scout Ranch near Cimarron, N.M.

Philmont is one's of Boy Scouts' four National High Adventure Bases. Others are located in Florida, Maine and Canada.

From June 6 through Aug. 11, Earles, who advanced to the rank of Eagle Scout in February, taught younger scouts the art of roping, other ranching duties and camping out. Some 212 scouts were at Philmont during his stay.

Earles enjoyed working with the younger scouts because he said they reminded him of himself when he was their age. Always fond of the outdoors, he has spent years camping out. That, in fact, is one of the main reasons he decided to join scouts. He likes canoeing and hiking and described the back country of Philmont as "beautiful."

He also helped take care of the horses on the ranch — a popular chore for scouts — and took his turn as the chuck wagon cook.

Philmont consisted of several camps, each representing a different theme such as Indian camp and cattle camp. Beaubien, the largest camp, was where Earles was stationed. Other camps specialized in rock climbing and rapelling.

Scouts could also explore a mine shaft near Baldy Town, a mining town. At one time, a mine shaft had been built through the mountain but no gold was ever found there.

Safety precautions were taken with scout activities, such as exploring the mine shaft. Medical needs were taken care of at the first aid camp or a health lodge staffed by medical students called the "quack shack." During his stay, Earles said one scout was bucked off a horse and another one had an allergic reaction to kerosene smoke.

From Baldy Mountain, he said he could see Angel Fire resort. Mule deer were plentiful and rattlesnakes were around, but Earles said they weren't much of a problem.

While there, he acquired some branding irons.

His day usually started at 7 a.m. but when it was his turn to feed the horses he got up at 4:30 a.m. Gingling meant getting feed bags for 35 horses and getting them ready to be saddled for the day's work ahead.

Breakfast was usually served at 7:30 a.m. Afterward, scouts scattered, some to do program work or cabin duty such as cleaning up and checking the water tanks and taking crews back to camp site. Duties rotated daily.

Program activities, such as roping, branding, or shoeing horses kept the scouts busy on a daily basis. They also learned how to rope cattle by using a dummy and they also used dummies when learning about branding cattle. Branding proved to be one of the "more fun" activities far as scouts were concerned.

Some scouts came to Philmont from Japan and Earles said everyone enjoyed seeing the Japanese scouts try to brand something. He said they could read English but none of them could speak it very well.

Scouts in charge of the chuck wagon began preparing the meal around 4 p.m. Other scouts could follow their own pursuits until the 8 p.m. meal.

Earles' first trip to Philmont was in the summer of 1988 when he was a camper. When he had time off, he said he often went to Cimarron which had a population of 270 people or Red River which was 60 miles away.

Earles applied in January but it was nearly June before he was notified that he had been hired.

Factors in his favor included being an Eagle Scout, having already been to Philmont as a scout, applying early, and good contacts within the organization.

He said Philmont is an especially good place to be because it lets you "forget all about your problems."

Philmont consists of 137,493 acres or approximately 214 square miles. It is located in the Angre de Cristo Mountains of New Mexico near Cimarron.

It draws over 16,000 scouts during its summer season of 68 days. Both boys and girls — age 13-17 — are eligible to attend. Scouts come from all over the U.S. and the world.

Over 500,000 scouts have attended Philmont over the past 50 years. It celebrated its 50th anniversary in both 1988 and 1989.

Earles also attended the Boy Scouts Jamboree in 1989 which is held every four years.

Since joining Boy Scouts at age 11, Earles said he always wanted to become an Eagle Scout. To qualify he had to complete requirements for 21 merit badges. Eleven are for Eagle Scout status.

He also had to complete a project which would help persons not related to Boy Scouts. Earles chose making two redwood tables for Humble Smith School. He said he got the idea from his parents who were "flipping through a book one day."

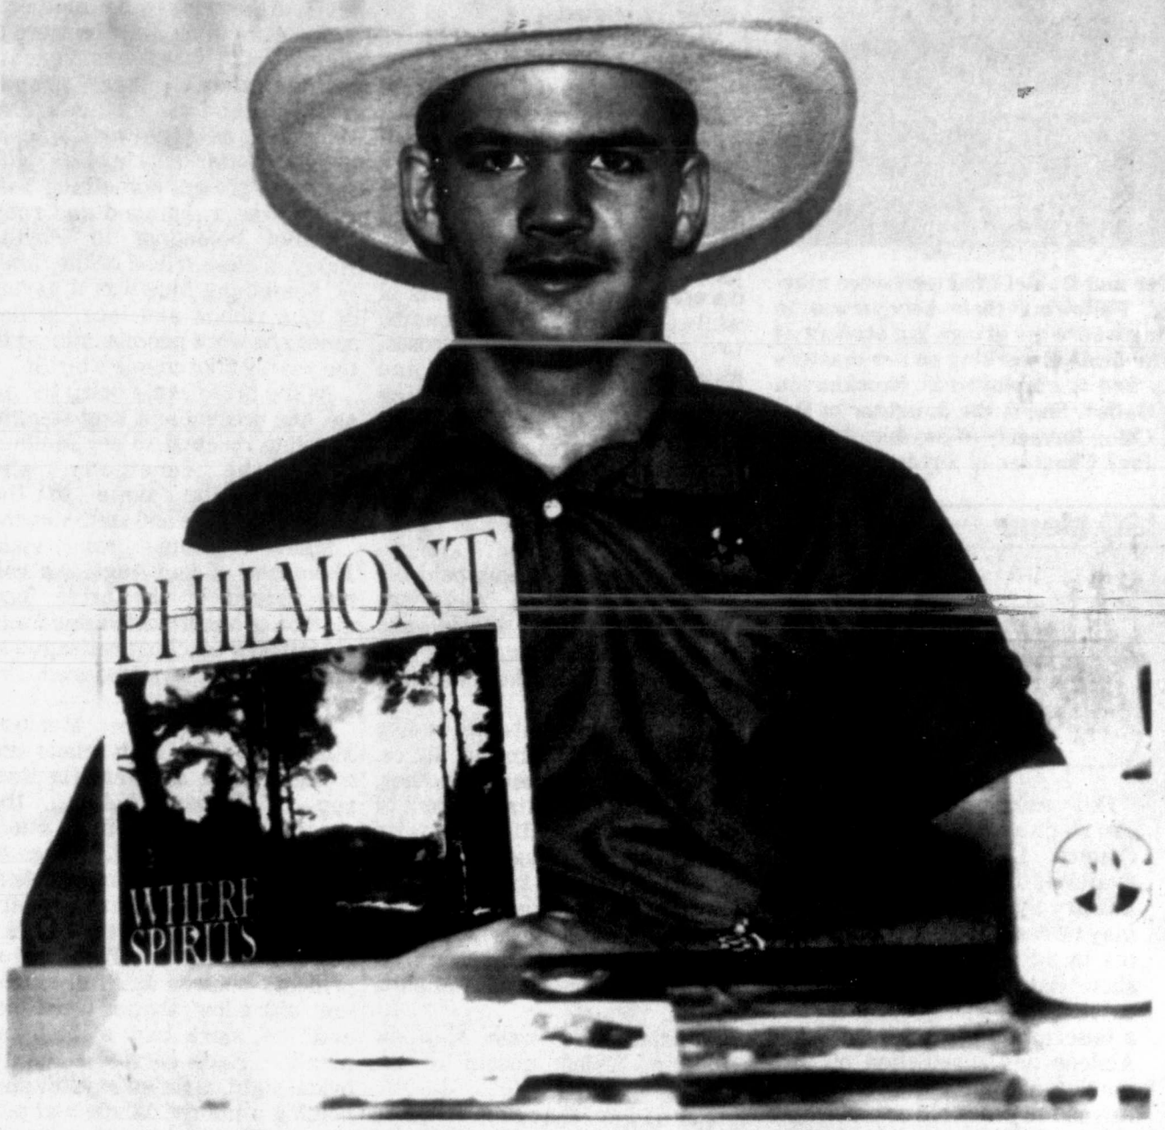

There turned out to be more to the project than he first thought. The work was completed though, in two weeks and he received help from other Boys Scouts in his troop.

Earles has held several positions in Boy Scouts including patrol leader, senior patrol leader, troop guide (current position), and junior assistant scout master (an appointed position.)

Earles has lived in Snyder for 12 years. He is a senior at Snyder High School and the son of Leon and Nina Earles. He has a younger brother, Patrick, who is also in Boy Scouts.

Besides Boy Scouts, Brian is also a member of the Snyder Future Farmers of America (FFA) chapter, and plays the valve trombone in the high school band.

After graduation, he said he wants to pursue agriculture studies in college.

HIGH ADVENTURE — Brian Earles, Eagle Scout, spent several weeks in New Mexico this summer as an employee of Philmont Ranch, one of Boy Scout's four high adventure camps. He said he enjoyed the surroundings very much and liked working with younger scouts. (SDN Staff Photo)

Hood, Harrup nuptials held

Deanne Hood of Lancaster, formerly of Snyder, became the bride of Stephen Montgomery "Monty" Harrup Jr. of Dallas, formerly of Waco, in double ring rites at 7 p.m. on July 27 in Colonial Hill Baptist Church.

The Rev. Miller Robinson, pastor, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Drs. Duane and Mary Hood and the bridegroom is the son of Stephen Montgomery and Delora Harrup of Waco and Phyllis and Mike Kloeckner of Austin.

The church was centered with a heart shaped 17-light candelabrum flanked by two 15-light candelabras. Each was decorated with arrangements of white starburst pom-pom mums, fire and ice and minuet roses, pink larkspur, mauve and burgundy carnations, pink alstroemeria lillies and baby's breath with springeri tree fern and ruscus foliages. Arrangements of greenery decorated the base of each candelabrum. The ribbon-sculptured unity candle held the wedding invitation and was decorated with fire and ice and minuet roses and burgundy and mauve carnations, held together by mauve ribbons.

Silk arrangements of mauve roses and alstroemeria lillies, created by the groom's mother, also adorned the altar in front of the music stand. Fifty white satin bows with tulle, dusty rose and burgundy satin ribbons, and English ivy marked the aisles. The white satin bows with tulle were loaned by the bride's first grade teacher, Mrs. Martha Floyd.

Candlelighter was Matthew Hood of Tyler, cousin of the bride.

Jerald Garner sang "Somewhere in the World" and "Wind Beneath My Wings," dedicated to the parents of the bride and groom. Mrs. Barbara Mott, who taught the bride piano lessons as a little girl, accompanied Garner and played the processional, "The Wedding March," by Wagner, and the recessional, "The Wedding March," by Mendelssohn. Harpist Mrs. Kim Gorman presented the prelude, "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, wore a gown by Bridal Originals made of embroidered white Alencon lace, satin trimmed with pearls and iridescent sequins. The fitted bodice flowed to a Basque waistline with embellished lace accents. The sweetheart V-neckline was comprised of pearled and sequined sheer lace. Full length puff sleeves, with sheer lace appliques, cascaded to the pearled point at the wrists. The full skirt of satin, was floor length and featured an embroidered lace hem. The cathedral length train of satin had cut-out lace appliques gradually flowing to the edge of the train, accenting the skirt. The open V-back of the skirt was draped with pearls and was accented with a V-shaped bow with two rosettes.

Her veil featured a re-embroidered Alencon lace headpiece studded with seed pearls and iridescent sequins. It was outlined with loops of pearls and iridescent beads. Her fingertip veil and blusher of silk illusion was scattered with seed pearls.

The bride carried a cascading silk arrangement made by Kim Hussey, a teaching colleague. It featured mauve sweetheart roses and buds, carnations, and gypsophilia leatherleaf fern, baby's breath and pearl sprays. It was accented with burgundy and mauve ribbons and streamers. attached was a lace handkerchief given to the bride by her mother.

For something old, she wore a ring that was her great-grandmother's, her grandmother's, and her mother's. For something new she wore a pearl necklace and earrings, a gift from the groom. Something borrowed was a diamond and ruby bracelet belonging to Phyllis Haley, a close friend of the family. Something blue was a garter of blue ribbon and lace. In her shoes she wore pennies minted in the years of the couple's births.

As the bride came down the aisle, she presented a long stemmed white rosebud to her mother. After the ceremony, she presented the same to the groom's mother and stepmother.

Maid of honor was Vicki Thompson of San Angelo, a college friend of the bride, and matron of honor was Jamie Page of Dallas, a teaching colleague of the bride who introduced the bride and groom.

Bridesmaids were Monique Miller of Austin, high school and college friend, and Jennifer Harrup of Phoenix, Ariz., the groom's sister. All four attendants wore matching dresses of mauve satin. Their off-the-shoulder gowns featured collars with tab fronts that were tied in a bow in the back. Their fitted princess bodices and full skirts, met with a low, shaped waistline, and the skirt had a high-low hemline. Each carried a maid's bridal light, a fluted crystal dish holding a mauve candle and potpourri. The globe was adorned with a cascade of mauve roses, baby's breath, greenery and a burgundy bow with streamers.

Best man was Ken Hering of Austin. Groomsmen were Barry Hefner of Waco, Joel Rimlinger of Lake Charles, La., and Gary Page of Dallas. Ushers were Richard Early of Dallas and Jeff Tankersley of San Angelo.

The groom wore a Christian Dior Grey Parisian fulldress tuxedo of European fabric with a subdued stripe and six-button style. Matching pleated pants and a matching four-button vest with satin lapels complemented the three inch double fabric bow tie.

Sara Carothers of Waco, the groom's stepsister, registered guests at the memorial table in the church foyer. It displayed baby pictures of the bride and groom, the bride's book and a mauve feathered pen. Also the serving table at the reception was covered with a mauve cloth with a white lace topper. It was decorated with the bride's throw-away bouquet, a mauve feathered pen, the bride's book and a copy of the wedding invitation quilled by Mrs. Jan Thomas.

Honored guests were great-aunts and uncles of the bride, Mrs. Nell Wolfe of Dallas, Mrs. Bess Osborne of Dallas and Della and Curtis Paroline of Athens.

The reception was held in the banquet room at Willow Park Inn. The bride's table featured a Lady Windmier European style cake. The cake stand of crystal and gold held a three tiered cake, surrounded by five two tiered heart shaped cakes. The three tiers of the main cake rested upon 14-inch crystal pillars. A fountain, flowing blue water, was surrounded by the bride's chosen flowers. The heart cakes were accented by lighted bulbs and crystal prisms. Heart shaped designs decorated the edges of the cake, accented with pearls. A Fleur-de-Lis design completed the decor.

The confection was especially designed for the bride and groom by Reta Graham. Trays held rose and heart shaped mints, made the bride's mother, and nuts. The bride's bouquet and a silver candelabrum completed the arrangement.

A second table held finger sandwiches, fruit, cheese and crackers, dips, chips and nuts.

Serving were the bride's aunt, Mrs. Cheery Dobbs of Texarkana and Ms. Phyllis Haley.

The groom's table, covered with a cloth featuring a design of a nine hole golf course, was made by the groom's mother. It held a brass fountain containing punch. Mixed nuts and mints were served from crystal trays.

The groom's cake displayed a golfer and a cutout of the bride. The chocolate cake was covered with green cream cheese frosting that was decorated like a golf green.

Serving was Mrs. Cara Hering of Austin.

The couple's honeymoon trip was to Orlando, Fla., where they stayed at the new hotel, Port Orleans. They visited Disney World, Epcot Center and the MGM Studio.

They are at home in Lancaster where the bride is currently in her second year of teaching the fourth grade at Millbrook Elementary and the groom is a dealer account merchandiser for Glidden Paint Co. in Dallas.

The bride was reared in Snyder where she graduated in 1987 and attended WTC. She graduated from Angelo State University in San Angelo in 1990, with a B.S. in elementary education. The groom was reared in Waco where graduated from Midway High School in 1983. He attended McLennan Community College in Waco and graduated from Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos in 1988 with a B.B.A. in marketing.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents in the banquet room of Willow Park Inn on July 26.

Children wonder about freckles

Melanin, Tan and Freckles

Deep in your skin are cells that make a brown pigment called melanin (say: MEL-uh-nin). Sunlight makes your body produce more melanin. That's why you get a tan.

Sunlight also can make freckles appear. That's because freckles are just clumps of melaninun under the skin. They appear because they darken more quickly than surrounding skin.

Melanin helps to protect skin from the harmful rays of the sun. But people who have less melanin get sunburned, because they have less protection. A sunburn is a first-degree burn. That means it burns the top layer of your skin, turning it red.

Getting sunburns — and even tanning — can cause wrinklin and skin disease. So slap on that sunscreen when you hit the beach — or the slopes.

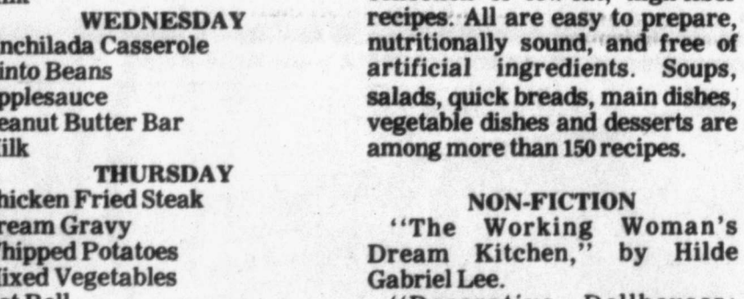

Picky Eaters

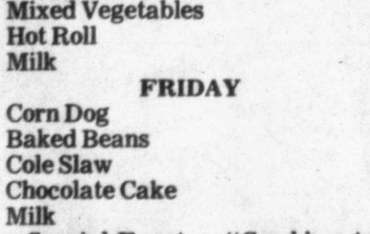

Mother knows best — especially is you're a sea otter pup. It seems that most young otters develop the same food likes and dislikes as their moms.

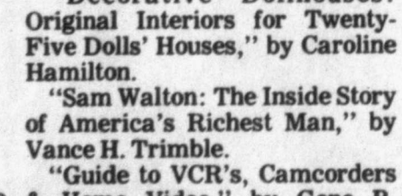

Researchers at California's Monterey Bay Aquarium offered grown-up otters a choice of 50 types of seafood. They discovered each otter only chose three or four items from the "menu." And the otters mainly wanted to eat that good ol' mom had fed them.

Mexican troops under Gen. Antonio Lopez de Santa Ana began the siege of the Alamo in 1836 in San Antonio, Texas.

A scriptwriter and bridge player

By Phillip Alder

In 1986 my friend Dennis Spooner died at 54. Though he began his adult life as a professional soccer player in London, he is much better known as a scriptwriter for television drama series such as Jason King, Hart to Hart, The Avengers, Sting Ray, Thunderbirds — the list goes on and on.

Spooner, who played a sound game of bridge, also wrote an amusing, self-deprecating column called "Diary of a Palooka." Today's hand is taken from one of these.

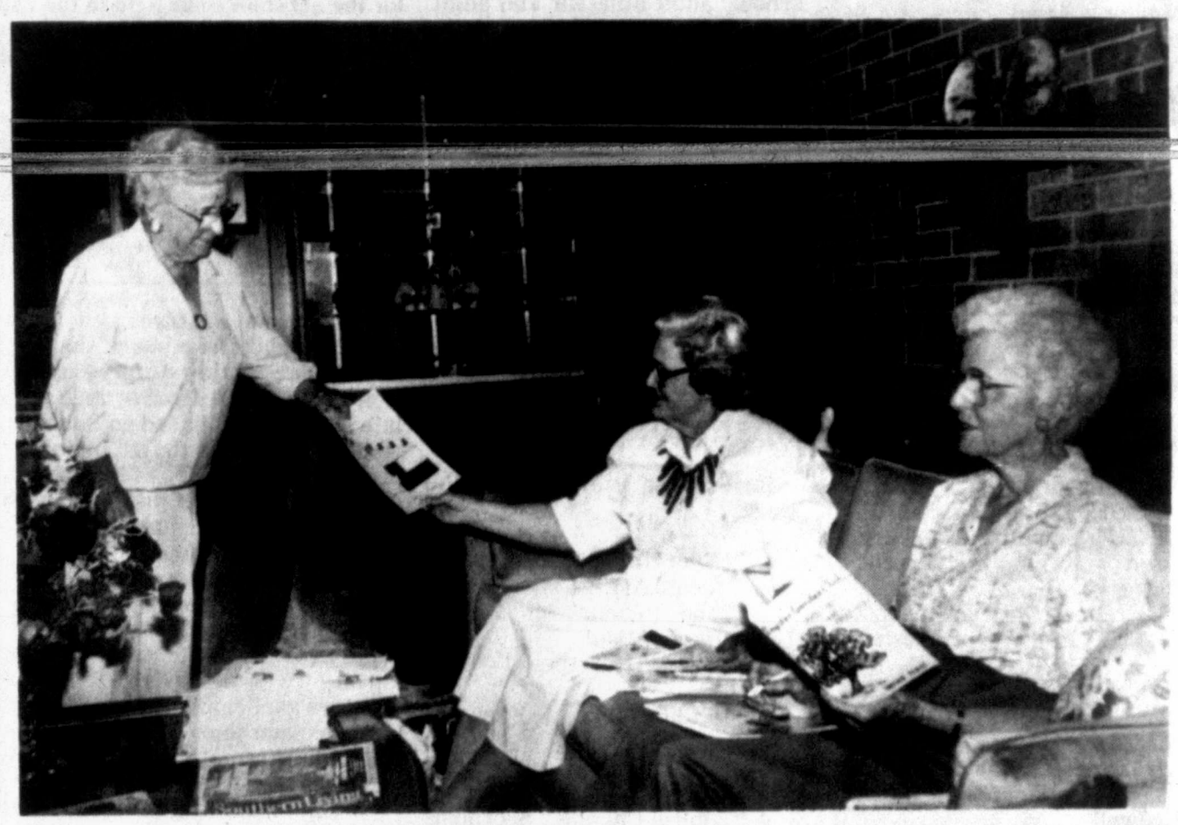

Look at only the South cards. With both sides vulnerable, you hear the dealer on your left open three clubs. Your partner (who has shown herself to be an overbidder) comes in with three spades, and your right-hand opponent doubles for penalties. What do you do?

Most of us would pass and, in this deal, be relieved to see partner bring home the contract. Some would attempt to show a red two-suiter, either by cue-bidding four clubs or (in kamikaze style) by redoubling, "expecting" partner to treat it as a request to be rescued. Spooner did none of these things — he bid four diamonds. His partner raised to seven diamonds.

After East doubled, North said, as she tabled her hand, "I must have the right cards." As you can see, she did. Spooner ruffed the spade lead, drew trumps with the aid of the winning finesse and established dummy's spade suit.

East was unwise to double three spades. If he had passed, that would probably have been the final contract. But I don't suppose he expected the opponents to bid and make a grand slam when he held two aces.

FAIR PLANS — The Snyder Garden Club met at the home of president Billie Jean Sterling for their first meeting where they planned the Scurry County Fair Flower Show to be held Sept. 18-21 at the coliseum. Standing, Gertrude League, distributes the flower show schedule which she prepared. LaVerne Hood, center, is flower show chairman and Polly Autry is assistant. Scurry Countians are urged to enter the artistic or the horticulture divisions of the flower show and must follow the rules available in the Fair Book. Information concerning the show can be obtained by calling a garden club member. (SDN Staff Photo)

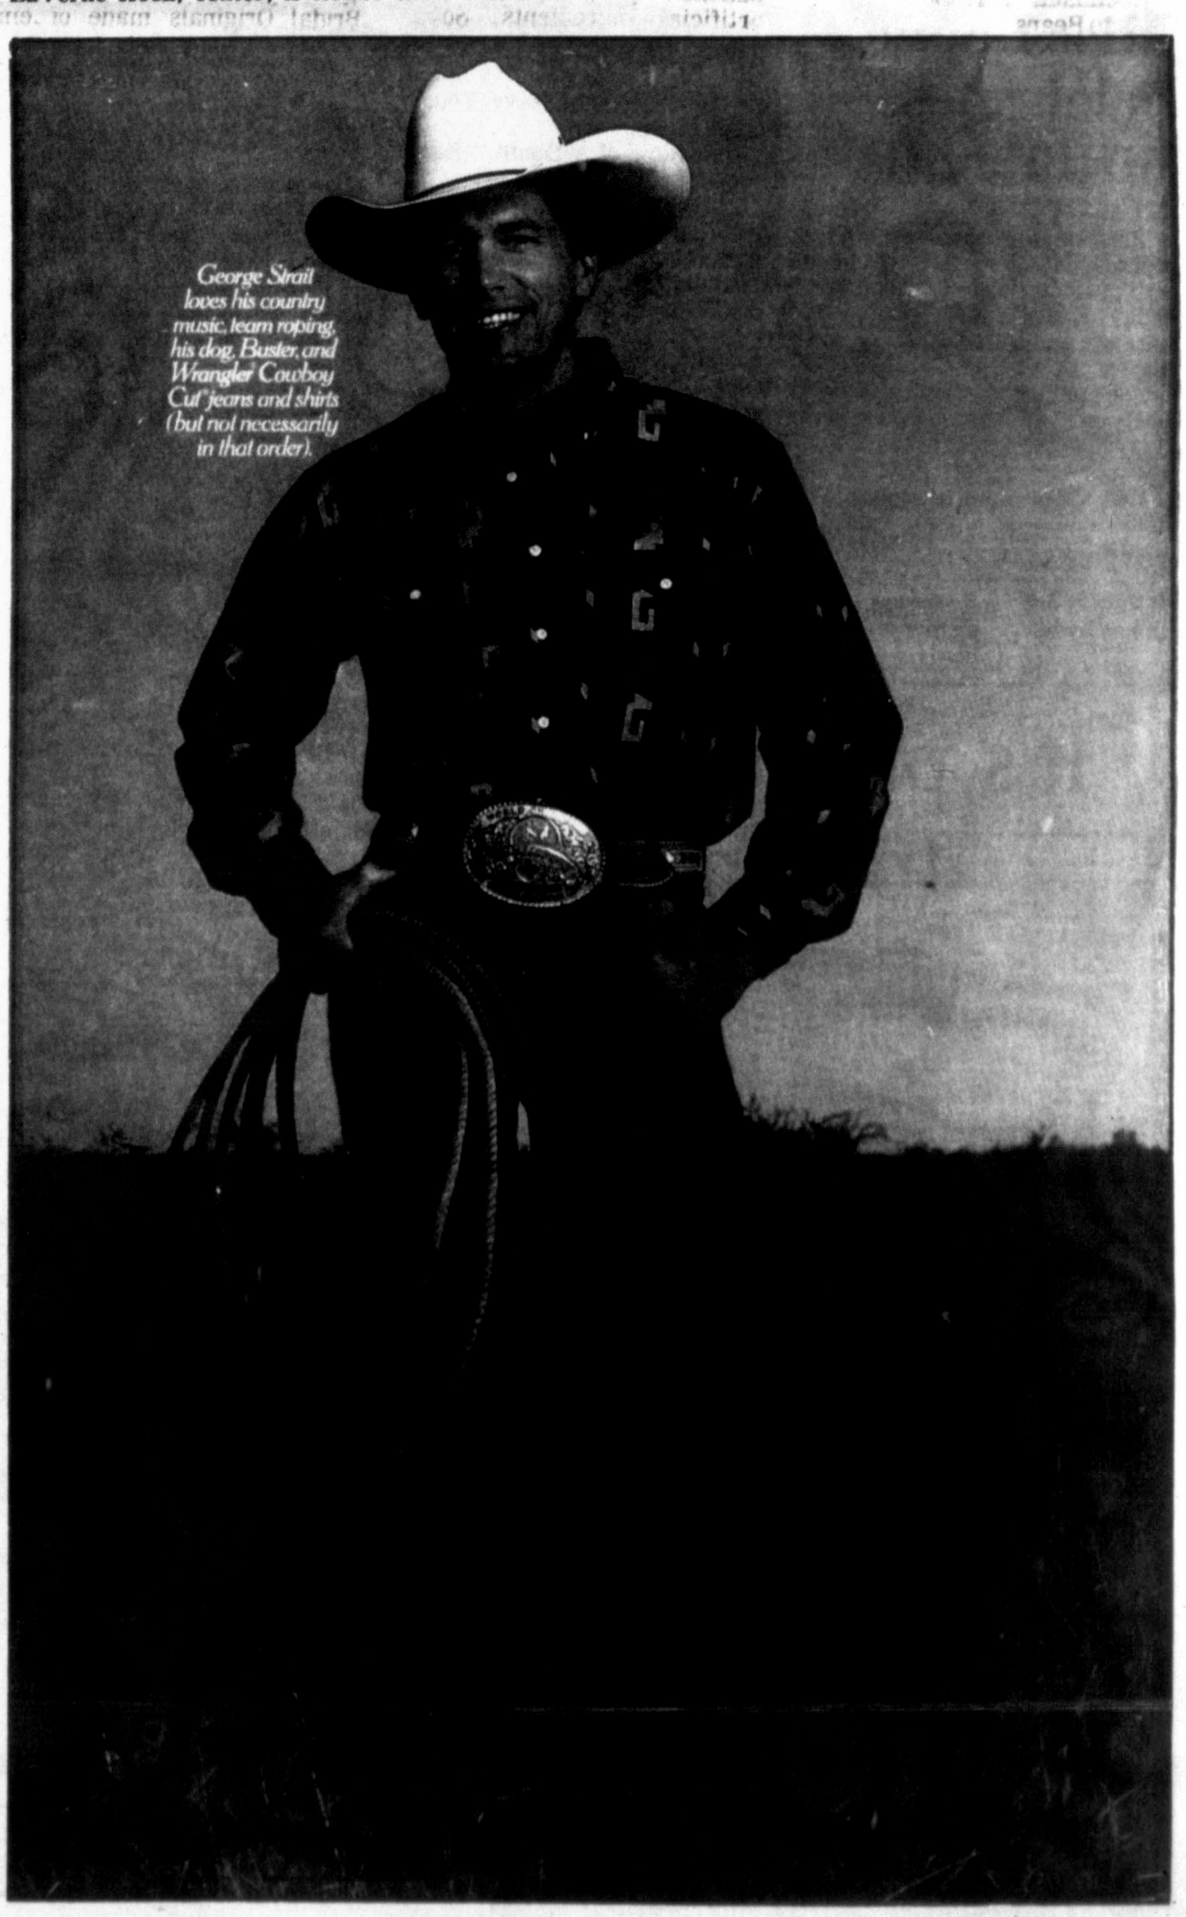

Biologists study origin of species

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Biologists claim the key feature separating species from one another is that they cannot interbreed. This prevents their genes from mixing and allows species to diverge from each other.

University of Rochester biologists have discovered that bacteria may play a surprising role in the evolution of species.

After Johannes Breeuwer and John H. Werren fed tetracycline to two kinds of wasps that had not previously been able to interbreed, the wasps mated and produced fertile hybrid offspring which carried chromosomes from both species.

"The presence or absence of microbes certainly seems to affect how insect species evolve," says Werren.

George Strait loves his country music, team roping, his dog, Buster, and Wrangler Cowboy Cut® jeans and shirts (but not necessarily in that order).

Miss Boone celebrates birthday 100

Miss Maggie Boone of Snyder Nursing Center, 5311 College Ave., will celebrate her 100th birthday on Sept. 15, according to her niece, Evelyn Holt of Arlington.

The public is invited to attend a party in Miss Boone's honor Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. in the dining room.

Her sister, Evelyn Boone, 96, also resides at Snyder Nursing Center.

New York and Boston were linked by telegraph in 1849.

Fair art show head is local Palette Club

Karen Rinker of the Snyder Palette Club and superintendent of the Scurry County Fair Fine Arts has announced entries for the annual art show will be accepted between 2 and 7 p.m. on Tuesday. They are to be picked up from 1 to 3 p.m. Sunday.

The art show is open to all Scurry County artists presenting original work. No copy work will be accepted in any division.

Artists may enter four works per category. Artwork should not be over two years old and not previously exhibited in the Scurry County Fair.

Four ribbons will be given by judges in seven divisions — preschool to six years old; grades 1-3; grades 4-6; junior high; high school; adult amateur and adult professional.

Categories allowed are two dimensional — oil and acrylic; watercolor-opaque and translucent; drawings, all media; graphics-lithographs; wood blocks; serigraphs; intaglio, etc.; collage; photography, no smaller than 5x7, preferably matted and wired or hanging; pastels; and miscellaneous.

AP Special Features

Here's a pizzalike snack that's supergood, supersimple and super any time — from brunch to late at night! It's based on Boboli (BO-bo-lee), a round, flat, bubbly pre-baked bread. Look for Boboli in the frozen, refrigerated, or bread sections of supermarkets or specialty food shops.

Zesty Italian Peasant Bread

One 16-ounce package Boboli (Italian bread shell)

1 to 2 tablespoons olive or cooking oil

1 clove garlic, minced

⅛ teaspoon pepper

1 medium tomato, peeled, seeded and chopped

¼ cup crumbled Gorgonzola cheese or blue cheese

1 tablespoon snipped fresh rosemary, oregano, or basil or 1 teaspoon dried rosemary, oregano, or basil, crushed

Fresh rosemary, oregano, or basil (optional)

Place Boboli on a lightly greased baking sheet. In a small bowl stir together oil, garlic and pepper. Brush generously over bread. Sprinkle tomato, cheese and desired snipped herb over bread.

Bake, uncovered, in a 400-degree F oven for 10 to 15 minutes or until warm and cheese is melted. Cut into 12 wedges. Top with fresh herb bundle, if desired. Serve warm. Makes 12 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 129 cal., 4 g pro., 19 g carbo., 4 g fat, 5 mg chol., 228 mg sodium, 57 mg potassium, 1 g dietary fiber. U.S. RDA: 10 percent thiamine.

Newspaper critics award

NEW YORK (AP) — Three awards have been announced in the 10th year of a program that gives recognition to newspaper art critics.

Hilton Kramer of The New York Observer; David Dillon of The Dallas Morning News, and Joanne Silver of The Boston Herald are the critics who'll receive this year's Manufacturers Hanover Art-World Awards for distinguished Newspaper Art Criticism.

Glycerine works wonders on lipstick

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — Help! I have lipstick stains on a good white blouse — courtesy of a 2-year-old "make-up artist." What is the best way to get these out? — JOANN

DEAR JOANN — The stains can be softened with glycerine. Then simply launder the blouse as usual, although it's safest to wash it alone to prevent the lipstick from staining other garments — an unlikely but possible occurrence.

This should remove any stains. Glycerine is available at most drugstores.

I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter, "Guide to Spots and Stains," which gives directions for removing a variety of common spots and stains on fabrics and other household surfaces. Others who would like a copy of this issue should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 93863, Cleveland, OH 44101—5863. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I have an excellent pointer for people with pets. When my dog, cat or puppy has an accident on my peach-colored carpeting, I absorb as much liquid as possible, then sponge with clean water and top with baking soda to absorb the stain. Let the baking soda dry, scoop up the excess and vacuum the spot thoroughly. No stain! Works great. — MRS. N.J.C.

DEAR POLLY — A fine way to clean an electric can opener is to scrub it with an old toothbrush.

An egg-turner spatula is excellent for turning fried potatoes or okra when there's a little brown on the bottom. — MARIE

DEAR POLLY — I bought a mini-mop at a discount store. I use it to clean the bottom of my cupboards — the ones that are so deep, you have to get down and practically into them to clean them without a mop. The mop works wonders and I can reach the back and sides. I rinse the mop out, then wipe over it again. — MRS. F.B.

Polly will send you a Polly Dollar ($1) if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peeve or Problem in her column.

DEAR POLLY — Women who sponsor a lot of church or school activities and are given silk flower corsages should save them and use them to dress up a gift-wrapped package later.

Recently, I wanted to send flowers to my mother, but was bored with yet another arrangement from my florist. I requested carnations in colors to match Mom's children's and grandchildren's birthstones. She had a beautiful and meaningful bouquet.

For the fitness-minded family: use long-handled measuring cups as serving spoons. No more cheating or guessing on a half cup of something when watching your diet.

The night light burned out in my 2-year-old's room the other night. A friend of mine, in desperation, strung a strand of Christmas lights across one corner of the room. The baby slept soundly and couldn't wait to show visitors his awesome set of night lights the next day. — PEG

DEAR POLLY — Put a facial tissue in each shoe before putting it on, especially if you are not wearing stockings. This absorbs the perspiration from your feet, keeping them drier and giving longer life to the shoes, since perspiration rots leather.

Put bits of reflector tape on your light switch plates so you won't soil your walls when trying to find the light switch in the dark.

Cut off a 1-inch square of reflector tape and put it over your front and back door keyhole. Then cut a little slit in the tape and insert your key through it. The tape keeps moisture and dirt from getting into your lock, and it saves searching for that particular spot to insert the key in the dark. — LAURIE

DEAR POLLY — I have a tin-lined copper pot. I clean the copper regularly with lemon juice and salt to keep it beautifully shiny, but the tin interior is darkening. How can I clean that up as well? — BETTY

DEAR BETTY — It's best to let the tin darken naturally. Don't attempt to polish it. Polishing the tin would gradually remove thin layers of the metal and, once the tin layer is worn away, the pot will have to be retinned before you can use it again. As I'm sure you know, it is unsafe to cook in unlined copper since undesirable amounts of copper can leach into some foods. Your pot will last longest if you simply wash out the tin interior with sudsy yet mild dishwashing liquid.

With winter approaching, everyone needs Polly's tips on saving money on heating bills, plus hints on heating with wood in a fireplace or stove. Polly's newsletter, "The Energy Saver's Guide," offers all this and more ways to save energy around the house. Send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 93863, Cleveland, OH 44101-5863.

4 veterans and 1 rookie on board Discovery

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Commanded by John Creighton, Discovery's five-man crew consists of four shuttle veterans and one rookie.

The astronauts will be living like night owls during the mission, waking up in the afternoon and ending their work day the next morning, arranged to accommodate the Saturday release of a research satellite.

Discovery's flight also is scheduled to end with the first-ever night landing in Florida. Other shuttles have landed in the dark at the expansive Edwards Air Force Base in California.

Creighton says although a night landing on the concrete runway at Kennedy Space Center presents a few more risks, he and his pilot have put in enough practice runs in the dark to feel confident about the task.

"We're looking forward to putting our names in the record books," Creighton said in a recent interview.

The 48-year-old commander also is looking forward to the satellite deployment, saying the atmospheric research gathered by the spacecraft will be important to "NASA, the country and the entire world."

Creighton was born in Orange, Texas, but he grew up in Seattle where he graduated from Ballard High School. He graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy and earned a master's degree in administration of science and technology from George Washington University.

A Navy captain, Creighton completed 175 combat missions in Southeast Asia.

Selected an astronaut in 1978, Creighton first flew into space as pilot aboard a 1985 shuttle flight. The crew deployed three satellites and used the shuttle's robot arm to release and later retrieve a research satellite.

Creighton next flew into space as commander of a secret defense department mission in 1989.

Pilot Kenneth Reightler Jr. is the only space rookie aboard Discovery.

The 40-year-old Navy commander will assist Creighton in operating the shuttle during the flight and will work on several experiments.

Reightler, a Navy test pilot, was selected as an astronaut in 1987. He had various technical assignments at the space agency before he began training for this mission.

In a recent interview, Reightler said he couldn't think of a better way to begin his spaceflight career than with a mission that may help the environment.

"I can't imagine personally, a better mission," he said. "We need to understand what's going on in the environment. We need to protect our world for future generations. We can't just keep going the way we've been going."

The satellite "has a key role in this whole effort."

Reightler was born in Patuxent River, Md., but grew up in Virginia Beach, Va., where he graduated from Bayside High School. After graduating from the U.S. Naval Academy, he earned a master's degree in aeronautical engineering from the U.S. Naval Postgraduate School and one in systems management from the University of Southern California.

Reightler attended the Naval Test Pilot School in his hometown and later served as a test pilot and project officer for a variety of flight programs. He also worked as an instructor and safety officer at the test pilot's school.

Mission specialist James F. Buchli has the most space travel experience among the current astronauts corps.

The Discovery mission is his fourth shuttle flight. Buchli says no other current astronauts have flown as many times into space, although former astronauts have had as much experience.

Buchli is the flight engineer, meaning he assists the commander and pilot during launch and landing.

The 46-year-old astronaut also is one of two crew members trained to perform an emergency spacewalk if necessary.

In typical astronaut form, Buchli was low-key about the possibility of a performing a spacewalk, saying it would be "nice." Spacewalks generally are considered a plum assignment among astronauts.

"It if happened, I would enjoy it," he said in a recent interview.

Buchli was born in New Rockford, N.D., and grew up in Fargo, N.D., where he graduated from Fargo High School. He graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy and earned a master's degree in aeronautical engineering systems from the University of West Florida.

After graduating from the U.S. Marine Corps Basic Infantry Course, he completed a one-year tour of duty in Vietnam where he was a platoon commander and a company commander. He returned to the United States for naval flight officer training at Pensacola, Fla.

Buchli was selected as an astronaut in 1979. He first flew into space on a secret defense mission in January 1985.

He next flew into space later that same year on the West German Spacelab mission. His third flight launched in October 1989.

Astronaut Mark Brown will operate Discovery's robot arm, which will hoist the satellite from the shuttle's cargo bay and place it in space.

Brown is making his second trip into space. His first was aboard a classified defense department flight that launched in 1989.

The 39-year-old Air Force colonel said in a recent interview that he is proud to be part of a mission because of its environmental objectives.

During his first trip into space, Brown said he realized how small the planet is and how the United States "can't ignore what our neighbors are doing."

"The Earth is the only home we have."

Besides operating the robotic arm during the satellite deployment, Brown will work on several other experiments during the flight.

Brown, a fighter pilot, was born in Valparaiso, Ind., where he graduated from Valparaiso High School. He earned a bachelor's degree from Purdue and a master's degree in astronautical engineering from the Air Force Institute of Technology.

He has worked at the Johnson Space Center in Houston since 1980 but was not selected as an astronaut until 1984.

Mission specialist Charles "Sam" Gemar is the second crew member aboard Discovery who has trained extensively to perform an emergency spacewalk.

Gemar, an Army lieutenant colonel, is making his second trip into space aboard Discovery. His first flew into space last November on a secret defense department mission.

The 36-year-old astronaut was a little more candid about the possibility of performing a spacewalk, commonly referred to as an extravehicular activity, or EVA.

"I think if you got all the mission's objectives (accomplished), and an EVA, it would be great."

Gemar, like his fellow crew members, is happy about the opportunity to work on a mission whose primary objective concerns a part of the Earth's environment.

During his first mission, Gemar said he couldn't help but notice the delicate balance of the world.

"We can all agree that man has had some adverse affect on the world," he said.

Gemar also will keep tabs on eight young female rats flying in a cage aboard Discovery as part of another experiment.

He was born in Yankton, S.D., and grew up in Scotland, S.D., where he graduated from Scotland High School. He earned a bachelor's degree from the U.S. Military Academy.

When he isn't busy training for a shuttle flight, Gemar is a volunteer firefighter for the Nassau Bay Volunteer Fire Department. He plans to resume his firefighting duties when he returns to Earth.

First female black astronaut likes shattering stereotypes

By The Associated Press

Dr. Mae Jemison, NASA's only black female astronaut, takes pride and pleasure in shattering space-age stereotypes.

No, you don't have to be in the military to be an astronaut, she tells audiences that invite her to speak. No, you don't have to be male and-or white.

"I like to bring to people a view of the space program they may not get," says Jemison, 34, a physician who speaks four languages, collects African art and is trained in jazz and modern dance.

Jemison has plenty of opportunities to offer a fresh space perspective. She is besieged with requests for interviews and speeches, making her one of NASA's most highly sought astronauts.

"People automatically think if you're a black astronaut or a black celebrity that you appeal to mainly — or only — the black audience," she says. "It's just as important for a young white boy to see a black astronaut as a young black girl. Everyone has skills and talents, and no one has a lock on scientific ability or physical ability."

Jemison doesn't see herself as a role model, although she's pleased if young people are inspired by her achievements.

Jemison grew up in an inner-city neighborhood in Chicago, the youngest of three children. Her mother was a schoolteacher, her father a construction and maintenance worker.

She won a scholarship to Stanford University, where she studied chemical engineering and African and Afro-American studies. She was torn between medicine and dance as graduation approached.

"My mother told me if I went to medical school I could always go dancing. But if I was a dancer, I couldn't always practice medicine."

Jemison chose medicine. She worked at a refugee camp in Thailand while studying medicine at Cornell University and a few years later served as a Peace Corps medical officer for Sierra Leone and Liberia in West Africa.

Jemison was selected as an astronaut in 1987 while working as a general practitioner and attending graduate engineering classes in Los Angeles. She had been interested in space since childhood and wanted the chance to "influence where a new field is going to be headed."

She set aside her work in tropical medicine and artificial organ design to concentrate on being an astronaut.

Jemison will make her first space flight next fall aboard the new shuttle Endeavour. The scientific research mission is a joint effort between NASA and the Japanese Space Agency.

"I do miss working in developing countries," she says. "But, you know, you move on."

NASA accepts first woman for its shuttle pilot program

By The Associated Press

Her father wanted her to be an accountant. Her mother told her to be whatever she wanted to be.

Eileen Collins listened to her mother. She became the Air Force's second female test pilot and recently conquered another male bastion — space shuttle piloting.

Collins is the first and only woman selected by NASA as a shuttle pilot. That makes her the first woman with the opportunity, if all goes well, to command a shuttle mission.

Being first, she says, is not what's important.

"For me, the important thing is we're going to have a second and a third and there are going to be more women and it's not going to be a big deal any more," she says. "It's not going to be different. It's just going to be picking the best person for the job."

The 34-year-old Air Force major just completed her one year of astronaut training and is waiting to be assigned to her first space flight.

Being the only woman among 41 shuttle pilots doesn't faze Collins. The 16 other female astronauts are mission specialists, a job that precludes piloting tasks.

"I've been in the Air Force 13 years and I'm used to being the only woman in the squadron," she says.

"I appreciate the fact that I'm not singled out."

Collins was drawn to space while growing up in Elmira, N.Y. Even though all the astronauts then were men, she figured women would travel in space one day, too.

She majored in math in college and joined the Air Force ROTC. She started taking flying classes at age 19 and paid for them by working odd jobs — pizza parlor, catalog showroom, church, hospital.

"I wanted to go flying, which to me was the greatest thing," she says.

She served as a T-38 instructor pilot, then as a C-141 aircraft commander and instructor pilot. She taught math and was a T-41 instructor pilot at the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo., for three years before entering the Air Force Test Pilot School at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

She was selected as an astronaut by NASA in 1990 and graduated from test pilot school that same year.

Collins, who is married to a commercial airline pilot, expects to be joined by other female shuttle pilots as more women become test pilots. The Air Force recently accepted its third female test pilot. Five women have graduated as test pilots from the Naval Test Pilot School at Patuxent River Naval Air Station in Maryland, and two more are enrolled.

Collins is confident there will be plenty of firsts — and seconds and thirds — to go around.

"We haven't had a woman on the moon yet," she says, "or on Mars."

Fitzwater: Bush in great health and will seek re-election

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is in "great physical health" and expects to run for re-election, his press secretary, Marlin Fitzwater, said Friday.

"No doubt in my mind," Fitzwater said when asked if he had any doubt that Bush would seek a second term. "I expect him to run." Bush has said that only a health condition might keep him from seeking re-election.

Bush's doctor, Burton Lee, said Thursday that Bush was in "perfect" condition following treatment for a thyroid disorder that caused an erratic heartbeat 4½ months ago.

"The doctors clearly at this point believe his progress has been excellent, and he's in great physical health, and there's no problem," Fitzwater said this morning prior to a scheduled checkup for the president.

Fitzwater said doctors expected Bush "to show good results from all the tests" he was to undergo.

Bush had lunch Friday with his national Fitness Council, and the chairman, movie muscleman Arnold Schwarzenegger.

The president later was undergoing what the White House called "his final cardiac evaluation" to close out the medical case that began when he suffered an irregular heartbeat May 4. He was subsequently diagnosed with Graves' disease, a disorder of the immune system.

"He's perfect, and I will prove it," White House physician Burton Lee told The Associated Press on Thursday.

While the thyroid condition has been brought under control, Lee noted that Bush must take daily medication for the rest of his life.

Buffalo Reef

By Bill McClellan

Peter Bohr, contributing editor of Road & Track, and author of Keeping Your Car Alive, a weekly column, recently ran a piece on automobile classified ad terms and what they mean.

You know, like A/C for air conditioning, Ld'd for loaded, and 4WD for four-wheel drive.

Then, he passed along a tongue-in-cheek explanation of other popular ad terms, and what they "really" mean.

If you've ever shopped for a used car, you can appreciate his insightful definitions:

- Clean — Just washed.
- Concour condition — Just waxed.
- Original condition — Except for the paint, upholstery and Bondo.
- Sick, must sell — Sick of this car.
- Rebuilt engine — New plugs and points.
- Low mileage — Always in the shop for repairs.
- Loaded — With useless gadgets that break.
- Priced to sell — What else? To keep?
- Must sacrifice — To any sucker who'll pay too much.
- Needs a little work — Bring a tow truck.
- Must see — What a hard life it's had.
- Dealer demonstrator — Been driven by every inept driver in town.
- Good investment — Can't depreciate any further.
- A true classic — Any heap over five years old.
- A rare classic — No one liked them when they were new.

In the tradition of Johnny Carson, we've come up with some additional explanations to terms found in the used car advertisements. So...

- Body fair — The trim has been ripped off, but it has both doors, a hood and a trunk.
- New tires — They're the only thing on the car worth bragging about.
- Runs good — Don't enter any races.
- Good school car — Candidate for the high school auto mechanics shop.
- A handyman's dream — I should pay you to take it off my hands.
- One owner — Never been able to push it off on anyone else.
- All the options — Has two sets of keys.
- Looks great — Runs lousy.
- Runs great— Looks lousy.

Dear Editor:

On behalf of the United Blood Services staff and the patients we serve, thank you to the Snyder area media, donors and blood drive sponsors that responded to the recent appeal for blood donations. The response to this emergency blood drive was far better than expected. A total of 78 people volunteered to donate and 61 blood donations were collected on Monday, Sept. 9.

In addition to thanking you, we are asking for your continued involvement. More than 100 life-giving donations are needed every day by area patients. Newborn babies, heart surgery patients, those with hemophilia, burn patients and the many people hurt in accidents depend on this caring community for life. Maintaining adequate supplies of blood for area patients is a constant and ever-increasing challenge.

We work hard to conduct the community blood program so that alerts and emergencies are rare events. Your continued participation in the community blood program is vital to meeting this challenge. As the sole provider of blood and blood products for area patients, thank you again for your efforts.

Sincerely,
Rachael Givens

To the Editor:

The Snyder Jaycees would like to express their appreciation to all the sponsors, merchants and volunteers who once again made our Labor Day Rest Stop a success. They include Mr. Andres Rodriquez of Hermleigh for his donation of electricity and location; Eddie and Gwen Thompson for use of their travel trailer; Tom Valentine for his flashing sign; Hillside Memorial Gardens; TCA Cable; Canyon Sandblasting; Scurry County Coliseum; chamber of commerce; Texas Department of Highways; Allsup's; KSNY; Snyder Daily News and Dairy Queen.

Donating supplies were McDonald's, Mundens, Southwest Coca Cola, Everybody's, Sonic, Whataburger, Reta's, Spanish Inn, Golden Corral, Eckerd Drub, Kmart, Wal-Mart, Lawrence IGA, Furr's and Dairy Queen.

Also, Cynthia Alvarado, Maria Leyva, Abel Garza, Roger Munoz, Felicia Ruiz, Lavinia Ruiz, Monica Rios, Marcella Rios, Pete Hammond, George Larralde, Robbie Nolan, Irene Hudgins and any others who might have been left out.

Sincerely,

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

I talked to a voice out of the past this afternoon, a friend of mine by the name of Jerri Simms. Jerri helped me research my newest book, "Deadline," and I had called her office to get her correct address before mailing her a copy. At the time I met her, she was a Chief Deputy Assistant Attorney at the Dallas County courthouse. At the time, she was only prosecuting felonies, mostly the high-profile types. Since then, she has been promoted. Now one of only six Dallas "Super Chiefs," she administrates all the chief deputies and their ADA's, (there are over a hundred assistant district attorneys in Dallas), and prosecutes only capital cases and the most sensational trials.

It occurred to me, during our conversation, that I was speaking to one of the most powerful individuals—certainly one of the most powerful women—in the Dallas County courthouse. I was honored that she considers me a friend. We discussed some of her more colorful cases pending, and she invited me to come again and sit in on more trials, an offer I'd be only too happy to accept.

The thing is — and I say this from the bottom of my little ol' feminist heart — it is rare to meet a woman who understands the nature of true ambition. I've been an ambitious little devil all my life, and it can be a lonely place for a woman to occupy. I asked my friend if she was still dating the homicide detective from two years back, and she said that no, he'd wanted to get married, and, "I guess I'm married to my career."

That's the problem. Most highly successful women are either (a) unmarried (b) childless or (c) have grown kids. (Or, as Gail Sheehy said in her landmark book, "Passages," they "hire themselves wives" — nannies, to bake all those cookies.) Women tend to either raise their kids first, then plunge wholesale into a career; or scramble up the ladder during their twenties and thirties — only to slow down and start a family in their forties — or trudge on down what is known as the "Mommy Track," where chances for promotion are few and far between because women with children are considered too encumbered for the more demanding jobs.

It's true even of authors. Take a look. The top sellers are either men — who have wives to raise the kids and run the households — or women who started their careers relatively late, like Mary Higgins Clark (the first writer ever to sign an eight-figure deal. Her first book was published when she was 43.)

Most women with children look for jobs that will enable them to spend as much time with their families as possible, and yet earn enough to supplement the family income so that they can take nice vacations, buy new cars now and then, or put kids through college. Even in the nineties, most women are critical of a mother who puts in long hours on the job, or takes work home, or asks her kids to make any sort of adjustments to her career.

It's never easy. Back during the years that my children were very small and so came first, we underwent some pretty severe financial hardships. As they

Shop around to uncover paint sales

By the Editors
of Consumer Reports

Homeowners who cringe at the prospect of fixing a leaky faucet or replacing a light switch don't hesitate to pry open a can of paint. You need neither the skill of a surgeon nor the muscles of Schwarzenegger. All you need is patience.

That wasn't always the case. Before World War II, having the inside of a house painted was nothing short of a nightmare. Typically, it took two workers about a week to invade and paint a six-room house. They used oil paint, applied with brushes that were cleaned with turpentine, and it was a messy business. When the job was done, you had two mementos: a fresh coat of paint and a smell that lingered for a month or so.

Then in 1948 came a paint that was easy to apply, fast to dry and a snap to clean up. This invention — called latex, or water-based, paint — has all but replaced oil-based (alkyd) formulations on surfaces where a high shine or water resistance is not paramount. And it has made the job so much more tolerable that do-it-yourselfers snatched up most of the $1.9-billion worth of interior latex paint sold in 1989. In addition, latex paints don't pollute the atmosphere as much as alkyds do. As they dry, alkyds release volatile organic compounds, which can react in sunlight with other pollutants to produce ozone, a major component of smog.

Consumer Reports tested 40 brand lines of interior latex paint in five pastel colors where available — gold, pink, green, blue and yellow — and the whitest white available from each manufacturer. Although most of the tested paints were matched to a specific color testers selected, the findings should hold for similar colors within each line of paint. Most of the paints were flat or low-luster (with a very slight sheen), but included are a few "satin" paints (they're shinier still).

The paints are generally top-of-the-line; the most expensive cost $31 a gallon. Several lower-cost paints were also selected and there were some fairly good performers among them.

Testers looked for qualities that indicate long-lasting results with a minimum of effort. They include the ability to hide old paint and to resist fading. Both of those qualities are likely to vary with a paint's color as well as its brand. There are five traits that tend to be the same within a brand line, in any color: ease of stain removal, resistance to scrubbing, spattering, blocking (stickiness) and water. No single brand of paint excelled in every criterion tested.

Pratt & Lambert Accolade ($31 a gallon) came closest to excellence. It was superior in four of the five brand-related properties tested and performed the best over the widest range of colors.

Next best overall were Benjamin Moore Regal Aquapearl and Regal Aquavelvet, Pittsburgh Manor Hall Eggshell and Sears Best Easy Living Flat 9500. The Sears 9500 line had the best green — at $19 a gallon, it was rated A Best Buy.

Keep in mind that differences in performance often exist among colors within a brand line. For example, Kelly Moore Acry-Plex had a noteworthy gold and blue. Conversely, Benjamin Moore Regal Aquavelvet had only a middling white.

With paint, sales are common, so it pays to shop around. Whatever paint you end up with, be sure to open the can and inspect its contents for defects and off-odors as soon as you get home. Testers bought several cans that contained gritty particles. If you see a problem, ask for a refund or replacement.

Debate concerning aid to Israel continuing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Keeping politics and foreign policy separate can be very difficult, as President Bush is finding out in the growing debate over whether to provide Israel with guarantees for bank loans to settle tens of thousands of Soviet immigrants.

He says he's standing on principle when he asks Congress to wait 120 days before considering the guarantees. And he urges Israel's supporters in Congress not to engage in "domestic politics" while the administration is trying to set up a Middle East peace conference.

"What's important here is that we give this procedure a chance," Bush said Thursday.

Bush also was making a political pitch — in this case reminding American voters that Israel is getting more than $4 billion in help from the United States in the fiscal year that ends Sept. 30. He said that amounted to nearly $1,000 for each Israeli man, woman and child.

The message to Congress was obvious: Bucking the president on what Bush is portraying as a peace issue could mean risking a backlash from voters who might conclude Israel is getting disproportionate help already.

Historically, the fact is politics and foreign policy are inevitably entwined in a democracy. Presidents, for instance, cannot fight wars that are unpopular at home. Vietnam proved that. Nor can they support dictators indefinitely.

In the current controversy over aiding Israel, politics and foreign policy are proving to be very hard to keep apart.

What Bush is suggesting is that the members of Congress who would not heed his request for a 120-day delay are forsaking principle for political gain. Moreover, he suggests they are overstepping their bounds.

"The Constitution charges the president with the conduct of the nation's foreign policy," Bush said at a White House news conference. But now, he said, "there is an attempt by some in the Congress to prevent the president from taking steps central to the nation's security."

Supporters of the loan guarantees cite principle, as well.

By their reckoning, helping Israel to house tens of thousands of Soviet and Ethiopian refugees is a humanitarian action that should be kept separate from the foreign policy objective of arranging peace talks.

Some, in fact, are arguing that Israel is being held hostage to Arab demands.

Bush has not been able to stop Israel from expanding its settlements on the West Bank and Gaza. About 2 percent of the Soviet immigrants live there and another 2 percent in East Jerusalem.

The Arabs hope to recapture the territories. Helping Israel borrow $10 billion could make it easier, at least indirectly, for more Jews to live there.

That's probably why Bush is asking Congress to hold up on the loan guarantees until January. By then he hopes to have a Middle East peace conference under way.

The theory is that once Arabs and Israelis get into negotiations the question of guaranteeing the housing loans will be far less controversial than it would be next week when Secretary of State James A. Baker III is visiting Israel, Egypt, Jordan and Syria trying to get the talks started.

Gifts Brought to Reception Become Burden to the Bride

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter was married yesterday after some whirlwind planning in which we used your wedding planning book. A question has arisen that was not addressed in the book: Many guests brought their gifts to the reception.

When the gifts were collected to be taken home, the ushers handed the bride's father a stack of envelopes that had been on the gift table. We have no idea whether these envelopes are gifts themselves, or became separated from their packages.

When the newlyweds return from their honeymoon in three weeks, they will have a massive job of unwrapping. What do they do if they find several unidentified packages and assorted cards? How do they match them up to be sure they thank the right guests for the right gifts?

BARBARA K.,
KENILWORTH, ILL.

DEAR BARBARA: When the bride returns, she will open the envelopes. Some will probably contain "the gift" (money), and those envelopes that became separated from the gifts will (let's hope) contain cards signed with first and last names.

Write thank-you notes to those you match up with gifts. And telephone (or write) to the others, tell them that their card and gift became separated, then ask them which gift was theirs. Embarrassing? Yes. But that's the price one pays when such accidents occur.

There ought to be a law against hand-carrying gifts to weddings. It imposes a burden on the bride's parents, who must take the gifts home and store them until the newlyweds return.

Wedding gifts should be sent directly to the bride in plenty of time for her to open them and make a record of the gift and the giver, so the giver can be properly thanked.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this in regard to your column titled "Obituary Relating to Cause of Death Adds to Family's Grief."

Circumstances can sometimes dictate just the opposite. My lovely 19-year-old granddaughter, who lived in another town, was killed in a car accident just three days after her high school graduation — a few months ago.

When we were making the funeral arrangements, we asked the funeral director to state the cause of death in her obituary. We are well-known in this community, and we wished to be spared the numerous telephone calls asking about the cause of her sudden death.

The funeral director, unfortunately, neglected to follow through on our request, and consequently, we were plagued with calls, which added much to our grief every time we had to relate the circumstances of her death.

GRIEVING ILLINOIS GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: You make an excellent point. Thank you for taking the time to write. And please accept my deepest sympathy on the tragic loss of your grandddaughter.

DEAR ABBY: I speak for the people who are in wheelchairs permanently, having been in one myself for a short time following a head injury.

Recently, I went to a concert in the park. I noticed a man in a wheelchair struggling to get to the dancing area. As he approached people, he would reach out as far as he could with his better hand. He was rejected time after time — or just plain ignored.

Finally, my heart just couldn't take it anymore, so I walked over to him, took his hand and started swinging it back and forth to the rhythm of the music. Then I "danced" quickly around his wheelchair as I held his hand.

Ordinarily, I am scared to death to perform in front of people, but I was as peaceful and self-assured as I could be.

The only thing I saw was the look of happiness in his face. When the song ended, he pulled me close enough to give me a sweet little kiss on the cheek. After that, others "danced" with him, and he had a wonderful time.

Abby, I ask everyone to treat people in wheelchairs as if they were standing up — to recognize their courage and realize that they have the same feelings as you do.

CELESTE RICE, LORANE, ORE.

DEAR CELESTE: Thank you for a letter that warmed my heart and will be appreciated by many.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My problem may seem insignificant compared to some you receive, but I need to air my feelings, and I hope my in-laws see this:

"Harry" and I have been married for 20 years (no children). We aren't poor, but he still gives me a weekly allowance for groceries. I worked the first nine years of our marriage, but I finally quit because all I was allowed to do with the money was make car payments on "our" car, which Harry drove most of the time.

Over the years, my in-laws have given us cards with checks enclosed for Christmas and anniversaries. They just hand the envelope to Harry in front of me, he promptly pockets it, and I never see it again. Once, I noticed that the check was made out for $1,000 to both of us.

If my in-laws ever asked me what we did with the money, I'd tell them the truth, but they have never asked. A few times I've asked Harry, and he said, "I've got it." End of conversation.

Don't mention "divorce," which I have considered a few times, but Harry would kill me before he'd give me a divorce. And lately, there have been times when I wish he would.

TRAPPED

DEAR TRAPPED: Marriage should be a partnership; yours is more like a master-and-slave relationship. Christmas and anniversary checks from the in-laws should be spent on something you can both enjoy, something for your home or a vacation trip. They should not go into your husband's pocket never to be seen again.

But there's more than material inequality ailing your marriage. Please see a marriage counselor. If Harry refuses to go — go without him. And if you still would "rather be dead," ending your miserable marriage is preferable to ending your life.

grew older and I began putting more time and energy into my work, they had to understand that I would be out of town occasionally, would be working behind closed doors sometimes when there were home or would be preoccupied at others, and that I might even do things while researching a novel once in a while that are dangerous.

I think a woman can "have it all" but I think she must understand from the outset that it will take her twice as long if she has children. Arnold Schwarzenegger once said that the career ladder is not really straight up, like a ladder. He said it's more of a zig-zag path — a few steps up, a few back, than a few more up — but always, in the long run, upward. My kids have watched me scramble up that zig-zag path for over a decade now, and they are only just now beginning to see some of the yield, and what may be a light at the end of an exceptionally long tunnel. I think that's a pretty good life lesson to teach them.

I always burn the stupid cookies anyway.

"ZINC FOR VISION"

Small amounts of zinc may arrest a degenerative process in the elderly that damages nerve and pigment cells in part of the retina responsible for sharp vision (for reading). Researchers at Louisanna State U. Eye Center found that 100 mg of zinc taken twice day produced less vision loss and fewer adverse retinal changes. Federal surveys find that the diet of many elderly is deficient in zinc. Foods rich in zinc include red meat, nuts and oysters.

Book tells of bittersweet cheerleader's life

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — In a state where making a cheerleading squad can be a matter of life or death, three sisters and former Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders have written a bittersweet tale of pom-poms and pageantry on the sidelines in Texas Stadium.

Suzette, Stephanie and Sheri Scholz, who cheered the likes of Roger Staubach and Tony Dorsett during the late 1970s and early 80s, say life as a Cowboys cheerleader was not always as glamorous as the posters and made-for-television movies might indicate.

Their book "Deep in the Heart of Texas" talks about drug abuse, mind control and abnormal dieting in order to fit into the skimpy blue halters and star-spangled white shorts that made the cheerleaders famous worldwide.

The book describes Suzanne Mitchell, who directed the cheerleaders for 14 years before the team was sold in 1989, as a control-crazy sergeant who rarely handed out praise and often humiliated the women on the squad to maintain the upper hand.

Deep in the Heart of Texas, which is based on more than 100 interviews with former cheerleaders, was not authorized by the Dallas Cowboys nor the Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders Inc.

Kelli McGonagill, current director of the Cheerleaders, said the organization would have no comment on the book. Ms. Mitchell did not respond to requests for comment placed with Cheerleaders.

All three of the Scholz sisters grew up in Lubbock, obsessed with pom-poms and beauty pageants and the dream of being a Cowboys cheerleader.

"Nobody outside the state can quite understand just how big of a deal it is to be a cheerleader in Texas," the sisters write. "Oh, it's an honor to be a cheerleader in Boise or Tallahassee or Kennebunkport all right, but in Texas it's nearly life or death."

The book's release this month came on the heels of the conviction of a woman in Houston accused of hiring a hitman to kill the mother of her daughter's chief rival for a high school cheerleading spot.

The sisters write that being selected to the Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders is "right up there with your wedding day. Depending on who you marry, it might be even bigger."

Beautiful, buxom women dancing up and down the sidelines at Texas Stadium was the brainchild of former Cowboys president Tex Schramm.

Dallas was the first NFL team to use its cheerleaders as a marketing tool. And the success of the cheerleaders paralleled the meteoric rise of the oil-rich Texas economy in the late 1970s and early 80s.

The sisters claim many of the women on the squad were courted and showered with jewelry, trips and cars by big spenders now under indictment in the state's massive savings and loan scandal.

But for some of the cheerleaders, the fame, which included appearances on episodes of "Love Boat," "Real People" and two of their own made-for-television movies, was simply too much.

Two chapters tell of a Cowboys cheerleader who fell in with a high-class drug dealer and nearly committed suicide after years of cocaine abuse.

Several cheerleaders used cocaine to ease the stress of weeklong work schedules, nightly practice sessions, Sunday performances and countless public appearances, according to the book.

"In the end, a few of the girls found the best answer was stronger and stronger drugs," the Scholz sisters write. "That inevitably meant cocaine, the Cadillac of speed. The girls who were the heaviest into cocaine were among the thinnest girls on the squad."

They used pseudonymns for others mentioned, saying they wanted to protect their privacy."

Staying "scary-thin" was a mandate driven into the psyche of the cheerleaders by Mitchell, who the sisters say once told a squad member, "You are not (yourself). You are a Dallas Cowboys Cheerleader. You can't act or think any way you choose."

"Suzanne herself was thin," the sisters write. "...She looked at fat like a Baptist preacher looks at sex. It was evil. ...If you were scary-thin, Suzanne liked you.

"The emphasis on an anorexic body was so high, the praise was heaped so heavily on us when we were in that emaciated condition, that we all wanted to look that way."

Several cheerleaders turned to diet pills, diuretics, cellulite cream and fasting to make weight during weekly weigh-ins, the sisters claim.

"Every ripple or bulge will show," the book quotes Mitchell telling the squad after Suzette's and Stephanie's first practice. "You have to earn the right to wear one of those uniforms.

"It's as recognizable as the American flag and I will not let you disgrace it. Unless I see you continually at your best, you'll be put on probation for one game, and then cut if the problem is not resolved. Period."

Report sees carrier failures endangering deregulation benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The lower fares and better service that followed government deregulation of the airline industry could be swept away if failures leave only a few giant carriers to dominate the skies, a research panel says.

A report issued Thursday by the independent Transportation Research Board said that while competition is flourishing, that could change if so many airlines fail that the remaining few have no incentive to keep prices low.

Some have predicted that the airline failure rate could leave the nation with as few as three major carriers, and the report said that might not be enough to retain true competition.

"If as many as five or six major carriers survive the pending shakeout, the committee believes that pricing will remain competitive," said the panel, an arm of the National Academy of Sciences.

But it added that current trends "suggest the industry will continue to concentrate, which at some point might threaten the benefits achieved during deregulation."

Commenting on the report at a news conference, Transportation Secretary Samuel K. Skinner contended that it showed deregulation, which took effect in 1978, "is working, has worked and will continue to work."

But he acknowledged that steps must be taken to encourage competition and to assure that as many major airlines as possible survive.

"We are doing everything we can to make sure we have those five or six competitive carriers, or more, as we move into the next century," Skinner said.

Two major carriers, Braniff and Eastern, have ceased operations in recent years, joining a long list of merged or failed airlines.

Reporter writes of farmworkers' lives

BOARDMAN, Ore. (AP) — When Isabel Valle applies for jobs as a farmworker, she pretends she doesn't speak English.

She also fails to mention that she is an undercover newspaper reporter.

Ms. Valle is spending the year living with a migrant farmworker family, traveling from Washington state to Texas to chronicle their lives.

She is under a 15-month contract with the Walla Walla Union-Bulletin, writing stories each week for the Sunday edition.

Ms. Valle has been living with the Raul Martinez family of LaGrulla, Texas, since June, and has found that she isn't keeping the professional detachment she thought she would.

"At first I thought I would be able to pretend I was not there and look at them from the outside," Ms. Valle said. "But they engulf you and make you a part of the family."

Members of the Martinez family say they don't mind having the details of their lives offered to the newspaper's 15,900 subscribers each week.

Mother Maria Elena Martinez expects some good to come of the exposure.

"I wish the president would look upon us, and do something for us," Mrs. Martinez, 53, said, after serving a snack of boiled sweet corn and coffee.

Not that they are suffering in this Columbia River town of 1,200 near melon and potato fields.

They live in a two-bedroom, air-conditioned apartment in a complex with a swimming pool. They also own their own home in LaGrulla.

But what they don't have are good-paying steady jobs at home, so they are forced to travel as migrant farmworkers to survive, Mrs. Martinez said. Many of her 13 children have continued in the migrant life, she said.

Chief culprit, she believes, are the U.S. companies that set up factories just across the border in Mexico to capitalize on cheap labor.

"Why don't they do them in the valley where we live?" Ms. Martinez complained.

But international affairs are not on Ms. Valle's mind.

She wants to tell the real story of people who travel and pick crops for a living.

Too often such stories are written by reporters who make a quick visit to a farmworker camp and write about poor health or pesticide problems, she said.

Day-to-day life is rarely a topic of the stories, she said.

Rick Doyle, managing editor of the newspaper, said they spent a year creating the project. Much of the work was finding a reporter and a willing family, he said.

Ms. Valle is a 31-year-old single Hispanic from San Antonio who spent four years at the San Antonio Express-News. Then she spent a year on an English-language paper in Venezuela before returning to San Antonio as a free-lance writer.

Ms. Valle said she jumped at the offer, and that doubts only crept up later. She wondered if she really wanted to live the migrant life, including occasional field work.

So far she has picked berries, but was turned down for a job picking apples. She is now seeking work in the potato harvest.

Job-hunting can be a demeaning process, she said. Some employers are rude, scream at applicants or make them wait in long lines in the sun, she said. Others are humane, supplying their workers with extras like portable toilets and drinking water, she said.

"The bad ones don't care," she said.

Finding a family was a tough project.

"We wanted one with school-age children that moved through at least three states," Doyle said.

Most people contacted wanted no part of it.

But word spread through the farmworker community that the reporter was having trouble finding a host family, and the Martinezes stepped forward, Ms. Valle said. The couple's two youngest children, aged 7 and 10, are living with them.

In exchange for access, she is paying half the rent, food and other expenses, she said.

Her stories are distributed on the Knight-Ridder news wire, Doyle said. He declined to say how much the project is costing, but said the newspaper's owner, The Seattle Times Co., has been supportive.

"This shows you don't have to be big to think big," he said.
