Agents arrest militia leaders

Authorities find 10 bombs in homes after informant tells of alleged plot

Top federal law enforcement official says there is no connection to Olympics despite early reports.

ROBERTA, Ga. — Two leaders of a small militia group were arrested Friday and 10 bombs were confiscated in raids on their homes after an informant said they planned to build and distribute pipe bombs.

Early reports said the bombs were to be set off during the Summer Olympics in Atlanta, but a top federal law enforcement official said there was no indication of any connection to the Olympics.

The Georgia Republic Militia group, which law officials said has 11 to 15 members, apparently wanted to hold the bombs at their homes in case of government invasion, according to a federal affidavit.

Robert Edward Starr III and William James McCranie Jr., both of Roberta, were charged with conspiracy to possess unregistered explosive devices.

Starr was arrested at his home, and McCranie was arrested in Americus, where he was working Friday. Both were held at a county jail pending a hearing on Monday, said Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern.

In Macon, agents of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms displayed 10 pipe bombs they said were found in the raid. Nine of them were made from one-inch diameter

Budget politics

WASHINGTON — With the epic 1996 budget war over at last, President Clinton and Congress are already waging next year's fiscal battle. Yet Republicans who achieved little of their budget-balancing agenda face even longer odds of success in this election year's intense political climate. "Slim" are the chances former Rep. Tim Penny, D-Minn., who made deficit reduction a top priority while in Congress, gives for a budget deal between the two sides this year. Page 7B.

Domino transplant

MIAMI — For the last 10 years, Rondie Ann Harris suffered stomach aches so excruciating she couldn't get out of bed. Unable to eat for half that time, Rondie, 17, was the perfect candidate for an intestinal transplant. What doctors didn't realize until surgery last week, though, was that Rondie also was the perfect candidate to be a liver donor. In the first "domino" liver transplant in the United States, Rondie received a liver and a large and small intestine from a young donor, then gave her own perfectly healthy liver to a third patient. Streets fall silent after cease-fire between Israel, Muslim guerrillas

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli and Muslim guerrilla guns fell silent today after both sides agreed to a U.S.-brokered truce that will allow more than a half-million refugees to return home.

The truce, which marked a major success for U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher and his brand of shuttle diplomacy, was aimed at ending the worst fighting in the Mideast in three years.

The cease-fire arose from worldwide revulsion to the shelling of a U.N. refugee camp by Israeli gunners on April 18.

Christopher said the truce set the stage for an extended period of calm along the Israeli-Lebanese border and for an eventual Israeli troop withdrawal from southern Lebanon.

"We have achieved the goal of our mission," he told a news conference in Jerusalem.

Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres, standing next to Christopher, thanked President Clinton for sending his secretary of state to the Middle East. "I think you served peace," he told Christopher.

Hezbollah said it would abide by the agreement, which its secretary-general, Sheik Hassan Nasrallah, called "very good."

"What concerns us is the spirit and contents of this understanding. We see it as a formula to protect civilians in our country," he said in an interview with Hezbollah's Al Manar television station.

After leaving more than 150 people dead this month, Israel and Hezbollah guerrillas ceased firing at each other today, although U.N. officials reported five 155-mm shells falling on southern Lebanon shortly after the 4 a.m. (10 p.m. CDT Friday) deadline.

In addition to the five Israeli shells, which fell between 4 a.m. and 6 a.m., U.N. officials said Israeli gunners fired

Prophets of Presley

Followers believe in gluttony, fighting evil one

By Michael A. Giarrusso

BETHLEHEM, Pa. — After decades of unorganized Elvis worship, the Prophets of Presley want fans of The King to join their church.

The tenets of Presleyterianism are simple: eat six meals a day (with frequent snacking in between), face Las Vegas once a day, make a pilgrimage to Graceland and fight against the evil anti-Elvis, Michael Jackson.

About 200 people have joined the organization, which holds weekly services in cyberspace, and all of them celebrated when Lisa Marie Presley filed for divorce from Jackson.

"We believe Lisa Marie Presley is the princess of Presleyterianism and she was bewitched, bothered and bewildered by the evil Gloved One," said Mort Farndu, co-founder of the First Presleyterian Church of Elvis the Divine.

Farndu and Karl Edwards, who owns a marketing company in Hoboken, N.J., founded the church as a joke and marketing ploy in 1988. On Friday, they posted the King's 31 Commandments on the doors of the Packer Chapel on the Lehigh University campus in Bethlehem, about 50 miles

Tears, bitter memories mark Chernobyl's 10th anniversary

KIEV, Ukraine (AP) — Embracing and weeping openly in the streets, the living marked the Chernobyl nuclear accident's 10th anniversary Friday by invoking memories of their dead and — still — trying to make sense of the event that changed them forever.

Across Ukraine and the former Soviet Union, victims struggled with sad recollections. Some visited their contaminated, deserted homes. Environmentalists channeled feelings into direct protests. And survivors occupied themselves with the thoughts of friends and family gone for a decade.

"I feel guilty being alive while my friends lie here," said Yuri Rusnak, an electrician who worked at the plant at the time of the accident. He joined more than 1,000 mourners who laid flowers and burning candles on the graves of Chernobyl workers and firefighters in western Moscow.

In Minsk, the capital of Belarus, the former Soviet republic that suffered much of the effects of the accident, an anniversary march turned into an anti-government protest Friday. Dozens of people were injured in clashes with police after 50,000 people held an unauthorized rally to coincide with the official com-

Passion, responsibility: 'Bridges of Madison County' wins China

BEIJING (AP) — They loved the book. Now the movie version of "The Bridges of Madison County" has riveted China, selling 1.29 million tickets the first weekend it opened in the capital — one for every 10 Beijingers.

It's a dream of passion for some, a morality lesson for others. Either way, the love story of a traveling photographer and a Midwestern farm wife has an appeal here that goes beyond the sentimental. Its theme — adultery — touches on changes in sexual mores as capitalism pushes China away from communism.

Extramarital affairs were taboo in the early decades of communist China. Leader Mao Tse-tung kept harems for himself but expected restraint from everyone else.

In today's China, experts at telephone hotlines answer question after question about sexual problems. Many blame urban China's rising divorce rate on bedroom woes and roving eyes.

Shops in Beijing sell sex toys and lingerie openly. Mistresses are common luxuries for successful businessmen, and prostitution is everywhere — from Beijing's luxury hotels to village karaoke bars.

In contrast with these changes, Robert James Waller's novel — a runaway bestseller last year in its Chinese translation — seems downright wholesome. His heroine may fall madly in love with a romantic stranger, but in the end she decides to stay with her husband and children. She and the photographer cherish the memory of their passion until they die.

Some Chinese, like many American critics, found the story more than a bit unrealistic.

"If they really lived together a long time, they'd run into a lot of problems," said a 25-year-old woman outside a theater where the movie was showing. The film version opened April 20 around the country and is running through Sunday.

Not everyone was so dismissive.

"True love," said a misty-eyed middle-aged woman walking out after a show. "Very moving."

"A lot of human feeling," her husband agreed. "It can teach us something."

Leery of attracting attention from authorities who frown on Chinese talking to foreign reporters, or perhaps shy about the topic, all declined to give their names.

"Bridges" has struck a deep chord among middle-aged people in China today, many of whom were sent out to the countryside during the turmoil of the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution and lost opportunities for education and the normal social explorations of youth. In that era, many marriages were delayed or arranged.

The film may be attracting middle-aged Chinese viewers in particular because it gives them a look at their own sadness and a chance to cry pent-up tears, the Beijing Youth Daily suggested.

"Middle-aged people especially have had so many feelings repressed and have had to put up with so much," it said.

Other newspapers used the film to preach a message of warning. When people with dull lives and starved emotions encounter passion, marital problems are bound to surface, the China Women's News said in a front-page commentary.

But "one cannot be too careful," it warned: In real life, extramarital affairs end in hatred, discord and "eternal regret."

Japanese HIV patients sue government

TOKYO (AP) — A group of AIDS-infected Japanese hemophiliacs sued the government and five pharmaceutical companies Friday, seeking compensation similar to what an earlier group of plaintiffs won.

The 87 plaintiffs either are infected with HIV, which develops into the AIDS virus, or represent relatives of those who died of AIDS after being infected in the early to mid-1980s from tainted blood products.

Victims say the government and drug companies failed to remove unheated blood products from the market despite knowing they ran the risk of transmitting HIV.

As many as 2,000 Japanese, mostly hemophiliacs, are believed to have been infected by the blood products. Several hundred have died.

The latest group is seeking a court-mediated settlement similar to one reached by 118 victims in a landmark case in March, an Osaka District Court official said.

Under that settlement, $425,000 goes to each patient or the patient's family. It also includes monthly payments of $1,400 for those who have developed full-blown AIDS.

The government has admitted that, in 1983, it knew about the risks of conventional blood products but chose to wait until 1985 to approve new heat-treated versions.

Victims say Japanese drug companies wanted to postpone emergency imports to avoid costly recalls and to enable them to develop profitable treatments of their own.

The government didn't begin recalling the conventional products until several months after finally approving the safer, heat-treated versions.

Eighty-five of the HIV-infected people named in Friday's suit are men with hemophilia who must regularly inject blood extracts so their blood will clot when necessary. Two are non-hemophiliac women married to male plaintiffs. Of the 87, 16 have already died of AIDS.

Also Friday, Japan's top public health official reaffirmed his resolve to investigate and punish any government officials who were negligent in the matter.

STATE

A stationary front stretching across Central Texas separates slightly cooler and drier air to the north from warm, humid air across South Texas. The front reached from near Lufkin in Deep East Texas to Del Rio in the southwest.

Ahead of the front, mostly cloudy to cloudy skies prevailed. Skies were clear behind the front.

Winds were generally variable in direction at 10 to 20 mph.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms saturated much of the East on Friday, as high winds howled for a third day across the upper Midwest and Great Lakes region.

A frontal system across the eastern third of the nation spread showers and thunderstorms from New York to Alabama.

Severe thunderstorms packing damaging winds and small hail developed across western South Carolina late Friday morning, damaging businesses and power lines and blowing the front porch away from a house.

In Michigan's Upper Peninsula, melting snow and recent rain and snow caused creeks and rivers to flow over their banks, collapsing a large section of Highway 35 for the second time in two days.

In Dickinson County, officials were keeping a wary eye on the Menominee River as residents piled sandbags near their homes. Flooding also occurred in Marquette County.

High winds howled across the upper Midwest and Great Lakes region. Winds gusting up to 35 mph were reported from Minnesota to Michigan, and southward to northern Missouri.

Colder air from Canada caused record lows Friday morning. In International Falls, Minn., the temperature dropped to 14 degrees, breaking the old record of 16 degrees in 1956.

MILITIA: Agents find bombs in homes of group leaders metal pipe with caps screwed on each end. The 10th was about 3 1/2 feet long and four inches in diameter. It was wrapped in mud-stained plastic and apparently had been buried, agents said.

The agents also showed explosive powder, pre-cut pipe and other bomb-making materials they said were recovered in the raid.

Roberta is 74 miles south of Atlanta, where most of the Olympic games are to be held, and 43 miles east of Columbus, the site of Olympic softball.

Stern said the government is making "no allegation that they intended to explode any devices at the Olympics."

"The Olympics only came up once during the investigation when at one of their meetings, one member said if a bomb goes off at the Olympics they would get blamed for it," he said.

But CBS, which broke the story, was standing by its report that federal agents had uncovered a plot by a militia group to set off bombs at Olympic sites prior to the games.

Several sources initially confirmed an Olympic connection to the AP, but a top-ranking law enforcement official subsequently denied it.

"Whether the games were the target or not, it's better to have something connected with a bombing plot to be found out beforehand," said Scott Mall, a spokesman for the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games.

McCranie, 30, is a plumber who works in Macon. Starr, 34, is a self-employed electrician whose company, Spectrum Electric, filed for bankruptcy in June 1995, according to court records.

Their families were shocked by the arrests.

"I have never heard him speak anything about bombs. No way," said Starr's sister, Michelle Wilkes.

McCranie's mother, Sherry McCranie, said: "We don't have any idea what's going on. We believe it's a terrible misunderstanding."

Asked if her son was involved with militias, she said, "He's got lots of friends. It's a misunderstanding."

Starr and McCranie live about five miles apart in this central Georgia town of 980.

A sign on Starr's driveway advertises fresh eggs for sale, while two signs on a gate blocking the driveway to McCranie's trailer warn "Beware of Dog" and "Trespassers Will Be Shot."

Neighbor Georgine Fesperman said she's seen a pickup truck full of men with shaved heads carrying rifles and dressed in camouflage and black berets drive onto the McCranie property.

"Something is going on back there," she said. "There's always gunfire back there. They've got vicious dogs back there. You can hear them."

An informant told agents of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms on April 5 that he had attended a meeting with McCranie, Starr and others at which McCranie talked about blowing up a bomb on his property and said he had enough chemicals to make 40 bombs, according to the affidavit.

Starr said the group needed to start making pipe bombs by April 20. Starr said he wanted to make as many bombs as possible and distribute them among the members after packing them with explosives and wrapping them with nails for fragmentation.

McCranie said he already had completed pipe bombs stored on his property.

The informant went to a meeting on McCranie's property April 20 and saw pre-mixed explosives, fuse, igniters, chemicals and end caps. On Tuesday, the informant quoted Starr as saying he wanted to fully arm the pipe bombs on April 27.

"Starr said that whoever wanted one could have it but they were to bury them in their back yards. On other occasions, Starr had said that the pipe bombs would be to defend their rights against invasion of the government," the affidavit stated.

Starr, dressed in blue jeans and a plaid, short-sleeved shirt, looked up pleasantly but declined to talk to reporters as he left the courthouse in the custody of U.S. marshals.

McCranie, dressed in a black T-shirt, camouflage pants and boots, covered his head and chest with a light blue jacket and ignored reporters.

FIGHTING: Israel, Hezbollah agree to U.S.-brokered truce several shells toward guerrilla positions about 30 minutes before the truce deadline.

Hezbollah held out until the last minute, firing a rocket that struck a building in the Israeli border town of Kiryat Shmona at 3:59 a.m., officials said. There were no apparent injuries and Israel did not return fire.

The pact was the third major development in as many days, all expected to invigorate the peace process in the Mideast. On Wednesday the PLO ended its call for Israel's destruction. Israel's ruling party answered Thursday by abandoning its long-standing opposition to a Palestinian state.

The agreement came a week after Israel — targeting Hezbollah gunners — shelled the U.N. camp and killed scores of civilians. The attack galvanized world leaders into action. Until then the major powers had not taken a major role in ending the new fighting along the last active Arab-Israeli war front.

"I want to make it clear to the leaders of Lebanon — we have no territorial desires on Lebanon," Peres said. "We have no bad intentions. We are not interested in destroying or dividing Lebanon."

Both sides kept firing after the truce was announced at 6 p.m. (noon CDT), with Hezbollah pounding northern Israel with Katyusha rockets and Israeli artillery shelling southern Lebanon, where 90 percent of the population — or about 500,000 people — had fled the onslaught.

Israeli warplanes carried out more bombing raids and naval gunboats continued firing on the coastal highway linking the south with the rest of Lebanon, said Israeli security sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The highway filled with cars, vans and buses as the refugees began to return home today.

There was no immediate information about casualties in the fighting Friday.

The numbers after 16 days of fighting: 152 Muslims in Lebanon killed, most of them civilians, and 339 wounded; 60 Israelis hurt; 20,000 Israelis displaced; 700 rockets fired by Hezbollah; 13,000 artillery shells fired by Israel; 1,200 Israeli air strikes.

In northern Israel, residents seemed Friday evening of the truce pledge.

"There is no feeling that this is over," Yossi Malka said after watching the announcement on television. "I think the situation will go back to what it was — again Katyushas, again wounded, again bloodshed."

The new agreement — an upgrade of a 1993 verbal understanding also brokered by Christopher — bars both sides from targeting civilians. In a clause that Israel had insisted upon, Hezbollah may not launch attacks from populated areas in southern Lebanon.

The written, Syrian-backed agreement will probably boost Peres' chances for re-election May 29. Peres faces a challenge from hard-line Israeli opposition leader Benjamin Netanyahu.

Netanyahu immediately criticized the pact, accusing Peres of folding too quickly and saying the strikes should have continued until the Iranian-backed Hezbollah guerrillas were crushed.

Friday's agreement will be monitored by the United States, Israel, Syria, Lebanon and France.

Both Christopher and Peres emphasized that the pact could serve as a springboard for permanent peace agreements between Israel and its northern neighbors, Syria and Lebanon.

Peres said both Syria and Lebanon demonstrated that they were interested in calm in the region and described the cease-fire talks as a dry run for peace negotiations.

"The fact that Syria, Lebanon and Israel are truly interested in a truce ... is decisive," he said. "This is a kind of draft for additional agreements in the future between the three countries."

Peres has said he was prepared to pull troops out of Israel's self-declared buffer zone in south Lebanon if the Lebanese government dismantled Hezbollah and prevented attacks on Israel for nine months.

Peres said Israel received assurances from the United States that the Israeli army would retain the right to respond to Hezbollah attacks, such as car bombs or shooting ambushes, in southern Lebanon.

The Israeli leader said he hoped peace talks with Syria, which were disrupted by a series of suicide bombings in Israel by Islamic militants in February, would resume soon.

10th: Victims struggle with sad recollections on anniversary memorial ceremony.

Belarus President Alexander Lukashenko, at the official ceremony, said he approves of people eventually returning to the contaminated lands, comments that opposition leaders ridiculed.

Chernobyl's reactor No. 4 exploded on April 26, 1986, spewing a radioactive cloud across Europe and releasing 200 times as much radiation as the atomic bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki combined. At least 32 people died, but thousands more are thought to be suffering from radiation-related illnesses.

A decade later, the plant's fate remains unclear, though the world's industrialized nations have promised to help shut it down.

It continued operating as usual Friday. Workers monitored the plant's two functioning reactors, just a few hundred yards from the badly cracked, 24-story steel-and-concrete sarcophagus covering the destroyed reactor No. 4.

Environmental activists marked the anniversary with demands for the immediate closure of Chernobyl and other plants that still use RBMK graphite-cooled nuclear reactors. One group was arrested after they chained themselves to railroad tracks leading into the 18-mile exclusion zone around the plant.

Ukraine President Leonid Kuchma on Friday reaffirmed his commitment to shut down the plant but also reiterated his demand for foreign aid to do so.

'The planetary character of the catastrophe gives us basis to call upon the world community to increase help — not only in the name of the future Ukrainian nation but for all humanity.'

— Ukraine President Leonid Kuchma, in a speech at the National Opera House

"The planetary character of the catastrophe gives us basis to call upon the world community to increase help — not only in the name of the future Ukrainian nation but for all humanity," he said in a speech at the National Opera House.

"With our joint effort," he said, "the planet Earth will never again know such a tragedy."

Not far from the Lenin statue at the plant's entrance, a military band played and Russian Orthodox priests prayed as officials unveiled a monument to the firefighters who battled the blaze, many of who received fatal doses of radiation.

In Moscow, Anatoly Sitnikov was one of 28 Chernobyl workers and firefighters buried in the Mitinskoye cemetery beneath a gray stone monument shaped like an atomic mushroom cloud.

"He gave his life so that we could live," Elvira Sitnikova said, tears welling in her eyes before the grave of her husband, who was Chernobyl's deputy chief engineer.

Her husband was called at home when Chernobyl's reactor exploded during a routine midnight test. He went to the shattered reactor to help contain the damage and died of radiation illness a month later.

Even today, Ukrainians and the world watch Chernobyl with suspicious eyes.

The Group of Seven industrialized nations has pledged $3.1 billion to help close the plant by the year 2000, but concern over Chernobyl's immediate safety has increased in recent days.

On Thursday, a worker used an improperly sealed container to dispose of radioactive material. Plant officials said the incident did not raise radiation levels.

Earlier this week, forest fires swept across contaminated land around the plant, kicking up radioactive particles left over from the accident.

Though changes have been made in the design of Chernobyl's and other RBMK reactors still working across the former Soviet bloc, Western scientists insist the reactors are badly flawed.

In the abandoned town of Pripyat adjacent to the plant, former residents returned to see their gutted, contaminated homes.

Nina Klimenko, whose husband worked as a firefighter the night of the blast, wept when describing the sight of her dusty, crumbling apartment.

"It pierced my heart. But I had to see it," she said. She gave birth to one of her daughters in Pripyat the year before the accident.

In the city of Slavutich, about 3,000 mourners raised candles at exactly 1:24 a.m. for a moment of silence at a monument for victims. The city was built in the northern Ukraine wetlands after the accident to house plant workers just outside the exclusion zone.

Ukrainians cried openly in Kiev's streets Friday, embracing each other and reminiscing about the blast.

"We must do everything so that the 'glowing sarcophagus' and exclusion zone don't become the only symbols of Ukraine," Kuchma told the nation in a special televised address. He awarded medals to some 150 cleanup workers, including six who died after rushing to the scene.

Ukrainian television began airing a two-day telethon to raise money for children suffering from Chernobyl-related illnesses, showing chilling footage from the reactor.

Health effects of the accident remain controversial. Most research indicates the only direct consequence has been a hundred-fold increase in the incidence of childhood thyroid cancers in the affected region. Other cancers are not expected to appear for years, perhaps decades.

China, Russia, sign border agreement

SHANGHAI, China (AP) — The presidents of China, Russia and three central Asian countries signed a military agreement Friday to reduce tension along the 4,600-mile Chinese border.

The signing ceremony capped a three-day state visit to China by Russian President Boris Yeltsin that brought Sino-Russian relations to their warmest level in decades.

Yeltsin and Russian government ministers traveling with him signed 14 bilateral agreements in Beijing, including one setting up a hotline between Beijing and Moscow.

On Friday, Yeltsin joined President Jiang Zemin and the presidents of Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan and Tajikistan in Shanghai, China's largest city.

The presidents gathered at the Shanghai Exhibition Center, a Stalinist-style complex built in the 1950s with Soviet assistance, to sign the military agreement.

The document, the product of four years of negotiations, stipulates that border troops will not attack or carry out military exercises that threaten the other side.

It also restricts military exercises in scale, scope and frequency, and requires each side to inform the other of any major military activity within 66 miles of the border.

In statements following the signing, the presidents called the agreement "epoch-making," "unprecedented" and "historic." They clasped hands in a group handshake and clinked champagne glasses.

But Yeltsin said the agreement was only the first step and called on the parties to begin work on reducing border troop strength. Kazak President Nursultan Nazarbayev said it was a step toward setting up a common Asian market.

China shares a 2,700-mile border with Russia, 1,000 miles with Kazakhstan, 600 miles with Kyrgyzstan and 300 miles with Tajikistan.

Yeltsin, in Shanghai for the first time, packed in a busy day visiting the showcases of China's economic reforms, including the city's Pudong economic development zone. He also addressed 200 Chinese and Russian businessmen and peppered Shanghai's mayor with questions about the city's reform measures.

"I want to study Shanghai's experience in more detail," Yeltsin told The Associated Press. "What I have seen so far is very impressive."

Responding to Communist opponents at home who have criticized Russia's own economic reforms, Yeltsin said, "Our Communists... are fanatics. But here, they are pragmatists."

As he left his hotel for the signing ceremony, Yeltsin plunged into a crowd of Chinese onlookers. For about 10 minutes, he shook hands, shouted and clasped his hands over his head in a gesture of victory.

Yeltsin's visit has been carefully choreographed to highlight warming relations between Beijing and Moscow, whose Communist leaders broke off ties for three decades beginning in the late 1950s because of ideological differences. This was Yeltsin's second visit to China in five years and his third summit with Jiang.

The two leaders have clearly developed a rapport. Yeltsin whispered to Jiang during the signing ceremony and tried to help the Chinese president put on his earphone to hear the simultaneous translation.

However, that rapport did not win Yeltsin the agreement he sought from China to halt all nuclear testing.

Police on guard throughout India for election protection

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of armed police guarded green ballot boxes across India on Friday, hours before voting started in an election expected to unseat Prime Minister V. Narasimha Rao's Congress Party.

Elephants and camels were on hand to help millions of Indians vote in the parliamentary elections Saturday, carrying ballots to and from some of the 825,000 polling stations scattered over Himalayan peaks, deserts, river-streaked plains and tropical forests.

With nearly half of the 590 million voters illiterate, ballots are printed with party symbols as well as candidates' names.

As is usual during Indian elections, political violence marked campaigning in the days before Saturday's vote. At least seven people were killed Thursday as canvassing closed in many constituencies, raising the pre-election death toll to 19.

Police around the country detained thousands of suspects Friday — mostly petty criminals — to prevent violence, the Press Trust of India news agency reported. In Bombay, police were checking all vehicles entering the city to prevent militants from smuggling guns, Press Trust reported.

Bombay's police chief, R.D. Yagi, asked school children not to touch unclaimed objects, especially those that resembled lunch boxes, Press Trust said. It quoted him as saying that according to intelligence reports, some militant groups had made bombs to look like lunch boxes. He would not elaborate.

The bribing of voters with liquor and money is rampant. The going rate this time is about $3 per voter, although in the southern state of Tamil Nadu, the governing party reportedly is offering voters about $30, according to news reports.

The voting that begins at 7 a.m. Saturday is for one-third of the 545 seats to Parliament. Balloting for most of the other seats will be held in the first week of May, although a few constituencies in Jammu-Kashmir and other states will be completed only by the end of next month.

In northern Jammu-Kashmir state, where Muslim guerrillas are fighting for independence, suspected militants hurled a flaming bottle of gasoline Friday into a government building in Srinagar, the state capital, an officer at the police control room said on condition of anonymity. No one was injured.

Kashmir is the only Muslim-majority state in mostly Hindu India. The guerrillas, who claim the federal government discriminates against them, have boycotted the elections.

The results of an exit poll conducted by an independent group will be announced on state-run television on May 7, when most of the voting ends. Nearly all final results will be known by May 10.

Three opinion polls published this week agreed that no party will win a majority. They predicted that Rao's Congress Party will have its worst showing in 48 years of independence and that a coalition government is likely to be formed.

The polls predicted that the Hindu nationalist Bharatiya Janata Party will emerge as the largest

French death may cast doubt on mad cow disease

LONDON (AP) — The death of a French man from a new strain of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease may cast doubt on the link between the fatal brain disease and a similar cattle malady, French researchers say.

The 25-year-old victim appeared to have the same strain of the disease as in 10 cases in Britain, which scientists think may be related to mad cow disease, according to a letter published in the current issue of the medical journal The Lancet. It was released Friday.

Yet only 16 cases of mad cow disease, formally known as bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE), have been reported in France versus about 160,000 in Britain since the disease was identified in 1986.

The victim, a mechanic, had no particular contacts with cattle and had traveled abroad only once, in 1990, to southern Spain, the French researchers said.

"The case questions the possible causal relationship between bovine spongiform encephalopathy and the new (Creutzfeldt-Jakob) variant," they said.

British scientists said the 10 cases involved a previously unknown strain of the disease, which eats holes in brain tissue. All 10 cases involved people younger than 45, with some in their 20s.

DAN WILLIAMS MILLWORKS

"Quality Is Our Main Objective"

Custom Made Furniture By Dan Williams Millworks
Is Now Available Thru Furniture Factory Outlet

Dan Williams, owner of Dan Williams Millworks at the corner of Industrial Avenue and Maricopa, just south of the tracks downtown, says his criteria for the furniture he will build are stringent.

"We try to provide furniture that's a good value. Not necessarily the most stylish, or the most ornate, but a really good solid value-furniture that will last a long, long time. Furniture that you can hand down to your children," he says. "No particle board. Not in the drawers, not inside, none used in the construction at all."

Much of the wood furniture you see in the Furniture Factory Outlet is made on site. However, Dan will buy other pieces meeting his exacting criteria. He buys other pieces from a few select suppliers. The trouble is, most pieces are no longer made the way Dan thinks they should be.

"We have some special tables for example, like Grandma used to have. It used to be that tables were made with a very thick top. The ones you buy in the store now are 3/4 inch. Even if they're solid top, they're 3/4 inch. We make tables using 1-1/4 or 1-1/2 inch material, which is unique. Nobody else does it like that anymore."

Dan Williams Millworks is able to sell such pieces quite reasonably because there is no middleman. They keep overhead low. You will find no carpeted showroom at the Dan Williams Millworks-what you will find are pieces of furniture that will last a lifetime. Furniture that in some cases was still a stick of wood only a few days ago. They don't have a huge inventory-customers buy them up too fast. The reason for the turnover is value.

"We want to be real aggressive with our values," Dan says.

Oak is the most popular wood medium on furniture nowadays, but Dan Williams Millworks will work in almost any wood. They do mahogany, a lot of pine material, and alderwood, another popular material. They work with some exotics, such as zebra wood.

Recently they made a piece out of purple heart, from Africa, which is actually purple, and according to Dan, "really finishes up nice."

Dan started out in Oregon as an electronics engineer. He worked in the electronics industry around the world for a time, but electronics wasn't his niche. Then 18 years ago, he began a friendship with wood that has grown and flourished.

He says their aim is to put it together well. "In all our years of furniture building, we have had no furniture fail mechanically."

They also offer some specialized finishes, such as a catalyzed varnish finish which even stands up to West Texas Water. Impervious to most chemicals, a tabletop finished with catalyzed varnish will withstand fingernail polish remover, or lacquer thinner.

Dan says there are tougher finishes, such as catalyzed polyurethanes, but that they are more expensive.

Dan Williams Millworks builds some unique pieces you can't buy anywhere else. This is especially true with computer furniture. With his engineering background, Dan is quick to notice function, and to build pieces to fit that function.

"Pieces you buy in stores are not very innovative, and they're not very practical from a user standpoint."

POLICE REPORT

Girl found u

A 17-year-old Midland girl was found Friday in Dallas. Her family reported her missing.

The family left for Dallas and police are in Dallas to determine if Jeanette Creecy left of her own volition or was abducted. She wants to stay in Dallas.

"At age 17, she had a boyfriend," Sheriff Gary Painter said.

Miss Creecy was a cheerleader at Nashville, Tenn., and had heard her singing. "She sang country music," Painter said.

She said the man who came and auditioned for her was given a ride to Interstate 20, where she was seen getting into a Mitsubishi, possibly a silver one.

The man driving the car was described as a black male, 28-30 years old, 5 feet, 10 inches, 175 pounds, and well dressed, according to the sheriff's office reports.

The man had spent the night in the vehicle at a business at Midkiff Road and told witnesses that he was from California and was on his way to Dallas/Fort Worth.

POLICE REPORTS

Girl found unharmed

A 17-year-old Midland girl was found Friday in Dallas after her family reported her missing Sunday.

The family left for Dallas Friday and police are investigating to determine if Jennifer LeAnn Creecy left of her own free will and wants to stay in Dallas.

"At age 17, she has the choice," Sheriff Gary Painter said.

Miss Creecy had told her boyfriend that she was leaving for Nashville, Tenn., with a man who had heard her sing.

"She sang country-western," Painter said. "We're not sure where she was singing, perhaps at a club or karaoke bar."

She said the man wanted her to come and audition for him. She was given a ride to Midkiff Road and Interstate 20, where she was seen getting into a newer model Mitsubishi, possibly light brown in color.

The man driving the vehicle is described as a black male, 28-30 years old, 5 feet, 10 inches, 175 pounds, and well dressed, according to the sheriff's office reports.

The man had spent the night in the vehicle at a business at Midkiff Road and Interstate 20 and told witnesses that he had been to California on his way to the Dallas/Fort Worth area.

Environmentalists cheer end of endangered species moratorium

WASHINGTON (AP) — Environmentalists are applauding the end of a yearlong moratorium on new Endangered Species Act protections for vulnerable plant and animal wildlife.

But the author of the freeze, Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, warned that President Clinton will have to shoulder responsibility if his administration rushes to list new species at the expense of human interests.

The president waived the moratorium Friday under a compromise included in the final 1996 federal spending bill he also signed Friday.

Clinton said the freeze "could have resulted in a greater risk of extinction of some of the over 400 species that are currently either proposed for listing or for which proposed listings are awaiting evaluation."

Upset that her moratorium was gutted, Mrs. Hutchison joined 10 other GOP senators in voting against the $159 billion budget Thursday night.

In an interview Friday, Mrs. Hutchison expressed concern that the Fish and Wildlife Service would list endangered and threatened species without regard for economic concerns. Some 243 listings proposals were put on hold when the freeze took effect last April.

Clinton "takes the responsibility for any precipitous actions that would be taken with this new authority," she said.

But Defenders of Wildlife general counsel Heather Weiner, noting the bounce the White House has gotten from its recent push on environmental protection, said Republicans had handed Clinton an easy victory.

"They are making this a winner for the president," Ms. Weiner said.

In offering the moratorium,

Mrs. Hutchison had said a timeout was necessary to let Congress rewrite the 1973 Endangered Species Act in an atmosphere free from new listings controversies. While she framed her measure as a bid to restore common sense to the process, critics charged that the freeze was devastating endangered wildlife.

The act expired in 1993, and its reauthorization has been postponed since then, partly because of administration fears that a reworking would lead to reduced wildlife protections. Republicans want the act to be far more sensitive to private property owners, taking into account economic considerations.

Mrs. Hutchison didn't rule out the possibility of reoffering her moratorium. But her current focus is obtaining reauthorization this year.

With the moratorium gone — and thus the pressure for a speedy reauthorization — she acknowledged "great concern" that Republicans' leverage may have dissipated.

Mrs. Hutchison said she has received commitments from Republican leaders in the House and Senate to bring up reauthorization this year. However, fewer than 50 legislative days of business remain on Congress' calendar this year.

"The reauthorization could be done very quickly," Mrs. Hutchison said. "We've done a lot of work on it in the Environment and Public Works Committee."

Environmental lobbyists were less positive that reauthorization would occur.

"Let's face it, the timing is not with (Republicans) for moving ESA reauthorization and actually getting it done."

Law enforcement officials discuss border drug problem

AUSTIN (AP) — Law enforcement officials on Friday discussed the possibility of changing federal rules to address conflicts in state and U.S. laws on drugs brought in from Mexico, the executive director of the governor's Criminal Justice Division said.

"Essentially, everybody seemed to believe the bulk of the responsibility is on the federal level... because Customs and the DEA (Drug Enforcement Administration) are responsible for the border," said Karen Greene.

While U.S. Customs currently allows people to bring large amounts of narcotics, stimulants and sedatives legally into the country with prescriptions, Texas law enforcement officials are arresting people for possessing those same drugs.

Fred S. Brinkley Jr., executive director of the Texas State Board of Pharmacy, said prescription drugs purchased in Mexico could pose a health risk because they are manufactured without U.S. oversight or approval.

In addition, he said, people who buy them may not use them under a doctor's oversight.

"All these drugs are coming in, and we have no way of knowing whether people are using them properly," said Brinkley, who spoke to the law enforcement meeting. "This is not only a law enforcement problem, it has the potential to be a very serious public health problem."

Windows repairs

Microsoft Windows users need all the help they can get. Mac mavens like to say: That may be a bit unfair, but it is not entirely untrue. But the Macintosh itself has become more complicated over the years, and it is a brave soul who does not have Norton Utilities or a similar fix-it program at hand. Still, those programs concentrate on hardware. Here we are talking about software, Windows software.

Two weeks ago, I discussed Quarterdeck's Cleansweep 95, version 2.02, a program to help Windows fans clean programs and related detritus off their hard disks. A reader called to say that none of the three big software shops he tried had a version later than 2.0.

A Quarterdeck spokesman countered that, first, the salespeople were probably trying to get rid of an overstock of 2.0 before putting the newer version out; second, you cannot tell whether or not you had bought the newer version until you install it, because neither the packaging nor the manuals had been changed, and third, the patches that made Cleansweep 95, version 2.0, into versions 2.02 or 2.03 could be downloaded from CompuServe (go quarterdeck) or the World Wide Web (<http://www.quarterdeck.com>) anyway.

Life must go on. Since then, I have been experimenting with First Aid 95, a big collection of tools for repairing all kinds of things that can go wrong with Windows 95, Windows 3.1 and their applications.

According to the publisher, Cybermedia, First Aid 95 can fix more than 10,000 software configuration problems; I didn't count them. The technology is called Autofix: If First Aid finds a problem it offers to correct it automatically. So-called "power users," who enjoy playing with software by themselves, may be offended, but the rest of us will not be.

There are two basic components: The Problem Monitor, which can be set to start up when you begin a Windows session, and the First Aid program itself. The Problem Monitor watches for error messages in most common Windows applications, and when one appears, explains what the problem is and, usually, offers to fix it.

Netcom has woes, some keep faith

The fast-growing Internet business is often compared with the PC business a decade ago. And it is for just that reason that investors seem to be growing wary of the Internet and its wealth of too-good-to-be-true success stories.

Consider Netcom On-Line Communication Services of San Jose, Calif., the nation's largest independent provider of Internet access, but which has yet to turn a profit.

The company went public in December 1994 at $13 a share, and by November 1995 the stock reached a high of $91.50 a share. The company's subscriber base has more than quadrupled, to 400,000 last week, and its revenues climbed to $52.4 million in 1995, up from $12.4 million the previous year.

But when the market closed Friday, the stock was trading back down at $27, up 50 cents, on Nasdaq.

The market is reacting to recent announcements that bigger and better-known competitors, like AT&T, are revving up Internet access providers of their own.

The day AT&T announced its intent to provide Internet access, Netcom shares fell $4.75 even though the news had been expected. Shares of competitors like UUNET Technologies Inc. and Performance Systems International were also off.

But even with the potentially formidable competition, many analysts feel it is still too early to nail the lid on Netcom's coffin. With the right kind of positioning, they say, independent access providers have plenty of opportunities.

"With the market growing 100 percent a year, it's too early to call the winners and the losers," said Kevin Moore, an Internet analyst at Alex. Brown & Sons in Baltimore, who calls the Netcom sell-off "totally unjustified." Despite the high-profile jostling for position, Moore said, "It's not a foregone conclusion that the market leaders will get wiped out."

BasinLink users show widespread support for air terminal; two sides on ChatNight Live

Staff Report

By a wide margin, BasinLink users who also say they're registered voters in Midland County are in support of the construction of a new terminal at Midland International Airport.

The vote count on BasinLink was 60 percent in favor, 20 percent against; 18 percent had no opinion on the terminal issue. A total of 274 subscribers voted in the week-long poll, which closed Thursday. Debate, though, continues in the Forums area of BasinLink.

Midland County voters go to the polls May 4 to decide the fate of the controversial new terminal.

Wednesday at 7 p.m., representatives of the two sides in the airport terminal issue will appear on ChatNight. Mike Seibold, a local engineer, will represent Citizens for a New Air Terminal, a group of local citizens which formed recently to voice support for the construction. Tom Dollahite, who has led a group against construction and is instead in favor of renovating the current facility, will represent the opposition.

In another issue BasinLink voters were asked to respond to, 70 percent indicated they were in favor of term limits for local elected officials. That matter, too, will appear on the May 4 ballot in Midland County.

Honk! if you're BOTTLENECKED on the Internet

By Jeff Pelline

N.Y. Times News Service

Like a frustrated commuter at rush hour, consumers increasingly are running into traffic jams, bottlenecks and other delays when trying to log onto the touted Internet.

The problem, likened to a "brownout" from overuse of energy on a hot summer day, is reaching epidemic proportions, many experts say.

Internet gridlock is expected to get worse, too, as telecommunications giants such as AT&T and Baby Bells such as Pacific Telesis, USWest and Bell Atlantic this year begin offering cheap, or free, Internet access to the masses. Until now, the market has been dominated by "mom-and-pop" companies.

California is especially vulnerable because it handles 40 percent of the nation's Internet traffic.

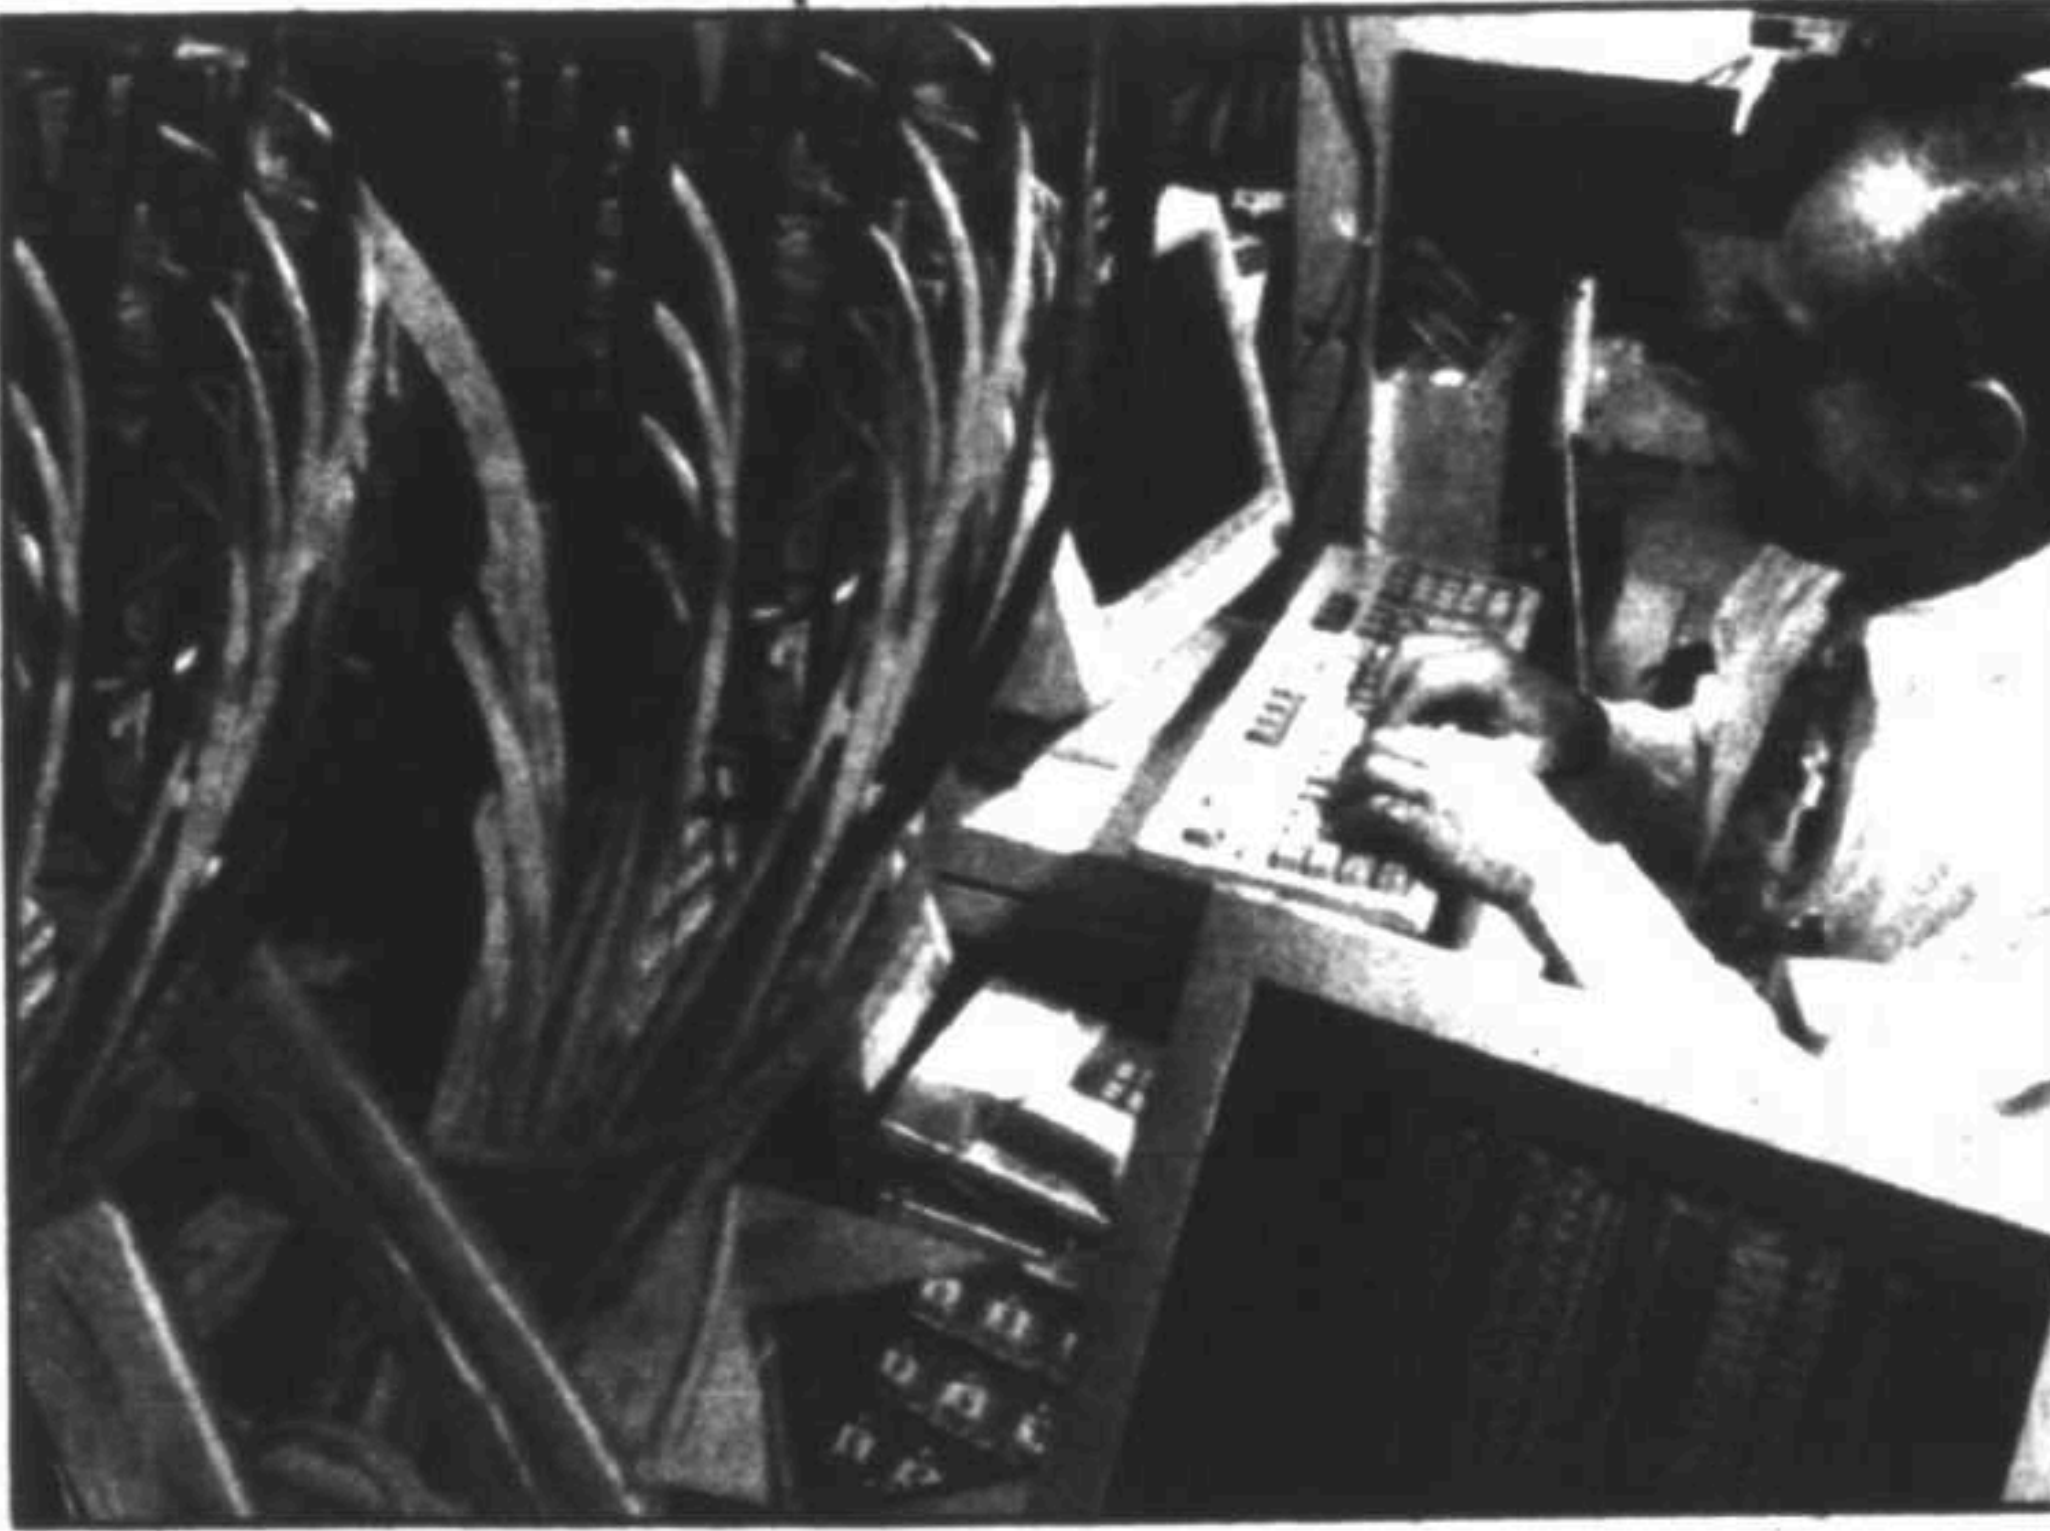

Unless the log jam is unclogged soon, experts are concerned that the Internet will go the way of fads such as the Hula-Hoop or pet rock, at least for consumers. The gridlock also is undermining efforts by its pioneers, scientists and engineers, to conduct high-level research.

"It is highly likely this year that there will be major outages that affect hundreds of thousands of people for hours, maybe days," said Bob Metcalfe, the inventor of Ethernet networking technology who predicted a collapse of the Internet in a recent column in InfoWorld magazine. "It's too late to avoid collapses; the U.S. Internet is a house of cards." He

No boat, no burn: The joys of virtual fishing

By Tim O'Mellia

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. — Jo Ragolia reeled in a 100-pound sailfish and not once did she heave her lunch over the side of a charter boat.

She went home to Juno Beach without a sunburn, and she and her husband Joe (CQ) didn't pay $500 for the afternoon of sportfishing.

"I never went for a big fish before," Jo said after winning the women's division of the fishing tournament. "Every other time out on the ocean, I wouldn't take the pole. I was afraid I'd lose the pole or the fish."

Nope. Jo, her feet planted firmly on linoleum between two pool tables at the Abbey Road Grill Friday, watched a giant screen of a sailfish thrashing about in the Pacific Ocean and handled a pole with a line connected to a large black box.

She was Virtual Sportfishing — a 45-minute battle with a sailfish, tarpon or king salmon condensed into a 120-second battle within elbow reach of her glass of chardonnay.

Several dozen would-be deep sea anglers took a turn at matching cunning with the sailfish and a computer that gave them the feel of a genuine strike, gauged their reaction to the fish and the strength of their reeling.

"You really get the sensation of battling a fish," said Joe, the experienced ocean fisherman who was outscored by wife, Jo, 1,920 to 1,842.

"You don't get bounced around, plus you're guaranteed a sailfish," he laughed.

Reading an article about computing can end up costing you money. The breathless prose goes into great detail about why you simply can't live without the latest gadget or program.

Today, let's turn the tables and find out how to make your Internet connection pay for itself. We'll see how you can avoid buying several popular computer programs by getting the same information from the Internet's World Wide Web. Not only will you avoid the expense of buying another program, you'll often get better, more current information.

Let's start by finding a replacement for street atlas programs. Some of these programs cost more than $100. By simply typing in a street address, you get a map that locates the destination and shows neighboring streets, right down to the smallest alley.

It's a service that many folks find handy. But next time you need to hunt up an address, forget the CD-ROM and log on to MapQuest at <http://www.mapquest.com/>. You'll be asked to register for the free service by giving your name and e-mail address. Once you do that, you'll be able to

Bringing telecommunications to underprivileged African nations

By Ronald Rosenberg
N.Y. Times News Service

As a Harvard Business School student, Monique Maddy figured she wanted a film career and spent the summer of 1992 in Hollywood working on the 20th Century Fox lot.

But it wasn't until the following summer on a trip to Tanzania — one of Africa's poorest countries with an average income of $250 per month — that she realized there were bigger opportunities as an entrepreneur than her original goals of working in the film industry.

Maddy, 33, is creating a pay telephone system in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania's capital of 2.4 million people, that makes its debut next month. The system uses American cellular and Canadian communications switching technology.

"I realized that working in Hollywood was not something I wanted to do for the rest of my life," said the Liberian-born Maddy, who, since graduating from Harvard in 1993, now spends half her time shuttling between Cambridge,

POOR: Africa remains wild frontier for communications technology

(From 1B)

Mass. and Tanzania.

I got some good experience understanding how to enter new markets from the movie industry ... but in the end I felt the film industry was one dimensional and I wanted to do something more challenging," said Maddy, who, as part of her stint with 20th Century Fox, tracked the overseas film grosses of such movies as Edward Scissorhands.

With Harvard classmate, Come A. Lague, and the guidance and financial support of some Harvard faculty members, Boston area investors and large corporate sponsors, Maddy and Lague have raised just over $5 million and have formed African Communications Group. Their lofty goal is to become a $100 million company in the next five to six years, based on providing telephone, computer data voice mail, cellular, paging and facsimile communications in Africa.

Early next month, they will formally launch their company's first business: a coinless pay telephone service in Dar es Salaam.

This year they expect to install between 200 and 400 telephones, mostly in Tanzania's central business district, at the university, airport and government offices. To use the phone, callers will buy one of five debit calling cards - priced between 87 cents (500 Tanzanian shillings) and $34.72 (20,000 Tanzanian shillings) - at restaurants, retail shops, supermarkets and pharmacies.

I think we'll get about 80 percent of our card buyers from business customers who are frustrated using the government phone system," said Maddy, noting that in Dar es Salaam there are only 55,000 telephones. The majority of calls are made by businesses, who account for 70 percent of the telecommunications revenue. About 20 percent of the revenue was from government organizations and 10 percent from residential subscribers.

African Communications Group is the latest example of entrepreneurs with sophisticated technology rushing into parts of Africa to get a foothold in one of the world's last remaining virgin communications markets. Some African countries are looking to privatize their phone systems and expand services. Others need to modernize their aging communications infrastructure and are offering attractive financial incentives to lure foreign investment.

Africa is a wonderful opportunity for small and medium-size companies with innovative ideas, like a cellular pay telephone system," said Dirk Stryker, professor of international economic relations at Tufts University's Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy. And the public desperately wants telephones, even though many cannot afford them.

Tanzania has a $225 million loan from the World Bank to upgrade its infrastructure, including the telephone system and the Tanzania Telecommunications Commission, which has granted licenses to private companies like African Communications Group - to provide specialized services.

Maddy, who spent five years with the United Nations' Development Program in Angola and other parts of Africa prior to attending Harvard, hopes to beat the traditional American and European telecommunications giants in countries like Tanzania, Uganda and Ghana by offering a variety of communications services to businesses first.

She acknowledges that the large corporate communications providers have entered some areas and then they left because of political instability, high corruption and vandalism. A number of them, she feels, are simply wary of investing big bucks in Africa when there are more opportunities with less risk in China and Latin America.

Tanzania, like a lot of other African countries, has rampant government corruption, although it has gotten a lot better in the past five years since the end of socialist rule," said Stryker.

Maddy said her company has not paid bribes to government officials. Maybe we missed the signals (of corruption), but we are very honest," she added.

Richard Churchill, general partner at M/C Partners, a Boston venture capital firm that invests in media and communications companies, said he - not the firm - invested in African Communications Group knowing the risks, but he said he feels the Tanzanian government is reasonably stable.

Ultimately I felt that their debit card pay phone service is not a luxury service, but one that is a necessary ingredient for telecommunications infrastructure and for economic growth," said Churchill, one of five board members.

Right now, we think we can get market share in parts of Africa much more quickly than the big communications players," said Maddy. African Communications Group is working with Computer Corp. of Tanzania Ltd. Their joint venture, called ACG Telesystems Ltd., carries nearly $11.3 million of political risk insurance from the Washington-based Overseas Private Investment Corp. in the event that antigovernment riots should destroy their phone system.

Putting pay phones in a poor country where the overwhelming majority of people don't have access to a telephone, is an daunting task. In Dar es Salaam, business people and some government workers will have to leave their offices to make calls on a pay phone because office phones are being used by someone else or they are unable to get through due to technical difficulties. With cellular technology, calls go directly to the Tanzanian-owned telephone switching system, bypassing miles of cable.

The government has such a backlog of telephone installations, they just can't keep up with the demand for land-based phones," said Lague, citing Tanzanian telecommunications authority data showing 153,000 potential subscribers applying for private telephone service, some of whom wait anywhere from seven to 10 years for service hook-ups.

Another growing group of telephone users are small businesses which often send staffers on motorbikes or bicycles to arrange deliveries from suppliers. Now businesses can call someone with a phone near their supplier, explained Maddy.

A bank of 10 pay telephones is being installed on the docks at the request of the Tanzanian Harbor Authority to relay information about incoming and outgoing freight. African Communications Group will also install new phones at the University of Dar es Salaam for students and faculty and at hospitals, hotels and railway stations. African Communications Group's transmission tower will be located at the university.

Maddy and Lague's payphone system has some shortcomings that puts a spotlight on what happens when advanced technology arrives in a largely unregulated arena. For starters, the telephones cannot receive incoming calls. Also the phone cards work only with African Communications Group phones. A rival, Jupiter Communications Ltd., of London, has installed about 15 pay phones that only work with its proprietary card.

African Communications Group and Jupiter are two of 20 organizations that have licenses for pay-phone services, although they currently are the only ones operating in Tanzania.

BOGGED: Holiday rush especially slow said the Net is most susceptible to gridlock, sabotage and bugs, but will recover after several scares.

"The Internet is experiencing growing pains," said David Garrison, chief executive of Netcom On-Line Communication Services Inc. of San Jose, one of the largest Internet access providers. "Being a leader in the industry, we are certainly impacted by those pains."

Some scientists who regularly use the Internet for research at the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center and other labs recently complained about the "disastrous state of the Internet." They cited "very slow" connections and an often "completely catatonic" network.

Last week, a group of top government officials, known as the Federal Networking Council, met in Washington to discuss how to fix the mounting problem.

The backup is caused by too many Internet users on a network that needs to be upgraded to handle more traffic - not just e-mail to your mom but powerful three-dimensional, animated graphics and video conferencing.

"The growth of the Internet is mind boggling," said Thomas Kalil, senior director of the White House National Economic Council. "Our ability to store and process information is also exploding. Today's $300 video games have more computing power than a $20 million, 1976-vintage supercomputer."

The global computer network, like a labyrinth of Los Angeles freeway interchanges that crisscross the world, connects nearly 10 million computers, tens of millions of users and more than 100 countries.

The Internet has more than 8,000 member networks, up from only 200 in 1985. By some estimates, as many as 20 million people worldwide may be able to receive e-mail via the Internet - more than the entire population of Canada or Australia.

The World Wide Web, the fastest-growing segment of the Internet, has an estimated 13 million Web sites, and 1 million new ones are popping up every month, said Allen Weiner, an analyst at Dataquest Inc., the San Jose research firm. They run the gamut: from corporate ads to pornography to personal Web pages.

As more people log on, they experience frustrating delays. One common example: You call up a Web page on the Internet and the screen freezes while it's being displayed.

Or you can't connect at all and this high-tech '90s busy signal appears: "The server may not be accepting connections or may be busy. Try connecting again later."

Some examples of gridlock include: ■ During the holiday rush, Netcom experienced a crash of Internet users, many of them armed with newly bought personal computers. In the winter, two separate cases of flooding in the Northeast knocked out primary as well as backup routes.

Strained server capacity at Netcom's San Jose data center has caused network slowdowns on some occasions too, The Chronicle has learned.

Tomorrow, the company will announce NetComplete, a new suite of products aimed at bolstering its nationwide service for 400,000 subscribers.

■ Last month, UUNET Technologies Inc. of Fairfax, Va., abruptly was forced to reroute its traffic to another Internet access point because of consumer complaints of congestion, sources said.

■ Also last month, Pacific Bell experienced a sudden surge in Internet traffic for half an hour, forcing it to reroute the data.

■ A Canadian computer supplier, with the same name as a small U.S. Internet access provider, gets flooded with 20 complaints weekly about Internet log jams. "I don't read them anymore," said the company's president. He sends out a form letter instead.

Many users of America Online Inc. also have complained about delays, including the receipt of e-mail. AOL declined to discuss the issue for this article.

The Christmas holiday, which is eight months away, will be another major threat to the system, analysts said.

The good news is that the Internet isn't expected to go dark like the big electrical blackout that hit Manhattan in November 1965. That's because the Internet is cobbled together from many smaller networks, so traffic can be rerouted if necessary - albeit on more circuitous paths.

Consumers can experience Internet gridlock anytime, anywhere, but the peak traffic hours are 4 p.m. to 9 p.m. when the network gets the most use.

Although that's rush-hour commute time in California, people on the East Coast are plopped down in front of their home PC, downloading the next day's work, talking with friends and strangers in chat forums, or scouring for travel tips for their upcoming vacation. An estimated one-third of American homes have PCs, and the number is growing.

"Tens of thousands of users are logging on at the same time," said John Zeisler, Netcom's vice president of marketing. "It takes a great deal of resources to handle that. It separates the men from the boys (or the women from the girls)."

Added Sky Dayton, founder and chief executive of EarthLink Network Inc. of Pasadena: "There are 2,000 Internet-access providers who can't handle the surge of calls, and bottlenecks occur. We're all faced with growth problems, and most companies don't have the facilities to accommodate everyone."

Dayton compared the problem to a health club, where all the members show up to work out at the same time and there aren't enough Nautilus machines to go around.

The Internet wasn't built for the teeming masses, either. It was started in the early 1970s as a network to link supercomputer centers in California, Colorado, Illinois, New Jersey and New York.

The network largely was used by researchers and scientists at universities and the federal government, such as the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. From 1986 to last year, the National Science Foundation had oversight of the Internet under the so-called Nsfnet program.

But last year Nsfnet began falling into private hands under a science foundation proposal.

The change has not served Internet users well, critics charge. "The degradation in Internet performance coincides with the privatization of Nsfnet," said the memo from national laboratory physicists who are complaining about the gridlock. "An important element was the overall coordination, which is now not present but sorely missed."

The memo continued: "We are in substantial agreement that there is a need for improving the cooperation among all the private and public networks."

The National Science Foundation is not standing idly. It recently launched a program to cull the academic community for new technologies that will help ease the gridlock. One idea: Prioritize Internet traffic like the U.S. Postal Service has options for overnight, first- and third-class service.

Silicon Valley also is playing a major role in policing the Internet jam, like a traffic cop in downtown San Francisco. In the past eight months, three big Internet carriers - CompuServe, Pacific Bell and LDDS - placed $30 million in orders for high-speed switches with StrataCom, a Santa Clara computer networking company.

Pacific Bell turned to high-speed "ATM" switching (for asynchronous transfer mode) to upgrade its gateway to the Net. The improvements will let Pac Bell's system handle 600,000 e-mail messages per second, said Warren Williams, the company's director of Internet management.

Startups such as Home hope to gain a foothold in the crowding field with higher-speed, higher-quality Internet access, said Milo Medin, vice president of networks for the Mountain View company controlled by cable-TV giant Telecommunications Inc. Home has run into launch delays, however, a sign of the complexity of the mission.

No matter what improvements are being made, there's no guarantee of getting on your favorite Web site right away - just like being passed up by your newspaper delivery person.

Summed up Kristine Loosley, a spokeswoman for Concentric Network Corp., a Cupertino Internet provider: "We can send you down the interstate, but if the exit you want is jammed up, we can't clear that out for you."

type in almost any address in the United States and get a detailed street map that's every bit as good as one from a CD-ROM.

Beyond giving you a way to get a good city map, the home page can also plot a long-distance trip across country. So beyond replacing a CD-ROM street guide, it'll also substitute for road atlas programs that cost $40 to $50. Hey, we just started and you've already saved $140 or so.

The neat thing about using MapQuest is that you won't have to worry about buying a new CD-ROM to get future updates that show new streets and addresses. You'll automatically get the latest information.

Have you ever bought, or considered buying, a CD-ROM-based telephone directory? These handy databases let you type in a name and the sketchiest of information and locate the address. Besides being useful, these programs are a lot of fun. If you'd like to locate old friends or college roommates you can type in the name and - in some cases - search the entire country. While that broad a search is unlikely to help find your old friend Jim Smith, you'll do fine with just a last name as out of the ordinary as Husted.

These programs can cost as little as $40 or well over $200 for industrial-strength versions. Some of the CD-ROM-based programs offer just residential listings or business listings; others offer both.

Hang on to your wallet if that sort of a program sounds useful. Instead, mosey on over to Switchboard at <http://www.switchboard.com> on the Web. You'll be asked to register, and your name and address information will go into the Switchboard database. In return, you'll get a way to find names, addresses, telephone numbers and even ZIP codes. You can get the same sort of information when searching for a business, too.

Again, this site is better than a CD-ROM since you won't have to go to the expense of buying an updated version each year. The information is amazingly complete, and most searches take just a few seconds when the Web isn't busy.

If you assume that you'd pay $100 for a CD-ROM-based program, your total savings have now reached $240.

There are too many specialized databases on the Web to even attempt listing them all. But if you have a hobby or special interest, it's likely you can use a search engine such as Yahoo (<http://www.yahoo.com>) to find a listing. For instance, amateur radio operators pay $40 or so for commercial CD-ROMs that furnish names and addresses of fellow hams. The Web offers a free replacement for that CD-ROM at <http://www.qrz.com>.

Now that you have the notion, you'll be able to search out Web sites that serve your own specific interests. Then, the next time you are asked to justify the money you spend for your monthly online bill, you can honestly say: It more than pays for itself.

FISHIN': Might a virtual bass championship be on the horizon?

(From 1B)

Virtual Sportfishing simulator, saw the machine at a Seattle boat show and quickly bought the Florida rights.

He envisions leasing the devices all over the state for use in bars, boat shows, fishing tournaments, marine dealerships, promotions, or even parties on big yachts.

Eventually, he sees a Hooters vs. Abbey Road competition and perhaps a national championship, with major corporate sponsors and big prize money.

Muscle won't win the virtual battle. "When the fish runs, let it go. When you feel slack, reel, reel, reel," said Wally Thompson, who operates the simulator.

The next generation - out next month - will penalize lack of technique. "Try to horse the fish, you'll lose it. Let out too much slack, you'll lose it," he said.

Virtual Sportfishing was a winner Friday. "I fish every weekend and believe it or not, it's great," said Terry Knight of Riviera Beach. "Besides, there's bad fishing out there now. I was skunked Saturday and Sunday."

With Thompson's aid, 7-year-old

Jason Staba (CQ) pulled a respectable score, his tongue wagging back and forth as he worked the reel. "The tongue makes it work better," said his mother, Mary Lou. Was the sailfish Jason's biggest catch? No. He said he once caught a dolphin "this long." That was a Virtual Fish Story.

GOP leaders search for Clinton's achilles heel

WASHINGTON (AP) — House GOP leaders sent an urgent memo to committee chairmen this week seeking information that would "expose" Clinton administration ethical lapses and the influence of labor unions.

The memo, suggesting leaders are considering a coordinated attack on Clinton, was played down by Republican spokesmen as routine information gathering. They denied it was a campaign document but said the results would be "given to the American people" as well as GOP lawmakers.

Democrats reacted with harsh language. An aide to House Democratic Leader Dick Gephardt called the effort "dirtball politics," and White House press secretary Mike McCurry called it "nasty, rank politics."

Dated last Tuesday and setting a deadline of Friday, the internal memo sought information on three subjects:

1. "Waste, fraud and abuse in the Clinton administration."

2. "Influence of Washington labor union bosses/corruption."

— "Examples of dishonesty or ethical lapses in the Clinton administration."

"Please have your staff review pertinent GAO (General Accounting Office) reports, inspector general reports or committee investigative materials or newspaper articles... that expose anecdotes that amplify these areas," the one-page memo said.

From Rep. Robert S. Walker, R-Pa., and Jim Nussle, R-Iowa, "on behalf of the House leadership," the memo said they were compiling the information "for packaging and presentation to the leadership for determining the agenda."

The memo's "subject" line reads: "Request for information — URGENT."

John Czwartacki, spokesman for the House Republican Conference, called the memo "routine management stuff."

"It comes out of the majority leader's office all the time," he said. "We're making sure that what all the committees are doing is disseminated to the leadership and Capitol Hill. It's the normal paper flow."

Asked about the "URGENT" priority, Czwartacki said, "everything's urgent around here."

He said House leaders need the material to formulate legislation. But he added, "The information will be given to the American people."

Michelle Davis, spokeswoman for House Majority Leader Dick Armey, said the memo was not a campaign document because "the House leadership does not gather campaign information."

She described the memo as "an effort to get the big picture. The point of going through the exercise is to show the results of all the different pieces" of information accumulated by committees.

Davis said Republican leaders are constantly "asked about union bosses taxing members to run the Clinton re-election campaign."

Sport vehicles top most stolen list

WASHINGTON (AP) — The growing popularity of sport utility vehicles apparently extends to crooks.

The two 1993-95 model vehicles with the highest theft losses are the Toyota Land Cruiser and the Mitsubishi Montero, the Highway Loss Data Institute reported Friday.

It's the second year sports utility vehicles have led the list, taking over from high-priced sports cars that had previously been most popular with thieves, said Institute Vice President Kim Hazelbaker.

The loss ratings are a combination of frequency of a vehicle being stolen and the cost to insurance companies to pay the claims, Hazelbaker explained, with the average rating 100.

On that scale the Toyota Land Cruiser rated 2,340 and the Montero 1,894.

At the other end of the scale the Chevrolet Lumina had the lowest theft losses rating, 11.

The frequency of thefts has declined over the years, but the losses to insurance companies have increased, Hazelbaker said.

That is because there has been a drop in joyriders, usually teenagers who take a car to drive around briefly, sometimes doing a little damage or taking the stereo before abandoning it.

Now the trend is toward vehicles being taken in their entirety, Hazelbaker said, "and in fact being exported, unfortunately."

Sport utility vehicles "are very popular vehicles to export to destinations in Latin America, South America, all over the globe," he said.

After the Land Cruiser and Montero, the top 10 vehicles for theft loss were Mercedes S-Class, 1,533; Acura Legend 2-door, 1,347; BMW 300i convertible, 1,051; Mercedes SL convertible, 972; Acura Legend 4-door, 665; Lexus GS 300, 620; Nissan 300ZX, 597; and BMW 300i 2-door, 555.

The 10 cars with the lowest loss rate were the Lumina, the Saab 900 4-door, 15; Buick Skylark 4-door, 15; Buick Park Avenue 4-door, 17; Saturn SW station wagon, 19; Buick LeSabre 4-door, 19; Subaru Impreza 4-door, 19; Buick Regal 4-door, 20; Ford Aerostar, 21; Ford E-150 Club Wagon, 22.

No slow down in last day of Onassis' estate auction

NEW YORK (AP) — The four-day feeding frenzy on Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis' estate went into its final session Friday, with more than $30 million already spent on memorabilia of all kinds.

The biggest items on the block were held for the end of the auction: a series of Aaron Shikler portraits of Mrs. Onassis and her children, John Jr. and Caroline; an Oval Room rocking chair used by President Kennedy; and Mrs. Onassis' 1992 BMW four-door sedan.

The bidding escalated as the auction reached its last few dozen items. A painted model of Air Force One, valued at $500, opened for bidding at $10,000 and sold for $42,500 as the audience erupted in applause.

A set of 22 green tumblers, estimated at $500, instead sold for $38,000. And a $50 mounted picture of Caroline Kennedy's cat, Tom Kitten, brought $13,000.

"Truly, there's only one opportunity to do this," said buyer Don Carter, who picked up a half-dozen items. "There will never be another Jackie Onassis auction."

Carter paid $110,000 — more than 20 times the pre-auction estimate — for a poignantly inscribed Christmas gift, given by the late first lady to her mother and stepfather just weeks after her husband's assassination.

"For Mommy and Uncle Hugh,

Jack was going to give you this for Christmas — Please accept it now from me — With all my love, Jackie, December 1963," the inscription read. It was inside a rare, bound collection of every presidential inaugural address from George Washington through Kennedy.

A maple work table, decorated with painted yellow flowers and once used in a White House sitting room, sold for $63,000; its estimated value was $2,000. A collection of 250 magazines collected by Mrs. Onassis from the 1960s through the '80s brought $11,000; its presale value was $200.

Sotheby's most optimistic projection for the sale was $4.6 million; the total midway through day four was $30.8 million.

Democratic candidates embrace Clinton in '96

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two trips to Connecticut illustrate the dramatic rise in President Clinton's political standing within the Democratic Party.

In the closing days of the 1994 campaign, Clinton visited the state to deliver a blistering attack on the Republican "Contract with America." However, like many Democratic colleagues in close races that year, Sam Gejdenson politely found a reason to be elsewhere.

But as Clinton prepares to speak at this year's Coast Guard Academy commencement — and raise his profile in the 1996 campaign — Gejdenson couldn't be more eager to welcome the president to Connecticut. Since first learning of Clinton's May 22 plans, the congressman's staff and Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee aides have been pushing the White House to arrange a joint appearance.

Gejdenson has plenty of company; the president's campaign time is much in demand in this spring of Democratic content. And why not?

Helped in part by the unpopularity of House Speaker Newt Gingrich, Clinton's job approval ratings — 55 percent in one recent survey — are among the highest of his presidency. Loyalty to him among Democrats is sky high.

Clinton also has staked out a big early lead over presumptive Republican nominee Bob Dole, allowing him the luxury of targeting Democratic Party television ads to areas where Clinton's interests overlap those of House or Senate Democrats.

And, as he proved again Friday by headlining a $1.3 million Democratic National Committee event in Philadelphia, Clinton is a prolific fund-raiser.

He has already raised $3.5 million just for Democratic House candidates, and next month he will attend several additional DNC fund-raisers as well as events for House Democratic leader Dick Gephardt and New Jersey Rep. Robert Torricelli, who is running for Senate.

While it is still spring, some Democrats now believe the party has decent odds of picking up the 20 seats it would take to regain the House majority. Senate Democrats also are more optimistic about their chances of regaining control, and Clinton was welcomed Friday at their strategy retreat in Delaware. At the most recent House and Senate retreats before this, Clinton was the biggest

Bill Clinton, seen here at a press conference to discuss the cease-fire in Israel, has had good luck with support from his own party, in contrast to the election year of 1992.

"The president has made remarkable strides since 1994," is the assessment of a top Gejdenson aide. "We certainly view him as an asset."

That description of Clinton is now almost as common as it was unthinkable not long ago.

It was just a year ago, for example, that Clinton was so overshadowed by the new Republican Congress that he made the eye-popping statement, "The president is irrelevant."

And there was plenty of bitterness among Democrats who survived the 1994 elections but saw their majority — and committee chairmanships — captured by Republicans who used Clinton's health care debacle and 1993 tax increases as powerful midterm election weapons.

"Six, eight months ago there was this sort of hate and nastiness," said Natalie Davis, a longtime Alabama Democratic activist running for the Senate this year. "I don't hear that from people anymore. Not that I expect him to carry Alabama, but even in rural areas people talk of him making a comeback of sorts."

Repetitious work most dangerous

WASHINGTON (AP) — Repetitious work, poor job design and violence have become the most significant safety and health problems in the American workplace, a union study says.

Since the early 1970s, rapid changes in the workplace have created significant new safety and health problems that put millions of workers at risk, according to the study released Friday by the AFL-CIO.

"Serious injuries and illnesses from ergonomic hazards — poor job design and repetitious work — are the most significant safety and health problems in the workplace today" and "are increasing at epidemic rates," it contended. "Overexertion and repetitive motion are responsible for one-third of all serious workplace injuries," it found. "One type of these incidents — repeated trauma disorders — have increased by 800 percent in the last decade."

The study also found that as "the epidemic of societal violence" has grown, homicide has become the second leading cause of workplace fatalities after transportation and the leading cause of work-related deaths among female workers.

On average, three workers die each day in violent circumstances, it said. "Most of these fatalities are the result of robberies and other criminal acts, not assaults by co-workers or family members."

The 121-page report — "Safe Jobs — Promises Kept, Promises

Broken" — was prepared for the 25th anniversary of the Occupational Safety and Health Act. The act went into effect April 28, 1971. "In the early 1970s," the study said, "falls, hazards, unguarded machinery, noise and exposure to cancer-causing substances and other toxic substances were all major concerns."

"These hazards still pose problems and remain a concern," it added. "But today, a whole new set of safety and health problems confronts American workers."

"Three of the most significant safety and health problems that have emerged with changes in the work force and workplace are ergonomic hazards, workplace violence and injuries and illnesses among service and trade sector workers," it found.

The study noted that 25 years of growth in the service and trade industries have resulted in mounting safety and health problems in those sectors.

"While injury and illness rates have decreased overall and in manufacturing, construction and mining, the injury rates in the service and trade industries have increased or changed very little," it found.

It said the two sectors accounted for 47 percent of all workplace injuries and illnesses in 1994. Bars and restaurants, hospitals and nursing and personal care facilities experienced significant problems.

Craftsmen use tools of history to restore White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Outside the second floor sunburst-shaped window that tumbles light into Bill and Hillary Rodham Clinton's White House living room, electric saws and pneumatic drills cut crumbling sandstone from 200-year-old walls.

The chatter and buzz of stone cutting has been background noise for three presidents now, a constant daytime racket halted only by the visits of kings and prime ministers and the very worst weather.

So far, this historic restoration has taken more than twice the time it took craftsmen in the 1790s to build the White House in the first place.

These are the walls George Washington saw rising as he rode horseback through the new federal city. President John Adams and his wife, Abigail, were the first presidential couple to live behind them, moving into the still unfinished house in November 1799.

Some time this summer, the last new stone should be in place and the work finished after 16 years. This fall the west wall will be painted and the White House will be entirely white once more.

But for now, while President Clinton is master of the house inside, the walls are in the hands of a gray-bearded, perpetually white-capped Englishman of Irish descent named Patrick Plunkett.

At 48, Plunkett is a master stone carver who worked on the old stone of English abbeys and country houses and the cathedrals at Salisbury and Chichester.

Plunkett came to the White House in 1989 after years cutting and placing the stones and carving the gargoyles that completed Washington's National Cathedral.

The White House is not all that different.

"It's very similar to the work we were doing on the English cathedrals, even though that stone is 700 years old," Plunkett said, sitting at a table with his crew of four American stone carvers and cutters looking on.

"We're basically looking for badly eroded stone with no integrity anymore, stone so badly cracked you can knock lumps off with your hand," he said.

"You have to cut back to sound stone, take measurements and prepare templates, reproduce that stone exactly as it was, drill holes for stainless steel pins and set the stone back in place and secure it with liquid mortar."

Some of the replacement stones are tiny, a few square inches. Some are 40 inches long and 18 inches deep.

"When it's finished, you can't tell what is original and what's not," Plunkett said.

Cancer rates up for black males

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cancer rates are up slightly for black men, still the Americans most likely to get and die of cancer, according to a National Cancer Institute study.

The study, released Thursday, found that black men had a general cancer rate of 560 cases per 100,000 people and a cancer death rate of 319 per 100,000, the highest for any of the measured groups. Statistics released last year showed a cancer rate of 557 per 100,000 and a cancer death rate of 316 per 100,000 for black males.

The National Cancer Institute includes the data in an annual report called the Surveillance, Epidemiology and End Results program. It covers statistics for a five-year period, 1988 to 1992.

The report includes for the first time the cancer statistics among ethnic groups other than black and white, adding 11 new categories.

For all cancers combined, the new study finds that white non-Hispanic males are second to black males in incidence of disease. Cancer struck this group at the rate of 481 cases per 100,000 people. For cancer deaths, Hawaiian males were second to black males, with a mortality rate of 230 per 100,000.

Among women, white non-Hispanics had the highest rates of all cancers, with 354 cases per 100,000. Alaskan native women were second, at 348 per 100,000. For cancer deaths, Alaskan native women had the highest rates at 179 per 100,000. Black and Hawaiian women were second, both with cancer death rates of 168 per 100,000.

For types of disease, the study found breast cancer was the most frequently diagnosed cancer among all women, except Vietnamese-Americans, who had more cervical cancer. Breast cancer rates ranged from 28.5 per 100,000 for Korean-American women to 115.7 per 100,000 among non-Hispanic white women.

Lung cancer was the most frequent cause of cancer death among American women, while breast cancer is the second most frequent cause of cancer death in all groups except Alaska native women, who die more often of colon or rectum cancer.

Either prostate or lung cancer are the most common cancers and the most common causes of cancer deaths among all of the male groups studied. Black males

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Church celebrates
Reverend's ministry

Kelview Heights Baptist Church will be celebrating the 35th anniversary of the Rev. Frank Johnson's ministry to the church during the 9 and 11 a.m. services Sunday.

In 1961, Johnson met with a few families in a one-room building. As the years passed, these families multiplied into a congregation of several thousand, many of whom are third generation members from the original members.

Johnson

Under Johnson's ministry, the one-room building has grown into nearly a full block of buildings, housing Sunday School classes, a gymnasium and a 5,000 square foot nursery.

Sunday schools meet at 10 a.m. Sundays. Throughout the year, Kelview has opportunities for involvement in children's choirs, AWANA Clubs for Children, Ladies Bible Studies, Teen Bible Studies, Men's Prayer Lunches, volleyball and softball leagues, golf tournaments and many other activities including summer camps.

Kelview Preschool and Day Care has served Midland since 1989 and has a current enrollment of 210 children ranging in age from six weeks to 12 years old.

The Rev. Bruce Melton of Huntington Beach, Calif., will be the featured speaker in the 9 and 11 a.m. services. The Rev. Jerry Thorpe of Odessa will speak at 6:30 p.m. as the congregation honors Johnson.

All are invited to attend.

Temple Beth El
sponsors auction

Temple Beth El is sponsoring a Jewish Celebrity Auction today, April 27, at the Holiday Inn, Midland. The event begins at 7:30 p.m.

Items being auctioned include those from hit television shows like "Friends" and "Touched by an Angel" and an autographed script from "Fatal Attraction."

Reverend to speak

The Rev. Howard Culbertson will be speaking at the "Faith Promise Convention" today and Sunday at First Church of the Nazarene, 1208 W. Wall Ave.

A banquet is planned for 7 p.m. today in the Fellowship Hall. Culbertson will speak at the banquet and again at 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday.

Culbertson is missionary-in-residence at Southern Nazarene University where he teaches missions. In addition, he directs the university's missions efforts. These include church-planting initiatives in Bulgaria and Sicily and a large evangelistic/medical/construction thrust to Mexico over the New Year's holiday.

A veteran missionary for the Church of the Nazarene, Culbertson spent nearly 15 years overseas. The Culbertsons served for almost a decade in Europe, then in 1984 they were to the Caribbean. He became mission director in Haiti, where Christianity is seeing explosive growth. Besides evangelistic thrusts, the 350 Haitian Nazarene churches run economic and farming aid projects, medical work and elementary schools where sponsors from the United States provide daily hot lunches.

A native Arkansan, Culbertson grew up in Oklahoma. He graduated from Southern Nazarene University and Nazarene Theological Seminary. In 1986, while a missionary to Haiti, he completed a doctorate in missions at Denver Seminary.

Widely known for his missionary writings, Culbertson's latest books are "The Kingdom Strikes Back" and "Our Balanced Attack: How Nazarenes Finance World Evangelism."

Besides English, the Culbertsons speak Italian, French and Haitian Creole.

The Culbertsons began their missionary service in Italy in 1974. During their nearly 10 years of service there, the Italian Nazarenes moved to full self-government. They were in Haiti during the revolution that overthrew the oppressive Duvalier dictatorship.

All are invited to hear Culbertson speak.

Group calls for Jewish reformation

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Judaism is no longer one religion and it is time for Reform Jews to break free of Orthodox confines, the head of a Reform rabbinic association says.

In a speech to open the recent five-day convention of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, Rabbi Simeon Maslin said Orthodox direction has become insulting, arrogant and power-hungry to Reform Jews.

"It is all very well to sloganize about how 'We Are One' ... but, in fact, we have ceased to be one, and I strongly advise that we recognize that fact and proceed," Maslin said. "The time has finally arrived to stop deferring to an Orthodox that insults us at every opportunity, an Orthodoxy that considers itself ... to be the Torah-true Judaism."

An Orthodox leader said the comments were belligerent and would only serve to further fracture the Jewish religion. And a spokesman for another Jewish group said turbulent times called for unity, not divisiveness.

Maslin's comments come just weeks after a senior Israeli rabbinic official proposed making the Reform movement a separate religion. And the rabbinic association voted to endorse gay and lesbian marriages — a major theological contradiction for Orthodox Jews.

Maslin sees these actions as a turning point for Reform Jews, a movement that came to the United States in the 1820s from Germany. Reform flourished in the United States as Jews, recently freed from European ghettos, became influenced by non-Jewish society, said Bernard Riesman, a professor in contemporary Jewish studies at Brandeis University.

In surveys conducted by the Council of Jewish Federations, 80 percent of Jews say they are Reform or Conservative, compared to 7 percent who identify themselves as Orthodox.

With 1996 budget finished, Congress, president to tackle next year

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the epic 1996 budget war over at last, President Clinton and Congress are already waging next year's fiscal battle. Yet Republicans who achieved little of their budget-balancing agenda face even longer odds of success in this election year's intense political climate.

"Slim" are the chances former Rep. Tim Penny, D-Minn., who made deficit reduction a top priority while in Congress, gives for a budget deal between the two sides this year. Penny believes that even if GOP presidential candidate and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole agrees to bargain with Clinton, Republicans may be too fractured to back an agreement.

The 16-month-long budget battle of '96 came to an end Friday when Clinton signed a $159 billion measure financing scores of federal agencies for the fiscal year's remaining five months. The legislation helped deficit-cutting Republicans nail down their chief budgetary accomplishment — a $20 billion cut from last year's levels.

Those reductions, while considerable, came strictly from annually approved domestic programs, that one-seventh of the $1.6 trillion budget that finances road-building, space shuttle flights and other familiar government functions.

Untouched were the huge, fast-growing benefits like Medicare and Medicaid that are the chief causes of the federal deficit and that Republicans pledged to revamp while balancing the budget by 2002. The budget fight ended with no changes in those programs, no package for balancing the budget and none of the GOP's promised tax cuts.

"Clearly, they accomplished far less than they set out to do," said Susan Tanaka, vice president of the Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget, a bipartisan anti-deficit group.

The 16-month-long budget battle of '96 came to an end Friday when Clinton signed a $159 billion measure financing scores of federal agencies for the fiscal year's remaining five months.

Now, led by Dole, congressional Republicans are preparing to write fresh blueprints for balancing the budget by 2002. Perhaps next week, the House and Senate budget committees will approve plans resembling last year's proposal, participants say.

That will preface a year in which Congress will send Clinton separate bills reshaping benefit programs, trimming spending and taxes. Though there might be agreement this year on welfare reform and perhaps other items, the likelihood is that Clinton will cast vetoes that Republicans hope will portray him as unenthusiastic about shrinking government.

In hopes of pre-empting his GOP rivals, Clinton this week repeatedly invited Republicans to revive defunct budget-balancing talks. To most people watching the process, the odds of a comprehensive budget deal this year seem remote because of politicians' campaign-year desires to draw contrasts with their opponents, not join forces with them.

"Obviously virtually nil," are the odds that Scott Hodge, who monitors the issue for the conservative Heritage Foundation, gives for a bipartisan budget pact.

On Thursday, Dole and House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said before even considering renewed talks with Clinton, Republicans will first write their own budget. Even then, the two leaders indicated, they would meet with the president on their own terms — "if he has a serious offer," Gingrich said.

The difficulties of achieving a major reordering of the budget in a politically divided government are amply illustrated by the spending legislation Clinton signed Friday.

Without dispute, it enabled the GOP to deliver cuts in annually approved domestic programs of a magnitude unseen for decades. And Republicans claimed it was merely a first step toward paring even more unneeded bureaucracy.

But the 200 programs Republicans said the bill eliminated were mostly small, obscure items like the $1.9 million Christa McAuliffe scholarships and the $3 million White House Conference on Aging.

In contrast, at the beginning of the GOP crusade to cut spending last year, the House approved a Republican-written budget promising to eliminate the entire departments of Education, Commerce and Energy.

Jury convicts two in graveyard murders

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Two men trying to prove their toughness to fellow criminals were convicted Friday of murdering a drug dealer, his mother and a friend by shooting the men and burying the woman alive in someone else's grave.

"They've got their bona fides now," prosecutor Jerry Harris said in closing arguments. "They don't have to do anything but walk up and down the street. They own the street."

Tony Carruthers and James Montgomery, both 28, were convicted Friday of killing Marcellos Anderson, a flashy, 21-year-old drug dealer; Frederick Tucker, 17; and Anderson's mother, Delois, 43.

Montgomery's brother, Jonathan, also was charged with the killings and led police to the bodies, but was found hanged in jail. His death was ruled a suicide.

Harris said the murders in February 1994 were part of a plan by Carruthers and Montgomery to rob drug dealers and take over the illegal drug trade in their neighborhood.

Their first target was Anderson, known for carrying rolls of cash in a diamond money clip. Anderson's mother, a law-abiding housewife, was murdered so there would be no mistaking how tough the killers were, Harris said.

The three were killed in a graveyard. With an open grave readied for someone's burial yawning beside them, the three bound and prostrate victims begged for their lives before two were shot and Mrs. Anderson was thrown in alive, authorities have said.

Their bodies were covered with plywood and dirt; later, the grave's rightful occupant was interred over them. The victims were found when Jonathan Montgomery led police to the m.

The jury convicted Carruthers and Montgomery on three counts of first-degree murder, three of kidnapping and one of armed robbery.

A sentencing hearing began immediately and continued into the afternoon.

Montgomery had two court-appointed attorneys, Judge Joseph Dailey ordered Carruthers to represent himself after he ran off six lawyers with threats or lack of cooperation.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SATURDAY, APRIL 27, 1996

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Big developments lie just ahead where love and money are concerned. Family relationships have a strong influence on the way you handle financial matters. Forming a business alliance with a relative deserves serious thought. Consult experts when tax questions arise. Do not become impatient with a loved one who needs lots of reassurance. You know exactly what to say to comfort and inspire people! Travel provides fresh insights and valuable contacts.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: actor Jack Klugman, pop singer Sheena Easton, civil rights lecturer Coretta Scott King, radio deejay Casey Kasem.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your involvement with a passive individual could leave you limp with frustration. A spiritual awakening will revolutionize your life. Try not to fret if romance seems to be in a holding pattern.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Reassess your priorities. Continued good health should be at the top of the list. Find time to exercise regularly. Your attraction to a stranger could catch you off guard.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Let nothing from your past interfere with your present progress. Taking on a landlord at this time could prove daunting. Romantic partner's concerns require sensitive, diplomatic handling.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Romancing a younger person poses a special challenge. You do not want to come on too strong. Participation in a humanitarian cause could lead to a change of career.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Heed your intuitive hunches when dealing with people you barely know. Return borrowed possessions and repay loans. Building up your financial reserves will give you a valuable cushion.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You will be held accountable for your behavior. If an apology is in order, make it swiftly. Put your distinctive touch on everything you do. A stinging romance comes to an end.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Seize a golden opportunity to sway public opinion. Shrewd handling of financial matters will attract close scrutiny. Try to catch the opposition unawares.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not buy a car or major appliance while your thinking is clouded. Comparison shopping is essential. Bid "goodbye" to a partner who will never be ready for a real commitment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You become aware of a possible financial problem. Consult a CPA or banker. Romance could blossom at the supermarket or Laundromat. Be cautious in your dealings with strangers.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Tackle a backlog of chores. Small children may want to get into the act. Even if their efforts fall short of the mark, praise them for helping out.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Social events are pleasantly distracting. If involved in a secret relationship, protect your privacy. Favors will be granted if you ask nicely. Pals are a little testy, but this too shall pass.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Important decisions should be postponed until after the weekend. Get your act together. Polish your skills and assemble an attractive work wardrobe. Cruel words will smooth ruffled feathers.

Hume Cronyn who found youth in 'Cocoon' plans to take plunge with younger woman

NEW YORK — Hume Cronyn, who found youth in a swimming pool in the movie "Cocoon," is now taking the plunge with a younger woman.

Cronyn, 84, longtime husband of the late Jessica Tandy, is engaged to children's writer Susan Cooper, 60.

The couple already have bought a house together in Connecticut, Cronyn told The New York Times. But the house won't be ready until July and they haven't decided when or where to hold the wedding, he said.

Cooper, winner of the Newberry Medal, has a new book of essays on writing for children called "Dreams and Wishes," that is being published next week by Margaret McElderry Books. She has dedicated the book to Tandy, who was a close friend.

She and Cronyn have collaborated on scripts over the years, for the play "Foxfire," and the movies "The Dollmaker," "To Dance With the White Dog," and "Dinner at the Homesick Restaurant."

"We are not in entirely unfamiliar territory," Cronyn said.

LOS ANGELES — An 82-room castle on 40 acres is apparently just not big enough for the King of Pop.

The owner of the Chateau de Chabennet, a 15th-century, moated castle, said Friday he did not sell it to Michael Jackson as was previously reported.

The castle, about 120 miles south of Paris, has been for sale for several months for $5 million, and Jackson had been "very interested," said owner Philippe Mareck.

But Mareck said Jackson apparently decided the 40-acre property was too small and too close to the village of Chabennet.

"For his security, Jackson needs at least 250 acres," Mareck said.

The singer's publicist said Thursday that Jackson bought an estate in the French countryside in the range of $10 million to $12 million.

The property was described in a press release as "a huge estate in a choice area" with "all the facilities and amenities befitting the King of Pop." The release did not specify the name or location of the property.

NEW YORK (AP) — The father of Macaulay Culkin admitted to police he smacked his movie star son for failing to clean up his room.

The 15-year-old star of the "Home Alone" movies called police after the argument Thursday. He did not require medical treatment, police spokeswoman Noreen Murray said.

Christopher "Kit" Culkin admitted slapping his son, but no charges were filed and the case was referred to family court, Murray said.

The fight comes during a nasty battle for custody of Macaulay and his six brothers and sisters.

Christopher Culkin, 50, and Patricia Brentrup, 41, lived together for 20 years and had seven children. The couple split up last year, and their battle is largely a question of who will control Macaulay's $50 million fortune.

SUPERIOR, Wis. — Arnold Schwarzenegger is getting pumped up for a new award.

The movie star and former body-builder will receive an honorary degree at the 100th spring commencement exercises of his alma mater, the University of Wisconsin-Superior.

The honorary doctor of humane letters degree was announced Thursday by interim chancellor Jan Womack. Schwarzenegger, a 1979 graduate of the university, will receive the award May 17.

LOS ANGELES — Heather Locklear is showing she can be more than just the mean, back-biting babe of "Melrose Place."

Locklear, 34, stars as a woman with multiple personality disorder in "Shattered Mind," a TV movie scheduled to air on NBC on May 27.

One of her character's personalities is a prostitute.

"I went into the XXX video store and that was the easiest thing," she told "Entertainment Tonight" in the first of a two-part interview broadcast Thursday. The second part of the interview was scheduled for tonight.

Locklear said her husband, Richie Sambora, was a bit taken aback by the role.

Few at Mitsubishi remain silent about co-workers accusations

NORMAL, Ill. (NYT)— As the gray sky brightened Thursday morning and Kelli M. Harrison hurried to work, she paused to give her views about accusations that hundreds of women here at Mitsubishi's automobile assembly plant had been sexually harassed. "You can't stop guys looking at women or women looking at guys," said Ms. Harrison, who works in the plant's body shop. She insisted that Mitsubishi Motor Manufacturing of America had been unfairly accused.

But then she discussed the time, just after she started working at the plant in 1989, that some male co-workers left a note for her on the factory floor that asked her to bare her breasts. Another man took the note to a supervisor, who met with her authors, and that was the end of it, she said. The company encouraged her to file a complaint, but she refused. "It is not worth some man losing their job."

Ms. Harrison said that since then she had had no problems at the factory, where about one-fifth of the 4,000 employees are women. As for other people's accusations, she said: "A lot of it I think is the women's fault. You have to stop it right away."

But 30 women, some of whom still work in the plant, have filed a civil lawsuit against Mitsubishi in U.S. District Court in nearby Peoria, that describes routine groping, sexual graffiti and degrading remarks. Their complaints were echoed earlier this month in a lawsuit brought by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission against the company in what may be the nation's largest sexual harassment case.

Both lawsuits contend that Mitsubishi has allowed offensive incidents to go unpunished, fostering an atmosphere conducive to harassment. A lawyer for most of the women who filed the civil suit, Patricia C. Benassi, described some of the incidents at the plant. She said one woman was bruised when a male worker fired an air gun between her legs. Male supervisors and line workers rubbed their genitals against female workers, she said.

And then there are the photographs. Routinely, male workers gathered to watch women dance naked and perform sex acts for pay at private parties away from the factory. Photos were taken and prints wound up in the plant. Some were stacked up in some of the break areas, Ms. Benassi explained and others, including officials of Local 2488 of the United Auto Workers, confirmed. Some show production line workers and managers performing oral sex on young women. Some party-goers wore their maroon Mitsubishi uniforms to the parties.

6-year-old charged with attempted murder

OAKLAND, Calif. (NYT)— County prosecutors charged a 6-year-old boy with attempted murder Thursday, accusing him of dumping a neighbor's newborn baby out of its bassinet and beating it nearly to death in an act that appeared likely to brand him the country's youngest would-be killer.

The boy and two 8-year-old twin brothers, who all live in the San Francisco suburb of Richmond, were also charged with burglary. Police say the boys attacked the infant after they slipped into a neighbor's home to steal a Big Wheel-type tricycle, prosecutors said.

Gun sales unchanged in six months

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gun sales are unchanged and the price of guns has actually gone down in the past six months, despite a dramatic drop in the number of licensed gun dealers since 1993, a gun industry spokesman told a House subcommittee Thursday.

A 45 percent drop in the number of gun dealers during the Clinton administration has had little effect on gun sales or prices, probably because the decline is mostly in dealers who bought only a few guns each year, said Richard Feldman, executive director of the American Shooting Sports Council.

Washington, D.C., a member of the House Appropriations subcommittee that oversees the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, questioned whether the heightened supervision of gun dealer licenses by the ATF was justified, since there is little evidence that the bureau's efforts were reducing crime.

Rep. Jack Kingston, R-Ga., said the ATF was "wrong and absurd" and is the result of pressure from "the most anti-gun administration in the history of our nation," said Tanya Metaksa, legislative director for the National Rifle Association.

"The freedom to purchase firearms is becoming severely limited in certain areas of this country because of the fact that you see an almost 50 percent drop in the number of federally licensed firearms dealers," Metaksa said. It will have no effect on crime but will instead drive up the cost of firearms by reducing competition.

So far, the administration's gun control efforts have done just the opposite, Feldman said. The best year for gun sales since World War II was 1994, when Congress was working on assault weapons legislation. The price

Lee playoff set

The District 4-5A baseball regular season is over, but there is still one game left to play.

The Midland Lee Rebels (17-11-1, 9-3) will take on Abilene Cooper (20-9, 9-3) today at noon in Abilene for the No. 1 seed in the upcoming playoffs. Cooper forced the tie with a 10-4 win over Odessa Permian on Friday night.

Abilene (17-9, 8-4), which could have forced a three-way tie with a win, became Odessa High's first district victim in an 11-3 upset loss to the Bronchos on Friday and finished in third.

Chaps, OC one and two at region golf

Stewart Dorean
Sports Writer

ROSWELL, N.M. — The surprise Friday probably is not that the Midland College golf team is in the lead at the Region V Golf Championships held at the New Mexico Military Institute Golf Course.

No, the surprise may be that the Odessa College Wranglers went out and ran with the big dogs of the region.

Midland College shot a team total of 10-under-par and leads the Wranglers by six strokes (566-572) after the first two rounds of action.

"Odessa is capable of playing under-par," said MC coach Delnor Poss. "We can't relax at all. We will have to play well."

Midland College was led by freshman Steven Young, who is tied at the top of the medalist race with a two round total of 138 (6-under-par). The Scot had 10 birdies and four bogeys over the 36 holes. James Clive and Derrick Pursley also are among the region's top seven after the first day of play.

Pursley, an Andrews native, is tied for fourth after a steady-as-usual 141. The sophomore, who will play at the University of Texas at El Paso next season, had a bogey-less 69 in the afternoon round. His round included 15 pars and three birdies.

"All in all they played well," said Poss. "I was proud of the way Pursley, Clive and Young showed patience. They were not putting well but they kept their poise."

Clive, a freshman, had 10 birdies and eight bogeys to place himself at two-under-par and in a tie for sixth. It was his play that Poss was especially happy with as he stepped up in a key spot for MC.

"James Clive stepped his game up a notch today when we needed it," said Poss, whose team has won the last six Regional titles. "That is how he usually plays."

Scotty Wade led the other Chaps with a 145 while Michael Lofdahl had a 150. Blair Buttar, competing for the Chaps in the conference team race, fired a 144.

The final round will be played today and Poss, whose team is looking for its eighth straight appearance in the national tournament that will be held in Scottsdale, Ariz. in early June, has specific goals for the final round.

"I would like to see four sub-par rounds," said Poss, whose team has an unbeatable lead in the conference standings. "They are capable of doing that. We have shot as much as 14-under par (at NMCI)."

The last time the Chaps had four players under par was at the Ranchland Hills Invitational this fall.

Team and medalist standings from the first two rounds Friday at the Region V Junior College golf tournament:

Team Standings: 1. Midland College, 285-291-586; 2. Odessa College, 287-285-572; 3. New Mexico Junior College, 292-287-579; 4. New Mexico Military Institute, 295-292-587; 5. Western Texas College, 296-293-589; 6. Grayson County College, 297-293-590; 7. McLennan County Community College, 298-296-592; 8. Westwood, 302-298-598.

Medalist Standings: 1. Steve Young, 70-68-138; 1. Brett Woodhead, NMCI 70-68-138; 1. Andrew Rowley, NMCI 70-68-138; 4. Derrick Pursley, MC 70-69-141; 4. A.J. Kapp, OC 70-71-141; 6. James Clive, MC 70-72-142; 6. Carter Womack, Grayson County, 72-70-142.

Young. "We don't take any teams lightly. We have one goal in mind and that is Austin."

There is not much doubt the Lady Rebs will have some tests to get to the capital city. That road, however, in this half of the draw is easier than the top half. A win today will put Lee against El Paso Ysleta, who defeated Lubbock Coronado 8-3 on Thursday. Young's team, however, is not looking past any team towards potential regional semifinal against Keller, who is one of the favorites in the region. They can't afford to.

"We're not talking about Lubbock High," said Young when looking at Andrews. "If we are not on our game, we'll be in trouble."

Andrews, 17-6, is a team that puts runs on the board by manufacturing them. The singles attack will be led by senior third baseman Kathy Rodriguez (.519 average and 20 RBIs), junior shortstop Autumn Ortega (.446, 20 RBIs) and senior leftfielder Veronica Garinca (.433 and 20 RBIs). There are not too many home run hitters on the club, but according to Andrews coach Jackie Warrick, the team will have score by putting pressure on Lee's defense.

"We'll have to manufacture runs," said Warrick, who will start three seniors and five juniors. "It should be a very competitive game. Last year, we didn't show much against them. After seeing them play we are just as good they are and vice versa. It should be very competitive."

Crystal Smith, 22-6 for the season, will start for the Lady Rebs. Young says his team is ready for the challenge it will get defensively.

"We have a strong defensive team and this will be a good test for us," said Young. "If we take care of our business, we'll be fine."

Young's team is led offensively by junior catcher Adrian Nobles, who tops the Lady Rebs in almost every offensive category. Nobles, however, is not the only Lady Reb that Andrews junior Amanda Green (16-2 with 62K's and a 2.52 ERA) will half to worry about. The team hits over .370 and has many threats including junior center-fielder Marci Villa, sophomore infielder Jennifer Aman and senior first baseman Susanna Reed. Young will need the whole team to come up with big games.

One sidebar note about the game. Tonight is the Lee prom, and depending on the game's outcome, the dance will be one more thing to celebrate or tough to get into the spirit of. Midland High did beat Lee on the day of the MHS spring formal, so it shouldn't be a distraction for the Lady Rebs. It is just a matter getting it done on the field.

"This team is focused," said Young. "We will show up."

Lady Rebel Notes: The game will be broadcast on KCRS (AM 550) Radio. The pre-game starts at 12:45 p.m. (CDT).

WEST COLUMBIA — Texas A&M's Jeff Brown fired a six-under-par 66 while SMU took a one-shot lead over Texas Christian and A&M Friday in the opening round of the Southwest Conference men's golf championship.

Brown's score equalled the tournament record for the first round.

The mark is shared by two former University of Texas golfers, Lance Ten Broeck (1975) and Marcus Jones (1994).

Brown went out in five-under 31 fashion on the 6,967-yard, par-72 Columbia Lakes course but also survived a double-bogey five on the 12th hole.

Cowboys appear at peace for minicamp

By Donna H. Freeman
Associated Press

IRVING — The Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys were at peace, for the time being, as they held their first minicamp Friday since winning a third NFL title in four years.

Troy Aikman was talking about an understanding between him and coach Barry Switzer.

Michael Irvin was joking and joshing with his teammates but keeping his lip zipped about his off-the-field problems which include a June 24 trial on cocaine and marijuana possession charges.

A smiling Charles Haley was bouncing around the lockerroom, spinning off one-liners and getting ready for a try at his sixth Super Bowl ring. Haley's mere presence at the minicamp indicated he's coming back for another season unless his back problems get him down.

Deion Sanders, who is expected to become an offensive force at wide receiver for the Cowboys in 1996, was being Deion, saying "I'm not talking but you can film me."

Moose Johnston was talking about the runaway construction crane that destroyed part of his house while he was gone on a honeymoon.

"I got a call from my mother who was inside the house when the crane fell," Johnston said. "I couldn't believe it."

Johnston and his new bride will be living in an apartment for another three months until the damage is repaired.

Emmitt Smith was talking about graduating soon from the University of Florida, wondering who the Cowboys drafted and debating whether golfers were really athletes.

Rookies and free agents were standing around in wide-eyed amazement over seeing their more famous teammates for the first time.

"It's incredible seeing all these guys you've seen so many years on television," said rookie wide receiver Stepfret Williams.

Aikman's unhappiness with Switzer stemmed from comments made by now Oklahoma coach John Blake, an assistant with the Cowboys until the playoffs began.

Aikman has met with Switzer and owner Jerry Jones and contends all disputes have been settled.

"I feel we had a good meeting and we've put everything behind us and we're ready to move ahead," said Aikman, whose passing elbow is still tender from surgery that removed bone chips.

Aikman also commented on Irvin's troubles, saying "I support Mike in doing what he has to do. I have no knowledge of what took place. But I support him as a teammate."

Fergus leads after two rounds

Associated Press

GREENSBORO, N.C. — When the fun went out of golf, Keith Fergus packed up his clubs and went home. After two rounds of the Greater Greensboro Classic, he's glad he changed his mind.

Fergus, who quit the PGA Tour in 1987 to spend more time with his family, marked another highlight in his return Friday with a 5-under-par 67, a two-day total of 137 and the lead in the Greater Greensboro Classic.

Hisayuki Sasaki, whose best finish in 10 years of professional golf was a tie for 31st in last year's British Open, was one of three golfers at 138 after shooting a 69 on the rain-soaked Forest Oaks Country Club course.

"I wanted to get back to see if I could do it," Fergus said. "Fortunately for me, I've been able to do it to a certain degree."

When Fergus left, his son was 7 and his daughter 3. In the previous season, he'd finished 142nd on the money list. He had barely topped $4,000 in winnings when he went home to Texas to watch his children grow.

"I felt like that I wasn't enjoying what I was doing. I had two small children and I just didn't want to be gone as much as I was being gone," Fergus said. "The fun was out of it. I didn't enjoy it and I didn't want to be out here. If you have that frame of mind, you might as well go home."

"I would have not got to enjoy baseball, and see my little girl grow up in her gymnastics," he said. "To see that is something I'll never get to enjoy again."

Fergus didn't think he would miss the tour and doubted that he would ever return. In fact, with only a little competitive golf under his belt during the lay-off, he coached the University of Houston golf team for seven seasons.

LPGA Sara Lee Classic
NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Marianne Morris took advantage of early calm winds to shoot a 4-under-par 68 and take a one-stroke lead after the opening round of the $600,000 Sara Lee Classic.

Starting on the back nine, Morris grabbed three of her four birdies before making the turn, after which gusty winds prevented her, and just about everybody else, from getting any more.

"The wind was just howling in our faces," Morris said. "It's hard because the wind keeps switching directions. I'd be setting up over the ball, and I mean I probably switched clubs four or five times then because the wind either died or blew harder."

Catrin Nilsmark-Wickberg, Shelley Hamlin and Robin Walton all shot 69 and were a stroke ahead of Michelle Redman, Amy Benz, Martha Nause, Helen Alfredsson and Meg Mallon.

Mallon and Alfredsson were the only afternoon starters to finish among the leaders.

With windy conditions expected through the weekend at the Hermitage Golf Course, Morris didn't plan to spend much time practicing before Saturday.

great job of competing."

The Rebels cruised to a second-place time of 3:19 in the District 4-5A meet two weeks ago. And that was a five-second improvement from their previous best of 3:24.

Friday, Lee finished behind 4-5A champ Odessa High (3:15.12) and Fort Worth L.D. Bell (3:15.44).

Competition begins today at 9 a.m. with the remaining field events that were not contested on Friday. The finals, beginning with the 400 relay, start at 1:30 p.m.

The Lee relay was the highlight of a not-so-spectacular day for the rest of the Midland entries.

As expected, McAfee qualified first in both the 110 hurdles and the 300 hurdles but was not happy with his times or they way he ran.

Also expected was the Midland High girls making the finals in two relays, but because of a minor injury to senior Toya Zachery, those times were also not their best.

And due to the injury to Toya Zachery, her sister Tami Zachery had to scratch out of the open 200 to run Toya's leg on the 800 relay.

Tami, however, did make the finals in the 100, running a time of 12.06 to qualify with the third-best time.

Toya pulled up and we still qualified in the relay. But we didn't want to take any chances with her on the 800 relay today so Tami ran in her place," said MHS coach Susan Nix. "I think she has a better chance to getting out (to state) in the 100 anyway."

Despite the mild strain in her left thigh, Toya Zachery gutted through the final 40 meters of her leg to hand the stick to Tami for the final leg. The Lady Bulldogs still recorded a time of 47.3, just off their best. Shelly Ray and Talitha Belcher were the first and second legs. They have the second-best time behind Arlington Sam Houston (47.2).

A bad handoff between Tami Zachery and Ray on the second exchange of the 800 relay did not keep the Lady Bulldogs out of the finals as they clocked a time of 1:42.18, fifth-best. Belcher and Ogonna Merritt were the other two legs on the relay.

It was the second regional muscle mishap for Toya Zachery, whose right hamstring pull last year on the final exchange caused the Lady Bulldogs to be disqualified because they couldn't complete the handoff. Zachery said she thought about that the moment her leg twinged.

"I'm not that mad though because I spent a lot of time stretching and warming up," Zachery said. "If it's going to happen at least it happened in the prelims."

Toya will probably resume her place on the 800 relay today but that could change depending on how her leg feels.

"She wasn't that upset about not getting to run the 200," Toya said of Tami. "In a way I think she would rather run the 800 relay."

The Lee girls also qualified in the 400 relay, running a season's best time of 48.5, just one-tenth of a second off the school record of 48.4. It helped make up for a disappointing performance by Toya Clater in the long jump.

Clater, a sophomore, was more than two feet off her personal best of 18 feet, 4 inches, and did not make the finals in the long jump. She was disappointed because with her best, she would have gotten third as first place was 18-9 1/2 and second was 18-5 3/4. Clater jumped 16-3 1/4.

"I probably didn't have enough speed on my approach," Clater said. "But I've got two more chances. (After the long jump) I said that I'm going to make up for it on the sprint relay because just because I'm down doesn't mean I'm going to let the whole team down. I wasn't taught that way."

Fellow sophomores Casandra Love and Amanda Douglas joined Clater and senior Kym Ward on the sprint relay.

Also for Lee, junior LaToya Strambler ran a time of 1:00.71 and failed to make the finals in the 400 while sophomore Marisa Beck finished 10th in the 3,200. Both events took place in the heat of the afternoon, more heat than Strambler or Beck have had to compete in this year.

Beck's time of 12:48.07 was well off her best of 12:29.20. She will get another chance at a state berth today as she is competing in the 1,600.

The heat obviously got to McAfee.

"I guess when I get nervous I get sleepy," McAfee said. "I tried to save too much for later (mile relay prelims later Friday and finals today). I'm used to it being cold. I'm not used to this hot weather yet, but we'll adjust."

McAfee got a bad start in the 110s because he said he sat in the blocks after it looked like two competitors had jumped the gun. But the race continued and McAfee charged into the lead after about the third hurdle to record a time of 14.08, way off his best of 13.51, but still almost one-half of a second faster than the competition.

In the 300s, he ran out of juice in the heat and clocked a 37.91. McAfee's best is a state's best 36.09. Despite the slow time, McAfee was still three-tenths of a second in the lead.

MHS: Woodard concentrating on Irvin

(From 1C)

2 Friday. MHS has never defeated Cooper in UIL play and that corresponds to a 0-4 mark in 1995-96. With a win, MHS would play Cooper in Coahoma at 5 p.m. on Tuesday.

The road also means going through what should be Richland, District 6 champion, or Arlington Sam Houston, which upset Haltom on Thursday.

Woodard, however, is looking at Irvin.

"They are quick and make the routine plays and it will be a matter of who plays better," said Woodard. "We should outthrust their team. I just don't know which hitting team will show up (for us)."

Irvin (16-4) will not be any means be a long ball threat. The Lady Rockets depend on good hitting and moving the runners to score. Sophomore shortstop Lisa Marie Castro leads the team with a .571 average while junior center field Jessica Sallaiz is second at .501. It is a style that puts pressure on the opposing team's defense.

"We're not a home run hitting team," said Irvin coach Robert Gauna. "We don't have the speed we should have. Our base hitting and bunting will help us out."

Guana figures when you have two teams like this getting on top is necessary and making mistakes is deadly.

"When you have two good team going you try to get that one-run edge," said Guana. "If one team makes that crucial error, that will cost them."

Jennifer Shelton, 9-5 for the season, will make the start for MHS.

The junior carries a 3.34 earned run average into the game, but as her marks in 4-5A dictate, she gets up for the big game. Shelton was 3-1 with a 2.97 ERA in district.

Irvin junior Erica Tabarez will take an 11-4 mark to the pitching circle. She has a 0.29 ERA and has 87 strikeouts to her name.

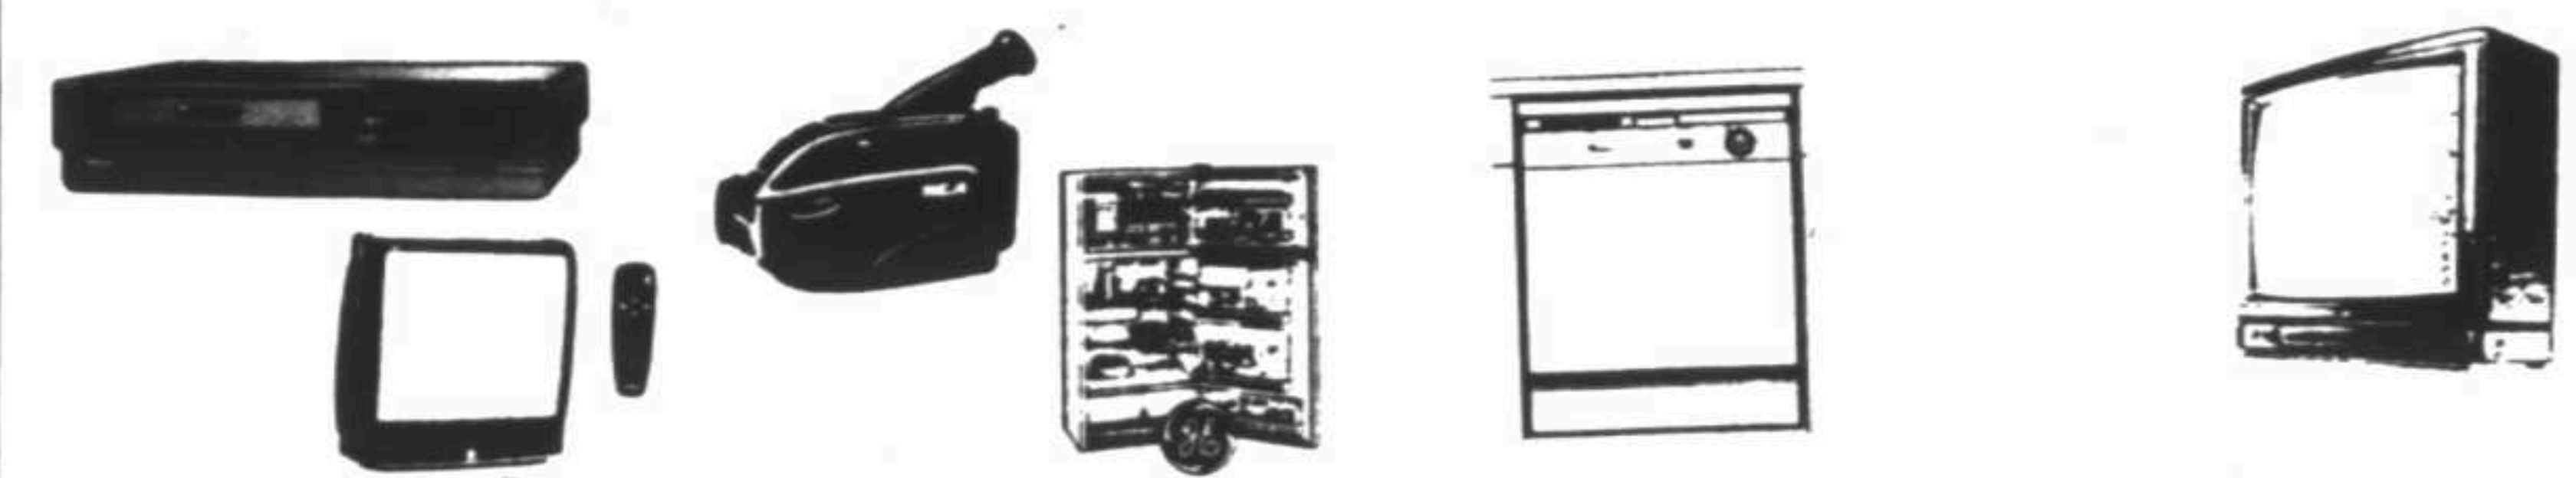

Offensively, MHS is led on the field by Julie Williams, who leads the club with a .429 batting average. Jamee Stennett, Jeni Neatherlin and Jessica Moss can also provide offense.

Lady Bulldog Notes: The game will be broadcasted on KCRS (AM 550) Radio.

The game will be a homecoming for MHS coach Ricci Woodard, who returns to Carlsbad where she grew up and played high school softball.

Texas ends 4-game skid on Clark's hit

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Will Clark broke a tie with a two-run double in the seventh inning as the Texas Rangers ended a four-game losing streak by beating the Baltimore Orioles 5-4 Friday night.

Mickey Tettleton broke out of a 3-for-25 skid with three hits, including a homer, to help Texas improve to 4-0 against Baltimore this season. The Rangers were winless since sweeping the Orioles last weekend.

B.J. Surhoff homered for the Orioles, who have lost seven of nine after an 11-2 start.

It was 2-0 in the seventh when Kevin Elster hit a one-out single off David Wells (2-2) and Darryl Hamilton doubled. Ivan Rodriguez received an intentional walk before Clark drove a 2-1 pitch into the gap in right-center.

Tettleton capped the uprising with an RBI single off Roger McDowell.

Surhoff hit his fifth homer of the season, a two-run shot, in the eighth.

Mark Brandenburg (1-0) pitched 1 1/3 innings of no-hit relief to earn his first major league win. Mike Henneman worked the ninth for his fourth save.

Tettleton's fifth homer gave the Rangers a 1-0 lead in the second. Roberto Alomar tied it with an RBI single in the third, but the Orioles didn't get another hit until Surhoff homered.

Texas starter Darren Oliver experienced control problems in the fourth. After two walks and a hit batsman loaded the bases, Oliver forced in a run by walking Brady Anderson.

TORONTO — Eddie Murray hit a two-run single and Orel Hersher scattered eight hits in seven innings as the Cleveland Indians beat the Toronto Blue Jays 6-3 for their 12th win in 14 games.

Hersher (2-2) gave up three runs, struck out six and walked none. Jose Mesa pitched the ninth for eighth save in eight chances.

Erik Hanson (2-4) gave up eight hits in eight innings. Toronto has lost three straight and seven of eight.

Royals 4, Red Sox 3
BOSTON — Kansas City extended Roger Clemens' worst start ever, keeping the Red Sox ace winless.

Clemens (0-4) struck out 11 in seven innings and allowed only five hits. The three-time Cy Young winner, with a 4.17 ERA, had never before lost three in a row at the start of a season.

Michael Tucker hit a solo home run for the Royals, and also robbed Mike Stanley of homer in right field. Tim Belcher (2-1) pitched 7 1/3 innings for the victory, and Jeff Montgomery got his fifth save.

Mariners 6, Brewers 5
MILWAUKEE — Randy Johnson left after 3 2/3 innings with a stiff lower back, but Seattle still managed to stop its three-game losing streak as Luis Sojo scored on a double-play grounder in the ninth.

Mike Potts (0-1) walked Sojo on four pitches, and Ken Griffey Jr.'s broken-bat single put runners on the corners. Sojo scored when Edgar Martinez grounded to shortstop.

Rafael Carmona (1-0) threw two hitless innings, and Norm Charlton pitched the ninth for his second save.

Mike Matheny homered and drove in a career-high four runs for Milwaukee.

Tigers 14, Athletics 5

DETROIT — Danny Bautista, John Flaherty and Chris Gomez each drove in three runs and Detroit ended an eight-game losing streak.

The Tigers bounced back from 24-11 and 11-1 losses to Minnesota, and stopped Oakland's five-game winning string. Pedro Munoz and Terry Steinbach hit consecutive homers for the A's in the seventh.

Mike Christopher (1-1) pitched 2 1/3 innings. Doug Johns (2-1) gave up six earned runs on six hits and walked four in four innings. Oakland pitchers walked 12, and Detroit pitchers walked eight.

Williams' homer, his fourth of the season and third career grand slam, came off Twins starter Brad Radke (3-3).

Kenny Rogers, making his first home start for New York, gave up four runs and 10 hits in five innings. Mariano Rivera (1-0) pitched three hitless innings, and John Wetteland finished for his third save.

Rogers allowed three runs in the second on a solo homer by Dave Hollins and a two-run drive by Pat Meares.

Avery's gem gives Braves win over Cards

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Steve Avery pitched seven shutout innings and Fred McGriff homered and doubled twice, leading the Atlanta Braves over the St. Louis Cardinals 6-1 Friday night for their seventh win in 11 games.

Andy Benes (1-3) allowed six runs and nine hits in 6 1/3 innings.

Pirates 10, Mets 6
PITTSBURGH — Jeff King, Orlando Merced and Charlie Hayes homered and Pittsburgh overcame the loss of starter Zane Smith, who strained his right hamstring while scoring on Al Martin's two-run double in the second.

The game had just resumed after a 59-minute rain delay when Smith was hurt, and there was no immediate report on the severity of his injury.

Jason Christiansen (2-2) relieved Smith and pitched three innings for the win. Jason Isringhausen (1-2) gave up eight runs — six earned — in four innings.

Phillies 2, Reds 0
CINCINNATI — Mike Grace (4-0) retired the first

DENVER — David Segui and Moises Alou hit two-run homers as Montreal won its eighth consecutive game.

Montreal, on its longest winning streak since July 18-26, 1994, won its 16th game and tied the club record for April wins, a mark set in 1981. Mike Lansing drove in two runs with a solo homer and a single.

Tavo Alvarez (1-0) allowed one run and three hits in six innings.

Armando Reynoso (1-2) gave up three runs and seven hits in six innings as Colorado lost its third straight overall and fifth straight at Coors Field.

Will Perdue, who came to San Antonio in exchange for Dennis Rodman in the offseason, had a career playoff-best in scoring with 17 points, far surpassing his regular-season average of 5.2 points. His ferocious dunks in the fourth quarter kept the Alamodome crowd cheering as the Spurs kept the game out of reach.

The teams exchanged leads during the first quarter and early in the second. Then, with 9:02 left before halftime, an 8-foot jump by Elliott sparked the Spurs' rally.

and get ahead of the hitters, and when I did that, I just went from there," said Ray, who allowed five earned runs in three innings in a no-decision against the Angels in Wichita on April 16. "He (Guil) always hits me well."

Second baseman Keith Luuloa walked to open the inning and moved to third on Guil's double. Ray (1-0) got Greg Shockley to strike out looking then gave up a two-run single to catcher Ben Molina to cut the Wranglers' lead in half.

"I tried to go inside on him and he just jumped on it," said Ray, who was lifted because he had reached a pre-determined pitch limit. "It was a good decision. They had a lefty coming up and (Kevin) Rawitzer has really pitched well for us this year."

The Angels threatened to make it a big inning when Tony Moeder reached on shortstop Anthony Medrano's second error of the game, putting runners on first and third with two outs. Rawitzer, who shut down the Angels in his appearance during the 15-14 game in Wichita, got Freddie Diaz to ground out and end the threat.

Brian Harrison pitched the final two innings for Wichita, allowing one hit and striking out two to pick up his first save of the year.

"It was a tough game. Both pitchers pitched a great game and we just couldn't get a rhythm going," Guil said. "We finally got something going but it was too late."

Dickson (2-2) pitched well enough to earn a win, but a shaky first two innings gave the Wranglers just enough opportunity to put together a 3-0 lead.

"They're a real aggressive hitting team and they just jumped on a couple of my fastballs early," said Dixon, who struck out six while walking none in eight innings of work.

The crowd of 3,192 had barely time enough to sit down and fill out the lineups when Wichita's Jed Hansen, who went 2-for-4 with two RBIs, led off the game with the first of his two home runs in the game. Kevin Long and designated hitter Mike Sweeney followed with hard-hit doubles to give the Wranglers a 2-0 lead before the Angels had a chance to bat.

Wichita made it 3-0 in the second when Ryan Long reached on an error and scored on an RBI double by Medrano.

The Wranglers' went ahead 4-0 in the fifth as Hansen took Dickson over the wall to center field with his second homer of the game and fourth of the season.
