Moody Intent Upon Centralization Of State Prisons

Two Measures Are Before Lawmakers For Consideration

Central Penitentiary Plant Is Sought For Texas In Efforts Of Governor and Co-Workers

Moody Also Hopes For Passage Of Legislation For Solution To State Highway Problems

By R. W. BARRY
Associated Press Staff Writer

AUSTIN, Feb. 9.—Governor Moody has his heart set on prison centralization and he is going to do his best to make the present legislature see it his way. Not to the extent of coercion, but through explanation of his plans to win over opponents to his ideas of how the reorganization and concentration should be done, will he act.

With the Holbrook bill, approved by the Governor, all but rejected by the senate committee, the Governor rallied his friends to its support with the result it has been passed out favorable.

Two Leaders Appear

The house committee preferred the Young-Turner-Loy measure providing for concentration on the seven farms below Houston with the central plant on the Darrington farm in Brazoria county, to the Holbrook companion bill, sponsored in the house by Graves of Williamson and Hubbard of Bowie, who by the way, are fast taking places as house administration leaders—but the Governor's measure has been ordered printed there on minority report.

The senate committee had reported favorably the Cousins bill, senate companion to the Young-Turner-Loy version in the house, previous to its action in recommending the Holbrook draft, thus bringing about a dilemma that might amount to nothing more than one of the two bills being considered on minor-

Forfeiture Of Charter Sought

Four Texas Mutual Insurance Companies Named in Quo Warranto Proceedings In Austin Saturday

(By Associated Press)

AUSTIN, Feb. 9. — Quo warranto proceedings to forfeit the charters of four Texas mutual life insurance companies were instituted today by the attorney general's department in district court here.

The attorney general alleges that the companies are failing to comply with the state's insurance laws, inasmuch as they are not confining activities to their counties, as prescribed under the mutual aid insurance law.

The companies named in the actions are National Mutual Life association, successor to the National Mutual Benefit association, Houston; Bankers Guaranty Life company, successor to Mutual Life Insurance association of Texas, Dallas; Texas Mutual Life Insurance association, successor to the Home Mutual Life Insurance association, Waco, and the Mutual Protective association of Texas and six individuals, Fort Worth.

Federal Rating Is Given Tech ROTC

The application of Texas Technological college to the federal government for Reserve Officers Training Corps aid under section 550 National Defense Act has been approved by the war department, according to a letter received here yesterday by Lieut. H. E. Killin, commandant of the present military corps at the college.

The letter of approval was accompanied by certain instructions and requisition blanks for which adequate equipment for carrying on the work at the college can be secured.

With the enrollment of 300 cadets in the work at the college, a senior R. O. T. C. unit may be secured which will provide full equipment and officers together with regular pay of 70 cents per day to all juniors and seniors taking the work.

A definite outline of program for the military corps of the college will be outlined within the near future, officials said yesterday.

Wealthy Farmer Is Found Killed Near Wichita Saturday

Arthur Pendergraft, Cotton County, Oklahoma Man, Is Victim of Gunshot Wounds

(By Associated Press)

WICHITA FALLS, Feb. 9. — A bullet wound through the head and hands folded carefully across the chest, the body of Arthur Pendergraft, 48, wealthy farmer of Cotton county, Okla., was found in a clump of bushes on a vacant ranch land about 10 miles from here late today.

D. J. Hobbler, described as having been Pendergraft's "right hand man" for 11 years, was charged with murder after he had led officers to the body. Hoobler was quoted by Assistant District Attorney George W. Anderson as having said he shot Pendergraft in sefl defense in an altercation about five miles from here the night of January 27.

Call Grand Jury

Sam B. Spencer, district attorney, said he would recommend recalling the grand jury at once.

The murder charge was filed against Hoobler after an inquest had been conducted. The coroner's verdict was that death was caused by a gunshot wound.

Officers of four counties had been searching for Pendergraft since he disappeared.

Second Meeting Of Group to Result In Stronger Work For Oklahoma City - El Paso Highway Routing

Last night more than a score of automobiles, including one or two chartered buses, arrived in Lubbock, bearing one or more citizens from each town between here and Oklahoma City, en route to Carlsbad, New Mexico, where they will attend a meeting of the Carlsbad Cavern highway association which will be held there Monday.

Twenty-four of the group were from Quanah, two from Altus, one from Olustee, two from Eldorado, four from Paducah, two from Matador, two from Roaring Springs, six from Crosbyton, two from Dickens, one from Ralls. One or more have signified intentions of being present at the meeting Monday in Carlsbad, from every town between Lubbock and El Paso, with a big delegation from the Gateway City slated.

Local Men Join Group

They will be joined by a number of Lubbock citizens, including B. Sherrod, Tom A. White, J. H. Hankins, R. J. Murray, and Al Hill, at 9 o'clock this morning, for the journey to Carlsbad.

R. A. Singletary, manager of the Good Roads department of the Oklahoma City chamber of commerce, represents that city on this trip. From his city the route comes through Chickasha, Lawton, Altus, and intervening points, from Altus coming by way of Olustee and Eldorado to Quanah.

Seeks Direct Passage

"Oklahoma City's objective in this highway routing," Mr. Singletary stated here last night, "is to have a direct route connecting us with El Paso, Carlsbad, Lubbock and Quanah, to the southwest and linking up with a transcontinental chain of highways from our city to the north and east, through Tulsa to Joplin and Springfield, Missouri, and from Oklahoma east and north-

Dallas Grocer Is Killed By Negroes

Joe Piccola Dies In Resisting Three Negro Robbers; Twenty-Five Dollars Are Taken From Store

(By Associated Press)

DALLAS, Feb. 9—Joe Piccola, 29, grocer, was shot to death tonight when he resisted three negroes who attempted to hold up his store.

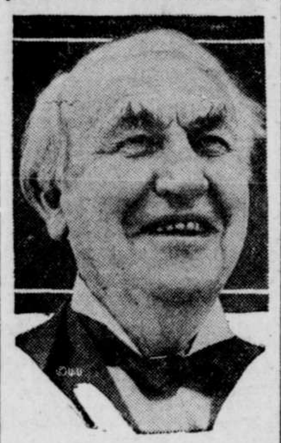

He was dead when relatives, hearing two shots, ran into the store.

About $25 in cash was taken from the register. A larger sum in Piccola's pocket was saved, the dead man having one hand clapsed tightly over the pocket when he was found. A butcher knife was near his hand. He evidently had attempted to reach it.

Police were given a good description of the three negroes. A sister of Piccola met the trio as she left the store shortly before the shooting and saw them again as they fled.

Celebrates 82nd Birthday Monday

The world and its many millions who have been benefitted by or found employment in the 50 billion dollars of industry which Thomas A. Edison gave life turns its eyes tomorrow to Fort Meyers, Florida, where the aging wizard is to celebrate his 82nd year. Those who envy his position in the spotlight may well be told it is nothing but another day of work for him in his experimenting with rubber trees, with a few hours out to play the trying role of lead in that unique act of journalism—the mass interview.

A birthday anniversary luncheon is scheduled at which President-elect Hoover and Mrs. Hoover are to be guests.

Hubbard Says Bond Plan Needs Chance

New Boston Solon Declares People Have Right To Vote On Program; Points Out Highway Needs

(By Associated Press)

AUSTIN, Feb. 9—It would amount to misuse if not usupatation of power for the legislature to refuse to submit a constitutional amendment which any considerable number of citizens desire referred, Representative R. M. Hubbard of New Boston, said today in urging passage of the resolution proposing a $175,000,000 statewide bond issue for highway construction.

Pointing out that the bond issue plan had received the endorsement of many organizations, he said if he were opposed to issuing bonds he would favor submitting the plan to the people for their action.

Are Behind Now

"We started our state highways program in 1917 with a meager amount of both state and federal funds. We started several laps behind the registration of motor vehicles and have noot held our own. Road building in Texas has not kept pace with the increase of motor vehicles and the consequent demand by the people for more and better roads. We have been lagging behind the rate of progress, which our commerce and travel requires It is now time to revise our revenue plans and to agree upon a definite program that will give us a correlated and completed system of state highways at as early date as possible without placing too great a burden upon the public" he said.

More Lives And Damage Added To Cold Wave's Toll In Mid-West; Wyoming Has 52 Below

With the temperature dropping again to a new low level for the worst cold spell of this winter, Saturday morning saw the theormometer register 4 degrees above zero, with three inches of snow covering the South Plains.

Raising temperature through the day yesterday, with sunshine melting the snow, saw slippery, ice-coated pavements change to dripping wet and not so hazardous.

The snow is looked upon as being greatly beneficial to farmers of the Plains country, its seasoning of inestimable value.

Ice Skating Here.

Ice-skating, the sport that Lubbock folks get to enjoy about once each year, was indulged in by a group of young people who braved the thin surface of the County Lake yesterday.

The lake froze over Friday night and Saturday morning numerous young people dug out their ice skates and tried their skill.

Senter To Run For Governor In 1930

AUSTIN, Feb. 9. (AP)—The Texas Press Association today approved a bill providing that all legal notices must be published in a newspaper of general circulation, and it will be introduced in the house by Clyde Warwick of Canyon and Ray Holder of Lancaster.

During the course of an address before the convention of newspapermen, E. G. Senter of Dallas announced he would become a candidate for governor in 1930 on a platform advocating court reforms.

He said the courts of civil appeals should be abolished and appeals from the trial courts carried direct to the supreme court. He said he had no personal ambition to be governor and if some one else should seek the office on the same platform he would withdraw in his favor.

City Ranked Second Last Week; Total Near $500,000

(By Associated Press)

DALLAS, Feb. 9.—Houston's great building program for 1929 resulted in $564,055 in permits being issued during the past week. Houston has led other cities of the state in weekly totals almost without a lapse since early in 1928. Lubbock ranked second for the week, followed by San Antonio and Dallas.

Following is a table of the leading cities:

	Week	Year
Houston	$564,055	$2,800,125
Lubbock	189,122	462,450
San Antonio	157,050	1,382,563
Dallas	154,335	1,034,788
Fort Worth	62,016	686,366
Beaumont	52,257	302,539
Amarillo	46,964
Galveston	41,290	269,974
Austin	35,369
Abilene	25,620	155,745
Corpus Christi	18,700	237,430
San Angelo	16,375	116,305
Corsicana	13,550	58,600

The issuance of a $3,500 permit to J. B. Crisler, 2112 Fourteenth Street, Saturday, for erection of a five room brick veneer residence, boosted Lubbock's building record for the past week to $189,122.30, most active seven-day period of this year.

The city's total building permits for this month is $200,722.30, which has run the year's grand total within easy access of the half million dollar mark, or $462,450.30. During the month there have been seven permits issued, with 73 for the year.

With the subway permit, of $182,122.30, issued last week to the Panhandle Construction company, the Santa Fe Railway company and the city of Lubbock, jointly, one of the year's major construction jobs was begun. This figure represents the amount expected to be spent in building the underpass at the intersection of Broadway and the Santa Fe tracks. It will require about five months to complete the job, it has been announced.

Smoot Sees Chance For Extra Session

Utah Senator Returns From Visit With President-Elect Hoover; Agriculture Must Be Saved

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Returning today from a visit with Herbert Hoover in Florida, Senator Smoot of Utah, said he expected an extra session of the new congress to be called early in April and to be limited to tariff revision and farm relief.

The senator, chairman of the finance committee which will handle the tariff bill in the senate, urged that tariff revision be confined to agricultural products and a scattering of other commodities which may need protection.

The entire scale of agricultural products could well stand increases in tariff rates, the Utah senator believed. He also thought that the finer grades of cotton and yarns deserved greater protection and he said the sugar duties would be increased.

Familiar Oklahoma Drama-Trial Of Governor Rehearsed Saturday

(By Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 9. Rehearsals, preparatory to presentation Monday of the familiar Oklahoma drama, the trial of a governor, shoved lawmaking to the background of the Oklahoma legislature today.

Henry S. Johnston, suspended governor, who will play the leading role, remained in seclusion with his attorneys, going over his defense before the senate court of impeachment.

Mrs. Hammonds, Leading Lady.

The leading lady, Mrs. O. O. Hammonds, erstwhile confidential secretary to Johnston, also was inaccessible to the public.

Argument over the lines to be spoken by the house board of managers in its prosecution of the governor consumed much time of the house. Following the procedure in the impeachment trial of J. C. Walton, removed from the governor's office in 1923, the board wanted instructions to inform the senate court of the vote by which the house adopted each of the eleven article of impeachment against Johnston. The board members also wished to inform the senate that a quorum of the house was present when each of the charges was voted.

Information Available.

In vain, administration supporters argued that the information was available in house records if the senators should express curiosity.

Oklahoma has had two other impeachment trials of governors in eight years. J. B. A. Robertson escaped removal in 1921 when a tie vote resulted on impeachment charges aginst him. Walton was impeached and removed by a session of the legislature he called after first refusing to convene it and calling out the national guard to enforce martial law.

Accomplice Of Richards To Also Face Trial; State Demanded Maximum Penalty; Adams Not Called

(By Associated Press)

DALLAS, Feb. 9.—Ben C. Richards, Jr., Dallas politican, was found guilty of forgery and given three years by a jury here tonight. The jury deliberated slightly over five hours.

Richards was charged with having forged an endorsement to one of two $1,000 cashier's checks put up as an election wager. When V. Ray Adams, one of the winning betters, found the money had been paid to the wrong man he killed Orville Mathews, banker who acted as tsakeholder, his trial for murder resulted in a mistrial.

Crabb to Be Tried

A. A. Crabb, confessed "tool" of Richards in the conspiracy, also will be tried for forgery. He testified against Richards in the present trial

The case went to the jury shortly after five o'clock.

Richards went to trial Monday on a charge of forging an endorsement to one of two $1,000 cashier's checks put up as stakes in an election wager, wrongful collection of which led to the killing of Orville Mathews, banker-stakeholder, by V. Ray Adams, one of the winning betters.

Adams In Courtroom

Adams, whose trial for murder resulted in a mistrial, has been in the courtroom the last two days. He was not called as a witness.

The maximum penalty, seven years, was demanded by the state.

"This man, Richards, is the most scheming, most careful man who ever committed a crime in Dallas county," charged Jimmy McNicoll,

Poultry Work Is Stressed Saturday

Farm Bureau Meeting Hears Talk Of Further Development Of Industry In South Plains Section

The greater part of the grain sorghums raised on the South Plains are sent to Petaluma, Cal., where it goes into the making of eggs, at the world's greatest poultry district there, and is reshipped back across the continent in the form of eggs, to the market in New York City. In the nation's metropolis Petaluma eggs, part of which can be traced to South Plains grain sorghums, bring a premium, because they are graded and known as to their quality standard, size and that they are sterile.

This was part of the astounding facts told to members of the Lubbock County Farm Bureau association, in their regular meeting at the courthouse here Saturday afternoon, by Mrs. M. S. Hudson, of Hale Center.

Pistol Shots That Killed Obregon Had Last Echo In Toral Execution

BY CLARENCE DUBOSE
(Associated Press Correspondent)

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 9. (AP) The pistol shots that killed Gen. Alvaro Obregon last July had their last echo today with the execution by a firing squad of Jose De Leon Toral, the president-elect's assassin.

The young slayer, who throughout had maintained that he felt his act for the good of Mexico, went to his death calmly and bravely, facing the firing squad quietly and dropping swiftly before a hail of shot.

Smiled At Instructions.

The execution had been set for noon, but it was put over until 12:30 p. m. A few minutes before that hour, Toral was taken to a patio and instructed how to act before the firing squad. He listened calmly and even smiled a little as the men told him how to die. Then he was led to a stone wall in a courtyard of the federal penitentiary and was placed before a portion scarred by the bullets of many other executions.

At 12:35 p. m., the shots rang out and Toral slumped down. His body twitched and Capt. Rodriguez Rabiela, in charge of the squad, fired the coup de grace using a pistol once presented to him by General Obregon, Toral's victim.

Shouts "Viv . . . "

Just as the rifles of the firing squad cracked, Toral tried to shout.

"Viv . . . "

That was as far as he got.

He had hoped to cry "Viva Cristo Rey," ("Long live Christ the King"), but his words were cut short by death.

A Catholic priest, dressed in civilian clothes as all priests have been in Mexico for some years except when in churches,

Airport Of Future Will Be Built Like Beehive To Accommodate All Traffic Of Big Metropolis; Has Mooring Mast For Dirigible

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Within a few years the air traveler may look down and regard a beehive on the earth with the same joyful anticipation that an ocean traveler sights land.

For the beehive one of the oldest forms, of architecture, inspired the newest plan for the nation's newest need, the airport and one has been designed by Frances Keally and E. P. Goodrich, New York architect and city planner. A model of the project is a feature of the Aviation Show at Grand Central Palace.

China to Have One

Goodrich now is on his way to China, having been commissioned by the Chinese government as consulting engineer in the development of a modern seaport at Canton and the laying out of a modern capital city at Nanking. His plans call for aviation development and he will use the Beehive Airport as a basis for this phase.

This new aviation terminal strives to become an architectural asset rather than a liability. And it looks ahead to the time when air travel will be much more common than today.

"It is designed so that one-way traffic becomes an automatic feature," explained Keally. "Twenty-two airplanes and a dirigible can land while 22 airplanes can take off—all at the same moment.

"The average train leaving Grand Central station carries between 600 and 700 passengers, thus the airport could handle about the same amount of traffic.

"The design is made so as to focus and clear from one point all the high speed traffic of the city. Thus, vehicular tunnels and subways can come right into the airport, and discharge their passengers, who then hop off in planes."

"All planes will start from and arrive at four terminals which meet in a huge rotunda. The east-west or north-south terminals will be used so the planes can take advantage of the wind."

The design calls for an airport 6,000 feet in diameter, the landing surface of which is covered with cinders, with enough space left for a runway 350 feet wide for each plane, the length of the runway being 2500 feet.

"The landing surface has a two and one-half per cent grade so that airplanes arriving will be helped by gravity to stop, and airplanes taking off will be helped by a down-hill run," Keally continued.

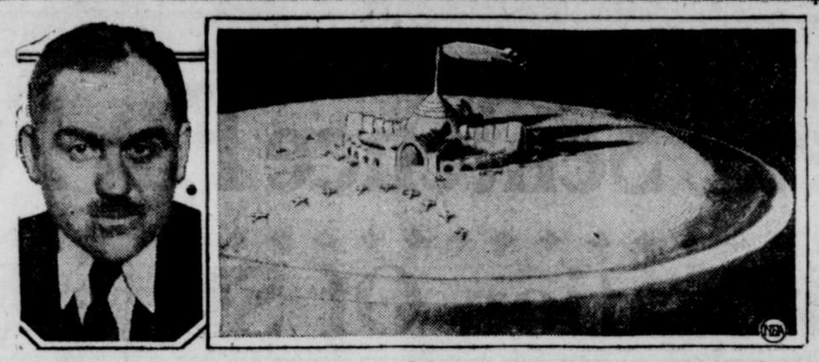

"A huge dome will cover the rotunda, with storage space for several thousand airplanes supplied by two-story hangars. Above the dome will be a mooring mast for a dirigible, and the top of the mast will be exactly 1000 feet from the ground, the highest structure in the world.

"The outer crust of the dome—thing of it as the inner and outer layers of a thermos bottle—will be fashioned into a hotel containing several hundred rooms. Each fifth story of this hotel will have a terrace so that guests can watch incoming and outgoing planes.

A City In Itself

"Passengers who arrive by dirigible will descend to hotel or to rotunda by elevators. In the rotunda will be ticket offices and an outgoing and incoming waiting room, with provision for baggage, mail, customs, public health, immigration, and a room in which traffic men of the airport will get their instructions from men in the tower. In other words, the airport will be a city in itself."

Keally and Goodrich are advisors to the Lehigh Airports Competition. Under Harvey Wiley Corbett, chairman of the jury of awards, and other famed architects and aeronautical experts, they are seeking to concentrate civic and technical attention upon the development of adequate airport facilities.

Frances Keally, left, New York City planner, is, is co-designer of this beehive airport, which is designed to accommodate all the air traffic of a large metropolis. This model, shown at the New York Aviation Show, was carved from white soap by Margaret J. Postgate, sculptor. Note the inverted-saucer contour of the field, in the center of which is a great terminal building, with hangars for thousands of planes and a modern hotel. Over this towers a dirigible mooring mast 1000 feet above the ground.

Didn't Check Out

City Gets Cheated On Check Here

The duty of being Corporation Judge is not all fun, so Judge J. T. Inmon is beginning to believe. Sometimes, in accommodating visitors to Lubbock who have run amuck of the law and imbibed too freely, all does not pan out as anticipated.

This particular instance recorded is not, necessarily, the fault of the visitor who ran amuck. Nor does the Judge so opine.

But, to accommodate the man, from Levelland, after he had sobered up, Judge Inmon accepted his check for payment of fine assessed, to wit: $15.

No. The check was not a bad one. It was all right. When the money it represented was returned, however, the City of Lubbock had been charged 50 cents—half a dollar—exchange by a bank at Levelland for handling.

Mrs. H. A. Johnston of Slaton, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Williamson and others of this city.

Miss Audie Jacobs and father, W. S. Jacobs, of Northwest Ward, accompanied by Ovena Paschal and Roy Lee Paschal of Liberty, were shopping visitors in this city Saturday.

Tech Takes Fourth Consecutive Game From McMurry

IN THE REALM OF SPORT
WITH ALLAN CARNEY
Avalanche Sports Editor

PERCENTAGE FATTENED

Coach Victor Payne's basket loopers ran their basketball percentage well above the 500 mark last night by taking the fourth game in a row from the McMurry college cagers of Abilene. Coach Medley's basketeers gave impressive exhibitions on each occasion but found the Tech sharpshooters hitting the basket and were outscored. Meeting Medley's teams on the gridiron or on the hardwood court is always a pleasure insomuch that a clean contest is always assured and plenty of action guaranteed. A Medley-coached team is a fighting team and one that is always welcomed at Tech.

The Matador cagers have but one day's practice before the Sul Ross basketeers of Alpine come to town for a two day affair. The pupils of Bernice Graves have been stepping at a fast clip this season and should give Tech a couple of hot contests. Following the Sul Ross series, the locals will take a much needed rest before going to Canyon for a return engagement with the Buffaloes. The final game with Sul Ross will finish the present home stay of 8 games in 13 days. A single game with Simmons University here February 25 will close the season.

A current need and ever-growing demand for an athletic club for Lubbock has been growing steadily during the past few weeks. With no place to stage boxing and wrestling matches, this city needs an organization of this nature probably more than any other one thing. A movement is under way to organize such a club in Lubbock and if the plans of Dee Puckett and others are carried out, local boxing enthusiasts are to be given a lively program in the near future.

Mr. Puckett returned from Plainview Saturday where Friday night he was a ringside spectator at the American Legion program staged there in which Claude Hutchinson, former Tech student and well-known local welterweight was a principal in the main event "Battling Hutch", as he is known, disposed of Frankie Terrell, the "Pampa Flash" in the second round of their scheduled ten round bout. Displaying worlds of ring generalship and the form of a polished fighter, the former Tech puglist gave one of the most impressive performances of his career. Hutchinson has continued to rise in popularity among fight fans of this section and will likely appear here if present plans mature, according to Mr. Puckett.

Hutchinson disposed of all comers during the two years he was a student here. In his last appearance here, he battled Kid Moco of Waco to a draw. Unlike the majority of professional fighters, "Hutch" is a gentleman in every sense of the word, giving the appearance of a polished scholar. Since graduating from Tech last year, he has appeared in numerous bouts with continued success.

The local promoter plans to bring Hutchinson here at an early date to participate in the main bout of an American Legion fight program. A number of local business men have signified their willingness to help in putting the affair over and from present indications the fight fans of Lubbock will be furnished with a lively exhibition within the next few weeks.

Texas Longhorns accomplished last night what sport authorities had been saying was impossible for the past month when they stopped the rampaging Arkansas Razorbacks in the final game with the conference leaders at Austin. Playing at home and fighting for second place in the loop, the Steers displayed a defense that the scoring aces of the conference were unable to penertate. It was the first defeat suffered by the Ozark basketeers in 21 conference games. Whether the news that they are to lose their coach affected their playing or not, the Porkers were outsmarted by the fighting Orange crew and lost their perfect percentage.

Some Athletes Wear Clothes For Comfort While Most Of Them Are Prone To Imitate Their Leaders

Characteristics Of Dress Peculiar To Professions Taken Up By Beginners As Well Known Leaders Are Imitated; Ruth And Dempsey Set Pace

BY HENRY L. FARRELL

NEA Service Sports Writer

Little Cecil McHugh, an apprentice jockey and a brother of "Gold Spurs" McHugh, was asked to pose for his first picture recently at the Tijuana race track.

"Wait till I get my cap fixed," he asked when the photographer was all set to shoot. He pulled the cap around until it was sitting on his head at the correct angle and then he turned the peak up over his eyes.

"What are you doing all that for?" the photographer asked.

"I want it the way the other boys wear theirs," he replied.

You probably have observed that in nearly every picture taken when the boy is not in silks, a jockey has his cap turned around or way up in front. You may have noticed characteristics of dress, peculiar to their profession in other lines of sport?

Why Do They Do It?

You may have wondered why practically all of the fighters wear patent leather dancing shoes as a part of civilian attire, why billiard players wear dinner coats, why so many of the ball players wear caps on the street, why tennis players wear white pants always, why fighters wear colored sashes instead of belts on their trunks, why polo players wear those funny looking helmits, why the tennis girls wear those eye shades, etc.

Some of them can give you a particular reason and those who don't know how they get that way have to admit that they are following the style of the other fellow.

It is almost obvious why a jockey has his cap turned up in front. If the peak were down the cap would blow off easier and the jockey also could see well when he was crouched way down on the neck of his mounty. But before a stable boy ever gets astride a mount he turns his cap up—because the big jockeys wear them that way.

Dempsey started the fad of patent leather dancing shoes and he was the first heavyweight champion who went for the sheik style in dressing. Dempsey says he liked the shoes because they were soft and easy on his feet and that a fighter can't have corns or bunions on his dogs. But Dempsey will admit that he bought his first pair because they looked swell. The other fighters wear them because they followed Dempsey's style.

Practically all of the ball players wear caps off the field. They say they wear a cap so much in their business that a hat does not feel natural. The wise crackers say that they wear caps so they can stuff them in their pockets and walk by the hat check girl in the hotels. But there may be another reason.

The Babe Is To Blame.

One of the major league clubs signed a sand-lot pitcher last season and had him spend two weeks with the club in mid-season. When he was preparing to leave his cross-roads town he bought two new caps.

"Why don't you wear a straw hat instead of a cap these hot days?" he was asked.

"Babe and all the big players wear caps," he said.

The tennis players wear white pants because they are prescribed court apparel. They can't give you any other reason for assuming the heavy laundry bills.

Last season John Hennessey appeared on the sacred courts at Wimbledon in a pair of white pants with black stripes. And the daring innovation caused so much unfavorable comment from the English writers that Hennessey had to borrow a pair of pure whites from George Lott to continue through the tournament.

Style Before Comfort.

Willie Hoppe admits that a tuxedo and a stiff white shirt are not comfortable for a billiard player. He says the dress was imposed upon the players when a movement was started to tone down the bad sound of a "pool room." Hoppe wore the dinner suits from his earliest days and the other players still wear them — because Hoppe made it a standard.

The funny looking hats the polo players wear are for protection. They are cork lined with enough space inside to remove any shock from contact with the ball.

Helen Wills says her eye shade was designed to protect her eyes but one of the tennis women at Forest Hills remarked cattily when the first saw the eye shade that—"She thinks she looks cute in it."

ATHLETES COPY THE STYLE OF OTHERS The fighters wear shiny black shoes because Dempsey started the fad. The young ball players go for caps because the Babe always wears one. Kid jockeys turn their caps up in front because the big riders do it. Tennis players wear white pants because tradition demands it. Tommy Hitchcock, with the funny helmet the polo players wear, is shown in picture No. 1. John Hennessey and his white pants are shown in No. 2. Helen Wills and the eye shade she designed are in No. 3. Cecil McHugh, a kid jockey at Tijuana, is shown in No. 4. Dempsey, with his fancy shoes, is shown in No. 5 and the Babe and his cap are pictured in No. 6.

Intramural Tilt Set For Tuesday

Championship Of Three Major Schools Of Tech To Be Decided Feb. 12; Liberal Arts Leading

Tech intramural championship will likely be settled Tuesday afternoon on the college gridiron at which time the Engineers are scheduled to meet the Aggies in the final game of the series between the three major schools of the college. Inclement weather has caused a re-arrangement of the games but the deciding contest will probably be played on this date if the eather man permits.

The Liberal Arts gridsters are leading the chase at present and will be declared champions if the Farmers are able to down the Engineers. In case the Engineers win over the Aggies, the Liberal Arts and Engineers will be tied for the leadership. In this event the two teams will likely meet in an extra playoff game.

By holding the Engineers to a scoreless tie and downing the Aggies 6 to 0, the Liberal Arts aggregation holds the upper hand in the grid series between the schools. Sidney Knowles, varsity tackle, has developed a formidable gridiron combination from the Arts molekins, looming as the favorite over the other two teams.

Chubby Dewitt, veteran guard on the Matador eleven, is directing the Engineers while Vaughn Corley, Matador center and 1929 captain-elect, is the Aggie mentor.

High School Track Candidates Begin Regular Training

Coach E. J. Lowery Facing Season With Scant Array Of Seasoned Material; Dash Men Scarce

With his distance men already rounding into shape, track coach E. J. (Pinkey) Lowrey will call all Lubbock high school track and field aspirants together within the next few days to begin training for what looks like a hard season for the Westerner cinder team.

Regular preliminary training for the squad was put off last week because of inclement weather, and serious work will likely begin tomorrow if the weather man permits. Coach Lowrey expects to mold his 1929 machine from a host of raw recruits.

With a scant array of material around which to build a track team, Lowrey can only hope that flashy cinder path stars and husky field performers will pop up out of nowhere to bolster up what now appears to be a rather slim prospect.

Only two letter men from the 1928 squad will be back to lead this year's team. These are: John Crawford, miler, and Charley Wilson, high hurdler.

Six Squad Men Back

Six squad members from last year will be back working for letters this season. From this group as well as from new material on hand, Lowrey hopes to develop a track team.

Of the six squad members, three pole vaulters are back for service—Bob Pressley, John Green and Kittrell. H. C. Gerrard, distance man, is also expected to develop into a point winner for the Westerner team. Greer Frizzell, weights; Lyle Hargraves, low hurdles; and Edd Pangburn, middle distance, are the other squad members likely to come through this season.

Earnest Schroeter, formerly of Wolffarth, is a likely candidate in the middle distance class.

Dash men are as scarce as hens' teeth on the high school team this season. Yancy Price, who distinguished himself in the line with the Westerner football eleven last fall, is the most promising candidate on hand for the sprints.

COWBOYS BEAT JACKETS

BROWNWOOD, Feb. 9. (AP)—Simmons university wrested a hard-fought game from Howard Payne college, 28-17, here tonight. The Cowboys' famed delayed offense was effective.

AGGIE FROSH WIN

COLLEGE STATION, Feb. 9. (AP) The Texas Aggie Freshmen defeated Bryan High school, 22 to 20, at basketball here today.

Ponies Stall Way To Conference Win

HOUSTON, Feb. 9. (AP)—Employing the same tactics that beat the Texas Aggies and gained a one-point victory over the Texas University Longhorns, the S. M. U. Mustangs tonight "stalled" their way to a 26 to 20 triumph over Rice Institute.

With two minutes of the first half to be played, the Ponies led 15 to 12. Hammon held the ball in his arms until the half ended.

The Mustangs in the second half took up the stalling tactics where they left off and during the first 10 minutes of the half did not take a shot at the basket.

For seven minutes of the second half, Rice men played into the visitors' hands by standing with their hands on their hips, while the spectators yawned.

Frogs Drub Bears In Conference Go

WACO, Feb. 9. (AP)—Outclassing the Bears at every turn the T. C. U. Horned Frogs won the conference basketball game from Baylor here tonight 38 to 21. The first half found the two teams fairly matched but it closed with the Frogs leading 17 to 12. More than 15 minutes of the second half had been played before Baylor scored another field goal.

Flynn was the star of the game, the Frog sophomore shooting several phenomenal baskets.

ABILENE, Feb. 9. (AP)—Abilene Christian College won a hard fought basketball game from Oklahoma Christian College, 26 to 24, here tonight.

Formidable Array Of Golfers Will Enter At Houston

Invitation Tournament Set To Open Feb. 15; Top Notch Performers Expected To Enter

HOUSTON, Feb. 9. (AP) — With the entry of John Dawson and Walter Crowe of Chicago, Lewis Levinson, former Texas champion, Bob Menefee and Rueben Albaugh, all of San Antonio, Ossie Carlton, former Texas champion, Jack Speer recent state titleholder, George Rotan, former member of the Walker Cup team and scores of other top notch golfers, one of the greatest fields in the history of the Houston County Country club invitation tournament will tee off here February 15, in the qualifying round.

Crowe, a side-kick of Johnny Dawson, who has been playing great golf in the winter tournaments, will come to Houston with Dawson. Crowe has won the Illinois State championship, Chicago City title and the Cook county championship three times.

Although no definite entry list has been received from Dallas, Ft. Worth and other North Texas towns, it is expected that all of the leading golfers from that section of the state will be here.

Only 16 will qualify this year. Thirty-six holes will be played in the preliminary test and those turning in the 16 low scores will start match-play for the championship. All matches will be over a 36 hole route. The entry list will close Feruary 18.

WINS HORSESHOE TITLE

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 9. (AP)—Blair Nunamaker of Cleveland, Ohio, won the national horseshoe pitching championship here today by finishing the round robin tournament with a total of 14 victories and one defeat. Bert Duryee, Kansas State champion, finished second.

HOOKS AND SLIDES

LOOKS AGAINST HIM

Miller Huggins, according to the story he told New York baseball writers, was picked up recently in Daytona, Fla., by an officer of the law and was about to be booked for loitering.

Huggins, with two friends, had gone to Daytona from St. Petersburg for a social evening. His friends had to leave early the next morning and Hug checked out with them. He had to wait for a bus and was sitting in the lobby of the hotel when the detective asked him to explain himself.

The sleuth wasn't satisfied and said he would take him in for loitering and he rode him down to the station. When Hug told the superior officers who he was they were all apologies and they tried to make him promise that he wouldn't put a piece in the paper about it.

COSTS TO SEE HELEN

Dr. Sumner Hardy, president of the California Tennis Association, filed the charges last summer which caused Bill Tilden to be suspended by the national association.

The good doctor has been an ardent crusader against Tilden and some of the other big stars who were charged at various times with activities approaching professionalism.

At the recent meeting of the Western Tennis Association, the doctor became a defendant, however, when it was charged that he had held up a club in Detroit for one-half of the gate receipts before he would produce Helen Wills for an exhibition match.

The club protested that the $1750, representing half of the receipts, was all out of proportion with the expenses encountered by the young champion.

MARK HAS FAULTS

Mark Koenig, the temperamental shortstop of the champion New York Yankees, is not going to be moved over to third base, according to the present plans of Miller Huggins, manager of the club.

"Koenig isn't temperamentally fitted for third base and he isn't fast enough," Huggins said. "I intend to keep him at short and give that young Lary a trial at third. Robertson is also available and I haven't heard anyone say that he wouldn't do as a third baseman."

JAWN WOULDN'T TRAIN

Johnny Risko, who was stopped recently by Herr Schmelling, the German, is not going to retire. He has enough money to get out of the business, but he does not think he is through.

"After the pastings he got in his last three fights he may settle down and begin to realize that he has to do a little training" Danny Dunn, his manager said. "He always has thought that no one could hurt him and he still says that Godfrey and Tunney hit him harder and hurt him more than the Dutchman did. But they didn't stop him. I think that Schmelling is a great fighter and I would like to get him again for John. It might come out different the second time if John would do a little training."

Two Conferences Facing A Breech

Rumors Of Dissention Concerning Two Major College Conferences May Develop Into Action

By NEA Service.

CHICAGO, Feb. 9. — There are rumors of dissention and talk of a possible split in membership among two of the major college groups.

It is no secret that some of the members of the Southern Conference, especially those along the South Atlantic seaboard, are dissatisfied, and rumbles are heard from the Pacific coast every now and then which tell of some disagreement with things as they are in that group.

The four big schools of the Pacific Coast—Stanford, Washington, Southern California and California—last fall decided to play each other in football every year for the next five years.

This pact has handicapped the six other and smaller colleges in arranging a schedule that would assure a financial profit. The big schools, it is said, ignore some of the smaller and this doesn't sit well.

The talk goes that Oregon State, Washington State, Idaho and Montana may form their own conference, with invitations to be extended other schools in their section to join.

Down in Dixie, it isn't exactly clear what the rumpus is about, but the Carolina and Virginia schools are said to be eager for a split in the present large body of 22 schools.

There are nine members of the Southern Conference in that section and the idea prevails among some that there ought to be a separate conference.

Nothing much has been done about it, as most of the dissension has been in whispers, but there may come some action soon.

If this group of colleges along the South Atlantic seaboard does withdraw from the present group it would leave the Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, Kentucky and Tennessee colleges in the other group.

Tilden Is Again At Top Of Tennis Stars In America

'Tennis Bad Boy' Given The Honor For Ninth Consecutive Time Following His Reinstatement

(By Associated Press)

BOSTON, Feb. 9.—William T. Tilden, 2nd, "tennis' bad boy" was named as America's highest ranking male player for the ninth consecutive time here today at the annual meeting of the United States Lawn Tennis association, which began and ended harmoniously.

Helen Wills of Berkeley, Calif., again was placed at the head of the womens' ranking list.

Though Tilden, restored to amateur standing last night after being suspended for violating the association's player-writer rule, did not compete in the 1928 national championship, more than a hundred delegates from all sections of the country agreed that he deserved the honor.

Hunter Ranks Second

Francis T. Hunter, of New Rochelle, N. Y., was ranked second and George M. Lott, jr., of Chicago, third. Both were given those positions in the ranking list last year. John F. Hennessey of Indianapolis, was ranked number four, in place of Manuel Alonso of Philadelphia, not in competition the past season. Hennessey was given fifth place on the 1927 list.

Several other members of the sport's "younger set" were honored by being included in the first ten on the list. Wilmer Allison of Fort Worth, Texas, named fifth, coming up from his last year's 11th position. John Van Ryn, of Orange, N. J., was again sixth and Frederic Mercur of Harrisburg, Pa., another youngster, was seventh instead of fifteenth as he was a year ago.

John Doeg, Santa Monica, California, again was named eighth and the other two in the first ten, Julius Seligson and Frank X. Shield, both of New York, were each rated ten places above their last year's ranking.

Helen Jacobs, another product of Berkeley tennis was ranked just behind Miss Wills in the number 2 place on the women's list, changing rankings with Mrs. Molla B. Mallory of New York, who was dropped back to number four. Edith Cross of San Francisco, who was not on the 1927 list of 20 names, was named as the nation's third best woman player.

The other women in the first ten were: No. 5, Mrs. T. C. Bundy, of San Francisco; No. 6, Marjorie Morrill of Dedham, Mass.; No. 5, Marjorie K. Gladman, of Los Angeles, No. 8, Mrs. L. A. Harper of San Francisco; No. 9, Mrs. A. H. Chapin, jr., of Springfield, Mo., who was No. 3, last year and No. 10, Mrs. J. D. Corbiere, of Southboro, Mass., who was ranked seventh in 1927.

Lott and Hennessey at Top

John Hennessey and George M. Lott, jr., were given the number 1 rank on the men's national doubles list, in place of William T. Tilden, 2nd, and Francis T. Hunter, who were rated third in the 1928 ranking. Lott and John Boeg were given the number 2 position and William Allison and John Van Ryn, number 4. The other pairs in the first ten were: Number 5, Berkeley Bell and his fellow Texan, Wilmer Allison; number 6, Malcolm Hill and Henry L. Johnston, jr., No. 7, Alan Herrington and Ralph McElvenney; No. 8, Frederic Mercur and Frank X. Shields; number 9, Wallace F. Johnston and Frederic Mercur; No. 10, Robert Seller and Neil Brown.

All 1928 officers, except Secretary Harry S. Knox of Chicago, who refused to accept another term, were re-elected.

Managers Come And Go, But Mack, McGraw, Robinson And Huggins Continue At Pennant Business

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Baseball's famous managerial quartet of McGraw, Robinson, Mack and Huggins are getting ready for another preseason training jaunt. These four have been making the yearly trips south for quite some time, in fact, are the only managers in the majors who can boast of ten or more seasons in their present positions.

The pair of "Macs" claim the longest regimes, McGraw has been piloting the Giants since the middle of the 1902 campaign, while Mack has bossed the Athletics since 1901. Robinson took charge of the Dodgers in 1914 and Huggins made his debut with the Yankees in 1918.

McGraw, Mach and Huggins have turned in enviable records down through the years.

The leader of the Giants has brought ten pennants and three world championships to his team and is the only leader who has copped four flags in a row. His club has failed only twice to finish out of the first division. Seldom has he finished lower than third.

Mack hasn't won a pennant since he broke up his great team back in 1914, but previous to that he had won six flags and three world titles.

Huggins, since assuming charge of the Yankees, has won six pennants and three world titles. His Yankees have grabbed every American League flag in the past eight years but those in 1924 and 1925 which Washington won.

Robinson has two pennant winners to his credit, one in 1916 and the other in 1920. He never, however, has won a world series.

Oddly enough, Robinson and McGraw were in the younger league before joining the older organization, and Mack and Huggins made their start in the National League before becoming affiliated with American League clubs.

All four served time as players—Robinson and McGraw as a catcher and third baseman, respectively, on the old Baltimore Orioles; Huggins as a second baseman for Cincinnati and the St. Louis Cards, and Mack as a catcher for Washington, in the old National League and later with Pittsburgh.

These four men form the Big Four of the managerial group. They have been carrying on over an unusually lengthy span of years in a period when pilots change posts year in and year out. And from present indications, no outward sign of an early or unexpected letup is seen.

Matador Quintet Drubs Medleymen 41-25 In Final

Crimson Basketeers Show Brilliant Brand of Cage Perforance To Grab Fast Contest

The Matador basketeers were impressive in a 41 to 25 drubbing handed the McMurry Indians last night at the college gymnasium. Displaying a brand of basketball that the fighting Redskins were unable to fathom, the Tech sharpshooters passed and dribbled through the McMurry defense consistently to annex the fourth consecutive game of the season from the Abilene cagers.

Practically every member of the squad Coach Payne sent into the tussle took a hand in piling up the score on the visitors. The Tech scoring machiner yas well as defensive performance gave the locals the upper hand throughout the hard fought contest.

Playing neck and neck through most of the opening frame, the two teams were alternating at taking the lead, but before the game was half gone, the locals had pulled away with a comfortable lead. Reeves, substituting for Hunter, led the first half assault with three baskets from the field.

Stage Scoring Spree

Tadlock, Hunter, Walker and Hodges opened fire at the beginning of the last stanza with a barage of field goals that sent the count soaring on the Tech side of the scoreboard. A shift in the McMurry lineup threw a blanket over the scoring spree, and for several minutes, the Indians played rings around the Matador cagers, Mitchell Turner and Ledbetter were in the thick of the combat, passing, dribbling and shooting.

Mitchell, of McMurry, who was shifted to guard in last night's game continued to lead the Indians scoring attack, accounting for 11 points to carry off high points each while Walker was close behind with 8.

The box score:

Williams Winner Of 60-Yard Dash

Canadian Flash Gets Off To Flying Start In Millrose Track Carnival By Beating Out Jimmy Daley

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, Feb. 9. (AP)—Percy Williams, the Canadian flash and Olympic champion, got off to a victorious start tonight in the Millrose Track Carnival by capturing the first 60 yard dash of the International sprint series. He beat Jimmy Daley of Holy Cross, indoor intercollegiate champion, by a foot in a heat which found Ed Hamm of Georgia Tech fourth and last after a bad start.

Williams was beaten off the marks a foot by Daley but closed with a great burst to nip his American rival by thin margin in 6 2-5 seconds, one-fifth of a second short of the world's indoor record. Daley led until the last ten yards.

The victory qualified the first two men for the final sprint test at fifty yards.

Karl Wildermuth of Georgetown, National indoor champion, captured the second 60 yard heat, also in 6 2-5 seconds, with Jimmy Quinn of the Newark, A. C., in the second qualifying position. Canada's other contender, John Fitizpatrick, was last, trailing Jimmy Pappas of the Newark, A. C.

Dawson Teams Ace Tourney Favorites

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal

LAMESA, Feb. 9.—Dawson county teams entered in the second annual South Plains and Eastern New Mexico tournament were ruling favorites at the close of the first round here Saturday afternoon. Klindike and McCarthy were expected to go into the finals.

Winners in the first round were: Seminole, Klondike, Wilson, McCarthy, Sunset, Lou and Plainview. Consolation winners were Meadow and Key.

TO PROPOSE CONTEST

CHICAGO, Feb. 8. (AP)—A post season football game between the Western Conference champion and either the Big Six title holder or a leading Eastern eleven, will be proposed to Big Ten officials by the athletic committee of the Illinois American Legion.

Texans On List Of Rookies Set For Big Major Season

Art Shires And Carl Hubbell Are Considered As Sure Regulars By Major League Baseball Owners

Five Rookies Making Late Start In 1928 Almost Certain To Be Regulars In Majors This Year

By BOB MATHERNE
NEA Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Football coaches tell you that a few weeks of spring practice give them ample information about the newcomers to the squad and enable them to start practice in September with an accurate index of the strength the team will show in the fall games.

They look at a lot of duds in these few weeks and often overlook some fellow who comes through unexpectedly in September, but they don't miss often. Most of them usually know, after a few weeks' workout in the spring, the men they will start in the season's opener.

The baseball managers also have a way of learning the capabilities of their rookies, other than what the record books and the scouts tell, before they assemble at spring training camps. That is by clustering their home ground late each season with newcomers for a few weeks of observation and trial.

Like the football coach, a major league baseball manager often calls the turn wrong on the youngsters He may see flashes of greatness on the part of some that arouse high hopes for next season only to have these same rookies fizzle out on greater trial.

Five Rookies to Watch

The books are filled with instances of fellows who played sensationally for a few weeks and then failed, but they also include many cases of fellows who broke in with a bang, and then continued in capable fashion for many years.

Five youngsters about to start south for training camp were late arrivals in the majors in 1928, but showed their bosses enough ability to warrant the belief that they were up in the majors for many years to come.

They may not last the season, but each one is considered a potential regular now. They are Outfielders Stone with Detroit, Dorman with Cleveland, Klein with the Phillies, Pitcher Hubbell with the Giants and First Baseman Shires with the White Sox.

Of all the rookies who were given a glance late last summer, they seem the best.

Because of the fact that Cleveland has two costly outfielders in Averill and Porter, Dorman will have a tough time getting in regularly, but his .364 batting average in 25 games last year assures him everypossible chance to make the grade. He came up from a small league in Texas, setting his bosses back only $4,000. Neither Porter nor Averill, who each cost around ten times as much, will get him out of the way easily.

Bucky Harris expects Jack Stone to continue at the same galt he showed in 26 games for the Tigers last summer. Stone batted .364 in 26 games and drove in 21 runs. If he continues that record for a season, he will be right up among the leaders. Stone looks every inch a future star.

Shires Started Nicely

Art Shires also came up from Texas and played in 33 games for the White Sox last summer. He displayed enough ability to give the Sox owners reason to believe he will take care of first base satisfactorily this season. He batted .341 in those four weeks of play.

Chuck Klein had more of a test than the others and never flinched a bit. He arrived from an infant and low minor league and immediately made a hit. He played in 64 games, compiled the neat batting average of .360 and was responsible for 33 runs. He is with the Phillies and is considered one of their best youngsters.

Carl Hubbell, the big southpaw McGraw acquired from Texas and used in many games last summer, also showed plenty stuff. He won 16 games and lost 10, and never yelped at the opposition. He had had previous trials with Detroit, but escaped, somehow. McGraw looks for him to be a regular this season, and a consistent winner.

If these five youngsters prove flashes of only a few weeks, there will be five very disappointed managers.

Smith Leading In Pensacola Match With Card Of 136

Youthful Missouri Golfer Leads Brilliant Field At End Of First 36 Holes; Mehlhorn Second

PENSACOLA, Fla., Feb. 9. (AP)—Horton Smith, youthful Joplin, Mo., professional, led the field at the end of the first 36 holes in the $3,500 Greater Pensacola open golf tournament today wtih a card of 136. Smith scored two 68's, picked pu eight birdies and one eagle.

Close behind came Wild Bill Mehlhorn, New York, with 138. Mehlhorn, going strong this season by winning the South Central at Hot Springs, and major tournaments at San Antonio and El Paso, led the field at the end of the fight 18 holes with a 66, five under par, but got into difficulties on the afternoon round on the wet course and took a 72, one over par.

Tied for third place at 140 Ed Dudley of Los Angeles and Billie Burke of New York. Henry Cotton, London, pro, and Tom Rakiels,

Monroe Winner Of Class B Title In County Tourney

Canyon Cagers Defeated By Rangy Monroe Crew In Final Contest; To Enter Class A Meet

Coach Floyd Blankenship's Monroe High school basketball quintet survived the gruelling two day class B tournament of Lubbock county held here Friday and Saturday and was awarded the silver loving cup which goes with the championship of this class when the rangy cagers from the north triumphed over the Canyon five 21 to 6 in the final contest.

With the field narrowed to four undefeated teams after the Friday games, the ten teams entered in the B meet, resumed play early Saturday morning, completing a 21 game schedule late Saturday afternoon. Monroe, Canyon, Shallowater and Acuff survived the first day's play, but the latter two were eliminated before the day was over.

Monroe Cagers Rangy

In the championship game, the husky Monroe Basketeers were met by a much smaller, but scrappy Canyon aggregation. Taking the lead early, Monroe held a slight edge throughout the tussle, but were forced to step fast to score on the aggressive cagers of Canyon.

Leading 6 to 3 at the end of the first quarter, the Monroe sharpshooters began to open fire in the second quarter, and held an eight point margin at the half. Canyon continued to hold down the taller Monroe basket loopers in the third stanza, but in the final slipped back to allow the opposition to pile up a comfortable lead.

Philips of Monroe carried off scoring honors with 9 points while the Canyon high scorer was Polk with 4.

Other games played Saturday follow:

Canyon 26, County Line 8.
Wolfforth 26, Woodrow 5.
Hardy 21, Carlisle 10.
Shallowater 11, Canyon 32.
Monroe 49, Bledsoe 13.
Bledsoe 25, Hardy 9.

Carlisle and Woodrow were forced to forfeit to Acuff and County Line respectively because of the time limit to appear.

By winning the Class B. title of the County, Monroe now is to enter the finals with the Class A teams next Friday and Saturday. The Class B girls tournament of the county will be held here Thursday, according to R. L. Hooten, county athletic director.

Texas Brilliant Defense Puts End To Porkers' Wins

Whirlwind Offense Of Arkansas Razorbacks Is Reduced To Light Zephyr as Longhorns Cop, 36-25

AUSTIN, Feb. 9. (AP)—Arkansas' whirlwind offense, which had bowled over the Porkers' last 21 conference basketball opponents, was reduced to the proportions of a light zephyr tonight as Texas University fought to a 36 to 25 victory over the Razorbacks.

The Texas defense functioned so nearly perfectly that the famous Schoonover, Pickel and company amassed a total of only seven field goals, just one more than "Big Un" Rose, Texas Longhorn guard.

Cheatham, forward, and Fomby, center, who had gained most of their previous experience as substitutes, played like veterans. Cheatham was like a watchdog on Schoonover's trail and the conference's leading scorer did not loop a single field goal.

Fouls Numerous

The Texans made 19 personal fouls in holding down the Razorback score. Rose, Wray, and Fomby being taken out because of an excessive number.

Pickel, who had played a bang-up game for Arkansas, went out by the foul route as did Holt.

The Longhorns stepped into a lead which never was to be relinquished less than ten minutes after the game started and the score at half time was 24 to 13.

About five minutes after the opening of the second period, the Longhorns began showing the home folks how to keep a lead by keeping possession of the ball. Led by Brock, they resorted to these tactics a number of times and the Hogs were able to take the ball away on only one or two occasions.

The victory firmly entrenched Texas in second place and was revenge for the 48 to 32 beating administered by the Porkers last night

Coming Champion Is Ambitious

CONTENDER FOR THE WORLD HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP

(Written for Central Press and The Avalanche-Journal

A GLADIATOR IS BORN

The first heavyweight champion of the world born in Germany.

Such is my ambition.

But that is all in the future. You Americans probably are more interested in my past.

Well, I was born in a tiny village, called Klein-Luckow. It is not so many miles from Berlin, which to us German boys is like New York to Americans.

I was born Sept. 28, 1905. Twenty-three years ago. And what hasn't happened in those 23 years! I am bewildered and dazed when I think of it.

My mother, Frau Amanda Schmeling, decided as soon as I was born that I would never be a sailor. That caused me a bit of unhappiness later. But she was right. My father was a sailor, a pilot of the Hamburg-American line. And when he was away she worried so.

Father Follows Sea

His folks didn't want him to be a sailor, either. For many generations the Schmelings had been painters. But my father rebelled. He was an adventurous spirit and when his three brothers turned painters he went to sea.

He died three years ago.

How happy he would be if he sould see me now fighting with my fists to make the Schmeling name the greatest in the world among fighting men!

During the great war he was a coast guardsman and did not get into any fighting. That pleased mother, but I don't think it made him so happy.

When I first went to work I had no idea of ever getting a chance to become a world champion. I was only a 14-year old boy and the great Herr Dempsey was then the champion.

My first job was in the office of Wilhelm Wilkens, who ran an advertising agency in Hamburg. Now when I fight, Hamburg is given as my home city.

Working for Herr Wilkens I learned to use the typewriter. I became good at it and have liked to write ever since. The only trouble is that sometimes I forget I am pounding a typewriter and then I hit too hard. Hard blows are good to win fights, but bad for typewriters.

There is only one trouble in writing my story. I do not know English so well. I only started learning the language nine month sago. But I am learning fast. One of the first things I learned after I came to New York was that a "grand" is $1,000.

NEXT—Frau Schmeling refused to let Max become a sailor, so he—but read it yourself in the Avalanche-Journal.

Porkers Surprised Over Coach Shift

AUSTIN, Feb. 9. (AP)—If anybody has an idea as to who will succeed Francis A. Schmidt as head football and basketball coach of the University of Arkansas it isn't the Razorback basketball players.

The team sweeping through the Southwest conference, were surprised men last night when Schmidt informed them after their victory over Texas he was going to T. C. U.. No thought of the change existed on the Fayetteville campus, according to Captain Tom Pickel.

Earl Thomson, former Dartmouth track star, is line coach at Arkansas but his name has not been linked with the vacant job.

ENTERS FINALS

New York Golfer Defeats Opponent 3 to 1

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 9. (AP)—J. B. Ryerson, Cooperstown, N. Y., went into finals of the annual Miami Biltmore invitation golf tournament today when he defeated Maurice Feeney, Indianapolis, 3 and 1.

Ryerson will meet T. W. Palmer, of Miami, tomorrow in the 36-hole final match of the tourney. Palmer today defeated Tom Higgins, Chicago, 5 and 3.

Conger Wins Over Finn In Mile Race

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, N. Y., Feb. 9. (AP)—The triumphant march of Paavo Nurmi, Finland's famous runner, was checked tonight by Ray Conger, of the Illinois A. C. who outran the famous Finn in sensational fashion in the Rodman Wanamaker mile, featuring the Millrose track and field carnival.

In the greatest upset of the indoor track season, the hitherto almost invincible Nurmi colors were lowered by the slim, curly-haired Iowan, Conger, who came from behind on the last lap literally to run away from the invader and win going away by 12 yards, to tumultous acclaim of a crowd of 15,000 spectators.

Nurmi in the first major test of his second American invasion, was only a shadow of the once unbeatable Phantom Finn, whether he was short of work or whether pop time has finally taken his toll. Nurmi had neither the speed nor stamina he showed four years ago in winning the same event in world's record time.

Prelims In Miami Battle Are Named By Jack Dempsey

Personnel Of Preliminary Bouts To Sharkey-Stribling Go Given Out By Promoter Dempesy

MIAMIA BEACH, Fla., Feb. 9.(AP) While Young Stribling fretted about the ring today perturbed about the injunction restraining him from flying or riding a motorcycle, motorboat, automobile or other vehicle faster than the speed limit, Jack Dempsey, promoter in the Stribling-Sharkey elimination bout, announced the personnel for his preliminary fights on the night of February 27.

Johnny Grosso of New York has been matched with Marty Gallager, Washington, in the eight-round heavyweight semi-final to the main event of the evening at Flamingo Park. Another pair of heavies, Spike Webb, Orlando, Fla., and Tony Tuente, Mexican fighter from California, will precede the Grosso-Gallagher affair for four rounds.

Pat McCarthy, Boston, will battle Jack Elezar Rioux, "The Canadian Woodchopper" in another four-round heavyweight engagement.

The opening bout of four rounds will offer "Baby" Stribling, brother of W. L., and Andy Callahan, Boston, a youth from the stable of Jack Sharkey. They will enter as junior welterweights.

Stribling got in another hour or so of snappy activity at his training quarters, and will occupy the ring again tomorrow, prior to a rest Monday that will precede a fishing trip to the Everglades.

Sharkey spent today on a golf course, having worked out in an exhibition bout at Tampa last night.

Dempsey, who got the anti-speed injunction against Stribling, did it to stop the fighter's flying activities.

He insisted there was no "ballyhoo' in the move.

TO ENTER FINALS

Utah Youth Pitted Against Grantham In Tourney

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 9. (AP) — Ralph Pugmire, Ogden, Utah, youngster and George Grantham, Pittsburgh National League outfielder, will be finalists in the annual invitation tournament of the Phoenix Country club.

They will go over the 36-hole route tomorrow.

Pugmire won his way to the finals by defeating Lewis B. Welch, of Phoenix, 7 and 6, in 36 holes, while Grantham took his place by defeating Milton Goggins of El Molino Country club, 4 and 3.

SETS TWO RECORDS

Hagenlacher Comes Into Own In Tourney

NEW YORK, Feb. 9. (AP) — Eric Hagenlacher, "Hard Luck Hero," of the 18.2 balkline tournament for the world's championship, came into his own today and set up two tourney records in whipping Felix Grange, 400 to 193, in the afternoon match. The German champion, twice beaten in gruelling matches, set up a high run mark of 264, and a high game average of 40.

Aggie Cagers End Season This Week

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

COLLEGE STATION, Feb. 9—Two of the liveliest cage tilts of the season are expected when Coach Chuck Bassett's Texas Aggie cagers close their home schedule this week with games with the S. M. U. Mustangs and the Texas Longhorns. The Mustangs will invade Aggieland Monday night and the Longhorns will meet the Aggies Saturday. Aside from the keen rivalry which always exists when the Aggies meet the Mustangs or their arch rivals, the Longhorns, which is in itself sufficient to virtually insure bitterly contested games, these two contests will be of particular interest because of the bearing they will have on the final standing of teams in the Southwest conference title race. The Aggies, Mustangs and Longhorns all have excellent chances to gain at least the runner up position in the percentage column at the close of the season and these games will probably go a long way toward deciding who will finally rest in that berth.

Missouri Runner Takes 600 Event

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 9 (AP)—The brilliant running of William Kosky, Missouri, in winning the 600 yard race for the Shannon Douglas cup and the smooth performance of the Iowa state two-mile relay team which won the event for the sixth consecutive year, featured early events of the 24th annual K. C. A. C. track meet here tonight.

Kosky clipped two-fifths of a second from last year's time when he won the race in 1 minute 17.2 seconds, defeating by ten yards William Youngman of Kansas, who won the trophy last season.

The time in the two mile relay—8 minutes 12.2 seconds—was 8.2 seconds slower than the record set last year by the Iowans.

Windows Of Washington Cathedral To Rival Old World Glass In Beauty; Old Methods Are Used

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—The new Washington Cathedral, being erected under Episcopalian auspices on the heights of Mount Saint Alban, here, will contain more windows than the famous Cathedral of Chartres, France, which is considered the "holy of holies" of stained glass.

The new edifice is the first fourteenth century Gothis structure to be built in modern times and will rank in size with the great churches of the world.

Stained glass of the thirteenth century is being reproduced for the adornment of the 183 great windows which will contribute to the impressiveness of the cathedral.

Use Old Methods

Handicraft standards and artistic ideals of the Middle Ages are being employed in its production at a glass-making plant which the builders of the Washington edifice have established near Philadelphia.

The glass is being made under the supervision of Lawrence B. Saint, an American stained-glass artist, who is regarded as an authority on medieval methods. The ingredients used in the manufacturing process are similar to those revealed by chemical analysis of specimens of glass taken from notable windows of medieval cathedrals.

They are compounded carefully, the French system of grams and milligrams being used for measuring. The basic formula requires 12 elements as compared to only three ordinarily used in the manufacture of present-day commercial window glass. Other materials are added depending in number upon the color desired.

Only 25 pounds of glass are made at a time. Each batch is stewed and mixed by hand prior to the melting process. After being subjected to intense heat for from six to ten hours, the molten glass is "gathered," "blocked" and "whirled" by an expert glass-blower. It is then cooled gradually in a great oven or lehr to insure a uniform co-efficient of expansion throughout.

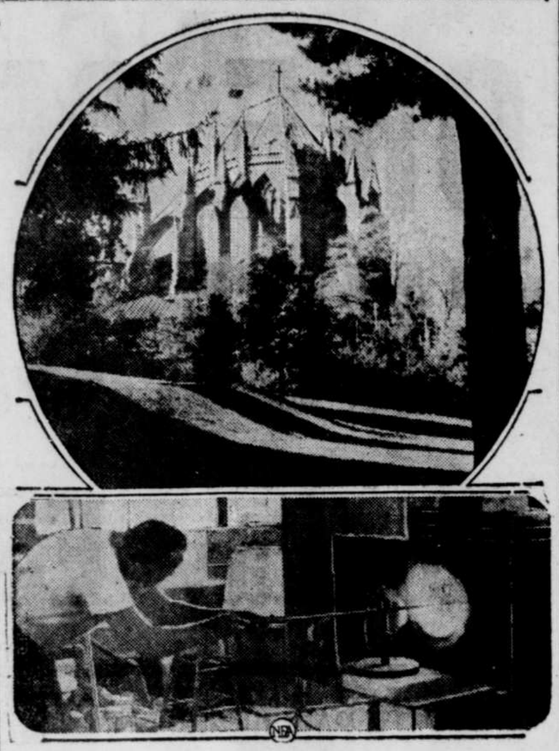

Wavy Surface

The finished product is in the form of discs or "roundels," 14 to 16 inches in diameter, each with variations in thickness, ranging from three-sixteenths to one-eighth of an inch. The variations provide a wavy surface which is characteristic of ancient glass. In a completed window they blend the rays of light in both diverging and converging lines, giving an effect of limpidity not otherwise obtainable.

Hundreds of "roundels" of varying colors are required for the creation of a single window. They are cut with steel tools according to a design copied from a full-sized design of the window after the artist has determined the specific shade desired. Leads and irons are then used by a glazier to assemble the many sections of glass which compose the completed window.

The windows are planned as a pictorial chronology of Christian history. Men and women who have contributed to the growth of Christianity through the centuries will be pictured. Many parables, miracles and other scriptural scenes also will be illustrated.

In addition to supervising the glass-making operations, Mr. Saint will prepare the various designs according to the comprehensive decorative scheme now being completed by a commission headed by the Very Rev. G. C. F. Bratenahl, D. D., dean of Washington, and the cathedral architects, assisted by leading students of Christian symbolism.

...n cathedral will look in its beautiful setting on ...Saint Alban is pictured above. An expert glass blower is shown below preparing to gather a batch of the glass for the windows on a blowpipe, an old-fashioned process by which it is planned to duplicate the beauty of stained glass in the cathedrals of Europe.

Jobs Are Hunting For Men, Head Of Industrial Concern Declares

By HORTENSE SAUNDERS
NEA Service Writer

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—There are more good jobs asking for men than there are men asking for jobs, according to Frank A. Ketcham, who started as file clerk and has just been elected president of the Graybar Electric Company, the largest employee-owned concern in the world.

"Big industrial firms are expanding so rapidly today, and executive jobs are so numerous, than no young man needs to fear being lost in the shuffle if he starts out in a big firm.

"As a matter of fact, if a man is any good at all, he can't help progressing."

Watch College Men

The Graybar company has 72 distributing stations, and could have 100, Ketcham says, if there were enough men ready to take them over.

"The need is reflected in our colleges where men are trained," Ketcham went on. "When I went to college, I did not have much idea what I would do when I finished, except be an engineer—because I was taking the engineers' course. I had to go round and hunt a job, and 'sell' myself to someone.

"Today, the large corporations watch all the colleges, and the promising young men are signed up during their senior years. Approached by different companies, they can take their pick. To be sure, they may and usually do start at the bottom, but every step of their progress is watched."

No "Battle" in Business

"The opportunities are not only for the college man, however.

"In our concern, we have many men in high positions who were never in college," Ketcham declared. "However, with the practical training which men get in our colleges today, university study is an advantage."

Ketcham believes the "fighting" element in business success greatly exaggerated. Looking back on his own rise, he said it seemed to be the result of logical promotions, rather than a series of scraps.

In selecting men for his concern, Ketcham said he regards a friendly disposition and the ability to cooperate and get along with others the most important qualification—presupposing, of course, average ability.

"The lone worker, the man who cannot adjust himself, does not work well in the big organization. The odd genius may or may not find his niche. But the man of poise and enthusiasm, who gets along well with his fellow men—who has the qualities of leadership, finds the way clear sailing. Because there are so many departments in the modern corporation, that as soon as man has learned the groundwork of the business, he can specialize in the financial or the legal side, in advertising salesmanship, or wherever his particular talents dictate."

Trained Men Valuable

Ketcham laughs at the idea that there is no personality in a large concern, that it is just a big machine.

Frank A. Ketcham . . . "if a man is any good at all, he can't help progressing."

"Look at General Motors, many another of the largest organizations," he advised. "They are reflections of the personality of the men who have built them up. They are full of character and individuality.

"More than a quarter of our men have been here over 25 years, and half of them have been here for 20 years. It takes a long time to train a man in his job—and when he knows it, he is valuable to his concern."

Ketcham is most enthusiastic over the idea of the employee-owned concern. Until four years ago, the Graybar company was the supply department of Western Electric. When the new company was formed, all the employees took stock and all the stock is owned in the company. They do a business of $75,000,000 a year.

He Tried Ranching

He declares the greater interest and cooperation shown by employees is a convincing indication that it is the coming method in business.

Ketcham has been with the company nearly a quarter of a century. A Michigan boy, he earned his way through the University of Michigan by working on a farm and tending cattle. He took a flier with Texas ranching and cattle trading, finally went broke, and went to Chicago to look for a job. It was then that he started with General Electric. He is enthusiastic about motoring, swimming, sailing and his ranch out west.

Three Men Missing In Mine Explosion

BOWER, W. Va., Feb. 9. (AP)—Rescuers tonight were pushing into the recesses of Number 3 mine of the West Virginia Coal and Coke company in search of three men, missing after an explosion in the workings today.

The blast occurred at a fortunate hour for the other employes of the mine. Between 25 and 30 were due to enter it at the time of the detonation, but officials said so far as they knew the three missing men were the only ones inside.

The missing men are A. L. Lewis, a plumber, and Marvin Goff and Luke West, miners.

PARRISH BILL PASSES

Measure Calls For Office Of Assistant Attorney

Durwood Bradley, district attorney, received a telegram from Senator Pink L. Parrish Saturday afternoon, in which he was informed that a bill introduced in the senate by Parrish, realting to the creation of the office of assistant district attorneys had been passed.

The bill was suggested by the crowded condition of the district courts here, which made it humanly impossible for one district attorney upon many occasions, to attend to official details of his office. As no funds were available for the employment of an assistant, the creation of this office by Parrish's bill will alleviate conditions, should the bill pass the house and become a law.

A Business School Course

Pays For Itself In Increased Salary

Why continue to mark time in the same old job—wren a few months of business training pays for itself in your increased earnings? If you find yourself in a business blind alley—don't stay there. Train yourself for a better job—and you will get it. Come in and talk the matter over with us—hear what others have done—and what you can do if you will.

New Tuition Rates On Feb. 15th

Since December 1st this school has been under a new management. Since this time considerable new equipment has been added, a large number of new courses have been formed and the scope of the old ones broadened. Our faculty has been enlarged with a number of better qualified teachers.

In view of these valuable additions and the fact that our present rates are lower than those of similar colleges, we are forced to raise our tuition fees. On February 15th we will increase our rates to a level in keeping with the superior courses now given.

We lay down an open challenge to any person seeking a business training to find a Texas Busiess College with a faculty of teachers superior to ours in educational qualifications.

If You Mean Business

We will pay railroad or bus fare to Lubbock and return of any young man or lady desiring to investigate our school with the intention of taking one of our business courses, provided that—

1st—You make the trip by Feb. 15th.
2nd—You do not live more than 150 miles from Lubbock.
3rd—You make arrangements for scholarship while here.

If you register by Feb. 15th we will let you in on our old rates. Register before the fifteenth—you can start your course at a later date if more convenient.

Nations Start Battle Of Reparations At Paris; Positions Of Various Countries Offer Many Many Serious Problems For Settlement

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Feb. 8. — When the Pacific fleet of Uncle Sam's navy stages its spring maneuvers, during February and March, it will have the first occasion to make a complete test of two unusual newcomers.

These are the huge, electrically-driven airplane carriers Saratoga and Lexington, latest sisters to the original airplane carrier, the Langley. From them, the navy could operate a powerful air fleet in any part of the world.

Following the warships off the west coast of Central America these unique ships in their newest tests will demonstrate to navy authorities the efficacy of carrying airplanes right into the midst of a battle at sea. For this purpose the carriers have been so constructed as to provide not only veritable landing fields for the fleet airplanes but complete construction and repair shops, hangars, supply depots and laboratories that equal if they do not surpass, many of our advanced airports on land.

Details Now Revealed

For the first time since their completion some of the details of this equipment have been revealed, although the big craft still hold many secrets that assure their unique and outstanding position among the world's fighting ships. Some of these revelations cover not only their own construction and operation, but those of the airplanes that grace its decks.

So complete is the equipment in each of these carriers that an entire airplane can be built aboard it and flown from its deck even during a gale. Aft of a huge hangar that measures 480 feet long by 78 feet wide are the machine shops where a plane can be disassembled for examination and repair and reassembled along the line production ideas prevalent in our modern automobile factories.

75 Airplanes Aboard

Both shops and hangar are below deck and are reached by either of two electric elevators that come up into the landing deck. The hangar covers half the area of the entire ship and has room for the storage of 75 planes of three different types, fighting, scouting and bombing.

On three decks below the shops and hangars are 14 gasoline storage tanks, each holding from 15,000 to 30,000 gallons each. Here is another secret at last popped open, for it reveals the ingenuity of designers in assuring utmost safety for the carriers and their crews at sea.

The secret lies in the method of keeping the fuel tanks full at all times when the planes are aboard ship, no matter how much gasoline is being pumped from them! What keeps them full is the replacement of fuel with salt water pumped up from the sea.

Since salt water is heavier than gasoline it sinks to the bottom of the tank and doesn't dilute the fuel. Thus the tanks are kept full, whether with fuel or water or both, sloshing of the liquid contents is prevented and dangerous fumes are avoided.

Up on deck, the airplanes can be fueled from any tank, or from all tanks at the same time when occasion demands. Returning from a flight, their tanks are emptied before they are stored below decks.

Landing Deck Huge

Perhaps the greatest secrecy is still held in connection with the construction of the landing deck. For here is a "landing field" less than 100 feet wide and 900 feet long, yet capable of starting off and receiving airplanes ranging in type from the small swift scouting planes to the cumbersome bombers.

Clear to the eye of everyone, yet containing many a costly constructional secret, is the "superstructure" built up on the starboard side. Here are gun turrets, bridge, mast, stack and other essentials that make up a quaint "island" and give the ship a strange, lop-sided appearance.

Nearly fifty feet above the water, the bow spreads out wide enough to permit planes to take off with room to spare. This flare widens out over the ship and ends in a huge ramp that overhangs the stern for the reception of landing planes.

Secret Gear Stops Planes

The landing deck is one smooth surface, wide enough and long enough to accommodate half its complement of planes. Yet worked into the floor of this deck are secret devices that catch a plane from below as it touches the deck and cause it to stop within a short distance.

Hundreds of such landings have been made aboard the Lexington and Saratoga with no fatalities and less than a dozen trival accidents. Around the entire deck is one continuous life net, to prove a life saver whenever an airplane goes on a rampage.

As unique as the carriers themselves are the airplanes that have been built especially for naval warfare. Here are included the tiny fighting planes that measure no wider than 30 feet and no longer than 20 feet 3 inches. They are the smallest, lightest, and fastest planes built for this purpose. Each weighs 800 pounds and can carry an offensive load, consisting of guns, ammunition and bombs, weighing 300 pounds.

Fly 200 Miles an Hour

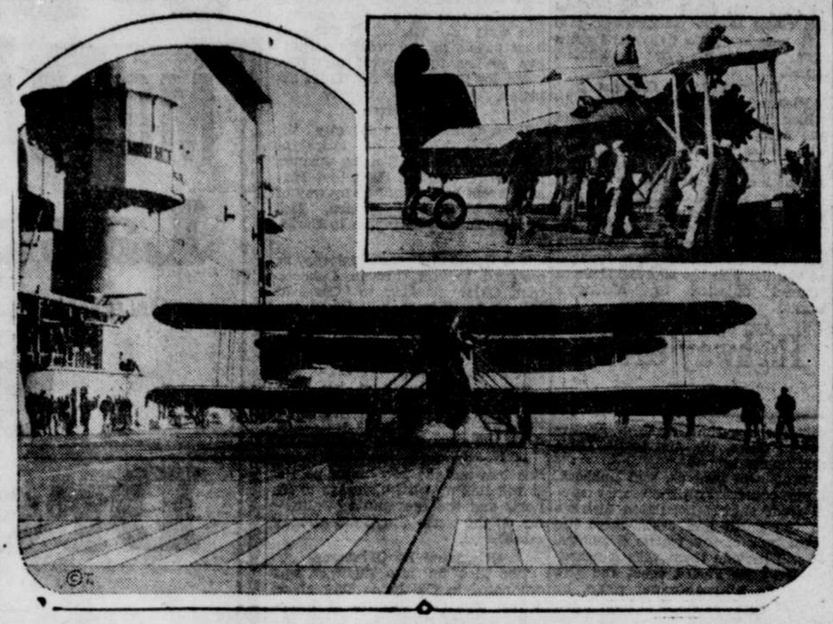

At sea level this little ship can fly 184 miles an hour and reaches the speed of 200 miles an hour at the fighting height of 5000 feet.

As fast and light as these are the scouting planes, so equipped that they can take off from battleships by means of a catapult.

The big navy bombers are necessarily heavier than either of the other types, yet they are much lighter than those used in the army. Because of their size, however, they are so constructed that their wings can be folded back for storing in the hangar aboard ship.

When ready to launch a plane the Lexington or Saratoga steams into the wind. As the first plane is warmed up, the ship gathers speed and at the proper time the signal is given, the plane is loosed from its moorings and off it goes, aided by the speed of the ship. On landing the carrier again faces the wind, the plane trails along until the white flag is hoisted, signalling "all clear," and the pilot "sits her down" on the landing deck.

Special hooks on the airplane engage the secret stopping devices on the deck landing, which quickly bring the plane to a halt.

This remarkable photo gives an idea of the size of the "landing field" aboard the U. S. S. Lexington, one of Uncle Sam's gigantic airplane carriers. This deck is almost 100 feet wide and 900 feet long, and the ship's hangars carry 75 planes of three different types—scouting, fighting and bombing. Observe the size of the big bombing planes lined up on deck, ready to take off, and note the panels in the flooring which give a hint of how the secret stopping devices work when a plane lands. The inset shows the wings of a bombing plane being folded back preparatory to storing it below.

Youths Turn to Culinary Arts

The familiar jingle, "Polly put the kettle on, and we'll all have tea," will have to be changed to "Billy put the kettle on" if other boys decide to become culinary artists. At least three homes in Lubbock have their kitchens presided over by Tech youths. One college professor insists that his male cook is very capable and shows initiative in the preparation of his meals.

"One day not long ago," this professor said, "we included in the menu for lunch, hot biscuit." A list of foods to prepare for the meal was given the student and he was almost ready to serve the lunch when he noticed that he had overlooked the biscuit. It was then almost twelve o'clock, and the boy instead of becoming excited over the situation simply made them up quickly and served lunch a few minutes late." The faculty member declared that the boy had risen to other culinary emergencies in as admirable a manner.

Two doctors of the city also employ Tech boys to cook their meals. One of these men declared that they simply couldn't get along without his "cook." The boys usually have learned something about cooking from camping trips and when armed with a cook book will tackle most any recipe.

No Scout Has Ever Paid A Fine In Lubbock's Police Court

Reduction of Delinquency Just One Thing That Scouting Does, Regional Head Says;

BY VESTEL LOTT

"Every man is the hero of at least one boy and when he fails to look after the general welfare of the children of his city, it is the betrayal of a trust that is almost sacred."

This was Ernest E. Voss, deputy regional executive of the national council, Boy Scouts of America, speaking in the interest of Scouting of the South Plains. "What Scouting needs," he continued, "more than any other one thing is an increased number of leaders among the prominent business men of the section. Citizens should feel that aid toward the Scouting program is more than a mere financial expenditure, but is an investment in the civic progress of a community.

"The present situation of the young boys of the South Plains should be a challenge to every man in the section. While there are now a total of 22 troops of 439 Scouts in the South Plains council, including thirteen counties, there should be at least fifty troops and more than 1,000 Scouts."

Attended Initial Meeting

Mr. Voss was in the city several days last week in connection with Scout work here. He was in Lubbock in March, 1925—four years ago next month—when the South Plains Area Council of Scouts was formed and relates the rapid development of the council. Although much good has been done, he states that the surface has been little more than scratched in Scout work. While one out of every eight boys in the United States is a Scout, only one in every thirteen in this state belongs to the organization.

"What needs to be done now is to extend the Scout program so that it will reach more boys. Forty per cent of the boys of the nation live in cities, seventeen per cent in towns, and forty-three per cent on farms. It is this last group that is now missed by Scouting activities, and it a challenge to outstanding business men to make some effort to reach the rural boys. Scouting is effective only as it is taken and used by a community. A Scout council is a partnership of these towns banded together to make an effective administration of boys' welfare."

Praises Standard Here

Mr. Voss praised the Scoutmasters of this council, stating that they had done some of the best work in the nation. 'Although the membership is not as large throughout this section as it should be," he said, "I will have to take off my hat to the standard of Scouting that has been maintained."

It was pointed out that while there have been numerous waves of petty thievery by youths of the city, including one last week, a Scout has never been fined in the local police court. Mr. Voss stressed Scout activities as the best cure for delinquency among young boys.

Idea of the South Plains council was born in 1925. Mr. Voss called Scoutmaster L. S. Harkey here from Roswell and talked to him concerning Scouting. A 'father and son" banquet was called jointly by the Kiwanis and Rotary clubs in the old Armory building here in an effort to promote the proposed organization. At that time there were two troops on the South Plains, one here and one at Lamesa. At the banquet one man was stationed in each corner and a contest begun to see which could raise the most money in five minutes. The five-minute campaign secured $1,200 for the cause of Scouting.

H. B. Palmer, H. B. Yates, W. H. Watts, and W. P. Knox have been the area executives of this council. Mr. Voss predicts that the entire Panhandle eventually will be combined into one large council, under the management of a strong executive with field executives stationed at various points throughout the section.

It is the hope of Scout officials that the annual financial drive of the organization can be eliminated in the near future by means of sufficient business signing as permanent members.

Weather

gradually rising temperature would make firing the stoves unnecessary.

One valley point, Brownsville, reported temperatures stationery at 39 with damage to beans, peas and potatoes apparently imminent.

Coast Feels Chill.

Meanwhile, the Texas Gulf coast was feeling the chill bite of most unusually low temperatures which at two points took an almost unprecedented drop to below 30 degrees.

Galveston reported a minimum of 29; Houston of 23. North Texas, and especially the Panhandle, lay under snow and ice with lower readings expected in some sections.

At Fort Worth, North Texas, the thermometer got down to 14 degrees, the lowest since 1899 when 16 was the bottom.

Central Texans likewise were going about with rattling teeth.

At San Antonio, the northern edge and winter resort metropolis of the "Winter Garden" district, the thermometers fell once to 23 degrees, lowest reading of the winter.

(By Associated Press)

More lives and damage were added to the cold wave's toll yesterday when wecks of its icy breath were climaxed by temperatures ranging from near zero to 14 below in the Missouri Valley down to 52 below in Southwestern Wyoming. Sweeping to the southeast, chill blasts roared over the southern Gulf states today, with Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee and Louisiana in their path. The lowest temperatures of the winter were expected there.

Two lives were lost in a motor car's skid at Belleville, Ill. A train-car crash killed another at Baker, Kan. A man was struck by a train at Pana, Ill., and killed; a rut in a snow-covered road near near Clay Center, Kan., overturned a car and a woman died of injuries late Saturday. Trains thundered through snow drifts behind schedule and roads were kept open with difficulty everywhere, although the snow had generally abated.

The blizzard's fury lingered last night, however, on the fringe of the Texas Gulf coast, lashing out its fury in temperatures that had dropped. Smudge pots were burning in Southern California yesterday where an "unusual" mercury reading of 26 1-2 degrees endangered citrus fruits.

Heavy sheep losses were reported in Southwestern Wyoming, where the temperature fell to alarming depths and cattle casualties were general in Oklahoma as the storm passed.

Predictions from the Missouri Valley, the Southwest, the Northwest, the Rockies and the Coast were for moderation during the day although the grip of the almost universally record breaking coldness seemed barely loosened last night at many points.

Moody Stand

Choose Between Measures

At any rate, the legislature will take its choice between the two measures and Governor Moody will ask that the one he favors be given first consideration.

He is preparing a message to the legislature which will convey his thoughts and wishes in plain language on prison and other subjects of legislation. He probably will deliver it in person Monday and his friends believe it will be the stroke that may not only to drive home administration prison legislation, but warm up the state-wide bond issue.

The Governor wants the prison board, Attorney General, Speaker of the House and President Pro Tem of the Senate empowered to survey the prison situation and determine the course to follow concerning reorganization and concentration.

The opposing bill would direct that certain properties now owned south of Houston be maintained and empower the prison board to carry out its ideas of concentration on these lands.

Concerning the highway situation, the Governor retains confidence that the legislature will submit a proposed constitutional amendment so that the people may pass on it. The plan is still before the legislature, in the Senate by favorable committee report and in the House through minority report.

The Governor is claiming 18 senators as ready to vote for the resolution submitting the amendment and only three more are needed to give it the two-thirds majority in that branch.

In the house some opponents of the bond issue claim it cannot pass.

cooperating in every manner possible to better their own conditions collectively and individually.

"Texas has only 3,500 farm families that are organized and affiliated with the Farm Bureau movement," Mrs. Hudson said. "Yet, Texas has 410,000 farm families." She was recently elected the director of District Eighteen of the Farm Bureau association in Texas, at the annual convention of the organization held in Dallas. She has 53 counties of West Texas under her supervision.

Another feature of the Saturday meeting was a talk by Prof. H. J. Bower, of Texas Technological college ,on the subject of "Farm Bureau Organization in Kansas and Ohio." In his speech he told of Ohio having 88 counties and every one of them organized with Farm Bureau associations. Kansas has 65 counties well organized out of 105 counties in that state. There were 65 Texas counties, out of 264, represented at the state convention at Dallas.

predict that he will be elected by a substantial majority over the candidate of the Al Smith forces."

"I hope not," was his reply when asked if he would be the candidate

He declared that even though Senator Martin should pass his bill barring from the democratic primary ballot the name of anyone as a candidate who last November bolted the party and voted for the republican nominees, it would be held "void."

"I am reasonably sure the legislature will not vote for it, though" he added.

Toral Execution

was with Toral in his cell until the walk to the execution ground. The distance from the cell to the firing squad was short, just down the corridor.

Toral was dead in less than a minute after he left the priest and only a few seconds after he had stepped into the courtyard. The squad was ready as he approached. The instant he was in position the rifles cracked. This rapidity seemed to startle Toral and he carried into death an expression of astonishment, as if he had expected opportunity to say something before death.

He was not blindfolded. He simply was marched from his cell by two civilian officials of the penitentiary.

A moment after he received the coup de grace, the priest who had been with him in his cell, Rafael Ruiz Soto, pushed through the soldier guards, advanced to the corpse, knelt and dipped his handkerchief in the blood of Toral. He made the sign of the Cross and pronounced extreme unction. He was detailed by the guards for having broken through the lines. However, he kept the blood-stained handkerchief as a relic of what Toral earlier had called his martyrdom.

A. U. Puckitt, defense counsel, pleaded with the jury not to send his client to the penitentiary. "Do not tear his little daughter's arms from around his neck," Puckitt urged.

Richard Denies Charges

Richard's testimony yesterday, in which he denied any knowledge of the conspiracy to collect the election stakes and repudiated the testimony of A. A. Crabb, his alleged accomplice, was attacked by District Attorney William McCraw in summing up for the state.

"Richards squirmed around on the witness stand like his pants were full of ants," McCraw declared at one point in his address. Defense counsel objected to McCraw's words.

Highway Group

east through the Ozarks of Arkansas to Cairo, Ill., and to St. Louis and points beyond.

"This will give us, and Lubbock, direct contact with the tourist travel from thickly populated districts of the north and east, where the great bulk of this traffic originates. It will provide them with a nearer route to the Pacific coast and give them an all-year-round route, by way of El Paso. As it is now, when we route tourists from Oklahoma City to El Paso during the winter months of bad weather, we are compelled to send them over 300 miles out of their way through Fort Worth, when they should come through Lubbock.

Provides Winter Routes

"This highway will provide the only winter route across the Rockies that is passable. Besides, it takes tourists to the eighth wonder of the world—the Carlsbad Caverns."

In telling of the accomplishments the Carlsbad Cavern Highway association has achieved since organization, Mr. Carl Guin, of Quanah, relates the encouraging news that, up to the Lubbock county line, between here and Quanah, things are moving along wonderfully.

"At present there are only 46 miles of the line from Quanah to the Lubbock county line that is not already a state or state and federal designated highway. And, this 46 mile stretch is the only part of the entire routing up to this county's line that has not either already been paved, in the process of paving, or has funds voted and provided for its paving," Mr. Guin explains.

Route Given

From Quanah to this city the route goes through the cities of Paducah, Matador, Roaring Springs, Dickens, Crosbyton, Ralls and Idalou. From here it will go by way of Brownfield, Plains, Bronco, McDonald, Tatum, Lovington to Carlsbad.

The Carlsbad Cavern highway, as proposed to run through Lubbock from Oklahoma City to Carlsbad and on to El Paso, will lessen the distance from the Oklahoma capital to El Paso, as now routed through Amarillo and Roswell, by 160 or more miles.

The route will lessen the all-year-round route, from Oklahoma City to El Paso, now via Fort Worth, by more than 300 miles.

It is, therefore the straightest line between the two major points. It will link up with highways to St. Louis and the east and to California on the west. These are already established.

Originated In Oklahoma

The idea for this highway was originated in Oklahoma City about a year ago. One meeting of interested citizens from cities along the proposed route was held on November 12, last year, at which an organization was perfected. This gathering was held at Quanah and Carl Guin, of that city, was elected president of the association. J. H. Hankins, of Lubbock, was elected vice-president, and Tom A. White, of this city, chosen as one of the directors.

Monday the second meeting of the association is to be held in Carlsbad, N. M., at which 200 or more representatives from every town and city between Oklahoma City and El Paso are expected to be present.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

The fashionable length for skirts is a never-ending subject for discussion. As with every fashion, however, study it—then study yourself. If a fashion adds to your charm, adopt it; if it is inclined to be trying for you to wear, modify it; but if it is downright unbecoming, ignore it. A long skirt will not actually add inches to the stature, but it will give the illusion of tallness, just as a too short skirt will appear to cut down height.

The little woman will do well to wear her skirts not too short, as this extreme style will detract from her charming dignity. Let her wear her skirts as far below her knees as fashion permits. Skirts should preferably be the same shade as the blouse or the sweater. Long hanging panels will give length of line, as will also inset panels. Perhaps one of the happiest effects may be acquired by the use of pleated panels, pointed if possible, that hang below the hemline, and flow in fraceful, sweeping lines as one moves. Anything that lends long lines is extremely desirable, and naturally the lovely single line from collar to hem, will be best. And as with blouses, so skirts, and in fact the entire gown for the little woman, should preferably be of a plain color, or one with a small inconspicuous figure.

The tall, thin woman should never wear her skirts to her knees, even though fashion sponsors it, and it cuts her height, for this will give her a very awkward and overgrown appearance. She should always compromise with the edict for at least a knee-length skirt, or one well to the calf of the leg. It is always safe to choose one which will fall half way between her knee and her ankle. If her feet are large, a swirling, rather full drapery will make them appear smaller, while a tight skirt will throw them into prominence and emphasize their appearance of size. Overblouses should extend well below the waist, and can very nicely be of contrasting color to the skirt. Wide trimmings on the bottom of the blouse will also be helpful. Large figured materials, flounces and frills are excellent, and have the tendency to normalize the too tall figure.

The stout woman should never wear skirts too short nor too tight, a sthis will very obviously make her appear extremely dumpy. She should strive always to achieve the vertical effect, the line which cuts her too bulky appearance in long straight lines. Use narrow and contrasting panels inset just below the hipline, low-set, inconspicuous belts, narrow pleatings and strappings that extend from shoulder or from bust to hem. Pleated skirts are not generally good, but flared skirts and uneven hemlines are splendid. Avoid all lines which cut the figure horizontally, and employ plain shades or small inconspicuous figures, and preferably materials of dull texture.

MAN FOUND SHOT

Unidentified Person Dies At Own Hands In Dallas

DALLAS, Feb. 8. (AP)—A man believed to be Charles H. Gauss, about 35, of Mineral Wells, was found shot to death in a hotel room here late tonight, a pistol by his side.

He had registered as "C. H. Green" of San Antonio, but examination of his effects led investigators to declare he was Gauss.

Abilene to Get 15-Story Hotel and Theater

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

ABILENE, Feb. 9—Plans for construction here of a 15-story hotel and $250,000 theatre were announced today by H. O. Wooten, pioneer Abilene resident, whose career as a constructive business man is one of the absorbing real life dreams of the development of West Texas.

The hotel building to be located at North Third and Cypress streets, considered one of the very finest locations in Abilene, will cost $500,000 to $550,000 equipped. Covering ground space measuring 140 by 75 feet it will be in the vertical or "setback" style developed in America in recent years and especially adapted to skyscraper buildings.

Both the theatre and hotel are being designed by the David S. Castle company. Mr. Castle, head of the concern, is a pioneer West Texas architect and has designed a large portion of the region principal buildings.

The hotel will be operated by A. H. (Al) Badger and associates, who have organized with local capital a corporation to operate this hostelry. Badger, a well-known hotel owner will become a resident of Abilene.

News Tidbits From Many Places

Appointed Curator

ALPINE, Feb. 9 (AP)—E. E. Townsend of Alpine, resident in the Rio Grande region for forty years, has been appointed curator of the Museum of the West Texas Historical and Scientific Society at Sul Ross State Teachers College here.

Alfalfa Demand

FORT STOCKTON, Feb. 9 (AP)—Farmers report good demand for choice alfalfa at $30 per ton, about double the price offered last summer. Demand is mainly from East Texas.

Explode Theory

SAN ANGELO, Feb. 9 (AP)—Belief in many quarters that Texas is a flat prairie country as a whole gains a knockout blow after a person visits the Big Bend district, where cowboys say everything seems to stand on end. These mountain peaks belie the flat idea; Big Needle, Mt. Cathedral, Indianola, Mitre and the Chinatis.

Well In Wilds

MARFA, Feb. 9 (AP)—The wildest of wildcat oil wells is being drilled in the wilds of the Big Bend. The prospects is on the 123,000-acre ranch of Luke Brite, 45 miles from a railroad at Marfa and 15 miles from the Cinati mountains. Fuel oil for operations is hauled from Valentine.

Cattle Stampede

KERMIT, Feb. 9 (AP)—Three miles of barbed wire fence was torn down recently by stampeding cattle on the Crowley ranch near here. Range riders could not explain the stampede, the first reported for years in this section, as there was no thunder or lightning at the time.

Their Wool Pays

OZONA, Feb. 9 (AP)—Mrs. C. E. Davidson, whose husband, the judge of Crockett county, is the only strictly cowman in the county of 316,000 sheep, has purchased a high class automobile from money she says she made on a flock of sheep which started with three lambs in 1917. She has the same three sheep today as well as about 250 others.

Aids Night Landing

BIG LAKE, Feb. 9 (AP)—Carl Cromwell, driller of the world's deepest oil well near here, says his feat has worked in handily with his penchant for aviation. Three big gas flares which burn waste gas from the nearly two mile deep hole, furnish excellent night landing for his own field at the camp of the Texon Oil and Land Company.

Trucks Oust Burro

SHAFTER, Feb. 9 (AP).—Motor trucks now haul the product of the Shafter silver mine fifty miles to Marfa for shipment. Once burros only were used on the road or series of roads clinging along the sides of Shafter hill for five or six miles. From the roadway Spanish goats are often seen browsing as they cling to the sides of the mountain with magnet-like feet. Shafter mine, one of the oldest silver operations in Texas, hasn't a drop of water in it.

New Mexican Town

PRESIDIO, Feb. 9 (AP).—Nuevo Ojinaga, a new Mexican town, has been laid out three and one-half miles from Ojinaga, the old border town opposite Presidio, as the result of extension of the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient railroad from Chihuahua to the border. The Orient station is to be built in the new town it is said.

Want Better Roads

BRADY, Feb. 9 (AP).—The rising generation in McCullough county is willing to pay taxes for road paving bonds. Of 52 papers written on the necessity of better highways and submitted in a contest, only one expressed opposition to a paving program. The contest was conducted among grade and high school pupils.

Seven Suits And Other Apparel Are Lost By Men Here

Residence Entered By Use Of Pass-Key; Police Fail To Uncover Clues In Connection With Raid

Police yesterday were searching for the burglers who plundered a house at 2019 Tenth street sometime Friday night.

The house which was occupied by four young men, was opened evidently with a skeleton key. Seven suits of clothes, blankets, towels and miscellaneous pieces of wearing apparel were obtained by the burglars.

Those living in the residence are W. D. Watkins, John Keathley, Cecil Hilley and Dr. Walter Howard.

5000 Mark For Schools Looms

With the present enrollment of 4,865 and with new students registering each day in the Lubbock city schools, Superintendent M. H. Duncan predicts that this year's total enrollment will easily reach the 5,000 mark. He said yesterday that there is a strong possibility that the enrollment will reach this figure by the end of this month.

Illness in the city schools experienced a considerable increase during the past week, causing more pupils to be absent than the previous light flu epidemic in the city, Mr. Duncan reports. Although the epidemic was reported to have subsided, the schools are now feeling the effect of it more than before.

Asks Early Mailing Registeerd Letters

Request that local business men bring registered mail to the postoffice by 5 o'clock in the afternoon if possible was made yesterday by Postmaster John L. Vaughan.

At the present time, he stated, there is a deluge of registered mail brought to the office from 5 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon, one of the busiest times of the day for mail workers, causing considerable overtime work. It was explained that the arrival of branch line trains about this time causes the incoming mail to be especially heavy near 6 o'clock.

GOOD FIRE RECORD

Only $6262 Total Loss In Slaton For Year

SLATON, Feb. 9.—Slaton made an excellent fire record in 1928, according to L. B. Hagerman, city fire marshal. Thirty-six fire alarms were answered by the fire department during the year, with a fire loss totaling only $6,262.70. A reduction of six cents in the insurance key rate became effective following the purchase of a new fire truck which cost $12,500. Another reduction is to be received due to the employment of a paid fireman. The key rate is now 47 cents.

CHARTER REPORT

Expect Recommendation Of Slaton Body Soon

SLATON, Feb. 9.—A final report from the city charter commission, appointed late in 1928 to draft a proposed form of special city charter for Slaton, will be ready in a few days, according to an announcement made by J. S. Edwards, chairman, at a meeting of the commission. An election will then be required to allow citizens to vote on the charter's adoption. It is freely predicted by leaders that the charter will be approved. The commission form of government is now in effect here.

Mabel Boll Faces Charge Of Dallas Jeweler

NEW YORK, Feb. 9 (AP)—Supreme coure Justice Nathan Blair today denied a motion by Miss Mabel Boll, flying "Queen of Diamonds" to set aside an order for her to appear for examination before trail of a suit brought against her by a Dallas, Texas, jeweler.

Irwin Kramer, the jeweler, said in his complant that Captain Albert Bach bought for Miss Boll in 1918 a diamond lavallier valued at $2,400, making a down payment of $750. Nothing more was paid, he said, and he seeks the remaining $1,650, plus interest from Miss Boll.

Apple-Growing

FORT DAVIS, Feb. 9 (AP).—Apple growing has brought a new source of revenue to the Davis Mountain country. The largest orchard, owned by C. H. Bird, consists of 55 acres with 56 trees to the acre. Total acreage in the mountains at present will not exceed 350 acres, all under irrigation.

Twain's Grandniece Is Tech Student

Smiling, Demure Lass From Shamrock, Texas, Inherits Wit and Literary "Bent" from Famous Writer

Out at the Tech there is a little gray-eyed freshman girl named Duelle Clemens who has the distinction of being the great grand-niece of the famous author, Mark Twain. A petite, unassuming and smiling young lass, she has inherited some of the humorous characteristics of the gifted writer.

Duelle is distinctly Irish and declares that all of her forefathers must have been. Her ability to interpret the brogue of the Irish was beneficial last year when she wrote the poem for her graduation exercises from the Shamrock high school. This poem was printed in the annual which used as its motif things typically Irish. Duelle was literary editor of the year book as well as feature editor for the school paper. The last verse of the poem which is a prediction of the future of her classmates is as follows:

I' Fate's hand thair futur' lies
An' ar' they to maet i' wi' sighs?
The weys o' life ar' mony ae mile
N' whither thae frown—whither
Thae smile: the dark o' Fate is oe'r tham.
An' who know what Fate may do?
I' the years befor' tham?
Here's luck! Guid Irish luck
Anu' a chear for the dark before tham.

Of course I am proud of the fact that Mark Twain was my uncle," Duelle declares, "but what work I do I want to stand for its individual merit and not because of the fact that I happen to have him for an ancestor."

Miss Clemens' grandfather, John Clemens, went up and down the Mississippi with his brother, Mark Twain, when they were boys together. Duelle never saw her uncle because he died the year in which she was born, and mainly the facts she has collected about the humorist are one which are generally known. After her grandfather left his brother's employ on the steamboat he moved to Arkansas and subsequently the family moved to Texas. Mark Twain remained on the Mississippi, however, where he amassed the wealth of experiences which have been made known to so many people through his works.

There is a tiny town in Mississippi which is named after Twain and the entire township has carried out the idea in the naming of the business houses.

Miss Clemens' parents have a collection of original photographs of the humorist and all his works.

John Clemens, a cousin, has already achieved some distinction as a writer and it is because of this and of early attempts of her own that Duelle thinks she may some day become a writer.

"It's a grand feeling to know that you are related to some one who is known almost universally", she said. "I don't mind telling folks that he is my uncle. "But I am determined that I shall make a writer in spite of Mark Twain and not because of him."

Lynn County Has Gathered 30,000 Bales Up To Date

Decrease Of Approxiately 10,000 Bales From Last Year's Total Apparent For That Section

TAHOKA, Feb. 9—A total of 30,000 bales of cotton have been ginned in Lynn county at the close of the week, with indications that the total crop will be at least 33,000 bales, nearly 10,000 bales under last year's crop. Much cotton is still in the fields in some sections of the county, and gins are still runninig daily.

Land is being plowed and put into cultivation for another crop, and it is no uncommon sight to see plows running in fields where pickers are still at work. The mild weather of the past three weeks has been ideal for cotton picking and plowing. An excellent season is reported, in spite of the fact that there has been few rains recently.

Indications are that there will be no reduction in the cotton acreage, however, more interest than ever is being manifested in dairy and poultry raising. More turkeys were marketed here this year than ever before. The new hatchery which opened here January 8, is running to its 16,000-egg capacity, and demand was never greater for high grade chicks. There are probably twice as many dairy cows in the county this winter as there were three years ago, but still good cows are in demand and several farmers have imported registered Jersey cows. The county's biggest feed crop, which was harvested this year is going to be a great aid in carrying out the diversification idea this year.

Local merchants are enjoying excellent business, bankers report more farmers in debt than ever before and fewer demands for loans; and with such indication, this promises to be an excellent year in Lynn county.

New Rail Station Opens This Week In Floyd Capital

$100,000 In Construction To Be Consummated With Formal Opening Of New Structure

FLOYDADA, Feb. 9 (Special)—The Quanah, Acme & Pacific Railway company opens the doors of its new $500,000 station, and the firm of Martin Dry Goods company holds the formal opening of ther new home on West California street this week. The two new buildings represent a third of the building permits issued in Floydada last year, and are of the most modern type and were built with a view of keeping in touch with the future growth of this section. The two represent an outlay of $100,000.

The new station was carefully constructed to serve the purposes both of utility and beauty. It is without doubt one of the prettiest buildings in Floydada, a commodious one that would meet the requirements of a station to serve a city of 15,000 people, and was expressly built, according to the officials, "with an eye to the assured future of Floyadad." It is 250 feet in length with the brick station platform extending a distance of 300 feet.

Opening day for the new station will be held Monday, and A. F. Sommer, vice-president and general manager, W. L. Richardson, general agent, and T. K. Hawkins, general passenger agent, will be present. The "Plainsman", crack all-steel passenger train, with its regular equipment of chair car, baggage and mail car, smoker and Pullman, will be stationed at the new building.

The Martin building, which was constructed at a cost of $30,000 not including elaborate new equipment, is one of the outstanding buildings in Floydada with its beautiful architectural lines and designs.

Autos Kill 19 In Week; Airplanes None

Railroads Claim 8 Fatalities; Falls Take Four, Burns Are Blamed For Death Of Equal Number In Texas

This is for those who express a horror of the danger of riding in an aeroplane.

During the week of January 24 to 31, 192 persons were injured and nineteen killed by automobiles in Texas. During the same week, there was not a single injury nor a single fatality to be blamed on the aeroplane.

These statistics come from the Texas Council of Safety, whose headquarters are at Austin.

Railway trains ranked next to automobiles as an aide to the Grim Reaper, claiming 8 lives and 13 injuries for the week.

One was injured in a street car accident.

Two were killed and fifteen were injured from falls. Four were killed and four injured from burns. Drowning, despite the cold weather, exacted a toll of four lives. Three were killed and seven injured as a result of firearms, and explosives injured six. Twenty-seven were injured from all other causes combined.

Of this toll thirteen were injured and four killed as a result of accidents in the home. Eight were injured and none killed as a result of industrial accidents.

This year is starting off poorly from a safety standpoint, a large increase in both injuries and fatalities being recorded. From the first of the year to date there have been 936 injuries and 166 deaths from accidents, compared to 551 injuries and 133 deaths from accidents of all kinds for a corresponding period of last year.

Leopold Slated For Main Speech On C. C. Program

Large Delegation From Lubbock Is Expected To Make Trip To Annual Event This Week

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal

PLAINVIEW, Feb. 9.—Five hundred guests are expected for the annual banquet of the Plainview Board of Civic Development and Agriculture, to be held Tuesday night in Plainview autditorium.

J. F. Leopold, famed over the Leopold, famed throughout the country as an outstanding speaker on business problems, and particularly as they relate to chamber of commerce activities will be the principal speaker. Leopold is manager of the southern central division of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, with headquarters at Dallas. Leopold has been in chamber of commerce work for many years, having served as secretary for several different local chambers of commerce before becoming identified with the national chamber.

The program committee, J. D. Steakley, chairman; P. B. Randolph, W. J. Lloyd and Matt A. Cram is arranging the other part of the program with the idea in mind of not making it too long and tiresome, and having some real live discussions of problems new before Plainview.

The tickets will sell for one dollar each and O. J. Sexton, chairman, Hugh Tull, and several others yet to be selected will make a complete canvass of the city this week. Everybody in town is urged to attend the banquet regardless of whether members of the local organization or not. Ladies are especially invited.

Plates for five hundred people are being arranged by the committee having this in charge. Andy Morrison has been obtained to prepare the food. W. O. Daniels is chairman of the committee making these arrangements with David Bates and Fred Madison.

The auditorium will be placed in order under the supervision of W. P. Dowden, Jim Williamson and Floyd Covington.

Invitations have been mailed to over one hundred fifty out of the city people over the Panhandle-Plains section. As this is written, Dr. Paul W. Horn, president of the Texas Technological college, has accepted, as well as president J. A. Hill of West Texas State Teachers college. These were the first acceptances received.

Members of the organization are being urged to bring in their farmer friends as guests at the banquet.

Hotel Annex Will Start On March 1

Actual construction of the five-story annex of the Hotel Lubbock, which will entoll an expenditure of about $350,000 when completed, will begin on or about March 1, it was announced yesterday by W. G. McMillan, contractor.

Mr. McMillan was awarded the contract by the Hotel Lubbock company recently and it was signed during the past few days. He said that building permit will be taken out on the date that construction begins. When completed this annex will give the hotel 300 rooms.

BUILDING AT PEAK

Week Is Banner One For Town Of Snyder

SNYDER, Feb. 9.—Building permit totals for January reached the highest peak in the history of Snyder the past month when an aggregate of $33,150 was taken out. Comparing this total of $7,550 for January of 1928 and no permits granted in January, 1927, some idea of the natural growth of Snyder can be noted.

FISHING EXCELLENT

PRESIDIO, Tex., Feb. 9. (AP)—Fishing in the Rio Grande around Presidio is excellent, says Chester Dugat who claims to have caught 90 pounds in a few hours. "Lots of fish and few people to catch them," said Dugat. 'It is unusual to fish with a mountain in front of you, a desert back of you, and catch 'em weighing from 40 to 50 pounds."

POPULATION DOUBLES

GRAND FALLS, Feb. 9 (AP)—Population of this Ward county town has doubled in recent months, due to bringing in of an oil well two miles north of here on the Monahans pike, according to S. G. Winn, school superintendent.

Wildcat Oil Test

ALPINE, Feb. 9 (AP).—The latest wildcat test to be started in Brewster county is reported down 470 feet in a favorable oil formation. The location is on section 45, block G-15, approximately two miles west of the Ranger sand croppings in the fracture of the Marathon field.

Old-Fashioned Valentine Has Modernistic Greeting

There are valentines to your taste this year. Center: The old-fashioned lace-paper valentine has been revived. Upper left and lower right: The familiar comic valentine has taken a subdued and more sophisticated turn. Upper right and lower left: Modernistic black and silver greetings made their debut this year.

BY NEA Service.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—With the return of more feminine styles and ruffles have come back also sentimental valentines.

And the very latest styles in 1929 love missives are reproduced of the beribboned and bedecorated lace-paper affairs of the Victorian days.

The alternative from the old-times with cupids, violets and cooing doves in the modernistic black and silver affair which made its debut this year—very tailored looking, with casual verses couched in the easy style of today.

Another "revival" at the valentine counter is the modern version of the old "comic" which used to carry such mean thrusts under such vicious cartoons. Today's are smaller, and more expertly drawn, but the old punch is there.

That Sophisticated Note.

Thus today, smart shops are selling, at smart prices, to sophisticated youths and maidens of today such sentiments as these:

"Beneath religion's cloudless sky,
The virtues bloom, the vices die."

Or:

"I love thee as I loved the first
Young violet of the spring,
Or the pale lily, April nurs'd
To scented blossoming."

and daring as:

"Since you're slow to take the hint,
Here it is, old dear, in print—
Will you be my valentine?"

Valentines today consider every possible urge for human affection, and are made up for grandfather, grandmother, the boss at the office, the family doctor, or any acquaintance in any walk of life. The special cards for children are delightful.

The modernistic cards, done in bright colors in startling effect, interpret the usual Valentine symbols in riotous designs. A heart, for example, may be broken into confusion by triangles of the roseate lights of an inspiration which begins at the top of the page and descends in shafts to the bottom and over to the back and then to the inside where the verse, snappily informs you:

"I'm sending you a wish for Valentine Day—
That the things you long for may all come your way."

Or the design may be one of tropic fruits and flowers with futuristic blue, red, orange and purple petals almost hiding a sleekly modern maid woven into the background.

The radio, airplane, athletic sports of all kinds and all the fads of the moment are reflected in the humorous cards, with black-face damsels uttering splashy sentiments which even the boldest of today's flappers might hesitate to send.

College Club Has Dance Friday Eve

Juvenile Costumes Worn at Affair Given Friday In Up Town Dance Palace; Collegians Play

The College Club entertained Friday evening with a dance at the Up-Town Dance Palace and The Collegians furnished music for the occasion.

As this was a "Kid Dance" guests were in juvenile costume and the dance hall was transformed into a toyland for the evening.

Chaperones for the occasion were Dr. and Mrs. R. B. Hutchinson, Mr and Mrs. Kenneth I. Kimbro, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Sproles, Mr. and Mrs. Ross McWhorter, Mr. and Mrs. Jack May.

CAMP FIRE MEETS

Sara Sue Stewart Is Hostess Friday Afternoon

A program was given Friday afternoon when the Nowetohpatimmin Camp Fire troop met with Sara Sue Stewart at 1901 16th Street. Readings were given by Vondelle Prideaux, Marguerite Spencer and Eloise Smith and Wildring B. Sherrod played a piano solo.

Missionary Society And Ladies Aid Of First Christian Church Sponsor Junior Societies; Observe Programs

Money Is Invested By Aid During 1928; Charity And Missions Are Included In Program

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of a series of articles on the Women's Missionary Societies of this city. Others will follow in the Sunday Avalanche-Journal until each society in the city has been included.)

By BLANCHE E. BEAN

Women's work in the First Christian church, which is located at 16th street and Avenue J, is confined to two societies, the Women's Missionary society which meets monthly, and the Ladies Aid which meets on three Monday afternoons in the month. These societies sponsor junior organizations within the congregation.

Home and foreign missions, benevolences and educational work, other than local church work, are included in the programs of the missionary society, and the general aid, which is divided into units, is concerned principally with local activities.

The Young Women's circle is an organization among girls 18 to 22 years of age and this unit has Mrs. R. A. Mills as a sponsor-mother. The Young Matrons' Auxiliary has been organized within the last two weeks.

Money Invested

During the year of 1928 the Ladies Aid of the church made a total of $1,588.40, and $900 was invested in building and loan stock for the society. A total of $258 was spent on boxes for the poor and orphans, for flowers to be sent the sick and in other charity work.

Several activities were engaged in by the society in making this money. During the annual district Rotary convention in Lubbock last spring, the society served a banquet and a luncheon to several hundred people and cleared $1,141.08 on the two meals. There is a calendar plan in effect for members who do not wish to work in the money-making campaigns and these women contribute regular amounts.

Dishes valued at $100 were given to the church by this society last year through a subscription campaign for Holland's magazine.

These Were Executives.

New officers took charge of this society at the beginning of the year but accomplishments described in this article were carried on under the administration of Mrs. J. O. Jones, president, with Mrs. N. L. Benson as secretary.

Circle officers for last year included the following: Circle 1, Mrs. Mary Hinton, chairman, and Mrs. J. E. Van Buskirk, secretary; Circle 2, Mrs. R. A. Mills, chairman, and Mrs. J. B. Rhodes, secretary; Circle 3, Mrs. J. F. Tom, chairman, and Miss Bess Edwards, secretary.

Mrs. W. T. Milam is president of the aid for this year with Mrs. W. C. Wood as first vice-president, Mrs. Clyde F. Elkins as second vice-president, Mrs. E. C. Young, secretary, and Mrs. O. A. Terry as treasurer.

Mrs. L. E. Grimes is chairman of Circle 1, Mrs. A. T. Biggers is Circle 2 chairman and Mrs. Arthur Brown is Circle 3 chairman.

Each circle follows a Bible study course throughout the year and society hours are observed by each group. There is an approximate membership of 65 in the Ladies Aid.

Each A Unit

Since the Aid and the Missionary Society are distinct organizations, membership is separate, although the church women are urged to affiliate with each society.

Membership in th: W. M. S., which is the local branch of the National Christian Missionary Society, is now about sixty. The association here is affiliated with the state and national societies and all the money in the society goes through the higher offices for home and foreign missionary work.

Programs which are sent out from the headquarters office at Indianapolis, Ind., are observed and the society year has its beginning July 1.

The local society contributes to the support of the Mexican Institute of the church at San Antonio and a

National PTA Congress To Observe Anniversary Of Founding Thirty-Three Years Ago

Many of the 1900 units of the Texas Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teachers Associations will, on or near February 17, pay homage to the women who thirty-three years ago in Washington, D. C., formed a national organization with the avowed purpose of forming other groups in local communities for the study of the problems of parenthood and of childhood in general, in order that the children of the land might have a better chance to develop into healthy, sane, worthy citizens.

Thus it is seen that the national organization came first and came through the vision and enterprise of mothers who themselves felt the need of training for parenthood. Two women stand out in this first meeting, Mrs. Theodore Birney, who became the first president, and Mrs. Phobe Hearst, who freely gave of her means to the struggling organization which was first known as "The National Congress of Mothers," but which now is known as the "National Congress of Parents and Teachers."

Congress Expands

The Congress has gone far since that day February 17, 1897, when Mrs. Birney said: "Every man and woman who begins to comprehend the sacred obligation due to helpless children, and who longs for their harmonious development, possess the attributes which will lead him or her to forward this development. Irrespective of creed or condition, we stand for parenthood, childhood, homehood. In the child and in our treatment of him rests the solution of the problems which confront society today." This thirty-second anniversary finds the organization with forty-nine state branches, more than 20,000 units with more than a million and a quarter members. It has headquarters at the National Capitol with an executive secretary, an extension secretary, and an office staff; a field secretary and two organizers; an official magazine, "Child Welfare", and hundreds of thousands of leaflets printed and distributed each year.

The nature of the observance of this national birthday, National Founders' Day, or Child Welfare Day, as it is variously called, is two fold: first it strives to bring about a better appreciation of the aims and ideals of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, a keener insight into the real love of childhood that prompted the calling of the meeting by Mrs. Birney and Mrs. Hearst so many years ago; and second, it calls for a small free will offering or birthday gift.

Cause Rededication

The first part of the observation it is believed, will cause a rededication on the part of the members of their powers to the unselfish task of making things smoother and better for the child in the midst, and the second part is used to extend the organization into unoccupied territory. Half of the birthday gift is sent to the national organization and half of it is retained in the state.

Presbyterian Women Will Make Offering

New officers will be elected and a self denial offering will be taken for foreign mission tomorrow afternoon when the First Presbyterian auxiliary meets at 3 o'clock.

Formal Gown

BY MADELON

Simplicity and the straightline for daytime, is the rule. Contrarily, full crispness of line for evening, and fullsome, supple femininity. Except upon occasion the smart woman this spring will seldom appear as a boyishly starved and "stringy" person in the evening.

In the evening gown sketched we see a joyous use of crisp rayon faille combined with georgette in an extremely feminine and graceful skirt and tightly bodiced design. The huge bow perked on one side at both front and back, and the fine shirring of the over-panels, add to the effect of dainty grace far removed from the lanky fashion of not so many moons ago.

Color is particularly effective in this garment. It is coral, closely approximating flames just ready to dart into blues and lavenders.

Tea Room Is Scene Of Parties On Friday Evening And Saturday As Young Women Entertain

Four young women of the Technological College faculty entertained with two affairs during the week-end, having as their guests other faculty people and a few other friends. These affairs were given at Mrs. Ragsdale's tea room at the end of Broadway and bridge was played on each occasion.

The Valentine motif was used and a plate luncheon of heart-shaped sandwiches, lemon rolls, creamed chicken in timbales, olives, cake and coffee was passed at the parties.

Guests at the party on Friday evening included Mr and Mrs. James Allen, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Gates, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Knickerbocker, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mahoney, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Waghorne, Misses Eunice Cox, Mabel Erwin, Katherine Harper, Bessie League, Frances Hoyt Ford, Ruth Horn, Gussie Teague, Margaret Weeks, Margaret McNabb, Evelyn Knipp, Lynn Dougherty, Vivian Johnson, Anna Jo Pendleton, Ruth Pirtle, Messrs. The Woman's Day

By Allene Sumner

Married women, complains and analyzes Mrs. May Sutton Bundy, famous tennis player, have little chance competing against girls free from responsibilities.

"The single girl has practically nothing to do aside from taking the ruogh edges off her game," she says. "Her clothes are all to that as well as to the million ready for her. Her mother sees other little details that come up in the course of a day."

• • • •

The Other Side

To which the single girl tennis player will drone a sarcastic "Is ZAT so?" reminding the married lady of her own trials and tribulations. It's so easy to see only one's own lot and not the pros and cons of the other fellow's.

Employed married women argue, for instance, that they're more efficient on the job than the single girl because they are "settled" and their minds aren't on dates and so on. The single girl argues equally as reasonably that her mind isn't on the details of home-making.

So human not to see the other side but hardly worthy of really big people!

• • • •

Ladies Preferred?

A burial pit containing the regally adorned bodies of 39 high court ladies has just been discovered by the expedition digging at the royal cemetery of Ur of the Chaldees. The discovery of the ladies means that the diggers are almost upon the burial chamber of some mighty king for whom so huge a slaughter was prepared for his funeral.

• • • •

A Grim Question

Six men were also found in the burial pit. Here's a fine question for the femininists. Can they take comfort from the fact that slaughtered women were considered infinitely more of a sacrafice to a mighty king than men, therefore 39 of the former and only 6 of the latter or does it mean that women were of such less worth they could be spared in greater measure than the mighty males?

• • • •

Would You Choose Thus?

Mrs. Emma McMahon of Kansas City recently celebrated her 107th birthday by taking the street car to her daily job as seamstress in the Good Will Industries. To many people this ability to work even when over a hundred is the epitome of a happy and successful life. But I wonder if we don't glorify work too much. Somehow I think of old ladies being able to stop and do the things they never had time nor money to do in the earlier year sof baby rearing.

Berean Class Tea To Be In McFarland Home; D.A.R. To Have Special Program And PTA Groups Meet

The approach of Valentine and George Washington's birthday anniversary are bringing announcements of a number of social functions in the city. These two events are annually popular entertaining times and several societies have yearly functions during February.

The annual Colonial tea of the First Christian Berean Sunday school class will be on the afternoon of February 22 in the home of Mrs. Sam J. McFarland in the O'Neall Terrace. Class members will be in costue for this affair.

Although it is customary for the Nancy Anderson chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution to entertain on February 22 with a tea, the members have decided this year to have a special program on that afternoon in the home of Mrs. A. H. Leidigh at 2101 17th street.

Party For Teachers

Teachers in the public schools are to be entertained on the evening of Washington's birthday with an affair in parlors of the First Christian church. The Parent-Teacher Association Council members will be hostesses.

Along with the other affairs, a number of Technological college functions have been forecast for the next few weeks.

An all-college girls party is to be given at Cheri Casa by the Woman's Forum on February 16. This is to be an informal bridge and forty-two party and the Washington birthday motif will be used.

Girls and Boys Glee clubs of the college are planning a joint Valentine party to be given on Tuesday evening of this week in the college gymnasium and dates have been scheduled for some of these. The Freshman affair will be on the evening of March 9 and the Junior dance will be on April 6 or April 13, the definite date to be announced later.

Home Economics club members are entertaining on the evening of March 1 with a dance at the gym and the Sophomore class dance will be on February 21 with Grady Gilder's orchestra playing. The dance committee is composed of Mendle Hughlett, Bill Walker and Miss Margaret Harvey.

The college Faculty is to attend an affair on the evening of February 15 in the gymnasium and Miss Ruth Pirtle will be in charge of a dramatic program. Mrs. R. M. Chitwood is at the head of the refreshment committee.

Affair For Seniors

Less definite plans have been made for affairs still later in the spring. A committee in the American Association of University Women, with Mrs. G. L. Tuve as chairman, is arranging for the annual tea to be given for high school senior girls and this affair probably will be in April. Church women's societies probably will follow an annual custom and entertain high schol seniors who are members of their congregations.

Other affairs are being forecast. The Lubbock Music club is entertaining on Friday evening of this week at the Country club with a reception for husbands of members and other guests. Mrs. Roscoe Wilson is chairman of the committee arranging this function.

Although dates have not been set, several have indicated that they will entertain for Mrs. Lorenz Ellis who was married last week in Amarillo. She was the former Miss Ophelia Steele. Mr. and Mrs. Ellis are expected to return from a honeymoon about the last of this week.

Dates For Music Festival Chosen; Artist Selected

Names of Contestants And Fees To Be Sent In By February 14; Eliminations On March 9

The Spring Festival, an event sponsored in Lubbock annually by music teachers of the South Plains, will be on March 14, 15 and 16, according to an announcement made yesterday afternoon, and Silvio Scionti of New York and Chicago will be the artist-judge.

The festival is being conducted two weeks earlier than usual this year, according to Miss Margaret Huff, president of the South Plains Music Teachers' Association, and elimination contests will be held on March 9 with Miss Craig Lasley of Abilene as the elimination judge.

Names and fees of all contestants must be in one month before the date of the Festival ,that is by February 14, Miss Huff said.

Mr Scionti is to give an artist program on the evening of March 14 and the Lubbock High School band, which is directed by J. W. Crowley, will appear in a program on the next evening. The outstanding event of the third day will be the business meeting of the association.

Since Mr. Scionti played in Lubbock a number of years ago, he is not unknown on the Plains. Miss Huff studied under this man and was instrumental in bringing him here before.

LUNCHEON — Luncheon toast, leaf lettuce and potato salad, stuffed figs, milk, tea.

DINNER — Lamb stew with potato dumplings, baked onions, pineapple and cream cheese salad, peach fritters with raspberry sauce, milk, coffee.

Choose large leaves of lettuce and wash, crisp and dry carefully. Roll them cornucopia fashion and fill with potato salad. The salad contains shredded lettuce, diced cooked potatoes, diced cooked carrots and peas.

Luncheon toast makes an excellent chafing dish item.

Luncheon Toast.

One cup rich milk, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 tablespoon anchovy paste, 1 tablespoon Worchestershire sauce, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 4 tablespoons capers, 4 eggs, 1 teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons grated cheese, 6 triangles hot buttered toast.

Melt butter, stir in flour and cook until bubbling. Slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Cook and stir until thick and smooth. Add anchovy paste, Worcestershire sauce, pepper and capers. When boiling point is again reached, add eggs beaten with salt. Stir over the fire until thick but do not let boil. Remove from heat and keep stirring for a minute or two. Spread on toast and sprinkle with grated cheese.

Bloater paste is cheaper than anchovy paste and can be substituted if more convenient.

White Is Always Popular For Wear At Palm Beach

Mrs. John R. Fell

Mrs. Raymond Balfe

Mrs. C. Edgarton Warburton

By BETSY SCHUYLER
NEA Service Writer

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 9.—After a short stay in Palm Beach, I always wonder why women ever wear any color but white—and I continue to wonder until I get back to the smoke and dirt of New York, and then I wonder why they ever wear anything but black.

Nothing is ever smarter here than white—for day or for evening. Against the background of blue sky, green grass and brilliant flowers it is delightful on the golf course, in the patio—or for any occasion. And it need never be monotonous, for a brilliant scarf, a chic, impudent hat of red or green, and color notes in the accessories are all it needs for variety and accent.

I needed only the opening of "Palm Beach Nights" at the Whitehall hotel, to convince me that white tulle was the ideal evening gown—a moded bodice of white satin or taffeta, and an irregular, long skirt of yards and yards of tulle, will glorify the slender girlish figure as nothing else will. Add what strass on crystal embroidery you wish, if you must have decoration.

A Brilliant Setting

I think I never saw a more lovely sight than the West Terrace where the dancing was, with its tiny lights, its brilliant moonlight, and its lovely women.

The lengthened skirt, and loops and tiers, sometimes almost a bustle effect in the eagerness to emphasize the back line, were features insisted upon by the smart women. Long side draperies too and very short back and front panels were also popular. After white, black played an important role, as did soft pastel shades and filmy printed chiffons, that were just wisps—but fascinating ones. The print of this season, that is really satisfying, is an exotic, undefinable creation, that bears no resemblance to the "prints" that have become standardized.

Another feature that is worthy of mention is the invisible shoulder strap, a strap of flesh colored chiffon which is discernible only at very close range. Peplums, too, are very smart on evening gowns.

White Hair Triumphs

At the formal opening of the Colony Club, I noticed that pink and lavender, and all the shades between were very smart. The woman with prematurely white hair can revel in these shades and strike terror into the hearts of her sisters whose hair remained its natural color.

With most of these lovely evening gowns are worn three-quarter wraps of sheer velvet, sometimes in gayer colors and sometimes matching exactly the tone of the chiffon or tulle of which the frock is fashioned.

Sport attire is quite too fascinating. Mrs. Sailing Baruch looked very smart the other day in a white frock, with a full box pleated skirt and a jacket of beige, and a lacing of biege on her frock. With her was Mrs. Raymond Balfe, in a white frock trimmed with ladder hem-stitching and a hat and parasol of checked braided straw.

Needless to state the hat was wide of brim.

A Frock of Pastel Blue

Mrs. Oliver Iselin, appeared at the Golf and Tennis Club in a very attractive frock of pastel blue, with a scalloped insert made of rows of fagoting outlining the jumper. With it she wore an interesting necklace which combined small strands of pearls and deep blue stones. Her shoes were of white buck with cut out sections to give the effect of many straps.

I saw Pauline Munn in a white flannel sleeveless frock with a wide flounce made of deep box pleats and with deep reveres finishing the deep V neck. V 'n her was Katherine Ritter of Philadelphia, in a pleated sports dress and cardigan coat of light beige wool in which was an invisible check. The frock had a wide belt of what seemed to be knitted brown wool. Her hat had a crown cut in many sections and was banded in beige and brown.

Another Philadelphian who made a charming picture was Mrs. C. Edgarton Warburton, who wore a brown angora sweater with a sport dress of yellow silk, trimmed with bows and box pleats. Her millinery was a yellow scarf tie like a turban, also of yellow silk.

Typical of the day mode is the costume photographed on Mrs. John R. Fell, of white linen, sleeveless and pleated, with only a bow at the neckline. Her smart, untrimmed hat has a black band around the crown that matches the tips of her white buck shoes.

MRS. GRIGGS VISITS

District Associations Paid Compliment

Mrs. J. E. Griggs, president of the fourteenth district P. T. A., visited associations in Sudan and Amherst last week and is planning to visit the Ralls ociety tomorrow, she has announced. Mrs. Griggs expressed satisfaction over the parent teacher association in this district.

Miss Juanita Meredith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Meredith, 1614 Broadway, is very ill.

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton

©1928 by NEA Service, Inc.

It is better to teach our children judgment than to do all their deciding for them.

In a thousand little ways it can be taught. But a child can not learn it unless we give him a certain amount of liberty and opportunities to make his own decision.

For instance—on the sideboard there is a silver dish filled with bananas.

Now it happens that bananas make Bobby very, very sick. Every time he has eaten bananas he has had to take castor oil afterwards and stay in bed for two or three days.

But is Bobby forbidden to touch them? No. He may eat one if he wishes. He won't be punished nor scolded, not a bit of it. He will be put to bed and the doctor sent for and his mother or father or grandma will sit up at night and nurse him.

Remembers "Talking To"

Bobby looks longingly at the bananas. He loves them so! Just one won't hurt him this time, perhaps. But there pops into his head the talk he had with his mother, or rather the "talking to" his mother gave him the last time he was ill.

It went something like this: "Bobby, you know now that every time you eat a banana you suffer for it afterward. Not only do you suffer but the rest of us do. We always worry terribly every time your temperature gets so high and besides it isn't easy for us to sit up all night with a sick little boy. And the doctor has to come several times and it costs Daddy a good bit of money he can't afford. And you can't eat your meals for a week afterward. All for one banana! Do you think it is worth all that? And I don't want you to make me say, 'No, you can't have it.' I want you to learn to look at a banana and say that to yourself."

Bobby thinks of this little talk as he looks at the bananas and passes on.

A few such lessons in self control and when Bobby is a man he won't have to begin at the beginning and pay a still higher price for indiscretion.

Large Parties Are Given During Week

Twenty-Table Affair Given In Snyder; Other Parties Are Noted In Towns Of South Plains

Bridge and forty-two affairs were the principal ones given last week on the South Plains. In-compliment functions were noted during the week.

Among the social affairs in Sweetwater last week was a bridge party given on Tuesday afternoon by Mesdames Alvin Gray, Louise Overton and Guy Morris. A patriotic motif was used for the affair, which was given in Mrs. Gray's home.

Miss Helen Brand of Sweetwater entertained a number of her friends with bridge on Friday evening, celebrating her fourteenth birthday.

Three Entertain

Mesdames T. O. Collier, Charles Malone and O. M. Unger entertained with a bridge party in Plainview Thursday afternoon and seventeen tables were in play. Mr. and Mrs. G. W. McDonald entertained the 1934 Forty-Two club of Plainview with a delightful party on Tuesday evening and a number of other social functions filled the week there.

Miss Laverne McCormick of Wilson entertained on Wednesday evening in her home with a forty-two party honoring Miss Othella Hamilton and Wiley Hamilton, who have moved to Barstow. Other guests included Misses Laverne Owens, Lilie Bird, Evelyn Stand, Hattie Server, Chloie Huffaker, Messrs. Noel Galloway, Alvin Crews, Stanley Barksdale, Marvin Bird and Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Todd.

Mrs. M. C. Golding of Spur entertained the 1925 Bridge club Wednesday afternoon at her home. Her guests included Mesdames F. W. Jennings, James B. Reed, E. A. Russell, R. C. Forbis, Nellie Davis, C. L. Love, Frank Laverty, W. D. Wilson, E. L. Turner, Riley Wooten, Oren McClure and Jim Edd Hall.

Compliments Stokers

Mrs. H. J. Brice of Snyder complimented Mr. and Mrs. Guy Stoker on Friday evening with a forty-two party in her home. There were a number of guests, including Messrs. and Mesdames T. H. Duff, Collie Fish, C. Wedgeworth, Wayne Williams, Joe Graham, Howell Harpole, G. B. Clark, jr., J. M. Claunch, Melvin Blackard, George Oldham, Clyde Shull, Forest Sears, O. D. Carter and Misses Mattie Ross and Maurine Cunningham, Marilu Rosser, Lila Mae Williamson, Katherine Northcutt, Maurine Stimson, Mary Ellen Martin and Herschel Rucker.

Among the other Snyder affairs of the week were a twenty-table forty-two party given by Mesdames Brice, George Northcutt and Nelson Dunn on Thursday afternoon and a party given by Miss Cecile Strayhorn on Tuesday afternoon in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Strayhorn.

Annual Teas

who is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Maple Wilson, probably will be honored with some affairs. Mrs. Wilson has announced a party for Thursday of the week.

Mrs. Dorrance D. Roderick, who is moving to El Paso, was honoree at a luncheon served yesterday in the Kenneth I. Kimbro home with M Kimbro and Mrs. Owen W. McWhorter entertaining, and Mrs. Jed A. Rix has announced a luncheon for 1 o'clock Wednesday at Hotel Lubbock in Mrs. Roderick's honor.

Women in the First Presbyterian Auxiliary are planning to have a Saint Patrick's Day tea in March at a date and place to be announced. This affair probably will be scheduled at the society meeting tomorrow.

Clubs to Meet.

In addition to thes social events, there are club functions to occur during the spring months.

April 25, 26, and 27 have been selected as meeting dates for the annual convention of the seventh district of the Texas Federation of Women's clubs which is to be in Snyder this year, according to Mrs. J. E. Griggs, secretary of the district. Mrs. Wade Hampton, of Quanah is program chairman for the convention and is planning an interesting program, Mrs. Griggs said.

The fourteenth district of the Texas Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations is meeting in Floydada early in April. Mrs. Griggs is president of this district and announced a change in the meeting place last week. Dates have not been set, but she indicated that a time will be chosen soon.

Mrs. E. M. Nowlin left yesterday afternoon for Abilene after having visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George R. Bean, for a week. She will meet Mr. Nowlin in Abilene for the week-end and they will go on to their home in Knox City from there.

Sudan Women Hear Lubbock Speaker

SUDAN, Feb. 9—The Parent-Teacher Association of Sudan met in called session in the high school building yesterday afternoon to transact such business as was necessary for the association. Among its business matters was one of entertaining the luncheon club at its next regular meeting, Friday, February 15. This entertainment will be in the corridors of the high school which were offered to the P. T. A. by the superintendent of the schools.

At the conclusion of the business meeting Mrs. J. E. Griggs, of Lubbock, resident of district number fourteen of the National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations, delivered a splendid address on the Aims, Needs and Methods of the Parent-Teacher Associations.

Following the address of Mrs. Griggs, came a short inspirational address by Mrs. Lester Lagrange, of Amherst, who is sixth vice-president of the same district. The association then adjourned to the home economics department of the school where there had been prepared refreshments for them.

Missionary Society

Bible chair is maintained at the University of Texas. Last year's budget was $235 but the society sent $250 into the higher offices. This money is raised through dues and special pledges.

Among the special days observed by the society last year were Woman's Day on the first Sunday in December and Easter. Offerings made on these days went into the treasury of the W. M. S.

Mrs. Elkins President

Mrs. Clyde F. Elkins is president of the society and other officers are as follows: First vice-president, Mrs. J. E. Hartley; second vice-president, Mrs. R. L. Howell; secretary, Mrs. Homer Pharr; treasurer, Mrs. R. W. Blake; publicity and literature chairman, Mrs. O. A. Terry. This society is divided into three groups over each of which is a leader.

Programs are carried on through the society magazine, "The World Call" and leaflets that are sent here from Indianapolis. Mrs. Sam J. McFarland is general program chairman.

Meet Monthly

Miss Helen Robertson is president of the Young Women's circle which meets on the first Wednesday evening in each month at 6:30 o'clock with the sponsor, Mrs. Mills. Each girl brings some food and this is supplemented by the sponsor to form a supper for the group. A missionary program is given and a social hour enjoyed.

Miss Jerda Casey is vice-president of the society with Miss Lillian Nelson as secretary-treasurer and Miss Annie Lou Barrier as reporter.

The auxiliary was organized in November 1928 with a membership of 10 and has been growing since then. In addition to the officers, the membership now includes Misses Nada Casey, Eleanor Nelson, Mary Eleanor Quick, Joellene Vannoy, Inez Marshall, Kathryn Scribners, Merlyn McGuire, Jessie Walker, Ouida Davis, Pearl Harrison, Elizabeth Adams, Mrs. James Smith and Mrs. Mildred Armstrong.

Mrs. Herbert Carlock is president of the Young Matron's Auxiliary, which was formed on January 29 under the sponsorship of the General Aid. A musical tea was given by this organization on Wednesday afternoon of last week and prospective members were invited.

Charter members of this organization include Mesdames Paul Barrier, Leo Edwards, T. T. Garrard, W. C. Wood, K. M. Renner, Carlock, O. A. Terry, L. E. Grimes, A. M. Johnson and Forrest Lindsey. Mrs. Garrard is reporter, Mrs. Barrier is vice-president and Mrs. Edwards is secretary. This group will function as a part of the General Aid.

FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST SCIENTIST

Services are held regularly each Sunday at 11 a. m. and on each Wednesday at 8 p. m. when testimonials of healing and remarks on Christian science are given. Sunday school is held at 9:45 a. m. for pupils under the age of twenty.

The subject of the lesson for today is "Spirit," and the golden text is from 1 Corinthians 2:14, "The natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned."

A reading room is maintained at the church and is open on Tuesday and Friday afternoon from 2 p. m. until 5 p. m. All authorized Christian science literature may be read free, purchased or borrowed.

The public is cordially invited to attend the services and enjoy the reading room.

las, who attended the first meeting thirty-three years ago and who is thereby a charter member of the national organization as well as the organizer of the Texas Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations and its first state president, is the state chairman of Founders' Day. She has already had literature sent to each individual president and has made suggestions to them about the observance of the birthday. Mrs. Porter is herself the author of a pageant which is widely used in the observances over the state, and just recently Mrs. W. F. Doughty has arranged another pageant which is suitable and effective for this purpose. Both of these pageants are available at the state office of the Texas Congress of Mothers, Capitol Station, Austin.

Challenge of P. T. A.

Educators, statesmen, all real thinkers of today echo the words of Mrs. Birney thirty odd years ago: "In the child and in our treatment him rests the solution of the problems that confront society today." And in view of the many problems which are confronting the world today it would seem that more than 56,000 men and women in Texas would stand with Mrs. Birney on the statement: "Irrespective of creed or condition, we stand for parenthood, childhood, homehood, and would write to study these subjects and to help solve the problems. This is the great challenge of the Parent-Teacher Association.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

BY MADAME RUBINSTEIN

The sleeves, the belt, the shoulder line—all play a most important part in the selection of a bodice, and all these points should be well considered in choosing of such a garment whether it be a gown in one piece or part of a garment, as the case may be.

A small woman would do well to choose a gown in one color, but if she feels that a blouse and skirt of contrasting color is what fashion and the occasion demand, she should then be careful that these do not cut her exactly in half. It is preferable for the blouse to come well below the hips, and, if possible, even to the knees. Vertical trimmings may be very nicely used in frocks for the small woman, but plain materials, or those with a small figure or stripe are the best selection for her. Sports frocks are very good, but if this woman wears a belt, it should be a narrow, simple one. Pockets should be unobtrusive and narrow cuffs are best. Little jackets should not extend below the hipline.

The tall, thin woman would do well to conceive and select her bodices in horizontal terms, and cut down her too-long lines with broad, wide treatment. Broad full cuffs give better proportions to over-long arms, and gloves of the gauntlet or pull-on type, which contrast with the dress or coat, are very helpful. Peasant, or balloon sleeves, too, conceal arms which are too thin, and at the same time give breadth to the figure. All sorts of jumpers and cape effects are good, and these are best when they extend well below the waist. Russian blouses and broad belts all may do their share in being of value to the tall, thin woman, while in jewelry the broad bracelet and the long pendant earrings are little touches which contribute to normalize the ensemble.

The problem of the stout woman is perhaps the most difficult. She would do well to cling to effects almost severe in their simplicity. Long-waisted frocks, long straight panels, either as part of the dress and extending below the waist or hanging from the shoulder to below the waist. Belts should be of self-color and placed below, and the waistline, itself, should never be too tight, but easy and graceful. The sleeves should be long, but not too tight, and a little flare at the bottom of the sleeve will add length. If the bust is too large to be in proportion to the rest of the figure, let the neckline be cut to a V, which extends below the bustline or to the waist, and this may be filled in with a little vestee. Care should be taken not to have this opening too wide, as in that case the effect would be broadening. Surplice and diagonal lines are probably the best allies of the stout woman, and the use of the long, thin jabot will be found most helpful.

When a garment has good lines, and suits your particular style, it is correct.

BREAKS FROM JAIL

Wink Bastile Unable To Hold Fugitives

WINK, Tex., Feb. 9 (AP)—Arrested and held for extradition to Oklahoma, where he is wanted in the slaying of two men, Wilbur Garton escaped from the Wink jail last night.

A man overpowered and disarmed Jailer John Reeves, and then forced E. H. Patrick to open the door into Garton's cell. After Garton had snatched up some clothing, the two got into an automobile and sped toward the New Mexico line, a few miles away. Neither of the fugitives nor the automobile had been located today despite an intensive search.

Memories Of Old Days Recalled By Aged Newspapers

CANYON, Feb. 9 (AP)—J. R. Gaut and Mrs. Ida Gaut of Amarillo, have just presented the Panhandle-Plains Historical Society two Panhandle newspapers dated during the nineties.

The Western Advocate was printed at Amarillo with J. R. Gaut as its editor and L. Gough as his associate. The paper is dated May 18, 1899, was published weekly, and was the successor of the Amarillo Stockman and Democrat.

The other paper, date May 19, 1893, is the Canyon City Headlight, published by J. R. Gaut.

This paper tells of a trail herd being held up for trespassing as its boss attempted to cross the T-Anchor pasture. Advertisements of Elkhart harness, wagons, and buggies occupy the positions now used by autos. Two advertisements of the T-Anchor saloon would seem to indicate that this was a prosperous patron of the newspaper.

Familiar names in this paper are those of John Knight, Dr. J. M. Black, and A. E. Brown, all of whom still live at Canyon.

The struggle to secure settlers was strong in those days and people are advised to "Come to Canyon where you can have fish three times a day" while another item relates that N. Thompson caught 91 fish in one day. If the creeks near Canyon would yield as many fish in 1929, Canyon would speedily become a headquarters for tourists.

TO INAUGURATION

Bilbo Will Attend Fete At Washington

BILOXI, Miss., Feb. 9 (AP)—Governor Bilbo of Mississippi, announced today that he will attend the inauguration of Herbert Hoover, accompanied by his staff of 80 colonels.

During the campaign Gov. Bilbo received national publicity through a quoted allegation that Mr. Hoover danced with a negro woman in Mississippi.

Mrs. J. E. Hamilton has been called to Roswell by the serious illness of her niece, Mrs. F. A. Beasley, who formerly lived here.

Discover Use For Farm By-Products

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal

CANYON, Feb. 9—The manager of the farm which is operated as a part of the agricultural projects of the West Texas State Teachers' College believes in teaching young college men to utilize the products that are usually wasted.

Old fences, frame buildings no longer needed, and lumber from old barns have been used to build a shed 100 feet long and which now stands on that part of the old T-Anchor ranch which is used as the college dairy and farm.

The shed is a substantial structure, including a shelter for cattle 12 feet by 75 feet, and a group of four horse stalls 12 by 24 feet. A granary, about to fall has been repaired and placed in line with the long shed, thus improving the looks of the lot east of the dairy barn. The shed is so planned that mangers and stanchions can be added if they are needed. The cows and young stock can be kept in a separate place making their handling much easier.

All of the work of building these improvements was done by college boys and the handy man of the college farm, under the direction of T. M. Moore.

PILFER VAULT

Cashier Locked Inside Of Missouri Bank

MARIONVILLE, Mo., Feb. 9 (AP)—Four young men escaped today with $3,363 they took from the vault of the Bank of Marionville, after they had held Cashier R. C. Turrentine a prisoner all night waiting for the time lock to permit the vault to be opened.

The four spent the night at the home of Turrentine. After the robbery two of the men accompanied Turrentine back to his home and locked him and his wife and a maid in a small closet.

CHILD BURNS TO DEATH

MARSHALL, Tex., Feb. 9 (AP)—While an older sister was across the street mailing a letter and her parents were away from home, Sybil Sullivan, 8 years old, was burned to death. Her clothing caught fire accidentally.

'Talkies' Here; First Sound Film To Come Thursday

Ramon Novarro Seen As Air Ace At Palace Today

First Class Program Of Cinema Attractions, Featuring Start Of Talkies, Scheduled For Week

The secret is out.

The South Plains first "talking movie" machine is already in Lubbock.

The machine arrived yesterday and will be installed immediate at the Palace theater. The complete apparatus is expected to be ready for operation with the beginning of Thursday's program at which time "Alias Jimmy Valentine," sensationally successful as a stage production, will be presented to Lubbock theater patrons as their first taste of talking movies. William Haines is starred in the production.

More detailed announcements concerning the talking movie apparatus at the Palace will be made later this week. As a matter of fact the Palace management did not intend for the news that the apparatus had arrived to leak out before they were ready to start its operation.

Navarro As Flier

The week's entertainment calendar—and that means chiefly movies in Lubbock—starts with that most popular of stars, Ramon Novarro, at the Palace in "The Flying Fleet."

"The Flying Fleet" is like so many other splendid pictures of the year a tale of the air. It features Novarro as an aviator and all the thrills inherent in an air picture are carried out in the extreme by Novarro. There are a parachute jumps from speeding planes, sensational maneuvers in the skies, the wreck of a great plane at sea, and a rescue by the airplane carrier, mother ship of the eagles of the fleet. Thrills and romance are combined in an intricate and engrossing pattern in "The Flying Fleet." Anita Page is in the supporting cast.

Haines In Talkie

Starting Thursday, the first talkie will be presented at the Palace.

In "Alias Jimmy Valentine," William Haines, sensationally popular as a comedian, shows his versatility by carrying a "straight" dramatic role—as Haines expresses it he likes the dramatic roles better than the comedy parts because the comedy requires more effort.

There's a whiz of a cast supporting Haines in the "talkie." The cast includes such cinema luminaries as Lionel Barrymore, Karl Dane, Tully Marshall and others.

Lyric, Rex Programs

The Lyric and Rex theaters also present all-feature program during the week.

Betty Compson, another of those "it" girls is at the Lyric Monday and Tuesday in "Temptations of a Shop Girl" a story of the poor working girls. There is an excellent comedy and an up-to-the minute news reel.

Credigton Hale in "Speeding Through," together with a comedy, is the feature for Tuesday.

Johnny Walker and Silverstreak, the dog star of the movies, are shown Wednesday and Thursday in "The Wonder Dog."

Friday and Saturday there is Mrs. Jack Dempsey, or Estelle Taylor, as everyone persists in calling her, in "Singapore Mutiny," together with a comedy and a chapter of the Fables.

The Rex has a program replete with interesting attractions and interspersed with spicy comedies and news reels.

News Notes Of The Movies

Paramount has brought the motion picture rights to Margery H. Lawrences' story, "A Woman Who Needed Killing." This story will be be filmed as a 100 per cent dialogue picture at the Paramount West Coast studios, and will be given one of the strongest casts yet assembled for a talking picture.

Paramount has taken a definite stand on talking and silent motion pictures with the announcement by Jesse L. Lasky for that organization that "The Four Feathers," which represents its maker's most pretentious work of the year, will be released with sound effects and music synchronization only.

Paramount has signed William Powell to new contract which specifically provides for his services in talking films.

Willard Mack has placed "Hunted," his own play, in work at M-G-M studio.

"Bridge of San Luis Rey" went into production last week at M-G-M studio on Coast. Lily Damita will play role of Camila. Ernest Torrence will be Uncle io, and Emily Fitzroy the Marquess. Jane Winton, Michale Vavitch and others have also been cast.

Car Skids; Man Killed

BIG SPRING, Feb. 9.—Leland D. Smith, 30, traveling salesman, was killed when his car skidded on the icy road thirteen miles west of Big Spring Thursday morning. A Mr. Templeton was driving the car and escaped unhurt. Templeton flagged a passenger train immediately after the accident and Smith was taken to Stanton, where he died. Smith lived in El Paso.

Romance, Thrills Blend In Picture

Some Of Best "Air Shots" Are Afforded In Film To Be Presented Starting On Sunday At Palace

Ramon Novarro, beloved of screen fans the world over, opens at the Palace Theatre today in one of the most thrilling film plays of his career. It is "The Flying Fleet," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's contribution to the motion pictures on aviation.

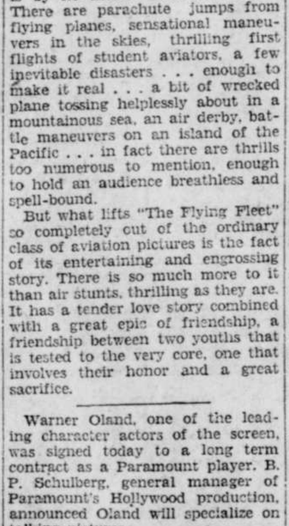

It is splendidly done and affords some of the best "air shots" that have yet been seen on the screen. It also deals with a new angle of aviation, that is new as far as pictures are concerned, for it treats of thrilling flights above the sea. The story is concerned with aviation in the U. S. navy.

What gave this reviewer the greatest thrill was the wreck of a giant plane at sea and a rescue by the airplane carrier, mother ship of the eagles of the fleet. But that is by no means the only thrill. There are parachute jumps from flying planes, sensational maneuvers in the skies, thrilling first flights of student aviators, a few inevitable disasters . . . enough to make it real . . . a bit of wrecked plane tossing helplessly about in a mountainous sea, an air derby, battle maneuvers on an island of the Pacific . . . in fact there are thrills too numerous to mention, enough to hold an audience breathless and spell-bound.

But what lifts "The Flying Fleet" so completely out of the ordinary class of aviation pictures is the fact of its entertaining and engrossing story. There is so much more to it than air stunts, thrilling as they are. It has a tender love story combined with a great epic of friendship, a friendship between two youths that is tested to the very core, one that involves their honor and a great sacrifice.

Warner Oland, one of the leading character actors of the screen, was signed today to a long term contract as a Paramount player. B. P. Schulberg, general manager of Paramount's Hollywood production, announced Oland will specialize on talking pictures.

Mal St. Clair has taken up the megaphone released by Ted Wilde in directing Harold Lloyd. Wilde resigned because of illness.

Stage To Suffer Most From Talkies DeMille Believes

After The Furore Subsides, Both Silent And Spoken Pictures Will Remain, So Directors Assert

BY WADE WERNER

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 9. — As in man another brawl, it is going to be an innocent by-stander who will get the worst of it in the present fight for supremacy between silent screen and talkies. That innocent bystander, believes Cecil B. DeMille, is the legitimate stage.

"When all the shouting is over," observed De Mille, at work on his first picture, "the silent screen still will be with us, and the talkies, too; but I very much fear that the legitimate stage will have passed away."

Looking ahead a few years and making allowances for the technical requirements bound to come into talking picture production, DeMille cannot see anything the stage could offer which could not be done as well, from the box-office point of view, on the talking screen. There are many stories, on the other hand which can be told best in pictorial silence.

SILENT GREATNESS

"There always will be," explained the producer-director, "many stories too big for dialog, too vast for the spoken word. They should and will be told on the silent screen. To cite one of my pictures—"The Ten Commandments' would have been made ridiculous by any attempt to reproduce the voice of Jehovah speaking to Moses."

In line with his view on silent drama, DeMille already is planning to follow his present talking venture, "Dynamite," with another silent epic in the well-known DeMille manner. The theme he has in mind has not been announced, but he says it is one particularly adapted to silent pictorial treatment — the sort of thing impossible to do in dialog.

DRAMA IN NOISES

His faith in the future of the silent screen does not dampen in the least, DeMille's enthusiasm for talking pictures. The dramatic potentialities of noise, as distinct from dialog, intrigues him. In "Dynamite" he high-lights a conflict between hammers building a scaffold and the lilt of a love song strummed on a guitar, much as though these conflicting sounds were opposing characters in a play.

"Talking pictures," he observes, "permit a complete development of this phase of drama: more complete than the rather realastic stage. For the talking picture can shift scene in a moment, and the accompanying dramatic noises can shift with them."

Order Bond Sale

CROSBYTON, Feb. 9.—The commissioners' court of Crosby county has authorized County Judge Edgar Hutchins to advertise for bids for the $40.000 bonds which were recently voted.

The state highway commission awarded $80,000 state and federal aid to the county for the project. The plans are to pave state highway 53 from the Dickens county line to Crosbyton. This will be the first paving on the Plains for this important highway.

Chaney Mum On 'Popularity'

Famous Character Actor, Chosen Best Liked Of Male Stars, Can Present No Solution For Plaudits Of Movie Fans

"Man Of Thousand Faces" Has Never Worn Same Make-Up Although He's Spent Years In Work

BY DAN THOMAS
NEA Service Writer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Feb. 8.—"I don't know—and if I did know, I wouldn't tell you."

That was Lon Chaney's reply to my question regarding his version of why he was chosen by exhibitors as the most popular leading man on the screen in a national poll taken recently.

"It's silly for any man to talk about himself," continued Chaney. In the first place no man is going to say things that are detrimental to him. And if he says favorable things about himself, people will 'Just another actor blowing off.' If you want to know the reason, you will have to talk to some of the people I have worked with. Get their ideas — nobody cares what I think about myself anyway."

Are You Surprised?

Offhand one might be surprised to find Chaney's name heading the list of leading men. You might expect Ronald Colman, John Gilbert, Charles Rogers or Charles Farrell to be in first place. But on second thought it is not at all surprising to find Chaney at the top of the list.

For years the "man with a thousand faces" has been entertaining theatregoers. During that time he has never worn the same make-up twice. Consequently, during his years as a star his followers have never tired of him. His old fans continue to stand by him and he is acquiring new ones all the time.

Tod Browning, who has directed him in some of his biggest successes says:

"I think the secret of Lon's popularity is sincerity. I have never seen an actor take his business as seriously as Lon does. When he comes to the set he doesn't want to think of anything else. He becomes the character he is portraying.

"Another thing is loyalty. He is always ready to help anybody in the east and in return the members of the cast do their best for him. Such co-operation always shows to good advantage."

Another thing which builds Chaney up, and which Browning forgot to mention, is the type of casts he has in all of his pictures. Lon will not make a picture without the best available players supporting him. With such actors and actresses surrounding him, he is forced to do his very best.

That is one thing that helps to keep Chaney alive. The average producer surrounds his stars with cheap casts.

Facing 'Talkies' Microphone Real Ordeal To Stars

William Powell Asserts All Cinema Performers Fear Device Which Records Sound Movies

NEW YORK, Feb. 9. — Talkie terror! It is the bane of the movie actors today.

William Powell, one of Paramount's ace character actors, and now resting on his first vacation in two and one-half years, admits freely that he is a victim of the new menace to movie stars.

"Tell me how to overcome that strange fright the microphone creates in me and I'll be much obliged," he said, as weary from a long train ride he "rested" by seeing as much of New York and as many New Yorkers as possible.

"Every time I face the microphone I'm frightened silly. It seems I can not talk. And I'm not alone. Many stars have told me the same thing.

"I remember when Clive Brook first appeared in a talkie he spoke his lines, but not a sound was heard. He thought he was talking but wasn't. Something happens to the throat. Call it stage fright. It's the same feeling a fellow undergoes appearing in a premiere. That's it. Every time we face the microphone it's a first night.

"We'll get over it. We've got to get used to the talkie first. So if the spectators will just have a little patience with us and the entire movie industry, in the development of this splendid new medium, the talkie, it will aid us greatly."

Coming from William Powell that is important. He is a veteran of both stage and screen. In the last two years and a half he has appeared in 26 pictures. Before that he appeared in 200 or so stage productions, it is said. Powell is regarded as one of the most intelligent of Hollywood's many citizens. He is really more interested in what you think of his work than in whether he looks best as an Arabian sheik or a member of the French foreign legion.

Powell originally hoped to be an illustrator or comic artist. At high school he met two boys named Barton. He took one look at their excellent drawings and then at his own attempts and decided to become—an actor.

Swedish Artist Will Sing Here

Miss Edna Swanson Ver Haar, famous contralto, has been substituted for Laura T. McCoy as the artist to appear with Alberto Salvi at the Tech in a concert on February 22.

Miss Ver Haar was outstandingly successful with an opera company in the East, where she was a prima dona. She sang in Sweden as a soloist with the Swedish Choral Society of Chicago and achieved a sensational personal and artistic triumph there. Her voice has that golden quality seldom found in a contralto and no better description of it can be made than a phrase used by a great Swedish critic, who said:

"Her voice, rich and clear, her intelligent understanding of the requirements of the songs and her engaging personality won her the highest praise."

Youth Vs. Age In Cinema At Lyric

A conflict of intelligent and energetic youth against conservative old age is one of the leading factors in the latest Betty Compson production. "Temptations of a Shop Girl," produced by I. E. Chadwick, for First Division Distributors, Inc., and which comes to the Lyric Theatre today.

Miss Compson as Ruth Harrington, portrays the chief saleslady of an old fashioned department store situated on New York City's commercial East Side. The store is quite old-fashioned in the light of present day standards. As a result, business is not what it might be.

This store has been in the Horton family for three generations, and while the present owner is abroad, his son, Jerry, due to the urge of his chief saleslady, proceeds to renovate the building, and jazz up things in general, to bring it up to a snappy, modern standard. The result is surprising to Ruth and Jerry.

Haines Starred In 'Talkie' Crook Tale

"Alias Jimmy Valentine" Was Long Popular As Stage Production; Now Is On The Screen

"Alias Jimmy Valetine," William Haines' latest starring vehicle opens a three day engagement at the Palace Theatre Thursday. The film is adapted from the famous crook play of Paul Armstrong which set the standard for productions of its type when it played on Broadway.

An unusually strong supporting cast surrounds the star. Leila Hymans, picked by Henry Clive, the artist, as the most beautiful blonde in Hollywood, has the leading feminine role. Karl Dane and Tully Marshall play the parts of Haines' fellow safe crackers, and Lionel Barrymore is cast as the dectective who is always trailing the adventurous trio. This is Haines' first "straight" dramatic role since he has achieved stardom. Usually he is associated with the breezy, wise-cracking type of modern youth, and his plays are usually vehicles of laughter first of all. While "Alias Jimmy Valentine," has comedy scenes and lines, it is the tense story that holds the attention all the way.

The picture tells of the cracksman who finally determines to go straight. He goes to a small town, gets a job in a bank, and gradually wins himself position and the heart of the bank president's daughter. The story reaches a thrilling climax when his sweetheart's young sister is locked in the bank's vault Haines knows that his sandpapered fingers can open the vault, but he also realizes that the act will reveal him as what his pursuing nemesis, the dectective Doyle, has accused him of being—the master cracksman. What he does makes fascinating seeing, and the picture has an unusual ending. It was directted by Jack Conway

Conrad Nagel, Bessie Love, Leila Hymans and Robert Ober will be featured in "White Collars," an all-talker which William De Mille will direct for M-G-M.

Allan Dwan, noted director, has returned to the Fox Film Corporation. Last week he signed a contract at the West Coast studios to produce "The Far Call," from a story by Edison Marshall which appeared in Good Housekeeping Magazine. Walter Woods is writing the screen adaptation.

"Ruby Lips," newest Hal Roach comedy starring Charley Chase, will be synchronized at the new Victor recording plant, located in the newly renovated Liederkrantz Hall, at 111 East Fifty-eighth street.

Radio Compass Aided Fried In Rescuing 'Florida'

Miniature Tank On Stilts Proved Real Rescue Hero

Weakening Signals From Sinking Vessel Caught By Sensitive Apparatus Above Pilot House

By ISRAEL KLEIN
Science Editor NEA Service

A miniature tank on stilts is the inanimate hero that led to the rescue of the crew of the Italian freighter Florida by Captain George Fried of the United States liner America.

The "tank," instead of containing water, contains a radio compass by which Captain Fried was able to catch the weakening radio signals of the Florida and direct his ship straight for the scene in the turbulent Atlantic.

Three years ago a similar instrument was the mean by which Captain Fried, then commanding the Roosevelt, was directed to the rescue of a crew on the British freighter Antinoe. Each time through the raging storm and extremely low visibility the ships plowed through the waves under forced draft, under the guidance of the compass. And each time the captain sighted the foundering freighter dead ahead.

This remarkable instrument is the invention of Dr. F. A. Kolster, chief research engineer of the Kolster Radio Corporation and formerly in charge of the radio division of the U. S. bureau of standards. Dr. Kolster developed this compass in 1915, but the government kept it secret during the war and used it to locate enemy submarines that sent radio messages to their bases. Thus, American ships laden with soldiers were guided out of sight of the submarines and safely across the Atlantic.

Exact Location Unknown

Dr. Kolster's invention makes use of the generally known radio compass idea and is being applied to ships of all sizes all over the world. Not only does the compass show the position of a ship in distress, whatever the weather, but it gives the captain his true position whenever shore radio beacons or other ships can be heard.

The remarkable fact of the Florida rescue is that, although the radio operator of the sinking ship could not give his position Captain Fried was able to direct the America straight to the scene through use of the radio compass.

This instrument consists of an oval coil mounted upright in what looks like a small water tank on stilts. The instrument is placed over the pilot house. The oval coil revolves on ball bearings and is connected by a shaft running down through the roof with the rest of the compass in the pilot house.

Operated in Pilot House

In the pilot house stands a cylindrical device almost shoulder high and containing a sensitive eight-tube receiving set. The shaft from the coil runs down to this set and is rotated by means of a wheel. A dummy compass rests over the set, while a wire needle attached to the shaft points to a direction on the compass.

Earphones come from the set for use by the radio operator or anyone listening to the signals coming in through the loop overhead. A flickering light makes the signals visible so they can be read across the room.

The principle of the loop antenna is well known. As the loop is turned the signals come in stronger or weaker. When the signals are weakest, the loop is at right angles to the direction from which the signals are coming. When the signals come in strongest, the loop is turned directly toward their source and it is a simple matter to turn the ship in the same direction.

The America was kept facing the unfortunate Florida by the guidance of this compass. Its three radio operators, headed by Chief Operator Nelson M. Smith, were constantly on the job so that at no time did the America lose track of the Florida's signals.

Press Confabs

Hoover To Keep Up Coolidge Custom

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 9 (AP)—President-elect Hoover, after entering the White House, will continue the semi-weekly conferences with newspaper correspondents inaugurated by President Harding and carried forward by President Coolidge.

Since his election Mr. Hoover has had but few meetings with the large staff of correspondents assigned to report his activities, and this had given rise to conjecture as to whether he might adopt some other system than that in vogue for stating his views to the country on public questions.

From the beginning of his campaign for the presidency the next chief executive decreed that any statement he might make for publication would be in writing so that there could be no misunderstanding and he has followed that plan since November 6. Aside from his speeches on his Latin American good will tour, he has made only a few public statements and most of them have been writing.

The time required to see and realize a danger signal and begin to press on auto brakes is around one-fifth of a second. In that time, at 40 miles per hour, you could travel nearly 20 feet.

Device Which Guided Fried

Radio Corn Club Popular Feature

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 9 (AP)—Birmingham boasts of the only "bootleg" club in the nation which runs openly each week without fear of federal officers. It is the Radio "Corn club" of station WBRC, presenting a three hour program each Saturday night.

The organization, which recently celebrated its half-year anniversary, has a membership of more than 35,000 scattered from Canada to Cuba and from Maine to California.

Jazz Is Doomed

Radio Educating Musical Tastes

EDGEWATER PARK, Miss., Feb. 9 (AP)—Radio is responsible to a great extent for the decline of jazz music, in the opinion of Gus Edwards, composer and orchestra leader.

"When the radio began to give the public a better grade of music," he said, "the average man and woman seemed to discover that simple melodies and tunes, both in new and old music, were more pleasant to hear and better for dancing.

"Today the average audience prefers simple melodies that will linger in the mind and with which one can become familiar easily."

Choice Waves Are Estimated To Have Ten Million Value

Radio Commission Looks For Trouble From Big Companies Seeking To Control the Ether

WASHINGTON, Febb. 9 (AP)—Declaring it had been estimated that a radio frequency capable of carrying messages around the world has a commercial value of $10,000,000, Harold Lafount, member of the federal radio commission, says the fight of big companies for wavelengths will give the commission more work than it has had in the past, even if it becomes an appellate board.

"The radio situation is just beginning to get where it is controversial," Mr. Lafount said. "Wavelengths are becoming very valuable We do not go to court over matters that are immaterial, but our problems now relate to matters of tremendous value.

"The assignment of a channel worth millions of dollars, with many companies seeking it and many issues involved, is bound to lead to controversy and probably increased litigation. Our problems are going to be more important and more intricate than they have been in the past. Even as an appellate body we must familiarize ourselves with these involved questions, and we will need more lawyers and engineering experts."

Whether or not the powers of the commission as an administrative body are extended after March 15, there will be enough work to keep the commission and its staff in continuous operation during the entire year, Mr. Lafount says.

Under the radio act the commission, as a tribunal of appeal for broadcasters, will have jurisdiction over "matters including all applications for station licenses or for renewal of modification of existing licenses, as to the granting of which controversy may arise or against the granting of which protest is filed."

As a first-class college graduate announcer, WGY, Schenectady, exhibits Frank Singiser, Jr., of Brown Singiser is a college man in all respects, besides being the son of a Baptist minister. He carries the insignias of four fraternities and two clubs. While in college he dabbled in dramatics, debating, soccer and basketball. But all of these, Frank opines, aren't one whit as valuable as the letters he receives from fans.

Hoover's Genius For Organization Aids Radio, View

President-Elect Probably To Give More Study Toward Broadcasting Than Did His Predecessor

BY ALEXANDER R. GEORGE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9 (AP)—To Herbert Hoover, the engineer, with his capacity for organization, the radio world now looks for expert aid in solving the problems that have arisen with the rapid development of program broadcasting and wireless communication.

Although the president-elect has given no public indication of his views, it is expected he will give radio important consideration when he becomes chief executive. That he considers radio of major national import has been indicated in his statements while secretary of commerce.

At a conference in 1924 of leader in the industry, he said: "Radio has passed from the field of an adventure to that of a public utility. Nor among the utilities is there one whose activities may come more closely to the life of each of our citizens nor which holds out greater possibilities of future influence, nor which is of more potential public concern. Here is an agency that has reached deep into the family."

The present session of congress which will decide whether the federal radio commission is to be continued for a year as an administrative body or is to become an appellate board, will end before Mr. Hoover becomes president. The Special session of the new congress to be held this spring may not take up radio as majority leaders are determined to restrict its deliberations to tariff and farm relief.

Fifteen-Year-Old Boy Hears Radio With Byrd Party

Home-made Set Picks Up Messages Sent Out By Operator Aboard City Of New York, Flagship FALLS CHURCH, Va., Feb. 9 (AP)—Edward Redington, 15 year old amateur operator of Station WKR has joined the select circle of those who, sitting in their homes, have communicated by radio with the Byrd expedition thousands of miles away in the icy wastes of the south polar regions.

Using his home made set, Edward established communication with the expedition's base ship, the City of New York, at 6:35 o'clock in the morning. He picked up the ship's call as it was transmitting on the daily morning schedule. He asked the ship's operator if he had any messages to forward. He was informed that nothing of importance had occurred and that the station had no message but thanked him for his cooperation.

Edward, whose station is in his own room, almost overslept the hour of his successful communication. The call is logged in his station book as being made at 12:35 Greenwich time. His apparatus consists of a one tube low power short wave transmitter and a two tube, one-stage audio amplifier short wave receiver with head phones. His aerial is of the Zeppelin type.

Redington has a communication schedule at 7 o'clock every morning with an amateur station at Glenely, South Australia. His log book also contains a list of conversations with London, Spain, Germany, Belgiums, Portugal, Holland, Newfoundland, Canada, Wisconsin and Texas.

He is a member of the radio club at McKinley technical high school, Washington, where he is a second year student. He became interested in radio, about three years ago and now often lectures to other members of the club on his experiences.

Synchronized Transmitters Are Expected To Eliminate Obnoxious Fading From Radio Broadcasting

Scientific Solution For One Of Paramount Complaints Is Believed To Be Now Obtained

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, Feb. 9—Synchronized transmitters to overcome two "dead" spots for reception in the Chicago area are to be built by WGN and KYW, Chicago broadcasters.

WGN, the Tribune's station, and KYW, owned by Westinghouse and operated by the Herald and Examiner, are two of the most powerful stations in this district—yet there are two areas, almost in the shadow of their towers where they are not heard clearly.

To overcome this, the stations expect to build smaller stations near the "dead" spots, operating in conjunction with the larger ones. The Westinghouse company already has permission of the federal radio commission to build its repeater station. WGN's application is on file.

Synchronization of transmission is successful with WBZ and WBZA at Springfield and Boston, Mass., 100 miles apart.

In the case of KYW, with a 10,000 watt transmitter on the Congress hotel, the "dead" spot developed after the latest reallocation of wavelengths. Listeners in north Chicago and the suburbs along the north Lake Michigan shore complained of fading and heterodyne whistles.

WGN's 25,000 watt transmitter near Elgin, Ill., is not heard at all in some sections of Beverly Hills, on the south side, or in Gary, Ind. There also are small spots on the west side of the city where the station is not heard.

The Tribune will build is auxiliary station—probably 500 watts—in the southwest part of the city. Officials of KYW are seeking a location on the north side.

INFALLIBLE GUIDE

THE BIBLE is the Word of God. It proves itself to be so thoroughly consistent, so true in its delineation of its principal characters, so convincing to the human heart that turns to it for guidance, for comfort and for courage. Through all the ages it has withstood the attacks that have been made upon it by the enemies of God who have sought to prove that all or a part of it is untrue; and it stands today as the Book of Books, containing the perfect law for the guidance of men and women in their search for fellowship with Christ, and with the Father.

The Bible teaches two things: What man is to believe concerning God, and man's duty toward God. The purpose of the Bible teaching is to reveal to man God's plan for the salvation of the world, and to help men to accept it and rejoice in it. The Book, therefore, becomes to the believer a living message from the Almighty Father, revealing God's love and upholding Jesus Christ as the fulfillment of God's age-old program for the redemption of a sinful and sinning humanity. It is no wonder that it is read more than any other book, is translated into hundreds of languages and dialects, and is found in every country on the earth. It has proven its own worth.

Obviously, a book of such tremendous importance should be ever at hand. The Bible should be ever at hand. The Bible ought not to be laid away, to become dust-covered and forgotten; for none of us can fully understand the revelation of God's plans and purposes, and all of us need the counsel of our associates as we seek the truth in the inspired passages of Holy Writ. All the Bible should be studied, for all of it, from the beginning to the end, is given to us for a purpose, and that purpose is to make God known to men and to teach men how to conduct themselves before him. All of it is "profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

Thus employed, the Word of God gives courage, and courage gives success both in temporal affairs and in our constant searching for eternal peace and happiness. Who can read the gentle promises, "Lo, I am with you always," "Come unto me and I will give you rest," "Ask and ye shall receive," without feeling his soul lifted up, his strength renewed, his courage revived and his heart rejoiced in the almighty love of God? The Bible meets every test that is made of it by the soul that turns to it for guidance and for help. Take it up in the hour of distress and bereavement, and it brings a message of hope and of consolation. Go to it when in perplexity and it points out the way of honor and of righteousness. But, of more importance than these things which the Word of God does for those who search in it for sustenance and help from day to day, the Bible is "wise unto salvation."

KINDNESS

IN the sixth chapter of II Kings there is related a beautiful story of how hostility was healed with kindness. It is written that "the king of Syria warred against Israel," but the Israelites were warned of God through Elisha of the actions of the Syrians in time to protect themselves from intended attacks. When the king of Syria learned that Elisha was informing the king of Israel of the intent of the Syrians, he sent "a great host" to bring Elisha to Syria. When the Syrian bands came to the place where Elisha was, he, being divinely protected, went out and offered to direct them to the place to which they desired to go. Not recognizing Elisha, they followed him, and he led them into the midst of Samaria. When the king of Israel saw that the enemy was in his hands, to deal with as he pleased, he cried out to Elisha, "Shall I smite them? shall I smite them?" Elisha answered the king: "Thou shalt not smite them:—set bread and water before them, that they may eat and drink, and go to their master." After "great provision" had been given to the Syrians, they were sent away in peace. It is further written that "the bands of Syria came no more into the land of Israel." Although one may entertain a degree of tolerance and sympathy toward others, yet, if he lack the understanding of their needs, there may be discord and strife; but where these good qualities abound, the result will be co-operation and helpfulness, as well as harmony and peace. Thoughts, words and deeds of kindness are effectual in conquering hate and discord. Kindness holds peoples and nations together in the bonds of friendship; indeed, it may be said to be a universal language; for while an individual may not understand another's speech, an act of kindness is always understood. In its true meaning, kindness is love expressed as courtesy, brothererliness, thoughtfulness and consideration for others, all of which qualities express the spirit of the Golden Rule given by Christ Jesus: "As ye would that men shoud do to you, do ye also to them likewise." There is today less inclination to resort to war and a greater desire for world peace and world harmony, as evidenced by the various efforts which are being made to establish methods of arbitration by which all the world may present its problems and have them rightly adjusted.

A somewhat timid looking stranger was walking slowly down the store. The floorwalker didn't like it.

"See here, my man, you've been walking around here a long time without buying. Now, what do you want?"

"Guess I want a new floorwalker," stated the old gentleman addressed. "I'm the owner of this outfit. I bought it yesterday."

IS AMERICA DRIFTING TO MUSSOLINI-ISM?

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Washington Correspondent for Central Press And The Avalanche-Journal

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—America drifting toward Mussolini-ism?

Senator Henrik Shipstead of Minnesota straightened up abruptly in his office chair at the question. His Norse eyes suddenly flamed.

"Of course it is," he said, emphatically.

Take it from me, Senator Shipstead can imagine no such thing as a dictatorship "minus tyranny."

Nevertheless, our returning tourists surely do bring back rosy-colored reports from the home of Mussolini-ism, Italy. Trains on time!—according to these globe-trotters. Crime suppressed! Plenty of work for everybody!

"Is justice on time?" demanded the senator.

"Has anything been suppressed besides crime? Have free speech and a free press been suppressed?—for instance.

"Have the workers their rights?—as well as employment.

"I haven't heard these questions answered by our returning Rotarians."

"THE Declaration of American Independence," continued the Minnesotan, "is history's greatest political document. It surpasses anything ever written before it; anything ever written since that declaration was written.

"Then men of '76 recognized many old errors the people had fallen into.

"They saw that it was not true a king could do no wrong. They saw that many a king was a grafter and a rascal. They saw that the doctrine of the divine right of kings was ridiculous.

"All those outworn theories went to the garbage heap, in the Declaration of Independence."

"TODAY," went on the senator, gloomily, "the American people have gone back to the garbage heap of the past and are digging out their old kingly effigy.

"They call it 'Party.'

"They are investing 'Party' with all the old kingly attributes.

"The party attains power and governs by divine right. The party can do no wrong. The party is perfect. And absolute."

NO other senator dares to utter quite such scandalous "lese majeste."

Senator Shipstead dares because he is our wholly independent senator. Several others are pretty bold. Occasionally a few of them are out-and-out rebellious. Shipstead, alone, acknowledges no party allegiance whatever.

True, he does go down in the record as a Farmer-Labobrite.

However, that is merely a different name for independence. It implies no particular political group. Incidentally, it is a necessary device to get the senator onto the official ballot on election day.

SHIPSTEAD did get onto it last November, but he had to fight like an entire party organization, in order to win on it.

"It was terrific," he admits, wiping his brow at the recollection.

Why?—especially.

"Because," explains the Minnesotan, "I refused to answer 'Yes' to the standard campaign question."

This question was—"Will you support the president?"

"It is not congress' duty," says the senator, hotly, "to support the president blindly. Its duty is to sit in judgment on his policies.

"Yet the average American voter is so sold on the idea of presidential supremacy that he considers it treason if the legislative branch of our government refuses to serve as a rubber stamp for the White House.

"There's Mussolini-ism for you!"

MINERAL SALAD OILS, BOUGHT AT DRUGGISTS AID IN CALORY COUNT

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

She Keeps Slim

"I WANT to tell you how wonderful I think Petersizing is for reducing and keeping normal. I reduced to my normal weight, which is 135, and I have kept it for over a year now by following its principles. Every now and then I go on 1,000 calories a day for a week or so, and lose the three to five pounds that creep on me.

"Just what is it you call for when you buy mineral oil for cooking purposes? I know you'll think I'm dumb, but there are several oils for cooking advertised, but I always have been under the impression that they were very fattening. Mrs. C."

Thanks, and congratulations, Mrs. C.

There is no mineral oil that I know of that is advertised for cooking purposes. The advertised cooking oils are vegetable and animal oils and these count terribly high in energy value (calories). One tablespoonful of them is 100 calories.

Mineral oils are used for lubrication of the intestinal tract and for external application. They are put out under various trade names and can be bought at the drug store. Ask for heavy mineral oil, if you want to make a mayonnaise with it (usual recipe). None of the mineral oils are absorbed by the system, so you do not have to count calories for them.

Some animal experiments have shown that there is some danger, if too much mineral oil is taken, that the vitamin A, which is fat soluble, may be dissolved in it and lost to the body, as the mineral oil is not absorbed. So don't take so much that it comes away free.

Your plan of watching your weight and going on a smaller number of calories for a week, every once in a while, to remove any weight that may have accumulated is an excellent one. Another good plan is to have one day in each week that is very low in calories. Remember that the normal weight varies two or three pounds on account of water retention.

The Petersizing pamphlet can be obtained by following column rules.

"About a month ago there was a pimple in the middle of the hollow under my nose. This was very painful. In a day or so the center of my upper lip began to swell and was quite abnormal for a few days. The swelling then went down but it left a hard lump under the skin. It is not noticeable by just looking at it, but if you press it you can feel it and it will move around some. It is not painful now when pressed. What do you think this is? P."

It may be possible that you had what is known as a blind boil, P. This type does not come to a head, and the inflammation is a low-grade one and not sufficient to cause pus, and the little lump that is remaining is simply the old inflammatory tissue which hasn't subsided yet. It usually takes weeks for the lump to go down.

I am giving your letter becaus I want to emphasize the importance of NOT picking pimples or boils around the upper lip or around the nose, for the lymph vessels communicate with the brain from there and the infection may extend to it and serious complications result.

What'll The Harvest Be?

SO THINK WE

We think if the times do, law is put into effect as to weddi there will be time for serious thou and it may be a good thing. Ma people would change their minds in three days time.

We think that thief who stole seventy-five pounds of bacon, probably had company at breakfast at his house.

We think if the supply of whitewash could be disposed of before the investigation of state departments begin that there might be a better chance to find the facts in the case.

We think most people have had plenty of time to pay automobile tax but some of them have not had plenty money since they have had to pay for the gas they have used, kept the old boat in running order for the past twelve months.

We think according to the way people complain about not having any money in Lubbock, there will be mighty little chance for Uncle Sam to get hold of much of the coin of the realm in this section of the country in 1929.

We think that after all the fellow who introduced a bill penalizing the wearing of shoes with a heel more than an inch high, had more real common sense than we will say the majority of the bills presented on other subjects, and many of the laws that are on the statute books as well.

We think if every fellow who goes before the grand jury would tell the truth, there would not be many bootleggers left.

Since Texas is a republican state this year, we should all be enjoying that GOP prosperity. Possibly those of us who own stock in the General Motors company are enjoying good returns on their money. Personally we are on the wrong side of the ledger with the G. M. C.

—o—

We think some people are downright cowards. They will write a column of stuff roasting some fellow or criticising some movement, but will not sign their name to the article, and about the only signs of nerve is when they ask the editor to publish their stuff over a fictitious name. This newspaper does not even want to act friendly toward people of the disposition.

—o—

We think that Childress is justified in asking for a new courthouse. The town has taken on their air of a modern city, and the courthouse looks like a 1925 model automobile compared with the new 1929 models now being put on the market.

—o—

Old Lucky Lindy just seems to be able to put it over in good shape every time. He has just recently completed a loop taking in a lot of territory around British Honduras, and back to the United States. Lindy is getting acquainted with lots of different kinds of people, and no doubt his visits are having a good effect toward acquainting those countries with the American people.

—o—

We think with the Santa Fe railroad pushing its extension further west into the Eastern New Mexico oil field that there will likely be a great demand in Lubbock during the next 12 months for more high class office buildings, and of course, Lubbock will make the necessary provisions for this, but we are just wondering if we are keeping in close touch with the situation, so that this demand will not rush us, before we are able to take care of it.

—o—

We think the little red school house may be disappearing, but the nice modern brick, with excellent equipment is taking its place, and that means more for the rising generations. Not many people of the half a hundred age, had much educational advantages in the south, but none of them regret to see the splendid improvement of the educational system in Texas, and the conditions that are enabling the educational program to go forward in Texas. They are in favor of better schools, and Lubbock people we are sure want the board to go forward in their program of building and equipment.

The Way Of The World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

...M DARKNESS TO LIGHT

In the biography of Cavour, Italian patriot, one reads these words: "In the ebb and flow of the seasons there comes a turning point when we say, 'yesterday was winter; today is spring.' The change may have been long, brooding, unexpected, almost unhoped for; but we recognize it immediately. At a given moment we are surprised to note a new feel in the air, to see buds peep forth on twig and tree, to find a new, strange exaltation in the heart. When we looked last the fields were stubble; now a delicate verudre is creeping across them. Nature, which for many months has seemed utterly absorbed by death, now pours life and more life into every nerve and fiber of the visible world. History, too, has its equinoctials."

And so in the patient struggle on the part of a few to make an improved world there seems for long periods to be little progress. Looking at the world today we see the persisting evils of the long centuries that have passed. But we hope, and our reasons tells us, that there will come a day when we can say, "ysterday was winter; today is spring."

MARCHING ON

W. H. Ranes, California farmer, is 98 years old. That doesn't prevent him from announcing his candidacy for justice of the peace in 1930. He gets the jump on the younger men who might be seeking office. At 98 he seems to lead the field in ambition and energy. There is something very brave about the old man, unaware of the sunset, pushing on to new things and new experiences with the indomitable courage of youth and of hope.

A SENSE OF TIME

The best salesman is not always the one that is described as the "peppiest." The man who is nervous, over-alert in manner, frequently gives the impression of being in a hurry. He does not create a comfortable atmosphere of confidence in himself and his goods. A customer doesn't like to be hurried—beyond the point that he wishes to be hurried.

RADIO AND THE FARM

If ther are indications of a back to the farm movement it is probably because something has happened which is making the farm more attractive. Probably the radio is having much to do with changing the minds of many people about farm life. Farmers are not a bit unlike other human beings. They want to keep in touch with life and affairs. Telephones, roads, radios, newspapers delivered daily—allt these things are bound to result in a general turn of favor toward the farm.

Experts say that a fat herring contains, weight for weight, as much nourishment as a good beefsteak.

SOUTH AMERICAN TRADE

The intention of the German ufthansa to begin trans-Atlantic air service between Berlin and Buenos Aires in the near future should give the American foreign trade experts a few things to cogitate. The movement not only is indicative of the efforts of Germany to rebuild her foreign trade lost during the war, but ic also representative of progress that European nations are recording in their commerce with the nations of South America. While the United States in many ways, is sponsoring closer relations between North and South America, Europe apparently is more active in commerce.

Little interest has been manifested in the United States in air routes to South America. But the matter is attracting much interest in Europe, it seems. For while the Germans are actually preparing to begin operations on their plane service, a dirigible company is being projected to ply between Madrid and Rio De Janeiro. Portugal, Spain, Germany and Italy are all considering South American air routes as a means of furthering their commercial relations with the South American countries, rich in potential resources, and promising to become an important factor in the commerce of the future.

Of course it can be argued that natural conditions are more favorable to Europe-South America air lines than to the United States-South America services. However, this argument will not fully account for the failure of the commercial interests of this country to develop their relations with the people of South America. There are practically no natural barriers to air service between Mexico and the United States, but inauguration of such service scarcely precedes the start of the trans-Atlantic service between Europe and South America.

It must be admitted that the sentimental ties that bind South America to Europe are much closer than those that bind South America to the United States. There are number of reasons for this situation, and they merit serious study. Relations between the United States and South America are far from being as cordial as they might in many respects. So long as such condition continues American exporters cannot expect to get their full share of South American trade.—Vernon Record.

Your Income Tax

Of the millions of taxpayers who will file returns for the year 1928, the vast majority are entitled, in addition to the personal exemption of $3,500 for married persons and heads of families, $1,500 for single persons, and a $400 credit for each dependent, to a further credit of 25 per cent of the tax on their earned net income. Correctly to determine this credit, the taxpayer first must compute the amount of tax which would be payable without the earned income credit, and from this amount of tax 25 per cent is to be deducted, the balance being the amount of tax due.

For example: A taxpayer, unmarried and with no dependents, with a net income for 1928 of $5,000, would pay without this reduction a tax of $52.50. His actual tax is $39.37. From his net income of $5,000 he is allowed a personal exemption of $1,500; the tax of 1 1-2 per cent on the remaining $3,500 is $52.50. One fourth of this amount, or $13.13, may be deducted.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

ASHTORETH ASHE, honeymooning in Paris, meets an old sweetheart, MONTY ENGLISH. Monty is young and handsome, but Ashtoreth turned him down because he was only a radio salesman, and poor as poverty.

She married, instead, a millionaire named HOLLIS HART, who showers her with gifts and loves her with all his heart. Ashtoreth loves him, too—or she thinks she does. Anyway, Hollis is fabulously good to her. They live at the Ritz, and she has a lady's maid, and a Hispano-Suiza, with a chauffeur named Felix, who wears a bottle-geen uniform. And she wears the most beautiful clothes of any American girl in Paris (which is saying a great deal).

Now she is sitting with Monty at a little sidewalk cafe near the Flower Market, watching the French sweethearts make love to each other.

Monty tells Ashtoreth how he has come to Paris, to sell radios. Suddenly leans to her across the tbale.

"Tell me, Ash," he asks, "are you happy, dear?"

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLIII

Ashtoreth toyed with a strawberry tart.

"Happy?" she repeated. "Why Monty darling, of course I'm happy."

But her voice was a little, scared whisper, that any man could guess was lying.

They sat in silence, like lovers who had quarreled. Near them, a student from the Latin quarter drank chocolate with his sweetheart. They leaned across the table, and exchanged kisses. Down the street came a man and girl, with their arms about each other. She said something that made him laugh, and he stooped to brush her lips with his. A bus stopped on the corner, and the first man to descend held his arms up to a girl in a red tam. She flung herself into his arms, and he kissed her as he set her on her feet. Ashtoreth and Monty looked at each other and smiled.

"Don't you adore the French lovers!" she exclaimed. "At home now, there are policewomen on the Common, to arrest boys and girls for kissing. And over here they don't think anything of it at all. There are three couples we've seen kissing within three minutes."

Monty bent to his pastry.

"It's all in the national viewpoint, I suppose. Being human, like the rest of those birds, I'd like a kiss myself. But, being American, I eat a foolish cake instead."

"Why, the idea, Monty! You mustn't forget that I'm a married woman."

"I'm not liable to," he told her. "That's the devil of it."

She leaned toward him, and the fragrance of her violets was a little breath of springtime. She put her fingers on his, gently.

"I'd have made a rotten wife for you, Monty."

"I know that."

"Then what makes you feel so badly?"

"Love's an unreasonable thing," he told her, and dug in his pocket for change. "Come on, let's get moving, Ash."

"How do you mean—unreasonable, Monty?"

"Oh, it makes savages stick rings through their noses, and smiled at her indulgently. "And it makes saps out of wise guys. And little girls ask questions. It's a snare and a delusion, that's what it is."

They strolled down the street, chatting like strangers.

"Where are you living?" she asked.

"Pension," he told her. "Over on the Left Bank. You're at the Ritz, I saw it in the papers."

"Yes," she said. "We've a suite that's bigger than the flat. And I've a maid of my own."

"Holy cow-" he whistled softly. "And you like it, Ash?"

"I told you," she reminded him, "that I am very happy."

"Your husband," he remarked, when they had walked in silence to the Quai, "seemed like a regular chap, Ash. I suppose he told you all the details about the smash, and the paper I had in my pocket. That was how we knew each other. Lord, what a coincidence!"

"Yes, wasn't it?"

"I didn't tell him I was going to ask you to marry me. I didn't want him to be magnanimous and all that sort of rot."

"What did you tell him, Monty?"

"Well, you saw the story, didn't you? I told him you were a friend of mine, and naturally a thing like that made me hot. He knew I was on my way to see you. He was very decent about it, too. Asked me to drive up with him. There wasn't any point to that, though. Your mind was made up then. He said you were going to be married in the morning. Well, that settled things for me. I wasn't going butting in.

"First, when he was telephoning to you, I thought I'd like to talk to you. But, when he handed me the phone, and I heard your voice on the other end. . . ."

"I know," interrupted Ashtoreth. "You asked for mother."

"And I couldn't even talk to her," he admitted. "Just a regular darn fool, that's all."

She slipped her hand confidingly in his.

"How are things going, Monty? Do you like it over here?"

"Oh, sure. It's all right. Lots of fun, where I'm living. All French people, you know. Gives you a chance to pick up the language."

"It's very nice at the Ritz," she boasted.

"All right, if you like it," he agreed. "I should think you'd smother in all that grandeur. Me for the little old Left Bank."

"We've a car," she told him grandly. "A Hispano-Suiza."

"You can't make me sore," he boasted. "I've a Citroen—one of those French flivvers—myself. And I know my way around, too."

She thought of their chauffeur, Felix. Grand in bottle green livery. He had a little waxed moustache, and his finger nails were beautifully manicured. There was something about him that made Ashtoreth feel like a little country girl. She didn't know what it was. But Felix and Mabel Mogg—they both made her feel that way.

"I bet," Monty was telling her impudently, "that you'd get a lot of kick out of tearin round with me."

Well, maybe she would. Hollis wasn't what anybody'd call a tearing model. Still, she certainly wasn't going to sound disloyal.

"I'm having a perfectly wonderful time," she declared, and pursed her red lips primly.

"Is money all it's cracked up to be?" he asked. "You remember, Ash, I always said you'd marry for love or money."

"Well, I did, didn't I?" she demanded.

"Which?" he inquired insolently.

"Love, idiot," she told him sharply.

Hollis had reached the hotel before she returned, and called to her from his room, as she opened the door.

"Oh Orchid—is that you? Hello, darling. Did you have a good time?"

She tossed her coat across a Louis XIV chair, tcetering on its skinny gold legs.

"Fine. I'll be right in, dear."

She wanted to see herself, as Monty had seen her. Before she powdered her nose, or poked her short ends up. To look upon herself through his eyes, and guess what he had thought.

She crossed the room, to the long mirror on the further wall, and inspected herself critically . . . Well, Monty wouldn't think she had changed for the worse, that was sure.

Hollis was wearing a brocaded dressing gown with silk frogs all over the front of it. They were always catching in Ashtoreth's hair, when he held her against him. She kissed him lightly, avoiding his arms.

"Miss me, Holly? You'd never guess who I bumped into, dear."

"Anybody I know?"

"Well, sort of. Guess."

He laughed. "Sadie Morton, with a sugar daddy?"

"No. Oh, you'd never know . . . Monty English, dear."

Ashtoreth, forgetting the frogs for the moment, wound her arms about her husband's neck . . . "And I was thinking, dear—wouldn't it be nice to ask him to have dinner with us some night?"

Hollis agreed good naturedly.

"Why, fine. Anything you'd like, Orchid. Why didn't you bring him back with you?"

"Oh, he had an appointment tonight. He's selling radios, Holly. And, you'd never believe it, but he says business is just wonderful. He says American salesmen are the only ones that have any punch. Imagine coming all the way from Boston to sell radios to Frenchmen!"

"Where did you see him, Orchid?

"Oh, it was just the funniest thing. You know you've never taken me to Saint Chapelle, and I've just been dying to see it . . ."

Hollis suppressed a small smile . . . "But you said you hated going to churches, dear."

"Oh, I know. But you might have known that I'd loved to have gone with you, if you'd ever once asked me. Anyhow, I thought I'd go this afternoon, all by myself. So—I was walking through the flower market—when, all of a sudden—oh, no, I wasn't,—I went to that cafe on the corner. And I'd just barely sat down, when who should come along but Monty! My goodness, Holly, I thought I was seeing things!

"It seems he doesn't know a soul, and he's terribly lonely. He's living over on the Left Bank, and nobody speaks any English, and Monty doesn't know much French yet. And I could just tell he was so desolate. So I thought it would be awfully nice, dear, if you didn't mind, to have him up for dinner some time."

Hollis patted her small dark head.

"Any time you say, Orchid."

She let him hold her then. And, when her hair caught in the frogs on his dressing gown, she laughed. And put her head back, for him to kiss her lips.

"Love me?" she whispered.

"Love you!" he cried. "Oh, Orchid . . . Orchid!"

And later, when he had carried her to the little brocaded love seat, all fat and puffy, and covered with pink roses, he held her in his arms, and asked her softly.

"Tell me, Orchid—truly, dear,—are you happy?"

She buried her head against his shoulder.

"Why, Holly, what a question."

But her voice was so muffled, he

MY GARDEN

A garden is a lovesome thing,
God wot!
Rose plot,
Fringed pool,
Ferned grot—
The veriest school
Of peace; and yet the fool
Contends that God is not—
Not God! in gardens! when the eve is cool?
Nay, but I have a sign:
'Tis very sure God walks in mine.

could not hear. And he lifted her chin with his finger tips.

"Are you as happy, Sweetheart, as you dreamed of being? You're not disappointed? Everything's beautiful?"

"Beautiful!" she whispered.

"And this Monty-boy didn't make you sorry about anything?"

"Why, Holly, how could he, dear?"

She snuggled closer against his chest.

"I bought some linens for mother today. Those colored damasks. She'll be so pleased."

"Always thinking of someone else!" he murmured tenderly.

He kissed the back of her neck, where her straight hair curled in surprising little twists, like the tendrils on sweet peas.

"Oh, my goodness, Holly! Now I'm all caught on those old frogs again."

"I'm sorry, dear."

He separated frogs and hair gently. The enchanted moment had passed.

"Let's have a cocktail!" Ashtoreth shook out her skirts. Tell them good strong ones, Holly."

Ashtoreth had learned to drink cocktails in Paris. Somehow they helped her to forget all about Hollis' two front teeth on their little swivels . . . She didn't even mind when he kept saying "Orchid . . . Orchid . . ."as is it was his prayer. And telling her, over and over again how wonderful she was.

Oh, it was very nice, of course, to have a man so absolutely insane about you. But . . . well, a few cocktails did help. There was no getting around that. Because, naturally, a girl had to be pretty sweet to a man who was always giving her things.

There were times when she had a ghastly feeling of paying for pearls and amethysts with her kisses and her arms. There were, in fact, times when she thought of that letter her father had written her. She wondered if Hollis ever thought of it himself . . . That part about girls who trusted exclusively to their youthful charms being no better than courtesans. . . . Only wiser and less honest.

Electrical Autos, Powered by Radio, Seen For Future

Present Type Of Engine Will Soon Be Obsolete, View

Marmon Motor Company Head Takes Dip Into Imaginative Future Of Automotive Engineering

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 9—Automobiles of the future will be driven by electric motors and will receive their power by radio directly from centrally-located transmitting stations, each car owner being assigned a specific wave length.

This startling prediction is made by G. M. Williams, president of the Marmon Motor Car company, in the midst of the nation's automobile show season featuring the latest gasoline-propelled vehicles.

"While I do not mean to adopt a radical position," says Williams, "I would say that possibly during the next generation and most certainly within the 20th century, the present type of automobile, powered with the present type of internal combustion engine, will be as obsolete as the dodo bird, the great auk and the great horn spoon.

The source of power for these electric automobile motors will be large central generating stations similar to those which are at present in use for the generation of electric power for lights and other commercial purposes. This automobile power, however, will be transmitted by radio directly from the central station to the car itself.

"I can foresee with a reasonable degree of accuracy each automobile owner being assigned a specific power reception designation or wavelength and all that will be necessary for him to start his car will be to pull a swith on the instrument board, thereby automatically tuning into the power wave which has been assigned to him. If his is an 80-horsepower motor car his maximum reception will be 80 horsepower and cars of this power will be controlled by a rheostat used like the accelerator of today.

We Won't Escape Tax!

As is the case today, these cars will be built in different horsepower and sizes and will be taxed accordingly. Motorists will not pay for more power than is used, inasmuch as a metering arrangement will be installed in each car which, at periodic intervals, will be checked by the power company for the purpose of making a charge for the power actually used.

"It is an established fact that automotive engineers long have attempted to attain as great a flexibility and economy in internal combustion engines as is possible to attain in electric motors, hence the increasing use of the eight-cylinder gasoline engine. The use of electric motors will attain flexibility and maneuverability to a superlative degree.

In predicting the universal us of electric motors in automobiles, Williams declares electrical engineers would have to speed their efforts toward reducing their weight in order to be adopted in automobiles.

"Advantages which would accrue from this development," he continues, "will bespeeding up of traffic conditions due to greater acceleration and deceleration; elimination of noxious fumes; minimizing of maintenance costs due to the relatively small number of moving parts in such electrical apparatus as compared to the present day internal compustion engine; complete elimination of the problem of heating and cooling existing in the present internal compustion engine; simplicity of operation due to the elimination of all operating gadgets with the exception of the controller and switch, and the continued availability of power without replenishing fuel supply.

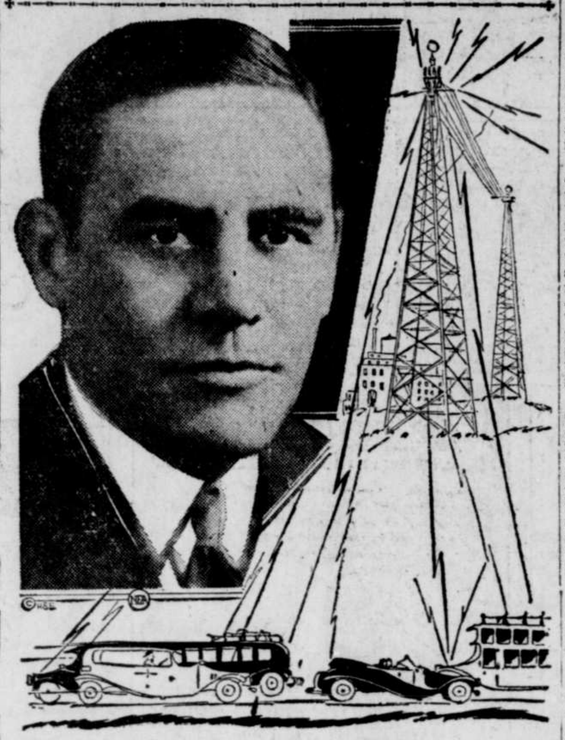

Many on Same Wave

"It may be said that the allocation of a sufficient number of wavelengths to care for each automobile throughout the country will be impossible. But there is no reason why many cars can not operate on the same wavelength, provided, however, that there are not too many to overload the particular wavelength to which they have been allocated. In other words, the chief problem would be to guard against the creation of too high a peak load.

"Aside from the many specific advantages of radio-operated automobiles from the standpoint of their individual utility and easier operation ,there is every indication that the advent of such cars would result in major economies concerning our national wealth. Efficient production of power by central power stations will effect considerable savings in fuel, taking into consideration the fact that the average automobile owner does not run his engine to its maximum economic efficiency. It has been estimated that fully 10 per cent of the gasoline used in this country today is wasted by idling motors.

"The automobile of 1929 is more than five times as efficient and economical as the automobile of 1900. The automobile of 1999 as compared to the automobile of today will bear a far greater ratio than this in these essential factors."

Whippet Remains In Public's Eye

The remarkable public acceptance accorded the new Whippet Six said to have set a new high standard of quality construction and engineering features in the light six field, is cited as one of the outstanding features of the past year in the automobile industry.

Introduced at the lowest price ever reached by a six cylinder car, the Whippet Six went even further, being equipped with a seven-bearing crankshaft, and even today the new Whippet Six is outstanding as the world's lowest priced six with a seven-bearing crankshaft. This notable advancement centered the eyes of the entire industry on the Whippet Six and its subsequent public acceptance and high standard of performance were chief factors in creating a demand even greater than was anticipated.

In Willys-Overland's introduction of the Superior Whippet Six, many of the features of the former model, including the fully drilled seven-bearing crankshaft, have been retained. However, the present bodies have been newly designed, made larger and roomier, and are marked by a style and quality development which illustrated a new idea of value and beauty in the low priced bracket.

Using all his spare time during the past three years, a conductor on the Great Western Railway has built himself a six-room bungalow.

Increase Output Of New Chevrolet

One Of Quickest Turnovers In Industrial History Is Effected In Change From Four To Six Cylinders

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 9.—The first comprehensive answer yet obtained to the question, "How did Chevrolet succeed in effecting one of the most mammoth turnovers in industrial history?" wes revealed here today.

Since mid-November when Chevrolet announced that it would discontinue producing four cylinder cars and would produce instead, a six in the price range of the four, speculation in automobile circles was rife as to how this was to be accomplished. Other manufacturers who had attempted turnovers had required as long as 18 months to two years to swing back into capacity production. There were many skeptics.

Speedy Deliveries Made

When Chevrolet followed up its announcement of a six with the announcement that deliveries on the new models were to begin January 1, few outside the company believed the feat would be accomplished. But deliveries in quantity numbers did begin January 1. On that date practically every Chevrolet dealer in the country displayed the new six. Once more the question re-echoed throughout trade circles, "How did they do it?"

The answer as it now comes to light can be epitomized in a single word—"foresight." The foresighted policies of General Motors and Chevrolet have never been known to countenance any blind gestures. The Chevrolet Six, which is today speeding over the highways in thousands, was born four years ago.

Began Four Years Ago.

At that time General Motors began considering, with an open mind, whether a six cylinder car could be produced to sell in the price range of the four. Shortly afterward Chevrolet engineers designed the first of the 100 engines which was to precede the one which today powers the new Chevrolet. One by one these engines were tested, redesigned, improved, torn down. From each experiment the Chevrolet engineers were learning.

Then, one day last May after over a million miles of test driving, and four years of the most intensive sort of checking, Chevrolet engineers expressed themselves as satisfied that they had perfected a six cylinder engine of exceptional merit. It was a momentous occasion in the history of the company, and marked the achievement of one of the greatest engineering triumphs in the history of the industry.

Essex Precision Greatly Improved

"There used to be a time," says S. G. Bates, chief engineer of the Hudson Motor Car company, "when folks ascribed a certain mechanical superiority to high-priced cars of European manufacture and justified the opinion by referring to old-world precision standards that were more exacting than the standards in use in American automobile plants.

"The fact is that we, of Hudson, observe rather unusual precision standards, which are perhaps best exemplified by citing the standards which we observe in building the Essex. The paper on which the average newspaper is printed is about 5-1000 inch thick. Thinnest tissue paper, such as the finest cigarette paper, measures about 1-1000 inch in thickness. Now with the Essex we have 139 operations in which the absolutely insisted upon accuracy standard is just half of 1-1000 inch.

In human beings the brain seldom exceeds an average weight of 1280 to 1460 grams in men and 1140 to 1340 in women.

Public Approves Chrysler Product

Buyers Invest Billion In Chryslers During Five Years Existence Of Co., Fields' Review Shows

By J. E. FIELDS
Vice-President in Charge of Sales, Chrysler Corporation

The beginning of the year 1929 also marks the end of Chrysler's first five years as a builder of motor cars.

They have been significant years in the automobile industry. They have witnessed a great transition in the public mind as to what a motor car should be and should do—the complete transition, one might say, as to what constitutes a proper motor car.

Transition Effected.

These five years have wrought a complete realignment of motor car manufacturers. Depending upon how well they fulfilled the public's wants have the various manufacturers come forward into prominence, held their position, fallen behind or passed into oblivion. For, after all, it is the public's estimation of your product that determine sthe extent of your success, or makes your product a failure. This, of course, is true in every other business or industry.

In its first five years the public has bestowed on Chrysler a measure of approval that has seldom, if ever, been equalled in the history of American business enterprise. In that period the public has bought more than 750,000 Chrysler-built cars. It has invested well in excess of $1,000,000,000 in Chrysler products. Today it is buying products built by Chrysler at the rate of several million dollars a day! The public has lifted Chrysler to a position of front rank among the world's foremost motor car producers.

Full Size Bodies Feature Plymouth

Never before has any car of lowest price offered such an unusual combination of economy in operation, comfort, size and luxury of appointments as has the Plymouth—Chrysler's new and powerful factor in the low-price field, says J. W. Frazier, Plymouth sales manager.

In building the bodies of this full-sized car, its body designers are paid the tribute by Mr. Frazier of having "contributed perhaps the most brilliant achievement yet accomplished in space engineering. Every inch of its length and heighth has been utilized to enhance the ease and pleasure of occupants. In compliance with the directions of Walter P. Chrysler, when he outlined his ideal of the type of motor car that should and could be built for a modest price, the Plymouth is built comfortably to seat five full-sized adults.. This makes it the ideal sized car for the American family of average means."

Plymouth bodies are long, low and roomy. Wide and deep seats, carefully designed to conform to the natural contour of the human frame, afford splendid headroom and legroom. Saddle spring cushions of the latest type add to the passengers' comfort. Upholstery is soft, resilient and luxurious. Wide doors, which permit easy entrance and egress, are equipped with large windlaces and a rubber strip to insure against drafts. Draft plates around the pedals further increase driving comfort by their preventive measures against draft entrance.

Stewart Is Still Sure Of Victory

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Feb. 9—Colonel Robert W. Stewart was preparing to return to Chicago today, avowing unconcern over claims of victory by the Rockefeller forces in their battle of proxies.

Meanwhile the Rockefeller strength in the battle for control of the Standard Oil company of Indiana was augmented by proxies for 2,360 shares forwarded by Dartmouth college.

"This latest claim of victory gives me no concern," Colonel Stewart said, "On the ensuing four weeks between now and the annual meeting of the stockholders will more clearly understand the situation."

Regarding the action of Julius Rosenwald, president of Sears Roebock company, who had written friends urging them to support the Rockefeller interests, Colonel Stewart said:

"Mr. Rosenwald is not a stockholder and his connection with Mr. Rockefeller is well known. His statements show a lack of information."

Trouble with the cooling system, when the weather changes suddenly, is not all we have to contend with in those parts of America that are subject to such changes.

Another difficulty arises in connection with the motor and ignition. This comes not so much when the weather turns cold as when it eases up and thaw sets in.

A case in point is one of a fellow motorist who had accumulated snow and ice on his car, had driven into his garage and discovered the next morning, after an overnight thraw that he couldn't get the car started.

After considerable fuss and bother, the motorist learned that the cause of his trouble was dripping of the thawed-out snow and ice through the openings of the hood and on the engine. The water got into the distributor and settled over the spark plugs.

In addition, water accumulated in the carburetor and there was no chance of his getting started under these conditions.

What this driver should have done the night before was protect himself against such contingency. He should have wiped off the snow and ice from the hood, the cowl and sun visor, in order to prevent the water dripping through the motor. And he should have inspected the carburetor for any residue of water.

Water in the carburetor is not so frequent as it used to be because we are getting much better gasoline. But there still is water in our fuel, which is in a way unpreventable, and so we must occasionally drain the carbureter of whatever water residue might be there.

When there's fear of a sudden change to extreme cold, this should especially be done. For if there is any water in the carburetor bowl it will freeze overnight and the car won't start until after this has been thawed out. In order to prevent this occurrence, even if the carburetor is drained, it might be a good idea to put a 100 watt lamp close to the carburetor and let it stay there over night. The heat from the lamp will keep the carburetor warm and prevent freezing at that point.

If water has seeped into distributor and over the spark plugs, the ignition will be useless. The distributor must be cleaned out thoroughly, dried well and the contacts scraped a bit before it can be uesd again. The water in the spark plug wells should be blown out and the wells dried up as thoroughly as possible. The connections to the spark plugs must also be taken down, wiped clean and refitted to asure good contacts there.

Studebaker Wins Widespread Favor

Drivers Who Like Smartness In Closed Cars Are Choosing New President 8 State Victoria

Studebaker's new President Eight State Victoria for four is in widespread favor with drivers who like the smartness and intimacy of a close coupled enclosed car, yet also desire a somewhat roomier interior than a coupe or cabriolet affords.

"The new President Eight Victoria is a particularly appropriate car for both business and social use," says the Studebaker-Erskine dealer here. "It appeals especially to women who desire a smart personal car for shopping, sports or social occasions.

Comfort Provided For.

"For this reason Studebaker designers devoted unusual care to the development of comfortable seating arrangements, at the same time giving the body lines and color combinations such distinction as to make the new Victoria a truly outstanding reflection of the latest motoring mode.

"The body lines are markedly low as a result of Studebaker's double drop frame construction, which also has the effect of lowering the center of gravity and insuring fine riding qualities and roadability. The graceful body contours are emphasized by a new treatment of belt line and moulding. Curved windshield pillars and a smart French visor frame the non-shatterable safety windshield with its two automatic windshield cleaners.

Carnes To Leave For Prison Soon

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 9—Clinton S. Carnes, erstwhile treasurer of the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist convention, who faces a five to seven year prison term, was expected to start for the state prison farm at Milledgeville today or tomorrow. Carnes was being held here to help the board straighten out its books but the board decided his services will not be needed.

An explanation of why the board consented "to such a short sentence' for Carnes, after he had pled guilty to one of twenty indictments against him, was offered by the board's president. Dr. Luther Rice Christie, last night.

In agreeing to the consent verdict Carnes agreed that all his property should be given the board to make up in part, his defalcations, which are expected to total close to $1,000,000.

De Soto Success Is Due To Engine

Much of the remarkable success attained by the Chrysler-built DeSoto Six during the five months it has been on the market is due to the engine with which it is powered, DeSoto officials point out. No car, they say, can be better than its power plant since all its other attributes merely supplement the service rendered by the engine.

The engine of the DeSoto Six was designed by the same crops of engineers which for the last four years has been responsible for the enviable and world-wide reputation for quality enjoyed by Chrysler engines. It is not an experiment but a natural out-growth of Chrysler's years of experience in designing and building high grade automobile engines.

Notable for the amount of power per cubic inch of piston displacement which it develops, the DeSoto Six engine is also remarkable for the amount of power per pound of engine weight developed. Not only does it develop unusual power for its size and weight, but it designs is such that it can work continuously at sustained speeds without losing power. With a three inch bore and a stroke of four and one-eighth inches it has an S. A. E. rating of 21.6 horsepower, yet it actually develops 55 horsepower, more than two and a half times its S. A. E. rating.

Olds Dealers Are Optimistic For '29

Optimistic predictions for 1929 were the unanimous opinon expressed by approximately 3,000 Oldsmobile dealers and their executives present at the three largest dealer meetings ever held by the Oldsmobile company. The third and last meeting was held during the week of the Chicago automobile show.

Practically every section east of the Rocky Mountains, and even Alaska, was represented at the meetings. Regardless of the locality the Oldsmobile dealers expressed confidence that 1929 business would exceed that of last year, which had been the most prosperous twelve-month period they had heretofore experienced.

Orders placed by the dealers will require the full output of the materially increased manufacturing schedule set up for this year and will employ all of the enlarged facilities provided by the extensive expansion program completed during 1223, factory officials report.

More than 1200 Oldsmobile retail representatives were present at the Eastern dealer meeting held in New York City. Shortly afterward approximately 900 congregated at the factories in Lansing, Mich., while 800 more attended the Western dealer meeting held in Chicago.

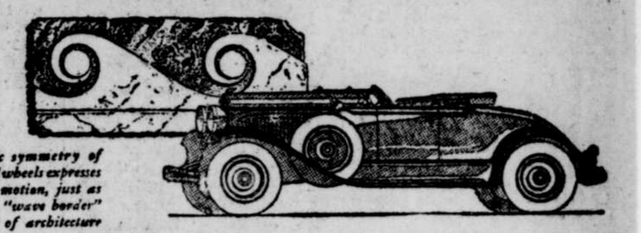

State Attention On Spur Classes

SPUR, Feb. 9—One of the largest classes in vocational agriculture in the state of Texas is being conducted at the Spur high school. Summarizing the projects of the class it was found that there are eight pure bred Jersey cows, seven purebred Jersey heifers, six grade Jersey cows two grade Jersey heifers, four Poland China purebred litters, two Poland China grade littters, three projects of meat production using Poland China grades, two litters of Duroc Jersey purebred, one baby beef, one turkey project, three baby chick projects totaling 700 chicks and 10 cotton projects totaling 75 acres.

Plans for next year will make more rigid the project requirements in order that the class will not be overcrowded. Each pupil will be required to have at least 10 acres of cotton or 200 hundred baby chicks or 10 acres feed and all livestock projects will have to be purebred individuals.

ELECTRA, Feb. 9.—Burglars knocked the knob off the safe of the Fort Worth & Denver ticket office at Harrold, six miles west of Electra Wednesday night. Twelve dollars in cash and a package of insurance papers belonging to J. C. Smith, agent, were taken.

CLASSIC ART deliberately utilized in motor car design

NOTE how the dynamic symmetry of Chrysler fender contours and wheels expresses the very essence of life and motion, just as do their counterparts in the "wave border" of the classic masterpieces of architecture and design.

THAT Chrysler motor cars are so different in appearance from all other motor cars is not to be wondered at in view of the unique plan by which their remarkable beauty has been attained.

Chrysler engineers recognized, as no others had recognized, that true beauty in automobile design must come, not from a chance inspiration of individual designers, but from a conscious and deliberate plan.

Guided by glorious precedents in art, architecture and design, they applied the authentic forms of beauty which have come down the centuries unchallenged and unsurpassed and translated them into terms of motor car utility and beauty.

It is because Chrysler style and beauty have this secure artistic foundation that they have won the admiration and enthusiasm of thousands upon thousands the country over.

Turkeys Found To Be Profitable By Floyd Farm Wife

Substantial Income Made By Mrs. J. D. Christian, Possessed Of But Three Years Experience

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

FLOYDADA, Feb. 9.—Less than three years experience in producing standard bred bronze turkeys has netted a profit of $1,385.75 to one Floyd county farm woman who received her inspiration at a poultry show held at Floydada several years ago when she was awarded three premiums on turkeys that she had raised without care or attention. Mrs. J. D. Christian, who lives in the Blanco community nine miles west of Floydada, has been one of the most successful of poultry producers in this county and in addition to realizing a substantial profit from her efforts has created an interest in standard bred poultry in this county that previously was unknown.

Iack of strong competition at the first poultry show here was perhaps the reason that Mrs. Christian's turkey was awarded a grand championship but it also served to stir an interest to produce better turkeys, and with the encouragement of her husband she decided to enter the poultry business in a business like manner and, if possible, create an additional income from the farm. With an investment of $500, which she paid for a tom and a hen, and began the start of a flock that is today the envy of hundreds of breeders in this section.

Paid First Year

The first year Mrs. Christian was actively engaged in the production of standard bred turkeys resulted in the sale of several hens and toms that netted her a profit of $300. In addition to the profit from the sale of her birds she won approximately $21 exhibiting her turkeys at the Floyd county poultry show. The following pear her sales dropped to $250 but her premiums increased to $40. With this splendid start the demand for turkeys from the Christian flock increased and in 1927 she sold $300 worth of breeding stock and while exhibiting at only one show, won eight first places and several dollars in cash. The past year climaxed the success of her efforts and at the Tri-State poultry show at Amarillo she won the majority of the premiums offered on turkeys, and sold $395 worth of breeding stock. Among her premiums won at the show were several special prizes.

Emphasize Quality

"We try to emphasize quality rather than quantity," Mrs. Christian said," and we find that a balanced ration of corn, oats, ground maize, mash and sour milk is practically all the feed we need. We invested $40 each for three modern poultry houses which were built by Mr. Christian, and by producing much of our own feed and milk we found that with some personal attention turkeys could be raised for a substantial profit. Experience has taught us that the climate on the plains is ideal for poultry raising and we are striving to make our turkey farm the best in the state."

As an evidence of her success in producing real sho wbirds Mrs. Christian points to the fact that the birds she has raised were awarded higher places at the shows than the ones she bought. There are 81 turkeys on the Christian farm now and the income is more than $1,300 better off than three years ago.

Snyder Airport To Be Ready Soon

Strip Of 200 Acres Reserved To Be Ready For Use Within Two Weeks, Operator of Field Says

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SNYDER, Feb. 9 — Announcement has been made here by D. P. Yoder who recently completed plans for a new 200-acre airport and land field here that 85 acres of the new tract will be available within the next two weeks for landing purposes. A landing strip 3,000 feet in length will be provided and the entire 85 acres will be cleared.

Building operations on the new filling station, restaurant and hotel at the field will be started next week. At a special meeting of the city council Monday night they agreed to bring water direct to the landing field as quickly as needed. Officials of the Texas Electric Service company through Lon Geer of Sweetwater are running an electric supply line to the location while the Southwestern Bell Telephone company is ready to place phone facilities at the field as quickly as any one of the new buildings is ready for it.

As quickly as the landing strip is completed, officials of the Texas Air Transport company are to be invited here for a booster banquet with the Lions club and to get the citizenship entirely sold from an "air-minded" standpoint.

RUSH ON WHITE WAY

SNYDER, Febb. 9.—Snyder citizens are rushing to complete the new white way system that is being installed on the pubblic square and one block each way with 10 foot ornamental standards before west-central district meet of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce here March 5. Paul T. Vickers of Midland has already promised to be toastmaster at the banquet which will insure a fast, snappy bit of entertaining for the more than a thousand who are expected to come here.

They Could Read

Negro Jailed After Presenting Letter

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 9 (AP).—Licious Davis, 22, negro from Elerson, Ark., is in jail because he couldn't read and sought the aid of police with a letter from his wife.

The cause of his arrest was a postscript which read: "I would tell you to come down here, baby, but the law is laying for you."

Licius is in jail while police determine why "the law" wants him.

Motorists Average 234 Miles Per Day

Tourists Now More Than Double Speed Of Ten Years Ago, According To A. A. A. Survey

WASHINGTON, D. C. Feb. 9.—The average day's run of motor tourists is now 234 miles, as compared with about 100 miles a day ten years ago, according to the National Touring Board of the American Automobile Association.

The question, "When touring what is your average daily mileage?" was addressed to thousands of motorists in every state of the Union in an effort to secure definite data on motor touring. Out ov every hundred persons who answered the questionnaire, 30 reported 200 miles for their average daily run; 25 advised 250 miles; 16 averaged 300 miles per day and 15 said they traveled 150 miles a day. The average run was 234 miles.

Reasons Given.

Outstanding among the reasons advanced for this decided increase in the mileage covered by motorists were the following:

1. Better highways throughout the country.

2. Improvement of the motor car from the standpoint of ease of operation, comfort, safety and stability.

3. More adequate sign-posting and marking of important highways.

4. Improved motoring facilities, including standardized services in all sections and up-to-the-minute reports on road conditions.

5. A nation-wide tendency to liberalize speed laws and the passing of the roadside justice of the peace courts.

"The questionnaire," says the A. A. A. National Touring Board, "has revealed in a convincing way that car owners of the nation are ever looking for new areas and that the national prosperity following in the wake of the motor tourist is being more evenly distributed.

Road To Hobbs In New Oil Field Is Being Constructed

Will Give "Cut-Off" Route To Cavern; 27 Nations Sent Visitors To Famed Showplace Last Year

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SNYDER, Feb. 9—Officials here of the Dal Paso Cavern Highway Association have been advised by Secretary Wm. A. Wilson that through the cooperation of J. J. Carson, townsite promoter of Hobbs, New Mexico, a road is being built west from the Texas state line following a survey by the New Mexico state highway body. The grade will connect at the west line of Gaines county to the already excellent road graded for the state highway department of Texas and will continue eight miles through to Hobbs, the new oil town. This will leave only ten miles directly west from Hobbs to connect with the direct highway which leads through Hobbs. Road boosters are hoping that these ten miles will be opened and graded, linking the federal highway that leads through Carlsbad, N. M.

Superintendent Thoomas Boles of the Carlsbad Caverns has advised all Dal Paso Cavern highway towns that a total of 46,222 visitors went through the Caverns in 1928 as compared to 29,034 during 1927. Every state in the Union was represented with the largest number coming from Texas of any state, while foreign possessions or countries showed Alaska 4; Hawaii 11; Austria 6; Australia 4; Brazil 2; Bulgaria 1; Canada 24; Canal Zone 5; Chili 3; Costa Rica 2; Cuba 2; Czecho Slovakia 3; Denmark 3; England 16; East Africa 1; France 3; Germany 4; Holland 2; Korea 1; Mexico 75; Netherlands 2; Novia Scotia 1; Patagonia 2; Porto Rico 2; Switzerland 4; South Wales 1 and Scotland 3. Traffic over the Dal Paso Cavern highway to the Caverns this year was much greater than before, owing to the fact that most of the traffic going to the Caverns was also going on to the coast and this route is 103 miles shorter than any other east and west road.

PLANT MORE PEANUTS

WEWOKA, Feb. 9 — A much larger acreage of Seminole county will be devoted to a peanut crop than ever before, according to C. S. Sullivan, county agent. The crop, if there is no demand for it, makes excellent feed and, in addition, offers an opportunity for crop rotation.

"United We Stand, Divided We Fall"

----Abraham Lincoln

Abraham Lincoln, savior of our country, pleading for a Unity of effort and spirit, expressed the policy that has been proven successful not only in Government but in every line of industry, commerce and City-Building.

A City divided against itself cannot grow and prosper. United citizenship can build despite many handicaps.

Our Company Believes in the Application of Lincoln's Statement: "United We Stand. Divided We Fall."

The spirit of unity existing on the South Plains is creating an empire of agricultural importance to the Nation. It is building transportation facilities, bringing all the comforts to the homes and making Cities grow into thriving centers of industry, commerce and education.

Five Weeks Set As Limit For Reparations Conference

Owen D. Young Is Unanimous Choice Permanent Head

Battle For Settlement Of War Debts Started; Decide That If Agreement is Not Reached To Adjourn

(By Associated Press)

PARIS, Feb. 9.—Five weeks was set today as the limit for consideration of the reparations problem by the new commission of experts.

All delegates, Germans, allies and Americans, agreed at an informal gathering today that if they could not find a basis for final settlement of Germany's war accountts within five weeks, there was a likelihood they never would agree.

There was unanimous demand at the meeting that Owen D. Young of the United States become permanent chairman.

Young, however, demurred at the suggestion, saying he understood President Coolidge would prefer a European in the chair. It was decided to send a message to Washington telling the president of the unanimous desire for Mr. Young.

Hoover Party Is On Boat Cruise

President-Elect Gets Out Of Communication With Land To Attend Birthday Celebration of Edison

(By Associated Press)

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 9. — President-elect Hoover was cruising leisurely tonight around the southern end of Florida on the houseboat "Saunterer," out of communication with land. He is en route to Fort Myers, on the west Coast, where Monday he will attend the birthday anniversary of Thomas A. Edison, inventor and patriarch.

The luncheon to celebrate the 82nd birthday of Mr. Edison, was set for 1 p. m. and Mr. and Mrs. Hoover planned to board the "Saunterer" again about 3o'clock and start southward for Ponce De Leon Bay, where the president-elect was to spend a couple of days fishing.

After a subsequent two-day inspection of flood conditions in Florida the president-elect is expected to complete his inaugural address and then wind up his Florida vacation.

Returning to Washington the last of this month to spend the intervening days before March 4, at his home.

Pioneer Farmer To Try Pecans

Will P. Edwards Of Big Spring Plans To Put Fourteen Sections Of Howard Land In Nut Trees

STAMFORD, Feb. 9.—"If paper shell pecans will succeed in Howard and Glasscock counties, I have fourteen sections of what is said to be the best farming land in West Texas which I shall set to pecans just as rapidly as I can get to it. And from what I have already seen, I know they will succeed. I am willing to make the prophesy that within the next ten years there will be more trees of the thin shell variety grown in West Texas than there are now native trees in all the area of native trees combined."

Thas is the way Will P. Edwards of Big Spring expresses his belief of the pecan industry in West Texas. Backing his judgment, he has just put out large demonstration orchards on the three kinds of soil of which his large ranch is composed. Within the next year or two, if satisfied with the results, he will begin setting his entire ranch near Big Spring. The carieties experimented on are the Halbert, Burkett, and Texas Prolific.

Is Real "Old Timer."

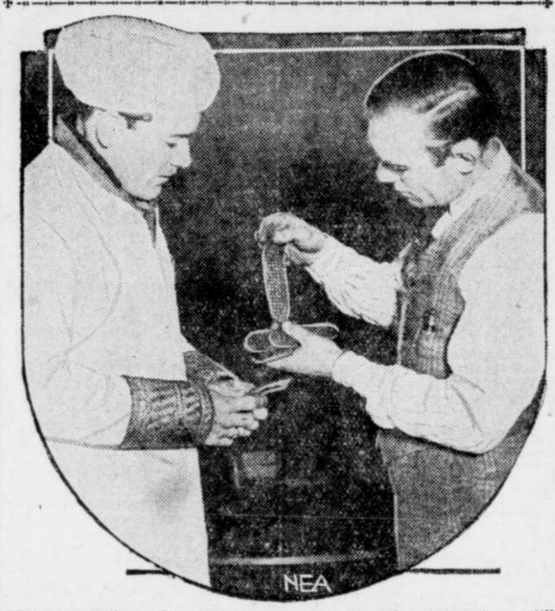

Mr. Edwards is one of the real "Old Timers" 'of West Texas. He moved to Howard county in 1898 and began farming on what had been vast cattle ranges. When he first began plowing it is said that the old cow men would ride up and look at him in surprise. Their common expression to him was, "Young man, the right side of this land is up. Don't monkey with what is underneath. This is the cow man's country."

Mr. Edwards replied to them that, since they had never investigated any of the soil underneath they probably did not know what they were talking about, and continued with his plowing. Within his thirty years residence, he has fully demonstrated his ideas.

He raised the first cotton ever produced in Glascock county and had to keep it two years before he could get it ginned, or haul it to Fort Worth or some other equally distant point, to the nearest gin. He also raised the first sorghum cane in quantity and had the experience of seeing it grow so large that it was almost impossible to harvest it.

Years of experience on this same land proves it to be some of the most fertile to be found anywhere. Average cotton production for the last five years on large areas has run from a third to a half bale to the acre. But Mr. Edwards insists that this same land in paper shell pecans will be worth ten or twenty times as much as it is in any kind of farm crop.

And Now Comes Non-Skid Hot Dogs

Thomas A. Edison, the great inventor, is near retirement, but we still have with us the Boyd brothers of Cleveland (R. L., left and J. M., right). Never heard of them before? Neither did we until the other day, when they invented a non-skid hot dog which lies flat on the bread, just like a slice of ham. Now your difficulty in keeping round hot dogs from rolling right off the roll has been solved—the roll has been taken out of the hot dog, beg pardon, we mean the skid.

Use Less Liquor

Great Colony Goes For Temperance

DAKAR, French West Africa, Feb. 9 (AP)—This great colony is going dry without the aid of a temperance crusade.

Brandies and liquors imported last year amounted to 538,560 gallons as compared with 654,720 gallons for the preceding year. Before the war the consumption was far greater, being for the year 1913 nearly 2,000,000 gallons.

Track Outlook At Tech Looms Good As Season Nears

Addition Of Promising Recruits To Squad Of Veterans Adds Color To Payne's Thinly Clads

Although a delayed winter threatens to slow up preliminary training, the Tech track outlook is beginning to take on a rosy hue as promising recruits are uncovered to add strength to the already formidable array of veteran performers of the cinder path and field.

Candidates for the distance races have been loosening up their leg muscles for the past several weeks and when the official training starts immediately after the basketball season, these members of the 1929 squad will be ready to bear down at a mid-season stride.

Two newcomers who are expected to bolster up Coach Payne's thinly clad aggregation are experienced track stars. Basil Hill of Lamesa, who runs the gruelling 440 yard dash, was a consistent point winner in high school and will likely make a strong bid for the Tech team.

A Lubbock product who enters the half-mile run is Ben Lawrence. Lawrence steps the 880 at a fast clip and is almost sure to place in Tech competition.

Facing stiff competition and plenty of it, Coach Payne will likely fall back on the twelve veterans of past years to furnish the backbone of the 1929 track and field team. Headed by captain-elect, Vaughn Corley, and the 1928 leader, J. H. Tadlock, the Matador thinly clads will be strong in every department with the exception of the weights.

The passing of Roy Edmonds leaves Payne without a sure point winner in the weight events. Edmonds held the state record in the shot put when in high school and continued to heave the missive consistently after entering Tech. Bruce Reed, Ameral Payne and Leon Fisher are the experienced weight pushers who are expected to carry on for the crimson this season.

In the various other track and field events, the Matador mentor will have his letter men evenly divided. Tadlock will run the high and low hurdles and enter the jumps; Corley is a quarter miler who is also an important cog in the mile relay team. James Dallas, Charley Wooldridge, Leon Fisher and Elmer Moore are the other veterans expected to enter the 440 classification and compete for a position on the relay team.

TAHOKA OLDEST LADY CELEBRATES

A dinner party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Suddarth last Friday, February 1, marked the birthday anniversary of their aunt, Mrs. Lu McDaniel, who was 86 years young on that date. Friends of Mrs. McDaniel will testify to the fact that her years are indeed young, considering their number—for although she is perhaps the oldest lady in Tahoka in point of years, he has not known a day of illness in 15 years—actively takes part in the duties around the home and enjoys church and social activities as thoroughly as any young person.

The invitation list included the members of Mrs. McDaniel's Sunday school class in the Tahoka Methodist church, but several were kept away by illness and other causes. Covers were laid for Mrs. W. T. Clinton, teacher of the class; Rev. and Mrs. Breedlove, Mesdames Adair, Slover, Lee, Wyatt, the hon, Mis Ve Noy Coughran and the hostess. All claimed to have done ample justice to the four-course menu consisting of mint coctail, pressed chicken, grape jelly, sweet ghergins, mashed potatoes, creamed peas, hot rolls and butter, baked macaroni and cheese, molded salad with cheese wafers, ice cream, cake and coffee. The last course was especially attractive, the ice cream being in rose molds of yellow and orchid matching the birthday cake—it being iced in white and bearing the two-colored decorations which included the honoree's initials and the dates 1843-1929.

Dainty gifts accompanying the good wishes of the guests evidenced their kindly thoughtfulness. Likewise, a number of the young people who have learned to know and love "Aunt Lu," as they affectionately call her, dropped in during the day with gifts, congratulations and good wishes. Mrs. McDaniel enjoyed the celebration to the fullest capacity, and deeply appreciated everyone's contribution to her pleasure on this occasion.

LOCAL SCHOOLS HAVE LARGE ENROLLMENT

To date the local school have enrolled 728 pupils. The enrollment in the different schools is listed below:

South ward, total enrollment 50, now attending 48; central ward has 428 enrolled, and 351 attending; seventh grade 61, and 48; high school, total enrollment 189, now attending 151. Total enrollment, 728; now attending, 598.

The fourth grade has the largest enrollment of any grade, employing only one teacher. There are 51 now attending this room. Arrangements must be made for an additional teacher in this grade after this year.

TAHOKA TEAM WINS OVER LOVINGTON

The Tahoka high school basket ball team made a short tour into New Mexico last week end and engaged in games with Tatum, Prairie View and Lovington. The game at Tatum was the local's first introduction to the rough and tumble type of basketball played in some sections of the country. Tahoka could never get started at this type of games and was snowed under by the score of 20 to 2. The last quarter was worse than most football games, and the locals were glad when the end came and they could pull themselves together again. Thursday night was spent in Tatum.

The squad journeyed over to Lovington on Friday morning. The day was spent in visiting the school at Tatum. At 2 o'clock Tahoka met Prairie View in a closely contested game. The locals outplayed their opponents most of the time, but still could not find the basket somehow. The score was Prairie View 25, Tahoka 23.

At 8 o'clock, central time, Tahoka took on the Lovington high school. By this time the locals had begin to find the basket and had their fighting spirit raised to the highest pitch. Short again led the scoring, but every man on the team fought his hardest. The final score of this contest was 17 to 15 in favor of Tahoka. This was Tahoka's hardest game of the series, and in this game the Tahoka team played far the best game of the trip.

Too much praise could not be given the schools for the generous and hospitable treatment. Friday was a day of real pleasure and profit to those who were in Lovington. Supreintendent Groner, Coach Powell and the entire student body of Lovington high school won the praise of the visitors, and much favorable comment relative to the school has been expressed. After game Friday night Barnes, Short, Massengale, Smith and Willingham in company with Mr. Baze, drove over to the Carlsbad cavern, returning Saturday night.

Those making the trip were, King, Evans, Barnes, Massengale, A. Williams, F. Willingham, Short, Smith, Tredway, Coach Nichlaus and Superintendent Baze.

C. C. JOHNSON CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

A lovely birthday dinner was prepared by Mrs. C. C. Johnson for Mr. Johnson on Feb. 3, celebrating his 55th birthday.

Several friends of Mr. Johnson were present and also enjoyed the turkey and all its trimmings. Many lovely gifts were presented by the following: Rev. Z. B. Pirtle, pastor of the Draw Methodist church; Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Moore and two sons of Slide, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Pennington, Mr. and Mrs. John Berry, Mr. and Mrs. W. Z. Florence and family, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Johnson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Pennington and daughter Billie Wayne and Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Lemond.

Possibility Of City Losing New Postoffice Seen

Prompt Action For Clearing Site Title Must Be Taken Postmaster Vaughan Declares; Suit Is Pending

Possibility that Lubbock will lose the $335,000 appropriation of the United States government for the construction of a joint federal court and postoffice building in the city, unless prompt action is taken in clearing the title of the proposed federal building site on the southeastern corner of the courthouse square, was voiced here yesterday by Postmaster John L. Vaughan.

The site originally was deeded to the "public" and it has been impossible for Lubbock county to give the government a fee simple title to the property, a requirement necessary before a building site can be accepted.

Advised to Rush Work.

Mr. Vaughan was in Washington recently and states that he was advised on every hand to rush through the clearance of the property title, as it is possible for the appropriation already made to be rescinded. "Many places are seeking appropriations and they are places that can give a fee simple title to suitable building sites," Mr. Vaughan said "It is extremely hard to secure an appropriation of this kind, and now that we have ours, I am afraid that we are going to lose it because of the inability of the county to transfer title."

An injunction suit was filed in 99th district court last Saturday by J. A. Hodges, J. E. Garrison, Ira Wilson, J. A. Wilson and Charles B. Metcalf against Lubbock county, the City of Lubbock, F. E. Wheelock, and Alice Rayner, in a friendly attempt to clarify the present title muddle. The injunction petition sought to restrain the county from giving the proposed building site to the U. S. government. It was planned for the county to file a cross-action, claiming a fee simple title to the property on the basis that it has never been used by the public. It was also planned to secure waivers from each of the defendants so that the injunction suit could be brought to trial during this court session. The case was scheduled to come before Judge Clark M. Mullican of the 99th district court during the past week.

Cross-Action Not Filed.

The proposed cross-action of the county was not filed, however, and waivers from the defendants were not secured, and the suit did not come to trial last week.

J. E. Vickers, member of the counsel in the suit, said yesterday that a hearing on the case probably would be the latter part of this week if the defendants were willing to sign waivers. He stated that an effort was being made to iron out all questions satisfactorily before an additional step was taken.

Rumors of slight opposition to the proposed proceedings have been heard although nothing of a definite nature has been advanced publicly.

Postmaster Vaughan feels that a favorable court decision in the suit will be satisfactory to the government, giving the county the right to transfer a fee simple title to the property as a site for the proposed federal building.

FRANK SKINNER IS MASCOT

Frank Skinner, the little boy who so obligingly distributed the towels to the basketball boys to wipe their perspiring faces, has been the Matador mascot for four years. In honor of his position he wears a red sweater with four service stripes which is the envy of many of the junior high school boys. Frank is modest and rather bashful. He is as proud of the team when it wins a victory and as crushed when it is defeated as anyone else.

CONCERNING GREEN CAPS?

"Where are the snows of yesteryear?" sang a bard of olden times, and "Where are the green slime caps of the fall?" query those who have not seen one since the beginning of the winter term. Irresolute attempts to arouse old scraps between the first-year students and upperclassmen have been attempted a few times, but since "horse play" is frowned upon so by the administration, interest lagged.

In some universities and colleges the caps brought out on the eve before Freshman day in the spring and are used to kindle a hugh bonfire while the frosh give a snake dance around the flames. Such as this has not been tried at Tech, but on Fish day each year the freshmen try to pay back in full measure some of the spankings which have been administered to them throughout the year by their upperclass mates.

From Selling Blood To Minding The Baby-College Youth Earns Its Way

Cause Of Dawson Killing Unknown As Victim Buried

Several Hundred People At Funeral In Lamesa; No Reason For Killing Can Be Learned

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

LAMESA, Feb. 9—J. A. Cox, shot and killed last Wednesday night about 8:30 o'clock near the Klondyke store 15 miles southwest of here was buried in the Lamesa cemetery here this afternoon. Despite bad weather conditions several hundred people attended the funeral services which were held by the Reverend Leonard Bankhead also superintendent of the Klondyke schools and the Rev. J. T. Barr, pastor of the Church of Christ of this.

Cox leaves his wife, and four small children, four sisters, his mother, and brother, the latter just arriving from a trip into New Mexico after facing a severe snowstorm to get here for the funeral services.

Struck Full In Face

Cox was killed by a shot from a new shot-gun which ranged its full discharge into his face. Charges have been made against the Rev. W. E. Duke, owner and operator of a store directly across the road from where Cox lived and is operating a filling station. W. E. Duke, also lives with his family in At this time no one can vouch for any authenic statement that would lead to the cause that resulted in the shooting of Cox.

No one saw the tragedy except Mrs. W. E. Duke, wife of the accused and no statement has been made to this time. The Reverend Duke has made an appearance bond which is signed by seventeen citizens. The amount of the bond is $5,000. Duke is also pastoring two community Baptist churches in this county at the time of the shooting. The Midway and Sparenburg Baptist churches 13 and 15 miles south east of here respectively. Duke is 40 years of age and has a family of three children, the oldest of which is a 17 year old boy.

Many and Varied are Tasks Undertaken By Tech Boys

From selling one's own blood at $25 a pint, to playing the nursery stunt and minding babies while their parents are away—Tech students, approximately three-fourths of them are earning their own expenses through college.

Positions, or jobs, as most of them are called, which these boys hold, range from keeping babies while the parents go to the movies to doing secretarial work either on the campus or down-town. In between come a multitude of tasks which may be performed by willing hands, either as part-time positions or as odd jobs.

Student jobs are varied. In the past three years boys have drawn cartoons for an advertising board, been chauffers, sold classified ads, and operated farms, to say nothing of the usual run of "hashing," filling station work and other orthodox labor. Several Tech boys deliver papers, milk and groceries, while two boys run a tailoring establishment by themselves. One student who could not find any work available decided to sell fire insurance and is making a go of it.

Perhaps the most unique way of earning expenses was the blood transfusion one student gave last Saturday at a local hospital, for which he received $25. "That was just the thing I wanted to happen" he said, "because I can now buy my Senior ring and a club pin now and I never could have taken the money from my expenses. "That is decidedly a new wrinkle—giving one's blood in order to buy a ring."

Play Nursery Act.

Several boys take small children to school and go for them as well as caring for them if the parents are to spend the evening away from home. Two boys declared that they received 50c a night for caring for babies. When asked what they would do if the babies should wake up they said they would "keep quiet and if the kids continued yelling they would rock them." Of course this may not be the scientific way to bring up babies, but the boys may learn in time.

The prize "snap" job of the college must be held by the student who is paid to feed and water guinea pigs in a local hospital. This is rivaled by another university student a few years ago who was paid to wind the eight-day clock, but Tech's clocks are run by electricity.

Many Help Tech.

Perhaps the work which employs the most students around the campus is that of acting as student assistant in some course or department. In the science course this entails taking charge of laboratory sections and grading papers, while in other departments the work is not so well defined.

A fairly large number of boys do house work or serve in dining rooms at various boarding houses over town. One student has won quite a name for his immaculate house cleaning, while still another boys is called upon frequently to wash dishes after a large dinner or banquet because of his efficiency in this line.

There are several young men who work in the library, and tickets sold at the games and taken up at the door are handled largely by the students.

As for occasional jobs, there might be included those of "buncers" at the dances, shoveling snow, clerking in down-town stores and once last summer a student acted as "part-time night watchman.

The rate of pay which the boys receive for their work varies with the type of work, but the average is about 35c an hour.

Fat Stock Show To Have Air Exhibit

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

FORT WORTH, Feb. 9.—At least 16 airplanes, most of them of different models will be on display during the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show which will be held here March 9 to 16. It will be the first time this Exposition has displayed airships. Information received by the Fort Worth Air Transport indicates that numerous aviators will land there in order to view the airplane show on the exposition ground.

Latest models of automobiles will be found in the elaborately decorated Auto Show building. A thirteen-piece orchestra has been engaged to play matinee and night in the auto show building. It will be under direction of Hyman Maurice whose orchestra has played successful engagements in several big theatres and hotels.

The cablegram was stated to have declared that it was his supreme trust to preserve integrity of the army and in it was a pledge for whole hearted support of the high council.

THE TINY MITES

BY HAL COCHRAN

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

"Hurray!" cried Clowny. "I just knew what classy fishing I could do. I merely dropped my line, and then a fish grabbed hold real quick. Just keep your eyes on me and then I'll toss my line back in again. Good fishing, after all, is really quite a clever trick."

Then Scouty said, "You boast a lot, but I'll just bet that fish you got was just a streak of real good luck. Let's see you catch one more." "Ha, ha" laughed Clowny. "Sure I will. Now, all of you must sit real still. I'll pull in lots and lots 'cause that is what I came here for.'

They watched him, but he's lost his luck. Then Clowny said, "I guess I'm stuck. I'm going to take a little nap. The rest of you can fish. Please catch enough for one good meal, 'cause very honestly I feel like eating nice fried fish. They always make a tasty meal."

The others sat and fished a while. Then Coppy broke into a smile. "Aw, gee" said he. "There are no more. "We've caught the only one. Let's make a fire and cook it right. At least we'll all get one good bite. Just sitting here like this, to me, is far from any fun."

They pulled all of their fish-lines in. My, what a bad day it had been. Then Clowny woke up from his nap, and nearly had a fit. 'What! Are you shopping now?" asked he. "You think you'll share my fish with me? Well, I am going to cook it, but you will not get one bite.

Just then they heard a noise nearby, and quickly Carpy shouted, "My!" A man's out in that water, and he came from 'neath the sea." The man walked, with a splashing noise, and then he shouted, "Greetings, boys! I am the ruler of the deep, I hope you'll like me."

(The Sea Man does a queer trick in the next story.)

What Is Obscenity? Critics Disagree

Vexing Question Is Again Up Before Book Public

BY HORTENSE SAUNDERS
NEA Service Writer

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—What is obscenity? That vexing question that no one ever has answered satisfactorily except for himself, again is bobbing up before book sellers, readers, censors and the courts.

"Obscenity is an empty word—a meaningless combination of letters, and yet it is the basis of our literary and dramatic censorship," declared Morris Ernest, attorney defending the two sensational cases which are attracting national attention.

Radclyffe Hall's book, "The Well of Loneliness," recently was seized by John S. Sumner, head of the Society for the Suppression of Vice. Mary Ware Dennett's pamphlet, "The Sex Side of Life," was found so objectionable by a Brooklyn federal grand jury that the author was indicted for sending it through the mails.

Authors Hail "Masterpiece"

The first book, written by an Englishwoman, deals with the unnatural emotional life of a woman. But it has been enthusiastically hailed as a great piece of literature by such men as Havelock Ellis, Sinclair Lewis, St. John Ervine and Theodore Dreiser.

Mrs. Dennett's pamphlet first was published by the Medical Review 10 years ago, and since that time has been indorsed and distributed by Y. M. C. A.'s and Y. W. C. A.'s and praised by ministers, doctors, university professors not knowing how it was distributed, said of it:

"It has more sound sense and decent thinking in it than in all the disgusting treatises recommended to adolescents by Y. M. C. A. secretaries."

"To each person, the word 'obscene' has a different meaning and application," said Ernst. "That is why censorship is so unsatisfactory, and why a book banned in Boston may be a best seller in New York. It depends on the people and not on the book.

"Censorship in all the arts is greatly on the increase in this country. First we had religious censorship—in the old days, heresy was the only basis for the suppression of a book; then political—you could not offend the state; third, the sexual, which is the modern culmination.

"We seem bound to have censorship in some form or other, so when we can write as we like against the church or the state, we set up moral bars. That is just human nature."

New York's shocking point is very much higher than Boston's More than 100 books have been banned by Boston censors, including such best sellers as "The World of William Clissold," "The Sun Also Rises," "Young Men in Love," "Nigger Heaven," "Manhattan Transfer," and "Doomsday." Actual criminal prosecutions have been instituted there against such books as Robert Keable's "Simon Called Peter," Sinclair Lewi's "Elmer Gantry," Upton Sinclair's "Oil" and Theodore Dreiser's "An American Tragedy."

Obscenity, Ernst pointed out, is a lingual concept.

Lawyer Cites Paradox

"The vice societies direct their best energies to books in English The New York Vice Society secured a conviction against 'Casanova's Homecoming,' but let it circulate freely as 'Casanova's Heimfahrt.' Yet we teach children in our public schools foreign languages! The obvious deduction, not a flattering one, is that if you are a foreigner, obscenity will not harm you, but if you are an Anglo-Saxon, you are susceptible.

"Censorship of the stage presents the same baffling problem. The police raided and closed Asch's 'The God of Vengeance,' but it can be bought legally in book form. So can 'The Captive,' which was closed for reasons of social purity.

"In a general sense, the test of obscenity is this: 'Does it create impure thoughts or desires?' But what does that mean? Whom does it influence—the child, the neurotic or the normal? And you get right back where you started, again facing the tyranny of words."

Radecyyffe Hall, upper left, and Mary Ware Dennett, below, are the authors of a novel and a pamphlet that New York censors have found objectionable. But there's no way of determining just what is and what is not proper reading, says Morris Ernst, right, attorney who is defending the cases.

Luckless Auto Owner In Claim As 'Unluckiest'

JACKSON, Miss., Feb. 9 (AP).—If any contests to determine the world unluckiest man are held, F. L. Etier of Fort Worth, Tex., wants to put in his car.

Etier was leading a procession of 30 automobiles being transported from Florida to Texas across Mississippi. Only three bore license plates. Near here a man questioned him about the unlicensed 27 cars.

Etier said that the attorney generals of Florida and Alabama had said that it would be all right.

"How about the attorney general of Mississippi?" asked the stranger.

"To hell with him," replied Mr. Etier.

Mr. Etier expended $525 in licenses and penalties. The stranger was the attorney general.

Rodger Mitchell has returned from New Boston where he spent a month visiting with friends, and relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Clark and children, Bonnie Lee, Dorothy and Bobbie, were shoppers here from Northwest Ward Saturday.

Random Book Notes Gleaned From the Editor's Mail

Glancing at random through the avalanche of book notes, reviews, and publicity articles which litter the desk each week, one is caught by the announcement of a sequel to "My Life", by Isadora Duncan. The sequel is "The Untold Story", or the life of Isadora Duncan from 1921 to 1927 and is from Mary Desti, who through its publication by Liveright keeps a promise made to the great dancer two days before the latter's tragic death in Paris.

Madame Desti's book, started while she was ill and finished from a hospital bed, fills the intervals in the dancer's life not touched by the first book. Dancers, actors, writers and artists—any of those who pursue what may be termed the more aesthetic of professions—have a hold on the public interest. This makes Madame Desti's book—interesting enough as a unit—have especial merit.

The "farm problem" which with "prohibition" "tariff" and "religion" became all but a national institution during the political campaign just passed is reduced to its vital human essentials and is thoroughly analyzed in a new book by the Century company. The author is Ellis Lore Kirkpatrick, an expert agricultural economist, who makes an earnest endeavor to present both sides of the proposition.

'Headlines", a story of the story that lies behind some of the glaring and sensational news displays in the oft-termed "yellow" tabloids of the metropolitan cities has recently been published by Liveright. It will be reviewed at an early date.

The cynically-inclined who are prone to aver that there is no such thing as a "good marriage" may be due for a rude upset in "A Good Marriage", book just published by Century company. It came from Mary Brearley, a brand new English novelist.

To say the least, a cowboy in the American Institute of Graphi Arts would appear paradoxical. Yet such has come to pass in the case of Ross Santee whose book, "Cowboy" written and illustrated by himself, has been selected by the American Book Illustration Exhibit as one of the 22 best illustrated books of 1928.

Cosmo Hamilton, who has written The Three Passions, believes that the greatest disadvantage to the author of today is commercialism, or the need to "keep up one's end." If a man has proved his right to be called an author, Mr. Hamilton contends that he should be endowed by the government. Of course if he is married to the widow of a millionaire, states Mr. Hamilton the government is let out.

Now will all authors who agree please step forward. Line forms on the right, gentlemen.

Influences which have been responsible for the enormous changes in recent Chines history are traced in the "International Development of China," a new edition of a book originally published by Putnams. Dr. Sun Yat-Sen is the author.

Among The Best Sellers Are

BY THE NEA BOOK SURVEY

Since the styles an sales in bookdom are now set, to some extent, by the various book selection committees, it is reasonable to assume that these volumes will find their way to the "best seller" lists . . .

Book-of-the-Month . . . . The three-volume-in-one edition of Sigrid Undset's "Kristin Lavransdatter" (Knopf), which includes "The Bridal Wreath." "The Mistress of Husaby" and "The Cross' These are the works which largely influenced the Nobel awarders in giving her the Nobel Prize.

Literary Guild . . . . "Mamba's Daughters" (Doubleday Doraan.) by DuBose Heyward, who wrote "Porgy" . . . . In which Charleston becomes colorfully identified with something besides a dance vogue. Three generations of negroes and whites moving through a most coloful scene.

American Booksellers Selection . . . "Prima Donna" (Longman-Green) by Pitts Sanborn, music critic for the New York Telegram. As the title indicates, this is of the opera and its people, a large and brilliant study, too.

Dutton Selection . . . . "The Village Doctor." by Sheila Kaye-Smith . . . Full of Sussex appeal.

Crime Club Selection. . . "The prints." by Kay Strachan . . . Given the "Scotland Yard award." whatever that is, for the best mystery story of the season.

While not on the "book selection lists," Fannie Hurst and E. M. Delafield are here again, both commanding a considerable audience.

Fannie Hurst's latest is a collection of short stories. "Procession." (Harpers). Insofar as The Survey is concerned. Miss Hurst has not been particularly exciting since "Lummox," which seemed to us a grand book, like many other reviewers we have argued largely with her writing style But Miss Hurst doesn't seem to care whether we like it or not, for she goes along her own sweet way, caring naught for verbs and much for asterix and broken phrases. At first it seemed an affectation, but seemingly she means it. She has several stories here that, it seemed to us would be good if written. But as they stood they seemed little more than skeletons.

Miss Delafield, who will be remembered for "Jill" — or will she?—has been glancing about America lately, perhaps as part of a personal introduction preparatory to the appearance of "First Love" (Harpers).

While a tender love story, and quite unlike this author's previous penchant for the malicious, it may be well to warn a certain type of reader that this is more about our post-war young folks, There is a pre-war love and a post-war reckoning and not a little conversation concerning "spiritual understanding" and such.

Heap Big Mystery Of Porcupine Creek

Chief Yellow Lodge Found With Head Frozen Fast In Ice—Three Companions "No Remember"

BISMARCK, N. D., Feb. 9 (AP)—Yellow Lodge was found dead on Porcupine Creek, his head frozen in the ice. The answer of his three Indian companions as to how it happened is: 'No remember.'

John Loan-Him-Arrows was there, and so was Joe Running Bear and Henry Twin. John Loan-Him-Arrows still wore a black eye when he appeared for the coroner's inquest yesterday. This was regarded by State's Attorney George Drowley as substantiation of his theory that the Indians, illuminated by white man's moonshine, had brawled out there on the ice of Porcupine Creek.

John Loan-Him-Arrows' memory was blurry. Him fight but him no remember with whom. Joe Running Bear and Henry Twin were equally at loss . The three were quite certain, however, that they had not left Yellow Lodge to die.

"Him sober up, go home," they grunted.

But "him" didn't sober up. The hole Yellow Lodge's hatchet had made in the ice when he sought water to weaken the potency of the moonshine, was the hole into which his head dropped when the fight was over; and slowly in the zero cold, the water froze.

The white man's jury found that Yellow Lodge came to his death by freezing, following a fight.

Collegiate Texas Is Described By R. Cross, Writer

Texas University Campus Of Past And Present Is Subject Of Article; News Of Week In Texas Books

Texas gets collegiate in the February issue of College Humor. In a somewhat lengthy article Ruth Cross, author (as everybody knows) of "The Golden Cocoon," writes of Texas university as she knew it and she finds it today. She recalls some of the more hectic days when the university had to struggle for existence before oil was discovered on university land. This enthusiastic Texas alumna maintains that at Texas university there is that rare quality, real democracy.

"To understand why well-to-do Texas sends its white hopes to Austin one needs only to glance at any map of the U. S. A. Texas is something less than 2,000 miles from the eastern college belt. And everybody realizes the cash, as well as carry, value of university associations to a man or woman whose future is to be invested in the state. Texas believes in patronizing home industry in education."

Ruth Cross presents an attractive, if somewhat sentimental, picture of her alma mater. She does not fail to mention the impressive contribution of Texas to the roll of celebrities in New York and in Hollywood. Our claim to greatness, she thinks, may be due to the fact that here "climate, instead of being tamely accepted as a handicap, has been gamely met as a challenge."

LITERARY VENTURE

A new Texas magazine, the Aclavache, has been launched at Austin under the editorship of Charles Jeffries. This monthly is intended mainly for the work of Texas writers—fiction, poetry, nonfiction articles and some shot miscellaneous material. No payment is made at present for contributions, but they are received with appreciation and consideration. The purpose of this venture, so the editor says, is to "fan into life a literature original, untaught, unsophisticated."

TEXAS ART

A publication which we predict will be of especial interest to women of Texas is Frances Battaile Fisk's "History of Texas Artists and sculptors, 1888-1928." Mrs. Fisk has succeeded in amassing in one volume an astonishing amount of information about the develepment of art in Texas, about well known canvases, about artists of the state.

Many Changes In Latest Frigidaire

New applications of refrigeration, perfected by Frigidaire engineers, make cold more conducive than ever before to human comfort and happiness, according to D. A. Davis, local dealer, who has returned from a convention at Fort Worth, where he say an electric room cooler and a device for the regulation of freezing temperatures exhibited and explained.

"The room cooler, designed to banish summer time discomforts is something for which scientists and engineers have sought for years," he said. "In tests it has been found to lower the temperature of an average size room ten degrees in 30 minutes and to bring about a ten per cent decrease in humidity.

"Just as important is the new cold control. With her Frigidaire equipped with this device, a housewife with no more trouble than turning a radio dial, may select any one of six different freezing speeds for the preparation of elaborate frozen desserts and other dainties in the freezing trays. In perfecting this device, engineers have kept in mind the hundreds of thousands of housewives who already own Frigidaires and have made the control so that it can be easily attached to previous models.

Slaton Business Department Is Of Large Size

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SLATON, Feb. 9—The business department of the Slaton high school, organized four years ago, is one of the most popular departments of the school, according to C. L. Sone, superintendent of Slaton schools.

Six courses and six classes are found in the department, as follows: bookkeeping, 51 members; typewriting, 51 members; commercial law, 34 members; commercial geography, 18 members; shorthand, 14 members; and commercial arithmetic, 54 members.

The department is in charge of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Nash. Students have been making good who have gone out from this department to fill responsible places, Superintendent Sone says.

Mrs. Garner Says It's Worth More Than $1000 To Her

HAD SUFFERED WITH LIVER AND NERVOUS TROUBLE 9 YEARS UNTIL SHE TOOK ORGATONE

"I wouldn't take a thousand dollars cash for the good Orgatone has done me," says Mrs. D. F. Garner, who resides at 413 1-2 Pierce street, and is the owner of the well-known apartments known as the Garner Place, Amarillo, Tex.

"It may sound strange, but I had suffered with stomach trouble, abcessed liver and nervousness until I got to the place where I felt like nothing on earth would ever do me any good. Everything I ate soured on my stomach and made trouble for me, and in addition to the nervousness at times I would have a lump in my side that felt like a rock and pained me terribly. I just lived in misery all the time and couldn't get any relief.

"I am just finishing my second bottle of Orgatone, and it's surprising the way I have improved, considering that I haven't been entirely well before for nine years. The nervousness and hard lump is gone from my side, my stomach is all right and I can eat anything I want and digest it. I have gained some in weight, and am able to do my work and feel good all the time. I want everybody to know what Orgatone did for me."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called secret or patent remedy but a new scientific treatment containing no alcohol or other false stimulating drugs and is sold in Lubbock exclusively by Bowens Drug Store under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative. Out of town customers are being supplied promptly upon receipt of price of one bottle, $1.25, or six bottles for $6.25. Adv.

Scholarship Body Is Being Planned

List Of Members Eligible Is Forwarded With Bid For Formal Entry Into National Society

In the past two weeks, a committee from the faculty has formulated plans for an honor society in the schools. The formal application, a copy of the constitution, and a list of members eligible to the society, have been sent to the national secretary for approval. As soon as the plans are approved, the students who have been elected to the society will be awarded their pins. Only juniors and seniors who have attended Lubbock high school for at least one year are eligible for election. They are chosen on the basis of their scholarship, citizenship, leadership, and service.

ASK NEW CAPITAL

State Outgrows Its Present Quarters, Heard

AUSTIN, Feb. 9 (AP)—The business of the state has outgrown its present quarters and a new building is needed, heads of a number of departments last night told a few members of a joint finance committee.

The departmental building needs could be solved through an appropriation of $300,000 to rehabilitate the capitol and $700,000 for a new building, the legislators were told.

LONGHORN STEER RETURNS

ODESSA, Feb. 9 (AP)—The Longhorn steer has come back to Texas. He is not the pure longhorn, but a sort of hybrid with horns shorter than which once pastured on unfenced ranges. Scarcity of steers in this section brought about importation of the Mexican longhorn from Coahuila in large numbers.

C. S. Gulick, field superintendent for Montgomery Ward company, of Fort Worth, was transacting business with the local store Saturday.

"Lubbock Generally Gets What She Goes After"

What Other Folks Think of Us; Read About City's Growth

By AL HILL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

It has been said, and some there be who believe it, that the Chamber of Commerce has made mistakes.

"So mote it be." All the more proof that the organization is human.

When Lubbock's original "Community Cooperation" (officially named "The Lubbock Commercial Club," from which has evolved the present Chamber of Commerce and Board of City Development), campaigned definitely for the first railroad—and got it—they made no mistake.

Last week you were told something of how this first railroad came to Lubbock. That occurred, to be exact, in November, 1909. Before its arrival the city boasted a population of approximately 1,000. Census figures of 1910 credit Lubbock with the grand total of 1,938. It will be the effort of this article to shed some light upon the city's growth from the year of 1910 to the year of 1920, and its expansion from 1,938 inhabitants to 4,051, during this 10 year period.

Also, it will be the purport of this effort to keep you from forgetting the facts that the Lubbock Commercial club had something to do with this expansion—and to remind you of the further truth that any city's chamber of commerce can only be a reflection of the citizenship, a part of which it is.

First Club Had 60 Members

"When we formed the Commercial club, we took in ranchmen and every body," is the reminiscence of D. W. Puckett, on of the original members. "With all of that, we had only about 60 members. Dues were $1.00 a month."

Perhaps the next forward step following the securing of the Santa Fe, was the purchase of 160 acres of lan deast of Lubbock, which was donated to the state of Texas with the provision it be used as an experiment farm. This was accepted in 1910 and has had much to do with the development of the South Plains argiculturally.

Booster Crosbyton Line.

Other outstanding achievements accomplished through the united effort of far-visioned and aggressive leaders, from 1910 to 1920, include the donation of a right-of-way and $35,000 to the C. B. Livestock company in building the Crosbyton railroad, now a branch line of the Santa Fe. The livestock company owndе a large body of land near Crosbyton and wanted to develop it. It was the Lubbock Commercial club that helped to put this over. Later the Santa Fe purchased the line and are now operating it.

When the Santa Fe built its branch line from here to Seagraves the right-of-way through Lubbock county was given that railway company by Lubbock's commercial organization, at a cost of about $17,000.

As these additional railroads were being secured, expansion was being obtained in the city and county and throughout the entire South Plains territory.

Developed As Distributing Point

Through natural consequence there came wholesale and jobbing houses. Among the first ones to locate in Lubbock were the wholesale grocery concerns of Nobles Brothers and the J. M. Radford company. Then came a branch house of the Ed S. Hughes company, of Abilene. Also, the Western Windmill company, first operating a retail hardware business, wheih was later changed to wholesale.

Lubbock was "strutting its stuff" as a distributing center.

It can be truthfully said that "The Spirit of Lubbock" was born back in the beginning of the town, before its incorporation, in 1909. This spirit is well known throughout Texas as expressed in the statement: "Lubbock generally gets what it goes after."

But, not so very much attention was paid to Lubbock, when it was struggling for the first few things it "went after."

As distributing center we of today lok upon a city possessing 186 different wholesale, jobbing and manufacturing concerns, serving a territory extending far beyond the South Plains.

This city, of itself, is not altogether responsible for everything coming its way. Expansion of all surrounding territory made a jobbing center somewhere in the section a matter of course.

But, without the concerted action of Lubbock's commercial organization,—the vehicle which has carried it over the highways of progress—some other city might now be "The Hub of the Plains."

Notice the Contrast.

To get a correct picture of Lubbock's growth, let's look back upon the county before there was a county before there was a county seat. In 1880 there were 25 people residing in this county. Ten years later, 1890, there were 33. Then another 10 years increased the number to 293. In 1910, when the city of Lubbock had 1,938 inhabitants, the county boasted of 3,624. At the date when the city had 4,051, there were 11,096 people in the county—1920. County population of 1925 is estimated at 33,226. Today the county has perhaps 40,000 or more.

Lubbock is credited by the Chamber of Commerce and Board of City Development with having 17,500 people at the present. This figure is considered low by the publishers of the current city directory, which states there are more than 20,000. According to the number of water meters and light meters in the city, it is also estimated we have more than 22,000.

County Climbed Ahead.

Now, a look at figures for the South Plains, over the period from 1910 to 1920, and up to 1925, reveals astounding expansion.

Both Hale and Floyd counties exceeded Lubbock and every other South Plains county in population in 1910, Hale having 7,566 and Floyd 4,638 inhabitants at that date. Other 1910 figures in county population shows: Bailey, with 312; Lamb 540, Cochran, 65; Hockley, 137; Crosby, 1,765; Yoakum, 602; Terry, 1,474; Lynn, 1,713; Garza, 1,995; Gaines, 1,225; Dawson, 2,320; Borden, 1,386. The total for all 15 South Plains counties in 1910 was 29,392.

Ten years later what had happened?

Note the following tabulation, with 1920 and 1925 figures of population listed. It is to be seen that Lubbock county has climbed to 11,096 population, leading the entire list in 1920. Hale is in second place, Floyd in third and Crosby in fourth.

For 1925, Lubbock county has jumped to 33,226, Hale county trailing a close second, but Dawson county coming up to third place with 15,000, Lynn in fourth place with 14,000.

Total population of the South Plains for 1920 was 56,994. For 1925, the estimated population was 159,029. In 1930 what will it be?

Growth of the South Plains, as showed in comparative figures for 1920 and 1925:

County	1920	1925
Bailey	517	3,500
Lamb	1,175	11,300
Hale	10,124	30,800
Floyd	9,758	12,658
Cochran	67	1,500
Hockley	137	4,400
Lubbock	11,096	33,226
Crosby	6,086	12,000
Yoakum	504	985
Terry	2,236	9,665
Lynn	4,751	14,000
Garza	4,253	5,531
Gaines	1,018	2,850
Dawson	4,309	15,000
Borden	965	1,610
Totals	56,994	159,029

Next Sunday's Avalanche-Journal will contain another article of this series. In it something will be told of that period immediately following 1920—of how Lubbock brought Texas Technological College to the South Plains.

BRIDGE LUNCHEON

Mesdames K. C. Scott and George Everline were charming hostesses at a bridge luncheon Friday at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Smith, on West Garza Street. The Valentine motif was carried out in decoration and table appointments. A lovely three course luncheon was served after which about two hours was spent playing bridge. that the new Nash "400" is the only car of all the new cars that offers all these important features as standard equipment.. at no extra cost

THE new Nash "400" not only gives you all the important 1929 refinements listed above, but gives them to you without one single cent of extra cost. All motor cars have two prices—the factory (f. o. b.) price, and the delivered price. If the delivered price includes the extras, charged for at retail prices, you'll find your car costing a lot more than you anticipate.

Some dealers (not Nash dealers) charge as much as $50 or $60 for bumpers alone. On the new Nash "400" you'll find every necessary accessory . . . hydraulic shock absorbers . . . bumpers, front and rear . . . even tire locks . . . installed at the factory . . . included in the factory price . . . at no extra cost. That means a very much lower price, delivered, fully equipped. The Nash "400" leads the world in motor car value!

Announces

SALLY ANN BREAD

809 Avenue H

The tremendous increase in our business for the past few months has made this move necessary. Now, we have ample room and facilities to give the greatest service in our history in a clean, sanitary way . . . equipped to take care of the ever increasing business of the South Plains.

The new location is easily accessible to the out of town trucks that were here to fore compelled to load under cramped conditions and "traffic jams." We cordially invite you to come any time and inspect Sally Ann's new home.

MONEY TALKS

There is a very noticeable and sensible business trend in Lubbock at this time that induces investors to construct commercial buildings out in suburban areas that will carry about a group of three small stores, say, one for groceries, one for drugs and pressing or other lines. Our clients' property at 802 Avenue Q, is mighty well adopted to this purpose. A buyer could remove the frame home now on it to some nearby location and make it nearly pay for the entire cost of the property He then could construct a block with a 55 foot front carrying three stores of either brick or stucco that would pay tremendously in rentals. This immediate section offers a fine opening for this kind of investment, and as a good sensible business person looking for an opportunity this will challenge your attention.

Those three lots facing south on the corner of Avenue S and 26th Street are absolutely the best purchase for the price in Lubbock, and are destined to more than double in value as soon as S or T is paved which will not be long away. They are well worth $1,200 and the present owner paid that for them some time ago, but $900 will buy them now. For a small money making investment they have no equal in town. Come up to our office and let's talk these opportunities over.

Daring Of Lady Heath Seems To Be Seasoned With Level-Headedness; Aviatrix Adopts U. S. As Country

By ALEXANDER C. HERMAN
Staff Writer for Central Press and The Avalanche

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 7.—Lady Mary Heath, high flying English aviatrix, never flies off the handle, or goes "up in the air."

No matter where her plane (even at the dizziness of a four-mile altitude) she always is down to earth—mentally. Her daring seems seasoned always with level-headedness.

Since arriving in this country she has received jolts which would have jarred the complaisance of most. But Lady Heath never seemed to be thrown off balance even for an instant.

Champagne Confiscated

She got her first bump at customs, when she declared a bottle of champagne, which she was bringing over for the christening of a new plane.

"If only you hadn't been so honest, lady," mumbled an inspector—for many a traveler has gotten away with a bottle or two by secreting it carefully. But sentiment availed little. The bottle was confiscated and smashed.

It was a bad break for the lady—for aviators are superstitious, and they believe that it is hard luck to name a plane without champagne.

Then a few days later, Sir James Heath, husband of the airwoman, announced in London that he was putting the brakes on his wife's expenses. The wealthy iron master (who is 76) published a legal notice, which was broadcast all over the world, that his wife (who is 31) could no longer pledge his credit.

Reporters rushed the lady. (The flyer would be hot under the collar, and might say some biting things.) But they found her calm—with a short, typewritten statement ready.

"The least said about such matters, the better, don't you think?" she smiled, as she handed out the paragraph stating that she was self-supporting.

There was no cut of credit, no embarrassment anywhere, and she continued her flights in a little Moth plane—which she has been trying to popularize.

Then, one Sunday, she decided to attempt to break her own altitude record—of 24,700 feet. It was frightfully cold, but the British airwoman went on up. She climbed and climbed. At a height, which she estimated to be 19,200 feet—which would be a woman's record in this country—the wind made her engine miss, and she was forced to come down.

There must have been a mistake in her calculation. For the sealed barograph showed a bare 15,000 feet—or just nothing at all for record breaking.

An Athletic Lady

Without any sign of disappointment, Lady Heath hopped into another plane, and flew off to the home of Governor Trumbull, of Connecticut, to keep a luncheon date! And she got there on time!

While flying is her major interest now, Lady Heath could hold her own in most any sport. She holds 200 cups for varied athletic victories; she has bagged big game in Africa, being among the first to hunt from a plane; she can shoot 97 out of 100 clay pigeons while flying; she holds two Olympic records—for high jump and bread jump, and she can throw a javelin.

Her major flying feat was her solo crossing of Africa, hopping from Cape Town to Cairo, and then covering the 10,000 miles between Cape Town to England—alone.

In all, this British avatrix has flown close to 100,000 miles in the past three years. And most of her flying has been done in her tiny plane weighing less than 900 pounds.

"Flying," she says, "is tremendous fun. Every man and woman of any age or size or shape can fly. If one can drive a car, or ride a bicicle, one can fly—it is as easy and as safe."

Lady Heath has taken out her first naturalization papers, adopting United States as her foster country.

Government Wins Conspiracy Case

Chicago Councilman and 4 Associates Convicted Of Operating Huge Liquor Syndicate.

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, Feb. 9.—The government today won its liquor conspiracy case against Alderman Titus Haffa and four accused associates in the operation of a $5,000,000 booze syndicate.

The jury convicted the city councilman and the others on all 11 counts of the indictment, carrying a maximum penalty of four and one-half years imprisonment and fines of $15,000. Sentences was delayed until next week.

The indictment, charging manufacture, sale, possession and transportation of intoxicating liquors and a conspiracy to do so, was returned as the climax of an extensive investigation carried on by special federal agents in Haffa's ward, the 43rd.

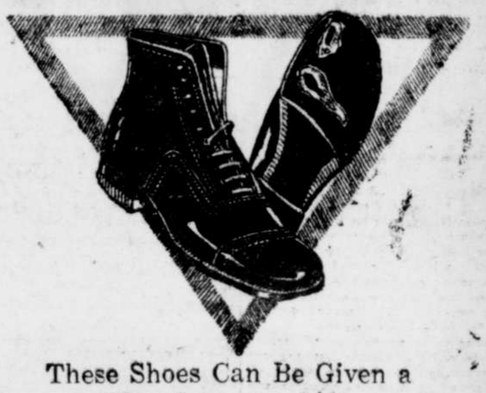

Haffa convicted with Joseph Begheria, ward politician and president of the republican boosters club; Edward Hug, minor political worker; Sam Simons, Haffa's chauffeur; and Henry Murray, political routabout and alleged booze runner.

Terracing Campaign To Be Inaugurated In County

Trip of Inspection to Experiment Farm at Spur to Launch Drive For Soil, Water Conservation In Region

Program Of Visits To The Farms of Lubbock County Is Mapped Out By Local Agricultural Agent

A concerted effort for general terracing of farms in Lubbock county and in the South Plains country is to be inaugurated by the Lubbock county agent beginning with tomorrow when a contingent of Lubbock county farmers will journey to Spur to visit and inspect the state experiment station there.

The delegation will be headed by County Agent Dave F. Eaton.

Beginning with next week a campaign for widespread terracing will be started. To assist Mr. Eaton is his efforts, a helper, R. D. Patterson of Idalou, has been employed. Mr. Patterson, thoroughly experienced in the work, will assist Mr. Eaton during a 90-day period.

At Spur the farmers will be shown the various demonstrations being carried on at the station there. The Spur establishment has gained a widespread publicity through its terracing tests and experts consider that this station has made a notable contribution to the knowledge of scientific soil and water conservation.

Beginning with Tuesday, in keeping with the program of terracing as boosted by Mr. Eaton, a day-by-day schedule for terracing will be followed by Mr. Eaton and his assistant. A school of instruction in the work will be given in a modified way.

Approximately 15 farms in Lubbock county have already undergone the process and Mr. Eaton said yesterday that it was hoped to boost this number to 100 during the current year.

"Terracing conserves the soil and saves moisture. It ultimately means larger crop yields," Mr. Eaton declared.

Seagraves Area Harvests Record Crops This Year

Total Production Is Near To 300 Carloads With Need Of Grain Elevators Sharply Felt In Gaines County

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SEAGRAVES, Feb. 9.—This territory is harvesting its largest corn crop. Approximately 150 carloads of corn have been shipped this season with approximately 100 carloads stacked on the ground for future shipments and 50 carloads remaining the fields.

With a reasonably good cotton crop and a good price, together with the bumper corn crop and favorable price, the farmers of Seagraves trade territory are in excellent condition.

Some farmers have purchased a moldboard heavy plow, such as are used in the Rio Grande valley for clearing land, and are doing deep plowing, on an average of 14 inches, throwing up the clay, mixing with the sand and making a better soil. This experiment was successful last year, causing corn and cotton to produce one third more.

The corn industry is becoming too large here to be handled from the farmers' wagons to the freight cars. One or two large grain elevators are badly needed, and will probably be built this year.

Business College Promoter Charged

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SNYDER, Feb. 9. — Swindling charges were filed with County Attorney Warren Dodson of Scurry county this afternoon against Harry D. Wall who is now opening another business college at Dalhart under name of Snyder Business College. Mr. Wall came here in September representing a reputable business college following which he announced opening a private school of his own, securing $175 in advance from students and then disappearing leaving unpaid bills, cold checks and salary of a teacher unpaid. The complaint filed today with the county attorney was signed by Geo. F. Smith, the editor of the Scurry County Time-Signal.

Gets "Her Man"

NEW YORK—This is the wedding day of Fannie Brice, who often has sung "My Man" and Billy Rose, song writer, who wrote "There's a Rainbow Round My Shoulders." They selected Mayor Walker to perform the ceremony at city hall. Billy is Fannie's third. Her second was Nicky Arnstein.

SHIP 800 CARS

Record Livestock Shipments From Gaines

SEAGRAVES, Feb. 9.—L. P. Bennett received eight cars of steer calves for his ranch near here. Ranges are in fine condition and cattle are doing well with but little feed. There were 800 cars of cattle shipped from this place last year and leaves omst ranges well stocked with good cattle.

Buying Movement Continues To Put Cotton Prices Up

NEW YORK, Feb. 9. (AP)—The cotton market was generally higher today on continuation of yesterday's buying movement, which seemed to be encouraged by talk of small fertilizer sales during January and a belief that recent declines had left the market in a firm technical position. May contracts sold up to 19.98 or 8 points net higher and closed at 19.97. The general market closed steady at net advances of 5 to 9 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 2 to 5 points on overnight buying orders. Some selling was reported on belief that low temperatures in the south would kill off boll weevil in hibernation. Offerings were comparatively light and the market soon turned steadier.

Much of the buying was attributed to week end covering. There was some Wall Street and Western buying on the advance, which carried the market up to 19.87 for March and 19.49 for new October contracts, or about 7 to 9 points net higher. Closing quotations were within a point or two of the best.

Talk of small fertilizer sales seemed to offset any bearish interpretation that might have been placed on reports of low temperatures in the South, the effect of which on the boll weevil situation was regarded as problematical by some local traders.

Private cables said that scattering liquidation in the Liverpool market had been absorbed by continental buying and thade calling and that there was a slightly improved cloth demand in Manchester but that reports from India were discouraging. Some of the houses with foreign connections were credited with selling here during the early trading. The offerings were absorbed on very slight setbacks and the general action of the market was regarded as reflecting an improved technical position following recent declines.

Reports that considerable areas of Texas were behind with farm work owing to unsettled weather conditions may possibly have been a factor. The market was favorable influenced by evidences of a fairly good demand for March contracts at a discount of from 10 to 12 points under May. Cotton shipboard waiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 132,464 bales against 94,676 last year.

Tickets to Bible Banquet Available

Tickets for the farewell banquet to be given in honor of Dana X. Bible, head coach of Texas A. and M. college who next year becomes the University of Nebraska coach, have been placed in the hands of W. G. McMillan of this city. The banquet will be held in Fort Worth on March 9, and anyone who purchases a ticket may attend.

Although it is felt that the entire quota of tickets could have been sold in Fort Worth and Dallas, it is planned to make a state-wide affair of the banquet. The state was divided into five sections; the south north, east, west, and central, and Mr. McMillan, for three years a football player under Bible, is in charge of the West Texas ticket sale. Only a limited number are available and those wishing to purchase them are asked to see or write Mr. McMillan. The price is $2.50.

Special railway rates for the Fort Worth Fat Stock Show will be in effect at the time of the banquet, Mr. McMillan announced yesterday He pointed out that the banquet is not limited to A. and M. students and ex-students but to anyone wishing to attend.

SELL LAND TRACTS

MUSKOGEE, Feb. 9—Sixty-one tracts of oil and gas leases on lands of the five civilized Indian tribes were sold here in the regular monthly auction sales. They comprised 5,154 acres and were sold for $25,291.94.

Sudan Reports Mercury Eight Below

** *** *** *** **

Livestock In First Class Condition And No Losses Are Feared—Cotton Picked And Threshing Started

SUDAN, Febb. 9—Icy winds accompanied by four inches of snow, have swept out of the mountains across the West Plains to bring to Sudan early this morning its first real winter weather.

The lowest registration of the thermometer noted was eight degrees below zero early this morning. At nine o'clock the registration was still only two degrees above.

It is thought that there will be little or no loss of livestock, they being in first class condition due to plentiful supply of feed and the warm weather of past weeks. The snow is protecting fall grain and furnishing a supply of moisture for lands that are being prepared for new crops.

Cotton is practically all gathered in this region and grain threshing has been rushed for several days.

Snow of Benefit

Will Conserve The Soil Moisture

"Snow of the week-end was generally of benefit to crops, according to the local county agent's office.

The moisture, in itself, was hardly enough to be of material benefit in providing a season, but as Mr. Eaton has expressed it, the earth already has abundant moisture.

"The snow prevents drying up of the soil and further conserves the moisture already stored there," Mr. Eaton said."

First planting in this part of the country will probably take place in May or late April.

Young grains received direct benefit from the snow Mr. Eaton asserted.

Oil Notes

(Special to The Avalanche-Journal)

HOBBS, N. M., Feb. 9.—Should the Bordages No. 1 Jenny Hughes prove a producer, more than 30,000 acres of land in and near Hobbs will be in proven territory, and there is at this time, every reason to think it will. The well is now more than 4,000 feet deep and the bit has reached pay sand.

Operations were ceased some 60 days ago after the contract for a 4,000-foot hole had been completed. It is strictly a wildcat, though in what is called good territory. Since that time a new contract has been let for an additional 500 feet unless oil in paying quantities is found at a lesser depth. There is every reason to think that oil will be found at about 4,300, as the structure in this well is something like 150 feet lower than in the Midwest No. 1. The Midwest at this time is the best well in the state.

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SNYDER, Feb. 9.—Latest geological maps show the Marathon fold upon which the heavy production in Pecos, Howard and other counties was discovered, passing across the center of Scurry county from north to south, informed oil men declare. Reports emanating from a major company with land and geological men in Scurry county are that leasing activity here continues, to be very steady, with a few blocks being taken an dseveral companies and individuals checkerboarding acreage in the central and eastern sections of the county.

Records show that during the last six months of 1928 one major oil company paid over $500,000 for mineral leases, and royalties in Scurry county. According to records in the county court. There are more than a dozen oil companies in the field that would bring the total of money paid in Scurry county to over the million dollar mark in the last six months of the past year.

Midland Auto Show

MIDLAND, Feb. 9—Large crowds of local people with many from adjoining towns and from the Midland oil field area attended the opening of the three-day free automobile show, which opened Thursday. They were entertained in the evening by a vaudeville performance.

Farm Agent Meet At Houston Took Up Many Subjects

Lubbock County Agent Reports On Proceedings About Big Session Of Extension Workers

In celebration of the silver anniversary of cooperative home and farm demonstration work in Texas approximately 1,500 county agents, agricultural extension directors, home demonstration agents, and the leading farm educators of the South convened in Houston this past week for the study of farm problems.

D. F. Eaton, Lubbock county agricultural agent; Miss Louise Baird, county home demonstration agent; and Don L. Jones, superintendent of the state experimental farm east of the city, represented Lubbock county at the annual convention, in session February 5, 6, and 7. Mr. Eaton returned Friday night and Miss Baird stayed over to take an inspection trip through the Rio Grande valley. Mr. Jones stopped off at College Station en route home.

In connection with the demonstration extension service convention, the thirtieth annual meeting of the association of Southern Agricultural Workers was held at the same time.

Mr. Eaton reports that he gained much worthwhile and valuable information from the general and section meetings. In commerating the silver anniversary of demonstration work in this state, a memorial service was held for the late Dr. Seaman A. Knapp, originator of agricultural extension work. Beginning with the fight on boll worms in Texas, the work changed into a general study of farm methods and finally into the demonstration of agricultural methods by county agents. Dr. Seaman was a well known educational worker and thinker, being president of Iowa State College at Ames, and representing the government in numerous agricultural activities.

Fixed Part of Farming

Extension service as a fixed part of farm activities, as the greatest single force in the development of state, proper and balanced agriculture was pictured at the convention. All of the outstanding farm problems and questions facing the farmers of this state were discussed.

Cow and milk testing by mail was advanced as the next development step to be taken in the South Plains. It is planned to establish a testing station at some central point with a superintendent in charge who will make tests of samples sent in from all parts of the section.

In a nation-wide contest of farm production, prizes were presented to representatives of seven states. Of these winners, Bernie Winder, of Nacogdoches, had the highest production record with 1,501 pounds of lint cotton harvested from one acre.

Budding Opera Star

NEW YORK — Serafina Di Leo, a black-haired, dark-eyed beauty in her 17th year, whose voice has been praised by Mary Garden as having greater possibilities than did Geraldine Farrar's, leaves tonight for Italy for a year's training prior to debut in the Metropolitan Opera next year. She is the eldest of five children of a workingman.

Cotton On Upgrade In New Orleans As Bulls Keep Alert

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 9. (AP)—Varied bullish influences kept cotton prices on the upgrade today although fluctuations were not wide by any means. Trade buying and shorts covering induced by expectations of bullish textiles statistics and a reported reduction in fertilizer sales carried May contracts up to 19.37 compared with 19.30, the day's low figure. The option closed at 19.35, net 5 points higher. The general market closed steady at net advances of 4 to 10 points.

Liverpool cables were favorable at the start here and first trades showed advances of 1 to 2 points. The demand became more aggressive after the start when shorts covered for over the week-end and on the belief that the severe cold weather in the belt would further hamper preparations for the new crop. Traders also expressed the opinion that the low temperatures would kill off large numbers of boll weevil in hibernation. At any rate buying continuel throughout the short session with the highs of the day reached in final trading.

The late months of July and October showed more strength than the near positions which were probably held back by some liquidation of March. At the highest May sold at 19.37, July 19.40 and October 19.22, or 7 to 12 points above the previous close. Final prices were 1 to 2 points under the top.

A report that the fertilizer association made the sales for the season 20 per cent smaller than last year added to the firmness. The textile statistics issued after the market closed about met traders bullish expectations.

Receipts, 11,470; for year 8,121,933; last year 6,915,505. Exports 23,199; for year 5,726,347; last year 4,715,524. Uort stocks 2,200,437; last year 2,268,542. Stock on shipboard 117,289; last year 123,066. Spot sales 11,045; last year 14,180.

Daily Markets

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 9. (AP)—(U. S. A.)—Cattle trade around the 11 market circuit this week was marked by an uneven daily distribution of the receipts which influenced moderate price fluctuations. Packers had their way on Monday and Tuesday, and enforced moderate to sharp declines on killing classes, but curtailed supplies resulted in a partial recovering. A restricted outlet for dressed beeves and a lower hide market continued to have a weakening effect on the slaughter grades Light weight steers and yearlings are closing the week at generally steady to 25c higher levels, but matured steers show averaged losses of around 25c. Country demand for feeders remained narrow, and only limited interest was shown in stockers. Aggregate receipts were around 151,300, a decrease of 16,000 from last week and 40,000 short of the same period a year ago.

Shipping demand for hogs had sufficient volume to more than offset the deterrent influence of increased receipts. Weak prices were paid on Friday with the extreme top of $10.50 paid at St. Louis. Current values are unevenly strong to 30c higher than a week ago. Total offerings were around 69,125, against 582,319 last week and 754,972 a year ago.

Fat lamb prices are generally steady to 25c higher with exception of Chicago which reported closing figures slightly under late last week. A weak undertone prevailed on aged stock and values are unevenly steady to 25c lower. The supply approximated 232,050, a shortage of 8,500 from last week, and 28,000 less than the same period a year ago.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Feb. 9. (AP)—Friends of higher prices for wheat took fresh courage today chiefly as a result of adverse crop developments in Europe. Evidence that foreigners were buying wheat future deliveries both here and at Winnipeg received special attention and there were predictions that world import needs for breadstuffs would exceed any estimate which has been current up to this time.

Closing quotations on wheat were firm at 1-8c to 5-8c net advance, with corn at the same as yesterday's finish to 1-2c lower, oats 1-8 to 1-4c down, and provisions varying from 5c decline to a rise of 15c.

Carload of Dairy Calves Is Ordered

A carload of dairy calves, numbering perhaps thirty or forty, have been collected from the Taft herds in South Texas and are now ready for shipment to Lubbock county, where they will be distributed among boys of the Four-H clubs in this county, it was stated yesterday by the local county agent.

Every animal in the carload is from either the famous Masterman or Masterman's son, of the Taft herd, according to County Agent Eaton.

The animals vary from 8 to 14 months in age and they are of the purest-bred stock.

The shipment is expected to arrive here in about two weeks.

Receipts Light On Ft. Worth Market

FORT WORTH, Feb. 9. (AP)—Only about 50 head of cattle and half that many calves changed hands on the Fort Worth livestock market today. Other cattle listed in the receipts either on through billing or direct to packers.

The odd lots of the different classes of cattle cleaned up early this morning at prices in line with those in effect yesterday. A few cows sold at $6.50 to $7.25 and a good part of a load of yearlings and heifers for slaughter purposes sold at $.835 and weighed around 600 pounds. Common light bulls sold at $6.75.

The few calves that entered in the day's trading sold at $6.50 to $9.00 and consisted of culls and a fair kind of calves.

No stocker cattle reported in the day's trading.

The light supply of hogs found buyers willing to pay steady to five cent higher values with a part load of 227 pound butchers selling at $10.05, which was the top in the rail section. Other sales at $10.00 and less.

The best rail butcher ssold at $9.50; packing sows unevenly higher at $8.00 to $9.00.

UNFILLEL TONNAGE MOUNTS

NEW YORK, Feb. 9. (AP)—The U. S. Steel corporation today reported that its unfilled tonnage as of January 31 amounted to 4,109,487 an increase of 132,775 tons as compared with December 31.

Dairy Courses To Be Held In South Plains Territory

Plan is In Keeping With Diversification Policy For This Region; Lubbock Meet to be March 6

In keeping with a policy looking toward greater diversification on the farms of Lubbock county, a series of short one-day dairy courses is to be held in Lubbock county and this entire region, it was stated yesterday from the county agent's office.

There are two principal reasons for the dairying school. The first is that of boosting interest in the annual Panhandle-Plains dairy show, to be held later, in Plainview. The second is to carry on cow testing work, with the ultimate end of securing for Lubbock or some other centrally located Plains city an official milk-testing office, where samples of milk may be sent by mail for analysis and testing.

The day's dairy course is to be held for the Lubbock community on March 6, and dairymen from all over the county are expected to attend. The course will probably take place at the court house.
