Electra Fisherman Drowns Sunday While Wading In Lake

TROXEL LAKE CLAIMS LIFE OF ELECTRAN

D. K. Martin, 33, Trapped By Deep Water While Fishing Sunday

SCORES HUNT BODY

Companions Attempt To Save Him But Fail To Reach Him

Special to The Record News.

ELECTRA, Aug. 7.—D. K. Martin, age 33, was drowned at 5:50 o'clock Sunday morning while fishing in Troxel lake on the Rio Brave Oil lease, three miles southwest of Electra.

Mr. Martin and a companion, Grover Lewis, age 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Lewis, went to the lake fishing about 7 o'clock Sunday morning. Martin was wading in water about waist deep in the lake, about 100 yards from the east bank, which is about the center of the lake, (a pool 640 yards wide and 1000 yards in length) when he suddenly stepped into a deep channel. He attempted to swim and after making a few strokes is said to have become frightened and went to the bottom.

Calls For Help

After coming to the surface for the first time he screamed "help" only once and sank again. He did not come to the surface the third time until about five minutes later.

J. W. (Bill) Alexander, an employe of the Post Office Barber shop, and who resides on the Rio Bravo lease, was fishing about 200 yards away, on the west bank of the lake and saw him go under the first time.

Alexander started to him, having delayed long enough to remove his shoes, and was about 30 feet from the drowned man when he came up the third time.

Mr. Alexander attempted to rescue him but was unsuccessful.

The boy also heard him scream and started to his rescue from where he was fishing on the south side of the lake, but made his way around the bank, knowing it would be useless for him to swim so far.

Oil Workers Help

Word was promptly sent to the adjoining oil fields and the city and in the course of a few minutes a large number were going into the water to search for the body, a total of about 20 men and boys remaining in the water until it was found.

Members of the police department ,the Boy Scouts and the fire department took the lead in the rescue work, assisted by a number of individuals. A human chain was made by linking hands; a boat with grappling hooks was secured and a seining party begun. In the meantime, approximately 500 or more people had gathered to watch the progress of the rescuing work.

Shook Finds Body

At 10:29 after an hour and 40 minutes in the water the body was located by Tom Shook, chief of police, who with O. M. Stidham and J. A. Stidham were in the boats with hooks. The body was found in about four feet of water, 75 feet south of the place it was last seen by Mr. Alexander and the Lewis boy.

The body had drifted southward from the channel where it went down. The water in the channel was about 10 feet deep.

When found the body was fully clothed with a minnow bucket tied on the overalls and a large string of fish entangled.

After being brought to the bank artificial respiration was given for 20 minutes, which was continued straight through while being brought to the Parmley-Ogden hospital and for several minutes after reaching the hospital, continuing while Dr. T. H. Parmley made an examination without avail however.

Taylor Cash, local scoutmaster, with W. B. Vandergriff of the Purity Baking company, and Sellars Soloman of Fort Worth giving the artificial respiration.

South American Hop

A non-stop flight over the 4300 miles between Pensacola, Fla., and Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, is the ambition of Lieutenant Donald Beatty, of Birmingham, Ala., who has filed his application for permission to make this trip, with officials at Pensacola.

THREE PLANES TO HOP OCEAN

Germany Plans to Send Fleet To America

By HUBERT R. KNICKERBOCKER.

(Special correspondent of the New York American and the only newspaper man who will accompany the Junkers' pilots in their epochal flight from Europe to New York).

DESSAU, Germany, Aug. 7.—In all probability a third plane, identical with the Europa and Bremen, will make the flight from Germany to America as the mail-carrier with two machines.

This was decided today by the Junkers directors.

After receiving information from the postoffice department that mail was accumulating in sufficient quantities to promise financial coverage for a third plane, the Junkers revealed they have had such a machine ready since three days ago.

If machine number three flies, it will only carry two pilots and no passenger. It will be the first exclusive mail-carrying plane ever to cross the ocean and will be the only trans-Atlantic plane which pays for itself on a strictly business basis.

The successful completion of the flight would prove the trans-Atlantic air mail service a matter of the immediate future, according to the Junkers experts who have figured out the costs.

Though only four days have elapsed since the announcement that mail would be accepted for the flight to America, letters have been received from every country in Europe. A batch of telegrams from Asia, Africa and remote points in Europe have been received, requesting Junkers to forward the telegrams as letters and paying postage by telegraphic bank drafts.

The pilot for the third plane has not yet been selected but probably will be Franz Dress, flight superintendent of Lufthansa's North German district, and Pilot Schanaebele, who flew a Lufthansa plane in the first flight from Berlin to Peking.

In case for any reason it proves impracticable to send plane three to America, Junkers intends to start it on a non-stop flight from Berlin to Peking at the same time the Europa and Bremen hop off. With two planes flying 4000 miles westward and one flying 6000 miles eastward, Junkers reckons that at least one more record should fall.

NEXT FILIPINO GOVERNOR TO BE CIVILIAN

Coolidge to Name Wood's Successor at Date In Near Future

FAVORS CIVIL RULE

All Semblance of Army Regulation Will Be Eliminated

AUSTIN, Aug. 7.—Dr. George C. Butte of Austin, attorney general of Porto Rico, is among the three or four men in line for appointment as governor general of the Philippines to succeed General Wood, it was said here by republican leaders.

Likelihood that his name will go to President Coolidge with strong endorsements for the appointment is enhanced by the fact that he combines law training with military experience, having served as a high army officer during the World war. He is conversant with insular conditions, speaks Spanish fluently, and has had executive experience as acting governor of Porto Rico. Dr. Butte is in Texas now on a vacation visit.

By Universal Service.

RAPID CITY, S. D., Aug. 7.—President Coolidge is expected to appoint a civil governor of the Philippine islands to succeed the late Major General Leonard A. Wood. He is anxious to strip the islands of the appearance of military government which grew up under General Wood's administration and which provokes so much trouble between the general and the islanders.

The names of Henry L. Stimson, who was the president's special commissioner to Nicaragua, and of former Governor Campbell of Arizona who is a candidate for ambassador to Mexico, loomed among the likely successors to the general.

Coolidge Stunned

President Coolidge was stunned by the news of General Wood's death. It was given to him by Secretary Sanders shortly before the president left the game lodge for the Sunday religious services in the tiny frame church at Hermosa and it threw a shadow over the day.

General Wood was obviously in very ill health when he came here last month to report his administration to President Coolidge. He was helped from his special car at Custer and his attendants practically lifted him into the president's auto for the trip to the game lodge. A parlysis seemed to have settled upon his left side. His left hand hung helpless.

Injured in Accident

The physicians who then accompanied General Wood positively denied that he had suffered parlysis or that his condition was attributable to a cerebral stroke. The general had undergone an operation for hernia, the physician said, but his left side had been inapacitated first by an auto accident in the Philippines and later by an accident aboard ship en route to America in which three left ribs were fractured.

Despite his physicial ailments General Wood impressed the president by his mental vigor and by his sturdy determination to return to the Philippines and complete his important task. Like a battered soldier, the general was eager for the fray again.

Wanted to Work

General Wood told the president of his desire to resume his task and received the president's hearty approval. In a statement to the newspaper men before he left for the east, General Wood lavished praise upon President Coolidge for the support he had always given him in his continued contests with the island leaders.

The general held very strongly

DAWES FIRES FIRST GUN IN G. O. P. CONTEST

DEFENDS NAVY CUT

Chicago Banker Refers To Failure of Geneva Naval Parley

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Vice President Charles G. Dawes, this afternoon shattered the official silence which has mantled the breakdown of the naval arms conference at Geneva. With characteristic vigor, Dawes performed this act in the presence of the future king of England, and the British prime minister, Stanley Baldwin.

The occasion was the dedication of the vehicular peace bridge connecting the United States with the Dominion of Canada. Ten thousand persons crowded the bridge plaza on the Buffalo side. They seemed electrified by the expressions of the vice president after other speakers had touched on the topic of peace only in a general manner. The radio carried his words through broadcasting stations in 25 states.

He Refers to Geneva.

Mr. Dawes' voice rose to impassioned pitch as he defined the Geneva meeting as quote "But an incident in the steady onward march of the principle agreed upon by the great naval powers at the Washington conference, in accordance with which two great English speaking peoples pledged themselves to equality in naval strength."

He added that it was not a mistake to call the conference. The cause of the collapse of the conference was suggested when Mr. Dawes declared:

"Perhaps before this conference was held there was not the preliminary careful appraisement by each conferee of the necessities of the other—perhaps too exclusive concentration by each conferee upon the necessities of his own nation resulted in predetermined ultimatums before a comparison of views—perhaps the public announcement of respective programs early in the conference produced fears of demostic public repersucsion if they were not reasonably modified, as would be necessary to effect an agreement."

Dawes' Brow Stern.

Dawes had his chin thrust forward. His brow, gathered in a half-frown above his spectacles, was stern. Meanwhile, Premier Baldwin, who has refrained studiously from mentioning the Geneva situation either in speeches or interviews on his Canadian tour and in his address today, looked steadily at his program. As the eloquence of the vice president died away, whispers could be heard among many of those near the nigh awning-shaded speakers' platform, interpreting the speech as an opening gun fired in a bid for the presidency.

The nearest Baldwin had come to mentioning the Geneva matter was when he siad:

Pleads For Peace.

"I wish that the path to international peace were as smooth and as straight as this bridge. But alas, to the goal of our desire there is no royal road. We have had to differ for the moment, but we know in our hearts this does not affect our friendship."

Others, including the Prince of Wales, Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg and Premier McKenzie King of the Dominion, had dwelt on the topic of peace as a desirable condition. They emphasized that Canada and the United States had been at peace for more than a century, a fact that is commemorated by the peace bridge.

Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, speaking before the arrival of the royal party which crossed the bridge at 4:25 p. m., said that the company of which he is the head is one of the leading ordnance making organizations in the world, but added:

Colorful Splendor.

"If peace could be brought about, I would gladly see our ordnance business sung for all time to the bottom of the Atlantic ocean."

The royal party, including the Prince of Wales, Prince George, Premier and Mrs. Baldwin and a great array of Dominion notables, had motored nearly 100 miles from Toronto for the bridge celebration. Their advent to American soil for two hours of ceremony was linked with a scene of colorful splendor beneath the hot August sun.

At Bridgeburg and the contiguous village of Fort Erie, the Canadian terminal of the long steel and concrete structure, the royal Canadian dragoons with their polished brass helmets and scarlet tunics, flanked the prince's entourage of 40 cars. After a brief ceremony, the royal party proceeded to the center of the span on foot. There, his royal highness clasped hands with Vice President Dawes, Secretary Kellogg and Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York. The salutation was exchanged across a white silk ribbon which denoted the international boundary line. That was at 4:10 o'clock.

150 Laborers Smuggled Into Texas From Mexico Are Captured

EDINBURG, Texas, Aug. 7. (AP)—An alleged smuggling ring of aliens which federal officers believe has been supplying central and North Texas with cotton pickers at so much a head, is believed to have been broken up north of Edinburg Sunday. Border Patrolman Dol Fleming of Falfurrias, headed the party of officers which captured 150 "wet back" laborers between Edinburg and Falfurrias.

The party of 21 cars were said to have been headed for the district north of Austin. The officers, drivers, and aliens passed through here en route to Reynosa, state of Tamaulipas, Mexico, where they were deported. It is understood that some of the laborers may be allowed to return when proper restrictions are complied with.

Smuggling of workmen across the Rio Grande, through the brush, and then north in trucks, is believed to have been in progress for some time. Officers say that the drivers of the trucks have been selling the laborers at $4.50 apiece.

SACCO DEATH CASE CAUSES TENSE SUNDAY

Great Crowd Gathers On Boston Common To Beg Mercy

POLICE ARE ROUGH

Mounted Officers Rush Crowd to Compel It To Disperse

By Universal Service.

BOSTON, Aug. 7.—Twenty-five thusond persons were thrown into confusion this afternon when the police broke up a protest meeting by Sacco-anzetti sympathizers. The crowd was charged by mounted police after an ultimatum to stop the meeting had been given to the speakers by the authorities.

"We have just been notified by the police to stop this meeting," cried one of the speakers, "but fellow workers I think we will continue."

Police Get Busy

No sooner had he spoken than he was jerked from his soap box by the officers and rushed to a nearby station. Then the riot was on. Hundreds of police, some of them mounted, surged through the crowds. Many persons were knocked down. Many persons were clubbed by the officers.

Then came the clanging patrol wagons and hauled several members of the mob out of the commons. A movement to storm the state house, just across the street was started by a wild human tide but this was soon broken up.

Feeling was worked up to fever pitch and the authorities were preparing for outbreaks later in the day.

It is the first time in the history of the Boston police department that the riot squad has been mobilized. The men have 15,000 rounds of ammunition, 56 shotguns, 12 machine guns, and several 18-inch bayonets.

Riot Squad in Charge

Back of the riot squad stood the entire police department ready for any emergency and the national guard awaiting call. Behind these forces are the United States marines expecting to be ordered out for the protection of life and property.

Boston is an armed camp tonight although all appears peaceful on the surface. Two thousand policemen have been cut off from their families as they await instant duty.

Although all these precaulons have been taken any kind of terrorism is improbable before tomorrow, for tomorrow the courts will hear motions on the famus case that has been in progress for seven years.

Judge Webster Thayer, who recently sentenced the men to the electric chair next Wednesday night will leave his summer home in Maine and go to the court house in Dedham tomorrow afternoon to pass upon the eighth motion for a new trial.

No Reverse Expected

It is not believed that he will reverse himself and the Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee is not counting much on that.

Tomorrow morning the warden of the state prison, who has the prisoners in custody will be in supreme court on a petition for a writ of habeas corpus brought in an effort to get the men out of the death house. The defense holds

California Man, 180, Holds Age Title

Captain Sam Born Before U. S. Revolution

By Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Aug. 7.—Thirty years before the Stars and Stripes were adopted as the American standard in the midst of the War of Independence, a man who still lives first saw the light of the sun, if Indian gossip, be true.

The man is Captain Sam, or Sam Fish, whose cabin is in the Indian village near June Lake in the high Sierras.

No one knows how old is Captain Sam. Residents of the region affirm he is the oldest man in California, perhaps the oldest in the world.

Captain Sam does not say. What matter a few moons more, a few moons less, when so many have passed over his head?

Tribal tales indicate that Captain Sam is 180 years of age. White men who scout this figure amit it is not improbable he has seen 145 winters.

There are more than 100 Indians in Captain Sam's family. Those far along in years recall tales he once told at camp-fires years ago. Nowadays white men strive in vain to have him impart his memories of the past.

These stories of his relatives indicate that Capt. Sam was a grown man, a leader of his tribe, when the Donner party went through the Upper Owens Valley nearly a century ago. This was the first party of whites to traverse the region. Relatives of Captain Sam recall the accounts he gave them of his astonishment at seeing white men and women for the first time.

Archaeologists Dig Up Ancient City

Indian Lore Unearthed By Mexico Experts

By Universal Service.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 7.—Excavation of an ancient Indian city set upon fortified hills is being pressed today by archaeologists of the federal department of public education following the re-discovery of the site overgrown with tropical vegetation.

Work already done has revealed fortifications which must have been impregnable in their day, temples, of great walls, and tombs of the dead rulers of the ancient empire.

Legends handed down to Indians now living in the vicinity of the ruins are being collected and examined by experts with a view to developing data which, it is hoped, will lead to new discoveries and will also explain the meaning of some already made.

These legends deal with the gods of the region, with the religious rites of centuries long past, and with the deeds of ancient heroes who ruled the land in years before the coming of the Spanish conquerors at the dawn of the 16th century.

One more modern story tells of a party of "strangers" who entered the area barely 50 years ago and undertook to explore the ruins and open the tombs of the dead. These venturesome explorers, the Indians assert, were regarded as vandals and were driven off with the threat that they would be killed if they returned.

La Ciudad Vieja—the Ancient City—as the place is called by the Indians, is divided into three important walled centers, each upon a hill rising several hundred feet above the valley.

WOMAN WEEPS IN DEATH CELL

Two Condemned to Die Denounce Fate

By Universal Service.

FRANKLIN, La., Aug. 7.—In her cell, alone, far from the hard, curious eyes of the hundreds of her neighbors and friends Ada Bonner Leboeuf, convicted late last night of the murder of her husband, broke down today for the first time since July 1, when she lured her husband to the desolate flood wastes about Morgan City so that her lover, Dr. Thomas E. Dreher could kill him.

With amazing fortitude, a fortitude that was the marvel of the parish of St. Mary, she calmly heard read the verdict that decreed she and this doctor should hang and that James Beadle, the third of this trio that played with life and death, should serve the rest of his life in the penitentiary. But in the cell that has been her only home for four weeks, she broke and the breaking was tragic, following so dramatically upon her dry eyed, adamant acceptance of the tears and kisses of her sons and brothers.

Wife Breaks Down

Mrs. Beadle, taut, work worn little wife of the only man who got off with his life, and who took the stand in her husband's defense, lost her little wall of reserve completely when that fateful word "guilty" was read after her husband's name.

The befogged brain of the woman who by sheer physical strength had kept herself going calmly during the 11 days' ordeal could not understand the significance of the words "without capital punishment" and only the "guilty" penetrated that tragic consciousness.

She whimpered, threw her arms in a deathlike grasp about her Jim's shoulders, cried out loud, and then shrieked. She could stand no more and it was several minutes before deputy sheriffs could fight their way through the sympathizing crowd that surrounded the man and wife to lead her from the court room.

Cries in Court Room

During those tense moments, so strained by the verdict as it had been delivered solemnly by the clerk of the court, the air was torn in shreds and the court room consciousness was shattered by those agonized yells.

But even this served not to penetrate the deathlike mask of the woman who had heard a moment before that 12 men willed she should die. Nor did it attack the doctor's strained self control. He wiped his hand hastily over his mouth, turned his eyes from the screaming woman, and started to talk to his wife.

Mrs. Dreher, a fragile bit of blue blooded aristocracy, blanched as the verdict was read, and her transparent skin assumed the greenish hue of unbeautiful death, but she held herself aloof and gave no opportunity to see her give way to emotion publicity.

Mrs. Dreher Brave

After her condemned husband was led back to the jail, to the cell that had become a death cell, she walked bravely to an office in the courthouse and only when she was away from the crowd did she permit herself the luxury of a sigh and a few dry sobs. She was given a glass of water and then shook off helping arms of friends, daughters and relatives, and with a certain stride left the courthouse.

This morning the two condemned murderers showed evident signs of the strain of the night before. Ada did not sleep, she wept in lonely solitude and eagerly awaited the morning that would bring friends, family and solace. The doctor slept for about an hour during the hot night, and woke up a crushed, broken man, still declaring his innocence, condemning Beadle as the real murderer of James Leboeuf and berating him for leaving the defense the other two had fixed for themselves.

Beadle Sleeps Well

But Beadle slept the sleep of the weary, woke up refreshed and thankful that his life was to be spared. Attorneys for Beadle intimated that he will not seek an appeal from his sentence but will take his medicine, depending upon leniency to shorten his sentence. Attorneys for the other two will file a motion for a new trial on Wednesday and if that is denied will immediately file an appeal to the supreme court.

THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOME

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

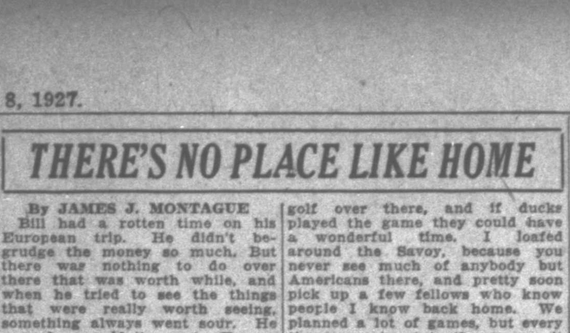

Bill had a rotten time on his European trip. He didn't begrudge the money so much. But there was nothing to do over there that was worth while, and when he tried to see the things that were really worth seeing, something always went sour. He says he wouldn't go to Europe again if they gave him the place. He told us all about it when he was gettig into condition for his first round Saturday morning.

"As soon as I got to Paris," said Bill, "I inquired around to see where I could get a game. Naturally I went to the American Embassy. I knew it was the business of those fellows there to see that their fellow countrymen are taken care of.

"They wouldn't let me see the Ambassador. They said he had gone home the day before. I was sure that was a stall, but there was nothing to do about it so I inquired for the man in charge. They wanted to know what I wanted to see him about, and when I told them that I was looking for a game they gave me a lot of dirty looks, and told me they couldn't do anything for me.

"I went back to my hotel and told the chief clerk that if I didn't get a game the next day I would leave the town flat and go to London. After I had demonstrated what I meant by a game by swinging my unbrella as if I was going to make a two hundrey and twenty yard drive, he called a page boy and said something to him in French. Then he said to me that if I would pay the boy for the day I would be taken to a place where I could get what I wanted.

"The boy called a taxi, and he and I rode for what must have been thirty miles—hey call it kilometers over there. We brought up at a big field, and I paid twenty-five francs apiece for admission at the gate. The boy followed me in, carrying my clubs, and attracting a lot of curious looks from the crowd that was goingin with us.

"He piloted me to a grandstand, which surprised me a lot, for I didn't know golf was so popular over there that they had to build houses for the galleries. But as soon as I got into the place I discovered what was the matter. I had been brought to a polo game!

"Well, of course I got out of there right away. I tried the chief clerk again, pronouncing the word 'golf' so loud that everybody in the office turned around and stared at me. I finally got it through his head what I wanted, and this time he appointed another boy to take me out.

"We went to one golf course after another, but they were all of them private, and we couldn't get in. Finally by tipping what I suppose was the chairman of a greens committee fifty francs I got permission to play on one of them. But I couldn't get a partner, and the caddies didn't understand English, and couldn't give me any information about blind holes. Worse than that they wouldn't understand me when I gave them the deuce for rattling the clubs when I was trying to drive. They evidently thought they were being complimented, and rattled them louder than ever, every time I exploded. I came away after nine holes, took a couple of drinks at an American Bar, and that night left Paris forever.

"I had heard before I left that they had pretty good courses on the French Riviera, and so I took the first train down there. But all the English and American people who go down there clear out as soon as the hot weather begins, and there was nobody who speaks United States to play with. Besides that the caddies all insisted that they couldn't understand me, so after a couple of futile days I came away.

"From the Riviera I went to England. There was plenty of our courses at nome, as far as scenery is concerned. But they don't keep them in the right kind of condition and anybody that can win a hole off a Scotch golfer has to be just a shade less handy with his tricks than Bobbie Jones.

"I went to Holland from Scotland, and from there to Germany, and from there to Italy. Now and then I was able to get a game, but it was always with some bird who spoke a foreign language, and who kept on making rules of his own, and claiming a hole by pretending I had violated them.

"So after six weeks of the six months I had expected to stay I came home. The fellow who said Europe was an overpraised institution is right. As far as I can see there is absolutely no reason for an American going over there. Of course there are saps who like to look at cathedrals and art galleries and palaces and things of that kind. And you can get a drink there without running the risk of dropping in your tracks as soon as it has got down as far as your solar plexus. But I can't understand why any red-blooded American, who can get a good game any time he wants it, and can play it in the American language should want to spend his time and money travelling in foreign parts."

FAKE BOMB IN NOTED TEMPLE

Aimee's Congregation Gets Fright Sunday

By Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 7.—A fake bomb at Angelus temple today featured the Los Angeles reaction in the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

Workers at Aimee Semple McPherson's church were thrown into a panic when the bomb was found in an alley next to the temple just before services. The nucleus of the "infernal machine," which contained no powder, was an alarm clock. Attached was a note bearing a black hand and the words "death" and "Sacco and Vanzetti." Police believe the affair was a boys' joke.

Four asserted radicals are under arrest as the result of "red" raids. Joseph Sominoff and Sam Globerman, said to be communist leaders, were charged with criminal syndicalism.

Malcolm Bruce, said to have formerly edited a Canadian communist paper and to have been a delegate to the internationale at Moscow three years ago, was held on a similar charge, and is being investigated for possible violation of the Mann act.

Jean Russell, 23 and pretty, was arrested at Bruce's apartment, police said. She was charged with entering the country illegally.

Courage and Belief In Christ Urged As Means To Happier Life For Man

Strength and courage to carry men through the intricacies and battles of life, and a love and understanding of their fellowmen that will evoke that consciousness of Christ that leads to an understanding of immortality, were stressed as the most crying needs of men of all times, by the Rev. Dan F. Greider Jr., assistant pastof of the First Presbyterian church, in his sermon, "What Do I Need Most," delivered Sunday evening at the first outdoor union service of the year, held in Bellevue park.

Story of Rich Youth.

The pastor took as his text the story of the rich young man, satisfied with respect to his material condition, who stopped Christ with the question, "What else do I need?" In every life the dissent with exisiting phases of life responds in the human heart with a need for an added stimulus, the addition of new attitudes; or, as the case may be, the subtraction of sins or viewpoints that hinder the spiritual development, the pastor said.

"Let him who thinks there is no need in all the universe that he cannot fulfill to his satisfaction beware," the Rev. Greider said, "and let him who thinks his material welfare leads to eternal happiness beware the piercing gray eyes of the Christ."

The union services were sponsored by the First Methodist, the First Christian, the Floral Heights Methodist, the Grace Methodist Episcopal, the Highland Heights Christian, and the First Presbyterian churches, and was attended by a crowd estimated at 3500. The services were opened with the invocation by Dr. S. S. McKenney, and several religious songs sung by the audience under the direction of Olva Willgus, accompanied by the Wichita Falls Municipal band directed by R. A. Broilier.

Girls Give Solos.

A feature of the service was the rendition of two solo numbers by a group of girls from Corsicana Orphans home, directed by Miss Annie Barker.

Following the services a band concert, sponsored by the Wichita Falls clearing house association, was given by the municipal band.

The union services are to continue throughout the month of August, it was announced. Dr. S. A. Barnes, pastor of the Floral Heights Methodist church, will deliver the sermon at the service Sunday evening.

HUSBAND HELD IN VANDALISM

Petrolia Man Demolishes Wife's Possessions

A Petrolia man was being held in the Wichita county jail Sunday after he had literally wrecked his home in a fit of rage caused by domestic troubles, according to reports to police officers here.

A priceless violin, handed down to the man's wife through generations, a fine piano and another violin valued at $150, were among the property destroyed while the man was giving vent to his rage, it was reported. The man's wife was said to be a teacher of violin and piano.

According to an account given here, a suit for divorce had been filed by the man's wife. Coming to Petrolia Friday night, the man went to his home while under the influence of liquor and while his wife was at a neighbor's home proceeded to take vengeance on the furnishings.

When a Petrolia city officer arrived at the home, he found two beds burning and numerous articles of furniture in splinters. In extinguishing the fires, feathers were scattered for some distance on the street, it was said.

The officer attempted to reason with the man but a fight followed between the two. After battling with their fists several minutes, the man was said to have drawn a gun on the officer who ended the melee by striking the man with the butt of a pistol. The officer's clothing was torn and his face scratched in the fight.

The Clay county jail at Henrietta is now undergoing repairs and the man was brought to Wichita Falls Saturday and placed in jail.

WOOD BURIAL SET TUESDAY

Rough Rider Leader To Rest in Arlington

to the belief that the vast majority of the islanders were contented under American rule. Tremendous progress had been made by them in civil government, education and sanitation, the general told the president. He said that capital was the greatest need for the islands but that the finances would be slow in making investments unless they had the assurance that the United States would maintain its hold there indefinitely.

Rubber Production

General Wood had mapped out a campaign by which the islands could be made to produce enough rubber for the United States' rubber supply, thus making this country independent of the English rubber monopoly.

To President Coolidge, General Wood said he regretted that his administration had a military appearance. But he said that his military subordinates were the only ones in whom he could place implicit reliance.

President Coolidge is strong for civil government. He will recommend to the next congress the creation of a civil bureau to administrate the insular possession, including the Philippines.

WOOD TO BE BURIED IN ARLINGTON CRYPT.

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, governor general of the Philippines who died in Boston early today, will be buried in Arlington National cemetery Tuesday morning, it was announced today.

His last Bivouac has been selected by Mrs. Wood. It is with his former comrades in the "Rough Rider" section. He commanded that unit during the Spanish-American war with the late Theodore Roosevelt as his second in command.

In consultation with Mrs. Wood by long distance telephone the war department completed arrangements for the funeral. It will be martial. Soldiers and sailors from every post near Washington will follow in the train of the celebrated warrior, chief exponent of militarism and national defense.

Body at Boston.

The body of General Wood will leave Boston Monday evening on the Federal Express. One officer and six enlisted men have been detailed as a guard of honor to accompany the remains.

Upon arrival here Tuesday morning the casket will be placed upon a caisson. The third cavalry, 16th field artillery and 12th infantry will be formed near the union station to accompany the remains to Arlington.

The marine and the army bands will alternately play the dead march as the procession winds its way through Washington across the Potomac and towards the beautiful green hills where most of America's noted soldier dead rest.

In keeping with the wishes of General Wood the ceremony will be typically military. Not since the ceremonies attending the burial of America's unknown soldier has the war department planned such high military honors.

Favorite Horse to Follow.

Behind the caisson with its flag draped casket one of General Wood's charges will follow. The stirrups will be reversed symbolical of military traditon in which the riderless horse has always been led behind his master's body.

The arrangements have not been completed. Honorary pallbearers have yet to be selected. They will probably be made up of ranking army and navy officers. Outstanding heroes of the World war will also be given places of distinction. Many of them are on their way here to honor their former comrade or commander.

Electra Lake Claime Victim

"death due to accidental drowning."

Mr. Martin is survived by his wife and three small children, D. K. Jr., aged four; Glenn, age 2 1-2 years and Dorothy June, age eight months. His mother, Mrs. Martin, resides in Jacksonville, Fla., as do several brothers and sisters: two sisters being Mrs. J. B. Welburn, of Jacksonville, Fla. and Mrs. E. P. Hickson of Lakeland, Fla. Mrs. Martin's mother and father reside in Denton, Texas.

Funeral at Denton

Funeral services will be held in Denton, where the body will be shipped upon the arrival of relatives. Arrangements for services in this city have not been completed.

Mr. Martin has resided in Electra for the past three years and was a lineman for the Electra Telephone company. He made his home 1 1-2 miles north of the city. He was a member of the local fire department.

While workmen were making efforts to recover the body, the three children were on the scene smiling at all the strangers who gathered around, and wondering about the excitement, wholly unconscious that "daddy" was drowned.

that they should be returned to their regular cells pending the decision for a ne wtrial. The prisoners will not be in court.

It is the general impression here tonight that both court hearings are mere gestures to get the case into the federal courts. It would be impossible under the law for them to appeal to the federal courts. It would be impossible under the law to appeal to the federal courts without such a move because the law provides that a case cannot be taken to the United States court after it has been through the state court three months.

SACCO AND VANZETTI FIGHT FOR TIME.

BOSTON, Aug. 7. (AP)—A closely guarded commonwealth awaited tonight the outcome of three separate moves to save Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti from going to their deaths in the electric chair at the state prison this week. Originally sentenced to die in the week of July 10, they were granted by Gov. Alvan T. Fuller a respite "to and including Wednesday, August 10," in order that he might complete the personal investigation which resulted in his refusal on August 3 to grant them clemency.

A stay of execution and a new trial are sought by counsel for the two men. Justice George A. Sanderson of the state supreme court will give a hearing at 10 a. m. tomorrow, at the Suffolk county court house in Boston on a petition that the court grant a writ of habeas corpus and order a stay of execution. Governor Fuller is expected to act tomorrow on a petition directed to him for a stay.

Moves for Time.

These two moves were made by defense counsel in order that they might obtain more time in which to carry on their efforts to obtain a new trial. In these efforts Judge Webster Thayer of the superior court, who presided at the trial and whose previous refusal to grant a new trial was upheld by the state supreme court, is again the central figure.

At 2 p. m. tomorrow Judge Thayer at the Norfolk county court house in Dedham will hear arguments on the latest petition for a new trial and for a stay of execution. Arthur D. Hill, chief counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti, asked Chief Justice Walter Perley Hall of the superior court to assign some other justice to hear the motion, but the chief justice ruled that it was in accordance with precedent and particular that Judge Thayer should be assigned. Judge Thayer will come to Dedham from Ogunquit, Maine, where he has been spending a vacation.

Warden William Hendry of the state prison has been summoned to appear at th esupreme court hearing. Under the law his presence is necessary.

Fuller Is Silent.

Governor Fuller, at his summer home at Rye Beach, N. H., gave no intimation today as to what his answer would be to the plea for a stay. He has remained away from his ofice since the meeting of the executive council last Thursday.

In their motion for a new trial defense counsel allege prejudice on the part of Judge Thayer and set forth what they describe as new evidence. They have filed affidavits in an effort to support this evidence, which has to do with a cap identified at the trial as having belonged to Sacco and with the testimony of a state fire arms expert. They allege that holes in the cap which were mentioned in Judge Thayer's decision refusing a new trial were made by the chief of police of Braintree and that the expert after the trial said that in his opinion a bullet which figured in the evidence was not fired from Sacco's pistol.

Killings in 1920.

It was in South Braintree that the murders of which Sacco and Vanzetti were convicted occurred on April 15, 1920. Frederick A. Parmenter, a shoe factory paymaster, and Alexander Beradelli, his guard, were shot to death when the factory payroll was stolen. The bullet in question was taken from Beradelli's body.

In the week-end pause between the filing of these various petitions and the court hearings the public had an opportunity to examine the reasons which led the governor's advisory committee after a separate investigation to reach conclusions which the governor in his decision refusing clemency said were "wholly in accord" with his own. The committee's report of 18 printed pages was released for publication in the Sunday papers.

The committee found that Sacco and Vanzetti had a fair trial and that they were guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. It reported that the juhy, ten of whose members appeared before the committee (the foreman being dead and another juro out of reach in Florida) "seemed an unusually intelligent body of men and with all representative."

Men in Death Cell.

All three men are in the death house at the state prison. Sacco and Vanzetti again refused to eat today. For Sacco it was the 22nd day of his hunger strike. Vanzetti has accepted his meals occasionally during that period. The prison physician after his daily visit to the two men today said that they were in fairly good condition. Once before, when in the Dedham jail, Sacco fasted for a month.

The entire Boston police force was on duty continuously today as a result of an order by Superintendent Michael Crowley. All public buildings were closely guarded and the police were instructed to prevent any unlawful assemblages.

Special guards have been assigned to watch over those who have figured prominently in the case, including Governor Fuller, Judge Thayer, and other members of the superior and supreme courts.

Dairy Cattle Will Be Featured in Exhibit

Special to The Record News.

HEREFORD, Aug. 7.—Jerseys, Guernseys and Holsteins, will be well represented in the dairy cattle show at the Deaf Smith county fair, September 22, 23, 24, according to Berry Orr, superintendent, and Hereford breeders of the Hereford county will have to assemble the cream of their herds, if they expect to put over a bigger and better Hereford show than the dairy people will have.

MODISH MITZI — Mitzi Checks Up — By JAY V. JAY

The Goofer inquires politely if Mitzi is expecting guests. He's delighted to take her down to the station but who is it that's coming? "Nobody at all," answers Mitzi placidly from under the wide brim of a natural Milan and black velvet hat, "at least, I hope not!" If Mitzi isn't expecting anyone why does she look so closely at the ladies who step off the only train that comes to town each day? If you will consider the side drape, pointed seam lines and large buckle of the dress to the left and the one-sided drape to the right you may—

You may, we say, have just an inkling of why Mitzi is so interested in the passengers. The frock just approaching is another advance fall model and features the irregular hemline and the one-sided trimming that seem to be necessary to the complete happiness of fall styles.

This cape coat in the background has not escaped Mitzi's eyes. She looked it over very carefully before ordering iced chocolate. That Mitzi can order iced chocolate without thinking of the ounces it puts on indicates more clearly than words that she's found no dress smarter than her own.

MAN'S RECORD TO BE PROBED

Sheriff Holds Suspect As Escaped Convict

Sheriff W. G. Bralley was planning Sunday to investigate the past record and recent activities of a man arrested Sunday morning in connection with the passing of a worthless check at McClurkan's store Saturday. Sheriff Bralley expressed the opinion tha tthe man's arrest will clear up a number of worthless check episodes here in the past two weeks, and that it may develop that the man is an escaped convict.

The man's arrest was made on information furnished by another man who had purchased a pair of $6 shoes for $1.75. When taken to the sheriff's office the man admitted that he had bought the shoes with a worthless check. He also told Sheriff Bralley that he had been pardoned from the state penitentiary about six weeks ago because of a record of good behavior made while serving a two and one-half year sentence. He had served about half of the sentence, according to Mr. Bralley.

Junior College Will Draw Big Attendance

Special to The Record News.

CLARENDON, Texas, Aug. 7.—The prospects for a large attendance at the first session of the Clarendon Municipal Junior college are brightening according to Dean H. T. Burton of the new school. Mr. Burton has received numerous requests for literature from students expressing a desire to attend and several have asked for reservations. Several requests have been received from Oklahoma and distant Texas points indicating a much wider interest in the school than was expected. It is thought that the recent decision of the high school authorities in favor of schools of this type will greatly increase the attendance at these schools in Texas.

Ambassador to Mexico

ACCORDING to Arizona newspapers Former Governor Thomas E. Campbell of that state has been selected by President Coolidge for ambassador to Mexico. Campbell knows all about the Mexicans. He has lived in the border state for forty years. He has had business dealings with the Mexicans and their government. He is said to be a very clever politician as well as a hard headed business man.

There are many problems to be settled in Mexico, including oil and land problems. Americans have an investment totaling more than a billion dollars in the Aztec republic. Boss Creager was tendered the position two years ago. He flatly turned it down. He was wise.

An American ambassador to Mexico has a great load to carry and a rocky road to travel. Ambassador James R. Sheffield found it so. All his predecessors found it so. The man from Arizona, if he should accept, will find it so.

Campbell is popular in the border states. He is well known in Texas. He served one term as governor and then Alphabet Hunt came back from Siam and turned the republicans out. Hunt is the present governor and is serving his sixth term.

Cutting Down Production

NOW the production of the wells in the Seminole fields is to be regulated by the individual owners. Fifty operators participated in the conference. Twenty-seven voted for a curtailment agreement. Production in the Seminole area now is about 525,000 barrels a day.

Those who signed the agreement have pledged themselves to see that this is pinched back to a daily production of 450,000 barrels. Two years ago a new field was brought in in California, and its enormous daily production played havoc with thousands of independent oil producers.

A year ago came the Seminole sensation, and now the Seminole field is the largest producer of crude in the world. It has played havoc with the petroleum industry and thousands of independents are financial losers on account of its steadily increase in flow and the depressing effect upon the price of crude.

Giants of the petroleum industry control the great producing wells in the Seminole territory. They know how to guard against disaster.

Ford Has a Choice

BILLIONAIRE Henry Ford has a personal choice for president as the successor of Calvin Coolidge. He would have the republicans pick Herbert Hoover as their presidential nominee next year. Henry is a business man. A man worth a billion dollars must necessarily be a business man and for business policies of government.

Henry Ford has the largest individual payroll in the United States. He pays the highest wages to common labor. His scrub women receive $5 per day. He is not hidebound, speaking of politics. Woodrow Wilson asked him to make the race for United States senator.

Ford complied. He came within a few thousand votes of winning. This did not keep him from giving unqualified support to Harding on a business platform and four years later to Calvin Coolidge on a business platform.

Henry Ford is for prosperity. He believes in stability of government, stability of business, stability of money and stability of mind.

Selling Texas' Gas

CONTRACT to build a gas pipeline from Amarillo to Kansas City has been signed by Rollin J. Windrow of Dallas. Windrow is a former employe of the state highway commission, and the representative of a big Dallas contracting firm. It is said the total cost of the project is to be $45,000,000.

This pipeline will extend from the Amarillo gas fields for 475 miles to Kansas City, permitting of service to all intermediate points. The contract also calls for 24 miles of service line in greater Kansas City.

Texas and Oklahoma are large producers of natural gas. There came a demand from outside states for the product and now millions of dollrs are being invested in pipe and service lines. There must be money in gas.

Alvin Makes His Bow

COL. ALVIN M. OWSLEY of Dallas has hopped into the arena in the race for a toga in the United States senate. He has made the modest announcement that he would champion the cause of the young men of Texas and that he would depend largely upon them and the women to elect him to office.

Col. Clarence Owsley threw his gray hat into the ring months and months ago. He declared that he would plead the cause of all the people of Texas and hoped to get the votes of as many as possible—not of the young men and women, but old and young, rich and poor, regardless of sex.

Col. Alvin is a lawyer. Col. Clarence was a noted editor in his day and has given years of service to the farmers of the country and is widely known as a student and interpreter of farm economics.

Really there is going to be plenty doing in Texas in 1928 in a political sense.

Communists are Angry

COMMUNISTS the wide world over are angry because Governor Fuller of Massachusetts ordered two convicted murderers and robbers to make their peace with their maker preparatory to the march to the gallows high. One communist can make more noise than ten million locust. He is all powerful in the soviet Russia, but the blow will come there some day and the Slavs will work their way back to a civilized form of government.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By BURTON RASCOE.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7. (EFS)—There is no audience so true to form, so in sympathy with the performers, so knowing of the proper responses of an audience as the regular patrons of vaudeville.

Go into any house of the three-a-day and note with what small reason the customer breaks into applause. These people know, for instance, that certain sounds from the drummer in the orchestra accompanying a performer indicates a feat of unusual ability. When the dancer breaks into a tricky variety of acrobatics, the drummer rolls on a snare drum and beats time with the bass drum. In every vaudeville theater I have visited, this always brings for a deal of handclapping.

Queerly enough, they also know the precise moment at which to applaud. Apparently it is considered gauche to wait until a performer has finished his stunt to applaud. The proper time is just before the thing reaches a climax; when the dance or feat of strength or of acrobatics is almost at its height.

With most of these people, going to see variety is habitual. It is much more of a habit than movie or play going. And its patrons are as alike in reaction and in behavior as so many trained seals. They know, just as well as the people in the business, what make up the essentials of any kind of act. They have seen the buck and wing dancer, the tramp-comedian-juggler, the blue singer with the pianist who always plays "Kitten on the Keys" while the star is changing. They are familiar with the vaudeville condensed revue, in which a company of six assorted dancers and singers do their stuff before voluptuous silk hangings, with the acrobatic team, which always appears either as the first or the last act, in which the only word spoken is "hup" and in which there is a deal of hand-wiping, footscraping and gesturing before each new feat. They approve of the comedians who introduce songs under lengthy and heavily humorous titles such as "My Girl Is Moonshine Mary, I Love Her Still." And best of all, for the powers that be in the business the regular patron has little tolerance for an act which varies from the routine.

He insists on stereotyped entertainment. Week after week he will attend precisely the same performance he has been seeing for years, and enjoy it just as much as he ever did.

The New York taximan is a fellow of flesh and blood, even as you and I. His is not the heart of a lackey; he will not conduct himself as a mere servant. No, to the hack driver no man is too seedy or too grand for a bit of conversation.

Last evening I entered a cab, and was no sooner seated than the taxi-man asked me for a cigaret. I gave it to him and he remarked that he hadn't had time to stop for any. Traffic, it seemed, was getting so bad a fellow had an awful job trying to park anywhere. He had just come from a trip across the ferry to New Jersey.

"Lissen, fella," he remarked, confidentially, out of the side of his mouth, as we plowed through the never-ending stream of traffic on Broadway, "New Yawk is pretty tough, but Joisey—say, 'ats somp'n awful. Take my advice, don't ever try to drive in Joisey!"

Sally's Shoulders

READ THIS FIRST:

SALLY JEROME, pretty and clever, is the prop and mainstay of her family in the absence of her father who has not lived with her mother for 9 years. The family consists of MRS. JEROME; the twins, BEAU and MILLIE; and Sally herself. Mrs. Jerome enjoys poor health so Sally does the housework mornings and office work for grouchy MR. PEEVEY afternoons downtown.

In the flat below the Jeromes lives young Ted Sloan, an auto salesman who wants Sally to marry him and keep on working. But the only man in whom Sally is interested is John NYE, whose real estate offices are just across the hall from Mr. Peevey's little office.

Nye hires the flirtatious Millie as his secretary after Sally had refused the place because Millie was out of a job. Shortly after she starts working for him he becomes blindly infatuated with her as a sensible man often will with a frivolous little woman, and Sally is heartsick and jealous.

Millie and Beau rarely give Sally any money towards the upkeep of the flat. But suddenly Beau blossoms out with so many new clothes and other expensive trifles that Sally becomes suspicious, especially as Beau has always been light-fingered, and he works in a bank where money is constantly within sight and reach. Ted Sloan says he gave Beau a check for $10, but Sally knows that Beau spent more than that for liquor for a party given by his girl, MABEL WILMOT.

One night Aunt EMILY JEROME turns up at the flat with the news that Beau has been frantically trying to borrow money from her, and Sally is more suspicious and unhappy than ever about him. Ted Sloan arrives to take her out for an evening's dancing, and in Aunt Emily's presence, Sally tells him that she can't go because her mother is slightly ill and doesn't want to be left alone.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XVII.

Aunt Emily had no use, whatsoever, for young Ted Sloan.

He was, she said, her idea of just nodbody at all.

Her sharp eyes went over him now, taking him in point by point from his red hair slicked down with grease until it looked like tan leather, to his too-loud necktie and his too-wide trousers.

"All dressed up and no place to go, aren't you?" she snapped at him. Then she turned her back squarely and impolitely upon him and spoke to her niece.

"You didn't tell ME your mother was feeling badly!" she said accusingly. "What's wrong with her?" Aunt Emily always said that Sally kept things from her, and this was more or less true.

She kept all the unpleasant bits of news from her, simply as a matter of protecting the family from Aunt Emily's peppery, vinegary tongue.

"There's nothing much the matter with her, Auntie," she hurried to say. "But I made a chocolate cake tonight for supper, and she ate some of it and it upset her stomach."

"I'm all right now, though," came Mrs. Jerome's voice from the doorway. "I wasn't very sick anyway—Just for a minute I thought I was going to be."

"Just long enough to spoil Sally's plans for the evening!" remarked Aunt Emily with a frank laugh. "I know you, Margaretta!—I remember how you kept me home from a party once upon a time when you were first married and still living in the old house . . . Pretended you were sick until it was too late for me to go. Just because you were angry at not being invited!"

Mrs. Jerome's face seemed to wilt like a faded pink flower for an instant under Aunt Emily's stinging words. Then it brightened up as she spoke again:

"Now just let Sally go out and dance tonight. She'll only be young once, you know. And you and I'll go out and see a show somewhere. I'll get a taxi so you needn't walk."

The prospect of an evening's enjoyment cheered Mrs. Jerome enormously, and she let Sally help her into her clothes and lace up her shoes for her.

"You don't need to call a cab," Ted said to Aunt Emily with a grand air, "I'll take you wherever you're going in my own car."

And so the four of them started out together, squeezed into his little rattling roadster.

Of all the dance places in town, the one Ted Sloan liked the best was "The Blue Lagoon."

"The Blue Lagoon" got its name from its azure walls with waves and gold-fish painted upon them, and from its deep sapphire-blue ceiling studded with star-like electric lights.

There was an orchestra that spun out a magic web of jazz music from 8 to 12 o'clock six nights a week, too; and a large pale-yellow floor that was like clouds under hundreds of young rhythmic feet.

All of this splendor could be had for the small sum of 5 cents a dance—and that, after all, was the thing that endeared "The Blue Lagoon" to the heart of young Mr. Ted Sloan. For, like millions of other young men across this broad United States, he wanted to show his best girl a good time on Saturday night and did not have much money to spend doing it.

Moreover there could not be a better place to spend an evening from the viewpoint of romance. For everything about the "Lagoon" spelled romance with a capital R—the soft lights, the low, disturbing music, the hundreds of couples drawn into each other's warm, eager, young arms for the dance itself.

"'Cherrie—Cherrie—my own,'" Ted Sloan sang low in Sally's ear as the orchestra beat out the slow measures of the last waltz of that last Saturday night in September, "'My love is for you alone'—It is, you know, Sally." His mouth was against the dark cloud of her hair.

"Oh, stop!" said Sally sharply, "Be yourself, Ted!" she was in no mood for love-making tonight of all nights. She never was in a mood for Ted's caresses, for the matter of that.

"And how!" Ted answered shortly and slangily. But he took his face away from her hair and began to whistle "Cherrie" to himself instead of singing it longingly in her ear. And that, Sally told herself thankfully, was a blessing.

She looked up at his face as the music came to an end and they stopped dancing. It had lost its look of tenderness and was grim and unsmiling.

He handed her the pink slip.

TWO—SALLY—MONDAY . . . . .

"There was something that I was going to keep to myself," he said, unlocking his arm from hers and putting one hand into his trousers' pocket. "But I don't think I will."

He drew a pink slip of paper and a pale-blue one from his pocket.

He handed her the pink slip, and she looked at it under the starry lights in the blue ceiling. It was a check for $110 made payable to Beauregard Jerome, and it was signed with Ted's name.

"But I thought you said you lent Beau only ten buckeanos," said Sally, trying to speak lightly. But a fear, heavy and cold as chilled steel, had settled down over her heart.

"Yes, I did," Ted answered, steering her through the crowd by the shoulders. She hated but she left them there. "But he altered it—and collected a hundred dollars more!—Men have gone to jail for less, Sally!"

Then, in the brightness of the hall outside, he showed her the other check—the pale blue one. It was Beau's check, and it was for a hundred and ten dollars, too!

"He gave me that check in payment," Ted said coldly, "I told him I'd say nothing if he'd pay me back . . . His check came back to me marked 'N. S. F. . . . The dirty crook!"

"What does 'N. S. F.' mean?" Sally asked mechanically, looking down at the letters on Beau's check. She had expected something like this for weeks. But now that it had actually come she was stunned.

"It means that he didn't have sufficient funds in the bank to cash a check like that," the boy explained. "He knew it when he gave it to me. He tried to 'gip' me twice!—Well, I'm not through with him, let me tell you! I'll put him where he belongs. I'd been months saving that hundred dollars!"

In the bright light his good-looking face with its gray eyes and red hair, seemed suddenly rat-like and mean to Sally. Whether it was a trick of the lighting or whether it really was rat-like at times, she couldn't tell.

"Oh, Ted, you wouldn't do anything to—to hurt Beau, would you?" she asked, and unconsciously her hands were clasped on her breast as if she were praying. Her eyes were soft and bright and wide with fear and her mouth trembled.

But Ted was not looking at her. He was looking down at the two slips of paper—the two frail bits of paper that could mean so much agony and punishment to Beau.

"I don't know why I should be so darned soft about this thing," Ted said in a hard, bitter tone. "None of you people ever treat me like a human being. You tell me not to touch you when you know I'm wild about you . . . Your aunt treats me as if I were dirt under her feet, and your mother pretends she is sick to keep you from going out with me—"

"Oh, Ted, that's because she doesn't want me to marry you. She's so afraid that I will," Sally was beginning when he cut her short.

"Well, will you?" he asked, turning on her sharply. "It's all up to you—If you'll say the word, I'll tear these checks up this minute!" He held them between his fingers, and she saw that he meant what he said.

She looked him straight in the eyes and shook her head.

"No," she said quietly, "Beau would be the last person on earth to want me to do such a thing. He'd rather take his medicine."

Ted laughed a nasty laugh. "He would, would he? Don't fool yourself—Ask him tonight, and see! Ask him!"

Sally turned on her heel and walked into the women's dressing room where a hundred girls were struggling to get to the mirors to put fresh make-up on their smooth, fresh faces.

When she came out he was waiting for her, puffing stolidly on a cigarette. Under his arm was his new gray felt hat with a loud scarlet and blue silk band.

It seemed to Sally as if she never had loathed anything or anybody quite so much as she loathed him and his loud hat-band at that particular moment . . . It seemed to typify him and everything that he stood for in some obscure, half-understood way.

He turned and put out a hand towards her, touched her arm.

"Ready?" he asked.

But she shook him off, glared at him with two great angry eyes, and started out of the dance hall alone.

Then suddenly she turned on one of her light heels, and swung back to him for a second. She flung one sentence at him.

"I'll see that Beau gives you that money tonight, if I have to go out and steal it myself!" said Sally.

PATROL LEADERS CONFERENCE.

The patrol leaders conference for patrol leaders, assistant patrol leaders, senior patrol leaders and junior assistant scoutmasters will start Tuesday, Aug. 16, and last until noon Friday, Aug. 19. Five churches have reserved places for all patrol leaders of their troops.

E. Clay Venable, camp director, will be in charge of the conference and will be assisted by Frank Creighton, scout executive. This school will be very educational and will give the patrol leaders several very good ideas for making their particular troops the best in the city.

TROOP FIVE.

Troop Five, James Boyle, scoutmaster, met Thursday night at the troop meeting hall.

Den Ross, scoutmaster of Troop Twelve, met with the troop and gave a demonstration of archery as practiced by the Indians of his troop.

Messrs. Buchanan and Gallagher, troop committeemen, visited the troop and announced that the four patrol leaders and the senior patrol leader would be sent to the patrol leaders' conference to be held at the scout camp August 16, 17 and 18.

About twelve scouts from Troop Five went on the third period camp Saturday morning. They are interested in archery and expect to learn a great deal about it on this camp. They also stated that they expected to smash the prune-eating records.

HARMONICA BAND.

All boys who are interested in joining a harmonica band will please see Bob Godfrey at his home, 1816 Tenth Street, Monday afternoon at three o'clock.

TROOP SIXTEEN.

Troop Sixteen, Kenneth Erwin, scoutmaster, spent Thursday and Thursday night on Red River. There were 14 boys in the crowd and they all declared they had a "keen" time.

A good swimming hole was found and the boys went in twice. Following supper watermelons were cut and a watermelon rind battle was engaged in.

TROOP THREE.

Troop Three, the campers, are living up to their name. They had 15 boys in camp the second period. This is the largest number of boys that have attended camp from any one troop.

Homer Lee, patrol leader of the Tiger patrol, was elected honor camper. Troop Three is mighty proud of this election.

During the past two weeks the troop has discontinued its regular meetings on account of so many members being away at camp or on vacations. Starting next Friday, meetings will be continued as usual.

JAMBOREE.

The third quarterly jamboree of the Wichita Falls Boy Scouts was held Friday night at Bellevue park. Announcement has not been made yet as to who won the jamboree but will be made the first of the week. The jamboree was attended by the largest crowd ever had at any scout jamboree so far.

Scout camp songs opened the program, followed by introductions of all the scoutmasters and of Mr. Venable, camp director, and Mr. J. W. Pond, chairman of the camp committee of the executive board.

In the advancements contest Troop Twenty won five points for first place, Troop Sixteen three points for second place, and Troop Twenty-four one point for third place. Winners of the pennants for attendance, uniforms and visitors will be announced later.

The first contest on the program was the game "Swing Ball," in which Troop Two took first place, Troop Sixteen second places and Troop Fourteen, third place.

Troop Twelve took first place in "Push-Em-Over," Troop Seventeen took second place and Troop Three third place.

In the pup tent pitching contest Troop Ten took first place and Troop Seventeen took second place.

A game of Kelly Says and one of Compass were played while Troop Fifteen built a signalling tower. Troop Fifteen took first place in tower building, as it was the only troop that entered the contest.

The fire by friction contest was eliminated. Only one boy brought material and he broke the base of his set, so this contest did not count at all.

A knot tying demonstration was given by a member of Troop Twelve.

All the scouts who have attended camp some period or other gathered in the never-ending circle of friendship and sang the campers' goodnight song and repeated the scout benediction.

THIRD PERIOD CAMP.

Eighty-five boys left scout headquarters Saturday morning for the scout camp. This is a good-sized crowd but there is room for more boys so if any more scouts wish to attend this period of camp they may do so if they will get in touch with scout headquarters.

By mercy and truth iniquity is purged; and by the fear of the Lord men depart from evil.

When a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him.

Better is a little with righteousness than great revenues without right.

A man's heart deviseth his way; but the Lord directeth his steps.

A divine sentence is in the lips of the king; his mouth transgresseth not in judgment.—Proverbs 16: 6-11.

ALTAR ONLY PROPER WAY

Marriage Has Its Faults But It's Best

The Human Institution of Marriage Has Many Faults, but It Is the Best Method Yet Devised for Regulating Relationship Between the Sexes—And It's the Only Protection for Women and Children.

The Rev. Henry Lewis, who recently suggested at the National Congress of the Protestant Episcopal church that the church should recognize unmarried unions, calls the violation of the Commandment a "sex experiment" and proclaims that he is proud of the younger generation who are trying it.

It is no wonder that such a proposition made the gray hair of the clergymen who had spent their lives preaching morality and the suppression of the lusts of the flesh stand on end with horror. But the unregenerate layman's comment on these amazing sentiments from a preacher may be summed up in one word—bosh!

For of all the silly twaddle that has ever been uttered about the younger generation and sex, this is the most asinine.

To begin with, what does the reverend gentleman suppose that a boy and girl who are proposing to live without the benefit of clergy care about being recognized by the church, anyway? They are as indifferent to that as they are to the opinion of any old woman whose ideas they consider a bunch of mid-Victorian superstitions.

And how can the church reverse all of its standards and put the seal of approval on that against which its fiercest denunciations have been thundered? As easily could the law condone thievery and murder.

Furthermore, what new thing does he think there is about sex? Is he under the impression that this present generation is the first that ever discovered it? Doesn't he know that men and women have been experimenting with sex ever since the creation?

There is not an angle of the proposition that hasn't been tried out over and over again since the days when men and women mated like wild beasts. Polygamy, polyandry, free love, promiscuity—they have all been tried, and out of all these experiments has come the modern marriage where a man and woman decently and openly proclaim to the world that they have made a contract to live together and establish a family and that they take upon themselves the responsibility which that entails.

Marriage is a fallible human institution and it has many faults. No one will deny that, but it is the best method that civilization has as yet been able to devise for regulating the relationship between the sexes. And it is the only protection for women and children.

The alluring thing that is held out in these unmarried unions is that it leaves a man and woman free to follow their fancies. When they weary of their partners of the moment they have only to put on their hats and walk out of their temporary homes and find some one else who will offer a fresh flip to their jaded passions, and they believe that they will find happiness in this perpetual change.

Never was there a more mistaken theory. All that they ever know is a thousand light loves that bring to them only a passing physical pleasure. They never know the abiding peace and deep joy of those whose very souls cleave together, who have literally taken each other for better or worse until death parts them. We see many happy, serene, old married couples, but did you ever see any happy, serene, contented, old roues of either sex.

Think of the old bachelors you know who have devoted a lifetime to sex experimentation. Nothing to envy in their shaking, palsied hands and shambling feet and faces blasted by a knowledge of evil. Think of the women you know who have had lovers. Hard-eyed hard-faced, bitter, cynical, with nothing left for them in life when their attraction for men is gone. No woman wants to look like that when she is 50.

Except for the ability to swap husbands and wives at will, and not every trader improves his bargain, the unmarried union of a man and woman has all of the disadvantages that the real marriage has and none of its consolations. It costs no more to maintain a respectable home than it does one under the rose. Marriage interferes with no woman keeping on with her job nowadays if she so desires. It is not marriage but propinquity that destroys the illusions that a man and woman have about each other and that causes them to get on each other's nerves.

The man and woman who live together, whether they are married or not, see each other as they really are. The slovenly, lazy ladylove is just as offensive as the slovenly, lazy wife. The man who is brutal and surly will be just as brutal and surly to his mistress as he would be to his lawful wife. Lothario can be just as much a tightwad as John Henry and Messelina as poor a cook as Mary Jane.

Inasmuch as the divorce court doors are flung widely open to the dissatisfied no one is doomed to matrimonial martydrom, and there seems no good reason for any couple who really think they love each other and mean to stick together not complying with the conventions and being frankly married.

In reality, the unmarried union offers far more scope for discord and unhappiness than the legal marriage, because the very fact that there is nothing settled or permanent about the arrangement keeps both man and woman upset, in a state of ferment, always vivisecting their own emotions and wondering if they are getting the kick and thrill out of their association that they would get out of a new husband of wife.

It is curious that women who have fought so hard and so long for equal rights with men countenance this new order which is so unfair to them and puts them at such a disadvantage. For in all of these unmarried unions it is the woman who loses out.

She is worse off than the woman who sells herself, for she gives herself for nothing.

The woman who make a trade of immorality do not, at least, have to earn their bread and butter with their own hands, but the unmarried wives have to keep on with their jobs and do the housework as legal wives do, yet they have no claim upon the men for whom they sacrifice so much. When their pro tem. husbands tire they are free to leave, and if there are children they are left for their mothers to support.

All of which is respectively commended to the consideration of young people who are allured by the idea of being married on the installment plan.

KEEPING COOL.

Everyone wishes to be cool during the summer months! In cold or hot weather, the temperature of the body remains fairly constant at 98 3-5 degrees Fahrenheit.

Your only hope for relief from the "uneasiness" of a summer day is to keep the blood free from heavy food material not needed for the repair of tissues, and to increase elimination of toxins through the skin and breath.

I know many of you are baffled by reading so many different ideas about dieting. Some of these articles emphasize the need for studying the calorie theory of dietetics; other writers on health subjects urge you to live on uncooked foods, while others have a mania for being opposed to the use of meat. I know how hard it must be for you to get any "head or tail" out of this mixture of advice. However, whether or not you desire to make a radical change in your daily diet, it will not be hard for you to make some slight changes which will be quite effective in bringing about increased health.

If you have studied the calorie theory, you will have learned how to keep down the quantity of food that you are using. You will soon realize that you can live on a much smaller amount of food, provided it is of the right quality. In all of my experience, I have never found it necessary to advise a patient to use more food; instead, it seems nnecessary to advise them to use less.

If you have been studying the "uncooked foods" theory you should appreciate the value of raw foods enough to add an extra amount to your daily meals in the form of a large salad of such vegetables as lettuce, celery, cucumbers, water cress, etc. Do not have any other food for that meal until you have satisfied yourself with all of the salad you desire. You will be surprised to find the salad very filling and satisfactory in every way. If you use it at the beginning of the meal, it will be easy to cut down on the amount of the more hearty foods which you have been accustomed to using. You may even find that you can use one meal—perhaps lunch—of raw food, using no other kind of food at this meal.

If you have been studying "vegetarianism" you must by this time appreciate the value of vegetable foods and know how vital they are in the building of our cell structure. From the cooked and uncooked vegetables we get most of the material for building the bony foundation work of our bodies, such as bones, tendons, ligaments, etc. You will find that you can use an unlimited amount of the non-starchy vegetables without causing yourself any digestive trouble; you can "fill up" on these foods which have only a small caloric value.

When you have learned the value of meat in the diet, you will know that meat is not injurious if used in proper combinations with other foods, prepared properly, and not too much used at one time.

"Keeping cool" can best be accomplished by reducing your food to the minimum of necessity, drinking plenty of pure water, and wearing as little clothing as possible. There is no single remedy as valuable as plain water, neither too hot nor too cold. Small amounts of pure fruit juices may be added if desired, but these fruit juices should not be sweetened.

Make your meals as much as possible of fruits in season, or the leafy green vegetables, both cooked and in salad form. Keep the pores of the skin open by frequent bathing.

Get up early and take a long walk in the cool of the morning finishing with a cold shower bath, and you will find that you will be comfortable the rest of the day.

Any and all health questions will be answered free by Dr. Frank McCoy through the columns of The Record News or direct by mail.

SPUDS DIVIDE WITH SHIPPERS

Home Fans Razz Beaumont In Closing Game

Special to The Record News.

BEAUMONT, Aug. 7—The Spudders' lead over Houston was reduced to six games today when Wichita Falls won and lost against the Exporters while Houston was defeating Shreveport. The first game of today's double header was a Spudder victory in which the visitors won out in the ninth inning 3 to 2 in a loosely played seven inning affair.

Wichita Falls lost the second game after Fussell had replaced Cobb on the mound.

First, Close Duel

The first game, as may be imagined, was one of those hurling duels between Tom Estell and Lefty Darrough. The locals got off to a one-run lead in the first inning, Connolly's single, Watkins' double and Bryan's infield out to first accounting for the tally. In the third the Spudders tied it up when Mann's high fly between the box and first was let drop fair, after which the shortstop advanced to second on a wild pitch. Griffin's line single into center scored him.

In the fifth the exporters again took the lead, Burns drawing a base on balls, advancing to second as Darrough was grounding out, moving to third on a wild pitch and scoring on Dunning's bounding single off Pete Turgeon's shins. n the seventh the visitors tied it up on Estell's double over short right field fence, and Mann's double to right center.

Mann Wins Game

The game was decided in the first of the ninth when Mann got his second double of the day, a scorcher to left, that scored Lapan who had singled and gone to second as Manager Williams, batting for LaFayette, walked.

Townsend started on the local mound in the second game but was driven to cover in the third as the Spuds chased five runs across after two were out. Tobin lined to Dorman and Cobb struck out, LaFayette singled to center and stole second and Mann walked. Griffin scratched an infield hit to fill the bases, whereupon Townsend turned loose a wild pitch letting LaFayette in. Lamb bounced a hit off short and as the infield tossed the ball around Watkins, eventually throwing home in an effort to catch Mann, a series of misplays started that let in Mann and Griffin with the second and third runs. Lamb stole second and came home on Jenkins single to right, tom reaching second on the throw home. Turgeon then singled to left to score Jenkins and was out at second trying to stretch it.

A walk to Connolly, a double by Watkins, two fielders choices and Dorman's double scored three for Beaumont in the first. Claude Robertson's double, a sacrifice by Townsend and an infield out scored another in the second and singles by Odom and Jack Robertson followed by Griffin's error and a double by Burns added three more in the fourth. The deciding run came in the fifth as a result of Dorman's single and Odom's long double.

Home Fans Sore

When Townsend was replaced by Jack Robertson in the third the home fans got on the management and for two innings pulled for the visitors.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 7. (AP)—Both games of the double header here today between Philadelphia and Cincinnati were taken by the scrapping Reds who beated the easterners, 6 to 1, and 2 to 1, before a crowd of 20,000.

Jackie May proved the hero of the day by striking out 11 Phillie batters while the Reds were hitting both Decatur and Willoughby.

The second game was a pitchers battle between Red Lucas and Sweetland, with the support given Lucas in the field proving the deciding factor. Score:

PONIES EXPECT TO DUPLICATE

Speedier Football Looms In Southwest Conference

DALLAS, Aug. 7. (AP)—Southwest Conference football teams face heavy schedules for the 1927 season. Nearly all of the squads play nine games.

The season opens September 24 and closes as usual on Thanksgiving day, November 24.

Several interesting intersectional games are scheduled, but the games that will hold the attention of many persons in the conference region will be the annual clashes between Texas university and Texas A. & M. college at College Station, Baylor university and Rice institute at Houston, Southern Methodist university and Texas Christian university at Fort Worth on Thanksgiving day.

One big game that heretofore has been a contest of interest to football followers is missing this year. Baylor university of Waco and Texas A. & M. college, will NOT meet, as relations were severed last fall. This action was taken because of the fatal injuries inflicted on a Texas A. & M. cadet at Waco at the game last year.

The tragedy last fall at Waco was the climax to disorders at several games between the Baptist college students and the cadets. The players of either team were NOT involved.

S. M. U. Mustangs of Dallas, who so audaciously ran through the corrals of other conference teams last year, have nine games scheduled, four of which are conference events. Their one intersectional game is with Missouri university at Dallas October 22.

Steers Play Outsiders

Texas University Steers will greet their ancient enemies, the Vanderbilt University Commodores at Dallas, October 15, and November 11 the Kansas Aggies will be welcomed at the memorial stadium at Austin. The latter game is considered one of the most important intersectional contests scheduled by any team of the Southwest conference.

Arkansas university, the only member of the conference not in Texas, has but two conference games scheduled. The Razorbacks play the Baylor Bears at Fayetteville, October 8, and Texas Christian University Horned Frogs at Fort Worth, November 5.

Baylor university, which has been producing formidable teams for many seasons, will be crippled this fall. The Bears have no intersectional games scheduled, apparently because of the tragedy at Round Rock last winter when they lost their best athletes. En route to Austin to play Texas university basketball, a score of the finest athletes in the southwest were lost when 10 were killed and that many more or less permanently injured. A fast train slipped through the dark and dismal freezing haze, peculiar to Texas winters, struck and wrecked their bus.

Texas Christian University will go beyond the border of the state once to meet Centennary college at Shreveport. Rice institute will remain in Texas for all but one game, and that with Layola university at New Orleans.

Texas Aggies will clash with the boys from Sewanee at Dallas, October 8, to test their strength against a team that in recent years produced sensational football players in the old south.

Many New Players

Many new names will be listed among the players on all conference teams this fall. Graduation last spring took a damaging quota and accidents and personal affirs incresed the loss of players.

Changes have been made on some of the coaching staffs. These will result in different kinds of plays—and players. New material will be sought among the scrubs, as indications are the coaches desire to build good reserve elevens.

Only one thing is certain, S. M. U. obviously expects to duplicate the spectacular victory of last year. With the changes in players and coaches and the many posibilities of big development in any team in the conference, a forecast of the season is impractical. Indications are, however, that a higher class of football will be played this season and than ever before. Speed, stamina and the ability to adeptly seize the opportunities for the breaks in the games, will be stressed by the coaches.

Texas university, which has put out beautiful machines during the past two years, this year probably will have installed the idea for speed on the getaway, since Clyde Littlefield, track coach has been appointed to succeed E. J. "Doeful Doc" Stewart, as head football coach. Technically, Doc's teams, his first of which won the conference championship, played almost perfectly but the members lacked speed in getting the ball underway, and frequently they failed to execute daring plays needed in critical periods of the game.

$1,000,000 Worth of Tickets Already Reserved For Dempsey-Tunney Scrap

Rickard Predicts Absolute Sell-Out of Tickets 10 Days Before Big Fight a Chicago

By WARREN BROWN
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—Ticket reservations for the Dempsey-Tunney fight have already passed the $1,000,000 mark, to reach a point in excess of the total receipts of the recent Dempsey-Sharkey contest. was the announcement of G. L. ("Tex") Rickard, upon his arrival here today for a one-day conference with his ticket men.

Along with this announcement, Rickard issued what might be termed a warning to prospective Chicago ticket buyers.

"These reservations, he said, "represent for the most part, cities and towns throughout the country, and apart from Chicago. I would urge that the people here do not wait too long to file their reservations, if they do not want to run the risk of being shut out from desirable seats, I am willing to bet you now, that there will not be a ticket left for sale 10 days in advance of the bout, and the receipts will certainly go beyond the $2,000,000 mark, and set what may be a record that will stand for all time."

150,000 Tickets Printed

One hundred and fifty thousand tickets have been prinited, or at least the backs of 150,000 tickets have been printed, Rickard said. He and his ticket man spent seven weeks in perfecting a design that would be impossible to counterfeit. The work of the printing of the face of the tickets, which will contain the price scale, will go forward immediately. Rickard has decided to scale his "house" at the following prices, $40, $30, $25, $20, $15, $10, $5.

While ticket distribution will not be possible for a matter of 10 days or two weeks, Rickard has already established headquarters in the Congress hotel for reservations, and a regulation ticket office will be selected immediately. The handling of the tickets, Rickard said, will be entirely in charge of a committee of three, to be appointed by George Getz, and his associates who made possible the coming of Rickard to Chicago.

Railroads to Help

A new arrangement in ticket distribution for cities throughout the country has been perfected, with the aid of the railroads, Rickard said. Now it will be possible for a person at any city to buy his fight ticket along with his railroad transporation, full co-operation having been guaranteed Rickard by practically all of the roads leading into Chicago. The others doubtless will fall into line.

Rickard ended all doubts as to the handling of the crowds at Soldier's field on September 22, when he announced that the south park board had agreed to furnish what men might be needed for ushering and policing, with the actual work to be done under the supervision of Rickard's trained corps.

"To handle that crowd of 150,000 people, there will be at least 2500 ushers needed," he said, "and when you figure in the ticket takers, police and other necessary attendants, the total will go to 10,000."

Dempsey in Secret

Of the fight itself, Rickard had the important announcement to make that Dempsey has decided to do all his training in private, with only the newspaper men allowed to watch the proceedings.

"He wired me that decision a few days ago," Rickard said, "and I am entirely in accord with that view."

Rickard expressed kindly views towards the proposition that Dempsey do his training at the racing plant of the Lincolnfields Jockey club, at Crete. When the desirability of that location was presented to him, Rickard said that he would urge Leo P. Flynn, Dempsey's manager, to close for the site at once.

"I know that Dempsey wants to train within an hour's ride of Chicago," he said. "His wife intends to remain here during the training period, and the run out to Lincoln fields would be just right."

Rickard again stressed the importance of the "clients" that have made reservations for the fight.

"One large Chicago firm have taken 2500 tickets," he said, "and it is their intention to hold a convention of all their branch officers here during the fight.

800 Millionaires

There will be a delegation of bankers here for the same purpose. They have kidded me about my 800 millionaires from New York, but that's the exact number who will be here.

Rickard is leaving tomorrow on the Century for New York, to attend the Jack-Delaney-Paolino Uzcudzun fight. He will be back Sunday to remain until after the Soldier's field show is over.

Hopes to Beat Joe

BOBBY SANDOW

The midge coast junior welterweight who meets Yaqui Joe in finish match Tuesday night at the Ross stadium is in the city and ready for action. Sandow beside being rated as the fastest wrestler to ever be scheduled for a Wichita Falls appearance is one of the strongest little men ever to show here. From the waist up this 140-pounder strips like a heavyweight. Justa little guy, if you look only at his chest and shoulders you would believe him to be a 200-pounder.

Sandow hopes to wallop the Indian and then get a return whack at Matty Matsuda. He has wrestled the Jap to a one-hour draw verdict. If he beats Joe, Matsuda's protege, and a close student of the Matsuda type of wrestling, he feels sure he can put it on the wily Nipponese himself.

Walter Newman Sold To Detroit Americans

By Universal Service.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Aug. 7.—Walter Newman, who is playing his first season of class A baseball, today was sold by the San Antonio Bears to the Detroit American league club.

In exchange for their star flinging ace, the Bears will receive a wad of cash and several players. Should the youngster find the grade under the big top too steep, he will be turned back to the Bears.

The sale of Newman to the Tigers was announced late this afternoon by Harry Ables, president of the Bears.

Although he yielded seven hits, Hadley had little difficulty holding the tribe while his teammates chalked up a safe margin of tallies.

TWILIGHT CUP TO LONGHORNS

Panhandle Entry Takes League Championship

Wild Bill Hoehn's Panhandle Longhorns are the Wichita Falls Twilight league champions without a doubt.

Joe Randolph gained them this honor Sunday afternoon at Katy park when he let the Texas Electric Killowatts down with a 7 to 3 loss. The Electrics lost the game through no fault of Vernon Lewis, the sturdy mound ace of the Killowatts.

Lewis was given ragged support in the first two innings and this was what gave him the defeat. In spite of the bad start that he mad, Lewis pitched a masterful game all the way. Hits were bunched on him by threes in three innings for the seven Panhandle scores.

Waller's shoestring catch of Hind's drive to short left in the fifth inning was the outstanding bit of fielding in the game. It looked like a sure hit when Waller gobbled it in on the gallop.

McMahon, Maddox and Blue also turned in several nice catches in the outfield during the game.

The Longhorns went into a three-run lead in the first inning and this proved to be a lead that was never overtaken. McMahon had the first two strikes called on him and then he was hit with a pitched ball. Roberts laid down a perfect sacrifice bunt to Lewis. Maddox struck out. Rawls singled past short and McMahon crossed the plate, Rawls going on to second on the throw to the plate. Francis knocked down Melear's hot smash, but was unable to get the runner, Rawls stopped at third. Hoehn connected for a two-base wallop to right, scoring Rawls. Melear also scored when Andres juggled Blue's relay to the infield. Hinds grounded out to second.

The Killowatts scored their first run in the second inning. Blue singled past second. Cox went out on strikes. Andree walked. Shorty Ross slammed a single to right field that Melear cobld only get his finger tips on and Blue scored.

Steers Score Again.

Again the Longhorns took kindly to the pitching of Vernon Lewis and three more tallies were rung up. Graves walked. As Randolph swung for the second strike, Graves broke for second base. Ross heaved wild to second and the ball sailed far into center field. Andress let the ball get through him and graves dashed on across the plate. Randolph lined to Francis. Andree seemed to misjudge McMahon's drive to center and a one-handed catch failed to get the ball and it landed safely for a triple. On an attempted squeeze play, Roberts bunted into the infiled and beat the throw when no one covered first base, McMahon scoring. Roberts stole second and continued on to third when Ross' throw was low. Maddox flied to Blue and Roberts scored after the catch. Rawls doubled just inside the third base line, but Melear ended the inning by grounding out.

Lewis then launched out on a five inning string of hitless and scoreless innings over the Panhandle in which he showed his stuff as he had showed it early this year with Decatur Baptist college.

The Killowatts shoved over one run in the fifth inning to bring the score six and two. Gordon walked to start the inning. Ross slashed out his second hit, a single past third sending Gordon to second. Both runners advanced when Graves tried to catch Ross off first base and threw low to Rawls. Lewis flied to Melear and Gordon scored after the catch, Ross holding second. Miller hit to Randolph and Ross was trapped off second with a perfect throw to Hinds. Christian hit one to deep short for a base hit. Hinds made a great stop of the bounder, but threw wild to Hoehn to force Miller who continued to third while Christian went on to second. Francis then grounded out, Hinds to Rawls.

Score in Eighth.

The Longhorns scored one more time in the eighth inning for good measure. Melear hit a slow roller down the third base line and beat it out, and then went on to second on Lewis' jungle heave. Hoehn singled down the right field foul line an dwhen Blue's return to the plate went through Ross, Melear scored and Hoehn took second. Hinds singled through short sending Hoehn to third. Hinds stole second. Graves hit to Miller and Hoehn was thrown out at the plate. Randolph grounded to Francis who threw him out at first. Graves tried to make third base on the play and was out, Cox to Miller.

The Killowatts scored their third run after two were out in the ninth inning. Miller lined a long double to right-center. Christian walked. Miller stole third. Francis hot grounder at Hinds took a wicked hop past the little short stopper and rolled into left field for a double. Miller went over the plate with the third run. Waller was purposely passed, filling the bases and Blue flied to McMahon for the final out of the game.

DALLAS 7, SANTONE [illegible]

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 7.(AP)—Andy Messenger had the Dallas Steers on his hip with his subway slants Sunday afternoon until Big Bill Bagwell batting for Bob Sangillnet, came up in the ninth inning and slammed one over the left field fence scoring Mulvey ahead of him after the latter had walked to put the Bovines in front to win seven to four. After Bagwell cracked out his circuit clout Berry, Bauman and Morse filled the bases with singles and then George Diester, sent in by Snipe Conley from the Corpus Christi Sea Hawks, in time for this game, smacked the ball against the left field fence for a double to clean the sacks, giving about a dozen Dallas rooters in the stands an opportunity to let out some lusty cheers, for it was a thrilling finish from a Dallas standpoint. Ed Hughes' Column

BY ED. HUGHES.

Paul Berlenbach is through with the ring, and his passing, it must be said, does some credit to his manager, Dan Hickey. Mr. Hickey appeared before the boxing commission, and of his own free will gave the opinion that lion-hearted Paul is no longer a fit man for the ring. He admitted what has been plain to most people—that in Berlenbach boxing owns a most pathetic "hollow shell," no matter what folks may think of Jack Dempsey.

Berlenbach will be remembered as one of the most popular, colorful and courageous fghters that ever battered hs way to a champonshp. In the strictest interpretation of the world, the Astoria assassin will not be rated as a great fighter. He knew too little of boxing, was too slow a thinker to be niched with such as Fitzsimmons, Stanley Ketchel and even others of lesser fame and ability.

Hard Beatings Shortened Career

Oom Paul, however, was one of the greatest drawing cards of the ring, one of its most robust sluggers. No gamer fighter ever stepped into a ring than the ex-Astoria cab driver. He triumphed largely through his courage and hitting power. On this account the plodding Astoria German did not figure to last a great while in the strife of the ring. In most battles—even in his triumphs—Berlenbach received hard beatings. Jack Delaney, Mike McTigue, Jimmy Slattery, Johnny Risko—they are a few of the thumpers who have helped close Berlenbachs short but astonishingly colorful and profitable vareer.

Berlenbach has been fighting professionally less than four years. The ring has been both kind and unkind to Paul during that time. He started a poor, unheralded youth; today he is worth a fortune of some $300,000. The terrific strife of the ring, the fierce pounding which is the lot of every successful puglists, has taken something from the young man both mentally and physically. Perhaps his financial earnings balance these losses. Then again maybe they do not—all in the way you look at it.

The ex-light-heavyweight champion appears to have quit while the quitting was good. He had toppled to the ignoble fistic state where scornful fingers pointed the ghastly tidings, "'He's punch-drunk. Another 'goofy' ex-champ.' The ring is cruel, merciless, even to those who ornament it with brilliance and formidability in the days of their strength.

It has no sympathy for its "hasbeens," particularly those who question its demand long after the lesson of defeat and waning power has been read to them.

McTigue and Slattery Fights Berley's Best.

It is difficult to single out Berlenbach's best effort in the ring—he put forth so many heroiv ones. Probaly it was either the battle in which he won the championship from Mike McTigue or his sterling defense of the crown against Jimmy Slattery. In both instances he came from behind, after taking an ungoldly mauling ,to gain the award.

Berlenbach looked good in his second battle with Delaney, in which he turned the tables on his former conqueror, the man who handed him his first professional knockout. However, there were those who figured that Delaney might have been "holding up" Paul for the outdoor match in which Delaney punched Paul loose from his light-heavyweight crown.

At any rate, Berlenbach's style appeared made to order for the Bridgeport sharpshooter. "Bright Eyes" scored a clean knockout in their first meeting in the old Garden, and then demonstrated his superiority by outclassing the stubborn German over the 15-round route.

Delaney Softened up Paul for McTigue.

This latter defeat did much to reduce Berly to the diluted fighting type that faced Mike McTigue in their second meeting. Delaney hammered everything but the fighting soul out of Berlenbach in that Ebbets Field slaughter. He was well "softened up" for McTigue's accurate and viciously-driven right-handers.

However, in passing, one must speak a word for Dan Hickey, who caught him as an unknown and guided him to renown and a worlds title. Hickey had something more than a mere manager's interest in the welfare of his charge. He seemed to have a really significant personal regard for the Astoria assassin. Hickey was loth to send Berlenbach against Delaney the first time.

Old Dan protested that Berly was not ready for such as Delaney, despite the ex-wrestler's remarkable series of quick knockouts. The public and the press (the writer included), however, were clamoring for the assassin's head and Hickey was practically compelled to make the match.

That Berlenbach had a real fighter's heart was demonstrated in the maner that he took the Delaney setback. He went right on fighting, though his confidence had naturally experienced a rude shock. Paul, for a time, indicated by his actions that he had been knocked out, that his fistic poise had been disturbed. The devasting clip on the chin from Delaney gave him the notion that a little more boxing science would not harm him.

And then, in this period of readjustment, Berlenbach and the somewhat panicky Hickey made themselves somewhat ridiculous. Berly, under instructions to cultivate his boxing, develop a blocking defense, began to weaken his natural fighting ability. Neither Hickey nor Berley seemed to realize that in the Assassin's case a vigorous, crushing attack was the only worts-while defense. It was quite a while before Berlenbach settled into his old steem-rooler tactics, with chief dependence in victory beingf lodged in his terrific hitting and whirlwind attack. Berlenbach was never fashioned to be a boxer, and once the truth dawned on him the fans were able to see him at his best—the fearless, untamed fighting animal who was willing to take a wallop in order to connect his own wallop.

Hickey made a fortune handling Berlenbach, but his concern wasn't all confined to the amounts Berly could pile up at the box office.

"Berlenbach will never be ready to fight Loughran," he advised the boxing commission. "My fighter is through, and there is no good reason why he should ever fight again. He's got all the money he can ever spend. The only reason he tried to "come back" was to regain his title. I know he can never do that now. That's why I want him to quit, stop fighting for all time."

Berlenbach may consider himself fortunate to have such a manager-friend as Dan Hickey.

Remember how they sent the pugilistic remains of the once sturdy Floyd Johnson against Harry Wills? That represented the highwater mark of managerial greed and sheer cruelty in ring-lan"

BONNER WINS JOE ART CUP

Both Players Refuse To Turn in Cards

J. H. S. Bonner, the people's choice and whatnot, copped the grapes from the youthful Fred T. Couper Jr., in a hot golf match (the hot meaning that the sun was beating down at a heavy temperature) Sunday afternoon over the Country club course. And with the grapes went the 1927 Joe Art trophy tournament championship.

The margin of victory was 5 and 4. So erratic or something or other in play were their fellow golfers at the club, they refused to turn in a card.

Gives Up a Hole.

The referee gave up on the second hole after both men had sliced into the rough and started a prolonged search for their balls, so a blow-for-blow tabulation of this "battle of the hour" was not kept by any but the contestants themselves.

According to Professional William Strachan, so wildly and fiercely did these sturdy cowpasture poolers fight it out over the first seven or eight holes before Bonner slipped off into a substantial lead that the caddies got scared or were overcome by the heat and deserted them. Hence there was no hole-for-hole eye witness of the struggle.

Bonner Triumphed.

Only the bare score and the fact Bonner triumphed was available for a press report. With the temperature at 100 and some and the heat so intense that the contestants were ever in danger of succumbing to sun stroke, it was feared for a time that both had died on the field of battle.

At one stage of the match, neither player being discernable anywhere on the course by a lookout placed atop the club house, a searching party was sent out. Both were discovered hunting lost balls in a nearby irrigation ditch.

Too Hot to Play.

To Fred Elbert went third flight championship laurels. He braved the heat with Gose Waggoner and won, 3 and 2.

There will be no more tournament play at the club until the temperature drops and the lives of the golfers are not endangered so seriously.

Strachan plans departure Monday for San Antonio on pleasure visit. He expects to be back at the club Saturday.

ASLEEP AT SWITCH

Although two negro men believed in and practiced preparedness, they found themselves in the city jail Sunday afternoon following a raid on a servant's house in the western part of the city by Plainclothes Officers Luke Hart and Pat Allen.

Before engaging in a sociable poker contest, the two men had a negro woman, a mutual friend, to station herself outside as a lookout. The woman watched well enough but not wide enough and while she surveyed the neighborhood from one side of the house the officers approached from the opposite side.

The officers had the game well in hand before the woman knew they had arrived.

Those present were: Misses Bonnie and Lura Black, Justine Keeling, Rose Co Madge Christensen, Mrs. Ray Webster, Frankie Hamilton and Joan Bryan.

An exceptionally interesting meeting of the Baptist W. M. S. was held Monday afternoon when it met in the Bible Study, Mrs. George Thompson in the absence of the teacher, Brother Miller, had charge of the meeting. The subject for the ensuing year will be women of the New Testament. In studying the women of the Old Testament and the New Testament we find that women have been the most important factor in every great movement for the betterment of mankind today. Women are facing a greater task than ever before. The task is to awaken aworld which is but half awake. The woman's missionary work is not as simple as it used to be. It is more bound up with what people think of us politically. It is hard to prove our Christion spirit to Japan since an exclusion act was passed. South America is more critical of our sincerety because of trade expiditations and the unethical methods of some of our business relations. China does not understand our delays in considering her problems. In view of these facts we should lay aside our fixed notions of what we can or cannot do. The women of this land can bring hope to the motherhood of other lands by spreading the gospel through mission schools and giving service for the caus eof Christ.

Miss Mary Helen McNeely, whose approaching marriage to Gerald Sensabaugh has been announced, was honored with a beautiful and most unique shower given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Misses Mary Winston Montgomery, Iris Hollis and Mrs. John Deaver served punch.

Larry Allen Grundy, representing Dan Cupid dressed in aviator togs, presented the bride-elect with her afternoon mail. A letter addressed to "Her Majesty, Queen of Hearts," Land of Romance, was opened and read:

"Having successfully completed its record-breaking non-stop flight from the Land of Dreams to the Land of Romance, flying over worlds of best wishes and oceans of love, the "Spirit of Happiness," has orrived with its chest of gold and is waiting a royal welcome by her majesty, "The Queen of Hearts," Dan Cupid.

The bride-elect and guests then followed the aviator into a veritable garden where the "Spirit of Happiness" had landed. The aeroplane covered with chrysanthemums was overflowing with beautiful gifts for the bride-elect.

Iced tea, sandwiches and pink and white mine were served to 60 guests. The favors were small cards bearing hand painted aeroplanes sailing through rainbow tinted skies and miniature wedding slippers tied with pink tulle.

The Baptist young ladies held their regular business meeting with Mrs. Jones on Monday evening. Mrs. Paterson is to take Mrs. Owen's place as teacher of the class. After business matters were discussed the president, Yetta Mae Hackworth, presented the the bride, Mrs. Jones, with an ice bowl and pick as a gift from the class.

The hostess served ice cream and cake to the following girls: Yetta Mae Hackworth, Florence Wherry, Radie Moreman, Olive Ruth Ewen, Elizabeth Bryant, Mrs. Collier, Janice Miller and Avis Loard.

Miss Ione Webster entertained with a going away party at her home on 921 Noel street Saturday morning in honor of Miss Emma Ruth Lindsey of Denton.

Games were enjoyed and a delicious salad course was served to the following: Misses Emma Ruth Lindsey, Carolyn McNeely, Mildred Owens, Dorrace Powell, Florence Wherry, C. J. Goodnight and Shirley Greene.

A pretty affair in the morning hours of Saturday was a breakfast given by Mrs. Elmer S. Shelley at 9:30 o'clock at her home on West Roberson street. Miss Mary Helen McNeely, bride of the month was the honoree of the occasion.

A gold and green color note was followed in decorations and throughout the breakfast. The table was laid with a hand embroidered luncheon set. On the center was a large crystal basket surrounded by small crystal baskets all filled with Nasturtiums, marigolds, and zinniaas, the handles tied with green tulle and a yellow butterfly on each.

The bride's place was designated with shower bouquet of the marigolds and zinnias tied with gold. The place cards of the guests were miniature brides. Favors were nasturitums tied with gold ribbon.

The menu was iced canteloupe topped with mint, friend chicken, rice molds with gravy, beau-redard eggs, frozen salad in goldand green, iced tea, hot rolls, apricot marmalade, peach ice cream, brides caks. Just before the ice course the honoree and guests were entertained with a cake contest, after which the hostess presented the honoree with an index recipe box and each one gove a menu with recipes for the box.

During the ice course Mrs. Shelley gave a clever reading, "The Bridal Procession."

The guests were those who assisted in the wedding as follows: The bride's mother, Mrs. M. McNeely; maid of honor, Miss Carolyn McNeely; soloist, Mrs. Coleman Hahie; matron of honor, Mrs. Allen Grundy; decoraters, Mrs. L. D. Pierce Jr., and Mrs. Thomas E. Noel.

Texans Attract Tennis Experts

White-Thalheimer Team Dangerous Pair

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Members of the French Davis cup team, William T. Tilden and members of our own Davis cup squad as well as most of the national first ten players are entered in the 44th annual invitation tennis tournament of the Meadow club at Southampton, L. I., which begins tomorrow afternoon.

Tilden won the singles last year and White and Thalheimer won the doubles. All three will defend their titles. With Henri Cochet, who defeated Tilden last year in the national singles and again this year at Wimbledon, likely to meet in the finals at Southampton it is an open question whether "Big Bill" can retain his honors although he is playing superb tennis, when he wants to.

Teams Are Tornados.

In the doubles the new Wimbledon doubles champions, Tilden and Hunter, are likely to meet stiff opposition not only from a French combination but also from the present titleholders, White and Thalheimer, the Texas tornados.

Much interest in tennis circles, both among players and fans, centers in those young Texans. They weree entered in the Seabright tournament as a team last week, but on Tilden's demand that he be paired with Hunter instead of with R. Norris Williams, the White-Thalheimer combination was disrupted arbitrarily and White was paired with Williams only to be defeated in the final round by Tilden and Hunter. Now Williams announced that he will not enter at Southampton and White and Thalheimer will be reunited.

If they encounter the Tilden or Huneter combination the result will be of particular interest to the Davis cup selection committee. These youngsters have an enviable record and on the strength of their showing last year were offered by the United States Lawn Tennis association a world circling playing tour with idea of developing them further as possible Davis cup team material. Their college studies, however, made acceptance impossible.

Win Five Titles.

They won five of seven titles for which they competed last year, including the National Clay court, Longwood bowl, Nassau County club, Rhode Island state and Southampton. This year they have won their starts, including Nassau, Texas state and the Canadian province of Ontario tourney.

Southampton means more in tennis than the mere titles involved. It is the last tournament prior to the official Davis cup trials which will be held at the West Side Tennis club at Forest Hills next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

BLIND MEN SEE STRAIGHT

According to Steve's Mission Show Review

By STEVE STEVENSON.

Using the parlance of the habitues of Gay Broadway's theatrical emporiums, "they'd make a blind man throw his cup down and go to seein' straight again."

The above information is relative to the chorus which has been garneded by Honey Hank Harris for the edification of Mission theater customers.

All the information was gained Sunday night while viewing "Step Lively" at the Mission. "Step Lively" is a fast moving musical comedy, with the chorus furnishing the music and Honey Hank and Rose Harris the comedy.

Honey is "doing a straight part" and Rose a "character" and the only customers they can't make put forth the smiles are those with "frozen faces."

In "Step Lively" one of the "bits" is by Zoe Frazee, who can put all the "blue in blues." After singing, "I Got Such a Hot Papa, His Clothes Burn Up" the customers demanded "more," so she gave 'em "Love Me an' Your Bank Roll Is Mine."

The two Brennans in a short skit "The Fe low at the Depot" put forth a lot of comedy, worked their "pipes" and hoofed to the satisfaction of everybody concerned.

One of the new arrivals in Honey Hank's outfit, Elvie Harris, showed 'em she knew how to do her stuff when she sang, "Will You or Won't You; If You Won't, Goodbye."

And one of the best "bits" in the show comes last in this story. It was Joyce Culberson. That girl can "sure" dance and sing.

Stork Enrages Him; Kills Self and Wife

By Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 7.—Edgar O. Burnett, trucking contractor, expressed resentment when the stork visited his home a week ago for the fourth time. Yesterday, while the child slept in its mother's arms, Burnett fired a shot which fatally wounded the woman, and then killed himself. Police say Burnett had been mentally deranged by financial troubles.

"SETTLING DOWN"

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WHILE HE WORKS AT HIS ART, HE DREAMS OF HER.

SETTLE DOWN WHEN YOU'VE MADE A START AT YOUR WORK

Modern Young Men Still Anxious to Marry

By Beatrice Fairfax
An Authority on the Problems of Love and Marriage.

JUDGING by my correspondence, young men are as eager as girls are, to receive impartial advice on questions that arise regarding friendship, courtship, love, marriage and "settling down."

While young people do not, as a rule, settle down as stolidly and heavily nowadays as their ancestors may have done, and are always alert, "on tiptoes," ready for progress, yet now as of old the time comes in the experience of most girls and young men when they wish to find a helpmate, found a home and undertake seriously the responsibilities of marriage and bringing up a family.

"Herman" expresses something of this vague hope and the problems it suggests, in the following letter:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"You are in my opinion, a great authority on love affairs. I am an artist and a reader of your column. What I hope to draw now is your attention. I am going to give you the dope on my life in silhouette form. I assure you I will listen to whatever you have to say.

"For a number of years, the principal thing I drew was my breath. When I was a wee bit of a boy, my mother held me in her arms and said, 'Herman, I hope some day you will be blessed with artistic fame.' Her remark drew a smile from me and she decided at that instant, I was a born artist. I have advanced, for now at twenty-four I draw a salary of thirty-three dollars, weekly, for spreading commercial lettering in a sign shop.

"I attend a high school art class, evenings, and am art editor of the school magazine. Spare moments, I make cartoons and caser designs. I have had a few of them accepted.

"About two years ago I met a girl named May. She and I are both quiet. She is slim and young and delicate. I took a liking to her and we went together about eight months. She often hugged and kissed me and finally proposed to me.

"I stopped keeping company with her, partly because I'm not earning enough to support a wife, and partly because she was ill so much of the time and did not seem to try to build up her health and strength.

"I was introduced to my next sweetheart — Ethel — through a chum of mine. She is dark and pretty and sociable, with dark bobbed hair. She lives two hours from my home. I have corresonded with her nearly a year, for corresponding is one of my hobbies.

"My mind is unsettled. I do not know whether this is because I have not yet met my ideal or because I am not making enough to support a life-partner. My parents want me to settle down and get married, and they tell me, it is possible for two to live on thirty dollars a week.

"Do you think I should stop going around with girls until I am earning enough to support a wife? Shall I go back to the girl who proposed to me and loves me? Or shall I continue to keep company with Ethel? I don't know whether I love her or not, although I like to hug and kiss her when we say good-night." "HERMAN."

The right time to marry and settle down is an individual problem. It is safe to say, however that before marrying, a man should know pretty clearly what he wants to do with his life and should have made a successful start in the direction in which he intends to travel. Still more important, a man should marry for love and should not marry until he has met the woman who completely fills his heart, making all others seem by comparison, uninteresting and unlovable. Your liking to kiss a girl, does not mean you love her, but merely that you like kissing attractive girls.

You are not yet in love, Herman. If you were, you would know it beyond all doubt. And passing weeks and months would only strengthen your certainty.

At present, why do you not bend every effort to making a success of the art you love so much. Study and work and save your money. You will naturally wish the companionship of girls, occasionally. Do not exclude all but one girl from your circle of friends, however, until you meet the girl you are sure you love. Look for this girl, who will make you the best wife, the sweetest sweetheart. Keep yourself worthy of her.

In this way, working, progressing, seeking the heart, you will in time find yourself, success, and the One Girl. All happiness to you!

"Unto the Third and Fourth Generation"

By L. Lamar Matthews.

SAID a young man of my acquaintance, "I've always been very proud of my grandfather Hill. He was a noted physician with a reputation for skill that was known far and wide. Yet he lived and died a poor man — a country doctor."

L. LAMAR MATTHEWS

"What a shame!" I replied. "Why did he remain in a rural community when he was an acknowledged authority on disease?"

"Well, you see, he began practising there right after the War, and nobody had any money then. After a few years his people came to look upon him as their counselor, guide and healer. He carried his own store of drugs in saddlebags that were thrown across the back of the horse he rode. When his patients were too poor to buy medicine he gave it to them. Sometimes he took wood or hay or potatoes or whatever they brought him in payment — and so he eked out a livelihood.

"Wasn't that tragic?" I exclaimed.

"Tragic?" answered the young man. "I'm more proud of my grandfather's noble service than I would be of the millions that he might have made. To know that my son has the blood of his grandfather Hill in his veins makes me hopeful of his future."

And then I thought of something I had heard another man say about his grandfather.

"We've always been a little bit ashamed of grandpa," he confided, "You know he was very rich before the Civil War and during the war he hired other men to take his place in the army although he was an able-bodied man. As fast as he was killed or wounded grandpa put up the money to pay another man to take his place. I've always had a cowardly streak in me, and I have often wondered if I didn't inherit it from my poor, scared grandfather."

It is a little bit terrifying to think that perhaps your bad traits will show up in your children's children, twenty, thirty, fifty years from now. It is even more distressing to think that your own child already has in his make-up some particular weakness of your own. There is consolation in the fact, however, that inherited traits can often be eradicated from the child's character if parents are earnest enough in their efforts.

This question of inheritance versus environment has been debated for ages, and still no one knows the answer. But it has been proved without a doubt that training can to a large extent counteract the influence of inherited traits.

Nobody can alter the character of his forbears, but young men and women can have much to do with the character of the next and the next and the next generation.

For their good traits, like their sins, shall be passed on to "the children of the third and fourth generations."

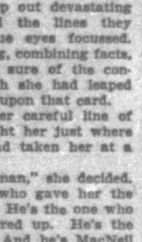

Folly's Daughter

A Thrilling Mystery of New York Night Life.

By Ann Lisle

Folly Calls on Mac

FOLLY DUANE stood for a long time with MacNeil Shannon's card held grimly between the forefinger and thumb of her white hand—the one thing about her which bore out most sturdily her claim to having seen better days and of having been "somebody" once upon a time.

ANN LISLE

She stared and stared. Her brow was lined with wrinkles. She forgot to hold her face impassive and to keep out devastating expressions and the lines they bring. Her blue eyes focussed. She was thinking, combining facts, trying to make sure of the conclusion to which she had leaped when she came upon that card.

In the end her careful line of reasoning brought her just where her intuition had taken her at a bound.

"This is the man," she decided. "He's the one who gave her the fifty dollar tip. He's the one who got her all stirred up. He's the one she likes. And he's MacNeil Shannon, the president of the company that owns the Shannon and about twenty other hotels. . . ."

Folly's eyes gleamed avidly. Her heart began to thump. Her breath came in gasps. And she laughed raucously as she cried aloud:

"Well, the little innocent certainly brought down a rare bird. . . . And she didn't know enough to bag him. . . . She only winged him, I guess."

Folly sighed, she yawned luxuriously and touched the tip of her little pointed tongue to the corners of her loose-lipped warm mouth. . . . If she had landed a bird like that!

She examined herself in the mirror. She had it all out with herself. Jill was a good girl. She ought to stay a good girl. She was the kind to marry and make a man happy and be happy doing it. Of course a man like the Shannon chap wouldn't marry a little nobody like Jill. . . . That wasn't what he would be thinking of. A man like that could only harm Jill.

Folly smiled grimly. She stared at her own likeness in the mirror. She was honest enough with herself to acknowledge that she was fading fast. But she wasn't a wreck yet! She had been pretty once and she had been charming to men. Irresistible, as attested by the tragedy of her life and the wreck it had caused and shared.

It was 11 o'clock of an August Thursday. Hot, muggy and so disagreeable that Folly had forsaken her bed hours before her usual time. Jill had gone to look for another half-time job to augment the earnings of her afternoon nurse-maid work. She was safely out of the way until 9 tonight. Up in Washington Heights this morning; over on Fifth avenue in the nineties from 2 on. The Fifties and the Shannon were safe from her today.

Folly began to dress carefully, painstakingly. It was noon when she emerged from her shabby hotel. She wore her blue-flowered chiffon without its coat, and the big jeghorn hat she had given Jill long ago. Around its crown was a scarf of blue that continued in a streamer which Folly threw lightly across her shoulders and twisted under her chin. The shadow of the hat made her face young, hid the ravages of late hours. The chiffon under her chin disguised its flabby softness. Folly's lovely hands were bare. Her small feet were dressed in her best tan stockings and champagne colored slippers. She looked young and almost as pretty as she fancied. . . . And once upon a time no man had been able to resist her.

Clerks and elevator boys found her hard to resist now. So after a time she made her way to the outer offices of MacNeil Shannon's business suite. Then she sent him a carefully thought out note on his own paper. She wrote heavily with a sweep of a stub pen, with a dramatic force that was part of her and in a hand that had been the smartest and the clearest sign of being correct in her day.

"Dear Mr. Shannon:

"Won't you see me? I am Jill Hathaway's guardian. She may have spoken to you of me. I am Mrs. Folly Duane. I must speak to you of her. You have so much. Won't you give a poor, helpless, muddled little woman half an hour?"

Ten minutes later she was ushered into the sunny private office where Jill had come two months before—on such a different errand. For Jill had come to give. Folly had come to get. Jill wanted to return what was MacNeil Shannon's. Folly intended to get more than was hers. Only she had to find out one or two things first. And after a curt exchange of greetings, when he had waved her to a chair, she leaned forward and laughed with the tinkle that was sometimes as soft as fairy music, sometimes as hard as breaking glass.

"Forgive me," she cried. "But it's too funny. That dear, innocent baby of mine told me you were a handsome—OLD man. Isn't the younger generation—amusing?"

"We old folks ought to know," he said with easy good humor.

Folly felt she had struck the right note. The rest ought to be easy to manage.

To Be Continued.

Smart Afternoon Frocks

A SMART Parisienne wears this chic little Patou frock of beige crepe de chine strapped with black and white. For tea there is nothing smarter than this bolero frock with the fashionable three-tier skirt. It is made of pale pink crepella strapped with a darker shade. The under blouse of finely pleated chiffon is a shade paler than the dress.

-:- The Rhyming Optimist -:-

By Aline Michaelis

THIS is the thing we have vowed to do; yield not and falter not, see it through! Likely the task that the years have brought, differs in much from the work we sought; lacking, perhaps, in all glow and gleam, not as we saw it in youth's bright dream; nothing of romance and glamor here, only the commonplace, drab and drear. Yet, we were born with a part to play; humble, it may be, or proud and gay; so there is only one thing to do; yield not and falter not, see it through! This is the light that has led the race, up out of slime to its lofty place; this is the motto when souls are true; yield not and falter not, see it through!

Fashion Fads and Fancies

By Mildred Ash.

The Smaller, the Smarter is the authentic way of judging the style value of patterns of printed silk or chiffon frocks designed for daytime wear. For street dresses tiny floral or geometric prints are the accepted mode.

Tough as Elephant's Hide is an exact contradiction of the fragile texture of the sheer silk hose that take their color and name from that sturdy gray hide. A variation from the darker, gunmetal shade so popular in the Spring, this new tone of hosiery is a lovely soft shade that offers a pleasing relief from the pale greys and beiges so generally worn.

Yoked to Yoke Fashions—Both the blouses and skirts of new tailored frocks exploit this feature. Many of the blouse yokes have the appearance of being buttoned on, while those on the skirt accent the tightly fitted hipline, that is one of the strongest forecasts of the coming season.

Expecting the Unexpected is what the Summer ensemble costumes have taught us to do. What fashion prophet could have foreseen the fad for a black satin pleated skirt worn with a delicately colored, sleeveless, linen slip-on and cardigan jacket to match? On the coat lapel is worn a black flower.

Caught Under Mistletoe has always had a romantic significance that probably largely accounts for the success now being accorded to mistletoe hat brooches. These pins are developed in marcasite and imitation pearls, and represent little sprigs of these berries and foliage.

Synthetic Scotch is not always of the liquid variety. An imitation of Scotch tweed is accomplished by dying a straw fabric in the same misty colorings that distinguish Scotch woolens. This odd straw is used to create many smart tailored hats, which have no other trimming than a crushed band of solid tone silk.

From Garden Of Eden comes the motif for some of the most exquisite printed chiffon; for tiny apples, printed upon a light green ground are among the smartest designs. Another odd theme is that of the conventionalized sea shell, printed in delicate colorings upon a pastel ground chiffon.

Hints on Preserve Making

By Hannah Wing

AS preserving time draws near every housewife feels the stirring of a desire for new and even more delicious preserves, jams and marmalades than those she made last year. The sandwiches served at Mrs. Brown's January tea were made from a new quince preserve which everyone was enthusiastic about. Mrs. Jones' bread pudding has become famous for the Damson jam which she serves with it. Mrs. Smith's ginger pears guarantee the popularity of the "spreads" which her young people give.

Preserve making is not all enthusiasm however. Discontentment and dismay and a little dread creep in when some of the results of last year's work are remembered. Why should these products be so different when the recipe and procedure seem the same each time? Why are some preserves dark, stiff and tough? Why do some ferment and spoil? Why do the fruits get hard, tough and chewy rather than tender when cooked in the syrup?

Times have changed and most preserves are now made with less sugar than in the old days when they were kept in stone jars without sealing.

Not only do people prefer less sugar but with the new knowledge of canning the also prefer to seal all products either in jars or by the use of paraffin. Therefore the amount of sugar required or the density of the syrups is one of the most important problems to consider in making preserves.

The syrup must be introduced gradually so that it will permeate the fruit thoroughly without shrinking it.

If the syrup is too heavy at the beginning the juices of the fruit will be drawn out so rapidly that the surface becomes coated with the syrup and very little can enter the fruit. The fruit shrinks, becomes hard and tough. For this reason it is necessary to start the cooking of all fruit in a thin syrup. This rule applies to practically all preserves except strawberries which seem to be in an isolated class since they require a large amount of sugar from the beginning to conserve their flavor, color and to some extent their texture.

All preserves should be cooked rapidly until clear, tender and transparent. The finished product should be bright, clear, sparkling and of good color. There should be enough syrup to cover the fruit while cooking and if it becomes too thick before the fruit is clear and tender a small amount of boiling water should be added to keep the syrup at a fairly constant density.

Educating Father to Help with the Children

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.,
Former President of the American Medical Association.

YOU, as a mother, know that the biggest job you have, is bringing up your children? Does father help?

If not, father needs a little bringing up himself.

One of the chief problems with which workers in maternity and child welfare centres have always been faced is the great power of the father in the home.

He is so powerful that he can, if he wishes, wreck the whole work. There is no doubt that the welfare workers have partly created this difficulty for themselves.

The very name "Maternity and Child Welfare" suggests that when the movement was begun the fathers were forgotten. If, in the earliest days, they had secured that power for good and not for evil, for interest and not for indifference, the history of the movement would have been different. It is not, however, too late to begin.

How often does one hear from a mother, on the subject of regular feeding, a remark such as this: "I want to carry out your instructions, doctor, but my husband gets so angry when the baby cries at night that I have to feed it for the sake of peace and quiet."

Or, about the health of school children: "My husband won't hear of the boy having his teeth seen to, or his tonsils cut; they never did these things when he was at school, and he doesn't like these new-fangled ideas."

The Maternity and Child Welfare Centre at its best is a homely gathering where the doctor, sister, mothers and children are all friends. Can no place be found in it for the father?

This is not a matter for the local authority, with its dignity and prestige, to take up. The first step should be taken by the centre itself. The fathers have heard of the centre as a body anxious to help their wives and children. The doctor and nurse should therefore send out a joint invitation to the fathers of the children, inviting them to an evening talk and informing them that coffee, tea and smokes will be provided. Minor bribery of this kind, though regrettable, seems to be necessary; it took more than that to get the mothers to the centre in the early days. Together with this invitation, the mothers should be urged to make the husbands come. The author offered as an inducement that he would give them a thorough good talking-to for not looking after their wives and children better!

Invitations of this kind are surprisingly successful. The first time Dr. Geffen tried it he got seventy fathers to attend his evening talk, and he has never failed to get them to respond in large numbers.

The first talk should be on general subjects. Dr. Geffen started by saying he had asked them to come because he could not get their wives to look after the babies properly, so he thought that the best thing to do was to get them to do it themselves. He explained the good points of breast feeding and the necessity of regularity, pointing out that they had to cooperate if the baby was to be fed regularly and so kept at its healthiest.

You see, fathers are not so bad, after all. They'll be all right if they are only made to know and to feel. Yes, most fathers can be "brought up."

Correct MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Bridal Bouquets.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
I am about to be married and would like to know who furnishes the flowers for the bride and her bridesmaids. I have always known the groom to do that—am I correct?
UNCERTAIN.

THE groom always sends the bridal bouquet to his bride, and sometimes gives the bouquets to her attendants. However, since it is most important that, in the costumes of the attendants and in the decorations there be artistic harmony, usually the family of the bride and the bride have definite plans about the kind of flowers and especially about the colors of the flowers that they wish to have the attendants carry. That is why it is customary for the parents of the bride to give the flowers to the attendants. However, the groom may do it, if he decides with the bride on just what types she wishes the bouquets to be.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)
