Leading Chinese daily lauds hard-line tactics

BEIJING (AP) — The leading national daily today praised the hard-line tactics of senior leader Deng Xiaoping and appealed for "unity of thinking" in a sign that China's rulers intend to stamp out all political dissent.

In the first news conference for foreign reporters since the crackdown on pro-democracy protesters began, an army general first said soldiers fired on unarmed civilians, then denied they shot anyone.

The government previously said troops did not fire a single shot in Tiananmen Square, which soldiers and tanks cleared of thousands of protesters. The government has not commented on shooting elsewhere in Beijing.

Gen. Li Zhiyun said troops were forced to use violence to enter the city and clear Tiananmen because "people who didn't know the truth" blocked them on the outskirts of Beijing.

"But still there were some thugs, they (were) still provocative to the troops. At this time, some of the soldiers in our troops directed their fire into the square," he said.

At another point Li said of the deaths: "It is not from any instances from the soldiers directing their guns at the people. This incident never happened within the area of Beijing."

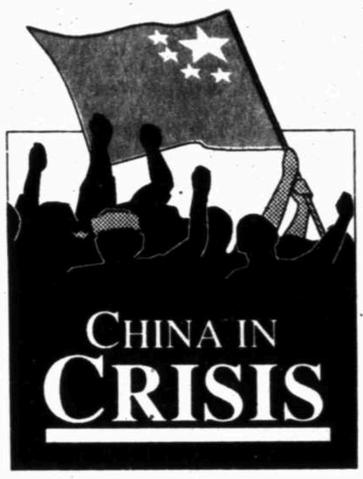

He did not clarify the contradiction.

The call for unity by the Communist Party's People's Daily came as the state moved to expunge opposition through arrests, death sentences and a barrage of pro-government propaganda.

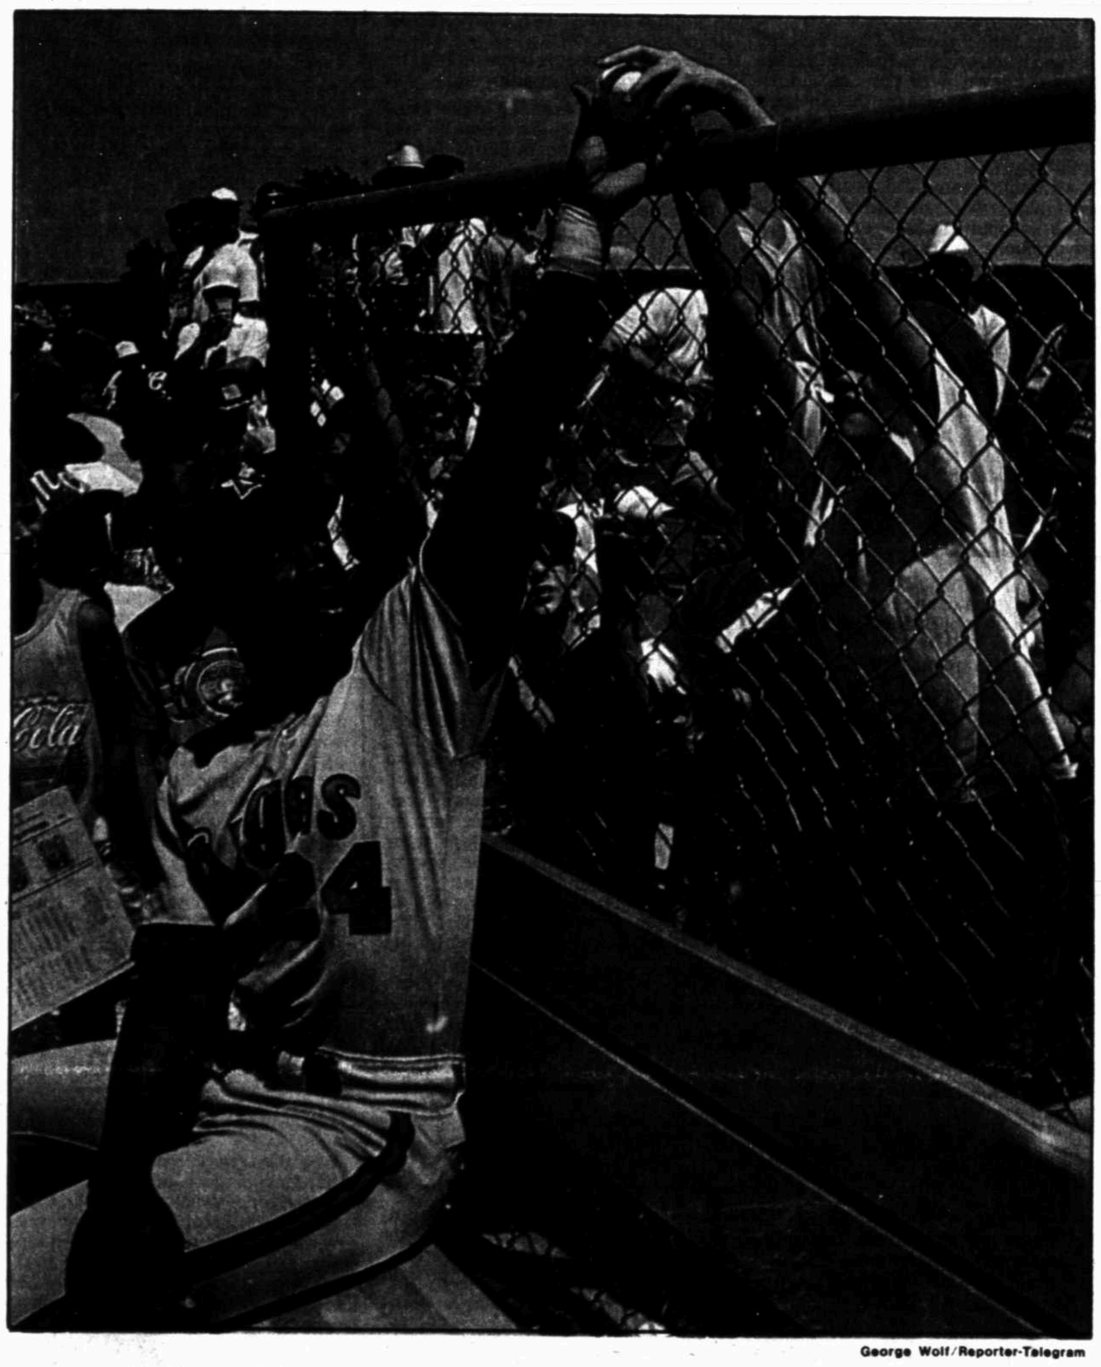

On Thursday, a Shanghai court sentenced three men to death for setting fire to a train during an anti-government riot. They were the first to receive the death sentence of more than 1,000 people arrested since nationwide protests broke out following the June 3-4 military assault on Beijing demonstrators.

The People's Daily editorial praised the "keen insight and scientific judgment" of the 84-year-old Deng in his June 9 address to military officers involved in the attack in the capital.

S&L reform hailed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration is hailing the House version of savings and loan bailout legislation as a major victory for taxpayers after the resounding defeat of an attempt to weaken President Bush's key reform proposal.

Shortly before 11 p.m. Thursday, the House capped a 13-hour session by voting 320-97 to solve the worst financial crisis since the Depression with the most expensive government bailout in history. It will cost, according to the congressional General Accounting Office, $285 billion over 30 years — $157 billion of that from taxpayers.

The legislation also includes a series of what Bush has labeled "never again" provisions. In what the president identified as the heart of his proposal, it requires S&L owners to risk more of their own money in a capital cushion between S&L losses and the government deposit insurance fund.

"The American taxpayers won a major victory today when the House of Representatives voted for strong, tangible capital requirements for the nation's savings and loans," Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady said in a statement.

"We applaud the House leadership for moving this bill rapidly through the House," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

The House action paves the way for a conference early next month with the Senate, which passed its S&L bill in April, and for final enactment before Congress goes on vacation in August.

The sharpest conflict between the two chambers will likely be on their funding plans. The Senate would allow Bush to keep some S&L spending out of the budget deficit through a plan to sell bonds through a new quasi-private agency.

Holding her 5-year-old miniature Yorkshire terrier, Bentley, is Sheila Hawkins of Spartanburg, S.C. The dog was held hostage for five days while four persons refused to settle for $200 reward.

Four arrested for holding woman's terrier hostage

SPARTANBURG, S.C. (AP) — Sheila Hawkins knew something was amiss when Bentley, her 5-year-old miniature Yorkshire terrier, turned up missing.

Ms. Hawkins said she knew from the beginning that her dog had not just run away. "I was just hoping whoever had him wouldn't mistreat him," she said.

Ronnie Blackwell, 18, found his neighbor's missing dog and later was arrested with three others and charged with conspiracy to commit extortion. Blackwell allegedly tried to force the owner to up the reward to $200 and set up a drop at a gas station.

But his intent wasn't malicious, officials said.

Blackwell told police he had grown fond of the shaggy little dog he said he found near the Spartanburg Library last week. After inquiring about how much the dog's owner was prepared to pay for its return, he apparently decided to keep the dog.

"He said he had become really attached to the dog and felt if he kept upping the price the lady would just think the dog wasn't worth it," said Detective Audrey McNair of the Spartanburg Police Department.

Bentley had been missing since June 8. Three days later, Ms. Hawkins received a call from a man who said he had the dog and would bring him to her house for the $50 reward she had promised on fliers, authorities said.

He never arrived.

Instead, a woman called three different times Sunday and told Ms. Hawkins, "We have the dog," and that the $50 reward was not enough, police said.

During one phone call, a man said the captors wanted $200, according to police.

Ms. Hawkins agreed to the price, but the dog was not returned.

High court's ruling a 'step back' for victims rights, prosecutor says

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A U.S. Supreme Court ruling limiting use of crime victim statements will not affect local cases, but is a "step back" for victims rights advocates, according to a prosecutor.

Earlier this week, the high court ruled that a jury choosing between the death penalty and a life sentence for a convicted murderer generally may not be told about the victim's personal characteristics.

The justices said a South Carolina murderer unfairly was sentenced to death because a prosecutor told jurors the victim was a religious, community minded person.

The opinion, written by William J. Brennan Jr., relied heavily on the court's 1987 decision in which "victim impact statements" were barred from sentencing trials in which the death penalty is a possibility.

The impact statements are used throughout Texas, and by the Midland District Attorney's office in every case of a crime against a person — such as robbery or sexual assault — according to Olivia Wilson, the assistant coordinator of the Victim Assistance Program.

"It (the ruling) probably will not affect local cases, but we consider it a step back from the gains we hope would be made informing the jury of the full picture of the criminal offense," District Attorney Al Schorre said.

Under Texas law, juries are not permitted to read the victim impact statements, but judges are allowed to view them when considering sentencing, Schorre said.

But the prosecutor said the ruling likely will delay any change in the law which would allow the juries to see the statements, the prosecutor said.

"This is not entirely new," District Attorney Al Schorre said of the ruling's effect. "The Texas courts have already made some similar rulings, basically prohibiting a jury from learning the impact the crime had on the victim's family."

Schorre said victim impact statements are a factor in sentences only when the judge is asked to decide the sentence.

If the individual receives a prison term, the victim impact statement is also sent to the Department of Corrections, and is used for "parole consideration," Schorre noted.

In the South Carolina case, Demetrious Gathers was convicted of a 1986 killing in a Charleston city park. Richard Haynes, 32, was beaten and stabbed to death.

At Gathers' sentencing trial, a state prosecutor told jurors about Haynes', including the fact various religious items and a voter registration card were found at the murder scene.

"We know from the proof that ... Haynes was a religious person ... (he) believed in this community. He took part," the prosecutor said.

Odessa studying revenue alternatives

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Cobwebs are starting to spread from this city's 48.6-cent ad valorem tax rate, and City Manager Bill Brown thinks that is just fine.

And with an increase in city user-fees, the repeal of a utility sales tax exemption and a small dip into reserves, that tax rate should celebrate its fifth birthday next month.

City officials here will submit a preliminary budget and effective tax rate in mid-to-late July.

"The taxpayer is going to have enough burden," Brown said pointing out Ector County's ad valorem tax rate is expected to skyrocket 10-12-cents per $100 of valuation next year.

"Until we have exhausted other mechanisms ... I am absolutely without a doubt against raising the city's tax rate," Brown said Tuesday.

Instead, results of an 18-month-old study investigating alternative revenue sources will be reflected in Odessa's 1989-90 budget.

Brown believes populations who use certain services exclusively should pay the brunt of their availability.

Indicative of that philosophy is the expected increase in building permits, taxi cab permits, parks and recreation building use fees, accident report copies and engineering design fees.

The Odessa City Council Tuesday also repealed a 1978 1-cent sales tax on residential electric and gas bills that should generate an additional $325,000 annually beginning Oct. 1.

The theme of Brown's budgetary process this season has been "pressure off the tax rate.

"If we can continue to maintain operations without depending on the ad valorem tax rate during this downturn ... then it will help to enhance available money for business.

"I have personally felt like everything keys off business," explained Brown, a 10-year veteran of city of Houston government.

Odessa Mayor Don Carter concurred Tuesday with Brown's strong stance against raising taxes.

"The city is in good financial shape, but there is some housecleaning that needs to be done," the mayor said.

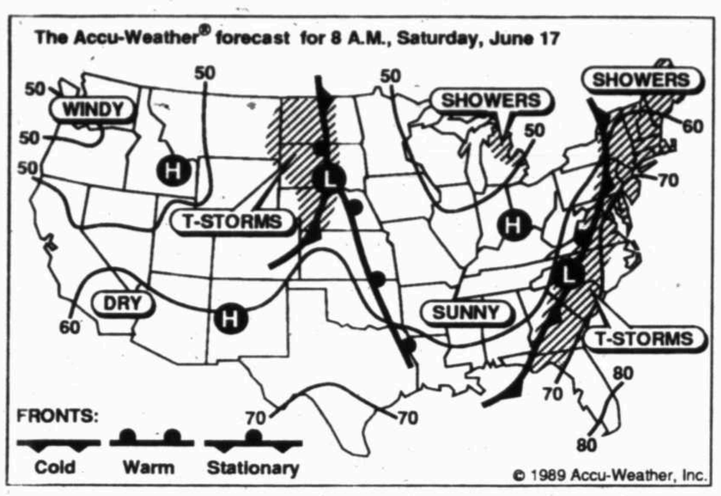

"As an elected official, I would be hard-pressed to support a tax increase."

And with the facts in front of him, that's a hard comment to make.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Fair skies, low in mid-60s forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Skies will be fair tonight with the low in the middle 60s and winds out of the south at 5-10 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Saturday will be partly cloudy and warmer with the high reaching into the middle 90s and winds from the southwest at 10-15 mph.

Thursday's high of 85 was 21 degrees cooler than the record high of 106 set for that date in 1960. The overnight low of 58 was 10 degrees warmer than the record low of 48 set for this date in 1981.

STATE

Most of Texas will have clear skies and conditions suitable for drying out from the recent torrential rainfall, but a few isolated thunderstorms are possible tonight in the Panhandle.

Forecasts are calling for clear skies and pleasant, mostly unseasonably cool temperatures for the first part of the weekend.

Lows tonight will be in the 60s and 70s.

Highs Saturday will be in the 80s and 90s, ranging upward to around the 100-degree in extreme West Texas and in southwestern portions of South Texas.

A ridge of high pressure of the central portion of the nation kept skies clear across most of Texas early today. There were a few high, thin clouds over the state at dawn, but skies were mostly clear.

Temperatures were unseasonably cool during the pre-dawn hours, mostly in the 50s and 60s except in the Rio Grande plains, the coastal bend and in extreme West Texas where readings were in the 70s. Extremes ranged from 51 at Marfa to 78 at Corpus Christi.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 58 at Amarillo, 57 at Wichita Falls and Fort Worth, 59 at Waco, 61 at Austin and San antonio, 59 at Houston, 66 at Brownsville, 61 at San Angelo, 59 at Lubbock, 62 at Midland and 71 at El Paso.

NATION

Powerful thunderstorms thrashed much of the eastern seaboard, downing trees and power lines and spawning a tornado that injured seven people in Pennsylvania.

The storms developed Thursday evening in warm, moist air that stretched from Florida to Pennsylvania.

Rain ends; Texas floodwaters remain

Associated Press

The rain is gone, but the flooding is expected to remain for several days across a vast area of North Texas and East Texas.

Rain-soaked areas of the state were rapidly drying out because of bright sunshine, light breezes and lower humidity, but several roads and highways remained closed because of the heavy rainfall.

State troopers and Kaufman County sheriff's officials searched Thursday for an 86-year-old man who was in a car that was swept into a swollen creek near Terrell. The man, Tom Stodghill, is presumed to be the sixth victim of the latest series of thunderstorms and floods.

Five people died in flood-related incidents since Tuesday, including Stodghill's wife and two young brothers, who were swept away in a creek in Dallas' Oak Cliff neighborhood.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency added 11 counties to the list of those eligible for federal funds to cover losses from heavy storms in the state since May 4. But victims who do not live in one of the 61 counties now covered by the declaration can also seek assistance by calling the agency's disaster office in Longview, a spokeswoman said.

"FEMA has asked people from anywhere in the state to call us," said spokeswoman Mary Ficklen. She said if a person applies from a county not included in the declaration and a county judge asks state officials for inclusion of the county, FEMA will review the applicant.

Added on Thursday were Archer, Clay, Hale, Knox, Marion, Rockwall, Sabine, Taylor, Titus and Trinity counties.

FEMA on Thursday also established a second relief program, which will provide assistance to local governments and non-profit organizations in the disaster area.

The agency's state coordinating officer, Ed Laundy, said such organizations include nursing homes, day care centers, volunteer fire departments and some types of non-profit schools.

Ms. Ficklen said the office has been receiving between 175 and 200 calls daily from people seeking assistance.

Meanwhile, levels in many of the state's flooded rivers had crested, National Weather Service officials said.

River flood warnings were issued for the Sabine River basin, which was expected to crest in several locations today. The Neches River is expected to crest Saturday.

The Trinity River crested in the Dallas-Fort Worth area Wednesday and has started to slowly fall. Officials said it would remain above flood stage in many parts of the metropolitan area until next week.

A handful of major roads were temporarily closed due to high water in five counties, the Department of Public Safety said.

CHINA

The government variously says 200 to 300 people, mostly soldiers, were killed. Unofficial Chinese and Western intelligence reports say troops fired on unarmed crowds and killed up to 3,000.

The editorial said the rebellion in Beijing has been put down but "some people still harbor ideological hangups.

"Therefore, it is necessary to seek unity of thinking covering the whole party and the whole people by seriously studying the important speech made by Deng Xiaoping."

The paper said China must abide by "one center and two basic points." The center, it said, is the party and the people. It defined the two points as principles of communist rule and socialism in addition to continued open-door and reform policies.

The editorial indicated the ruling party will no longer tolerate criticism of its policies, as it did to a limited extent in the months before the crackdown.

In his June 9 speech, Deng said the Beijing protesters rallied under the slogans "down with the Communist Party" and "overturn the socialist system." He said their goal was to establish a Western-style bourgeois republic.

Although many did praise Western democracy, their stated goals were to open a dialogue with the government, guarantee a free press, and end corruption among officials.

The official media has let loose a flurry of reports condemning the protesters and defending the party line.

In its report on the three Shanghai men, the official Xinhua News Agency said they had "frenziedly smashed the railway cars and set fire to police motorcycles and the cars" of a train during the June 6 attack.

Crowds burned the train and injured 21 security officials who tried to put out the blaze after it ran through a protest barricade, killing six people.

Seven more people were on trial in the case, Shanghai radio said.

Most of those arrested have been workers, but the government has also issued all-point bulletins for 21 student leaders. Only three of those have been arrested or reported to authorities.

The official news agency Xinhua on Thursday again criticized the U.S.-funded Voice of America. "The VOA has daily concocted and spread rumors to incite disturbances and rebellions," it said.

On Wednesday, China ordered the expulsion of VOA Beijing bureau chief Alan Pessin and Associated Press reporter John Pomfret. It accused them of violating martial law rules, which banned reporting of the protests.

S&L

But the House would swell the deficit by $44 billion, increasing pressure on the administration to agree to a tax increase, in a bid to cut long-term interest costs.

On capital, the House would require S&L owners to risk $3 in "real money" capital for every $100 in lending, while the Senate standard is $1.50.

Despite heavy industry lobbying, the House, on a 326-94 vote, rejected an amendment offered by Rep. Henry J. Hyde, R-Ill., which would have given 241 S&Ls a chance, through an administrative appeal, to win exemption from new capital requirements.

Hyde was arguing on behalf of institutions currently benefiting from an accounting break known as "supervisory good will." Regulators granted the $19.7 billion break to institutions, many of them in Illinois, that took ailing institutions off the government's hands in the early 1980s. Supervisory good will allows many of them to operate without risking any of their owners' money.

Hyde said the government should keep its word, but his critics said the policy change was warranted because of the huge bill to taxpayers.

Earlier this week, Hyde appeared to have a good chance of success, but Thursday morning Bush threatened to veto the bill if House members adopted the amendment.

"There should be no mistake. This matter goes to the very heart of my determination to clean up the abuses of the past among the savings and loans, about which every voter is entitled to be outraged," the president wrote.

Both House and Senate versions of the S&L bill reorganize the bureaucracy to give the administration greater control over S&L regulators. And, they provide more money — the House, $75 million, and the Senate, $50 million — to detect and prosecute fraud in financial institutions.

Among the other differences between the two chambers:

—The House, unlike the Senate, requires the industry-owned Federal Home Loan Banks to spend $75 million a year, rising to $150 million by 1995, to subsidize housing for the poor. It barely defeated, by a 208-204 vote, an attempt by Rep. Steve Bartlett, R-Texas, to delete the subsidy program, which was written by Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, chairman of the House Banking Committee.

—By a 214-200 vote, the House also adopted anti-discrimination provisions sponsored by Rep. Joseph Kennedy, D-Mass., and Gonzalez forcing banks and thrifts to disclose their record of serving the poor, minorities and women.

—The Senate permits S&Ls to hold 11 percent of their assets in high-yield, high-risk debt instruments known as junk bonds, more for state-chartered S&Ls if they raise extra capital. However, the House voted 303-114 to adopt an amendment by Rep. Byron L. Dorgan, D-N.D., banning thrifts from holding junk bonds and giving those that already own the bonds two years to sell them.

76-year-old heads out to sea again

AVALON, N.J. (AP) — Stefan Szwarnowski, the oldest person to sail solo across the Atlantic Ocean, is heading out to sea again.

The 76-year-old Polish native left this New Jersey seashore community recently to return home the same way he came, bound for England aboard the 24-foot Tawny Pipit. He has no radio transmitter.

ODESSA

A $30 million drop in the $1.73 billion tax base will negate an estimated $300,000 to $400,000 in city of Odessa tax revenues next year.

The elimination of motorcycles from the Odessa Police Department has decreased traffic citation revenues, and an additional "flat" economy in some 60-70 line items doesn't help either, Brown added.

However, the 11 city positions eliminated the past four years, privitization of major street engineering jobs and Odessa's monopoly on solid waste removal contracts creates some financial leeway.

In fact, some new services are being budgeted for the coming year, the city manager said.

"Odessa used to be designated one of the most beautiful cities in the U.S.," Brown said. He suspects things got messy during the most recent boom.

City Council upgraded a trash ordinance that subsequently called for the construction of new "trash transfer stations" hidden from the naked eye, but capable of holding old sofas or water heaters citizens want to dump.

"That may cost some money initially, but the upside is it pays off. Property values may go up."

The city of Odessa's 850 employees also received a 3 percent across the board raise last year and insurance and retirement benefits for which the city is responsible have increased, he said.

Brown expects next year's budget to hover in the area of last year's $42 million tab and expects this will be the first year he's had to draw on the $8.8 million reserve coffer ("no more than $500,000") to make ends meet.

"It's not magic. It's management. You can do three things. Cut expenditures to meet revenues, raise revenues to meet expenditures and we choose to do both," Brown said.

"It's not that we're heroes. We run it like a business."

RULING

The South Carolina Supreme Court said those statements deprived Gathers of a fair sentencing trial, and this week's decision upheld that ruling.

"The content of the various papers the victim happened to be carrying when he was attacked was purely fortuitous, and cannot provide any information relevant to the defendant's moral culpability," Brennan wrote.

Despite the court's ruling, victim impact statements are valuable tools, according to Ms. Wilson.

"We use them in any violent crime," Ms. Wilson said. "It (the statement) contains questions that gives the victim an opportunity to describe in his own words."

In Midland County, victims — and in cases of murder, family members — are able to provide information about the trauma of a particular crime, including depression, nightmares, anxiety, job stress, and any needed counseling.

The statement also solicits information about financial burdens, such as medical bills, caused by the crime.

"We really push them," Ms. Wilson said, lamenting the court's ruling. "We feel like these statements are the biggest breakthrough we have had in a long time."

Florida has water ills

Associated Press

The Northeast's rains this spring have filled reservoirs, making the possibility of a summer drought remote, but Florida residents have been asked to conserve water due to sparse rainfall.

Officials have placed all of Florida except the Panhandle under some water-use restrictions. Most restrictions are voluntary, but many south and central areas of the state have banned lawn watering.

In the Northeast, an unusually dry winter brought drought emergency regulations. But since then many areas received record amounts of rain.

Now the reservoirs are nearly full.

"It just goes to show that weather is a fickle thing," said Christopher Roberts of the Delaware River Basin Commission on Thursday. "One month you're in a drought, the next month you have rivers and streams overflowing their banks. It's just a whimsical element you're dealing with."

A drought warning issued Jan. 16 for 7 million people in Delaware, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania who depend on the Delaware River basin ended May 12, thanks to the spring rain.

New York City declared a drought emergency in March after a dry winter dropped reservoirs to 55 percent capacity. City reservoirs are now at 97.1 percent capacity and the city has ended the drought emergency.

Second storm cuts more power

WASHINGTON (AP) — An area still recovering from a devastating thunderstorm was hit by showers and high winds for a second day in a row, hampering efforts to clean up trees and leaving an additional 22,000 homes without power in the nation's capital and suburban Maryland.

The second storm swept through the area late Thursday afternoon, creating havoc with rush-hour commuters for the second time in 24 hours. To make matters worse, dozens of traffic signals were out as a result of Wednesday's storm, which caused an estimated 150,000 power outages and felled hundred of trees.

Virginia Electric Power Co. spokeswoman Deborah Tompkins said an estimated 12,600 homes in the northern section of the state were without power at the height of the storm, around 6 p.m.

Tom Welle, a Potomac Electric Co. spokesman, said the second storm, not as strong as the first, hampered efforts to repair the damage caused by the initial thundershower, which he said was the most disruptive in the company's 93-year history.

"We have to rebuild almost all of the electrical system from scratch," Welle said. "At this rate, some people will probably be without power through the weekend."

Pepco was giving out dry ice at two locations for people who owned freezers filled with food that was thawing.

Even before the new storm, hundreds of trees still blocked side streets and were wrapped around felled power lines. City and county police directed traffic at key intersections where traffic lights were malfunctioning.

Frenchman's sheepdog escapes

CHICAGO (AP) — When Korsair leaped from a cart at O'Hare International Airport, "sit," "stay," and "heel" fell on deaf ears.

The 3-year-old Belgian sheepdog, a champion show dog valued as high as $50,000, escaped and is still missing, and he understands only French.

Korsair's owner, Frenchman Daniel Paul, said Thursday that when he transferred Monday from a flight from San Francisco to a flight to Lansing, Mich., he thought his best friend was safely with him.

But United Airlines spokesman Rob Doughty said that at some point during the transfer the cage door flew open and Korsair leaped from the cart and bounded across airplane taxi lanes into a field.

United personnel chased the dog in their cargo carts until they became bogged down in the rain-soaked field. They cornered Korsair once, but the dog snarled and bared its teeth before escaping, Doughty said.

DOG

During one of the phone calls Sunday, a woman identified herself as a mother whose son had found the dog and was very attached to him. Ms. McNair said the caller was Blackwell's girlfriend, Rebecca Entsminger, 18, who was also charged with conspiracy to commit extortion.

A relative of one of the captors saw a television news report Tuesday about the missing dog and apparently convinced the four to return it, authorities said. They called Ms. Hawkins to say they would give Bentley back that night.

Ms. Hawkins got a call Tuesday night telling her to go to a local gasoline station to get her dog.

Ms. McNair, who was at Ms. Hawkins' home at the time of the call, rode with her to the station, where three suspects were arrested and the dog was recovered in good condition. Miss Entsminger was later arrested when she came to the police station.

Also charged with the misdemeanor conspiracy offense were Blackwell's sister, Theresa Blackwell, 19, and Kipling Messer, 19.

They have been released on a $2,000 bond each, Ms. McNair said.

Teen-ager tells Congress about gun-toting child drug dealers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The teen-ager sat gingerly at the witness table and spoke so softly that the congressmen had trouble hearing her. But there was nothing gentle or innocent in the tale she told of children carrying guns to carry out the drug trade.

"You can get guns on the street just about as easily as you can get candy," Detra J. of the District of Columbia, whose last name was not revealed, told the House Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families on Thursday.

"Everyone knows how to get a gun if they want one. The guns range from .22s to 9 millimeters to Uzis."

Generally, she said, the youngsters get their guns from the drug traffickers for whom they work.

"If they hustle for a person — he's a runner or a hit man — he's getting a gun to carry out the orders the man has given him," said Detra, 18.

The hearing on children and guns occurred one day after Florida Gov. Bob Martinez asked state lawmakers for a law that would punish people who leave firearms within reach of children.

Pediatrician Katherine K. Christoffel of Chicago, representing the American Academy of Pediatrics, painted a grim picture for the panel:

"Ten American children ages 18 and under are killed every day in handgun suicides, homicides and accidents," she said. "Three or four times as many are wounded. One of every 25 admissions to American pediatric trauma centers is due to gunshot wounds. In 1987, gun injuries were the fourth-leading cause of unintentional-injury death for children ages 14 and under. For inner-city black adolescent boys and young men, firearm injuries are the leading cause of death."

But Gary Kleck, an associate professor of criminology at Florida State University, said accidental shootings of innocent bystanders "are extremely rare," that the involvement of guns in youth suicide has fallen since 1979, and that fatal gun accidents involving youths, as well as for all people, have been declining for 20 years.

Nevertheless, Detra said she knows eight people who have been shot to death, and more who have been wounded. Of those killed, she said, "Half had guns and were in a gunfight, and half of them were innocent bystanders."

Drug-related killings have given Washington the nation's highest per capita murder rate. So far this year, 202 murders have been committed in the District, compared to 133 at this time last year. Most have been drug-related, police say.

The lure of dramatic monetary rewards in the drug trade inspires youngsters to get involved even when they see friends killed, said Detra.

Firebomb killing of baby leads to legal questions on juveniles

GADSDEN, Ala. (AP) — A teen-ager charged in the firebombing death of a baby has become a focus of disputes about racial justice, the death penalty for juveniles and whether Washington is imposing its legal standards on Alabama.

The District of Columbia Court of Appeals is expected to decide soon whether Alabama can extradite the black 17-year-old, known in court documents only as O.M. because of his juvenile status.

Prosecutors deny race has anything to do with the matter, and the baby's relatives and an NAACP official agree.

"It doesn't make any difference to me what color somebody is, black, white or polka dot," said District Attorney Jimmy Hedgespeth. "What a lot of folks are not saying is that the victim of this crime was black. There is no place on my docket for white or black. It doesn't matter to me."

O.M. was charged with murder and arson in the death of 14-month-old Tamel Jackson. The baby died in a kitchen blaze on the night of May 12, 1988, after a plastic jug of gasoline was tossed into his apartment at a housing project where a relative had been involved in a fight.

The teen-ager's grandmother testified at a court hearing in Washington that the white authorities in Etowah County, a mostly rural area that includes the steel city of Gadsden, have a longstanding vendetta against her family. The youth's father and uncle died in police custody, she said.

Washington police captured the boy in December only after his grandmother, Alyce Guice Thomas, was jailed for 82 days last summer by an Etowah County judge for failing to produce the teen-ager in court. She said he disappeared the night of the fire, after police released him to her custody. The jailing set off small civil rights demonstrations in Gadsden.

The District of Columbia Council passed legislation May 30 intended to block the teen-ager's return to Gadsden for 90 days. Council members said extradition would violate the district's ban on the death penalty, because if O.M. is convicted in Alabama, he could face execution in the electric chair.

The U.S. Supreme Court has heard arguments but not yet ruled on a challenge to the death penalty for those who were minors when they committed crimes. The Alabama boy was 16 at the time of Tamel's death.

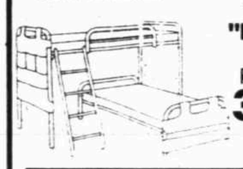

A Superior Court judge in Washington ruled March 30 that O.M. should be returned to Alabama. But the extradition was delayed until after his appeal, which could make the council's action moot.

Hedgespeth would not say what he has decided about whether to seek the death penalty.

"They're fanning enough flames up there in Washington," he said. "I'm just sitting here keeping my mouth shut."

Many people unhappy over Kraft contest offer

■ Related story — 3B

CHICAGO (AP) — Kraft's efforts to appease winners in its botched "Ready to Roll" game aren't winning over everybody.

"I don't mean to sound greedy, but the settlement offer is kind of skimpy and it's a far cry from what was being offered," says Larry Bernstein, who matched game pieces for a $17,000 van.

Bernstein was one of an estimated several hundred people who matched game pieces for a Dodge Caravan in a contest designed to have only one van winner. Kraft on Thursday offered those winners $250 and a special drawing for four vans.

"I'm not really too pleased," he said. "You're talking $17,000 versus $250. I suspect lots of people will want to go ahead with the lawsuits."

At least two class-action lawsuits have been filed against the company.

The suburban Chicago-based company, known formally as Kraft General Foods Group of Philip Morris Cos., also offered to make up for the mistake by quadrupling the number of prizes and giving away cash to all winners. The company is not saying what caused the foul-up.

The promotion was run only in th Chicago and Houston metropolitan areas. The contest required consumers to match left halves of a pictured van contained in specially marked packages of Kraft Singles cheese with right halves appearing in coupons in Sunday newspaper advertisements.

Bernstein wasn't the only one balking at the deal.

"I look at it this way," said Sharon LaMont, who also had matched game pieces for a van. "If they had cheese on sale for $1.39 and I offered to buy it for 14 cents, do you think they'd let me have it?"

The Skokie resident joined one of the class-action lawsuits.

"We have five secretaries just taking the calls," said attorney Burton Weinstein, who filed a lawsuit. He said his firm is representing at least 300 people.

Diana Redmond, a Rockford resident who hasn't decided whether to join the lawsuit, said a drawing that included everyone who matched game pieces for the van wouldn't be fair.

Senate begins debate over child care bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A multi-billion dollar plan offering parents both subsidies and tax credits to help pay for child care faces stiff opposition from the White House, which favors an approach dependent almost solely on tax credits.

The Senate on Thursday started debate on the issue, with Democrats saying they are open to compromise but committed to the principals of the Act for Better Child care sponsored by Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn.

"This package embodies a truly bipartisan and comprehensive approach to this nation's child care crisis," Dodd said. "It's not a complete answer, but it's a very solid beginning."

The debate was to resume today, and numerous amendments were expected to be proposed before a final vote, not likely to come before late next week.

Dodd agreed to a number of changes in his plan in order to get it to the Senate floor, a significant step in itself given the staunch opposition the package faced earlier this year.

Opposition stemmed for the most part from two provisions in the original bill, one calling for federal regulation of child care and another that many lawmakers believed would have forced the closing of church-run centers.

The revised version leaves regulations to the states, although it would establish federal guidelines for the states to follow if they wished. And it allows for vouchers to be used to pay for child care at church-run centers provided the money is not used "in a manner inconsistent with the Constitution," which mandates separation of church and state.

Those changes were drafted with the assistance of a leading GOP senator, Orrin Hatch of Utah, who challenged the administration's position that tax credits alone would put a significant dent in the nation's child care problems.

"It will not, by itself, encourage family based providers, churches, non-profit organizations or businesses to offer child care services," Hatch said.

NATION IN BRIEF

Bennett approves idea of capital punishment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drug czar William Bennett says that beheading some kinds of drug dealers would be a "morally" fitting punishment although difficult to implement under the American system of justice.

Bennett, interviewed Thursday on the "Larry King Live" television program on Cable News Network, said, "We are not doing enough that is morally proportionate to the nature of the offense."

His remarks were prompted by a caller's question, "why not behead the...dealers?" as the law calls for in some Middle Eastern countries.

"What the caller suggests is morally plausible," Bennett said. "It's legally difficult."

Bennett, who is director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy, said, "Morally, I don't have any problem with that at all."

"Ask most Americans if they saw someone on the streets selling drugs to their kids, what they would feel morally justified in doing — tear them (the sellers) limb from limb," Bennett said.

New AIDS drug urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal health officials are recommending aggressive use of a newly approved drug that protects people infected with the AIDS virus against a form of pneumonia that is the No.1 killer of AIDS victims.

The Food and Drug Administration approved the drug, aerosol pentamidine, on Thursday. The announcement came as the Centers for Disease Control issued greatly expanded treatment guidelines recommending wider use of the drug in people infected with the AIDS virus but who may show no symptoms.

Aerosol pentamidine has been widely available for several months to people infected with the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, under a special FDA pre-approval distribution program. The cost of the drug, however, is a burden for many.

Whaling resolution OK'd

SAN DIEGO (NYT) — The International Whaling Commission yesterday (June 15) adopted resolutions criticizing Japan and Norway for their plans to kill whales during research programs and urged them to reconsider.

Harsher measures approved in previous years have failed to deter the scientific killing, and neither Japan nor Norway indicated yesterday it would call off this year's programs. Both voted against the resolutions.

Japan, which killed 241 minke whales last year, said it plans to take 400 in 1989. Norway, which took 29 in 1988, said it will kill 20 this year.

Yesterday's resolutions came one day after the commission, meeting in San Diego, adopted a similar measure asking Iceland to reconsider its research proposal. It did, agreeing to drop 22 whales from its intended kill of 90.

The commission has had a worldwide moratorium on commercial whaling in effect since 1986, but its governing laws allow member nations to kill the giant sea mammals for scientific studies.

Japan, Norway and Iceland have used the loophole for research that they say provides vital information about the size, age and migration of whales. The data will be useful in future management of the populations, they say.

Noriega deposits revealed

NEW YORK (AP) — Panama's leader Manuel Antonio Noriega has deposited at least $50 million in secret bank accounts since 1982, according to documents seized in a money laundering investigation, NBC News reports.

The network reported Thursday that the documents were seized in October in London by British authorities after Noriega's bank, the Bank of Credit and Commerce, was indicted in the drug money case in Florida.

British authorities this week gave U.S. investigators more than 1,000 documents and show that the Panamanian general controlled up to seven secret accounts, according to NBC.

According to the documents, Noriega deposited at least $50 million since he opened the accounts seven years ago while his Army salary was about $50,000 a year, NBC said.

Court upholds anti-discrimination law

By DAN FREEDMAN
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — In a ruling that dismayed both liberals and conservatives, the Supreme Court upheld an historic anti-discrimination law Thursday but said it cannot be used to protect minorities from on-the-job racial harassment.

The high court's latest major civil rights decision came in a case involving a North Carolina woman, Brenda Patterson, who charged her employer with harassing her because she is black.

The justices unanimously agreed that an 1866 law putting blacks on an equal footing with whites — a statute allowing freed black slaves to "make and enforce contracts" — could be used to sue private citizens accused of racial discrimination.

But in a separate vote, the court ruled 5-4 that the law cannot be used by minorities to sue employers for racial harassment.

Writing for the majority, Justice Anthony M. Kennedy said "the right to make contracts does not extend...to conduct by the employer after the contract relation has been established."

Chief Justice William Rehnquist joined Kennedy along with Justices Byron White, Sandra Day O'Connor and Antonin Scalia.

Patterson, hired in 1972 as a teller and file coordinator at McLean Credit Union in Winston-Salem, N.C., alleged in a lawsuit against her employer that her boss forced her to perform duties not required of white employees, including dusting and sweeping the office.

The employer constantly stared at her, ridiculed her in staff meetings and gave her an oppressive work load, the former credit union worker charged in Patterson v. McLean Credit Union.

When Patterson complained, the suit said, her boss replied "Well, blacks are known to work slower than whites by nature."

Patterson alleged that whites were routinely promoted to secretarial and bookkeeping jobs over her. Despite a positive evaluation, she said, she was passed over for a merit raise and eventually laid off in 1982. She sued McLean Credit Union in federal court in 1984.

The Supreme Court sent Patterson's case back to the lower courts to determine if her bid for promotion constituted a "new contract with the employer." If so, Kennedy wrote, Patterson might be able to pursue her claim under the 1866 law.

The high court also ruled that the jury in Patterson's case received faulty instructions from the judge, who said Patterson had to prove she was better qualified for promotion than her white competitors.

Patterson must prove "purposeful discrimination" in promotions in order to win her case, Kennedy wrote.

Neither civil rights activists nor their conservative pro-business opponents claimed a clear victory in the case Thursday.

For one thing, the court handed liberal activists a defeat by taking away the legal basis for lawsuits aimed at collecting damages under the Civil War-era anti-discrimination statute.

It also disappointed conservatives by backing away from what would have made the Patterson ruling truly historic: Overturning a 1976 precedent, Runyon v. McCrary, which said that the same 1866 statute bans racial discrimination in the private sector.

Last year, the court sent shock waves through both sides on the civil rights issue by announcing it would reconsider the Runyon precedent while deciding Patterson v. McLean Credit Union.

The court rarely overturns previously decided cases. Pro-civil rights partisans saw it as an early sign that the court's emerging conservative majority wanted to gut anti-discrimination laws.

But in declining to overturn Runyon, Kennedy wrote for the court that the 1976 landmark "is entirely consistent with our society's deep commitment to the eradication of discrimination."

Justices William Brennan, Thurgood Marshall, Harry Blackmun and John Paul Stevens agreed with the decision not to overturn Runyon, but dissented on whether the 1866 law applies to racial harassment.

"What the court declines to snatch away with one hand, it takes with the other," Brennan wrote.

The loudest cries on the ruling came from civil rights partisans.

"The case we took to the Supreme Court, we lost," said Charles Stephen Ralston, an attorney with the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People Legal Defense and Education Fund, which represented Patterson in her suit against the credit union.

Italian art restorers learning they can't save everything

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — One after another, proud symbols of cities and empires are disappearing from public view in Italy, victims of pollution and discouraging testimony that restoration can't rescue every monument and artwork.

In Florence, the 15th-century gilded panels on the east entrance to the Baptistry — a door so beautiful Michelangelo thought it was fit for paradise — are destined for specially sealed glass chambers inside a museum.

Now blackened and devoured by automobile pollution, the 10 bronze panels were done over 23 years by Lorenzo Ghiberti before his death in 1455 to depict the Creation and other Old Testament stories. Today they are being delicately restored, one by one, to much of their shining splendor.

But since no known chemical coating can protect them from car exhaust, the panels will be replaced in the door by copies; the originals will end up inside the oxygen-less, humidity-controlled chambers of the museum across from Florence's cathedral.

Ghiberti's work, dear to Florentine hearts, has good company.

Earlier this decade, the four gilded bronze horses on the facade of St. Mark's Basilica in Venice were placed, after restoration, inside the church, and their places outside were taken by copies.

The statues outside Milan's cathedral also are going inside, and Rome will not soon see its symbol back at the city hall square atop Capitoline Hill: The 1,800-year-old gilded bronze statue of Emperor Marcus Aurelius astride his noble horse, recently restored, is too frail to withstand the pollution and vibration of Rome's relentless traffic.

Restoration has had some heady days in recent years. There have been gala unveilings of Venetian canalside palaces, the emergence of Michelangelo's bright colors during the cleaning of the Sistine Chapel ceiling and the titilating discovery that Adam and Eve's fig leaves were a cover-up added to Masaccio's fresco in a Florence church.

But less attention has gone to the sobering realization that, despite the marriage of high technology to restoration, restorers often watch helplessly as monuments crumble and others, like Ghiberti's masterpiece, must be removed from their glorious settings to survive.

In its current state, "technology is more suitable to diagnosis" than prevention of the decay, said Alessandra Melucco, who directed restoration of the statue.

And what do you do with a monument like the 65-foot-high Arch of Settimius Severus, which isn't easily moved, along with its spectacular setting in the Roman Forum?

"In a generation, we are losing an historical heritage of 2,000 years," said Roberto Nardi, an archaeologist and restorer who was part of a team that restored one-half of the arch, one of Rome's most badly damaged monuments.

"What took 2,000 years to erode, then took 50, now takes five years."

Like some other restorers, Nardi said its time to rethink the approach to restoration.

In the case of the arch, restorers had to stop work because they ran out of money from a special fund established by Parliament earlier this decade. The restored half is more or less white, while the untouched half is coffee brown with soot and grime.

Nardi says they would have stopped anyway because they saw that pollution was damaging the monument as fast as they cleaned it.

"In five, six, 10 years," said fellow restorer Luisa Barucci, "it will be the same argument. The black crust (will return). Italy always waits until these things are falling apart."

Restoration, said Nardi, should be resumed only when the state begins a program of regular maintenance.

"We stopped work but maintenance didn't begin," he said.

The arch was restored with a natural material, limestone plaster, that lasts about five years. The temptation is to use harsh, plastic resins that could last longer, but in some cases, the coatings made it impossible for the stone to "breathe" and the coatings themselves were difficult to remove without damaging the monument.

At a recent conference in Florence, experts called for more chemical research specifically to aid restorers.

Arnold Wolff, in charge of restoring the Cathedral of Cologne in West Germany, projected slides that showed how in less than a century, the face of a stone angel was disfigured by pollution.

"We desperately need a chemical agent to protect stone," he said.

Nine-year-old lobbies for new dinosaur cards

Hearst News Service

COLONIE, N.Y. — Nine-year old Matthew Streifert knows about dinosaurs and is mad at the Topps bubble gum people who don't.

When his mother bought him some gum that said "Dinosauers Attack" on the wrapper, he recalls, "I thought I'd see pictures of dinosaurs fighting and then they'd tell us something about it."

Instead, he said, what he found on the five bubble gum cards inside was, in his words, "gross."

"The one I hate the most," he said, "has blue and red dinosaurs ripping, people apart. They aren't even real. I can tell. I love dinosaurs and I've read about them a long time." The reading taught him that dinosaurs disappeared from the earth long before humankind arrived.

Topps spokesman Ken Liss said the cards are aimed at older kids, "with a target audience of 10 and up." Presented "kind of tongue in cheek," they are meant to be humorous, he said. Fantasy and fictional horror stories on the cards describe dinosaurs destroying people by stepping on or biting them.

Disappointed, Matthew did not see any humor in the cards and felt ripped off.

So Matthew prepared a petition for his third-grade class at Shaker Road Elementary School. It said the people who signed it found the bubble gum cards gross and suggested the company should put out dinosaur cards "based on fact."

Of 24 classmates, he said, "All but two signed" the petition. His teacher Helen Tomaso also signed.

In his letter, Matthew told Topps, "My mom has little money but she bought me the cards for a treat and another pack for my brother. If you ask me, they are gross. I'd like to see all facts, like he triceratops-...weight, eight to nine tons...height, 10 feet...length, 25 et...nickname, three-horned-face...home area, western North America. favorite food, grass."

His letter concluded: "Look this up if you don't know it."

GOP fund-raising letter went to wrong person

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even Ronald Reagan's personal check for $120 couldn't persuade Sen. Howard Metzenbaum to help the Republican Party rid the Senate of "ultra-liberal Democrats."

Metzenbaum, the junior senator from Ohio, is one of those Democrats who doesn't think liberal is a dirty word.

So when he received a GOP fund-raising letter urging him to match Reagan's donation, his reply to Sen. Don Nickles, chairman of the Republican National Senatorial Committee, was brief.

"Though I cannot send you any money for your efforts, I can send you my heartfelt wish that you achieve the same success in 1990 that the GOP earned in the 1988 Senate race in Ohio," he wrote.

Metzenbaum also suggested he could teach the party's national chairman a thing or two about campaigning.

"I could demonstrate to Lee Atwater that Republican smear tactics end up tarring the GOP and irritating the voters," he wrote. "I have copies of some GOP commercials from 1988 that perfectly illustrate my point."

Metzenbaum attributes part of his re-election landslide last year to voter backlash after his Republican opponent, Cleveland Mayor George Voinovich, accused him of being soft on child pornography.

Metzenbaum, who was rated by Americans for Democratic Action at 80 percent for votes on liberal issues in 1988, was one of thousands of people who were sent the solicitation, RNSC communications director Wendy DeMocker said.

The glossy fund-raising packet seeks charter members of a "Republican Presidential Task Force" whose mission is "to elect a Republican majority to the U.S. Senate in 1990."

It tells recipients they were chosen by a committee that included President Bush and every Republican in the U.S. Senate, and urges them to send donations because "some of the most outspoken, combative, extremist anti-Bush Senate Democrats are up for re-election. And the more of these ultra-liberal Senate Democrats we can replace in the 1990 elections, the better."

That the appeal was wasted on a Democrat who describes himself as a proud liberal didn't seem to trouble DeMocker. "I am sure it happens when the Democrats do mailings, too," she said.

She said the mass mailing went both to regular GOP targets and names from other lists purchased commercially. "The mailing list is very, very large," she said. "Thousands and thousands of people got this particular mailing."

Meanwhile, a liberal Democratic congressman from Connecticut was sent a fancy embossed card identifying him as a "sustaining member" of the GOP and asking for a donation to the Republican National Committee, headed by Atwater.

The mailing read: "Yes, Lee! You can count on me to work with you to make the Bush administration a success for America through my support of the Republican National Committee."

Ceremony demands measure of dignity

A graduation ceremony brings a kaleidoscope of emotions to those receiving diplomas and those watching the ceremony, ranging from the pride of accomplishment to the irrepressible joy of being set free from a structured environment. It's a formal time, yet not marked by stuffiness.

Regrettably, it seems that some of the graduating seniors at Midland High School and Lee High School were a little too drawn in by the revelry and giddiness of the moment and a little too disrespectful of the solemnity and respect due at graduation time.

Complaints of the antics exhibited by some students have led trustees of the Midland Independent School District to begin looking at ways to better control those involved in the commencement exercises. That's entirely appropriate in light of the complaints received about this year's ceremonies. In fact, some of those involved in the ceremonies earlier this month agreed that the antics — such as noise, mice released among the chairs, thumb-sucking, tossing of confetti and a beach ball — got out of hand and ruined the ceremonies for the students as well as those observing.

School officials probably do not expect to remove all the revelry from commencement or to turn it into a time for only stern looks and solemn talk. It's not supposed to be that, but neither is graduation supposed to be a free-for-all, anything goes comic opera. As long as there has been a commencement to end the formal education of young people there most probably have been antics performed by students to irritate school officials and adults present; that's one way, after all, that the young people can assert that they have "the last laugh." But with that said, there is a point at which the revelry begins to undermine the ceremony and, thus, crosses the line of decency.

More than anything, perhaps, graduation is to mark an end and a beginning for the participants. As such, it marks a time denoting a level of maturity that demands a show of discipline, respect for others, self-respect, and the observation of accepted social graces.

In light of the extent of the misbehavior this year, school officials should take whatever steps they feel are needed — to the point of removing particularly disruptive students from the ceremonies — to ensure that future commencement exercises are properly observed by students and visitors alike.

Army punishes courier of bad tidings

WASHINGTON — The career of Army Staff Sgt. William Murphy is ruined, all because he wouldn't turn his back when he saw what he thought was racism.

Jack Anderson

Murphy's mistake was that he stood up for two soldiers, one black and one white, who wanted to marry.

The captain who supervised Murphy and the young couple called the bride's family to discuss the implications of her planned marriage to a black man and then refused to give the woman leave for the wedding. Murphy sided with the couple. Now he is doing menial work and the captain, Sheila O'Connor, is on the fast track to the top.

Before Murphy tangled with O'Connor he was regarded as one of the Army's brightest Russian linguists, translating Soviet military manuals into English.

Today Murphy is a gofer. He chauffeurs Army brass. He carries paper from office to office. After a long string of outstanding evaluations in his eight-year career, Murphy lost his top security clearance, was reprimanded for "disrespect toward a superior commissioned officer," and branded as disloyal.

Murphy's story as revealed by Army documents is a blatant example of the military's bungling its own personnel matters. That's business-as-usual. Except this time Rep. Roy Dyson, D-Md., and two senators, Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., and Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. are angry enough to lean on the Army to re-open the investigation into the allegations of racism. "The case is a tragedy," Dyson told our associate Jim Lynch, "but the Army is content to sweep it under the carpet."

Capt. O'Connor was in charge of Murphy and some 100 other soldiers at the Foreign Materials Intelligence Group in Aberdeen, Md. Last year, a white woman and a black man under O'Connor's command announced their marriage plans.

According to affidavits from the bride and her relatives, O'Connor, who is white, phoned the bride's mother and grandmother and asked them if they were aware the groom was black. O'Connor also allegedly solicited their opinions on inter-racial marriage.

O'Connor told Army investigators that her calls were motivated by concern, not racism, and the Army accepted that explanation without talking to the mother or grandmother. It is not unusual for a captain to counsel a subordinate on a marriage but even the Army admitted the phone calls to the bride's family were "unusual."

The bride, a private, was outraged by the intrusion and filed a equal opportunity complaint against O'Connor. When the private asked for a few days leave to get married, O'Connor denied the request. Army investigators also decided that action was not racially motivated.

It was not the first time O'Connor was accused of being prejudiced. Three years ago, sworn testimony in a court martial proceeding against a Moslem soldier indicated that O'Connor had blamed the man's religion for some of his problems.

When word of the marriage conflict spread through the ranks, Murphy, who is white, circulated a petition to support the young couple. The command caught wind of the petition and called the soldiers together. They were warned that signing the petition was tantamount to "mutiny."

At that point, the Army's investigation into O'Connor turned into a witch hunt to find the author of the petition. Murphy took the credit. The Army reprimanded him for being disloyal and sent him to a psychiatrist who pronounced him "normal."

O'Connor survived the investigation unscathed and was given a meritorious service award last fall. The couple got married.

Murphy has hired seasoned military lawyer James Klimaski to help him clear his record so he will be able to get government jobs in the future.

Murphy is 40 years old and knows that his Army career is dead. As a young man, he tried to join the Army and serve in Vietnam, but an illness kept him out. He tried to join again and failed a physical. Finally, at the age of 32, Murphy was admitted to the Army. "I just thought it was something I owed the country," he said.

KHOMEINI'S LEGACY — The frenzied mourners who wept over the death of the Ayatollah Khomeini would do well to look at his record. He left behind a nation where women are required to wear scarves over their heads; where school prayers are compulsory but 1.8 million children have no school to go to; where 52 percent of the population is illiterate; where alcohol is banned and 3 million people are addicted to drugs; where 6 million people are out of work and industries are running at one-third the output of a decade ago. Iran has more reasons to mourn than the death of Khomeini.

MINI-EDITORIAL — A man in Florida has turned three exotic roaches loose in the wild, one step ahead of the law. The roaches on the lam are 3-inch-long hissing roaches from Madagascar and are pest-nongrata in Florida. Agriculture authorities there are afraid the roaches will breed like rabbits, only uglier. But the roach lover was afraid the authorities would kill his pets. We hate to come between a man and his best friends, but anyone who would introduce a new breed of giant roaches into the country is nuts. This guy should be locked up with a roomful of his closest friends.

Irish eyes may cry for death of dreams

NEW YORK — She would give me her answer today.

I was driving to Princeton, N.J., to meet her at a park bench. My mind wasn't on Interstate 95 South. It was a few miles outside Dingle, County Kerry, Ireland. She was born there in 1895.

Jack Casserly

We had been talking about her going home to the family farm for 25 years. It was our dream, ever since Dad died in 1964.

We had so many dreams. Mom and Dad would take us on a trip around the world when he struck it rich. Then we would buy a new car and tour the United States. Finally, we would move from the Midwest out to Colorado for the mountain air and majestic scenery.

Mom knew Colorado by heart although she had never set foot there. So did I and my sister. We would live in Estes Park beneath a half-dozen 14,000-foot peaks. I went out there to take a look at it — and later lived in Colorado for four years — and returned home with glowing descriptions of the sweeping mountain ranges. Mom's face shone.

Dad didn't strike it rich. By the time he retired, he was too old to move to Colorado. Then, he died. Ireland was our last dream.

I've spent a lot of time over the past year preparing for today. Speaking to many people and reading brochures. Mom wanted to stay a week in September on one condition — that she pay her own way.

The best plan of all was that of Aer Lingus, the Irish airline. They offered the use of a car and hotel room with full breakfast for two people covering 6 nights for $328. It was a steal.

We would travel from Dublin, to Galway, Mayo, Kerry and Sligo. We would stay an extra two days in Kerry for $64 more — a total of $392 for a full week. I knew Mom would like the price. It was a dream within our reach.

I drove past the halls of Princeton to the park a few blocks off the main drag. My sister had brought her and she was waiting on the bench. I said hello and took her hand. She would not let go of my hand.

I asked her how she was. She was having difficulty walking. I changed the subject to Ireland and told her that I was making reservations on Aer Lingus for plane, car and a week there in early September.

She didn't say much but wouldn't let go of my hand. I finally said: "I'll get the tickets and make the other reservations next week."

She looked at the ground and finally took out her checkbook. Her hands shook. The writing was askew and barely legible. The check was for $500. She said: This is for you, Jack. I'm not going.

I was thunderstruck. "Why not?"

"Because I'm going blind, Jack," she replied. "I see only figures now — only black and white objects. I wouldn't see Kerry. I wouldn't be able to recognize our farm. It would be too much pain to be home and not see it."

I was silent.

"Take the money," she insisted. "Come back and describe everything for me — especially the ring of Kerry. I want to know if it's as wild as it once was."

Perhaps hers was too wild a dream at 94. Maybe not. But Irish eyes are terribly sad when they are going blind and a dream dies.

CHARLEY REESE

New law could mean loss of old freedom

The great threat to American freedom has always been ourselves, not foreign invaders.

A foreign invader is so tangible and understandable a threat that Americans have always readily rallied to the fight and would do so today. Let one bomb fall on American soil and differences and apathy would vanish in its smoke. A united people would fight the foreign foe to the death.

Charley Reese

But in times of peace, we are always in danger of selling our birthright, liberty, for the porridge of some fashionable cause or issue.

The easiest way to understand freedom is to define it as choice. As long as we have choices, we are free, and the more our choices are eliminated, the less free we are.

But let us right away face the complicating factor. It is never a question of all freedom or no freedom. From the time of the first tribe, mankind has always recognized that living together necessarily means trading some individual freedom for the benefits of cooperation.

What we have to do, and frequently fail to do these days, is to examine the transaction carefully to assure ourselves the alleged benefit is worth the loss of freedom.

For example, if semiautomatic rifles are available to the general public, we have choice. Those of us who don't want them don't buy them, but those who do desire them can make the purchase.

If, as some legislators and congressmen are proposing, those rifles are banned, then our choice is eliminated. We, as law-abiding citizens, are no longer given the choice to buy and own a semiautomatic weapon. Even if we someday decide we have a need for one, we won't have that choice. That bit of our freedom to make choices about our own lives will have been taken away.

It seems to me reasonable to ask that those who propose to eliminate a freedom prove the benefit in a tangible and reasonable manner. If there are benefits to be gained by eliminating this particular freedom, then they should be easily spelled out and verifiable.

To stick with our same example of the semiautomatic rifles, those who wish to eliminate our individual choice fail in trying to justify it. I myself don't own a semiautomatic rifle and have no present intentions of buying one, but I am not willing to give up that freedom just because some fellow thinks I shouldn't have it. He has to give me a better reason than just his arbitrary opinion about what I should or shouldn't do with my own life.

It is obvious, of course, that a ban on the legal sale of semiautomatic rifles would not affect criminals who, by definition, don't obey laws anyway. People who can smuggle in tons of drugs can certainly smuggle in cases of whatever kinds of weapons they want. They can buy them on the black market, manufacture them in clandestine machine shops, or steal them from government warehouses.

The only impact laws have on criminals is simply to provide an after-the-fact justification for punishing their behavior. Criminal laws do not and cannot prevent crime.

I might consider giving up the freedom if it could be shown that semiautomatic rifles are being used excessively by criminals, but no such evidence has been produced. The only statistic I've been able to find is that about 3 percent of weapons confiscated by police are semiautomatic rifles. Again emotional opinions by even law enforcement officers are not reasonable evidence of the need to take away a freedom.

Whatever the issue, always recognize that a new law means a loss of an old freedom to choose. Make sure the benefit is worth it.

Ayatollah welcomed into the hell of fame

The devil called his management staff to order.

"Men... and women, of course," he began. "Will you please take your seats."

The devil did not like the idea of women in management, but after months of pressure from various she-devil rights groups, he had been forced to relent and name female executives.

Lewis Grizzard

"As you may have heard," the devil went on as the room fell silent, "the Ayatollah Khomeini arrives in hell this afternoon.

"It is not every day we receive someone with a background such as his.

"If you will check the documents in front of you, you will note that Research has compiled some startling figures concerning the ayatollah.

"Notice, if you will," the devil continued, "the incredible number of political opponents he had killed. Right up there with Joe Stalin.

"And then there were all those who died as a result of the long war Iran had with Iraq.

"Add that to all the terrorist acts he ordered, all the imprisonments, all the hands he had cut off, and we've got a guy who certainly deserves the kind of treatment we give only to true hall-of-famers who devoted their lives to the misery of others.

"What I am looking for from you guys — and gals, too, of course — are some suggestions regarding the appropriate punishment for this mad despot.

"How about you, Ursor?"

"I say we put the ayatollah into the dung pit, head first, next to Hitler," said Ursor.

"I think not," said the devil. "I want to keep Hitler alone. Being head down in a dung pit isn't nearly as wretched if you know somebody else is in there with you."

"Chief," said Munakahkin, "why don't we move Attila the Hun out of the Oval Oven and put him in the Room of Doom with all the poisonous snakes?

"Then we could put the ayatollah in the oven and knock up the temperature a couple of hundred degrees and keep him in there for a century or two until we can come up with something better."

"Not bad, Munakahkin," said the devil, "but it's still not exactly what I'm looking for. Ms. Durbalia?"

The devil did not particularly care for Ms. Durbalia, whom he considered a troublemaker. It was Ms. Durbalia who led the other female executives to demand that the devil end the rule that forced female employees to keep their tails covered while in the office or when out representing The Firm. But she did have an obvious mean streak.

"I say we put the sucker behind the Door of Gore," she said.

"And?" asked the devil.

"Put bamboo reeds under his toenails," said Ms. Durbalia.

"Go on."

"And cut off his fingers one at a time with a dull butcher knife."

"I'm beginning to like it," smiled the devil.

Ms. Durbalia continued.

"Then, we slice open his tongue with a dull razor blade, gouge out his eyes with an ice pick, trim his eyebrows with a weed eater and have a dentist come in and perform a root canal on him with no Novocain."

"That last thing there is a nice touch," said the devil. "And we've certainly got enough dentists around to do the job. Is there anything else?"

"Yes," said Ms. Durbalia, "while we're doing all that to him, we'll make him listen to 'The Satanic Verses' being read aloud."

The devil heartily approved and thought to himself, "Perhaps women know a little bit more about how to torture a man than I gave them credit for."

Baptists call for limits on abortion

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Southern Baptists wrapped up their first stay in this gambling city by urging states to enact legislation restricting abortions except to save the mother's life.

The nation's largest Protestant body also approved resolutions Thursday condemning past racism within its ranks and calling for an end to happy hours at taverns throughout the nation.

The resolutions were approved at the end of the three-day Southern Baptist Convention that attracted 20,423 delegates.

Baptist officials said it was the sixth largest Baptist convention in 132 years, despite fears that many would stay away because of concerns over the Sin City image of Las Vegas and its distance from traditional Baptist strongholds.

The convention rejected arguments that abortions should be permitted in cases of rape or incest or if the fetus is severely deformed.

One delegate objected that the resolution would call for abortion laws that require "moral heroism."

"We do though want to say we do not want to victimize the child in the womb because evil things have happened to bring that child into the womb," said Mark Coppenger, chairman of the denomination's Committee on Resolutions.

The resolution noted that a U.S. Supreme Court decision is pending that may reopen the possibility of broader state restrictions on abortion.

It also reaffirmed the support of the 14.8 million-member denomination for a constitutional amendment to prohibit abortion except to prevent the imminent death of the mother.

The convention, formed in 1845 in a dispute with Northern Baptists over slavery, said in a resolution on racism that the denomination repents of past bigotry. It called for members and churches "to reach across racial boundaries, establishing fraternal rather than paternal friendships."

The resolution also called upon the predominantly white denomination to bring about greater racial and ethnic representation at every level of the church. About 300,000 Southern Baptists are black.

The denomination stopped short of approving an amendment condemning apartheid in South Africa because of concerns it would hurt evangelistic efforts there.

The racism issue arose in the denomination last fall when a member of the Christian Life Commission, Dr. Curtis W. Caine Sr., reportedly said in a commission meeting that the late Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. was a fraud. Baptist Press reported Caine also said apartheid in South Africa "doesn't exist anymore and was beneficial when it did, because it meant separate development."

Delegates also approved a resolution on drunken driving that seeks increased excise taxes on alcohol, no more use of celebrities to promote drinking and the elimination of happy hours in which drinks are discounted.

Conventioneers have different view of Sin City

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Skeptical Southern Baptists and Las Vegans sized each other up this week as the town some have dubbed Sin City played unlikely host to the passionate opponents of gambling and drinking.

Stan Pritchett, a delegate to the Southern Baptist Convention, and cabbie Don Capaldi termed the three-day event a draw — with eyes opening on both sides of what has been called the meeting of the high rollers and the Holy Rollers.

The gathering for the nation's largest Protestant denomination ended Thursday.

"They're nice, decent people; they even gave me a Bible," said Capaldi as hundreds of Baptists passed out Bibles and imparted their faith to tourists and residents. "I don't think they can do much about our image, or our thinking."

Down the neon-bathed thoroughfare known as the Strip, Pritchett approached tourists who hurried between casinos Wednesday to beat the 100-degree-plus heat.

"The people have been generally very friendly," said Pritchett of Pensacola, Fla. "We thought people would look at us like a calf looks at a new gate. Generally the people have been very friendly. The atmosphere here is like almost any place, except for the gambling."

Ted Wakeman, pastor of the First Southern Baptist Church in Fallon, 380 miles to the northwest, said he takes exception to the image rap.

"I get a little upset with the people who came here from back East and are bad-mouthing Nevada," Wakeman said.

"A lot of people thought they'd come here and find a lot of people gambling and drunk," said Annette Edwards of Nashville, Tenn., who tended one of the booths in the exhibit hall. "That's just the impression people who live outside of here have. But it wasn't like that at all."

Some 1,800 Baptists fanned out across the city last weekend, knocking on doors in a mission to save souls. They reported polite response.

"I think they're going to be surprised when they find we're just a normal city like any other city," Mayor Ron Lurie had promised before the convention.

Some members of a Southern Baptist advance team who have been here since January preparing for the convention said they'd found a different city than they expected.

"I really have been impressed with Las Vegas," said Stanley Clark, a church volunteer. "We've been in a lot of other cities that, to use a term, are more Sin City than Las Vegas is."

Bishops to discuss AIDS, religious disputes

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The nation's Roman Catholic bishops are aiming to tackle a number of lingering controversies, including what their stand should be on AIDS education and how to settle disputes with religion teachers.

About 300 cardinals, archbishops and bishops were to gather today at Seton Hall in South Orange for the National Conference of Catholic Bishops. The meeting ends Monday.

Tension has increased over the last few years between the bishops and religion teachers, some of whom have been disciplined for advocating birth control and female priests, and taking other stands that contradict church teachings.

"The doctrinal statement hopes to resolve these types of things without doing too much damage," said Bob Wonderly, spokesman for the bishops conference. "In recent years there has seemingly been an increase in these types of cases, at least in perception."

The dispute itself indicates a shift within the church.

During a conference in 1968, the bishops specified the right of priests and laymen to disagree with the church in the classroom. But that right has since been questioned and theologians have been punished for doing so.

The policy to be considered this weekend would not solve disputes over specific issues, but would establish procedure for settling such arguments.

In a widely publicized case, the Rev. Charles Curran was barred from teaching theology at the Catholic University of America in Washington. The university's action came after the Vatican strongly criticized him for his positions on abortion, homosexuality and other matters of sexual ethics.

Disputes within the church have not been confined to the bishops and theologians. The bishops themselves were divided over a statement on AIDS issued by the group's 50-member administrative board in December 1987.

The AIDS statement insists on the church's teaching that the only sure safeguards against contracting the disease are abstinence from sex before marriage and fidelity within a marriage.

But one paragraph said public education programs, directed at people who may reject church standards, could include information about condoms, which most medical experts say can help prevent the disease.

Critics charged this paragraph implied approval of condoms, which the church has condemned as a form of birth control. Defenders insist the document did not approve condoms, but said that they were an alternative to halting the spread of the deadly disease.

The bishops plan to issue a new report on the topic Saturday.

The bishops also are scheduled to vote on a statement calling for a normalization of relations between the United States and Vietnam, said Michael Hurley, spokesman for the Newark Archdiocese.

The supersonic B-1B bomber from Dyess Air Force Base near Abilene takes off from Midland International Airport in practicing touch-and-go maneuvers. B-1B Flight Commander Capt. Joe Brown talks about the aircraft, which is replacing the aging B-52. The B-1B will be on display during Saturday's Air Show '89 at Midland International Airport.

Pliska plane, Air Force 'top gun' part of air show

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Day of the Pliska Aeroplane, the sharpshooting-pilot "William Tell," and the flying general will be combined into one event in Air Show '89 this Saturday at Midland International Airport.

The day's show, replete with aerobatic maneuvers by supersonic jet fighters and by agile propeller-powered biplanes and monoplanes, will salute:

■ John Valentine Pliska, the Midland blacksmith who designed, built and flew the first Texas-built airplane as early as 1910 or 1912. Pliska, an inventor, wheelwright, and renown early-day forger of branding irons through the ranching industry, built the Pliska Aeroplane out of buggy parts, piano wire, canvas, steel, and powered the biplane with a tug-boat engine turning a Pliska-built, metal-tipped wooden propeller.

■ Capt. Teddy T. Varwig, the U.S. Air Force F-15 Eagle pilot who is winner of the 1988 William Tell "Top Gun" award. Varwig is assigned to Holloman Air Force Base in New Mexico.

■ Brig. Gen. James S. Allen, commander of the 833rd Air Division, Tactical Air Command, at Holloman Air Force Base. The command pilot will swear in U.S. Air Force recruits at the event, which is tabbed Air Show '89 — Armed Forces Recruiting Day.

"A GENERAL has lot of stroke in the military," noted Paul Erdmann, Air Show '89 coordinator. Allen was a major influence in "making it (the air show) happen," Erdmann said. "He has a lot of power with the Pentagon."

Air Show '89 "will prove to be our best one yet," said Erdmann, a Midland pilot who has organized several air shows.

"It's exciting."

For aviation buffs, an "exciting" part of the show aside from the Pliska Aeroplane will be the display of the Rockwell International B-1B intercontinental supersonic bomber from Dyess Air Force Base near Abilene.

The B-1B, which will be protected by armed guards, is powered by four General Electric turbo-fan engines, carries a four-man crew, and has variable wings that are swept back for fast flight and moved forward for slow flight.

The skydiving and flying part of the show is scheduled to begin at noon, noted Erdmann. Gates to the show will be opened at 9 a.m. Saturday, when aviation buffs and those curious about antique, mid-age and modern aircraft can look over aircraft on static display. The show will conclude after 4 p.m.

Aircraft on display will include the B1-B supersonic bomber, the mammoth Lockheed C-5A Galaxy jet transport Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio, the General Dynamics F-16 Fighting Falcon, the KC-10 jet re-fueler, the Cessna T-37 and Northrop T-38 from Reese Air Force Base in Lubbock, the C-141, Lockheed C-130 Hercules from Dyess AFB, the Navy F-18 Hornet and other military aircraft, and classic and antique aircraft.

U.S. AIR Force Col. Monroe S. Sams Jr., commander of the 64th Flying Training Wing at Reese, is sending the T-37 and T-38 jet airplanes to the show.

Admission to the show is $5 at the gate and $4 in advance. Air-show dollar-discount coupons are available, noted Erdmann, who is president of the West Texas Aerobatic Club Inc., which is sponsoring the annual event.

The club is Chapter 71 of the Experimental Aircraft Association's International Aerobatic Club. Aerobatic pilot Brad Baysinger is to narrate the flying show.

Flying demonstrations will include those by the P-51D Mustang of World War II fame, the Fairchild A-10 Thunderbolt, the McDonnell Douglas F-15 Eagle, the McDonnell F-4 Phantom, civilian aerobatic biplanes and monoplanes. The flights will be scheduled around commercial air traffic into the airport.

"He always wanted to (fly again) but Mother always frowned on it, so he never did. He always wanted to take it down and put it back together again."

— Jimmy Pliska

Music at the air show will be played by the U.S. Air Force Band.

Before the main thrust of Air Show '89 gets under way, Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas will pay tribute to the Pliska Aeroplane, the Flying General and the William Tell "Top Gun" pilot.

PLISKA, WHO developed a passion for aviation through hot-air balloon training in his native Europe prior to 1900, flew his Aeroplane over West Texas ranch-land after taking off on the salt bed of dry playa lakes.

His son, Jimmy Pliska, a 70-year-old Odessa master aircraft mechanic and airworthiness inspector, recalls his father's recollections of building and flying the biplane, which featured a tri-cycle landing-gear, push propeller turned by the 50-horsepower four-cylinder marine engine, canard elevator up front, Curtiss ailerons, and a grappling hook for brakes. The pilot used movements of his hands, feet and body to fly the Pliska Aeroplane.

The biplane's wings are 33 feet long, and the fuselage measures 27½ feet in length.

Jimmy Pliska said his father, who was in his early 30s when he built and flew the biplane, "said he got high enough to where he could turn it and come back around. He said sometimes he got 20 or 30 feet high up off the ground."

His father flew the biplane on weekends from an "old dry lake north of town," said Jimmy Pliska, who was a Boeing B-17 Flying Fortress flight engineer during World War II.

"All of the old cowboys I used to talk to said, 'Yeah, on Sundays, if they heard he was out there, they would ride horses out there and watch him go across there and hit them barbed-wire fences and everything else.' "

THE PLISKA Aeroplane was grounded, apparently for all time.

"That's what happen. He hit a barbed-wire fence," the son said, "and Mother told him to put it up. He put it up, 'cause he ruined the engine. And he sent the engine back to be reworked (in Sandusky, Ohio), and they never did send it back to him."

A replacement engine was found when the airplane initially was restored in the late 1960s. The Pliska Aeroplane was restored this year by Midland-Odessa members of the Experimental Aircraft Association.

After 1912, John V. Pliska dismantled his Aeroplane and stored it in the loft of his downtown Midland blacksmith shop.

"He always wanted to (fly again)," said the son, "but Mother always frowned on it, so he never did. He always wanted to take it down and put it back together again."

Earlier, in demonstrating the Aeroplane's flight characteristics in Midland and Odessa, Pliska was seeking investments to put the aircraft into production.

But John V. Pliska got no takers.

"He was trying to get up to building this thing, but nobody ever (invested)," the son said. "They called him 'a crazy fool.'

"Back in them days," he said, "people didn't have money to splurge."

Lawyer indicted, jewelry auctioned to pay $200,000 on back taxes

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Lowell Hahn, a California lawyer-tax protester, was indicted by a federal grand jury in Midland on Thursday even while Internal Revenue Service agents were auctioning off some of Hahn's gold jewelry to collect a fraction of the $200,000 in back taxes the IRS said Hahn owes the government.

In late 1988, Hahn was arrested by IRS agents in Midland as a bail-jumping tax-protester who had been a fugitive for five years.

The IRS submitted 12 necklaces and bracelets of 14- and 18-karat gold purity and a 14-karat diamond ring for auctioning in the United States Courthouse in Midland. But more IRS agents and officers turned out for the auction than did bidders.

Only five pieces of jewelry, which the IRS said was priced at 55 percent of appraised retail value, were sold. Minimum bids ranged from $60 to $870.

"We are not guaranteeing anything," said IRS Revenue Officer Clarence Watkins.

IRS auctioneer Betsy Ontiveros said the unsold jewelry would be auctioned off later.

"There weren't any bargains here," surmised a Midland observer to the bidding.

The jewelry was confiscated in Midland, where Hahn, going by the aliases Jay L. Woods and Henry L. Waggoner, had lived and worked in recent years. He had been employed by U.S. Postal Service in Midland under the Jay L. Woods alias, according to records.

Hahn's other possessions in California were seized by the IRS for auctioning, the IRS said.

The 47-year-old Hahn, now imprisoned on California's Terminal Island, was to be freed from prison after serving a sentence for jail-jumping when Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery of Midland said an arrest warrant was issued to prevent Hahn's release.

Hahn had been a fugitive since 1983, when he failed to show up for trial on tax-related charges.

In Midland, he was indicted on three counts of giving false statements in applying for the U.S. Postal Service job and using a false Social Security number.

Additionally, Hahn is under investigation for fraud charges, Beery said.

Hahn is to be returned to Midland for trial.

2 men, woman indicted in arson case

From Staff Reports

Two men and a woman, charged with arson in Odessa to collect insurance money, were indicted Thursday under a 10-count indictment by a federal grand jury in Midland.

Indicted following probes by the FBI in Midland were George Russell Johnson, 53, of West Memphis, Ark., and Michael Roy Shively, 44, and his wife, Kim Renee Shively, 30, both of Henderson.

The three were charged with conspiracy to commit arson of the Shively residence at 6412 Mecca St. in Odessa in 1984 and setting fire to the house and a car there on June 22, 1984.

The indictment alleges that Shively on June, 27, 1984, filed a "false burglary" complaint regarding the fire and burglary of his house and cited a $40,700 loss. Mrs. Shively later filed a supplemental burglary report which listed $3,440 in additional missing property.

In mid-July 1984, Shively and his wife signed a loss-inventory sheet that listed $96,885 in losses, the indictment said.

A year later, according to the indictment, Shively "threatened" to kill Ronnie Coplen and Coplen's wife, Marsha, and children in order to "prevent the truthful testimony" of Coplen in a proceeding.

Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Shively also were charged with engineering a scheme "to defraud" and obtain money from State Farm Fire and Casualty Company.

Man arrested after firing from house

BUFFALO (AP) — Authorities arrested a man who was barricaded in his rural home today and firing shots at people who came near, authorities said.

Local authorities and the Department of Public Safety arrested the man about 9:45 a.m. after a standoff that began shortly after midnight.

"No one was hurt," said DPS spokesman Mike Cox.

The man, whose identity was not immediately released, was inside a rural house about between Buffalo and Keechi on U.S. Highway 79, according to Glenn Price, dispatcher for the Leon County Sheriff's Department.

The first call about the standoff came at midnight Thursday, Price said. The DPS SWAT team was sent to the scene by helicopter and small plane at 7:15 a.m.

"We're still under siege," Price said at about 9:15 a.m. "It didn't really get going until about five o'clock this morning...He's still got 'em holed up, and he's still firing at anyone that shows himself."

Price said the man had held two people hostage but released them this morning. But Cox could not confirm whether hostages were taken.

The last shots were fired at about 7:40 a.m., he said.

"At that time, they were negotiating with the man and attempting to get him outside the residence," Cox said.

Authorities said they had no estimate on how many shots had been come from the house.

Officials had notified the man's grown son, who was coming to Leon County from Navasota, Price said.

Buffalo is a town of 2,000 people near Interstate 45 about halfway between Dallas and Houston.

Day camp alternative to watching television

By BRIAN PEARSON

They circle and climb all over the pool tables, laughing and using the cues to whack and poke the colored balls at random, usually in no specific direction.

Probably not even Minnesota Fats could take a game of eight-, nine- or whatever-ball too seriously after an active morning of tennis, gymnastics, soccer and baseball. Besides, these pseudo-shark tots are just loosening up for the talent show.

"This is free time," Janet Swallow said Wednesday during a typical morning of summer day camp at the Midland Youth Center.

For 25 Midland third- through sixth-grade children, the camp means, learning basic skills to various activities as well as having an alternative to staying home and watching television all summer, said Ms. Swallow, executive director for the Midland-Lee Youth Center Inc.

While the boys learn soccer, baseball, tennis and basketball skills, the girls take part in gymnastics, tennis and cheerleading. The group also creates arts and crafts and conducts science experiments among other activities.

"We try to do something different every day," said Ms. Swallow, whose camp children have been meeting from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the 1001 W. Illinois Ave. center across from Midland High School. "We try to make it fun. These kids would be home watching television and bored while their parents work."

Whooping cough rarely found in area

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Whooping cough is rare in the Permian Basin, with the last case of the disease, which resembles the common cold with a hacking cough, confirmed in Odessa in December 1988, county health officials said this morning.

Midland hasn't had a confirmed case since October 1987, when a young child contracted the communicable sickness, said Monette Burke, administrator of the Midland County Health Department. Ms. Burke said about two cases a year are reported.

"It doesn't always end up being whooping cough," Ms. Burke said of the reports. "It's not a very prevalent disease."

Administrator Toby Cross of the Ector County Health Department said Odessa saw a 1-month-old boy contract the illness in December 1988 and 3-month-old male come down with it in April 1987, the only two confirmed cases during those years.

"They don't come around very often," Cross said. "In recent years it's really rare in this area."

However, it's a different medical ballgame in Austin, where six children and an adult in the past week were confirmed as having whooping cough. A health department director there called the outbreak an epidemic.

Whooping cough is a highly contagious respitory infection caused by a bacteria spread by coughing and sneezing.

The disease is contracted by inhaling infected droplets from a patient with a full-blown case. It also can be spread from soiled sheets and other contaminated objects.

A patient usually begins showing whooping cough symptoms after a seven- to 10-day incubation period. The sickness causes low-grade fever, sneezing, listlessness, vomiting and a persistent raspy cough which sometimes ends in whooping sound.

Complications can include nosebleeds, conjunctival hermorrhaging, blindness, choking and severe bacterial infections. Death occurs in some cases.

The disease can be treated with antibiotics.

Historian for Good Sam Club hunting antique camping items

By CARLA McKEOWN

LUBBOCK (AP) — For about the next three months, David Woodworth of Tehachapi, Calif., will tour the country in a Model A Ford Phaeton, displaying his antique camping equipment and searching for additional equipment that may be hiding attics and garages.

As historian of the Good Sam Club, an organization for recreational vehicle owners, Woodworth is helping create a museum of antique camping equipment. He was in Lubbock recently as part a nationwide tour to help locate and save the antique items.

During his travels, Woodworth constantly searches for any items or information related to auto-camping, as the activity was called in the beginning.

"What we want are journals, pictures, old beds and tables, etc. that people once used when they went camping," he said. "We would like to collect the diaries — even copies of diaries — because they give us an idea of what the people went through. For example, in Texas, they went from one farm to the next, opening and closing the gates. That seems unusual today, but that's how things were back then."

The Good Sam Club is not an old camping club, he said. "But, as a club, we are trying to put together this memorabilia and preserve it for posterity," Woodworth said.

While many young people are of the opinion that "RVing" is a new concept, in 1922, the New York Times estimated 15 million automobile campers were on the road, Woodworth said. "It was very big back then because it was an escape from the trains which dictated everyone's schedule," he said. "With auto-camping, they could see the real America. The trains went behind the towns."

When auto-camping originated in the early 1900s, many towns set up free auto-camping sites to lure the money-spending campers to their town. "By the 1920s they started charging campers 25 to 50 cents a night in order to keep out the undesirables — Model T owners," Woodworth said. "They figured Model T owners didn't have any money to spend and would just go on down the road to the next town."

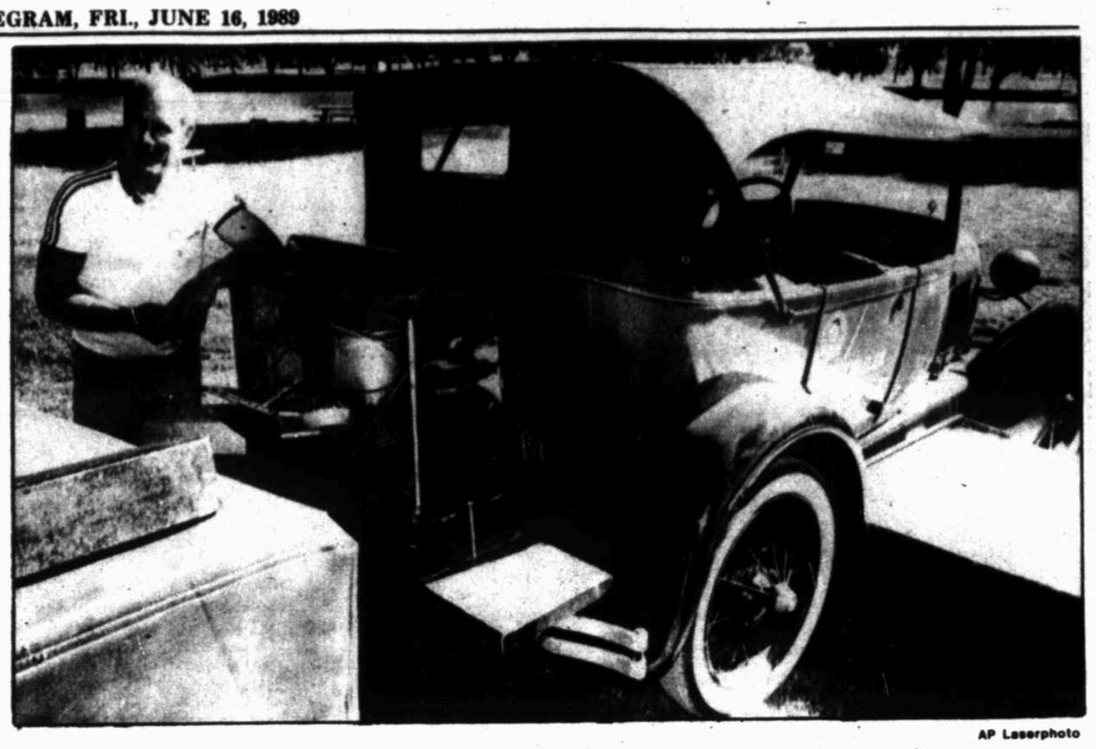

Woodworth's car is equipped with a running board that unfolds to form a picnic-type table or a bed. On the back of the car is a miniature kitchen complete with a stove, storage space, an ice chest and utensils.

"These (portable kitchens) sold for $50 from 1924 to 1930," he said. "Today people find them and either don't know what they are or think they have no use and throw them away. Antique dealers just don't say, 'We're going to collect old kitchens for cars.'"

Combining his love for old junk and his hobby of camping, Woodworth went to work for the Good Sam Club about three years ago. When he is not traveling and exhibiting his equipment, he is obtaining and restoring additional antique camping items.

"Most people don't know what it is and think it's useless," he said. "And most of it is not worth anything in value, but it is worth a lot historically."

The museum, which contains several antique camping setups, will not be kept in one locality, but will be available for loaning out to various museums and organizations.

Landman to be honored for his volunteer work

From Staff Reports

Ray Vaden, landman for Chevron, U.S.A., Inc., was to receive the American Association of Petroleum Landman's Citizen Award for his volunteer work for Keep Midland Beautiful at the AAPL Annual Meeting today in Anaheim, Calif.

Vaden

Vaden was chairman of the parks committee for Keep Midland Beautiful. Under his direction, three entrance parks were completed and a right-of-way landscape ordinance was written to encourage landscaping along city streets.

A past Trimble Service Award recipient, Vaden also has been active in other community organizations.

When Chevron relocated its land department, Vaden was transferred to Houston where he now resides.

Robbery suspects sought

Midland police are looking for three men involved in an early-morning robbery of the E-Z Mart convenience store, 2210 N. Big Spring St.

Police department public information officer Cpl. Jim White said the suspects — armed with an ice pick, baseball bat and a hand-held garden tool — entered the business about 3:30 a.m. and cornered store clerk, 20-year-old Guadalupe Rodriguez, at the fountain area.

While one of the men held Rodriguez at bay, the other two made off with three 12-packs of beer and 21 packs of cigarettes. The clerk, who was not harmed in the robbery, was then directed to surrender about $95 from the cash register, White said.

White said all of the suspects were believed to be in their late teens or early 20s.

Church holding mission

A Faith Promise Mission Conference is in progress at Tall City Missionary Baptist Church Church, 3500 Anetta Drive. Services begin today and Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

Bruce Turner, missionary to British Columbia, Canada, is the featured speaker. He is sponsored by Tall City to lead this work on Vancouver Island, located off the mainland.

A Canadian citizen, Turner has worked with the mission for more than six years and has experienced solid church growth. A project to build a church plant near Courtenay on Vancouver Island is under way.

Tall City's pastor, the Rev. W.R. Simpson, invites the public to hear Turner speak.

Motorcyclist hurt in wreck

A 26-year-old Midland man was in satisfactory condition this morning at Midland Memorial Hospital with multiple contusions and abrasions following an early-morning motorcycle accident on South Rankin Highway, a hospital spokeswoman said.

According to the police report, Paul Calvin Davis, 3001 W. Ohio Ave., was southbound nearing the 1200 block of Rankin Highway about 1:15 a.m. when his 1975 Honda motorcycle struck a stop sign.

Davis was not wearing a helmet, the police report said.

Facial mole keeps man out of prison

HOUSTON (AP) — A small blemish on his face has kept Robert Lynn Witner from getting a major blemish on his record.

Witner, 43, was arrested three months ago and charged with two aggravated robberies of a Houston convenience store. Because he was unable to post $40,000 bond, he spent 90 days in jail.

District Court Judge Frank Price Thursday dismissed the charges against Witner and he went free because he had a small, reddish mole on his lower right cheek and the man wanted for the robberies did not.

Witner said the mole he has nicked with his razor for so many years was enough to keep him out of prison, but it couldn't keep him out of jail.

"It's a sickening feeling. You tell these people, 'I'm not the person you want.' And they look at you and think you're guilty," Witner said. "It's a nightmare, really."

Defense lawyer Joseph Licata was finally able to convince authorities that the man shown in the surveillance camera had no mole and that resulted in freedom for Witner.

Witner said the mistake cost him his job, 90 days of his life and 60 pounds.

"It's been like a day in the Twilight Zone, where you wake up one day facing 99 years in prison twice over for a crime you didn't commit," he said. "Psychologically, it unbalances you."

The CitGo convenience store was robbed in November and December 1988 by a man who was captured on the camera. The robberies were shown on a local television program and someone called Harris County Detective Tom Keen and said that the man was Witner.

Keen told the Houston Chronicle that he obtained a police photo of Witner that was taken in 1987 when he was arrested for driving while intoxicated in neighboring Montgomery County and showed the picture to the two clerks who had been robbed.

Both positively identified Witner, Keen said.

Witner said he couldn't believe it when an officer who stopped him for a routine traffic violation in March told him he was under arrest for aggravated robbery.

"I came unglued," he said, but his claims of innocence got him nowhere. "The officer told me he hears that all the time."

Witner said he lost his job when he went to jail because his employer, an asbestos abatement company, wouldn't accept a collect telephone call when he tried to call and explain his situation.

He came down with bronchitis in the jail and his weight dropped from 165 pounds to less than 100 pounds, he said.

Witner said he was certain that it would take only a few days for authorities to discover the mistaken identity.

"I thought seriously that all they had to do was take a look at me and take a look at the (robber's) pictures and that would be the end of it," he said. "Little did I realize that it would be something like three months later."

Freedom came for Witner after Licata persuaded Keen about the mole on Witner's face and pointed out that the robber had no mole.

"I'm told by a lot of people that they're innocent, but when I saw that mole, I felt that he was probably being honest," Keen said.

Keen then had Witner take four polygraph tests. He passed them all.

It was then that Keen asked Assistant District Attorney Mark Vinson to drop the charges.

Vinson examined the pictures of the man in the robbery videotape and at Witner. He noticed other differences, including different-shaped ears, he said.

But the two men still closely resembled each other, he said.

"They look very, very similar," Vinson said of the robber and Witner. "If a mole ever helped a man, it helped him."

Witner admits he's a ringer for the robber. It bothers him.

"What happens now if this person goes out and robs another store. Are they going to pick me up and lock me up again?" he asked "Is this man going to do something where I have to go through this hell on earth all over again?"

Witner said he had an appointment last year to have a doctor remove the mole, but changed his mind at the last minute.

"I'm glad I did," he said. "It's going to stay where it's at. I've had it since I was born, and I'll have it when I go."

CAMP

Frank Savage, youth director, said he tries to show the children the basics of various sports without the seriousness of a training camp.

"We think at this age that probably they don't have anything like this that's real basic," Savage said. "Most of the other camps are real structured. Mainly here we try to teach them the basics about a few things and have a lot of fun."

Helping out with the staffing are six Lee or Midland high school students, some of whom take part in their schools' sports programs and have the background to pass on the basics to the children, Savage said.

Paul Howard, 11, who will be a Milam Elementary School sixth-grader next school year, said he would be "laying at home in bed and watching TV" if he wasn't at the center.

"It's really exciting," Paul said. "I like it because there's a lot of sports and you make a lot of friends."

Sixth-grader Blake Dyer, who will attend Crockett Elementary School next year, said the free time of playing pool, video games or whatever combined with learning baseball and soccer skills have made for a special summer.

The center is holding three two-week sessions this summer, the first time the program has been offered. For $45 a session, the children get all the activities plus snacks and drinks. They must bring their own food for lunch hour.

"Right now we're losing money with it, but we're not here to make money," Ms. Swallow said, adding that the center has had to make up about $1,000 in debts through fundraisers and donations. "But we can't affort to keep this program going if we're out $1,000.

"I don't think we'll know until the end of the summer whether we'll ever do it again."

Today marks the end of the first session. The second session, which begins Monday, and third will be held at the Lee Youth Center, 3500 Neely Ave. Children can be registered anytime for all or part of a session.

For more information call the Midland center at 682-1352 or the Lee center at 694-2881. The camp has room for at least 40 children.

Interpol joins investigation into missing books

GALVESTON (AP) — Interpol has joined an investigation into the disappearance of about 80 rare books from a Galveston medical school library, suggesting that the books may have been sold in other countries, officials said.

"We want to be as thorough as we can, but when you are looking at something that may have happened outside the states, it just takes a little longer," District Attorney Mike Guarino said, adding that the international scope of the case has slowed the probe.

An audit concluded in February revealed that books were missing from the Truman G. Blocker Jr. History of Medicine Collections at UTMB's Moody Medical Library.

Some scientists today believe that a previously unknown natural antigravity force makes an iron weight fall more slowly, although to an extremely small degree, than an aluminium one, says National Geographic.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

Summer vacation takes away many volunteers but not volunteer needs. If you have some free time this summer, give yourself and your community a boost and become a volunteer. Here are a few areas in which you are needed:

■ The dropout rate is a national problem. As a volunteer, you can be trained to help students study for their high school equivalency exam. Help these students get back on the right track by giving your time to them.

■ Enjoy a challenge? An agency needs a volunteer to help implement an information and referral marketing plan. This would entail developing brochures, devising a distribution plan, coordinating media efforts, and working with area nonprofit organizations. Flexible hours, can be worked around your schedule. This is an opportunity to learn new marketing skills or brush up on your old ones.

■ A new agency needs volunteers for water play activities, arts and crafts, rocking babies, field day activities, puppetry and storytelling. Help fill a child's summer with new experiences by volunteering.

■ Are you bilingual? A volunteer is needed as an interpreter or speaker for a speakers bureau. Meet with this volunteer agency and train with the volunteer director of the speakers bureau.

■ Have transportation? A volunteer is needed to get groceries and prescriptions for elderly or handicapped individuals, who, because of health, safety or weather, cannot do their own shopping. Volunteers do the shopping and deliver the order the same day it is placed. Give a little of yourself and volunteer for this special task.

■ Enjoy children? A volunteer is needed to work with students K-6 and 7-11 two hours per week by giving help with basic skill building and subject areas of difficulty. Give these children a better chance for success by helping out.

For more information on how you can volunteer, please call the Volunteer Center at 697-8781.

Gov. Bill Clements, right, listens as Texas Secretary of State Jack Rains announces his resignation. Rains will be joining a Houston law firm.

Rains resigns, to decide on gubernatorial race

AUSTIN (AP) — Secretary of State Jack Rains says he is 30 to 45 days from deciding whether to seek the 1990 Republican gubernatorial nomination.

"I have a lot of people who are anxious to support me in that race," Rains said Thursday as he announced his resignation from the secretary of state's job.

A Houston businessman before entering Gov. Bill Clements' administration, Rains will join a private law firm. He said last year he was 95 percent certain about running for governor. Thursday, he said he wasn't interested in any other office.

"I'm not a committee man. I'm an executive," he said.

Rains, who holds both business and law degrees, founded a Houston design firm. He will join the Houston office of Winstead, McGuire, Sechrest & Minick.

But politics remains on his mind, and he said he will talk with friends, family and others about the governor's race.

A poll published by the Houston Chronicle and The Dallas Morning News last month showed Rains with the lowest name identification of five potential Republican candidates.

Leading that survey was George W. Bush, the president's son. Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance, an unsuccessful GOP gubernatorial candidate in 1986, was second, and Amarillo oilman T. Boone Pickens was third.

Midland oilman Clayton Williams, set to launch his gubernatorial campaign Wednesday, also ranked ahead of the secretary of state.

But Rains said he wasn't concerned.

"If you compare me to someone who has run six times in 12 years (Hance) and spent millions of dollars — I've never run a race, I've never spent a nickel. I would expect to be behind them," he said. "I wouldn't bet the farm on an early poll."

Rains also said he has no worries about funding a gubernatorial bid, which many political consultants say could cost $15 million or more.

"I've been a (political) fundraiser in Texas for some 20 years. So I think I've demonstrated a track record that I can put money together. My political base is in Houston, Texas, and it's known for being able to back candidates," he said.

"We'll cross that (financing) bridge when we come to it, but I'm not concerned about being able to cross it."

Clements praised Rains as a superb secretary of state, but he stopped short of endorsing Rains as his successor.

"I encourage a lot of people with respect to the Republican Party," said Clements, the state's only 20th century GOP governor.

"Getting him out there in the political arena will be a plus for Texas and it will certainly be a plus for the Republican Party. I feel that way about other candidates, also," Clements said.

Clements said he would name a new secretary of state within a few days.

Mattox: Richards behind recent publicity

He continues to deny bribery allegations

STATE

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox charged the campaign of state Treasurer Ann Richards as being behind the recent publicity of allegations that $125,000 was slated for his intervention in a lawsuit.

Mattox on Thursday denied the allegations, describing them as "hot air." When asked who was responsible for the publicity, he pointed to Ms. Richards' campaign.

Ms. Richards announced last week her candidacy for the Democratic Party gubernatorial nomination, and Mattox has said he will run, too.

Mr. Richards' campaign denied the charges.

"There have been allegations made that money was given to bribe me. There have been allegations made that monies were given to bribe my assistant who handled the case. Allegations were made there were monies given to bribe the judge. All of which is a bunch of nonsense," Mattox said.

A reference to the payment allegation was made in a fraudulent insurance lawsuit that was related to the Dallas bankruptcy case of Joseph F. Landis and his Intercon Reinsurance Brokers, Ltd.

The company, Landis and others also are named in a related civil suit in U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders' court in Dallas. In that suit, Lloyd's, U.S. Corp., alleges fraudulent practices by Landis' company.

In January proceedings in a U.S. Bankruptcy Court hearing involving Landis, his company and Lawrence Dale St. John, another defendant in the Lloyd's lawsuit, the $125,000 was discussed.

According to a transcript, Samuel D. Rosen, a New York attorney for Lloyd's, asked bankruptcy trustee Don Navarro if he was "aware that Mr. Landis and Mr. St. John have testified under oath that this $125,000 payment of Mr. Landis's money was for the purpose of conveying it to the attorney general of the State of Texas?"

Navarro said he had heard about that testimony, and had heard that Landis' $125,000 was given to an intermediary, Dallas businessman Gail Cooper, a campaign contributor and fundraiser for Mattox.

But Navarro said he also understood that Landis' lawyer said he gave the $125,000 to Cooper as a consulting fee for his help in locating a new insurance carrier for Landis.

Following Cooper's involvement on Landis' behalf, a judge reversed his $3.2 million default judgment against Landis after the attorney general's office presented him with an overriding court order, The Dallas Morning News reported in a copyright story Thursday.

The State Board of Insurance initiated the legal action against Landis, but the attorney general's office settled the case by fining Landis $30,000 in attorney's fees and costs and ordering him not to sell insurance without a license, a restriction that already applies in Texas, The Morning News said.

But Mattox said the $30,000 fine wasn't lenient.

"We followed the exact same manner of handling this case as we have all the others," he said.

He said his impending bid for governor is playing a part in the allegations becoming public at this time.

Asked if Ms. Richards, who announced her candidacy last week, was behind it, he said, "I think her people are."

Glenn Smith, Ms. Richards' campaign manager, said Mattox was wrong.

"We don't know anything more about these allegations than what we've read in the newspapers," Smith said.

"To my knowledge, nobody in the (campaign) organization knew anything about these allegations until they appeared in the newspapers. It sounds like a very serious matter. But we are readers and watchers of the news, just like everybody else," Smith said.

Mattox said he has spoken with Cooper about the allegations.

"He said they (the allegations) were never made," Mattox told news reporters.

Mattox lashed out at Landis, saying, "He is a real smooth-talking individual. His entire company was built on fabrications."

Kraft's contest agreement fair, Mattox says

AUSTIN (AP) — An agreement in which Kraft will compensate consumers over a misprinted promotional contest is fair to all, Attorney General Jim Mattox says.

The misprint led more than 100 people to wrongly believe they had won a 1990 van, said Mattox, whose consumer protection division began negotiations with Kraft on Tuesday.

Mattox announced Thursday that Kraft had agreed to compensation for all winning tickets with cash and through a special drawing in which the company will give away four vans instead of the one originally intended.

"Kraft was very cooperative, and the misprint was not intentional on the company's part," Mattox said.

The misprinted contest tickets were included in packages of Kraft cheese sold in grocery stores and run as newspaper advertisements. The contest was cancelled when Kraft learned that the misprint had given hundreds of people winning tickets for the van.

Mattox said his office received more than 60 consumer complaints after Kraft cancelled the contest.

Under terms of the voluntary compliance agreement — which hasn't been formally signed — consumers who notify Kraft by mail with proof of their winning tickets will be compensated, Mattox said. Notifications to Kraft must be postmarked by midnight Friday (and sent by first class mail, he said.

Consumers with winning tickets for the van will receive $250 per household. Consumers with winning tickets for other gifts will receive per household $50, $25 and $5 awards, Mattox said.

Then, the tickets of all those consumers will be included in a special drawing to be held next month for the four vans, 400 bicycles, 2,000 skateboards and 32,000 packages of processed cheese food.

The company also agreed not to run any more such promotions in Texas without adopting internal procedures that are designed to prevent similar mistakes. Kraft also agreed to pay the state $12,000 in investigative costs, Mattox said.

Smithsonian chartered in August 1846

Congress chartered the "nation's attic," the Smithsonian Institution, on Aug. 10, 1846. It was named in honor of English scientist Joseph Smithson, whose bequest of $500,000 made it possible. Smithson's will directed the money be used "for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men."

STATE IN BRIEF

Clements optimistic about comp bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said he is optimistic about the upcoming special session on workers' compensation reform, which he expects to last less than a month.

"I think that everyone concerned, on all sides of the issue, realize that we're down to the meat of the matter, and it's necessary now to come up with a proper bill that is appropriate and right for this state," Clements said Thursday.

"I am absolutely committed that we're going to get a good bill done through this Legislature, or we're going to be here a long, long time," he said.

Clements called the special session, which will begin Tuesday, after lawmakers failed to agree on a workers' compensation reform plan during the regular session that ended May 29.

The system of paying compensation for workers injured or killed on the job has been criticized as combining high rates for employers with low benefits for workers.

The governor can call a special session for 30 days at a time, and he also is empowered to call back-to-back sessions.

"I really think that we'll be here less than a month," Clements said. "I think that everyone is sensitive to the issue. I think they realize how important it is to the economy of this state...and I think that they fully understand that we are all serious."

Woman beaten to death

HALTOM CITY (AP) — A woman who reportedly moved here four years ago to escape crime in Houston was found beaten to death in her home, police said.

Vilorie Nelson was beaten to death Wednesday afternoon, apparently by someone who forced open a side window of the residence she shared with her daughter, Haltom City Police Lt. R.W. McQueary said.

The daughter, who was not identified, reported finding Mrs. Nelson's body when she returned home from work about 7 p.m. Wednesday. Officials said the woman had been dead several hours.

Bill Fabian, a spokesman for the Tarrant County medical examiner, said Mrs. Nelson was killed by blows from an undetermined blunt object. The examiner's report did not specify where the woman was hit, but police said she suffered a head wound.

The daughter said she found her mother's body lying face up on a floor of the bedroom, McQueary said.

The house was ransacked, but the daughter said she was uncertain whether anything was missing, the police lieutenant said. The killer apparently entered after forcing open a window, he said.

Marineworld dolphin dies

GALVESTON (AP) — A dolphin born at Sea-Arama Marineworld less than a month ago has died, the second such death at the popular tourist attraction in as many months.

The dolphin calf born May 18 was found near death Tuesday morning by a park employee, said Sea-Arama spokeswoman Christy Benson. The dolphin, kept in a tank with its mother, Beta, was lethargic and having difficulty breathing.

Dolphin trainers called the park's veterinarian, who prescribed an injection of antibiotics. But the animal died before a second injection could be given, Ms. Benson said.

"We have no evident cause of death at this time," she said, adding that tissue samples have been taken for testing.

On April 9, a 3-day-old dolphin also died suddenly and subsequent testing indicated it died from a lack of immunities, Ms. Benson said.

A dolphin must receive certain nutrients and antibodies from its mother's milk during the first 24 hours of life, she said. If the antibodies are not present or are in small amounts, the risk of death from bacterial infections increases.

I-37 rest area planned

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The 145-mile drive between Corpus Christi and San Antonio should be a little easier by next summer when the state provides a rest stop for long-distance motorists traveling along Interstate 37.

A state-owned rest stop is under construction near the Live Oak-Atascosa county line, or about half way between San Antonio and Corpus Christi, the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation has announced.

The only other state rest stop on I-37 between the two cities is more than 120 miles south of San Antonio.

"I think the restrooms are a good idea," said Thelma Barnes, automobile travel supervisor for the American Automobile Association regional office in San Antonio. "We have found that most people like to stop about halfway to their destination, for one reason or another."

Ms. Barnes said her office receives a lot of inquiries from clients asking about facilities along major highways.

The $2.4 million project including restrooms, covered picnic shelters and landscaping is due for completion next June.

Lawmen free on bond

SHERMAN (AP) — Two Oklahoma lawmen charged with conspiring to kidnap and torture a suspected drug dealer have been released on bond after spending 28 days in jail, defense attorneys said.

Attorney Bill Sullivant said a federal judge released Love County Sheriff Wesley Liddell Jr. and Marietta policeman Roger Ray Hilton late Thursday from the Grayson County Jail on $50,000 personal recognizance bonds.

Both lawmen face trial Aug. 7 in federal court at Sherman on the charges, Sullivant said.

A federal magistrate earlier had denied bond for the lawmen, but Sullivant appealed that ruling during a hearing last week.

The FBI alleges Liddell and Hilton conspired to kidnap a suspected drug dealer in north Texas, bring him back to Oklahoma and torture him into revealing where illegal drugs are being manufactured.

The alleged plot was never carried out.

Sullivant said Liddell is on paid voluntary suspension until the case is settled.

Hilton, who is on paid suspension until his termination becomes effective July 1, can be reinstated if exonerated in court, Sullivant said.

Woman found in freezer

HOUSTON (AP) — Authorities are looking for the daughter of an elderly woman whose body was discovered hidden in a freezer at her apartment.

The body of 75-year-old Sarah Murray was found Thursday by police officers who went to her apartment in northwest Houston.

Although Ms. Murray was last seen alive June 4, she was not reported missing until June 12 "because this daughter was putting out conflicting stories" of her whereabouts, Houston police Sgt. J.C. Mosier said.

A cause of death has not yet been determined, but Mosier said there were obvious wounds on the body. He refused to elaborate.

Mosier said two investigators Thursday went to Mrs. Murray's apartment and noticed a large freezer in the bedroom. They found her body under a pile of frozen food, he said.

Gas leak causes evacuation

FORT WORTH (AP) — Firefighters evacuated a two-block area near downtown businesses Thursday due to a natural gas leak.

A broken valve was replaced at 12:05, about 1½ hours after the leak was discovered.

One woman at the scene was taken to a hospital, but officials said they believe her respiratory trouble was not related to the leak.

R.J. Forester, an aide to the deputy fire chief, says the leak was caused by a construction crew, but didn't elaborate.

Clements signs more than 800 bills

AUSTIN (AP) — After signing more than 800 bills into law, Gov. Bill Clements says he is still reviewing the $47.4 billion state budget and some bills that he might veto.

In a flurry of bill signing Thursday, Clements endorsed measures to build more prison cells, overhaul the criminal justice system and bring water and sewer services to substandard "colonias."

Working against a Sunday deadline to complete work from the 1989 Legislature's regular session, the governor said he hoped to complete quickly his review of the 1,081 bills left by lawmakers when they adjourned on May 29.

"I've got about 200 to go," he said late Thursday.

Under the Texas Constitution, Clements has until midnight Sunday to finish the job, although he said he expected to be finished by tonight. "I will, I guarantee you," he told news reporters while adding a warning: "It might be pretty late."

The governor said he was particularly pleased with the criminal justice overhaul, which calls for 11,000 new prison beds along with new sentencing options that would place inmates in community facilities instead of state prisons.

"By our action, we are putting the justice back into the criminal justice system in Texas," he said.

Texas is under a federal court order to keep the state prison population under 95 percent of capacity. Counties have complained that state inmates awaiting transfer are backed up in county jails.

Lawmakers hope the plan, which should increase prison capacity from 39,000 to 61,000 beds by the early 1990s, will answer those problems.

The governor also signed bills changing laws on organized crime and the use of verbal statements as evidence in criminal investigations.

The oral confession bill allows police to record a suspect's statement either without telling him or after giving him one warning instead of continued warnings.

The measure on organized crime changes the definition from five people to three people carrying on illegal activity. It also increases penalties and adds fraud, bribery and drug offenses as punishable under the statute.

The colonias bill will allow proceeds from millions of dollars in state bonds to be used to provide sewer and water services to the substandard developments, many of which are located along the Texas-Mexico border.

With lawmakers and law enforcement representatives looking on, Gov. Bill Clements prepares to sign legislation which overhauls the criminal justice system. The legislation, which authorizes $400 million in bonds for new prison construction, is among the more than 1,000 bills Clements must act on before midnight Sunday.

Among other bills signed were measures to:

- Regulate businesses offering gifts and prizes to lure customers to their sales pitches.
- Allow licensing of "minibars" in hotel rooms.
- Make it a misdemeanor to sell cigarettes or tobacco products to anyone under age 18.
- Prohibit motorists from carrying children under age 12 in the beds of pickup trucks traveling more than 35 mph.
- Increase the power of cities and counties to regulate sexually oriented businesses, such as adult book stores, movie theaters and motels.
- Make it a felony for lawyers to solicit business in a hospital, funeral parlor, cemetery, or at the scene of an accident.
- Designate anabolic steroids and growth hormones as controlled substances, raising penalties for possession, and requiring schools to post a copy of the law in gymnasiums.
- Ban public school students from carrying telephone pagers except for those working for volunteer emergency organizations.
- Streamline government services with uniform financial reporting practices, and a statewide accounting and payroll system. "These initiatives will greatly improve our state's management...and as a result save taxpayers money," Clements said.
- Establish a procedure for saluting the Texas flag.
- Increase penalties for hunting at night, or using electric shock devices to catch fish.
- Raise penalties for bootlegging recordings of concerts.

Officials inspect the wreckage of a Bell OH-85 U.S. military helicopter that crashed near the Panama Canal.

Three American soliders killed in Panama Canal copter crash

PANAMA CITY (AP) — Three U.S. soldiers were killed when the military helicopter they were riding in crashed near the Panama Canal, but a U.S. Embassy spokesman said the accident did not involve any hostile fire.

"We don't know why or how" the accident occurred, U.S. Embassy spokesman Terry Kneebone said Thursday, adding only that the crash of the OH-58 helicopter "apparently was an accident."

The helicopter went down about 2 p.m., Kneebone said. The helicopter and all three aboard belonged to the 7th Light Infantry Division from Fort Ord, Calif.

Names of the victims were withheld pending notification of their families.

The division was among about 1,900 troops sent to Panama following the government's nullification of the May 7 elections and post-election violence in which three opposition candidates were beaten.

When the helicopter crashed, it was serving as an escort for a military convoy transporting troops between Fort Clayton, on the Pacific side of the Canal, to Fort Sherman, on the Atlantic, Kneebone said.

The U.S. Southern Command said the helicopter went down near a road in the town of Chilibre, about 21 miles north of Panama City, and that it is investigating the crash.

He said the accident caused the temporary suspension of traffic linking Panama City with the nearby city of Colon.

The helicopter, also known as the Kiowa, is made by Bell.

Israel raids Abu Nidal's base

TYRE, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes blasted a base operated by Palestinian terrorist Abu Nidal at dawn today in twin bombing runs. Two children were reported wounded.

Six U.S.-built Skyhawk jets swooped down for the raid on the beachside Rashidiyeh refugee camp, police said.

An army spokesman in Israel said the planes hit all the targets. The spokesman said the base that was bombed had been used to launch guerrilla attacks against Israel and its self-declared security zone in southern Lebanon. The camp is 10 miles north of the Israeli border.

Palestinians fight West Bank illiteracy

By MARY SEDOR

KAFR EIN, Occupied West Bank (AP) — A half dozen 8-year-olds sat on the floor of a makeshift classroom in this West Bank village and leafed through a science book on animals. Some drew Palestinian flags in the margins, but none could read the simple text.

"If they were in school, they'd be able to read by now," said Najah Mahmoud, the children's 15-year-old teacher. "I'm trying to get them to memorize some words, but it just isn't enough."

Illiteracy is growing among the West Bank's 230,000 elementary school children, who have been deprived of an education for 16 months as a result of Israel's closure of schools. Classrooms have remained empty for all but a few weeks since Feb. 3, 1988.

Israeli authorities say they closed the West Bank's 1,194 schools, including 145 kindergartens, because they were breeding grounds for violent protests during the 18-month Palestinian uprising. Fifteen schools in the Gaza Strip also have been closed, but the army has not shut down the entire system.

Israel has come under increasing international pressure, including a call from U.S. Secretary of State James A. Baker III, to end what many consider a collective punishment and to reopen classes when the closure order comes up for renewal on Monday.

"We would like to see the schools open but without an escalation of violence and without an increase in danger that children would be injured in the process. That's our concern, and Mr. Baker's concern, as well," Foreign Minister Moshe Arens said in an interview.

Palestinian fourth-graders study in a cramped one-room home in the West Bank village of Kafr Ein — an underground facility set up in defiance of Israeli closure of schools.

To try to keep students from falling too far behind, Palestinians have been running underground classes in more than 100 West Bank towns and villages in defiance of army orders outlawing such alternative education.

The lessons are taught in unused buildings, mosques, churches or even in the open air, shaded by a tree. But, according to Arab educators, these so-called "people's schools" have produced mixed results.

"The problem we face now is illiteracy," said Khalil Mahshi, principal of the Quaker-run Friends School in Ramallah. "Instead of consolidating reading skills at ages 7 to 9, we are dealing with children as old as 9 years old who are illiterate."

Malashi said some children from poorer families, who have taken on unskilled jobs to supplement meager family incomes, may become permanent dropouts. And wealthy Palestinians, concerned about the educational prospects for their children, are leaving for the United States and Europe.

"Long term, the community is going to pay a price at the level of development, production and skilled manpower. This is the biggest asset of any society," he said.

The second-graders studying in a cramped one-room stone house in Kafr Ein, a village of 1,000 about 25 miles north of Jerusalem, spent a recent science class drawing pictures of donkeys, chickens and camels.

Samir, a dark-eyed 7-year-old, carefully sketched two outlawed Palestinian flags onto the hump of his camel. "I'd like to be able to read. It is important," he said in a small, serious voice. "Instead, I can draw a Palestinian flag."

Grades one through six in Kafr Ein study two hours each day, doubling up two classes at a time on opposite sides of the room. There are no classes for the upper grades, and the only teaching materials in evidence were two tattered primary-level science books, some colored markers and two chalkboards.

But teaching materials weren't the only thing missing. The second-graders' 15-year-old teacher, Miss Mahmoud, only in 9th grade herself, conceded she has no teaching qualifications.

FAMILY MATTERS

IQ tests not an accurate measure of intelligence

By JIM MAY

May

DEAR FAMILY: My daughter was a first grade student at (school's name). She has always made good grades (all As). When I met with her teacher at the end of the year, I asked her about the results of the IQ tests that my daughter took earlier in the year. I was shocked to find that she only had an IQ of 105. I just don't believe that the test is right. Our daughter is very bright. She started talking at 10 months.

Her teacher told me not to be concerned about her score. She thought that (daughter's name) just had a bad day. I have talked to several of my friends whose children don't do nearly as well in school as my daughter does but they had higher IQ scores. Her father and I are both worried about this. Should we be concerned? Can I have her retested? What can I do to increase her scores? WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: IQ tests were designed to help educators identify which students may need remedial aid, have learning problems or be eligible for gifted programs. An IQ test cannot measure intelligence. The most an IQ test can give is an indication of a student's chances of doing well in school.

I am not a proponent of IQ tests except in special cases. I have found that motivation, social competence, self-esteem and self-discipline are extremely important to academic success. An IQ test does not measure any of these.

I encourage you and your husband to disregard the results of this IQ test. Your daughter has already shown her capabilities. Research has indicated that IQ scores fluctuate through time. For example, researchers in one study found that over a 14-year period, IQs fluctuated by as much as 30 points in about one-third of the children.

Continue to focus on your daughter's strengths. Encourage her scholastic performance and the development of other gifts and skills that she may have.

DEAR FAMILY: Ths may sound like a dumb question but I don't know any games to play with my 5-year-old son. His sister is 2 and all I know is her little games. He is going to be home all day this summer and I want to do things with him that will help his development. I don't want to park him in front of the television, but I really don't know what else to do. Can you suggest some games that I can play with him? GAMEY

DEAR GAMEY: I can. Your daughter may even enjoy some of these games too. The easiest is "Follow the Leader." Choose a leader and the other two form a straight line behind the leader. The leader begins by moving the line forward through some actions that everyone in the line must follow (for example, walking on tiptoes, skipping, hopping on one leg).

Another game is "Hide and Seek." You may wish to play the game indoors first if your daughter plays. One of the three is "It." Select a home base (say a chair). Have the person count to 10 (your daughter can only pretend to count). When "It" finishes counting, "It" shouts "Here I come ready or not." When "It" finds someone, he or she should say "I see Jimmy in the ...." The last one to be found is "It."

Statues also is a fun game to play indoors but it may be a little advanced for your daughter. The object of the game is to assume various positions and hold them like a statue (remain motionless no matter what). "It" tries to make the "statues" laugh or move. It can make funny faces, say funny things, or do anything that "It" wants to do except touch the statues. The first statue to move becomes "It."

In addition to these games, the YMCA has summer programs that are both fun and educational. Many of the local churches have vacation Bible schools during the summer.

Video tapes ideal gift for dad

By MAX McQUEEN
New York Times News Service

CNS Graphic

Coming as it does five weeks after Mother's Day, Father's Day always seems like an afterthought.

It's a hard holiday to celebrate as a family unit.

Even with women's liberation and today's two-career households, on Mother's Day it's relatively easy for husband, the kids and the grandkids to kidnap mom from the kitchen and treat her to something special.

Then there's Father's Day.

What routine job can a clan do together to show their appreciation for dad?

Tackle him en masse while he's washing the car and say "Stand back, Dad. We're going to clean your precious '69 Cadillac for you. All 20 of us."

Dear old dad would probably have a heart attack right on the spot.

So what can you buy for papa for Father's Day that he doesn't already have, or isn't in the process of passing on to the next generation or donating to Goodwill?

Well ... though the American Video Association doesn't pay me to say this, videos aren't a bad idea.

After all, the vast majority of VCRs are bought and played with by fathers age 30 and upwards.

There always seems to be room for a new video on the shelf.

Besides, videos are a cinch to wrap, too. Scot that I am, I'll go for the inexpensive, easy-to-wrap gift every time. Just ask my family.

Of the thousands of videos available, my favorite Father's Day title remains "How to Beat a Speeding Ticket" (Active Home, $14.95).

WHAT FATHER wouldn't appreciate 30 minutes of taped tips on how to avoid speeding tickets?

Plus, when he's done with it, he can pass it along to his children. And grandchildren.

Sports videos are available for every interest. However, I must forewarn you about "The Very Best of the Football Follies," that free video you get for subscribing to Sports Illustrated.

Do not, I repeat, DO NOT give this as a Father's Day gift.

Though narrator Steve Sabol refers to this 44 minutes of bloopers as a "significant milestone" in the 20-year history of the National Football League's video series, it is the poorest compilation of sports footage I've ever seen.

How does that saying go? "You get what you pay for."

Though I rank playing, watching or talking about golf up there with getting a root canal by a drunk dentist, I must admit the PGA's "1989 Golf Digest Video Almanac" is well-produced and extremely informative.

Following the PGA tour around the country, this hourlong tape shows highlights by the month, from the Mony Tournament in January to the Centel Classic in November.

Sports Illustrated could take some lessons from Golf Digest, which produced this tape.

An extra bonus is that the book form of the video makes an excellent companion piece. You can order both for just $19.95 by calling 1-203-373-7168.

I prefer my golf the way Tim Conway does: as little as possible. That's why I like "Dorf on Golf" and his recent "Dorf's Golf Bible."

Though Sam Snead joins Conway on the latter, rest assured precious little time is spent actually playing golf.

AS MANY HOW-TO videos as there are on golf (and there are hundreds of them), there are even more on tennis.

Everybody from Bobby Riggs (remember him?) to Jimmy Connors (remember him?) have their video say on how best to play the game.

Bruce Jenner and Dick Van Patten throw caution to the wind and play just for fun in "Dirty Tennis."

This 33-minute assault on uppity tennis etiquette is Jenner and Van Patten's answer to Conway's Dorf attack on golf-course snobbery.

If there was one new sports tape I would recommend for baseball-loving dads, it would be "Mickey Mantle: The American Dream Comes to Life."

For an hour, the Mick quips about his Yankee years. But never mind all the stories, some on the field, some not.

What I'll always remember about this tape is the reverential tone in which Mantle speaks about the late home-run king, Roger Maris.

It's not so much what Mantle says, but how he says it that makes you realize his deep love for his former teammate. It's strangely touching.

Well, you know your father's taste and interests, so check out the how-to section of your video store.

In larger stores you'll find instruction videos on every thing from archery to zebra safaris.

Now, how about father-son films to view with dad and/or grandad while mom and/or grandma do the dishes Sunday afternoon?

IT'S NO SURPRISE that most films made about fathers and sons have a turbulent bent, with the two Godfather chapters being the definite sagas about father-son rivalries.

Other great films revealing the often strained nature of father-son relationships are "The Chosen," "The Great Santini," "I Never Sang For My Father," "Ordinary People" and "The Stone Boy."

DEAR ABBY

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have been divorced from my first husband for five years, and am now happily married to another man.

My problem is my niece (by marriage to my first husband) — I will call her Melanie. She is 17 years old and still keeps in touch with me. Melanie has been calling me with a rather strange request. She wants me to arrange a "family portrait" to include me and my ex-husband, who is her mother's brother. In that picture she wants her own mother and father, who are now divorced and both living with other mates, and herself!

Melanie has been begging me to round up these people and arrange for a studio portrait. When I asked her what her mother (my ex-sister-in-law) thought about this idea, she said, "She said she would be rather uncomfortable with the idea, but she would do it if you would."

Abby, I am not comfortable with this idea, but I hate to hurt Melanie's feelings. How would you handle this? — EX-FAMILY MEMBER

DEAR EX-FAMILY MEMBER: I would tell Melanie that the "family" she would like to re-create for a family portrait no longer exists, so it is very unrealistic to take a "family portrait" now.

Let her down as gently as possible. The poor girl is still hurting, and has not yet accepted that the "family" she once had is no longer a family.

DEAR ABBY: These days, with so much pressure on us to "optimize" our time, it is very frustrating to have to lose so much time in public jockeying for a place, or your turn in line. So, when someone jumps in ahead of you, when you've been waiting for a very long time, you fume — not wanting to create a scene.

What, if anything, should be said if a salesperson overlooks you waiting, and turns to a newcomer on the scene? Is it better to let it go, or what? — FUMING IN ONTARIO, CANADA

DEAR FUMING: I would not get into an argument with a stranger who deliberately moved in ahead of me in line; neither would I fume about it. (If the line were a long one, you can be sure that someone else would remind the "squeezer-inner" where the end of the line was.)

If a salesperson "overlooked" me to wait on a newcomer, I would politely remind that salesperson that I was "next." (Nice guys who are too nice finish last.)

DEAR ABBY: In regards to the fathers who are divorced, pay child support, but are dissatisfied with the amount of child support that actually goes toward the child's needs: If the fathers are as concerned as they claim to be, they should seek custody of their children, and make sure their children receive the care and attention they deserve.

I am a happily married man (thank God) and our marriage is strong, but my parents were divorced. My father paid child support, but I was raised by my mother, who was a very bitter and unhappy woman.

The real tragedy of their divorce is that I grew up seeing my father through my mother's eyes. I never really knew my father until I was 18 or 19 years old.

I know it wasn't his fault, but in retrospect, I would have settled for a little more of his time and a lot less money.

Children who grow up with two parents who really care about each other don't know how lucky they are. — MY NAME IS LEGION

DEAR ABBY: When little Joey died, three months before his eighth-grade graduation, I cannot tell you how good I felt when his classmates mentioned him in their graduation exercises.

Please advise all reunion committees to send flowers, or in some way acknowledge the memory of those classmates who have passed on. It means so much to their families. — G.L. AIRHART, MAPLE VALLEY, WASH.

Dear Abby's Cookbooklet is a collection of favorite recipes — all tested, tried and terrific! To order, send your name and address, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Abby's Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

AT WIT'S END

Guilt an effective tool to restore moral fiber

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

People talk about the moral breakdown and the lack of ethics in America as if they don't know what to do about them. I know what to do: Bring back guilt! Good old-fashioned, intimidating, demoralizing, threatening, viper-tongued guilt.

It used to be an art form among mothers, passed from generation to generation. When was the last time you refused to speak to your kids for four days, and when they asked why, you said, "YOU know!" When they persisted with "Tell me," you answered, "I can't tell you anything."

I figure I have a lifetime pass into my children's lives. If they were sports heroes and sold autographs to a bunch of star-struck kids who tagged along after them as if they were gods, don't you think I'd put a cork in their bottles? I'd do something subtle, like send 'em a check for signing my Mother's Day card with a note, "Tell me if it cost more."

The morality erosion has surfaced on all levels, from top government, sports and industry to relationships. A commitment these days isn't worth the spit it takes to form the words, "You can count on me." We either can keep lawyers busy — like the recent case in which a girl sued her prom date for canceling out, causing her to get stuck with the expenses of flowers, etc. Or we can start early and stay late with kids and elevate our expectations of them.

I personally blamed our son for the stock market crash of 1988. He will never borrow more money than he can pay back again. They all have tapes of me in the labor room before their births, which they can play back on their VCRs ... just in case they think my birthday doesn't matter. Where else can they get that kind of love?

I personally hate guilt. I hated it when my mother used it on me, but it worked. I would have waited until I was 55 to get married if I hadn't had to hear her say one more time, "We're not asking you NOT to get married; we're only asking you to wait until you're sure."

Today, whenever one of my kids messes up, I have a "look" that is just below the one where your dog dies in your arms. This is accompanied by deep sighing and threats that have no rationale. They probably would have skipped school more than they did, but they weren't quite sure if I would appear and chain them to their desks or if I was bluffing.

It's a great temptation for kids to cut deals with integrity when the front pages are full of Exxons, Boeskys, Norths, and TV evangelists selling paradise.

It is within each of us to etch a line of moral standards in our life. The hard part is not to cross over it for money, power or personal gain. The inner voice of a mother at your elbow, threatening you with giving her chest pains if you so much as put a toe over that line, can't hurt.

Erma Bombeck is columnist of Universal Press Syndicate.

Make Father's Day stylish

New York Times News Service

Sunday is Father's Day, and somehow even creative people find their imaginations grinding to a halt when it comes to buying a gift.

Unless there is a hobby like golf or stamp collecting to give direction to the quest, a child or wife can feel totally at sea.

Hence the decision to buy something "safe" like a striped tie or a plain white shirt. Well, there are ties and shirts that are a bit more imaginative and still tasteful.

Why not a tie with dots instead of stripes? Or florals instead of solids? Why not a paisley or mattress-ticking vest instead of a sweater vest? Why not a patterned pullover sweater instead of a classic navy blue?

There's more to life than work, and there's more to weekend wear than a plain polo shirt. Anyone's father might be pleased by something that's fun to wear, something that doesn't look like everything he already owns.

Vests make a strong fashion statement this year for men as well as women. Bergdorf Goodman has wide-striped and mattress-ticking versions by Tom Gilbey of London ($350) and millefleurs vests by David Martin ($125). Saks Fifth Avenue has subtle paisley and foulard waistcoats ($45).

Horizontal stripes in wide and narrow widths give a new look to silky soft cotton T-shirts and polo shirts at Paul Stuart ($49.50 to $76.50). The subtlest stripes of all are on Dior's cotton shirt with fine horizontal lines ($69.50 at Bloomingdale's).

Stripes, paisleys and bold coin dots enliven bow ties at Barneys New York ($18.50 to $35), and discreet dots of red, black or navy add interest to classically styled white cotton shirts by Ike Behar ($95 at Bergdorf's).

Dad can even have polka-dot cuff links of enamel on sterling silver ($265 at Paul Stuart). Bonwit Teller has a collection of polka-dot four-in-hand ties in fashionably wide widths ($50 to $55) and more daring patterns in muted tones by Giorgio Armani ($60), while Saks has colorful florals and geometrics by Hugo Boss ($56.50).

Barneys has some short-sleeved sport shirts that are a sophisticated take on the Hawaiian print shirt. These have palm trees and tropical flowers in tones of beige on beige ($165). Good selections of flowered swim trunks can be found at Barneys and Bergdorf's, which also has paisley trunks by Etro.

Undershorts in abstract patterns by Joe Boxer are $15 at Saks, where more traditional checks and stripes by Charvet are $65. Paul Stuart has madras cotton pajamas ($79.50) and Bonwit's has silk pajamas in black and cream prints ($105).

Of course, you can steer clear of fashion altogether and choose a magnifying glass (handy for the farsighted) or an antique inkwell for his desk (Saks Fifth Avenue has both), a sleek Thermos bottle in black and steel (Barneys has a selection), a fitted toiletries case (every store has some), or even a telescope (Bloomingdale's has desktop and floor models) — for a dad who likes to keep an eye on things.

Cal Angels go through motions

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

The California Angels came to Midland Thursday. They got off their bus, changed into their uniforms, went through the motions, and then left.

In other words, the California team did not break their seven game losing streak Thursday, as Midland defeated the parent club 4-1. It was a game that didn't showcase the California team. It was a game that one of the teams had to win. The Midland Angels just happened to swing the bat more and connected on more hits than did the big league club.

Midland pitcher Kevin Trudeau said before the game "Something's got to break today. They're on a losing streak, and so are we."

WITH both teams in the midst of pennant races, the California club opted to rest its starters after a token turn at bat for each. The game was effectively over by the bottom of the second.

The bottom of the second marked the point in the game when eight of the nine California players had come to the plate and taken their swings.

Half way through the second, California coaches Deron Johnson, Bobby Knoop and Joe Coleman, and manager Doug Rader took the field to save injury to the front-liners.

Up 1-0, Midland added two runs when Gary DiSarcina doubled, driv-

For Holtzman, game is promise come true

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

For Rick Holtzman, Thursday's exhibition between the American League California Angels and Texas League Midland Angels was a promise made good.

"When I bought the club two years ago, I vowed to bring a major league exhibition game to Midland and Bill Davidson (Midland general manager) and I have been working on it ever since."

And Thursday was delivery day...

With as many fingers as Holtzman has in the minor league pie, it's surprising he remained faithful to his resolve, but that probably is partly the secret to his business success.

Holtzman has clubs at all levels, the latest acquisition Class AAA Tucson of the Pacific Coast League.

"You've got the farm system," the tongue was in cheek, "when are you going to get a major league club to complete the picture?"

No tongue in cheek answer, "We tried to buy the Texas Rangers," admitted the Chicago developer. "But we haven't given up. We're looking at some other possibilities. The thing is, you have to establish credibility in a city."...

A couple of years ago, Joe Coleman was California's roving pitching coach and now he handles the major league staff.

"Sure, I miss coming into Midland, playing golf at Hogan Park, seeing balls fly out of the park."

Turns out that Coleman not only knows Al Patterson, the golf pro at Big Spring's Comanche Trails, "but I worked for him when he was the pro in Fort Myers, Fla."....

Joe likes the extra deck of outfield advertising and so does Brian Harvey, the Angels' relief ace, who pitched here a couple of years ago, but not enough to want to be back here.

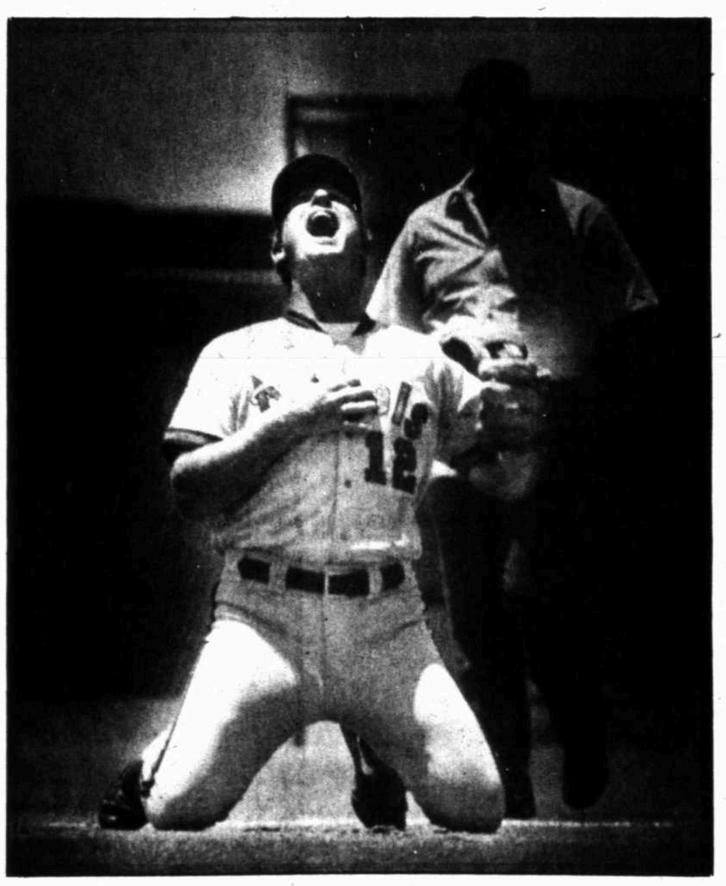

The Angels' skid: "We've lost seven straight and still are only four games out of first place. Lose seven straight and you are usually 12 games out," said Harvey, last year's surprise bullpen package for California...

Veteran Johnny Ray, who came over from Pittsburgh last year, expressed the same sentiment. "All clubs go through slumps, we couldn't expect to play .700 ball all season."

Also from Ray, who played his AA ball in the Southern League, "This is a good sized ball park." The tone was surprise, which means someone has been telling stories....

Brian Downing, who started with the White Sox in 1973 and has been with the Angels for 12 years, says Anaheim's Big A isn't the same since they enclosed it for the Los Angeles Rams. "It's antiseptic now." And the big A, the trade mark of the stadium when it open ended, "is laying in a field somewhere."...

Abbott W-Ls make news, not handicap

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

You can't blame Midland Angel fans if they don't exactly rejoice over the fact that Jim Abbott, the one-handed, Olympic gold medal winner from the University of Michigan, went straight to the major leagues with the California Angels instead of playing one game in the minors.

After all, Abbott was ticketed for Midland in his first professional year for grooming before he made the grade in spring training.

Abbott, however, is grateful for the early break in his young pro career and wants to make the most of it.

"I was a little surprised to be with California this year, but I really didn't know what to expect," said Abbott Thursday prior to the exhibition game between California and the Texas League Midland Angels at Angel Stadium.

"I DIDN'T know much about how professional baseball worked. I just went to spring training, hoping to do the best I could. I was prepared to play baseball wherever they sent me. I just wanted to play up to my ability."

So far Abbott is holding his own in the big time, owning a 5-4 record after 10 starts and a respectable 3.56 ERA in 60⅔ innings. Even big league clubs don't ask much more from any rookie.

Still, many players have been rushed to the big top without minor league experience, only to find they are a brief burning light in a sea of darkness. The Texas Rangers' David Clyde, who was used up in one season out of high school, is a good example.

ABBOTT doesn't fear a like fate. First of all, he isn't just out of high school.

"I knew my abilities and was not afraid to take the step into the majors," says Abbott. "This is a big opportunity and it's up to me to make the most of that opportunity. I knew there were going to be some ups and downs and I've seen both already.

"The main thing is making the adjustment to the every day grind and concentration required in the pros. I wasn't used to playing games every day. I've still got a lot to learn, but I've been pleased so far."

Nicklaus up to old tricks with old sticks

By HAL BOCK

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The old putter had been in and out of Jack Nicklaus' bag any number of times, tossed in the back of closet now and then, retrieved for a while and then discarded again.

It has been in semi-retirement since 1986 when Nicklaus rode a wave of birdies to his emotional triumph in the Masters. In its place, its owner used a fancy new stick, a longer one, equipped with a bigger head.

Old reliable was still there, though, you know, like an old friend you could always fall back on, just in case. On Thursday, Nicklaus decided it was time to do a little falling back.

So when he set off for the first round of the U.S. Open, Nicklaus had three replacement clubs in his bag, a wooden driver, a sand wedge he used last year, and the old putter.

They happen to be the three clubs a golfer uses most frequently, so when Nicklaus produced a 3-under-par 67, one stroke off the lead, his old sticks came in for some special attention.

The putter dates to 1962 and the Phoenix Open.

"The first five tournaments I played that year, I had no less than 34 putts per tournament," he said. "I tried a new putter and shot a 64 in the Pro-Am. I've used it ever since except for a couple or three years."

Included in that putter's triumphs were Nicklaus' seven-stroke victory at the 1980 PGA, played, coincidentally at the Oak Hill Country Club, site of this year's Open.

Nicklaus remembered that and decided to put the old pal back in his bag along with the wooden driver and the sand wedge. Together, they produced results that bordered on the spectacular.

Logic tells you that Nicklaus can't win another major, not at age 49, not with his limited preparation, not with all the young lions out there.

But logic didn't matter at the 1986 Masters. And it didn't matter Thursday, even after some rather mediocre practice rounds.

"I had no reason whatsoever to believe I'd shoot three under," he said. "The way I played the last two days, there was no reason to believe that."

But with greens softened by weeklong rains, Nicklaus' old putter performed flawlessly, much the way it had over this same layout nine years ago.

Angel exhibition strictly for old-timers

Battles

What started out as an exhibition game, in its most formal sense, wound up as an Old-timers game that could easily have been the conclusion of a Fantasy baseball week.

If someone had just thought to invite a few fans whose baseball ambitions had never been realized out of the stands to play for the Midland Angels this would have been "Play Your 1970 Heroes" finale.

California started its up-til-midnight-the-night-before varsity. As second baseman Johnny Ray put it before the game, "As I understand, we're each going to get one at bat."

Sure enough, within two innings, an overflow Angels Stadium crowd was watching Deron Johnson at first, Bobby Knoop at second, Glenn Hoffman at third and Doug Rader at third, representing 174 years.

It may be the oldest infield ever to perform on a minor league diamond.

Some felt cheated that coaches Joe Coleman and Moose Stubing, another 92 years, weren't invited to serve as a battery.

ONE COULDN'T really blame Manager Rader for wanting to rest his troops. They arrived at Angels Stadium at 1:15 p.m., less than hour before game time.

The mood should have been foul. The Angels not only were up late, but were losing a doubleheader to the Texas Rangers, stretching a losing streak to seven straight.

When Rader was asked about how much of an imposition such a game, to start at 2 p.m. and finished in time for a 6 p.m. plane flight Detroit, might be to his team, he tactfully replied, "I wouldn't touch that question."

PITCHING Coach Coleman said, "It wouldn't have been bad at all, if we hadn't had the doubleheader. We didn't get out of the park until after midnight."

Ray, on the other hand, observed the mild temperatures, drooping outfield flags and bright sunshine and wondered, "Is it always this nice here?"

After a summer day in Dallas/Fort Worth, Midland effects "just-arriveds" that way.

There was no disguising for most that despite the weather and open-hearted reception here, Detroit might be closer to Hawaii, as a place to be on June 15, than Midland for the California players.

Regular season exhibitions aren't as much fun as in the relaxed, unhurried atmosphere of spring training, but maybe the same purpose was achieved as far as the fans were concerned.

They got to talk to the players they've admired from afar and, best of all, it was an autograph collector's paradise.

SOME OF the Anaheim Halos spread a lot of good will in Midland with their accessibility and willingness to sign on the glossy white hide. And then, some raised the short hairs with their abruptness.

Bert Blyleven, the veteran pitcher, and outfielder Chili Davis were two of the most accommodating signers and if anyone in the right field overflow bleacher area didn't come away with an autograph, it wasn't because they didn't ask.

It was a rushed interlude and perhaps most amazing was the number of Midlanders who managed to get away for a midweek baseball game.

But now it's time to get serious and get back to real baseball, the Texas League pennant race, the outcome of which will be on the line today.

Midland youngsters with autographs on their minds hound California Angels outfielder Dante Bichette for his signature on anything they can get in his hands.

Golden Bear sheds strokes to trail by one in Open

By JOHN NELSON

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — For years, only his scores have been fat. Now, Jack Nicklaus is shedding strokes, too.

Winner of 18 major tournaments, the man called "Fat Jack" when he joined the PGA Tour in 1962 is bidding for yet another title — the 1989 U.S. Open.

"I don't know what's going to happen tomorrow or the next day," said Nicklaus, one shot off the lead after Thursday's first-round 67. "But at least it's shown me that I can still play a little, sometimes."

Bernhard Langer of West Germany, tour veteran Payne Stewart and newcomer Jay Don Blake shared the first-round lead at 4-under-par 66 on Oak Hill's 6,902-yard East course, where a week of rain turned putting surfaces from teflon to velcro.

"THE COURSE was surprisingly dry on the fairways," said Scott Simpson, who was tied with Nicklaus. "No roll, but the greens are holding, and that's good for scoring."

Also at 67 were Tom Kite, Joey Sindelar and Tom Pernice.

Langer, who had only one par in the final 10 holes, had eight birdies and four bogeys in his round. His bogey on the 18th prevented him from equalling the best round ever played here during three Opens — John Spray's 65 in 1968.

"It was kind of an up-and-down day," said Langer, the 1985 Masters champion. "I didn't think there were eight birdies out there. That kind of surprised me."

NICKLAUS, 49 years old and in his 33rd straight U.S. Open, started the day with a bogey, but still had a feeling this wasn't going to degenerate into another of those 78s.

"I was playing a little more positive today than I have been," Nicklaus said. "That's something that I used to do until the last three or four years when I forgot how."

He finished the day without another bogey and four birdies, including a near eagle on the 594-yard, par-5 13th when he fired a 9-iron past the cup on his third shot, backed it up and just lipped it the hole, settling for a tap-in birdie.

Nicklaus said he had gone back to three old clubs — his sand wedge, wooden driver and 27-year-old putter — for this tournament. They're all confidence-builders; so too is the knowledge that the last time there was a major tournament here — the PGA in 1980 — Nicklaus won by seven strokes.

"I KNOW I can play this golf course," he said. "If I'm seven shots worse than I was in 1980 — and I probably am — that still puts me in contention here. That's sort of a negative positive."

Nicklaus won his last major in 1986, the Masters.

Rain fell only sporadically on Thursday, although more was forecast for today and possibly Saturday. Still, Langer agreed with most of the other golfers that it had helped scoring rather than hindered it.

"The greens must be playing a little easier," he said. "For one thing, you can hit a lot of shots more at the hole, and they may be putting just a touch slower.

"Still, the rough is very, very tough. It's wet and heavy, and the ball doesn't go anywhere, and you don't get any run on the fairways."

WHEN Langer came to the 18th — a 440-yard par-4 — he was five under par after his only regulation hole on the back nine. He just barely made the 18th green with a 5-iron second shot, then 3-putted from 60 feet. That made up for the 60-foot birdie putt he made on the par-3 11th.

Stewart won the Heritage Classic earlier this year but has yet to win a major tournament.

"I don't think my career will be complete until I win a major," Stewart said. "I'm not saying I will, but I'm not saying I won't."

Stewart's first round was much the same as Langer's — up and down. He turned in 2-under 33, then got to four under with birdies at Nos. 12 and 14, both par-4s. He then bogeyed the 15th and 16th, and finished with birdies at 17 and 18, where he holed a 20-foot putt.

Blake, in his third year on the tour at age 30 and never a winner, had a more consistent round of 33-33. It included just one bogey, the 177-yard, par-3 15th, where he plopped a 6-iron 40 feet from the hole and three-putted.

Kite shot 32-35, Simpson and Sindelar had 33-34, and Pernice shot 36-31 with four birdies on the back nine.

Kite won two straight tournaments in March, finished fifth in last week's Westchester and is considered a strong contender here.

At 68 and two shots back were Nick Faldo of England, Kurt Beck, Dillard Pruitt, Larry Nelson and Raymond Floyd.

ABBOTT——

So far Abbott is holding his own in the big time, owning a 5-4 record after 10 starts and a respectable 3.56 ERA in 60⅔ innings. Even big league clubs don't ask much more from any rookie.

Still, many players have been rushed to the big top without minor league experience, only to find they are a brief burning light in a sea of darkness. The Texas Rangers' David Clyde, who was used up in one season out of high school, is a good example.

ABBOTT doesn't fear a like fate. First of all, he isn't just out of high school.

"I knew my abilities and was not afraid to take the step into the majors," says Abbott. "This is a big opportunity and it's up to me to make the most of that opportunity. I knew there were going to be some ups and downs and I've seen both already.

"The main thing is making the adjustment to the every day grind and concentration required in the pros. I wasn't used to playing games every day. I've still got a lot to learn, but I've been pleased so far."

ABBOTT has been hounded by the media in every stop across the nation. After all, he is the only one-handed pitcher in the majors and he hurled the USA to a 5-3 victory over Japan in the Olympics to win the gold medal. People are interested in his story and that makes reporters even more interested.

Playing with a "handicap" has been the focus of his first pro year, but it really isn't any big deal to him.

"The media has made it a big deal, but I've always known what I could and couldn't do on the baseball field," said Abbott. "I understand the attention, but I think it's dying down now. Reporters are now beginning to look only at my wins and losses now."

BUT HE isn't through with media attention. Abbott is scheduled to face Detroit Saturday afternoon on national TV. It will be the nation's first real view of Abbott.

"I'm really excited about pitching in Detroit Saturday, but not because of TV," said Abbott. "It's only 60 miles from my hometown and I've got to come up with a bunch of tickets to get all my friends and family into the game. Now that's real pressure."

It will be Abbott's first pro appearance in his home state of Michigan and a big reception is expected Saturday. He was a hero in Michigan long before he ever put on a California uniform.

Abbott says that his rookie season in pro baseball isn't his biggest thrill. Pitching in the Olympics is.

"I never thought about the professional thing when I was in the Olympics," said Abbott. "That was really a special time. It was a thrill of a life time. If I never did anything else in my life, I would still have that gold medal and I will cherish that forever."

AS FAR AS missing his chance to put on a Midland Angel uniform.

"I'm sure Midland is a nice place and the people seem to be real friendly, but I'm happy with the way things have turned out for me."

Midland still mourns the loss, however. His Midland Angel uniform (No. 25) was retired during pre-exhibition ceremonies Thursday while thinking about what could have been.

Jackson ends Travelers' run

One chop block can alter a life

By ANDREW MARANISS
Cox News Service

AUSTIN, Texas — In football, the common maxim is that injuries are just a part of the game — that a good team will fight through them. A second-string player is brought in to fill the void, and life goes on.

But for the injured player, especially a high school athlete, the injury can have drastic implications on the course of his life.

As a junior left tackle at Travis High School two years ago, Patrick Brown was named to the All-District defensive team. Colleges from around the country flooded the Travis coaches' office with letters showing interest in Brown's skills.

Last year, in the third game of his senior season, Brown took his stance on the line, prepared to blitz the Copperas Cove quarterback. When the ball was snapped, Brown was first met with a block at the shoulders. But the Copperas Cove lineman quickly dropped to 'chop-block' Brown, taking his knees, and possibly his athletic future, out from under him.

"PATRICK'S foot was planted in the ground, and when the helmet hit his knee, it ripped up everything," Travis assistant coach David Seaborn said. "It almost made you throw up looking at it on the game films. He's been out ever since."

Brown was hit so hard his protective knee brace was broken during the play. He said his injury would have been far worse if he had not been wearing the brace. Rather than major reconstructive surgery, Brown "only" had to undergo arthroscopic surgery.

Brown was fortunate the school's trainer Mike Patrick suggested he wear the brace. Patrick said many high school players do not wear such padding.

"I highly recommend knee-pads," he said. "Some research lately has shown that they're not so hot, but I'm very much for them. We try to provide as many as we can, but we can't afford to provide them for everybody. A lot of kids buy them themselves. The coaches love them, the kids love them, and I love them."

ALTHOUGH the extent of Brown's injury was lessened because of the brace, it was serious enough to force him to miss the rest of the football season and the entire basketball season — he started at center his junior year — and hinder his chances of playing college football.

"He had potential to really excel. A lot of colleges had contacted us before the injury. After the injury, they just stopped," Seaborn said. "Patrick still thinks he can recuperate and play in college, but whether or not he really can, I don't know."

Brown said he will attend Worcester Academy, a prep school in Massachusetts, next year, and he still hopes to land a college football scholarship.

ing in John Orton and Everett Graham.

MIDLAND'S first run came in the first inning when Dante Bichette, a former Midland Angel, wildly overthrew third base, allowing Reed Peters to score from first.

The home team's final run scored in the fifth when Bob Rose doubled home Chris Cron.

California scored its only run in the seventh when Glenn Hoffman homered to left.

Despite the easy runs scored by Midland, the local Angels were nothing but thrilled to play with the big leaguers.

"The biggest thing is to be able to be on the same field and build a closer relationship with them," second baseman Scott Cerny said. "Everybody tends to forget they're human beings just like we are. You really get to appreciate their talents when you can be on the same field with them."

MIDLAND shortstop Gary DiSarcina said seeing Rader play at third was a thrill.

"It's great to see how he used to play and to see that he can still throw the leather around."

DiSarcina added he thought the game meant a lot to the people in the crowd, "and it means a lot to us to come out and see what we have to compete with in future years. It's just a good atmosphere. It's fun.

"It kind of humbles you a little bit. Being on a Double A club. It kind of brings you down to reality.

"I'm sure (the crowd) wishes their starters could have played a lot more for them but that's all you can ask for.

"Obviously their season is more important to them than ours is to us," DiSarcina said. "I don't blame them. You come here, get your at-bat and get out of the game. They don't need to get anybody hurt, especially now.

"It seems like they stayed around and signed autographs. They were courteous in that manner."

CATCHER Otto Gonzalez added: "You have to understand they don't want to get hurt playing against us. It doesn't mean anything to them. They just want to give the crowd a nice show without getting hurt. They have to play 162 games, maybe more if they make the playoffs, and they dont want to get hurt playing here.

"They did their best. They showed a good time to the crowd and it was nice for us to play against them."

California's offensive starters finished the game with three hits in 11 at bats before being lifted.

Midland's starters finished with 10 hits in 27 at bats.

Midland starter Roberto Hernandez was given credit with the win. Bob McClure got the loss for California.

Midland resumes league play at 6 p.m. today with a doubleheader against El Paso.

Ron Davis gets win

TOKYO (AP) — Former major-leaguer Ron Davis, one-time Midland Cub, gave up just one hit over the last three innings and was the winning pitcher as the Yakult Swallows edged the Hanshin Tigers 4-3 in Japanese baseball Thursday.

EXHIBITION

Chili Davis, a product of LA's Dorsey High, spent most of the exhibition signing autographs for young fans in the right field bullpen. When it was suggested his move from the San Francisco Giants must have been traumatic in two respects: 1. You moved from the National League to the American. 2. And from Candlestick to Anaheim....the grunt of displeasure at the latter was an answer in itself.

"The difference in Candlestick and Anaheim, I don't even want to talk about it. I'm trying to forget Candlestick.

"As for the leagues, they play a more intense type of baseball in the National League, because it is geared to speed, running and pitching, and defense. Here, in the American League, the emphasis is more on power hitting."...

The name on the California uniform was Sturdivant and, horrors, he was donning catching gear. "What are you doing?"

"I'm getting ready to catch."

"Aren't you Tom Sturdivant's son?"

"No, but everybody asks me that."

David Lynn Sturdivant was summoned from Palm Springs, California A League, to fill out the California roster for the exhibition. After the game, he was on his way back.

A second year player, Sturdivant may never have heard of Yankee pitcher Tom Sturdivant, it was a few years ago, but he did play with current Midland Angels Scott Lewis and Reed Peters at UNLV and probably isn't long from Midland....

Davis played one season in the Texas League under Andy Gilbert for the Shreveport Giants. "We made only one trip to Midland and I remember I had a couple of good games hitting here. I also had a fight here with a pitcher. He hit me with a pitch."

At the batting cage, Deron Johnson, the California hitting instructor, was reflecting on how it was when he signed. "I got $4,000 to sign with the Yankees in 1956. If they paid you more than that, they had to put you on the major league roster."

They retired Jim Abbott's Midland Angel number in a pregame ceremony, but, if they are going to start a Hall of Fame of players ticketed for Midland who never got here, Rick Reuschel should have been the first, because he was the first. Rick, on Midland's 1972 preseason roster, pitched his way on the Chicago roster in spring training....and he's still going strong.

Egg industry makes slight comeback

WASHINGTON (AP) — The egg industry is not exactly Humpty Dumpty but it is trying to put itself back together after having a great fall the last two years because of rising costs and declining consumer demand.

So far in 1989, according to the Agriculture Department, prices are up from a year ago and profits are gradually returning to the beleaguered egg industry. But analysts say the future could be shaky.

Producers have cut back laying flocks significantly to reduce losses and help boost prices, and department economists say the reductions have had an impact.

In the first quarter of 1989, egg production was down 5 percent from a year ago. The U.S. laying flock in April was down more than 3 percent, including a 5 percent reduction in the number of hens that lay table eggs and a 4 percent increase in the flock that produces hatching eggs.

Wholesale prices for large eggs averaged 79 cents per dozen in the first quarter, well above the 55 cents of January-March last year. Although prices have dropped since peaking at 99 cents in mid-March, they're expected to be relatively strong through the remainder of the year.

But a few months of profit don't necessarily put the egg industry back on track, says economist Lee A. Christensen of the department's Economic Research Service. One reason is the outlook for egg consumption.

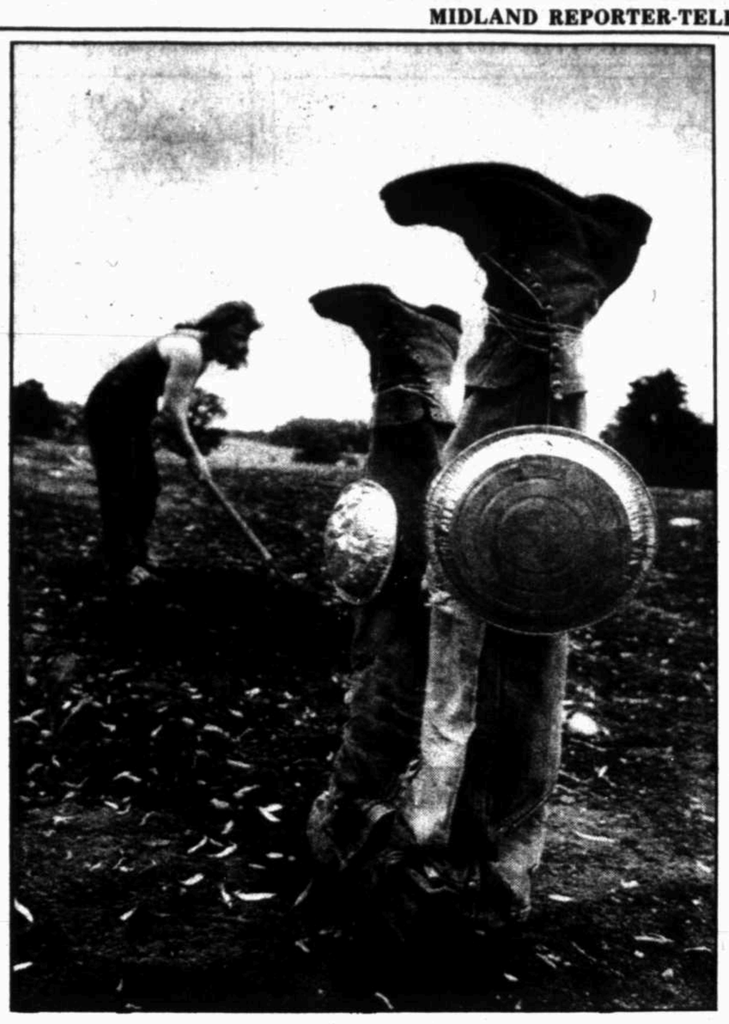

Per capita egg consumption dropped by about five eggs last year and is expected to decline another nine eggs to about 235 in 1989.

Christensen, writing in a new report, said the continuing downward trend in egg consumption can be attributed to a number of factors, including health concerns about cholesterol and "negative publicity linking eggs with outbreaks of Salmonella enteritidis," a type of food poisoning.

In 1988, total egg production was estimated at 5.79 billion dozen, about the same as in 1987. But the value of production declined 3.8 percent to $3.06 billion from $3.18 billion the year before.

California continued as the leading egg producer with 643 million dozen valued at $298 million, a decline of 26 million dozen eggs and almost $10 million in value from 1987.

Overall, the U.S. egg industry's net returns in 1988 as compiled by the USDA agency showed the greatest losses since 1975, Christensen reported.

Yeutter says House drought bill could raise complaints

AGRICULTURE

WASHINGTON (AP) — New drought legislation in the House includes provisions that Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter says could raise taxpayer complaints.

"In my judgment, some of the present drought proposals are, at best, on the margin of acceptability to the American public," Yeutter said Wednesday.

The Senate Agriculture Committee, meanwhile, unanimously approved a rural development program and agreed to take up drought relief on July 19.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas had argued before the committee on Tuesday that quick action on drought relief for winter wheat farmers should come before rural development legislation.

Large areas of the Great Plains and western Corn Belt have still not recovered from the devastating 1988 drought. The winter wheat crop in Kansas, for example, is down by more than a third from last year.

Yeutter, in an interview with reporters, said that "we have not officially embraced any drought legislation" and will "give an official response when the time comes."

Yeutter said he preferred Dole's drought-relief bill over a broader version in the House, which he described as "too open-ended, with far too much taxpayer exposure and vulnerability."

Further, he said, the House bill is "far too subject to attack by the general public" because of its costs and other features. Yeutter said the Dole bill "is far more acceptable in that regard."

Dole's drought bill would extend terms of last year's drought relief to crops planted in 1988 for harvest in 1989, mostly winter wheat, which is normally Kansas' biggest crop.

> "If we're now also to cover weather risks in a very significant way, one must wonder just what additional role government should take up on behalf of American agriculture — and at what cost."
>
> — Clayton Yeutter
> Agriculture Secretary

The House bill, which was approved by the agriculture committee on May 25, is basically an extension of the $3.9 billion 1988 drought relief law. Under it, if farmers qualified, they could get federal aid for any affected crop or livestock operation.

Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the House committee, said the bill "provides the thinnest of safety nets for farmers around the country who have suffered significant financial losses because of the continuing drought and other types of weather damage."

De la Garza said the committee "acted in a compassionate and budgetarily sound manner" to deal with the tragedy of these farmers.

But Yeutter said there are limits on measures the federal government can or should take to remove risk from the nation's agriculture.

"We are already covering price risk in agriculture in a very significant way through a variety of programs," he said. " We are already covering income risks to agriculture in a very significant way through a variety of programs, including deficiency payments (subsidies)."

Yeutter added: "If we're now also to cover weather risks in a very significant way, one must wonder just what additional role government should take up on behalf of American agriculture — and at what cost."

Already, he said, there are "multi-billion-dollar price tags" for the price support and income protection under federal crop programs.

"It seems to me at some point in time, as an industry, we're likely to experience a taxpayer rebellion, and we ought to be careful to ensure that we can persuasively defend these programs to the American public," Yeutter said.

The Dole drought bill "is obviously more attractive" than the House bill because it is limited mostly to winter wheat, he said.

Foreign competition worries soybean producers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's soybean farmers continue to feel competitive pressure from Brazil and Argentina, says the Agriculture Department.

The harvest is nearly completed in Brazil, and better-than-expected yields have been reported, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said Tuesday. Production was estimated at a record 22 million metric tons, up from 18 million tons last year.

The agency report said only about 30 percent of the Brazilian crop has been marketed. Exports are ahead of last year's pace, but crushing plants — which turn out soybean oil and meal — are lagging behind.

"Because of this, more of the 1989 crop will be marketed later in the marketing year," the report said. "This will mean that the U.S. crop will face stiff competition from Brazil early in the next U.S. marketing year."

The 1989-90 U.S. soybean marketing year will begin on Sept. 1. No production estimate has been made by USDA, but projections based on yield trends and an assumption of normal weather point to a soybean harvest this fall of 53.1 million tons, up from less than 41.9 million tons last year.

A metric ton is 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of soybeans. USDA projects this year's soybean harvest at 1.95 billion bushels, up from 1.54 billion in 1988.

In Argentina, the government has levied an additional 10 percent tax on agricultural exports, making a total of 30 percent in export taxes levied in recent months. Also, the exchange rate has been fixed again after being free for some time.

"As a result of these factors and because inflation is out of control in Argentina, farmers will probably hold their crops as long as possible as a hedge against inflation," the report said. "So the crop will be marketed at a slower pace."

Maintenance, common sense keys to using lawn mowers

"Carelessness" is the main factor in the more than 50,000 people injured each year in accidents involving power lawn mowers.

Kiker

Proper mower servicing, observing standard operating precautions, and picking up rocks and other objects from the lawn prior to mowing will help eliminate most accidents.

The lawn mower should be routinely serviced before each use. A properly operating mower is safe to use and performs better than one in poor shape.

Routine service includes sharpening the blade, checking the blade to be sure it is securely attached to the shaft, and checking the crankcase oil level in 4-cycle engines.

Always disconnect the spark plug wire before examining the blade. The condition of the blade is critical to the mower's operation and safety. Remove, sharpen and balance the blade several times during the mowing season. Replace damaged blades. Service the carburetor air cleaner and change the crankcase oil after every 25 hours of operation, or at the manufacturer's recommendation. Also, clean the mower after each use to reduce rust and corrosion and to prevent overheating, both of which reduce the life of the mower. Cleaning the mower regularly will extend the it life and will also aid in detecting worn or broken parts before they cause extensive damage.

Also remember that safety devices such as engine cut-offs and discharge shields are there for your protection. Do not remove or by-pass these devices. If they are broken, get them fixed. Your safety and the safety of bystanders depend on them.

Before mowing, scout the lawn closely and remove any objects that might be picked up by the mower blade.

While operating the mower, follow these precautions:

- Never allow children to play in the area where you are mowing since the blade can pick up and throw rocks and other objects.
- Avoid mowing up and down slopes — always mow across the slope to prevent slipping under the mower housing.
- Always push rather than pull the mower.
- Never leave a mower running while unattended.
- When starting the mower, put your foot on its housing to pull the starter cord. Caution and common sense will prevent most lawn mower-related accidents. That means keeping your lawn mower in good condition and using good judgment.

Profits predicted for 'foundation herds'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new Agriculture Department analysis shows that farmers and ranchers with cow-calf operations, the foundation herds that form the bedrock of the nation's beef business, will probably make money again this year.

But the detailed figures by the department's Economic Research Service include some sour notes regarding capital improvements that could affect the long-term financial health of the cattle industry.

The analysis also includes some mixed outlook figures for hog producers, who saw market prices drop sharply last year. Even sheep producers are feeling a pinch.

If only cash flow is considered, the cow-calf operators are in pretty good shape, economists Hosein Shakpouri and Terry Crawford said in their report. But when costs of capital replacement are included, the situation is much less encouraging.

The report compares estimated 1988 production costs and net returns with those projected for 1989.

Last year's drought "severely affected" all livestock producers, the report said. Spending on feed jumped 28 percent from 1987, while gross cash receipts from livestock sales increased only 3 percent.

On the average, the "gross value of production" of one beef cow totaled $348.18 in 1988. That was up from $313.70 in 1987. The projection for 1989 is $346.06 per cow.

The values were construed by including allowances for calves and culled cows, and converting them to a one-cow figure.

Cash expenses, ranging from feed to taxes, insurance and interest, also were prorated on a one-cow basis. Those added up to $296.77 last year, up from $255.84 in 1987. The projection for 1989 is $306.26 per cow.

Thus, after deducting cash expenses from gross values, the cow-calf operator this year may have an average cash return of $39.80 per cow, down from $50.46 in 1988 and $57.86 in 1987, the report showed.

But if an allowance for capital replacement of buildings, equipment and other facilities is included, the tidy per-cow net "profit" disappears. In this case, the report said, the operator could lose an average of $41.79 per cow in 1989, compared with losses of $26.69 in 1988 and $17.72 in 1987.

"Cash returns, before and after a charge for the replacement capital, are key indicators of producer supply response," the report said. "A positive cash return is an incentive for producers to continue or even expand their operation; a negative cash return is often regarded as a signal to discontinue production."

However, the report added, the figures are averages, and there are producers who fare better or worse. Some individual operators may expand when most do not.

The cash return, or residual, reflects the cash flow available for paying family living expenses, repaying debts and replacing machinery, equipment and buildings.

Era of irrigation expansion may not be over

WASHINGTON (AP) — A preliminary study by the Agriculture Department says the era of irrigation expansion in the United States may not be over.

After irrigated farmland peaked at 50.3 million acres in 1978, there was a gradual downtrend, evidenced by the government's 1982 farm census and by a 1984 USDA survey. Many experts believed irrigation expansion had run its course.

The report by the department's Economic Research Service showed that crop irrigation dropped to 49 million acres in 1982 and then plummeted to 42.3 million acres in 1983 as federal acreage programs and low prices prompted farmers to make sharp cutbacks.

Some recovery was reported in several years following 1983, but irrigation still lagged behind the old peak of the late 1970s.

Last year, when drought parched crops across much of the nation, irrigation edged up slightly to 45.9 million acres from 44.5 million acres in 1987.

"Irrigated area in 1989 could be the highest since 1982, reflecting strong crop prices, moderate energy prices and low annual acreage setasides (reduction programs)," the report said. "In the East, last year's drought is expected to stimulate some investment in irrigation as a form of insurance."

In the West, where most of the nation's irrigation is located, the water supply has improved from a year ago.

The report, in the May issue of Agricultural Outlook magazine, was written by economists Bill Quinby and John Hostetler.

"Crop prices and acreage diversion programs have more influence on irrigated area than do weather conditions or energy prices," the report said. "After expanding about 30 percent per decade (from 1900 to 1930), irrigation development slow to 4 percent in the 1930s, a period marked by low crop prices."

When crop prices rose in the 1940s and 1950s, irrigation growth was encouraged once again.

The expansion of crop irrigation in the mid-1970s was a "substantial deviation" from the pattern, the report said. That was due to favorable crop prices and expanding exports, which helped push irrigation growth to about 2.3 million acres per year.

Slower growth in the early 1980s reflected "adjustments to crop surpluses and low prices," the report said.

Hostetler added Wednesday in a telephone interview that last year's severe drought will "encourage people to at least think about irrigation," and that some will invest in new systems or expand operations as a result.

He said it's too early to conclude whether irrigation is back on an expansion track because all the figures aren't in yet.

The report said the national figures mask regional trends. For example, the Pacific and Mountain regions account for more than half the U.S. irrigated area. In 1987, the two regions had 24.1 million acres under irrigation, down about 2 million acres from 1982 but almost 700,000 acres more than in 1983.

Last year, the West had poor soil moisture prior to planting and there was reduced streamflow during the crop growing season. The irrigated area was cut back to 23.9 million acres. In 1982, the area was 26 million acres.

In the plains states, which straddle the nation between the arid West and the humid East, irrigation grew to 13.7 million acres last year from 12.6 million in 1987. But that was well behind the 15.3 million acres in 1982. In 1983, however, the irrigated area plummeted to 11.5 million acres.

"Because much of the irrigation water in the southern plains is pumped from deep wells that have declining water tables, energy costs represent a substantial share of production costs," the report said. "Irrigated area declined in 1974 and 1982, following steep rises in natural gas prices."

The East had a record 8.2 million acres under irrigation last year, up from 7.7 million in 1987 and 7.6 million in 1982, the report said.

"Irrigation has more than quadrupled since 1969 in the Corn Belt and Lake states," the report said. "In these regions, irrigation is supplemental, and there is strong evidence that weather affects irrigated acreage."

The East's irrigation is also supplemental, used when and if needed. Last year's drought helped push irrigation to a record level, the report said.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Expand your friendships; get out and mix more than you have in the past. Your intuition will be amazingly accurate in September. A direct approach helps you win the hand of the one you love. Be cautious and conservative in financial matters. Steer clear of fly-by-night business schemes. A deal that sounds too good to be true could be just that.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Methodist leader John Wesley, entertainer Dean Martin, comedian Joe Piscopo, actor Ralph Bellamy, Cincinnati Reds infielder Davey Concepcion, musicman Sammy Fain, author John Hersey, football's Elroy "Crazylegs" Hirsch, music superstar Barry Manilow.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An important club or organization pursues you as a member. Put your personal goals first for a change. Exercise programs started now are likely to succeed. Ask a friend to join you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A wonderful day for romance. This may not be the best period to relocate. Get family members' views. You may find yourself searching for answers. Enjoy the time you spend at home with loved ones.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A relative or longtime friend may pop back into your life. Soak up as much of the outdoors as possible. Fresh air and exercise leave you feeling rejuvenated. Host a small gathering.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Keep away from "losers" or their ways could start to rub off on you. You have too much to offer to settle for less than the best. Aim high in everything you do.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be flexible. A mix-up will only add spice to your day. If young and single, you could walk into an explosive new romance. Be careful not to rush into making a commitment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do what you can to enhance your social image today. Too many things may be happening at once for your own good. Find time for a short nap if going out tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Work isn't everything. Put those papers away and spend time with your children or friends. A surprise could lead you to change your weekend plans. Take advantage of an unexpected opportunity.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Today could bring you great love and many laughs. An unhappy episode will turn out to be a blessing in disguise. Protect your health by eating right and getting more rest.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Work out peaceful agreements with family members or neighbors so that you can enjoy a fun-filled weekend. Build up your strength with regular exercise. A young person relies on your guidance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan 19): Climactic emotional events make this a special time. Be wary of promises made by people who have let you down in the past. You need to put your own interests first now.

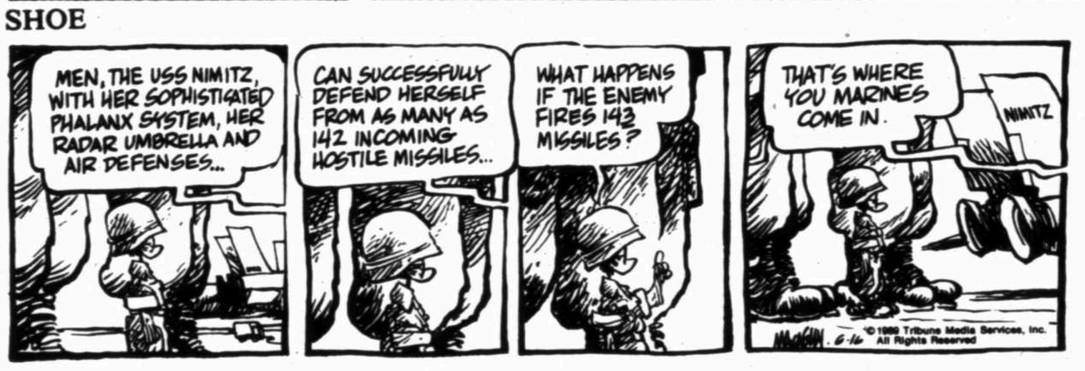

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Family finances may require more of your time than expected. The experience you gain now can be a springboard to a brighter future. Curling up with a good book has special appeal.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Act bright and sunny, and people will flock to your side. Welcome an opportunity to travel or visit a museum. Look for ways to promote your personal goals without seeming too obvious.

When all else is sure to fail, a dash of guile can work wonders. We can't help admiring South's play on this hand, although we are not sure his opponent should have swallowed the bait.

North's jump raise to three spades, by agreement, showed four-card support and a hand worth 9–11 points. South's hand was easily worth pressing on to game.

West led the jack of clubs, and declarer was delighted with his dummy. If he could avoid a trump loser (odds on), or find West with either the king of clubs or ace of diamonds, the contract would be a laydown.

Dummy's queen of clubs was played to the first trick and lost to the king. A club was returned to the ace, and declarer tried his next shot by cashing his high trumps. That came to naught when East discarded a low heart on the second round. Since declarer would have to ruff his losing hearts in dummy, he could not yet afford to lead a diamond to the king. If West held the ace, he could rise with it and take his trump winner, and declarer might be stranded with a losing heart.

So declarer took the ace-king of hearts and was pleasantly surprised to see West drop the two missing honors. That not only meant that declarer's hearts were high, but it presented him with a sneaky extra chance for his game. Declarer continued with the seven of hearts. West could have ruffed and shifted to a diamond to defeat the contract, but he was a trifle stingy and did not want to waste his master trump on such a lowly spot card. He discarded and the location of the ace of diamonds became immaterial. Declarer discarded a diamond from dummy, and another on the nine of hearts. The defenders took only one trump, one diamond and one club.

20 years after fatal accident, parents still bitter at Kennedy

NEW YORK (AP) — Twenty years after his daughter drowned in Edward Kennedy's car at Chappaquiddick, the father of Mary Jo Kopechne says she did not die in vain because her death "kept the senator from becoming president."

"He was worried about himself, not Mary Jo," Joseph Kopechne said in an interview in the July issue of Ladies Home Journal.

Miss Kopechne, 28, died July 19, 1969, when a car driven by Kennedy ran off a bridge at night and plunged into a pond on Massachusetts' Chappaquiddick Island. Miss Kopechne had been a campaign worker for Kennedy's brother Robert.

Kennedy said he freed himself from the car and tried to rescue his passenger. But it took him 10 hours to report the accident. He pleaded guilty to leaving the scene of an accident and lost his license for a year.

In the interview, Miss Kopechne's mother, Gwen Kopechne, 71, said other women who attended a party with Kennedy and Miss Kopechne before the accident "were shut up."

"I think there was a big coverup and that everybody was paid off," she said.

The Kopechnes received a settlement of $140,904, of which $90,904 came from the senator and $50,000 from his insurance company.

The Malibu couple's request was granted Tuesday by Superior Court Judge David Rothman after several days of closed hearings to decide custody of Maria Juana Aguilar's children.

Kristofferson and his wife, Lisa, said they wanted keep a promise they made to her a week before her death: to see that her children were taken care of should anything happen to her.

Rothman granted co-guardianship to the woman's sister, Vicenta Aguilar, with whom the children will live in Culver City. He refused a guardianship request from the family of Ricardo Arauz, who pleaded guilty in March to second-degree murder in the shooting death of his common-law wife, Ms. Aguilar.

The father's relatives had sought guardianship of the two children fathered by Arauz: Maria, 4, and Marta, 9. The father of their 12-year-old half-sister, Brenda, lives in El Salvador.

The youngsters' 32-year-old mother had faithfully served the Kristofferson family as a housekeeper for 10 years, according to court documents.

Shortly before she died, Ms. Aguilar confided in Mrs. Kristofferson that she feared for her life because of her husband's beatings. A week later, she was shot three times and killed.

NEW YORK (AP) — Ellen Burstyn will be Broadway's new "Shirley Valentine." The actress who won a Tony Award for her performance in "Same Time, Next Year" and an Oscar for "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore" takes over the title role in Willy Russell's one-woman comedy July 17, a spokesman for the show said Thursday.

Pauline Collins who won the 1989 best actress Tony Award for her portrayal of Shirley, a bored English housewife who runs off to Greece, leaves the play July 1. From July 3 through July 15, the role will be played by Patricia Kilgarriff.

"Shirley Valentine" won the 1989 Olivier Award in London as best comedy of the year and also was nominated for a Tony Award as best play.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Lisa Bonet is suing a drug store chain over a photograph of her baby that disappeared from a set of newly developed snapshots and turned up in a supermarket tabloid.

Bonet

Miss Bonet, star of "The Cosby Show" and the movie "Angel Heart," filed suit Wednesday in federal court saying that when she picked up developed film from a neighborhood Osco Drug Store in suburban Reseda, a negative and photograph of her then 3-week-old daughter, Zoe, was missing.

The National Enquirer ran the photo Jan. 10 with an article on Miss Bonet and musician-husband Lenny Kravitz that congratulated baby Zoe for transforming the actress "from a high-kicking hell-raiser" to a "doting mother."

The lawsuit asks for unspecified general damages and $5 million in punitive damages. The complaint doesn't name the tabloid, but it accuses Osco's parent company, Anaheim-based America Drug Stores Inc., of "willful, wanton, malicious and oppressive" conduct in its handling of Zoe's photo.

A corporate spokeswoman said no one was available to comment, and the Los Angeles bureau of the National Enquirer refused to comment.

McLEAN, Va. (AP) — Comedians Chevy Chase and Steve Allen, talk show hosts David Letterman and Larry King, and weatherman Willard Scott admit to tying one on — an ugly tie, that is.

And they've donated the offensive cravats to a fund-raiser called "Ugly Ties of the Rich and Famous."

Anyone looking for the traditional Father's Day present can bid on them Sunday at a silent auction to benefit Big Brothers of the National Capital Area and the Leukemia Society.

The auction at a local hotel is open to members of the public, who may buy the ties or simply view the collection before the bidding begins.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Victor French, the co-star of "Highway to Heaven," and "Little House on the Prairie," died Thursday from lung cancer. He was 54.

French

The actor was known early in his career as a leading television villain, appearing in more than 20 episodes of "Gunsmoke," directing five of them. He was frequently seen in "Bonanza" and was Agent 44 on "Get Smart."

He then played the scruffy farmer Isaiah Edwards on "Little House on the Prairie," starring Michael Landon. French left the series in 1977 to star in his own situation comedy, "Carter Country."

He rejoined "Little House" in 1982 for one year and teamed with Landon again on NBC's "Highway to Heaven" in 1984.

No inflation seen in consumer index

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose a sharp 0.6 percent in May, pushed up by strong increases in food and gasoline costs, the government said today.

But despite persistently strong price increases, many analysts say inflation now may begin to level off and that it could start to drop again late this year.

The rise in the Consumer Price Index, the government's primary gauge of inflation at the retail level, followed an even stronger 0.7 percent April increase that was the largest jump in more than two years, the Labor Department reported.

During the first five months of the year, consumer prices rose at an annual rate of 6.7 percent, a significantly faster pace than the 4.4 percent price increases registered in 1987 and 1988.

Inflation at the wholesale level has been even stronger, rising at an annual rate of 9.4 percent so far this year.

Today's report will be closely scrutinized by the Federal Reserve Board, which last week slightly eased its grip on the money supply in the belief that the slowing economy will help to tame inflation.

Analysts believe the central bank will wait for further evidence that inflation is under control before it eases any more.

In May, the overall inflation rate was heavily influenced by a 1 percent increase in energy costs. These costs had shot up 5.1 percent in April, when there was an all-time record increase in gasoline prices of 11.4 percent.

Last month's increase in gasoline costs was a still-strong 3.9 percent, which accounted for about one-fourth of the overall increase in the CPI for May.

Food and beverage prices, meanwhile, increased 0.6 percent last month after rising 0.5 percent in April. The May increase included a sharp 3.2 percent jump in prices for fruits and vegetables. Beef prices rose 0.5 percent and poultry prices 3.2 percent.

Excluding the volatile food and energy categories, other consumer prices rose 0.5 percent in May, up from a 0.2 percent increase in April. Many analysts closely watch these figures and believe they represent the important "core" level of inflationary pressures in the economy.

The various May price changes left the overall Consumer Price Index at 123.8 percent of its 1982-84 base. This means that a hypothetical selection of goods costing $100 during the base period would have cost $123.80 last month, 70 cents more than in April.

The 0.6 percent increase in prices last month was slightly higher than most analysts had expected. The consensus projection had been 0.5 percent.

The Labor Department offered these other details of price changes in May:

—Apparel prices increased 0.8 percent after rising 0.3 percent in April.

—Entertainment costs rose 0.1 percent in May after jumping 0.6 percent in April.

—Medical care prices rose 0.7 percent and advanced 7.3 percent over the past 12 months.

—Transportation costs rose 1 percent in May after shooting up 2.1 percent in April.

Midland living cost increases

From Staff Reports

Rising transportation costs continue to fuel an increase in Midland's cost of living, according to figures released by the ClayDesta National Bank.

In May, the bank reports, the Tall City's cost of living rose 0.4 percent, the third consecutive increase. Annualized, the local rate of inflation would be 4.6 percent.

Part of the rise was due to a 2 percent increase in transportation costs, which posted its seventh consecutive increase. Lower automobile insurance premiums were offset by increases in auto maintenance costs and a sixth month of higher gasoline prices.

Higher electric bills were responsible for a 1.4 percent increase in utility costs in May, as summer electric rates begin. Water rates fell an average 10 percent and gas bills rose 1.8 percent.

WTI in big demand

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil prices headed lower today after traders had pushed prices near the $21 mark.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, July contracts for West Texas Intermediate stood at $20.09 at midmorning, down 48 cents from Thursday's close. The contract reached as high as $21 a barrel Thursday before closing at $20.57, a gain of 34 cents from Wednesday's close.

A near-record 149,000 contracts were traded in near-panic buying.

Traders say the rise in WTI prices is due to the growing perception of a possible tightness in supplies — problems with the physical delivery of the so-called prompt-month barrels of WTI. The Wall Street Journal quotes Peter Beutel of Elders Futures Inc. as saying that whatever the reason, "WTI is in great demand."

According to the Wall Street Journal, reports have been circulating that there won't be enough WTI to meet the needs for physical deliveries against the July contract, and purchasers won't settle for other oil although the NYMEX allows some foreign crudes to be substituted.

It is also understood that the pipeline that delivers the crude to Cushing, Okla., WTI terminal point, is already full.

Despite the strength in crude oil prices, gasoline futures prices remained weak, despite this being the peak driving season. The futures price of the July contract for unleaded motor fuel dropped nearly a half-cent to close at 59.44 cents a gallon.

Sears goes for credit card bingo

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Sears, Roebuck & Co. has introduced a $6 million, one-month give-away promotion, hoping to sustain interest in the new pricing policy it began three months ago, when it cut prices on 50,000 items.

The new promotion, which began on June 4, is a first for Sears, said John Summers, a marketing executive, and would probably not be repeated. The program ends June 30.

The prizes are gift certificates ranging in value from $5 to $5,000.

Although Sears, the nation's largest retailer, has said it is pleased with the customer response to the new pricing policy, its sales increases have slid in the last three months.

In March, Sears had an 11.9 percent sales gain over the month a year earlier. In April the increase was 9.2 percent; in May 5.3 percent.

"The everyday low pricing is important, but it's only part of our new marketing approach," said Ernest Arms, public relations director of the Sears Merchandising Group.

"When all our 'super-stores' — which are expanded departments within a Sears store — are rolled out, that will provide the biggest part of the pie."

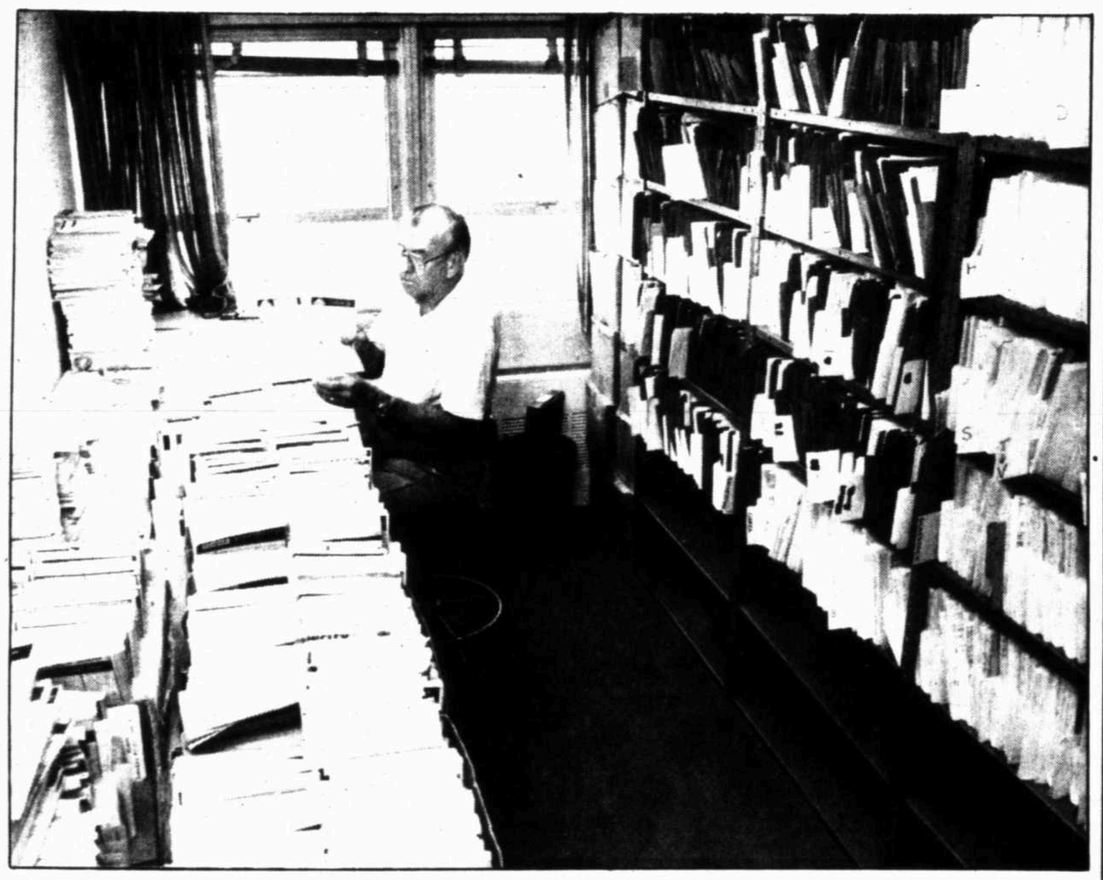

Summers said of the new promotion: "The 'Match-Up Game' was started to keep the traffic going and to capitalize on the everyday low pricing policy. It's our first promotion since we started the new pricing structure March 1."

Some retail analysts said the Sears promotion and the K Mart Corp.'s double-coupon day last Saturday underscored the continuing slump in general merchandise sales.

When K mart announced its coupon promotion last week, one company executive said it was intended to stimulate sales, which had been erratic.

Jeffrey B. Edelman, an analyst for Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., said store traffic at K mart, the nation's second-largest retailer, and at Sears had been sluggish.

"Higher-priced durables are tough to sell these days," he said. "The exception is women's apparel and the worst hit are those companies that aren't big in that category of merchandise."

Volunteers fuel energy library

'Mutual help' program aids both

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

The Midland Energy Library is itself running on energy — the energy of its volunteers.

"If it wasn't for our volunteer program, the library wouldn't be where it is today," notes Gay Floyd, the library's manager. "We've helped them by allowing them to get the data they need, and they've helpd us organize all the data we have."

Since the library opened in May 1986, it has grown from part of the 11th floor of the Midland Savings building to occupying the entire floor, and has gone from one employee to five. Floyd, herself a geologist, started out filing cards for the library three years ago.

The volunteer program was begun in the heart of a severe downturn in the oil industry as many geologists were losing work. The program allows them to work for the library in lieu of paying membership fees.

Floyd says the volunteers run the gamut from younger geologists who use the data to help put together prospects to retired geologists who want to remain useful, and all of them believe in the library. "The geologists and people of Midland want to help the library because they know the data is valuable," she says. "If it wasn't for this library, a lot of this data would have been lost."

OPEC may be headed for free-for-all

Cox News Service

It would appear the oil cartel has set itself up for an old fashioned free-for-all when members meet this fall to negotiate how they'll split up their production quota pie on a more permanent basis.

The meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), which will be held Sept. 22 in Paris, could turn out to be a "shoot-out," said Norman Barakat, vice president of energy investments for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

In the meantime, said Barakat, attention will be riveted on rebellious Kuwait, once the close oil policy ally of Saudi Arabia, to see whether she'll keep her promise not to produce more than 1.35 million barrels a day.

Kuwait, OPEC's most flagrant cheater, produced around 1.7 million barrels a day in May, or about 700,000 barrels a day more than her official production allotment.

"We'll have to wait until the first week of July to find out whether Kuwait will keep her word," said Barakat.

It was Kuwait that refused to agree to OPEC's new production quota agreement at the meeting last week in Vienna, Austria. However, Kuwait verbally agreed not to produce more than 1.35 million barrels a day.

If Kuwait breaks her word, it would undoubtedly inspire other cartel members to cheat as they jockey for position to snare a bigger share of OPEC's production ceiling, which was increased by 1 million barrels a day to 19.5 million.

Surprisingly, Iran and Iraq, both in desperate need of revenues as the result of their war, have been relatively "good boys" regarding their production quotas, said Barakat.

"But Iraq will be adding some 300,000 to 400,000 barrels of oil a day to her production total with the opening of a new pipeline, and Iran will want parity," he said.

Barakat said for the time being, Kuwait has usurped OPEC leadership from Saudi Arabia, the largest exporter.

But the energy analyst said he doubts Saudi Arabia would retaliate and try to bring Kuwait back in line by overproducing and driving down the price of oil as she did once before.

"I doubt Saudi Arabia would threaten to do it because once you unsheath the sword, you have to use it," said Barakat.

Charles Maxwell, senior energy analyst for C.J. Lawrence, Morgan Grenfell Inc., figures that because OPEC production in the third quarter will exceed demand, the price of oil will decline by about $3 to $4 a

Oil at $24 by 1995?

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Oil prices are likely to remain below $20 a barrel for a few years, but growing worldwide energy consumption will push them to about $24 a barrel by the mid-1990's, according to a report issued Thursday by Conoco Inc.

Officials of the oil company, a subsidiary of the Du Pont Co., said they expected the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to pursue moderate pricing policies despite oil importers' growing reliance on supplies from the Middle East.

"I think OPEC learned some lessons by setting the price too high in the past," said John Sauer, manager of Conoco's planning and analysis department.

Dollar rallies despite intervention

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar, after plunging in the United States and Tokyo, rallied today in early European trading though it was still off its previous highs. Gold prices were higher.

Traders said reports of coordinated central bank intervention, selling dollars to bring the currency down, had tended to strengthen the dollar.

They said sentiment remained much in favor of the dollar and attributed Thursday's biggest single-day drop in years in the United States to technical stop-loss selling.

In Tokyo, the dollar suffered its biggest single-day plunge in recent years today but rallied in later European trading.

The dollar fell 6.25 yen to a closing 145.05 yen in Tokyo. Later, in London, it was quoted at a higher rate of 147.05 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning compared with late Thursday:

—2.0055 West German marks, down from 2.0235
—1.7290 Swiss francs, down from 1.7490
—6.8068 French francs, down from 6.8680
—2.2459 Dutch guilders, down from 2.2915
—1,451.50 Italian lire, down from 1,472.00
—1.1985 Canadian dollars, down from 1.1993

In London, the dollar fell against the British pound. It cost $1.53075 to buy one pound, more expensive than $1.5195 late Thursday.

Gold opened in London at $365.80 a troy ounce, compared with late Thursday's $362.50. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $365.35.

Silver was quoted in London at $5.31 a troy ounce, up from Thursday's $5.29.

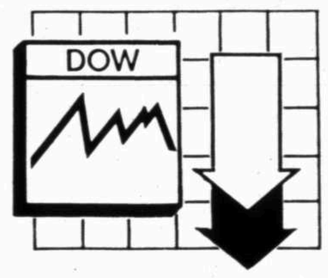

Stocks tumble 28.3 points

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices took a pounding Thursday, hit by futures-related selling programs plus plunges in bond prices and the dollar.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials tumbled 28.36 to 2,475.00.

Losers swamped gainers in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 1,078 issues down, 444 up and 466 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 179.48 million shares, up from 170.54 million in the previous session.

Stocks were sold in preparation for the so-called triple witching hour, something that occurs once each quarter when stock-index futures, index options and options on individual stocks expire. Wall Streeters expect trading volume to be heavy Friday as investors adjust their positions in stocks and futures.

A setback in the credit market acted as a catalyst for the stock selling. The 30-year Treasury bond dropped about 1½ points, or $15 for every $1,000 in value. The bond's decline coincided with a steep slide in the dollar.

Stock analysts detected little direct reaction to a Commerce Department report showing the country's merchandise trade deficit fell to $8.26 billion in April from March's deficit of $9.54 billion.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

50-Off Stores reporting strong revenues

SAN ANTONIO (SWN) — 50-Off Stores, Inc., a San Antonio-based chain of off-price retail stores has reported a continued upward trend in revenue and income. The company reported revenue of $12,760,086 for the quarter ended May 5, 1989 compared to revenue of $7,996,427 for the quarter ended April 29, 1988, an increase of approximately 60 percent. The chain credits new store locations, particulary on the Mexican border, for improved performance.

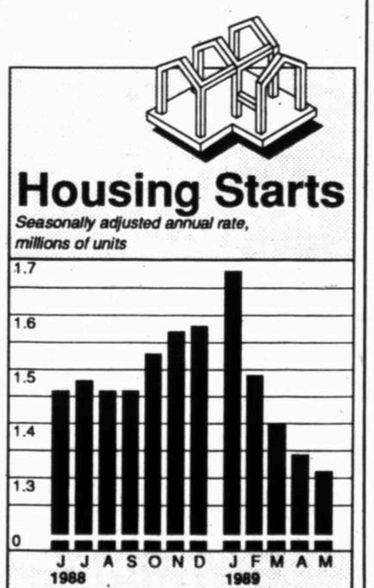

Housing starts at lowest level since 1982

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite falling interest rates, housing construction continued to decline in May, down 2.1 percent from the previous month to the lowest level since the last recession in 1982, the government said today.

Mortgage rates, which peaked at 11.22 percent in March before falling to 10.2 percent by last week, had been blamed for the recent decline in housing activity. Analysts had thought the falling rates would boost the pace.

Nevertheless, new homes and apartments in May were built at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.31 million units, down from 1.34 million in April when construction fell 5.0 percent, the Commerce Department reported.

It was the fourth consecutive monthly decline, the longest string since activity slowed for five months in a row from February through June 1987. The April level was the slowest pace since the 1.30 million rate in December 1982.

From Staff Reports

A project in Irion County has yielded a second producer for the Zan Zan field, extending the Middle Canyon pay southeast.

CASS OIL CO., Midland, tested the No. 3 Joan Crews Hoyt to flow 251 barrels of 39.6 gravity crude and 35 barrels of water from perforations 5,996 to 6,040 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,250 gallons of acid and fractured with 30,000 gallons of gel. Gas-oil ratio is 1,681:1.

Permitted as a 7,400 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 6,590 ft. and plugged back to 6,529 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 6,588 ft.

Location is 1,580 ft. from south and 760 ft. from east lines of Section 9, Block 3, H&TC survey, Abst. 296, five miles northeast of Mertzon.

★Irion producer

Cass Oil Co. has added a second producer to the Zan Zan field of Irion County.

Austin firm reopens pay in Menard field

Canyon 3100 production was reopened in the Wilhelm Lane field of Menard County as DANIEL EXPLORATION INC., Austin, completed activity in the area.

On potential test, the No. 4-B Alex Menzies pumped 34 barrels of 34.8 gravity crude and 15 barrels of water. Production was from perforations 3,193 to 3,199 ft., which had been acidized with 250 gallons of acid and fractured with 4,000 gallons of gel and 4,000 lbs. sand. Gas-oil ratio is 588:1.

Drilled to 3,631 ft., the well was plugged back to 3,565 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,282 ft., include the Canyon Lime at 2,400 ft., Palo Pinto Lime at 2,970, Capps Lime at 3,283, and Goen Lime at 3,468 ft.

Location is 3,490 ft. from north and 2,580 ft. from west lines of W.C. Huey survey 62, Abst. 1700, 11 miles northwest of Menard.

Tom Green field gets second Strawn well

MORROW RESOUCES INC., San Angelo, has reentered the former Canyon opener in the Lipan Creek field of Tom Green County, recompleting it as the second Strawn producer and a half-mile east extension to that pay in the field.

The No. 1-A Evelyn Walling was tested to pump 28 barrels of 39.6 gravity crude and no water from perforations 4,854 to 4,858 ft. The interval was acidized with 100 gallons of acid.

Location is 660 ft. from south and 1,980 ft. from west lines of Section 159, Block 11, SPRR survey, Abst. 2061, seven miles southwest of Wall.

Midland operator adds to Dawson production

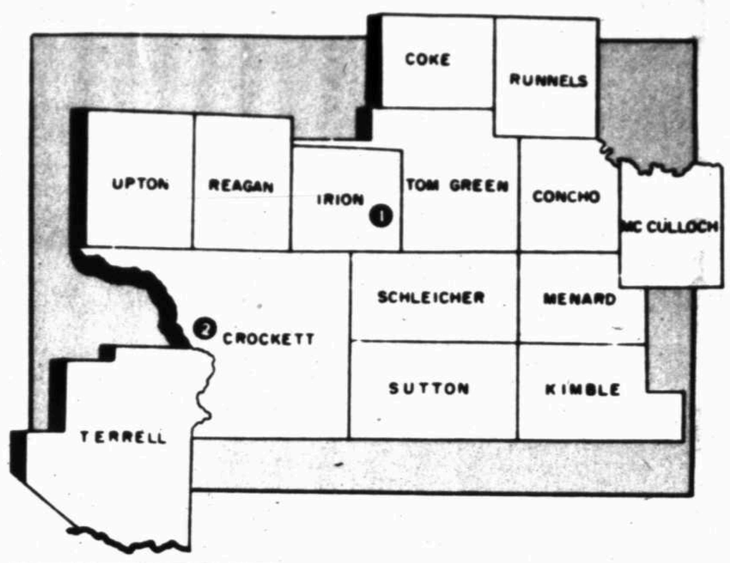

New production has been added to the Spraberry field of Dawson County.

VOSKAMP EXPLORATION INC., Midland, potentialed the No. 1 Riddle to pump 26 barrels of 34 gravity crude and 12 barrels of water from perforations 3,755 to 3,820 ft. Gas-oil ratio is 577:1.

Permitted as a 3,900 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 3,867 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set.

Location is 330 ft. from north and west lines of Section 1, Block 34, T-4-N, T&P survey, 12 miles southeast of Lamesa.

Bull Dog Tool, B.D. Appleton settle lawsuit

From Staff Reports

Bull Dog Tool Inc. of Hobbs, N.M. and B.D. Appleton of Snyder have agreed on a settlement of a lawsuit filed by Bull Dog over patent infringement.

Bull Dog filed suit in the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Texas alleging infringement on its patent of the Bull Dog bailer by the Appleton well clean out tool. As part of the settlement, a consent judgement of validity of Bull Dog's patent has been filed.

Also as part of the agreement, Appleton has agreed to pay a cash settlement and to cease further manufacture, sale and use of its well clean out tool. Bull Dog has agreed not to charge any customer of Appleton with infringement for prior use of that tool.

Clayton Williams records Louisiana strike

From Staff Reports

HOUSTON — Clayton W. Williams Jr. Inc. has completed a Chris A-4 sand discovery in Cameron Parish, La.

The State Lease 12848 No. 1 potentialed at 5.2 Mmcfd and 55 barrels of condensate on a 16/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 3,600 psi. Perforations were from 11,625 to 11,631 ft.

Amoco completes third Arkoma gas strike

DENVER — Amoco Production Co. has made its third significant natural gas discovery in the Oklahoma portion of the Arkoma Basin in the past six months.

The Amoco No. 1 Patterson tested natural gas at a daily rate of 14.1 Mmcfd from the Pennsylvanian Spiro-Wapanucka section between 11,944 and 12,124 ft. The test was conducted through casing on a 24/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 3,925 psi.

Orxy announces plans for Gulf production platform

DALLAS (SWN) — Oryx Energy Co. has announced plans to build a $33 million production platform on High Island Block 384 in the Gulf of Mexico. Start-up is scheduled for the fall of 1991.

Production is expected to exceed 40 million cubic feet of gas per day (MMcf/D). Based on today's prices, High Island 384 will generate about $22 million in revenues for Oryx Energy during the first full year on stream. The company has 100-percent interest in the block and will operate the new platform.

High Island 384 will be the first offshore platform built by Oryx Energy since the Dallas-based company became an independent in November 1988. The six-slot platform will be in about 360 feet of water in the Flower Garden Area, some 130 miles south of Sabine Pass, TX.

The $33 million total cost covers the platform, pipeline, drilling and completion, and hook-up. The initial timetable calls for setting the jacket in October 1990 and beginning the drilling phase in late 1990. Production equipment will be installed during the first-quarter 1991 and High Island 384 should go on stream in the fourth quarter.

Before deciding to construct the platform and produce from High Island 384, Oryx Energy drilled four successful exploratory wells, the most recent in early 1989. Earlier this month the company filed a development plan with the Minerals Management Service. Engineers are currently studying soil conditions and collecting other seafloor data preparatory to developing design criteria. No construction contract has been let.

OIL

Oil prices continued to increase in trading Thursday on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The benchmark U.S. grade, West Texas Intermediate, closed at $20.57 a barrel for July delivery, up 34 cents.

Worldwide energy demand is expected to grow about 2 percent a year from 1989 to 2000, the study said, with oil demand rising about 1.5 percent a year.

Conoco officials said the projections took into account concerns about global warming, which is linked to the consumption of fossil fuels.

The rate of growth in energy demand in the U.S. will trail the world average, at about 1.5 percent a year, the study estimated.

But even so, demand for oil in this country is expected to climb from 16.7 million barrels a day in 1987 to about 19.5 million barrels a day in 2000.

Declining domestic production will increase oil imports from 6 million barrels a day in 1987 to an estimated 11 million barrels a day by the end of the century.

At that point, imported oil would account for 55 percent of demand, compared with 37 percent in 1988.

LIBRARY

The non-profit concern has about 255 members and an average of 14 volunteers have worked there each month since January. In May, Floyd says, volunteers worked a total of 226 hours at a credited cost of $1,132.

Volunteers do a variety of work, from picking up data donations to filing data already received.

One volunteer, Jack Jordan, an independent geologist, is helping with the library's new computer system, which was donated by the Mabee Foundation and Abell-Hanger Foundation. He calls the system state-of-the art, and says when it is operational, members can easily search for geological information via logs, scout tickets and production reports.

Othal Plemmons has been a volunteer at the library "since they began receiving data." He spends about 10 hours a month at the library, sorting and filing data, and says it's a pleasure working with the data. And though he graduated from Texas Tech 40 years ago and is semi-retired, he admits that "It's hard to get away from geology. Sometimes I put together a prospect, and can get my information here."

After working for Amoco and Davis Oil in the early 1980s, John Sullivan has supported himself and his family with carpentry work and occasional mud-logging jobs since moving to Midland. He works at the library about 10 hours a month to offset the cost of membership, and uses the library for a long-term data-gathering project on Throckmorton County for himself.

He knows a number of younger geologists like himself have suffered during the downturn, and encourages them to join the library, saying they could be doing a lot of leg work and compiling information for later, when activity picks up. "Working here can be a good thing, mentally and professionally."

As he sums it up, "If it wasn't for this library, it would be impossible for me to fulfill my professional goals."

OPEC

barrel by midautumn before a modest recovery begins next winter.

Maxwell estimated in a recent report that OPEC is now selling 20.5 million barrels into the market.

Thus, a million-barrel increase in OPEC's daily output quota could result in a sales-to-market total of roughly 21.5 million barrels a day for the second half of 1989, Maxwell asserted. That's about 1.5 million barrels a day above market demand in the weaker third quarter but about in line with demand in the fourth quarter, he said.

MIDLAND—

Restaurant prices rose 1 percent in May, as lower prices for main dishes prepared with ham were offset by higher prices fo rchicken dishes.

For the first time since November, Midland housing costs increased, rising 0.8 percent. Higher rents were responsible.

A fifth month of lower price tags on women's apparel and a aecond month lof lower men's wear prices helped cause a 0.8 percent drop in clothing costs in May.

Only a 0.03 percent decrease in health care costs was noted in May, due to lower prices for nonprescription medicines.

Food at home costs remained stable in May, with some components showing changes. Alcoholic beverage prices fell 0.4 percent, meat prices were down 5.5 percent, produce prices jumped 15.2 percent and shelf items fell 0.6 percent.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Treasury notes have no investment limitations

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have three U.S. Treasury notes, purchased through the Federal Reserve Bank at different times. After selling my house, I have another $100,000 I would like to put into Treasury notes. Is there any limit on how much can be invested that way?

Doyle

A. None whatsoever! Unlike U.S. Savings Bonds, on which there is an annual purchase limit of $15,000 per individual and $30,000 when savings bonds are bought in co-ownership form, there is absolutely no top on the amount of Treasury bills, notes and bonds you can buy.

Rich folks have millions salted away in Treasury securities, secure in the knowledge that they will always collect interest and that the principal amounts will be paid off when those securities mature.

There is one slight wrinkle. When you submit a tender to buy a new Treasury security at the auction at which it is sold, you're guaranteed you will get the bill, note or bond you want if you send in a "noncompetitive" tender — agreeing to purchase at the average price determined by the auction — and if you don't tender for more than $1 million. Tenders for that amount are always accepted.

Note I called that a "slight" wrinkle. A million-dollar investment is way beyond the reach of average investors.

You can attempt to buy a larger amount of Treasury securities by submitting a competitive tender in which you specify the price and/or yield at which you are willing to buy. However, you won't get the securities if you bid too low and you'll pay too much if you bid too high.

It should come as no surprise that most individual Treasury security investors use noncompetitive tenders.

Q. We own two Treasury notes. The semiannual interest checks from one are mailed directly to us. The interest from the other is credited to our bank account every six months. When each of these notes matures, we will probably purchase a new one.

However, we would like to have all the interest payments mailed to us by check. Is this possible with the new "book-entry" policy now in effect?

A. No. Under the "Treasury Direct" arrangement in effect for Treasury notes and bonds issued since August 1986, direct deposit of interest into your bank, savings and loan association or credit union account is mandatory. The face amount of your note will also go there when your note matures.

The U.S. Treasury Department no longer mails out interest and principal checks on new Treasury securities. The money is sent electronically the very day it is due. That's a good deal. No more worries about checks being lost or stolen in the mail. Assuming you know the day an interest or principal payment is due, you can write a check against your local account or go to your bank and make a withdrawal on that very date.

Q. Is there a market for Treasury Direct bills, notes and bonds that have not reached maturity? Is so, what is the procedure for selling?

A. Already issued U.S. Treasury securities are very "marketable," meaning they can be bought and sold.

However, when you own a Treasury bill, note or bond in your personal Treasury Direct account, you cannot sell it right out of that account. First, it must be transferred to a commercial Treasury Direct account at a brokerage firm or bank, which will sell the security for you.

Another hang-up with having securities in your own Treasury Direct account is that they cannot be used as collateral for a loan.

Treasury Direct accounts have many advantages but, because of the two inconveniences mentioned here, they are intended for investors who intend to hold the securities until maturity.

Beijing divided

Chinese citizens, left, line up outside the American Embassy in Beijing today to fill out applications for U.S. visas. In the wake of recent riotin, many are seeking to leave their homeland. Meanwhile, Chinese army troops, above, are trucked into Tiananmen Square to continue clean-up efforts. Here, a group of transport vehicles is lined up outside the Great Hall of the People. The square still is closed to the public.

U.S. won't let crisis affect ties to Deng

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON — The United States still can do business with Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping despite his military crackdown and the massacre of hundreds — perhaps thousands — of people, a senior Bush administration official says.

The U.S. position as outlined Thursday by the senior administration official went far beyond public pronouncements from the White House or State Department.

President Bush has been reluctant to affix blame for China's bloodshed but has said it would be "extraordinarily difficult" for the United States to have normal relations with officials responsible for the massacre of students and workers participating in pro-democracy protests.

However, the administration official, a top policy maker in Bush's inner circle, said U.S. ties with China involve "a very important relationship with a very important country."

Despite the crackdown, the official said, "China has come a long way since 1972" when Washington reestablished ties with Beijing. The official called China "a great important country in the world, and we have great stakes there."

"I think they have made a decision that they're going to restore order and that they're going to try to rediscipline the system," the official said. "It is not so clear that they have made a major reversal in course and will not resume a path like they were on before. I think it's premature to make that decision."

The official, who spoke with four reporters on the condition of anonymity, appeared open to continued contacts with Deng, China's senior leader, who has praised the military for its bloody assault against Chinese citizens.

"He is the head of a very major country. There are lots of heads of government and state who do things that we don't like that we do business with," the official said.

"Are you suggesting we should not have done any business with (Soviet leaders Nikita) Khrushchev, (Leonid) Brezhnev, anybody who has done anything wrong?" the official asked.

Saying it was premature to say China has abandoned reforms, the official added, "It is not so clear that they have made a major reversal in course and will not resume a path like they were on before."

On Capitol Hill, meanwhile, lawmakers pummeled the State Department with complaints about the way it reacted to the crisis in China.

Rep. Elton Gallegly, R-Calif., said parents of American students in China contacted the department in the past week with specific details on how to reach the students so they could be given help in leaving.

"There was no contact made by the consulate (in China) as to any way for them to get out," he said at a hearing. One person seeking help with transportation to an airport was told, "The consulate is not in the taxi business," he said.

Richard L. Williams, acting deputy assistant secretary of state for east Asian and Pacific affairs, apologized for any shortcomings but defended the department's efforts and said no one could have foreseen the violence that resulted from student demonstrations in Beijing.

"Of course we are not satisfied when we hear that major foul-ups took place," he said. "We are sorry, congressman."

Williams was responding to Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., one of half a dozen lawmakers who took the department to task for not moving faster to help Americans leave following the Tiananmen Square massacre. In fact, the department characterized its effort as a great success.

"It's that kind of aloof attitude, in the face of justifiable criticism, that upsets the citizens involved and their members of Congress," Weiss said.

"Frantic parents called my office with desperate pleas for help in getting their sons and daughters out of China," said Rep. Howard Berman, D-Calif., who said his staff booked flights for students. "If we were able to make these arrangements from Los Angeles, why couldn't the State Department provide such assistance?"

Rep. Rod Chandler, R-Wash., citing a case in his congressional district, said the State Department has denied visas to Chinese grandparents who sought to bring grandchildren who are U.S. citizens to the United States.

"It is clear to me that the way we deal with the evacuations of U.S. citizens in a crisis, especially U.S. children, needs to be carefully re-evaluated," Chandler said.

Chandler and others said it was simply luck that no Americans were killed or seriously wounded in the violent aftermath of the June 3-4 crackdown on pro-democracy protests.

Williams claimed success for the evacuation effort, noting that more than 6,000 Americans had left China over the last week in "one of the largest evacuations of Americans in a crisis situation since World War II." About 1,000 Americans remain, along with 182 U.S. government personnel, he said.

Witness says Chengdu also marred by riots

EDITOR'S NOTE: Reports from interior China have been rare since troops cleared student demonstrators from Tiananmen Square in Beijing on the night of June 3-4. Here is an account of events in Chengdu from a correspondent who traveled to the city in central China.

By TERRIL JONES

CHENGDU, China (AP) — When Beijing's night of blood and fire had ended, witnesses said police with clubs attacked people gathered at a huge statue of Mao in Chengdu, 1,000 miles away, starting riots that spread through the city.

Witnesses said a market was destroyed by flames and a row of buses was burned during two days of street battles that began Sunday, June 4.

They said up to 30 people were killed, more than half of them students. Official press reports have said 300 police were injured but have not mentioned fatalities.

It was one of the most violent episodes outside Beijing, where soldiers swept into Tiananmen Square the night of June 3-4 to end weeks of student protests for democracy.

The government says a few hundred people were killed in Beijing, at least half of them soldiers, but Chinese witnesses and Western intelligence put the civilian death toll at about 3,000.

As in the capital, students in Chengdu began protesting for democracy in mid-April after the death of former Communist Party chief Hu Yaobang, who lost his job for being too easy on student protests two years earlier.

Their focal point was the white 50-foot statue of Mao Tse-Tung, father of communist China, in the heart of Chengdu, capital of central Sichuan province.

On that Sunday, police charged in with clubs, arresting 47 students and four workers the official media said were camping out at the statue.

Word of the assault spread and 10,000 people gathered at the statue, witnesses said. Reports of the Beijing bloodshed also were coming in by telephone and Voice of America radio.

Protesters attacked police and were turned back with tear gas and water cannons, the witnesses said.

A student reported seeing at least one person killed with a bayonet. Unconfirmed reports said several people were shot dead.

"Many students were beaten with clubs with enlarged ends that leave no marks but scramble your brains," said a student at Sichuan University, a center of the democracy movement.

The Sichuan Daily and Chengdu Evening News have denied rumors that two women were mutilated with bayonets.

That night, protesters set fire to a police booth at the entrance of the People's Market and the flames spread through the entire half-block area. Several city buses also were burned.

General gives contradictory accounts of army shooting

BEIJING (AP) — An army general told Western reporters today that soldiers of the People's Liberation Army fired on unarmed civilians in Tiananmen Square, then he contradicted himself and denied troops shot at the protesters.

In the government's first news conference for Western reporters since it began cracking down on the movement for democracy, Gen. Li Zhiyun said troops were forced to use violence to enter the city because "people who didn't know the truth" blocked them on the outskirts of Beijing.

Li said soldiers in tanks and armored personnel carriers later "exercised restraint" while clearing student-led demonstrators from Tiananmen June 3-4.

"But still there were some thugs, they (were) still provocative to the troops. At this time, some of the soldiers in our troops directed their fire into the square and especially those troops that have wounded or dead soldiers within their troops," the army spokesman said.

"The rest of the soldiers started to fire on those thugs who were provocative to them."

Li spoke in Chinese during the news conference inside the Great Hall of the People. His comments were translated by an interpreter provided by the army.

Student fears unrest will reach Hong Kong

By BENG LEONG LIM

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — Legend has it that one starry night, the poor people of China gazed across the narrow strait of water toward the English colony of Hong Kong and marvelled at its glittering skyline. Their hearts slowed and they dreamed of being on that little pearl where the streets are lined with gold dust.

Ellis Mo

Except for the folklore, the Chinese dream of being on the streets of Hong Kong will materialize in 1997, when its lease by the British expires and falls into the iron grip of the Communists.

Where the dream begins for China, it will end another for the people of Hong Kong. For the latter, and particularly one Pan American University student from Hong Kong, a nightmare is just about the surface, thanks in no small measure to the brutality with which the Chinese Communist Party has shown to the world in crushing the student demonstrations for democracy in China in the last few weeks.

One Pan Am student from Hong Kong, Ellis Mo, may just have his work cut out for him. The 24-year-old Mo, who is pursuing a master's degree in business administration, is now reconsidering his temporary resident status here.

The reason? The Hong Kong he knew for so long may never be the same again.

There was a time when Chinese leaders promised Hong Kong would not be subjected to the iron fist with which the motherland is ruled when England's lease on its little crown colony expires. The people of Hong Kong believed Chinese leaders would grant some degree of autonomy to Hong Kong.

But in the last few weeks, that feeling has changed. Mo and many other students from Hong Kong studying abroad are evaluating their priorities. The merciless killing of almost 3,000 protesters for democracy at Tiananmen Square has opened their eyes and their minds to a new awareness.

The recent "Beijing butchery" that shocked the democratic world may have scared many students from Hong Kong from going home.

"Who wants to go home now, after what they have done to their own brothers and sisters?" Mo asks.

What the government has done is fast reducing the 5 million population of Hong Kong, he says. Already a million Chinese people have emigrated from Hong Kong.

Financial institutions are looking elsewhere to invest their capital, and wealthy businessmen are closing accounts and opening them somewhere else that is safe, Mo says. The general price index in the Hong Kong stock exchange reportedly dropped 500 points the June 5, after the weekend bloodshed at Tiananmen Square.

Even looting, a rare occurrence, is taking place in this tightly secured island country. This is because of the hysteria the people are experiencing after nearly a million Hong Kong Chinese staged a protest against the Chinese government, Mo says.

The Pearl of the Orient is fast becoming the leper of the Orient. Its status as the third largest port in the world in terms of daily tonnage is fast eroding. Its lifestyle of fast cars, bright neon signs and gourmet delicacies is finding itself on the shores of big cities.

What had happened in Hong Kong, situated just two miles off the mainland of China, is burdening this young man.

"Because I love my parents very much, I now have to find a way to get them out of Hong Kong," Mo confides.

Others like Mo are also considering immigrating to Australia, France, Germany, England, and Canada, which has the largest concentration of Hong Kong Chinese. Home away from home will never be the same, but these people are not ready to place their trust in the Chinese Communist government.

"People are losing their faith in the initial agreement between the British and Chinese governments to grant self rule to Hong Kong," Mo says, adding that the same killing that happened at Tiananmen Square in Beijing, China, may very well be repeated in Hong Kong should a demonstration result.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Tanker explosion kills one crewman

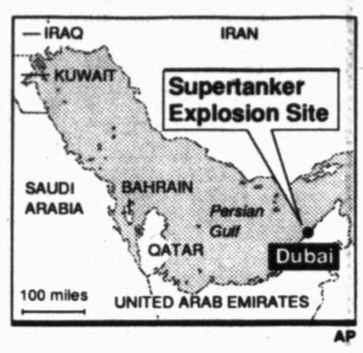

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — An explosion ripped through a Pakistani-owned supertanker in a Dubai dry dock Thursday, killing one crewman and injuring at least 10, police reported.

The blast shattered windows for miles around and triggered a fierce blaze aboard the vessel, which was being repaired in Dubai, a major southern Gulf port and capital of the United Arab Emirates.

Dubai police commander Dhahi Khalfan said firefighters and civil defense squads took three hours to control the fire.

One man was killed and 10 others were injured, some seriously, he told reporters without giving names or nationalities. Marine salvage executives said they are believed to be Pakistani and Filipino nationals.

Dubai-based agents for the 231,439-ton Seiva refused to give details of the accident. The Seiva is owned by the Pakistani company Gokul and managed by Atlas shipping company of Hong Kong.

Hungary reburies hero

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of Hungarians paid a belated tribute today to Imre Nagy, the executed leader of the 1956 anti-Soviet revolt, in a reburial ceremony.

The reburial of Nagy and four collegues in Heroes' Square amounts to a catharsis for Hungary and mirrors remarkably swift political changes. This week, the ruling Communist Party began talks with opposition leaders on holding multi-party elections.

"We see this day as a dividing line, which we hope will mean we can begin to build a new and free Hungary," said Andras Kaplar, a member of the opposition Hungarian Democratic Forum.

At today's ceremony, red, white and green Hungarian flags with black cloth circles in the middle — symbolizing the Soviet star that many Hungarians shot out of the national flag during the revolt — dominated the square where the coffins of Nagy and four associates were on display.

The star was removed from the Hungarian flag after the revolt.

Palme trial continues

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A witness testified on Thursday she saw Carl Gustaf Christer Pettersson, the man accused of shooting Prime Minister Olof Palme, shouting in a drunken rage and hailing Palme's death.

She quoted Pettersson as saying last September that if Palme had not been dead already, he should be killed. Pettersson may have said he killed Palme, but she could not make out his exact words, said Sigrid Lovisa Malm.

Palme, Sweden's four-term prime minister, was killed on a downtown Stockholm street on the night of Feb. 28, 1986, shortly after emerging from a movie house with his wife. Pettersson was arrested for the shooting last December.

Charges called 'gossip'

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's former federal security chief pleaded innocent Thursday to charges he ordered the murder of a prominent journalist and denied links to a Mexican drug kingpin, blaming it all on "pure gossip."

Jose Antonio Zorrilla Perez, 47, was charged with first-degree murder in the parking garage shooting of newspaper columnist Manuel Buendia, who exposed drug trafficking, gunrunning and wrongdoing in high places.

Buendia, of the daily Excelsior, was killed in Mexico City on May 30, 1984.

"I am innocent of all these charges," Zorrilla, a former director of the Mexican equivalent of the FBI said at his arraignment in Criminal Court.

Settlement ordered

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — A judge has ordered the Defense Ministry to pay $47 million to an electrician tortured during Uruguay's 1972-85 military dictatorship, a newspaper reported Thursday.

A government spokesman said the Defense Ministry will appeal the order.

The victim, who was not identified by name, was held without charge from January 1976 to May 1977, the weekly Busqueda reported.

His injuries were not described, but the newspaper quoted Civil Court Judge Carlos Beriangieri as saying in his ruling that they prevent the man from returning to work. The report did not say what day the ruling was made.

Bus collision kills 16

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Sixteen people were killed and 30 injured when a local tourist bus and a truck collided in southeastern Thailand, police said today.

Police Lt. Rathsith Doungngung said the accident occurred Thursday near Chanthaburi, about 130 miles southeast of the capital Bangkok. Rathsith said both the bus and truck drivers fled the scene of the accident.

The crash was the second accident involving a tourist bus in Thailand this month. On June 7, 22 people were killed when a tour bus was struck by a truck in central Thailand.

Ban on film overturned

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's Supreme Court has overturned a ban on Martin Scorsese's film, "The Last Temptation of Christ," though the judges said the movie is likely to offend some people.

The country's 27-member Theater and Film Censorship Board banned the film last October. The panel cited a criminal law that forbids practices offensive to the beliefs of any religious group.

The movie, adapted from a 1955 novel by Nikos Kazanthakis, touched off protests by Christian groups in the United States and Europe. Some Christians have been offended by Scorsese's portrayal of Jesus Christ as a human being with passions and weaknesses.

In reversing the ban Thursday, the five-judge panel said it was "not enough that the movie is likely to stir up opposition or even offense against a portion of those who choose to see it."

Amnon Globus of Golan-Globus Cannon, the film's Israeli distributors who appealed the case to the Supreme Court, said its decision signaled "the end of censorship" in Israel.

Blacks taking holiday

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Businesses shut down as thousands of blacks stayed away from work today to observe a self-declared national holiday on the 13th anniversary of the Soweto township riots.

Police reported scattered incidents, but no major violence.

June 16, commonly known as "Soweto Day," has no official status as a holiday. But many businesses decided to close because so many of their black workers and customers took the day off.

In the major cities of Johannesburg, Durban and Cape Town, black commuter traffic was less than half the weekday average, according to various estimates. Bus stops, railway stations and taxi stands all were unusually empty. Black schools nationwide were deserted.

Buses in Durban traveled under police escort to prevent attacks by black militants attempting to enforce the boycott.

Irish counting ballots

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Ireland began counting ballots today from its snap national election, but politicians are already threatening to force another contest.

A heavy turnout was reported Thursday as Ireland also selected members of the European Parliament. Counting for the European Parliament begins Sunday.

Prime Minister Charles Haughey called the election in hope of winning a majority in the Dail, or parliament, which would be his first in five tries.

Leaders of the other parties offered no support.

Soviets take weapons

MOSCOW (AP) — Troops have seized thousands of weapons since a curfew was imposed nearly two weeks ago to quell ethnic violence in Uzbekistan, and the death toll rose with the discovery of two more bodies, Tass reported today.

Tass, the official news agency, said troops had confiscated 157 firearms and steel weapons as well as 26 firebombs during road checks in the last 24 hours. A total of 7,718 weapons have now been confiscated.

Meanwhile the remains of two people were discovered and added to the list of at least 100 victims, Tass said. On Thursday, the agency quoted Premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov as saying that at least 100 people had died during the turmoil that began June 3.

Police fire tear gas

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Police fired tear gas Thursday to stop 200 students protesting poor living conditions in this impoverished Caribbean nation.

Police said they arrested 12 students. No injuries were reported.

The protesters, from Santo Domingo's State University, were demonstrating in support of a 48-hour general strike called Monday by several trade, student and neighborhood groups to demand higher wages and protest deteriorating living standards.

In an about-face Thursday, President Joaquin Balaguer said he sympathizes with leaders who called the strike and is willing to negotiate with them. Last week he refused to talk to them. There was no immediate response from strike leaders.

Galtieri denied pardon

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The Supreme Court on Thursday refused to pardon ex-President Leopoldo Galtieri and three other generals charged with human rights abuses during Argentina's 1976-83 military dictatorship.

The decision complicates an issue that sparked three rebellions against President Raul Alfonsin and threatens to undermine the government of President-elect Carlos Menem, who is to take office in three weeks.
