Austin plans party fit for a president

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

AUSTIN —The state capital is getting ready to kick up its heels tonight.

The guest of honor, a fellow who may find a new home on the East Coast, probably won't emerge from the governor's mansion until 10 p.m.

The hours leading up to Election Day have been a steady buzz.

Electric screw drivers. Hand-held saws.

Standing outside the gates to the capitol, Marilyn DuVon looked on as the workmen in blue T-shirts, employees of her Austin-based staging company, Eichenbaum Displays, touched up on the final details of what Republicans hope will be a very presidential stage.

"Solid granite," said a smiling Michael Flanagan as he cut through a wooden board, the exterior of which is painted in a style to match the state capitol's granite.

"We've had four people working on it every day since the Friday before last," Ms. DuVon said. "Full work days every day."

But most of the stage preparation took place indoors.

The actual setup didn't begin until early Monday morning, and for good reason.

"I'm glad we didn't put it out yesterday," Ms. DuVon said. "It just poured. When you get out here things change. They change hourly around here. Chaos. But that's the nature of our business."

Where Congress Avenue meets 11th Street in downtown Austin — this is party central. The streets have been blocked. Police cars actively patrol the area. Electrical and sound lines run the streets in every direction. Multiple JumboTrons are dispersed throughout the closed off streets. Finding a bathroom shouldn't be a problem; there are porto-potties for all. And if you're interested in brushing up on a foreign language, this is the place to be. Foreign journalists are everywhere — Japanese, Dutch, Mexican.

There's plenty to eat, too. Just behind The Tower, a huge stage for television media, sits a booth called the Per Diem Cafe. Per diem because most jour-

Midland's GOP crossing fingers for Bush victory

By Ed Todd

For 12 hours today, Midland voters so inclined to cast ballots for their favorite candidates in the general election will be driving or traipsing to 35 polling places.

"We are looking for a good turnout," said Midland County Elections Administrator Pat Eastup, who anticipates a turnout at least equal to the 23,680 Midlanders who cast ballots in the 12-day early-voting period that ended on Friday.

Polls will be open 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Moments after the polls close, Mrs. Eastup and her staff will electronically scan the early votes. Afterward, they will count the day's votes as they are brought into her office voting precinct by voting precinct.

Because of the times zones, the vote count on the East Coast will begin at 6 p.m. Midland time and on the West Coast at 9 p.m. Midland time.

The heavy early-voting draw in Midland apparently was prompted by the passion generated among Republicans for Gov. George W. Bush, the Republican Party's presidential nominee, and, like his father, former President George H.W. Bush, a one-time Midland resident.

The younger Bush spent much of his 1950s childhood years in Midland and returned in the mid-1970s and stayed in Midland until the late 1980s. He married a Midlander, the former Laura Welch.

"I'm confident that we are going to have more voting on Election Day than we had in absentee (early) voting," said Midland County Republican Party Chairman Sue Brannon.

"The interest is wonderful. Everybody in Midland wants to elect George W. Bush. And we (Republicans) are going to get out the vote."

Based on mock voting in Midland's public elementary and junior-high schools, the 54-year-

Today's White House contest promises to be the closest race in four decades.

Because states on the West Coast may not be reporting results until late in the night or perhaps in the wee hours of the morning, newspapers across the country will be struggling with deadlines. The Midland Reporter-Telegram will be coping with the same situation.

Bush and Gore campaigns seek last-minute momentum

WASHINGTON (AP) — George W. Bush and Al Gore campaigned through the final hours of their run for the White House on Monday, seeking last-minute momentum in a costly and exhausting race to become the nation's 43rd president.

The Texas governor said he trusted that Americans had "heard our message" — compassionate conservatism and a less intrusive government. The vice president urged a Democratic vote to maintain the nation's economic prosperity.

Gore anticipated a long count on election night, and joked that his first meal as president-elect would probably be breakfast. "But I'm going to make it a Happy Meal from McDonald's," he told an Iowa audience.

In Florida, Bush was confident he would return Republicans to the presidency lost by his father in 1992. "We've laid the groundwork for victory," he said, "now it's up (to us) to get people to the polls."

Candidates for the 107th Congress went through their final paces, Republicans and Democrats focusing their energy and money on four or five dozen highly contested races likely to determine control of the House and the Senate.

The airwaves were a blizzard of campaign advertising, with an advantage to Bush. From the start of his run through mid-October, the Texas governor had spent $138 million, including $56 million on

Election Day could end uncertainty on Wall Street

Investors are hoping that the uncertain stock market will get back on track after the votes are counted today.

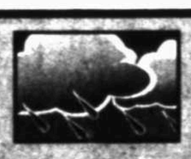

"The economy is in a slow-down mode right now and Alan Greenspan is still in charge of the Federal Reserve," said Midland investment specialist Tim Bryson. "So there probably will not be much change, although a slight pickup can probably be expected." Bryson alluded to the 1992 presidential election, immediately after which the stock market exploded, but said that drastic post-election market movement, in either direction, is unlikely this year.

The Kiplinger Editors, a Washington, D.C.-based forecasting group, echoed Bryson's predictions of overall stability, advising that investors should figure on a few days of generally manageable stock market gyrations following the election, regardless of which candidate wins.

Revised calendar could shorten Thanksgiving vacation

■ Legislature may require that school not start until after Labor Day.

By Danielle Belton
Staff Writer

It's Thanksgiving week. Do you know where your child is?

Your child could be in class if the Texas Legislature has anything to do with it.

If a new law mandating that all public schools must not start until after Labor Day wins approval, many local districts could find themselves scrambling to find days to round out the year. That means no more week-long Thanksgiving holidays. Last year the school pushed the holiday up so vacation would start in the middle of the week. Students, parents and teachers could be looking forward to more days in school.

To address this incoming issue the Midland Independent School District will hold a community forum to discuss next year's school calendar. Parents, community members, teachers and staff alike are invited to voice their concern at 7 p.m. Monday in the San Jacinto Junior High School Auditorium.

According to Midland Federation of Teachers President Steve Buck, the root of this hot-button issue is balancing the number of days students are in school, with the number of days they aren't.

"The real problem is we're starting school earlier and earlier," Buck said.

According to Buck, the calendar school year has been growing longer every year. Summer vacation, which used to last three months, now lasts less than 2 1/2 months. If the measure passes making an after-Labor Day start date a reality, administrators will be in a pinch to keep students in class for the state-mandated 180 days. Buck argues that with summer vacation and an after-Labor Day start there is little room for movement with such a tightly wound schedule. Therefore, week-long Thanksgiving holidays may soon be a fond memory.

MISD has scheduled a forum for 7 p.m. Monday at San Jacinto Junior High School to receive public input on the school calendar for the 2001-02 school year.

MISD has some options to get around the scheduling crunch. Some have suggested Saturday classes while others are contemplating the notion of year-round school. Buck said he thinks year-round schools are a viable option because of the program's past success in other Texas school districts, such as El Paso. Buck also argued that year-round school would work to the advantage of teachers because teachers in the secondary schools would be teaching only two or three subjects for a nine-week session.

LAST: Doug Flutie, Bill Cosby stump for Hillary Clinton radio and TV ads, according to the Campaign Study Group. Gore was at $94 million overall, including $41.5 million for broadcast ads.

The polls gave Bush a small edge in the popular vote, a position he gained after overtaking Gore in public opinion surveys during October. But the decisive Electoral College seemed less predictable. It takes 270 electoral votes, a majority, to win the White House. Key swing states included Florida (25 electoral votes); Pennsylvania (23); and Michigan (18); and an aggressive Bush campaign bid as well for Gore strongholds such as California (54) and Tennessee (11).

Some aides worried that Green Party candidate Ralph Nader would damage the vice president's chances of succeeding Bill Clinton by diluting the Democratic vote in swing states like Oregon and Wisconsin. Under pressure from Democratic liberals to back off, Nader countered: "...The only wasted vote is for someone you don't believe in."

Gore didn't express concern, saying, "I think by tomorrow (today), particularly with the election this close, most people are going to want to participate in the main choice."

The candidates' itinerary and pace told the story on the final day of a long and costly campaign.

Gore embarked on a 30-hour nonstop journey beginning in Iowa, then heading to Missouri, Michigan and Florida before flying home early Tuesday morning to Nashville, Tenn.

"I think that what is involved in this race is whether or not we are going to have policies that keep our economic good times rolling and extend them to the people who've not yet shared in those good times," the vice president said in an early morning interview on NBC's "Today."

"I have a passion to do what's right for your family," he said later in Flint, Mich., touching on issues ranging from health care to campaign finance reform to targeted tax cuts.

Bush's schedule projected his confidence: from Gore's home state of Tennessee, he flew to Wisconsin, Iowa and Arkansas, four states that Clinton carried twice, before returning to his residence in Austin.

"My opponent vows to carry his home state," Bush said in Chattanooga. Gore "may win Washington, DC, but he's not going to win Tennessee."

Later, in Green Bay, Wis., as he has in hundreds of stops in the past year, he said a Republican victory would mean "a fresh start after a season of cynicism" in Washington.

One survey suggested that Bush headed into Election Day with his supporters more enthusiastic than Gore's backers, a potential advantage in a close race. The poll, by Pew Research Center, found that 32 percent of Bush's voters said they strongly support him, compared to 26 percent for Gore's supporters.

Pat Buchanan, an asterisk in most polls, sounded like a man writing his own campaign's obituary.

"I've been able to influence, I think, over my career of 35 years, ... a lot of policies and a lot of decisions," he said. "But this does not appear to be the best format to do it."

Just beneath the presidential line on the ballot, some of the most memorable congressional campaigns in years were nearing an end. Democrats need to gain eight seats to wrest control of the House; and five in the Senate.

Hillary Rodham Clinton, trying to make history as the first first lady to win a Senate seat, campaigned through New York with comedian Bill Cosby and Buffalo Bills quarterback Doug Flutie.

"I know some people say she is from out of state," said Flutie. "Doug Flutie's from out of state but we fight hard. We try to deliver for Buffalo and she will, too." Her opponent, Rep. Rick Lazio, sought support in the New York City suburbs.

In next-door New Jersey, investment banker Jon Corzine tested the limits of self-financing. Dipping into his own pocketbook for a record $50 million or more, he faced a surprising challenge from Rep. Bob Franks.

Half a continent away, Gore made a pitch for the late Missouri Gov. Mel Carnahan, whose name remains on the ballot for a Senate seat. "You know what we say, keep the fires burning," the vice president said in St. Louis. "It means to vote for Mel Carnahan and send his partner, who shares his hopes and values, to the United States Senate." Carnahan's widow, Jean, has said she would accept appointment to the Senate if her late husband is victorious against Sen. John Ashcroft today.

Among the House races, Rep. Jim Rogan fought to hold his seat in southern California in an $8 million battle with State Sen. Adam Schiff that will end up to be the costliest House race in history. The results will be closely watched in Washington where Rogan was a leader in the successful effort to impeach Clinton.

The political parties assembled massive get-out-the-vote operations.

Karl Rove, Bush's chief strategist, said that in the campaign's final 10 days, the governor's operation would place 70 million phone calls, send 110 million pieces of mail and deploy 243,000 volunteers in 28 states.

Democrats geared up too, buttressed by allies in organized labor and a celebrity or two. Actors Jimmy Smits and Janelle Maloney, of "The West Wing," were on the final day of a three-day fly-around for Democratic candidates, with stops in Iowa, Wisconsin and Illinois.

"Go door to door and keep working the phone banks," Republican vice presidential candidate Dick Cheney told volunteers in Nevada.

POLLS: Schools' mock elections give win to Bush

(From 1A)

old Bush may win about 87 percent of the Midland vote.

"That's what the schools are reporting," Mrs. Brannon said. The mock elections "pretty well tell you what the parents are thinking."

Among the Democrats in a predominantly Republican community, Vice President Al Gore, the 52-year-old Democratic Party's presidential nominee, is their apparent major draw to the polls.

Michael Higgins, the Midland County Democratic Party chairman, said that Midland Democrats are "very proud of all of our candidates" and that "we support each and every one ... vigorously. ..."

Higgins, who is set on rebuilding the Democratic Party in Midland, said that "the people of Midland County will be better served by the checks and balances of two-party government."

Impact of the vote for the Green Party's presidential nominee, Ralph Nader, 66, "will be negligible," Higgins said.

"It could have an impact (nationwide)," Higgins noted. "But I believe Gore will be able to overcome that."

From her vantage, Mrs. Brannon said that the Nader vote "is going to help George Bush very definitely" by siphoning off Gore votes.

Nationwide, according to U.S. Census projections, there are about 205 million citizens of voting age. In Texas, the count is about 14.8 million.

Of the Electoral College's 538 electoral votes which are used to elect the president rather than by the majority of the citizens' votes nationwide, Texas has 32 electoral votes to cast for the presidential nominee who musters a majority of the statewide vote. All told, a majority of at least 270 electoral votes are required to elect the president.

Each state's vote ranges from a low of three to California's 54 — the highest. The District of Columbia has three electoral votes.

"I think it (voter turnout) is going to be high," said Mrs. Brannon, who noted that "so many people" had wanted to cast their votes on Election Day rather than in early voting.

However, Higgins figured that, "based on our early-voting results, I'd say another 10,000 to 15,000 more voters" would cast ballots today.

"I think the impetus (behind early voting) is that Texas has one of the most liberal early-voting statutes in the country," Higgins said, "and that people are just getting use to the convenience of early voting."

The 23,680 Midland early votes exceeded the previous early-vote high count of 21,347 in 1992's general election when Bush's father, then-President George H.W. Bush, a Republican, was challenged by Democrat Bill Clinton. Bush's lost his re-election bid.

However, percentage-wise in 1992, the early vote was 41 percent of the then-51,714 registered voters and is a greater percentage than the 33 percent of Midland's 71,500 registered voters who voted early in the 2000 general election.

And if that 71,500 number were pared down to the estimated 61,500 "active" Midland voters in 2000, the percentage would ease on up to 39 — still short of record percentage-wise, Mrs. Eastup noted. "It's been a good turnout," she said of the early vote.

While Higgins said that he is encouraged in the rebuilding of the Democratic Party in Midland, Mrs. Brannon said that she was "just really encouraged" by early-vote turnout and prospects of heavy vote today.

Mrs. Brannon said that the church she attends was to hold a prayer meeting on the eve of the election "to pray for this election and that the godly man will win and that the (the people) shall turn back to God."

Mrs. Brannon said that the election returns "definitely (will make for) a long election night.

"Some of the states that vote by paper ballot and turn them back in, if they end up being the key states, it could be as late as Friday before we know the complete results."

However, "I hope it's pretty cut-and-dry and a landslide (for Bush)," Mrs. Brannon said.

The Midland County Republican Women at 7 p.m. today will host a "Win, Lose, or Draw" Bush celebration in the downtown Midland Hilton and Towers' Ballroom, Mrs. Brannon noted. Admission is $7.50 a person.

Bill Collyns, who at almost 92 is a former Midland newspaper editor dating back to 1946 and Midland newspaper writer and Midland Chamber of Commerce manager and World War II Army veteran before that, noted the changing political times.

"We would have election-night parties out in front of the paper," Collyns recalled. "We had a big glass window, and we would post the returns as they came in. And everybody came down and gathered around. It was a different world entirely back in those days — (Franklin Delano) Roosevelt (times) and others.

"People got pictures of the people (candidates) out of magazines and newspapers. It wasn't until later on when you had to be a pretty good looking fellow to be elected" because of the impact of television after the 1950s.

"I'll tell you what, if you are not big and strong and athletically inclined and whatnot, you better not run for office," Collyns said. "It's a different world."

PARTY: Caterer prepares food for visiting journalists

(From 1A)

nalists in town are limited in how much they can spend on food per day. Austin-based G&M Catering is running the booth. Cesar Perez, one of the cooks, was busy preparing for the impending lunch business.

"Today we're going to put in 14 to 16 hours. We're going to work late," he says with a big smile.

Perez's boss, Charles Well, laughs and shakes his head.

"We got here at 4 a.m. this morning. We'll probably be here until 8 p.m. With 1,500 journalists, we'll have sold at least 4,500 hamburgers before the day is over."

But the work doesn't bother Perez, who, with a big smile, said he has a reason to be happy. "The work is all worth it. George W. Bush is only half as good as he can be today. Tomorrow, when he becomes president, he'll be perfect."

The George W. Bush campaign is anticipating that more than 20,000 people will congregate here for election night. And with the race being as tight as it is, partygoers may not know until early Wednesday morning if their candidate has been crowned president.

Hoping to drum up more support, Bush spent most of Monday campaigning in Wisconsin, Iowa, Arkansas and competitor Al Gore's home state of Tennessee, all of which are considered up for grabs, according to recent polls.

the election, while pharmaceuticals are expected to fall if Al Gore wins. However, the Kiplinger group anticipates "no big shift in the economic winds" as a result of today's election.

The Dow closed up 159.26 at 10,977.21, losing some ground after hitting 11,000 for the first time since mid-September. The average has climbed more than 1,000 points in the 13 trading days since Oct. 18, when it fell as low as 9,571.40; this was the Dow's fastest 1,000-point gain ever.

Mike Moore, senior investment specialist with First Union Securities of Midland, was somewhat more optimistic, however, saying that the election may cause the traditionally predictable January rally to arrive a little earlier than usual.

"October was weak," Moore said. "But due to the current uncertainty, there is a lot of built-up cash sitting on the sidelines right now that investors will likely be putting back into the market after the election."

Moore said that although there are many other cross-currents to be considered, he believes that investors still have plenty of faith in the stock market, and he remains bullish for the immediate future.

Some market activity tends to support Moore's assertions, especially in certain areas where investors are apparently putting their faith in a Bush victory. Drug stocks such as Pfizer, Eli Lilly & Co. and Merck & Co., which are expected to fall if Gore wins, led the Standard & Poor's 500 Index to a gain of 7.38, or 0.5 percent, to 1434.07 on Monday.

Gore proposes putting price restrictions on certain drugs, which would bring their stock values down.

According to the Kiplinger group, the Republicans are expected to retain control of the Senate. Therefore, a Bush victory would put an end to the current gridlock on Capitol Hill, which could potentially help certain stocks. However, the same situation could be detrimental to other stocks, because party lines in the Senate and House would most likely become more sharply divided.

CAMPAIGN 2000 IN BRIEF

■ Bush, Gore make their final pushes

With the presidential contest still neck and neck a day before the nation votes, Al Gore and George W. Bush made their final sustained pushes Monday through battleground states. Bush promised "a sprint to the finish," while Gore told audiences it's time "to move your feet." Both candidates emphasized get-out-the-vote drives, hoping to energize their core supporters and reach still-undecided voters. Bush was traveling and campaigning today in Chattanooga, Tenn., Green Bay, Wis., Davenport, Iowa, and Bentonville, Ark. Gore went to Waterloo, Iowa, St. Louis, Flint, Mich., and Tampa, Fla.

■ Bush campaign exudes confidence

In an in-your-face gesture, George W. Bush began his final campaign day in rival Al Gore's home state and was ending it in President Clinton's, predicting victory in both. Bush and top advisers projected an air of invincibility today, though polls showed the presidential race as very close. Campaign officials were even talking about schools, neighborhoods and real-estate prices in Washington. "We're coming down the stretch. I feel optimistic. I like what I feel," Bush told an airport rally in Chattanooga as several thousand supporters chanted "One more day" and "Help is on the way." Besides Tennessee and Arkansas, Bush also had stops in Wisconsin and Iowa before returning to Texas to vote today and await the election results.

■ Gore: It's in the hands of the people

In the midst of campaigning round the clock Monday, Al Gore appeared with wife Tipper on all three major network's networks' morning shows. In a wind-blown cold rain, he addressed about 100 campaign volunteers this morning in Waterloo, Iowa. "You are the ones who are going to make a difference in this race," he said. "That's what's going to win this race." The closeness of the election, he said, means that voter turnout will be key and volunteer operations essential. "Once again, it's in your hands, and I know it's in good hands," Gore said.

■ Poll: Bush lead down to one point

George W. Bush's lead over Al Gore fell to a single percentage point in Sunday's Reuters/MSNBC national tracking poll, and six key battleground states remained too close to call. The national survey, conducted Friday through Sunday by pollster John Zogby, found the Texas governor with 47 percent and the vice president with 46 percent. With a 3 percentage point margin of error, the race is too close to call. With the national poll this close, attention swings to a few battleground states where the election will be decided. Separate Reuters/MSNBC polling showed Gore securely ahead in Michigan and Illinois, and Bush appearing to have Ohio sewn up. But Florida, Missouri, Washington, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania and Tennessee all remained within a 4 percentage point margin of error.

■ Lieberman solicits votes over the phone

Joe Lieberman visited a local Democratic headquarters in St. Paul., Minn., dialing 85-year-old Marie Connelly. "Hey Marie, believe it or not, this is Joe Lieberman. I am running for vice president," he said. Lieberman later said Connelly's response was, "Aw, come on." But he persisted: "It really is me; it is not a recorded announcement." Connelly said she was voting for him and Gore. "Ah, you are wonderful. You made my morning. I love you," Lieberman told her.

■ Cheney follows lead, phones voters

Dick Cheney picked up the phone in Las Vegas and told a voter, "Hello, this is Dick Cheney. No, I really am; it really is me. Need a ride to the polls or anything?" Cheney later told volunteers, "Tomorrow marks the end of the Clinton-Gore era."

■ Clinton begs voters to tip the balance

Courting loyal supporters at home in a presidential battleground state, President Clinton played drum major for Al Gore's march for the White House. Before 1,500 cheering Democrats at a rally in Pine Bluff, Ark., Clinton said he's sweating the election results but remains optimistic that Gore will eke out a victory. Clinton said he has pored over state-by-state polls and found more than a dozen states that could still go either way. He said Arkansas' six electoral votes could be the difference. "This may or may not be the closest race in 40 years," he told campaign workers in Little Rock, "but I'm absolutely convinced that if our folks show, we win."

■ Gore leads prayer on campaign trail

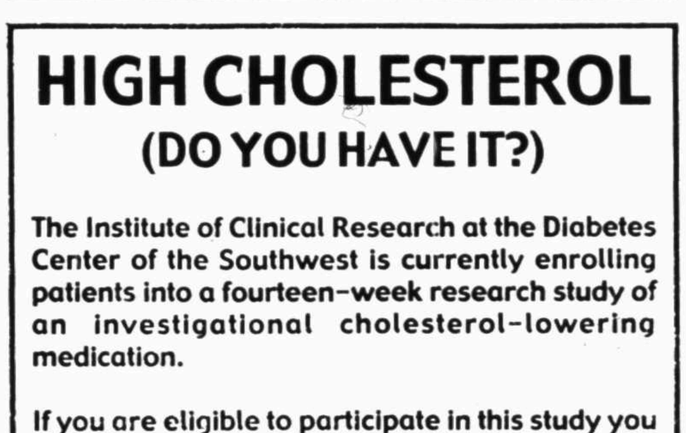

Al Gore interrupted a campaign speech to electrical union members in Pittsburgh on Saturday night to lead an impromptu prayer for a man in the audience felled by a heart attack. Then, at a rally Sunday night in Dearborn, Mich., Gore had to summon a doctor — his son-in-law, in fact — after a man in the crowd fainted. In Pittsburgh, Gore asked people to bow their heads, and offered a prayer as medical technicians tended to the stricken man. When the man fainted in Dearborn, Gore halted the rally and asked if there was a doctor in the house. There was: Drew Schiff, an internist at New York Hospital and Karenna Gore Schiff's husband. Schiff watched over the man until medics arrived.

American Home Improvement installs energy-saving windows

With our recent bout of cool, wet weather, you may have noticed cold drafts leaking in around your windows. Or maybe you'd like to be able to open those windows and feel a cool breeze, but you can't because they're stuck or even painted shut. Why put up with that any longer? Call American Home Improvement and let them show you how brand new, vinyl insulated windows can improve the comfort of your home—and save on your utility bills.

Save on your energy bills with easy-cleaning, energy efficient vinyl windows from American Home Improvement.

The sooner you have these windows installed, the sooner you'll start saving money, winter or summer. One customer had American Home Improvement replace all his old windows with cozy, insulated ones—and began saving $100 per month on his air conditioning bills. "At that rate, his windows will pay for themselves in energy savings in a few years," notes American Home Improvement's Hillary Kilpatrick. Those same windows will help his furnace work less during the cold winter months.

Many experts believe high energy costs will be with us for the foreseeable future. Insulated windows will help you fight back against those higher bills.

These attractive, maintenance-free windows keep out dust and hot or cold drafts. Titanium low-E glass also fights the sun's heat and its ultra violet rays that fade furniture, carpet, wallpaper and other furnishings. Titanium low-E glass blocks UV rays 1,000 times better than regular double pane glass. You can see for yourself how they block the sun's heat—ask for a free in-home sun lamp demonstration.

Because they're made of vinyl, there are two things you'll never have to worry about—painting them or unjamming them. The color goes all the way through, so you'll never see spots without it. And vinyl slides against vinyl in opening and closing, so they can't stick. These windows tilt in to make cleaning a breeze.

American Home Improvement is so sure of the quality of these windows they offer a lifetime warranty on them—good as long as you own your home.

Installations are done by American Home Improvement's expert crews. Hillary says they do the complete installation and clean-up, so all you have to do after they leave is enjoy your sparkling new windows. The company, in Odessa for years, has recently added an office in Midland. It's in the Courtyard at Midland Park, directly across Midkiff from the Mall.

Why mess around with those old windows any longer? They're drafty and dusty—and they're probably costing you a lot of money in cooling and heating bills. Call American Home Improvement today for a free estimate—and watch your utility bills fall!

American Home Improvement has been locally owned and operated for 17 years. Call them at 520-5318 in Midland or 550-7224 in Odessa for a free estimate and home demonstration. Their Midland location is 4410 North Midkiff, next to Sugarbaker's.

Now is the best time to have your trees pruned

If you have tree branches that need to be cut out of the way, or trees that need to be thinned to let in more light, this is the right time of the year to have that done. Charlie Cook, owner of Precision Landscape Maintenance, explains, "Trees heal much faster in mild weather than in summer's heat."

Charlie Cook (center) and the Precision Landscape Maintenance staff are ready to shape up your trees this fall.

There are several reasons to prune trees. Trees that grow by themselves tend to develop large low limbs, leaving weak branches that can break off. Low branches also get in the way when you're in the yard. Precision can prune your trees to promote the right kind of growth. Removing dangerous dead branches can spur proper growth as well.

Pruning helps your landscape by letting in more light, allowing grass or flowers to flourish.

Branches touching the roof or rubbing against your house, carport or other structures need to be removed before damaging the structure and the tree.

Charlie is a native Midlander who has been in the landscape business here for many years. He is fully insured for your protection. No job is too big or too small.

Let Don Franks, TXU and Carrier save you up to $600

Install a Carrier system, get cash back

If your old furnace/air conditioning system is getting to be more trouble than it's worth, here's an idea that's worth real money. TXU Electric has authorized area Carrier dealer Don Franks to offer up to $500 in cash rebates to TXU customers who have Don install a complete new Carrier HVAC system with a Seasonal Energy Efficiency Rating (SEER) of 13. You can get an extra $100 rebate for installing Carrier's super efficient ComfortHeat™ system.

If your current system is old enough to need frequent repairs, it's probably wasting electricity. A Carrier 38TXA or 38YXA (heat pump) will probably save you up to 30 percent on your heating and cooling bills, if your old unit is a 10 SEER. That means it will continue to save you money long after you've forgotten about the rebate.

You can cut your utility bills even further (and get the extra $100 rebate) by having Don install a 58UHV ComfortHeat™ gas furnace or a Comfort Heat Pump System™ FV4 fancoil. These units have an extremely efficient variable speed motor on the indoor blower. With this blower, you can run the fan continuously for about the cost of a 100-watt light bulb. Continuous operation keeps the temperature more even throughout your home and it continuously filters the air—great for allergies.

Don is particularly excited that all these Carrier systems are truly the wave of the future. They use Puron® refrigerant, which has been established as the replacement for the R-22 that's in general use now. R-22 will begin to be phased out in 2004, due to concerns about its effect on the earth's ozone layer.

As R-22's production is reduced, its price will likely rise, making certain repairs more expensive for units that use it. That's what happened when production was stopped on R-12 automotive refrigerant in the 90s.

You might think that this is new, unproven technology. Not so—these systems have been very popular in this area for several years, with fewer repairs than other units. In fact, the Copland Compliant scroll compressors used by these systems have the best repair record of any that Copland makes. They are also amazingly quiet. You'll be able to enjoy quiet evenings in the back yard, even if your compressor unit is nearby.

Soon after you have Don install your complete new Carrier system, you'll get your TXU rebate through your local Carrier distributor. Don suggests that your rebate could pay your heating bills this winter, or help pay for the system itself. Either way, it's a great incentive to make a change that will continue to bring you comfort and savings for years to come.

Don Franks Heating and Air Conditioning, TACLB004736C, has been in business since January of 1977. Don has 36 years' experience in heating and air conditioning. Call 684-0873.

Let Don Franks (right) and son, Jody, explain how you can get a rebate of up to $600 from TXU for installing a new Carrier heating and air conditioning system. Call 684-0873.

"No payments, interest deferred until 2002" sale begins next week

Southwest Floors asks: Is it time to retire your old carpet?

Before the holidays, before guests from across town and out of town converge at your home and walk all over your floor, take a good look at your carpet. Has it been with you awhile? Maybe it's time to give it a retirement party before your holiday parties begin. Southwest Floors can help.

Travis Kendrick of Southwest Floors explains to Tammie Hanson about the best carpet and about their no payments, interest deferred until 2002 sale, which starts next Monday.

If your carpet is worn, stretched out and loose, overly stained or if you're just ready for a new color, call Southwest Floors. Owners Robert and Jane Burton or one of their friendly staff will sit down with you and begin by finding out what your needs are. If you have small children or if you entertain frequently, you may need carpet that is wear and stain resistant. If you're concerned about matching the décor in a formal living room, you may prefer a plush carpet.

Another reason to buy carpet now is that, from November 13 through December 31, Southwest Floors is offering a no payments, interest deferred plan. That means you can enjoy your carpet for over a year before paying anything for it.

This can also be a great deal if you're buying or selling a home. If you're buying, have your new carpet installed before you move in. You'll have most of the additional expenses involved in a new home out of the way before you start paying for your carpet in 2002.

If you're selling a home, fresh carpeting can help it sell faster. And if you sell your home before January of 2002, you can pay for the carpet out of the sale proceeds, without spending anything out of pocket.

Southwest Floors' installation crews are the best in town. Robert uses only the best because he understands that the carpet itself is only half of the equation in new carpet—if it's not installed properly, there's a problem. "We aren't happy until you're happy," declares Robert. "We built our business on repeat customers, and that comes from making sure the customer is satisfied with the carpet and the installation." Southwest Floors' installers will move your furniture out while they're installing carpet and move your furniture back in when they're done.

There is still time to get new carpet installed before Christmas guests arrive, if you call Southwest Floors right away. With their no payments, interest deferred until 2002 sale, you won't have to choose between paying for new carpet or buying Christmas gifts. So retire that old carpet this year and give your home a new outlook on 2001!

Southwest Floors was opened by Robert Burton in 1990. They carry a wide selection of carpet, tile, wood and vinyl flooring. The address is 1113 Andrews Highway, next to McDonald's. The phone number is 689-9312. Store hours are 9-5:30 Monday through Friday and 10-1 Saturday. They accept Visa, Master Card, American Express and Discover.

Cattlemans booking Christmas parties

It's beginning to look a lot like time to plan Christmas parties—and soccer parties and business meetings, rehearsal dinners and other kinds of meetings. Have you checked the schedule at Cattlemens Steakhouse?

Cary and Teresa Patteson invite you call now to schedule your Christmas party at Cattlemans. The phone number is 682-5668.

Cattlemans' banquet room can comfortably seat up to 50 people for a lunch or dinner meeting. They can reserve the south dining room for you, which seats up to 100 people.

Owners Cary and Teresa Patterson still have times available, but they suggest you call them before December first, because times fill up quickly from then until Christmas.

They tailor the menu to your needs. To help control costs, you can let your guests select one of three items from Cattlemans' Midland favorites menu. Or, you can order Cattlemans' tender, pan-fried chicken fried steak with a potato, salad bar and tea or coffee. For a little more cost, offer your attendees a tender, juicy sirloin. Of course, you can simply allow them to order whatever they're hungry for off the entire menu. Cary asks for at least a week's notice, especially if you're setting up certain choices for the menu.

Did you know Cattlemans is open for breakfast now? Yes, there's no need to miss breakfast or grab a candy bar—Cattlemans is serving a hot, made-from-scratch breakfast to get your day off to the best possible start. Cary and Teresa have heard raves about their steak and egg breakfast, which includes a thick cut of their famous tender sirloin dinner steak, cooked just the way you like it, nestled next to two eggs cooked to your order. You get all this, plus hash browns, for under $10.

Rather have pork? Try a thick, center cut pork loin, breaded and grilled, with your eggs. And you can always have a chicken fried steak! If you're not that hungry, look over their selection of smaller breakfasts.

At lunchtime, remember that Cattlemans has some of the most mouth-watering lunch specials in town. Mondays features are chicken fried steak and pork chops; Tuesday's specials are hand-cut steak fingers and ham steaks; baked chicken and Cattlemans prime dip are the Wednesday items; for Thursday, it's spicy Southwest chicken or juicy hamburger steak, and Friday finishes the week with baked cod or flavorful meatloaf.

Cary reminds customers that the restaurant can hold lots more people than the parking lot can—so if you go by and it looks full, it's probably not. You may be surprised at how quickly you can begin enjoying Cattlemans extensive selection of fresh items on the salad bar, some fresh rolls and some of the best steaks and seafood in this neck of the woods.

Cattlemans Steakhouse, owned by Cary and Teresa Patteson with help from their son and daughter-in-law Chris and Candyce, is located at 3300 North Big Spring, where it intersects with Wadley. Hours are: Breakfast, 7 a.m. to 10:45 (Monday through Friday; Lunch, 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday through Friday; and dinner, 5-9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 5-10 p.m. Friday and Saturday. The phone number is 682-5668. A meeting room is available.

Stay calm in a volatile market

There are two things we can be fairly sure of in the investment world. The first is that prices will some times go up. The second is that prices will sometimes go down. When the ups and downs become too volatile, many West Texas investors may be tempted to make snap decisions based on short-term events. But the secret to successful investing during jittery markets is to stay calm.

Van Pearcy

Of course, that's easier said than done. However, you can do it. Here are a few suggestions that may make it easier:

Concentrate on long-term objectives. It's important to develop an investment strategy, stick with it over time and keep your long-term objectives in sight. You may want to adjust your portfolio to reflect changing circumstances, but don't abandon proven principles of investment success, such as diversification and striking the proper balance between risk and reward.

Look for opportunities. During choppy markets, many people turn to "defensive" industries such as consumer staples and drugs. These sectors are rarely out of favor for extended periods of time, for the simple reason that people will always need these products and services. Other sectors, while struggling along with a down market, may still be poised to do well during the next upturn.

Accept normal market adjustments. Sometimes when the market appears to be going through convulsions, it's actually "shaking out" excesses of one kind or another in a move toward equilibrium. Such may have been the case this past spring, when overpriced technology stocks fell sharply, causing a drag on the market. While these shakeouts can seem unsettling at the time, they're often healthy for the market in the long run.

Put your idle money to work. It's probably not a good idea to ever get totally out of the market, no matter how turbulent things may get. By being on the sidelines, even for a short time, you're likely to miss out on opportunities for growth, especially given the speed with which markets can turn around. But if you do have money that's not invested in the market, at least make sure it's working for you—in a money market account, for example. Your money will earn a decent rate of return and, more importantly, will be available to invest when you're ready.

Shelter money in qualified retirement accounts. Put as much as you can afford into tax-qualified retirement plans, such as an IRA or a 401(k). The money you invest in these plans is certainly not immune to market fluctuations, but it will grow on a tax-deferred basis—which means it will grow much faster than if it were placed in an investment on which you paid taxes each year. And if you have a Roth IRA, your money will grow tax-free, provided you meet certain conditions.

By following these suggestions, you should be able to keep your composure, no matter what the market throws your way. And when it comes to investing, my wisest, most experienced 92-year-old stock-buying client states, "The less emotion that's involved, the better. You'll always be rewarded for your patience!"

Voter turnout will be key to today's election

Today is the day Americans will select the next president of the United States. We are reminded what a great nation it is in which we are so fortunate to live.

Nowhere else in the world has democracy thrived as it has here in the United States.

At this moment, things seem to be crazy and chaotic. We have two major party candidates who have pulled out all the stops in these final hours of the campaign, jetting from stop to stop, trying to energize crowds of voters. We have a third party candidate loudly criticizing the two major party candidates and calling for Americans to abandon the two-party system in support of his dark horse candidacy. Ross Perot, the prominent third-party candidate in the 1992 and 1996 elections, surprised the political world this past week when he came out and endorsed George W. Bush, in spite of the fact that Perot is said to have had a long-running feud with the Bush family.

We have a vote that is predicted to be extremely close and will be ultimately determined in the Electoral College.

While the campaigns of Al Gore and George W. Bush appeared to be in the doldrums most of the summer and not too many Americans seemed to be paying attention, the past 72 hours of the campaign have been a literal rollercoaster.

And, finally, Election Day has arrived.

Turnout will be the key.

This election could very well hinge on the number of senior citizens who show up to vote in Florida; how autoworkers interpret the candidates' positions on issues such as gun control, abortion and health care; how America's veterans view the two major party candidates; and if political triggermen like Chicago Mayor Richard Daley are successful in pushing people to the polls.

One thing is for sure.

We are likely to see record turnout across the country.

Voting is an issue this newspaper has encouraged all week long.

And for the last time, we'll say it one more time.

Make sure your vote is heard today.

Make sure you cast your ballot.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, Nov. 7, the 312th day of 2000. There are 54 days left in the year. This is Election Day.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 7, 1917, Russia's Bolshevik Revolution took place as forces led by Vladimir Ilyich Lenin overthrew the provisional government of Alexander Kerensky.

On this date:

In 1893, the state of Colorado granted its women the right to vote.

In 1916, Republican Jeannette Rankin of Montana became the first woman elected to Congress.

In 1929, the Museum of Modern Art in New York City opened to the public.

In 1940, the middle section of the Tacoma Narrows Bridge in Washington state collapsed during a windstorm.

In 1944, President Franklin Roosevelt won an unprecedented fourth term in office, defeating Thomas E. Dewey.

In 1962, Richard M. Nixon, having lost California's gubernatorial race, held what he called his "last press conference," telling reporters, "You won't have Nixon to kick around anymore."

In 1972, President Nixon was re-elected in a landslide over Democrat George McGovern.

In 1973, Congress overrode President Nixon's veto of the War Powers Act, which limits a chief executive's power to wage war without congressional approval.

In 1980, actor Steve McQueen died in Juarez, Mexico, at age 50.

In 1989, L. Douglas Wilder won the governor's race in Virginia, becoming the first elected black governor in U.S. history; David N. Dinkins was elected New York City's first black mayor.

Ten years ago: In some of her strongest remarks during the Persian Gulf crisis, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher warned Iraqi President Saddam Hussein that time was "running out" for a peaceful solution.

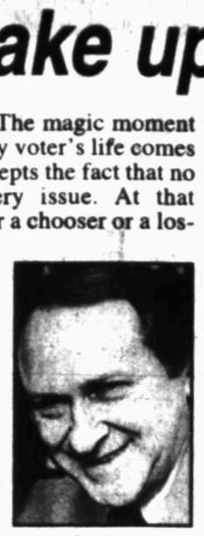

Five years ago: In a Japanese courtroom, three American military men admitted to the ambush-rape of a 12-year-old Okinawan schoolgirl, an attack that outraged the Japanese and strained security ties between Japan and the U.S. (The men later received prison sentences ranging from six and a half to seven years.)

One year ago: Relatives of the victims of EgyptAir Flight 990 gathered in Newport, R.I., to bid them a wrenching farewell, a week after the plane crashed into the Atlantic Ocean. Tiger Woods became the first golfer since Ben Hogan in 1953 to win four straight tournaments. Kenya's Joseph Chebet won the New York City Marathon; Adriana Fernandez won the women's division.

Can't make up your mind? Split your vote

WASHINGTON — The magic moment of maturity in every voter's life comes when he or she accepts the fact that no candidate is right on every issue. At that moment, one becomes either a chooser or a loser.

Safire

I like Al Gore's assertive stand on NATO expansion, but I much prefer George W. Bush on missile defense. Gore has been naive on Russia, but Bush might be even more roundheeled on China.

I'm with Bush on education vouchers but don't like the way he has downplayed his support for them; I'm with Gore on gun control but do not admire the way his weakness out West caused him to fudge this issue.

Gore was wise to reveal his marijuana use years ago and Bush was wrongheaded to think an arrest for driving under the influence would somehow escape campaign scrutiny.

Bush's lower taxation for all will better preserve prosperity, and Gore's deathbed conversion on campaign finance reform will better preserve democracy, if he can drop his class warfare long enough to make a deal with Republicans.

Gore is not as stiff as he seems and Bush is a lot shrewder than he gets credit for. Gore has a better sense of humor, believe it or not, but Bush confidently surrounds himself with more independent-minded people.

I have a heavy case of Clinton fatigue, and know that shameless fellow would interpret a Gore victory as the nation's apology to him (though the artful dodger redeemed himself a bit by vetoing the Congress' crackbrained official secrets bill).

So I'm conflicted. But failing to vote is not an option; I know that even when one's candidate does not win, choosers are never losers.

Here's my way out: Our system offers us an opportunity to hedge our bets. Even when forced to cast a "clothespin vote" (go explain that metaphor to a washer-dryer generation that has never seen a clothesline), we have a way to ease the pain of choice.

It's called splitting your ticket.

Let's say you plan to place that clothespin firmly on your nose while you vote for Gore. All this and Hillary, too? With a Democratic House and Senate to egg him on, we would risk untested entitlements and litmus-tested judges, with no restraint on liberal spending except on national defense, and with an unstoppable urge to centralize government and raise taxes.

Contrariwise, say you decide for Bush. Do you want a Senate and House that will rubber-stamp his judicial choices, push his disinclination to nation-build into outright isolationism, break down the wall between national spirit and religious spirituality, and inundate future elections in a tsunami of soft money?

If the lurch to right or left troubles you, don't participate in it. Instead, vote for a Republican president and Democratic Congress, or vice versa. Splitting the difference creates as much energy as splitting the atom.

But wouldn't this lead to (ugh) the partisanship we all deplore (eeuw), the bickering that so turns us off and (yecch) the horror of political gridlock?

You bet. Partisanship sharpens debate and opens the possibility of grand compromise. Bickering adds spice to life and pungent language to public discourse. And gridlock, much derided by goo-goos who foolishly put unity ahead of diversity, is the glory of tripartite government. Put that in your lockbox and smoke it.

Make the deals that keep the nation's legislative battles between the 35-yard lines. Resist the tyranny of the majority. If the nation's course is to be changed, it should be eased around gently, not yanked about by a party and an executive all too sure of themselves.

Do I have a personal ax to grind? Of course; divided government means well-pointed fingers, multidirectional leaks, the bubbling of juicy controversy and the clash of impotent powers — all in all, pundit heaven.

I will not say here how I will vote, partly because it's against my newspaper's rules, but mainly because millions of undecideds would follow like lemmings and make me responsible for the result and unable to creatively backbite or pettily bicker.

My voting advice: go either way for president, and then go the other way for Congress. Preserve the tension. Luxuriate in Splitsville. Adopt democracy's cautiously principled slogan: "Don't just do something; stand there."

Legislative staff positions uncertain

Texas legislators always pay close attention to elections, to see how they and their friends, enemies and parties fare.

But the presidential race, in particular, is being watched even more closely this year — not just by legislators, but also by current and potential staff members for the regular legislative session that begins Jan. 9.

Those holding or seeking staff jobs on the Senate side of the capitol know that if Republican Gov. George W. Bush wins, there could be a significant shuffle of power and jobs.

McNeely

That's because if Bush wins, the Senate presiding officer, Lt. Gov. Rick Perry, will become governor. Under current Senate rules, the lieutenant governor appoints committees and their chairmen.

If Perry leaves, the 31 senators will caucus and appoint one of their members presiding officer. Who that might be, and even when it might occur, isn't known — at least publicly.

Meanwhile, Perry has a transition staff already at work, so that if he becomes governor, he and his staff will waste no time taking over.

But since whether Perry will move up won't be decided until after today's election, and even then his successor won't be chosen until Bush actually vacates the governorship, the race to replace him hasn't fully begun.

But it's certainly under way: Republican Sen. David Sibley of Waco has been courting his colleagues intensely and Sen. Jeff Wentworth of San Antonio has been making it widely known he'd like the job. Other contenders — Democrat Ken Armbrister of Victoria, and Republicans Teel Bivins of Amarillo, Bill Ratliff of Mt. Pleasant, Buster Brown of Lake Jackson, and a few others — have made no secret that they're interested.

Until the presiding officer names the committee chairmen, there's an air of uncertainty about who will be pick committee staffers.

If Bush loses, it should be much simpler. Perry will remain presiding officer and presumably would continue most of the current committee assignments.

One unlikely but possible scenario: if Democrats win the open Senate District 3 seat in East Texas, and reverse the Republicans' 16-15 advantage, they could take back the power to appoint committees and chairmen currently ceded by Senate rules to the lieutenant governor.

Perry has said he will run for governor in 2002 regardless of whether Bush wins or loses the presidential race. The Democrats might decide they want to weaken Perry's hand. But getting all 16 of them — including some Democratic friends of Perry — to go along with that is another matter.

On the House side, little movement is expected among committees unless Republicans overcome the 78-72 advantage the Democrats now enjoy.

Even if the Republicans win a slight majority — say, 76 to 74 — the prediction is Laney would still get another term as speaker, since a handful of rural Republicans consider their allegiance to Democratic House Speaker Pete Laney more important than that to their party.

But if the Republicans won a significant majority — say, 80 to 70 — Laney probably would be replaced by a Republican speaker.

If that happened, many committee chairmanships probably would change, as would staff members.

And if a Republican speaker junked the bipartisan approach of Laney and his predecessors to have committee chairmen of both parties, and followed the example of Congress and most other legislatures and awarded all chairmanships to the majority party, there could be wholesale staff turnover.

To sin is to be more attractive to the public

The climate in Washington is such that in order to be a political candidate for any office you must confess to every sin you committed in your life.

Winkel, a presidential contender, couldn't understand it. He asked his campaign manager, "Why do you want me to expose my private life to the public?"

"Because if you can't they will think you are hiding something much worse. What is wrong with going on TV and telling everyone you were a shoplifter when you couldn't afford to buy your mother a gift for Christmas?"

Buchwald

"I never was a shoplifter and I could always afford to buy my mother a present."

"I didn't say you couldn't, sir, but we're in a tough battle. Blaisdorf has confessed to hiding out with a college cheerleader in a motel in South Bend, Ind. Squiggly has told the world he used the Lord's name in vain when he sailed in the America's Cup. Rocabottom has fessed up to leading a panty raid on the USC Tri Delt sorority, and Duggan has admitted to reading Penthouse magazine since he was 9 years old. We're the only ones who are not begging for forgiveness."

"It seems to me that the country would vote for the one candidate who has nothing to hide."

"Maybe. But we would be taking too big a chance. Think back, sir. Couldn't you have committed adultery in your youth?"

"It was so long ago. Who can remember?"

"Maybe it happened in Iowa when you were too tired to think?"

"I never committed adultery. I wouldn't have been able to handle the guilt."

"OK then, have you ever been drunk and disorderly and arrested and tossed in the can?"

"Certainly not. I don't drink."

"We have to come up with something. You never smoked pot?"

"Never, not even from a potted plant."

"Sir, have you ever flirted with a woman other than your wife?"

"Why should I do that if I intended to be president of the United States?"

"The voter is going to find you awfully dull. What about wild beach parties?"

"I went to beach parties but only in my capacity as a lifeguard. This is getting ridiculous. I know of nothing I have done that the public need forgive me for."

"There has to be something we've overlooked. Have you ever gone to Bimini in a boat with a volunteer from your campaign?"

"Yes, but she slept on a minesweeper when we got there."

"That's it! You have to say that you sailed out of Miami with another woman who was a model and also happened to be a good friend, and you're not going to sin anymore."

"But I hardly knew the girl."

"By the time we're finished denying it, the whole world will love her. Then finally the public will know you as a swinging human being who made one mistake but still belongs in the White House."

"Will adultery make me human?"

"A lot more human than supporting a balanced budget."

FDA warns against using popular over-the-counter drugs

By Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government warned Americans on Monday to quit using dozens of over-the-counter cold remedies and diet pills that contain an ingredient that could cause hemorrhagic strokes, especially in young women.

The Food and Drug Administration is preparing to ban phenylpropanolamine, or PPA, which is found in products from Dexatrim to Triaminic. But legal steps needed for a ban will take a few months, so the FDA asked manufacturers Monday to voluntarily stop selling PPA-containing drugs immediately — and replace the ingredient with a safer alternative.

For consumers, the FDA's unusually strong health warning says: "We suggest you stop taking the drug immediately and use an alternative."

Consumers should look for PPA in the ingredient list of all nonprescription cold relievers — brand names and generic or store brands — and choose decongestant pills containing the safe alternative pseudoephedrine or use nasal sprays instead, said FDA nonprescription drugs chief Dr. Charles Ganley.

There are no over-the-counter alternatives for diet pills, however, so dieters will have to consult a doctor about prescription-only alternatives, Ganley said.

Some retailers and manufacturers moved Monday to take products off drugstore shelves.

Don't use PPA-containing Contac 12-hour Cold Capsules, but five other Contac versions contain the safe pseudoephedrine, so check the label, said manufacturer SmithKline Beecham Consumer Healthcare.

Whitehall-Robins Healthcare quit shipping PPA-containing Dimetapp on Monday. New liquid Dimetapp formulas that don't contain PPA will head for store shelves next week, with pill versions to follow later. Also, check Robitussin-CF — some stores are selling PPA-containing versions and some are selling a new non-PPA formula, in boxes flagged with a yellow band.

CVS Pharmacy announced Monday that it also was removing products with PPA from the shelves of its 4,100 stores in 25 states and the District of Columbia.

Even though manufacturers learned three weeks ago that the FDA's move was coming — when the agency's scientific advisers declared PPA unsafe — many spent Monday scrambling to decide what to do.

Top-selling manufacturers that refused to reveal their plans include Novartis Corp., maker of PPA-containing Triaminic and Tavist-D; Bayer Corp., maker of Alka-Seltzer Plus cold medicines; and Chattem Inc., maker of Dexatrim diet pills.

About 6 billion doses of PPA are sold in this country each year, the vast majority without a prescription. However, there are a few PPA-containing prescription decongestants, and the FDA asked their makers also to stop selling them while it moves to ban prescription use as well.

The risk of a hemorrhagic stroke, or bleeding in the brain, is very small to an individual user.

These are often deadly strokes, and survivors can be left disabled. With millions of Americans swallowing PPA daily, the FDA estimated it could be to blame for 200 to 500 strokes just in people under age 50.

Hemorrhagic strokes typically occur in the elderly, and are extremely rare under age 50. Yet the first warning sign about PPA came in the 1980s, when medical journals cited several dozen young women who suddenly had strokes days after taking their first diet pill.

The FDA's records show 44 cases of hemorrhagic stroke among PPA users in the past 30 years. Most were women; the median age was 35 — including a few who died while using diet pills even though medical records showed they weren't fat.

Barak, Palestinians trade complaints as fighting rages on

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israel's prime minister on Monday accused the Palestinians of failing to implement a truce agreement, while Palestinian leaders called for expanded foreign mediation. As the rhetoric ran hot, street clashes persisted: Two Palestinian teen-agers were killed and a third was blinded by gunfire.

The truce, in its fifth day Monday, has dampened the overall level of unrest but has not extinguished it. About 30 Palestinians were wounded in Monday's sporadic clashes in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, doctors said.

As Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat prepared to head to Washington for separate meetings with President Clinton, they remained sharply at odds on how to stop the violence and revive suspended peace talks.

In the evening, Barak's government easily survived four no-confidence motions in parliament, said parliament spokesman Giora Pordes. Some were brought by Arab legislators angry over the deaths of about a dozen Israeli Arabs in recent riots linked to the Palestinian revolt.

The Palestinians, meanwhile, complained Monday that U.S. mediation in Mideast peacemaking has been ineffective and demanded that the United Nations, the European Union, Russia and China be included in future talks. The Palestinians also raised the possibility of an international peacekeeping force.

"Since the United States has failed to persuade Israel to implement the agreements, there is a need for other parties to be involved in this process," Arafat aide Nabil Aburdeneh said.

Israel has adamantly rejected any international peacekeeping force. It wants its leading ally, the United States, to keep its role as the main mediator.

In another development, a senior Palestinian official said the Palestinians have no intention of unilaterally declaring statehood at a Nov. 15 meeting of their Central Council.

Nov. 15 marks the 12th anniversary of a symbolic statehood declaration, and there has been speculation that the Palestinians would act on the anniversary, declaring a state for themselves in the West Bank, Gaza and East Jerusalem. But Israel also claims some of that land, and a Palestinian move to declare statehood there would be sure to bring a harsh response from Israel, including the annexation of parts of the West Bank.

"It's not our intention to declare a state in the coming Central Council session. There were no plans to do so," Palestinian Information Minister Yasser Abed Rabbo said.

In Monday's unrest, a 15-year-old Palestinian boy was killed by a bullet to the chest in the West Bank town of Tulkarem, and a 17-year-old died when he was hit in the back in the Gaza Strip. Also, bullet wounds cost another 15-year-old boy sight in both eyes, according to doctors at the Shifa hospital in Gaza.

Later Monday, firefights were reported in several areas in Gaza and the West Bank.

Since the truce was agreed to last week, 13 people have died in five days — a decline from earlier levels, but hardly the calm that had been hoped for. Overall, the violence has claimed more than 170 lives, the vast majority Palestinians.

Arafat plans to meet Clinton in Washington on Thursday, and Barak is to hold talks with the president Sunday. With peace negotiations for a political settlement on hold, the leaders appear focused on the more immediate goal of ending the bloodletting.

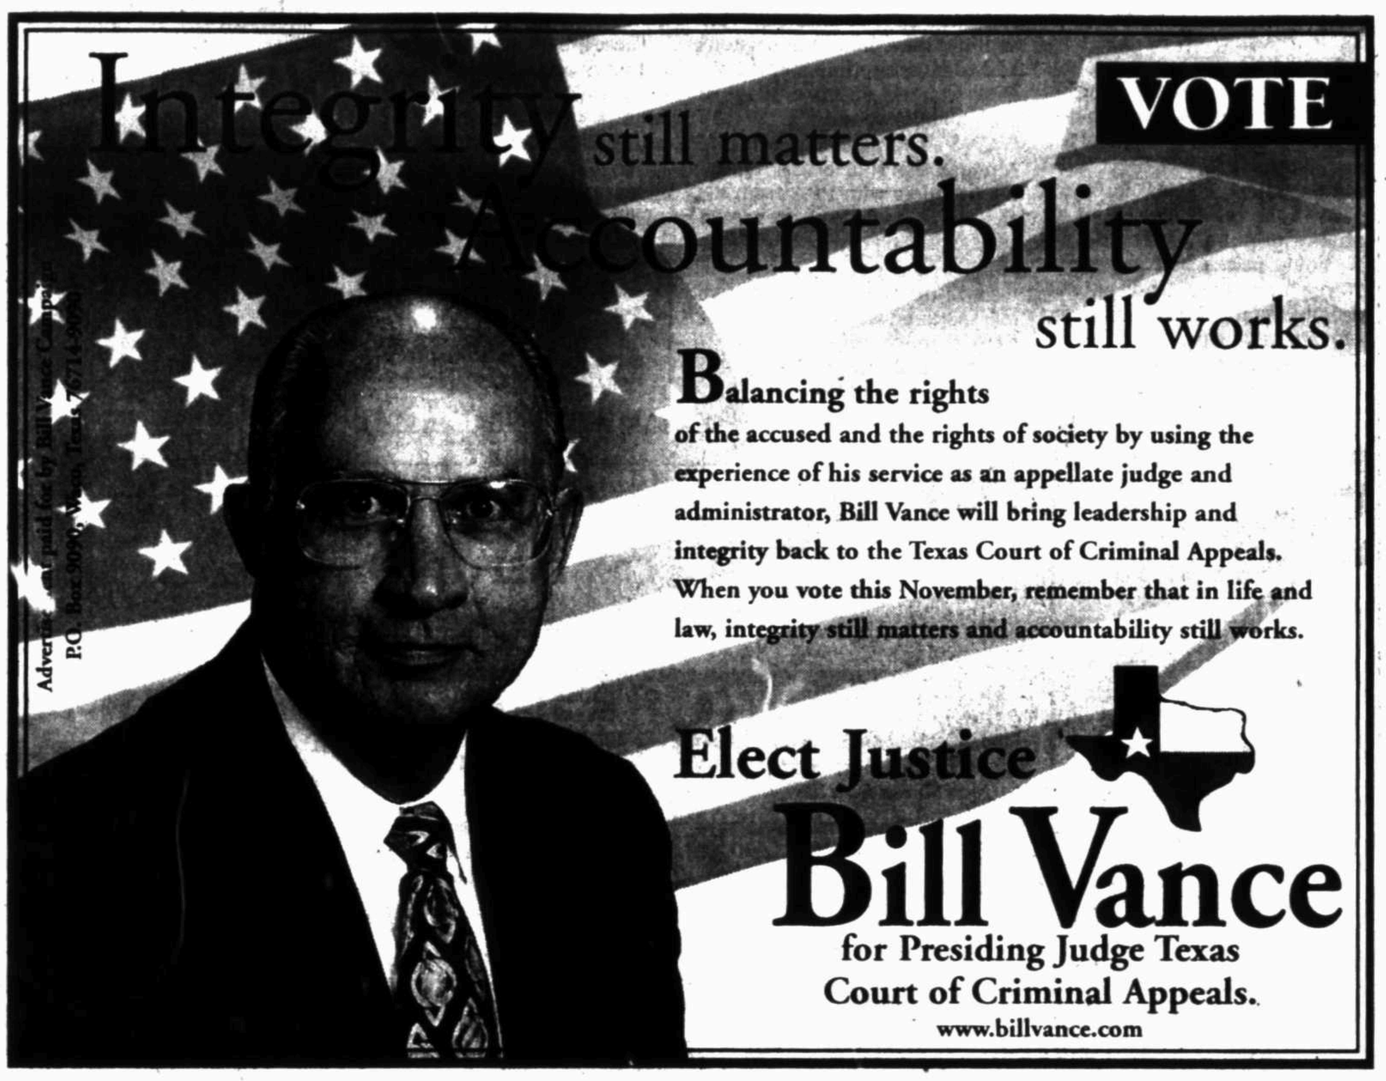

In a statement issued after its meeting Monday, the Palestinian Cabinet said the Arafat-Clinton meeting will be devoted to "finding a way out of the dangerous situation that the peace process has reached after the Israeli government's rejection" of peace initiatives and cease-fire deals.

Israeli Foreign Minister Shlomo Ben-Ami said Arafat has raised the possibility of holding a three-way meeting with Clinton and Barak in Washington. Ben-Ami said Israel would consider a summit only after the violence has stopped.

Israel allowed the Palestinian airport in Gaza to reopen Monday for one flight, a plane that brought Qatari Foreign Minister Sheikh Hamad al-Thani for a meeting with Arafat. Israel had closed the airport shortly after the riots began, citing security concerns.

"This is now an important and dangerous time, not only for Palestine, but also for the whole Islamic world," Arafat told his al-Thani.

In its statement, Arafat's Cabinet called on Arab nations to help provide employment to Palestinian workers, lift taxes off Palestinian products and develop an industrial zone within the Palestinian territories. It also urged foreign nations to help it rebuild houses damaged in the violence.

Photographs shown in child-porn trial

By Brian Rogers
Staff Writer

The jury endured more than 40 sexually explicit photographs Monday in the sexual exploitation of a child and child pornography trial against Lonnie Payne, 51, of Midland.

The pictures were culled from computers and computer disks the prosecution claims came from Payne's home and office, 24-Hour Bail Bonds.

An expert witness in identifying ages of sexual assault victims described each sexually explicit picture as it was shown to the jury.

According to the prosecution, some of the people in the photographs were adult males and females, some were juvenile males and females, and all were in varying stages of undress. Some were participating in acts of bondage and some were involved with animals.

Payne

The prosecution alleged that Payne received and distributed the sexually explicit images in attempts to increase his collection of pornography.

That opinion was presented by the prosecution by the disks labeled, "Trade."

Other disks were labeled, "Nasty," signifying pornography, according to the prosecution.

The star witness for the state is an 18-year-old girl who alleges that Payne used his bail bonding business to pressure her into posing for sexually explicit photos when she was 17. She said that he told her the photos would be posted on the Internet.

The attorney for the defense, Tom Morgan, said in his opening statement that his client did not take the pictures of the girl.

The defense also maintained a standing objection to all charges relating to anything found in Payne's home, on the grounds of the Fourth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which protects citizens from unreasonable search and seizure.

On the stand, the girl said she was arrested April 19 on charges of credit card abuse.

On May 5, Payne secured her release. At his office in the 700 block of West Indiana, the girl claims Payne took the photos and had sex with her.

The girl said under oath that after her bond was revoked for non-payment of fees, she came forward with the story about Payne.

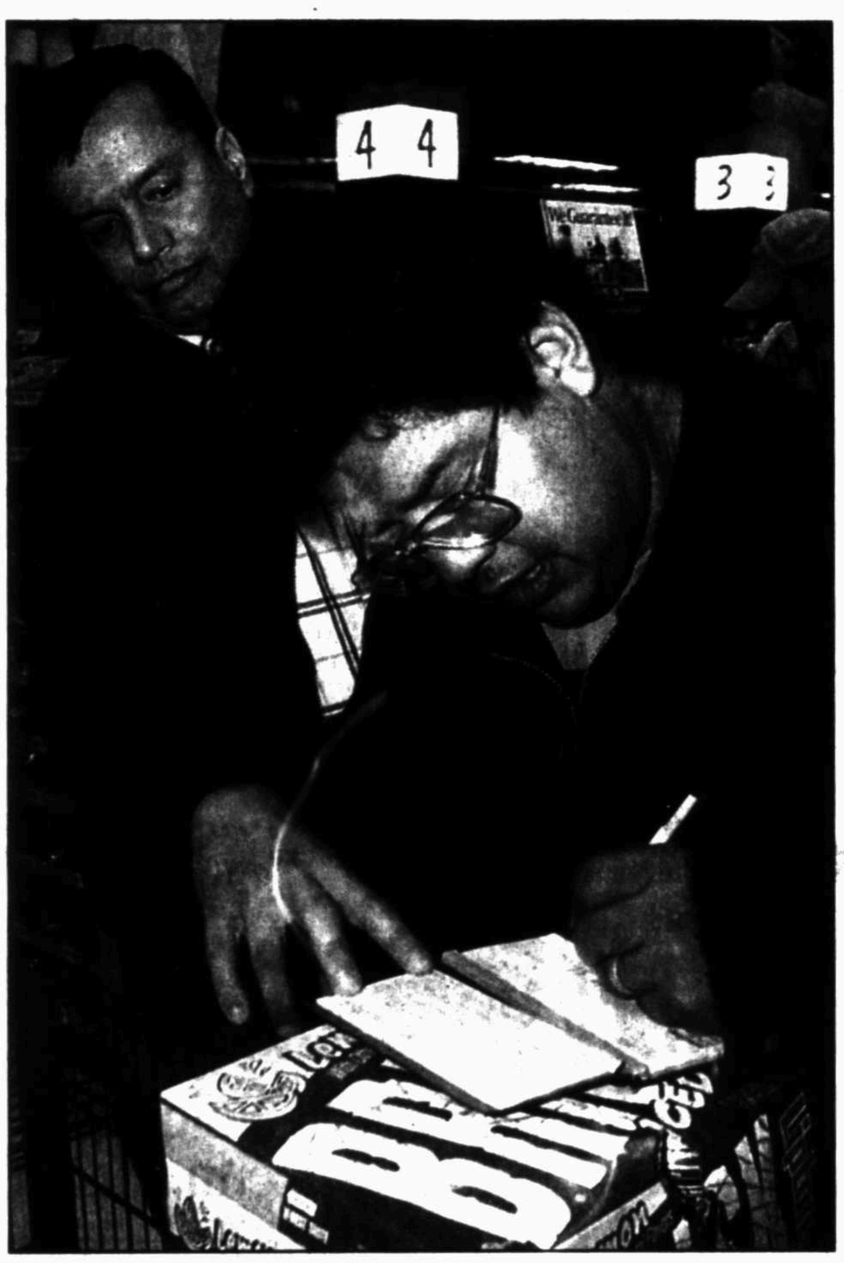

After a search warrant was issued, the FBI, Midland Police Department and the Midland County Sheriff's Department seized computers, digital cameras, scanners and related items in Payne's home and office.

Authorities also found sexually explicit photos of children they believe to be as young as 7 years old.

Payne was arrested July 17 at his office. He was released and placed on home confinement after posting 10 percent of a $75,000 bond.

The maximum punishment Payne faces for sexual exploitation of a child is 20 years imprisonment. He could face 15 years imprisonment for possession of child pornography.

MARC helps individuals with disabilities gain independence

Since its formal charter in 1959, the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens has been dedicated to the advocacy of opportunities and delivery of services to individuals with disabilities. The MARC Apartment Living Program is viewed by many as the pinnacle of those services.

Aimed at getting mentally challenged individuals out of 24-hour care facilities and into their own apartments or homes, the program begins with training in the most basic elements of independent living, like how to cook and clean, then slowly progresses into the more advanced aspects of daily life, such as checkbook balancing and household budgeting.

"Everyone progresses at their own pace," said MARC Apartment Coordinator Larry Hernandez. "What we're trying to do here is instill the basic skills needed to make it through an average day." Hernandez, whose job is to help the apartment program clients with everything from paying bills to running errands, has his hands full at a local supermarket while he supervised a group of mentally challenged MARC members as they did their weekly shopping.

Hernandez is available to the apartment program clients 24 hours a day via his cell phone and pager. "If anyone from this group has a problem they can't work out for themselves, I am always at their disposal," he said. Hernandez went on to say that he spends an average of three to four hours a week with each client, which makes for a busy job, because he must provide care and training services for 15 people.

"Larry is a good man,"

Texas trend: Uncertified teachers in classrooms

By Danielle Belton
Staff Writer

With the teacher-hiring crunch on in Texas, many school districts are having to hire teachers who may not be formally certified to fill certain teaching positions.

According to state education officials, in Texas nearly one-fourth of the state's 4 million students are taught by teachers who do not have any certification in the subjects they are teaching.

There are many reasons why these teachers are considered uncertified — some are certified out of state, others are certified in subjects other than the ones they are teaching, while some never finished the necessary college exit exams to receive their certification.

Currently, Midland Independent School District has 102 teachers working in the district under some type of permit that allows them to teach without certification in the particular subject they are teaching. Of those, 27 teachers have no certification at all and are working under an "emergency certificate."

Emergency certificates are normally utilized in situations where the position must be filled immediately due to a suddenly departing teacher and when there is no certified teacher available.

Although teachers working under some type of permit is currently about 7 percent at MISD, Midland Federation of Teachers president Steve Buck is still concerned about unqualified teachers teaching subjects outside of their certification.

"We're maybe not as bad as the state of Texas in some areas," Buck said. "In Texas, our weakest part is high school algebra. Nearly one out of four kids are taught by a non-certified teacher at that level. They have a college degree but they don't have a teaching certificate."

Buck, who is a tennis coach for Lee High School, gave the example of coaches teaching math classes without having certification in mathematics. He said that although schools are required to alert parents about teachers who have no certification, they are not required to alert parents about teachers who have certification in one area, but are teaching another.

"It's a loophole," Buck said. "Parents have to be notified if it's a non-certified teacher, but a teacher could be certified in some courses, but not in others. Like you might be certified in math, but you're teaching history. They don't have to notify the parent because they are a certified teacher."

It's this loophole that concerns Buck and to some extent also concerns former Midland Classroom Teachers Association president and new Texas Classroom Teachers Association president-elect Lin-

Midlanders head to polls to cast ballot in national, local races

Following is a list of candidates in local races and Midland polling places. Polls open at 7 a.m. today and will close at 7 p.m.

Candidates for Texas State Representative for District 82:

■ Republican Tom Craddick, who, at 57, has served in the Texas Legislature since 1969 and who is a sales representative for Mustang Mud, Inc. He is the incumbent.

TREND: Emergency certified teachers required to meet criteria before teaching da Hancock. She is more concerned about how teaching courses outside of certification affects the instructors.

"If it's a teacher who is a certified teacher and they are teaching outside of their teaching field I don't think that's a problem," she said. "It's just the teacher is having to prepare and stay ahead of the students and that puts more stress on the teacher."

Ms. Hancock worries that in the long run, teaching a subject outside of a teacher's training could be detrimental to both the instructor and the students. Taking over a subject that is not a particular teacher's specialty could cause stress that could spill over into the classroom causing problems, she added.

But Ms. Hancock doesn't believe the problem is widespread and said she thinks MISD has a good handle on the situation.

"With Dr. Holland we don't have as many teachers who would be classified as uncertified," Ms. Hancock said. "He does a very good job of interviewing teachers."

MISD executive director of human resources Tom Holland said the district can only hire uncertified teachers when there are no certified teachers available for the position or if the only certified teacher available has a questionable record of previous employment.

Holland said that teachers with emergency certificates can only teach for a year under the special status and during that year they must be enrolled in a minimum of six hours worth of classes working toward their certification. A teacher must also have at least 24 hours under their belt in the particular subject they will be teaching in order to qualify.

"I may hire a chemist to teach chemistry," Holland said. "A chemist would have more than enough hours of chemistry. They would have the subject matter background, but would not have the education courses."

Holland said that the district hires the uncertified teachers out of an immediate need and the ultimate goal is to make sure all children are provided with an education.

"If there were certified people available we would hire them," Holland said. "These children have the right to the best education available."

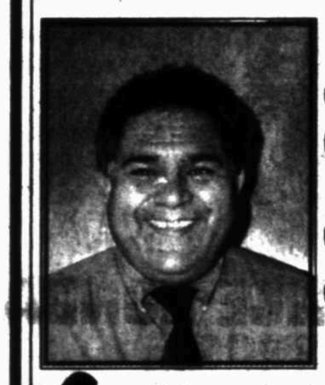

Holland said that most parents whose children are being taught by teachers without any kind of certification should have been notified during the first six weeks of school with a letter alerting them of the situation. Parents have the option of pulling their children from classes taught by teachers with no form of certification. If parents are concerned that their child is being taught by a teacher who is certified, but not in the subject they are teaching, they should contact Holland at 689-1920.

James Bond is defecting . . . Brosnan wants to become U.S. citizen

Brosnan

LONDON — Agent 007 is defecting: Pierce Brosnan, best known for portraying British agent James Bond, said he has started the process of becoming an American citizen.

Brosnan, 47, recently bought a beachfront house in Malibu, Calif., leaving his native Ireland and England, where he spent most of his adult life.

"I would like to be an American. I've enjoyed my time here. It's a very, very fine country," he told London's Sunday Express.

Brosnan also said he plans to marry longtime girlfriend Keely Shaye Smith, 35, next year. Ms. Smith is seven months pregnant and the couple has a 3-year-old son, Dylan.

The couple postponed their wedding after Brosnan's 16-year-old son, Sean, was seriously injured in a car accident.

"You see, I want my boy to be able to dance at our wedding, and he would have found that rather difficult," Brosnan said.

NEW YORK) — The terrible twos are trying times for any parent. Now multiply that by seven.

Things are a bit overwhelming for Kenny and Bobbi McCaughey, the parents of the nation's first living set of septuplets — Kenny, Brandon, Joel, Nathan, Alexis, Kelsey and Natalie.

"Sometimes we just have to get away. We take turns. I'll go out in the garage, or Bobbi will go to Wal-Mart. Even a walk to the mailbox is a break," McCaughey said in December's Ladies' Home Journal.

"I knew these kids were gifts from the Lord, and I figured somehow he'd make this easier," he said.

Even older sister Mikayla, 4, feels the strain. "I just do this," she said, covering her ears.

Still, the McCaugheys say they have much to be thankful for. The children's health is improving and they are beginning to talk and develop distinct personalities.

"There's a lot of tension, but there are good, happy times," McCaughey said.

RADNOR, Pa. — Paul McCartney credits his art with helping him with get over the deaths of his wife and former bandmate John Lennon.

"There is a lot of sadness in my life," McCartney, 58, told TV Guide in its Nov. 11 issue. "My mother died when I was 14. Three years on, I was up and running in the Beatles. It was actually one of my great bonds with John, because his mum died."

The former Beatle said he continues to paint his wife Linda, who died of breast cancer in 1998.

"I did a lot of portraits, none of which capture her but all of which capture a certain essence. We often used to sit late at night, and I would paint her," McCartney said. "Thirty years is a lot to get over. She was a very powerful person in a very quiet way."

He also said he has painted portraits of Lennon and struggled to remember what Lennon's face looked like.

"Then I'd think, 'Of course you know. You wrote all those songs facing each other,'" he said.

BEDFORD, N.Y. — Martha Stewart has completed the purchase of a 153-acre estate in Westchester County, her next stop after fleeing the "unfriendly neighborhood atmosphere" of Westport, Conn.

Ms. Stewart, whose taste and marketing savvy have made her a conglomerate of domestic goods, closed Friday on the last two parcels needed to reassemble Cantitoe Corners, an estate that dates to the late 1700s.

Real estate agent Donna Reimer said Ms. Stewart paid about $15.6 million for the property.

The new home includes a 1784 farmhouse, a 1929 Colonial-style Winter House and the 1897 Teamster's Cottage.

Ms. Stewart said in April that Westport had changed from a small town where butchers knew their customers' names to a place with a "more elitist, and much less charming, retail scheme."

LONDON (AP) — The Queen Mother Elizabeth broke her left collarbone in a fall at her home, her office said Monday.

The hugely popular 100-year-old mother of Queen Elizabeth II was treated by doctors at Clarence House, her home near Buckingham Palace, and was not hospitalized after the fall Friday afternoon, her office said.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, Nov. 7, 2000:
Use your innate creativity and ingenuity to find solutions this year. Deal with partners and associates on a one-on-one level for greatest success and understanding. You need to confirm details and meetings. An element of misunderstanding runs through your work. If you are single, your attractiveness draws others. You really do have a lot of choices. If attached, add more of the old spice to your relating, and your relationship will sizzle once more. PISCES adores you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Someone has an odd way of asking questions. Be helpful to this person. You need to indulge another, rather than snubbing or chastising him. Your intuition guides you with a money matter, but don't act on another's point of view. Confusion surrounds communication. Tonight: Stroll home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ You take a cause to heart, whether it is voting or animal rights. Another knows that you mean well, even though he might be distanced. Emphasize work and effectiveness. Network later in the day. Expect to explain yourself more than once. Another seems confused now. Tonight: You're happiest with friends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Assume a take-charge attitude at work. Be indulgent with a child or loved one. You might have a difficult time getting your message across. Another doesn't quite understand where you are coming from. Your ruler, Mercury, goes direct tonight, allowing for greater clarity. Tonight: In the limelight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ An overview helps others understand what might be happening. Not everyone sees eye to eye with you. Use your sense of humor and help another relax. When confusion exists, be indulgent. What seems like a maze will be quite clear in a day or two. Listen to a pal. Tonight: Watch TV.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Deal with others in the most effective way you know. Allow others to see your multifaceted personality when dealing with a problem. Though you might not have the right answer, you demonstrate a willingness to seek it. Listen to feedback from a loved one. Tonight: Be with your best friend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Others might push your buttons. Deal with finances, but don't put the final touch on a plan or decision until tomorrow, if possible. You could be shaky as your planetary ruler, Mercury, goes direct. Listen to someone at a distance. He has interesting insights about another. Tonight: Out and about.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Express ideas. Respond to someone who keeps tapping into you as a resource. Work demands focus, which you might need to insist upon. Exclude yourself from social chatter or close your door. You quickly get a lot done if you concentrate. An associate has helpful information. Tonight: Exercise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Allow more creativity into your life. You might not always be right, but you are heading in the right direction. Another is often hard on you and challenges you on the deepest level. Something that might be bothering you needs to be investigated. Don't make assumptions. Tonight: Kick up your heels.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Build on established ground. You might not always agree with another. Allow your sense of humor to come through with a friend. This person knows how to lighten you up. Ask for another perspective on a domestic matter. You will like the feedback. Touch base with a loved one. Tonight: Mosey on home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Ask questions and get feedback. You might not understand what others are doing or why. Your instincts serve you well with communication. You are able to read between the lines. A child or loved one might be difficult to connect with. A boss makes suggestions. Tonight: Out and about.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Expenses go out of whack. Remain optimistic about a money matter. Discuss opportunities with another. You seek out a loved one or an associate for an important financial discussion. You are unusually grounded and direct with those close to you. Tonight: Be the Rock of Gibraltar for another.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ You make the best of confusion. Though you might not be sure about a relationship, you make solid choices. Know what you are looking for in a discussion with an associate. Another might be extravagant, but that doesn't mean you need to follow his cue. Tonight: Get what you want.

Opening lead: Three of ♠ North-South bid well to reach the grand slam in spades. Declarer's technique was almost equal to the task of scoring up the most exciting contract in bridge.

North's jump to four clubs was a splinter bid, showing shortness in the suit. After South cue-bid hearts, North launched into Key-Card Blackwood, where the king of trumps counts as an ace. South's response showed four key cards and North needed no further information to contract for all the tricks.

There were only 11 fast tricks, but two more could be developed with ruffs. Since the high trumps on the table suggested a dummy reversal, declarer won the opening trump lead on the table, cashed the ace and king of diamonds and ruffed a diamond high as West discarded a heart. Declarer returned to the board by leading the seven of spades to the 10, East discarding a diamond, and ruffed the remaining diamond as West parted with another heart.

Since declarer could not afford to ruff a club as a dummy entry, the only way back to draw the outstanding trumps was with a heart. Unfortunately West ruffed — down one.

When you plan a dummy reversal, the key is to use the side-suit entries to dummy early to complete the ruffing process in hand. Look how easy the hand becomes if, after ruffing the first diamond high, declarer returns to the table with a heart to ruff the last diamond high. Now declarer can cross to dummy with a trump, draw the outstanding trumps and claim the rest of the tricks.

DEAR ABBY

Free senior financial seminars can cost survivors a fortune

DEAR ABBY: You've recently printed letters from people who have been victims of weight-loss or male-potency scams. Please warn your readers about another one: "senior financial workshops"!

They are usually advertised on inserts in newspapers and claim to teach seniors how to legally avoid paying income and estate taxes, how to increase spendable income, and how to "protect yourself" from nursing home expenses. The workshops are always "free" for seniors 60 years and older, and of course they "will sell you nothing."

Van Buren

My father died last year, and I have never been so horrified in my life. By the time the lawyers, accountants and trustees get their share, there will be barely enough left to take care of my mother.

What is most ludicrous of all is that my husband is an attorney. If only Dad had talked to him or any other honest lawyer, he would have been advised that none of this foolishness was necessary.

Abby, please warn senior citizens to be aware of these scams. Some honest people do conduct these seminars, but they are hardly "free." If seniors must attend, they should ask a lawyer or trusted friend to go with them, because unfortunately there are accountants, consultants and some lawyers who are only interested in robbing their client's survivors. — ANGUISHED SURVIVOR.

DEAR ANGUISHED: Your story is frightening. I hope all seniors, and readers of every age, will think twice before making investments or signing agreements with people they do not know and haven't thoroughly checked out.

Beware if the salesperson tells you, for instance, to borrow money on a credit card, to take out a mortgage on your home, or to cash in your IRA to invest — with the assurance you will quickly double or triple your money with little risk. Select a broker or investment adviser who understands your financial objectives. Interview two or three to compare experience, education and professional background.

When it comes to taxes, investments, financial and estate planning, it is best to talk to professionals you know or who have been highly recommended by a trusted family member or friend who has an established, positive history with the agent and firm.

MARC: Independence fostered through help of hands-on program said MARC client Ricky Starnes, who suffers from mild mental retardation. "He's my friend and he always watches out for me. He's just a phone call away." Starnes, one of the few in the apartment program who can drive, owns his own car and works part-time at a grocery store.

"All of the apartment program clients work part-time," Hernandez said. "When they leave the group home and move out on their own, they lose a large amount of their state funding. Having a job teaches them responsibility and gives them some community involvement in addition to providing them with a means of paying their bills every month."

Other apartment program clients, like Jerry and Bonita Lakey, a married couple, say they really enjoy the freedom and independence the program has given them. "We have a house," Lakey said. "We love being together and having our own life."

According to Hernandez, the amount of assistance needed varies from person to person. "We have some who can make their own shopping lists and such," he explained. "Others may need help figuring out what they need for the week."

The Lakeys say that Hernandez does an excellent job of watching out for and assisting everyone. "He comes by our house every day," Ms. Lakey said. "And if we ever need him for anything, he's right there at a moment's notice."

Getting citizens with disabilities like Starnes and the Lakeys into their own homes and working steadily is key for several reasons, according to MARC director Bob Rose. "We not only help people stand on their own two feet with the apartment program," Rose said, "we also remove a tremendous burden from the shoulders of the state."

Rose elaborated, saying that in a 24-hour care setting, it takes 10 to 12 staff members working all shifts to oversee 15 residents. But in an independent living situation, the same 15 people can be cared for by only one case worker, such as with Hernandez and his group.

Both Rose and Hernandez hope that in the upcoming legislative session, state officials will be willing to allocate more of the funding used for the group homes to the apartment program, so that more mentally challenged people can become independent. "Larry is beyond maxed out," Rose said. "He just can't take on another person without some help. We need the funding to get him that help."

Grants and donations from private groups also help MARC in providing quality services for its clients. Recently, Burlington Resources Foundation in Midland funded a grant of $24,000 to MARC that will be put toward the purchase of a new Ford WindStar mini-van, which will be used by both the group home and apartment programs at MARC to provide more reliable transportation services to its clients.

Rose went on to say that, although many other programs are aimed at getting people out on their own, MARC's program has been especially successful because it offers apartment program members access to 24-hour assistance. "A lot of our members are perfectly capable of going out and working a job every day," Rose said. "But by the same token, most of them will never be able to properly pay their bills and manage their household without continued help. We provide that help."

The absence of that "all-help-to-no-help" shock factor is the reason MARC has been able to keep recidivism back into the group homes very low, according to Hernandez. "I've only seen two people fail in the apartment program," Hernandez said. "We're doing a good thing here ... something that matters."

Horse Liniment Eases Arthritis Pain

OCALA, FL -- An ingredient derived from hot peppers that decreases inflammation in racehorse's legs, is now recognized as safe and effective for human use. The ingredient has been formulated into a product called ARTH-Rx™ and comes in a strength designed for humans. Researchers are excited and say the formula can relieve arthritis pain for millions.

Developed by the Phillips Gulf Corporation, ARTH-Rx is a breakthrough in the treatment of painful disorders ranging from minor aches and pains to more serious conditions such as arthritis, bursitis, rheumatism, tendonitis, backache and more.

Although the mechanism by which ARTH-Rx works to relieve pain is not totally clear, scientists suggest that pain is relieved because ARTH-Rx intercepts the messenger substance that sends pain signals to the brain.

ARTH-Rx is available in a convenient roll-on applicator without a prescription. According to a spokesperson for the company, due to the overwhelming demand for ARTH-Rx, supplies are sometimes limited. ARTH-Rx can also be ordered by calling 1-800-729-8446.© 2000 PGC

Eagles, Bronchos fight for third playoff spot

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

Here's a Cliffs Notes preview of District 4-5A's final Friday night.

Either Abilene High or Odessa High is going to take the district's third playoff spot; Midland Lee and Abilene Cooper are chasing 4-5A championships; and it's the Friday night of the cross-town games, so Midland High and Odessa Permian also have something to play for — it's called pride.

The first thing on the 4-5A docket is the playoff picture. Lee (7-2, 3-1) and Cooper (6-3, 3-1) have clinched, leaving one spot to fill. That will go to either Abilene High (7-2 and 2-2) or Odessa High (4-5 and 2-2).

The gist of this race is this:

If Abilene High wins or Odessa High loses, the Eagles are in for the second straight year.

If Abilene High loses and Odessa High wins, the Bronchos are in. There are many scenarios, but they all lead to the above conclusions.

■ 4-5A Football

"We feel good having destiny in our own hand," Abilene High head coach Steve Warren said. "If we win, we go in as a second-place team (but the first seed in Small School bracket)."

That would be tremendous news considering AHS' most recent game — a 61-14 loss to Midland Lee.

"You might as well throw that film out in the street and realize there is nothing you can do about that game," Warren said. "They out-played us on both lines of scrimmage."

Odessa High's loss on Friday night wasn't as lopsided, but still hurt the same. OHS started the 4-5A season at 2-0, but consecutive trips to Abilene turned into consecutive additions to the loss column. Now, they have to hope for some help from Cooper, and then beat T.J. Mills' Mojo team.

"We need to get healthy enough to play one more good game and see what happens," OHS head coach Jim Carson said. "We got ourselves in a position where we have to have help. This time last year, we were out of it."

As far as the district title goes, Cooper and Lee are front runners for the top spot. If there is a tie, the teams will be considered a co-champion. That rule is the same if three or four teams tie at 3-2 (see "gist of this race" to see who moves on).

Cooper coach Randy Quisenberry, for one, will rest easier this week, knowing he can have his team focus on playing for 4-5A hardware.

In Friday's game, Cooper scored a fourth quarter touchdown against Odessa High to make the score 21-7. What was so important about that touchdown pass from Jordan Neal to Tony Cunningham? It gave

Injuries Take Their Toll

Losing Ismail, Teague adds to 'Boys' woes

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — The season is over for receiver Raghib Ismail and safety George Teague. Their teammates on the Dallas Cowboys still have seven games to suffer through.

Dallas (3-6) is off to its worst start since 1990, when Emmitt Smith was a rookie and coach Jimmy Johnson was in his second year.

At least that team was on its way up, headed to a Super Bowl championship in two years. These Cowboys, still relying on several of the same key players from a decade ago, are crumbling fast.

Turnovers, silly penalties, injuries and all the other things that have gone wrong this season were on display Sunday as Dallas lost 16-13 in overtime to Philadelphia.

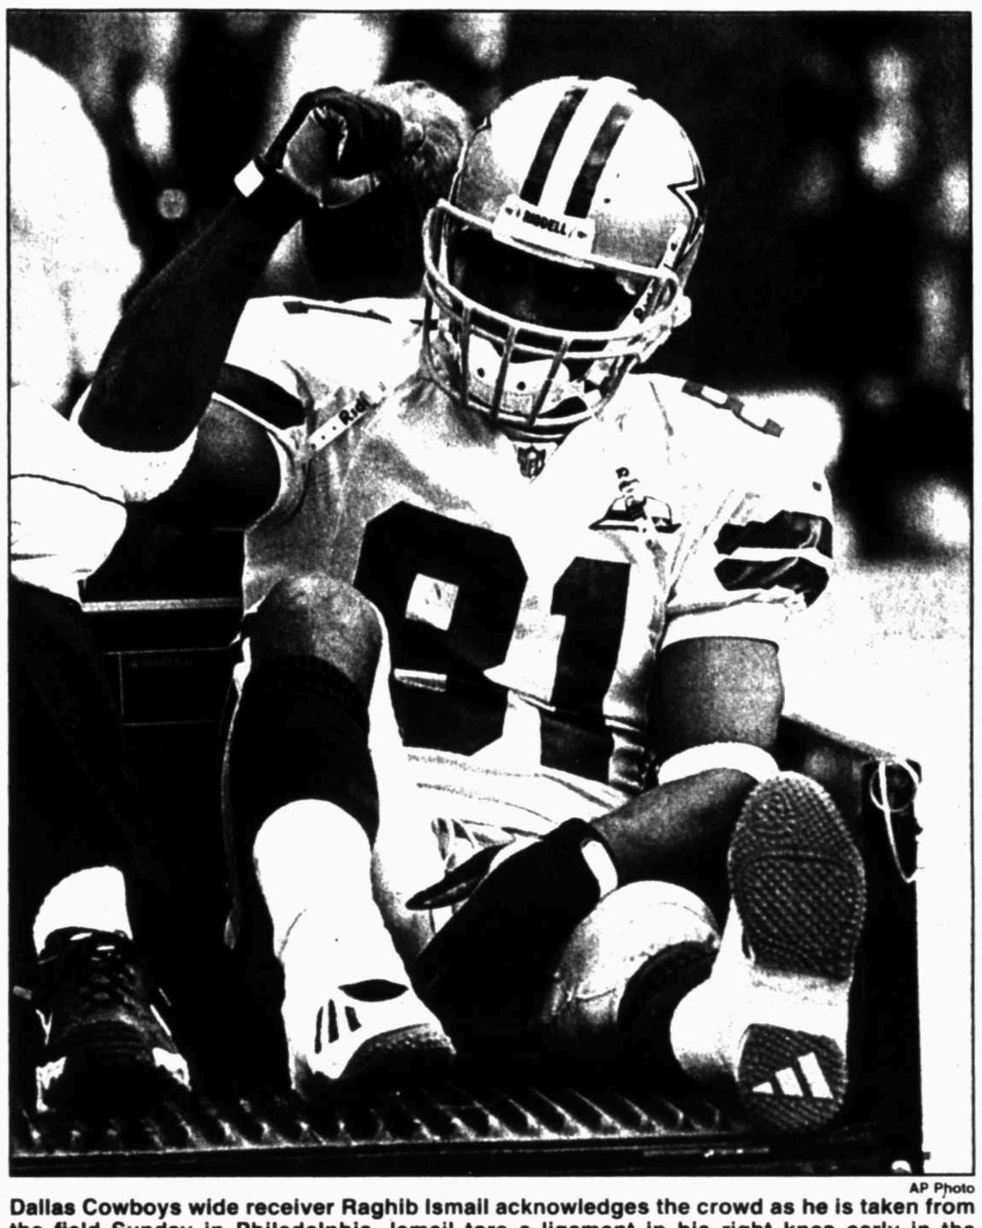

The Cowboys' second straight overtime loss and third defeat in four games douses any hope for a midseason turnaround and makes it likely they'll miss the playoffs for just the second time since 1990.

Coach Dave Campo grudgingly admits he'll start playing his youngsters more, but insists nobody has given up on this season.

"I don't think I'll ever get to that point, until they mathematically tell me I'm on the floor and that's it," Campo said. "As far as I'm concerned, any game is capable of being won from here on out, it doesn't matter who we play."

Campo keeps saying Dallas can play every game close, a theory that implies it will make one

Ross quits; Moeller is Lions' man

Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — The Detroit Lions replaced a burned-out coach with one who wore out his welcome less than 70 miles away.

Bobby Ross, mentally and physically drained after 3 1/2 years, resigned Monday and was replaced by assistant coach Gary Moeller, who was fired as Michigan's coach in 1995 days after his arrest during a disturbance at a Detroit-area restaurant.

Ross

"I really think I can put less pressure on myself," Moeller said Monday after signing a three-year contract. "But I'm not sure, you know what I mean? You get into it, things start to tighten and the screws start to tighten. ...

"This honeymoon is going to end tomorrow, probably in two or three hours. I think I can deal with that and deal thoroughly with it."

Ross' resignation is the third coaching change in the NFL this season, but it's the first with a team that is having a relatively successful season. The Lions are 5-4 and have a chance to earn a playoff berth.

Two weeks ago, Arizona fired Vince Tobin and replaced him with Dave McGinnis. On Sept. 25, Bruce Coslet resigned in Cincinnati and was replaced by Dick LeBeau.

Simms will start at QB for 'Horns

By Jim Vertuno
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN — Once again, Chris Simms is the starting quarterback for Texas. This time, it's not because it's his turn in the rotation.

Major Applewhite, who took over the starting duties when the No. 19 Longhorns scrapped their system of rotating quarterbacks four games ago, sprained his right knee in a 29-17 win at Texas Tech and will not play Saturday at Kansas.

Coach Mack Brown said the injury does not require surgery but could be bad enough to also keep Applewhite out of the regular season finale Nov. 24 against No. 23 Texas A&M.

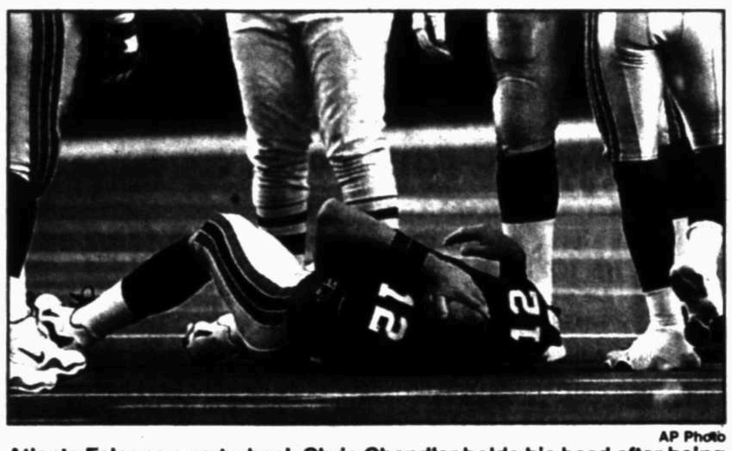

"We feel like he's got a chance to return," Brown said. "And as tough as he is, you can't ever count him out."

Texas' career passing leader as a junior, Applewhite tore a ligament in his left knee in a 27-6 loss to Arkansas in the Cotton Bowl back in January.

He returned from surgery in time for the regular

Team doctors working overtime in NFL

Atlanta Falcons quarterback Chris Chandler holds his head after being pile-driven by several Tampa Bay Buccaneer defenders on Sunday. Chandler was one of three quarterbacks who were injured Sunday as the NFL's injury list expanded.

By Dave Goldberg

The NFL is keeping its team doctors busy.

The injuries piled up this weekend — from loose cartilage in Marshall Faulk's knee that required surgery Monday to a knee injury that will sideline Rocket Ismail for the rest of the season and a serious hamstring injury for Dermonnti Dawson.

Three quarterbacks also went down — Atlanta's Chris Chandler (again), Detroit's Charlie Batch, and New England's Drew Bledsoe.

And Tennessee, which has managed to start 8-1 despite having its wide-receiver corps ravaged, was down to three healthy receivers.

Faulk, the Rams' running back, may have the least serious injury but could be the most important player among the injured.

He underwent surgery to have loose cartilage removed from his right knee after sitting out Sunday night's game unexpectedly. The Rams ended up losing 27-24 to Carolina and ran for just 31 yards without Faulk, who had been leading the NFL in combined rushing and receiving yardage.

Faulk practiced Friday and warmed up after having his knee drained earlier Sunday, but the knee began to lock. "He could feel the cartilage getting hung up in there," coach Mike Martz said. "Really, there was nothing else to do."

STEWART DOREEN

Bose knows tackling — but can he handle Benson?

Just when you thought you had seen Midland High's Matt Bose do everything, he's standing alone in Ratliff Stadium's north end zone, back against the proverbial wall, or at least, the back of the end zone.

Midland High is still in its game with Permian, but the ball is inside its 10. They need a minor miracle to reclaim the field position battle.

Doreen

Enter MHS' "Minor Miracle Man." Bose boots a punt which partially shanks off the side of his foot, takes a nice Ratliff Stadium roll and ends up down the field — way down the field, 82 yards down the field.

"It kept going and going," said Bose, who in addition to having a 50.5 average on two punts this season, can boast a tie for the second longest punt in the history of West Texas' most storied football district.

"Coaches said he could come in (and perform as a punter) because he is a gamer," Midland High head football coach David Browning said.

With Midland High down 14-0 in the fourth quarter, Bose was again going to make history. Ray Johnson had forced a fumble, and guess who was there to recover it? Bose. And guess where he went? The end zone. It was significant, because the record books said that a MHS player had never before returned a fumble recovery for a touchdown. It also put MHS down by only one score.

"Good competitors come in and play good in good games and under tough circumstances," Browning said.

Bose also recorded 13 tackles (one for a loss), which isn't a record-breaking number, just another day at the office. His 125 total tackles for the season probably isn't record-breaking material. It just leads the district this season.

Bose, a warrior in a 5-foot-10-inch, 215-pound frame, has come a long way this year. Whether he has come far enough to earn District 4-5A Defensive MVP status is still to be determined by 4-5A's coaches and sports writers at season's end.

"If he is not (the district MVP), it doesn't take long to call roll (to see who is)," Browning said. "He is one of the best in the district. There is no question about that."

This week's game versus Midland Lee may play a big part in determining Bose' fate as far as the MVP thing goes.

The first reason, big players are supposed to elevate their play in the biggest games, and when you are a middle linebacker and playing against Cedric Benson, the challenges don't get much bigger.

Second, Midland High owns the No. 1 defense in 4-5A, albeit by two yards over Abilene High. Still, it is the No. 1 defense, and the Bulldogs would like to keep it that way.

Third, and this is very similar to the first reason, it is Midland Lee, the No. 8 team in Class 5A and the team which has owned the Bulldogs for 21 of the last 23 games played in the series. A win here is one to savor, maybe historical, no matter the circumstances.

Lastly, it is easier to pick an MVP off a 2-3 team than a 1-4 team which finishes last in its district, no matter how good the player is.

No. 1 defensive rankings, an 11-game losing streak to Lee and such will probably be on the minds of the Bulldogs at game time although some where in the very back. That is not what the game is about. This is MHS' Super Bowl.

"This game means everything Friday night," Bose said. "It is all about pride."

For nine games, MHS' defense has been playing against teams which are much bigger and often more talented. But there haven't been many who have taken more pride in a job well done.

And the Bulldog at the top of this list is Bose. He's done it all.

4-5A Playoff Possibilities

Who's In, Who's Out

Midland Lee (3-1 in district) and Abilene Cooper (3-1) are in.

Abilene High (2-2) and Odessa High (2-2) are still alive.

Midland High (1-3) and Odessa Permian (1-3) are out.

Scenarios

This Week's Games: Midland Lee vs. Midland High; Abilene High vs. Abilene Cooper; Odessa High vs. Odessa Permian.

Scenario: If Abilene High wins this week... The Eagles are in, no matter what Odessa High does. The Eagles finish district with a 3-2 record and make the playoffs due to a win earlier this season over Odessa High.

Scenario: If Abilene High loses and Odessa High wins... The Bronchos finish 3-2 and AHS finishes 2-3. The Bronchos are in with best record.

Scenario: If Abilene High loses and Odessa Permian beats Odessa High... AHS, OHS and Permian all finish 2-3. The tiebreaker is positive points (difference in score in games involving tied teams). Abilene High has the edge in positive points (with 26 compared to zero for OHS). The most Permian could get on Friday would be 18. AHS advances.

Scenario: If Abilene High loses, Odessa Permian beats OHS and Midland High beats Lee... AHS, OHS, MHS, Permian all finish with 2-3 records. The tiebreaker is positive points. AHS has 26, MHS has 14, OHS 10 and Permian could finish with 26 at the most... AHS advances due to its win over Permian...

For Seeding

If OHS makes the playoffs, they are the Big School entry. If the Bronchos don't, Midland Lee is.

Scenario: Midland Lee defeats Midland High, Abilene High beats Cooper, (Odessa game doesn't matter). Seeds: Big School - Lee, Small School - 1. Abilene High, 2. Cooper.

Scenario: Midland Lee defeats Midland High, Abilene Cooper beats Abilene High and Odessa High beats Permian... Seeds: Big School - Odessa High. Small School - 1. Lee, 2. Cooper.

Scenario: Midland Lee defeats Midland High, Abilene Cooper beats Abilene High, Permian beats Odessa High. Seeds: Big School - Lee. Small School - 1. Cooper, 2. Abilene High.

Scenario: Midland High defeats Midland Lee, Abilene Cooper beats Abilene High, Odessa High beats Permian... Seeds: Big School - Odessa High. Small School - 1. Cooper, 2. Lee.

Scenario: Midland High defeats Midland Lee. Abilene High beats Cooper, (it doesn't matter what happens in Odessa). Seeds: Big School - Lee. Small School - 1. Abilene High, 2. Cooper.

Scenario: Midland High defeats Midland Lee, Abilene Cooper beats Abilene High, Odessa Permian beats Odessa High. Seeds: Big School - Lee. Small School - 1. Cooper, 2. Abilene High.

PLAYOFFS: Lee, Cooper are in

(From 1C)

Cooper seven more positive points and put the Cougars ahead of Odessa High just in case both are tied with Abilene High and Midland Lee at 3-2. The 4-5A rules state that when more than two teams are tied and looking to fill one or two spots, positive points (point differential in games between those tied teams) are used. Going into this week, Cooper has 14, and Odessa High is locked on 10. Had Cooper not scored that TD, and such a tie takes place, then Quisenberry's team would be out.

"We knew what they had. We knew we had to win by more than 10," Quisenberry said. "It feels good to be in. Now, we go for a share of the district."

We might know two-thirds of 4-5A's representation, but trying to figure out who's going where in the UIL playoffs is a little premature.

We know if OHS makes the playoffs, it is the Big School entry. If the Bronchos don't, Lee is. After that, it is all up in the air.

We do know that District 3-5A is set up. San Angelo Central is that district's big school entry. Lubbock Monterey and Amarillo High are the No. 1 and 2 seeds in the small school bracket, respectively.

And what about MHS and Permian? Well, they are the cross-town games, the stadiums will be full and wins over Lee and OHS, respectively, could be huge. Their playoff games are Friday night.

As for the rest of the league, if AHS wins or OHS loses, 4-5A will have a postseason cast that many penciled in before that shocking Friday the 13th night.

4-5A Quiz: Which 4-5A team has the longest winning streak over a cross-town school?

4-5A Facts: The 82-yard punt by Matt Bose on Friday tied for second longest in district history... The longest punt — an 84-yarder by San Angelo Central's Doug Bonds in 1986 — also came on the Ratliff Stadium turf... With a win on Friday, Permian stopped its losing streak at four. One more loss would have set a new Permian record... Midland High's playoff drought hits 49 seasons...

Rebel Rousing: Friday night, Lee qualified for the playoffs for the 17th time in 18 years... With a win, John Parchman will capture at least a share of the 4-5A title for the fifth time in six years... Cedric Benson has rushed for 7,321 yards and 98 touchdowns in his career... Benson is also 230 yards away from his third straight 2,000-yard season...

Cooper Comments: Cooper will be going to the playoffs for the ninth straight time (a current 4-5A best)... Abilene Cooper's Jordan Neal became the third quarterback in 4-5A history to pass for 2,000 yards in the regular season. He has 2,019 yards now... He also has 26 touchdown passes, the fourth-best mark in 4-5A history...

4-5A Answer: Midland Lee has defeated Midland High 11 straight times...

Wild catch lifts Pack over Vikes

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Antonio Freeman's fluky 43-yard touchdown catch in overtime gave the Green Bay Packers a 26-20 victory over the Minnesota Vikings on Monday night.

Brett Favre launched a deep pass to Freeman, who slipped on the wet grass as cornerback Chris Dishman deflected the ball at the 20-yard line.

The ball bounced off Freeman's left shoulder as he rolled over, and he tipped it into his chest with his right hand before it hit the ground.

Freeman grabbed the ball, jumped up, juked safety Robert Griffith and rumbled into the end zone.

Both teams were already scattered across the field, some in prayer at midfield, when the officials finally announced the play stood as called.

It was the first time the Packers (4-6) had the lead all game against the stunned Vikings, who lost their second straight after starting 7-0.

INJURIES: Janikowski has cellulitis

(From 1C)

nursing a nagging injury, Jacksonville linebacker Hardy Nickerson, had arthroscopic surgery on his left knee Monday. The Jaguars said he might miss Sunday's game with Seattle although similar injuries often sideline players for three weeks.

San Francisco offensive tackle Derrick Deese also underwent knee surgery that will keep him out three weeks.

Dawson, Pittsburgh's center, is out indefinitely and could miss the rest of the season. He missed much of last season with injuries.

Meanwhile, coach Jon Gruden of the Raiders said kicker Sebastian Janikowski will be hospitalized for three days for treatment of cellulitis in his kicking foot. He missed Sunday's game with Kansas City after warming up, then walking off the field.

Bledsoe, who had to leave New England's game with Buffalo after bruising his right thumb on the helmet of the Bills' Sam Rogers, said he hopes to play next week against Cleveland.

Atlanta coach Dan Reeves said he didn't think Chandler, who has a concussion, would play next week. "We use every precaution we can with these kinds of injuries," Reeves said.

Seattle Seahawks quarterback Brock Huard continues to feel the ill effects of a concussion and likely will not start Sunday at Jacksonville.

COWBOYS: Dallas has rough road

(From 1C)

or two key plays to pull out a victory.

But that hasn't happened very often. The Cowboys led or have been tied in the fourth quarter of four losses and are 2-4 in games decided by six points or less. They were 1-6 — with six straight losses — in games decided by seven or less last season.

Ismail and Teague are the kind of big-play makers the needed to break that close-but-no-cigar pattern. Instead, both are gone until training camp, Ismail with a torn ligament in his right knee and Teague with a broken right foot.

Ismail has the same injury that ended Joey Galloway's season in the opener. Instead of the pair starting together for Dallas, they'll soon be going through rehab together.

With defensive tackle Chad Hennings likely out for the year with a neck injury and quarterback Troy Aikman's health still shaky, the Cowboys face teams with winning records in six of their final seven games. The only exception is the next foe, Cincinnati.

At this point, Dallas players might want Christmas to arrive quickly because that's the day their season ends.

"You got to endure, got to stand strong and keep fighting. That's all you can do. If it was easy, everybody in the world would be trying to do it. It's not that easy," Smith said. "These are the times where true character and true love for the sport really come out."

The last time things were this bad was '97, the final season of the Barry Switzer era.

"I think in '97 our record was a little better than it is at this point in time," Smith said. He's right: That team was 4-5 and headed to 6-5, before losing its last five.

TEXAS: Applewhite has sprained knee season but spent the first five games splitting time with Simms, a sophomore who was the nation's top high school recruit two years ago. Simms started three of Texas' first four games.

The Longhorns offense struggled with the rotation and Brown opted to make Applewhite his primary quarterback after a 63-14 loss to Oklahoma on Oct. 7. Since then, the No. 19 Longhorns (7-2, 5-1 Big 12) have won four straight.

Applewhite has thrown for 2,164 yards and 18 touchdowns with seven interceptions this season. Simms has passed for 441 yards with three TDs. Of his five interceptions, three have been returned for touchdowns.

Applewhite sprained the knee when he fell on the artificial turf of Tech's Jones Stadium in the third quarter. Simms came in with Texas leading 19-17 and completed his only two passes for 18 yards.

Simms didn't attend the team's availability with reporters Monday.

$3,021,926 is 2nd-highest total ever raised in Midland

By Jimmy Patterson

Communications & Marketing Director
United Way of Midland

For only the second time in Midland's history, donations topped the $3 million mark in the United Way's annual fall fund drive, it was announced last Tuesday.

Jose Cuevas, chair of the 2000 campaign, unveiled at last week's campaign finale that Midlanders united to raise $3,021,926 for the benefit of the Midland community. The number represents the second-highest amount ever raised during a United Way of Midland campaign behind the $3,056,000 million raised in 1997.

"When you think about how huge this is, not only for the community as a whole, but for our 16 partner agencies that will benefit ... WOW!" said Mr. Cuevas. "The volunteers came together week after week with one goal in mind and that was to achieve our $2.9 million goal. We knew as a group that reaching such a goal was going to send a strong message to the community that we do live in the greatest city in the world, a city made up of generous individuals and truly wonderful volunteers. This couldn't have been done without their support. They are the real heroes."

Cynthia Y. Benson, executive director of the United Way of Midland, attributed the increase in donations to several factors, namely teamwork, a focused commitment and strategic planning. In addition, Mrs. Benson said, surpassing the goal by almost $122,000 was made possible by several generous one-time contributions, specifically by BP Amoco, and the underwriting of campaign and administrative costs thanks to a grant provided by the Fasken Foundation and the Abell-Hanger Foundation.

Beki Moorehead, United Way of Midland campaign director, said the volunteers came together, focused on their objective and succeeded in meeting — and beating — the goal.

"I think the volunteers focused on what their goals were and made those goals a priority," Mrs. Moorehead said. "They functioned as a team and they accomplished their goals. They were absolutely wonderful."

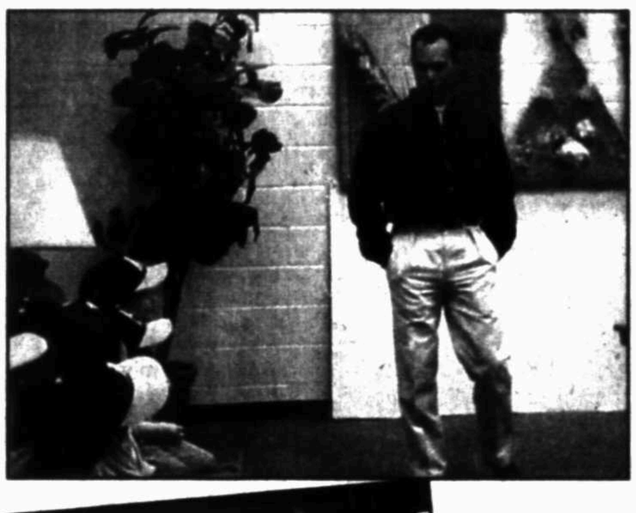

"It's been overwhelming," Mrs. Benson said of the September-October campaign. "The response from the community has been exceptional and moving. It reaffirms to me how blessed we are to live in a community like Midland. It makes me proud to be a Midlander."

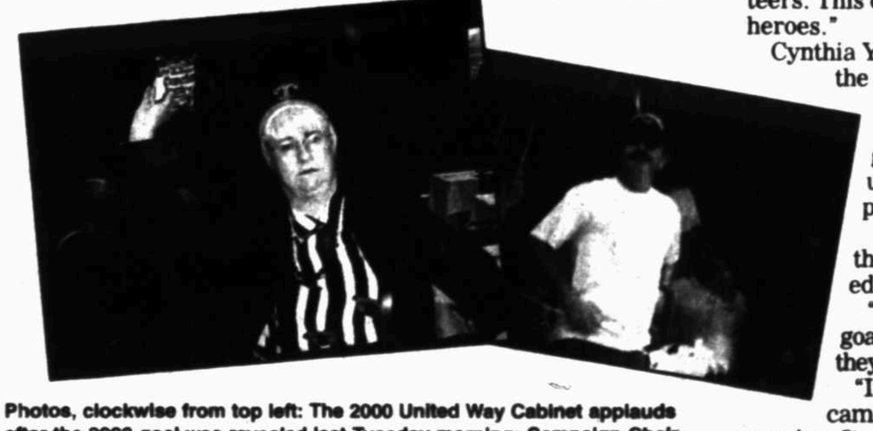

"The volunteers accepted the challenge laid before them, stepped up to the plate and absolutely hit a grand slam home run. We love and appreciate them."

Mr. Cuevas, who for years served the city as a councilman, said his experiences in the non-profit world were even more gratifying than his time spent in city government.

"I can't even begin to tell you how wonderful this experience has been," Mr. Cuevas said. "For 10 years I've sat on the political side of issues to strengthen our community and to make it better. This is my first venture out into the non-profit side of caring for individuals who for happenstance have come to a crossroads in their lives. All these individuals need is a hand up – not a hand out.

"I've met so many wonderful people who go out and prove that our citizens live without huge fanfare, no one to pat them on the back. They may not make it on TV, but they go out and make a difference in our community every day. I really, truly loved this experience."

Oil recovers

NEW YORK — Gasoline futures helped lift crude oil contracts at the New York Mercantile Exchange Monday while easing losses in heating oil contracts.

Jitters over supply disruptions were again highlighted, as oil futures bounced on news that civil unrest had prompted Shell Nigeria to declare a force majeure, excusing itself from fulfilling contractual obligations for the rest of November at its 475,000-barrels-a-day Bonny Terminal, traders said. A company spokesman said that up to half of the unit's output was cut, and some loadings were delayed by three days to nine days.

December unleaded gasoline futures rose 1.27 cent to 88.22 cents clung to gains after bouncing off support at 85.50-60 cents a gallon and finding support on the lowest inventories since last November, analysts said. But supplies are seen flooding in shortly, which will weaken gasoline contracts.

December crude futures got a boost from gasoline's strength, closing 15 cents higher at $32.86 a barrel.

Market players say they expect refinery runs to continue to increase, and heating oil's estimated demand to continue to fall, thus causing the year-on-year deficit to narrow.

December natural gas fell 8.2 cents to $4.849 per 1,000 cubic feet. In London, Brent crude from the North Sea gained 44 cents to $31.29 per barrel.

However, with the currently tight inventories in the United States, traders are wary of any supply disruption, making prices vulnerable to tensions in the Mideast.

Dollar mixed

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar was mixed against most other currencies in European trading Monday.

European central bankers intervened in money markets again Monday morning, buying euros to give the ailing currency a needed boost. It was their third attempt to bolster the euro including two interventions Friday that failed to boost exchange rates.

In midday trading in New York, the euro sank further more, trading at at 85.60 cents, falling back to pre-intervention rates.

Other dollar rates in Europe, compared with late Friday, included 107.24 Japanese yen, down from 107.58; 1.7657 Swiss francs, up from 1.7644; 1.5309 Canadian dollars, down from 1.5336.

The British pound was quoted at $1.4383, down from $1.4492.

In midday trading in New York, the dollar bought 107.18 yen, and the pound was worth $1.4287.

Based on euro rates, the dollar is worth 2.2700 German marks, up from 2.2653; 7.6132 French francs, down from 7.5974; 2.5577 Dutch guilders, up from 2.5534; 2,227.30 Italian lire, down from 2,242.61.

Gold down

Gold dealers in London fixed a recommended price of $264.95 bid per troy ounce, down from $265.20 on Friday. In Zurich the bid price was $264.55, down from $264.65. Gold rose $0.60 in Hong Kong to close at $265.65.

Silver opened in London at $4.73 bid per troy ounce, up from $4.71.

Argument over labor disputes heats up

By Bart Jansen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court heard arguments Monday on whether employers can require workers to resolve labor disputes through arbitration rather than litigation.

Arbitration is the preferred method of settling disputes for a growing number of companies, so the case is being watched closely by civil rights and business groups.

The case before the court stems from a lawsuit by Saint Clair Adams, who was required to sign a document agreeing to settle any potential labor grievance through binding arbitration before Circuit City Stores Inc. would hire him in 1995.

A year later he quit, then filed a lawsuit that alleged co-workers at a Santa Rosa, Calif., store harassed him because he is gay, and the company did nothing when he complained.

A federal District Court judge threw out the case, but the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturned that decision. That court ruled the 1925 Federal Arbitration Act specifically excluded "seamen, railroad employees or any other class of workers engaged in foreign or interstate commerce," which the court said includes Adams.

Business groups say arbitration is more convenient, less time-consuming and cheaper than lawsuits to settle grievances. Critics say workers forfeit certain rights when they go before a private arbitrator rather than a judge. Appeals often are limited, damages are capped, and severe restrictions are placed on discovery, the process by which a worker's lawyer may gather information to buttress the case.

The U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission issued a policy recommendation in 1997 against mandatory arbitration. Several civil rights groups, including the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the National Organization for Women Legal Defense Fund, have sided with Adams.

Almost one-fifth of the national work force is covered by arbitration agreements, according to the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress.

The argument before the high court is whether an exclusion to the 1925 statute should be broadly interpreted to include workers such as Adams. Other appellate courts have chosen a narrower interpretation than the 9th Circuit.

David Nagle, a Richmond, Va., lawyer representing Circuit City, argued that basically only transportation workers are excluded. He said seamen and railroad workers were specifically included because of lobbying, and that federal commerce at that time meant transporting goods or people across state lines.

"It is to be narrowly construed," he said.

But Michael Rubin, a San Francisco lawyer representing Adams, said Congress was trying to be as broad as possible by including workers "engaged in foreign and interstate commerce."

"'Engaged in' is as broad as it gets," he said.

Justice Stephen Breyer asked "Who's going to be left out in the cold?" if the court sided with Adams and broadly interpreted the law.

Nagle said federal courts would spend years sorting out who should be covered if the Supreme Court doesn't settle the question. He favored focusing the exclusion narrowly on transportation workers.

Rubin said no workers would be excluded from arbitration if they voluntarily submit to it. The problem arises when they are required to agree to arbitration as a condition of getting a job.

"If they agree to arbitrate, there is no problem," he said.

The case is Circuit City Stores vs. Adams. 99-1379.

Red Oak Realty experiences growing pains

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Midland Red Oak Realty is undergoing what could be described as growing pains.

With the sale of the corporate office building at 405 N. Marienfeld, Red Oak Realty is splitting its two divisions — Red Oak Realty, the investment division, and MRO Management, a fee-based management company. Midland Red Oak has relocated to Independence Plaza while MRO Management has moved to Century Plaza.

Bill McClain, president of MRO Management, said plans are to continue with the company's speculative suite program and will aggressively lease the building, including efforts to recruit a Mexican-food restaurant for the lower level that offers a limited menu for pick-up or dine-in.

With the two divisions sharing the same office, McClain said, it was easy for the two operations to become entwined. Separating them, he said, will let his company focus on building its third-party management operations, offering brokerage, management and maintenance services of office buildings and shopping centers to third parties.

As part of efforts to expand the business, he said, the company will sell its local holdings, which include Century Plaza and several shopping centers so it can concentrate on management services for other property owners.

Neill McClung, president of Midland Red Oak Realty, stressed that the changes do not lessen the company's commitment to Midland. In fact, he said, the move could benefit efforts to revitalize downtown Midland.

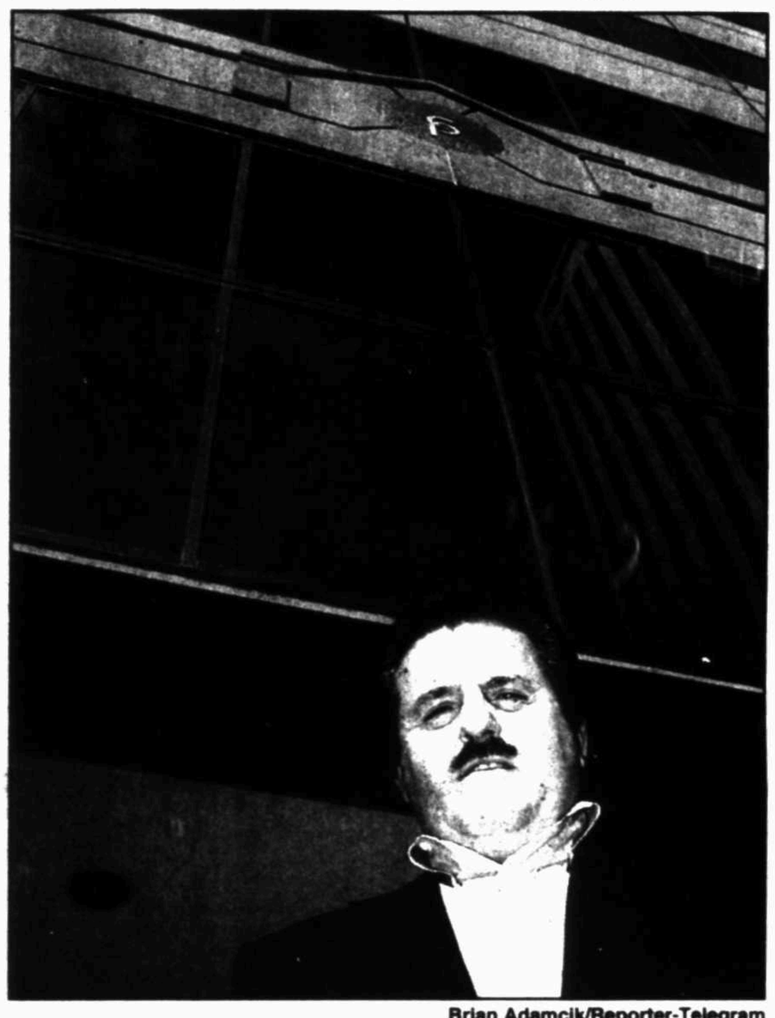

"People will see us on the ground floor, our people working, it could be good for downtown Midland and good for building owners," he said.

McClain agreed and added that the company sees tremendous growth potential in building its fee-based management services, which employs 20 Midlanders. He said he will devote the next 12 months to attracting new clients in the markets the company already serves.

"That's really who we are," he said, noting that the company's roots are in property management, dating back to 1986 with Mike Lewis & Associates, which was bought out by Don Davis in 1991, renaming it The Davis Company. Red Oak bought The Davis Company in 1998 and Davis remains with the company.

Midland Red Oak Realty employs four and owns commercial property in Midland, Odessa, San Angelo, San Antonio, Austin, Tulsa, Okla., Oklahoma City and Tucson, Ariz. McClain said the company is looking for additional acquisitions, including properties in Dallas-Fort Worth and Albuquerque, N.M..

"As our acquisitions grow, the company will grow," he said.

Sale of Chase branches to Wells Fargo delayed

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The acquisition of Chase Bank Texas' Midland branches by Wells Fargo, expected to take place Friday, has been delayed until late January.

"We're still waiting regulatory approval," said Andy Lane, chairman of Chase Bank Permian Basin. "We didn't hear from the regulators within the 15-day mandatory timeframe that would have let us complete the acquisition by Nov. 10, so it looks like it will be late January before the sale goes through."

He and Ron Mullins, president and chief executive officer of Wells Fargo in Midland, both stressed that there are no problems or concerns about the sale raised by regulators.

"We just haven't heard anything from them," Lane said.

Until then, he said, Chase customers should conduct their banking business as usual.

"Letters are going out Monday letting customers know what the situation is," he said.

He added that because some employees had expected the branches to be sold to Wells Fargo by mid-November, they had found new jobs or decided to leave Chase, and "we'll hold up our end of the bargain and give them severance packages," expected to affect six employees.

Mullins observed that such transactions are complex and "a number of different federal agencies review the plan because it affects thousands of customers. When we announced the sale, we said it would be pending regulatory approval."

Chase Bank will be selling its two Midland locations, one in downtown Midland and a section location with a drive-through facility at 1030 Andrews Highway — to Wells Fargo. Its Odessa locations are being sold to American State Bank out of Lubbock.

Lane explained that the decision to exit the Permian Basin was, while difficult, a business decision based on the fact that it would have been too costly to add locations and services to be more competitive with other banks and credit unions.

Mullins said Chase customers who switch to Wells Fargo when the Midland locations are purchased will benefit from additional branch locations, high-tech ATMs and financial products. Wells Fargo plans to continue operating Chase's Andrews Highway location.

Rates in Treasury bill auction continue to rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities rose in Monday's auction with the rate on three-month bills hitting the highest level in nearly nine years.

The Treasury Department sold $11 billion in three-month bills at a discount rate of 6.220 percent, up from 6.180 percent last week. An additional $10 billion was sold in six-month bills at a rate of 6.105 percent, up from 6.075 percent.

The three-month rate was the highest since Jan. 7, 1991, when the bills sold for 6.52 percent. The six-month rate was the highest since July 31, when the rate was 6.115.

The new discount rates understate the actual return to investors — 6.406 percent for three-month bills with a $10,000 bill selling for $9,842.80, and 6.386 percent for a six-month bill selling for $9,691.40.

In a separate report, the Federal Reserve said Monday that the average yield for one-year Treasury bills, the most popular index for making changes in adjustable rate mortgages, rose to 6.11 percent last week from 6.01 percent the previous week.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Annuities bought through a broker carry stiff penalties

By Eric Tyson

Q: We invested the proceeds from the sale of our business into an annuity nearly a year ago, and after making that decision, we now wish we hadn't. Is it possible to retrieve our investment without paying a large penalty? We sold and retired from our business at the age of 70.

Tyson

A: Most annuities are sold by insurance brokers or other brokers (sometimes operating under the self-anointed title of financial planner). Annuities carry generous commissions for the selling broker — sometimes paying upward of 10 percent of the amount invested.

In the event that you bought your annuity through a broker, odds are your contract does contain a stiff penalty for withdrawing or transferring your money to another annuity plan. This penalty usually diminishes over several years (usually no more than 10 years).

People your age should generally not be investing new money into an annuity. The main reason is that annuities carry higher fees than comparable non-annuity investments, such as mutual funds, and the investment earnings when withdrawn from the annuity are all taxed at the higher ordinary income tax rate. By contrast, when investing in mutual funds or securities of your own choosing, the appreciation on those investments once realized upon sale are taxed at no more than 20 percent, so long as you've held the investment for more than one year. An investor generally needs to keep annuity money invested for 15 to 20 years or more for the tax-deferred compounding to make up for the annuity's higher fees and the higher income taxes paid upon withdrawal.

Q: You recently said that it is generally better to save for your child's education by putting that account in your name, not the child's name. I have custodial mutual fund accounts in my children's names. After reading your column, I am thinking of transferring these accounts to my name only. Three years ago I moved my children from public schools to private. What I have in their accounts wouldn't be enough to pay for their private school, so I have been paying for their school from money that I had been using to buy mutual funds for my retirement. I can sell these mutual funds to pay for their tuition, but I am concerned that selling these mutual funds will create a tax liability. What is your advice?

A: Money in children's custodial accounts is supposed to be spent for the benefit of the child. Therefore, you shouldn't try transferring those assets into your name.

You could simply spend the assets in those custodial accounts on your children's private-school tuition. In the event those mutual funds have appreciated in value, you would owe capital gains tax. However, so long as you've held the funds more than one y ear, you would benefit from the lower long-term capital gains tax rate.

You should also know that the first $1,400 of investment returns in a custodial account are taxed at the child's tax rate for children under the age of 14. Returns above $1,400 per year are then taxable on the parent's return. Once a child reaches the age of 14, all of their investment returns are taxable to them. So, if the capital gains are substantial and your kids are nearing the age of 14, consider waiting to sell until after they turn 14 years old. Alternatively, you could sell some of their holdings each year to avoid exceeding $1,400 in taxable returns annually.

Going forward, if you hope to apply for financial aid for your children, I would encourage you to invest money you earmark for their college educations in your own name.

Recess not an option for children

By T. Berry Brazelton, M.D.
New York Times Special Features

QUESTION: I am a kindergarten teacher in the Dallas Independent School District. At our school, students are not allowed recess. We kindergarten teachers think this is borderline "criminal" and beg your support in telling our administrators how important physical movement is for growing students.

The neighborhood we are in is extremely dangerous in the evening; in the past, some parents have told me that immediately after school they bring their children indoors. So, for some, this crucial component of their development is left out all around.

Brazelton

Physical education class is the one exception, but the gym is often overcrowded (with up to eight classes at a time.

The P.E. teachers often have to keep the children on the floor, because it is unsafe to have 100-150 kindergartners (who don't know how to play productively for lack of playground experience!) running around for true exercise.

I see recess as a time for physical exercise for gross and small motor skills, socialization time and even time for me to get to know my kids better.

I imagine it is quite infrequent that you have the opportunity to improve the lives of so many children by one response.

I hope this provides you with that opportunity. - Name Withheld, Dallas.

DR. BRAZELTON: The situation at your school clearly deserves to be re-evaluated. I agree that recesses can be valuable opportunities for play, socialization and exercise.

Jane Brody, personal-health columnist for The New York Times, recently wrote about the importance of exercise and fitness to balance the sedentary, media-overloaded lives of many children who will end up fat and unfit.

"Regular physical activity enhances thinking ability and reaction time, reduces stress, increases stamina and strength and helps to control weight," she wrote. This is one argument for more recess times. The opportunity for peers to learn about each other in play and in free time is another. A third might be that recess gives both teacher and child the chance to balance the up-time of learning with the down-time of being free from expectations.

This cycling of up and down time is likely to be more conducive to health and to optimal learning than is a school day with no breaks from the classroom. Asian schools, for example, have many short recess periods during the day so that students and teachers can relax briefly in order to pay attention more vigorously afterward.

Thanks for writing. I hope this helps you in your quest for change.

QUESTION: What causes a child to be mean? I am concerned about my 6 1/2-year-old grandson, the oldest of three children. On a recent visit, I discovered a very bad bite on my 4-year-old granddaughter and was told her brother had done it.

I feel he is a very emotionally challenged child. My daughter has told me he shows signs of depression and has problems getting along with other children. I think he is also frustrated because his dad wants him to be very macho.

He tells him "Big boys don't cry" and makes other inhumane statements.

Is he looking for attention - or is it something much deeper? - F.S., Crestview Hills, Ky.

DR. BRAZELTON: I think you are already aware of the depths of your grandson's emotional problems. You say that he still bites (a 2-or 3-year old's behavior but not a 6-year old's), has symptoms of depression and an inabilityto relate to other children. These are all signs of a troubled child. I urge you and your daughter to seek emotional help for him now.

His father s reaction to him may be based on his anxiety about his son's poor adjustment. Everyone seems to be worried about him. I am, too.

Questions or comments should be addressed to Dr. T. Berry Brazelton, care of The New York Times Syndication Sales Corp., 122 E. 42nd St., New York, N.Y. 10168. Questions of general interest will be answered in this column; Dr. Brazelton regrets that unpublished letters cannot be answered individually.

Dr. Brazelton heads the Brazelton Foundation, which encourages and supports education and training programs that implement preventive health-care practices for children and families. For more information, write to: Brazelton Foundation, 4031 University Drive, Suite 200, Fairfax, VA, 22030.

Check list for preschool now includes check up

By Lana Cunningham

U. Frank Williams Jr/Reporter-Telegram
Lisa Irvin demonstrates how to use an oto-screen at her Speech, Language and Learning Services office. The instrument is used for pure tone hearing assessment.

One door shuts; another one opens. One disease is being halted from making its annual rounds of child care centers and schools. Meanwhile, young children's hearing and vision are being tested in an effort to uncover problems that can be corrected early.

State regulations are changing the complexion of children's health problems. Beginning in August, all children 1 year and older must have the chicken pox, or varicella, vaccination. And youngsters 3 and older must have their vision and hearing screened. These changes, claim health care workers and child care providers, will keep children from suffering the scarring effects of chicken pox.

And parents will know if their child has a vision or hearing problem at a young age and can correct it before a behavior problem develops.

"Most parents and doctors know about the chicken pox vaccination," said Donna Van Horn, director of Trinity Presbyterian's Children's Learning Center.

"If a child is going to participate in a public program, he has to have the shot."

The requirement for the varicella vaccination became effective Aug. 1 of this year. Parents registering their youngsters in child care, Mother's Day Out programs or preschool learned the child was required to have the shot. "All our kids had to have the shot by Sept. 15," Mrs. Van Horn said.

As with most vaccines, the chicken pox shot is no guarantee the child won't develop the disease.

But if he does contract the disease, it will be a much milder case.

"We had our first case of chicken pox reported here last week," Mrs. Van Horn said. "But he only had six spots and no fever. He'll be back to school in a few days."

On the other hand, she remembers how her son and daughter suffered from the disease a few years ago. "My son was covered from head to toe with the spots, as was my daughter who was 18 months old then."

Another woman recalled giving oatmeal baths to her two when they came down with chicken pox and watching the oatmeal and scabs wash down the drain. "I used to take a washable marker and we would connect the dots in an effort to have some fun with it," she said.

Jose H. Padilla understands new state regulations don't come out of thin air. The immunization/customer services coordinator with the State Health Department explained how health officials collect and study data before suggesting a vaccination become a requirement.

"In the United States, there was one adult death and one child death per week from chicken pox," he said. "It's a very communicable disease and the vaccine helps prevent the illness."

The illness affects the whole family, he noted, with one parent taking off work and staying home with the child. "In single-parent homes, this is a big crunch on their income," he said.

Data compiled by the health department is given to the State Board of Health, which reviews it and makes a recommendation to the State Legislature. In this case, the board suggested the varicella vaccination be required. The Legislature agreed.

"We have not heard of any problems with the vaccine," said Padilla. "What we have heard is that some children will get chicken pox, but it's a very mild case. Then we start looking at lot numbers of vaccine to see if there was a problem with that vaccine.

And there are some kids who just won't develop an immunity with the vaccine.

"Overall, we've seen a decrease in the disease. In another five to 10 years, chicken pox will be rare."

That would be one door closed on a disease that parents no longer would be concerned about their children catching.

Another regulation is opening the door for young children whose parents are unaware of hearing or vision problems in their offspring.

Detected early, solutions can be sought for the problem, whether it's eyeglasses to help a youngster see the words written on a wall or an aid to hear a teacher talking.

The Special Senses and Communicati Disorders Act under the Texas Health and Safety Code requires all children enrolled for the first time in public, private, parochial or denominational school or licensed child-care facility be screened for possible vision and hearing problems.

Speech, Language and Learning Services is one agency that provides these tests for a fee of $20 per student at various schools and preschools. "Children in preschool are having to do activities where if they have vision or hearing problems they can't do as well as they should," said Lisa Irvin, owner/director of the agency.

She even discovered a vision problem in a son when he was in third grade.

"He couldn't see the blackboard," Ms. Irvin said.

She has four employees who conduct the screenings at various schools, and it's rare to not detect a problem in at least one child.

Reports from three schools indicate: 13 screened, one failed the hearing and one failed the vision; 12 screened, one failed hearing and one failed vision; 125 screened; two failed hearing and one failed the vision portion.

When a student fails a portion of the screening, "we tell parents they need to take their child for more in-depth testing," Ms. Irvin said.

"There is an emphasis by the state (government) on improvement in education, and hearing and vision are important to learning," she added.

Mrs. Van Horn acknowledged that several parents were unaware of the state requirement for hearing and vision screening when notes were sent home with the students about the procedure, and she heard several objections. "Next year when we do parent orientation, I am including a letter that explains this is a state requirement.

"What the state is trying to do is catch these kids at an early age and correct the problem. Some children develop behavior problems because they can't see or hear."

For some children, being able to hear what a teacher tells them or seethe words written on a board is like opening a door to a new world.

Don't rush in to that school computer purchase

TROY, N.Y. (AP) — Before you buy a new laptop for school, put it through its paces. And put it on a scale.

That's the advice from experts at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, one of the nation's most wired schools — where laptops are required for all incoming students.

"Some of the keyboards are very tiny," observes Sharon Roy, Rensselaer's director of academic computing services. "They'll cramp your hands, and you won't be able to work comfortably for long periods of time."

Consider that it will be part of your daily load. "The weight of the laptop is also very important," says John Kolb, dean of computing and information services. "A laptop that exceeds eight pounds will be mighty heavy to carry around with all your books and supplies. Five or six pounds is more like it."

Make sure your system is robust enough to do the work, they say. For science and engineering studies, plan on at least a 300 megahertz Pentium II processor, 96 megabytes of RAM, and a six-gigabyte hard drive.

You'll also want networking capability. If your school has Ethernet connectivity, then you'll need an Ethernet network card.

If your school doesn't provide Ethernet connections in dorms, classrooms and libraries, you will need a modem to connect to telephone lines for e-mail and Internet use. A 56K modem is best.

Insist on a built-in CD-ROM drive, the Rensselaer experts say. Much of the software you'll be using will be loaded from a CD-ROM. An external drive for 3.5 floppy disks also is handy — but you probably won't want to carry it around.

Your laptop should accommodate batteries that will keep it running for at least four hours. Roy and Kolb recommend lithium ion batteries.

You'll need software programs for word processing, spreadsheets, presentations, and online communications. You also may need specialized software for studies in mathematics, engineering, science, or the arts.

And buy a padded case, Roy urges. "Remember, you're protecting a costly and important investment that has all your work stored on it."

Before you shop for the computer, check with the computer professionals at school. They can advise you about compatibility of hardware and software used by teachers and classmates — and where to find educational discounts that can save you money.

"Finally, make sure you work with an established vendor," says Kolb. "Most laptop manufacturers will offer a three-year warranty. but you want to make sure the company will be around for those three years."

A PARENT'S PERSPECTIVE: LANA CUNNINGHAM

Chronic lateness ... could it be a genetic trait?

By Lana Cunningham

We're late. We're always late. I'm writing this to explain why so that by the time Christopher gets into high school and he's late to his first class every morning, the teacher will understand he's been this way all his life.

My husband says the problem is me. "You're going to be late to your own funeral," he says.

I don't know of anyone who wants to be early for that event. (However, I was the last person of my wedding party to arrive at the church.)

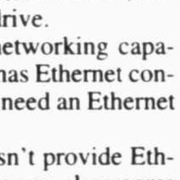

Getting Christopher up and moving in the morning is a chore. He is a child whose mind and body are on the go until he's practically tied down at night. And even then it's hard for him to shut down his mind.

But once he's asleep, he's out. Rousing him out of bed in the morning is no easy task. I turn on the radio, I open the shutters, I sing to him (that alone should get anyone moving quickly to get out of range of my voice). When that doesn't work, I drag him out of bed to the bathroom.

When that is completed, Christopher begins to open one eye and stumbles into his bedroom. One glance at some toys, and his mind is wide awake and the stories are rolling off his tongue.

My husband claims if I got Christopher up earlier, we wouldn't be late. I've tried that.

It just means Christopher's mind has time to shift into fourth gear, finding more toys to play with and thinking of more stories to tell.

Cunningham

If I can drag him from bed to breakfast to the car without his mind being fully awake, that is a successful morning. In fact, that is an easy morning.

It's just that no 4-year-old thinks in terms of straight lines. Life is a zig-zag.

One recent morning, Christopher hopped out of bed and immediately sat down on the floor to play with his Thomas trains while setting up a new track design. Meanwhile, I stuffed a shirt over his head and placed his arms through the sleeves between his putting down track.

Next came socks and pants while the engines Thomas and Henry were having a "discussion" over the track layout and the cars they were pulling. Shoes were more difficult and required turning Christopher several different ways on the floor to get them on, while he attempted to roll the trains around the track.

We were, however, still a long way from getting in the car for the morning ride to preschool.

It was time for breakfast. The cereal and juice were ready for a hungry mouth. Christopher wasn't ready. With my guidance, he made his way to the kitchen, holding two of the trains.

Then came the thought that he absolutely had to have a caboose and headed back to the bedroom. My quick glance over the floor found the car he was seeking and we headed back to the kitchen.

Breakfast meant another game with another toy between bites of cereal.

"Aaahh, " I thought, "we might make it on time this morning" as I pushed and pulled Christopher from one activity to another.

It was time to comb his hair and, I thought, head for the car.

Wrong. Christopher had diverted off the track and out the back door to run and look for bird feathers.

I dragged the child, clutching several bird feathers, back into the house and ran the comb through his hair. "Now, we can get in the car."

Nope. One shoe was off. One shoe is always off. "My foot had an itch," he explained. A search of the house revealed the shoe under his kitchen chair. Sometimes, it's in the television room or back in his bedroom, or under a chair in the living room, or in my bathroom, or....

OK, now we were headed for the car. Christopher had escaped my grasp and darted into another room for a miniature airplane so he could be a pilot.

Finally, we were in the car and on our way.

"Christopher, if you would get up and do what Mommy says, we could be at school on time," I said, looking in the rear view mirror for his reaction.

"No, Mommy. You need to get me up earlier."
