Balloting underscores water issue's impact

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas voters dispelled any doubt about the importance of water Tuesday when they overwhelmingly approved a $1.43 billion comprehensive water plan.

With all of the state's 254 counties reporting, 711,955, or 73.9 percent of the voters favored Proposition 1, which authorizes an additional $980 million in water development bonds for a variety of water projects. Voters also approved Proposition 2, which creates an agricultural water-conservation fund, by 657,313 to 283,691, or a margin of 69.9 percent to 30.1 percent.

In Midland County, voters approved both amendments by an even wider margin. On Proposition 1, 92 percent of the county's voters said "yes," while 8 percent turned down the plan. On Proposition 2, 86.7 percent of the voters OK'ed the amendment, while 13.3 rejected the proposal.

Gov. Mark White, House Speaker Gib Lewis and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby strongly urged passage of the water plan, as well as the leadership of both the state Republican and Democratic parties. A wide array of influential organizations also endorsed the package, including the Texas Chambers of Commerce, the League of Women Voters and the Texas AFL-CIO.

White said passage of the water plan will resolve "every major water problem we have faced in Texas for years."

"It was a vote for clean water to drink, to grow food, to provide jobs, and to prosper," the governor said in a prepared statement. "We go forward as a state ready for a new century of progress."

Lewis said he was "somewhat surprise but elated" over the wide margin of victory the two water amendments scored. A statewide water plan, he added, will open new doors to economic development.

Light turnout backs amendments

By ED TODD

More than 89 percent of the 54,675 registered voters in Midland County avoided the polls Tuesday as if there were no urgency in changing the Texas Constitution through passage of amendments or in triggering a water-conservation plan.

Slightly less than 11 percent — 5,982 — of the voters trickled to the polls and overwhelmingly approved two water-related amendments, passed nine others and rejected three proposals related to health care, veterans' housing assistance and the purchase of farm and ranch land. Statewide, all 14 proposed amendments met with voter approval.

"I just think everybody should have voted on every amendment, which they didn't," Janeice Builta, Midland County elections administrator, said late Tuesday.

However slight, the turnout impressed some election judges.

"I was pleased," said Naomi Chandler, election judge for Precincts 101 and 107 in rural northwest Midland County. Altogether, 94 of 1,321 registered voters in those two precincts cast ballots in the election.

Constitutional amendment elections traditionally do not excite voters to turn out to the polling places.

"It's a fantastic turnout," said Midkiff Election Judge Carol Ann Midkiff. "There wasn't supposed to be much (of a turnout) statewide." Ten of 82 voters in her precinct cast ballots in the election. Of those, nine out of 10 passed favorably on both water proposals.

Here's how the 5,982 Midlanders voted on the 14 proposed state constitutional amendments.

No. 1 to authorize the issuance of $980 million in Texas Water Development Bonds to create funds for water conservation, water development, water-quality enhancement, flood control, and agricultural soil and water conservation: 5,410 for, 472 against.

No. 2 to authorize the issuance and sale of $200 million in Texas agricultural conservation bonds: 5,090 for, 780 against.

No. 3 to authorize the Texas Legislature to enact laws to permit cities and towns to spend public money and levy assessments for the relocation or replacement of water conduits on private property: 3,575 for, 1,705 against.

Midlanders pleased about water plan

By MARK LEWIS

Local officials and civic leaders expressed delight this morning with the passage of two constitutional amendments funding the Legislature's $1.43 billion water plan.

"I'm overwhelmed by the majority it passed by," said Rep. Tom Craddick, who played a crucial role in steering the water package through the Legislature earlier this year. Craddick said he expected the amendments to pass, but not by such a wide margin.

"I'm elated," he said. "Voter apathy is usually pretty high."

In Midland County, about 10.9 percent of registered voters turned out for the election. Amendment 1 received 5,410 votes in favor and 472 against, for an approval rating of 92 percent. This amendment authorizes $980 million in bonds for reservoirs, pipelines and water-treatment plants, and creates a $250 million state insurance fund to back the bonds of local governments with low credit ratings.

Amendment 2, which authorizes $200 million in bonds for a program to encourage water conservation by farmers, received a slightly lower approval rating: 5,090 (86.7 percent) in favor and 780 opposed.

Therapists praise addition of hyperbaric chamber

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Last week's announcement by Midland Memorial Hospital President Ray Branson of plans to install a full-body hyperbaric oxygen system (HBO) continues a growing trend in the medical world toward the much-questioned form of treatment.

Locally, therapists praise the results they have seen from several smaller versions of the proposed MMH unit. HBOs for extremities only were introduced to the Permian Basin nearly two years ago. Currently, the units are in use at physical therapy offices in Midland and Odessa, at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa, a private physician's office, and at least one private residence.

"It definitely works," said Rick Gordon, a licensed physical therapist and head of Midland Physical Therapy. "Sometimes you can see results right away. Someone's skin may be kind of grayish near a wound site and within an hour it looks healthy again."

Gordon, who has headed the clinic since its inception in December 1984, has seen a steady increase in the acceptance of HBO's in Midland.

"We're really just getting started," he said. "But the business is getting better and we're treating several patients a day now."

One problem, Gordon admits, is the cost — $50 an hour for HBO therapy plus the cost of "extras" such as antibiotics and bandages.

Another hold-up is the slowness of physicians to refer patients for HBO treatment — a vital link, since a "prescription" is required from a physician before the therapist may administer treatment.

"WE DON'T HAVE very many physicians who are familiar with the hyperbaric chambers," he said.

Hyperbaric oxygen therapy, according to MMH spokeswoman Lisa Ball, is "the administration of 100 percent oxygen while the entire body is exposed to high pressure."

"One to two hours exposure in an HBO chamber produces dramatic changes in a patient's body due to the blood's carrying 20 times its normal saturation of oxygen," said Ms. Ball.

Mormon leader Kimball dies after 12-year ministry

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon Church President Spencer W. Kimball, whose 12-year ministry encompassed some of the most dramatic changes in the faith's 155-year history, has died at the age of 90.

Kimball, the church's "prophet, seer and revelator" since 1973 and one of its most energetic leaders until the infirmities of age sharply curtailed his activities, died at 10:08 p.m. Tuesday in his downtown hotel apartment, said church spokesman Don LeFevre.

Kimball's wife, Camilla, and a nurse were with him at the Westin Hotel Utah, said LeFevre, who could provide no other details.

Presidents of the largest and wealthiest church founded in America — from founder Joseph Smith to Kimball — have served for life and are the product of an apostolic succession within the Council of the Twelve Apostles.

Within days, that body's president and most senior member, former U.S. Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson, 86, is expected to succeed Kimball after a pro-forma vote of the Twelve in the Salt Lake Temple.

Kimball, the 12th president of the 5.8 million-member Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, had been weak since 1981 after his third operation in two years to drain blood and fluid from between his skull and brain. He also had undergone throat and open-heart surgery and installation of a pacemaker.

Kimball's death came a month after his final public appearance Oct. 6 at the church's semiannual general conference, which he did not address.

Damage in millions estimated in storage-tank blasts

MONT BELVIEU (AP) — Damages from a series of underground gas storage-tank explosions that killed two workers and forced hundreds of Texans to flee their homes will run into the millions of dollars, a petroleum company spokesman said.

About 200 area firefighters worked almost six hours Tuesday to control the blaze, fueled by liquified propane. The fire was fed by three pipelines that could not be shut off because the intense heat kept crews away from the valves.

A five-foot underground pipeline ruptured at Warren Petroleum Co. refinery and storage plant while construction workers were doing maintenance work, according to Cul Ingram, spokesman for Chevron Inc., which owns Warren and the 300-acre complex.

Ingram said the charred area, about 10 percent of the plant, would be closed for a few weeks and damages would run into the millions.

"An investigation will go on for a week, at least," he said. "This is a substantial fire and a lot of damage. It will take time to get in."

Mayor Fred Miller called for the evacuation of the entire town of 1,200, fearing the fire would spread through a network of gas lines under the town.

The mayor lifted the order Tuesday evening for about half the residents. He refused to allow residents living near the plant to return.

The blasts occurred in a cavernous salt dome used to store natural gas products. Smoke could be seen from Houston, about 30 miles to the west.

"I saw gas rising four feet off the ground," said Henry Ford, a 40-year-old welder. "It was dangerous but pretty. I turned my back and started running."

At least three similar explosions have occurred here in the past five years.

"This is becoming an annual event," complained Bill Wallace, who owns a mobile home park.

The dead were identified as James Hoffmann and Richard Duncan, according to Chambers County Justice of the Peace Paul Williams. Their ages and hometowns were not immediately available.

The victims were part of a construction crew that had worked on the pipeline, Ingram said. The 56 employees of Warren Petroleum were unharmed, he said.

A fire was reported about 8:30 a.m., followed by the first explosion about fifteen minutes later, Police Chief Fred Dodd said. The second blast came about 8:55 a.m., followed by another five minutes later.

"I felt the ground shake," said Charlie Clevenger, an electrician working about a half-mile from the plant. "And when it shook, I felt one explosion and then another. It sounded like a sonic boom, one right after another."

Warren Petroleum has operated for about 28 years and also is the largest natural gas storage facility in the area.

In 1980, officials discovered the presence of lethal hydrocarbon gases after a Mont Belvieu resident turned on her dishwasher and it ignited.

Officials found that more than 820 million cubic feet of ethane-propane had leaked from a well. At one point, more than 70 familes were evacuated from their homes, some as long as six months.

The mayor said city officials have tried since 1980 to get the industry to buy out the landowners. He said the City Council will meet soon with Texas Gov. Mark White to discuss buyout options.

"People have suffered a lot and now they should be fair to these people," Miller said. "We're prepared to act but we're waiting for them."

Texans favor law-and-order measures

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans overwhelmingly approved two constitutional amendments touted as law-and-order measures, including one already an issue in the state attorney general's race.

The other 12 propositions on Tuesday's ballot also gained voter approval, increasing to 283 the number of changes to the 109-year-old constitution.

One of the crime-related propositions authorizes the Texas Department of Corrections to transfer certain prison inmates out of state, thereby easing troublesome problems. In unofficial returns from all but one of the state's 254 counties, the measure passed 664,565 votes to 273,032.

Wichita Falls Sen. Ray Farabee, sponsor of the proposal, said the measure is "particularly relevant to breaking up gangs" and controlling prison violence.

The other law-and-order measure — which will allow the Legislature to set standards governing the process of charging people with crimes — was pushed by state Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, a Republican candidate for attorney general.

Brown said the amendment would prevent appeals courts from reversing convictions based on technicalities that no prosecutor or grand jury can anticipate.

The unofficial count showed the measure, which calls for defendants to object to defects in an indictment before trial or else waive the right to object to any defect on appeal, winning 607,274 votes to 277,494.

Opponents claim the proposal would wipe out decades of judicial precedent guaranteeing people accused of crimes sufficient notice of the charge against them.

"Say you were charged with a crime. Wouldn't you think it would be in your interest to make the state conform to all the technicalities to protect your right as an individual?" said Bob Towery, executive director of the Texas Criminal Defense Lawyers Association.

Propositions 1 and 2, which together formed a $1.43 state water program financing new projects and authorizing agricultural water-conservation bonds, passed easily.

The closest vote was on Proposition 10, which would provide $500 million in bond money for loans to buy farms and ranches. The proposal, which Speaker Gib Lewis had endorsed as a "very noble program," led 462,782 votes to 439,905.

To be eligible for the Farm and Ranch Finance Program, a person must be a U.S. citizen, a resident of Texas for five years, a member of a household in which at least 35 percent of the gross income came from farming or ranching for the preceding three years, and have a net worth of less than $250,000.

Proposition 8, authorizing an additional $500 million to continue making $20,000 low-interest home loans to Texas veterans, passed 602,934 votes to 328,185 and State Land Commissioner Garry Mauro called it the "best possible Veterans Day present."

The housing program has been so popular that the Veterans Land Board made more than 21,000 loans during the first 17 months of the program.

The other propositions:

— allow cities to pay for water hookups on private property, with residential customers paying the city back in installments.

— authorize the state to use proceeds from the sale of public-school land to acquire other land for the Permanent School Fund.

— allow Chambers County to have six justice of the peace precincts.

— allow the Legislature to require state agencies to obtain approval before spending or making an emergency transfer of appropriated funds.

— give the Texas Supreme Court and Texas Court of Criminal Appeals jurisdiction to answer federal court questions about state law.

— create a Judicial Districts Board to propose reapportionment plans for district court districts.

— abolish the office of county treasurer in Andrews County — and in El Paso County if a majority of the local voters agree — and abolish the office of county surveyor in Denton, Randall, Collin, El Paso and Henderson counties, if a majority of the voters approve in a local election.

Few Odessans cast ballots on amendments

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Less the 10 percent of Ector County's 58,226 eligible voters went to the polls Tuesday to approve 14 constitutional amendments, including overwhelming support for two amendments that will give Texas its first statewide water and conservation plan.

A total of 4,682 voters cast ballots at 16 merged polling places. The county's 31 voting precincts were consolidated in an effort to reduce the cost of the election.

Ector County Auditor Don Potter estimated cost of the election with all the usual polling places open would have totaled almost $22,000.

Although all 14 amendments were approved in Ector County, there was isolated rejection of some amendments at a few polling places, though approval of the first two proposed amendments dealing with a water plan were unanimously approved in all precincts by voters.

If the statewide election had hinged on the results of votes cast in Precinct 109 at the Goldsmith Community Building eight of the 14 amendments would have failed. Precinct 109, which encompasses Goldsmith residents and other voters in northwest Ector County, saw only 35 votes cast.

Absentee voters and persons voting at three polling places rejected Amendment 10, which authorizes the issuance of general obligation bonds to provide financing assistance for the purchase of farm and ranch land.

Amendment 5, which authorizes the legislature to regulate provision of health care by hospital districts, was rejected by voters at eight polling places.

Amendment 3, which will authorize the legislature to enact laws permitting a city or town to spend public funds and levy assessments for the relocation or replacement of water laterals on private property, was rejected by voters at three Ector County polling places were voters mostly from the West Odessa area voted.

Total vote breakdown in Ector County was as follows:

— Amendment 1: For 4,271, Against, 411
— Amendment 2: For 4,073, Against, 582
— Amendment 3: For 2,773, Against, 1,741
— Amendment 4: For 3,279, Against, 1,300
— Amendment 5: For 2,281, Against, 2,207
— Amendment 6: For 3,234, Against, 1,330
— Amendment 7: For 2,794, Against, 1,271
— Amendment 8: For 2,967, Against, 1,589
— Amendment 9: For 3,034, Against, 1,363
— Amendment 10: For 2,311, Against, 2,123
— Amendment 11: For 3,219, Against, 1,132
— Amendment 12: For 3,361, Against, 920
— Amendment 13: For 2,448, Against, 1,654
— Amendment 14: For 2,790, Against, 1,234

WATER

"It's going to benefit every citizen of the state," Lewis said.

Midland Rep. Tom Craddick, House sponsor of the plan, shook hands and smiled broadly as the totals rolled in Tuesday night. "We're elated," he said. "I think this will allow us to grow as a state — it's a move in the right direction."

Opponents to the plan included the Texas chapter of the National Audubon Society and a group of Gulf Coast environmentalists led by Corpus Christi Sen. Carlos Truan. The Lone Star Chapter of the Sierra Club remained neutral on the package.

The Texas Water Development Board will administer the $980 million water development fund, which assists local governments and water districts in financing water projects.

Legislators earmarked $400 million of that amount for state participation in reservoirs, pipelines and water treatment plants. Since 1957, the state has participated in such projects by buying a share of the storage capacity in reservoirs. Political subdivisions then buy back the state share as their water needs grow.

State participation cannot exceed 50 percent of the cost of such projects, and lawmakers have limited the use of state involvement to $50 million for the 1986-87 biennium.

Proposition 1 also expands eligibility for state assistance by increasing both the number of applicants and the types of projects that qualify for state aid. The plan requires the water development board to finance water projects that cannot achieve "optimum regional development" without state help, provided the projects are good risks and serve the public interest.

Almost $200 million in bonds is set aside to finance sewage-treatment projects in cities that could not otherwise finance their water projects. Another $190 million is designated for hardship water-supply projects and for areas converting from ground water to surface water.

The amendment also pledges up to $250 million of the state's credit to insure repayment of $500 million in local governments' bonds for water development projects. Those projects include sewage treatment plants, pipelines and flood control.

Proposition 2, which creates an agricultural trust fund, establishes a $5 million pilot program to help farmers buy water-efficient irrigation equipment over the next two years. The water development board must report back to the Legislature on the status of the pilot program by Jan. 1, 1987 and Jan. 1, 1989.

THE ELECTION in Midland was carried out in 38 voting precincts at 20 voting places, including the absentee-voting site, without apparent incident.

However, noted Ms. Builta, one voter complained that she was rushed by an election judge.

"They (voters) should be prepared to vote when they close the (voting machine) curtain," said the judge, Greg Atkins of Precincts 405 and 406 at Rusk Elementary School.

However, Akins said he never asked anyone who was voting "to hurry up."

But Akins said he had suggested that voters read and study the proposed amendments, if they previously had not done so, while they were waiting in line to vote.

"Evidently somebody took it personally," he said.

Akins noted that the Texas Election Code provides that "no voter shall be allowed to keep the curtain of the voting machine closed for more two minutes" except when the voter is receiving assistance. In that case, the curtain may be closed for up to five minutes.

Ms. Builta said some people unfamiliar with the 14 amendments may have wanted to read them in the voting booth.

"They should have been prepared (to vote), but they weren't," she said. "How many people are?"

REACT

That program wouldn't go into effect until a pilot program has tested the concept, according to Craddick. Then a two-thirds vote of the Legislature would be required to authorize the bonds.

The amendments were backed by the Midland Chamber of Commerce, and Chamber President Joan Baskin said the vote will allow Texas to develop water resources necessary for further growth in the state.

"This just enabled that bill (the statewide water plan) to be funded. It means Texas can develop," she said. "We are delighted that the rest of the state joins us in supporting this very important issue for the future of the state. It gives us a blueprint for the next 20 years or so to finance the kind of water development the whole state needs."

Vote totals were higher for the water amendments than for other amendments on the ballot, noted Gregg Holmes of the Chamber's Government Affairs Committee. According to Holmes, the higher totals for amendments 1 and 2 demonstrate voters' awareness of the importance of water in Texas.

"I'm really enthusiastic about the response," said Holmes, who was involved in a campaign to promote voter awareness of the issue.

Craddick said he feels a sense of accomplishment in finally getting a water plan through the Legislature and passed by the voters, after several failures. He expressed relief that East Texas voters didn't reject the plan, as they have several times in the past.

"I think it's the best-balanced water bill" the Legislature could have come up with, he said. "It's got something for everyone in the state."

Midland City Councilwoman Katie Heck said voters "showed marvelous good sense" in passing the amendments, but noted that Tuesday's election won't solve the state's water problems by itself.

"There's still a lot more that needs to be done," she said. "But this is a good first step."

CHAMBER

The HBO proposed by MMH differs from those currently available in the Permian Basin in that it encloses the entire body in a glass cylinder, complete with telephone inside from which the patient may converse with the attending therapist. The unit is being donated by an anonymous benefactor, and is estimated to cost more than $75,000.

According to Director of Development Paul Dietz, the unit should be installed "sometime after the first of the year."

HBOs used by Gordon and therapists in Odessa are designed for treatment of arms and legs and average "about $6,000" according to Gordon.

"WE TREAT mainly arms and legs," said Chris Robichaud, co-owner of Odessa Physical Therapy. The clinic, which has affiliations with Midland Physical Therapy, was the first to introduce HBOs to the area in 1982.

"We had a fellow who had an ulcer on his heel that was infected," said Ms. Robichaud. "He had surgery several times and it wouldn't heal and so the doctors finally recommended amputation.

"We had heard of the HBOs and said, 'Hey, wait a minute, let's rent one and see if it will do some good,' " she said.

"We rented a unit and the patient used it four hours a day for three months and today he is healed," she said.

At one time, said Ms. Robichaud, the clinic had three HBOs but recently sent one back when business slowed down. Currently, Odessa Physical Therapy is treating "about 20" patients a day, and like Gordon, depends on physicians' referrals and word-of-mouth.

One Midland resident has high regard for the treatment, following a traumatic accident and slow recovery.

"It really did great things for me," said Randy Honaker, a former roughneck. "I don't think I would have healed up as fast without it."

Honaker, 26, suffered severe injuries and burns to his left arm in a March oilfield accident.

"We were moving a rig and the derrick hit an electrical line," recalled Honaker. "They told me that 12,500 volts came in my leg and blew out of my left wrist."

THE ACCIDENT, according to Honaker, destroyed nerves and "two handfulls" of forearm tissue and caused second and third degree burns.

"My tendons got cooked too," he added. "They tried to save them, but they were too far gone."

Honaker was in Odessa and Lubbock hospitals for one month recovering from the incident. Three days later he began the HBO treatment in Odessa. He now goes to Midland Physical Therapy.

"It was pretty painful at first," he admitted. "There was a lot of gauze stuffed into the arm and they had to remove it when they put my arm into the chamber. It was still real tender."

Today, however, Honaker states that the greatest inconvenience he encounters during treatment is boredom.

"I just sit there and read a magazine usually," he said. "The arm has really healed up. There's still a hole where it blew out, but it's covered with a thin layer of skin and looks 101 percent better."

Honaker admits that he still cannot use the arm, however, and has plans to go to Louisville, Ky., in January where surgeons will try to reconstruct his left hand.

THE FORMER oilfield worker, who lost his job shortly after the accident when the company went out of business, is currently searching for another job while undergoing treatment.

The introduction of the full-body HBO may increase their acceptance among the local medical community.

"Between 1977 and 1984, the number of hyperbaric chambers used in the United States increased six-fold," stated Ms. Ball recently. "The process is still undergoing research but it has been established that HBO therapy is effective in treating osteroadonecrosis, carbon monoxide poisoning, gas gangrene, gas embolisms, crush injuries, problem wounds, cyanide poisoning, cerebral edema and several hard-to-treat bone, fungal and soft-tissue infections.

"While research is not conclusive," she added. "HBO therapy has also been used in treating multiple sclerosis, skin ulcers, senility and certain blood flow problems."

While HBOs appear to be an innovative treatment for several afflictions, Ms. Robichaud acknowledges there is no magic in the units.

"A person can not just come in and be put in the chamber," she said. "It takes preparation. Wounds must be cleaned, skin debrided, antibiotics administered — it takes a trained therapist to properly use the unit."

Shultz calls chances for summit agreement slim

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — With only two weeks left before the Reagan-Gorbachev summit, prospects for a nuclear weapons limitation agreement or other U.S.-Soviet accords appeared slim following talks between Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet officials.

"Basically, we have a lot to do," Shultz said Tuesday in Moscow as he told reporters he and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev had been unable to narrow differences between the superpowers on their arsenal of missiles, bombers and submarines and on future space defenses.

In fact, Shultz said he would not bet that President Reagan and Gorbachev could agree at their summit Nov. 19-20 in Geneva, Switzerland, on a set of principles to guide future nuclear negotiations.

Shultz said he based his bleak forecast on a skeptical Soviet appraisal of President Reagan's counterproposal to Gorbachev's call for a 50 percent reduction in U.S. and Soviet nuclear warheads.

In his proposal last week, Reagan recommended further reductions in missile warheads but did not offer to curb his antimissile research program, the Strategic Defense Initiative.

"There was no narrowing with respect to those nuclear and space talks," Shultz said of his discussions with the Soviets.

Shultz was flying home today following an overnight refueling and relaxation stop in this capital city.

In his Moscow news conference, Shultz claimed there were "some positive developments" during his 14 hours of Kremlin meetings. He gave no examples, however. He criticized Gorbachev for having "misinformation" about the United States based on a lack of knowledge about the country.

When Shultz spoke to the Soviet leader through an American translator, Gorbachev sometimes interrupted him. Shultz said he adopted the style of interrupting Gorbachev in return.

And yet, Shultz said their sessions were, "quite cordial." But he also said there were "frank arguments" in his meetings with Gorbachev and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

The best hope for some kind of agreement in Geneva apparently is for such relatively noncontroversal areas as cultural exchanges and improved air safety procedures. Talks to resume direct commerical air travel between the two countries have broken down in a dispute over how much of Aeroflot's profits should be shared with Pan Am, the American carrier.

Spokesman: Most of Polish political prisoners to be freed

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The chief government spokesman announced that most of Poland's 368 political prisoners will be freed soon, and defended officials against Solidarity charges of government "lawlessness" in the death of a student.

Jerzy Urban, the government spokesman who announced Tuesday the impending release of the political prisoners, did not say whether officials would also release several prominent members of Solidarity, the banned trade federation.

But he made a distinction between first-time offenders and those who have been jailed before.

Among the Solidarity figures behind bars are Adam Michnik, Wladyslaw Frasyniuk and Bogdan Lis, three activists who were sent to prison by a court in June. All three had been granted amnesty a year ago, but were accused of anti-state activities, rearrested and tried.

Two prominent members of the Solidarity underground, Tadeusz Jedynak and Czeslaw Bielecki, also have been arrested in the past six months. Jedynak faces a charge of treason and Bielecki faces an equally severe charge of subversion.

The funeral for the student Marcin Antonowicz was scheduled for today in Olsztyn, 100 miles north of Warsaw, said the Rev. Julian Zolnierkiewicz.

Former Solidarity leader Lech Walesa and six other union activists have charged that the death of Antonowicz was the result of "another act of lawlessness" by police, and called for an end to political repressions and police abuses.

But Urban accused Solidarity of attempting to make a "political case" out of Antonowicz's death, "although in fact it gives no pretext for it." The government broke up Solidarity, the Soviet bloc's first independent trade federation, in December 1981 and outlawed it in 1982.

Gen. Jaruzelski to resign from post as premier

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Communist Party and diplomatic sources say Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski is resigning as Poland's premier, apparently signalling the end of the political crisis that led to martial law and suppression of the Solidarity labor movement in 1981.

The sources said Jaruzelski's resignation was approved Tuesday at a meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee and would be made public today at the opening session of the new Parliament.

Jaruzelski intended to remain head of the Communist Party, the real power in this Soviet-bloc country, and work to strengthen the organization that lost nearly 1 million members after labor turmoil in 1980 gave birth to Solidarity, the sources said.

The government crushed Solidarity and declared martial law in December 1981, and outlawed the Soviet bloc's only independent labor federation the following autumn. Many Solidarity leaders have been driven underground and some are in jail.

Diplomats said that by relinquishing control over day-to-day government operations, Jaruzelski would be able to prepare for next year's Communist Party congress.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Jaruzelski will be replaced as premier by Zbigniew Messner, the deputy premier who has been responsible for coordinating Poland's economic reform program.

Western diplomats said Jaruzelski's decision meant that the Polish leader feels the country's political turmoil is largely over. One diplomat, who also spoke on condition he not be identified, said the move "means Jaruzelski has decided the problem in Poland is no longer political but economic."

Messner, 56, was appointed deputy premier in November 1983 and is a member of the party's ruling Politburo.

Jaruzelski said nothing about his plans in a speech to the Central Committee that was broadcast Tuesday on state television. However, he referred to himself as the "until-now prime minister."

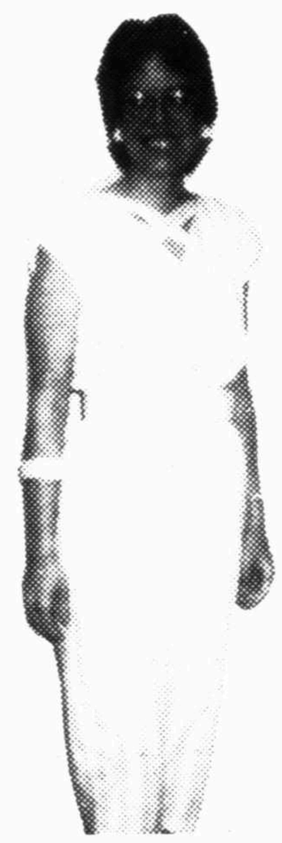

Jaruzelski, 62, became premier February 1981 and Communist Party chief eight months later, shortly before the government moved against Solidarity.

A government spokesman said Tuesday that most of the country's 368 political prisoners would be given amnesty and released "shortly."

Workers held in killings' probe

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Fifteen farm workers have been detained by authorities for questioning about marijuana traffickers alleged to have ambushed and gunned down 22 members of an anti-drug squad in a remote area of southern Mexico.

Gen. Jaime Jimenez Munoz, commander of the 29th military zone in the state of Veracruz, said in a press release late Tuesday that none of those held for questioning had admitted taking part in the killings late last week.

But, the statement said, the farm workers "have mentioned some names of the presumed criminals, although (Jimenez Munoz) didn't want to cite any to avoid obstructing the investigations."

Jimenez Munoz also said they have put together a list of middlemen involved in drug trafficking in the mountainous jungles of Veracruz, a key marijuana-growing region of Mexico.

The statement said three of the 15 detained were believed to have witnessed the slayings.

Authorities said earlier that they arrested three men suspected of telling the drug agents they would find a large cache of marijuana at the ambush site.

Enrique Arenal, head of the government's anti-narcotics campaign, said the investigation would extend to state officials. He did not identify them, but the chief of Interpol in Mexico, Cmdr. Florentino Ventura, was quoted in local newspapers as saying they included a state police commander.

In addition, authorities continued questioning two survivors of the shootout, Jose Isidoro Chontal and Moises Espronceda Gonzalez, who were transferred to Mexico City by agents of Interpol-Mexico.

The survivors, both civilians, were working with the agents when they were ambushed early Friday in the tiny settlement of Ignacio Aldama by an estimated 80 drug traffickers armed with high-powered rifles. The village is about 90 minutes by river launch from the gulf coast city of Minatitlan.

The details of the attack remained sketchy.

According to some officials, the drug agents had exchanged fire with their assailants at two villages before they were gunned down at a third site.

Jimenez Munoz, in his statement, said the drug traffickers and the agents had three confrontations. After that, he said the agents went to another site to rest and buy sodas and cookies when they were attacked.

According to some accounts, the men were tortured, forced to kneel with their arms and hands bound and then shot with high-powered weapons.

Autopsies showed 16 of the victims had internal injuries that indicated they had been beaten or tortured, a Veracruz medical examiner said.

Peso hits record low against dollar

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican peso has plunged to a record low against the U.S. dollar in private exchange houses in the capital in a slide apparently driven by investors' fears about the economic outlook.

At the close of business Tuesday, private exchange houses offered 500 pesos for each U.S. dollar and demanded 521 pesos for a dollar.

It was the first time the currency on the free market had slid to the 500 mark in the capital. The market along the U.S.-Mexico border is generally more volatile. The peso was quoted at more than 500 pesos in San Diego early last week, before stabilizing at about 475 by week's end.

Some exchange houses in the capital, apparently running low on dollars, refused to sell dollars to customers and were dealing only in travelers' checks.

The free market rate for the peso is used in tourism and for most private transactions.

A second rate, regulated by the government for most commercial transactions, stood Tuesday at 322 pesos to the dollar to buy and 323 to sell.

Late Tuesday, the Banco de Mexico, the nation's central bank, announced that it was setting restrictions on the operations of peso accounts by foreign financial institutions and exchange houses.

The central bank, in a statement carried by the government news agency Notimex, said the financial authorities believe the buying and selling of the peso should be conducted only through Mexican financial institutions.

The impact of this decision was not immediately clear but it likely was intended to try to give the government more control over the volatile currency.

The currency held surprisingly steady, around 380 pesos to the dollar, for several weeks after the deadly earthquake Sept. 19, but then began sliding.

Private analysts attributed the fall in the value of the currency to investors' worries about the nation's economy. Even before the earthquake, the economy was strapped with double-digit inflation, strong government spending and a foreign debt of $96.4 billion.

Preliminary costs of rebuilding earthquake-damaged parts of the capital have been estimated at more than $3 billion, putting further strain on the nation's limited resources.

"People are worried about high inflation and a high exchange rate and decided to shift (to dollars) to protect their wealth," said Ignacio Trigueros, director of economic research at the Mexican Autonomous Institute of Technology.

Another analyst, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said, "I don't think people are very happy with the economic situation."

The analysts said investors were jittery about a number of uncertainties in the economy.

With the additional costs of reconstruction after September's earthquakes, Trigueros said the government is under pressure to print more money to cover its costs, which would fuel an inflation rate already expected to run more than 50 percent this year.

Protesters battle police in Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Protesters against the military government of Gen. Augusto Pinochet threw stones and firebombs at vehicles and battled police from behind barricades of burning tires. Police said four people were wounded and more than 100 others were arrested.

The capital city was blacked out late Tuesday by a bomb that destroyed a major electric transmission tower, the state electric company said. Power was being restored gradually.

Police said four people were injured by gunfire in several hours of street protests Tuesday, while news reports and Roman Catholic Church sources reported additional injuries but gave no figures. The sources said some people were hit by buckshot from police shotguns.

Four other people also were injured in 15 bomb explosions Monday night in Santiago and the port city of Valparaiso, 83 miles to the west, police reports said.

The demonstrations, which lasted well into Tuesday night, were organized by political parties and other groups opposed to Pinochet, who came to power in a September 1973 coup against the elected government of President Salvador Allende, a Marxist.

The protesters also called for the release of six dissident labor and community leaders who have been in jail for 40 days, charged with organizing an anti-government demonstration on Sept. 4. The six began a hunger strike Friday to protest their detention.

Police said the four people were shot in separate incidents in suburban working class districts of Santiago.

They said Fernando Urrejola, 17, was shot in the stomach near an intersection where demonstrators erected a barricade to stop traffic. They said he was hospitalized in serious condition.

The other three — a 14-year-old boy, a 17-year-old girl and a 23-year-old man whose names were not given — were hit in the legs, apparently by stray bullets, according to police reports.

Police used tear gas and water cannons to scatter protesters. Some shops closed in downtown Santiago, but most stores and offices remained open and the protests did not seem to attract widespread public support.

Public transportation services were cut back, however, when demonstrators began throwing rocks at vehicles. Protesters also threw bent nails in the streets and flat tires idled many buses.

Police and students fought at three university campuses, and reports from the School of Medicine said one student was hit in the head by a tear gas grenade.

South African police: Two blacks killed near Cape Town

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police said today they killed two blacks in a mob throwing stones at police vehicles near Cape Town, and a mixed-race soldier was found shot to death along a road skirting Cape Town's tense mixed-race townships.

Police spokesman Attie Laubscher said the soldier was shot in the back of the head, and his duffel bag and toiletries sack were placed neatly beside the body.

There was speculation the soldier may have been hitchhiking, and it was not immediately clear whether the killing was related to South Africa's ongoing racial unrest.

However, residents of the area said anyone seen in uniform risked reprisals from rioters who regard police and soldiers of any race as enforcers of the apartheid system of racial segregation.

Police also reported incidents of stone-throwing and arson late Tuesday and early today near Port Elizabeth, Johannesburg and in eastern Cape province.

Residents of Soweto, the black township outside Johannesburg, said soldiers fired tear gas on stone-throwing youngsters this morning. No casualties were reported.

The residents also reported soldiers stopped cars on roads out of Soweto this morning, looking for youths who might be carrying stones into white Johannesburg.

Stone-throwing incidents have occurred twice in the past three weeks in white shopping areas of Johannesburg, where stones do not litter the streets as they do in black townships.

Residents said some youngsters were forced out of vehicles and ordered to walk back to the township.

Police said the two blacks were killed and a third suffered shotgun wounds in Guguletu, a black area east of Cape Town. They were members of a crowd stoning police vehicles, according to a police report.

The deaths were the first reported by police since the government clamped restrictions on news media five days ago. Police are now one of the few sources of information about anti-apartheid unrest.

A gasoline bomb thrown by an arsonist damaged a school in the mixed-race area of Elsies River, also outside Cape Town, and stone-throwers and arsonists damaged a bus, a store and a private home in Soweto, southwest of Johannesburg, police said.

Another black suffered shotgun wounds near Port Elizabeth when policemen fired on a gang from which a gasoline bomb was heaved at a police vehicle, according to a police report.

An arsonist damaged a black policeman's home in eastern Cape province, and government offices were set on fire in a nearby black area, police said.

Government regulations imposed Saturday virtually ban television crews, still photographers and radio reporters from unrest areas. Print journalists must have police permission to come near trouble spots.

Louis Nel, the deputy minister of information, said television crews were a "catalyst" to rioters, but the Foreign Correspondents Association of Southern Africa disputed the charge.

WORLD in brief

Train collision injures 43 people in England

HAYWARDS HEATH, England (AP) — Two four-car trains collided head-on near this southern English town before dawn today, and an ambulance service said 43 people were hurt.

The state-run British Rail network said in a statement that the crash occurred shortly before 2 a.m. (8 p.m. CST) and involved two electric-powered trains. British Rail traffic manager Gordon Dudman said one train was bound from London to Brighton and the other was traveling in the opposite direction.

Altogether, 65 passengers were aboard the two trains, British Rail said.

The Sussex county ambulance service said 43 people were treated for injuries and of them 13 were hospitalized, most with broken bones or concussions.

The service earlier had said that 47 people were hurt.

Hussein: Plan needs PLO

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — King Hussein of Jordan said Tuesday that his plan for an international conference on the Middle East will fail unless the United States recognizes the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Hussein found European support for such a conference in a day of talks with government officials in Luxembourg, which currently holds the presidency of the 10-nation European Economic Community.

Israel refuses to deal with the PLO and the United States has said it will not recognize Yasser Arafat's organization until the PLO recognizes Israel's right to exist.

Both countries have opposed an international peace conference, which would involve the Soviet Union, but Prime Minister Shimon Peres of Israel said last month he might reconsider if Moscow renews relations with his country.

Foreign Minister Jacques Poos of Luxembourg, reflecting the view of the Common Market governments, called the proposed international conference "a last-chance plan" for peace in the Middle East.

Peres knocks 'arrogance'

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres today condemned what he called "the arrogance" of Jewish settlers in the occupied West Bank who have threatened an armed insurgency if Israel gives up land to make peace with Jordan.

Peres, speaking in Israeli's Parliament, was responding to an article in this week's edition of "Aleph-Yud," a weekly settlers' magazine, which called on the 45,000 Jews in the West Bank to prepare themselves spiritually for armed insurgency in the event of territorial concessions.

Settler leaders issued a statement Tuesday saying that for the government to cede even partial sovereignity over Jerusalem, the West Bank, Gaza Strip or the Golan Heights would be "an illegal act and ought not to be obeyed."

Israel occupied the territories during the 1967 Middle East war.

Peres said, "I reject completely the arrogance, the attempts to intimidate and mislead of the Council for Jewish Settlement in Judea and Samaria (the West Bank)."

Iraqi Mirage jets hit ship

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraqi warplanes reportedly crippled a Greek oil tanker near the Iranian coast Tuesday, and shipping sources speculated Iraq was now using French-built long-range Mirage jets to attack ships near Iran.

A missile destroyed the engine room of the 300,000-ton Canaria and set it ablaze, forcing its crew to escape on lifeboats, maritime salvage sources said. No casualties were reported.

Iran and Iraq have been at war since September 1980. Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Unit in London reported Tuesday that 156 ships have been attacked or damaged in the Persian Gulf since May 1981 because of the war.

Four salvage tugboats were sent from Bahrain and Dubai to help the vessel, which put out a distress signal at 3:42 p.m. Iranian coast guard boats were at the scene rescuing the crew and helping fight the fire, the sources said.

Voters back abortion ruling

BRISTOL, Conn. (AP) — Voters in three New England communities have backed a 12-year-old U.S. Supreme Court ruling legalizing most abortions, but pro-life advocates were playing down the significance.

In what was billed as the first of its kind in the nation, Bristol voters Tuesday were asked in a non-binding referendum: "Should the decision of the Supreme Court regarding abortion be overturned?"

Unofficial figures showed 8,555 voting "No," while 6,737 voted "Yes."

Similar referendums in Dover and Derry, N.H., also found a majority of voters there supporting the Supreme Court decision.

The vote in Dover was 2,564 to 1,362, while in Derry it was 1,650 to 1,106, according to unofficial votes.

"I don't think this is a defeat, because in two or three years when Roe vs. Wade is defeated, they'll look at this as its start," said the Rev. Patrick Mahoney, a leading backer of the measure who founded his New Convenant Church in Bristol three years ago. "Remember, we had to overcome 12 years of mindset in three short months.

At the headquarters of pro-choice activists in Bristol, champagne corks popped and campaign workers hugged.

"I'm ecstatic that we won," said pro-choice spokeswoman Catherine Blinder. "But I have to keep bringing myself back down to earth and understand that the national right to life, with our president at the lead, is attacking fundamental civil rights of women and children."

Abortion rights activists in Bristol were bitter that the question even appeared on the ballot.

"I think there is a resentment because in the progressive community and specifically the women's movement we had hoped to be able to elect progressive candidates, we had hoped to get comparable worth pushed through, we had hoped to get an equal rights amendment. We can forget those things now because we have to fight this battle," said Blinder of the pro-choice Citizens Against Referendum 1.

"It tastes very sweet tonight, but I know tomorrow I'll be back on the battle line," she said.

First black wins Virginia state race

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A traditional campaign by Democrats in Old Dominion yielded historic results as Virginians elected Gerald L. Baliles their new governor, and with him the first woman and first black to hold statewide office.

"Tonight the people of Virginia voted for the future," Baliles told cheering Democrats after his victory Tuesday keyed a victory for the party that had thrown off the yoke of two decades of Republican dominance in Virginia only four years ago.

Baliles, 45, had a commanding 10-point margin in the governor's race over Wyatt B. Durrette, the man he narrowly defeated in the attorney general's race in 1981 when Charles S. Robb was elected governor.

But it was two other Democratic candidates for lesser offices who in victory gained almost as much attention as the governor-elect.

Veteran state Sen. L. Douglas Wilder, a slave's grandson who was called called a 100-to-one shot when he was nominated, was elected lieutenant governor. It was the first time a black candidate in the South had won a state executive office since Reconstruction.

Del. Mary Sue Taylor won the attorney general's race, becoming the first woman to win statewide office in Virginia.

"It's not the two of us but Virginia voters who have made history today," Ms. Terry said.

Wilder, speaking to supporters at party headquarters in the Hotel John Marshall, recalled when he had to work at the hotel to pay his way through college.

"I used to listen to political speeches as I would wait the tables on this floor," he said. "Little did I believe that one day I just might be your lieutenant governor."

The Democrats ran a traditional campaign, linking themselves to an incumbent administration and ignoring the uniqueness of their ticket until the last weekend, when Robb began talking about a "rendezvous with history."

Baliles, who portrayed himself as heir to Robb's administration, bettered his mentor's showing in 1981, when Robb took all but one congressional district. Baliles won them all, with support in several traditionally Republican areas. Robb, by law, could not succeed himself.

With 99 percent of the state's 1,969 precincts reporting, Baliles had 737,853 votes, or 55 percent, to Durrette's 595,807 votes, to end the campaign, during which both candidates spent a record $7 million.

Ms. Terry, 38, who plugged her country roots and urbane experience, led the ticket with 810,002 votes, or 61 percent, to 509,639 for fellow House member W.R. "Buster" O'Brien of Virginia Beach. She took every congressional district and won in every region of the state.

Wilder, 54, ended with a comfortable margin of 52 percent. He had 680,386 votes and his opponent, Senate colleague John H. Chichester of Fredericksburg, had 632,540.

The rains and floods that claimed at least 19 lives forced local registrars to relocate more than 20 precincts and delayed the openings of others.

Cuban natives face Miami mayor's run-off

MIAMI (AP) — Mayor Maurice Ferre, losing black votes that kept him in office two years ago, was denied an unprecedented seventh term as he finished behind two Cuban-born challengers who will meet in a Nov. 12 runoff.

Attorney Xavier Suarez, 36, who lost to Ferre in 1983, finished atop the 11-candidate heap with 16,224 votes, or 28.9 percent of the unofficial returns from Tuesday's election, which was marred by computer problems and wrong tabluations.

Banker Raul Masvidal, 43, a self-made millionaire, was second with 15,893 votes for 28.3 percent, while Ferre, 50, was third with 15,006 or 26.8 percent. Black sociologist Marvin Dunn, 45, was a distant fourth at 7,199 votes, 12.8 percent.

"The vote was a definite rejection of the incumbency," Suarez said. "There is a lot of desire for change among all of the ethnic blocs."

While nearly all the candidates had agreed about issues of crime, economic development, deteriorating neighborhoods and the "circus atmosphere" at City Hall, Ferre had become the central issue.

"I accept that. I have a long record to run against," he had said.

Opponents had charged that Ferre divided the multi-ethnic, racially troubled city and blamed him for the often-unruly atmosphere of the Miami City Commission, on which the mayor has a seat.

"Our campaign was based on the belief that Miami must be a united city if we are to resolve our problems," Masvidal said. "We were told it was a high-risk campaign, but today's votes tell those who cater to only one ethnic group that the people are weary of divisive politics."

Oak Park confirms ban on handguns

OAK PARK, Ill. (AP) — Voters in this Chicago suburb — one of four cities in the nation that bans the sale and possession of handguns — have affirmed their suburb's ordinance, saying the endorsement represents a small town's victory over the national gun lobby.

The final tally in a non-binding referendum Tuesday was 8,031 to uphold the 13-month old ban on handguns and 6,368 to repeal.

"Everyone here is ecstatic," said Henry Hulseberg, a spokesman for the Citizens Committee for Handgun Control. "The people here have already begun celebrating.

"We beat the NRA (National Rifle Association)."

Committee chairman Chris Walsh said that those who supported repeal were funded "by the fat wallet of the National Rifle Association."

A spokesman for the Oak Park Freedom Committee, which lobbied against the ordinance, said the group was surprised at the strength of its defeat.

"We're very upset," said spokeswoman Nadine Lenarczak. "We thought we'd be ahead, we thought we'd win. We didn't."

Freedom Committee treasurer James Zangrilli said the fight was not yet over.

"We're urging our fellow Oak Parkers to stay in Oak Park," Zangrilli said. "We're going to go to Springfield and we're going to fight it on the state level."

The ordinance, approved last fall, was not originally brought before voters. The board agreed in July to put the question up for an advisory vote.

Voinovich beats second Kucinich in mayor's race

CLEVELAND (AP) — Mayor George Voinovich racked up his second electoral victory over a member of the Kucinich family, breezing to a third term by defeating an opponent who raised only $7,000 in campaign funds to his own $400,000.

With 99 percent of the city's precincts reporting from Tuesday's balloting, Voinovich had 82,112 votes, or 72 percent to 32,015 votes, or 28 percent for City Councilman Gary Kucinich, a Democrat.

Kucinich, 34, is the younger brother of former Mayor Dennis Kucinich, whom Voinovich, a Republican, defeated in 1979 for his first term as mayor by blaming him for the city's fiscal default.

Only coincidence?

What's the deal with all these Russians suddenly seeking asylum from the United States government only to turn around a short time later and go back to the Soviet Union of their own free will?

There have been three such incidents in the past week or so and while the fact that all occurred just as the leaders of the United States and the Soviet Union are preparing for a summit meeting may be explained away by some observers as mere coincidence, we find that explanation difficult to swallow in all three for a number of reasons.

In at least two of the instances — the one of the Soviet sailor who went ashore in New Orleans, said he wanted to remain in this country, then abruptly changed his tune and was taken by American officials back to the Soviet ship from which he had fled so he could "go home" and the case of the Soviet soldier in Afghanistan who took refuge in the U.S. Embassy before agreeing to return to the Soviet Union — there's some question at least as to whether the potential defections were mishandled by American officials. That fact lends credence to the validity of those near-defections and if the cases were mishandled it's tragic because there's reason to at least suspect the men involved will suffer severe treatment by Soviet officials once back behind the Iron Curtain.

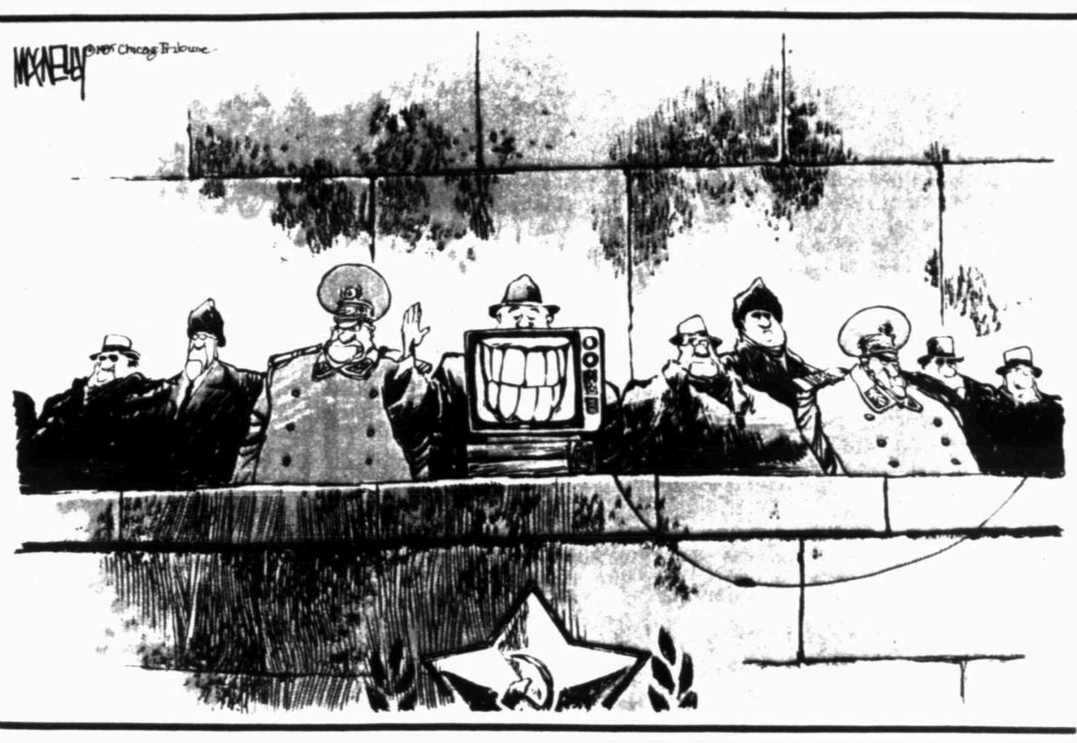

In the case of KGB official Vitaly Yurchenko, who State Department officials say defected by coming in to the U.S. Embassy in Rome in August, the defector's story is suspect from the word go largely because he was a spy who "came in from the cold" voluntarily only to return to the Soviet Embassy in Washington, D.C. this week to tell reporters how he had been "kidnapped" by the CIA, forced to take drugs and denied contact with Soviet representatives until he was able to escape.

While not discounting the lengths to which spies for both countries will go to embarrass and discredit the other side, Yurchenko's story is the least plausible. There's no more reason to believe that story from a professional trenchcoat than there is to reject the one offered by U.S. officials for his return to the Soviet fold — that the spy simply changed his mind or got homesick.

It could be mere coincidence that these three recent incidents occurred just weeks before the meeting of Ronald Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev Nov. 19. In fact the cases of the sailor and the soldier even point that way. But not the Vitaly Yurchenko case.

Rather, that case looks like the Soviet Union recognizing a fluke of good public relations in the other two cases and Yurchenko taking full advantage of the situation.

Far-fetched? Maybe, but we've seen even stranger episodes where the Soviets and summits are concerned.

High flying journalist nixes flight

NASA has just announced that it will choose a journalist to fly into orbit on a space shuttle flight next fall. The passenger will be selected from thousands of journalists by the Association of Schools of Journalism and Mass Education.

Art Buchwald

Minimum requirements are that the candidate be a citizen of the United States, have five years of journalistic experience and be working at the time.

The applicant must pass a physical examination and be able to demonstrate an ability to communicate to mass audiences in the broadcast and print media.

I'm aware of what you're thinking. I would be the perfect person to take the flight! But before you nominate me I have to warn you I have no interest in going into space.

Sure, I know your argument. I am probably in better physical shape than any journalist in the country, and could handle weightlessness more easily than most. And there is probably no question in your mind that I could do a better reporting job. So why won't I fly? The main reason is I have to think of myself before my country.

This is the downside to the shuttle flight. They say I would have to give up four months of my life to prepare for the three- or four-day NASA flight. Since I've already had intensive training flying the Eastern Shuttle to New York I don't see why I need more.

The next thing that bothers me is that the candidate has to promise not to violate the privacy of his fellow astronauts. This makes no sense. If you can't violate someone's privacy you have no right to call yourself a journalist. Space, for all its grandeur, is still the story of human beings holed up in an aluminum cigar, standing on their heads, hurtling around the globe while TV records them waving to the camera.

I have other reasons for turning down the flight. One is that I will be required to pool all the information I gather with every other reporter on the ground.

Why should I risk my life so every one else can get my story? Pooling with other reporters is unfair because the only reason for a journalist to go into space is to make his colleagues look stupid when he returns.

The idea of NASA giving a journalist a free trip in a shuttle could present a conflict of interest. Let us say, for argument's sake, the food is lousy, the crew is fooling around and the much-touted walk in space doesn't live up to the advertising. How can you report freely what really goes on behind closed doors on a shuttle when NASA is picking up the tab?

The final thing that bugs me about the offer is that we journalists were NASA's fourth choice — after Sen. Jake Garn, a Saudi Arabian prince and a schoolteacher named Christa McAuliffe. Sen. Garn has milked everything he saw, as has the prince, and Mrs. McAuliffe, who goes up next, isn't planning to keep what she sees a secret either. By the time a journalist is launched there won't be one new thing in space left to see.

I have only given a few reasons why I don't want to go up in the shuttle. I'm not surprised that when you first read the story of NASA offering to shoot a professional communicator into the sky my name immediately came to mind. And I hope I haven't disappointed any readers by withdrawing from the competition.

Some of you, in your enthusiasm, may have already submitted my name. If so, please write to the NASA Journalist in Space Project, University of South Carolina, Columbia, S.C., and tell them to take me out of consideration. I don't want the NASA people to select me and then find out, to their embarrassment, I'm the only member of the media who doesn't want to go.

Khadafy ripe for an overthrow

WASHINGTON — Col. Muammar Khadafy, the desert fox who has ruled Libya with increasing instability since 1969, is likely to be toppled by a military coup within a year.

Jack Anderson

During his 16 years in power, Khadafy has outdone the proverbial nine-lived cat. By our count he has survived at least 22 attempts to assassinate or otherwise unseat him. He has been nicked by a bullet but has never been seriously wounded.

Yet the time has never been riper for either a spontaneous coup from the inside or one orchestrated from outside, according to our sources, who include Libyans still in the country as well as in exile. The CIA, in a recent top-secret evaluation, rates Khadafy as "very vulnerable."

His physical condition may be as precarious as his mental health. The CIA reports that Khadafy has been ingesting large amounts of sleeping pills lately. His wife oversees the desert dictator's medication, for fear that one of his many enemies may poison him.

The most serious coup attempt, last August, got little publicity in the Western media, but its significance was not lost on Khadafy-watchers in the intelligence community. In one of his all-too-frequent fits of pique, Khadafy ordered his generals to invade Tunisia. Instead, they mutinied.

It was only by the skin of his teeth that Khadafy survived this attempt. His loyal guards, including East Germans, were able to halt the planes and tanks that the mutinous officers had ordered to attack Tripoli. At least 13 senior air force officers and 30 army officers were subsequently arrested.

Without the loyalty of the military colleagues who put him in power, Khadafy is on a slippery slope. Just how slippery was demonstrated by the Sept. 1 anniversary celebration of his 1969 coup. For the first time ever, the great parade contained no military units, only a rabble of revolutionary militants.

Presumably, he remembered that his old enemy, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, was assassinated while reviewing a military parade, and Khadafy didn't want to risk the same fate.

In his speech to the celebrants, the distrustful dictator put the best face possible on this curious absence of military muscle. "The Revolutionary Committee Movement," he said, "which we parade today instead of tanks and aircraft, which are standing in their bases and camps, is another display of power."

Khadafy knows he can survive as long as he has the military behind him. But a secret CIA report states bluntly: "That support is no longer assured."

The CIA report notes that trouble "has been brewing within the officer corps," and adds: "Khadafy's policies have caused bitterness and friction, especially among the Free Officers, a loose organization of about 60 officers who brought Khadafy to power and hold key posts in the armed forces and security apparatus."

Consequently, Khadafy has "reduced his reliance on the officer corps ... gambling that the rank-and-file of the armed forces (along with the East German bodyguard) can protect him from challenges." In hopes of cementing the lower echelons' loyalty, "he has suggested to his fellow Bedouin tribesmen, who make up the rank and file, that they should be suspicious of their largely city-bred officers."

Though the CIA cautiously warns that "Khadafy has a remarkable ability to patch up or smooth over apparently irreconcilable differences," other Libyan experts predict that his days are numbered.

"The time is ripe," one intelligence source said. "His domestic base is eroding fast. There will be greater upsurges and attacks against him." And sooner or later, one will succeed.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: All but forgotten in the roster of ethnic groups seeking to maintain their identity against majority oppression are the Berbers of North Africa. Until the Arab encroachment from the east beginning in the 7th century A.D., the Berbers flourished in the mountains and deserts of present-day Morocco and Algeria. In Algeria, although Berbers make up about 25 percent of the population, the dominant Arab majority forbids official teaching of their language. Arab attempts to write the Berbers out of the history books have aroused protest marches. Watch for eventual trouble.

TRAVEL TIPS: In the aftermath of last June's hijacking of a TWA airliner and the brutal murder of an American serviceman on board, the Pentagon has quietly issued new regulations governing international travel by U.S. servicemen on official business. No longer must they fly American airlines only — if the route would take them through areas that are demonstrably dangerous for Americans. Safety considerations can now override both the "fly American" rule and possible greater expense. Whenever possible, of course, service personnel will fly U.S. military aircraft.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Administration economists are already preparing their alibis for the next recession, and guess what? They've decided to blame consumers. Here's how this nervy notion works: Years of enthusiastic spending by consumers has led to a record-breaking total of private debt. So sated consumers have slacked off on their spending spree while they try to climb out of the red. This belt-tightening, however modest, will bring several quarters of sluggish economic growth — a trend that has already begun. Interestingly, the administration economists don't give consumers credit for the economic boom — only the slump.

JAMES RESTON

Test ban deserves consideration

BERKELEY, Calif. — In all the speculation about the Reagan-Gorbachev summit meeting in Geneva on Nov. 19-20, there has been very little public discussion of the possibility of an agreement to immediately stop and finally ban the testing of nuclear weapons.

James Reston

In Washington, where politicians prefer to test everything and decide nothing, the nuclear test ban has been supported in principle, but not in practice, by every president since Eisenhower.

Here in Berkeley at the University of California, however, some of the scientists who helped invent these atomic weapons are suggesting that maybe a ban on testing new ones may be the best hope of compromise at Geneva. At least it deserves more attention than it's getting.

Consider, for example, the thoughts of Prof. Glenn Seaborg. He has been around this campus as a research chemist since 1937, and was awarded the Nobel Prize for his discoveries in the field of atomic energy.

He was chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission in Washington for 10 years, a participant in many of the struggles over the control of nuclear weapons at home and abroad for more than a generation. And now, at age 73, he is still reflecting on the politics and possible remedies at the coming nuclear talks at Geneva.

"Today," he says,"relations between the United States and the Soviet Union are at a lower point than they have been for some time — a mountain of distrust between us — but I think there is a realization in both countries that steps toward a test ban can be to mutual advantage. Perhaps we need to think in terms of where we are going in another 10 years if we don't come to an agreement."

Seaborg believes that if the nuclear nations can't test new nuclear weapons on earth, in the sea and in outer space, they wouldn't dare risk using those weapons because of fear they might backfire in a crisis. He makes four arguments for paying attention to Gorbachev's offer of a moratorium on nuclear testing until the end of the year, and then for negotiations for a permanent testing ban:

— First, Seaborg insists, an agreement to end all testing of nuclear arms would impede further developments in the nuclear arsenals of the major powers — developments that may lead, as he sees it, to destabilizing new weapons systems that could disrupt the present balance of power.

— Second, the end of all testing for future weapon systems might ease the economic burden of excessive military expenditures and relieve the hunger, agony and menace of war and chaos in the undernourished and overpopulated regions of the world.

— Third, an agreement by Washington and Moscow to come to grips with the nuclear arms race would provide evidence, so far missing, that they intended to keep their promises to work for arms control and to curb the spread of nuclear weapons to other nations and to the terrorists of the world.

— Fourth, and finally, if President Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev could agree at Geneva to avoid testing for a few months, as Gorbachev has offered to do, it might then be possible to negotiate in the coming year a longer-range ban on testing that could be verified with the help of other nations that have already offered to do so.

Seaborg and his colleagues here at the University of California are not insisting that a moratorium or a ban on the testing of nuclear weapons is the answer to the nuclear arms race. There are other scientists here in Reagan Country with different views, but there seems to be general agreement here that a comprehensive test ban deserves more consideration than it's getting in Washington and the rest of the country.

On the facts of the testing and spread of nuclear weapons, there is no dispute. From 1945 to the end of 1984, the United States exploded 756 nuclear weapons, the Soviet Union 556 since 1949; Britain, 38 since 1952; France, 127 since 1960; China, 29 since 1964, and India, one in 1974.

The United States and the Soviet Union have about 50,000 nuclear weapons between them, and they produce two or three new ones every week. Even if they agreed at Geneva to cut these arsenals by 50 percent, they'd both have enough to blow up the world 10 times over.

So Seaborg and some of his colleagues here ask why go on testing to produce more sophsticated weapons, at more cost.

Because, says Reagan, if we keep on testing and developing new weapons, we may invent a shield that might in the next century protect the human race from nuclear attack, and a ban on testing new weapons might not be a good thing but a bad thing. That point could be a central one in his meeting with Gorbachev in Geneva.

Thanks for happy ending

On a recent Saturday my husband and I were in Midland to visit our three daughters, and we had dinner together at a restaurant. While we spent an enjoyable hour or so eating and visiting, someone broke into one of our cars and stole two of our daughters' purses from under the seat. This was a very upsetting experience for all of us. Not only was their money gone but also car and apartment keys, checkbooks, drivers licenses, and other things that could not be replaced.

We always hear how busy and uncaring city people are, but I can tell you this was not the case that Saturday night in Midland. The management of the restaurant was extremely helpful. One gentleman brought a flashlight and helped my husband search for the discarded purses while another stayed with my daughter and me in the parking lot as we waited for the police. When Officer Glover arrived, he conducted his investigation with efficiency and courtesy.

On the following Monday, someone found the discarded purses and turned them in to the police. By that Wednesday the girls had all their belongings back, except for the money.

This was only a small incident, but it proves to us that people do still care about each other. We offer our sincere thanks to everyone concerned for making an unpleasant situation have a happy ending.

Vocal fan states case

I'm a parent and fan, and a strong believer in the no pass-no play rule. If my child can pass and keep her grades up along with making the basketball team, I feel as a parent that I should be able to cheer and support the team without being told to be quiet because the coach feels that I'm upsetting her team.

The point is this: Oct. 31st my family went to San Jacinto to watch our daughter play. Now being a parent you are going to boo and hiss the other team in fun. I never want any child to get hurt, just play the game, win or lose, but most of all learn to be good sportsmen.

Case in point: The coach for San Jacinto tells the official to tell me not to cheer, boo, hiss and so forth because I'm upsetting her team. Now I never said anything to offend the players, coach or anyone. I was just out to watch the game to have fun and hope our team wins. If I can't do that without the coaches and officials telling me to be quiet, then there is something wrong with Midland Independent School District. And I know that is not the case.

Every game that I attend, I'm vocal. No drinking involved, I'm just a vocal fan. We left the game to avoid any changes, but I wanted to express my thoughts and feelings so this type of thing doesn't happen again to someone not so nice about it.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1928, in a first, the results of Herbert Hoover's election victory over Alfred E. Smith were flashed onto an electric sign outside the New York Times building.

In 1956, President Dwight D. Eisenhower and Vice President Richard M. Nixon won re-election, defeating Democrats Adlai E. Stevenson and Estes Kefauver.

In 1962, Edward M. Kennedy was elected senator from Massachusetts.

One year ago: President Reagan overwhelmed his Democratic challenger, Walter F. Mondale, winning re-election by a landslide.

West Virginia hardest hit by floodwaters

Associated Press

The swirling, silt-brown crests of Appalachian floodwaters rolled downstream today, threatening more damage after killing at least 26 people, sweeping away houses, cars and barges, isolating towns and forcing thousands of evacuations.

Officials throughout the mid-Atlantic states already had counted hundreds of millions of dollars in damage from several days of flooding.

"We're talking millions and millions, just untold millions, if the reports we're receiving are correct," said John Price, an aide to Gov. Arch Moore of West Virginia, where federal disaster relief is being sought for 22 counties.

"It's certainly, in terms of the widespread nature, got to rank as the worst flooding disaster West Virginia has ever had," Price said.

Flooding, triggered by a low-pressure system that deluged the region for three days before sliding out to sea, was reported in more than half the state.

Moore said he was mobilizing National Guard units throughout the affected areas. The towns of Weston, Marlinton, Parsons and Petersburg all were cut off at various times Tuesday, and telephone communications with many towns were still out today.

There were seven storm-related deaths in West Virginia, and Price said looting had been reported in some areas. "It's a problem in these isolated pockets," he said. "We can't move law enforcement people in."

Lynchburg, Va., firemen watch buildings smouldering as the floodwaters of the James River rise.

In Virginia, where at least 19 people were killed by floods and as many as 800 roads were blocked by high water or mudslides, Gov. Charles S. Robb declared a state of emergency.

Officials in Roanoke, Va., where the Roanoke River crested 13 feet above flood stage, estimated their city received at least $125 million in damages, while preliminary figures for the region topped $250 million.

But rising waters elsewhere threatened floods along the James and Appomattox rivers. In Richmond, Va., the James was expected to crest Thursday afternoon at 19 feet above flood stage, raising the possibility that Interstate 95, a major north-south East Coast thoroughfare, might have to be closed.

Six one-ton canisters of poisonous chlorine gas washed into the James from a plant near Lynchburg, Va., when it crested 17 feet above flood stage, but city Fire Chief William A. Anderson said he was more concerned about several propane gas tanks seen floating in the river.

"With the rate of the river, they would be like torpedoes if they hit some of these pilings," the fire chief said.

A telephone company employee, Mike Lester of Roanoke, was rescued by scuba divers after struggling for 27 hours in the flooded basement of the science building at Hollins College. Lester survived when the water crested one foot below the ceiling, leaving him air.

In Pennsylvania, Gov. Dick Thornburgh released $1 million in emergency funds, called out 600 National Guard troops to sandbag stricken communities and declared state disaster areas in the counties of Allegheny, Fayette, Greene, Washington and Somerset — where an estimated 3,000 people were in shelters.

Pittsburgh police closed heavily traveled bridges and snarled evening rush-hour traffic after a fleet of 40 to 60 coal barges slipped their moorings upsteam on the Monongahela and crashed into pilings, crushed pleasure craft and plunged over a Corps of Engineers dam.

Cloudy to sunny skies were forecast for the region today, but more than 8 inches of rain had fallen on Canaan Valley, W.Va., while Cape Hatteras, N.C., got more than 6 inches and Erie, Pa., 3½ inches. The National Weather Service said more than 10 inches fell along the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia.

City of Rajneesh renamed Antelope

CITY OF RAJNEESH, Ore. (AP) — Residents of this tiny north central Oregon town that was taken over by followers of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh three years ago voted 34-0 Tuesday to change the community's name back to Antelope.

City Council President and Acting Mayor Ma Deva Parmita said the name changes takes immediately, but the returns still must be certified.

In mid-September, the Indian guru suggested restoring the town's original name to mend fences with non-Rajneeshee residents. About 3,000 of his followers live at the Rajneeshpuram commune about 18 miles east of town.

"I think it's a real statement that the city can live harmoniously now," she said of the vote.

'Half of Marlinton is gone' in wake of flooding

MARLINTON, W.Va. (AP) — Patients at Pocahontas Memorial Hospital, flooded when the Greenbrier River spilled over its banks, huddled in the darkness of their hospital rooms, listening to trees, cars and houses bouncing off the building.

"It was eerie," Lonnie Parsons, 40, a disabled Vietnam veteran, said Tuesday. "Things were crunching against the hospital all night. Whole houses were floating down the Greenbrier River."

Parsons, who was admitted to the hospital Friday, said water began rising Monday night and patients were moved to the second floor. Then, he said, the generator was inundated and the lights went out.

"One little boy was concerned about whether we would have to go out into the water where cars and houses were flowing by," said Parsons, of Richwood. "I'm sure the hospital personnel were concerned about their futures, but they didn't let it interfere with the way they did their duties."

Through the night, water flowed through the first floor of the hospital, he said. Rescue attempts began at daybreak for about 50 hospital patients and personnel.

"There was about three inches of water on the hospital floor this morning," said Parsons. "A Coast Guard boat tried to get upsteam to check us out but the motor failed or it couldn't move against the current, and it slipped sideways and was cut in half on a rock."

When the water receded, volunteers evacuated the first 10 patients to Humana Hospital Greenbrier Valley by ambulance.

"The water is starting to go down now, but in some areas it just stretched from mountain to mountain," said Robert C. Clutter of the Greenbrier County Emergency Ambulance Service.

Crews remained on duty overnight as five days of often torrential rains pushed rivers in Virginia and West Virginia to record levels.

"I tried to calm down one woman," said Robert Hoffman Jr. of the West End Ambulance Service at Rainelle. "She didn't know where her kids were and thought they were across the river but there was no way that she could get there."

"You could see the loss in people's eyes and hear it in people's voices," added his co-worker, Chris Trout. "All around, people have lost their homes and everything."

Pocahontas Deputy Sheriff Craig Doss was among the victims.

"Half of Marlinton is gone," he said. "Several people including me, lost their homes. Water took my house right down the river."

Doss said his wife visited his parents on a hill overlooking the Pocahontas community Monday night because she was worried about the floods.

"She drove to the top of the hill and looked down this morning," said Doss. "There was only one trailer left of eight or 10 — and it wasn't ours."

Cooler weather expected

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders may want to pull an extra blanket out of the closet tonight as cooler temperatures are expected in the Permian Basin area, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Fair skies and a low near 40 are expected tonight with winds from the northeast at 10 to 15 mph.

Temperatures are expected to remain cool Thursday as the high reaches near 70. Winds will blow from the north at five to 15 mph.

Tuesday's high of 75 was four degrees below the record set in 1955. This morning's low was 29 degrees above the 1959 record of 21.

STATE

A cold front rolled into Northwest Texas from the central plains early today, pumping a strong southwest wind into the Panhandle, and forecasters predicted rainshowers could develop in southern sections later.

No showers or thunderstorms developed in the dry Polar air. Only middle to high cloudiness was present over the Panhandle.

The leading edge of colder air advanced to a line from west of Wichita Falls to Lubbock.

Winds were gusting from the southwest at 15 to 25 mph from the western Hill Country into North Texas. Winds north of the front were from the north at at 20 to 35 mph, gusting to 45 mph in the high plains.

Meanwhile, weak high pressure from deep East Texas to the lower Gulf coast kept winds light and variable.

NATION

Rain dotted much of the nation today, a cold front pushed snow into Western high country, and temperatures took a sharp dip as northern winds whistled across the Plains.

Rain was scattered from the lower Great Lakes and upper Ohio Valley to the northern and middle Atlantic Coast; from western sections of the upper Mississippi Valley to the west central Plains and over parts of the Pacific Northwest and northern Rockies.

A cold front moving across the Pacific Northwest sent snow into the western mountains, prompting travelers' advisories for the Cascades, Olympics, Northeast and Blue mountains in Washington and the Cascades and Northeast mountains of Oregon.

Snow also was falling over parts of the northern and central Rockies.

Laker ceremony ends in Cavs win

Associated Press

If the Los Angeles Lakers win another National Basketball Association title this season, they might plan to send the championship rings through the mail and hang the championship banner in private.

Commissioner David Stern presented the Lakers with their 1984-85 rings and their title banner was unveiled in a 25-minute ceremony Tuesday night at the Forum. A couple of hours later, Los Angeles lost for the first time this season, 129-111 to the Cleveland Cavaliers, who won for only the second time in six games.

"It was the same kind of ordeal that we went through three years ago," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said, referring to a 132-117 loss to Golden State after a similar ceremony in 1982.

"I was feeling great, receiving the ring and remembering what the championship meant," said Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who led Los Angeles with 23 points, eight rebounds and eight assists. "We know everyone will be gunning for us. The Cavaliers shot 57 percent to our 42 percent. We won't win any games shooting like that."

Cleveland's 1-4 start did not flag the confidence of the team and Coach George Karl, and the Cavaliers proved it against the Lakers.

"The guys know they can play with any team," Karl said. "It doesn't matter if it's the Lakers or the Celtics. We believe we can win."

The Cavaliers got stellar performances from point guard John Bagley and backup forward-center Edgar Jones against Los Angeles. Jones had 24 points and 12 rebounds, while Bagley added 20 points and 11 assists.

"We felt we could run with the Lakers and Bag had a great night," Karl said. "It's a great victory. Last year we came in here after winning six straight and got blown out by 25. It's strange, but we play better on the road. We have not won at home yet, and this is our second win on the road (2-0).

"We stay mentally into the game on the road. I don't know why. Maybe because we are away from our families."

Cleveland led 37-30 after one quarter, then hit its first 13 shots in the second period and led 75-57 at halftime. The Lakers, now 4-1, never threatened in the second half.

"I won't say they thought I was the weak link, but they were leaving me open for my shot," said Jones, averaging less than nine points per game for his career. "We came to play as hard as we could. We aren't going to be blown away anymore. We are earning our respect in this league."

Rockets 127, Blazers 113

Akeem Olajuwon had 41 points and 18 rebounds, and Houston got a big second half from John Lucas to beat Portland.

Despite 27 points by Olajuwon, the Rockets led only 57-56 at halftime, but they outscored the Trail Blazers 18-7 to start the third quarter to lead 75-63. Portland missed eight of 11 shots during that span.

Kiki Vandeweghe went on to score 14 of his 28 points in the third quarter as the Trail Blazers cut Houston's lead from 13 points to nine at the start of the fourth period, but Portland never threatened in the last 12 minutes.

Bucks 126, Spurs 97

Backup guard Ricky Pierce hit 10 of 14 shots and scored 26 points to lead Milwaukee to an easy victory over San Antonio.

The Bucks started the second quarter with an 18-7 streak that gave them a 56-41 lead. They went on to outscore the Spurs 32-17 in the period for a 68-49 halftime advantage.

Milwaukee took a 75-54 lead in the third period before a 14-2 streak by San Antonio cut the deficit to nine. But the Bucks rebuilt the margin back to 97-77 at the end of the third period.

Mike Mitchell led San Antonio with 17 points, while backups Randy Breuer and Kenny Fields scored 15 apiece for Milwaukee.

SuperSonics 84, Knicks 80

Rookie Xavier McDaniel had 21 points and 14 rebounds as Seattle handed New York its sixth straight defeat.

McDaniel's two free throws put the SuperSonics ahead to stay at 77-76 with 3:28 left, and he followed with a slam dunk 21 seconds later.

The Knicks, who got 22 points from rookie Patrick Ewing, pulled away to an 11-2 lead, but Seattle rallied to go ahead 41-35 at halftime.

Nuggets 128, Hawks 113

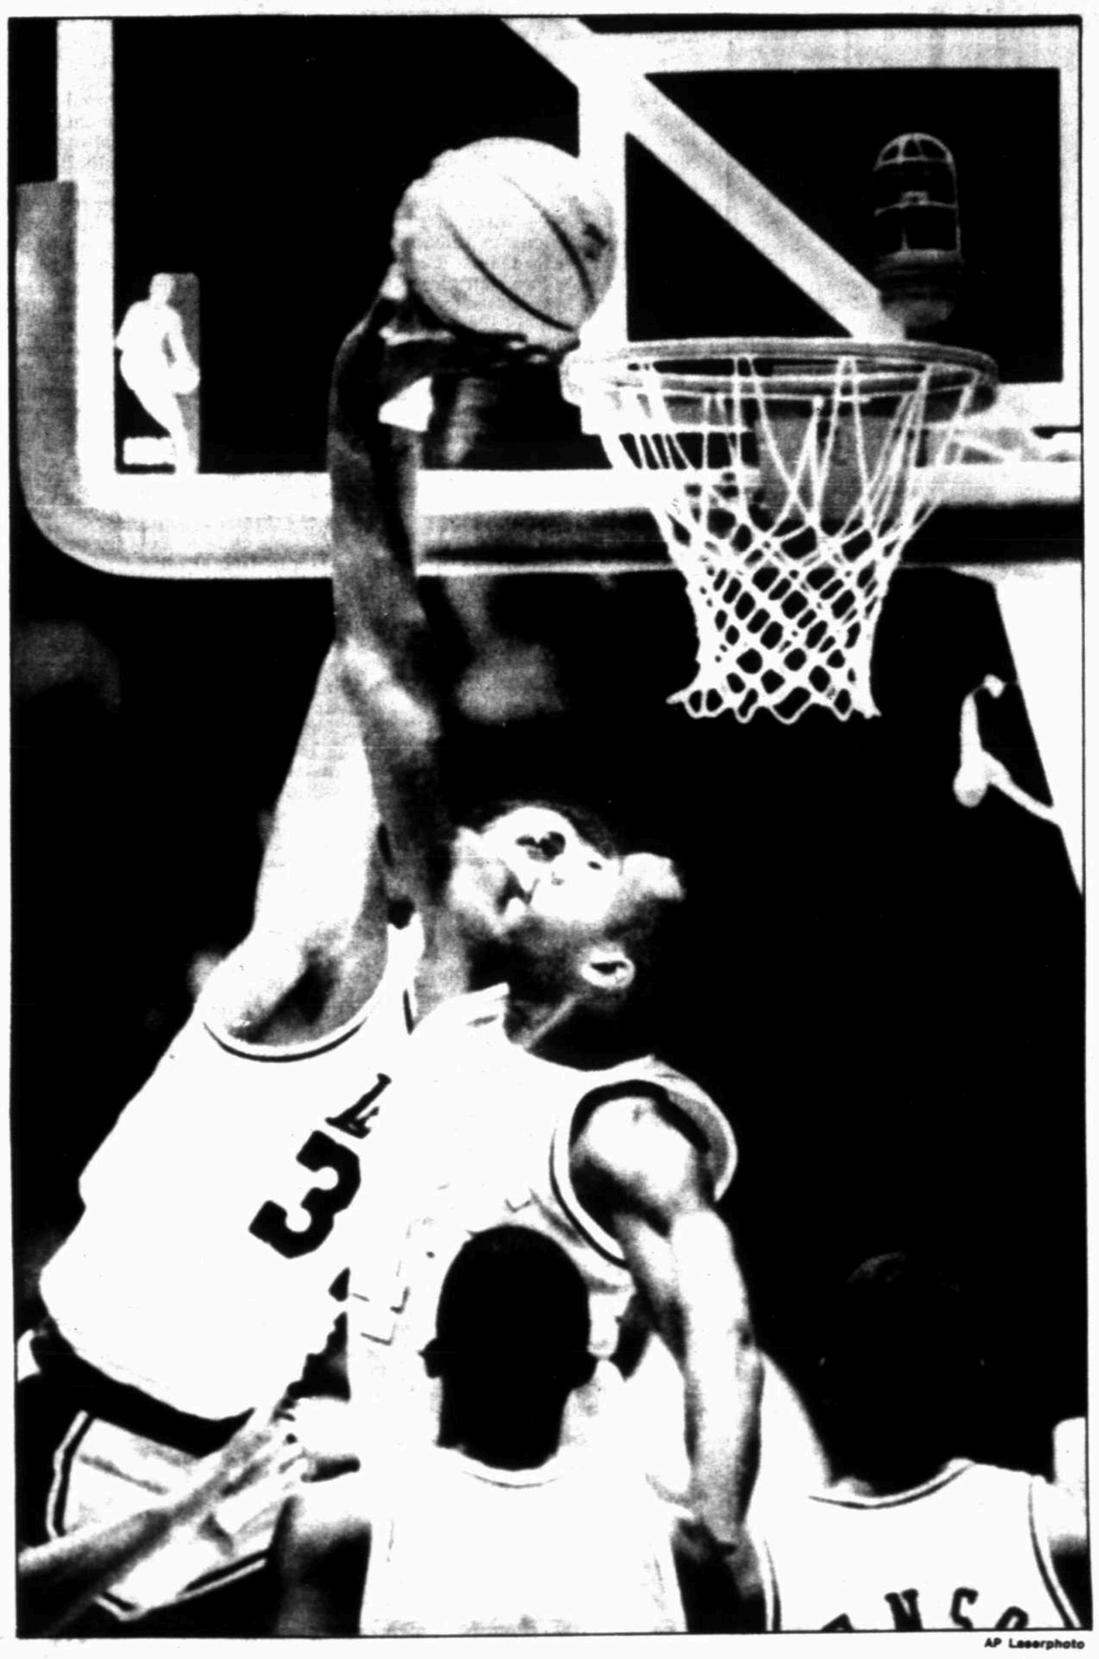

NBA scoring leader Alex English scored 33 points as Denver stayed unbeaten by defeating Atlanta despite the loss of all-star forward Calvin Natt in the second quarter.

The start is the best for the 5-0 Nuggets since 1976, when they started by winning their first eight games.

Natt suffered a sprained left ankle in the second quarter and did not return to the game.

Mike Evans, who had four three-point goals and 18 points, led a 15-0 rally as Denver broke away from a 34-34 tie in the second quarter.

Eight teams to compete in Chap Classic

An eight-team field will tip off in the Midland College Chaparral Classic with the first of the four-game opening round at 3 p.m. Thursday between Murray State of Oklahoma and South Plains College.

Midland College meets Grayson County at 7 p.m. while other games pit Odessa College against Garden City, Kansas, at 5 p.m. and Howard College against Lubbock Christian College JV in the 9 p.m. contest.

Play continues with four games Friday and Saturday.

Consolation games will be played at 2 and 4 p.m. Friday and the semi-finals are at 7 and 9 p.m. The MC-Grayson and SPC-Murray winners play at 7 p.m. and the losers meet at 2 p.m. the OC-Garden City and Howard-LCC winners meet at 9 p.m. and the losers at 4 p.m.

Saturday games will be at 1 p.m., seventh place; 3 p.m., consolation finals; 5 p.m., third place and 7 p.m. championship.

"With four conference teams (MC, OC, SPC and HC) in the field, there are going to be some hotly contested games," predicts MC Coach Jerry Stone, whose Chaps opened the season with a 110-84 win over Jacksonville Baptist College Saturday night.

"Murray State and Grayson are reputed to be tough, and Garden City always has good teams. It should be an interesting three days for basketball fans," predicts Stone.

In Saturday's opener, Stone used all 10 players available and got point-production out of each as the Chaps exhibited mid-season form.

Freshman guard Daron "Mookie" Blaylock, 6-1 speedster from Garland, scored 26 points to break in with a splash. Another newcomer, Chase Brown, the NMMI transfer, pumped in 20 points from the other guard as the Chaps demonstrated an ability to penetrate inside, riddle a zone from outside and strike decisively off its transition game.

Tony Wright, Ricky Grace and Eddie Frazier, the holdovers from last year, carried a strong share of the load as starters and Coach Jerry Stone's bench maintained the pace with no noteworthy loss of performance. Derrick Lewis, Eric Kelly, Todd Duncan and Craig Curry all contributed to the point total.

"It was a nice way to start, but we'll face tougher competition in the Chap Classic," Stone said, "We'll have to be ready Thursday, since Grayson gave us a tough time last year. If we beat them, Friday will, be even tougher."

South Plains is coached by Ron Mayberry, former Odessa Permian, MC assistant, OC and Wayland College coach.

Astros hire Cards' Lanier

New boss wants running game

HOUSTON (AP) — Hal Lanier wants the National League Western Division Houston Astros to become a base-stealing carbon copy of the Eastern Division's St. Louis Cardinals.

Lanier signed a two-year contract Tuesday to manage the Astros, his first major-league managing job. He spent the last five seasons as an assistant coach under Whitey Herzog with the Cardinals.

"I think there are at least five or six people on this team that can steal 25 to 30 bases," Lanier said. "This is going to be a more exciting ballgame for the fans."

The Cardinals led the NL with 314 stolen bases last season and had three players in the top 10 in stolen bases, including NL leader Vince Coleman with 110.

The entire Astros team stole 96 bases last season.

"I want to get it in people's minds to take the extra base," Lanier said. "I don't like to see a club that goes base to base and I think that's the type of club the Astros have been."

Lanier said Astros Bill Doran, Dickie Thon, Jose Cruz, Kevin Bass, Jerry Mumphrey and Terry Puhl each have base-stealing potential.

Lanier replaces Bob Lillis, who was fired Oct. 7 after the Astros tied for third place in the NL West.

Lanier's success as a minor league manager and his association with Herzog were factors in his selection, Astros General Manager Dick Wagner said.

"I like the Herzog touch," Wagner said. "He's a very outstanding man in the game today."

Lanier said Herzog gave him a good recommendation.

"Anytime you get a recommendation from Whitey Herzog, you've really got something on your side," Lanier said.

Bass said he's excited about a more aggressive approach.

"I think we need to have a giddy-up offense and he's going to give us that," Bass said. "We have to take chances. We don't have the Boston Red Sox power."

The Astros already have retained three coaches from last season — Denis Menke, Matt Galante and Les Moss.

Lanier, 43, led Gastonia to the Carolina League title in 1977, and in 1980 took Springfield to the American Association championship.

Lanier joined the Cardinals' major league staff in 1981 as a coach and was third-base coach in the Cardinals' charge to the 1985 World Series against Kansas City.

Lanier reached the major leagues in 1964 with the San Francisco Giants and in 1968, he was the top fielding shortstop in the National League.

Chicago White Sox third-base coach Jim Leyland, former New York Mets and Atlanta manager Joe Torre, former major league manager Dave Bristol, and former Minnesota Manager Billy Gardner also interviewed for the job.

The Astros finished third in 1983, tied for second in 1984 and tied for third last season under Lillis. The Astros started the 1983 and 1984 seasons with slumps and dropped out of contention with a July swoon last season.

Giants' Gray ends holdout

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Wide receiver Earnest Gray has ended his holdout and signed a contract with the New York Giants reportedly worth between $200,000 and $225,000 in each of its two years, the National Football League club announced.

Gray, who has played for the Giants since they picked him in the second round of the league's college draft seven years ago, agreed to terms of the contract last week and signed after passing a physical exam Tuesday, said team spokesman Ed Croke.

Croke said Gray, who missed the season's first nine games, would report to practice Wednesday but remain ineligible. Croke said the club would ask NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle for a two-game exemption for Gray, so he can practice but not count on the roster.

Gray, 28 and out of Memphis State, is the Giants sixth leading all-time receiver with 243 catches. He shared the 1983 National Football Conference pass receiving championship with Roy Green of the Cardinals and Charlie Brown of the Redskins. All three had 78 catches.

Real time counted in quality

Only our Maker knows why Tracy Hagins, 19, was taken from us in a car accident last Sunday morning at so young an age, but we do know that he touched us while he was here. And that's important.

Tracy was home for a visit — his weekly visit — from McMurry College in Abilene when the accident occured. He came home almost every weekend to see the Midland High Bulldogs play football.

His dad, Bernie, is an assistant football coach under Doug McCutchen at Midland High and Tracy always seemed to find a way to watch the Bulldogs play on Friday night.

"As far as I know, Tracy saw everyone of our games except the game with Lubbock Estacado in Lubbock," noted McCutchen. "He was always there and always supportive.

"I just wish there was something we could do instead of just showing Bernie and Lois that we are here if they need us. But there is nothing we can do. We all feel the loss.

"It's a double loss for our team because they all played football with Tracy last year and the kids are close to Bernie. But we will go on because that's what both want us to do."

Tracy was a defensive back for the Bulldogs only a year ago and also was a distance runner in track. And when that all ended, Tracy still thought of home and Midland High. He had deep roots at home and in Midland although he lived here only since 1981.

In a big way, Bernie and Tracy are an example to all of us who profess to be parents. They turned the ideal into a working relationship and we can all learn from that.

Bernie and Tracy had a unique relationship in that Tracy had the opportunity to take part in his dad's chosen occupation. Bernie is an assistant in both football and track and the two got to work and achieve together.

In the eyes of the world, Bernie and Tracy had little time together. Many times it takes 19 years for a father and son to even reach an understanding of each other.

Few of us ever get the chance to work as close with a child as the chance these two had. As a result, the two were close. They achieved what many of us strive for in a family relationship and it is easy for the world to see that.

We're told by people who are supposed to know about these things that it isn't important how much time you spend with your children as long as it is quality time.

We don't need doctors to tell us that fact. We only need to look at the Hagins family. The time was short for Tracy and his family, but the quality of life was full and complete.

That is something that is never taken away. It's a beacon to the rest of us.

Both Midland Lee and Midland High football teams have felt the sting of tragedy this year with the loss of Gil Kenney and Tracy Hagins. That is the danger of becoming close to people. But not to have known either one of them would have been the greatest tragedy of all.

NEW YORK (AP) — Wheatley Stable's Dark Secret won the Jockey Club Gold Cup at Belmont Park two straight years, 1933 and 1934, but in the '34 renewal he also lost his life.

Dark Secret galloped home four lengths in front in 1933 in the two-mile event and a year later he won by a head over his stablemate, Faireno. However, going under the wire one of his legs snapped and he had to be destroyed. He was, however, confirmed as the official winner.

Senior quarterback Mark Calcagni, replacing injured starter Greg Thomas, got his first start Saturday against Rice and was awarded SWC Player of the Week honors for his efforts.

Hogs' Calcagni earns SWC honor

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Against Texas, fifth-year senior Mark Calcagni came off the bench in the fourth quarter and led Arkansas to a touchdown. A week later, starter Greg Thomas was injured on Arkansas' second play and Calcagni bombed Houston. Last week, Calcagni started and made the big plays against Rice. This week, he may be No. 2 again but it won't matter.

"He's the same old guy, start or not start," said Arkansas quarterback coach David Lee. "He's the most consistent guy in the world."

One of the goals against Rice, said Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield, was to beat the Owls without using Thomas, recovering from a hyperextended knee.

In his place, Calcagni carried 22 times for 160 yards — the most by an Arkansas quarterback since Lamar McHan turned 26 carries into 189 yards against Texas A&M in 1951.

"They took away our running backs," Calcagni said. "They knew this was my first start and they dared me to do something."

"We had an idea they would try to take the fullbacks and halfbacks away," Lee said. "We told our quarterbacks that they would have to rush for 180 yards for us to win."

Rice took a 3-0 lead after intercepting a Calcagni pass, but his 55-yard run to the Rice 8 set up his 6-yard scoring run on third down. In Arkansas' next scoring drive, Calcagni had runs of 14 and 17 yards. He read the option 21 times against the Owls and made the correct decision 85 percent of the time, Lee said.

"We think he has good running ability, but you never know what the opponent thinks," Lee said.

For his performance, Calcagni was named The Associated Press Offensive Player of the Week in the Southwest Conference. Domingo Bryant, who blocked a fourth quarter field goal attempt by SMU, was named the Defensive Player of the Week for his play in Texas A&M's 19-17 victory over the Mustangs.

The best thing about Calcagni, Lee said, is that he is a team player and a competitor. Last year, with seniors Brad Taylor and Danny Nutt backed by Thomas, Arkansas moved Calcagni to wide receiver.

"He just refused to believe that he wasn't good enough to be a quarterback," Lee said. "He was bound and determined to play quarterback. His persistence won out."

Against Houston, when Thomas was injured, Calcagni completed five of his first eight passes for 166 yards and guided the Razorbacks to five straight scores in a 57-27 victory.

"It's a great credit to him that he really stays in the game," Lee said. "That's really tough when you're second team."

Hatfield refused early in the week to say who would be the quarterback in Saturday's SWC game against league-leading Baylor on Saturday in Little Rock. Baylor is 5-0 in the league and Arkansas is 4-1. If Thomas starts, Lee said, Calcagni will understand.

In fact, moments after the Rice game, Calcagni said, "You play your best and Greg Thomas is the best at the position."

Knicks muck up NBA salary cap

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — An arbitrator's decision in the Albert King case puts the National Basketball Association right back where it was before the salary cap was imposed to curb the spending instincts of the wealthier clubs, in the opinion of New Jersey Nets Coach Dave Wohl.

"You can really make some big deals now," said Wohl. "The rich clubs can offer big bonuses and a $75,000 salary. It's going to be tough for some clubs to meet the price of a veteran free agent."

NBA Special Master Kingman Brewster, in a ruling announced Monday, held that the New York Knicks did not violate the salary cap provision by offering King, a member of the Nets, a $3 million contract, which included a $1 million signing bonus over three years.

The Nets have until Friday to match the offer, which they say they will do.

Meanwhile Brewster's decision drew other comments.

Denver Nuggets President Vince Boryla, a former Knicks player and coach, saw his old team as a villain.

"It's just typical of the Knicks trying to circumvent something," Boryla said. "We just try to kind of mind our own shop here, but they (the Knicks) spend money like it's water."

The Nets, which King has played for since entering the league in 1981, have no intention of letting the Knicks getting away with the offer.

"We're going to match it," said Nets President Bernie Mann. "I'm very disappointed in the ruling. I really think it does havoc to the (salary) cap."

King could still wind up in New York. The Nets could sign him and then trade him to the Knicks for a first round pick, which New York coach Hubie Brown says he'd be willing to do.

Mullin, Warriors come to terms

OAKLAND (AP) — Chris Mullin, the National Basketball Association's only unsigned first-round draft choice, has reached an agreement with the Golden State Warriors, according to his agent.

Mullin and agent Bill Pollak arrived Tuesday night by plane from Newark, N. J. and the former St. John's star told reporters: "Everything will be taken care of tomorrow."

Pollak said an agreement has been reached with the Warriors and the terms will be announced at a news conference today. However, he would not reveal the time of the conference. Neither would officials of the team.

Pollak would not say what was responsible for the apparent breaking of the logjam in the negotiations with the Warriors.

Mullin said he plans to report in good shape after practicing every day with the St. John's varsity.

Nets 112, Bullets 106

New Jersey won its fourth straight game at home by outscoring Washington 66-50 in the second half.

Buck Williams scored 13 of his game-high 25 points in the fourth quarter for the Nets, who have lost their three road games by an average of 22 points.

The Nets, who trailed 52-36 in the second period, outscored Washington 10-2 at the close of the third quarter to take a one-point lead.

New Jersey then held the Bullets without a field goal for the first 3:34 of the fourth period, outscoring Washington 11-2 during that stretch to open an 88-78 margin. Williams had seven points in that streak.

Jeff Ruland led the Bullets with 21 points, while Mike Gminski scored 22 for the Nets.

Jazz 118, Warriors 99

Adrian Dantley scored 27 points and Utah reserves outscored Golden State's bench 53-28.

Backup forward Thurl Bailey scored 11 of his 13 points during a six-minute stretch of the second quarter as the Jazz rallied from a 24-21 first-quarter deficit to take a 51-44 halftime lead.

The Jazz extended its advantage to 77-66 after three quarters and led by as much as 100-78 in the fourth period.

Joe Barry Carroll and Eric Floyd led the Warriors with 26 and 24 points, respectively.

Hard for Saberhagen to top '85

NEW YORK (AP) — What, Bret Saberhagen was asked, could possibly top 1985?

He won 20 games for the Kansas City Royals during the season, won their two most crucial World Series games, was named the Series Most Valuable Player and — the day before the Series ended — became a father for the first time.

"It's going to be tough to top this kind of year I've had," he said. "But you can always try. Maybe next year I can win 21 games, win three in the World Series and have twins."

He laughed. "I haven't spoken to Janeane about it, but I don't think she'd be too happy about the twins part."

About the only things left for the 21-year-old right-hander, 20-6 with a 2.87 earned-run average this year, would be the Cy Young Award as the American League's premier pitcher, the $25,000 provided by a Cy Young bonus clause in his 1985 contract, and a big salary increase for 1986 and beyond.

"I'm not counting on it," he said of the Cy Young, to be announced next Tuesday, "but I'm hoping. I'm crossing my fingers, toes, anything I can cross."

Saberhagen beat St. Louis 6-1 in the third game, after the Cardinals had won the first two in Kansas City, and 11-0 with a five-hitter in the seventh and deciding game. It was the greatest comeback by any team in World Series history.

His 2-0 record and 0.50 ERA made him the unanimous selection as Sport Magazine's Series MVP. On Monday he received the trophy and a mini-van.

In the Series' seventh game, the Royals got to John Tudor and the St. Louis bullpen in a hurry, scoring two runs in the second inning, three in the third and six in the fifth. "When you get an 11-run cushion early in the game, it makes my job so much easier," Saberhagen said.

As the game drew to a close and it was clear the Royals had it won, he said, "I was thinking about some of the other guys, what it meant to them. George Brett, Hal McRae, Jim Sungberg, Frank White — it's something they've been playing so long for and so hard and they've come so close a couple of times. I'm sure it was a lot more memorable for them.

"This was only my second year. It's a great feeling but it came to me real easy. To them it was years of work finally paying off."

Cowboys may play exhibition in London

DALLAS (AP) — National Football League officials say they are considering the Dallas Cowboys as one of the participants for an exhibition game in London next summer.

At recent meetings, NFL officials voted to consider a preseason game outside the United States, with London the most likely site.

"The reason the Cowboys have been mentioned is, number one, because people in England would know us," Cowboys vice president Joe Bailey told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"The second reason is that next year is the Texas Susquecentennial and there apparently is going to be lot of interaction between Texas and Great Britain," he said. "But we have not pursued it in any way."

A likely opponent would be the Los Angeles Rams.

Owner "Georgia Frontiere's husband (Dominic) has done some work in England and he has contacts over there," Bailey said.

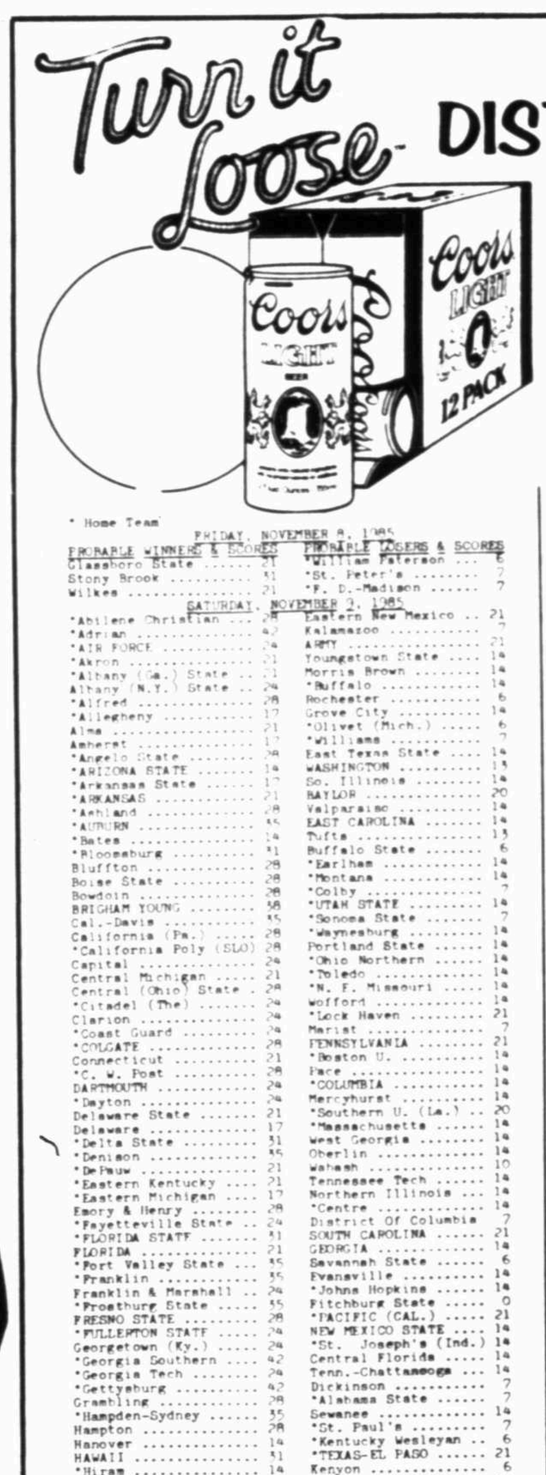

The Cowboys, if chosen to play, would report to training camp a week early.

"It would be treated like the Canton (Ohio) Hall of Fame game," Bailey said. "It would be a fifth game, an extra game.

"I guess you'd spend no more than a day or two there. On the other hand, if you stayed longer, it would help from a public relations standpoint. I know you wouldn't get much training camp work done if you stayed for several days."

A decision would be necessary before the end of the year to provide time for arrangements, said Bailey.

The St. Louis Cardinals and Minnesota Vikings played the first European exhibition game in London in 1983.

Young learning way around NFL

Associated Press

NFL Report

Steve Young, the $1 million third-string quarterback for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, has been educating himself about the National Football League for the past six weeks.

"One thing I've learned," he says, "is that there's very little difference in talent between a 7-2 or 6-3 team and a 3-6 or 2-7 team."

Or an 0-9 team, like the one that Young plays for — probably the best winless team in NFL history.

The Bucs, who lost the first 17 games in their history, have lost to the New York Giants, Miami Dolphins, Los Angeles Rams and Chicago Bears by a total of 17 points. Those four teams made the playoffs last season and are collectively 28-8 this year.

Tampa Bay has led in six of its losses and five times was ahead at halftime. The Bucs held a 14-0 advantage over the 6-3 New England Patriots and led the unbeaten Bears in both games — 28-17 at the half of the first game, 12-3 at halftime of the second.

Every week, coaches like Chicago's Mike Ditka, the Rams' John Robinson, New England's Raymond Berry and Miami's Don Shula stand up and says what Bill Parcells of the Giants said last Sunday after his team barely escaped, 22-20:

"They're not an 0-9 team. They could just as easily be 5-4."

But they are not, primarily because those things that invariably happen to losers keep happening to the Bucs.

Against the Rams, who were unbeaten at the time, the Bucs led by four points in the third quarter when Keith Browner picked off a Dieter Brock pass at the Los Angeles 28 and headed for the end zone. At the three, he fumbled, the ball went through the end zone and the Rams got the ball back at the 20, just where the play at started.

Los Angeles won by four points.

On Sunday, Tampa Bay led the Giants 13-6 at halftime. New York made some adjustments at halftime, then came out and scored the first four times it had the ball while holding the Bucs, who have been outscored 77-17 in third quarters this year, to just one first down.

But the Giants had trouble finishing their drives and settled for a touchdown and three field goals, so instead of 34-13, it was 22-13. The Bucs closed to 22-20 and, with 33 seconds left, completed a pass into New York territory.

Whoops. A yellow flag, a holding call. On the next play, an interception. Another loss.

"We've lost about every way possible," said quarterback Steve DeBerg, who may someday lose his job to Young after previously losing jobs in San Francisco to Joe Montana and in Denver to John Elway.

"It gets harder and harder," Coach Leeman Bennett said after Sunday's game. "We played about as well as we can play, but then we got that flag. It's similar to the things that have been happening to us all year."

"We seem to play well in spots, but we haven't reached the level of consistency for the whole game that we need to win," said tight end Jimmie Giles, who's been a model of consistency with seven touchdown catches in his last three games.

The Bucs, of course, have also lost on merit.

A defense that lost LeRoy Selmon to a back injury before the start of the season has surrendered 272 points, the third-highest total in the league. DeBerg, once described as a quarterback just good enough to lose, leads the NFC with 16 interceptions, four of which have been returned for touchdowns.

On Sunday, the Giants started running in the second half and the Bucs couldn't stop them, even when they knew what was coming. They allowed Joe Morris a career-high 132 yards, 116 after intermission.

"It's nuts," said Young, who suffered through a 3-15 spring with the Los Angeles Express of the United States Football League. "It makes you want to come out next week and tear somebody apart. That's what we do. We win the first half every game. But then the second half starts. And something happens."

The schedule is no help either.

This week, the Bucs get the underachieving St. Louis Cardinals who, after four straight losses, finally awoke Monday night to beat Dallas. Tampa Bay then returns to Giants Stadium to play the Jets, who lead the AFC East and are playing as well as any team in the NFL right now.

But the Bucs have one advantage in those games.

"They're a hard team to play," Giants quarterback Phil Simms said. "They make you tight. You know in the back of your mind that they haven't won a game and you don't want to be the first to lose to them."

Football season washed out for Liberty Flames

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — The 1985 college football season may be over for the Liberty University Flames.

Because of the recent torrential rains, the Flames' practice facility at Treasure Island has been flooded and the team's equipment damaged. That has forced school officials to cancel Saturday's game at Carson-Newman.

Head coach Morgan Hout said Tuesday it was likely the 3-4-1 Flames would not get to play their Nov. 16 season finale at Towson State as well.

"Could be, folks, our season is over," Hout said at his weekly press luncheon. "We're wiped out. There's nothing left, the whole island is under water. I can only speculate that everything is ruined. We don't have a football. We don't have a shoe. We don't have a piece of headgear."

The first floor of the team's two-story building contains the training room and the locker room, which holds Liberty's game and practice equipment. If the water engulfs the second floor, the Flames would lose all recruiting records, scouting records and films.

By midday Tuesday, the water level had reached the second floor of the two-story football office. The bridge leading onto the island collapsed.

Hout said he estimated the equipment loss alone to be between $110,000 and $130,000. Vince Bradford, who sells athletic equipment to area high schools and colleges, estimated the equipment loss to be at least $100,000.

Spinks turns in light-heavy title

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Spinks, the newly-minted International Boxing Federation heavyweight champion, relinquished his light heavyweight title belts Tuesday and his promoter said a first defense would be announced within two weeks.

Ex-champ Larry Holmes and Gerry Cooney were among the possible opponents.

Representatives of the World Boxing Council, World Boxing Association and IBF reclaimed the light heavyweight hardware, figuratively if not literally. Promoter Butch Lewis said Spinks will keep the actual belts that identified him as the undisputed light heavyweight king.

The decision to continue in the much more lucrative heavyweight division surprised no one.

"Michael's immediate plans are to defend the heavyweight title in February," Lewis said. "Negotiations have started with Holmes, Cooney and all the other guys in the top ten who call every five minutes."

Spinks won the IBF title last Sept. 21 in Las Vegas, Nev., outpointing Holmes over 15 rounds. After the fight, his first loss in 49 bouts, Holmes announced his retirement. But the ex-champ is apparently considering a rematch with Spinks, although the negotiations have not gone smoothly according to Lewis.

"Larry still has the syndrome of being champion for seven years," he said. "It's only been six weeks since he lost it. I appreciate that. He's negotiating from emotion. Larry is still of the opinion that he's the champion. It's as if he's the champion and Michael is the challenger. It will make our negotiations go smoother when it hits him (that Spinks holds the title)."

As for Cooney, Lewis said talks were stalled.

"With Cooney, it's his management. There are two ways to negotiate. Eithex ⅞ou negotiate for a payday or you negotiate because you feel your fighter can win the title. Cooney's manager is wavering outside of both of those. There's a long way to go when you're talking about a Cooney fight."

From Spinks' standpoint, whatever Lewis decides will be fine.

"I don't have a preference," he said. "It doesn't matterr to me. I never get involved in picking opponents. I feel I have the talent, ability and knowhow to defeat anybody I go up against.

"I asked Butch once if he needed help picking opponents. We decided. He does that and I do this (fighting)."

Lewis added Carl "The Truth" Williams, Frank Bruno, and Marvis Frazier to the list of candidates for a defense. "I want Joe," Spinks deadpanned, referring to Frazier's father, the retired ex-champ, who attended the press conference.

Also on hand was WBC heavyweight champion Pinklon Thomas, who has a defense scheduled against Trevor Berbick in February. Thomas said he hoped to fight WBA champion Tony Tubbs and he and Spinks both expressed interest in an eventual unification fight.

"No light heavyweight champion ever retired his belts undefeated," Lewis said. "Michael unified the title and he plans to do that in the heavyweight division very soon so that there's only one guy on the block."

Spinks was humble in his first formal appearance as heavyweight champ.

"I don't know what to say," he said. "I'm so proud. I'm shaking out of my boots and there's no fighting going on.

"I had a great time as a light heavyweight. I hope I didn't slight or miss anyone. I felt I had run out of opponents. I'll try to accomplish (as a heavyweight) all I accomplished as a light heavyweight, defend my title proudly to the best of my ability and not duck anyonme."

USFL won't pick up tab for Breakers' payroll debt

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Portland Breakers' overdue paychecks and bills won't be paid by owners of other United States Football League teams, the league's commissioner says.

Commissioner Harry Usher said Breakers owner Joe Canizaro "must work out some kind of agreement" with his former players.

"We are exerting a lot of pressure on Joe to try to figure a way out of his financial problems," Usher told The Oregonian newspaper in an interview published Tuesday. "But there's only so much we can do."

The Breakers, now an inactive USFL franchise, owe the players more than $1.2 million for the final four games of the 1985 season. Canizaro, a New Orleans real estate developer, has said the club doesn't have the money to honor the players' contracts.

The league's players association is considering further legal action in light of last week's transfer of the Denver Gold franchise to Portland for the 1986 season. The players' group filed a lawsuit Sept. 24 in Portland, seeking payment to at least 48 former Breaker players.

The Breakers and the USFL were named as defendants in the federal court lawsuit.

Joe Restic, the Breakers' player representative, said, "The league wanted its name removed from the lawsuit. It can't afford the bad publicity. We said, 'yes,' provided the league does not move another team into Portland until the players are paid. We took the league's name off the suit, but we can put them back on.

Seattle strategy: Play ball control on defense

SEATTLE – There once was a fighter named Young Griffo. He was the last of the carnival booth fighters. He'd stand in one place and dare you to hit him. You'd take your best shot and he wouldn't move off a dime and you couldn't lay a glove on him.

He was the same way in the ring. He'd let you wear yourself out. He could beat you without hardly starting a punch. He would counterpunch you to death.

Willie Pep and some guerrilla armies are the same way.

And so are the Seattle Seahawks.

These are the Young Griffos of football. The urban terrorists of the gridiron.

They just stand there and say "OK, now hit me as hard as you can." And, by the time you swing, they not only disappear, they're behind you. And you may be flat on your back. They take from you. You supply the power. You bring the rope. They hang you with it.

Their game plan is simple: they let you have the football. Then, they get ready to spike it in the end zone. Your end zone.

Listen, the Seattle Seahawks are supposed to be what is known as a ball-control team. This is a football philosophy where the plot is to get the ball and just keep it all afternoon. Do everything but bury it like a dog with a bone.

They even have a name for this kind of offensive behavior. It's called "Ground Chuck" in honor of its creator, Seahawk Coach Chuck Knox. Know how many minutes Ground Chuck had the ball in the second quarter of a football game here Sunday? About 2 minutes 40 seconds. The rest of the time the Los Angeles Raiders had the ball.

That was just the trouble.

Know how many points the Seattle Seahawks scored in those two-plus minutes? Twenty-three. Know how many the Raiders scored in their nearly 13? None. Zip.

AS CHURCHILL said, never have so many owed so much to so few. Years ago, before a Rose Bowl game, a master of ceremonies advised a Big Ten coach, Duffy Daugherty, to take a good look at the football before he played a Red Sanders' ball-control team because "once the game starts, you're not going to see it much." Said Duffy sweetly: "We're not going to need it much."

Neither did the Seattle Seahawks Sunday. Strictly speaking, they didn't exactly have the football on their spectacular scoring drives. The Raiders had it. The way a guy going through Central Park might have his wrist watch. Not long. The Seahawks just mugged them.

It's kind of like rounding a corner on your way to your house and seeing a guy making off with a safe or a TV set, and you suddenly say, "Hey! that's my TV set that guy's carrying!"

The score was 3-0, Seattle, at the start of the second quarter Sunday when a terrible thing happened to the L.A. Raiders: they got the ball.

They opened the period on a punt. It went 34 yards to a returner named Kenny Easley. Easley is a guy who makes his living like a river-boat gambler. Off the other guys' possessions.

This time he got the punt on his 48 and ran it back to the Raiders' 27. The Raiders netted nine yards on the punt. On the next play, Seattle scored a touchdown. Elapsed time: 19 seconds.

Two plays later, the Raiders had the ball again. Bingo! Interception. The Seahawks took the ball again. They scored a field goal. Elapsed time: 40 seconds.

The Raiders then kept the ball from 13:54 on the clock to 9:09 by which time they were inside the Seahawks' 40. Field-goal range. They tried the field goal. It was blocked by one Seahawk player with his face and scooped up by another who ran it 56 yards for a touchdown. Elapsed time: whatever wide receiver Bones Walker runs the 50 in – not much.

The Raiders took the ball again and hoarded it much of the quarter. The Seahawks held it from 3:27 in the period to 1:49.

Then, the Raiders got it again. B-i-i-i-g mistake. They should have said, "No you don't. Here, you take it."

Instead, they plunked down the field again to the Seattle 40. Their quarterback, Marc Wilson, faded to pass. The Griffos had him again. Terry Taylor, the guy who blocked the field goal with his face, got this one in his hands. He sped 75 yards to a touchdown. Elapsed time? Oh, 10 seconds. Taylor was a sprinter and long-jumper in college (Southern Illinois).

YOU HAD a mental picture of Coach Knox lining up his team before the blackboard before the game and drawing a picture on it. "Now, gentlemen, this is a football. Whatever you do, don't touch it! Let those other guys have it!"

It was about a dozen years ago in Minneapolis. Coach Knox had a division champion in the Rams in Metropolitan Stadium playing the Minnesota Vikings for the right to the Super Bowl. Knox's team had the ball on the Vikings' one-yard line. Or less. It was fourth down, goal to go. So, they lined up for a field goal.

It was blocked. A player named Bobby Bryant scooped it up and ran 99 yards or so to a touchdown. Bye bye Bowl.

Coach Knox knew precisely how Raider Coach Tom Flores felt Sunday. Only time will tell whether this one meant the Super Bowl, too.

But the Raiders should have treated the football Sunday as if it were ticking or glowing. They should have paid somebody to hide it from them like a potential suicide begging someone to hide all the knives and razors and firearms. Their wounds Sunday were all self-inflicted. They kept stepping on their own mines, falling on their own swords.

In the locker room later, Byron Walker, a pleasant, handsome young man out of the South Carolina military school, The Citadel, tried to explain the pivotal play. A wide receiver with a half-dozen other touchdowns to his credit, he plays on three special teams for Coach Knox and one of them is the field-goal defense. "We just try to get a seven-man rush. We leave a few men back in case of a fake. In this case, Terry took the ball on the chin. It bounced right up in my arms."

He treated it as just another reception. He had the decency not to try an end-zone dance.

It was not Ground Chuck that destroyed the Raiders, it was Air Chance. When you get beat by four interceptions, a punt and your own field goal, it's time to lobby for the surgeon general – or at least the NFL commissioner – to put a label on the football: "Warning! This product has been found hazardous to your team's health. May cause touchdowns in the wrong hands. Consult physician before taking."

Faust's football paradise was at Moeller High

By THOMAS ROGERS
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Gerry Faust thought he had found paradise when he arrived at Notre Dame as football coach four beleaguered years ago. In truth, paradise was what he had just lost. While the disappointments have mounted with little abatement in South Bend, the Moeller High School varsity team, which Faust created in 1963, continues to embellish a young tradition.

Moeller High is a Catholic school situated in Cincinnati, and if winning is to your taste, then there may be no better place to coach football. In their 18 years under Faust, the Crusaders had a record of 174-17-2, including 70-1 and five state championships in his last six seasons. Since then, they have gone 53-4 (8-1 this year) and taken yet another state title (in 1982). A loss this September to J.O. Johnson High of Huntsville, Ala., broke a home-field winning streak that had reached 70 games. Along the way, they have received a perennial ranking from the high school-following fanatics who rate teams nationally. "Year in, year out, I doubt that any other school in the country has matched Moeller's program," says Dave Krider, sports editor of The Herald-Argus in LaPorte, Ind., who compiles the rankings published by USA Today and awarded the Crusaders a national championship in 1982.

The heir to the bounty that Faust created is Steve Klonne (pronounced KLAH-nee), who was promoted from assistant to head coach three years ago after Faust's immediate successor, Ted Bacigalupo, resigned to devote full time to business. The 39-year-old Klonne keeps the program vital not through massive recruiting — the Archdiocese of Cincinnati's districting policy restricts Moeller's student body to boys from 10 surrounding parishes — but through intense preparation. "You build a team in the offseason," he says. "The season really has nothing to do with it."

When a season ends, the players get two weeks off and then begin their staff-supervised offseason conditioning program. Full-scale practice for another season starts in July. When the games begin, the coaches — most of whom also have teaching duties at Moeller — are on the job seven days a week, supervising practice from Monday through Thursday, walking the sideline during Friday night's play, grading the game films and critiquing their charges on Saturday, then preparing all day Sunday for the next game after reviewing films provided by the coming opponent.

If all this sounds like a lot of work, it is. But Klonne does not do it alone. To help him run not only the varsity team but also the sophomore and freshman programs, he has a staff of 18 assistants, twice the number that Faust has at Notre Dame.

And if it all sounds like a lot of fun, that's true as well. Klonne, who has the Crusaders pointed once again toward the 16-team state playoffs, which start next week, was asked the other day whether there was anything about his job that he didn't like. "Honestly?" he said. "Not a thing."

MOELLER is not the only place, of course, where football dominance is a way of life these days. Take the state of Iowa, for instance.

While the University of Iowa Hawkeyes continue perched on top of the Division I-A polls, 7 of the 25 other football-playing four-year colleges sprinkled throughout the state have also achieved spots in this week's rankings. Northern Iowa (6-1) has climbed to No. 6 in the Divison I-AA listing, having lost only to another Iowa team, Drake. In Division III, Central College (7-0) is No. 2, right behind perennial power Augustana of Illinois, the team that beat Central in the division's championship game last season. Then there are Cornell College and Coe, which are both 8-0 and ranked 18th and 19th in Division III.

Meanwhile, in Division II of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics, Northwestern College (7-0) is top-rated, while St. Ambrose (6-1) and Loras College (7-1) are ranked 10th and 13th.

Clearly, in an area whose farm-oriented economy is somewhat strapped, there has been a different kind of rich fall harvest this year. And it will be served up with a spicing of intrastate rivalry Saturday, when Cornell College plays Coe and Northwestern College meets St. Ambrose.

Jon Kramer, a 5-foot-2-inch public relations intern for the New York Rangers, when asked by an onlooker what he had been discussing with 4-foot-9-inch Mary Lou Retton: "It was just small talk."

Close race run for Texas JUCO leading rusher

TYLER (AP) — It's a close race for top rusher in the Texas Junior College Football Conference as Tyler Junior College's Marvin Allen leads Henderson County Junior College's Joe Beasley by a mere 46 yards.

Allen, a 5-11, 205-pounder from Wichita Falls, who's chalked up 893 yards on 168 carries, has one regular season game left as an Apache, Nov. 16 at Kilgore College.

Beasley, on the other hand, a 5-7, 185-pounder from Houston who's got 847 yards on 119 steps, has two games remaining, Saturday at Kilgore and Nov. 16 hosting Navarro.

Before the regular season ends, Beasley could take over the top spot. In action over the weekend, Ranger dumped Blinn, Cisco nudged Kilgore, Henderson County defeated Tyler, and Northeastern Oklahoma A&M blanked Navarro.

On tap this weekend is Blinn at Cisco, Henderson County at Kilgore and Navarro at Ranger. Tyler is open.

Tyler, despite the loss to HCJC, remains a half a game ahead of Henderson County in the TJCFC standings at 4-1. HCJC is 3-1, while Cisco and Kilgore are tied for third with 2-2 marks. HCJC sports the league most potent offense, sparked by Beasley and quarterback Scott Williams, a sophomore from Brownsboro, who's passed for 1,350 yards this season.

Not far behind in the passing department is Kilgore's Clifton Thurmond, who's registered 1,086 yards. Blinn's Greg Lewis is the loop's top receiver with 38 catches worth 683 yards, ahead of HCJC's Keith Pate (37-571) and John Boyenga (28-352).

TJC's Matt Banks continues his stronghold in league scoring with 66 points via kicking, ahead of Cisco placekicker Raymond Hernandez, who's scored 51 points. Beasley and Kilgore tailback Paul Butler lead all conference scorers outside of kicking with 42 points each.

ETSU tags Volwell as new football coach

COMMERCE (AP) — East Texas State defensive coordinator Eddie Vowell will become head football coach at the end of the season when Ernest Hawkins retires, school officials announced Tuesday.

Hawkins has been head football coach at ETSU for 22 years. He will assist Athletic Director Vince Gonino after his retirement from coaching.

Vowell, 38, is a graduate of Southwestern Oklahoma University in Weatherford. Before joining ETSU, he coached high school football in Amarillo, San Antonio, Levelland and Gainesville.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Flawless execution of a special project will bring tremendous financial rewards and tempting job offers. A romantic relationship strengthens your resolve to move forward quickly. An interest in old-world artistry could lead to a new home or business. You finally know exactly what you want from life! Keep your plans under wraps while mapping out a strategy. A new maturity marks your behavior. Be kind but firm when turning down a proposal. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Chicago Cubs pitcher Reggie Patterson, evangelist Rev. Billy Graham, Houston pitcher Joe Niekro, jazz musician Al Hirt, singer Joan Sutherland, Polish chemist-physicist Marie Curie.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Someone in authority has his or her eye on you. A promotion or new job is possible. Handle routine tasks with dispatch. Travel makes you see someone in another light.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are in a position to turn more than a few heads today. Make the right choices and your star will shine brighter than ever! Romantic couples should protect their privacy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your audacity and wit help you rise above the crowd. Temper your originality with practicality. Higher-ups are looking for ideas they can use right away.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Show more consideration for loved ones and you will find true happiness. A phone call rights a wrong. Love triumphs over secret doubts. Give more thought to changing your job or residence.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Someone who shows you the ropes wins your respect and affection. Expand your career horizons by developing a natural talent. Night school is one possibility. Romance has you thinking about marriage.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Beautifying your home will increase its real estate value. Get several bids before authorizing repairs. Romantic partner could be at odds with a close friend. Push for a reconciliation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Financial matters deserve top priority this morning. Mixing business with pleasure could jeopardize a close relationship. Resist the temptation! Contradictory information is confusing. Conduct your own investigation before making a decision.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A good day to ask for a special favor. The best way to deal with a difficult individual is through an intermediary. Be careful not to jump to conclusions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Careful planning is the key to success. Take a disappointment in stride. Focus on the future, not the past. Financial discussions are best postponed. A long-term relationship brings many benefits.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You decide to team up with family members or neighbors and demand action. Group endeavors prove more successful than solo efforts. Postpone making a large investment or purchase.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A hunch or early impression could influence a decision you make today. Do not take risks with your health or safety. Soothe a co-worker or relative's ruffled feelings.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Avoid financial arguments. Check your budget before going on a shopping trip. Tact and good will accomplish more than ultimatums. A new business or romantic triumph boosts your confidence.

Opening lead: Ace of ♣.

When this hand was played in a world championship, declarer took the normal line and went down. Had he been concerned with bridge immortality, he could have chosen a far inferior line that would have won the day.

South's opening two clubs was artificial and forcing and North's response was semi-positive. Thereafter, the bidding was natural and the final contract was something of a stretch.

Since dummy was going to produce some ruffs for declarer, West led the ace of clubs and continued with the ten. Declarer won in hand, cashed the ace-king of hearts and ruffed a heart on the table. He returned to hand with a spade ruff, then cashed his remaining trumps and the queen of hearts. Had either defender held the ace of spades and four diamonds, he would have been squeezed and the slam would have been home. Since that was not the case, declarer had to settle for down one.

A transfer squeeze is a rare animal indeed, and had declarer decided that he wanted to provide bridge columnists with material, this was his opportunity.

After ruffing a heart declarer leads the king of spades from dummy. East must cover with the ace and declarer ruffs.

Now, however, the spade guard has been transferred to West, the defender who has the long diamonds. In the five-card ending, declarer has four diamonds and the queen of hearts, West four diamonds and the queen of spades and dummy has the guarded jack of spades and Q-3 of diamonds. On the queen of hearts West has no safe discard. If he parts with the queen of spades, dummy's jack of spades becomes the fulfilling trick; if he lets go a diamond, declarer scores four diamond tricks.

Superman to get mid-life makeover

Comic-book hero Superman will get an updated look in honor of his 50th anniversary, to be celebrated in 1988.

NEW YORK (AP) — He still lives in Metropolis, and he still fights for truth, justice and the American way. But Superman is about to get a new look, a new history and a new and more limited cast of super friends.

"The core of it is, we're getting him ready for his 50th anniversary in 1988," said Paul Levitz, executive vice president of DC Comics, which publishes Superman. "We want him to be the best there is."

The new Superman will have a more contemporary look, though the famous red-and-blue costume will not be changed, Levitz said Tuesday.

Other changes seem to be inspired by films about the superhero. Lois Lane, Superman's heartthrob, will be updated — "more like Margot Kidder," who played the character in the movies, Levitz said.

The changes are scheduled to take place around July 4 and will start with a retelling of the Superman legend, Levitz said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Patty Duke has been elected president of the Screen Actors Guild, overcoming a challenge by union members who objected to liberal political stands taken by outgoing president Ed Asner.

Asner had endorsed Miss Duke, 38, an Academy Award-winner, as the candidate of the guild's liberal faction. TV actor Ed Nelson was the candidate of the Conservative Actors Working for an Actors' Guild, which opposed Asner's political activism.

Miss Duke took 10,838 votes, or 56 percent of the 19,751 guild members voting, and Nelson captured 7,419, or 38 percent, guild spokesman Mark Locher said Tuesday night.

Stunt man Tony Cecere got 735 votes and actor Charles Holden got 289, Locher said. The guild has 56,000 members.

The guild's conservative faction, led by Charlton Heston, managed to gain one regional vice president's post and three of 13 seats open on the national board of directors.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tommy Lasorda, manager of the Los Angeles Dodgers, had this bit of advice for President Reagan in summit talks with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev later this this month:

"I think he should go over there and just play hardball," Lasorda said Tuesday after a brief Oval Office visit in which he presented Reagan with a "Dodger blue" necktie.

Asked how Reagan should handle Gorbachev, Lasorda replied:

"I think he should make every effort to be as friendly as possible but let him know we are the greatest country in the world. That would be a good, high, hard one."

GUNNISON, Colo. (AP) — Chicago White Sox pitcher Jerry Koosman hopes his namesake World Series Elk Hunt will become an annual event, but so far he and other major leaguers on the hunt are on the wrong side of a shutout.

After four days at two backcountry camps, the hunter-players Tuesday had seen neither hide nor hair of an elk or mule deer and were planning to "roast" the Chisox hurler Thursday night.

Others on the hunt include Gregg Luzinski, formerly of the Philadelphia Phillies and the White Sox; Rich Dotson, White Sox pitcher; Greg Walker, White Sox first baseman; Bruce Sutter, Atlanta Braves pitcher; Tug McGraw, retired pitcher for the Phillies and New York Mets, and Gene Nelson, pitcher for the White Sox.

SUNNYSIDE, Wash. (AP) — Astronaut Bonnie Dunbar, scheduled to return today from her first trip aboard the space shuttle Challenger, may be out of sight here in her hometown, but she's not out of mind.

The state Department of Transportation has erected two huge signs on either side of Sunnyside on Interstate 82, proclaiming the town as home of the Northwest's famous astronaut.

The 12-foot-long signs erected this week will remain along the freeway until early December, then will be moved to the east and west entrances of the city on old Highway 12, said DOT spokesman George Hilsinger.

LONDON (AP) — Tenor Placido Domingo, who panicked international opera impresarios with plans to quit the stage to raise money for Mexican earthquake relief, may keep part of his engagement at the Royal Opera House, a newspaper says.

London's Daily Express said Tuesday that Domingo had changed his mind and would fulfill part of his schedule in Verdi's "Otello" at Covent Garden and sing in "Carmen" at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York.

The Spanish-born tenor, who emigrated to Mexico as a child, lost four close relatives in the Mexican quakes Sept. 19 and 20, and worked in the rubble of Mexico City for 12 days before announcing a one-year hiatus for relief work.

NEW YORK (AP) — Writer Gregory Mcdonald, whose "Fletch" mystery novels feature a wise-cracking newsman-sleuth, says American criticism today is "like telephoning long distance and having someone under the age of 5 answer the phone."

Mcdonald stole the show at Tuesday's New York Public Library literary luncheon by saying that he was proud to be a popular writer.

"I think literature should pass us over. We don't belong in this room today. We belong out with the people eating a bag lunch."

Other crime writers at the luncheon included Shana Alexander, Mary Higgins Clark, Tony Hillerman and Robert B. Parker.

Nordiques rally past Bruins, 7-5

Associated Press

The Quebec Nordiques had a bad experience in Philadelphia, and didn't want to repeat it in Boston.

"We had some mental lapses recently after winning our first seven games," Quebec's John Anderson said. "After we lost to Philadelphia last weekend, we knew we had to bear down a little."

The Nordiques turned things around for themselves Tuesday night, coming back from a second-period deficit to beat the Boston Bruins 7-5 in a battle of Adams Division front-runners in the National Hockey League.

"Even though we were behind (4-3) going into the third period, I wasn't worried because we were getting plenty of good scoring chances," said Quebec's Simon Nolet, who is coaching the Nordiques while Coach Michel Bergeron recovers from a severe virus. "I told them to go out and do the same thing in the third."

Boston held a 4-3 lead after two periods, but Quebec got even on a goal by Alain Cote. The Bruins held their last lead on the second goal of the game by Keith Crowder at 8:58 of the period, only to surrender the advantage five seconds later on Michel Goulet's ninth goal of the season.

Anderson and Anton Stastny then scored late in the third period for the victory that moved the Nordiques, 9-3-1, ahead of the Bruins, 8-3-1, in the Adams race.

"We played 10 minutes in the first period and 10 minutes in the second," said Boston defenseman Ray Bourque. "The Nordiques just wanted it more than we did in the third."

NHL Roundup

Oilers 6, Canucks 4

Goals by Mark Messier and Jari Kurri midway through the third period triggered the Oilers over the Canucks.

Wayne Gretzky added two goals for the Oilers, giving him 10 for the season, the last into an empty net. Gretzky also had an assist, but twice was stopped on breakaways by Vancouver goaltender Richard Brodeur.

Messier tied the score at 4-4 with a shot from the top of the left circle at 9:11 and Kurri fired the winner at 11:41 with a hard shot from the right boards.

The Oilers, 10-2, moved six points ahead of the second-place Canucks in the Smythe Division. The improving Canucks, 6-5-2, got goals from Rick Lanz, Stan Smyl, Moe Lemay and Doug Halward.

Flames 4, Islanders 4

Hakan Loob scored midway through the third period and the Flames held on for a tie with the Islanders with help of a strong effort by their penalty-killing unit.

Loob's backhander from just inside the crease with 10:05 gone in the third period forced an overtime period after Mike Bossy had propelled the Islanders, 5-4-2, in front with two third-period goals.

The Flames, 6-5-1, were especially effective with their penalty-killing, allowing the Islanders only one power-play goal in six opportunities, including a 55-second stretch late in the second period when the Islanders had a two-man advantage.

"We did a great job of killing penalties," Flames Coach Bob Johnson said. "We competed very well along the boards. It was just a great effort."

Canadiens 8, Whalers 3

Chris Chelios scored two goals and had two assists and Sergio Momesso racked up two goals and one assist to pace Montreal over Hartford.

The Canadiens, 5-6-1, snapped a three-game losing streak and moved to within one point of fourth-place Hartford in the Adams Division. The Whalers are 2-5 in their last seven games and 6-6 overall.

Bob Gainey set up two goals late in the second period as Montreal took a 5-3 lead. The Canadiens went 4-for-5 on the power play.

Capitals 8, Black Hawks 4

Alan Haworth scored two goals and added two assists to pace the Capitals to their biggest offensive outburst of the season. Haworth, with eight goals, has scored in six consecutive games, the longest streak in the NHL this year.

The Black Hawks, 4-7-1, took a 2-1 lead early in the second period on goals by Denis Savard and Steve Larmer. But Washington rookie defenseman Kevin Hatcher scored his first goal of the season, assisted by Haworth, to tie the score at the five-minute mark. Then Haworth put the 6-5-2 Capitals in front for good at 11:56. Greg Adams made it 4-2 at 14:21, and Haworth scored again at 14:36.

Hanshin Tigers' Bass named Japanese baseball MVP

TOKYO (AP) — Former U.S. major leaguer Randy Bass, whose slugging helped the Hanshin Tigers win their first Central League pennant in 21 years and their first Japan Series championship ever, was voted the league's Most Valuable Player, a league official said Tuesday.

Bass was the fifth foreign player to receive the MVP award in Japanese professional baseball history.

American Greg "Boomer" Wells of the Pacific League's Hankyu Braves won it last year, but this was the first time in 28 years that a foreign player won the Central League's MVP award. The Yomiuri Giants' Kaname Yonamine of Hawaii, the first foreign player in the league, won it in 1957.

Bass, a 31-year-old Oklahoma native, won the batting Triple Crown this year, batting .350 with 54 home runs and 134 RBI during the 130-game season.

Landry to stay with White at QB

IRVING (AP) — Despite his worst game of the season, Danny White will remain as the Dallas Cowboys' starting quarterback this Sunday against the Washington Redskins, Coach Tom Landry says.

"Normally, I'll change quarterbacks when the quarterback isn't operating efficiently," Landry said Tuesday after the Cowboys were whipped 21-10 Monday night by St. Louis. "But we weren't operating as a team against St. Louis. It just wasn't the quarterback."

Landry admitted White was lousy against St. Louis.

"Danny was as off on his passes as much as I've seen him," said Landry. "But he was just part of the whole thing, the way the entire team played."

Landry didn't take the loss well.

"I don't feel good about this one," Landry said. "You can take a lot of defeats but there are some I don't take too well."

Landry said the Cowboys could have been sitting pretty in the National Conference Eastern Division with a victory.

"We came up against a team that hadn't been playing very well and let 'em get going," the coach said.

Dallas dropped to a 6-3 record, tied with the New York Giants atop the NFC East. The Cowboys travel to Washington on Sunday for a rematch with the Redskins, who lost to Dallas 44-14 in the season opener.

"We still have as good a chance as anybody although we have a tough schedule," Landry said. "Washington has its confidence back. It's a mental game now in the league, much more mental than physical. I'm sure Washington hasn't forgotten what we did to them in the Monday night game."

Landry said the 1985 season was a mystery year.

"It's the most unusual season I've seen," said Landry who is in his 26th year as the Cowboys' coach. "I don't understand the league this year."

Landry had hoped the Cowboys would come out gunning in the second half of the season.

"We wanted to start on a positive note," he said. "We really evened the division up. We made the other NFC teams happy."

The Cowboys were three-point underdogs against the Redskins for their 4 p.m. EDT nationally televised game on Sunday.

The Cowboys will play five games in November. After Washington, they host Chicago on Nov. 17, entertain Philadelphia on Nov. 24, and come back four days later to host St. Louis on Thanksgiving Day.

"It's a tough stretch and we've got to get going," Landry said.

Landry gave the team two days off before the Washington game despite the short week.

"I've tried it the other way before and we've lost," he said. "I'll try it this way once."

What did you say? I can't hear a thing

CHICAGO (AP) — Crowd noise at football games is getting to be a major problem, and Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said he came close to yanking his football team off the field at Ohio State.

The Hawkeyes, who then were ranked No. 1, suffered a 22-13 defeat Saturday that dropped them into a first-place tie with Ohio State, a team which will represent the Big Ten in the Rose Bowl if the Buckeyes can win their last three games.

"You don't know how close I came to taking my team off the field," Fry said Tuesday in a telephone interview with Chicago football writers. "The noise was deafening

"We had a fourth-and-one and our line is just sitting there and didn't hear the snap call," said Fry. "When it rains, it rains on both sides of the field. Crowd noise is one-sided."

Fry's complaint is that the officials should have the authority to penalize a team when the home crowd makes so much noise that the visiting team cannot hear the call of signals.

Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke, saying he is concerned with the problems of crowd noises, also said, "It is that time of the year when coaches and teams don't lose football games, only officials do."

Duke explained that the rule where officials can penalize the home team for excessive crowd noises is still in the books but isn't one that should be applied unless it is "the last option."

Fry was angered because the noise level at Ohio Stadium kept quarterback Chuck Long from using the audible system of changing signals at the line of scrimmage.

"We utilize our audible system," said Fry. "Chuck Long got to the top of the lists of quarterbacks in passing efficiency because of his ability to call audibles. That was taken away from us.

"It's like a surgeon," said Fry. "Can he operate if he can't communicate with his assistants?"

Fry said there was a rule that gave officials the authority to penalize a team because of excessive crowd noise "but they changed it in midseason."

Duke said the rule is still on the books, but the league would rather have other measures used before going to the extent of penalizing the home team.

Dollar down

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar eased in early European trading today against all major currencies except the Canadian dollar after dipping sharply for the third straight trading day in Japan. Gold prices were mixed.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell to a closing 205.95 yen, its lowest level since Feb.20, 1981, from 207.77 yen at Tuesday's close. Later, in London, it was quoted at 205.60 yen.

The dollar has fallen more than 36 yen since the world's big five industrialized nations agreed on Sept. 22 to act forcefully to drive down the dollar in a bid to curb the U.S. trade deficit and stem protectionist sentiment in the United States.

Currency dealers in Europe said the market remains bearish on the dollar and the dollar was expected to slip lower.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Tuesday:

—2.6030 West German marks, down from 2.6100

—2.1425 Swiss francs, down from 2.1445

—7.9325 French francs, down from 7.9350

—2.9300 Dutch guilders, down from 2.9370

—1,753.50 Italian lire, down from 1,762.10

—1.37675 Canadian dollars, up from 1.37255.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $324.85, a troy ounce, down from $325 bid late Tuesday. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $324.75.

In Zurich, the bid price was $324.80, up from $324.50 bid late Tuesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose the equivalent of 16 cents to close at a bid $325.69.

In New York Tuesday, gold fell 75 cents to a late bid price of $324.50.

Bank board charters 'thrift institution'

DALLAS (AP) — Financial pressures on the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. could be eased by a new FSLIC-owned "thrift institution" created to manage and sell the insurance fund's assets, according to Edwin Gray, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

The Bank Board on Tuesday chartered the new corporation — known as the Federal Asset Disposition Association — to help the FSLIC deal with its financial problems through more efficient disposal of the assets it takes over from failed or troubled thrifts, Gray told a session of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions convention.

"The chartering of the new Federal Asset Disposition Association does not constitute a panacea for the difficulties of the FSLIC," Gray said. "Rather, it is one element in a much larger mosaic of actions which need to be taken to strengthen the insurance corporation's hand in meeting its obligations now and in the future."

Edwin Gray

In a speech to the convention, Gray did not specifically mention recent speculation that he would resign his post, or that he was under pressure from White House officials to leave office on the grounds he had lost the support of the savings and loan industry. He also declined to comment to reporters about the issue.

In the speech, he cautioned those who might be waiting for a big announcement not to hold their breaths.

"It could be detrimental to your health," Gray said.

Last week, William B. O'Connell, president of the U.S. League, made a public display of support for Gray by releasing a letter he sent to White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan in which O'Connell expressed displeasure over what he called a "campaign of disparagement" against Gray.

And on Tuesday, O'Connell praised the decision to charter the asset disposal corporation, which his group had strongly supported.

"By applying the expertise of the business and profit incentives of the private sectors, this corporation will relieve the financial and management pressures on the FSLIC in a cost effective and efficient manner," O'Connell said.

Gray said the Federal Asset Disposal Association, which would be based in Denver, was intended to help FSLIC get "every last penny we can" from its assets, but was not intended to recapitalize the fund.

The Bank Board chartered the new corporation as a federal savings and loan association, empowered initially to issue 1 million shares of stock and having the same authority as other federally-chartered thrifts to borrow money from Federal Home Loan Banks.

Gray said a committee of thrift industry and business leaders several weeks ago had petitioned the Bank Board to charter the association, which is known as a "406 Corporation" after the section of the National Housing Act that authorized it.

At a briefing following Gray's speech, FHLBB general counsel Norman Raiden said the FSLIC had bought 1,000 shares of the association's common stock for $1 million, which would be used to fund start-up operations.

Raiden said additional shares of stock and debt securities could be issued as authorized by the corporation's 11-member board of directors, subject to approval by the Bank Board. The Bank Board also would have to approve the transfer of stock or debt securities to parties outside the association or the FSLIC, he said, as well as the board's selection of a chief executive officer.

Raiden noted the board had not yet established a business plan, so he did not know details of how the association would operate, how much of the FSLIC's assets would be moved to the association or how much capital the new corporation would require.

Midland Hispanic Chamber sponsoring barbecue to benefit earthquake victims

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a barbecue Sunday to raise funds for the Mexico City earthquake victims and to honor local citizens, including Midland mayor Thane Akins, who helped with earthquake relief.

The Chamber hopes to sell approximately 300 tickets, at $10 each, according to Ciro Sanchez. The fund-raiser will be held at the Club Granada, beginning at 4 p.m.

Sanchez also announced that anyone wanting to send clothing to Mexico can back them in a small box and leave outside the restaurant Sunday. The main speaker at the barbecue will be Rudy Flores, president of the Texas Association of Mexican-American Chambers of Commerce.

Plans for the barbecue were discussed at the Chamber's November meeting on Tuesday.

"Let's show what we can do," Sanchez said at the meeting. The chairman of the Midland Earthquake Relief Fund, Lillian Wallis, was nominated by the chamber, and the Governor's office is considering her, for the Governor's Good Samaritan Award.

In other business, Manuel Carrasco, chairman of the East Side Development Task Force, announced that the task force has asked for permission to pursue funding from an Urban Development Action Grant. Carrasco also noted that the group had expected to receive about 8 to 10 applications for the position of Manager of Economic Development, but instead received 32 applications for the job. The successful applicant is expected to be announced later this week.

Other employment possibilities affecting the hispanic community announced at the meeting was a notice from Chevron of job opportunities in Hobbs, Andrews, Kermit, Lamesa and Midland.

According to Roger Robles, president of the Chamber, details can be obtained from Sherry Marshall or Trish Arnold at the Midland Chevron office. Deadline for applications is November 15. "They want results, so if you're interested, or know someone who might be, let them know." He said some of the positions require a college education, and some only need a high school education.

Also discussed at the meeting was an upcoming seminar sponsored by the Chamber and Casa de Amigos. The seminar, slated for Wednesday and Thursday, November 6 and 7, from 7:30 to 10 p.m. at the Casa de Amigos, is a panel discussion and information session on "How to Start Your Own Small Business." Chamber members Virginia Connor, Joe Cuevas, Sam Flores and Ciro Sanchez will be on the panel, discussing alternative financing for a business, risks to consider, how to reach the customer, and how to avoid mismanagement.

The seminar is free to the public, and will be held in both English and Spanish. Two members of Avante, the El Paso-based group of minority small business specialists, will also attend.

An earlier group of business seminars sponsored by the Chamber and Midland College, and held at Midland College, was termed a success by Maria Antonieta Soto, co-ordinator of the project. She said about 80 students attended the seminars, and that there would have been more if the weather had been better. She noted that Midland College is willing to co-sponsor more seminars, but expressed disappointment that there weren't more members of the Chamber present.

The meeting wrapped up with the election of officers for the 1986 year. Roger Robles was re-elected president, and Robbyne Fuller was elected to the board of directors to fill the unexpired term vacated by Oralia Corrales. Committee chairmen were also named for 1986. Chamber plans for 1986 include a trade show, an after hours mixer, setting up a new committee to welcome new businesses with ribbon cuttings, and the awarding of two $1,000 scholarships.

Workers and family members read the notice that General Tire will close its bias manufacturing plant in Waco this spring, effecting over 1,500 persons.

Declining market, imports spur Waco plant closing

WACO, Texas (AP) — The announced closing of Waco's General Tire plant is still six months away, but workers and city officials are gearing up now for ripple effects of the shutdown.

GenCorp Inc., based in Akron Ohio, and its subsidiary General Tire, announced Tuesday it plans to close the bias-belt tire producing plant which employs 1,405 workers and averages a monthly payroll of $3.5 million.

Operations will begin phaseout within a few weeks, said John Floyd, vice president for manufacturing at General Tire.

An agreement in the United Rubber Workers contract required the six-month advance notice of the closing.

Floyd said the decision to close the plant was made within the past month, but that the GenCorp board of directors approved the measure Monday afternoon.

While company officials are looking at strategies to ease the closing, Waco city officials are looking at repercussions to its tax base.

The McLennan County Appraisal District has valued General Tire's 137-acre plant, site, machinery and inventory at $49.4 million, said Jim Landrum, appraisal district chief deputy.

The plant pays $142,262 in annual taxes to McLennan County, $277,417 to the city of Waco, $375,650 to the Waco Independent School District and $28,500 to McLennan Community College.

Waco Independent School District Superintendent Frank Kudlaty said the closing of the plant will have a major impact on the school district. Paying 2.6 percent of the district's taxes, General Tire is its largest taxpayer.

To make that amount up could mean an increase of 2 to 3 percent in school taxes, Kudlaty said.

For workers, the shutdown decision was a confirmation of rumors they had hoped were wrong.

"I wasn't surprised," said Ron McLennan, who has worked at General Tire for nine years. "The rumor had been too strong."

When the plant closes, McLennan plans to go to school at Texas State Technical Institute and learn a new trade.

Tenngasco postings down

From Staff and Wire Reports

HOUSTON — Tenngasco Exchange Corp. posted spot market natural gas prices of $2.03 per million BTU at Vinton, La, and $2.01 per million BTU at Tivoli, TX, for November 1985.

The posting is down six cents from October at Vinton and eight cents at Tivoli. The company cited continued competition from other gas supplies, especially in Texas markets, as a reason for the decline in prices.

The November posting marked the first anniversary for Tenngasco Exchange, the nation's first natural gas posted price program. "The exchange has provided the industry with a clear view of real market prices," explained Tenngasco Corp. president Jerry McLeod.

"We are proud of the amount of interest and response the exchange has stimulated in the industry."

"Our volumes are indicative of producers' confidence in the value of the program as a means of getting their production to market," he added.

"Furthermore, we have become aware that other industry parties are tying their contract prices to the posted price. This reinforces our belief that a public posting is a valuable industry tool."

Attesting to the success of the exchange, the company said volumes averaged 225 million cubic feet per day in October 1985, with peak daily volumes exceeding 300 million cubic feet.

On the 25th day of each month, Tenngasco Exchange posts the price it will pay the following month for natural gas delivered at the posted points. These locations are geographic reference points for determining comparable prices at other locations.

Prices are posted near the end of the preceding month to provide market-responsive price that is equitable to both the producer and the end user. Contracts are written for a 30-day period.

Voters reject restrictions on offshore drilling

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — In a victory for oil companies, voters here rejected a measure that would have locked in some of the tightest restrictions ever imposed on offshore oil drilling.

Measure A, the Santa Barbara proposal supported by area celebrities like Jane Fonda, John Travolta and others, was designed to tighten restrictions on how oil companies handle vast offshore fields.

It was overwhelmingly defeated, 62 percent to 37 percent, with all 242 precincts counted.

Election officials said 38 percent of the registered voters cast ballots, considered a large turnout for an off-year election.

A budding offshore oil boom ignited the million-dollar election battle.

BUSINESS SCENE

Oilfield carrier expanding to Permian Basin

By SUSAN LINDSAY

What may be the oldest oilfield carrier in existence, JOE D. HUGHES, INC. is opening a terminal and pipe storage facility at the former Atlas yard in Odessa.

The company, a wholly-owned subsidiary of The Halliburton Co. and affiliated with Brown & Root, Inc., was established in 1896. The company dates to the early days of oil booms in East Texas when pipe was hauled to the drilling rigs by mules and wagons.

The business specializes in oil field transportation, pipe storage, pipe line stringing and heavy hauling. It is headquartered in Houston and has offices in Corpus Christi, and Duncan, Okla.

Johnny Lemmons will be area manager. John Robinson will be terminal manager.

The Board of Directors of the Midland engineering firm PARKHILL, SMITH & COOPER, INC., has named two employees as stockholders in the firm.

Edwin E. (Butch) Davis, an engineer in the firm's Lubbock office, and Walter A. Brown, an architect with AC Associates, the architectural division of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc. are the newest stockholders. There are presently 16 stockholders in the corporation.

Davis joined the company in 1982 as a design engineer. His primary work assignment has been the Interstate 27 project in Lubbock. Prior to joining the firm, he worked for the U.S. Soil Conservation Service.

Brown joined AC Associates in 1984 with nearly 30 years of experience in the architectural profession. He currently serves as AC operations manager. His previous experience was with Texas Tech University and the University of California system in their facilities planning and construction offices.

Ever wish for the perfect boss? Employees at MAGCOBAR DIVISION OF DRESSER INDUSTRIES, INC. must not have to, since Robert H. "Bob" Williamson, executive account manager for the company, was named Boss of the Year for 1985-1986 by the Permian Chapter of Professional Secretaries International.

Williamson is a member of the Chamber of Commerce and the Midland Wildcatters Committee and has served on the board of directors of the Permian Basin Oil Show and the advisory committee in the area of petroleum technology for Odessa College.

Or, ever wish to work for a top-ranked company? LUBY'S CAFETERIAS, INC. has been ranked as one such firm. The San Antonio-based cafeteria chain was named as one of the top 200 small companies in America by FORBES magazine.

The magazine's November 4th cover story ranks Luby's in the top quarter in the sales, profits and market value categories. Additionally, the company ranked 70th in the five-year return on equity section.

This is the second year the company has been included in the prestigious survey. Of the 300 companies listed in last year's survey, only 89 returned this year.

Congratulations are also in order for FELIPE MORALES, local representative of American Security Life Insurance Co., who has won two of the company's top awards.

He has won the Screaming Eagle Award, which is given to agents who have achieved outstanding production in life insurance sales. He has also been awarded the Five for Fifty Award for his outstanding sales records. This is the 22nd time Morales has won the award.

Also winning an award is HARVE SHAVOR, owner of the local Lien Infection Control Systems franchise, who was recognized for the outstanding sales performance of his franchise at the company's recent conference in Phoenix.

Shavor and the area branch managers were presented with the Distinguished Achievement Award for the greatest dollar growth over the past year, an award Shavor has received six of the last eight years.

THE BUSINESS JOURNAL OF THE PERMIAN BASIN, a new business publication, will make its debut in this region in mid-November and will provide industry leaders with a comprehensive view of local, national and international news.

The journal, owned by Hearst Corp., will be tabloid form and will come out each Monday, beginning November 11. The publication is headquartered in Midland.

It will cover business activity in West Texas and Southeast New Mexico, including oil and gas, construction, retail sales, real estate, automobiles and farming and ranching.

THE PERMIAN BASIN ADVERTISING FEDERATION's monthly meeting will be at noon Friday at the Hospitality Room at Permian Distributing Co.

The program will feature the "1984 Best in the West," a taped presentation of award-winning campaigns in television, radio, outdoor, newspaper and specialty advertising.

Wainoco buys Canadian gas

HOUSTON (SWN) Wainoco Oil Corp.announced that its wholly-owned Canadian subsidiary, Wainoco Oil & Gas Limited, and Czar Resources Ltd. have jointly entered into a contract for the sale of up to 16 million cubic feet of gas per day. The three-year contract was made for the sale of gas to Prince George Pulp & Paper Limited of Prince George, British Columbia and represents the first sale of industrial discount gas to a former "ineligible buyer" in British Columbia.

Gas sales commenced November 1, 1985 under contract terms which call for a firm daily delivery of five million cubic feet plus an interruptible component of 11 million cubic feet per day.

A substantial portion of the gas requirements will be supplied from both firms' uncontracted gas in the Monias field. A new pipeline with a carrying capacity of 60 million cubic feet of gas per day is being constructed for delivery of Monias gas to accommodate sales under this contract as well as those from future contracts.

Mesa reports reduced earnings

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Mesa Petroleum Co. has reported slightly reduced earnings for the third quarter of 1985, compared to the similar period in 1984.

T. Boone Pickens Jr., president of the company, announced Tuesday that Mesa had net income of $10.7 million, or 16 cents a share, for the third quarter, compared to net income of $11 million, also 16 cents a share, for August through October of last year.

Operating income for the quarter was $17 million, or 25 cents a share, compared with $20 million, or 29 cents a share, in 1984, Pickens said. Third-quarter revenues were $82.2 million in 1985, compared with $105.1 million in 1984, he said.

Coastal buys Texaco's share of coal project

HOUSTON — The Coastal Corp. has completed the purchase from Texaco, Inc. of the remaining 50 percent interest in the Skyline Coal Project near Scofield, Utah. Subsidiaries of Coastal and Texaco each previously held a half interest in the Skyline project, which is developing an estimated 90 million tons of recoverable coal reserves in Utah's Carbon and Emery counties.

Offshore well completed for 2,096 barrels

FINDLAY, Ohio — Marathon Oil Co. has successfully tested a well located in 370 feet of water on West Delta Block 143 about 40 miles south of Venice, Louisiana. The West Delta 143 No. 1 well flowed at the stabilized daily rate of 2,096 barrels of 31.5 gravity crude and 3.5 Mmcfd, with no water, on a 24/64 inch choke.

Mitchell begins water injection in Wyoming

THE WOODLANDS — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. is proceeding with the initial phase of what ultimately may be a $28 million secondary oil recovery venture in southeastern Wyoming.

In a pilot project, the company will drill additional wells and inject water into a 400-acre area of the Teapot reservoir at Mikes Draw field, located in Converse County, Wy. As far as it can determine, the company noted, this will be the first waterflood project in the Teapot formation.

If the pilot waterflooding proves successful, the project will be extended to approximately 7,400 acres. Presently, that area contains 44 wells, and plans call for the drilling of 33 additional wells.

Harken Oil & Gas completes rights offering

DALLAS — Harken Oil & Gas, Inc. has announced the successful completion of its previously reported rights offering.

Approximately 2.3 million shares of Harken common stock were issued pursuant to the offering at a price of $1 per share. Proceeds were used to further reduce Harken's bank debt. During the course of 1985, Harken's bank debt has been reduced from approximately $14 million to $3 million.

Celeron tests 408 barrel wildcat discovery

LAFAYETTE, La. — Celeron Corp. has completed a wildcat oil discovery near the Texas-Louisiana border, north of Orange, Texas.

Drilled on the State Line Prospect, the well is flowing oil at a stabilized rate of 408 barrels of 38 gravity crude per day, along with 384 Mcfd of casinghead gas. The oil well was tested for seven days through a 10/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 2,380 psi.

HNG/InterNorth reports third quarter results

OMAHA, Neb. — HNG/InterNorth, Inc. has reported net income from continuing operations of $38,869,000 for the third quarter of 1985, compared to the $35,207,000 earned by InterNorth from continuing operations in 1984's third quarter. Primary earnings per share from continuing operations were $.60 p;er share, up 15 percent from $.52 earned in the same period a year earlier.

American Exploration buys interest in field

HOUSTON — American Exploration Co. has purchased Burnett Oil Co.'s interest in the AWP (Olmos) field in McMullen County, Texas for $29.25 million.

Burnett's interest in the AWP field consistes of working interests ranging from ten to 50 percent in 64 oil wells and 9 gas wells. As a result of the acquisition, American Exploration will become operator of a substantial portion of the field. Approximately 36 percent of the purchase was made on behalf of an institutional partnership.

Monthly income distribution revealed

HOUSTON (SWN) Houston Oil Royalty Trust announced that the monthly income distribution for November 1985 representing the net proceeds for September 1985 accounting will be made November 25, 1985 to Unit holders of record on November 15, 1985. The total amount of the distribution will be $279,151.49 or approximately $.11631 per Unit.

PARTY FARE WITH TEX-MEX FLAIR

Surprise the crowd with a Tex-Mex fiesta. Start with Picante Pork Enchiladas, a streamlined main dish with the authentic Mexican flavor of picante sauce. Pass crunchy Bean and Pepper Salad, a flavorful blend of cooked or canned Western dry beans and Southwestern vegetables, and serve with Olive-Tomato Relish for delightful taste and texture contrast.

The lively flavors of Tex-Mex cooking are taking the nation by storm. Subtle, spicy and spectacular, these foods strike a unique compromise between authentic Mexican specialties and the time pressures of busy American cooks. With emphasis on exciting flavors, easy preparation and the elimination of hard-to-find ingredients, they're a natural for casual entertaining.

Next time the party's at your house, look to Picante Pork Enchiladas to star on the fiesta menu. The spicy ground pork-filled tortillas boast a crowd-pleasing, garden-fresh sauce that's a shortcut version of a Mexican classic. Authentic flavor is provided by the cook's choice of mild, medium or hot picante sauce.

For the taste and temperature contrasts that provide part of the charm of Tex-Mex foods, serve a variety of toppings with the enchiladas. Avocado slices, additional picante sauce and Olive-Tomato Relish are ideal. Combining cool, crisp vegetables with California black ripe olives in a spicy marinade, the relish makes a pleasing accompaniment to full-flavored foods of all kinds.

Of course, no Tex-Mex meal is complete without beans in some form. Whether served refried, as a dip or as a salad, they're a border state menu "must." Bean and Pepper Salad combines the best of the Southwest in a zesty salad with a lime vinaigrette. Convenient canned or cooked dry kidney, pinto or pink beans, grown in California and Idaho, team with peppers, jicama and chiles for a spicy/tangy palate pleasing combo offering flavor, color, texture and temperature contrasts to the meal.

Another time when you're feeling festive, delight the crowd or the family with Bean and Cheese Crispy appetizers, a tostada-like treat that tops seasoned cooked mashed beans with colorful, flavorful Mexican-style garnishes. Bring on the easy-to-prepare Cheese and Chicken Chimichangas as the main course and watch the meal become a Tex-Mex fiesta.

OLIVE-TOMATO RELISH

- 1 cup pitted California ripe olives, drained
- 2 ripe tomatoes, seeded and chopped
- 1 medium zucchini, chopped
- 1/3 cup chopped onion
- 1/3 cup chopped celery
- 1/4 cup olive oil or vegetable oil
- 1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
- 1 small clove garlic, minced
- 1 mild green chile, chopped
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper

Toss together olives, tomatoes, zucchini, onion and celery. In small jar combine oil, vinegar, garlic, chile, salt and pepper; cover and shake until well blended. Drizzle dressing over olive relish; mix well. Cover and chill at least 2 hours or up to 24 hours, stirring occasionally. Drain before serving. Makes 5 to 6 servings.

CHEESE AND CHICKEN CHIMICHANGAS

(Not Shown)

- 2-1/2 cups shredded or chopped cooked chicken
- 2/3 cup picante sauce
- 1/3 cup green onion slices
- 3/4 to 1 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1/2 teaspoon oregano leaves, crushed
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 8 flour tortillas (7 to 8-inch)
- 1/4 cup melted butter or margarine
- 1 cup shredded Cheddar or Monterey Jack cheese
- Guacamole (recipe follows)

Combine chicken, picante sauce, onion, cumin, oregano and salt in saucepan; simmer 5 minutes or until most of liquid has evaporated. Brush one side of tortillas with butter. Spoon about 1/3 cup meat mixture onto center of unbuttered sides; top with 2 tablespoons cheese. Fold 2 sides over filling; fold ends down. Place seam side down in 13 x 9 x 2-inch baking dish. Bake in preheated oven at 475°F. about 13 minutes or until crisp and golden brown. Top with Guacamole and additional picante sauce to serve. Makes 4 servings.

Guacamole

- 1 ripe avocado, peeled, seeded and mashed
- 2 tablespoons picante sauce
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- Salt to taste

Combine all ingredients; mix well. Makes about 1 cup.

BEAN AND PEPPER SALAD

- 1 can (about 16 oz.) kidney beans, drained*
- 1 can (about 16 oz.) pinto beans, drained*
- 1/2 cup very thinly sliced red onion, separated into rings
- 1/2 cup red or green pepper strips
- 1 cup thinly julienned jicama
- 1/4 cup very thinly sliced green chiles (Anaheim)
- Lime Vinaigrette (recipe follows)
- Lettuce cups or shredded lettuce

Combine all ingredients except lettuce; mix well. Marinate at least 2 hours. Drain salad; reserve marinade. Serve on lettuce with reserved marinade. Makes about 8 servings.

*Three to three and one-half cups drained, cooked kidney, pinto and pink beans can be substituted.

Lime Vinaigrette

- 1/4 cup olive oil
- 2 tablespoons lime juice
- 2 tablespoons white wine vinegar
- 1 tablespoon minced onion
- 1 teaspoon minced cilantro or parsley
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon oregano leaves, crushed
- 1/2 teaspoon sugar

Combine ingredients; mix well. Makes 1/2 cup.

TO SOAK AND COOK DRY BEANS

Wash 1/2 pound dry beans; add to 5 cups boiling water. Boil 2 minutes; remove from heat. Cover and soak 12 hours or overnight.* (Or, for quick-soak method, add beans to 5 cups boiling water, boil 3 minutes, cover and let stand 1 to 4 hours). Rinse and drain thoroughly. In large pot, place soaked beans, 3 cups hot water, 1 tablespoon vegetable oil or shortening and 1 teaspoon salt. Boil gently with lid tilted 20 to 25 minutes or until beans are tender. Makes about 3 cups.

*Beans are more digestible when soaked for a longer period of time.

Tip: Leftover beans can be packaged in freezer-proof containers and frozen.

PICANTE PORK ENCHILADAS

- 3 large outer romaine lettuce leaves, cut up
- 1 medium green pepper, seeded and cut up
- 3/4 cup chicken broth
- Vegetable oil
- 3/4 cup picante sauce
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2/3 cup dairy sour cream
- 1 pound ground pork
- 1 small onion, chopped
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 12 corn tortillas
- 2 cups shredded Monterey Jack cheese

Place lettuce, green pepper and broth in blender container; blend until smooth. Heat 1 tablespoon oil in saucepan; add lettuce mixture, picante sauce and 1/2 teaspoon salt. Cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, 5 minutes. Remove from heat; whisk in sour cream. Set aside. Brown meat with onion and garlic in 10-inch skillet; drain. Stir in remaining 1/2 teaspoon salt and 3/4 cup of the sauce mixture; remove from heat. Heat about 1/2-inch oil in small skillet until hot but not smoking. Quickly fry each tortilla in oil to soften, about 5 seconds on each side; drain on paper towels. Spoon scant 1/4 cup meat mixture down center of each tortilla; roll and place seam side down in 13 x 9 x 2-inch baking dish. Spoon remaining sauce evenly over enchiladas; cover with cheese. Bake at 350°F. about 15 minutes or until heated through. Spoon additional picante sauce over enchiladas to serve. Makes 6 servings.

Variation: Substitute flour tortillas for corn tortillas: omit frying.

BEAN AND CHEESE CRISPY

(Not Shown)

- 1/4 cup minced onion
- 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
- 1 can (about 16 oz.) drained pinto or kidney beans, coarsely mashed
- 1/4 teaspoon chili powder
- Salt
- 4 flour tortillas (7 to 8-inch)
- 3 to 4 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
- 2 cups shredded Monterey Jack cheese
- 1/2 cup sliced California ripe olives
- Chopped avocados, onions, tomatoes and picante sauce, as desired

Sauté onion in oil. Add beans, chili powder and salt to taste; heat thoroughly. Place tortillas on greased large baking sheet. Brush surface of tortillas with butter; broil about 4 inches from heat until lightly browned. Turn tortillas, brush with butter and broil until puffy and browned. Dot bean mixture on tortillas; sprinkle with cheese and olives. Broil until cheese melts. Cut each tortilla into 6 wedge-shaped pieces. Serve with avocados, onions, tomatoes and picante sauce. Makes 24 appetizers.

Onions turn up in turnovers

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Mary Ruff Greene, who has reigned over my test kitchen for a long time, has great culinary craftsmanship and thoroughly enjoys it.

A few weeks ago I watched her roll out a batch of pastry into an exact 18-by 12-inch rectangle and then cut it into 6 equal squares — each one as trim as the other. We always use a pastry cloth and stockinet covered rolling pin to roll out the pastry and they are a big help.

We were trying a recipe for turnovers with a filling of cooked sweet Spanish onions topped with grated cheese. The turnovers — a generous size — were judged to be good to serve for a light supper with a mushroom sauce and a tossed green salad. They would also be fine for dinner with roast chicken or meat.

Rolling out pastry well takes practice.

SWEET ONION TURNOVERS

Pastry, see recipe
1 large sweet Spanish onion (1¼ pounds)
3 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon salt
Pepper to taste
½ cup grated sharp cheddar cheese
1 tablespoon milk

Make up pastry.

Peel and thinly slice onion; separate into rings — there should be about 5 cups. In a 10-inch skillet gently cook onion, stirring often, until golden and tender — 15 to 20 minutes. Stir in salt and pepper.

On a pastry cloth, using a stockinet covered rolling pin, roll out pastry to a 12- by 18-inch rectangle; cut into six 6-inch squares. Spoon onions into centers of squares. Sprinkle with cheese. Moisten edges of pastry with water and fold opposite corners together to form triangles. Press edges with tines of a fork to seal. With the fork prick tops to allow steam to escape. Brush with milk. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven on an ungreased cookie sheet until golden brown — 25 to 30 minutes. Serve hot.

Makes 6 very large servings.

FLAKY PASTRY:

3 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
1¼ cups solid white shortening
1 large egg
5 tablespoons ice water
1 tablespoon white vinegar

In a large bowl stir together flour and salt. With a pastry blender cut in shortening until the size of peas.

In a small bowl whisk together egg, water and vinegar until blended. Pour over flour mixture. With a fork stir just until flour mixture is moistened. Form into a ball. Wrap in saran and chill until firm enough to handle — 1 hour or longer.

Smoky delights: Sizzling foods from barbecues

By GREGG HOWARD
Copley News Service

'Fess up food fanatics — even if you love to cook, the kitchen can become monotonous. Using the same appliances, the same techniques and the same seasonings day after day can even become oppressive.

The desire to break out of the cooking corral and find a change-of-pace meal accounts for the popularity of barbecuing, according to the Barbecue Industry Association. Enjoying wide-open spaces while imparting an outdoorsy flavor to food has captured the fancy of America — about 100 million barbecues are sizzling across the nation, according to an association survey.

The grills are sizzling away to create flavorful main dishes, appetizers and even vegetables, although the most frequently barbecued items are hamburgers, hot dogs, steaks, sausages, chicken and fish, according to the survey.

Marinades are an easy way to enhance barbecued meat with flavor and tenderness. Basically, there are four types of marinades:

• A dry marinade consists of herbs, spices and salt. A combination of freshly ground pepper, salt, dried thyme and dried oregano, for example, can be rubbed into meat for deep flavor. The salt reacts with the meat's natural juices and penetrates the flesh along with the herbs.

• A paste marinade is a dry marinade to which an aromatic, such as chopped garlic, and a small amount of oil and dry mustard have been added. The paste will coat and penetrate the meat with a stronger flavor.

• An oil marinade is made by saturating herbs with oil. Aromatics, such as garlic and citrus peel and herbs lend their flavors to the oil and thus flavor the meat. An oil-based marinade lubricates an moistens the meat, preventing drying out over hot coals.

• An acid marinade is based on one of the following ingredients: wine, tomato sauce, soy sauce, yogurt, citrus juice or vinegar. Combined with herbs and aromatics, this type of marinade penetrates and tenderizes the meat while flavoring.

WHICHEVER MARINADE is used, the cook can control the intensity of the marinade's effects by varying the marinating time. For a spiced coating or surface flavor, use the marinade immediately prior to grilling and continue to baste until done. For a deeper flavor, marinate up to two hours at room temperature or up to 24 hours in the refrigerator. For fish, reduce marinating time to 30 minutes at room temperature and up to two hours if refrigerated. When a tenderizing effect is desired or when a salted dry mixture is used, marinate 24 to 48 hours in the refrigerator for best results.

If your epicurean explorations take you beyond the traditional meat barbecue, consider these suggestions for appetizers:

• Place corn tortilla chip in an aluminum-foil roasting tray; top with Monterey Jack and sharp cheddar cheeses, chili peppers and onions. Place on the cooking grid of a covered cooker and warm for 15 minutes. After you remove the nachos from the grill, top with sour cream and guacamole.

• A loaf of French or Italian bread provides numerous possibilites for savory snacks. For example, mini-pizzas are easy to make; on each slice of bread, spread tomato sauce and mound several types of cheeses. Place in an aluminum roasting pan and heat on the cooking grid for 15 minutes or until cheese is hot and bubbly.

AND NOW, SOME advice on vegetable grilling:

• Cook vegetables 4 to 6 inches above medium-hot briquettes and turn periodically to ensure even cooking.

• Lightly oil skins of thin-skinned vegetables to keep them tender.

• Roast vegetables with tough skins — especially yams, yellow onions, potatoes and corn in the husk — directly on hot briquettes for a unique, smoky-flavored treat.

• Moisten foil-wrapped vegetables with meat stock, wine, citrus juice or beer for special flavor.

• For vegetable kabobs, place a firm-fleshed vegetable, such as a sweet red pepper, at the beginning and the end of each skewer to hold juicier vegetables in place.

Whether you choose a gas or charcoal grill as your means to mouth-watering meals, barbecuing can be a great success — if safety precautions are taken. Following are some suggestions from the barbecue association:

• Barbecue in a well-ventilated area that has adequate lighting. Keep the barbecue center away from children's play areas.

• Let liquid starter soak into the charcoal before lighting. Never add liquid starter once the briquettes are burning. Never use gasoline or kerosene to start the fire.

• Before putting a barbecue grill away, be sure the fire is out.

DEAR ABBY

Woman's wedding guest list upsets boyfriend

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: If plans go according to schedule, I'll be married next June. I met "Julia" when I was a senior at college. She was a junior. After I graduated, I drove down to see her nearly every weekend. I live about two hours from there. We started to go steady, then I gave her an engagement ring.

One night Julia called me from college crying. She said she had fooled around with a guy I knew (I'll call him John), but she promised she would never go near him again.

She called me several times after that to say John was still "after her," but she didn't want me to do anything about it because she could handle it. Meanwhile, I was very upset after these calls.

Then one morning she called in tears to say that John had given her a ride somewhere, refused to take her home and tried to rape her, but she fought him off. I told her I was driving right down there to have it out with him, but she begged me not to, saying they have a lot of mutual friends and she didn't want any awkward feelings. She asked me for her sake to forgive and forget.

Here's the payoff: Julia put John on her guest list for our wedding! I told her I couldn't stand the sight of that guy and I didn't want him anywhere near us on our wedding day. She says he's a good friend to all her friends and she can't leave him out. I am ready to tell Julia if she wants to marry me, she can't invite John. Am I wrong? — END OF ROPE

DEAR END: No! Why your fiancee would even consider inviting to her wedding a man who tried to rape her is a mystery to me. Give her a choice, you or John. And if you back down and permit John to be a guest at your wedding, prepare to do a lot more forgiving and forgetting.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for your very informative column on fire prevention. May I add one more fire hazard to the list? It's one I never would have thought of, but it nearly cost me my home.

Late one morning I smelled smoke. The last room I searched was the spare bedroom. As I entered the room, I saw the heavy drapes pulled back from the window burst into flames!

I had left a magnifying makeup mirror on a table by an east window, and apparently the sun on the mirror had reflected onto the drapes! — STILL SHAKING IN WESTLAKE, ORE.

DEAR STILL: Thank you for the valuable tip and your reassuring comment. Apparently a St. Louis reader was less than fired up about that column:

DEAR ABBY: Your column is one of the first things I read in the Globe-Democrat, but the one about fire prevention was very disappointing. I enjoy your column when a problem is posed and you offer a solution, but the essay on fire prevention is just not your thing and has no reader interest.

I hope you'll accept this in the constructive manner in which it is offered. — CHUCK NORMAN, ST. LOUIS

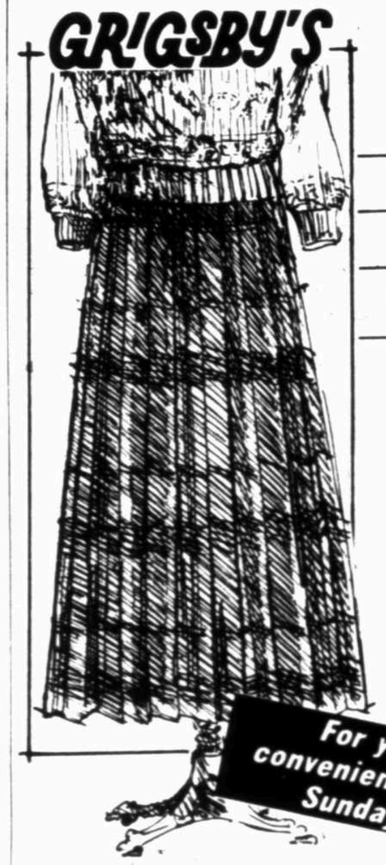

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Dinah, Who Will Feel Much Finer When Folks in Carolina Return My China": I strongly urge those taking food to someone who is grieving to heed this suggestion: Please use disposable, non-returnable containers.

During my son's illness and subsequent death, we were given dozens of food items in "nice" containers. The last thing I needed at the time was the worry about returning the containers. It hung over my head for months, making a traumatic time even more stressful. So if you really want to make things easier for those who are grieving, send your offerings in plastic, foil or paper.

Also, please keep your cakes, and give me carrots! I put on 25 pounds eating all those "goodies." And don't tell me I should have been more careful. When you're stressed out and it's right under your nose, nibbling is normal. — BEEN THERE IN SACRAMENTO

Changes in diet not easy

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Making dietary changes for better health is not an overnight process. It takes time to alter an eating style, to reduce the intake of fat, calories, sodium and cholesterol, and to include dietary fiber in the diet.

Recent national food surveys suggest that Americans are becoming more nutrition-conscious. But Gail A. Levey, a registered dietitian who spoke recently at a forum for food writers sponsored by the New York City affiliate of the American Heart Association, said there's more to healthful eating that awareness.

Often, we need to hear it repeated that a prudent diet can help reduce the risk of heart disease before we actually make changes such as easing up on salad dressing, skimming the fat off stew before serving, choosing a bagel rather than a croissant and opting for fresh fruit rather than pastry. The heart association nutritionists at the forum said there are many ways to improve diet without too much fanfare and without spending more money.

But we're tired at the end of the day and might be inclined to select items for convenience rather than for nutritive benefits.

CONFUSING HEALTH and diet messages can create other stumbling blocks. Some foods carry a label that reads "no cholesterol," but those foods might be high in fat. A label that says "no salt added" still could be high in sodium naturally.

There is a trade-off for the convenience of frozen entrees. Often, such food contains excess fat, salt, calories and cholesterol, Levey said. It's not difficult to prepare your own entrees if you organize your schedule. For example, prepare a large pot of chili (a fat-modified and reduced-calorie version is offered on this page) over the weekend, making enough for two meals during the week.

Takeout shops can be the wrong stop for heart-healthy foods, unless you choose wisely. At the deli, choose white-meat turkey, lean roast beef, health and vegetable salads with little or no dressing. Barbecued chicken is a good choice; ask for a bird prepared without salt. High-fat, whole-milk cheeses, salami, coleslaw and most prepared salads, such as egg, macaroni and potato, are best left behind.

SOME JAPANESE takeout shops offer rice and fish entrees. Chinese takeout entrees of stir-fry vegetables and chicken, steamed fish or tofu can be fine if the chef cuts back on the oil and salt. Look for a fish store on your route home that will prepare a fish entree ready for the oven or microwave. Some recommended entrees are halibut topped with cut-up fresh vegetables, and broccoli tucked in rolled fillet of sole.

Salad bars are a boon, but beware of fat traps. Go lightly on such toppings as chopped egg, bacon bits, seasoned croutons and grated cheese.

Eating well doesn't necessarily mean big spending. One of the easiest ways to cut your food costs is to reduce the size of your meat, poultry and fish entree from the typical 8-ounce serving to 4 ounces, said Maudine Nelson, a nutritionist at Columbia University's College of Physicians and Surgeons, who also spoke at the forum. By doing that, you not only cut cost in half but also fat, cholesterol and calories. Occasionally replace expensive meat meals with low-fat, vegetarian meals based on legumes, whose grains and pastas, said Nelson.

TO REDUCE saturated fat in the diet, read labels and avoid products that name as main ingredients eggs or such fats as lard, butter, suet, coconut oil, cream cheese, cocoa butter, chocolate, palm oil or powered whole-milk solids, Nelson said. Because the word fat does not always appear on the label, it may be hard to know what you're getting. Check for such words as shortenings or hydrogenated oils; these are fats.

A food label that reads "no cholesterol" is misleading, nutritionists warn. Vegetable oils, like all plant foods, are free of cholesterol, but if the oil is made from palm or coconut, it is a highly saturated fat.

FAT-MODIFIED CHILI

1 cup dried pinto or kidney beans
3 cups water
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
2 cups chopped onion
1 green pepper, seeded and chopped
1 pound lean ground beef
2 cups canned unsalted tomatoes, chopped
1 6-ounce can unsalted tomato paste
¾ cup water
2 tablespoons chili powder
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 teaspoon finely minced garlic
1 teaspoon dried oregano
¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1 bay leaf

Place beans and 3 cups water in a saucepan. Bring to a boil and cook for 2 minutes. Do not drain. Set aside for 1 hour. Return beans to heat, add water to cover, if necessary. Simmer for 1 hour or until the beans are tender. Drain and set aside.

In a large, deep skillet or Dutch oven, heat oil. Add onions and green papper. Cook until onion is transparent. Add meat and brown. Pour off all fat. Add beans, tomatoes, tomato paste, ¾ cup water, chili powder, vinegar, garlic, oregano, pepper and bay leaf. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer 1½ hours, stirring occasionally. Remove bay leaf. Makes 6 servings.

CORNBREAD

1½ cups cornmeal
½ cup all-purpose flour
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon baking soda
1 egg, lightly beaten
1½ cups buttermilk (no salt added)
1 cup fresh corn or canned, unsalted corn, drained
⅓ cup vegetable oil

Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Combine and blend cornmeal, flour, sugar and baking soda in a large bowl.

In a medium bowl, mix egg, buttermilk, corn and oil. Stir buttermilk mixture into cornmeal mixture and blend thoroughly.

Pour into greased 8-inch-square pan and bake 20 to 25 minutes, or until top is golden and a toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Salad tangy with Roquefort cheese

COMPANY BUFFET
Tepid Boned Pork & Yams
Bourbon Apples & Bean Salad
Chocolate Cake & Coffee

SNAP BEAN SALAD

2 pounds snap beans, trimmed
1 cup tightly packed parsley leaves
4 medium to large scallions (green ends included)
1 clove garlic
2 tablespoons red wine vinegar
1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
⅓ to ½ cup olive oil
Salt and pepper to taste
1 large sweet red pepper, seeded, deribbed and thinly sliced

Cook beans until tender-crisp and still green; drain and cool. Finely chop parsley and scallions (there should be about ½ cup of each) and the garlic. Whisk together vinegar, mustard and oil until blended; stir in parsley, scallion and garlic; toss with beans and salt and pepper. Garnish with red pepper. Cover tightly and chill to allow flavors to blend. Makes 12 servings.

Oregon Pharmacist's
Wrinkle Cream Great Success

It's an exciting story of a pharmacist who developed a wrinkle cream which women all over the country are clamoring for.

Dr. Robert Heldfond, a Portland pharmacist, used knowledge from pharmacy school and years of experience, to compound EB5, a wrinkle cream he started selling in his drugstore and which is now making cosmetic history across the nation.

Women started coming to Heldfond's pharmacy when the word got around about its wonderful results in helping women look younger. The phones never stopped ringing and letters poured in praising the results with EB5 cream.

Research lab tests show that by using EB5 cream morning and night, facial lines, lines around the eyes, lines on the forehead and around the mouth are smoothed.

EB5 contains natural ingredients, including Liprogen, an exciting natural combination developed by Dr. Heldfond and other aids to help smooth aging skin. Heldfond's base for the cream absorbs quickly leaving the skin soft and velvety.

EB5 cream is actually 5 creams in one jar . . . a wrinkle cream, moisturizer, night cream, eye cream, and makeup base, all in one. One jar lasts many months.

ANSWER TO AGING SKIN?
Dr. Robert Heldfond shown working in his laboratory where he developed his wrinkle cream, EB5, after 12 years of research.

Note: EB5 cream is available in Midland at JC Penney at Midland Park Mall 699-4347.

Copley News Service

Americans consume 1 billion pounds of soybeans a year and most of the time aren't aware they're eating soybeans. Soybeans are used in more than 1,000 processed foods.

But soybeans don't have to be disguised. They come out from hiding in the following recipes.

But, first, here's how to cook dry soybeans:

Soybeans may be found in a variety of ways — fresh green, canned green or yellow dried mature beans.

The fresh green soybeans, which are high in vitamin C, should be shelled before cooking. Cover with boiling water and let stand 5 minutes. Cool and drain; break pods in half and squeeze out the beans. To cook, add 1 cup boiling water to 2 cups soybeans, return to boil and simmer 10 to 20 minutes or until tender. Beans should be used within one week after cooking.

Blanching the green soybeans (bring to a rapid boil, hold 2 to 3 minutes, cool immediately) and freezing up to three weeks results in minimal vitamin C losses.

The green soybeans can be used as a side vegetable, with a taste similar to split peas. Try them with a cream sauce or with bits of cooked bacon.

Yellow dried mature beans can be used the same as any dry bean. However, soybeans take a bit longer to cook than the other beans.

BELOW ARE three ways to cook soybeans. Choose the one that best suits your needs.

— One cup soybeans to 3 to 4 cups water. Cover, bring to a boil for 2 to 3 minutes, remove from heat; store overnight in refrigerator and finish by simmering 1 to 2 hours the next day.

— One cup soybeans to 3 to 4 cups water. Cover, bring to a boil; boil rapidly 2 to 3 minutes. Remove from heat for 1 hour; add 1 teaspoon salt and other seasonings such as onion, brown sugar or molasses, mustard and flour. Simmer an additional 1 to 2 hours. The texture will be crunchier than other beans.

— For softer soybeans, use a pressure cooker. Be sure to read the instructions on your cooker. Do not fill the cooker more than one-third full to allow venting. Cook at 15 pounds pressure for 30 minutes. Cool under water before removing lid from cooker. Cook with ham or chili meat and chili seasonings.

BEANS AND RICE

1 cup dry soybeans
3 slices bacon, diced
½ cup chopped onion
5 cups water
1 clove garlic, minced
¼-½ tsp. hot pepper sauce
⅛ tsp. thyme
⅛ tsp. rosemary
1½ tsps. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
1 cup uncooked rice

Soak soybeans overnight in 3 cups of water. In large kettle, fry bacon unti crisp, and then remove and reserve bacon bits. Add onion to bacon fat and cook until onion is soft.

Add water, garlic, pepper sauce, thyme, rosemary, salt and pepper to onion, and bring mixture to boil. Drain soaked soybeans and add to boiling mixture. Lower heat and simmer, partially covered, for 2 hours.

Add rice and cook, covered, for 30 minutes more or until soybeans and rice are tender. If necessary, add more water. Just before serving, stir in bacon bits and add additional salt and pepper to taste. Garnish with fresh chopped tomato and chopped parsley, if desired.

Makes 5 servings.

FOUR BEAN SALAD

1 (1 lb.) can red kidney beans, drained
1 (1 lb.) can cut wax beans, drained
1 (1 lb.) can cut green beans, drained
2 cups cooked dry soybeans, drained
1 medium green pepper, chopped
1 medium onion, thinly sliced and separated into rings
½ cup sugar
½ cup vinegar
½ cup salad oil
2 tbsps. chopped parsley
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. dry mustard
½ tsp. dried tarragon leaves, crushed
½ tsp. dried basil leaves, crushed

Combine beans, pepper and onion in bowl. In separate bowl, thoroughly mix together sugar, vinegar, oil, parsley, salt, mustard, tarragon and basil. Pour dressing mixture over vegetables and stir. Cover salad and chill thoroughly. Stir salad occasionally during chilling. Just before serving, stir again. Drain.

Makes 8 servings.

SOYBEAN CHILI

½ lb. ground beef
2 tsps. salt
2 tbsps. chopped onion
2-3 tsps. chili powder
3½ cups canned tomatoes, chopped
1 (6 oz.) can tomato paste
1 tsp. sugar
2 cups cooked dry soybeans, drained

Brown meat with salt in large saucepan. Add onion, chili powder, tomatoes, tomato paste and sugar. Cook, uncovered, over low heat 1 hour, stirring occasionally. Add soybeans and cook 15 minutes.

Chili may be made by omitting meat and adding two-thirds cup dry textured vegetable protein hydrated with two-thirds cup boiling water.

Merlot sparks wine fad

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

The latest red wine fad in the United States is Merlot, a grape variety that is a cousin to Cabernet Sauvignon and is often blended into Cabernet to give it fruit and a vivaciousness Cabernet often lacks.

The public clearly likes this wine. It is being bought and drunk with appreciation by a wide variety of people because it has fruit and intensity, and it is dry and tart and matches well with foods.

It is the fruit that is the prize element of these wines, and it is that very element that appears to be so elusive to retain as the wines age.

I have found, for example, that the best Merlots are not those made 100 percent from Merlot, but are blended with small percentages of Cabernet Sauvignon. The reason, I suspect, is that young Cabernet is a shy, introverted wine compared with the flashiness of Merlot, and that as the Merlot ages, its fruit changes and becomes subdued.

But Cabernet's complexity adds to the richness of the wine, bringing out the herbal qualities that such wines should have in time. (And of course many of the best Cabernets made in California every year are blended with some Merlot.)

I tasted a number of excellent wines made from the Merlot grape recently, and found some very interesting things. The best of the group was probably the 1982 Stag's Leap Wine Cellars ($12), an alluring wine of much lighter color and aroma than others on the table, but a wine well worth airing in a decanter. The youthful aromas were offset by an apparent aroma and taste of an aged wine, an interesting duality.

More youthful and intense was the 1981 Monterey Peninsula Winery Doctor's Reserve ($18), an audacious, rich, cherrylike and pungent wine that displayed less complexity at this stage and demands at least three more years to develop bouquet. The wine is mighty impressive, one of the better made Merlots I have tasted.

The 1982 Robert Keenan ($12.50) was more tightly structured with more complexity and a lot less of the obvious fruit I often find in Merlot. It was an intriguing wine, more like a Cabernet in some respects. The high acid makes me feel it will age.

More exciting, and certainly more floral in aroma, is the 1982 Whitehall Lane, Knight's Valley ($10). It is a more approachable wine, but again I wonder how long it will improve in the bottle.

A good value in Merlot is the attractive 1983 Trentadue Merlot ($8.50), which again offers a nice herbal (Cabernetlike) aroma and is fairly drinkable without additional bottle aging.

Similar in style is the 1982 Lambert Bridge ($9), though it has less "stuffing" and is more open and a bit simple.

The most opulent and stunningly fruity wine of the lot I tried in my latest evaluation was the 1982 Belvedere-Robert Young Merlot ($10), a most intense cherry-cassis aroma and intense jammy fruit making it a must for Merlot lovers.

Even though Merlot has qualities much like a fine Cabernet, the allure of its fruit may be the very element that lulls the buyer into the sense that the wine will age for a long period of time. In fact, I think caution should be taken when buying Merlot.

Of course, that may be simply due to yesterday's styles in wine making. Perhaps today's Merlots do have the staying power to turn into great wines as they age.

Spicy foods: Some like it hot

Copley News Service

When you're talking about what's hot and what's not in food, take the discussion literally. Because spicy foods are the latest trend in cuisine.

The number of fire-breathing food fanatics is ever increasing, regardless of their food preferences. From Chinese to Cajun to Caribbean, the hotter the better.

Some of the most familiar spicy dishes are the creole creations of New Orleans. In the cookbook "New Orleans Recipes," author Mary Moore Bremer says, "If you have no faith in the potency of herbs, don't try creole cooking."

Bremer includes recipes for everything from sauces and stuffings to soups and shellfish.

But spicy doesn't have to be creole. It can, for instance, be Indian, Chinese, Mexican, Middle Eastern, African or Vietnamese. In the cookbook "Hot & Spicy: Unusual, Innovative Recipes From the World's Fiery Cuisines," author Marlena Spieler includes recipes from all these cuisines and more. She rates the recipes for heat level and gives information about special equipment, menu planning and mail-order sources.

Hens basted with orange sauce

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

DINNER FOR TWO
Cornish Hens & Rice
Green Peas & Mushrooms
Pear Turnovers & Coffee

ORANGE CORNISH HENS

2 fresh Cornish hens
½ cup orange juice
¼ cup soy sauce
1 tablespoon light brown sugar
4 25-cent-sized slices fresh gingerroot
1 large clove garlic, peeled and quartered

Tie legs of each hen together and turn back wings. Arrange breast side up, in a shallow pan in which they just fit. Stir together orange juice, soy sauce, brown sugar, gingerroot and garlic; pour over hens. Roast, uncovered, in a preheated 350-degree oven, shaking pan occasionally and basting, until browned and tender — 45 minutes. Remove gingerroot and garlic and serve the thin sauce with the hens and hot cooked rice. Makes 2 large servings.

Picky eaters not in danger of starvation

Copley News Service

Next time you're head-to-head with your child in the war of what to eat, consider this: It may not be as disastrous as you think to let your child win.

So what if all he wants to eat are peanut butter and bologna sandwiches? It's not the nutritional calamity most parents make it out to be, according to Frank Thorp, M.D., associate professor of pediatrics at the University of Chicago Medical Center.

"Many children go through periods where they want the same food at every meal," he said in Self magazine. "This request is normal and usually ends after a few weeks."

If you make a big fuss about it, however, you may find yourself in a power struggle with a young tyrant who discovers that eating habits are a great attention getter, he said.

There are a number of creative, non-aggressive — and slightly dishonest — ways to edge a child toward a balanced diet, according to the article.

To begin, foods that help you "run faster" or "jump higher" certainly sound and taste better to young taste buds than foods that are "good for you."

Another trick to feeding kids is to make the food attractive. Children like colorful foods — try combinations of red, green and orange. They also like exotic shapes, so cookie-cutter sandwiches are much more fun to eat, regardless of the filling. If you make your own bread, dye it your child's favorite color.

The Montjoy of Cooking School for children in Dallas offers the following suggestions for making food more appealing to children: Add a carrot-stick mast and cheese-slice sail to a deviled egg to turn a yucky-sounding snack into a tempting "sailboat" treat. An ordinary celery stick filled with peanut butter or cream cheese becomes a "car" when carrot slices are attached to the celery with toothpicks. Raisins can be placed as "people" riding in the car.

Another suggestion from the school — let children make their own food when possible. The motive? When children make or put something together, they are so proud of it that they can't wait to eat it.

If all else fails, resort to downright deception, according to the Self article. You can doctor up a peanut butter sandwich with a puree of fresh fruit instead of the jelly or stir in a little calcium-rich powdered milk. If your child hates milk, whip up a fruit-laced blender shake. Serve custards and pudding for dessert. If your child hates vegetables, puree them and mix into hamburger meat.

Fettucine dinner for two

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

SUPPER FOR TWO

Peppers, Anchovies & Rolls
Pesto Fettucine & Salad
Fruit & Coffee

JUDY GORMAN'S PESTO FETTUCINE

Generous handful of fresh basil leaves (about eighteen 2½-inch leaves)
¼ cup butter
¼ cup olive oil
¼ cup freshly grated Asiago or Parmesan cheese
¼ cup pine nuts or walnuts
1 garlic clove
¼ teaspooon salt
Generous amount of freshly ground black pepper
½ pound fettucine
½ cup reserved hot pasta cooking water

Wash the basil leaves and pat dry wth paper towels. Combine the butter, olive oil, cheese, nuts, garlic and salt in the container of a processor or blender or in a mortar. Whirl or pound to a paste. Incorporate the basil leaves until the paste takes on a bright green hue. Blend in the pepper. Refrigerate.

Cook the fettuccine in boiling salted water until tender. Remove ½ cup hot pasta water and drain the fettucine. Transfer the cooked fettuccine to a large skillet.

Stir in 2 tablespoons of the hot pasta water into the pesto sauce to lighten it. Pour the remaining water over the fettuccine and toss to coat. Place over medium-low heat, add the pesto sauce and continue tossing until the sauce smoothly coats the pasta.

Candied apples taste of fall

By BETTY WILSON
Hearst News Service

What's autumn without caramel and candy apples? These treats never go out of style, and making them is a fun family project.

EASY CARAMEL APPLES

1 bag (14-ounce) caramels
2 tablespoons water
5 medium size apples
Wooden sticks

Unwrap and place caramels and water in a heavy saucepan. Cook over low heat, stirring frequently until the sauce is smooth. Place a sheet of waxed paper on a cookie sheet. Grease the waxed paper. Wash and dry the apples. Insert a stick into the stem end.

Holding the stick, dip the apples, one at a time, into the hot caramel sauce, tilting the sauce pan until well coated. Scrape extra sauce from the bottom of the apple with a spatula. Place the apple on greased wax paper. Refrigerate. Let stand at room temperature 15 minutes before serving.

To make caramel sauce in a microwave oven, cook on high power 2½ to 3½ minutes, stirring water and caramels after each minute. If the sauce is too thin, let it stand prior to dipping.

CANDY APPLES

6 medium-sized apples
1 cup sugar
¾ cup dark corn syrup
1 cup light cream
2 tablespoons margarine
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Stick wooden skewers into the stem end of the apples. Combine first five ingredients in a saucepan. Cook over low heat until the sugar dissolves. Cook to very hard-ball stage (260 degrees) without stirring. Remove from the heat. Add vanilla. Dip the apples into the syrup, working rapidly. Place upright on a well-greased cookie sheet to cool.

Pineapple tart tasty brunch fare

Pineapple Tart & Coffee

PINEAPPLE TART

1½ cups stirred all-purpose flour
¼-pound stick butter
2 tablespoons plus ⅓ cup sour cream
3 large egg yolks
½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon kirsch
20-ounce can unsweetened chunk pineapple, well drained and dried

In a food processor with the metal blade, evenly distribute 1¼ cups flour, the butter and 2 tablespoons sour cream. Process until mixture forms a ball around blade. Press over bottom and sides of ungreased 9-x1½-inch round cake pan with removable bottom. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until tinged with gold — 20 minutes. Remove tart shell from oven and turn control to 350 degrees. In the food processor, without washing bowl or blade, process together until smooth remaining ¼ cup flour, ⅓ cup sour cream, egg yolks, sugar and kirsch. Arrange pineapple chunks in tart shell and pour egg yolk mixture over pineapple. Bake in 350-degree oven until edge is golden — 45 minutes.

HOW TO BRING OUT THE CLASSROOM WHIZ THAT'S HIDING IN YOUR CHILD.

THIS CAN BE THE BEST YEAR YOUR CHILD EVER HAD IN SCHOOL.

Sylvan Learning Centers are located in major cities across America. We teach reading and math. An independent study by clinical psychologists shows that Sylvan students gain an average of more than one school year in reading or math in the first 36 hours of instruction.

AT SYLVAN YOUR CHILD DOESN'T HAVE TO COMPETE TO LEARN.

There are never more than three students per instructor, so your child receives constant individualized attention. Experienced, certified teachers use innovative teaching methods and modern technology. This, combined with continuous praise, encouragement, motivation and rewards, builds your child's confidence and desire to succeed.

ENROLL YOUR CHILD NOW.

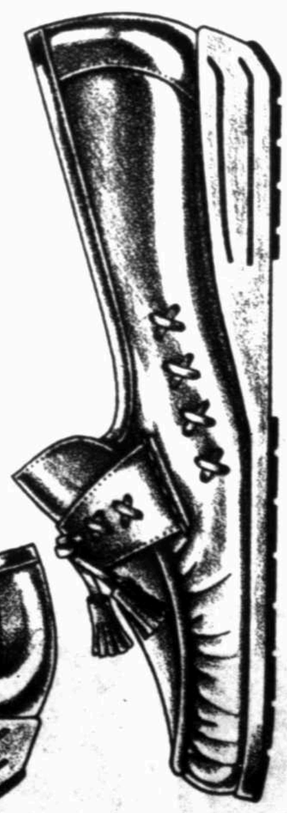

Remember, because we hold the line at just three students per instructor, enrollment is strictly limited. And the sooner your child begins, the sooner you'll see positive results reflected in his classroom work.

Sylvan offers flexible after school hours and requires no contracts or long-term commitments. You simply pay monthly tuition. Don't let this learning opportunity pass your child by.

Officials want to consolidate bonds to save interest

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

City officials went to New York City today to begin the refunding process for $45,580,000 of bonds and certificates of obligation.

If they are successful, the city could save an estimated $1 million in payments, according to Finance Director Troy Gifford.

These bonds were sold when the interest rates were high, said City Manager Jim Brown. By refunding the issues at one time with the lower interest rates, the city in turn gets lower interest rates.

The issues will be grouped into two categories: one will be $22,270,000 of Colorado River Municipal Water District revenue bonds that were sold a few years ago to finance a sewage disposal project 15 miles southeast of the city; and the other will be $23,310,000 in nine general obligation bond issues and one certificate of obligation.

Attending the sessions today and Thursday with members of Standard & Poor's and Moody's bond rating agencies will be Brown, Gifford, Mayor G. Thane Akins, Councilmen Gordon G. Marcum and David Godfrey, Deputy City Manager Fred Poe and O.H. Ivie, general manager of CRMWD in Big Spring.

The two-day session will focus on presenting Midland's financial status to the two agencies for their bond ratings. Gifford said Midland is hoping to retain its AA-1 rating.

"There's been a lot of interest in refunding in the last six months," he said of several local taxing entities which are going through the same process. One reason is that the interest rates appear to be bottoming out, he said. Another is that the proposed tax reform bill in Congress calls for eliminating the refunding procedure. If that is passed, local governments will be prohibited from doing refunding after Jan. 1.

"The city's primary rationale is taking advantage of the economic benefit," said Gifford, "and there's also the simplification of paperwork. It would be cleaning up a plethora of old issues into two.

"But the new issues would not extend the maturity date. We're not stretching out the debt," he said.

If the city is successful at refunding, it wouldn't necessarily translate into lower tax rates. Gifford said the CRMWD bonds are being paid out of the water department revenue and might mean rates wouldn't have to be raised as much over the next several years to pay back the bonds. Six of the 10 general obligation bonds are being paid out of the general revenue sinking fund while three general obligation and one certificate of obligation are being paid off by airport revenues.

Lead manager on the refunding is Shearson/Lehman Brothers, American Express, Inc. Co-managers are Rauscher Pierce Refsnes Inc. and RepublicBank First National Midland.

ECISD trustees OK use of dogs to sniff out drugs

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County school trustees Tuesday night during a special meeting approved the use of specially trained dogs to sniff out illicit drugs and alcohol on school campuses.

The new policy was approved "in order to respond to the drug and alcohol abuse problems in the schools, with an emphasis on prevention and the maintenance of a safe school environment conducive to education."

The policy will allow unannounced visits to schools by dog handlers and their specially trained dogs, accompanied by a school administrator, "to sniff the air in vacant classrooms, other common areas, and around student lockers and automobiles parked on school property."

According to the policy, if a dog "alerts to a particular locker, vehicle, or an item in classrooms or other common areas, it may be searched."

In the case of vehicles parked on school property, if a dog alerts during a search, the student identified as the driver of the vehicle would be asked to unlock the vehicle for an internal inspection. If a student refuses to allow an internal search of a vehicle "the parents shall be notified," the new policy states.

School administrators are specifically prohibited from using dogs for "random sweeps of students" and dogs will not be allowed to make any contact with individual students.

Under the new policy, students are to be notified at the beginning of each school year that lockers, even though assigned to and/or used by a particular student, remain under the jurisdiction of the school district and subject to search at any time and that students will be held responsible for anything found in their lockers. Classrooms may not be searched when occupied by students.

The policy states that "if any prohibited substances are found, the student may be subject to appropriate disciplinary measures" in accordance with ECISD regulations and that parents or guardians shall be notified.

The new ECISD policy also provides for school officials to allow the use of dogs by police officers to search inside school buildings if there is reasonable cause to suspect an intruder has gained unauthorized entry after school hours and during weekends and holidays. The policy requires law enforcement officers to "broadcast a warning in English and Spanish" before dogs can be turned loose to search a specific area and give a suspect sufficient time to surrender.

In the past, Odessa police and sheriff's deputies called to investigate break-ins at schools, where burglary suspects might still be in a building, have not been allowed to turn dogs loose for searches.

In other action Tuesday night, school trustees awarded three separate architectural contracts for the $3.2 million expansion of elementary schools to bring ECISD into compliance with state law that allows only 22 pupils per classroom. The expansion program calls for construction of 46 new classrooms.

"If he'd (client Rex Shanks) have got the death penalty, I wouldn't have been sued. I thought I did a pretty good job defending him."
— Odessa attorney Michael McLeaish

A $250,000 legal malpractice suit by a convicted murderer against the lawyer who defended him was resolved in the lawyer's favor Tuesday by 142nd District Court Judge Pat Baskin.

Rex Shanks claimed Odessa attorney Michael McLeaish had defrauded him of $300 he thought he was paying for a transcript of his 1981 trial, and sought $250,000 in damages for negligence, but Baskin issued a directed verdict denying Shanks' claims.

According to Baskin, Shanks was actually paying for a partial transcript of testimony from the earlier trial of Patty McPeters, who had received a 50-year sentence in December 1980 for arranging to have Shanks murder her estranged husband. Shanks was sentenced to 99 years in March 1981 for the murder of James David McPeters, who was stabbed to death July 28, 1980, on an Interstate 20 service road in west Midland County.

"Obviously there was no fraud involved," Baskin said. "It was simply a regrettable error of communication."

McLeaish took a less sympathetic view of Shanks' suit, claiming his former client was after his malpractice insurance.

Shanks was convicted of killing McPeters in an arrangement with Ms. McPeters to divide the man's insurance money. Because the self-created widow was convicted of her husband's murder, she never received the money from his policy, which was worth $39,000.

After the trial, McLeaish compared Shanks to a dog biting the hand that fed him.

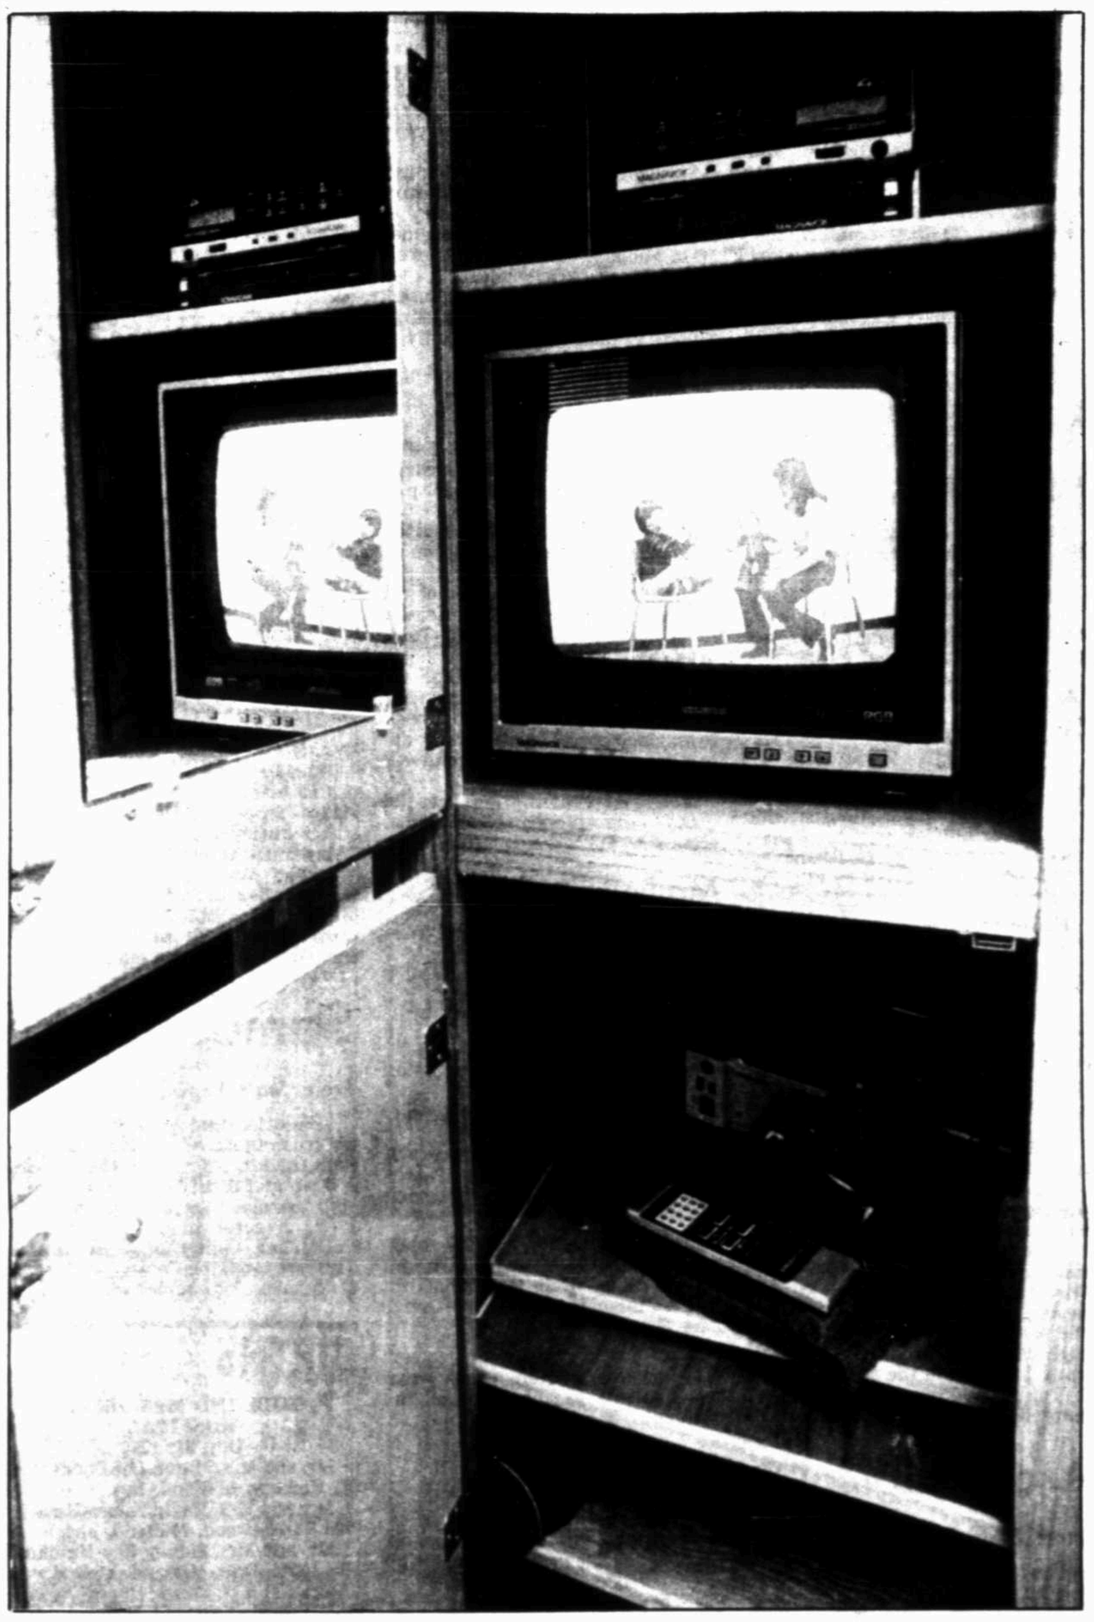

"If he'd have got the death penalty, I wouldn't have been sued," the lawyer said. "I thought I did a pretty good job" defending him.

Shanks was indicted for capital murder, but prosecutors agreed just before the trial to try him instead for murder, which carries a maximum penalty of life in prison.

"I feel I was misled by Mr. McLeaish," Shanks said Tuesday after Baskin's ruling. "I'm going to appeal it. I got 99 years in prison, and still no transcripts."

Shanks still maintains he was innocent, and only stabbed McPeters to defend Ms. McPeters and her 3-year-old son.

Shanks, who was brought from the Texas Department of Corrections facility in Tennessee Colony for the trial, acted as his own lawyer; McLeaish was represented by attorney Jimmy Edwards of Odessa.

Televised testimony

Video equipment to be used in taping the testimonies of children, was donated to the Midland Police Department by the Midland Downtown Lions Club recently. The $1,700 gift, supplied at cost to the club by Folger's Home Entertainment, will be shared by the Midland County Sheriff's Office. A recent state law made it legal to use video tapes of children rather than taking the testimony in open court.

Chairman estimates event made $100,000 for March of Dimes

From Staff Reports

The Eighth Annual Monte Carlo Night fund-raiser for the Midland County Chapter of the March of Dimes last weekend will probably prove to be the organization's most successful benefit ever.

"I would estimate that we'll be grossing somewhere around $130,000," said Merrill Reynolds Jr., local March of Dimes chairman. Although it's still too early to be sure, he said the group was "hopeful that we'll net around $100,000," which would make it the most profitable Monte Carlo Night event yet.

"Monte Carlo Night is our largest fund-raiser," Reynolds said. The Midland County organization is usually among the most financially successful chapters of the March of Dimes, a charitable organization which focuses on fighting birth defects.

"Historically, we have been a front-runner in fund raising for a five-state area," Reynolds noted.

Almost 800 guests attended Monte Carlo Night this year. The event had a "Circus Circus" casino theme with approximately 140 volunteers manning such attractions as a roulette wheel, craps table and blackjack game.

Like its famous Las Vegas counterpart, Midland's "Circus Circus," set in the Atrium at ClayDesta National Bank, also featured carnival music and circus-style acts for entertainment, Reynolds said.

Guests paid $125 per couple and received $75 worth of chips to use at the gaming tables. Chips could only be redeemed for prizes, not for cash.

There was also an auction to further supplement the heated financial action. A couple of the more offbeat auction items were two health care packages — pediatrician Dr. Debbie Reese offered a full year of hospital and office care for one child and obstetrician Dr. Jay Mendez offered a complete package of all prenatal care, delivery, C-section if needed, and anesthesia.

Among the other goods auctioned were a mink jacket, scuba lessons, a fishing trip to New Mexico, jewelry, a professional skateboard, Cabbage Patch dolls and a catered dinner for 30 people.

Part of the profits from the benefit will go to the national organization and the rest is used locally.

Previous local donations by the March of Dimes have included equipment to the new maternity wing of Midland Memorial Hospital and to MMH's pediatric ward.

Co-chairmen for the 1985 Monte Carlo Night were Stephens Harper and Roger David. Other officers of the Midland County Chapter of the March of Dimes are Martha Bernatis, vice chairman, Sammy Morrison, treasurer, and Mimi Langdon, secretary. Leann Wilson is the group's executive director.

VIEWPOINT

Many Midlanders satisfied with Reagan's performance

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

On Nov. 4, 1984, President Reagan was elected to his second term in office. On the first anniversary of his second term, Reagan has continued to have high public opinion ratings nationwide.

Locally, 14 Midlanders were randomly selected and asked if they approve of the president's performance after one year into his second term. Ten out of 14 said they liked the job Reagan has done so far; four didn't.

Several people interviewed said they liked the strong image Reagan gives the United States and projects to other nations.

Sarah Crowe, 3203 Durant, said she liked that public image.

"He denotes strength. The country feels secure with a strong leader," she said.

Richard Luttrell, 3511 Andrews Highway, said he also liked Reagan's strong image.

"Recently he showed world terrorists he would respond...He's trying to show the world we're not going to put up with it."

Luttrell also said that interest rates and unemployment seemed to have gone down under Reagan's second term in office.

Vince Ewing, 3801 Fair Circle, said he liked Reagan's "stern" hand in foreign affairs.

"I think he's handled the foreign policy the only way I think it can be handled. With a stern hand," Ewing said.

Joyce Jezek, 2801 S. Midkiff, said she liked Reagan's reaction to the Achille Lauro ship hijacking.

"I liked the way he handled the crisis over the boat," she said.

Richard Luttrell

Joyce Jezek

Gerardo Martinez

Kelly Fuller, Route 10, said Reagan is the best president she's seen in a long time.

"He hasn't raised taxes for one. He's doing better than any president that I have known since '75," she said.

Sheri Hobbs, 2504 Dartmouth, said she liked Reagan because he has maintained peace.

"Our country is not fighting on foreign ground anywhere. We're holding our own in the arms race," she said.

Charles Godfrey, who didn't want his street address published, had three reasons for approving of Reagan's performance.

"One, I like our reduction in taxes that we've had under him. Two, our business climate is as good as it can be, and three, our image overseas is better than it was than under Carter, Ford or anyone," he said.

But others said they were not satisfied with Reagan's performance.

Gerardo Martinez, 1503 E. Walnut, said Reagan spends too much on the military and not enough on people.

"I think he's spending too much money within the budget of making bombs and all that," he said.

Gordon Jenner, 2300 N. A St., had the same criticism. Jenner said Reagan spends too much for national defense and has had deficit spending under his term. Jenner also said he didn't like Reagan's foreign policies toward Central America.

Charles Mason, 1605 E. Kentucky, said he doesn't like Reagan's performance because, "...the economy's so much worse now that he's in there."

Velma Brooks, 5266 N.W. Loop 250, said she wasn't satisfied with Reagan because "he's keeping me in the poor farm."

DEATHS

Survivors include, two daughters, Marie Spiars Sargent of Houston and Patricia Spiars Luedecke of Georgetown; one sister, Louise Kayard; one brother, Jack Bolton of Longview and one grandson.

Memorial contributions can be made to the American Heart Association, P.O. Box 20448, Houston, 77225.

Mollie Hill

Mollie Hill of Midland died Tuesday night at a local hospital.

Services are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Court: Counties not liable for constables' actions

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Texas counties cannot always be held accountable for bad judgment shown by constables, a divided federal appeals court has ruled in a suit filed by a motorist who was shot at and jailed by a San Jacinto County constable in 1980.

The 2-1 ruling by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Tuesday said San Jacinto County shouldn't have to pay half of the $150,000 in damages awarded the motorist, Ronald Rhode, because of the run-in he had with Constable Rathell Denson.

The Circuit otherwise let stand the U.S. District Court jury's award of $150,000 in actual damages and $3,000 in punitive damages against Denson, who it said committed a "tortuous and unconstitutional act..."

The 5th Circuit, in reviewing the case, said Rhode was driving along a San Jacinto County highway on Dec. 13, 1980, and passed Denson's car on the road's right shoulder.

The court said Denson chased Rhode down, but Rhode — not knowing Denson was a constable — sped away when he saw Denson get out of his car with his gun drawn.

Denson resumed the chase, the 5th Circuit panel said, firing several times at Rhode's car, which ran off the road and hit a tree.

Then, the court said, Rhode "ran to a nearby house, hysterically explaining that someone was trying to kill him."

The owners of the house, identified only as "the Gladdens," got the sheriff's office to send a deputy, who arrested Rhode for evading arrest and passing on the wrong side of the road, the court said.

"Threatening him along the way, Denson drove Rhode to the county jail, placed him in a cell without medical attention, and left him to wash the blood from his face with water from the toilet," said the 5th Circuit.

San Jacinto County appealed — but Denson did not — when a U.S. District Court jury in Houston ordered it to pay half of the $150,000 in actual damages it awarded Rhode.

The county disclaimed any responsibility, saying Denson was enforcing a state law at the time in a separate and distinct precinct in which his elective authority was absolute.

Man charged with threatening to kill Ector deputy

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Ector County sheriff's deputies this morning filed a charge of retaliation against a 44-year-old man who is free on bond in connection with earlier charges of aggravated sexual assault and indecency with children.

A probable cause affidavit filed in justice of the peace court accuses the man of threatening to kill sheriff's Lt. Jerry Davis during a conversation with his estranged wife. Davis said about mid-morning he expected the man to be re-arrested on the new charge sometime today. Deputy Sheriff Troy Davis said Justice of the Peace Jimmy Harris issued a warrant for the arrest based on the information contained in the probable cause affidavit.

The man was earlier released from the Ector County jail on bonds totalling $41,500 after being arraigned on two charges of aggravated sexual assault of a child and four counts of indecency with a child. The charges involved three girls, ages, 11, 13 and 14.

The threat against Davis and several other unnamed sheriff's deputies was allegedly made Monday night after an Odessa television station broadcast a report stating the sexual assault and indecency with children charges involved "three teenaged boys."

In the conversation with his estranged wife late Monday night, the man accused Davis and the other deputies involved in his earlier arrests of "telling lies" about him.

In an unrelated incident, a 34-year-old Odessa man was charged Tuesday on 11 counts of aggravated sexual assault of a child and one count of indecency with a child. All of the charges involved an 11-year-old. The incidents are alleged to have occurred during the past two years.

Peace Justice Virgil Lumpee set bonds totalling $120,000 for Earl Ray Jackson, 1012 S. Kelly, and he remained in the Ector County jail in lieu of bond at last report.

Parenting, candy making among MC short courses

From Staff Reports

The Midland College Department of Continuing Education will offer four short courses beginning Monday.

"CMA: Internal Reporting and Analysis" will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. on Tuesday through Dec. 3. The course will include principal financial statements and its primary purpose, strategic planning and operating projections, theory and development of standard costs and ratio analysis and statement interpretation. The course fee is $19.

"Effective Parenting" will meet from 7 to 8:30 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday through Dec. 10. Co-sponsored by Midland College and Family Services of Midland, this course is designed to assist parents in learning more effective coping patterns for teen-agers. Training will include discussion in building communication skills, self esteem and determining discipline for teen-agers. Materials will be provided at the first class meeting. The class is limited to 25 students and the fee is $23 including the cost of materials.

"Christmas Candy Making" will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. on Wednesday. The course will demonstrate how to make molded candies such as chocolate covered cherries, peanut butter cups and turtles. Methods for painting candies also will be discussed.

"Gingerbread House" will meet from 6 to 10 p.m. Nov. 13 and Dec. 3. Students will be presented a list of recipes and items to be brought to the second class meeting. The course fee is $12.

For information or to register, contact the Department of Continuing Education located in the MC Administration Building, or call 684-7851, extensions 147 or 216.

Samaritan Counseling Center offers couples' workshop

From Staff Reports

"We often find ourselves trapped by frustrations which block or prevent the kind of contact that makes a deep and satisfying love relationship possible," says Norman Godfrey, director of the Samaritan Counseling Center of West Texas. This weekend, the Center is offering a workshop for couples who want to learn tools designed to increase their communication skills with one another. The workshop will be held at the Center, 202 Pilot Road, Terminal, from 7 to 9 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

"Emphasis will be placed on why we choose the type of partner we do, along with sharing tools to work through frustrations in a love relationship," Godfrey says.

The "Love or Illusion" workshop will be conducted by Dr. Pat Ponder, associate professor, Department of Counseling and Guidance, East Texas State University, Commerce. Ms. Ponder also serves as a part-time therapist at the Center for Relationship Therapy, Dallas. The "Love or Illusion" workshops were created by Dr. Harville Hendrix, founder of the Center for Relationship Therapy.

Ms. Ponder has conducted previous "Love or Illusion" workshops for singles at the Center. This is the first time she has presented the couples workshop in the Midland-Odessa area.

Fee for the workshop is $100 per couple. For registration information call Debbie Roberts, 563-4144.

Driver, passenger hurt in accident

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A one-car accident early today critically injured the driver of the vehicle and a young woman passenger remained in surgery at mid-morning.

Police spokesman Rusty Baker said the car driven by Kenneth Wayne Long, 18, 311 W. 47th St., was headed east in the outside lane of the 1800 block of West 8th Street at a high rate of speed when he apparently hit a dip in the road, lost control of the 1976 Buick and it slammed into a light pole at the intersection of West 8th Street and West County Road.

Long and Jackaline C. Talbot, 20, 1502 E. 42nd St., were taken to Medical Center Hospital shortly after the 2:40 a.m. accident.

Long was listed in critical condition in the MCH intensive care unit this morning, while Ms. Talbot was still undergoing surgery around 9 a.m.

According to police reports neither Long nor Ms. Talbot were wearing seatbelts at the time of the accident.

Archeological Society to meet

From Staff Reports

The Midland Archeological Society will hold its monthly meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Marion Blakemore Planetarium.

James Walker, southwest regional director of the Archaeological Conservancy in Sante Fe, N.M., will give a slide presentation focusing on the problems of vandalism and looting on privately owned archaeological sites and some of the solutions that have been employed over the years.

Included in the presentation will be recommendations for landowners or concerned citizens to preserve existing archaeological resources. The Archaeological Conservancy's program of protection and the new Texas projects will also be discussed.

Walker has had extensive experience in archaeological field work and cultural resource management, including five years with the School of American Research in Santa Fe, N.M., as an excavator, laboratory director and director of the contract archaeology program.

The public is invited to attend the meeting.

Woman reports home burglarized

From Staff Reports

A Midland woman reported the loss of about $1,540 worth of property in a Monday burglary of her home, according to Sheriff's Office reports.

Debi Smith, Route 1, Box 97HH, reported finding a $700 microwave oven, a $500 videotape recorder, rolls of coins worth $250 and other items missing when she returned to her home on Horse Shoe Lane Monday afternoon, reports said.

A 1984 Chevrolet Silverado valued at $12,700 was reported stolen by Mike Morrison of Goldsmith.

Morrison told sheriff's deputies he had a flat tire while driving on FM 1788 near Midland Regional Airport about 9:30 a.m. Sunday. He walked to the airport to call for help, and when he returned the pickup was missing, reports said.

KUFO-FM changed to KODM-FM

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — KUFO-FM radio has changed its call letters with the sale of the station to East-West Broadcasting. The station, located at 98 on the dial, will be known as KODM-FM.

The change became effective Tuesday, according to a spokesman with the station.

The station had been owned by Stream Broadcasting. The new owners are Steve Horowitz of New York and Bill Gruber of San Diego.

Also changing will be the programming format. Instead of album-oriented rock, the station will change to adult contemporary, according to the spokesman. "The format was changed to serve a more broad-based population. The owners said the previous format was excellent but was too limited."

The only employee that will be leaving is the program director, Mark Lapidas, the spokesman said.

Seminar slated for people who want to quit smoking

From Staff Reports

People who are planning to quit smoking can get some support at a Five-Day Plan to Stop Smoking seminar slated Nov. 11-15 from 7 to 9 p.m. in Room 232 of Midland College's new Health Science Building.

A spokesman said 80 to 90 percent of the people attending the seminar have stopped smoking initially and a study shows that more than half of these are not smoking a year later. The program has been offered as a community service by the Seventh-day Adventist Church for nearly 20 years with more than 16 million graduates world-wide.

The video seminar is being presented by Roger Morton, M.S.P.H., a hospital health educator who has personally supported more than 7,000 smokers toward success in quitting. Each of the five sessions shares motivational insights plus suggestions on how to best handle the physical and psychological withdrawal symptoms.

Local facilitators will be Dr. John Barroso, a Midland dentist, Mike Mahoney, a respiratory therapy student at Midland College, and Jerry Oster, pastor of the Midland Seventh-day Adventist Church.

The seminar is free. For more information call 694-7382 or 697-7015.

Water deliveries for October up

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — Despite one of the coolest and wettest Octobers on record for this area, water deliveries by the Colorado River Municipal Water District were up. This was due primarily to San Angelo taking 92,262,000 gallons more than compared to October 1984.

Total deliveries for October were 1,236,329,120 gallons, up 10.14 percent. Of this, 1,061,446,800 gallons went to municipal customers, up 5.93 percent; 174,902,390 gallons to oilfield users, up 51.73 percent.

Big Spring used 192,641,000 gallons, down 5.97 percent. Midland, 276,045,000 gallons, down 11.06 percent; Odessa, 422,035,000 gallons, up 2.5 percent. Snyder, 68,413,000 gallons, up 1.10 percent.

Austin students, parents, praise science academy

AUSTIN (AP) — If the Science Academy of Austin is a success with the students, school director John Friedrick figures he won't have to work hard at recruiting.

"If the program is good, I don't need to recruit students. You will recruit the students," Friedrick told a ninth-grade class last week. "If the students don't think the program is good, we don't deserve to exist."

The academy, a magnet school emphasizing science, math and computer courses, opened in September.

Located at LBJ High in northeast Austin, the academy is a cooperative effort of the Austin Independent School District, the University of Texas and the business community. It was placed at LBJ to boost dwindling enrollment and to increase the number of white students at the school, officials said.

The academy's curriculum emphasizes science, math and computers, and class periods in these subject areas are two hours long instead of one.

Last week, students praised the classes while making a recuriting film that Friedrick will show to 4,000 Austin junior high students.

Under the direction of classmate-interviewers Kim Jones and J.C. Hernandez, the students said more challenging classes, a sense of accomplishment and good teachers were the academy's big drawing cards.

"When I was in junior high, the sound of three hours of homework was a turn-off," student Donovan Scott said into the video camera. "But usually it isn't that hard. But you have to be ready to work. It's not a place to goof off."

"It's more difficult, but it's more interesting," said James Baker.

"The Science Academy has the best teachers in the world," added Shea Trimble.

Three academy teachers have been named the best teachers in Austin in past years, and one of them recently was chosen state teacher of the year.

Parents share the students' enthusiasm about the school.

"We couldn't be happier with the science academy," said Suzanne Franka, whose son Chris is a ninth-grader.

"We had considered putting Chris in (a private school). But he is getting a private school education here for the money we pay as taxpayers," she said.

Friedrick described the academy as "demanding, but not tough, because the teachers we have are excellent communicators" who are willing to spend extra time with students to make certain they learn.

Friedrick said the academy is a success by several measures.

Grades are high, a $250,000 federal grant was received last week to buy additional equipment, teachers and students are already applying for next year, and a community and business support is strong.

While 39 percent of secondary students in the Austin school district failed at least once course during the first six-week grading period this year, only 16 percent of Science Academy students received an F, Friedrick said.

Although students must pass a qualifying test to enter, he said the academy is not exclusively for gifted students or a "nerd university."

Evidence that the academy is for more than just bookworms can be found on the football field. Eleven of the 183 academy students play football, and 25 play in the LBJ band. Nearly all academy students participate in extracurricular activities, school officials said.

Study: Unemployment coverage drops

Texas has highest number of jobless not getting benefits

STATE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Only about one in six jobless Texans was receiving unemployment benefits in October, according to a study by an independent research group.

The Center on Budget and Policy Priorities said unemployment coverage nationwide dropped to an all-time low last month, with 74.2 percent of the nation's jobless going without benefits.

According to the group's figures, of the 605,000 unemployed in Texas, about 500,000 were not getting benefits, a percentage of 83.7.

"Here we are in the midst of a strong recovery, so we hear, and yet the number of unemployed workers who are not getting any benefits is as high now as it was in the depths of the recession when unemployment was 10.7 percent," said the center's research director, John Bickerman. "For the people who are out there slipping through the safety net, it hasn't gotten any better."

The national unemployment rate in October was 7.1 percent. Texas' rate was 8.1 percent.

John Kruse of the Texas Employment Commission said for the week of Oct. 19, about 1.5 percent of the state's workforce, or about 120,000 workers, were covered by unemployment insurance.

"It varies from state to state how universal coverage is," he said. "In Texas, for instance, very little agricultural work is covered" though it is in other states.

The center said it had only figures for the 11 states with the biggest populations. Among that group, Massachusetts had the biggest percentage of unemployed getting benefits, about 50 percent.

The highest unemployment rate among the 11 states was Michigan's, at 10.3 percent. Michigan was next-highest to Texas in the percent of jobless people going without benefits, 82.6 percent.

California had the largest number of unemployed, 923,000. Texas was second.

Bickerman attributed the reduction in benefit recipients to budget cutbacks and continued high unemployment.

"One (reason) certainly is policy," he said.

DA says Geter's suit doesn't surprise him

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade said he is not surprised by a civil suit filed by Lenell Geter and five other black engineers seeking $8.2 million and accusing police and prosecutors of malicious prosecution.

"I don't know anything about it. I heard they were going to sue," Wade said, adding that he had not seen the 51-page lawsuit but knew it had been planned for about a year. "It doesn't worry me. There's not any basis for it."

Geter and other black engineers were investigated for a series of armed robberies in 1982.

Geter and Anthony Williams were charged with armed robbery, and Geter was convicted but none of the other plaintiffs — Richard McCants, Rodney McCullogh, Amos Norman and Goerge McCormick — was convicted of a crime.

The federal lawsuit filed here Monday names the cities of Greenville, Garland, Plano and Balch Springs and members of their police departments as defendants.

Also named are Wade and members of his staff who prosecuted Geter.

Plano Police Chief James McCarley declined to discuss the lawsuit in detail but said, "We feel there have been no improprieties on our agency's part."

Geter served more than 15 months of a life sentence on a robbery conviction before his case was reopened December 1983.

An informant initially implicated Geter in the robbery of a fast-food restaurant in Greenville in August 1982.

> "I don't know anything about it (lawsuit). I heard they were going to sue. It doesn't worry me. There's not any basis for it."
> — DA Henry Wade

Based on information provided by Greenville police, the lawsuit states, Geter later was implicated in robberies in Garland and Plano and was convicted of robbing a fast-food restaurant in Balch Springs.

Wade dropped the charge in March 1984 amid Geter's allegations that authorities conducted a shoddy investigation and arrested him because of racial prejudice.

Williams was charged with robbing a 7-Eleven in Garland but was acquitted in November 1983.

The other plaintiffs say in the civil suit that they were investigated without probable cause by officials working on the cases involving Geter and Williams.

Baptists give 'crumbs' to missions

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Texas Baptists attending their 100th-anniversary convention have received a scolding from a missionary who claims its members have isolated themselves from the poor.

Sam Cannata, a missionary-in-residence, claimed in a preconvention meeting before Texas Baptist Men that Southern Baptists' latest "million-dollar fad" is to build big buildings while giving "crumbs from the table" to missions.

Delegates to the Baptist General Convention of Texas should have elections today.

The convention is meeting in San Antonio this week.

UT astronomers confirm ring of dust around star

AUSTIN (AP) — University of Texas astronomers announced Tuesday that they recently made observations which confirm the existence of a ring of dust around a newly formed star.

Such dust clouds are believed to be the precursors to planetary systems or binary star systems, said Paul M. Harvey, an assistant astronomy professor.

Although earlier observations have suggested that disk-like clouds may exist around young stars, this is the first observation of such a dust cloud in which the shape has been seen clearly, the astronomers said.

The observations from the NASA Kuiper Airborne Observatory were made by Harvey, research scientist Daniel F. Lester, and Marshall Joy, a graduate student.

Harvey said the discovery of a hole in the center of the dust means the star is beginning to separate from the surrounding cloud, much as the sun may have when our solar system was born.

Baby to be in foster home

AUSTIN (AP) — An infant found on Halloween, "Baby Pumpkin," is headed for a foster home, officials say.

Susan Blose, a spokeswoman for the Texas Department of Human Services, said the foster family that will take the baby has two adopted children and a child of their own.

The baby isn't eligible for adoption because legally he still belongs to his natural parents, Ms. Blose said.

Austin police are continuing their search for the infant's mother, who authorities said may have fled to Nevada. Efforts to locate the boy's father also have been unsuccessful.

Ms. Blose said state law requires the human services department and police to continue searching for the parents. If the parents or their relatives cannot be located, or if they are found and do not want the child, a hearing will be scheduled before a judge. The judge can then terminate their rights to the infant, she said.

TDA to push Texas goobers

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Department of Agriculture and the Texas Peanut Producers Board have launched a 20-city tour through 13 states to promote Texas peanuts.

"We're not merely talking goobers, we're talking America's finest goobers, and this kind of special marketing push by TDA will result in a lot more than 'peanuts' for the Texas economy," Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said Tuesday.

Texas ranks fourth in the nation in peanut production, producing more than 362 million pounds. But Hightower said the state is nearing the top spot in marketing and promotion of the commodity.

Among cities to get the Texas peanut promotion are Chicago, Seattle, New Orleans, Denver and several Texas cities.

Dallas lawmaker to retire

DALLAS (AP) — State Rep. Lee Jackson says he will not seek re-election next year but is not retiring from politics altogether.

The 35-year-old Republican and Dallas County co-chairman of the Kent Hance gubernatorial campaign said on Tuesday he was retiring from the House because of family and financial reasons. But Jackson did not rule out a future political race.

"I still like the issues in the Legislature as much as I did in 1976 when I first ran," said Jackson. "The Constitution of Texas deliberately designed this to be a citizen legislature, instead of a professional legislature. It was designed to be a civic duty rather than a career."

Jackson, who represents an area of northeast Dallas, said he will return to building up his management consulting business after finishing his fifth term.

Land donated to hospital

DALLAS (AP) — Children's Medical Center of Dallas on Tuesday announced the donation of 14 acres with an estimated value of $6 million from developer Robert Folsom and his wife, Margaret, officials said.

The land north of the city will be used for construction of a 100-bed, not-for-profit hospital satellite facility and physicians' office building, the hospital said in a news release.

Children's Medical Center North will offer primary and secondary care to children from birth through age 18, the statement said.

Alleged cab robber injured

AUSTIN (AP) — A man suspected of robbing a taxi driver was seriously injured as he fled and ran into the path of a car on Interstate 35, police said.

According to police reports Tuesday, the injured man is suspected of robbing American Cab Co. driver William Simonds at knife point about 10:30 p.m. Monday.

After the driver was robbed, police said, the man ran onto the highway and was run down, police said.

The man, who wasn't carrying identification, was in serious condition at an Austin hospital. Both of his legs were broken and he received internal injuries, authorities said.

Two other men also are suspected in the robbery, according to police reports.

Group wants policy altered

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas Faculty Senate has reiterated opposition to university investment in South Africa, asking regents to revise or justify the policy of seeking the best return on holdings regardless of ethical issues such as apartheid.

"A maximum rate of return is not the only thing that is important to the university," said Charles C. Holt, professor of management, in advocating revision of the policy. "If we are serious about apartheid, we really ought to do something about it," he said.

The faculty group Monday approved a resolution calling on UT regents to revise or justify the policy of seeking the maximum rate of return on university investments when ethical questions arise.

The $2.9 billion Permanent University Fund includes more than $770 million worth of stock in companies doing business in South Africa.

Victorious Whitmire: 'It's time to move forward'

Kathy Whitmire

HOUSTON (AP) — Kathy Whitmire will serve a third term as mayor of the nation's fourth-largest city after defeating former long-time mayor Louie Welch in a campaign that was dominated by the issue of the disease AIDS.

Mrs. Whitmire won another two-year term with 200,788 votes, or 58.88 percent, to Welch's 138,552, or 40.63 percent, in a non-partisan field that included six candidates.

"I believe it's time to put differences behind us and to move forward," Mrs. Whitmire, 39, said in her victory statement. "We sent a message that Houston has made great progress, that we're working to make this city the best city to live, to work, to do business and to raise families."

Welch, 66, had insisted the acceptance of homosexuals in the city and increased number of AIDS cases reported by the city health department dissuaded businesses and families from living in Houston. Public health, he said repeatedly, was the top issue in the campaign.

Mrs. Whitmire said her administration was following the advice of experts who urged public education programs about the dangers of AIDS.

Welch's candidacy, spurred by his effort leading to the defeat of a gay rights referendum in January, also prompted eight political newcomers calling themselves the Straight Slate to seek eight City Council seats. Their campaign was based solely on the issue that public health rules should be adopted to protect residents from AIDS.

Although none of the Straight Slate candidates won, they drew enough support to force two council races into runoffs because the leading vote-getters failed to attract more than 50 percent of the ballots.

Anthony Hall, the councilman who drew up the gay rights ordinance that subsequently failed, was a victim of the Straight Slate, pulling only 45 percent of the vote. He'll face businessman Dick Hite, who had 32 percent, in a runoff forced by the 16.6 percent of the vote gained by Straight Slate candidate O.J. Striegler. Striegler finished third.

In another council race, Straight Slate candidate Jim Kennedy made the runoff against incumbent Judson Robinson, who received 49.8 percent of the vote. Kennedy drew 29.6 percent.

Welch, who retired as mayor in 1974 after five terms and then headed the Houston Chamber of Commerce, blamed his defeat on a voter turnout lower than he expected.

"We have known all along that with any count (turnout) less than 400,000 it would be very difficult to win this race," Welch said.

"We're going to be able for the first time to do things without having to answer to any living soul and without having any media following us," he said, standing next to his wife.

Welch's comment appeared to be a bitterness reference to the news media's handling of his gaffe on a television broadcast.

In an incident that gave national notoriety to his campaign, Welch said on live television two weeks ago that one way to curtail AIDS in Houston would be to "shoot the queers." Unbeknownst to him, a microphone he was wearing was still on and the comment was broadcast live.

Rick Wilson, a political analyst from Rice University, said Welch spent too much time on the gay issue.

"The campaign was characterized as a negative, mixed bag of issues that was not tied together too well," Wilson said.

As for the televised gaffe, "He was as much as much to blame as the media," the analyst said. "After all, it was his slip."

Beaumont mayor, coucilman survive recall vote

BEAUMONT (AP) — City voters overlooked a $20 million investment loss, a budget crunch that forced layoffs and sharp criticism of a city manager to trounce a proposed recall of their mayor and a city councilman.

Of the 22,700 ballots cast Tuesday, 64.5 percent opposed recalling Mayor William E. Neild, while 62.7 percent favored keeping at-large Councilman Wayne Turner in his seat.

In a year filled with crises and controversies stemming from the city's $20 million loss to Fort Lauderdale, Fla.-based ESM Government Securities in March, voters sent a message of confidence to elected city officials, Neild said.

Neild called the defeat of all seven city propositions "a victory for the citizens who believed in their city government."

"This city can resolve any divisive issues," Neild said. "It's a significant win, not just a little one."

Recall proponent Dorothy Collier said that although her group, Citizens United for Responsible Government, failed to oust Neild and Turner, the group created a "forum for different views."

"I'm disappointed," she said, "but we'll continue to contribute in a constructive way."

The group issued a terse statement Tuesday night predicting the "outcome of the election has given both the present council and future councils permission to run roughshod over both the city charter and state laws which govern local government actions."

Doris Smith, an officer of Service Employees International Union Local 706 that spearheaded another Neild recall movement, said the effort might have failed because it was perceived as simply a union issue.

Neild, 48, twice elected to office by 74- and 81-percent margins, already has announced he will not seek reelection when his term expires in April 1986.

The attacks against him came from different segments of the community. Ms. Smith filed the recall petitions at the time the union was striking the Schlesinger Geriatric Center, complaining Neild had been "insensitive to the plight of Beaumont workers."

Neild, who survived the recall by a 14,649 to 8,052 vote, said he could not inject himself into the union dispute because the National Labor Relations Board was investigating a decertification petition that could disband the union.

CURG said, meanwhile, that Neild's and Turner's support of City Manager Karl Nollenberger and the economic repercussions of his investing $20 million of the city's funds in ESM prompted the recall.

Collier later said the group planned to drop its recall after learning of Nollenberger's resignation. But they renewed it when the City Council voted 5-1 to hire Nollenberger as a consultant through Dec. 31 at $6,000 a month.

Turner, 36, said he was more concerned about the $40,000 salary cap for municipal workers and the $4.10 minimum wage proposals than his own recall, which he weathered in a 14,077 to 8,380 vote.

Recall of LaMarque mayor, councilmen fails

LaMARQUE (AP) — A move to recall the mayor and four City Council members, spurred by disagreements over budget-cutting measures, failed Tuesday by a 3-2 margin.

Voters decided that Mayor Jack Nash, Mayor Pro Tem James Klyng and councilmen Jack Neuner, Wally Deats and Carol Shipman can keep their offices.

With about 1,600 ballots cast from among LaMarque's 8,000 registered voters, the totals were 936 to 693 against recalling Nash; Klyng, 931 to 668; Deats, 919 to 667; Shipman, 941 to 658; and Neuner 941 to 662.

The coastal city's recall election was forced by members of Citizens For Fair Governement, who disagreed with the council's fiscal policies and budget cutting measures.

The group also challenged what they said was the forced retirement of Assistant Police Chief J.L. Campbell and the combining of the city's fire chief and fire marshal positions.

Following the victory, Nash said he and the council will work to "bring the community back together."

Fluoridation issue fails in San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Voters soundly rejected a proposal to fluoridate the city's water because they resented municipal leaders trying to decide the issue for them, the leader of the anti-fluoride forces says.

The issue failed Tuesday 42,213 votes to 38,947 — a margin of 52 percent to 48 percent — making San Antonio the largest city in the nation behind Los Angeles that does not fluoridate its water.

C.A. Stubbs, who led a drive to collect more than 40,000 signatures forcing Tuesday's referendum, said San Antonio citizens "felt they were being taken advantage of."

The City Council voted in May to increase the fluoridation content to almost triple the present natural level, to .8 parts per million, which proponents say would drastically reduce tooth decay. The election was forced after Stubbs' petition drive.

"The people have spoken and we have to live with that result," said Mayor Henry Cisneros, who campaigned for the fluoride measure.

Cisneros said only time will tell if the referendum's failure was a political defeat for him. "In politics, you win some and lose some," he said. "I'm not the type of person who rolls over and takes a defeat."

City Councilwoman Helen Dutmer, who strongly opposed fluoridation, said the outcome "was not a vote against your mayor. It is merely a fluoride issue and people governing their bodies," she said.

The pro-fluoride forces, who advertised heavily on television, raised at least $80,000 for their campaign. Cisneros appeared on some of the television spots, urging voters to "vote with me."

Stubbs said his organization raised only $10,000 and relied heavily on fliers delivered door-to-door. He said he opposed the issue primarily for its cost, estimated at $703,000 initially and $200,000 annually thereafter.

El Paso voters pass juvenile detention center

EL PASO (AP) — El Paso will get a new $6.5 million juvenile detention center, but the sales tax — and thus the city's transportation system — will stay the same.

El Paso voters narrowly rejected a three-quarter-cent increase in the local sales tax to finance an expanded bus system, but they strongly endorsed selling bonds to finance the juvenile facility.

With only 15 percent of registered voters casting ballots, the transit issue lost by just 149 votes, 12,896 to 12,747. It was the second defeat of a transit measure in four years.

The detention facility fared far better, passing by 67.8 percent, or a vote of 19,038 to 9,024.

The transportation issue would have established a transit authority to operate a bus system. The proposal entailed adding new routes, expanding service and adding two major bus terminals, park-and-ride lots and expanded express routes.

In April, the City Council created an interim authority board to study the feasibility of a regional transit authority for the county. The board voted in September to propose an increase in the current sales tax to 5⅛ percent.

In 1981, voters rejected a proposal for a transit authority financed by a half-cent sales tax increase.

The new juvenile facility will replace the 35-year-old El Paso County Juvenile Detention Center.

Dentists' dream?

Equine dentist Ed Merian of Whitinsville, Mass., tries but can't match the "sharpness' of the smile on Pasquale, a thoroughbred at Eagle Rock Stables. Merian files the horse's teeth to maintain proper chewing surfaces and give the equine his pointy grin.

Soviet sailor with slashed wrists truly wanted to return home

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Soviet sailor, exhausted by two desperate attempts to swim ashore from his merchant ship, withdrew his request for asylum and convinced U.S. authorities — despite his slashed wrists — that the change of heart was genuine, the Reagan administration told a congressional panel.

A frightened Miroslav Medvid was returned to his freighter in the Mississippi River last week for a third time, U.S. officials said Tuesday, even though they never learned what events occcured while he was in Soviet hands between visits to U.S. soil.

As members of the Senate Judiciary immigration subcommittee listened to State and Justice officials describe their handling of the incident, they reacted with disbelief.

They demanded to know why U.S. authorities, faced with Medvid's cut wrists, sent the Ukrainian sailor back to his ship near New Orleans, while failing to give him blood and urine tests to see if he was drugged.

Why, senators asked, were officials not more cautious when the ship jumper brought with him a sealed bottle containing his personal papers?

William W. Woessner, acting assistant secretary of state for European and Canadian affairs, testified the captain of the grain ship Marshal Koniev told U.S. officials that Medvid had cut his own wrists.

That occurred after U.S. immigration officials determined Medvid was not a candidate for political asylum, and twice returned him to the ship at Reserve, La., 25 miles upstream from New Orleans.

Meanwhile, in New Orleans Tuesday, lawyers asked a federal judge to order Medvid removed from the Soviet freighter Marshal Koniev to let him meet with three Ohio women who say they may be relatives. The temporary restraining order was sought as part of a $10 million civil rights lawsuit that claimed Medvid had been drugged or tortured into saying he wanted to return home.

Two courts in Washington, D.C., already have denied requests by Ukrainian-American groups to hold the ship.

Medvid had jumped into the Mississippi twice, and indicated in an Oct. 24 interview with Immigration and Naturalization officials that he wanted to defect, according to a translator who assisted the interview.

Woessner said that after Medvid left the ship last week for a third time — taken off by federal authorities — American doctors who examined him at a U.S. military facility determined his physical condition was not life-threatening and that he was mentally competent.

Repeatedly, during a 24-hour stay, the sailor asserted his desire to return home, according to Woessner and INS Commissioner Alan C. Nelson. Medvid signed a statement to that effect, and there was no other choice but to send him back, they said.

Asked whether there was any indication of a suicide attempt, Woessner replied, "I don't know."

"Probably the guy tried to commit suicide," said Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H. "Was he, a few hours later, in a position to make a rational decision?"

No, said Humphrey, who was joined by 38 senators in a letter to President Reagan, asking that Medvid be transferred to a neutral country.

NATION IN BRIEF

Balanced-budget proposal swings scales of Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican-led Senate, backed by President Reagan, repulsed Democratic attempts to protect the poor, elderly and veterans from spending cuts as the lawmakers braced for further high-pressure talks over a balanced-budget proposal.

"We think rather than seek items to be excluded from deficit reduction and budget cuts, we should pursue a course that makes a reduction across the board, assuming that it is equitable and fair to all," White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Tuesday.

But the House was ready to insist on those protections as the two sides prepared to try again to resolve their differences before the Treasury faces default.

The balanced-budget language has been attached to urgently needed legislation to raise the national debt above $2 trillion. The Treasury has reached the current limit of $1.824 trillion, and Treasury officials predict the government will default Nov. 14 without action by Congress.

The Senate was expected today to pass a revised version of the balanced-budget plan it first approved last month. It is sponsored by Sens. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, Warren Rudman, R-N.H., and Ernest Hollings, R-S.C.,

The so-called Gramm-Rudman bill would require Congress and the president to meet gradually smaller deficit targets each year, beginning with $180 billion in the current fiscal year and ending with zero in fiscal 1991. If spending legislation misses the deficit targets, automatic spending cuts administered by the president would take effect.

International crew returning

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Challenger's international crew was headed back to Earth today at the end of a week-long West German research mission viewed as an important step toward European cooperation in an American space station planned for the 1990's.

Five Americans, two West Germans and a Dutchman packed up their experiments aboard the shuttle and prepared for landing on a dry lakebed at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., at 12:44 p.m. EST.

On landing, commander Henry Hartsfield was to test a new nose-wheel steering system by twice guiding the craft about 20 feet off the runway centerline and back again. Success would clear the way for shuttles to land once more on the harder, shorter and narrower concrete runway at the Kennedy Space Center here.

The shuttles originally were designed to be steered by applying brakes on the landing gear, but a landing at Kennedy in April resulted in tire and brake damage, and NASA scheduled all subsequent touchdowns at Edwards until the new nose-wheel steering system could be qualified.

The astronauts were returning with a rich harvest of information gathered from 76 scientific experiments that studied the effects of weightlessness on materials processing, crystal growth, biological samples and human physiology.

Abortion aid for China blocked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms says that by delaying Senate confirmation of Winston Lord as new U.S. ambassador to China he wrested a pledge from President Reagan that no U.S. funds will be used to finance or encourage abortions overseas.

Hours after what Helms described as a lengthy conversation with the president at the White House on Tuesday, the North Carolina Republican went to the Senate floor to claim victory and permitted a roll call vote that confirmed the veteran diplomat, 87-7.

Helms, who had been at odds with Lord over the nominee's views on abortion, voted "no" after accusing Lord of "orchestrating a snowstorm of stories and broadcasts implying the senator from North Carolina was doing something unreasonable."

"I can tell Mr. Lord and the news media, I'm beyond your reach," Helms declared. "And as long as I am in the Senate of the United States I'm going to do whatever I can to prevent this nation from getting into the business of endorsing or financing the termination of innocent human lives."

Helms, who had invoked an unwritten Senate rule that allows any member to block final nomination votes on the Senate floor, said he will continue to delay action to block nominations he opposes or to produce policies he favors.

NTSB probes Midwest crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — The investigation into the crash of a Midwest Express jetliner at Milwaukee in September is focusing increasingly on whether the flight crew should have been able to recover from the loss of one engine and fly the DC-9 to safety.

Documents released by the National Transportation Safety Board on Tuesday gave little indication as to what corrective action the pilot of Flight 105 took when he discovered the right engine had broken apart seconds after liftoff.

But a transcript of the tape from the cockpit voice recorder showed the pilot had at least 10 seconds from the time of the "loud clunk" of the engine breaking up to when the plane indicated it was about to stall, then veered sharply to the right and crashed in the woods.

All 31 people aboard the plane, bound from Milwaukee to Atlanta, were killed in the crash Sept. 6 about a half minute after lifting off from General Mitchell Field.
