"Moral House Cleaning" Of Wichita Demanded Of Council

Faith

Wait for June—
F. O. B. to Utilities—
Eight of Them Wrong—
Some Day—

Comparing the number of divorce suits filed and marriage licenses issued during the merry month of May, a reporter concludes that more Wichita couples "sought happiness through the divorce courts than through marriage." May was never the favored month of the bride. There will be a different story in June. If you don't believe it, count the number of licenses issued Monday, according to the "records" column.

As a matter of fact the persons who visit Miss Hall, county clerk, for marriage licenses are not seeking happiness. They already have it. When they reach the district court, via the divorce petition, they are seeking release from unhappiness. And why not? "Inability to be happy" would probably not win freedom for many, under present rules, but it would cover most of the grounds now alleged in petitions.

While the federal trade commission has been stirring up considerable ruckus over the propaganda activities of public utilities, this writer rather admires the way utility employes operate in times of emergency. There is a bit of praise due Wichita Falls long distance telephone operators who held on to popping receivers Sunday night to place one call after another, with no light except that of candles and matches to aid their efforts. There is commendation due telephone and electric linemen who went into a blinding storm to trace dangerous breaks and to repair service. All of which may be "propaganda," but it's f. o. b. to the utilities and a. y. d. to those who may read it.

Guinn Williams, candidate for congress, and J. D. Avis, candidate for the state legislature, are unopposed for their offices, according to the list of district candidates released by E. C. DeMontel, county Democratic chairman. They know where they will stand before the primary ballots are counted. Not so Senator Earle B. Mayfield, who speaks here tonight, and his eight or nine opponents. They have a long and gruelling campaign to face. One will be the victor. "Hope springs eternal" must have been written for these gentlemen.

Here is a piece of negative news: No conferences have been held recently by water experts or city officials on what to do about the water situation here. The New York bond house that insisted the city retain its $12,000 check as a guarantee to purchase Wichita Falls water bonds, WHEN ISSUED, wins the cardboard storm cellar for the most outstanding piece of optimism to date.

League Opens New Era Says Geneva Speaker

GENEVA, June 4. (AP)—Immense practical progress in achieving good understanding among the nations is the fruit of meetings of the council of the League of Nations, said President Aguero Betancourt opening the first public meeting of the 50th session of the council today. He said that in earlier days those who governed the destinies of peoples hardly knew one another or only met at official interviews, but that now a new era had been created, thanks to the league.

(INS)—Many departments of the state government here were closed today in tribute to the memory of Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederate states, whose birthday occurred Sunday. Governor Moody, however, was at his desk. No definite closing program for the departments had been arranged, it being left entirely up to individual department heads.

LIQUOR AND VICE TRAFFIC GAINING, CLAIM

W. B. Chauncey Heads Group Filing Protest On Conditions Here

PLEA FOR CHILDREN

Council Votes Thanks After Hearing Need For "Clean-Up"

Discontinuance of the sale of "salacious and immoral" magazines by news stands, elimination of organized vice, active work and raids by the police to stamp out the liquor traffic in the city, and an active board of censors for moving pictures and stage productions were demanded by women, ministers and laymen at a fiery meeting of the city council Monday night.

W. B. Chauncey, chairman of the board of education of the city, made the four definite suggestions on behalf of the school children of the city and stirred up the hornet's nest.

Chauncey Leads Attack

"The moral protection of our children, and of our entire population is as vital and necessary as the protection of our physical property," Judge Chauncey declared.

"We should eliminate the houses of ill fame and make them quit.

"We should file state or federal charges against all liquor law violators at once, and not let them off with fines for vagrancy as I have heard has been the case at times in the past.

"The detectives and all the police should be told to stamp out the liquor traffic and everyone in the department should help out in the raids.

"Magazines which are unfit for consumption of our young people should be prohibited from sale on the news stands. They sell magazines on the news stands which the United States government will not even allow to go through the mails.

"There should be an active board of censors to watch the movies and work to the end of cleaner motion pictures."

Quizzed on Liquor

Judge Chauncey was pressed for specific instances where state or federal charges had not been filed against liquor law violators when arrests had been made, and the judge said he had none at hand. He gave a specific case of another kind of liquor law violation which he said had resulted in the escape of a man he believed guilty.

Mrs. Ira L. Cain and several other women, representing the mothers and church women of the city, emphasized Judge Chauncey's remarks.

"It should be the duty of the mothers and fathers to make the city safe for the greater welfare of our youth," Mrs. Cain said. "This means mentally and morally as well as physically. The entire city should lend its influence to Judge Chauncey in his petition to the city council for these needed reforms.

"Delinquency is increasing, and investigation has proved that the character of certain magazines sold on the news stands is as bad as bootleg whiskey."

Temptations Listed

"Our children are at the mercy of the adults. The adults are the ones who write the stories, print and sell the magazines; and who make and sell the liquor and who make and distribute and book and buy certain films and who put these temptations in the way of children.

E. Van Deventer spoke of protests made on alleged gambling devices at the fair and at street carnivals in the past and of their effect on children.

"They put on a fair, and because it is for some local people or cause or other, they let anything go," he said.

"If some carnival comes to town under the auspices of some organization or other, they let it operate gambling games called games of skill and do similar things that they would run a merchant on the street out of business for doing. They do this, usually, because some local organization allows the carnival company to use its name for 10 per cent of the income."

Urging the city fathers to get busy now rather than let things go until some time later when condi-

Damage Toll Mounts In Flooded Storm Area

Two Injuries Reported As Winds Sweep Wichita County; Heavy Losses in Oil Fields

Two men were seriously injured, many counties suffered inestimable damage to crops and property, while other regions received priceless rains which will insure good crop yields in Sunday night's rain and wind storm, according to latest reports filtering in from the storm area. The storm, centering its ferocity on Wichita county, was felt generally all over the Northwest Texas and Southern Oklahoma. No loss of life was reported, and the crop and property damage, though reported extensive, has not been estimated.

W. T. Mathews of Gainesville, employe of a contracting company at present operating near Electra, was struck by a falling casing during the storm on a lease south of Electra, it was reported. He is at present in an Electra hospital, where his condition is feared serious. Charles Tracy, employe of the Wichita Falls Laundry company, is still confined in the Hargrave-Walker hospital with injuries received in the height of the miniature tornado which struck here. Tracy was injured when a gas pipe in the plant exploded, presumably as the result of short circuits of wires during the high winds.

Narrow Escape

One narrow escape from death was recorded near Graham when John A. Taylor attempted to cross Flat creek to reach his home in Flat Creek community. His team was drowned and he was swept a short way down the swollen stream, but he grabbed a tree, shouted for help and was hauled out by a neighbor.

The Olney Chamber of Commerce Monday appealed for cottonseed for replanting large areas where the rain and some hail blotted out nearly all growing crops.

Attaining a velocity here of 60 miles per hour, the winds were virtually of this caliber which struck Electra, where much damage resulted, reports said Monday. Several derricks were blown down, trees were uprooted, houses damaged, and downtown stores were battered by large hailstones, causing much damage to windows. Heavy rains and winds also were experienced at Iowa Park and Burkburnett, although less damage resulted.

Damage to property apparently centered in Wichita Falls, which experienced the heaviest wind. Reports continued to come in Monday of serious damage to windows in the residential section, of flooded homes and considerable damage to trees, which in some cases were hurled to opposite sides of lawns. Damage to many stores, which were flooded by the rising waters and pelted by hail, had not been estimated Monday.

Officials of the electric company Monday had completed repairs to blown down wires, which, caught in the whirl of the storm Sunday night, were put out of commission, leaving many parts of the city in total darkness for several hours.

While in the majority of Northwest Texas damage to young cotton and wheat crops was reported, other regions reported beneficial rains. Corn crops near Sunset were given a splendid sendoff, while, on the other hand, many cotton fields were ruined. Grains and feedstuffs looked flourishing after the storm at Dundee, and cotton there was greatly helped, it was reported. Floydada crops, however, experienced a setback, especially in the wheat fields and gardens.

Dad's Corner Hurt

Gardens and cotton crops near Electra were virtually ruined.

An average rainfall over the district of about one inch is reported. Some areas had less, while in Wichita Falls the total fall reached 1.06 inches.

Dad's Corner, near Holliday, was one of the most damaged communities in the area, advices from there said Monday. The roof and two sides of the Field Athletic building were torn off by winds, and hurled several hundred feet, striking the Senter Mercantile store. The roof of the latter was considerably damaged.

SERVICES POSTPONED

ELECTRA, June 4.—The Memorial services of the I. O. O. F. and Rebekah lodges of this city, which was scheduled for last Sunday night, were postponed on account of the heavy storm which visited this section Sunday night. No definite date has been set for the services.

W. P. Belcher and L. N. McKelvey, of the city detective force, were heroes of Sunday's storm.

They played good Samaritans to two donkeys in distress about 4 o'clock Monday morning after the animals had been caught when Sunday's high wind blew in the barns at the city pound. They extricated the animals from the wreckage.

Persons living near the pound reported to police that the animals were pinned beneath the wreckage.

HIGH CHURCH OFFICIAL SHOT BY PREACHER

Bishop William A. Guerry Seriously Wounded By Clergyman

SEEKS FINANCIAL AID

Check for $50 Found In Hand of Wounded Man By Secretary

CHARLESTON, S. C., June 4. (UP)—Bishop William A. Guerry of the Episcopal diocese of southern South Carolina was wounded seriously by a retired clergyman of his church today.

The Rev. James A. Woodward, formerly of Brunswick, Ga., who fired the shot, committed suicide by shooting himself through the head immediately after, according to police records.

The shooting occurred shortly after noon. Late today physicians said Guerry's condition still was serious but that he had a chance to live.

Made Appointment

The bullet entered Bishop Guerry's chest. He was rushed to a hospital by physicians summoned by Miss Henrietta Jervey, his secretary, who was in an ante-room when the shooting took place.

Miss Jervey said the Rev. Woodward made an appointment with Bishop Guerry by telephone early in the day. On his arrival, the bishop called her aside and said:

"I am afraid of this man. Do not leave the ante-room."

The Rev. Woodward was dead when Miss Jervey reached the bishop's office. He apparently had come for financial aid, Miss Jervey said, as she found a check for $50 in Bishop Guerry's hand when she ran into the room.

Two Shots Fired

Miss Jervey said the minister recently had written newspaper articles criticising Bishop Guerry, and was considered a "crank."

Two shots were fired, according to Miss Jervey.

The bishop, formerly chaplain at the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., had been head of the southern diocese of South Carolina for 21 years. He was one of the most distinguished churchmen of the south and descended from a prominent South Carolina family.

The Reverend Woodward was 66 years old and recently had been temporarily filling the pulpit at St. Mark's church, Brunswick, Ga. His family is said to live at Darien, Ga., near Brunswick.

Attorney Slain in Row With Client Over Fees

BALTIMORE, June 4. (AP)—Clifton S. Brown, member of a Baltimore law firm, was shot fatally today as he approached his office, by Louis Berman, who had waited for him in the corridor of the office building. The slayer, seized by police who heard the shots, collapsed at the police station.

Brown died in an ambulance on his way to a hospital.

Brown, it was said, represented Berman in the settlement of his father's estate. Berman changed lawyers, refusing to pay Brown's fee which he regarded as excessive. The attorney's suit for the amount of his claim was recently upheld by the court of appeals.

Message Revives Hope For Gen. Nobile and Crew

Amateur Radio Operator In Russia Picks Up Purported SOS From Exploration Dirigible

MOSCOW, June 4. (UP)—The message picked up by an amateur radio operator at Vosnesinskoye Sevyerni-Dvinskoe, near Archangel, purporting to come from General Umberto Nobile and saying the polar dirigible Italia was over Franz Josef land, was believed authentic by experts here tonight.

The message said "Nobile SOS Franz Josef Land" and there was a phrase "Tengo a terra" which is believed to have meant Nobile was keeping close to land or actually had landed.

Soviet authorities are thoroughly investigating circumstances in connection with receipt of the message, standing prepared to send relief immediately if it is verified that Nobile sent a message saying he had landed or was about to land.

MORE MESSAGES FROM DIRIGIBLE

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, June 4 (AP) Radio messages in English and Italian, repeated frequently, were heard at midnight tonight by amateurs at Gaevle, Upsala, Sjaernum and Trelleborg. The message said: "Italia Nobile S. O. S. Kings Bay east."

The message finished with "Radio Bordeaux."

It is inferred that unless a hoax were being perpetrated, the dirigible Italia, lost in the Arctic since May 25 was trying to inform the world that it was able only to hear Bordeaux.

The amateurs received the message on wave lengths varying from 800 to 1000 meters.

PREPARATIONS FOR RELIEF RUSHED

MOSCOW, June 4 (US)—Preparations to send a relief expedition to Franz Josef land were being rushed tonight by the soviet Nobile rescue commission as the belief grew that the missing dirigible had sent out an SOS call last night, from a position in that vicinity.

Although members of the commission admitted there had been no confirmation of the report that an amateur radio operator had picked up the dirigible's call the night of June 3, they apparently did not doubt the accuracy of the report.

Verification Reported

Early tonight the rescue commission announced that it had verified the report that an amateur radio operator named Schmidt, living in the village of Voznessenie-Vochma, on the Dvina river, had caught the Italia's signals last night.

Schmidt was reported to have said that the dirigible messaged that it was "hovering over Franz Josef land."

The message was garbled but the rescue commission interpreted it as indicating that the entire crew of 17 was safe.

According to the Russian rescue commission, Schmidt says that, using his one tube receiving set, he picked up the following message:

"Italia Nobile Franz Josef land anuosof SOS SOS SOS, terra teno ehn" (all CQ.)

The first four words and the SOS, are the only ones absolutely deciphered, the commission states. The Italian words are interpreted to mean that the Italia is flying extremely low or in the direction of Franz Josef land.

Same Wave Length

Schmidt's set was tuned in on a wave length of 33 meters, it was said, this being the same as Nobile's wireless.

Members of the rescue commission said the presence of the Italia over Franz Josef land would be in accordance with the prevailing winds and the probable speed of drift since the airship ran out of fuel.

The expression of "terra teno" was interpreted as meaning that Nobile did not dare attempt a landing for fear of wrecking the ship and endangering the lives of the crew. A landing without motors a rough terrain such as is common would be particularly dangerous in on Franz Josef land.

PACIFIC PLANE BROUGHT DOWN SAFE ON ISLE

Second Leg of Flight To Australia From U. S. Is Completed

DISTANCE MARK SET

Strange Airway Crossed By Intrepid Quartet In Big Fokker

SUVA, Fiji Islands, June (Tuesday)—(UP)—Bound from the mainland of the United States to Australia, the Fokker monoplane, Southern Cross roared out of the tropical skies to the north of Suva and landed here today.

It came to earth at 2:23 p. m., local time, 6:23 p. m. Monday Pacific coast time or 10:23 p. m. Monday, eastern daylight time.

The fliers were greeted as they landed at Suva by Sir Eyre Hutson, governor of the Fijis.

Captain Kingsford-Smith and his crew of three reported the Southern Cross in perfect condition as they stepped from the cockpit and surveyed the ship.

The welcome given them by the thousands of natives from Viti Levu and surrounding islands, and the 3800 whites, was wild and tumultuous.

"We're tired and sleepy, but in fine physical condition otherwise," Kingsford-Smith told The United Press.

A perfect South Sea Island day greeted the four adventurers.

The plane was wholly undamaged in the landing, which was somewhat difficult due to the narrow confines of the improvised airport.

Arrival of Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith and his three companions of the Australian flight marked the end of the longest ocean hop ever attempted.

Since leaving barking sands on the Island of Kauai, Hawaii, early Sunday, the plane had covered a distance of 3138 miles, all of which was over water.

The elapsed time for the flight from the island of Kauai was 34 hours, 33 minutes.

Elapsed time for the great 5646-mile flight from the California coast, via Honolulu, was 62 hours and one minute.

Only once during the record breaking flight were Captain Charles Kingsford-Smith and his companions, Charles T. P. Ulm, relief pilot, Harry Lyon, navigator, and James Warner, radio operator, within close proximity to ground on which they could make an emergency landing.

That was when they passed near the Phoenix islands, mere dots on the wide expanse of the Pacific, in the early morning hours today.

The rest of the time they were over the open ocean, confident in the ability of their plane to make the flight and in the gasoline supply to hold out to the end.

In the hop completed today and the one from the Oakland airport to Honolulu last week, the Southern Cross covered a distance of 5546 miles over the Pacific.

With arrival of the four airmen here, a 1795-mile sea flight to Brisbane, Australia, and a 500-mile hop over the continent of Australia lay ahead of them before completion of their air voyage.

Upon arriving at Sydney they will have covered a total distance of almost 9000 miles.

Nearly 11 days ahead of the fastest time ever made by ocean liners between California and Suva, the Southern Cross survived the danger of tropical storms and other

Booze Sleuths Granted Right To Tap Wires in Securing Evidence

WASHINGTON, June 4. (AP)—Evidence obtained by tapping telephone wires and listening to conversations can legally be used in criminal prosecutions, the supreme court, by a 5 to 4 decision, held today in three cases from the state of Washington, involving the conviction of Roy Olmstead and a number of others in one of the most gigantic prohibition violations ever unearthed.

The minority of the court, consisting of Justices Holmes, Brandeis, Butler and Stone, scathingly denounced the conclusions of the majority, declaring that telephone messages should be clothed with the same sanctity against government "snooping" that the court had attached to letters.

Pointing out that the evidence disclosed "a conspiracy of amazing magnitude," in which two seagoing vessels brought intoxicating liquor from Scotland to British Columbia, a fleet of swift boats landed it on the Washington coast and liquor stored in a large underground cache near Seattle, and in a number of smaller ones in the city, with a monthly business reaching $176,000, Chief Justice Taft, speaking for the majority, declared the controversy could be reduced to the single question whether wiretapping violated the fourth amendment of the constitution.

Girl Flier Waits Impatiently For Start of Flight Across Atlantic

TREPASSEY, N. F., June 4. (AP)—A fair-haired girl tonight poised impatiently on the eastern-most land of the new world for an attempt to fly the Atlantic.

With Amelia Earhart were Wilmer Stultz, veteran pilot who brought her plane, the Friendship, here from Halifax in unusual time today, and Lew Gordon, mechanic, who complete the crew.

The three had slipped out of Boston yesterday, unheralded in their tri-motored Fokker monoplane, fitted with pontoons. Fog encountered near Halifax forced them to spend the night there, but this morning they continued their way and in about four and a half hours reached this bay, the mark they will toe for their great endeavor.

In a note she left behind her Miss Earhart had said, "If I succeed, all will be well. If I don't I shall be happy to pop off in the midst of such an adventure." Her slightness of build was accentuated by the tight-fitting brown knickers and high laced boots she wore when she stepped from the plane here this afternoon. Her close-cut, light hair was tousled by the wind, for she wore no hat.

Fort Worth Chosen Over N'Orleans For Meeting of Petroleum Geologists

TULSA, Okla., June 4.—The 1929 convention of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists will be held March 21, 22 and 23 at Fort Worth, Texas. After a six-hour study of the poll taken of local organizations and studying the facilities of Fort Worth and New Orleans for entertaining the association, the executive council voted for Fort Worth.

The fact that hundreds of young geologists are now engaged in the oil fields of that state and would be allowed to attend a meeting at Fort Worth, but not at New Orleans, carried the point.

R. S. McFarland, chief geologist, Twin State Oil company, Tulsa, president; J. E. Elliott, Elliott Core Drill company, Los Angeles, first vice president; J. L. Rich, Ottawa, Kan., third vice president, and David Donoghue, Texas Pacific Coal & Oil company, Fort Worth, secretary, comprised the board which chose Fort Worth.

Protestants Set To Boost Hoover

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 4. (UP) Arriving here today "all set to boost Hoover to the last ditch," as she puts it, Mrs. J. C. Griswold, San Antonio, national committeewoman from Texas, injected the religious element into the national convention activities.

"If Al Smith is nominated as the Democratic standard bearer, the majority of the Protestant women in Texas will vote for the Republican nominee," declared Mrs. Griswold.

"Women of Texas, both Republican and Democratic," she said, "are against any one who is wet. That is the main reason they are against Smith."

Mrs. Griswold asserted that because Texas is a Democratic stronghold, many Republicans are suffering from a mental apathy. They see not reason for voting, for they declare their vote will not even be counted, she said.

DEEPEST WELL FLOWS CRUDE

Reagan County Test Makes Oil at 8230 Feet

Special to The Record News.

SAN ANGELO, June 4.—The world's deepest well, in Reagan county, is flowing; Southern Crude Oil Purchasing Co., Prairie Oil & Gas Co. and Roxana Petroleum corporation have added one producer each in Winkler county and McMan-Marland No. 16 Yates has registered another high gauge for Pecos county, 2,112 barrels an hour, a rate of 50,728 barrels a day.

Group One Oil corporation's (Texon Oil & Land Co. subsidiary) No. 1B University in Reagan county, 8,230 feet deep, a world's record, started flowing after standing almost thirty days following the destruction of the rig by fire caused by a spark generated by friction of the sand reel. Until then the oil from pay at 6,284 feet, the third producing horizon encountered, had been kept swabbed down to 6,200 feet, where special heavy 5 3-16-inch casing is set. Cessation of this swabbing, it is believed, caused the well to fill up and flow.

Reports as to the amount of production varied, one being that the well was making 300 barrels a day, another that it had made two heads and a third report that it merely was slopping over. The deep oil is of 41.5 gravity, compared with that of 38 to 39 gravity from the pays at 2,400 and 3,000 feet, from which 206 wells in the field, including Texon No. 1B, have produced in excess of 34,000,000 barrels of oil in five years and have placed over $7,000,000 in the coffers of the University of Texas through royalties. Fishing for a bailer, lost when the rig burned, was to have started Monday, after which the hole will be deepened. If deeper production is not obtained, No. 1B will be plugged back to the horizon at 6,284 feet from which the oil now is coming.

Close on the heels of Simms No. 5 Smith, in section 103, T. C. Ry. Co. survey, which gauged 3,760 barrels of oil in one hour—a rate of 90,240 barrels a day—from 1,280 feet, McMan-Marland No. 16 Yates, in section 34½, in Pecos county, gauged 2,112 barrels in one hour upon deepening from 1,103 to 1,232 feet. It is the farthereast eastern well on the line of McMan-Marland producers in section 34½, block 194, G. C. & S. F. Ry. Co. survey and 210 feet from the south line.

The largest of Winkler county's new producers is Prairie No. 1 Ida Hendricks, in the northwest corner of the east half of the southwest quarter of section 40, block 26. It flowed 765 barrels of oil in one hour, open, from pay at 2,735-38 feet, showing no water. On an inch and a half choke it made 293 barrels an hour.

DEMOS THRILL AT CONVENTION

15,000 "Unofficial" Delegates Will Attend

Special to The Record News

AUSTIN, Texas, June 2.—Democrats of Texas already feel a quickening of the pulse, as the first national convention of the party since before the civil war is but three weeks away.

The Texas delegation of 60 men and women has been chosen, but the state will have an unofficial delegation there of probably 15,000 people, aside from the many thousands of Houston people who will crowd the convention galleries.

"On to Houston"

Austin will have nearly 1000 people in Houston during the convention.

For 10 days before the convention opens, Texas highways will be clogged with cars, all moving "on to Houston." Special railway trains, and many added train cars and Pullman cars will bear the visitors from other states through Texas to the big auditorium at Houston.

People of [illegible] Texas cities share [illegible] degree the joint "poss[illegible] Democratic meeting. [illegible] the entire state is hos[illegible] than just Houston; and aside [illegible] this, both curiosity and a revived party consciousness contribute to unprecedented interest in the big meeting. That Texas has a favorite son who, it believes, could have gone on the national ticket had he tried, in Governor Dan Moody, and another favorite son who will be put in nomination for president, in Jesse H. Jones, heightens the interest of every section of the state in the convention.

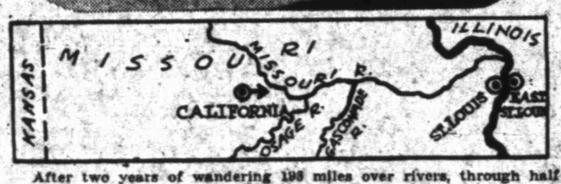

Victory Looms

A whiff from afar of victory this year has reanimated the Democratic party even to a greater degree than when it went into power on the Roosevelt-Taft split.

Governor Moody likely will not go to Houston until a day or two before the convention opens. He probably will not be present when the national executive committee convenes, just preceding the convention. As chairman the Texas delegation he will speak for the delegates on all matters. He has been chosen for the Texas member of the national platform committee, and will probably repeat his achievement at the Washington Jackson day dinner of becoming the spokesman for those Democrats who demand a dry plank and affirmance of rigid enforcement of the prohibition laws. Governor Moody already has formulated the language of the plank he will propose, and will cause it to declare for "temperance, prohibition and a sober nation."

Weary Tabby Home and Happy

After two years of wandering 198 miles over rivers, through half a state, Dirty Nose is home again to stay. Two years ago, her owner, Mrs. C. A. Grossman, of East St. Louis, Mo., took her to some relatives near California, Mo., who needed a cat to rid their farm of mice and rats. Dirty Nose didn't like the other felines on the farm, so she started out for home. Once before she returned home after her owners had given her to friends some distance away. Now Dirty Nose is recuperating on her mistress' porch with only a few broken teeth to remind her of her journey. Above, the cat, and the route she traveled.

Offer Prize for Plan To End Street Clatter

BERLIN, June 4. (AP)—Germany is starting a war against street noises by opening a competition for the best scheme to abolish the nerve-racking clatter and din of the big cities. Naturally, street noises are mostly caused by wheeled traffic. Grinding of street cars around curves, jolting of badly sprung vehicles, banging of garbage cans on pavements and noisy exhausts from old motors are all on the blacklist, as well as street criers and the deafening chorus of motor horns generally.

All these noises are measurable by an instrument called the Backhausen sound meter. Traffic experts claim that most street accidents are attributable to the nerve-destroying racket which is making city life hideous.

Under the auspices of the Association of German Engineers a prize of $200 is offered for the best solution. The competition is open until December 1.

PLAN WELCOME FOR NEW ROAD

Celebration to Be Held at Sterling Junction

FORT WORTH, Texas, June 4. (UP)—Elaborate celebration plans are being made by West Texas counties which will be affected by the 202-mile Fort Worth and Denver City railroad extension from Estelline to the South Plains district.

Special cars will be run from Dallas, Fort Worth and other cities to carry business men to aid in the celebration, which will be held early in July at Sterling Junction.

This extension is considered the most important of years. Already many new business projects have been started in towns along the new route, according to reports from representatives who attended a meeting at Turkey which was held to make arrangements for the celebration.

Turkey, one of the towns on the new route, is 40 years old. It has no rail connections closer than 35 miles since its origin. Twenty important building projects have commenced there since the announcement of the new road.

Sterling Junction was selected as the scene of the celebration as a compromise measure. Several other towns along the route had planned to observe the entrance of the road. They will now combine with Sterling Junction.

Drink Potent "Lindy" Cocktails in Mexico

MEXICO CITY, June 4. (AP)—Lindbergh's name continues to adorn at least one, perhaps more, of the Mexico City saloons that tore down their former signs and relabeled their places in honor of the famous flyer when he was here last December.

It reads: "Lindbergh Cantina Saloon. Bar-room. Drinks."

Also, a "Lindbergh cocktail" was invented during the visit of that renowned but abstemious young man. It had quite a vogue, despite its devastating qualities. The Mexicans were determined to honor Lindbergh to the utmost, even if it involved gulping liquid dynamite. Of course, some of the native drinks had given them pretty good training. Anyhow, the Lindbergh cocktails were taken bravely. You can still get one if you can stand it. It consists of a shake of a little of everything on the shelves.

Finds Indian Tongue Without Nouns, Verbs

BOMBAY, June 4. (AP)—A language that had no nouns or verbs is among the 180 languages which Sir George Grierson has mastered in a linguistic survey of India, which has just been completed.

The survey was begun soon after Sir George Grierson came to India from Dublin university, Ireland, in 1873. It classifies the speech of some 290,000,000 persons and deals with 179 languages and 544 dialects.

"There are languages," Sir George declares in his survey report, "whose phonetic rules prohibit the existence of more than a few hundred words, and that cannot express what are to us the commonest and most simple of ideas. And there are others with opulent vocabularies, rivaling English in their copiousness and in their accuracy of idea-connotation. There are languages which know neither noun nor verb, and whose only grammatical feature is syntax; and there are others with grammatical systems as completely worked out as those of Greek or Latin."

Turk Officials Must Marry Native Women

ANGORA, Turkey, June 4. (AP)—The Turkish government prohibits marriage of ambassadors or high government officials to foreign wives. The breaking of this rule entails dismissal, as in the recent case of a prominent officer of the aviation corps here, who returned from a mission abroad with a German mate. Infringement of the law has been winked at, however, in cases where the foreign wives are wealthy.

The hotel annex will cover ground space of 140 by 200 feet and will be of fireproof construction. Her Dreadful Past

Convicted, an outcast, marked for life with the brand of patricide.

The amazing true story of a girl patricide

PERHAPS you recall reading in the newspapers the case of Gretchen. It was the piteous, sordid story of a girl who poisoned her father—and then, at her trial, steadfastly refused to utter a word in her own defense, preferring punishment rather than describe the terrible details of the soul-destroying life he had forced upon her.

You read of her conviction and incarceration. There, apparently, the story ended. But really it was only the beginning of one of the most amazing human dramas ever enacted.

In prison Gretchen performed her duties in utter silence; nothing amused or interested her; she kept completely to herself—an outcast branded a patricide for life.

Then Mary Howard came to the prison to teach. Her heart went out to the little soul-frozen daughter of the slums. She was kind to her, encouraged her, tried to make her feel that she was not a pariah but a girl like other girls.

At first Gretchen feared and distrusted her; but later, with her head in the kindly teacher's lap, her body wracked with sobs, she told for the first time the dreadful story which, had she told it to the jury, would probably have resulted in her acquittal.

The complete story of the events leading up to her dreadful crime, her trial, imprisonment, eventual parole and the glorious success she is now making of her life, appears in July True Story Magazine—now on sale. The title is "Out of the Slums." Don't miss it.

1400 New Maytag Owners every day

For homes without electricity, the Maytag is available with in-built gasoline motor

THE Maytag's only rival is another Maytag. The New Maytag has broken Maytag's world record for washer production.

Every day 1400 new Maytag owners in every section of the country are introduced to Washday Happiness—happiness because of washings done in less time, about one hour; happiness because of clothes washed beautifully clean without hand-rubbing.

And it is happiness that has come to stay because the Maytag is built for a lifetime of service. It is the only washer with a non-breakable, cast-aluminum tub—the tub that keeps water hot for an entire washing, then empties and cleans itself.

Because of the silent, smooth-running, steel-cut gears, and the fine engineering in every part, there is a remarkable absence of vibration, and vibration is a washer's greatest enemy.

Would you know washday happiness, try a Maytag. See the new soft Roller Water Remover with safety feed board and automatic tension adjustment—test and compare its many outstanding features.

Why the NEW MAYTAG leads the World

—Automatic-feed, Soft Roller Water Remover, which swings to seven positions and reverses. Does not crush buttons and has instant tension release which is the utmost in safety.
—Non-breakable, heat-retaining, life-lasting, cast-aluminum tub which cleans and empties itself.
—Quiet power-drive with precision-cut steel gears.
—A week's washing done in an hour.
—Tubfuls washed in 2 to 7 minutes.
—No hand-rubbing—even of cuffs and collars.
—Adjustable legs which raise or lower the tub to your height.
—Hinged cover which forms handy shelf when open.
—Scientific construction tested to insure perfect performance and reliability.
—Beautiful lacquer finish, sanitary and enduring.
—Lifetime washing service—the Maytag is the most durable washer made.

One out of every three washers sold is a Maytag

The Social Side—Wichita Falls' Woman's Interests—Clubs and Churches

Ramblin'
with
Marie Theresa

"I CAN'T see what the club women of the nation can find to do in a biennial convention that lasts two weeks, can you?" This remark from the husband of one of the prominent club women of the city. So Marie Theresa is giving a brief description of what the women are doing to take up the two weeks in question, at the biennial of Women's Federated clubs now convened in San Antonio.

Talks and discussion of club problems take up the day-time sessions, while beautiful presentations and staged attractions fill the evening programs. One of the attractions on the opening evening program was "The March of the Presidents," when state presidents of Women's Federated clubs from 46 states of the union marched in an attractive line down the aisle of the municipal auditorium, between flags bearing the name of the state represented. They crossed over near the stage and mounted the platform, each taking her place in special part of the stage reserved for them. Some were silver haired, some like our state president, youthful, but each bearing that intangible dignity that won her the position of leadership in her own state. They were clothed in evening dresses of many hues and styles, their beauty enhanced by the armfuls of roses of all kinds which each carried as a token of appreciation from their respective states.

The march was played on the pipe organ of the auditorium and on the piano. As the presidents took their seats, a chorus of 75 voices, recruited from among the delegates, sang "Woman's Triumphal March."

FOLLOWING a brief program of speeches, the platform was cleared, and when the curtain again arose, this scene was one of frontier days—a ranch camp with a camp fire around which were gathered a group of cowboys in colorful costumes, singing cowboy songs of early Texas days. Seated in a row near the front of the stage were about 40 early ranchmen of Texas, well known in the state. Among these were Colonel Slaughter, whose father carried the message to the army in the Alamo; Mr. Maverick, son of the originator of cattle by that name, and George W. Sanders, who originated the Old Trail Drivers' association, and himself one of the trail drivers.

THE next scene was that representing a bright street in Old Mexico, where 75 boys and girls dressed in native costumes danced and sang songs of Old Mexico. These dancers were sons and daughters of San Antonio Mexican families, trained by those familiar with native music. Among the numbers was the "Jababe Tapatio," popular folk dance executed by five couples dressed in native garb. Music by a stringed Mexican orchestra gave the final appropriate touch to the scene and to the dancing.

The above is only a small number of the many attractions planned to please the eyes as well as feed the mind of delegates to the biennial. After the business and other details of the convention have passed from the minds of those attending, the pictures painted by these novelty programs will flash upon their upward eyes, as the poets say, to make them happy that they attended the meeting in picturesque San Antonio.

I wish I were there, don't you?

It Must Be Right!

The same policy of rigid censorship which guides us in the selection of our stocks, to make sure of worthy quality and correct fashion, is exercised in our advertising.

Any statement we make about merchandise, price, values and quality must be right both in literal meaning and impression.

We regard every advertisement just as we do any item of merchandise in the store—it must be absolutely free from any fictitious valuations.

CHIC CHERIE

Cherie's felt hat has an unusual brim that is cut and wrapped around the crown so that one end slips through a slit at the top of her head. The brim to Dina's hat is slit in another fashion—one end turns up, the other end turned down. And the heads under these hats are simply crammed full of information about the only subject of interest.

Others may visit Montmartre or Versailles or such place of interest, but this is the map of the favorite haunts of our entirely gentle heroines, and for these reasons: styles continue to be feminine, even frilly. Ruffles are good both on skirts and bodices, but the hipline continues to be slim. The waistline stays where it is.

You're Wrong, These Are Races!

Practically all evening gowns dip down in back. Afternoon dresses have circular skirts and bias flounces. Sports dresses have unpressed pleats or box pleats. Coats have scarfs and use raglan sleeves about as much as they use the sleeve and yoke cut in one piece. Dress coats are straight or are trimmed with flat flounces or low flares. . . .

Perhaps it was the effort of collecting all this information that led to their taking an afternoon off and seeing Paris with a guide book. Cherie is sightseeing in a beige woolen frock with an ombre scarf—Dina wears a black satin dress with shirrings along the sides of the diagonal panel at the waist. Their newest frocks!

This picture is really misleading. Gwendolen is really a sweet tempered child and sort of happy-go-lucky, but you would never judge it from the accompanying picture, would you? You see, she didn't know that her picture was going to be made, and she couldn't see any particular reason for looking at the lens for a long time without anything happening.

Gwendolen is the daughter and younger child of the Rev. and Mrs. David Rees-Jones and will probably grow up to be a missionary or a wife of a missionary, her mother hopes. With a daddy and grandfather following the path of Presbyterian ministers, the girl will have to combat heredity and training if she turns out to be anything else.

Gwendolen is two years old and has been a resident of the city only since last August when the family moved here from Oklahoma. She is a blonde, possessing blue eyes and a fair skin.

Dorothy Dix Tells Why Old Maids Are Always Husband-Spoilers

Naturally Men and Women Do Not Treat Each Other After Marriage as They Did During Courtship, Because the Altar Divides Romance From Reality—And What a Strain to Have to Be "on Parade" for Forty Years!

A young and sentimental flapper tells me that she has made up her mind that she will never marry because she has observed that most marriages seem to slump somehow and that few men and women treat each other after marriage the way they did before marriage. And she wants to know why this is thus.

Perhaps the easiest way to answer is to say that courtship is one thing and marriage is another thing. Very different. Courtship is romance. Matrimony is reality. Courtship is the pursuit. Marriage is when you get your bargain home and sit down and look it over carefully and appraisingly and see just exactly when you have got for your trouble and money.

And most people take their disappointment in their bargain too hard. One of the chief reasons why both men and women are disillusioned with matrimony is because they expect the impossible of it. They expect too much of themselves, too much of their wives and husbands, too much of marriage as an institution.

They think that they have made a mistake in their choice and have failed to get their real soulmates because they no longer thrill and palpitate in the presence of their wives and husbands. But the real reason is because nobody can always live on emotional heights. We are bound to come down to the prosaic, practical level.

We are bound to get over hectic fevers and chills. We are bound to wake up from our dope dream, so the sentimental reaction is perfectly healthy and normal. Otherwise we would all be batting our heads against padded cells in insane asylums and howling love sonnets to the moon. So it is no indication whatever that a husband and wife have ceased to love each other because their hearts have quit doing flipflops at the sound of an approaching footstep.

Men and women are disappointed in their wives and husbands because they expected too much of them. They expected them to be impossible paragons of perfection. The man expected a wife who would always be young and beautiful and exquisitely dressed and a wonderful cook and a miracle worker who could run a house without spending any money, and he is disillusioned when he finds out that he is united to a human woman with nerves and temper, who has to learn the job of housekeeping with evil results to his pocketbook and stomach and who looks like a chromo instead of a living picture after she has been up half of the night with the baby.

And the girl thought she was getting a movie hero and Job and Mr. Rockefeller, and she is disappointed when she finds out that she is married to a poor, weak brother who stumbles off the strait and narrow path every now and then and who is fussy and irritable around the house and not so good as a money-maker.

And both husbands and wives are disappointed in marriage because they have believed that when they got married they would pass into an impossible state of bliss in which they would live happily ever afterward, as the fairy tales used to say. And when they find out that instead of being an Elysium in which they can lay all of their troubles down, the altar is the place where you pick up the real burden of life, why, then, they cry out that marriage is a failure. But in reality it is no more a predestined failure than any other undertaking that calls for work and intelligence and patience and courage to make of it a success.

Most marriages are different from what the high contracting parties expected them to be. Even the happy ones. But in reality no woman wants a sentimental Tommy for a husband, and she has something else to do with her hands besides having a man hold them. Nor could any man stand a wife who was always smirking and smiling like a Cheshire cat. He would be bored to death with one who was so devoted that she would never let him out of her sight.

The first two or three years of every marriage are stormy ones and husbands and wives never settle down to be happy until they learn how to give and take and to smile indulgently over each other's faults and weaknesses. It is only after a marriage has "slumped," as my flapper friend says, that it really becomes comfortable, like an old shoe that you have broken in and fitted to your foot.

Of course, men and women do not treat each other after marriage as they did before marriage, because their relationship to each other is not the same. Before marriage a man wooed his sweetheart with gifts. He sent her flowers and candy and trinkets.

After marriage his love tokens inevitably take the form of paying bills and providing her with food and clothes, and when that is done there is generally not much money left for the florist and the candy shop, but a beef steak is just as much an indication of affection as a bunch of orchids.

Before marriage a man takes a girl out and shows her a good time. After marriage it takes a charge of dynamite to pry him away from his hearthstone and into a dinner coat. Good reason for this also. Before marriage he did not have to support the girl and could afford restaurants and night clubs, but marriage cramps the amusement budget. Also, every worth-while man feels that when he gets married he begins the serious business of life, that his playtime is over and he wants to save his strength and health for his work instead of wasting it on running around at night.

Before marriage a man is never weary of telling a girl that he loves her, but he stops his love-making at the altar, not because he has married her to prove his affection and it seems to him as unnecessary for him to be continually telling her of it as it would to proclaim that he takes a bath every morning or that he is an honest man.

And it is the same way with a woman. After marriage she doesn't feel that she has to be always looking her best or to coquet with her husband in order to keep him vamped or to always flatter him and agree with him. For if he doesn't love her as she is, he doesn't love her at all.

And that is why husbands and wives don't treat each other after marriage the way they did before marriage. They would bore each other to death if they did, and there would be far, far more divorces than there are. Nothing would be more horrible than having to keep your best foot foremost for 30 or 40 years at a stretch.

INTREPID QUARTET OF SOUTHERN CROSS BRAVES STORM IN FLIGHT

EPIC OF AIR IS UNEQUALLED

Flight Made Over Seas Not Crossed by Plane

hazards which caused aviation experts to brand the venture as suicidal.

Make Repairs

The crew of the Southern Cross had repaired short circuits which threatened to disable the craft and tuned up motors which Warner reported were "sputtering and spitting fire" until they were again throbbing in perfect unison.

Captain Kingsford-Smith with the skill of a master aviator turned the nose of the Southern Cross sharply up when he ran into a violent rain and wind squall during the morning.

The plane climbed rapidly from an altitude of less than 1000 feet until it was cruising more than 8,000 feet above the Pacific and out of reach of the fury of the storm.

Like an Elevator

Then, with the storm area passed, Captain Kingsford-Smith brought the Southern Cross again to the lower altitude, where the greatest speed could be made with a minimum use of fuel.

"It's just like riding up and down in an elevator," Warner radioed in describing the maneuvers by which the Southern Cross successfully dodged the storm.

Anxious eyes of the crew were fixed on the indicators of the gasoline tanks during the final stages of the flight.

Always there flashed out this reassuring word to those waiting eagerly on both shores of the Pacific and on its islands for word from the Southern Cross:

"The gasoline supply is ample. We will make it safely." When the Southern Cross passed near the Phoenix Islands where an emergency landing had been charted, the radio messages gave no indication of any temptation to turn aside and play safe by stopping.

At that time the Southern Cross had covered more than 2,000 miles, a distance nearly as great as the flight from the mainland to Honolulu.

But the crew kept the Southern Cross headed resolutely southward for another thousand miles and more of travel through an air route never before traversed or ever attempted.

Always Cheerful

Throughout the long hours of the flight, the four adventurers were never pessimistic, and they accepted the adversities of storm and temporarily unfavorable winds with good nature.

Time after time Lyon reported to ships in the Pacific as he checked his bearings with them.

"I'm guiding a straight course for the northern end of the Fijis. The Southern Cross is traveling almost in a bee line toward its goal."

Repeated checkings showed only minor deviations from the course, and these were quickly rectified.

"Will greatly appreciate roped enclosure and policemen to watch the plane," said a message signed by Ulm as the Southern Cross soared unerringly on its way.

Hazards Removed

The cricket field here was cleared of trees and telephone poles and electric light standards to remove as far as possible all landing hazards.

"Thanks for improvements at recreation grounds." Ulm acknowledged when told by wireless of the improvements at the recreation ground which had been turned into a landing field.

While the Southern Cross was still hundreds of miles out at sea, the populace of the island of Viti Levu, on which Suva is located, began flocking to the landing field.

It was an event the like of which the island had never before experienced, and may not again for many years.

The possibility of a shortage of fuel, which caused grave fear for the safety of the Southern Cross during the latter part of the flight to Honolulu, was mentioned only casually during the hop to Suva.

The gasoline capacity of the plane was increased in Honolulu until it carried more than 1,400 gallons on the takeoff from Hawaii.

Winds Favorable

Favorable trade winds prevailed for a major portion of the flight and the Southern Cross sped on its way with a minimum use of gasoline.

The Southern Cross took off from Oakland airport, Oakland Calif., at 5:52 a. m., Pacific coast standard time, last Thursday, and landed at Wheelan field on the inland of Oahu 27 hours and 28 minutes later.

Saturday a 125 mile flight was made from Wheeler field to Barking Sands, on the island of Kauai. The Barking Sands airport afforded a longer runway for the takeoff with the heavy load of fuel than was available at Wheeler field.

At 5:20 a. m. Honolulu time, Sunday, the Southern Cross left Barking Sands.

First to Suva

It was the fifth plane to complete the long flight between the mainland and the Hawaiian islands, but the first that ever pointed its nose southward to Suva for another flight even more perilous than the first.

Several hundred miles out from Barking Sands, a short circuit developed in the wiring of the plane. It was quickly corrected.

Rain squalls were encountered at intervals Sunday afternoon and night, and once the right motor faltered for several anxious moments.

"You should have seen Ulm's eyes bulge out when he thought that motor was going dead," said Warner in deseribing the incident by radio.

On through the night the plane rushed toward its invisible goal, the stillness over the Pacific broken only by the chorus of its three motors.

"Their noise is deafening," Warner said at one time in talking of the motors.

Twenty-four hours after the departure from Hawaii, the Southern Cross was considerably more than two-thirds of the way of its destination.

Early in the morning the giant craft crossed the equator into the southern hemisphere.

Position Uncertain

During the last two hours of the flight the position of the Southern Cross was uncertain, as in the case of the latter part of the flight to Hawaii.

The aviators seemed to have lost the exact estimate of the miles yet left to fly, although holding to their true course.

"The plane is coming fast," the messages said over and over again, "we'll be there soon."

Then came a flash from the Southern Cross that the Fiji islands had been sighted, and the danger of catastrophe overtaking athe expedition just as victory was at hand, had passed.

A great shout of joy went up from the crowd awaiting arrival of the Southern Cross.

Eager eyes scanned the horizon to the north until at last the big plane swept into view and swooped down to the landing field.

HONOLULU, June 4. (AP)—Beset by tropical storm conditions and with the gasoline supply running low, Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith and his three companions in the monoplane Southern Cross were threatened with possible failure today in their attempt to reach Suva, in the Fiji islands, the goal of the second hop of their flight from California to Australia.

Reaching a point 500 miles from Suva, the Southern Cross sent out the message, "May be able to make Suva, but doubtful."

Fuel Supply Low

The fuel tanks still held sufficient gasoline to continue in the air for from five to seven hours, a message picked up by the naval radio station at Pago Pago, Samoa, indicated. Unless the fliers had miscalculated their fuel reserve a desperate race for land was certain, with the possibility that the plane might be forced down in the trackless waters of the South Pacific.

"We are now due north and to the westward of our course," the Southern Cross radioed. "Our approximate position is due north of Suva. Only about five hours of gasoline left. (Later a message showed seven hours supply of gasoline). Our speed is 75 knots. May be able to make Suva, but doubtful."

Doleful Message

The disheartening message was sent out by the Southern Cross at 12:46 p. m. (Pacific coast time) 28 hours and 56 minutes after the plane took off from Hawaii yesterday and after it had covered approximately 2638 miles. This exceeded by more than 200 miles the distance negotiated from Oakland to Honolulu on the first hop of the projected 7785-mile journey to Sidney, Australia.

The argonauts, who hopped off from Hawaii at 7:50 a. m. (Pacific coast time) Sunday on the longest over water flight ever attempted, greeted the dawn of a second day in the air at a point 750 miles from their goal and continued their race down from the equator over the swishing Polynesian seas.

Storms Encountered

The equator was reached without difficult flying, but tropical storms were encountered in the southern hemisphere, and the plane was buffeted about by frequent squalls.

The air argosy over the southern sea pursued a twisting course, as the plane climbed and descended, twisted and turned in an effort to miss the black rain clouds and keep the friendly moon in sight.

"Rough Riding"

Though flying under the light of the constellation that forms the ship's namesake, the crew often was denied a glimpse of the stars by the racing clouds, with which the plane played tag.

"Just gray dawn—in combat with elements—it's rough riding," read a message sent out at 9:32 a. m., Pacific coast time today. The ship radioed greetings to Samoa at 9:10 a. m., reported poor flying conditions, changeable weather and rain at 9:30 a. m., and 9:50 a. m., coast time, the craft was flying in circles at 8500 feet, approximately 750 miles from Suva.

ELECTRA, Texas, June 4.—W. T. Mathews of Gainesville, employe of the O'Donohue and Gibson Contracting company, was seriously injured in the progress of a terrific rain and windstorm which caused thousands of dollars of damage here Sunday night.

Mathews was injured when he was struck on the head by a falling casing on a lease south of Electar. He was brought to the Parmley-Ogden hospital here Monday morning. Extent of his injuries had not been announced by attending physicians this morning.

The storm reached the height of its ferocity here when the derrick on the C. A. Evarts and N. D. Cooper farm was blown down and scattered, and several other derricks, belonging to the Texas company, were demolished. Within the city, several homes were damaged, fences were laid low, the First Baptist church windows were knocked out, and the awnings and signs of the Grade theater were blown down.

The Southfield Baptist church, it was reported, was unroofed and blown from its blocks. Rural telephone lines were put out of order.

Many cotton crops were lost, and several hundred acres of the crop will have to be abandoned on account of the damage inflicted, it was said.

TORNADO STRIKES DAD'S CORNER

Special to The Record News.

DAD'S CORNER, Texas, June 4. Dad's Corner, five miles south of Holliday, was hit by a tornado last night about 8 o'clock, leaving considerable damage in its wake. The roof and two sides of the Field Athletic building was torn completely off and hurled a distance of one hundred yards or more, striking the Senter Mercantile company's store, damaging the roof to an extent not yet determined.

The roof was torn from the Phillips garage, out houses were blown down and power and telephone wires were put out of commission. It is estimated that at least 90 per cent of rigs in the field were blown down. A heavy downpour accompanied the gale which blew with high velocity for about two hours. Work of rehabilitation is already under way. No one was injured so far as can be ascertained.

LOCKNEY, Texas, June 4.—Wheat and cotton crops were greatly aided by about a half-inch rain which fell here Sunday morning and evening.

House Cleaning In City Asked

tions might reach the place where he would get "provoked" about it, the Rev. A. F. White, pastor of the Grace Methodist Episcopal church said there is violation going on and that some of our officers know about it."

"I don't know what the police of Wichita Falls are being paid," Rev. White said, "but I am in favor of paying them a wage that will support themselves and their families.

"If we get into this matter voluntarily, we can have one of the cleanest cities in the southland, and we need have no fight about it either."

The Rev. White explained that he had not seen a great deal of vice in the city, but that he had seen evidences of some "not 100 miles from the courthouse." He said also that he had at one time been associated with Wayne B. Wheeler.

J. T. Cabe, juvenile officer, said that a great part of the present juvenile delinquency is due to the parents and also that he had a sure cure for the liquor situation.

Cabe Raps "Church Drinkers"

"If all those who attend church or who profess to be church members would quit patronizing the bootleggers, there would be no bootleggers in 30 days for there would not be enough customers left to support them," he declared.

"When it comes to clean shows, the people don't want them. If a show manager would present the kind of clean movies you speak of he couldn't operate a house a month save at a loss."

Alderman King asked Mr. Cabe if he knew what per cent of people in Wichita Falls attended church and Mr. Cabe said he didn't know. Alderman King said about 10 per cent attended church and he didn't believe five per cent of them used liquor.

W. J. Townsend, former senator, called Mr. Cabe to task for attacking the church people.

"I'm not attacking the church," Mr. Cabe replied. "I believe it is the greatest and best means for good in the world. What I refer to is those who use liquor. We can't preach one thing and practice another."

At the end of the hearing, the council adopted a resolution expressing the board's appreciation for the co-operation and assistance of the committee.

In the regular business session which followed the hearing a committee named by the council several weeks ago reported unfavorably on the petition of the Studio hotel for permission to add four stories to the building.

Test for Cows

All cows hereafter must pass a tuberculosis test at regular intervals if they are to supply milk for consumption in the city of Wichita Falls, according to the provisions of an ordinance which was presented at the suggestion of City Manager George D. Fairtrace and Dr. L. I. Lucey, manager of the sanitary department.

The ordinance to repeal paving on the King's highway was protested by the L. E. Whitham company, paving contractor, as being in the courts. A delay of two weeks in considering the ordinance was granted.

Fire Chief J. L. McClure was granted leave to attend the state fire marshals' convention at Denton starting June 12. He will leave June 11.

Action on setting the tax rate of the city of Wichita Falls was deferred until the new assessed valuation of the city had been determined that the values may be used as a basis on which to set the tax rate.

A sanitary ordinance making it unlawful for customers to handle fruit and vegetables in grocery stores or for the grocerymen to allow it, was tabled indefinitely when women in the audience were asked for opinions on it and gave them against the plan. Many groceymen were present, and all save two declared themselves in favor of the ordinance.

PASTOR'S PLAN JUNE PICNIC

Union Park Services in August Also Voted

Pastors of Wichita Falls and their families will have a basket picnic on the George Keith place, five miles out of the city on the Fort Worth road, Friday evening, June 29, according to plans formulated by the Ministerial Alliance Monday morning at the First Christian church. Dr. S. A. Barnes was appointed to arrange for the picnic.

The alliance also decided to hold union services Sunday evenings in August at Bellevue park. Dr. Floyd Allan Bash and Dr. Nat F. Grafton were named to make arrangements for the services.

The Ministerial Alliance will hold its last meeting for the summer the first Monday in July.

Those present at the meeting Monday were: Dr. Bash, pastor of the First Christian church; Dr. Barnes, pastor of the Floral Heights Methodist church; the Rev. William D. Bratton, rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd; the Rev. W. D. Cook, pastor of the Adams Street Methodist church; Dr. Grafton, pastor of the First Presbyterian church; the Rev. David Rees-Jones, pastor of the Floral Heights Presbyterian church, and the Rev. A. F. White, pastor of the Grace Methodist church.

UNION CITY, N. J., June 4. (UP)—The final tryouts for the United States Olympic gymnastic team will be held here Saturday at 2 p. m. A team of eight men will be selected to represent the United States at Amsterdam.

Fire Alarms

The influence of the storm of Sunday night continued to be felt by firemen Monday when they were called to Austin and Twelfth streets when wires shorted by the rain turned in an alarm. Sunday the firemen answered eight calls, none of which were serious, and seven of which were turned in within a 15-minute period while the storm was at its height.

Small Decrease Expected in Tax Levy As Leaders Resume Parleys Today

Only a slight decrease in the county taxpayers' burden in Wichita county will be made this year, it was indicated Monday afternoon on the eve of a joint session of a chamber of commerce committee and the county commissioners to consider the proposed increase in tax rate and decrease in assessed valuation.

The chamber of commerce committee and the commissioners will meet with Burl Bryant, county school superintendent, at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning to study the effect the change might have on the county schools.

In the afternoon the two bodies will assume their consideration of the juggling of tax and assessment figures in an effort to determine what reduction can be made under the law.

Meeting with the commissioners last week the special chamber of commerce offered a plan whereby the assessed valuation would be reduced from 50 to 33 per cent of actual value and the tax rate for the county increased from 80 cents on the $100 to $1.20. This plan would effect a saving in the county of approximately $156,000 in state taxes annually, it was pointed out.

A number of stumbling blocks were encountered for this child of the chamber of commerce.

The road and bridge fund would come up short some $21,000, it was found.

A tax rate of above 90 cents is constitutionally impossible, County Judge E. W. Nicholson has declared, regardless of what the valuation may be.

This, Charles I. Francis, president of the chamber of commerce, has suggested, may be changed by a vote of the people.

E. P. Walsh, county auditor, was appointed to devise some plan by which a lowering of the taxes would be possible. The chamber of commerce committee and the county commissioners will hear Mr. Walsh's plan Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Walsh declared Monday that although he had been working for several days in an effort to effect the proposed reduction of $156,000, he did not believe such a radical decrease could be effected.

Indications Monday were that an increase of the tax rate to 90 cents with a decrease of the valuation to about 40 per cent, would be the plan finally adopted. This plan will effect a saving in state taxes in Wichita county of slightly more than $60,000, it is estimated.

Mayfield Talks To Decatur Crowd

Special to The Record News.

DECATUR, Texas, June 4.—Asserting that he was "ready to stand or fall on my record in the senate," Senator Earle B. Mayfield addressed a crowd of approximately 200 people in the district court room in the interest of his re-election here today.

Senator Mayfield recounted the accomplishments of his term of office, asserting that he had been "hounded by political enemies" the majority of the time, but that he carried on his duties, and felt no malice to those who attacked him. He recited that it was a time honored custom for a senator to be re-elected when his record represents him as having accomplished good for the people.

J. J. Perkins Adds Third Junior College Scholarship to List

J. J. Perkins of the Perkins-Timberlake company Monday night donated a third scholarship to the Junior college, according to announcement made by W. B. Chauncey, president of the board of education. Mr. Perkins' donation was the second of the day.

W. B. McClurkan and Company advised Judge Chauncey earlier Monday that they desired to offer a scholarship to Junior college.

Mr. Chauncey, opening a campaign for scholarships to the college, contributed the first scholarship a few days ago. The scholarships cover cost of tuition to the college, $90 a year. The basis on which they will be awarded will be determined later, Mr. Chauncey said.

Political Pot Shots

THEY BELIEVE IN IT.

If Hoover wins at Kansas City it is all over with Wurzbach; If Hoover is defeated its all over with Creager. "To the victor belongs the spoils." Jackson invented the system and the republicans believe in it.

UNINSTRUCTED

North Carolina has spoken in its precinct conventions. Al Smith and Cordell Hull ran neck and neck with instructions, but the uninstructed delegates to the county convention on June 9 outnumber the Smith and Hull battalions. On June 9 the story will be told by the county conventions. Wait for the count.

WHERE CAL LOST

President Coolidge won in all his big battles. He vetoed a dozen bills. The two houses of congress enacted three into laws over his objection and on three others sustained his veto. None of the remainder were brought to a second vote. He was defeated on the world war officers' disability retirement measure and two postal bills, one to give increased pay to postal employes assigned to night work, and the other to grant allowances to fourth class postmasters for rent and fuel and light. Isn't the laborer worthy of his hire? Isn't the disabled officer worthy of the consideration of his government?

BOARDING THE BAND WAGON

Herbert Hoover has behind him in his candidacy 134 Republican members of the house of representatives, many Republican senators are outspoken for him, and President Coolidge and Andrew W. Mellon are two of the master minds who believe him to be the most available man in sight for Republican standard bearer.

It looks like a Repaublican get-to-gether harmony meeting in Kansas City in the month of June. In this campaign the master minds and the Republican congressional leaders are doing their sand-bagging before the organization of their convention.

They are not battling over minor issues. They are for prohibition law enforcement and religious liberty "for all mankind, not only in the United States, but over all the world."

These master minds who have been conducting the elections, running the national administration and making the laws of the land not only know what they want, where and how to get it and "why they are here." They are master strategists as well as master minds.

DINNER STORIES

Civilization

A mainland tourist journeyed from Honolulu to historic Kona on the island of Hawaii. Fired by romantic tales, he felt sure he had reached a land where nothing savoring of western civilization would be permitted to disturb the tropical atmosphere.

When, in the course of his wanderings, he reached a small village by the seashore he became exceedingly interested in a tame mynah bird displayed by a picturesque Hawaiian maid. But he was due for a rude shock.

"What's the bird's name?" he inquired.

"Mary Pickford, sir," was the answer.

One-Minute Sermon

Therefore thou are inexcusable, O man, whosoever thou art that judges: for wherein thou judgest another thou condemnest thyself; for thou that judgest doest the same things.

But we are sure that the judgment of God is according to truth against them which commit such things.

And thinkest thou this, O man, that judgest them which do suan things, and doest the same, that thou shalt escape the judgment of God?—Romans, ii, 1-3.

A Tribute to Juries

IT remained for the magazine Life to make the final comment on the oil trials.

Messrs. Sinclair, Doheny and Fall, Life says, ought to be fervent supporters of the U. S. constitution. For where, it asks, would these gentlemen be without the great institution of trial by jury?

With which we can now consider the case closed.

Federal Aid for Texas Roads

FEDERAL aid for Texas highways recently appropriated by congress amounts to approximately $9,000,000 for the next two years, according to the Fort Worth head of the United States bureau of public roads. In addition to this one of the points cleared up by the lawmakers concerning the federal fund administration was that this money may be spent within city limits in towns of more than 2500 population where houses are over 200 feet apart and in cities less than 2500 without restrictions. A previous ruling stipulated that federal aid could be extended only within one mile of city limit.

The Manhunt

WHY is it there is something about a manhunt that stirs human emotions more powerfully than any other event?

The flight of the four bandits across western Kansas and Colorado, with airplanes, machine guns and horsemen mingled in the pursuit and dead bodies littered the trail, has absorbed public attention throughout the nation. The progress of political campaigns, the activities of congress, the course of world events in China and Europe—things far more significant than this western flare-up of criminality—were forgotten as we read of the wild chase for a human quarry.

Apparently we are still pretty much uncivilized at heart. We respond to the elemental things as our ancestors did. We have not yet outgrown the love of excitement and battle that characterized the old American frontier.

Terrell Demands a New Deal

THERE are office holders and candidates for office who are neat side side steppers when the excitement of a campaign is on. There are others who walk in the middle of the road with tongues that are unbridled and hearts unafraid.

George B. Terrell is state commissioner of agriculture. He has held the office several terms. He is a candidate for re-election. He knows where to find his hat. This from his pen is a contribution to the political literature of the day:

"The majority rule is Democratic and should be observed in all party affairs; the majority vote controls in Texas in conventions, primaries and general elections; presidents are elected by majority vote in the electoral college, so why should the two-thirds rule prevail in the national convention?"

Announcing himself a plain Democrat without a handle, he sends this message across:

"I want the Democratic national convention to declare for the majority rule in all future conventions. I am opposed to letting any man or set of men hand-pick the delegates to the national convention. I want the district to elect all district delegates by a majority vote of each district in the old-fashioned Democratic way and let the delegate-at-large be elected by the convention."

Commissioner Terrell believes that the Democrats should elect outstanding delegates who are not seeking such positions in future. This is his viewpoint, "Honors of this kind should not be given to the same men continuously, but should be passed around to deserving men who have been delegates in the past. These honors do not belong to certain men. We have plenty of good Democrats who have never had this honor."

National Committeeman Jed Adams is the champion of a presidential preference primary law. There is a direct primary law for the nomination of all candidates from United States senator to precinct constable. Colonel Adams' proposal is that the lawmakers next winter enact a presidential direct primary law.

As for the two-thirds nominating rule it was invented 96 years ago, it is moss covered and moth eaten and out of place in a democracy or an organization of champions of democracy founded by Thomas Jefferson.

This rule will be 100 years old in 1932. Then it should be sent to the political graveyard.

THE "CANARY" MURDER CASE

MARGARET ODELL, (THE "CANARY")
CHARLES CLEAVER, a man-about-town
KENNETH SPOTSWOODE, a manufacturer
LOUIS MANNIN, an importer

TONY SKEEL, a professional burglar
WILLIAM ELMER JESSUP, telephone operator
ERNEST HEATH, Sergeant of the Homicide Bureau

THE STORY THUS FAR

Margaret Odell is found strangled. Skeel's finger prints are found in the apartment, but Vance believes Skeel had been binding in a closet while the strangler did his work. The thing that baffles police is the side door to the alley, which had been bolted on the inside the night before and was found the same way in the morning. Mannix, Dr. Lindquist and Cleaver all lie about their whereabouts the night of the murder. Spotswoode, who had called on the girl, had rushed to her door at the sound of a scream, but had been reassured that everything was all right. Then Skeel is found strangled, after promising to tell who murdered the girl. Heath arrests Jessup, believing him the only one able to manipulate the side door; but Vance demonstrates how Skeel could have done it.

CHAPTER XLV

(Monday, September 17; noon)

When Vance finished speaking, there was several minutes' silence. Markham sat deep in his chair glaring into space. Heath, however, was watching Vance with a kind of grudging admiration. The cornerstone in the foundation of his case against Jessup had been knocked out, and the structure he had built was tottering precariously. Markham realized this, and the fact played havoc with his hopes.

"I wish your inspirations were more helpful," he grumbled, turning his gaze upon Vance. "This latest revelation of yours puts us back almost to where we started from."

"Oh, don't be pessimistic. Let us face the future with a bright eye. . . . Want to hear my theory?—it's fairly bulging with possibilities."

He arranged himself comfortably in his chair. "Skeel needed money—no doubt his silk shirts were running low—and after his unsuccessful attempt to extort it from the lady a week before her demise, he came here last Monday night.

"He had learned she would be out, and he intended to wait for her; for she had probably refused to receive him in the custom'ry social way. He knew the side door was bolted at night, and, as he didn't want to be seen entering the apartment, he devised the little scheme of unbolting the door for himself under cover of a futile call at half-past nine.

"The unbolting accomplished, he returned via the alleyway, and let himself into the apartment at some time before eleven. When the lady returned with an escort, he quickly hid in the clothes closet, and remained there until the escort had departed. Then he came forth, and the lady, startled by his sudden appearance, screamed.

"But, on recognizing him, she told Spotswoode, who was now hammering at the door, that it was all a mistake. So Spottswoode ran along and played poker. A financial discussion between Skeel and the lady—probably a highly acrimonious tiff—ensued. In the midst of it the telephone rang, and Skeel snatched off the receiver and said the Canary was out.

"The tiff resumed; but presently another suitor appeared on the scene. Whether he rang the bell or let himself in with a key I can't say—probably the latter, for the phone operator was unaware of his visit. Skeel hid himself a second time in the closet, and luckily took the precaution of locking himself in. Also, he quite naturally put his eye to the keyhole to see who the second intruder was."

Vance pointed to the closed door. "The keyhole, you will observe, is on a line with the davenport; and asSkeel peered out into the room he saw a sight that froze his blood. The new arrival—in the midst, perhaps, of some endearing sentences—seized the lady by the throat and proceeded to throttle her. . . . Imagine Skeel's emotions, my dear Markham. There he was, crouching in a dark closet, and a few feet from him stood a murderer in the act of strangling a lady!

"I don't wonder he was petrified and speechless. He saw what he imagined to be maniacal fury in the strangler's eyes; and the strangler must have been a fairly powerful creature, whereas Skeel was slender and almost undersized. . . . No, merci, Skeel wasn't having any. He lay doggo. And I can't say that I blame the beggar, what?"

He made a gesture of interrogation.

"What did the strangler do next? Well, well; we'll probably never know, now that Skeel, the horrified witness, has gone to his Maker. But I rather imagine he got out that black document box, opened it with a key he had taken from the lady's handbag, and extracted a goodly number of incriminating documents.

"Then, I fancy the fireworks began. The gentleman proceeded to wreck the apartment in order to give the effect of a professional burglary. He tore the lace on the lady's gown and severed the shoulder strap; snatched her orchid corsage and threw it in her lap; stripped off her rings and bracelets; and tore the pendant from its chain.

"After that he upset the lamp, rifled the escritoire, ransacked the Boule cabinet, broke the mirror, overturned the chairs, tore the draperies. . . . And all the time Skeel kept his eye glued to the keyhole with fascinated horror, afraid to move, terrified lest he be discovered and sent to join his erstwhile inamorata, for by now he was no doubt thoroughly convinced that the man outside was a raving lunatic.—I can't say that I envy Skeel his predicament; it was ticklish, y' know. Rather!—And the devastation went on. He could hear it even when the operations had passed from out his radius of vision. And he himself was caught like a rat in a trap, with no means of escape. A harrowin' situation—my word!"

Vance smoked a moment, and then shifted his position slightly.

"Y' know, Markham, I imagine that the worst moment in the whole of Skeel's checkered career came when that mysterious wrecker tried to open the closet door behind which he was crouching.

"Fancy! There he was cornered, and not two inches from him stood, apparently, a homicidal maniac trying to get to him, rattling that thin barricade of white pine. . . . Can you picture the blighter's relief when the murderer finally released the knob and turned away? It's a wonder he didn't collapse from the reaction. But he didn't. He listened and watched in a sort of hypnotic panic, until he heard the invader leave the apartment. Then, weak-kneed and in a cold sweat, he came forth and surveyed the battlefield."

Vance glanced about him.

"Not a pretty sight-eh, what? And there on the davenport reclined the lady's strangled body. That corpse was Skeel's dominant horror.

"He staggered to the table to look at it, and steadied himself with his right hand—that's how you got your finger-prints, Sergeant. Then the realization of his own position suddenly smote him. Here he was alone with a murdered person. He was known to have been intimate with the lady; and he was a burglar with a record. Who would believe that he was innocent? And though he had probably recognized the man who had negotiated the business, he was in no position to tell his story.

"Everything was against him—his sneaking in, his presence in the house at half-past nine, his relations with the girl, his profession, his reputation. He hadn't a chance in the world. . . . I say, Markham, would you have credited his tale?"

"Never mind that," retorted Markham. "Go on with your theory." He and Heath had been listening with rapt interest.

"My theory from this point on," resumed Vance, "is what you might term self-developing. It proceeds on its own inertia, so to speak—Skeel was confronted by the urgent problem of getting away and covering his tracks. His mind in this emergency became keen and highly active; his life was forfeit if he didn't succeed. He began to think furiously.

"He could have left by the side door at once without being seen; but then, the door would have been unbolted. And this fact, taken in connection with his earlier visit that night, would have suggested his manner of unbolting the door. . . . No, that method of escape wouldn't do—decidedly it wouldn't do.

"He knew he was likely, in any event, to be suspected of the murder, in view of his shady association with the lady and his general character. Motive, place, opportunity, time, means, conduct, and his own record—all were against him. Either he must cover up his tracks, don't y' know, or else his career as a Lothario was at an end. A sweet dilemma! He realized, of course, that if he could get out and leave that side door bolted on the inside, he'd be comparatively safe.

"No one could then explain how he had come in or gone out. It would establish his only possible alibi—a negative one, to be sure; but, with a good lawyer, he could probably make it hold. Doubtless he searched for other means of escape, but found himself confronted with obstacles on every hand. The side door was his only hope. How could it be worked?"

Vance rose and yawned.

"That's my theory. Skeel was caught in a trap, and with his shrewd, tricky brain he figured his way out. He may have roamed up and down these two rooms for hours before he hit on his plan; and it's not unlikely that he appealed to the Deity with an occasional 'Oh, my God!'

"As for his using the tweezers, I'm inclined to think the mechanism of the idea came to him almost immediately.—Y' know, Sergeant, this locking of a door on the inside is an old trick. There are any number of recorded cases of it in the criminal literature of Europe. Indeed, in Professor Hans Gross's handbook of criminology there's a whole chapter on the devices used by burglars for illegal entries and exits.

"But all such devices have had to do with the locking—not the bolting—of doors.

"The principal, of course, is the same, but the technic is different. To lock a door on the inside, a needle, or strong slender pin, is inserted through the bow of the key, and pulled downward with a string. But on the side door of this house there is no lock and key; nor is there a bow in the bolt-handle.—Now, the resourceful Skeel, while pacing nervously about, looking for something that might offer a suggestion, probably espied the tweezers on the lady's dressing table—no lady nowadays is without these little eyebrow-pluckers, don't y' know—and immediately his problem was solved.

"It remained only to test the device. Before departing, however, he chiseled open the jewel case which the other chap had merely dinted, and found the solitaire diamond ring that he later attempted to pawn.

"Then he erased, as he thought, all his finger-prints, forgetting to wipe off the inside door-knob of the closet, and overlooking the hand-mark on the table. After that, he let himself out quietly, and rebolted the side door the same as I did, stuffing the tweezers in his waistcoat pocket and forgetting them."

The Day Book of a New Yorker
By CLARK KINNAIRD.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Naturally, sights that attract New York visitors do not have the same allure for the majority of more or less permanent New Yorkers. Comparatively few of the latter ever have purposely gone down to Battery park to watch the ocean greyhounds, or have been up in the Woolworth tower, or have viewed the spectacle in the stock exchange, or toured the American Museum of Natural History, or climbed the Statue of Liberty, or seen the inside of the most famous old building in the city Fraunce's tavern. Thousands of New Yorkers would have difficulty in finding city hall, or Wall street, or the aquarium, or the Metropolitan Museum of Arts, or John D. Rockefeller's town residence, or the main postoffice, or even Greenwich village.

Yes, sir, it takes some extra special sight to capture the interest of the Gothamite. Something like the ruins of the bombed house of Robert Elliott, state executioner. A continuous stream of sightseers passed the place on the first Sunday after the blast, paralyzing traffic in a section of New York.

Visitors usually notice how pale Gotham girls are in comparison with damsels in the hinterland. "I think the white faces of New York women are the most striking thing I've seen," remarked my brother, here from Kentucky. "It would be better for them to use more rouge and look like Indians. They'd be a lot healthier in appearance."

I suggested that the unusual whiteness of the New York girl's complexion was not due to unhealthiness, but rather to the excessive, but necessary, use of powder. Faces get soiled more quickly in New York than in Pittsburgh, despite the latter's blacker reputation.

For years New York has been one of the dirtiest cities in the world because of unregulated smoke and the inefficiency of the street-cleaning department.

That Guinan woman sure has a gift of gab.

"You are lovely," said Prince Potensiani, governor of Rome, when he visited her nightclub with Mrs. W. R. Hearst. "I do trust that some day you will come to Italy and I will see that you are presented at court."

"Tut, tut," responded Texas, whose crest is a padlock, "it's an every day occurrence with me."

Now there's "Milk Bottle Reclamation Week." New Yorkers, it appears, are more careless of milk bottles than any other persons in the world, and millions of bottles disappear every year. Milk distributers complain that while they shouldn't need but three bottles in stock for every quart of milk used, instead it takes 12 bottles for every quart delivered to an expensive advertising campaign to arouse the consciences of careless householders.

An idea of what the well-furnished home of the near future will be like is given by exhibits at an international exposition of art in industry promoted by one of the big department stores. The department that is attracting most woman visitors is not the laborless kitchen, but the modernist boudoir and the attached dressing-room which has floor, walls and ceilings composed entirely of mirrors placed at such angles that one may see 10 images of one's complete costume.

The bathroom is also a gem, but it wouldn't suit me, because the tub wouldn't be long enough. When are bathtub makers going to make the discovery that there are persons taller than five feet five?

Village Name Honors General Who Slew Son

FUTSING, Fukien Province, China, June 4. (AP)—The nearby mud-walled village of "Father Killed His Son" stands as a monument to the word of a Chinese general who fought Japanese invaders centuries ago.

He was General Ts'i and lived when China was ruled by the Ming dynasty from 1368 to 1644. He was sent to Fukien province to exterminate Japanese pirates who were ravaging the coast.

From Futsing, General Ts'i was about to start for the sea when informed by signal lights from the coastal hilltops that pirate boats were landing. Before going he drew up his troops and announced that any man who looked back after they left the walls of the city would be summarily executed.

The troops marched out and when they reached the site of the present village of "Father Killed His Son," the general's own son looked back toward Futsing. The general himself beheaded the lad and in the strength given by his example of faith to his word the army swept on to victory against the marauders.

Old Havana Church Must Pay Museum Tax

HAVANA, Cuba, June 4. (AP)—The Havana city government has decreed that Columbus cathedral, once the reputed resting place the bones of Christopher Columbus, shall be known on city tax records as a museum.

Mecca of the majority of tourists, the famous cathedral, located in old Havana and now surrounded by modern business life, passes from the roster of houses of worship because, officials say, a charge has been made to all who go within its ancient walls. Under the Cuban law, admission fees automatically classify properties as amusement places or museums. Thus Columbus cathedral must stand its share of community expense by paying a fee to the civil government.

Denials have been entered by the bishop of the church, who claims all fees go to guides and not to the church, but Havana is firm, and the church will be known as a museum.

Bolivian Troops Have Shoes but Go Barefoot

LA PAZ, Bolivia, June 4. (AP)—Shoe leather is not wasted when the Bolivian troops go on the march. The troopers remove their shoes and carry them in their belts. Some go barefooted; others use sandals. The Bolivian army is made up almost entirely of Indians, who are not accustomed to footgear.

Strawn Girl Receives Three College Degrees

DENTON, Texas, June 4. (UP)—The honor of being the first person to receive three degrees from C. I. A. goes to Miss Alice Strawn of Strawn.

Miss Strawn received her first degree a year ago, obtaining a B. S., having majored in home economics. Continuing her work, she will receive a degree in home demonstration work this June and with further research this summer will be awarded another degree in general home economics in August.

Mascot of Noted Band Goes to Convention

BROWNWOOD, Texas, June 4. (UP)—The peaceful days of Sarah II, mascot of the nationally famous Old Gray Mare band, are about to come to an end.

Sarah is soon to be groomed and manicured for the national Democratic convention to be held in Houston in June, the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention in Fort Worth and the American Legion convention in San Antonio next fall.

The Old Gray Mare band will be one of the official music makers at the convention in Houston and the first song to be playcd there will be "The Old Gray Mare Ain't What She Used to Be."

The Old Gray Mare band first began to play the Old Gray Mare at Camp Bowie during the war and continued in France, until many other army bands took up the strains. The song originated during the civil war.

Penny Colony in Texas Planned by Syndicate

SAN BENITO, Texas, June 4. (UP)—A New York syndicate is planning a huge project in the valley whereby a large acreage would be purchased and colonized after the J. C. Penny project in Florida.

According to M. G. Neal, who has just returned from a conference with the group, two men are already in the valley investigating the conditions. If a suitable tract can be found, it is highly probable that the project will be put in operation in a very short time, McNeal said.

The plan is to divide a large tract into small farms, place one house on each of the farms with the necessary farm implements and livestock. Each tenant would have the use of the land for a year. If he proved his worth, he would be allowed to purchase the farm on a small payment plan, McNeal explained.

Texas Girl in Mother's Steps

"Out of sight, out of mind", is a true saying. The fact that we can't see what's happening inside our children's bodies is the reason so many of us allow them to go on suffering from constipation until they are full of the poisons from decaying waste and they're bilious, headachy, sallow and weak, with no appetite or energy. Watch your baby or child, Mother, and at the first sign of coated tongue, bad breath or feverishness, give him a little California Fig Syrup. This rich, fruity product gently expels all the souring waste; gives tone and strength to the stomach and bowels, so they continue to act normally; stimulates the circulation; tones and nourishes the entire system.

Its sales record of over four million bottles a year and the enthusiastic praise of women everywhere, prove mothers depend on it today as they have for more than 40 years. A Texas mother, Mrs. M. H. Goodrich 1530 So. Olive street, San Antonio, says: "I used to take California Fig Syrup as a child, so when my little girl began to suffer with constipation I started her on it. It stopped her trouble quickly and made her look ever so much better. I kept using it with her for a few weeks and it made a different girl out of her. She has grown so well and strong and is never sick any more."

See that the Fig Syrup you buy bears the name "California," so you won't be imposed on by imitators. —Adv.

Favorite Jokes of Famous People

As Told by Them to
FRANK ERNEST NICHOLSON

By RT. HON. SIR GILBERT PARKER, P.C.

RT. HON. SIR GILBERT PARKER

The Right Honorable Sir Gilbert Parker, who is famous for his extensive travels through Europe, Asia, Egypt, Northern Canada and the South Sea islands, organized and initiated the first Imperial Universities conference in London, and was for nine years chairman of the Imperial South African association.

He is also the author of more than three dozen books, much verse and several plays. "The Power and the Glory," "The Right of Way" and "The Seats of the Mighty" are among his most popular novels.

Gilbert Parker says he knows numerous jokes, but that the following is his favorite:

"Dan O'Connell, the great Irish patriot," as Sir Gilbert tells it, "once entered the fish market in Dublin and bought two fish. He felt in his pocket and had no money.

"'I've no money, ma'am,' he told the lady attendant; 'you'll have to trust me.'

"'Oh, that's perfectly all roight, Misther O'Connell,' the woman told him. 'Pay me the next time you come.'

"He came two days later. 'I'm paying ye for the three fish I bought of ye day before yesterday, Mrs. Moriarity.'

"'Sure, you didn't buy three fish, Misther O'Connell; you only bought two.'

"'But I feel as though I should pay you for three,' said O'Connell. 'I took two trout and one smelt.'

HEALTH and DIET ADVICE

By DR. FRANK McCOY
Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Mr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper.

A Lesson on the Digestive Tract

It is very important that the food be very finely divided by the teeth so that the digestive juices may reach into the innermost portion of the food particles. Whenever there is an incomplete digestion, there is danger of food fermentation.

The food passes from the mouth down the throat, through the esophagus, and into the stomach. The stomach is a highly elastic, muscular organ which will hold about three pints and when full is about a foot long and four inches wide. When empty, however, the stomach contracts and occupies very little space.

The stomach acts as a storehouse for food until it has been acted upon by the gastric juice which is secreted by glands within the stomach walls. These gastric glands secrete very powerful digestive juices containing hydrochloric acid and pepsin which not only kill the bacteria present in food, but are used to digest protein.

You will realize what a wonderful apparatus the stomach is when I tell you that the stomach glands will secrete from two and a half to five quarts of gastric juice each day. The stomach is lined with circular, longitudinal, and oblique muscular fibers. These muscles keep contracting in such a way as to thoroughly churn the food and mix it with the gastric juice.

After digestion has taken place, the pyloric muscle relaxes slightly and allows the more liquid parts of the food to pass through into the duodenal part of the small intestine. The larger particles are usually held back until there is a good deal of surplus hydrochloric acid which has not been absorbed by the food. This produces a reflex nervous impulse to open the pylorus, allowing all of the food to pass through into the duodenum.

When the duodenum feels the food passing into it from the stomach, an impulse is sent to the liver, gall bladder, pancreas, and their yellowish green liquid mixture is formed and emptied into the partly digested food. The gall bladder, which is simply a storehouse for the liver's bile until it is needed, also empties into this duct.

The bile assists in rendering the food alkaline, and counteracts the acidity which was produced in the stomach. This assists in breaking up the fat globules, producing a kind of soap, and it also acts as a destroyer of bacteria, killing by its alkaline strength those bacteria which were not destroyed by the hydrochloric acid of the stomach.

The pancreatic juice is one of the most important secretions that are thrown into the intestines because it contain three powerful digestive ferments, trypsin, a substance which digests the proteins which remain indigested from the stomach; amylopsin, for digesting the starchs which were not digested by the saliva; and steapsin, which digest fats. The action of these digestive fluids makes the small intestine of great importance to our body.

The small intestine is lined with glands similar in shape to the glands of the stomach. Their secretions assist in the digestive processes, and in addition they secrete a peculiar fluid which converts cane sugar into grape sugar, since cane sugar cannot be used by the blood until it has been converted into the latter form.

Questions and Answers

Question—R. W. writes: "When changing from high-heeled slippers into low-heeled ones I seem to have a cramp in my foot and just before I get into the low-heeled slippers my foot seems to snap like when you try 'finger-breaking.' Can you tell me what causes this, and what to do about it?"

Answer—The change from high-heeled slippers to low-heeled ones must be made gradually. The unnatural position of the foot in a high-heeled shoe changes the positions of the bones of the foot, and it takes some time before they will return to their normal shape after such a shoe has been continually worn. The "cracking" is due to the bones or ligaments slipping into position.

Question—Mrs. E. L. asks: "With what foods may cheese be combined, and what particular kind of cheese do you think is best?"

Answer—The best way to use cheese is to make it the protein part of a meal, serving with it plenty of green vegetables, both cooked and raw. It also combines well with pineapple. No starches should be used with this meal. Fresh home-made cottage cheese is the most wholesome.

Question—J. F. writes: "My right hand and arm sleep so much I can hardly do any writing. What do you think is the cause of it? I am 63 years old, and had it a few years when I was about 40, but it left me. Please tell me what to do."

Answer—The numbness in your right arm is due to poor circulation and this in turn may be caused by pressure on the nerves which go from the spine to the arm. A chiropractor or osteopath may be able to help you in one or two treatments.

Cops to Hold Shooting Contest at Convention

HOUSTON, Texas, June 4. (UP)—Eight teams will be entered here Tuesday in the shooting tournament to be held in connection with the thirteenth annual convention of the Chiefs of Police and City Marshals' Union of Texas. The union meets here three days.

Teams are entered from San Antonio, Ranger, El Paso, Fort Worth, Houston and Dallas. A team composed of Texas rangers will take part in the meet also. In addition a team of women, selected from among families of members of the union, will participate in the matches. Seventy-five are expected to take part in the shoot, with several prizes offered to the winners.

The delegates will visit Galveston for one day. Chiefs of police, city marshals, sheriffs and their deputies, railroad special agents and other authorized peace officers are members of the union.

Claude Trammel, chief of police of Dallas, is chairman of the executive committee.

West Texas Well Fixed For Water, Says Whitaker

STAMFORD, Texas, June 5. (UP) At no other time in her history has every nook and corner of West Texas been so well supplied with water as at the present time, according to E. M. Whitaker, exhibit-agricultural manager of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Tanks, lakes and ponds are all filled with water and the unrestricted use of water in artificial lakes by dependent towns is now being enjoyed to the utmost, he said.

By LARRY DAILEY
Record News Sports Editor

This job of reporting the capers of the Spudders is getting to be only part of the day's work, instead of a pleasant duty. I mean, that while I like baseball for the game's sake and can appreciate its fine points, even as exemplified by the enemy, seeing our nine receive its daily licking is growing rather monotonous. I do wish the home athletes would vary the proceeding and win a game now and then. My appetite has utterly failed me; I do not sleep well and I fear that even my best friends won't tell me.

The Spudders lost their second straight game yesterday to the Waco Cubs, and if it is of any interest, the score was 3 to 0. It was the fifth straight game in which the champions took the short end of the count.

Ace Elliott turned in a superlatively pitched game of ball to blank our hopefuls with six hits, struck out seven and passed only one. That's REAL curving. To a man up a tree (and I AM up a tree trying to figure it all out) this batting slump has reached the proportion of a serious matter. Or maybe it is the fine chucking of the Cub flingers, Charlie Barnabe the precious day having let the Spuds down with one run and eight hits.

Cubs Field Errorlessly

Waco chelled Joe Kiefer for 12 hits, which would indicate the stocky right hander was not so good. But Joe, however, wasn't so bad. He bore down when the hostilities were on the base paths and thanks to two fast double plays did very well. Except for the third inning, when the Cubs bunched two blows, a sacrifice, base on balls and error, the only misplay of the game for all their runs.

The Cubs, for the second consecutive game, fielded errorlessly and they also turned in a couple of two-ply killings to help Mister Elliott set down the champions runless.

Marty Karow and Etie, the kid catcher, each banged three hits to lead the attack and George Blackerby continued his batting pace with two knocks. Lyman Lamb clouted two hits, one a double, and Swenson and Turgeon maced for two bases.

Swenson's double was a terrific smash to left field, into the teeth of a driving wind. It hit halfway up the wall. A runner was on base and had the day been calm Wally's drive would have been a homer and two runs would have been scored. Jenkins smote a drive to left in the fourth that also, on a normal day, would have been good for the circuit.

Give Credit Where Due

But it's the winning ball clubs that make the breaks, an old saw of the game goes, and I am not one to belittle the excellent pitching of Elliott, nor to discredit the Cubs, who deserved to win because they played the best baseball.

Karow started the decisive third with a hit through short. Moore doubled past Turgeon. Karow stopping at third. Blackerby walked, filling the bases. Benton threw wide and hastily to second on a tap by Battle. Karow and Moore scoring. Blackerby going to third and Battle to second. Shires lifted a sacrifice fly to Eldred, scoring Blackerby.

Reverting to the estimable work of Elliott: The Ace fanned Eldred in the first inning with a runner on third and two out; retired the side in the second with two on; Strucked out Lamb and Eldred in the fourth with a runner on second, and allowed only two Spudders to reach third.

Notes of the Game

Herb Cobb may start the third and final of the series today for Skipper Williams. Molenda or Tuero probably will go for Pratt, though Del used some "strategy" yesterday by employing Elliott instead of Bo or Oscar.

Yesterdaywas cold and dark and dreary. It also was blue Monday. Possibly that explains the paid admissions of only 250.

The storm Sunday night blew off the top of the negro bleachers.

Blackerby and Kiefer engaged in an argument in the seventh after George smacked his second hit, and while thus engaged Cobb picked off the local boy at first.

This youngster Etie looks like a capable catcher to share the receiving burden with Wolgamot. He also seems to be a right smart hitter.

Helen Captures French Net Title

Miss Wills Victor in Two Straight Sets

AUTEUIL, France, June 4. (AP)—America's Miss Helen Wills today became the undisputed women's tennis queen of the world by adding the French International hard courts crown to her collection, which already includes the English and American titles.

Henri Cochet of France qualified as prince consort by winning the men's singles and becoming champion of his own country as well as England.

Both Miss Wills and Cochet met worthy adversaries, but won in decisive fashion befitting a champion. Miss Wills swept to victory over Miss Eileen Bennett of England, 6-1, 6-2, while Cochet downed his redoubtable countryman, Rene LaCoste, the defending champion and present holder of the United States title, 5-7, 6-3, 6-1, 6-3.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

IT IS REITERATED in this column that the second half race in the Texas league is going to be a mad scramble, and if present signs do not go awry hotter even than the hectic first-half chase. The second division clubs all have strengthened and finishing among the first four, much less copping the gonfalon is going to be a difficult matter. Indeed, it's going to be tough just to win a ball game.

ONE OF THE CLUBS in the second four now that promises to make trouble for the present pacesetters is Waco. Del Pratt's club is a much more impressive looking machine than in its first series here. Recent additions to the Cubs have added power to the offense and defensive strength. Jimmy Battle, at third base, rounds out an infield of defensive skill and with nothing to desire in the attack. Randy Moore is a star outfielder and with George Blackerby, one of the best in the loop, and Johnson, a very good ball player, completes a fine outfield trio.

Wolgamot isn't a star, but is a capable catcher, heady and dependable, and this youngster Etie looks like a capable understudy. The only doubt over the Cubs is their pitching. Charley Barnabe, who toiled last season for Shreveport, will be a winner for Del. Elliott is another chucker who will win his share of games for a good ball club. A couple of more winning tossers—maybe Pratt has them now—will give the Cubs all that could be asked for.

ARMAND MANUEL, the boxer-barrister, is to have the w. k. acid test Thursday night. The Jewish heavyweight from the Pacific coast will meet ancient Mike McTigue in a 10-round mill at Madison Square Garden. Manuel is held as a heavyweight of great promise and his eastern debut will be watched with interest.

IT WILL BE the second meeting of Manuel and McTigue. Bould Michael went west a few months ago and gave the learned Armand a shellacking. But Armand, they pointed out, was fighting his first battle against an experienced foe and would reverse the result the next time. Thursday night is the next time, and we shall see if Manuel can really fight a bit and is to be viewed as a possible contender within the near future, or whether, like so tragically many, is just another of a bad lot.

BUFFS VICTORS IN LATE RALLY

Snyders Score All Runs In 7th to Win, 8 to 3

DALLAS, Texas, June 4. (AP)—Scoring all their runs in a seventh-inning rally, the Houston Buffaloes made it two straight victories over the Steers today. The score was 8 to 3.

A series of drag hits and bunts proved the undoing of Darrough after he had pitched six innings of creditable baseball in a duel with another wrong-sider, Barnes.

The contest was fought on a heavy field as a result of heavy rains Sunday night. In spite of this fact, some fast fielding was exhibited, particularly by Schuble and Mann, opposing shortstops, and by Edde Hock and Happ Morse. Score:

BEARS WIN IN NINTH

FORT WORTH, June 4. (AP)—Scoring five runs in the ninth inning, San Antonio defeated Fort Worth, 7 to 5, in the third game of the series here Monday afternoon. However, the contest was played under the protest of Manager Jake Atz of the Panthers. Manager Gibson of the Bears inserted himself in the box score twice in the ninth inning, batting for Cox and then in turn going to run for Grimes.

The defeat was the first of the season for Paul Wachtel in nine starts, having chalked up victories in the previous eight engagements. Score:

Bare Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

NEW YORK, June 4.—The twin political factions are going into this campaign without a slogan.

Somehow, the public doesn't plaster any trust in campaign adages since "he kept us out of the war" got us into it.

Coolidge wasn't such a much with his prescription for 1924, "Keep cool with Cal."

The boys kept cool. They froze.

"Remember the Maine," that was all right in 1899. But since investigations started to get popular the boys would rather remember the Leviathan or any other boat that sails at midnight.

There isn't much you can do with Hoover. He lost a chance for a rhyme when he forgot to get born in Vancouver.

You might say, "Hoover, Hoover, he's my skoover." But by the time you figured the meaning of a skoover you would forget what a Hoover was.

Al Smith's publicity dragoons are up against the same thing. The nearest rhyme to Smith is Jones.

They cried, "Al, Al, he's my pal." But then they found that he would never be elected on the ratio of two Als to one pal.

You might yell, "Smitty, Smitty, what a pity," which would be sympathetic but not boostful.

There is always a chance to stampede a convention with some good nursery doggerel. After the third day all the delegates would rather sing than talk.

Headquarters will pay 100,000 bills for something like "Happiness in every deadlock," or "Not a delegate in a carload."

Typewriter Pounder Finds Pounding Foe in Ring Different Proposition

Wyoming Warner, Who Is Something of a Scribe, Loses Hard Fight, to Annoyance of Other Reporters

By DAMON RUNYON
(Copyright, 1928, by Universal Service)

NEW YORK, June 4.—My pugilistic step-child, Wyoming Warner, of old Cheyenne, who is sometimes known as the punching paragrapher, because he is the only sport writer known to science who turned fighter, got all tuckered out fighting Signor Mando Tassi, of Sunny Italy, over in Ebbets field the other evening.

That's the trouble with sports writing. It is most fatiguing. A fellow gets all out of breath beating a typewriter. I said as much to Mr. Otto Floto, the dean of the sports writers of the Rocky Mountain west when he shipped Wyoming Warner to me in bond the last time, but Mr. Floto differed with me.

"I've been sports writing many a year," said Mr. Floto, "and it never bothered my wind. I've sat up night in and night out going through tough rounds as fast as we could order 'em, and I'm still hale and hearty. You tell Wyoming to forget his wind, and just get in there and heave a lot of right hand periods and left hand commas around, he he'll be o. k."

That worked out fine in round 1, when Wyoming tagged Signor Tassi on a slightly protruding chin with an exclamation point, and Signor Tassi sat down swiftly. He was speedily aroused by cries of "ally oomp" from Doctor Bagley and Johnny Lemanna over in his corner, and he struggled through the GKF, even though Wyoming beat out about half a column of crisp comment on his noggin and chassis.

Tassi Rejuvenated

As Signor Tassi sat on his little stool during the recess, Doctor Bagley worked briskly over him, and Johnny Lemanna, who manages Signor Tassi, muttered in his right ear, "Vive l'Italia!" This all seemed to inspire Signor Tassi quite some, as he came out much rejuvenated for the second round.

Wyoming stabbed the proud snoot of Signor Tassi with a stinging sentence and brought out Signor Tassi's headlines in red ink, but by the time the third round came on, Wyoming was feeling the stress of competition. Just as I feared, all that effort against the old Underwood, or possibly the L. C. Smith, was commencing to tell on him.

His breath came in short pants. Signor Tassi, nurtured to the pink of condition on the finest spaghetti that Johnny Lemanna could buy, was rarin' and pitchin' in there in a manner that I deemed most temerarious on the part of a gladiator fighting a sports writer. How does Signor Tassi know but what Wyoming Warner may say some mean things about him in his next column?

Smashing Fight

It was a smashing fight, and the clients were all aglow with excitement. But I could see Wyoming Warner sneaking an occasional glance at his fellow sports writers seated at the ringside well out of range of Signor Nando Tassi's punches, and it occurred to me that he might be thinking.

"So you boys down there think you've got a tough job, hey?"

When the decision was announced in favor of Signor Nando Tassi, who, by the way, is a right good fighter, Wyoming Warner gazed reproachfully at the referee and the judges before retiring to his dressing room.

I would advise them not to look at the next issue of the Sheridan, Wyoming, Post-Enterprise wherein Wyoming Warner writes a column called "The Neutral Corner." Or their ears may tingle. You can go just so far with a sports writer.

Mr. Ed Sullivan, of the Sports Writers' Guild, subsequently chided Wyoming Warner on behalf of all the members, saying:

"How come you to get fagged out so, doing nothing but fighting? We can't understand it. Don't you know a sports writer isn't supposed to get all fagged out doing nothing but fighting? If you'd been covering the fight we wouldn't blame you, but as it is, some of the members want to take up your card."

To which Wyoming Warner, blushing slightly and speaking in the language of the craft, replied:

"Well, just get me that egg again and I'll knock him for a row of em quads."

About Loughran

But out of his riotous experience, the young sports writer must have acquired material for a number of interesting columns in the future, for he remained to see Thomas Loughran, the light-heavyweight champion of the world, defend his title in masterly style against Pete Latzo, the rugged roly-poly from Scranton.

I would not be surprised to read in Wyoming Warner's "Neutral Corner" words of wisdom to the following effect, though perhaps in manner more chaste;

"That old condition is the thing—that getting in condition, and staying in condition, like Tommy Loughran. It carried him over some rough spots in his battle with Pete Latzo.

"The most superb animal, physically, in the ring, Loughran always has something in reserve, something to carry him onward when the other fellow is tired. A clean living man, a clean thinking man, Loughran is always in condition, morally, mentally and physically, and he ought to hold his title as long as he desires."

I called Mr. Otto Floto on the long distance telephone yesterday. I wish to advise him that his theory that a sports writer can get in condition for a grueling battle on a typewriter is all wrong, no matter how much he heaves those periods and commas, because when a man is all out of wind he can't think of anything to say.

"Got tired in the third round, did he?" said Mr. Floto, his voice coming strong and clear from those mountain heights. "Well, listen—I'm still right."

SIMON PURES About Amateurs

By GORDON FULCHER

No team in the Twilight league has the first half cinched so far. Each team in the league is scheduled to play 12 games in this half, but none of them will complete that many games except the Texas Electrics unless postponed games are played this week.

If the Electrics win their game today they will have the half cinched unless the games of the Panhandle, which were postponed on account of rain, are played.

If the Kilowats lose and the Panhandle wins its game the Longhorns are winners without making up their lost games.

By playing the postponed games and winning them, as well as their game Wednesday, the Longhorns have a chance to tie the Electrics even though the Kilowats win their remaining contest.

The Electrics either get into the winning line or or on the losing side this afternoon so it behooves Manager Bill Hoehn and the team as a whole to leave nothing undone that will win today's contest with James Brothers.

It is being rumored that Texas Electrics have a new pitcher coming or are in the market for one.

Jud Waller, who tried out with Waco this spring and who also spent a few weeks with the Lone Star clubs, Paris and Tyler, has returned to Wichita Falls and is playing with James Brothers in the Twilight league. Jud got four hits out of nine times at bat in his first Twilight games Sunday afternoon.

Ray Hanks a leading the Landon-Hill Sporting Goods company's contest for the largest bass caught this season in Wichita Falls vicinity with a seven-pound fish.

P. B. M. and Perkins Timberlake, two of Wichita Falls' largest department stores, are scheduled to tie up in a baseball game this week, probably Wednesday. Only men who are employes will play.

Nichols, DeLuxe Cleaners and Dyers pitcher, has pitched several good games this year in the Master Cleaners and Dyers league. He has hurled two no-hit games and two two-hit games. He held the Katy team, leaders of the City league, to two knocks in a practice game.

Producers-Katy Game Is Set for Tomorrow

Yesterday's baseball game scheduled between Producers Creamery and M-K-T in the City league was postponed until Wednesday afternoon because of wet grounds.

ARMY AND STANFORD SIGN 2-YEAR GRID PACT

ELEVENS PLAY IN 1928, 1929

Meet This Season at New York; Next Year in West

WEST POINT, N. Y., June 4. (UP)—Leland Stanford university will send a football team to New York City to play the Army on December 1, it was officially announced here tonight.

The game will be a climactic one for both elevens, whose schedules include leading teams from every part of the United States. It also will mark the first invasion of an eastern gridiron by a football team from a far western university.

In 1929, a return game will be played at Palo Alto on December 28. Agreement for the two contests was signed by Major Philip Fleming and Captain "Biff" Jones, Army head coach, for the U. S. Military academy, and by Prof. W. B. Owen, representing the Stanford faculty and Alfred Masters, graduate manager of athletics at the university.

Both elevens have tough schedules for 1928 and if each should come through undefeated until the final game, the contest at the Polo grounds should be of paramount importance in determining the outstanding team of the year.

Midland Baseball Manager Suspended

ABILENE, Texas, June 4. (AP)—J. McAllister Stevenson, president of the West Texas league, today suspended J. J. Maloney, manager of the Midland baseball club, pending an investigation of charges of violation of rules and "conduct detrimental to baseball."

It is understood the suspension is the outgrowth of a dispute over charges that Midland has not abided by rules governing player limits, which has resulted in the forfeiture of 10 games won by Midland.

German, Uruguay Soccer Game Cause of Dispute

AMSTERDAM, June 4. (UP)—As an aftermath to the scandal arising from the unsportsmanlike conduct of German soccer players in their Olympic match with Uruguay, ministers from the two nations are disputing over the matter of an apology.

The German minister to The Hague has issued a communique, denying indignantly that he apologized to the Uruguayan minister for the German team's roughness in Sunday's football game.

The Uruguayan minister previously had announced receipt of such an apology, adding that he was glad the incident thus could be considered closed.

Dempsey Gets Another Billet-Doux From Kearns

NEW YORK, June 4. (UP)—A new suit by Jack Kearns against Jack Dempsey was revealed today by the filing of a petition by an attorney for the former heavyweight champion. In the suit, Kearns seeks to have a jury say whether he should have received $237,500 or $158,033 as his share of Dempsey's purse for the Firpo fight.

Arthur F. Driscoll, representing the ex-champion, asked that the suit be transfered from the supreme court to the U. S. district court on the ground that Dempsey is a resident of Los Angeles.

Special Jury To Probe Slayings

CHICAGO, June 4. (UP)—In the hope of obtaining indictments against some of the "higher ups" believed responsible for the murders, bombings and other acts of violence that attended the Illinois primary in Chicago, Chief Justice William V. Brothers impaneled a special grand jury today to hear the evidence. A jury of 23 men was selected.

F. Edson White, president of Armour and company, was chosen foreman.

The murders of "Diamond Joe" Esposito who was a Deneen candidate for ward committeeman, and Octavius C. Granady, negro, who was seeking ward leadership in the "bloody twentieth," will be the main crimes under investigation, the jurors were told.

The bombings of the homes of United States Senator Charles S. Deneen and Judge John A. Swanson during the campaign and the numerous slayings and kidnapings on election day also will be thoroughly investigated.

CREWS START FINAL DRILLS

College Oarsmen Point For Big Regattas

By FRANK GETTY
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, June 4. (UP)—Pointing for the big regattas of the eastern rowing season now only a little more than a fortnight away, college oarsmen commenced daily workouts today on the Thames and Hudson.

Despite inclement weather, the oarsmen of Yale and Harvard, who had reported overnight at Gales Ferry near New London, dipped their oars in the first practice pulls for the varsity race on June 23.

Shells at Poughkeepsie

Up at Poughkeepsie, Penn, Navy and Columbia crews, first of the Intercollegiate Rowing association to arrive, had light workouts in preparation for the annual race which this year takes place on June 19.

As in the case in so many other branches of intercollegiate athletics, the majority of the oarsmen are ambitious to win a trip to the Olympic games at Amsterdam for themselves and their shell. Only a few of the crews have entirely given up hope of representing the United States at the ninth Olympiad.

Yale oarsmen are working hard in hopes of defeating Harvard. Two workouts a day have been ordered by Coach Ed Leader. Yale has a comparatively green crew, yet Leader has not hesitated to leave off the squad two veterans from last year's varsity boat.

Harvard Formidable

Harvard upset the rowing dope last year by defeating Yale, and this year Ed Brown, the Crimson coach, has assembled a powerful, heavy crew, well adapted to the four-mile test. Yale's oarsmen, on the other hand, have excelled at sprinting thus far.

The Olympic crew races are short distance affairs. Yale's varsity represented the United States at Paris in 1924, and will be anxious to do so again this coming summer. The competition will be far keener, however. The Blue had a super-eight four years ago. This year's crew must prove itself in the Harvard race, and even a victory must be spectacularly achieved to offset the prowess of Columbia, California, Washington and some of the eights which will be in the rival regatta on the Hudson.

Reynolds Again Loses to Singh

Stewart and Owens Box Six-Round Draw

Basanta Singh, 152-pound Hindu wrestler, for the third time walked from the mat victorious over Jack Reynolds, welterweight champion of the world, when he took two out of three falls in a match at Alec Ross' Gym Monday night. Singh, who hails from Calcutta, twice before threw the champion, but, at his present weight, he was disqualified to receive welterweight honors. Reynolds is wrestling coach at the University of Indiana.

The Hindu took the first fall with an arm strangle, giving in to Reynolds on the second when the latter carried a Boston split in his bag of tactics. Singh took the third with a series of rabbit punches.

"Country Boy" Owens and "Spike" Stewart fought to a six-round draw as the feature of the preliminaries. The fighters drew the enthusiasm of the boxing fans, who muttered considerably over the decision of the three judges, one of whom favored "Spike" as the winner. Alvie Anderson and Johnny Owens fought a fast four rounds preceding the match.

Senate Aspirants Tell Of Campaign Expenses

WASHINGTON, June 4. (AP)—Hamilton F. Kean and Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, two of the candidates in the recent five-cornered New Jersey Republican senator contest, each put up $50,000 for his campaign and each confined expenditures on his behalf within a few dollars of that sum, the Reed campaign funds committee was told today at the outset of the inquiry of into the New Jersey primary.

Texas Oil Company Fails to Get Hearing

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 4. (AP) The supreme court today refused to review the affairs of the Federal Crude Oil company of Beaumont, Texas, which in 1907 was closed out under receivership.

H. L. Fagin and other stockholders in the company began suit in 1926 to have the sale of the land for $50 set aside, contending that the land was worth over $200,000 since the discovery of oil.

STARS SURVIVE TEXAS TENNIS

Seeded Players Win First Round Matches.

HOUSTON, June 4. (AP)—Every seeded player in the Texas state tennis tournament being held at the River Oaks courts this week came through Monday with colors flying as the first round singles matches gained headway, although Henry Lawrence, former Texas university star, and "Tiste" Adoue of Dallas came very close to grief in their grueling battles with Herbert Sloan of Rice and Dunlap of Texas.

Despite the miserable weather conditions that threatened to hold up the play Monday afternoon, all the singles matches were run off in quick time. Heavy rains that saturated the courts toward the latter stages of Monday's heated competition are expected to prove but a slight hindrance to the continuance of the play Tuesday, which will get under way about mid-day.

Adoue-Dunlap Thrill

By far the hardest fought match of the day was the thrilling struggle between Adoue of Dallas and Hugh Dunlap of the University of Texas.

When the first set went to Dunlap, 7-5, the gallery began to get wind of what promised to be one of the most surprising upsets of the tournament.

Adoue came back with a smashing rally to take the next set in short order, 6-2. The next set, and the match, went to Adoue, 8-6, after a great challenge down the home stretch by Dunlap. With the games standing 6-all, Adoue brought his flawless backhand into action and had Dunlap scampering to all corners of the court as he ran out the match. Summary of the singles matches:

Lithuanian City's Ownership Upheld

GENEVA, June 4. (AP)—When in 1920 the Polish General Zeligovski seized the ancient city of Vilna he started something destined to endanger the peace of the Baltic many years afterwards.

Poland used strong phrases today in condemning to the league of nations council Lithuania's insistence that Vilna belongs to Lithuania—is, indeed, her capital. In a communication to the league council the Polish premier, Zaleski, declared that Lithuania's constitutional amendment proclaiming Vilna the capital of Lithuania could only envenom Polish-Lithuanian relations, which the council has been striving to improve.

The Polish spokesman said tonight that the question of sovereignty was certain to dominate the discussions of the council on minor problems. Lithuania's claim to Vilna, he declared, had no juridical foundation.

Egypt will meet Argentina in the semi-finals Wednesday, and Spain will play Uruguay Thursday.

Kiwanis Club Has Program of Fun

Members of the Kiwanis club became "children" again in a program of foolishness at their luncheon at the Kemp hotel Monday noon.

Fisticuffs, throwing of buns, pillows and wisecracks were the order of the day. In other respects the Kiwanians deported themselves as 10-year olds shouldn't.

The four parts of a quartet, composed of William E. Young, George Winburne, Gerald Pond and W. H. Kerr, each were clearly discernable. After that silent music was applauded.

Those with names beginning with letters from A to J were served a chicken dinner by the M's to Z's, who ate pork and beans and cornbread. Eight menials—waiters, cushion peddlers and flunkies in general—were appointed from the wrong end of the alphabet.

Walter Nelson, Jr., was called upon for a toe dance.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, June 4. (AP)—Advances of approximately $2 a bale on reports of rains in the South, were followed by partial reactions in the cotton market today. October contracts, after selling up to 21.21 or 45 points net higher, closed at 21.05, the general market closing steady at net advances of 20 to 30 points.

The opening was firm at an advance of 25 to 30 points on the reports of rains over the week-end in nearly all sections of the belt and relatively firm Liverpool cables. Buying was active and after the first rush of demand had slackened, there appeared to be a further broadening of interest late in the forenoon on the outlook for further showers or rains and numerous complaints that the wet weather was preventing needed work in the South.

July sold up to 21.00 and December to 21.03, net advances of 38 to 45 points on active months, but these figures attracted increased realizing, and prices reacted during the afternoon.

The detailed reports of the weather bureau showed fully as much rainfall as anticipated, while some of the private advices reported that lowlands in some Mississippi valley sections were flooded, and crop complaints from the Southwest were said to be accompanied by buying orders in some instances.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, La., June 4. (AP)—General and excessive rains over the belt promoted rather heavy buying in the cotton market today with a resultant advance of nearly $2.50 a bale in prices. The improvement was not fully maintained, however, as realizing developed in the late trading and the market closed steady at net gains of 27 to 30 points.

October after trading to 20.67, or 45 points above Saturday's close eased off 15 points to 20.52, closing at that figure, or 30 points up for the day.

Liverpool cables came in 3 to 6 penny points better than due, that market probably being also influenced by reports of rain in the belt. First trades here showed gains of 26 points. July ultimately advanced to 20.85, October to 20.67 and December to 20.65, or 41 to 45 points above the previous close.

When demand had been supplied, satisfied longs began taking profits. There was also some selling by ring traders on the reactionary theory and the belief that the rains in some parts of the belt would prove more beneficial than otherwise. Prices were on the downgrade for practically the whole afternoon session, reaching the lows in the final trading when July touched 20.73, October 20.52 and December 20.50. The market closed at these levels or 12 to 15 points under the highs.

The statement in the detailed weather report saying that the rains over the week-end were too numerous to be chronicled and the official forecast for continued unsettled weather in the belt were responsible for a large part of the early advance but their influence was somewhat offset by the belief existing in many quarters beneficial to the crop.

Call Money Rate Advances From 6 To 7 Per Cent and Stocks Break

By BROADAN WALL
Universal Service Financial Expert

NEW YORK, June 4.—Money broke the stock market today. The call rate was advanced to 7 per cent, from a renewal of 6, as the street was worrying about rumors of bearish statement to come from the reserve board and the possibility of another increase in Chicago's rediscount rate.

Steady liquidation that had been experienced from the opening increased in volume, and General Motors, Radio and other recent group favorites lost most of their gains of last week. Individual stock news had little importance as the money situation and the efforts of the reserve board to curb stock speculation assumed increasing importance.

Indication that the tightening money situation here is but a temporary disciplinary measure was found in the ragged foreign exchange market, with sterling and other European currencies slipping lower. Wheat continued its advance as bullish weather advices were received, influenced by strength in other grains. Cotton also gained ground.

The seven per cent call money rate came sooner than generally expected, and its full effect on the market will not be evidenced until tomorrow's session.

Of course there were all manner of opinions about the higher rate being temporary and due to further calling of loans for the mid-week adjustment. These were true in part, but did not take cognizance of the fact that the advance in the rate to the highest level since June, 1921, is the direct result of the federal reserve's efforts to curb stock speculation.

It may be, as Mr. Durant recently forecast, that loans will jump to $10,000,000,000, but if the increase continues at the recent rate of speed it is to be expected that report of a five per cent rediscount rate in Chicago and other districts, such as circulated today, will prove correct.

Radio lost more than 26 points while General Motors and International Telephone & Telegraph dropped more than seven, with Steel and other recent leaders down from two to five points.

Offerings of General Motors were added to as brokers stressed the fact that period of greater competition was beginning and pointed to increased output of Chevrolet and Ford as indications. Chrysler and Dodge dropped with others. It was stated that the merger will not go through unless 90 per cent of Dodge stock is deposited.

THE GOULD COUPLER CO.
5-Year Record

The Gould Coupler company was a successor to a business established many years ago for the manufacture of railroad accessories including couplers, side frames and bolsters. It is controlled by the Symington company and its plants are located at Depew, N. Y. It has a subsidiary which manufactures storage batteries. In 1926 the company sold the friction draft gear and passenger buffer business and in 1927 disposed of the Gould Car Lighting corporation which was operating at a loss.

Earnings were high in 1920, but a loss was reported in 1921. Since 1923, income has again declined and in 1927 it amounted to only $42,263 as compared with $191,669 in 1926 and $499,422 in 1925. The 1927 earnings amounted to 24 cents a share on the class A stock and nothing on the common. In the last quarter of 1927 there was a net deficit of $101,000.

Funded debt totals $4,850,000. Capital stock outstanding consists of 175,000 shares of $2 cumulative and participating class A stock of no par value, and 300,000 shares of no par common, of which 285,000 shares are owned by the Symington company. The class A stock has exclusive voting power in case of default of four quarterly dividends.

No dividends have been reported on the class A since September 15, 1926, and none has been paid on the common. Accumulated dividends on class A on March 15, 1928, amounted to $3 a share.

As of January 1, 1926, total current assets were $3,059,570; total current liabilities amounted to $1,090,074, leaving net working capital of $2,029,496. Book value applicable to the 175,000 no par class A shares amounted to $26.38 a share.

Grain

By THOMAS TEMPLE HOYNE
Universal Service

CHICAGO, June 4.—Wheat had made a nice advance by mid-day today, but late in the session it fell away from top prices like a tired laborer dropping his shovel when the afternoon whistle blows. Corn never could get up above its previous close.

At the finish wheat was ¼c to ⅝c higher; corn was ⅝c to ⅞c lower; oats were 1c better to ⅛c off; rye was up ¼c to 1¼c.

Both wheat and corn looked pickish at the end. Today this condition may develop into a temporary breakdown.

The bulling of wheat for the last few trading days looks to this writer forced by hopeful enthusiasm rather than by real crop conditions. A stream of private messages continued to pour in from the northwest telling about drought and crop deterioration.

Rain would undoubtedly be beneficial in the Dakotas, but I doubt whether any such dry condition prevails generally as reports from certain localities might lead one to suppose. The private crop reports of June 1 gave the condition of the spring wheat as only a trifle under normal.

The wheat market yesterday acted like an independent candidate being run for office by enthusiastic friends with money. It spurted forward at times and reports from every precinct were promising; but the votes have not been counted yet.

Corn may be going to sell higher, but at the present time this writer can see nothing on which to buy it except the cash situation. That may not be sufficient. Corn is not yet disappearing fast enough to make the situation look tight.

In the cash market wheat was unchanged to 2c up; corn was unchanged to 1c up; oats were unchanged to 1c up; rye was firm; barley was unchanged.

COULD NOT GET OUT OF BED

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Strengthened Her

Elkhart, Ind.—"I had a tired feeling and was unable to get out of bed without the help of my husband. We heard of the Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. I am still taking it and it sure is a help to me. I can do my work without resting before I am through. I know that if women will give the Vegetable Compound a trial they can overcome those tired and worn-out feelings. I cannot express the happiness I have received and how completely it has made over my home."—Mrs. D. H. Simer, 1326 Laurel St., Elkhart, Indiana.

Louise Brooks is never hard to look at. You can think what you like about Victor McLaglen. He was the "Captain Flagg" of "What Price Glory?" At any rate, this pair have been brought together in "A Girl in Every Port," now at the Olympic. What they don't give the public in the way of love, thrills and comedy isn't worth giving if the reception given at the new Roxy theater in New York is any criterion.

Then there are the ideas expounded daily in the press by Will Rogers. That's by way of leading you to the Strand, where the mayor of Beverly Hills is holding forth in a new one called "The Texas Steer." It should be interesting to see him.

Automobiles, airplanes, telephone systems, electric lights, telegraph, stores, trees, parks, radios and others of the most prized of modern man's inventions and posessions proved their helplessness and fragility in the Sunday night storm. Yet, if the small havoc in and around Wichita Falls was put into the movies, the public would calmly say "applesauce" and tell the producers to get something realistic and not of the wild pipe-dream variety. All of which proves nothing save that man is helpless against the elements, and also that he, and he alone, is responsible for the movie producers giving the dear public so many unbelievable things. He just will not believe the true things of life.

Commissions Cancelled By County

Commissions of 11 deputy constables have been cancelled during the past week, according to a report made to the county commissioners Monday by Frank Morgan, constable.

Cancellation of the commissions follows an order issued by the commissioners court last Friday that all special commissions issued by the court through the constable's department be rescinded.

Most of the commissions cancelled, Mr. Morgan said, involved night watchmen and special investigators of private concerns in Wichita county. No reports on cancellation of commissions were received from other precincts in the county.

Former Wichitan Given Custody of Two Children

Luther Pryor, a minister of Cisco, and former resident of Wichita Falls, was granted custody of his two children, Martin Luther Pryor, 2, and Howard Phillips Pryor, 8, in 89th district court Monday at a habeas corpus hearing.

J. B. Wilson, 2100 Taylor street, maternal grandfather of the two boys, on May 23, had filed suit asking that custody of the children be awarded him, after the Rev. Pryor had taken the baby from the grandparents' home. The older boy, until Monday, remained at the home of his grandparents.

CITY PLANNING BOARD URGED

C-C Board to Ask Council For Commission

A request that the city council name a city planning commission will be made to the mayor and councilmen in three or four weeks by the chamber of commerce through the civic development committee of the chamber, according to announcements made Monday following a meeting of the committee in the directors' room of the chamber.

It is considered possible by those working on the proposition at the chamber of commerce that the commission appointed will, at a later date, make arrangements for the hiring of a city planning expert.

ETHYL GASOLINE

Another demonstration that Ethyl Gasoline is the one motor fuel which experts demand when their motors must perform at their best. There could be no greater testimonial to any fuel than the fact that every prize-winner in the Indianapolis classic used Ethyl Gasoline. Louis Meyer, the winner, wired as follows:

"Used Ethyl Gasoline in winning five hundred mile Indianapolis race. A high-grade fuel is required in racing cars and your gas met requirements perfectly. Average speed 99.44 miles per hour."

Isn't this convincing proof that Conoco Ethyl Gasoline is the fuel for your car? A smooth, even flow of power, rapid acceleration, no overheating of the engine, greater speed on the long, hard hills—in short, better engine performance on every count. That's what you get from Conoco Ethyl Gasoline.

Draw up to a Conoco Ethyl Pump and convince yourself!
