Lawmen pursue anti-drug funding

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

West Texas lawmen were told not to expect more than $500,000 from a federal program that will allot $9.5 million to fight narcotics traffic in the state's 254 counties.

The lawmen, representing 17 counties, held their second meeting Thursday to organize preparation of a grant to the office of Gov. Bill Clements, which later this year will decide how the money is to be distributed.

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre, who serves on the governor's criminal justice task force and a subcommittee on funding, told the 25 officers attending the session that requests for funding will probably reach $100 million, which will dwarf the available money.

The proposal from West Texas has to be "real realistic," and the "lowest figure in there we think we can live with," he said.

"If we get $500,000 we are going to be ahead of the game," Schorre said. "We are not going to get a million dollars."

Much more money than will likely be granted is necessary to halt the flow of narcotics in West Texas, the prosecutor said.

"If we really want to kick off this program, we need about $2 million even," Schorre said. "But the money just isn't there.

"We need to make the (grant proposal) realistic enough that we are going to be in the front group.

"I think we can justify $500,000 just because of the bulk area we cover."

At the first meeting of the group a week ago, Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter presented a proposal that requested almost $900,000. But he said that proposal was only a starting point.

Schorre also drafted a sample resolution endorsing the program, and copies were distributed to officers. They were told they needed to get approval from their local government entities, commissioners' court or city council.

Richard Kleinhans, criminal justice coordinator for the Permian Basin Law Enforcement Academy, told the group two proposals to divide the 17-county area had been devised. The first would split the area into judicial districts; the second would divide the area geographically.

After a recommendation from Ector County Sheriff Bob Brookshire, officers voted to section the area geographically, and choose board members that way.

The region was divided into five sections of counties, with a board member to be chosen from each section. The first consists of Gaines, Dawson and Andrews counties; the second Borden, Martin, Howard and Glasscock counties; third, Midland and Ector counties; fourth, Loving, Winkler, Ward and Reeeves counties; and fifth, Crane, Upton, Pecos, and Terrell counties.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter, who organized the effort to apply for the one-year funding, told officers that the monies would help the entire region.

"I believe it will work if we keep an open line of communication," Painter said. "We're going to be making enough busts to keep this thing going — we just need a chance to show them what we can do."

Brookshire said the funds will help lawmen battle a recurring problem — a recent outbreak of methamphetamine laboratories and other drug operations in rural areas with little population.

Oil price increase creating interest

DALLAS (AP) — Independent petroleum producers say they won't be racing each other to drill new wells just because the price of oil finally exceeded $22 a barrel.

But in the Permian Basin, the heartland of Texas oil, the latest price surge prompted some quiet celebrating.

"It should increase the drilling activity. I don't anticipate that it will increase it drastically," said Rey Perkins, vice president of Enstar Energy Inc. of Dallas, which hasn't drilled a well in two years.

Analysts and oilmen were mostly optimistic Thursday as contracts for August delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the U.S. benchmark crude oil, continued to trade at more than $22 a barrel for the second day in a row. It closed at $22.35 Thursday.

"It's nothing we're dancing in the streets about yet," said Ray Peterson, president of Peterson Drilling Co. in Midland. "My personal idea is it will hang in there where it's at for the rest of the year."

But oil prices must rise to the mid-$20s to spur any significant drilling activity, producers said.

"We're extremely optimistic and happy about the price increase and hope it continues to roll," said Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association in Midland.

The price depends on the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries keeping a production limit and on the tense political situation in the Persian Gulf, said James Blain of Johnn Drilling Co. in Odessa.

"A lot of rigs once active are now scrapped, sold for parts or stacked up in yards and rusting away," Perkins said.

Land sales figures up

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

The University Lands Sale conducted Thursday at the Midland Hilton brought a total of $3,973,097 into the State Land System, exceeding the January 1987 sale by almost 25 percent.

"It was a good sale," said State Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, "we didn't sell as many tracts as we would have liked, but we were pleased."

Is Kimbell playing 'card' close to vest?

FORT WORTH (AP) — Kimbell Art Museum officials refuse to confirm a published report that they bought Caravaggio's long-lost masterpiece, "The Card Players," for about $15 million.

Zurich art dealer Bruno Meissner, who said he represented the family that sold the painting, told the ARTnewsletter Thursday that the ambitiously acquisitive Kimbell had bought the work at the highest known price for a painting in a private sale.

Meissner said he was not at liberty to reveal where the painting has been since 1898, the date of its last recorded sale, reportedly to the Rothschild family.

He described the most recent owners only as "a European family" — not the Rothschilds — who "did not know what they had" until he and other dealers told them.

Museum spokeswoman Wendy Gottlieb said Thursday night that "we have not acquired a Caravaggio." She refused to comment on whether the newsletter report was wrong.

William Jordan, deputy director of the Kimbell, would say only that the museum "is not prepared to comment," and ARTnewsletter noted that the museum previously has denied important acquisitions until a formal announcement.

The museum's director, Edmund Pillsbury, was en route from New York to Fort Worth late Thursday night and unavailable for comment.

A photograph of the painting taken in 1898 has frequently been reproduced. The painting itself was said to be "dirty but in exceptionally good condition."

"The Card Players" depicts three men seated at a table, two of whom are holding cards. The third man peers into the hand of one of the players and signals to the other — who draws a card from his waist band.

Caravaggio, a Renaissance Italian painter known for the powerful realism of his religious paintings, lived from 1573 to 1610.

He refused to idealize his religious figures in the tradition of European art, and supposedly used peasants and people from the streets as models for his unorthodox interpretations of biblical stories.

Poindexter tried to limit 'outside interference'

Iran-Contra Affair

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former National Security Adviser John Poindexter testified today that he withheld information from earlier congressional investigators because, "I simply didn't want any outside interference" in the secret program of aid to Nicaraguan rebels.

But he told the Iran-Contra committees that he had no intention of concocting a cover-up last November when he destroyed a key document or participated in the drafting of false chronologies for White House use.

The nationally televised hearing was marked by a heated complaint from Poindexter's attorney that the proceedings were unfair — and an acid rebuke from Sen. Danial Inouye, D-Hawaii. Inouye, chairman of the Senate investigating committee, said he found the rear admiral's three days of testimony "incredible, mind-boggling, chilling."

The 50-year-old naval officer, who served as national security adviser for one year until his resignation last Nov. 25, fall, admitted, as he did on Thursday, that he withheld information from earlier congressional investigators.

He said he "didn't want any more restrictive legislation" to stop it. Congress had already voted a ban on government aid to the Contras, but Poindexter said he believed it did not apply to the National Security Council staff. His other reason, he said, was that telling Congress would have created a lot of attention to covert support being provided in Central America "which would have destroyed our ability to aid the Contras."

Answering questions for the third straight day, Poindexter also said he testified erroneously about his knowledge of secret arms sales to Iran when he appeared before a House committee in 1986.

"I simply did not remember" what he had been told previously about the sales, the rear admiral said.

Campers rescued after bus mishap

COMFORT, Texas (AP) — A bus and a van carrying more than 50 people, most of them children, to a summer camp ran into the rain-swollen Guadalupe River today, authorities said.

Some children were rescued and others were clinging to trees in the high water, said Marianne Groves, a dispatcher with the Kerr County Sheriff's Department.

"There are some that are still missing," said David Wells, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety.

"The driver was taking kids to camp, with 42 in the bus, when it went tumbling in the water," said George Toler, a Kendall County sheriff's deputy. "The kids all went out of it. And then somebody in a van followed the bus in."

School aid cuts threaten budget compromise

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A proposal to cut state aid to public schools threatened Thursday to topple the fragile, day-old compromise on the 1988-1989 state budget with just five days left in the special session.

State leaders reluctantly defended the agreement against attacks that it would force school districts to raise property taxes. Republican Gov. Bill Clements also rebuted charges from his own party that he gave up too much too soon in the effort to hold down state spending.

"The area of most convern obviously is the" reduction in school aid, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said. "I think it'll be possible, but it won't be easy."

The House Government Organization Committee approved the bill Thursday evening following a parliamentary maneuver that moved the bill out of the reluctant Appropriations Committee. "It's just something that had to be done," said Gordon "Doc" Arnold, top aide to Speaker Gib Lewis. "It's the end of the session."

Arnold said the bill still lacks enough support to pass the full House. Only one member of the Senate Finance Committee showed up at a committee hearing called to discuss the controversial measure.

The proposal — a key to the compromise spending proposal Clements, Hobby and Lewis hammered out Wednesday — would reduce the state's contribution to school districts by $177.3 million over the two-year budget cycle. A Legislative Budget Board analysis shows most districts would have to raise property taxes 1 or 2 percent to make up the money if they wanted to.

The leaders have linked the reduction to a plan that would delay for two years possible $2,000-a-year bonuses to about 8,000 outstanding teachers and allow the districts to freeze all teacher salaries. That would provide $443.4 million to offset the lost aid.

Still, senators and representatives of both parties seemed reluctant to support the cut, particularly when they still must approve a record $6 billion in new state taxes to balance the budget. "It's tough to vote for a tax bill, and when it hurts you back home in your district it's hard to justify," said Rep. Gary Watkins, D-Odessa.

Texas tax writers hard at work today

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Despite an approaching deadline, House and Senate tax writers didn't meet Thursday but plan to lay out a compromise plan today.

Tax writers said they will move to broaden the sales tax base to certain services but will not propose to place lawyers, doctors and other professionals under the state sales tax. Both sides said the Senate-approved tax on car repairs probably will remain in the bill.

Rep. Dan Morales, head of the House negotiating team, said the House-Senate conference committee on taxes will meet today. Morales, D-San Antonio, said he will ask senators to scale back their increase in the franchise tax from the proposed $7.50 per $1,000 of capital to about $6.50. The current rate is $5.25.

France ends three-week dispute by breaking relations with Iran

PARIS (AP) — The government broke relations today with Iran, ending nearly three weeks of diplomatic wrangling over France's demands it be allowed to question an Iranian Embassy employee in connection with terrorist bombings.

The Foreign Ministry did not immediately announce a deadline for Iran's five diplomats and about 35 other embassy employees to leave the country. France has about 15 nationals at its embassy in Tehran, including eight diplomats.

The cut in ties came hours after the Interior Ministry confirmed that Iranian envoys have been forbidden to leave French territory for the past week, and that four Iranian diplomats were prevented from crossing into Switzerland.

On Thursday, Iran said it was reducing its embassy staff in Paris to a minimum and would cut diplomatic ties in 72 hours if France did not remove a ring of police posted around the Iranian Embassy in Paris.

France responded by reinforcing the police contingent late Thursday. The police have been checking the identities of Iranians entering and leaving the embassy since June 30 in an effort to force Iran to turn over embassy translator Wahid Gordjih.

French police claim Gordji has ties to at least one person arrested in connection with five bombings that killed 11 people and wounded more than 150 in Paris last September. They say that Gordji, who does not have diplomatic immunity, really is the No. 2 man in the embassy and may have links to the Iranian secret service.

Four cars carrying 13 Iranians, four of them diplomats, were barred Thursday night and early today from leaving France, an Interior Ministry spokeswoman said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

She said a ban on Iranian diplomats leaving the country took effect Saturday.

Informed sources in eastern France said the cars, which had diplomatic license plates, were stopped at four border points as they tried to drive into Switzerland. The cars then turned back toward Paris.

Iran has stopped two non-diplomatic French Embassy employees in Tehran from leaving.

Prime Minister Jacques Chirac said in an interview published July 7 that France might break relations with Iran unless Gordji presented himself.

France began trying to normalize relations with Iran after Chirac took office in March 1986 but has refused to alter its policy toward Iraq, a longtime friend and major arms customer. Iran and Iraq have been at war since September 1980.

HEARING

"If we were trying to cover up something from the beginning we would not have gone to all the trouble of preparing all these various drafts of the chronologies," Poindexter said at nationally televised hearings. "It would have been stupid to try to find out what all the facts were...if we had intended to cover-up something."

The session got off to a fiery start as Poindexter's lawyer complained bitterly that lawmakers and lawyers on the committees have treated his client unfairly by publicly questioning his truthfulness.

Congress "has the power to crush an individual if it wishes to, unless it shows some restraint," attorney Richard Beckler said.

Poindexter registered a complaint about news coverage, as well, saying that news reports had twisted his own words out of context.

But Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, head of the Senate committee, told Beckler he thought committee members had a right to question elements of the admiral's testimony, which Inouye characterized as "incredible, mind-boggling, chilling."

He said that neither he nor President Reagan considered the president's initial approval of secret arms sales to be a straight arms-for-hostage arrangement.

On Wednesday, Poindexter said Reagan signed a document authorizing arms sales. That document, an unsigned copy of which has been made available, made no mention of a broader diplomatic initiative to Iran. The paper that authorized the sales listed its scope as "Hostage rescue — Middle East."

In today's testimony, Poindexter again described that he had carried the paper into Reagan and watched him sign it.

He said, as he had on Wednesday, that he was dissatisfied with the paper and that it was prepared by CIA officials who were anxious to have retroactive approval for covert actions already taken.

Poindexter also repeated his statement that he destroyed the paper, and denied that it had anything to do with a cover-up.

As he did on Wednesday, Poindexter said he did so to spare the president from embarrassment if it ever became public.

Under questioning from House counsel John Nields, Poindexter also said that he was wrong when he told the House Intelligence Committee in November 1986 that he had not know about a arms shipment more than a year earlier. But he said that was an honest error, not a deliberate falsehood.

Beckler, stating his complaint just before questioning of Poindexter resumed, described his client as a "soldier, scholar, statesman," who deserves "just treatment and fundamentally deserves fairness from this body."

Some committee members have told reporters they have doubts about the version of events that Poindexter has testified to in his first three days at nationally televised hearings.

The 50-year-old rear admiral quietly puffed on his pipe as Beckler made his arguments in the manner of a lawyer delivering an emotional closing argument to a jury.

As he did on Wednesday, when Poindexter first began testifying, Beckler asked the committees to withdraw the subpoenas that compelled his appearance.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House committee, denied the motion, as he had done on Wednesday. And Poindexter, answering questions under a limited grant of immunity from prosecution, commenced his give-and-take with House committee counsel John Nields.

In his first three days in the witness chair, Poindexter has said he did not tell President Reagan that proceeds from secret Iranian arms sales had been diverted to Nicaraguan rebels.

FUNDS

The task force should look to a recent example of area cooperation among law enforcement agencies, said Lt. Alex Nava of the Midland County Sheriff's office.

Nava said Midland County, Robert Lee and Coke County authorities conducted a joint operation last month that resulted in the seizure of two methamphetamine laboratories and the arrest of several people.

Painter said the group would meet again in two weeks, and would likely elect a board of directors from the five regions at that time.

OIL

"There is a lag time involved in getting those rigs back in operation...."

Investors, who once were able to get investment tax credits in exploration and write off much of the cost of a dry hole, no longer have an attractive shelter, he said.

"There goes the investment capital for drilling and exploration," Perkins said. "The number of drilling rigs active in the continental U.S. is down considerably from what it used to be."

The Senate voted 58-40 late Wednesday to attach a repeal of the windfall profits tax to a sweeping trade bill. The energy tax was designed in 1980 to capture for the government some of the profits from then-soaring oil prices.

"If the money is not there for the exploratory or development wells, there is just not any work for the drilling rigs. They get stacked and people get laid off who are operating them," Perkins said, adding that the majority of onshore wells are drilled by independents.

The increase in the futures price of West Texas Intermediate to $22.15 a barrel Wednesday came one day after refiners increased their price to producers by 50 cents, raising the price to $20 per barrel.

Analysts predicted the rise in oil futures, which could top $28 a barrel by the end of this decade, will spur more drilling and higher stock prices in the industry.

Sanford Margoshes, oil analyst for Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. in New York, predicted $28-per-barrel oil by 1990 and $55 a barrel by the year 2000.

"Certainly, oil prices continue to be strong and the service company and 'E&P (exploration and production) stocks continue to do well," said Russell Hoffman, a Shearson Lehman vice president.

Analysts raised their rig count estimate with the climbing futures, he said. The count was expected to average 955 U.S. rigs in 1987, peaking at 1,500 by year's end.

Baker Hughes Inc., which provides the weekly rig count that is the yardstick of drilling activity, said this week's total was 891.

"This could mean a boom the second half of 1987. As a result of rising oil prices and greater drilling activity, companies could be reporting earning surprises on the upside on the third quarter and certainly the fourth quarter," Hoffman said.

LAND

While the amount is far short of the record $52 million in leases sold in 1981, University Lands officials are confident interest has been rekindled in exploration.

"I think it is reflective of a more positive attitude in the industry at this time. More people are buying leases," said Wallie Gravitt, manager of University Lands' oil, gas and mineral interests.

About 200 interested bidders and spectators were in attendance at the closed bid sale, which saw 23 companies placing bids on about 100 more tracts than were on sale in January.

The increased inventory could have had something to do with the fact that 88 tracts sold during this sale, compared to only 38 during the last sale.

The top bid for a tract was $809,991 for a half-section in Tract 55, paid by Arco Oil & Gas. The $2,500 an acre price was prompted by two recent discoveries on adjacent non-university lands, one a 300-barrel oil discovery by Arco and the other a significant gas find by Terra Resources Inc.

Most bids fell into the range of $85 to $300 per acre and a few even went for about the $50 minimum. This sale was the first time a sliding scale of $50 to $150 was used in the bidding process. Previous sales had only a $50 minimum.

Dave Leaverton, landman for Enserch, said he was generally pleased by the results of the sale. His firm bid on eight Reagan County tracts and won on seven.

Howard Bradford, landman for Forest Oil Corp., commented that he found the $150 mimimum to be too high. "I think university leases should go for below the going rate." He also expressed concerned with the 25 percent royalty.

Robert McCommon, also a landman for Forest, said he preferred the old oral bid system, because it was fairer. "Sealed bids may make more money at the land sales, but the name of the game is to find oil and gas."

Gravitt said the Land Office was not married to the sealed bid system, but generally found that it works better when there is less competition for leases. He also said there had been discussion about reducing royalty on some rank leases as an incentive to get them drilled.

BUS

He said authorities believe 56 people were aboard the two vehicles.

We have three helicopters over at the bus and they are also evacuating Hermann's Sons Camp," said sheriff's office dispatcher in Kendall County, where the accident occurred.

Officials said the bus was from a summer camp in the area, about 60 miles northwest of San Antonio.

At least nine children were rescued, said Kathy Sakach, dispatcher for the Kerr County Emergency Medical Services.

"We have hypothermia and shock patients who are children, as they are being rescued from the river," Ms. Sakach said.

Two people were in critical condition, with "anywhere from five to seven who are in stable condition," she said.

One of those critically injured was a 14-year-old girl, and Ms. Sakach said another person in critical condition was suffering from severe shock and hypothermia.

"The water is running fast and it is very cold," she said.

Most of the injured were teenagers, she said.

"We've got camps all up and down here. I think they were going across the river there. They've got little bridges and the river came up too fast," said Arthur Verona of the Kerr County Fire Department.

The Kendall County dispatcher said the accident occurred shortly after 8:30 a.m. and that 40 children were believed to be on the bus.

The National Weather Service reported today that parts of the Guadalupe River in South Texas were 12 feet about flood stage and the river was rising.

BUDGET

The change would cost Midland ISD $592,000 in state aid next year, about $33 per student, and would require trustees to increase property taxes 2 percent if they wish to make it up. Ector County ISD would take a $715,000 cut.

But Lewis and Senate Education Committee Chairman Carl Parker of Port Arthur said they also are concerned that districts would use the change to blame the Legislature for even larger property tax hikes. "Local taxing entities use actions of the Legislature as a crutch, an excuse to increase their taxes," Lewis said.

Education Commissioner William Kirby said the cut in state aid — which comes as an increase in the districts' share of the Foundation School Program burden — is the fairest way to cut back on education spending. "The only way to make an adjustment in funding and not hurt the poor worse is by the local fund assignment," Kirby said.

Meanwhile, Republican and conservative Democratic lawmakers accused Clements of selling out when he agreed to the total $38.2 billion budget. Rep. Sam Johnson, R-Plano, said Clements bowed to special interest pressures and "is giving up the ship."

"I think the state of Texas is going to be mad," he said.

My answer to that is that they had their opportunity over about a four-day period in the House to see what they could do with the budget and they reduced it what, $17 million, and I've reduced it about $300 million," the governor said. "If they can do what they think they can do, they should have done it. They had their opportunity."

Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, hesitated to criticize the governor, saying he wasn't there for the negotiations. "But the spending level's too high and the taxes are not what my constituents want," Craddick said.

"I'm not going to vote for them either."

TAXES

Also, Morales said, the House wants the fee increases for driver's licenses and car inspections eliminated from the bill.

House Speaker Gib Lewis said he was cautiously optimistic that a plan will emerge by Saturday. Lewis said the driver's license and car inspection fees must come out of the Senate bill, even if it means increasing the sales tax rate.

"To me the sales tax is the fairest tax we have, fairer than fees," said Lewis, a Fort Worth Democrat. "(Fee increases) postpone the inevitable and isn't the approach we ought to be taking here because it's a temporary thing also."

Comptroller Bob Bullock's office is trying to determine how much money a comprehensive luxury tax would raise. Rep. Charles Finnell, D-Holliday, has offered a tax plan that would tax an array of luxury goods and services, from hot tubs to country club memberships.

Morales and Sen. Bob Glasgow, the chief Senate tax writer, said they could include the luxury taxes if they generate a substantial amount of money for the state and if Bullock's office can efficiently administer and collect the tax.

Lawmakers are trying to raise $5.7 billion in new taxes to pay for a compromise spending bill. Senators and House members said they want to avoid raising the sales tax rate above 6 percent.

The legislative staff told lawmakers to settle on a tax plan by Saturday afternoon so the bill can be printed and distributed to members. Unless legislators receive the bill by Sunday, the House runs into procedural problems that could doom the tax bill.

Gov. Bill Clements said he will sign a tax bill to cover state spending, but would not say what kind of taxes he wants included. "I'm watching and listening," the Republican governor said. "I have not come down on any particular pattern on how we make sure our revenue stream meets the obligations of the appropriations bill."

Reflagged tankers vital link in sophisticated Kuwaiti oil export chain

KUWAIT (AP) — The Kuwaiti tankers that will carry the Stars and Stripes through the Persian Gulf past Iranian guns are a major link in one of the world's most sophisticated oil export efforts.

Most oil producers sell the bulk of their petroleum as unprocessed crude. But the state-run Kuwait Petroleum Corp., or KPC, sells about 80 percent of its oil as costlier, refined products — boosting its profit margin.

As a result of generally shrewd investments, the nation of 1.7 million people is heavily involved in everything from global oil exploration to roadside retailing abroad. That diversity gives it many interests in common with industrialized Western countries, where it retails its oil.

The common interests will be cemented further when the U.S. Navy begins escorting Kuwaiti vessels newly registered in the United States. The Reagan administration has undertaken the operation, scheduled to begin next week, to back up its pledge to safeguard freedom of navegation in the strategic waterway.

Nearly 5,000 gasoline stations with the punning name Q8 have popped up across Europe, selling Kuwaiti products refined in Kuwaiti-owned refineries, including one in the Netherlands.

Kuwaiti-owned exploration companies hunt and drill for oil in Australia, Egypt, Italy, Tunisia and the United States.

The Kuwaitis have their eye on expanding in the American market as well.

Abdul Fatah al-Badr, chairman of the Kuwait Oil Tanker Co., noted that KPC almost purchased the Atlantic Richfield Corp. about two years ago. The Kuwaitis bought U.S.-based Santa Fe International, an international exploration company, in 1981.

"Kuwait never stopped looking for an investment in the American market," he said in an interview this week with The Associated Press.

The tanker company, a wholly owned subsidiary of KPC, owns 22 tankers of its own, 11 of which are being reflagged as part of a newly created U.S. subsidiary, Chesapeake Shipping Co.

Kuwait is due to take delivery of six more more vessels next year.

Badr said Kuwait also spends some $150 million a year to charter about 20 foreign vessels from foreign operators. Currently, three of those are Soviet ships, three are British and three are U.S.-owned ships flying foreign flags.

In addition, it uses spot charter agreements to lease ships for single voyages eight to 10 times a month.

The heavy use of foreign ships means that if demand falls, Kuwait's own fleet won't be idled, Badr noted.

It has also drawn U.S., Soviet and British warships into protective duty inside the gulf, where Kuwaiti ship traffic is under attack by Iran. Iran, which has been at war with Iraq for nearly seven years, is angered by Kuwaiti economic assistance to Iraq.

Kuwait refines much of its crude oil at home, shipping it abroad as liquefied petroleum gas, for example.

Only one of the reflagged veseels is a crude oil carrier — the mammoth 401,382-ton Bridgeton, formerly the Al-Rekkah, which is likely to be the first ship reflagged.

Al-Badr said refined products make up about 55 percent of Kuwait's exports of 1 million barrels a day allowed by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Of the rest, about 200,000 to 250,000 barrels go to Kuwaiti refineries abroad, leaving about the same amount for outside purchasers.

Badr said Kuwait played a key role in holding down insurance costs for ships plying the gulf, where more than 230 vessels have been hit by Iraq or Iran.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Iraq's economy hurt by war, poor oil prices

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Seven years of war with Iran, a fall in oil prices and the sinking value of the U.S. dollar have sent Iraq's once-vibrant economy into a downward spiral.

It is counting on increased oil production to send it back upward.

The war has cost an estimated $200 billion and the country now has a foreign debt estimated at $40 billion to $50 billion, an amount it had in foreign exchange reserves before the war began in September 1980.

Repaying debts to non-communist countries alone costs $3 billion a year, about one-third of Iraq's projected oil revenue this year, Western analysts estimate.

The government of President Saddam Hussein has launched an all-out drive to boost oil production.

Output in the last year has risen to its highest level since 1980 and Saddam is imposing austerity measures and cutting back imports to ease the debt burden.

Current output of oil is around 2 million barrels a day and the government plans to boost that to 3 million next year.

INS leader in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service Commissioner Alan C. Nelson continued meetings here Thursday with Mexican officials, following an announcement that a joint commission would study ways to prevent further harm to undocumented workers.

The Foreign Ministry announced that an agreement was reached after a meeting Wednesday between Nelson and Mexican officials about the new U.S. immigration law that both countries would "intensify and perfect the mechanisms of communication and cooperation to take care of problems that arise from the application of the law."

It said a joint working group also would work to prevent incidents that harm Mexicans in the United States, in apparent reference to the suffocation deaths of 18 undocumented workers in a locked boxcar in Sierra Blanca, Texas, earlier this month.

Nelson scheduled a news conference before his departure from Mexico City International Airport on Friday.

Meanwhile, Elliott Abrams, the assistant secretary of state for Inter-American affairs, held talks with Cabinet-level officials in Mexico City on Thursday, a State Department official said in Washington.

Bodies taken to Panama

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The bodies of six U.S. servicemen killed in a helicopter crash were flown to an Army mortuary in Panama after a private service attended by President Jose Napoleon Duarte.

The six crash victims were on a mission to aid a wounded U.S. military adviser in eastern El Salvador late Wednesday when, seven minutes after takeoff from Ilopango Air Base here, their Huey UH-1H helicopter crashed against a cliff in a rainstorm.

Leftist guerrillas trying to overthrow the U.S.-supported government had nothing to do with the crash, said U.S. Embassy spokesman Jacob Gillespie.

Among the victims was Air Force Lt. Col James M. Basile, 43, the deputy commander of the U.S. Military Group attached to the U.S. Embassy in San Salvador, said Pentagon spokeswoman Capt. Nancy LaLuntas in Washington.

240 dead, missing in aftermath of Korean typhoon

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The toll of dead and missing from Typhoon Thelma rose to nearly 240 today as more than 100,000 emergency workers dug through rubble and mud and combed the seas for shipwrecked sailors.

Local media said faulty forecasting was partly responsible for the high toll from the storm, the worst to hit South Korea in almost 30 years.

The national Disaster Center in Seoul said today that 78 deaths had been confirmed and 161 people were still missing in the wake of the tempest that lashed the southern coast early Thursday. The center said casualty figures were expected to rise.

The typhoon, which unleashed floods and mudslides and battered the region with 80 mph winds, was the worst since 1959, when a storm left 849 people dead and more than 373,000 homeless.

"The damage is more than we thought," said a Disaster Center official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "Many people buried were sleeping when heavy winds and rains triggered earthslides, and more seamen are feared missing and drowned."

The center listed the number of injured people at 103. It estimated the storm had caused more than $84 million in damages.

Weathermen said the flank of the 120-mile-wide storm swept the southern coast and missed the peninsula proper before dissipating over the Sea of Japan.

Thatcher encourages Reagan to be strong

By HENRY GOTTLIEB

WASHINGTON (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said today that President Reagan has not let the revelations of the Iran-Contra hearings dim his role as a world lead and expressed confidence he would negotiate a verifiable arms reduction agreement with the Soviet Union.

"I believe he's a great leader," Mrs. Thatcher said hours after arriving here for a one-day visit. "Even during this difficult period, he has not let go his leadership role in any way," she said on NBC-TV's "Today" show.

She pointed to the administration's handling of the internal unrest in South Korea and its vigorous efforts to recruit support for a U.N. Security Council resolution for a ceasefire in the Iran-Iraq war as examples of Reagan's recent leadership.

Mrs. Thatcher, who last month entered her third term in office, was having lunch with Reagan and then meeting with Senate leaders before leaving Washington.

She urged Reagan to move forward with foreign policy initiatives, saying that, "if America does not take the leadership role,...she injures the interests of the free world." She added that "America is the flagship of freedom...she must sail into the sunrise and not look back at things that may or may not have happened."

Mrs. Thatcher rejected U.S. assessments that the Soviet Union was dragging its feet on the negotiations to eliminate medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe.

"Verification is tricky and that's what's taking the time," she said. The conservative premier, who took a tough line with the Kremlin leadership when she visited Moscow in May, said she believed Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev wanted an agreement as much as Reagan.

Gorbachev needs an arms control pact if he's to continue doing the "remarkable things" he's doing in liberalizing and reconstructing Soviet economic policies, she said.

Mrs. Thatcher rejected suggestions that the Soviets were seeking to take advantage of Reagan's troubles at home. "I don't think they'll find a politically weakened president," she said.

Britain supports Reagan's plan to reflag 11 Kuwaiti oil tankers and grant them U.S. Navy protection through the Persian Gulf, she said.

But Mrs. Thatcher said her country could not do more than it's already doing to escort British-owned and flagged ships in the gulf. She noted that the British navy had this year escorted about 150 vessels in those troubled waters.

She expressed support for a U.N. ceasefire resolution to end the seven-year Iran-Iraq war.

Early next week, Secretary of State George Shultz is expected to participate in U.N. Security Council adoption of such a resolution. Britain is a member of the Security Council and has endorsed the proposed U.S. wording on the resolution.

On the Middle East peace process, Mrs. Thatcher said she would urge Reagan to push for an international peace conference as a framework for direct talks between Israel and the Arabs. Reagan has been cautious on the international conference, partly out of reluctance to allow the Soviet Union a role in Mideast peacemaking.

Mrs. Thatcher said it was too soon for the United States or her government to resume ties with Syria, which were broken off last fall over signs of Syrian involvement in an attempt to blow up an Israeli airliner flying from London.

But she accepted Reagan's decision to send U.N. Ambassador Vernon Walters to Damascus for talks with President Hafez Assad earlier this month, and said she beleived Syria was doing what it could to obtain freedom for Western hostages held in Lebanon.

Unlike previous visits, when Mrs. Thatcher voiced disagreements on particular U.S. policies, she headed into today's session with general support for American moves.

Ex-White House aide indicted in scandal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House political director Lyn Nofziger is under indictment for alleged illegal lobbying activities on behalf of Wedtech Corp., a government source says, in a scandal that also has touched Attorney General Edwin Meese III and Rep. Mario Biaggi.

Nofziger, one of the many public figures pulled into the criminal investigations surrounding Wedtech, was indicted by a federal grand jury Thursday for violation of federal conflict-of-interest laws, according to the government source, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

The indictment was to be disclosed today by independent counsel James McKay, who also is investigating the attorney general. Meese has acknowledged interceding in 1982 on behalf of the New York City defense contractor, four of whose top business executives have pleaded guilty to bribing public officials in exchange for help in winning no-bid Pentagon contracts and other favors.

Nofziger's lawyers said Thursday they would hold a news conference today, but refused to make any immediate comment.

Nofziger began lobbying for Wedtech shortly after leaving the White House in January 1982 and received thousands of shares of stock in the company.

Nofziger

The indictment concerns Wedtech's efforts to obtain a $32 million contract to build small engines for the Army, the source said.

Four months after his departure from government, Nofziger wrote a letter to James Jenkins, deputy to then-White House counselor Meese. Nofziger asked his help in obtaining the Army contract for Wedtech, the Justice Department said in court documents filed early this year seeking an independent counsel.

Federal ethics law prohibits high-level public officials from lobbying their former agencies for one year after leaving the government.

The 1978 Ethics in Government Act provides for a maximum penalty of up to two years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Nofziger is among more than a dozen current or former public officials or business executives charged in the Wedtech scandal.

Law enforcement officials have said they expect additional indictments in New York of as many as 10 other government officials for allegedly taking payoffs from Wedtech.

Among the others who have been indicted are Biaggi, D-N.Y., accused by a federal grand jury in Manhattan on June 3 of extorting $3.6 million worth of stock from Wedtech by threatening to withdraw his support for the company's efforts to win government contracts. He has denied any wrongdoing.

Nofziger is the second former Reagan administration official to be indicted in connection with lobbying. On Thursday, the perjury trial of Michael K. Deaver, Reagan's former aide, was postponed by a federal judge whose attempt to conduct jury selection in private was stopped by an appellate court.

Deaver is accused of lying to a grand jury and a House subcommittee about his lobbying.

The attorney general was brought into McKay's investigation May 11 and that inquiry is continuing. Meese has not been indicted.

In 1981 and 1982, when Meese was White House counselor, he received as many as a dozen memos from his longtime friend, E. Robert Wallach, touting Wedtech. Wallach was paid more than $1 million in stock and fees by the defense contractor.

Meese later interceded on Wedtech's behalf and directed his staff to ensure that the company got a fair hearing from the Army in its efforts to receive the Army engine contract.

Jenkins subsequently called a White House meeting in May 1982 attended by officials from the Army and Small Business Administration, and Wedtech ultimately got the contract.

Three years later, Wallach introduced Meese to San Francisco investment manager W. Franklyn Chinn, who was doing consulting work for Wedtech and who later sat on the company's board of directors.

Meese invested more than $50,000 with Chinn, who in 19 months made a profit of nearly $40,000 for Meese through highly speculative one-day stock trades.

What will Iran be after Khomeini government?

An Analysis

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iran after the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini could be a dangerous, divided country even though his supporters beginning in 1979 systemically eliminated alternative political groups and ideologies.

There are at least three potential successors, including Ayatollah Hussein Ali Montazeri, whom the 87-year-old leader has chosen to take his place.

The two others are President Mohammad Ali Khamemehi and Parliament Speaker Ali Rkhbar Hasehmi Rafsanjani.

Their rivalry, says scholar Barry Rubin, could provide an opportunity for the Soviet Union to get its foot in the door or degenerate into internal disorder or even armed conflict.

A weakened Iran might encourage a Soviet invasion or, more likely, a covert Soviet role in backing certain groups, Rubin writes in a new paper distributed by the Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies.

The competition also could breed adventurism and aggression against Arab states in the Persian Gulf as a way of enhancing one faction's credentials for spreading the fundamentalist revolution, he says.

Rubin's gloomy prognosis appears to make a quick settlement of the Iran-Iraq war even more urgent.

The Khomeini government is on a roll. Despite an enormous human toll — an estimated 400,000 Iranians and Iraqis have perished in nearly seven years of fighting — Tehran is determined to keep fighting until President Saddam Hussein is toppled in Iraq.

Also, Iran has captured Iraqi territory and would be reluctant to retreat to pre-war borders, especially since the war was initiated by Baghdad.

The Iranian offensive has some of the characteristics of a holy war. If Iran were to win a clear victory, Rubin says, it might move against weaker gulf states in order to stem Western influence and spread Islamic fundamentalism.

But his forecast suggests Iran also might be tempted to make the same move after a postwar period of rebuilding and rearmament.

After attempting to influence events in Tehran through secret arms shipments, the Reagan administration is now resorting to traditional diplomacy.

Early next week, the U.N. Security Council will take up a U.S.-backed resolution ordering a cease-fire between Iran and Iraq. Approval by an overwhelming vote apparently is in the cards.

But with the war likely to go on, American diplomats are hard at work on a follow-up resolution to impose an arms embargo against Iran if it refuses to comply.

In the meantime, the Navy is in the gulf to escort American merchant ships. Beginning next Tuesday the first of 11 Kuwaiti oil tankers will carry American captains and American flags, and have U.S. naval escorts, as a deterrent to Iranian attack.

Iran has threatened to retaliate. Many members of Congress are convinced Tehran means business.

If the diplomacy and the bold naval move in the gulf work, the war might at last be terminated.

But that does not mean Iran itself will change. "The Islamic regime is well entrenched and likely to continue for years after Khomeini's death," Rubin writes.

Historically, the country has alternated between strong leaders and weak central governments that lost control of outlying provinces.

Iran has had to contend with Russians on the north, seeking territory and political control, and British and Americans in the south interested in strategic oil.

Khomeini has managed to keep the superpowers away

Nation's airports bracing for security crack down

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Transportation Department, concerned about lapses in security at the nation's airports, is promising to get tough with airlines that do not pay enough attention to screening passengers at security checkpoints.

Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole directed the Federal Aviation Administration on Thursday to focus on airlines with poor security records and aggressively seek civil penalties against air carriers when security measures are found to be lax.

She made the remarks in releasing a task force report that said while some airlines are committed to a "first class" passenger screening program, others refuse to take an active role and express more of "an interest in minimizing the costs of providing security."

Too often, the task force suggested, airlines seek the lowest bidder when choosing a security company to handle the passenger and carry-on baggage screening and do not take an active role in assuring the job is being done well.

Last month some members of Congress expressed outrage after a report revealed that one in every five mock weapons carried by FAA inspectors through airport passenger checkpoints went undetected.

FAA inspectors tried to carry 2,410 guns and weapons onto aircraft at 28 major airports and 496 of them never were detected by the security screeners, said the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress.

Mrs. Dole told the FAA to step up its monitoring of airport passenger screening programs by testing them more often and using a broader variety of mock weapons. If test items are not detected, the agency should seek civil fines from the air carriers responsible, she said.

Robert Whittington, acting FAA administrator, said the FAA hopes to "draw the security net as tight as needed (and)...these new aggressive enforcement actions will help get the job done."

In addition to calling for tougher enforcement, Mrs. Dole directed the FAA to take measures to tighten the standards for hiring screeners, many of whom work for minimum wages and are not highly skilled.

Mediator meets with unions, Postal Service

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal mediator is stepping in to resolve a contract deadlock between the Postal Service and two of its largest unions.

Kay McMurray, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, held separate meetings Thursday with postal officials and representatives of the American Postal Workers Union and the National Association of Letter Carriers.

Vincent R. Sombrotto, president of the Letter Carriers, said he expected the mediators to arrange a meeting between the two sides, perhaps today.

But, he added, the unions have demanded information on a settlement announced earlier with a third, smaller union, the Mail Handlers Division of the Laborers International Union, and is awaiting a response from management.

That settlement apparently was behind a walkout by union negotiators that ended contract talks Wednesday.

Chief postal negotiator Thomas J. Fritsch said he is "looking forward to returning to the bargaining table."

But postal officials declined comment on the dispute and officials of the mediation service also declined to discuss their efforts or to say whether any progress had been made.

Local presidents and regional directors for the Mail Handlers union have endorsed an agreement reached Tuesday with the Postal Service and will submit it to the members for ratification, Louis D. Elesie, a union international trustee, said Thursday.

The contract improves job security for union members and calls for an annual wage increase of $350 the first year, $400 in the second and $500 in the third, the union announced.

The postal workers union is concerned that the Mail Handlers agreement could result in a transfer of some of its members to the jurisdiction of the smaller union.

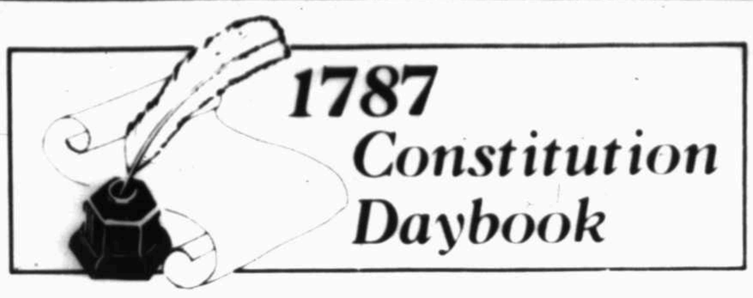
The contract between the Postal Service and its unions expires at midnight on Monday.

Although the Postal Service was made independent from the federal government in 1971, employees of the agency are covered by laws banning strikes by federal employees. More than 140 postal workers were dismissed following wildcat strikes in 1978 in California and New Jersey, although some were later allowed to apply for reinstatement.

Three years ago, when the Postal Service and unions were unable to reach agreement, the contract was submitted to binding arbitration.

If the Postal Service and unions can't agree by the time the contract expires the mediation service will set up a three-member fact-finding panel.

That group has 45 days to make recommendations, and the two sides have 45 days after that to consider that proposal and agree to it.



Associated Press

Tuesday, July 17, 1787

PHILADELPHIA TODAY

At its monthy meeting at the home of Richard Allen, the Free African Society (the first organization in this country by blacks for blacks) appointed Caesar Thomas, William White, and Caesar Cranchell to have oversight of the members for the ensuing month.

CONFEDERATION TODAY

Congress assembled, nine states present, and resumed consideration of Samuel Holden Parsons's proposal to buy land in the Northwest Territory.

Thomas Jefferson wrote from Paris to congratulate John Adams on negotiating a new loan in Holland.

CONVENTION TODAY

A number of members from the large states met before the Convention opened to decide what to do about yesterday's vote, giving the states an equal vote in the Senate. They couldn't decide on any action. Several small state delegates were present and saw that their interests were safe.

As soon as the Convention convened, Gouverneur Morris moved to reconsider yesterday's decision, but was not seconded.

The Convention then took up the powers to be given the legislature, including the clause giving Congress a veto over state laws. The clause was defeated, Massachusetts, Virginia, and North Carolina ay, 7 no.

Luther Martin then proposed language that became the "supreme law of the land" clause, which was accepted without opposition.

DELEGATES TODAY

William Paterson wrote to his wife of two years, Euphemia.

"I expect to be with you on or about the first of next month, and hope I shall not be under the necessity of returning. The business is difficult, it unavoidably takes up much time, but I think we shall eventually agree upon and adopt a system that will give strength and harmony to the Union, and render us a great and happy people. This is the wish of every good, and the interest of every wise man.

"I shall be in want of some hard money in order to clear me of this town, and, therefore, I request you to send me by the first good opportunity about 12 pounds. It is no end for me to draw upon the Jersey treasury, as it contains nothing but paper money, which few people will take: when tested by gold you must pay from 20 to 25 per cent, and the Pennsylva. paper is at present quite as bad, if not worse."

Elbridge Gerry turned 44.

LOOKING BACK

The Congressional Veto

This day 200 years ago illustrates just how fortuitous the workings of the Convention were.

James Madison, perhaps the most thorough student of the history and theory of governments of his time, was fighting hard to give the proposed Congress the power to review state laws and veto any that did not conform to federal policy. "The necessity of a general Government proceeds from the propensity of the States to pursue their particular interests in opposition to the general interest. This propensity will continue to disturb the system. Nothing short of a negative on their laws will control it."

The problem Madison stated was very real. His proposed solution would have been unworkable if it did not cause the defeat of the proposed plan.

At this point, Luther Martin stepped in. He was a defender of states rights, wanting, at most, only a few more absolutely essential powers to be vested in the Confederation Congress. He would leave the Convention in disgust, and fight savagely against ratification of its work.

But today, after Madison's veto of state laws was defeated, it was Martin who moved to include a provision "that the Legislature Acts of the United States made by virtue and in pursuance of the Articles of Union, and all treaties made and ratified under the authority of the United States shall be the supreme law of the respective States, as far as those acts or treaties shall relate to the said States, or their Citizens and inhabitants — and that the Judiciaries of the several States shall be bound thereby in their decisions, anything in the respective laws of the individual States to the contrary notwithstanding."

Adopted without opposition, sharpened and strengthened by the Committee on Style, this provision solved the problem Madison sought to address, and has proven one of the most distinctive and effective provisions in our system of government.

States file lawsuit in pollution case

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — New York has joined five other states in a lawsuit to force federal regulators to deal with the "regional haze" caused by factory emissions in the Midwest, Attorney General Robert Abrams said.

The suit, filed Thursday in federal district court in Portland, Maine, would compel the federal Environmental Protection Agency to enforce a provision of the 1977 Clean Air Act that seeks to protect views in national parks.

Oregon fire eased, others still rage

Associated Press

Wildfires that charred nearly 22,000 acres of range and forest raged in six Western states today, but cool, wet weather slowed an Oregon fire that killed two loggers, destroyed eight houses and forced dozens of evacuations.

The blazes, fed by tinder-dry brush and trees, burned in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, California, Utah and Montana.

Light rain and overnight lows in the mid-40s helped 650 firefighters battling in southwest Oregon, where the largest blaze had burned more than 7,000 acres near Roseburg, killed two people, destroyed at least eight homes and forced 25 to 35 families to flee.

"We hope the rain keeps up, but we're not out of it yet," said Lynn Anderson-Farr, a spokeswoman for the state Department of Forestry in Roseburg. "When you have a fire this large, any factors that turn your favor help."

Two of the 300 firefighters battling a 500-acre blaze in Oregon's Umpqua National Forest suffered minor injuries. At least two families were evacuated temporarily as about 100 firefighters encircled a 1,200-acre brush fire along the Little Applegate River.

Carl and Fay Giles listened helplessly on their logging company's radio Wednesday as fast-moving flames near Roseburg trapped their son Mark, 30, and employee James Richard Moore, 55, at a camp where they were trying to save equipment.

"Everybody knew they were there, and there was no way to get to them," said Dora Collins, a spokeswoman for the Douglas County sheriff's office. Rescuers recovered the bodies later Thursday.

Smoke from more than 9,000 burning acres in Oregon was visible in satellite photos and prompted the National Weather Service to issue a visibility warning to drivers and a health alert to those with respiratory problems.

A murky haze also hung over large areas of Northern California from the Oregon fires and a wind-driven timber fire started Wednesday by lightning. It scorched nearly 1,000 acres in northeastern California's Modoc National Forest.

AP Laserographic

About 200 firefighters were expected to control the flames by Saturday evening, said U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman Nancy Gardner.

In Hangman Valley, south of Spokane, Wash., about 120 firefighters doused hot spots from a fire that swept through a subdivision, destroying 24 houses valued at $100,000 to $200,000 each and damaging 12 before the blaze was contained Thursday morning.

Three people suffered minor injuries in the fire and residents of 90 to 100 homes were evacuated. They were allowed to return Thursday to inspect the damage and collect valuables.

Mexico's problems not to be ignored

Former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt sensed he was getting a question that would show him to best advantage at a recent press conference. A reporter had asked him how, as a Democratic presidential hopeful, he thought he stacked up against his opponents in his knowledge of Mexican affairs?

Babbitt respectfully declined to single out any one candidate for criticism. But he acknowledged the obvious: Babbitt is the only presidential contender — either Democratic or Republican — who has tried to make Mexico a major issue in his presidential campaign.

While the Central American country of Nicaragua (population 3 million) gets plenty of public attention, Babbitt complains that the U.S. government deals with Mexico, a neighboring country with about 83 million people, in an "episodic and crisis-driven" way. A more consistent, better-informed U.S. policy toward Mexico may not be as controversial, but Babbitt correctly believes that it is vital to American interests.

Why should the United States worry about the state of Mexico? Because the Mexican economy is stagnant and ailing — a condition that could eventually cause political unrest. The country's foreign debt is about $100 billion. Its peso is steadily devaluing, shrinking the government's tax revenues and the buying power of Mexican workers. Mexico must cope with the still unknown effects of the United States' new immigration reform bill, aimed at staunching the flow of undocumented aliens across the U.S.-Mexico border.

For instance, Americans who live near the border have a keen awareness that Mexican problems can be our problems. They live with the reality of sewage that flows into the United States. They have a deep understanding of the benefits from U.S.-Mexican trade and of the Mexican twin assembly plants that help fuel the border economy.

Babbitt, as a former governor of a border state, is well-versed and knowledgable about those issues, too. He is calling for a "reverse Marshall Plan" in which the United States would help relieve Mexico of the staggering $10 billion in annual interest it owes on its foreign debt.

Babbitt's thoughtful comments and proposals should serve to encourage other presidential candidates of both parties to bone up on Mexico and jump into the debate.

As a matter of foreign policy, we can't afford to ignore a neighbor so intricately bound up in the economy and politics of our own country.

Humane bills needed

I want all humane Texans to know about a treachery committed against them. Silently. Unilaterally. With the simple stroke of a pen.

Two animal welfare bills introduced before the legislature this past session passed close scrutiny and lively debate. Cautious, conservative committees examined all the facts and agreed that both of these bills were valid and necessary. They passed both the House and the Senate. A consensus of this magnitude is no small feat in the Texas Legislature.

One of these bills, H.B. 746, would have established a law setting minimum humane standards for all riding stables without any cost to the state or taxpayers. Currently malnutrition, broken hooves, saddlesores, exhaustion and other abuses are prevalent across the state. And yet no standards, inspections or licensing of riding stables are required in Texas.

The second, and perhaps most important bill, H.B. 151, amended the current Cruelty Law 42.11 to make it more effective. As written, our animal cruelty law is rarely enforced. Effectively, it does little more than pay lip-service to the need for animal protection. This bill would have reduced neglect offenses from a Class A to Class C misdemeanor so they could be tried in justice of the peace court and municipal courts rather than congested district courts, thus making enforcement easier and more likely. Furthermore, the bill would have provided a deterrent to serious animal abuse by making the third offense a felony. By allowing two "slap on the wrist" convictions before "getting tough," this provision was generally considered quite lenient.

In the end, all the work done by legislators and concerned citizens was merely academic. All the tax money spent on time expended was for naught. Gov. Bill Clements took it upon himself to veto both bills without a word. And apparently without good reason.

I urge all who care to write the governor to express your concern and hold him accountable for his actions: Gov. Bill Clements, Box 12428, Austin, TX., 78711, telephone (512) 463-2000.

Afghanistan note

In Section B, page one, July 5 edition, Jane Marler Dees wrote a story about Afghans. She wrote, "... a few facts are already known about the Soviet conflict in Afghanistan. Soviets invaded the country on invitation from the pro-Soviet Afghan government in December 1979." Actually, the Soviets invited themselves into Afghanistan. This was by means of a radio broadcast from Soviets posing as Afghans, which proved to actually emanate inside the Soviet Union.

The USA, on the other hand, was invited invited by the Diems, the leaders of South Vietnam.

This is not an insinuation that Ms. Dees wrote a poor article. It was par excellent, and I would like to hear more about our "freedom fighters" in MMH — that is if those from the Iran-Contra committee don't deport them first!

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, July 17, the 198th day of 1987. There are 167 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 17, 1945, President Harry S. Truman, Soviet Premier Josef Stalin and British Prime Minister Winston S. Churchill began meeting at Potsdam in the final Allied summit of World War II.

On this date:

In 1821, Spain ceded Florida to the United States.

In 1841, the British humor magazine "Punch" was first published.

In 1898, during the Spanish-American War, the Spaniards surrendered to the Americans at Santiago, Cuba.

In 1917, the British royal family adopted the name "Windsor."

In 1935, the entertainment trade publication "Variety" ran its famous headline, "Sticks Nix Hick Pix." Loosely translated: Rural audiences dislike movies with rural themes.

In 1948, the Republic of Korea was founded.

In 1955, Disneyland had its opening day in Anaheim, Calif.

In 1975, an Apollo spaceship docked with a Soyuz spacecraft in orbit in the first link-up of its kind.

In 1980, Ronald Reagan formally accepted the Republican nomination for president at the party's convention in Detroit.

In 1981, a pair of walkways above the lobby of Kansas City's Hyatt Regency Hotel collapsed, killing 114 people and injuring 200 others.

Today's Birthdays: TV personality Art Linkletter is 75. Comedian Phyllis Diller is 70. Actor Donald Sutherland is 53. Comedy writer Pat McCormick is 53. Actress-singer Diahann Carroll is 52. Actress Lucie Arnaz is 36. Actor David Hasselhoff is 35. Singer Phoebe Snow is 35.

Haitian leader linked to Duvalier funds

WASHINGTON — A member of the three-man military junta that has ruled Haiti since the flight of dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier last year was apparently paid $10,000 from a Duvalier-controlled "development fund" during the dictator's heyday.

Jack Anderson

The payment to Gen. Williams Regala, currently minister of defense and interior, appears in a document from Haitian government files. There had long been rumors that Regala, 50, a career military man, had links to Duvalier and to the Ton-Tons Macoutes, the dictator's murderous security force. But until now there has been no documentary evidence to support the rumors of the Duvalier association.

The disbursement record we obtained is among more than 24,000 documents the Haitian government turned over to American lawyers. The files are for use in lawsuits Haiti has filed against Duvalier and his cronies to regain millions in cash and artworks allegedly taken out of the country when the regime collapsed in February 1986.

One of the defendants is Auguste Douyon, Duvalier's longtime personal secretary. According to a Bank of the Republic of Haiti debit statement dated Feb. 21, 1980, Douyon authorized the payment of $10,000 to Regala from an account titled, "Cpte Spec de Developpement Gvt d'Haiti." The other expenditures listed suggest the account was used for travel and lodging.

In a telephone interview, Regala denied any knowledge of the disbursement. "There is nothing in my mind that I received any cash or check or anything," he told our reporter Michael Rosenfelt. "I've not received any money from anyone. Maybe it had to do with my profession. I never dealt with him (Douyon). We didn't used to deal together."

There is indeed no way of determining from the documents whether Regala ever actually received the $10,000.

The Haitian government is trying to regain some $120 million with which Duvalier and his satraps absconded. Part of this effort is a suit in the District of Columbia Superior Court to recover 56 Haitian paintings that Douyon allegedly bought with money stolen from the Haitian government. The paintings, valued at more than $1.3 million, were discovered in a Washington warehouse where Douyon allegedly stashed them.

Disclosure that Regala was apparently the recipient of a cash payment from a special Duvalier-controlled bank account comes at a time when the Haitian military junta is trying to deal with the country's worst political crisis since Duvalier fled for his life 17 months ago. At least two dozen Haitians have been killed in the recent wave of anti-government protests, strikes and riots. Among the protesters' complaints is that the military junta is more devoted to Duvalierism than to democracy.

The immediate cause of the civil unrest came in late June when Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, head of the junta, seized control of the Provisional Electoral Council, an independent panel set up to oversee the November presidential election that is supposed to restore full democracy to Haiti. The protests were apparently successful: Namphy gave in and returned control of the election to the Electoral Council.

MINI-EDITORIAL — We wouldn't want you to think that Congress is incapable of chewing gum and holding Iran/contra hearings at the same time. As evidence of how productive our lawmakers have been, this is officially Snow White Week, so declared by a joint Senate-House resolution. (It has nothing to do with the seven Democratic presidential candidates.) Furthermore, resolutions were introduced recently to designate National Dairy Goat Awareness Week, to declare "The Stars and Stripes Forever" the national march and to allow political cartoons to be printed in the Congressional Record. You can see why the honorable members need a summer vacation.

Evidence mounts that bad old Dole's back

WASHINGTON — Sen. Robert J. Dole, the biggest ground-gainer of all presidential candidates this past year, shows signs of reverting to the form that so stunted his previous national ambitions: nastiness and trimming.

Nastiness reared its head at an Iowa Republican affair when Dole threatened Vice President George Bush's state chairman with retaliation if he did not stop criticizing him. Trimming exposed itself when Dole backed away from President Reagan's Central American policy in an interview.

Two small incidents, even though buttressed by other shreds of evidence, will not arrest the Senate Republican leader's high flight. But they suggest difficulty sticking with advice he has rigorously followed of late: Be nice and court the party's dominant conservative wing.

Threatened recidivism to Dole's ugly 1976 vice-presidential campaign and hapless 1980 try for the presidential nomination exposed habitual trepidation by his advisers at beard-ing the boss. Senior campaign strategists are worried, but somehow have not found the time to remonstrate with Dole over either incident.

The Iowa incident occurred at the Polk County (Des Moines) Republican picnic June 27. Dole spotted George Witgraff, who led Bush to his 1980 triumph in Iowa and heads the vice president's 1988 campaign there. Witgraff earlier issued a puerile charge, prepared in Bush's Washington headquarters, that Dole sold out Midwestern farmers to favor tobacco growers.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

That singed Dole but not so much as Witgraff's accusation June 23 that "his campaign staffers," by spreading unsubstantiated personal rumors about Bush, reinforced Dole's "unfortunate image of the past — a mean and nasty image." Four days later, an unsmiling Bob Dole fixed on Bush's chairman the hard-eyed glare that aides, a few reporters and even fellow senators have come to dread. He spoke softly so that only a discomfited Witgraff, wearing a sheepish grin, could hear. Unknown to the senator, a CNN camera recorded it all.

"I'm tired of being stabbed by you every time I come out here," he told Witgraff. "If you want to play that game, I'll be glad to play it with you." Dole softened this slightly with his next words: "But we don't need to play the game. We got other things to do." Still, the threat — smacking a bit of gangland language — was palpable.

What business would a presidential candidate have down in the dirt with a mere state campaign chairman? None, replied all Dole advisers we asked, who added it was no use nagging the senator about it. "He saw everybody else slugging," a Dole insider told us, "and didn't want to be left out."

At the same time, the July Atlantic Monthly published an article by political analyst William Schneider. He asked Dole whether he supported the Reagan administration's "commitment to supporting anti-communist revolutions, including the overthrow of the Sandinista government of Nicaragua." The response: "I wouldn't say yes or no. Generally ... no, I don't think so."

The answer is unfathomable, considering Dole's sterling leadership for contra aid. His aides first told us the answer was out of context. In fact, the quote was tape-recorded in a July 16, 1986, interview with Dole and passed the Atlantic fact-checkers. Dole's men later said the controlling word was "overthrow," which — after calling the White House — they said was not Reagan policy.

The contras might be surprised that they are not fighting to drive the communists from power. The unpleasant conclusion of conservatives, who had been warming to Dole, was that he could not resist saying what he thought a liberal interviewer wanted to hear — an ill omen for post-nomination trimming.

Campaign advisers, explaining that they had not gotten around to discussing it with their champion, suggested we try the senator himself. He told us he was echoing the administration's position against "overthrow," but added: "I go further. I would break diplomatic relations.... There's no question where I stand on contra aid."

These incidents are not isolated. On nastiness, Dole is reported to have spread the word that Bush's recent peace-making telephone call was a sign of "weakness." On trimming, he turned down an offer by New Right activist Paul Weyrich to sponsor a freedom-fighters bill.

Dole strategists worry more about the GOP's hierarchical affection for Bush as Reagan's heir apparent, which could dominate Southern primaries Super Tuesday. But the best remedy for that is confidence Dole has a better chance to win the general election, a prospect undercut by signs the Bad Old Dole is back.

CHARLEY REESE

Political posturing on court vacancy amusing

With the resignation of Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell, the liberals' worst nightmare has come true: Ronald Reagan gets to appoint the swing vote on the U.S. Supreme Court.

Charley Reese

I find the situation vastly amusing. It's fun to watch liberals try to say the president should appoint a liberal without saying it. What they say is that the president should find a man of great intelligence, competence, moderation, who will judge each issue separately on the basis of reason. Since that is how they view themselves, they see nothing wrong with asking a president they didn't support to agree with them.

Of course what they mean is they want a person who will agree with their positions on the issues. Any person of great intelligence, competence, moderation and reason who reaches a different conclusion is automatically an ideologue, reactionary, rightwing fanatic, religious nut, or a purely political appointment.

What is even more amusing is that no matter who ends up on the bench, neither the president nor the Senate can be sure he will turn out to be the kind of judge they expect. The late Earl Warren, whom Eisenhower appointed, is a classic example. In his worst nightmares, Eisenhower — a fairly conservative president — probably never dreamed that Warren, who had a reputation as a conservative, would go sailing off in the direction that he did.

The trouble is that people who get to be Supreme Court justices are fairly smart people, whatever their political bent, and know that once confirmed, they've got the job for life. The president can't touch them. Theoretically, Congress can impeach a justice but the probability of that happening is about the same as the probability that the Soviets will take down Lenin's statue and replace it with one of Tom Jefferson.

Therefore Supreme Court justices feel perfectly free to call them as they see them which may or may not be the way people predicted they would see them.

A further source of amusement to me is the late-blooming discomfort on the part of liberals with judicial activism. As long as the activists were liberal activists, liberals were in the forefront of damning the idea that the court should stick strictly to interpreting the Constitution as it was written and intended. Now that we may have a court full of conservative judicial activists, some liberals are finding new virtues in the concept of strict construction.

Judicial activism, which means in effect legislating, is wrong no matter if the activist is a conservative or a liberal. If the Supreme Court can legislate, then we are not free people governed by our elected representatives. We are subjects of an unelected oligarchy.

The liberal sin — and in the future it could become a conservative sin — is to believe that if one is right on an issue, and the elected representatives won't agree with you, then it's justifiable to have the court force the solution down the people's throat under the guise of the Constitution.

Actually, the Constitution is quite specific, its meanings fairly clear on most issues, and more importantly, it is absolutely silent on a great many issues. That's logical because the people who wrote the Constitution never intended it to be a substitute for elected legislatures.

The Constitution is silent as a rock on the subject of abortion. Whether it should be legal or not legal ought to be a legislative decision. The Supreme Court concocted a constitutional right to abortion out of thin air. There is nothing in the Constitution to justify one-man-one-vote. On the contrary, the original Constitution clearly did not espouse that because it assigns two senators per state regardless of population. You would have to be nuts to read the Constitution and find in it authorization for a federal judge to administer a state prison system or assign pupils to schools.

If liberals get a good dose of their own salts, they deserve it.

NOW convention opens, new leader to be picked

AP Laserphoto

Branch library

Chris Bartlett, 11, of Tucson, is perched on his own branch library, getting in some summer time reading.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The National Organization for Women today opens its 21st national convention, at which the 2,500 delegates will pick a new leader and push for the Equal Rights Amendment in the birthplace of the Constitution.

The largest women's group in the country, NOW has 150,000 members and 756 chapters.

"We have come of age," said Eleanor Smeal, president of NOW for seven of the past 10 years. She is stepping down and plans to devote herself to a "Feminization of Power" tour aimed at influencing the 1988 elections.

The fight to succeed Smeal has focused on Mollie Yard, NOW's national political director and Smeal's designated successor, and Noreen Connell, president of New York NOW.

> "I believe that our feminist vision is no longer being articulated, and that the current administration is no longer in touch with the needs and dreams of American women."
>
> — Noreen Connell, president of New York NOW

"I believe that our feminist vision is no longer being articulated, and that the current administration is no longer in touch with the needs and dreams of American women," said Connell, 40, who is backed by Betty Friedan, NOW's first president.

Smeal was president from 1977 to 1982, then defeated Judy Goldsmith to take the job back in 1985. She criticized Goldsmith's low-key approach that favored compromise and vowed to take NOW to the streets with marches, protests and more visibility.

Nominations were planned for today and voting for Saturday. Results were to be announced Sunday, the final day of the annual meeting.

Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., addresses the convention Saturday. She has been considering running for her party's presidential nomination, and Pat Schroeder For President buttons were selling briskly among the delegates.

Schroeder will lead an equality march Saturday to Independence Hall, where the Constitution was written 200 years ago. The NOW meeting is called "We The Women," an allusion to the preamble to the Constitution that begins, "We, the people..."

NOW is working for the Equal Rights Amendment, which fell three states shy of the 38 states needed for ratification in 1982. The ERA was reintroduced this year in the House and Senate, where it must be passed by a two-thirds vote before it can be sent to the states again.

It reads: "Equality of rights shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any state on account of sex."

NOW also plans a strategy session Saturday on fighting the Supreme Court nomination of Robert Bork.

"It's going to be an all-out fight," Smeal said. "If we lose this one, many of the rights women take for granted will be threatened," including affirmative action and the right to an abortion.

On Thursday, the last of 305 runners carrying a "torch of equality" arrived after a three-day trip from Washington. The torch was presented to a congressional delegation marking the 200th anniversary of the creation of the House and Senate in a compromise reached at the Constitutional Convention.

NATION in brief

Bork delay criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Plans to delay until Sept. 15 the start of Senate hearings on the nomination of Robert H. Bork to the Supreme Court are coming under fire from critics who say the issue has gotten wrapped up in politics.

Sen. Gordon J. Humphrey, R-N.H., on Thursday said Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr., is "all wet" in saying that the delay in consideration of Bork's nomination is normal.

Humprey also accused Biden, D-Del., of putting his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination ahead of his responsibilities as Judiciary Committee chairman.

Humprey, joined at a news conference by Reps. Bob Smith, R-N.H., and Henry Hyde, R-Ill., also urged President Reagan to put aside his campaign for a so-called economic Bill of Rights to concentrate on the Bork nomination.

Deficit outlook improving

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III says prospects for reducing the federal deficit this fiscal year are improving due to increased revenues and other developments.

Baker, speaking to reporters Thursday after a Cabinet meeting on the budget, said the deficit might be pared by about $20 billion more than previously expected, down to about $155 billion.

That would be down $66 billion from the deficit for the previous fiscal year and is $20 billion less than the $175 billion deficit that had previously been anticipated.

Asked what was responsible for the decrease, Baker said it was "mostly increased revenues" from the administration-backed tax overhaul passed by Congress.

Nuclear disposal defended

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is defending its program to dispose of highly radioactive nuclear waste as "valid and urgent," despite criticism from some opponents of nuclear power.

Ben C. Rusche, director of the Energy Department's Office of Civilian Radioactive Waste Management, told the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee Thursday that "the positive steps already taken are too important to derail, disrupt or destroy."

Legislation from 1982 established plans for a permanent deep underground depot for 10,000-year storage of highly radioactive waste from power reactors and weapons manufacture.

Import quotas extended

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he has decided to extend import protections for the specialty steel industry beyond Sunday's expiration date because U.S. manufacturers still face "widespread trade problems."

Reagan on Thursday extended for another 26 months the quotas and tariffs he put into effect for such steel five years ago.

"The president's decision to extend import relief to the specialty steel industry is part of his comprehensive approach to trade problems in steel," presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

For stainless steel sheet, strip and plate, the president continued in effect an import tariff starting at 3 percent and declining to 1 percent of value.

Media told to keep away

WASHINGTON (AP) — News media organizations have been put on notice that a Defense Department "Notice to Airmen" requires them to keep their distance from U.S. Navy warships and planes in the Persian Gulf.

Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims on Thursday called attention to the notice, put into effect for the gulf in 1984, which warns private aircraft to stay at least five nautical miles away from American ships and at an altitude of at least 2,000 feet.

"I'm getting reports from various countries around the Middle East that there are large numbers of newsmen and women who are gathering in the expectation that something that might happen...," Sims said.

Low in 60s anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

Following the scattered showers of Thursday evening, with only a trace of rain having been officially recorded, the National Weather Service is calling for a less than 20 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight. The low is expected to be in the upper 60s.

Skies will continue to be partly cloudy for Saturday with winds being southerly at 10-15 mph and gusting. The high will be in the upper 90s.

Thursday's high of 83 was 18 degrees below the record high of 101 set on that date in 1980. Today's low of 67 was seven degrees above the record low of 60 set on this date in 1936.

STATE

Skies over Texas were stormy today as heavy rain in South Texas caused flooding in the Hill Country.

As much as nine inches of rain was reported at a ranch 11 miles west of Hunt in Kerr County Friday morning, the National Weather Service said. The Guadalupe River at Hunt was already 12 feet above flood stage.

Elsewhere, numerous showers and thunderstorms covered the upper Rio Grande Valley, South Central Texas, the Hill Country, the Panhandle and South Plains.

Meanwhile, scattered thunderstorms dotted the Far West, North Central Texas and just off the upper coast.

The thunderstorms are the product of an upper level disturbance over West Texas drifting east, coupled with an abundance of warm moist unstable air.

Outside of the rainy areas, most of the rest of Texas was covered by cloudiness, except in the Midland-Odessa area, which was clear.

NATION

Scattered showers and thunderstorms dampened the Plains and the Rocky Mountains early today, after storms pummeled parts of the Southwest and much of the nation's midsection with rain, hail and tornadoes.

A severe thunderstorm watch covered northern Minnesota and central North Dakota, where golf-ball sized hail and more than an inch of rain fell in 30 minutes Thursday night at Grand Forks.

Flash flood warnings were posted in central Texas, where thunderstorms produced locally heavy rains. Hail and more than 2 inches of rain fell this morning near Alamo Village.

A strong storm system brought cool air and a chance of snow in higher elevations of Nevada and California.

New reservoir will mean expansion of water plant

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

An expansion of the Midland Water Treatment Plant will be needed to handle an additional 15,000-acre-feet of water a year provided by the Stacy Reservoir, said Utilities Director John Lowe Thursday.

The city has hired Black and Veatch, a Dallas engineering firm to conduct a $155,000 study on expanding the 1970 treatment plant, Lowe said.

The study should be completed in December.

An acre foot of water is equal to the amount it takes to cover an acre with one foot of water.

The city buys 13,103-acre-feet of water a year from the Colorado River Municipal Water District that is now treated at the plant, Lowe said.

Stacy Dam, about 150 miles east of Midland, should be completed by 1989 and pump water to cities by late 1990, said Joe Pickle, CRMWD secretary.

A pipeline up to 160 miles long will be built from the dam, 25 miles southeast of Ballinger, near the confluence of the Concho and Colorado rivers.

The dam will hold 455,000-acre-feet of water and yield 90,000-acre-feet a year, Pickle said.

The Midland water treatment plant will probably have to be doubled to handle the Stacy Dam water, but the engineering firm is looking into expanding the plant in stages, Lowe said.

While he said no final figures are determined yet, Lowe estimated a $10 million bond might be needed by next year to begin the plant's expansion.

"I would like to see the filter plant constructed in 1990 to 91 and at that time if I've got a plant built, I'd like to have a pipeline in place," Lowe said.

However, specifics about the pipeline that will carry Stacy Reservoir water to Midland, San Angelo and Abilene and district member cities — Big Spring, Synder and Odessa — have not been discussed, Pickle said.

With the pipe expected to cost as much as the $68 million dam, Pickle said the cities are holding off construction until they need the water.

"They're not going to spend that money until they have to," Pickle said.

"I'm not sure when there will be a discussion unless there's a sense of urgency about needing the supply," he added.

The pipe should take about six months to design and a year to build, he said.

The amount each city must pay for the pipe will depend on the size of pipe they need to meet their yearly water demands, Pickle said.

The pipe could cost as much a $100 a foot, he added.

Silent alarm will help judges to maintain control in court

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The installation of a silent alarm in each of Midland County's courtrooms will aid judges in keeping a firm hand on court proceedings when they suspect a situation is getting out of control, officials say.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said county commissioners have tentatively approved a request for the alarms by District Judges Pat Baskin, Vann Culp and Barbara Culver after several threats were made on the judges' lives in recent months.

Painter said the alarm will not only provide added security to the bench but protect lawyers, court bailiffs and spectators as well.

The alarm device will be installed so the judges — when they suspect the court proceeding is getting out of hand — can notify the sheriff department's communications network without disrupting the trial, Painter said.

"It's much like a silent alarm in a bank," he said. "It'll be disguised or hidden so the judges can signal for assistance by simply reaching over and tapping it."

Painter said each of the county's courtrooms, from district to justice court, will be equipped with the same device.

The total cost is estimated between $750 and $3,200, depending on which of the three proposed systems commissioners agree to purchase.

The county looked at several options, including a two-way intercom system, but decided shortly after Monday's meeting to settle on a silent alarm.

County Commissioner Win Brown said the judges "would feel more comfortable pushing a button and it (the signal) going directly to the sheriff's department."

YMCA finally breaking ground to construct northeast branch

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Groundbreaking was scheduled this morning for the long-awaited Northeast YMCA.

Implementation of plans for the new Y, located at 2900 E. Butternut Ln., has been five years in the making due in part to skirmishes with a federal agency, said Al Jackson, the new facility's director.

In 1983, the YMCA presented its proposal for the new arm of its organization to the Midland City Council and received $363,000 in Community Development Block Grants to aid in construction of the new building.

These CDBG funds were derived from the federal Housing and Urban Development Agency.

Jackson said directors found certain federal and municipal requirements and strings attached to the grant that made it hard to get the ball rolling on the new project.

Odessa jury finds 25-year-old man guilty of murder

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A 70th District Court jury of nine men and three women deliberated about two hours this morning to find a 25-year-old man guilty of murder.

District Judge Gene Ater recessed court until 1 p.m. today after the verdict was returned, telling jurors they would then begin hearing testimony in the punishment phase of the trail.

Ronald George Decker could receive from five to 99 years for the Nov. 1986 killing of a 40-year-old man.

On Thursday, Ater had recessed the jurors after they deliberated some six hours without reaching a verdict.

At 10:40 p.m. Thursday, Ater called jurors back into the courtroom and asked the defendant, his defense attorneys Tracey Bright and Jim Jordan and prosecutors Eric Augesen and Roger Jones, if they were willing to allow the jury panel to suspend deliberations and split up until 9 a.m. today, since they had been unable to reach a verdict. All parties agreed.

Prosecuting and defense attorneys alike were amazed that jury deliberations dragged on in the case because Decker had confessed to the November 1986 murder of 40-year-old Bryan Hoople. However, as deliberations continued, word leaked out that one juror was adamantly standing against the others, contending a person would have to be insane to kill someone as Hoople had been killed.

Defense attorneys during the four day trial had argued Decker was not mentally competent when he shot Hoople several times as he lay bound to a bed in a West 2nd Street motel. Hoople's body was not discovered until about a week later, Nov. 24, 1986, when neighbors began complaining that an odor was emanating from the apartment.

During testimony Wednesday, Decker said he met Hoople in Andrews about mid-November and Hoople invited him to stay at an apartment he planned to rent in Odessa.

After they arrived, Decker stated, Hoople left on some errands after suggesting they engage in sex. While the older man was gone, Decker said, he looked through a bag and found photos of "children being sexually molested and abused."

Decker said the photographs made him mad, reminding him of an incident in Little Rock, Ark., when two men sexually assaulted him when he was 16.

Hoople returned from running his errands, Decker said, and made advances toward him. He suggested Hoople take a shower and, when he had finished, Decker said he suggested Hoople let him tie him to the bed. Once Hoople was tied up, Decker said, he asked about the photographs he had found in the older man's luggage.

Saying he wanted Hoople to feel the fear the children and he had felt, Decker said he pulled a gun and fired the fatal shots as Hoople begged, "Don't shoot me."

Decker said he left the motel apartment a short time later, took Hoople's car and eventually drove to Flint, Mich.

The pictures referred to by Decker have never been found. He told the court he took them with him and began throwing them out of the car window as he traveled north of Odessa on Andrews Highway and continued to throw pictures out of the car all the way to Brownfield.

Defense attorneys have argued Decker acted under the duress of memories of abuse he suffered as a child evoked by the photographs and Hoople's advances.

Augesen contends the various stories Decker has told in statements and from the witness stand don't match.

At one point Decker claimed Hoople had overpowered him and knocked him down. In another version, the district attorney said, Decker claimed he hunted down Hoople to seek vengeance because of the sexual assault when he was 16.

Decker's testimony from the witness stand differed from these stories, Augesen told Decker during cross-examination. The district attorney suggested Decker had "told so many stories you don't remember which ones you told to whom."

Shortly after deliberations began about 2:15 Thursday afternoon, jurors sent out a note asking to rehear Decker's testimony concerning the photographs he took from Hoople's luggage and looked at. Ater instructed court reporter Dale Keaton to locate all references to the photographs made by Decker and once found jurors were brought back into the courtroom, heard the testimony reread and then returned and continued deliberations until the judge let them go out to eat shortly after 6 p.m.

Jurors returned from dinner and resumed deliberations, continuing until about 10:40 p.m. when Ater recessed court until this morning.

Minister files $400,000 suit against Odessa

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 63-year-old Odessa minister-businessman who claimed that a city policeman accosted, threatened and intimidated him for no apparent reason on March 5 has filed a $400,000 lawsuit in federal court in Midland against the city of Odessa and the policeman, Mark Marinelli.

The minister, Curtis Norris, said in his complaint that the policeman had followed him in his police car and tried to run him off the road, as Norris was returning to his barber shop from the Greyhound Bus Station, where he had dispatched packages to California.

When Norris drove up to his business, the complaint said Marinelli, who had not turned on his siren or emergency lights, jumped out of his car, pulled out his pistol and yelled, "'Get out with your hands up.'"

Norris, who said in the complaint he was unaware that Marinelli was a lawman, honked his horn in trying to arouse people in the neighborhood.

Marinelli then shouted, "'I am a policeman,'" and shoved his badge in front of Norris' face, Norris alleged in his complaint. Norris said Marinelli threatened him. Another policeman then arrived at the barber shop.

Norris said Marinelli "pushed him" and "physically touched him without reason" after the officer got Norris out of his car.

The minister said in the complaint he then entered his barber shop, where he attempted to call police, who did not respond to pleas to come to his aid.

Norris' complaint said the police officer ordered him out of the barber shop.

Norris also complained that $500 in a bank-deposit bag under the front seat of his car disappeared after the police officer allegedly accosted him. "It was easy for Marinelli to take said cash," Norris said in the complaint.

The next day, Norris said he notified the Odessa mayor's office, the police detective's office and the police chief of the March 5 happenings but "all of whom (them) did nothing." That lack of action "appeared to be a complete cover-up of what had taken place," Norris said in his complaint, which is being handled by Odessa lawyer Gerald K. Fugit.

Odessa City Attorney Joel Roberts said the city had not yet been served with the Norris civil complaint and that he would require "time to review" the allegations before he could respond to Norris' charges.

Voters to decide on elected education board

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Voters would decide in a statewide referendum whether they want the State Board of Education to be an appointed or elected body under an amended bill the Senate approved Thursday.

The Senate voted 21-9 to accept the amendment by Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, that would place the controversial issue on the Nov. 3 ballot.

"The fate of our children is equally as important as horse racing and dog racing," said Brooks, referring to two other issues also up for a statewide vote.

"We're talking about reversing a commitment that was made...in 1984," he said. "I want the people of Texas to be able to respond to this."

On the House side, the Government Organization Committee approved a similar bill late Thursday also calling for a statewide referendum on the issue.

Retaining the board as an appointed body is supported by Gov. Bill Clements, despite his long-standing pledge to back an elective board, said House Speaker Gib Lewis and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who remained optimistic after the Senate vote.

"I would have no concern about such a referendum," Hobby said. "I think it will probably pass overwhelmingly because the new system is quite visibly working better than the old one."

Port Arthur Sen. Carl Parker, sponsor of the bill that would retain the current appointed board and cancel next year's scheduled board elections, was less pleased, saying the sweeping education reforms of 1984 could "nosedive" if the current 15-member appointed board is disrupted.

"We need a great deal of continuity at this point," Parker said. "We are at a critical point."

During a public hearing earlier Thursday, school administrators and teachers groups were joined by the 675,000-member Texas PTA in opposing Parker's bill.

House Bill 72, the education reform law, abolished the old 27-member elected board and replaced it with the current board appointed by then-Gov. Mark White. That law also called for the board to become an elected body again in 1988.

But state leaders, joined by Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot, a chief architect of HB 72, say the previous board's poor track record and a need for stability require the retention of the appointed board. The need is further emphasized by the board having to respond soon to a court ruling that the school finance system is unconstitutional, Clements said.

"I certainly do not want to restructure public education in the state of Texas during the next two years," the governor said. "I think that a big factor in that that will be helpful for continuity of purpose would be to retain the (current appointed) board."

Hobby said the old elected board would not have been effective in administering the school reforms.

"If there is a reversion to the elected board, there would be a wholesale turnover which would, I think, lose a lot of the momentum that the state has achieved in the last three years," he said.

Under Parker's bill, the state board would continue to have 15 members appointed to staggered, four-year terms. The governor would make the appointments from a list of nominees submitted by the Legislative Education Board.

Jazz band's vision not affected by handicap

MONTREUX, Switzerland (AP) — Beneath the shade of a large white umbrella advertising Marlboro cigarettes, 16 teen-age U.S. jazz musicians attentively awaited their director's command.

As the group charged into a slightly disheveled but spry version of the bluegrass standard "Rocky Top," they could not see hands tapping tables or the haze on nearby Lake Geneva. All of the band members are legally blind.

The appearance of the Texas School for the Blind's All-Star Jazz Ensemble at the 21st Montreux Jazz Festival — which concludes on Saturday — caps a successful one-month tour whose fruits include a first-place trophy from the Vienna International Youth and Music Festival. Six of the band's musicians attend the Austin-based school. The remaining 10 include representatives from public and private schools in Oklahoma and Louisiana.

"Our (jazz) program has been very strong for the past 10 years now," said Michael Bina, principal of the Texas School for the Blind. "This is the first time we've ever taken a group to Europe. Our band director worked his fingers to the bone to get us here. Between auctions and candy sales, he managed to raise about $50,000. The school chipped in $8,000. We've been staying first class all the way. I'm not at all a jazz fan, but this trip has gotten me into it."

Clad in a T-shirt and shorts, the principal succinctly described his role on the road: "I haul equipment."

Halfway through its one-hour set, the band had dispatched any remaining butterflies.

DEATHS

Treatie Cole

Treatie Cole, 85, formerly of Midland, died Thursday in San Angelo.

Services will be Saturday, 4 p.m., at the Ellis Funeral Home chapel with Roger Hamm of Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary officiating.

Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Cole was born March 21, 1902, in Athens and was reared in San Angelo. She married Elmer Cole July 23, 1921, in San Angelo. They lived in that area until 1953, when they came to Midland. They lived here until 1973. The later lived in Jacksboro, Amarillo and Farwell. Cole died in 1985 and Mrs. Cole moved to Bronte.

She was a member of Calvary Baptist Church in Midland.

Survivors include four sons, John O. Cole of Texhoma, Lawrence Cole of Bronte, Tommy D. Cole of Snyder and Lanny R. Cole of Midland; four daughters, Irene Monk of Texas City, Imogene Vines of Midland, Inez Caston of Kirtland, N.M., and Olene Mason of Amarillo; two brothers, Jeff Bob Ross of Tishomingo, Okla., and Warren Ross of Christoval; two sisters, Lydia Ayers of Ravia, Okla., and Ruth Humble of Pueblo, Colo.; 41 grandchildren; 64 great-grandchildren; seven great-great-grandchildren.

Ivy Lee Epley

Mrs. Ivy Lee Epley, 88, of Midland, died Tuesday at her residence.

Graveside services will be at 2 p.m. Friday at Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. J.B. Stewart of the First United Methodist Church officiating.

Mrs. Epley was born at Brownwood and, in 1925, moved to Midland from Dallas. She worked at Midland Hardware for a number of years. She also worked for several different independent oil operators and a Midland law firm.

She met and married the late J. Homer Epley of Midland, an early-day Midland pioneer. Mrs. Epley was a member of the First United Methodist Church of Midland.

Survivors include one son, Vann B. Mitchell of New Braunfels and Canyon Lake; three grandchildren; one great-grandchild; and several nieces and nephews.

The family requests that memorials be directed to the Women's Auxiliary of Trinity Towers/Manor Park.

Nell C. Uhrig

Nell C. Uhrig of Midland died late Wednesday at a local hospital.

Services will be Saturday, 3 p.m., at the Glass Chapel of First United Methodist Church with the Rev. J.R. Stewart officiating.

Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Uhrig was born and reared in Lolita. She married Leonard F. Uhrig in 1937 in Edna. They spent their early married life in the Gulf coast area. They lived in Houston from 1944 until moving to Midland in 1949, when Uhrig went to work for Shell Oil Co.

She was a member of First United Methodist Church.

Survivors include her husband; one daughter, Judy Lynn Coleman of Midland; and one sister, Eva Simpkins of Corpus Christi.

Mildred Ann Stewart

Mildred Ann Stewart, 76, formerly of Midland, died Thursday at a Dallas hospital.

Graveside services will be Saturday, 10 a.m., at Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. Dick Braun of First Presbyterian Church officiating. Services will be under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Stewart was born Jan. 9, 1911, in Memphis. She married Verle Lee Stewart, who preceded her in death in 1975. She lived in Midland for many years before moving to Childress is 1976 and then to Duncanville in 1986.

She was one of the original members of the old St. Andrews Presbyterian Church.

Survivors include one son, Don Stewart of Dallas, and two grandsons.

Bobby Joe Willmon

Willmon

DUNCANVILLE — Bobby Joe Willmon, 46, formerly of Midland, died Wednesday at a hospital in Dallas.

Arrangements were made under the direction of the Duncanville Funeral Home, Duncanville. Burial was to be at the Winton Cemetery, Merced, Calif.

Willmon was a steel construction engineer in Midland for 25 years. He was a veteran of the Vietnam era.

Survivors include his wife, Constance Willmon of Dallas; three sons, two daughters, one sister and four brothers.

Lillian Jackson

Mrs. Lillian Jackson, 57, of Midland, died this morning at a local hospital.

Services are pending with Sizemore Funeral Home.

Squabble locks out town's police force

EAST TAWAKONI, Texas (AP) — The town police force won't be able to use the Rains County Jail and a police radio frequency beginning Sunday because of a squabble between local and county lawmen.

Sheriff Andrew Roberts, who has been indicted on charges of tampering with government documents and official oppression, denied use of the jail and radio frequency to East Tawakoni after the town police chief indirectly criticized him on television.

Roberts, in a letter to Mayor Allen Blair, said he "was not aware that your city police force was unhappy with the jail system in Rains County, Texas, as he has publicly stated.

"Therefore, effective Sunday...the Rains County jail will no longer house prisoners for the city of East Tawakoni or handle any of the paperwork," he wrote in a letter made available to KLTV-TV.

Police chief Bob Weatherford, the sole member of the town's department, attended a meeting this week in which some citizens started petitions calling for Roberts' removal from office. He was quoted in a television news report.

"All I said on TV was that two prisoners I've jailed have wanted to call Andy Roberts as their phone call," Weatherford said Thursday. "That's not slander, no way."

Weatherford said the two men were father and son, and that they had "a hold on the sheriff." He would not elaborate, except to say that "some organized crime things are going on here."

"He does not wear the badge the same way I do," Weatherford said of Roberts.

Roberts wrote in reply that effective Sunday, the county jail would no longer house prisoners from East Tawakoni, a town of 400 people about 50 miles east of Dallas.

"There has never been a written contract on this matter, and the office has done this as a favor to your city," Roberts wrote to the mayor, adding that the sheriff's office would no longer handle the town's police radio calls.

"We have always done these services for your city as an accommodation to you, and since your chief of police has expressed his displeasure with the services and the running of the sheriff department of Rains County, Texas, I believe it would be the best for all parties concerned if your city would provide all future services beginning Sunday, July 19," Roberts wrote.

Roberts pleaded innocent Monday to the indictments and was released on his own recognizance, said 8th Judicial District Attorney Frank Long. A grand jury indicted Roberts on June 26, Long said.

The charge of tampering with government documents accused Roberts of falsifying an arraignment sheet to indicate he had attended a June 2 arraignment that allegedly did not occur, Long said.

The oppression charge "alleges he denied a prisoner the opportunity to go before a justice of the peace to have bond set," Long said. The alleged offense occurred Sept. 23.

No trial date has been set; pretrial motions are scheduled for Aug. 14.

Roberts was out of town Thursday and was not available for comment, his office said. But on Wednesday, he told KLTV he did not know Weatherford and thought the county should not provide jail and radio services to the town.

Roberts' attorney, Randy Taylor, said Thursday, "My client's not guilty and we expect to fight the case vigorously. I think 'zealously' is the word."

NASA adds three tests for rockets

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — NASA officials are hoping to squeeze in three more full-scale test firings of a redesigned rocket engine before U.S. space shuttle flights resume next June.

John Thomas, manager of the NASA team redesigning the flawed rocket engines that caused the Challenger accident, said Thursday that the three tests were added to the shuttle recovery program after astronauts and a National Research Council committee recommended more firings for the new engines.

NASA plans seven full-scale firings of the new rocket before space shuttle flights resume next June, and one test firing after they resume, officials said.

Thomas said the test schedule is "exceptionally tight," however, and could be disrupted if even one section of one rocket engine is damaged during assembly.

"The three extra tests are not mandatory before the next flight," he said. "We expect to get at least two of the three, but hopefully we get all three."

Challenger exploded, killing its seven member crew, after one of two solid rocket boosters leaked flame and caused a fuel tank to burst shortly after launch on Jan. 28, 1986.

Amarillo firefighters and rescue personnel pull the body of James Crittenden Baird, 25, of Amarillo, from a 25-foot-deep trench which collapsed and killed three construction workers Thursday. Baird was trying to save two of his co-workers when he was trapped and buried under the dirt with them.

Collapsing trench kills three workers

AMARILLO (AP) — Two construction workers were killed in a cave-in and a third man died after being buried in the collapsing trench while attempting to rescue the other two, officials said.

James Crittenden Baird, 25, Mark Allison, 23, and Clifford Davis, 18, all of Amarillo, died when a 25-foot-deep sewer line trench collapsed Thursday.

Emergency personnel worked for almost five hours to recover Davis' body, guarding against the threat of an additional collapse.

The cave-in occurred at about 4:30 p.m. as workers from H.B. Jordan Construction Co. were attempting to dig a sewer line to an old water line, said Potter County Justice of the Peace Haven Dysart.

The dirt above the old water line apparently was loosely packed and unstable, and collapsed into the newly dug trench, Dysart said. Allison and Davis were immediately buried.

Baird, who was working on top of the trench, jumped in to try to rescue the two, said construction crew member Lupe Martinez.

Witnesses said Baird was quickly trapped and then buried by the crumbling dirt.

"They told me to come out, and when I turned around it caved in," Martinez said. "They never had a chance. They couldn't even run."

Baird's body was recovered about 5:15 p.m. after fire department rescue crews, assisted by construction workers with back hoes and earth movers, began attempts to dig the men out.

Allison's body was recovered about 7:20 p.m. and Davis' body was recovered about three hours later.

Officials said Thursday's accident was similar to a cave-in last September when a worker was killed at a construction site when the wall of a 9-foot sewage trench collapsed and buried him.

STATE IN BRIEF

Burlington Industries gives Sherman facility to city

SHERMAN (AP) — Burlington Industries is moving out of Sherman, but company officials are making the city a parting gift of their $4.9 million plant.

"Today ends Burlington's 31-year presence in Sherman," former plant manager Willis Hastings said at a ceremony Thursday. "But we don't want to look back, we want to look forward. I hope this is a prelude to greater things for Sherman."

After they were unable to find a buyer for the 45-acre plant, Burlington's board of directors decided to donate the facility, which will be administered by the Sherman Chamber Foundation, a newly formed non-profit organization affiliated with the Chamber of Commerce.

All proceeds from the facility, whether it is leased or sold, will be plowed back into the community.

City officials at the Thursday ceremony sat beneath a bright yellow banner that read, "Thank You Burlington."

"This is a leg up in (Sherman's) economic development activities," Mayor Dean Gilbert said, adding that the plant could attract a new industry to Sherman.

Since the textile plant closed July 13, 1986, Greensboro, N.C.-based Burlington has offered the facility to several buyers for an estimated $4.9 million, Hastings said. When that failed, they tried to sell the facility to various businesses.

Water loans approved

AUSTIN (AP) — About $4 million in loans for water and sewer service in two South Texas colonias have won approval from the Texas Water Development Board.

Donna Darling, board spokeswoman, said the panel voted 5-0 Thursday to approve the loans to the city of Pharr for projects in the colonias of Las Milpas and Lopezville. A sixth board member abstained.

A total of $720,000 in water funds will be used to purchase the portion of the Military Highway Water Supply Corp. that serves Las Milpas, Ms. Darling said.

Another $3.26 million in sewer project funds will be used to provide sewer service to Las Milpas and Lopezville, she said.

Local officials said that about half the residents in the two colonias currently must use outhouses, which often overflow during heavy rains.

Prison to admit inmates

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — State prison officials said more inmates would be admitted today because the release of almost 60 prisoners on Thursday enabled them to once again get under a state-mandated ceiling of 95 percent of capacity.

The Texas Department of Corrections had to turn away new admissions on Thursday — for the second time this week and the 15th time this year — because of Wednesday figures that showed the inmate population at 38,485 — or 95.1 percent of capacity, prison spokesman Charles Brown said.

The prison system, the nation's third largest behind California and New York, was closed to new admissions Monday, but open again on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Man blows whistle on plot

HOUSTON (AP) — A man allegedly hired to commit a murder listened to his conscience and decided to blow the whistle on the air conditioning contractor who hired him, police said.

Houston police arrested James William Whitener, 47, Thursday after detectives watched him made the second of two partial payments totaling $4,500 after being told by the intended gunman that his business partner, Steven Sigloch, had been killed the night before. Police had been tailing Whitener all morning.

Whitener allegedly promised $20,000 plus an unspecified bonus for neatness and efficiency to the man, whose name was not released, said homicide Sgt. Steve Arrington.

Sigloch and Whitener are majority owners of J&S Mechanical, a commercial air conditioning company, said Arrington. He said they have been partners about four years.

Police were preparing a charge of solicitation of capital murder against Whitener.

Arrington said Whitener apparently hoped to gain insurance money through Sigloch's death. He said he did not know whether Whitener or the business was having financial problems.

NASA presents association with flag from Challenger

By ALISSA SCHRAMM
Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — A small flag carried by teacher Christa McAuliffe aboard the Challenger and recovered from the wreckage of the space shuttle has been presented by NASA to the flag's sponsor, the National School Public Relations Association.

Robert W. Brown, director of the educational affairs division of NASA, returned the flag, mounted on a plaque during the association's 34th annual seminar Wednesday. The flag has a white background and depicts the flame from the Lamp of Learning.

"It seemed very fitting and appropriate for us to encase the flag and return it to the association that created it," Brown said after the ceremony.

The plaque will be exhibited at the group's headquarters in Arlington, Va., association President Lew Armistead said.

The flag was one of 50 identical ones carried with McAuliffe aboard the shuttle. After the flight, the teacher would have used them to symbolize the mission at lectures in schools across the nation.

The Challenger exploded Jan. 28, 1986, killing its seven-member crew.

Many believe NASA's Teacher in Space Program ended with the tragedy, but the program continues, Brown said.

JAZZ

"Sweet Georgia Brown" was given the All-Star treatment, to the delight of a quartet of French jazz aficionados sipping white wine. Band director Gary Bailey momentarily stepped away from the group, whose sounds were being recorded by jazz festival personnel.

"We only had two weeks to practice before we headed over to Vienna," he said, wiping his brow. "We're all pretty tired. I just can't wait until this set ends and we can all go swimming."

By now the group had attracted about 70 spectators to the Bar Du Rendezvous, many of whom did not seem to notice its communal handicap. The performance did not belie it.

Dwayne Jackson of Dallas laid aside his violin and banjo, picked up his bass and led his friends into the funk classic, "Corazon." Midway through what proved to be the band's final piece together, Jackson took a solo. The band put down its instruments and began clapping on the beat. Shouts — of support, of joy, of relief — followed.

"This is it," said Paula Wright, one of the school's music instructors. "It's the last time they'll play together. They're letting it all hang loose."

After the applause dissipated, the band undertook the chore of breaking down the set. Roland Perez, an alto and soprano saxophone player from Mercedes, Texas, now living and performing in Austin, took a moment to reflect on the band's European odyssey.

"It's a different kick here," he said, removing his dark sunglasses. Perez is one of a few band members who is not completely blind. "The crowds here are real quiet when they listen to you. We had a more lively reaction in Vienna, but I think that's because there were more kids our age there.

"But here in Montreux, it being the city of jazz, you can tell the folks really appreciate your playing. And as far as the States goes, Austin is the place to be. Tomorrow we go home." A big smile.

Bailey gathered his troops. He announced a meeting time for the evening's main jazz event, a performance at the Montreux Casino by trumpet patriarch Dizzy Gillespie.

Perez was asked if he thought blindness was a unifying force in the group.

"We feel somewhat in the same boat," he said. "But it's the love of music that really speaks."

YMCA

HUD wanted to approve the site the new YMCA was built on and choose an architect for the project.

The land chosen for the new building, the underdeveloped Tolbert Park, was partially located in the 100-year flood plain and also platted for single family residences.

The building has been designed around the flood plain and the site was rezoned to become a planned district, the director said.

"But the straw that broke the camel's back was when HUD asked us to take the word 'religion' out of our statement," Jackson said.

Officials of the YMCA called it quits with the agency and gave the $363,000 back about six months ago, he said.

So funding the $1.1 million, 24,000 square-foot facility has been through donations and other grants, Jackson said.

Plans for the new YMCA include a gymnasium, handball and raquetball courts, a junior Olympic-sized pool, a child care center, Nautilus weight rooms and a vast assortment of meeting rooms.

The Northeast YMCA should be open for business in April or May of 1988, Jackson said.

Painter said he didn't believe the intercoms, priced at about $60 a pair, were adequate, although they are by far the least expensive.

"I don't think the judges would have been satisfied with it in the long run," he said.

Painter said the judges don't always require immediate assistance, but may choose to request reinforcements. With the security alarm, they can do so with the least amount of commotion, he added.

"We can have people there in a matter of minutes," he said.

Painter said he doesn't think the judges are asking for too much, just for more protection.

"They do an awful lot of work and they do a lot of good for this community," he said. "It would make them feel better."

Western Europe reining in farm subsidies

AGRICULTURE

"We must absolutely settle on a policy that includes a certain amount of market organization. ...Otherwise we will get into a useless trade war between industrial countries."

— Michel Noir, France's minister of foreign trade

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The European Economic Community has begun chipping away at its fortress of protectionist farm policies that for years have piled up huge, costly and often wasteful food surpluses.

Spurred on now by a crippling drain on its treasuries and by pressure from abroad, the 12-nation trading bloc has laid down new measures intended to make its 11 million farmers less dependent on a subsidy system that has encouraged them to produce more than West Europeans can eat or export.

Earlier this year, West European surplus butter was sold to the Soviet Union at a price that was 15 percent lower than what the EEC paid its dairy farmers.

But a series of recent decisions by the community, known also as the Common Market, are aimed at reducing the surpluses. The measures cut guaranteed prices to growers of some products, lowered production limits and forced farmers to help pay for the disposal of surpluses.

The European strategy for reform stops short, however, of the more drastic measures advocated by President Reagan.

His administration on July 6 proposed a universal end to agricultural trade subsidies and import barriers by the year 2000.

The U.S. plan, presented in Geneva at trade-liberalization talks under the 93-nation General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), drew a cool initial response from West European governments. Some said it was unrealistic and a possible threat to the European farm industry.

Frans Andriessen, the EEC's vice president for agriculture, said July 9 during an official visit to Washington that he detected little support for the Reagan plan in either the U.S. Congress or Western Europe.

"I don't think there will be a concrete phasing out (of subsidies), and I don't think that will be the final position of the United States administration or the United States Congress," Andriessen said.

France's minister of foreign trade, Michel Noir, said his country agreed that farm-support programs had grown out of control. But he contended that allowing the agricultural market to operate with no government interference was a recipe for global economic conflict.

"We must absolutely settle on a policy that includes a certain amount of market organization," the newspaper Le Monde of Paris quoted him as saying. "Otherwise we will get into a useless trade war between industrial countries."

For many West European governments, the Reagan proposal confirms a fear they have kept relatively quiet since the GATT members began considering opening a new round of global trade negotiations several years ago: that the United States would single out agriculture for quick reform.

The EEC governments' concern centers on the prospect of drastic and rapid changes in farm-trade rules that could force the dismantling of their Common Agricultural Policy — the cornerstone of West European economic cooperation.

The principle of protecting farmers' incomes is enshrined in the European Economic Community's founding charter. It is carried out by a combination of levies on imports to protect domestic producers and subsidies to prop up market prices.

EEC headquarters in Brussels will spend more than two-thirds of its total budget on farm-support programs this year, including production and processing subsidies, export aids and public and private storage of product surpluses.

The $26 billion tab for these programs has grown by 145 percent over the past seven years, limiting the community's ability to finance other programs such as scientific research and development.

The United States spends a similar amount on its own farm-support programs.

By linking subsidies to the volume of farmers' production, the EEC has encouraged the creation of huge surpluses. The need to get rid of these surpluses has led to such politically embarrassing deals as the sale of butter to the Soviet Union below cost.

With the Reagan administration having taken the offensive on the agricultural trade issue, the Europeans are scrambling to fashion a common response. For now, they are trying to blunt the U.S. assault by stressing the painful steps already taken to reform the EEC farm policy.

Last December, in what Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe of Britain called the most significant reform of the European policy since its creation in 1966, the member governments agreed to cut milk production by nearly 10 percent over two years and to slash beef support prices.

More recently, the EEC has made these other moves:

— Cut the guaranteed price for grain producers by 6 percent for the current marketing year, despite stiff opposition from the powerful West German farm lobby and resistence from the Bonn government.

— Reduced the period during the year in which the EEC enters the market to buy up surplus grain. This was designed to curb the community's growing surplus of grain, which currently totals 24 million metric tons.

— Began phasing out a complex system of border levies and subsidies that compensate farmers for changes in national currency values.

— Temporarily suspended EEC-financed purchases of surplus butter. This effectively ended a longstanding guarantee to dairy farmers that any time the market price of butter fell below a pre-determined level, they could dump it on the community, which in turn spends more than $1 billion a year to keep it in cold storage.

These steps have been taken, over the vigorous objections of West European farmers, partly in response to a growing consensus among the major industrial nations that world farm trade is in urgent need of reform.

In a wide-ranging report on the state of agriculture last spring, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development in Paris said the increasing use of export subsidies by the major producing nations was causing heightened trade friction that could have "dire consequences."

"The economic, social and political consequences of all this could cause the system to collapse and bring in a cycle of gluts and shortages that could not fail to damage the world economy," the report said.

Beef industry conference slated August 10 at A&M

Kiker

Where is the beef cattle industry headed in the next few years? How do consumers perceive beef products? How can cattle producers, feeders, packers and retailers change beef's image and turn per capita consumption around?

These are only a few of the questions that will be addressed at the 1987 Beef Industry Conference at Texas A&M University's Rudder Center Aug. 10-11. Conference theme is "Beef Gearing up for the 1990s," points out Earnest Kiker, county agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The Texas A&M University System. The conference is a joint effort of the Extension Service and Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

During the first day's program Dr. Robert Olson of the Stony Brook Health Sciences Center, New York, professor of nutrition at Case Western University and Dr. Janice Neville of Cleveland, Ohio, president-elect of the American Dietetic Association will discuss where beef fits into the American diet and what would make beef even more nutritionally approriate.

Later that day Dr. Russell Cross, meat scientist with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Texas A&M, will talk about branded beef products, and Dr. Darrell Wilkes of of the National Cattlemen's Association, Denver, Colorado, will discuss the Beef Food Safety Issue.

NCA's Beef Promotion and Research Board and NCA past president, will be the keynote speaker at the evening banquet. Her topic is "Beef Promotion: Is it Working?"

The second day of the conference will deal with "Producing and Marketing Cattle to Fit Industry Needs." Speakers include Dr. Rod Bowling from Monfort of Colorado Inc., discussing hot fat trimming and how it could change our cattle pricing system. Dennis Farley of Friona Industries will discuss integrated approaches to cattle production and Dr. Dell Allen of Kansas State University and Dr. Bill Mies of Texas A&M will give their views on packer live cattle specifications. Dr. Darrell Wilkes, NCA director of education and research, and Dr. Steve Hammack, Extension beef cattle specialist, will present information on cattle breeds.

Registration information for the Beef Industry Conference is available from Dr. Dale Hale, 114 Kleberg Center, Texas A&M University, College Staion, 77843, telephone 409-845-2052.

A Christmas Tree Production meeting and workshop will be held July 23, 1987, beginning at 9:30 a.m. until noon on the Frank Evridge farm north of Rankin.

Dr. Michael Walterscheidt, State Extension Forestry Specialist will present information on varieties, planting, weed control, irrigation, marketing, and demonstrate training and shaping (shearing and pruning).

Earnest C. Kiker is Midland County Extension Agent for Agriculture.

RICHARD MINZENMAYER

Beef industry at mercy of cattle grub parasite

Minzenmayer

Cattle grubs are internal parasites and their damage is largely unseen, yet they cause greater economic losses to the U.S. beef cattle industry than any other insect pest.

While grubs are usually found on the backs of infested animals during the winter months, that's not the time for control measures since the pests have already done their damage.

Grubs are the larvae or worm stage of heel flies, and adult heel flies are active over most of the state from March through May.

The time to control grubs is during the period of May through August when grubs are small and before infested animals suffer stress, weight loss and decresed feed efficiency.

Heel flies cannot sting, have no functional mouth parts and cause no pain to cattle. Yet, they frighten animals, making them difficult to manage.

Heel flies lay their eggs on an animal's hairs in the lower leg region, glued in position. Tiny larvae hatch in a few days, crawl down to the base of the hair and burrow into the animal's skin.

Then they begin a migratory course through the animal's body, congregating in the throat after a few months, and after six to eight months, appear in the grub stage in the animal's back.

If a producer has a history of grubs in his cattle herd, it is recommended to treat each animal over three months of age with one application of an approved systematic insecticide or injectable treatment during the May through August period.

Systematic insecticides are absorbed directly through the animal's skin, circulate throughout the body, and kill grubs while they are small. Injectable treatments are circulated in the animal's body fluids to kill the invading pests.

These insecticides come in various forms — dips, sprays, pour-ons, injections and spot-on treatments. A listing of approved insecticides and methods for controlling cattle grubs is available at the county Extension office.

Richard Minzenmayer is Midland County Extension Agent for Entomology.

Egg marketing proposal rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says commercial egg producers have rejected a proposed federal marketing order that would have imposed mandatory fees to pay for a nationwide research and promotion campaign.

BORN TO BE KILLED!

(12,500 per hour)

I ask for the privilege of not being born-...not to be born until you can assure me of a home and a master to protect me, and a right to live as long as I am physically able to enjoy life...not to be born until my body is precious and men have ceased to exploit it because it is cheap and plentiful.

SPAY YOUR PET PREVENT CRUELTY

Midland Animal Control has had the unpleasant task of putting to death approximately 500 dogs and cats every month.

DEAR FAMILY: I am exasperated with my 15-year-old son. For the third time this week he has thrown his wet bathing suit down somewhere in his room and I had to wash the suit and whatever he threw it on to get the smell out. I don't know what to do. I try to be a good mother and keep a clean house, but this is only one thing in a long list of things that I have to do because of this kid's irresponsibility. I can't seem to get other things done for myself and my family. Picking up after him and making certain that he has done everything he is supposed to do is a full-time job. I thought that when school was out that at least I wouldn't have to stay on him about doing his homework, but now I have to carry him everywhere. What can I do to make him more responsible? — TIRED MOM.

DEAR TIRED MOM: There is clearly a real problem here, but whose problem is it?

I strongly believe that children should be responsible for their day-to-day existence as as possible for their age. It seems to me that a responsibility of parents is to offer our children ample opportunity to learn responsibility. If we assume responsibility for everything, what kind of adults will they become?

The home is the child's primary laboratory for experimentation. It should be a safe place where they can risk and learn from their mistakes.

When we make ourselves responsible for every aspect of our children's lives, then they cannot learn about personal responsibility — the lab is closed. I do not believe that mothers exist solely to serve their children.

The first thing that I would do is decide just whose problem this is. For example, the wet bathing suits, is that your problem or his? I suggest that it is his problem. A possible approach for him to experience the logical consequences of his action would be to leave the suits where they fall. When he wants to swim and cannot go because his suit is soiled, that's his problem. When his room stinks because of the mildew, that's his problem.

Discuss possible solutions with him, after all, he has not had any practice at being responsible; but do not help him (or worse, do it for him). If he misses out on a good time, he misses out. Sometimes there is an explosion in the lab, but better there than at school, or church, etc.

DEAR FAMILY: My husband and I have a running argument about arguing. When we have an argument, he calls it a discussion. I think that he does that because he sounds like "Mr. Spock" when we are trying to resolve a problem.

I just don't think that everything that happens can be reduced to a black and white analysis. He thinks that I am just too emotional in our "discussions." My parents argue and he just says that I am like my mother. It leaves me really frustrated when I have to argue with "Mr. Spock." Am I wrong to think that? — A.G.

DEAR A.G.: Talking to a computer is not so bad; in fact they are often very helpful when you need a telephone number. However, arguing (or "discussing") with a computer is a different story. That voice is often very monotonous (some say that is because they have no feelings from the top of their head down).

A person acting as a computer is often very busy just trying to select exact words. Their intent seems to be to make certain that they do not make any mistakes. Unfortunately, often we are so busy trying not to be wrong that we lose sight of the discussion.

Everyone has their own style of communicating. If the purpose of the "discussion" or "argument" is to address an issue, we must ask did we meet our goal? I personally have a strong bias toward expression of feelings. I feel that it is better to over-communicate rather than under-communicate.

Unfortunately, the business model that most males are taught does not reward over-communication (sometimes called emotion). Perhaps you and your husband could agree that the next time you have a "discussion," it will be called an "argument" and both of you will respond accordingly. Remember that "Mr. Spock" and "Bones" always had a difficult time communicating with each other, but they always worked together to save The Enterprise.

DEAR ABBY

Woman wears family pants to hide legs

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have never seen my problem in your column, so I finally decided I couldn't wait any longer.

I am very happily married (19 years) and have three good children. My problem is that I am bowlegged. I would like to wear shorts, but I don't wear them outside the house. I also don't wear dresses even though I would like to. My wardrobe consists of nothing but slacks. I feel self-conscious wearing anything that shows my legs. My husband gets mad at me because I don't like to wear dresses.

Is there any surgery or exercise that can be done to help bowlegged women? I would really feel much better about myself if I wasn't bowlegged. Thanks a bunch. — BOWLEGGED AND SELF-CONSCIOUS

DEAR BOWLEGGED: I consulted Dr. Bernard Morrey, consultant in orthopedic surgery at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn. He said: "Bowed legs cannot be corrected by exercise. However, there is an operation known as a 'high tibial osteotomy' which is well-known by orthopedic surgeons everywhere. This procedure is used to relieve severe knee pain due to bowed legs and not generally done for cosmetic purposes. The woman who wrote to you should consult an orthopedic surgeon in her own community for an examination and evaluation."

DEAR ABBY: Another girl and I have shared an apartment for three years and have a great relationship. Her boyfriend slept here occasionally, but for the past year or so he has been living with us 98 percent of the time. He has a key to the apartment, washes his clothes here, eats and sleeps here. There are times when my roommate has been out of town on business, but the boyfriend sleeps here anyway. I really don't mind because he's a nice guy, but I think he should pay rent, or a third of the utilities.

I've mentioned this to my roommate and her boyfriend, but they think I'm being petty. Am I? If you think I am, I'll back off. If you think I have a valid complaint, I'll mention it again. What do you think? — USED IN THE SOUTH

DEAR USED: I think Mr. Nice Guy should pay a third of the rent — and a third of the utilities. As things stand, he's a very expensive house pet. Mention it again. This time, with more conviction.

DEAR ABBY: I had an appointment with a doctor I had not seen before. My appointment was for 11:15, and I arrived 10 minutes early. At 12:10 I had been moved to one of the inner examining rooms, but still had not seen the doctor. I had other obligations for the afternoon and was getting nervous, so I went to the receptionist and told her to reschedule another appointment for me.

I realize that doctors are sometimes unavoidably delayed, but no one relayed this information to me. My question: How long should one wait? Doctors are notorious for this, and I feel we have let them get away with this sort of thing too long. My time is important, too. — IMPATIENT PATIENT

DEAR IMPATIENT: How long one "should" wait depends on how much time one has, and how urgent the problem. Personally, I would rather wait, see the doctor, and get it over with than schedule another appointment and start again from "square one."

Finding 'prince' not easy as used to be

By STEPHANIE SALTER
Hearst News Service

Has it really come to this? A photograph of a man's big wing-tip shoe pressing down on a silk pillow, illustrating a new book entitled, "Beyond Cinderella: The Modern Woman's Guide to Finding a Prince."

"This book is dedicated to my prince, Tony," says the dedication page. Uh-oh, say I.

I turn to the back cover so I can eyeball the author, Nita Tucker. Dressed in a high-necked blouse of silk (a little lighter shade than the pillow's on the front), she looks a bit like the famous business executive Mary Cunningham. You know the smile I'm talking about?

A ring the size of the Seattle Kingdome is on the third finger of her left hand. I hope it's from Tony.

Above Nita's softly-lit studio photo are these words: "Events of the last three decades have profoundly altered the nature of relationships between the sexes. Marriage in the '80s is a new ball game. This book will enable women to win this game and to develop fulfilling lifetime relationships."

Double uh-oh. Two "relationships," one cliched sports metaphor and the appearance of those staples of new-age phraseology, "profoundly altered" and "develop fulfilling." Looks like I've got a live one here.

Nita, says the photo caption, is "a former educator" who has "helped hundreds of women and men find satisfying partnerships."

She regularly appears on radio and TV shows in Seattle and has been a guest on "The Oprah Show" and "The Tom Snyder Show." Hey, Tom Snyder. Far out.

Inside the book I find the section headings: "Before You Set Out on Your Quest," "Slaying the Dragons," "Living Happily Ever After."

Some of the chapter titles: "Someday Your Prince Will Come?" "Glass Slippers Come in All Sizes," "Pumpkins and Other Problems," "When You're Knocked off Your Steed," "Wave Your Magic Wand."

I double check what I read previously in the introduction, which begins "Once upon a time..." — and yes, it does say this book is for women 25-and-older.

Time for the invocation of a Major Truth of Journalism: When dumbfounded, turn to the press kit.

Out falls a four-page pink booklet labeled "Six-Week Action Plan for Finding a Prince." Week one's "homework assignments" are, among other tasks, "Tell five people you're looking for a relationship," and "Smile and say hello to 50 men."

I try to picture myself sitting across from a neighbor, my publisher, my favorite bartender, my dermatologist and, uh, maybe my paper boy, and blurting out, "I'm looking for a relationship."

Next to each assignment is a blank space to check when the work has been completed. I notice that "Smile and say hello to 50 men" must be done every week.

I skip ahead to the end and see in week six, "Get intimate with a man. Page 151." I turn to page 151 and I am disappointed. It refers me to something called the "20 questions."

On the way to looking up the 20 questions I run into a diagram of little happy-face flowers — "all the good things" one sees in a new relationship, sharing a circle with a mean old sour-puss face — "a problem" that has come up in the relationship.

I shut the book in awe, then spot the most unbelievable piece of information yet, printed on the back cover: "$11.95."

AT WIT'S END

American inventiveness grows more 'disposable'

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

It's an unusual product these days that is not being eyed as a potential "disposable."

Throughout the years we have watched everything from china, silverware and handkerchiefs to diapers and ballpoint pens become throwaways.

I suspected my world as I knew it was being trashed the day I walked into my gynecologist's examining room and his nurse said, "Slip into this. It opens down the front." I unfolded what appeared to be a road map of Rhode Island and remembered thinking, "This isn't something a full-grown woman slips into. This is postage."

Seeing the look on my face, the nurse explained, "You see, when you are finished with this, we can throw it away."

"I never imagined that you would want to keep it," I said, "unless, of course, you are packing a vase for shipment." That day marked the last modicum of modesty and innocence left to me. From that evolved a society that keeps nothing.

Today, there are few things that are permanent. Take a shave. Throw away the shaver. Take a picture. Throw away the camera. Answer the phone. Throw the phone away. See who's across the room. Throw away your contact lenses.

In retrospect, my children were years ahead of their time. Everything to them was temporary. Umbrellas and sweaters were expendable. There was no doubt in their minds that once they had used it, they could leave it and another one would pop up in its place. The same with gloves and boots.

Some people, like my mother, refuse to succumb to the "waste." She still launders plastic bags and hangs them out to dry and has the largest supply of plastic butter containers in North America.

With our growing paranoia over the transmission of germs, it's only a matter of time before luggage and rental cars become a one-shot commodity. Frankly, I don't know how much longer parents can hang on.

One of these days someone will figure out what it takes to maintain us. We have to be laundered, fed three times a day, transported, exercised to keep us from sagging, and run in occasionally for checkups and parts.

Someone will figure out it would be cheaper to have a disposable parent in every room — maybe in pastel with a microchip that covers discipline, wise sayings and advice.

I know — it sounds ridiculous. But last month I was attending the American Booksellers Convention in Washington, D.C. A crowd was gathered around a display of Bill Cosby's book. There, seated at the counter, was a wax figure of Bill. People were posing with him for pictures. No one seemed to notice or to care that he wasn't saying anything.

His publisher was happy. He never had room service, a limo or an expense account. If he doesn't come out with a book next year, he could be melted down and recycled. Think about it.

Man loses bid to be first black Ranger

HOUSTON (AP) — A Texas Department of Public Safety trooper who hoped to become the only black member of the elite Texas Rangers was passed over for the position, officials say.

"I can't help but think that race has a lot to do with promotions system in the DPS," Michael Scott said Thursday. He said he has taken a written exam three times and passed it twice.

But DPS spokesman David Wells said Thursday neither favoritism nor racism was involved in the selection process that included two competitive examinations.

"I don't believe that they make the decision on promotions in the Ranger service, or any other service, by race or politics," Wells said. "They consider a number of factors — the degree of experience, judgment abilities, communications abilities, analytical abilities. It does produce, we believe, the people most suited for the positions."

Highway patrol trooper Thomas Ratliff of Lubbock was chosen Thursday for a Ranger post in Pampa.

Even though he did not get the position, Scott said, " I will keep on trying if it takes me my 20th year."

In a Houston Post story published Sunday, Scott had charged that the system for promotions within the DPS is political, not competitive. He said that despite a clean record and passing numerous written promotional exams over the past 11 years, he has yet to rise above the rank of trooper.

"This is a system where they pick and choose their people. If I am not one of the chosen few, I will not be promoted," he told the newspaper.

Of the 21 applicants who passed a written test, Scott, who lives in Houston, was the only black, the newspaper said.

Wells said more than 100 DPS officers took the written examination. A six-member selection board interviewed the top 21 in a second, oral examination earlier this week.

He said four other DPS officers were placed on a list that makes them eligible, in order, for Ranger openings that occur during the next year.

DPS spokesman Mike Cox said there are 93 Texas Rangers, and there had been one vacancy.

Romances say what 'women want to hear'

DALLAS (AP) — The differences between paperback books and real life romances are that in the books, life always has a happy ending and the men always desire the women, the authors say.

"A flight attendant once told me, 'Men never talk to me like that. I wish they would,' " said Maggie Davis, a Sarasota, Fla., author of 12 popular romances. "The heroes in these books say all the things that women want to hear."

More than 1,000 published and unpublished writers, agents, editors, publishers and sellers of popular romantic fiction, nearly all women, are gathering in Dallas this weekend at the annual convention of the Romantic Writers of America.

It's the biggest convention in the six-year history of the group, the largest professional writer's organization in the country, says RWA spokeswoman Renee Clark.

"People are love people. They like happy endings. They like knowing what it's like to live in another time or even another place," said Michalann Perry of Rowlett, Texas, who has written six romance paperbacks for Zebra Books and is contracted for four more.

For nearly half of the group who are unpublished writers, the convention is the best shot at breaking into the romantic fiction market and a share of its estimated annual sales of $250 million in the United States.

"Well I'm hoping," said Weta Nichols, a Springfield, Mo., bookkeeper who is attending the conference for the first time and has two "faction" — a cross between fact and fiction — books and eight romances to pitch to editors and agents.

Author Maggie Davis poses with one of her books at the Romance Writers of America convention in Dallas Thursday. At the convention, members will discuss the craft of writing, specifics of the romance genre and the management of a professional writing career.

AP Laserphoto

"I wrote my first one seven years ago right after my husband died and my therapist recommended that I write to get my frustration out," said Ms. Nichols, adding she hopes to get some income from her therapy soon. "I'm ready to retire and just write."

Between workshops, speeches and book proposals, the writers are talking about their responsibility to promote responsible sex and about the just-released book "The Romance Revolution," which culminated six years of research by Austin, Texas, marketing consultant Dr. Carol Thurston and is believed to be the first definitive study of the genre.

The president of the 3,400-member RWA, Marianne Shock, of Detroit, said some popular romance writers began portraying their characters using birth control and taking steps to engage in sex responsibly four or five years ago. She said, however, that the attention being given the AIDS crisis is causing writers to question their social responsibility even more.

"It's author's choice at this point (to portray characters using birth control) and it has been editor's freedom as to whether to allow that choice," said Ms. Shock, who has written five books, one to be issued in October.

"It's by no means a majority of authors who do that. We're seeing more, I would guess, but still I would say it's a small percentage of the books," she said.

Ms. Shock said the issue was initially brought to the attention of the membership through a point-counterpoint presentation of opinions in a recent issue of the association's magazine.

Dr. Carol Thurston, whose book concludes, among other things, that the growth of romance novels in the 1970s communicated feminist ideas to a broad base of women, said publishers consider the books as fantasies and believe readers don't want real-world issues creeping into them.

But "writers are much more socially conscious," she said. "I strongly suspect we'll see more and more of the kind of caring displayed by a hero saying 'I'm prepared' in these books."

Most of the paperback romance readers who responded to Ms. Thurston's surveys support the Equal Rights Amendment and equal pay for comparable work.

McFarlane finds honor among hometown folks

GRAHAM (AP) — Residents in the hometown of former National Security adviser Robert "Bud" McFarlane are staunch supporters of Lt. Col. Oliver North, but that hasn't stopped them from rooting for McFarlane.

"Personally, I think they're both heroes," said Dennis Newton, 55, leaning on the glass counter in the jewelry store his family has run on the town square since 1875. "I cannot believe Bud or Oliver North did anything dishonest in any way."

North's testimony has conflicted with McFarlane's in congressional hearings on the Iran-Contra scandal.

"I think there's a difference of opinion between the two," said Joe E. McKinley, 63, who has been watching the hearings on a small television in his hardware store. "But I don't have trouble with either testimony. I think they are both telling the truth as they recollect."

News of McFarlane's promotions and travels appeared regularly in the hometown paper, said Graham Leader editor Chuck McDonald. He said McFarlane has become something akin to the city's patron saint.

After McFarlane went through his first skirmish with Congress in May, the town stood by him.

Resident Jim Bob Bennett bought a quarter-page advertisement in the local paper, which, flanked by two American flags, lauded McFarlane's loyalty, discipline and energy.

Although hero worship of North is rampant in Graham, McDonald believes it may evaporate while leaving confidence in McFarlane intact.

"I don't believe they realize yet that North was putting Bud McFarlane down because they still see Ollie as a great guy," McDonald said. "It's very conservative out here, so we have no problem with Ollie. But I think what McFarlane says might begin to open a few eyes because they hang on his every word."

McFarlane still maintains his voter registration in the community 75 miles west of Fort Worth. He arrived in Graham when he was 6 months old, after his mother died of a heart attack in Washington, where his New Deal Democrat father was serving as a congressman.

William Doddridge McFarlane lost the next election and his son, then known as Buddy, remained in Graham for the next eight years.

In 1945, the elder McFarlane remarried and returned to Washington as an anti-trust attorney in the Justice Department, serving Republican and Democratic presidents until 1970.

But a daughter, Mary, married a Graham man, Louis Pitcock, and his widow, Inez, also makes her home in Graham.

Texans wave flag in support of Oliver North

DALLAS (AP) — Texans are showing support for Iran-Contra hero Lt. Col. Oliver North by writing letters, buying Ollie T-shirts and signing petitions in his support.

Former Fort Worth Mayor DeWitt McKinley placed an open letter to North in several newspapers, including the New York Times and the Washington Post, writing: "I believe Ronald Reagan told the CIA that we have to do what we have to do to keep Soviet's bases off of this continent.

"You know how to do it — do it. I don't want to know anything about it."

"It's (the New York Times) kind of a liberal paper and it (the letter) might do some good," DeWitt said.

North, a Marine and former White House aide, has become a national hero to Americans impressed by his recent testimony in hearings held by a committee investigating the Iran-Contra scandal.

Meanwhile, a tiny Hurst-based T-shirt printing company is filling a K mart order to provide North T-shirts for 262 Southwest stores, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported. The yellow and red T-shirts are emblazoned with "Ollie North for President" and "The Good The Bad The Ugly' Ollie North" slogans.

In the Fort Worth suburb of Haltom City, Mayor Jack Lewis declared this Oliver North week.

"I think the majority of the people are in support of this, but I'm willing to take the consequences if they're not," he told the Dallas Times Herald.

Herman Wurlitzer, an ex-insurance claims adjuster, teacher, disc jockey and author, has been calling radio stations from New York to Los Angeles pleading that they broadcast his comic radio skit. The tape begins with the "Dragnet" theme and pokes fun at Congress and praises North.

"Look, man this guy is a spirit-filled Christian, and so am I," Wurlitzer said. "Everybody makes mistakes."

At the Contra Shop in suburban Fort Worth, a 16-foot banner reading, "We Support Oliver North," has been drawing customers to the army surplus-camping shop to pick up North memorabilia.

"We figure it will last for weeks, then die," said Stan Adkins, a K mart assistant marketing manager. "But we don't have to worry about that."

In the Panhandle town of Borger, a group of high school and college students collected signatures Thursday on a petition against the possible prosecution of North.

Chris Thrutchley and Cap Gillman, organizers of the petition drive, said they hoped to obtain 2,000 to 3,000 signatures in the Hutchinson County area.

U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo, said Thursday he would deliver the petition to the proper authorities in Washington.

Boulter said he thought North had served as an articulate, persuasive and competent spokesman during his testimony.

Swaggart tax hearing postponed

CONROE (AP) — A hearing scheduled for today regarding whether Montgomery County property owned by the Rev. Jimmy Swaggart is tax exempt — or whether the television evangelist owes $157,000 in taxes — has been postponed.

After a conference call with attorneys for both sides, State District Judge John Martin on Thursday postponed the hearing. A new hearing date has not been set, Martin's court clerk said Thursday.

Participating in the conference call with the judge were attorneys for Swaggart, Conroe Independent School District, the city of Shenandoah and Montgomery County.

The school district, the city of Shenandoah and the county say Swaggart's local radio station, KJOJ, owes the taxes for three properties. Swaggart contends that because the radio station is a place of religious worship, the properties are exempt from taxation.

Methodist minister, four others to testify in near-fatal attack

DALLAS (AP) — A Methodist minister, a psychologist and four others have been ordered to appear before a fact-finding grand jury to answer questions about the near-fatal attack on the minister's wife, officials say.

The Rev. Walker Railey and psychologist Lucy Papillon are to appear before the grand jury July 29. Norman Kinne, Dallas County's chief criminal prosecutor, said five subpoenas were delivered to witnesses Thursday and Railey's was taken to the office of his attorney, Doug Mulder.

Mulder said Thursday Railey will appear before the grand jury.

Kinne, who would not identify the four others subpoenaed, said he is seeking evidence on the choking attack on Margaret "Peggy" Railey, on April 22. Mrs. Railey, 38, has been in a coma since the attack and is in a nursing home near her parents in Tyler.

"The purpose of this (grand jury) is a fact-finding procedure," Kinne said.

Kinne said he has subpoenaed certain records that witnesses "may not be able to or feel they don't have the right to disclose unless they're subpoenaed."

Police have said the former minister at the First United Methodist Church of Dallas has not cooperated fully with the probe into the attack on his wife.

Mulder said Thursday the subpoena was unnecessary and that his client would appear before the grand jury at any time.

"I have not withheld my client from the police," he said. "I don't think it's in our best interest" not to cooperate with investigators.

Dollar recovers

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose against most other major currencies in early European trading today, recouping losses sustained after increases in the U.S. trade deficit. Gold bullion prices fell.

The dollar's swift recovery surprised some market participants. Many had sold dollars in anticipation of further declines following Wednesday's report of a larger-than-expected widening of the U.S. trade deficit in May to $14.4 billion, traders said.

By midmorning, the dollar had bounced back close to where it stood before Wednesday's plunge.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with rates in Europe late Thursday:

—1.8440 West German marks, up from 1.8341

—1.5367 Swiss francs, up from 1.5255

—6.1395 French francs, up from 6.1065

—2.0757 Dutch guilders, up from 2.0645

—1,334.50 Italian lire, up from 1,327.50

—1.3200 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3220

The British pound fell to $1.6215 from $1.6320.

The dollar closed at 151.50 Japanese yen in Tokyo, up from 149.58 yen. Investment trusts, trading houses and foreign banks bought dollars in brisk trading. In later London trading, the dollar was pegged at 151.60 yen.

GOLD

London's major bullion dollars fixed a recommended gold price of $452.50 a troy ounce at midmorning, down from $453 late Thursday.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $7.75 dollars a troy ounce, down 1 cent.

Oil market's rise an uneasy upward ride

By LEE A. DANIELS
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK (NYT) — Driven by concerns that the war between Iran and Iraq could disrupt oil supplies from the Middle East, world crude oil prices have moved above $22 a barrel in volatile trading this week. However, energy experts in the United States said Thursday that the market's fears have exceeded the realistic prospects of a cutoff of crude oil supplies or even of a substantial reduction in Middle East shipments.

Consequently, these experts said they expect oil prices to retreat to about $20 a barrel. In fact, the "correction" of this week's price spike appears to have already begun.

The price of both Brent North Sea crude oil, a key international marker, and West Texas Intermediate, the American benchmark oil, jumped markedly during hectic morning trading Thursday. The West Texas grade crested at $22.76 before noon, 50 cents above its opening. But during the afternoon prices fell as traders took advantage of the weeklong runup and began to cash in.

Support for prices at about $20 a barrel — which is more than twice what world oil prices sank to during last year's price crash — should remain strong, the energy experts said. That is assuming, they said, that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries can stick to a production quota of 16.6 million barrels a day for the second half of the year — a quota agreed to at the end of June.

That quota raised production from 15.8 million barrels a day, but the increase comes at a time when the summer growth in demand for gasoline in the United States is proving greater than anticipated. As a result, retail gasoline prices now average $1 a gallon, the first time they have reached that level in nearly 18 months.

This week the American Petroleum Institute, an industry group, reported that gasoline demand for the first half of the year increased 2.4 percent, to 7.1 million barrels a day, over the same period a year ago.

Peter C. Beutel, assistant director of Elders Futures Inc., a commodity brokerage, said that the demand for gasoline, comparable with that before the 1979 oil shock, is "telling us a story."

"We're in the post-conservation period as far as consumers' thinking about gasoline and crude oil is concerned," Beutel said.

Trilby Lundberg, president of Lundberg Survey Inc., which issues reports on gasoline prices every two weeks, said that gasoline consumption for the summer is likely to be higher than anticipated, leading to further price increases.

She said that prices are virtually certain to rise even if crude oil prices erode because there is considerable pressure on gasoline marketers to improve their profit margins.

As for the world crude markets, Steve H. Hanke, chief economist for Friedberg Commodity Management Inc. of Toronto, said that the fundamentals "don't support prices at the current level."

"This has been a highly speculative boomlet driven by technical trading and the war talk," he said.

Further, Hanke maintained that "the higher prices, paradoxically, are bad for OPEC because it tends to reduce world oil demand, while encouraging non-OPEC producers to increase their production."

That means that if prices are to remain at their relatively high current levels, Saudi Arabia would have to cut its production, reverting to its old role as OPEC's "swing" producer.

Hanke said the Saudis have explicitly rejected that role because of the financial strain it causes them.

John H. Lichtblau, president of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, said of the price moves on the world oil markets: "What has happened was directly related to concerns in the market about the Persian Gulf. But there's no evidence that oil supplies have been disrupted, or will be. So, this has been an overreaction."

Lichtblau said that fewer than 1 percent of the oil tankers in the Persian Gulf have come under military attack, and none have been sunk.

The experts said that between 6.5 million barrels and 7.5 million barrels of oil pass daily through the Straits of Hormuz at the mouth of the Gulf.

Triumphant Texans ready for next Windfall Profits Tax repeal hurdle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Triumphant-oil state senators predict a tough conference committee battle over repeal of the Windfall Profits Tax following Senate passage of the measure as part of the omnibus trade bill.

Senate supporters said the size of the victory would provide leverage when they sit down with House members in conference and work out a compromise version of the sweeping trade bill.

"We won big," Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said after the 58-40 Senate vote Thursday. "Whether it's going to get it over the top we'll have to wait and see."

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Finance Committee and of the conference committee, said he would talk to House Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., who has been critical of the repeal move.

"I anticipate a tough fight in the conference committee as we try to convince the House to keep the repeal provision on the trade bill, but we have a real shot at getting this tax repealed," Bentsen said.

The tax approved in 1980 was an attempt to capture for the government some of the soaring profits derived from sharply increased oil prices in the energy crisis of the 1970s. There were forecasts of oil selling for $70 a barrel at one point.

But the steady drop in oil prices in the mid-1980s hammered oil states and left the tax moribund. It has generated no revenue lately with prices well below trigger levels that start collections. But prices have been creeping up again in recent months past the $20-a-barrel level.

Last year, the Senate passed a measure to repeal, but it languished in the House and finally died in conference.

Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., said he expects more support in conference from the House leadership now that Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth, has succeeded Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., as speaker.

"With this strong vote in the Senate, with Senator Bentsen chairing the conference committee, and with the previously declared support of Speaker Wright, I think we have the best chance we've had to actually repeal the tax," Boren said.

Treasury Secretary James Baker, a Houston businessman who is a close personal friend of Bentsen's, said he joined in the lobbying effort for repeal of the tax, calling several Republican senators about the vote.

If the repeal survives a House-Senate committee and is signed by the president, supporters say it would bolster confidence in the U.S. oil industry, fostering more bank loans for further domestic exploration.

"There will definitely be more rigs drilled in Texas," Bentsen said.

Hard times in oil country have made the repeal idea easier to sell in the Senate this year, although the same has not been so in the House. This also marks Bentsen's first year as chairman of the Finance Committee, a post that carries considerable Capitol Hill clout.

The lawmakers said they have assurances from Baker and Energy Secretary John Herrington that the Reagan administration will support the effort to keep repeal alive this year.

They also suggested that the windfall tax provision could lend a more attractive aura to the thousand-page trade bill, which has been on the Senate floor since June 25 and has collected numerous critics.

Factory use up; Dow hits 41st record high of year

Associated Press

America's factories, mines and utilities operated at 79.7 percent of capacity in June, up modestly from the operating rate a year earlier, the government reported.

In a report Thursday, the Federal Reserve said U.S. industry's operating rate in June was unchanged from a revised rate of 79.7 percent in May but was 0.7 percentage point higher than in June 1986.

On Wall Street, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials hit a record closing high Thursday for the third consecutive session, rising 13.23 points to 2,496.97. The market was encouraged by positive company earnings reports.

In Washington, Federal Reserve officials said the nation's factory use index was held back in June by a big cutback in production at auto factories as U.S. automakers struggled to lower inventories in the face of weak sales.

Analysts said without the effects of the auto cutbacks, June's factory operating rates reflect a general rebound in the competitive position of U.S. manufacturers, who are beginning to see export sales climb as the weaker dollar makes American goods cheaper on overseas markets.

"U.S. manufacturers are becoming competitive again in the world market place. Exports have been the major source of strength for the economy for the past two quarters," said David Wyss, an economist with Data Resources Inc. of Lexington, Mass.

Wyss predicted economic growth, as measured by the gross national product, would average between 2.5 percent and 3 percent for the rest of this year as an upturn in U.S. manufacturing offsets weakness in other areas of the economy.

The Reagan administration forecast is counting on a declining trade deficit to boost GNP growth to 3.2 percent this year, up from last year's sluggish 2.5 percent rate.

Search for new FHLB president begins

DALLAS (AP) — The search for a new president of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas should focus on a strong leader who can shepherd troubled savings and loans through the continuing recession, thrift experts say.

Roy Green announced Thursday he is resigning, but said he was not pressured to leave and believes his colleagues can cope with the region's troubled thrifts.

"We know the problems and what needs to be done," he said.

Pat McCelvey, spokesman for the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in Washington, said he expected the directors of the FHLB-Dallas to launch a national search for Green's replacement.

Green has agreed to become the chief executive of County Savings Bank in Santa Barbara, Calif., a job that pays substantially more than his $220,000 annual salary at the Dallas FHLB.

He said he will stay on the job until fall in hopes that a successor will be found and President Reagan will sign the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. recapitalization bill into law.

Green said he told FHLB Board Chairman Danny Wall he was resigning about two weeks ago, at about the time Wall succeeded former Chairman Edwin Gray in the Washington job.

The resignation follows a 12-month period in which the state's savings and loans collectively have declined by $5 billion to a negative net worth of $1.43 billion.

"Green did a commendable job," said William O'Connell, president of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions. "He beefed up the supervisory function and got the problem cases under control — the worst is over."

Supreme Court ruling not apt to spur foreclosures

HOUSTON (AP) — A state Supreme Court ruling allowing homeowner associations to foreclose on members who refuse to pay neighborhood assessment fees is not expected to cause a dramatic rise in foreclosures, according to a Houston lawyer.

"These associations can't make money on foreclosures," said Lou Burton, of Burton Associates, who represented Inwood North Homeowners Association Inc., in a case against six subdivision homeowners.

"They (Inwood North) don't want to foreclose," he said. "They just want an avenue of recourse when their members refuse to pay their fees."

A trial court earlier ruled that while homeowners are required to pay neighborhood assessments, the court refused to allow the association to foreclose on homes to collect amounts due.

"In that situation, a homeowner unwilling to pay fees will say, 'Hey, do whatever you want, I'm not paying,' " Burton said. "This subdivision and others have been stymied, but now we have case law to back us up and we can step up assessment fee collection."

Judge OKs LTV pact; Appeal expected

NEW YORK (AP) — The federal agency that guarantees pension plans for millions of American workers says it will appeal a bankruptcy court's approval of a tentative labor contract between LTV Steel Co. and the United Steelworkers.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Burton Lifland approved the proposed pact Thursday night over objections by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp. that it would cripple its insurance system or force it to raise the premiums for the nation's employers.

"We shall appeal," said Gary Ford, general counsel for the PBGC.

The new pact, which still must be approved by the union's rank and file, would restore most of the uninsured benefits lost by LTV workers and retirees when its parent LTV Corp. filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection last July.

Lifland, who is presiding over the reorganization of the Dallas-based corporation, must approve all labor agreements and other contracts.

"I conclude the imposition of this agreement will help to resolve some of the most troubling issues raised to date," said Lifland.

He added that approval would help "ensure labor peace and alleviate the extreme hardships" suffered by LTV Steel's retirees.

The tentative agreement reached last month by the union and LTV Steel, the nation's No. 2 steelmaker, calls for the restoration of an average 92 percent of the $400 a month supplemental retirements cut by PBGC.

But the PBGC claimed during a marathon hearing in Manhattan Thursday that agreement required the agency to subsidize an ongoing pension plan in violation of federal law.

In an affidavit filed with Lifland, Kathleen P. Utgoff, the PBGC's executive director lawyer, said the if the agency were required to provide such guaranteed benefits, it would encourage companies with underfunded pension plans "to terminate the insufficient plan and to adopt a new benefit arrangement that provides the benefits PBGC does not guarantee."

The result would be "payment by the PBGC, rather than by the company, of a major portion of the cost of the company's ongoing retirement plan," she said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Portion of cash stash suited to mutual fund

By BILL DOYLE

Doyle

Q. My husband will retire next March at age 65. Our combined Social Security benefits will be approximately $1,015 per month. We have a principal residence worth $120,000, a summer home worth $300,000 and $100,000 in bank certificates of deposits.

I am planning to put a portion — just a portion, certainly not the whole amount — of the money now in CDs in a no-load income mutual fund. But I am being discouraged by family members, who say we are "too old" to take risks and who say we should leave the cash in CDs.

My husband says it's up to me. What are your comments?

A. First off, make certain you are aware there is risk in that type of mutual fund — one holding bonds and preferred stocks. The fund collects interest from the bonds and dividends from the stocks. Then, after deducting its operating expenses, the fund passes that money along to shareholders as dividends.

Well-managed income mutual funds provide higher dividend yields than the interest you are collecting from CDs.

But — and this is a big BUT — the value of the fund's shares can rise or fall. The share value goes up when interest rates fall and goes down when interest rates rise.

Many investors in income mutual funds were shocked to see the values of the shares they own tumble 15 percent or more just this past spring. Nonetheless, investments in most such funds have risen in value over the years.

By putting some of your cash hoard into an income mutual fund now, you might be getting in near the top of the interest rate cycle and close to the bottom in income mutual fund share prices. However, there is no assurance of that.

You undoubtedly would welcome the extra income from an income mutual fund's dividends. In your shoes, I'd be inclined to put a "portion" of that CD money into an income mutual fund. How big a chunk? As your husband says, that's "up to you." I'd keep it at less than $25,000.

Q. Please repeat your warning against mutual fund contractual plans. The outfit that sheared me is appearing at meetings of elderly people in the mobile home park in which I live. The people in these parks are easy prey to fast-talking mutual fund peddlers.

A. OK! Contractual plans — methods of buying mutual fund shares over periods as long as 15 years — have front-end loads as high as 50 money an investor pays in the first year can go out in commission charges. They are absolutely the worst way to invest in mutual funds, for the simple reason that the shares purchased during the first year of the plan have to double in value before the investor even breaks even.

Contractual plans are bad enough for young and middle-aged people. They are unconscionable for older folks, who might not live to see the plans completed and are almost certain to take financial beatings.

Anyone who would try to peddle mutual fund contractual plans to the elderly should be horse whipped.

Q. You wrote, "For 1987, the entire amount of a (mutual fund) capital gains distribution is taxable at ordinary income rates, but no higher than 28 percent."

It is my understanding, after numerous calls to the Internal Revenue Service, that only the profit on the sale of stock or other capital asset is taxable as a capital gain. The profit, of course, is the difference between the cost and the higher sale price.

How can all of a capital gains distribution be taxable?

A. Because a capital gains distribution represents a mutual fund's profits from sales.

In the normal course of its operations, a mutual fund sells some of the securities it had held as investments. The net profit from those sales is passed on to fund shareholders as a capital gains distribution. The fund doesn't pay tax on the profits it realized from those portfolio transactions. Fund shareholders pay the tax when they receive the profits as capital gains distribution.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Two Tom Green discoveries filed at TRC

From Staff Reports

Two discovery wells were recorded in the District 7C Office of the Texas Railroad Commission. Both discovery wells were finaled in Tom Green County.

CARAWAY OPERATING CO., San Angelo, potentialed its No. 8 WCSL flowing 86 barrels of 38 gravity crude through a 16/64 inch choke. Gas-to-oil ratio was measured at 684:1.

Caraway's completion opens Tiller Sand production. The well was drilled to a total depth of 5,350 feet and plugged back to 5,010 feet. Four and one-half inch casing was set to total depth and perforations were shot from 4,638 feet to 4,642 feet.

Acidization of the well was 400 gallons; the well was fractured with 4,900 gallons of gel and 5,000 pounds of sand.

Formation tops picked from ground elevation of 1,908 feet were are follows: Coleman Junction 2155; Palo Pinto 4578; Tillery Sand 4638; Harkey 4738; and, Strawn 5008.

Location is 746 feet from south and 4,050 feet from east lines of the Washington CSL Survey, and five miles south of San Angelo.

Another San Angelo firm, FORTUNE PRODUCTION CO., completed a wildcat well four miles east of San Angelo in Tom Green County.

The No. 1 McGill flowed 71.7 barrels of oil and 16.7 barrels of water on a 24-hour test. Gas-to-oil ratio was measured at 487:1.

Production was through a 12/64 inch and perforations from 4,855 to 4,858 feet. The well was treated with 250 gallons of acid.

The following formation tops were picked from ground elevation of 1,800 feet: Palo Pinto 4242; Canyon 4404; Strawn 4530; and, Ellenburger 5230.

Total depth reached was 5,310 feet and plug back depth was 5,230 feet. Four and one-half inch casing was set to a depth of 5,298 feet.

A 300-barrel oil producer was finaled recently near Texon.

The Spraberry oil area of the Big Lake multipay field of Reagan County gained its current third producer with completion of MARATHON OIL CO.'s No. 195 University, two miles west of Texon, to pump 306 barrels of 40 gravity oil and 78 barrels of water.

Production was through perforations at 5,444 to 6,785 feet, which had been acidized with 6,000 gallons and fractured with 155,000 gallons and 296,000 pounds of sand.

It topped the Upper Spraberry at 5,440 feet and the Spraberry 'A' at 5,922 feet on ground elevation of 2,673 feet.

Drilled to 7,000 feet, with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,990 feet, it was plugged back to 6,946 feet.

Union Texas gets Terry production

UNION TEXAS PETROLEUM CORP., Midland, added a Terry County completion in the Wellman Field which, upon potential test, pumped 261 barrels of 44 gravity oil.

The No. 5-11 Wellman Unit produced 20 barrels of water, and gas-to-oil ratio was recorded at 2,870:1.

Production was through perforations from 9,441 to 9,523 feet. Five and one-half inch casing was set to a depth of 9,799 feet. Total depth reached 9,800 feet.

Location is 180 feet from south and 2,630 feet from east lines of Section 22, Block C-36 of the PSL survey, about 4.5 miles east of Wellman.

Strawn producer flows 5.6 MMcfd

A Strawn producer was completed in the Whitehead Field of Sutton County for a caof of 5.6 MMcf daily.

SONORA SOUTHWEST PARTNERSHIP, Irving, completed its No. 139 Brown Ranch 'A' at a location 1,075 feet from north lines and 2,850 feet from west lines of the Clemenline Fruger Survey, 15 miles southwest of Sonora.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 9,400 feet and plugged back to a depth of 9,303 feet.

Four and one-half inch casing was set at 9,376 feet and perforations were shot from 8,830 to 9,086 feet.

The well was acidized with 3,000 gallons and fractured with 69,000 gallons

DEVELOPMENT

■ HOCKLEY COUNTY FIELD DEVELOPMENT SET. Development of the Levelland Field in Hockley County will continue when S.K. Rogers Inc., Levelland, drills four wells four miles southwest of Pettit.

The wells are staked in Labor 19, Leage 81 of the Reeves CSL Survey and are proposed to reach a total depth of 4,900 feet.

■ SHELL PLANS WASSON FIELD PROJECT. Shell Western E&P Inc., Houston, plans to drill a four well package in further development of the Wasson Field.

The Yoakum County locations are eight miles northeast of Denver City and contract depth is 5,300 ft. The wells will be drilled in Block D, Sections 631, 565, 677 and 678 of the J.H. Gibson Survey.

North Yemen may begin oil exports by year-end

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — North Yemeni Prime Minister Abdel-Aziz Abdel-Ghani said his country would start exporting oil before the end of the year, a newspaper reported Thursday.

Abdel-Ghani, in an interview with the Saudi newspaper Arab News conducted in the North Yemeni capital San'a, did not give the targeted export figure.

However, President Ali Abdullah Saleh told a Kuwaiti newspaper in April that sales would start in November at a daily rate of 200,000 barrels.

The prime minister said a pipeline from the oil fields to an exporting terminal on the Red Sea would be completed in a few months.

Oil industry sources said work was proceeding apace on the 150-mile long pipeline to the Salif terminal on the Red Sea, and that its diameter was 24 inches.

Abdel-Ghani said estimates have put the production capacity of the oilfield called Alif (A) at 500,000 barrels per day and added that exploration was continuing in other areas such as Al-Jouf, Mareb and the central and western regions. The results of these activities were "positive and encouraging," he said.

Arab News quoted unidentified sources as expecting the country's daily production to start at 180,000 barrels per day from October and to jump to 500,000 barrels a day from 1989.

The first oil strike in impoverished North Yemen on the southern tip of the Arabian Peninsula was made in 1984 in the Alif oilfield with the help of the American company, Hunt Oil.

The company also built a small refinery of a 10,000-barrel daily capacity for domestic requirements.

Amoco, another American company, and Petrofina of Belgium have joined the oil hunt in North Yemen. Arab News said that a major South Korean consortium had also become involved but did not give its name.

Oil industry experts said that North Yemen's oil reserves may be in the range of 1 billion barrels. A barrel is the equivalent of 42 gallons.

BLM schedules oil lease sale

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — The New Mexico office of the federal Bureau of Land Management plans to offer 101 parcels of public land in New Mexico, Texas, Kansas and Oklahoma for oil and gas leasing at a competitive bid sale Aug. 19 in Santa Fe.

The BLM will accept sealed bids for lease of 78 parcels totaling 19,878 acres in known production areas in New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas.

Seventy-one parcels of public land in Chaves, Sandoval, Roosevelt, Rio Arriba, Eddy and Lea counties in New Mexico are being offered.

In addition, the BLM is offering six parcels for lease in Le Flore, Woods, Roger Mills, Ellis and Payne counties in Oklahoma and one parcel in San Jacinto County in Texas.

The BLM requires a minimum bonus bid on each parcel, ranging from $15 to $35 an acre.

Sealed bids must be received by the BLM cashier's office in Santa Fe by 4 p.m. Aug. 18 to be considered at the sale.

The BLM said 22 parcels totaling 3,957 acres are "future interest leases" located in the Hugoton Field in Morton County, Kan.

Another future interest lease is in the Lyndon B. Johnson National Grasslands in Wise County, Texas.

Future interest leases are on tracts currently under a private mineral lease that will revert to federal government ownership.

Phillips 66 expands composites production

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (SWN) Phillips 66 Co. will expand its production and technical development of advanced composite materials and parts, by adding a new 70,000 square foot facility here. Also included in the facility will be a state-of-the-art quality assurance center.

Advanced composites, often called "synthetic metals," are high-strength reinforced plastics which are resistant to corrosion and high temperatures. They are used in aerospace, military, medical, automotive and industrial applications.

The facility will be used for the manufacture of advanced composite materials utilizing Phillips Ryton polyphenylene sulfide (PPS) resins reinforced with carbon or glass or aramide fibers. It will also be used for the fabrication of parts utilizing pultrusion, stamp molding, thermoforming and vacuum bagging processes.

The facility will be constructed at the company's Engineering Design Center in Bartlesville.

Henry commences drilling in Australian venture

ARLINGTON (SWN) — Henry Energy Corp. announced that drilling has commenced on its Reids Dome Prospect in Queensland, Australia. Through its wholly owned subsidiary, Reids Dome Exploration Co., Henry has formed a joint venture with Conex Australia N.L. and Phoenix Oil & Gas N.L. which provides for drilling two epxloratory wells. Under the terms for the "farm-in" agreement, Phoenix immediately earns a 23 percent interest in the permit and Conex will earn a 31 percent interest upon completion of the two well drilling program.

The drilling program will be conducted under an exploration permit held by Reids Dome since 1983. The Minister for Mines & Energy for the State of Queensland recently granted an extension on the term of the permit to June 1, 1988. The permit area covers 40 blocks or approximately 700,000 acres.

ONEOK has earnings loss for one-year period

TULSA (SWN) — ONEOK Inc. reported earnings of 31 cents per share of common stock for the fiscal year's third quarter, which ended May 31, 1987. This compared with 59 cents per share for the third quarter a year ago.

For the 12 months ended May 31, 1987, earnings per share of common stock were $1.69 compared with $2.52 for the 12 months ended May 31, 1986.

Sterling completes Texas plant acquisitions

HOUSTON (SWN) — The Sterling Group, Inc. announced today that Cain Chemical Inc., a company formed by Sterling, has completed the last two acquisitions of seven petrochemical plants located in Texas. The total value of all of the plants and related working capital acquired is approximately $1.1 billion.

In one of the recent acquisitions, Cain Chemical purchased the Corpus Christi ethylene plant and related assets from Corpus Christi Petrochemical Co., a partnership comprised of subsidiaries of Union Pacific Resources Co., ICI Americas Inc., and Solvay America, Inc., and the South Texas Pipeline from affiliates of the partners of Corpus Christi Petrochemical Co.

In the other acquisition, Cain Chemical purchased the Bayport ethylene glycol plant and related assets from ICI Americas Inc.

Texaco, Nippon enter joint deal

HOUSTON (SWN) — Texaco U.S.A. and Nippon Oil Co. Ltd. of Tokyo have entered into a joint venture to explore and develop selected Outer Continental Shelf leases held by Texaco in the Gulf of Mexico.

Nippon will provide approximately $100 million to cover most of the exploratory drilling and other associated costs, and Texaco will operate the project. A portion of the funds will be provided to Nippon by the Japanese National Oil Corp. At least 20 initial exploratory wells will be drilled. The first well is already being drilled on Ship Shoal Block 52, located approximately 120 miles southwest of New Orleans.

Slide continues; Caps rip Angels, 10-1

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

The Shreveport Captains have made themselves right at home in Angel Stadium, thank you.

The Captains, normally a light-hitting bunch, pounded a 10-1 victory over the slumping Angels Thursday, handing Midland its fourth loss in a row and third at the hands of the Captains.

Shreveport has done it by turning the friendly wall and favorable breeze that make Angel Stadium such a hitter's paradise to their advantage. And rather than quivering at the sight of the home-run haven, the Captains' pitchers have handcuffed the lively Angel bats.

"We just try not to change our style of pitching when we come into a park like this," said Thursday's starter John Burkett. "I think, as a staff, we pitch inside more than any team in the league. Not to throw at people, but to keep them from digging in at the plate."

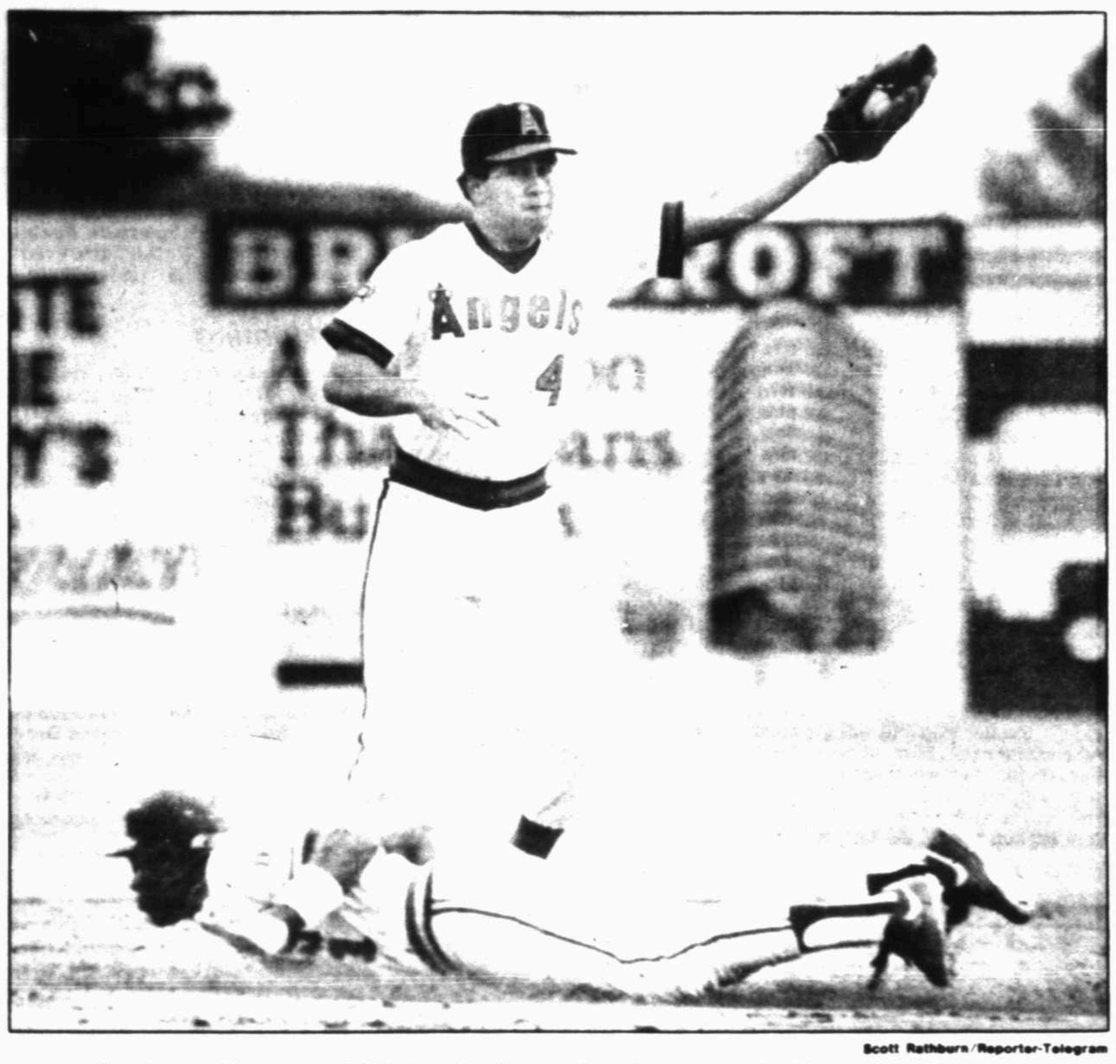
And the Captains, who average less than one homer a game, have become a Murderer's Row for Midland pitchers, blasting three in each game of the series.

Pat Adams and Tony Perezchica each hit one in the first inning Thursday, digging a hole for Midland starter Chris Collins, 3-5. Collins was ineffective early and often, allowing nine runs, 12 hits and three walks before being lifted in the sixth.

"We've probably got more confidence coming from a pitcher's park to here than a guy who has pitched here night after night and seen what can happen," Burkett said. "But tonight wasn't so bad because the wind wasn't blowing out so much."

While Shreveport slapped the Angels with three home runs, a pair of doubles and a triple among its 14 hits, Midland countered with 13 hits of its own. The Angels, however, stranded 16 base runners and, combined with 11 left on the night before, prompted a closed-door clubhouse meeting called by Manager Max Oliveras.

"I told them we have to bear down more with men on base, we have to be more aggressive," Oliveras said. "But that's part of a streak, when you're going good things happen. We're in a bad streak right now."



Scott Rathburn/Reporter-Telegram

Midland second baseman Bill Geivett hauls in a late throw on a double steal as Shreveport's Dee Dixon slides into second base.

IN THAT streak, Midland has gone from 2½ games in front in the Western Division of the Texas League to 1½ games behind. And the Captains and their league-leading pitching staff are staring them in the face for the next two nights.

"When (Shreveport is) in a tough situation, they get tougher," said former Midland Manager Joe Maddon, here as the roving minor league hitting coach. "They have that quality, they were like that last year and they are this year. Our hitters are just not meeting that challenge right now."

Thursday, it was Burkett, 10-6, and reliever Randy McCament who held the Angels at bay, three times worming out of bases-loaded jams and twice more with two men on. Of the seven strikeouts by Captains pitchers, six were caught looking.

Burkett, the only East pitcher in last week's All-Star game who did not allow a run, allowed just one in seven innings and put the clamps on every budding Midland rally.

But Shreveport Manager Jack Mull is concerned about all the base runners, despite his pitcher's ability to work out of jams.

"Sooner or later, someone is going to take advantage of all those runners on base and get three or four runs on one swing," Mull said. "And in this park, that's easy to do. Our pitchers have to remember that all we want to do is get guys out, not embarrass them, and when we get a strike or two, we start playing around and walk guys or give them a cheap hit."

Reggie Montgomery is back for a second time around in the Texas League.

Montgomery glad to be back in TL

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Don't anybody feel sorry for Reggie Montgomery.

The Midland Angel, after a year-and-half tour with Edmonton of the Triple-A Pacific Coast League, couldn't be happier to be back in Midland, the town he left behind, seemingly for good, in 1985.

"People have been coming up to me and saying, "I'm sorry, I'm sorry,' but I couldn't be happier being here," Montgomery said. "It wasn't a blow to my ego at all. It just wasn't the ideal situation for me (in Edmonton)."

Montgomery wore out the Texas League in the Angels' first season in Midland, smacking 22 homers and driving in 101 runs despite missing the final month of the season with a broken foot. He seemed on his way to a stellar career.

In 1986 Montgomery moved to Triple-A, and made the transition in style. He led the Edmonton team with 18 homers and was among the RBI leaders with 82.

But new Edmonton Manager Tom Kotchman and Montgomery didn't see eye-to-eye and the numbers fell, along with his playing time. Though he was hitting .268, Montgomery managed only four home runs and 27 RBI in a platoon role.

"I haven't seen a right hander for a month," Montgomery said before Thursday's game, his second in Midland. "I don't like to think I'm uncoachable, but it really messed up my game. I couldn't play that man's style of ball.

"He had me hitting and running, taking pitches trying to make me hit like Jack Clark. But I'm Reggie Montgomery, and that's all I can be. My game is to just hit and let the homers come."

FOR MONTGOMERY, who became best friends with Cincinnati's Eric Davis when they attended the same Los Angeles high school and played summer ball with major leaguers Darryl Strawberry and Chris Brown, the pine-time was too much.

"It wasn't that I was unable to perform at that level, I proved I could do that last year," said Montgomery. "I put up numbers when I play every day. But I had to worry about every little thing. I never knew if I would be in the lineup from one day to the next.

"The best thing was for me to go elsewhere and play. Eric (Davis) has been worried about me. In fact, he was even trying to get me traded somewhere. But I'm happy to be back here, I hit real well here."

Kotchman is known as a disciplinarian and has enjoyed immense success in four years in the California Angels' system. Last year he was named the California League's Manager of the Year after guiding Palm Springs to a title.

But his style was not suited to Montgomery's. Rather than give up on the big slugger, California, prodded by former MidlandManager Joe Maddon, now the roving minor league hitting coach, decided to send Montgomery back to the scene of his biggest success.

"A HAPPY Reggie is a productive Reggie," Maddon says. "Some guys take to the holler-guy type of manager, Reggie did not. Reggie was on his way to having a career-type year here in 1985. We're hoping he can approach those numbers again."

Inserted into the lineup every day, Montgomery thinks he can. And that's all he needs to do to erase the memory of a long first-half of the season.

"He made it tough for me from the beginning of the season," Montgomery said of Kotchman. "He told me to do one thing and then another. He told me not to concentrate on home runs, and then later in the season, he came to me about not hitting any homers. He confused me.

"That kind of stuff may work in A-ball with younger players, but it hurt me instead of helped. It got so I didn't enjoy the game any more. I'd much rather play for someone I enjoy playing for. It's made me hungry. I've got something to prove to myself now."

Midland Manager Max Oliveras hopes he proves it all the way to a second half title in the Texas League West.

1936 — New York Giant Carl Hubbell's 24-game winning streak, over two years, began as he beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-0 on five hits.

1941 — Joe DiMaggio's hitting streak of 56 games was stopped by Al Smith and Jim Bagby of the Indians before 67,000 in a night game at Cleveland. The New York Yankees won, however, 4-3.

1956 — Boston's Ted Williams hit his 400th home run in the second game of a doubleheader at Fenway Park. Williams' victim was Tom Gorman of the Kansas City A's.

1961 — Ty Cobb died of cancer at age 74 in Atlanta.

1969 — Jim Kaat, Gold Glove winner for seven straight years, was charged with three errors, leading to three unearned runs against the Chicago White Sox. Nevertheless, he won the game at Minnesota 8-5.

1974 — Bob Gibson struck out Cesar Geronimo of the Reds in the second inning to become the second pitcher in major league history to record 3,000 strikeouts. Cincinnati beat St. Louis, 6-4.

Astros' rookie has grand debut

Associated Press

Houston's Ken Caminiti felt as high as the roof in the Astrodome after hitting a home run, a triple and scoring the winning run in his first major-league game.

Gerald Young, playing center field in the absence of injured Billy Hatcher, singled to right with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning to score Caminiti from third base, giving the Astros a 2-1 victory Thursday night over Philadelphia.

Caminiti, called up from Class AA Columbus of the Southern League on Wednesday, walked with one out in the ninth, went to second on a single by Craig Reynolds, and took third when reliever Mike Jackson intentionally walked pinch-hitter Jose Cruz to load the bases. Young then lined the first pitch from Jackson, 3-7, into right field to end the game.

Caminiti, a third baseman, also tripled in the fifth for his first major league hit and hit a solo homer in the seventh to tie the score 1-1.

"When they called me I thought I was going to Tucson (AAA)," Caminiti said. "This might be the highest high I've had. I knew it could happen. I just didn't know it would be this fast."

Manager Hal Lanier's new lineup means Cruz, the veteran left fielder, will be benched.

"It doesn't mean that Jose isn't going to play again," Lanier said. "I'm just trying to go now with the players who are hitting."

The victory moved Houston to within 1½ games of first-place Cincinnati in the National League West.

Caminiti started the game with a diving catch of Juan Samuel's grounder on the first play and added several other fielding gems before breaking up Kevin Gross' no-hitter with a triple for his first major-league hit to start the fifth inning.

Houston rookie Ken Caminiti is congratulated by Billy Doran after scoring the winning run Thursday against Philadelphia.

After Caminiti tied the score 1-1 with his homer, Houston fans demanded an encore bow and Caminiti obligingly tipped his hat to the appreciative crowd.

"I'd never done that before either," Caminiti said.

"Ken saved the game for us defensively in the first two innings," Lanier said. "It gave (Danny) Darwin a chance to get going."

Darwin, 6-6, matched Gross with four hitless innings to start the game.

The Phillies took a 1-0 lead in the sixth when Von Hayes hit into a double play to score Samuel from third base.

Darwin started the game in place of Nolan Ryan, who suffered a sprained ankle when he stepped into a hole in the ground at his ranch in nearby Alvin, Texas.

Mets 9, Reds 0

Dwight Gooden pitched a seven-hitter for his 14th career shutout and Gary Carter drove in four runs as New York routed Cincinnati at Shea Stadium.

Gooden, 7-2, struck out two and walked one en route to the 38th complete game of his career and third this season.

The Reds, who scored six runs in three innings against Gooden on July 5 at Cincinnati, have lost four straight and seven of their last eight games.

"I thought about that loss (July 5) and the mistakes I made," Gooden said. "The Reds were guessing fastball on my first pitch. Tonight, I went for location instead of throwing the ball right down the middle."

New York sent nine men to the plate in the third inning, scoring four times, with Kevin McReynolds' bases-loaded misjudged double to center clearing the bases. Carter had a run-scoring single in the third and hit a three-run homer in the sixth, his 12th of the season.

Cowboys keep coach, cut receiver

Landry to stay three more years

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Coach Tom Landry says he has decided to stay put for three more seasons and hopes to rebuild the Cowboys following one of the most frustrating years in the club's history.

"We're optimistic. We're below where we should have been last year, but we'll be working hard and we'll be a factor in the eastern race," Landry said Thursday after ending speculation that he would coach for only one more season.

The Cowboys finished 7-9 last season, their first losing record in 21 years. Landry described it as one of the most frustrating years in football.

As the only coach in the National Football League team's 27-year history, Landry led the Cowboys to two Super Bowl victories in five appearances, but the team hasn't played in one for the past eight years.

"After having 20 years of winning,

Dallas wide receiver Tony Hill no longer a Cowboy.

Hill placed on no recall waivers

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys released wide receiver Tony Hill Thursday after Coach Tom Landry said the 10-year NFL veteran was overweight and did not show up for three weigh-ins this summer.

Hill, 31, had 479 career receptions with the Cowboys, only 11 short of the NFL club's all-time record of 490 held by Drew Pearson. He has played in three Pro Bowls and holds the Cowboys' record for yardage gained by a receiver.

Hill weighs about 230 pounds, more than 30 pouunds over his assigned weight, according to the Cowboys.

"He had weight problems," Landry said. "He just didn't fire up as everyone else did."

Landry informed Hill on Thursday of the decision to place him on no-recall waivers.

Last season, with the addition of rookie Mike Sherrard, Hill played less of a role in the offense, grabbing

Davis' 64 sets British Open pace

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (AP) — When the wind did not blow, Rodger Davis blew away the competition at the British Open and puffed his chances for a full-time return to the American golf circuit.

Playing near-perfect golf in surprisingly calm conditions, the journeyman from Australia shot a 7-under par 64 Thursday for a three-shot lead after the first round of the 116th British Open.

He said he owed it all to a bad business venture back home.

"I was struggling with my game at one stage, so I decided to play just in Australia, do corporate work and go into a motel venture in Queensland," Davis, then a part-time U.S. circuit player, said. "It didn't work out too well and I was forced back on the tour."

Playing primarily in Europe, Japan and Australia, Davis nursed his game back to life, winning three tournaments last year and moving to the 10th spot in the European money-winning list this season.

AS THE second round started today by the Firth of Forth, Davis was well clear of an American-dominated pack.

Two-time Open champion Lee Trevino, defending U.S. PGA champion Bob Tway and Ken Green shared second at 67.

At 68 were Americans Paul Azinger, the current U.S. tour money-leader; Larry Mize, the Masters champion; and two European tour stars, England's Nick Faldo and South Africa's Nick Price.

Defending champion Greg Norman of Australia and two-time Open champ Seve Ballesteros of Spain both landed in greenside bunkers and took double-bogey 6 at the 18th. Norman finished the round at even par and Ballesteros, who parred every other hole, was at 72.

Jack Nicklaus was at 74, with Arnold Palmer, in his first Open since 1984, a shot behind. The 1985 champion, Sandy Lyle of Scotland, bogeyed six holes in a round of 76.

Green and Australian George Taylor wasted chances to close the gap on Davis.

Playing in the afternoon and evening, when rain hit as the winds picked up and changed direction, Green moved to within two strokes of the lead when he holed a 58-yard wedge shot at 17 for an eagle 3.

But at the 18th, Green said he "calmly choked," taking a bogey 5.

TAYLOR WAS two under on the front nine and went to three under with a birdie 2 on the 13th hole before double bogeying both 15 and 18.

He was among 10 players at 69, with the group also including five-time Open champion Tom Watson, pre-tournament favorite Bernhard Langer and 1982 Masters champion Craig Stadler.

Stadler, too, could have been closer to the lead. But his offense was a shot he made, not a shot he missed.

On the par-5 fifth hole, Stadler mistakenly thought that the rule allowing a drop of an embedded ball was in force. He lifted his ball in the rough and went on to birdie the hole. However, a spectator brought it to the attention of officials and Stadler was penalized two strokes, changing a 67 into a 69.

"Some day I'm going to learn the rules," Stadler said. He was stripped of a runner-up finish at San Diego earlier this year when someone who was watching on television called the course and advised that Stadler had broken a rule. On that occasion he was disqualified the next day for signing an incorrect scorecard.

A RETURN to the American tour is the goal for Davis, who more than tripled his prize money last year, when he won the European PGA Championship.

"Since then, I guess I've won half a million dollars," he said. "This year, I am trying to get my playing card in the States. It wasn't really with that in mind that I came to the Open."

But with his top performance this year being a second in Monte Carlo a month ago, Davis knew a standout effort here would only help his chances.

"Why do I want to play in the U.S.?" Davis said, repeating the question. "One of the main reasons is that the competition is stronger per player, and the money is also a lot bigger. It's an incentive."

Davis used strong iron play and steady putting to build a round just one stroke off the Open record and the best at Muirfield since the course was changed in 1980.

He birdied the second and third holes with long putts, the fifth with the help of a sand wedge, the seventh with a 10-foot putt and the ninth after pitching within two feet.

The 10th hole was his lone bogey, and he got it back with a birdie on the 13th, where he hit a 6-iron from the tee within eight feet. Long putts that ended inches short helped save pars on the next three holes, and Davis capped the round with two birdies, the final one finished with a 12-foot putt.

As good as the round was, Davis said it could have been better.

"You don't want to say you're unlucky shooting seven under, but this could have been anything," Davis said.

Faldo owns early Day 2 lead

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (AP) — Nick Faldo of England celebrated his birthday one day ahead of schedule today, splashing into the early second-round lead at the British Open as the weather on Scotland's east coast took a dreadful turn.

Faldo, winner of this year's Spanish Open and a consistent British Open performer, shot 2-under par 69 for a two-round total of 5-under 137.

Nick Price of South Africa, who also started the day 3-under, bogeyed twice in the front nine around an eagle-3 on the eighth hole and barely missed a birdie putt at 17, then bogeyed the 18th for an even-par 70 and 36-hole total of 139.

Making a strong run at the lead was American Tom Watson.

Aiming for a record-tying sixth Open title, Watson was 3-under for the round and 5-under for the tournament through 13 holes, despite a pair of bogeys on the front nine.

Raymond Floyd of the United States, playing in the same threesome as Faldo and Price, had the best round of the early starters, putting together four birdies for a 3-under 68 to go with an opening-day 72 for a 140 total.

Mattingly homers in sixth straight

Associated Press

It was another grand night for Don Mattingly.

"I just found a swing five or six days ago," said Mattingly, who continued to swing one of the hottest bats in the major leagues with two home runs Thursday to lead the New York Yankees to a 12-3 victory over the Texas Rangers. "Something just clicked. I haven't hit a home run that I was trying to hit."

Mattingly tied an American League record by homering in his sixth consecutive game and equaled a Yankee record with his fourth grand slam of the season. Lou Gehrig set the record in 1934 and Tommy Henrich matched it in 1948.

The homers were Mattingly's eighth in the last six games, two shy of the six-game record of 10 set by Frank Howard of the Washington Senators in 1968. Dale Long of the Pittsburgh Pirates holds the major league record for homering in consecutive games, with eight in 1956.

Since coming back from the disabled list late in June because of a back injury, Mattingly has batted .423 and collected 10 homers to bring his season's total to 16.

Mattingly drove in a career-high seven runs, as he hit a bases-loaded homer in the second inning and a two-run shot in the eighth. He also drove in a run with a first-inning groundout.

Charlie Hough, 10-5, was the victim of Mattingly's slam, which made the Yankee first baseman the seventh American League player to hit home runs in six consecutive games.

Winner Ron Guidry, 2-4, pitched 5⅔ innings, allowed two runs on seven hits, walked four and struck out four in a game that was delayed one hour, 43 minutes at the start because of rain. Three relievers finished up.

Rangers catcher Mike Stanley, meanwhile, tied the AL record for passed balls in a game with five. Additionally, Stanley had a throwing error.

American League

Indians 4, White Sox 3

Cory Snyder hit a three-run homer and Sammy Steward provided clutch relief pitching as Cleveland made Doc Edwards' debut as manager a successful one with a victory over Chicago.

"I never had any doubt that Snyder and the other players were good hitters and while I know we can hit, I've got to get the players to respect themselves again," Edwards said. "I want us to play to win more than we lose. We've got to get our pride back to last year's level."

Edwards, the Indians' bullpen coach, took over when Pat Corrales was fired earlier in the day.

Snyder's homer in the first and a solo shot by Mel Hall in the sixth gave the Indians their first win in four decisions against Richard Dotson, 7-6.

Scott Bailes, 3-2, got the win with relief help from Stewart, who got the last five outs for his first save. Stewart pitched out of trouble after Bailes left the game in the eighth with one out and runners on first and third.

Blue Jays 5, Twins 2

Jesse Barfield's four hits and Jimmy Key's pitching led Toronto over Minnesota. Barfield had a double, three singles and one RBI.

Key, 10-6, allowed six hits and two earned runs in six innings. Tom Henke, who struck out pinch-hitter Randy Bush with two outs and the bases loaded in the ninth, picked up his 18th save.

Loser Bert Blyleven, 8-7, allowed five runs and 10 hits in 7⅔ innings. The Blue Jays have won all five games against the Twins this season by a combined score of 41-8.

Brewers 6, Angels 4

Ernest Riles capped a four-run second inning with a two-run single, and Rob Deer hit his 21st homer as Milwaukee beat California.

Teddy Higuera, 8-7, won for the third time in his last four starts, but needed relief help from Mark Clear and Dan Plesac.

Clear pitched out of a two-on, one-out jam in the seventh after the Angels had scored twice, and Plesac pitched the final two innings for his 19th save.

Deer hit his fifth homer in seven games to spark the second-inning rally that gave the Brewers a 4-1 lead they never lost.

Tigers 3, Mariners 2

Kirk Gibson broke a 2-2 tie with his 12th home run leading off the seventh inning to lift Detroit over Seattle behind Walt Terrell's nine-hitter.

AP Laserphoto

Pat Corrales couldn't get the job done for Cleveland so they gave the job to bullpen coach Doc Edwards

Gibson's homer at Tiger Stadium was off Seattle starter Mike Moore, 3-11.

Terrell, 7-8, survived four doubles, walked three and struck out two in his third complete game of the season.

Seattle took a 2-0 lead in the fourth on an RBI single by Gary Matthews and sacrifice fly by David Valle. But the Tigers tied it in their half, one run scoring on a single by Tom Brookens and another on an error by Seattle second baseman Harold Reynolds.

Athletics 6, Red Sox 3

Alfredo Griffin had three hits and Luis Polonia had two and both figured in a tie-breaking, three-run seventh inning to lead Oakland over Boston.

Dave Stewart, 12-7, earned his fifth consecutive victory, scattering five hits before needing seventh-inning relief help from Dennis Eckersley, who picked up his seventh save.

Boston right-hander Roger Clemens, 8-7, last year's Cy Young winner in the American League, was 4-0 in six previous starts.

The victory enabled Oakland to move to within one game of AL West leader Minnesota.

Orioles 5, Royals 4

Billy Ripken singled Ken Gerhart into scoring position and Cal Ripken Jr. drove him in with the go-ahead run, leading Baltimore over Kansas City.

Mike Boddicker, 7-4, picked up the victory, while Tom Niedenfuer gained his third save by getting the final out. The loser was Charlie Leibrandt, 8-8.

With the game tied 3-3, Gerhart singled leading off the seventh. With one out, Billy Ripken singled and then Cal Jr. greeted reliever Steve Farr with a fielder's-choice grounder that forced his brother but scored Gerhart with the go-ahead run.

Expos 2, Braves 0

Floyd Youmans pitched a three-hitter for his second consecutive shutout and Hubie Brooks drove in two runs with a home run and sacrifice fly as Montreal beat Atlanta for the Expos' fourth straight victory.

Youmans, 7-3, struck out five and walked five en route to his sixth straight winning decision. In his last game, Youmans pitched a one-hitter to beat Houston, 1-0.

Doyle Alexander, 4-6, retired the first 12 Montreal batters before Tim Wallach opened the bottom of the fifth with a triple. Brooks followed with a long fly to center, scoring Wallach. Brooks led off the Expos' seventh with his eighth homer.

Dodgers 7, Pirates 0

Fernando Valenzuela pitched a seven-hitter for his first shutout of the season and the first against Pittsburgh this year.

Valenzuela, 8-7, struck out eight, walked four and induced four double plays. It was the left-hander's 27th career shutout and his first since May 24, 1986. The complete game was his seventh of the year, tying him with the Pirates' Rick Reuschel for the NL lead.

Mike Marshall walked leading off the Dodgers' second against Bob Kipper, 5-7, and Mickey Hatcher followed with his fifth homer of the season. Hatcher has hit in 11 of his last 12 games, including 12 runs batted in. Mariano Duncan also homered for the host Dodgers.

Cubs 4, Giants 1

Jamie Moyer pitched four-hit ball for 6 2-3 innings and Andre Dawson hit a two-run double as Chicago beat San Francisco at Candlestick Park.

All the hits off Moyer, 9-6, were singles. The left-hander, who walked two and struck out four, was relieved by Scott Sanderson in the seventh after Chris Speier ended the shutout bid with a run-scoring pinch hit single. Sanderson finished the game for his second save.

Ryne Sandberg had a sacrifice fly and Leon Durham hit his 16th homer for the Cubs' other runs.

Padres 9, Cardinals 8

Benito Santiago homered off reliever Todd Worrell with one out in the bottom of the 10th inning to lift San Diego over St. Louis.

Worrell, 4-4, enetered the game in the 10th and struck out Chris Brown leading off. But Santiago ended the game with his eighth home run of the season, a drive over the right field wall.

"I knew it was gone as soon as I hit it," Santiago said.

Lance McCullers, 5-6, pitched one inning for the victory.

The Cardinals are 10-2 in extra inning games this season.

49 receptions for 770 yards, compared to 74 receptions for 1,113 yards in 1985.

"We just felt that the time had come and we needed to make a change for the best interest of the club and Tony Hill himself," Landry said. "I like Tony very much. It's one of the toughest things I have to do when I have to let a veteran go."

Hill indicated to Landry that he wanted to continue playing, and another NFL team could claim him.

Hill was not at home Thursday when The Associated Press tried to reach him for comment, and did not immediately return messages left with his wife.

Earlier, Landry had said that Hill did not appear to be heeding warnings that more would be expected this off-season of Cowboys veterans than ever before following a 7-9 record in 1986, the team's first losing season in 21 years.

"He knew he hadn't been working," Landry said.

Hill was a standout at Stanford University, breaking all of former San Francisco 49ers All-Pro Gene Washington's receiving records. He led the Cowboys in receiving yards for eight straight years.

But Hill lost his starting position last year to Sherrard, becoming the first player in the club's history to lose a starting position during the off-season.

Cowboys running back Tony Dorsett said Thursday he was surprised by Hill's release.

"I would guess a guy of his caliber would be given the benefit of the doubt. I still feel Tony can play football," Dorsett said. "I'd like to see that seasoned leadership out there in the wide receiver department. It could be beneficial to the young players."

Cowboys quarterback Danny White agreed.

"We're going to miss him, me particularly," White said. "It's almost like losing your left arm. I've worked with him for 10 years, and it's going to take a real effort on everyone's part to take up the slack."

Last year, wide receiver Mike Renfro threatened to retire if Hill remained on the team, but he decided to stay when Sherrard was placed ahead of Hill on the roster.

LANDRY

we're trying to get back on track, and it's going to take us a little while to turn it around," he said.

Cowboys President Tex Schramm said Landry, whose contract expired at the end of the 1986 season, told him of his decision Wednesday.

"It just shows a very renewed determination on his part, that he hasn't tired of the challenges," Schramm said. "His position has always been when the game was no longer fun, when it no longer commanded his attention, he was going to quit. Now he has incentive and determination to get us back."

Although Schramm declined to disclose the amount, he said Landry's salary will be among the highest of NFL coaches. That means it could be about $1 million, since Don Shula of the Miami Dolphins was paid $900,000 last season and is expected to earn about $1 million this season.

"As always, he will be paid according to his success," Schramm said.

Landry, who will turn 63 before regular-season play opens Sept. 13, said he would have a contract negotiated by the time rookies report for training camp Sunday in Thousand Oaks, Calif.

"We'll sign something for this year. Everyone has to have a contract" when coaches step on the field for training camp.

Landry, who was a player, a player-coach and an assistant coach for the New York Giants before taking over as head coach of the Dallas expansion team, says he has worked harder during the off-season this year than any other period of his career.

"I just feel that this is a very important time in our history," he said. "It's time to blend in some new blood with our team. I am willing to take the time to do that."

Arkansas No. 1 in SWC, Sooners top national pick

DALLAS (AP) — Arkansas is the pre-season favorite of Dave Campbell's Texas Football magazine to win the 1987 Southwest Conference football championship, with Oklahoma getting the nod to take the national title.

Last year, the pre-season edition correctly predicted that Texas A&M would win the SWC. It's the second straight year for the magazine to pick Oklahoma for the national title. The Sooners finished second last year.

This year, there were some changes in SWC football with Southern Methodist blanked out by NCAA sanctions and three new coaches at the eight remaining schools.

"There's a story in the magazine on SMU's plight and then kind of a chart telling where all the SMU players scattered," Campbell, the editor-in-chief, said Thursday. "This is the first time we've ever had to do something like that in the 28-year history of the magazine."

A panel of football writers picked A&M to finish second behind Arkansas, with Texas tagged for third and Texas Christian for fourth.

Campbell said Arkansas hasn't been chosen to win the conference since 1978. Houston wound up as the champion that year.

"Everything points to Arkansas," Campbell said.

When schools juggled their schedules after the NCAA banned football at SMU for 1987 and the school voluntarily scrapped the 1988 season, Texas picked one of the toughest opponents, adding Auburn to the schedule, Campbell said.

Campbell said a game to watch this season will be Arkansas vs. Texas A&M on Nov. 14.

USBL vice president Mike Bovino said Richardson and Tampa Bay's Tony Karasek each were automatically suspended for one game for fighting in a game July 9. Richardson was scheduled to sit out Thursday night's game.

Bovino said Richardson, coach Henry Bibby and the team's ownership was made aware of the suspension via written memo, and that the USBL turned down an appeal by the Jammers' owners that the suspension be waived.

Three Midland Little League teams unbeaten

From Staff Reports

Big Spring — Three of the five Midland Little League teams are still unbeaten in playoff action here this week.

Mid-City opened play Monday night with a 6-0 victory over Big Spring's Texas League for the first Tall City victory. Tuesday, Tower notched a 1-0 decision over defending champion Odessa James Parker and Wednesday Midland North Central edged cross-town rival Western, 5-1.

In other league action, Eastern opened play Monday on a sour note, losing to Big Spring American, 5-2. However, Eastern rebounded Wednesday to eliminate Big Spring Texas, 9-2.

Tonight, Tower returns to action against Big Spring National at the American League Field while North Central plays on the National League field. Saturday, Mid-City plays Big Spring American at the National League field while Eastern plays on the AL field. All games both days are scheduled for 8 p.m.

The tournament has more than a week left to run. On Saturday, June 25, the surviving teams will meet for the championship game on the NL field at 8 p.m. Should a second game be necessary, it will be played July 27 at NL field at 8 p.m.

#HTR3009
$100 OFF sug. retail price
#HTR3811
$150 OFF sug. retail price

Both our riding mowers and our automobiles feature advanced Honda Overhead Valve engine technology. Both are extremely maneuverable and easy to drive. Both share an impressive reputation for reliability. (Honda has been Car-of-the-Year twice in the past 6 years.)

See your local dealer. He'll be happy to demonstrate how, for the price of a riding mower, you can own a Honda.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

SATURDAY, JULY 18, 1987

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Be yourself both in business and when you go out socially. To know you is to love and admire you! A leadership post could become yours in the fall if you maneuver yourself into the right place at the right time. Determine what is really important to you and give it top priority. The ideal partner may already have entered your life. Look around.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Broadway giant Hume Cronyn, Ohio Sen. John Glenn, skater Dick Button, mime-comedian Red Skelton, character actor Chill Wills, actress-singer Harriet Nelson, California Angels broadcaster Joe Torre, actor James Brolin of "Hotel."

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Today promises to bring you both fun and happiness. Major financial moves should be postponed until you can consult an expert. Deal with a frustrating situation without further delay. Speak from the heart.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The breakup of a relationship is never easy, but you have what it takes to survive. A feeling of anxiety disappears following a heart-to-heart chat. You enjoy new peace of mind.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A major travel assignment could come your way this weekend. Be prepared to make a quick getaway. Take a step-by-step approach to buying or selling a home. Read for real pleasure.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Put your own needs first this weekend. Spending some quiet time reading and thinking would be in your best interest. Car problems may be a headache if you travel. Allow extra time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Some negative news floating around the social circuit is false. Tend to your own affairs and ignore those who gossip. Fun in the sun brings you closer to a loved one or friend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Little things mean a lot to people who live alone. Make a loaf of bread or pick flowers from your garden. A romantic phone conversation stimulates wonderful fantasies. Do not go overboard.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Family members are in a cooperative mood. Spend the day in the country or by the pool. Continue to guard against wild spending. Romance requires discrimination and discretion. Be more selective.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are happy to take care of some business matters today. Accounting and bookkeeping tasks figure prominently in your plans. Try to get a clearer picture of where you stand financially.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your intuition may not be reliable today. Certain people or situations may not be what they appear. Reduce the amount of money you are spending on creative projects. A friend helps with a problem.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make this a family day. Any contact with influential people will prove beneficial. You get an opportunity to mix business with pleasure. Avoid all forms of gambling. There is no "sure thing."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You could prefer the company of friends to family today. Steer clear of gambling. By evening, the atmosphere at home will have improved. Go ahead and exchange confidences with mate. Love conquers all!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Seek pleasure in ways that are intellectually stimulating. It would be foolish to indulge in heavy sports if you are out of shape. Children are a source of joy, cater to their special needs.

It might seem strange for declarer to complain that he held too many trumps. That plaint falls on deaf ears if he could have done something about it.

East went up with the ace at the first trick and shifted to the queen of diamonds to dummy's ace. A trump to the king revealed the bad break, and declarer tried to recover by cashing the king of hearts and then ruffing the queen. A diamond ruff was followed by a club to the ace and another diamond ruff, but declarer eventually had to concede two club tricks and a trump for down one.

As is often the case where declarer has long trumps, a wise precaution is to shorten his trumps as soon as possible. Thus, after winning the ace of diamonds at trick two, declarer should have ruffed a diamond at once. When he next cashes the king of trumps to find out about the break, he still has time to apply countermeasures.

He continues as above, using the two entries to dummy (ace of clubs and a heart ruff) to ruff two more diamonds. Then he simply exits with a club and sits back to score his last two trumps. In all, he will have collected seven (!) trump tricks (three high trumps, three ruffs in hand and one in dummy) and one in each side suit for a total of 10.

We have described this type of situation often. It can seldom do harm, and often a lot of good, to prepare to score your trumps singly if, by so doing, you do not risk losing control of the hand.

Joan Collins' estranged husband may be threat to her safety, lawyer says

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Actress Joan Collins should stay in Europe because her estranged husband Peter Holm, who picketed the mansion they shared, may threaten her safety, her attorney says.

"Frankly, she is concerned somewhat for her safety," celebrity divorce lawyer Marvin Mitchelson said Thursday. "In view of his behavior, I'm afraid to put her in his presence."

The lawyer said he would seek a court order today barring Holm from picketing the mansion the couple shared during a 13-month marriage.

Miss Collins, who plays the conniving Alexis Carrington Colby on ABC-TV's "Dynasty," had been due to return from London on Thursday.

The same day, Holm, 40, and a friend drew swarms of reporters and camera crews with a protest at the Hollywood Hills home, from which he was evicted last week after it was sold to producer Freddie Fields.

Holm, who eventually left the mansion peacefully, had threatened last week to shoot anyone who tried to evict him. "I take it as a danger when someone acts like that," Mitchelson said.

"There already is a standard court order enjoining him from harassing, molesting and annoying her, but we want an order specifically to stop this picketing," he said.

Holm and Miss Collins are engaged in a bitter divorce. Holm is seeking a property settlement for half the value of the mansion he estimates is worth $2.5 million. He also seeks $80,000 a month in temporary support while the property settlement is negotiated.

On Thursday, the former Swedish rock musician and a friend demonstrated at the corner of Coldwater Canyon Boulevard and Cabrillo Drive, near the secluded, gated mansion at the end of a cul-de-sac.

"I'm completely homeless. It's our home, and I want my share of it," said Holm.

At a court hearing Monday, Holm will seek the $80,000 a month in temporary support from Miss Collins, said Frank Steinschriber, Holm's attorney.

NEW YORK (AP) — Comedian Phyllis Diller, who turns 70 today, says she doesn't mind, but "my body is pretty steamed about it."

Miss Diller ushered in her birthday Thursday night with a raspberry cake, a roomful of friends and a male stripper who gyrated out of a policeman's uniform.

"It's really fun to be this age," said Miss Diller, emitting her famous laugh and rolling her eyes as the strip-a-gram was delivered. Asked the secret of her youthful appearance, she replied, "I think lovely thoughts. I'm constantly working on new material. And I bathe daily."

Miss Diller, whose routines ridicule her appearance, has had a face lift, tummy tuck and other cosmetic operations over the years, earning an award from the American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery for helping bring plastic surgery "out of the closet."

"I still go to them a lot," she said of cosmetic surgeons. "But my last operation was to have cobwebs taken out of me. Actually, after years of having things taken out, I'm at the point now where they're starting to put things back in."

• • •

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A new foundation headed by entertainer Bob Hope will act as a clearinghouse for donations to programs battling drug abuse, organizers said.

Hope Thursday announced the creation of Hope for a Drug-Free America, aimed at encouraging large corporate and private donations.

"Drugs have infiltrated every level of our society," said Hope. "American society might not survive as we know it unless the drug problem is solved."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jim Belushi has pleaded innocent to charges he attacked a man who spat on a car the actor was driving.

Belushi, the 34-year-old brother of the late comedian John Belushi, entered the plea Thursday through his lawyer. A preliminary hearing was set for July 31.

Belushi, charged with misdemeanor assault and battery, is accused of attacking Bobby Ray Henson, 43, a Santa Monica accountant, after Henson reportedly spat on Belushi's vehicle.

The 125-pound Henson suffered scratches and damaged teeth when the 195-pound Belushi tackled him, said Deputy City Attorney Peter Corvette.

Dance festival uses works of foreign choreographers

New York Times News Service

DURHAM, N.C. — Since 1984, the American Dance Festival has sponsored an International Choreographers Workshop that permits choreographers from around the world to attend the festival, take classes and share ideas. This year, four previous participants in the workshop — choreographers from Indonesia, India, Argentina and Spain — were invited back to create new dances for casts of festival students. The results were shown Sunday night at the Page Auditorium of Duke University.

The most striking of the pieces was by Deddy Luthan, a choreographer from Jakarta who seeks to achieve a synthesis of Indonesian and Western dance styles. In his "Imbauan Salvang," to recordings of traditional Indonesian music, dancers moved rhythmically as if taking part in a ceremony. Often, as in much Indonesian dance, the performers' palms were held outward or upward with fingers separated so that each finger could be seen as a distinct entity.

Then the tempo quickened and the choreography rushed ahead to the conclusion. During this episode the dancers remained seated on the floor. But that failed to limit them. There were exciting passages involving nothing but sharp turns of the head and increasingly rapid bendings to the side. And when Mr. Luthan had some members of his cast rise while everyone else bent low, he wove intricate designs in space out of only a few basic movements.

Although choreographed only this summer, "Imbauan Salvang" resembled an age-old ritual. And the student dancers who had just learned it convinced one they had been performing it all their lives.

The evening's other works derived from dramatic situations. Yet Bharat Sharma's "Utthaan" began by resembling an abstract study in changing energies. Dancers facing an incense burner launched into flowing, bending and twisting movements to an electronic score, by the choreographer, that sounded like winds and waves. However, the crouchings that came next made one realize why Mr. Sharma, a choreographer from New Delhi, described his piece as "A Sketch on Evolution" in his program note.

The liquid movements had been those of sea creatures and life was now developing on dry land.

Revenge is sweet for top film 'Revenge of the Nerds II'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Revenge was sweet for the gang of misfits in "Revenge of the Nerds II," who beat out the other summer movie heroes to become the top choice of moviegoers at the box office last weekend.

The comedy sequel about a bunch of nerds who take a break from college and head for the sun and fun of Fort Lauderdale earned $7.9 million in its debut weekend.

An equally impressive showing came from the surging "Full Metal Jacket," the Stanley Kubrick Vietnam War film, which rocketed from 11th place to second as it spread to 881 theaters. It earned $6.1 million in its third week for a total gross of $13 million.

Falling from first to third place was "Dragnet," the movie version of the popular television series.

Here are the top box-office films for the weekend, with distributor, weekend gross, number of screens, per-screen average, total gross, number of weeks in release and estimated production costs. Distributors supply the gross amount figures. Figures not available are indicated by n-a.

1. "Revenge of the Nerds II," 20th Century Fox, $7.9 million, 1,351 screens, $5,848 per screen, $7.9 million, one week, n-a.
2. "Full Metal Jacket," Warner Bros., $6.1 million, 881 screens, $6,901 per screen, $13 million, three weeks, n-a.

DON'T GO SWIMMING UNTIL YOU SEE THIS MOVIE AT NORTH PARK

WE OWE YOU AN APOLOGY.

All of us at Stop N Go want to offer a sincere apology.

In mid-June, many of our customers in the Dallas, Fort Worth, Midland and Odessa areas experienced performance problems with gasoline purchased at Stop N Go. It was discovered that an independent distribution company had delivered impure gasoline to some of our stores, as well as other local gasoline retailers.

After more than 25 years of selling billions of gallons of trouble-free gasoline to customers of Stop N Go stores across America, we were disappointed to see that our quality standards were not met with this one shipment of impure gas. Once this problem was discovered, we removed all the impure gasoline from our stores. And we have also changed our gasoline supplier as a result of this incident.

Stop N Go has built its reputation on quality products and services for our customers. So we want to give you our full assurance that all gasoline problems have been corrected.

We owe you more than just an apology. We owe you our thanks for your patience during this time. And our thanks for the confidence and patronage you have given us through the years.

It is our sincere hope that you will continue to look to Stop N Go for the trusted products, competitive prices and the consistent "good neighbor" service you deserve.

Again, our thanks.

V. H. Van Horn
President

SPECIAL
"Now my roommate & I don't fight over the the largest bedroom anymore. Thanks Saddle Club"

My roommate and I need our privacy. This apartment's perfect. We each have our own bedroom and bath.
Saddle Club is in a great location. And naturally, we have all the features and amenities the other apartment communities have. But, we also have something more.
The Saddle Club tradition of quality and service.

THE ENCLAVE

The French term "enclave" refers to small cultured group living as an entity within a larger community. The Enclave is nested in a choice location at Godfrey and Boyd, convenient to shopping, theaters, restaurants, etc. All units are 2 bedroom, 2 bath, with 2 car garage, private courtyards, ceiling fans, self-cleaning ovens, microwaves and vaulted ceilings.

697-9768 689-0781

Sutton Place

Sutton Place is beyond your expectations. Conveniently located just minutes from downtown, nestled among large old trees and gracious grounds. In the center lies a sparkling pool and cabana for relaxing moments. You probably wouldn't expect large spacious rooms, abundent closet space, fully equipped kitchens, private balconies or patios. But all these extras are standard at Sutton Place.

682-2423 601 George #98

Brighton Court

...Your setting for stylish living in Midland. Nestled in a garden of lushy landscaped walkways and winding cobblestone streets to capture the quaint ambiance of elegant townhome living. Large 2 and 3 bedrooms with vaulted ceilings, fireplaces, microwaves, self-cleaning ovens, large 2 car garage, plus lovely pool and cabana... much more.
