Soviet delegation arrives in Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A high-level Soviet delegation arrived in Warsaw today to discuss economic cooperation with the beleaguered Polish government.

The delegation was headed by Nikolai Baibakov, deputy prime minister of the Soviet Union and chairman of the Soviet State Planning Committee, Poland's PAP news agency said.

Pap said the Soviets were invited by the Polish government, which is billions of dollars in debt to foreign creditors and is unable to pay them because of year-long labor upheaval.

Meanwhile, leaders of the independent union Solidarity gathered for a meeting in Gdasnk to discuss a response to Soviet and Polish government attacks on the labor federation.

Workers at a Soviet industrial plant warned that Poland "is on the edge of enormous misfortune and a national catastrophe," the official Soviet news agency Tass reported.

"The counter-revolutionary ideas and filthy deeds of Solidarity are a direct attempt to use trade union channels for ideological sabotage against the socialist community," declared an open letter to Polish workers issued by workers at the Uralmash machinery plant in the Ural Mountains city of Sverdlovsk.

The letter, part of a Moscow campaign to demonstrate Soviet displeasure with events in Poland, expressed confidence that Polish workers would take "resolute measures" to stop "counter-revolution."

On Monday, the Polish government's chief labor negotiator said Solidarity declared war on communism in Poland and killed the partnership that was developing between the government and the independent labor federation.

"The funeral of this idea has already taken place," said Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski. "And it wasn't me that put it in the grave. It had a solemn funeral in Gdansk."

Rakowski said the first half of Solidarity's first national congress in Gdansk two weeks ago "apparently declared war on the authorities and the (communist) system." He said the statements of some union leaders had gone from "stupid" to "criminal."

Tass on Monday accused the union of provoking crises in an attempt to seize power. In a dispatch from Warsaw, it said the union's leaders believed the Polish government was too weak to stop them.

Noting that the labor congress is reconvening this weekend, Tass said: "Active preparations are under way for decisive actions and to struggle for political power."

Locals in the 9.5-million-member labor federation did not wait for their national leaders. They responded with accusations of Soviet interference in Poland's internal affairs.

"Setting a sovereign government against a sovereign nation is clear interference in the affairs of our country," said a statement issued by workers in a paper factory in Niedomice.

Those taxing talks

Representatives of the six taxing districts gathered Monday afternoon in City Hall to discuss the future of the Midland County Tax Appraisal Board. Among those participating in the hearing were, from left, Board Chairman Gil Tompson, City Councilman Gordon Marcum and County Attorney Robert Rendall.

MISD may wish to keep control of tax board

The Midland Independent School District, which is guaranteed the upper hand in controlling the Midland County Tax Appraisal Board, may opt to dominate the board and give token representation to three or five other taxing bodies.

It depends strictly on the school trustees' pleasure.

The school board, said Midland ISD Superintendent Dr. James Mailey, likely will not endorse a Midland County resolution which would give equal voting power to each of the six taxing entities in the county.

"The board will take a look, a hard look, at what the law now says," Mailey said Monday in City Hall in an informal, information-only gathering of the existing appraisal board and representatives of the six taxing districts: the city of Midland, Midland County, Midland ISD, Greenwood ISD, Midland College and Midland County Hospital (Midland Memorial Hospital).

MAILEY STRONGLY suggested that the trustees may want to control the appraisal board, which the Texas statutory formula effectively condones, since the Midland ISD is the largest ($17.7 million) tax levier in the county and, by law, will be paying the bulk of the $830,000 chief appraiser's budget for 1982.

"I don't think the school district will be amenable to reducing its vote," Mailey said.

The Texas Property Tax Code seems to favor tax-levying power over people representation via the one-man, one-vote concept.

The law now calls for only the public schools, municipalities and counties to be represented on a five-member appraisal boards in Texas counties. Furthermore, the law prescribes that the makeup of the appraisal board shall be decided by a vote of the governing bodies of schools, cities and counties.

In Midland, that means that the college and hospital would have no vote and no direct voice in regulating that Central Appraisal Office, manned by Chief Appraiser Virgil Jones Jr. and his 25-member staff. And it also means that power to elect the appraisal board's membership would be controlled by the Midland ISD, which will have 60 percent of the vote unless it decides to cast aside the statutory formula, which, by law, could happen.

"(The college and hospital) do not have voting rights" unless granted by a unanimous vote of the Big Four — Midland ISD, city, county, and Greenwood ISD, noted County Attorney Robert Rendall, who has been succeeded by Jimmie Oglesby as legal adviser to the appraisal board.

THE MIDLAND County Commissioners' Court unanimously has passed a resolution to discard the statutory formula and to allow for a six-member appraisal board which would give equal representation in any official business to each of the six districts.

Mailey indicated that the school would not consent to weakening its guaranteed dominant role on the board.

The county-drafted resolution proposed that the appraisal board keep its present six-member makeup, authorized in 1979, of one representative for each of the six taxing districts. The board automatically will fall into the statutory formula in 1982 unless action to the contrary is taken by Oct. 1.

Currently making up the board are potential and likely lame-duckers Gil Tompson, board chairman who represents the Midland ISD; Joe Nuessle, Midland city attorney who represents the city of Midland; Charlie Welch, Midland County commissioner who represents the county; Walt Holton, who represents the hospital; Fred Wright, who represents the college; and Bud Lea, who represents the Greenwood ISD.

NUESSLE offered a proposal on board membership. It didn't fly.

"I don't know if I'm here as a city attorney or as a member of the board," he said wryly and then proposed an 11-member board and, thus-

Haig stresses resolution of Polish crisis

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. is making clear the importance the Reagan administration attaches to peaceful settlement of the Polish crisis.

Haig has said he will tell Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko at their first meeting Wednesday that the Soviets must refrain from military intervention if they wish to improve already cool relations with the United States.

The secretary met today with Polish Foreign Minister Jozef Czyrek to emphasized the importance and gravity with which the administration views Poland's problems. Details of their talk were not immediately released.

Haig met Czyrek after appointments with close U.S. allies but ahead of representatives of other nations that also are important to the United States, including China and Venezuela.

State Department spokesman Dean Fischer said Haig wants an assessment of Poland's internal situation, both economic and political. He said the question of economic aid for Poland may also be raised.

Fischer said Haig discussed Poland in nearly all of his meetings with U.S. allies Monday, including British Foreign Minister Lord Carrington and Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo.

Haig does not believe the Soviets are on the verge of sending in more troops to stop Poland's move toward democracy, Fischer said. He said although the secretary believes the Soviet demand last week for the Polish Communist Party to crack down on internal dissent was "somewhat intimidating," there is no evidence that the Soviets are massing troops near the Polish border.

Haig delivered a major address to the 36th U.N. General Assembly Monday in which he charged that Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and the Soviet-backed Vietnamese occupation of Cambodia pose a threat to global order, economic development and the U.N. Charter.

"One of the great dangers to the Charter today and to development itself is the willful violation of the national integrity of both Afghanistan and Cambodia by the Soviet Union and Vietnam," he said. "Their behavior challenges the basic rights of all sovereign states."

Gromyko listened with his usual impassivity. But Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said the speech was "a demonstration of the hypocrisy of American diplomacy."

Tass said Haig's charge that the Soviet Union violated Afghanistan's national integrity was "absurd."

"It is not the U.S.S.R. but the United States that is interfering in the internal affairs of that country," Tass said.

Haig did not mention Poland in his speech.

First female justice expects she'll be 'very busy'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sandra Day O'Connor, confirmed by a unanimous Senate as the first woman justice on the Supreme Court, promises to be "very busy, very fast" after she is sworn in later this week.

There is no clear indication, however, how she will vote on social and constitutional issues that come before the court.

The 51-year-old Arizona appeals judge won a 99-0 endorsement in the Senate on Monday as the 102nd justice in the 191-year history of the nation's highest court. She will be youngest of the nine members.

Mrs. O'Connor will be sworn in for her lifetime position in ceremonies Friday afternoon at the Supreme Court building. But because the ceremony will be conducted in the courtroom itself, the recording for posterity will be limited.

"As is the court practice, there will be no TV, no photographs and no tape recordings," court spokesman Barrett McGurn today said in a printed statement released today.

Reporters and artists will be admitted to the ceremony, as they are for all court sessions. There will be no public admission, however, except by invitation.

Two "picture opportunities" are scheduled shortly after the 15-minute ceremony.

McGurn said official court photographers would be on hand but added, "I know of no plan to have any photograph taken in the courtroom (during the ceremony)."

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger will administer Mrs. O'Connor's oath of office, and White House officials said President Reagan may attend the Friday ceremony.

"My hope is that 10 years from now, after I've been across the street and worked for a while, that they'll all feel glad for the wonderful vote they gave me today," a smiling Mrs. O'Connor said at an appearance on the Capitol steps with Vice President George Bush and Senate leaders.

Once installed on the court, which opens its 1981-82 term Oct. 5, "I'm going to get very busy, very fast," Mrs. O'Connor said.

Mrs. O'Connor steadfastly refused to indicate how she might rule on any specific issue, although she expressed personal dislike of abortion and busing for school integration and support for the death penalty.

SILENT WITNESS 685-1190

Accused murderer, 73, ordered to state hospital

SAN ANGELO (AP) — A court-appointed psychiatrist and a physician testified that a 73-year-old man charged with murder in the deaths of two fishermen is an alcoholic who probably never will be competent to stand trial.

Mortimer "Bubba" Hall Monday was ordered to Rusk State Hospital by State District Judge Earl Smith after testimony showed Hall's mental state was such that he could not understand a trial or aid in his own defense.

Hall is charged in the March 22 fatal shootings of David James Adams, 32, of Rolling Acres and John Bernardon, 34, of Midland while the two were fishing near Mertzon, about 50 miles southwest of San Angelo.

Hall's physician, Dr. John L. Read, testified that Hall suffered from senility, an irregular heartbeat and alcoholism. Hospital records show Hall was hospitalized for treatment of alcoholism after he was indicted by an Irion County grand jury in April, and he currently is a patient at a geriatric center in San Angelo.

"His mental health is severely impaired," Read said. "I would say his chances are close to 100 percent that he will never gain his competency to stand trial."

Court-appointed psychiatrist Dr. Richard Coons said Hall suffers from senility and probably had some further brain damage from the "heavy use of alcohol over the years."

District Attorney Gerald Fohn did not challenge the defense position.

Smith said state officials will examine Hall for 90 days to decide whether Hall is likely to be able to stand trial in the near future. If not, another hearing will be called to have Hall committed indefinitely.

If he is ever found to be competent, he will face the murder charges, Smith said.

The widows of Adams and Bernardon have filed a civil suit against Hall alleging wrongful death. Attorney Max Parker, representing the widows, said they will proceed with the case.

He said a guardian probably could be appointed for Hall's estate and the civil case could be resolved without his testimony.

Mortimer "Bubba" Hall, 73, of Mertzon, hides his face as he is driven away from the Tom Green County Court House in San Angelo after a jury found him imcompetent to stand trial.

Winds should travel south to southeast at 10-15 mph through Wednesday, decreasing to 5-10 mph tonight.

Hot news

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sawdust and agricultural waste are among the hottest energy items in California's Central Valley.

Both these products, which were once burned, buried or hauled away to landfills, are now being used in a project to generate pollution-free heat and electricity, according to a report in Crocker National Corp.'s "Assets" magazine.

The waste products are converted to pelletized fuel which, pound for pound, produces as much heat as Western coal and with an ash residue of some 3 percent that contains trace materials and other nutrients that can be returned to the soil.

In addition to producing kilowatts of electricity, the pellets are used by a sugar refinery that burns it to dry sugar-beet pulp. The pellets also provide heat for hospitals, military installations, asphalt plants, schools and lumber yards in the United States and Canada.

MISD may keep control of tax board

ly, suggested that the Midland ISD sidestep the statutory rule.

The Nuessle proposal would break down board voting power like this:

—Midland ISD: five of the 11 members. The school district, which has a tax levy of $17.7 million, would pay 50 percent of the $830,000 chief appraiser's 1982 budget.

—City of Midland: two of the 11 members. The city, which has a tax levy of $6.2 million, would pay 20 percent of the budget.

—Midland County: one of the 11 members. The county, which has a tax levy of $4.3 million, would pick up 10 percent of the cost.

—Midland College: one of the 11 members. The college would pay 10 percent of the bill.

—Hospital: one of the 11 members. The hospital would pay 6 percent of the cost.

—Greenwood ISD: one of the 11 members. Greenwood would pay 5 percent of the chief appraiser's operating budget in 1982.

But to get out from under the statutory formula, a unanimous vote by the Big Four — Midland ISD, city, county and Greenwood ISD — would be required. But on what to vote would be the dilemma. Under the statutory bypass option, up to 13 members could be on the board and under any arrangement agreed upon by the officials of the taxing districts.

"You can doodle around with this endlessly," said Nuessle. "It (his proposal) would give everybody representation, but it would obviously have a glaring discrepancy."

By law, the governing boards of the Big Four taxing entities determine the membership of the appraisal board. In Midland County, that formula gives the Midland ISD 60 percent of the possible 5,000 and a guarantee of a majority rule on the five-member board. But, noted Nuessle, the law is so flexible that it allow the Big Four the option of allowing the college and hospital in on the vote.

And, under that plan, Nuessle proposed a voting system to determine the board membership and which would reduce the Midland ISD's control to 51.8 percent.

Under yet another proposal, the city would have 912 of the 5,000 votes; Midland ISD, 2,594; the county, 621; college, 402; hospital, 282, and Greenwood ISD, 189.

"There's innumerable ways of doing it," Nuessle said.

TOMPSON, WHO chaired the discussion in City Hall and who will be out of office unless the Midland ISD chooses to re-appoint him, said he and the other members of the "old" board "are rather in a peculiar position of having no voice. We are on the outside awaiting your decision.

"I feel like we are out of place," Tompson said. "We are only a catalyst in this gathering."

Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins, who viewed the officals there as "reasonable people," said he had supposed "the voice (on the appraisal board) ought to be apportioned to the vote entitlement. I think we ought to do it some way so that everybody has a voice."

Commissioner Welch's view was similar to that of the mayor's.

"We feel like everybody today (under the six-member board) is represented."

City Councilman Gordon Marcum II proposed a 13-member board which would allow five votes by Midland ISD, three by the city, two by the county, and one each by the Greenwood ISD, college and hospital.

"That would have some type of balance," he said and would proportionately reduce the Midland ISD share of the $830,000 operating budget to 38.6 percent.

Midland College President Dr. Jess Parrish favored the resolution by which all six taxing entities would be have votes on the appraisal board.

"We like the idea of having some representation," he said. "I can read the provisions very well."

Edwin Magruder Jr., president of the hospital's board of directors, expressed satisfaction with the present set-up which, for almost two years, has allowed the hospital a vote on the board.

"I'm just glad we're protected by the statute. I'd like to see the board continue as it has been," Magruder said.

He was opposed to an 11- or 13-member board, which, he said, "wouldn't be able to do business as well as a six-member board. I don't think we'd every get anything done."

Magruder observed that under the statutory formula, "the thing has been tilted in favor of who collects the most taxes."

He favored the current makeup of the board.

"I'd like very much for the (Midland) school district to consider leaving the board as it is," Magruder said.

TO THAT SUGGESTION, Mailey queried the representatives of the other taxing bodies to see if they would be willing to equally share the expense of running the the Central Appraisal Office. He got no answer.

Welch, who opposes Midland ISD domination of the appraisal board, likened the "weighted" vote on the board makeup to having a big bank account. Welch said that he was "glad" that voting on election day isn't linked to the voter's "bank balance" by which more money would mean more votes.

"I think the one-man, one-vote concept" as sanctioned by the U.S. Supreme Court should apply to the vote on composition of the appraisal board, Welch said. He recommended that the officials there "quit talking dollars and cents and start talking about representing people."

But Mailey said he has "a hard time harmonizing" equal voting power with unequal tax-levying power.

The statutory formula, which would give the Midland ISD control of the law-mandated five-member board, will take effect in 1982 unless the Big Four opt to do otherwise by Oct. 1. Today, both the City Council and the Midland ISD trustees were to consider the county's resolution to retain the six-member, equal-voice appraisal board.

"The (school) board," Mailey had said, "will not be in favor of the resolution, proposed by the county and adopted by the county."

Turkish air force jetfighter crashes

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — A Turkish air force F-104 jetfighter crashed today into a bivouac area prepared for a scheduled NATO exercise in western Turkey, and first reports from journalists on the scene indicated at least 100 soldiers were killed and another 100 injured. All were believed Turkish.

There were conflicting reports on whether the casualties were the result of the plane having hit an amunition dump or an explosion when the plane crashed.

Military sources said the pilot was practicing a diving run over the bivouac area and was unable to pull the plane out of its descent. It was not known if the pilot had ejected.

Turkey's ruling generals were meeting in Ankara and there was speculation that the exercise in Turkey might be canceled.

Turkish military sources said the bodies of 65 victims from the crash already had arrived by helicopter at hospitals in Istanbul and that Gen. Haydar Saltik, commander of the 1st Army had rushed to the site of the crash.

The military sources, asking not to be named, said three Istanbul hospitals had been put on alert to accept the dead and wounded.

Police look for station robbers

ODESSA — Police here are looking for two men who held up the Hudson Gas Station at 1330 E. 2nd St. shortly after 9 p.m. Monday.

An attendant at the station told officers he was alone when the men came in, pointed a blue steel revolver at him and demanded the station's money. They also took the attendant's wallet, which contained an undisclosed amount of cash.

No dollar figure was placed on the station's loss.

Big Spring man held in lieu of bond in connection with murder, rape

BIG SPRING — A 41-year old Big Spring man was still being held in jail here this morning in lieu of posting a $200,000 bond in connection with a murder and rape that occurred in Big Spring early Saturday.

Steve Harper, 41, was charged Monday afternoon by Peace Justice Lewis Heflin with capital murder, aggravated rape and aggravated assault.

According to Big Spring police, Harold Denton Boy, 37, died from a bullet wound in the chest about 1:30 a.m. Saturday. Boy's 17-year old daughter told officers that a man shot her father and whipped her with a pistol.

Boy's wife and three other daughters were in the house at the time of the shooting and assault.

Police said a 17-year old girl reported that a man broke into her residence on the other side of town about an hour after the incident at the Boy's residence and choked and raped her.

According to officers, the description of the man in the two incidents was the same.

Autopsy performed on Taiwanian professor

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — U.S. forensic pathologist Cyril Wecht performed an autopsy early Tuesday on Chen Wen-cheng, the Carnegie-Mellon University professor who died under mysterious circumstances 2½ months ago after being questioned by government security agents.

Chen Ting-mou, the professor's father, said the autopsy was performed at the Taipei morgue where the body is being kept. He said it began at midnight, shortly after Wecht arrived from the United States with Morris DeGroot, another professor from the Pittsburgh university.

Chen said he and a son-in-law were present for the autopsy.

Chen, a native of Taiwan who taught statistics at CMU, was found dead on the campus of National Taiwan University on July 3 about 12 hours after being interrogated by security agents.

The Taiwan Garrison Command said Chen was a supporter of a Taiwan independence movement which the Nationalist Chinese government considers seditious. This caused widespread speculation that he was murdered although the government said he "committed suicide or died in an accidental fall" from the university's four-story library building.

The government rejected a request last month by Richard Cyert, the president of Carnegie-Mellon, and DeGroot for an independent autopsy or the return of Chen's body to the United States for a post-mortem.

Sources in the Taipei district prosecutor's office said there was no longer any legal bar to the autopsy because the body was now entirely at the disposal of Chen's family. But local newspapers last month called the request by Cyert and DeGroot interference in Taiwan's internal affairs.

Chen's family has persisted in the belief that he was murdered. His father charged earlier that the government investigation of the death was "insufficient and unconvincing."

Wecht and DeGroot avoided reporters on their arrival in Taipei, registered at a hotel under aliases and could not be reached for comment. They were scheduled to visit the district prosecutor's office to examine Chen's internal organs.

The prosecutor's office said earlier the case was not closed despite the official finding of death by suicide or accident. It said it was keeping the internal organs for further investigation if new evidence was found to challenge the official ruling.

Duarte seeking $114 million for El Salvador

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — El Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte is trying to persuade Congress to support the Reagan administration's request for $114 million in economic and security assistance next year for his Central American country.

Congressional support for the administration policies toward El Salvador has been wavering, and Salvadoran officials were attaching considerable importance to Duarte's meeting today with congressional leaders. The new fiscal year begins next week.

As he began the third day of his 10-day U.S. visit here, Duarte's strategy for enhancing American support for his embattled government was becoming increasingly evident.

In his meeting Monday with President Reagan and in his public statements, Duarte has gone to some lengths to demonstrate that the Salvadoran guerrilla movement — and not his government — is the principal obstacle to peace.

Duarte told Reagan that he is willing to talk with leftist leaders if they renounce violence and support his plan for the establishment of democratic rule, a senior U.S. official said.

During his visit on Capitol Hill, Duarte was certain to be asked about the human rights situation in El Salvador.

Most of the reservations about U.S. support for the country center on allegations of widespread atrocities committed by the Salvadoran security forces.

But the senior U.S. official, who asked not to be identified, said Duarte told Vice President George Bush on Monday that 600 national guardsmen had been dismissed and 64 imprisoned for "offenses against the population."

At the State Department, Eugenio Vides Casanova, head of El Salvador's National Guard, told reporters there is "complete determination of all the members of the armed forces to guarantee to all Salvadoran citizens a completely free electoral process."

This would represent a new role for El Salvador's armed forces, which prevented Duarte from taking power in 1972 after he was elected president.

The civilian-military leadership allowed Duarte, a Christian Democrat, to become president last December in a shakeup prompted by spreading civil war and rapid economic decline.

Under his plan for democratic rule, a constituent assembly will be elected next March to draft a new constitution. This will be followed by presidential elections in 1983.

Duarte says the great majority of the Salvadoran people support the process. In private and public, Duarte has lamented the lack of U.S. press coverage of his independence day speech last Tuesday, which he claims drew huge crowds.

Duarte's refusal to negotiate with his leftist opponents has received the solid backing of the Reagan administration.

When a senior official indicated Monday that Reagan might be responsive to outside mediation, possibly by Mexico, other administration sources acted quickly to deny there had been any policy shift, saying the official was either misquoted or misinformed.

"We do not favor negotiations on the formation of a government," an administration informant said. "But we have favored and strongly support any efforts that are made to bring more parties into the election process."

Settlement could yield $60 million

WEST CHESTER, Pa. (AP) — The Army has agreed to a medical-malpractice settlement that could yield up to $60 million for a baby born with brain damage at an Army hospital.

Rosemary Maloney, 34, was a captain in the Army Nurse Corps when she gave birth to the child in April 1980 at the Tripler Army Medical Center in Honolulu. The infant's skull was fractured "when an antiquated suction method of delivery was used instead of forceps," said Lawrence Grant of Paoli, the woman's lawyer.

The child, Michael Maloney, 18 months old, suffered severe brain damage and will require institutionalization, Grant said. The baby was placed in St. Edmond's Home for Crippled Children in suburban Rosemont last week.

The out-of-court agreement, approved Sept. 3 by Judge Lawrence Wood in Chester County Orphans Court, provides payment of $95,000 a year. At present interest rates, the settlement could amount to $57 million to $60 million if Michael survives a life expectancy of 72 years, according to court documents.

Ms. Maloney received an additional $655,000 in the settlement, much of which will pay lawyer's fees.

She left the Army in September after 10 years in the nursing corps. She had been married to an Army officer.

Grant said his client was not given sufficient prenatal care and Michael was "born blue" without "proper resuscitation people" during delivery. He said Ms. Maloney had asked an Army doctor to perform a Caesarean section, but he refused.

A spokesman for the U.S. Army Claims Service, which negotiated the settlement, said it was by far the largest ever reached by the Army.

Jeffrey Axelrad, director of the torts branch of the Justice Department, said the maximum cost of the settlement to the Army would be $2,255,000. The structured payments will be paid through annuities purchased through a private insurance carrier, he said.

When is a small copier a big mistake?

Now don't misunderstand.

We have nothing against small copiers. We happen to make some of the best in the business.

It's just that small copiers are built for small work loads. Overwork them and you'll get gray, streaked copies, too many breakdowns, and too many visits from the repairman.

But there's a bigger small copier built to answer the demands of a growing business.

The Minolta EP520.

It takes options like a document-feeder and sorter to handle work overloads. Or you can get a counter to keep track of the copies you've made.

Minolta's exclusive micro-toning system assures you rich contrasts and crisp, clear copies. Edge to edge, and corner to corner. On any kind of paper up to 11"x17".

It even has a special self-diagnostic system that tells you when it needs service. And what kind of service it needs.

So, if you've overestimated the capacity of your copier, get the Minolta EP520.

A big business can afford to make a few mistakes. A small business can't.

Mideast policy needed

The meetings between President Reagan and Israel's Prime Minister Begin were pointedly cordial. There's an obvious friendly chemistry between the two men, both of them hard-liners who tend to see complex issues in black and white terms.

It's to the good, of course, that the strong ties between the two countries have been reaffirmed and that the differences over recent Israeli actions in the Mideast and the administration's plan to sell the AWACS package to Saudi Arabia have not driven a serious wedge.

Yet the only agreement reached was the announced cooperation at the "strategic level" for countering possible Russian threats in the Middle East. Israel agrees to permit use of its territory for storage of American military equipment, with details of the arrangement still to be worked out. However, given the Israelis' longstanding invitation on that course, the agreement represents no major new turn.

The summit meeting reflected the Reagan administration's preoccupation with forestalling Soviet penetration of the Persian Gulf region, something of unquestioned importance to Western interests but a complex matter against which the White House seems willing to downplay the hard issues of peace between Arab and Israelis.

Thus, Reagan declined to use his personal influence with Begin even to discuss what will be required to break the deadlock over the Palestinian question. Indeed, some critics argue that the White House's glowing tributes to Begin and the warmth of the personal meetings may embolden the Israeli leader to believe that he will be able to hang on to the occupied West Bank indefinitely, while Washington worries about the Russians.

At the same time, the administration's effort to build a cohesive alliance for Gulf security runs into Arab arguments that Israel remains the threat to peace and that the Palestinian issue must be resolved. Secretary of State Haig now finds himself with the task of convincing the Saudis that the AWACS deal will go through and implying that the strategic understanding with Israel was partly meant to soften congressional opposition.

There's an ad hoc circularity about the administration's approach in these things that underscores its lack of coherent overall policy. The plan to sell the Saudis sophisticated weapons — a plan unjustified by any rational analysis of Saudi defense needs — in turn compels the president to promise still more arms and a closer military alliance with Israel. Begin is thereby encouraged to go his way in the Mideast without serious concern for American reaction or consequences for U.S. policy. The Arabs then up their price again for cooperation in Gulf security.

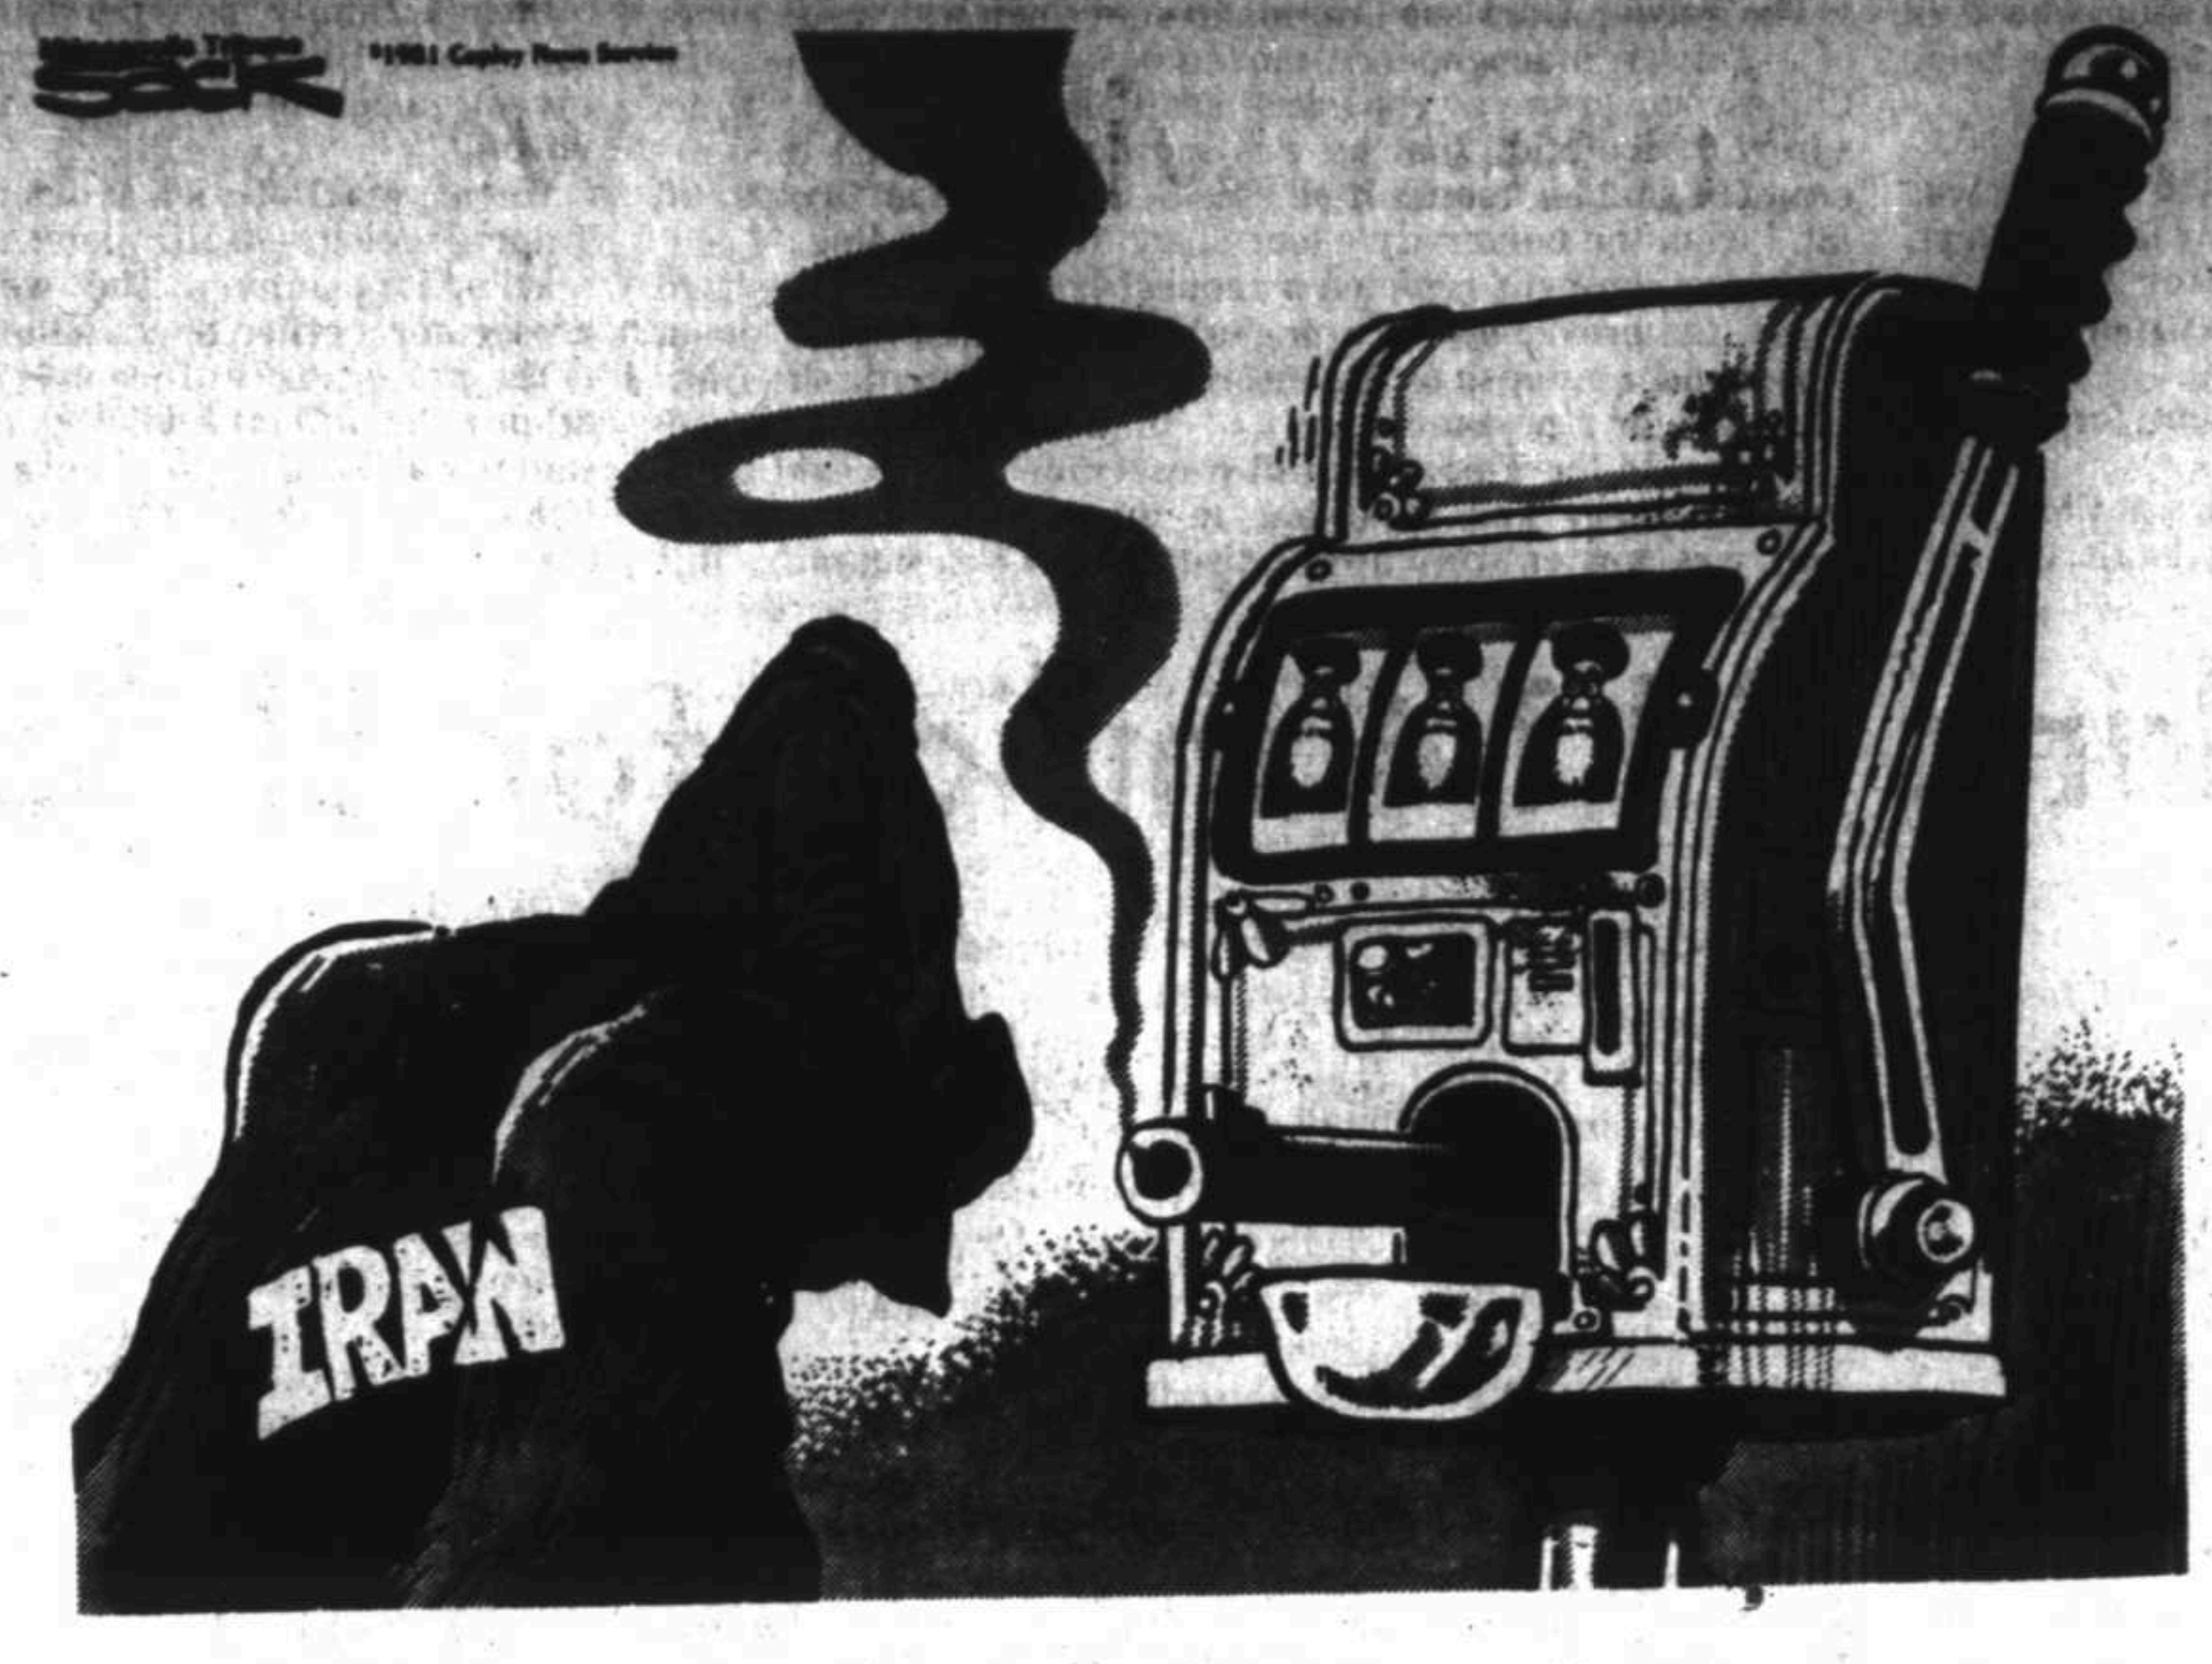
The disappointment of the summit meeting between Reagan and Begin is their failure to recognize that the present spiral of events leads nowhere, that it would have been far better to have engaged in blunt talk about the Palestinian impasse. Real progress on that issue, the kind that could come from determined prodding by Washington, would make it possible for the administration to back off from the AWACS deal with grace and with some compensation for the Saudis. Most importantly, it would reassure the Arabs, including Egypt's beleaguered Anwar Sadat, that the administration is as concerned for peace between Arabs and Jews as it is for protecting the oil fields, and that it understands the important connection between them.

A losing battle

The wine snob is fighting a losing battle — and it couldn't happen to a more deserving person.

First came those half-gallon jugs of wine at popular prices. Then came wine in floppy plastic bags. Now a California winery is peddling chablis in handy sixpack cans (specially coated to protect agaist a "tinny" taste).

Those are horridly uncivilized developments to the often insufferably pretentious connoisseur of the grape. But they are part of the democratizing process that mean the average worker can now opt for a can of wine instead of a can of beer, if the worker so chooses.



WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

CIA tries to mislead news media, public

WASHINGTON — In a triple assault on the public's right to know, the Central Intelligence Agency is (1) trying to shut off channels of information to the electorate, (2) seeking criminal penalties against reporters whose stories might identify CIA operatives and (3) spreading "disinformation" to news agencies.

Jack Anderson

The most disturbing is the disinformation campaign. This poisons the well from which Americans draw the facts they need to govern themselves. The wise Thomas Jefferson sought to lay this issue to rest two centuries ago when he argued that the people's right to know is more important than the officials' right to govern.

Now along comes Bill Casey, the doddering CIA director, with the argument that the government has the right to mislead the public by planting phony stories in the press.

His purpose ostensibly is patriotic. He wants to build public support for the political, economic and military measures that the Reagan administration believes are necessary to counter the worldwide conspiracies of the Soviet Union.

Legal experts have warned that the CIA is forbidden by law from conducting operations within the United States and that disinformation aimed at the American public, therefore, would be illegal. But Casey has found a way that he thinks the CIA can get around the law. The disinformation will be planted with foreign news bureaus whose stories are routinely picked up by U.S. newspapers.

Thus the phony stories may be concocted by CIA dissemblers in McLean, Va., but will reach the American audience circuitously through foreign sources. Casey believes this deception does not violate the restrictions against domestic operations.

Trusted CIA sources have told my associate Ron McRae that the foreign press, in the words of one insider, "is already being manipulated directly."

Consider the campaigns to discredit Libya's radical ruler, Muammar Qaddafi, for example. There should be no need to portray him as being any more vile than he is. He has committed outrages that should be sufficiently repugnant to arouse American public opinion against him. I have called Qaddafi the world's most irresponsible ruler and have backed up this opinion with facts that need no embellishment.

But under the imaginative Casey, the CIA is busily creating rumors connecting Qaddafi to the slave trade in Mauritania, the only nation that still auctions people on the block.

The CIA is also spreading stories that Qaddafi is manipulating Libyan accounts in international banks and otherwise mismanaging the Libyan peoples' petrodollars.

The agency has even considered arranging the disappearance of a moderate Moslem leader after a visit to Libya. This could revive the outrage against Qaddafi in the Moslem world that followed the actual disappearance of a holy man, named Mousa Sadr. He never returned from Libya after a set-to with the dictator.

What Casey doesn't understand is that truth — just the simple, straightforward truth — is the most effective method of persuading people and influencing events. If the U.S. government could re-establish its credibility, its word could become a powerful weapon for combating communism.

Footnote: Casey has done his utmost to obstruct the flow of CIA information to the public. He has also sought criminal penalties against newsmen who divulge the identity of CIA agents. These steps are necessary, he has contended, to protect the CIA's secret operations.

The truth is that the CIA's own ineptness, not newspaper stories, has jeopardized secret activities and exposed its operatives. The most damaging disclosures have come from Philip Agee, who is a renegade CIA agent, not a newsman. The CIA allowed him to slip through its fingers.

The CIA has loudly complained that its station chief in Athens, Robert Welch, was gunned down because his identity was revealed in anti-CIA publications. But the CIA station chief had occupied the same house in Athens for two decades, and sightseeing guides used to point it out to tourists. So Welch was more likely the victim of CIA carelessness than press exposure.

PRO-AM COMPETITION: Officially, prostitution doesn't exist in communist states; workers supposedly have paradise enow without recourse to commercial sex.

But in Poland, hard times have made prostitution a booming and lucrative profession. Not that the average Pole can afford the going rate of $100 a trick — that's anywhere from three to eight months' wages for most Poles.

The result is that the tourist hotels are overrun with heavily made-up young women flaunting their wares. And the Johns are usually Arab businessmen, for whom 100 bucks is loose change.

The government makes a feeble effort to control the industry by requiring medical checkups every two weeks. But the worst economic crisis since World War II has brought hard times to most Poles, and "amateurs" are flocking into the oldest profession. The government can't hope to control the situation.

WATCH ON WASTE: Separation of powers is the keystone of our federal system, so naturally the Supreme Court justices can't be expected to walk a block or two to the Senate or House barbershops. They have their own barber, at a cost to the taxpayers of $13,000 a year in salary, plus free space for his shop. The question now is: Will the Supreme Court have to put in a beauty parlor for Sandra Day O'Connor?

CHARLEY REESE

Emotions guide too many causes

An interesting thing about being a columnist is that everybody seems eager to convert you to their cause. You end up on a lot of mailing lists and while it's nice to be wanted, some of what you get in the mail is depressing.

Charley Reese

I gave up causes some years ago and today I'm like a fellow I know who served briefly and brilliantly in a state legislature before being defeated. "I'm the only blankety-blank in the world," the fellow said ruefully, "who has the Klan burning a cross in his front yard while the NAACP demonstrates in his backyard."

I know what he means. I'm sometimes called a Bircher, a communist, a racist, and a black-Jew lover all on the same day. Actually, I like most blacks and Jews, I think some black leaders are idiots, that frequently the Birch Society is right in what it says, and that sometimes big business is so anti-capitalist and anticompetitive that it stinks.

Still, so far I've not found any group or ideology which has cornered the market on truth. Instead, I've found that people and organizations who become obsessed with neat, single answer solutions most often lose touch with reality.

A good current example is the opposition voiced from some parts of the New Right — mostly the professional New Right — to the nomination of Sandra Day O'Connor to the Supreme Court. Conservatives have been crying for years for judges who were strict constructionists of the Constitution — judges who would rule on the basis of the law and not on the basis of their personal ideology. Judge O'Connor is that kind of judge. But what does the New Right opposition want? Not a strict constructionist but an Earl Warren who shares their particular ideology and will twist the Constitution to fit it.

There is an old saying in the newspaper business that the one way to be sure you have reported a controversy fairly is when both sides get mad at you. What this reflects, of course, is that what people who are emotionally committed to a cause want is not fair coverage but advocacy.

I try not to be anybody's advocate, but to look honestly at each situation and try to discern the truth. I don't always succeed. Columnists are just plain people who are lucky enough to get paid to do what everybody else does at the office water fountain for nothing.

If there is any "cause" I would support it would be to serve in some small way those reasonable, kind and decent human beings you find in every group who are trying to find out how we can live together on what Thomas Wolfe called this burnt cinder in a reasonably happy and humane fashion.

I think on our plane, human life is the highest value so I don't like people who are willing to kill or hurt other people over a difference of opinion or because of their race or religion. I don't like people who place a higher value on efficiency and lifestyle than they do on a single human life. I don't like people who reject reason, because the mind is the only tool God gave us to work with. And I don't like people who refuse to commit themselves or to make any moral judgments since, in my opinion, that is an evasion of one's responsibility as a human being.

Lincoln Steffens, after spending a career exposing corrupt city bosses, came to the conclusion that quite often the corrupt city bosses were better human beings than some of the reformers who replaced them. I agree with him. Most of history's most cruel killers have been idealists.

If you hit a guy over the head with a club, it doesn't make his head feel any better just because you think you are doing it in the name of a good cause.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 22, the 265th day of 1981. There are 100 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 22, 1792, the French Republic was proclaimed during the French Revolution.

On this date:

In 1862, President Abraham Lincoln declared that all slaves would be free as of Jan. 1, 1863, the date of the Emancipation Proclamation.

In 1927, slavery was abolished in the former British colony of Sierra Leone in Africa.

In 1949, the Soviet Union exploded its first atomic bomb, four years after the first U.S. nuclear detonation.

And in 1977, British-American proposals for bringing about black majority rule in Rhodesia were denounced by Prime Minister Ian Smith as an attempt to appease terrorists.

Ten years ago: A military jury at Fort McPherson, Georgia, found Army Captain Ernest Medina innocent of all charges of involvement in the deaths of more than 100 Vietnamese civilians at My Lai.

Five years ago: A House panel rejected proposals to punish CBS correspondent Daniel Schorr for his unauthorized disclosure of a House Intelligence Committee report.

BIBLE VERSE

No man can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon. Matt. 6:24

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan appointee due sacking for not being team player

WASHINGTON — One of the nonconservative appointments to the State Department pushed through by Secretary of State Alexander Haig against the wishes of Sen. Jesse Helms is about to be sacked: Myer Rashish, under secretary of state for economic affairs and one of the few Democrats at so high a level in the Reagan administration.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Rashish, a Kennedy administration official two decades ago who crossed party lines to support Ronald Reagan last year, has been accused of bad-mouthing the president in private. "I don't think there was any big ideological problem with Mike," one presidential aide told us. "It's just he never was a member of the team."

His likely successor is scarcely more of a Reaganaut than Rashish: Assistant Secretary Robert Hormats, a career government functionary who was a high-ranking trade official in the Carter administration. But Hormats could be succeeded by Richard McCormick, a conservative foreign policy specialist who is currently an aide to Helms.

REAGAN ON TERRORISM

In a private Oval Office meeting, President Reagan recalled his own problems as governor of California in dealing with anti-Vietnam war demonstrators when told by a visiting German leader of recent violence in West Berlin during the visit of Secretary of State Alexander Haig.

West Berlin's conservative Mayor Richard von Weizsaecker told Reagan some 500 "violence-prone" West German militants infiltrated West Berlin from West Germany to promote violence. That violence was nipped in the bud by West German security agents. As for the future, Weizsaecker told Reagan that forthcoming U.S.-Soviet talks on nuclear arms in Europe should reduce anti-American demonstrations in West Germany.

Reagan listened with skepticism. Recalling his own California experience, he said government authorities cannot show indecision in dealing with violence but must clamp down hard. That view is not shared in West Germany, either by the socialist government or the conservative opposition.

KOCH'S CONTROLLER PLAN

While publicly praising President Reagan's hard line against the illegal air traffic controller strike, Mayor Edward Koch of New York privately — but without success — offered the Reagan administration a plan to end the walkout on a conciliatory note.

Koch's plan: Give the striking controllers exactly 24 hours to come back to work, with the understanding they will start on the bottom of the seniority ladder. That would close the book for all time on those who do not return. Koch urged Reagan Cabinet members to accept his scheme so that the president could hand this concession to the union movement during his Labor Day visit to New York.

Koch got nowhere. The reason is put bluntly by one Transportation Department official: "As far as we're concerned, they (the controllers) are no longer government employees. There's no way they can be asked to return, and that's it."

GOLD IS 'CRAZY'

Although the notion of returning to a gold standard has been getting increasing attention, it is still considered "crazy" by ex-Nixon administration officials who severed the last connection between gold and the dollar in 1971.

"That's nonsense, it's crazy," said California industrialist George Shultz when Professor Arthur Laffer started pushing for gold at a recent meeting of President Reagan's outside economic advisers. As budget director in 1971, Shultz was one of the architects in closing the gold window.

A footnote: Reagan has grown noncommital about gold. Although earlier in the year he talked in private about the historical role of the gold standard in curbing inflation, he was much more cautious when the issue came up recently at a meeting with Republican congressional leaders. He would say only that the issue is under study by the Federal Gold Commission.

McNAMAR'S FOLLY

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan hit the ceiling when his close associate in the Reagan administration, Deputy Secretary Tim McNamar, told a reporter of plans to increase taxes as a means of reducing the budget deficit.

Both Regan and the White House read the riot act to McNamar, previously considered a reliable team player. They informed the deputy secretary that increasing taxes (apart from user fees) has no part in the president's economic strategy.

But McNamar was not wholly to blame. The tax boosts (including limitations on income tax reductions for interest payments) came out of the Treasury's Tax Division, where career government employees were eager to unearth relics of the high-tax past.

C-130 plane crash under investigation

INDIAN SPRINGS AIR FIELD, Nev. (AP) — The military is investigating for the cause of the crash of an Air Force C-130 transport plane in which seven soldiers perished and 20 others were hospitalized.

The four-engine turbo-prop was carrying 68 troops on night maneuvers when it crashed early Monday and burned for four hours. Most of the injured apparently were hurt from the impact or when they escaped through side exits, said Lt. Col. Mike Wallace, an Air Force spokesman.

Runway lights were off as part of the mission at this base about 45 miles northwest of Las Vegas, according to Air Force sources. Officials refused to confirm or deny the report.

A spokesman at Nellis Air Force Base near Las Vegas said none of the 20 hospitalized were in critical condition.

Wallace said the plane's fuel lines ruptured on impact, starting what he said was a small fire that flames up to 25 feet in the air because it ignited smoke grenades and flares used on the mission, Wallace said. Troops were able to get out before the fire reached the flares and grenades that "went bananas," Wallace said.

The C-130 was attached to the 463rd Tactical Aircraft Wing at Dyess Air Force Base near Abilene, Texas. It was taking part in training involving the Army's 9th Infantry Division from Ft. Lewis, Wash. to simulate Air Force-Army airlifts.

Duarte is trying to save country

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Jose Napoleon Duarte, president of El Salvador's civilian-military junta, is a skilled politician who has been trying for nine months to save his war-torn little Central American country from both the left and the right.

Since he became president of the U.S.-backed junta in Dec. 1980, Duarte has persisted in a middle-of-the-road approach to the leftist-rightist conflict in which an estimated 32,000 people have died in two years.

If Duarte makes concessions to the left, he is accused of leaning toward communism, and rumors of an imminent military coup circulate.

If he makes a move to appease the powerful conservative oligarchs, the leftists accuse him of backing down on promised reforms, and guerrilla violence gains support.

"Either way he turns," one observer said recently, "Duarte will be going too far. He can only stay in power as long as he keeps walking a straight line."

Duarte, 56, is the founder of El Salvador's popular Christian Democrat Party. He was arrested in 1972 after making an unsuccessful bid of the Salvadoran presidency in what was later declared a fraudulent election.

Released with a badly beaten face, Duarte flew to exile in Venezuela and remained for seven years.

He returned to El Salvador after two moderate army colonels ousted Gen. Carlos Humberto Romero, the military president, in a coup on Oct. 15, 1979.

The colonels, Adolfo Arnoldo Majano and Jaime Abdul Gutierrez, added three civilians to their junta two days later, but the lineup changed frequently.

On March 10, 1980, Duarte joined the junta in a power shuffle. A subsequent power struggle between the two colonels led to a second shakeup in December, when Majano stepped down and Duarte assumed the presidency.

Duarte says he wants free elections to end the massive bloodshed in his country, a goal supported by the United States. The leftists, supported by Mexico and France as well as Cuba, Nicaragua and the Soviet Union, say they want a negotiated settlement to the civil war.

Duarte says he is willing to talk with leftist opposition leaders if they renounce violence and embrace his call for a democratic government.

He says he has dismissed 600 of the national guardsmen in the wake of charges government troops were helping right-wing "death squads" in their wholesale slaughter of civilians.

France inaugurates fastest train service

By PAUL TREUTHARDT
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — President Francois Mitterrand inaugurates the world's fastest train service tonight, riding alongside the engineer at 160 miles an hour.

French officials see it as the beginning of a new era of travel that could spread across Europe and cut into the airlines' business.

Mitterrand is making the 264-mile trip north from Lyon to Paris in one of the new TGVs, that being the acronym for "train a grande vitesse," or high speed train.

The public begins riding Sunday between Paris, Lyon, Geneva and major cities and towns in between. The eight cars in each train have 386 seats, though two trains can be coupled. With electric engines at each end, they cruise at 160 miles an hour — 30 mph faster than Japan's Bullets — when they hit the 187-mile stretch of special track that has been installed.

The TGV cuts the travel time from Paris to Lyon from 3 hours 48 minutes to 2 hours 40 and to Geneva from 5 hours 40 to 4 hours 20. The times will drop to 2 hours for the Paris-Lyon run and 3 hours 40 for Paris-Geneva in 1983 when the special track is laid all the way.

French railroad officials predict the TGV will take as much as 50 percent of the airlines' business between the cities it serves.

Though the train's cruising speed nears that of a racing car, it has a large safety factor. A standard model set the world speed record earlier this year at 236 mph, 76 mph faster than the regular operating speed, without damage to train or track.

The only increase in ticket prices for travel on the TGV is a 20 percent surcharge at peak hours, but even this is cheaper than air fares. Meals will be served at the seats or in a bar-restaurant car, where preview riders had no trouble standing and drinking while the train was making more than 150 mph.

The TGV project started in 1964 with plans for a gas-turbine engine, but electric power was adopted after the oil crisis. The cost for the Paris-Lyon track and 87 eight-car-two-engine units on order was budgeted at $1.5 billion at 1979 prices, the last figures released.

Squatters resist Berlin policemen

BERLIN (AP) — Police used clubs and tear gas today in an attempt to evict squatters from eight West Berlin buildings and were met at some points by resistance, authorities said.

A police spokesman said squatters and several hundred sympathizers threw up barricades at three buildings in the Schoeneberg district and hurled stones at the police. Resistance was lighter at five other buildings, the spokesman said.

The fighting was the city's worst since Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. visited the city Sept. 13 and a demonstration against the Reagan administration's defense policies ended in violence.

City officials had told the squatters to leave by midnight Sunday, and the announcement prompted several days of protests.

More than 100 buildings in the western sector of this divided city have been occupied by youths who claim they cannot find low-cost housing. Police have allowed many of the squatters to remain unless owners demand their eviction.

Woman celebrates her 115th birthday

Rosa Deramus

HOUSTON (AP) — Rosa Deramus says she has picked up to 400 pounds of cotton a day, outlived three ministers at her Baptist church and never got a Social Security card in her 115 years.

One hundred relatives whose ages spanned five generations gathered in her northeast Houston home Sunday to honor their matriarch with cakes, candles, flowers and hugs.

Those attending the festivities included 15 grandchildren, 50 great-grandchildren, five great-great-grandchildren and five great-great-great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Deramus was born in the tiny East Texas community of Timpson and lived there until 1979, when she moved to Houston.

LONDON (AP) — A visit by Prince Charles and Princess Diana to Australia and New Zealand in 1982 is being planned, but "nothing has been finalized," according to Buckingham Palace.

The formal trip is the first to be announced for the Prince and Princess of Wales, who were married July 29.

The Sun newspaper reported in today's editions that the visit might "melt the hearts of Aussies who dashed Prince Charles' hopes of becoming governor-general."

Charles, who received some of his schooling in Australia, reportedly wanted to take the post as the representative of his mother, Queen Elizabeth II, but opposition was expressed by Australians who wanted one of their countrymen for the job.

When Charles visited Australia last April, crowds chanted, "We want Di," but she remained in London, preparing for the wedding.

●

NEW YORK (AP) — David Brinkley, who retired last week after 38 years as a broadcast newsman with NBC, is joining ABC News, according to an ABC sports announcer.

Frank Gifford, during his commentary on ABC's "Monday Night Football" broadcast, made a reference to Brinkley's move and said "a formal announcement will be made" with other specifics today.

The network had said earlier it would have a "major" announcement today at a news conference here, but would not elaborate.

●

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — The host of the radio talk show found little disagreement with his caller. But time was getting short, and the host said he just had to move on to other people phoning in.

Even so, Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. was polite in telling his caller, former Vice President Walter Mondale, that he had to get to other blinking phones during the program on radio station KMJ.

Brown, in his second stint as a talk show host, mostly answered questions from callers and discussed questions on farming and pesticide use for several guests.

During his call, Mondale defended the Carter administration's farm policies and charged that the Reagan administration "put in place a fiscal program that guarantees deficits of $60 billion to $100 billion over the next several years ... That is going to be paid for by the highest real interest rates in American history."

●

NEW YORK (AP) — Former British Prime Minister Sir Harold Wilson says he finds President Reagan's performance "very impressive," and that "one feels over in Europe there is somebody in charge."

"I felt there was no free world leadership under the previous government," Wilson said at a news conference held Monday prior to the start of a national speaking tour.

"Having taken over the most difficult system of government in the free world," Wilson said, "he's doing in my opinion a very good job of it."

Wilson resigned as Labor prime minister in 1976. He was succeeded by James Callaghan, whose Laborites were defeated in a May 1979 general election by the Conservative Party under Margaret Thatcher.

Wilson had little to say about Mrs. Thatcher's government, but commented that "she'll have to expand" the economy.

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Author Alex Haley has dedicated a plaque in this old port where his ancestors arrived 214 years ago aboard an English slave ship.

The plaque was installed Monday at the city dock, where the author's forebear Kunta Kinte — made famous in Haley's "Roots," — arrived from West Africa. The plaque honors Kinte and other slaves who arrived at the port.

Gov. Harry Hughes said the ceremony "signifies the resolve of this state to reject those who...would cast us back into a dark chapter of history."

Haley told the crowd in a tiny park area at the head of the harbor that Annapolis citizens are saying, "this is what it was; go on from here."

Chisanbop seminar scheduled at MC

James Bramlett, director of Midland College Department of Community Services, announced a four-evening seminar on Chisanbop.

"This form of mathematics may be more commonly known as finger calculating," Bramlett said. "It's a fascinating method of figuring addition, multiplication and subtraction by the use of the hands."

Scheduled for 7-10 p.m. on Oct. 19, 21, 26 and 28, the seminar will be conducted by Sue Ashwood of the Region 18 Educational Service Center.

Ms. Ashwood will begin the seminar with a rationale and background of Chisanbop in the United States, and then introduce the actual techniques.

Each session includes a review stage and then progresses to more advanced calculation. By the end of session four, students practice three methods of multiplication, learn to find missing addends and discover the stage of manipulation most expedient and efficient.

"This may sound complicated," Bramlett said, "but the procedure is geared toward those who possess little or no math aptitude. Many individuals without mathematical ability have been able to master the Chisanbop method and apply it easily."

According to Bramlett, the seminar is suitable for students of all ages, and math teachers may find this an interesting means of instilling confidence in problem students.

Pre-registration for the seminar may be completed in room 156 of the Midland College Administration Building between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays, including the lunch hour. Fee is $18.

Met's opening unruly, disappointing

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The Metropolitan Opera on Monday had its most unruly opening night since moving to Lincoln Center in 1966.

Soprano Renata Scotto was not vocally adequate for the title role of "Norma," which she sang. She lacked the high notes and the coloratura facility.

There was turmoil in the audience, sometimes well-bred, sometimes ill-bred. When she made her appearance, walking forward slowly to orchestral music, a man in the balcony yelled, "Brava, Maria Callas." Norma was one of the late Miss Callas' famous roles.

Ushers chased down the hecklers, and burly security guards escorted two standees out of the house rather roughly.

Miss Scotto began the famous "Casta diva" aria soft and shakey, then went shrill with the first high note. The embellishment that she attempted was butchered. There was much booing at the end of the aria. There also was applause and shushing to quiet the booing.

Later, as Miss Scotto swooped through more coloratura attempts, there was laughing in the back of the first floor. The act two Norma-Adalgisa duet, "Mira, O Norma," started rather well then a high-note squeal was heard, accompanied by more laughter from upstairs. That note sounded as if it were by Tatiana Troyanos, who sang Adalgisa, and the laughs were decidely rude.

Between the two scenes of act one, there was an unusual hum, as if every couple in the Met was exchanging remarks. At the beginning of act two, conductor James Levine won his share of boos followed by some shushing. Customary curtain calls after act one were omitted.

Final curtain calls were brief and the audience exited rapidly. A voice proclaimed, "a disgraceful performance," after Miss Scotto's solo bow. She received applause with a smattering of boos.

Tenor Placido Domingo was in rich, shining voice. He has enough vocal weight to be just right for the part of Pollione, who first loved Norma, then switched to Adalgisa. He can put tenderness in his sound when he sings of love.

The part of Pollione is considered thankless. It is relatively small and usually fades into the background, as audiences concentrate on the two women. In this case, the part was much noticed and appreciated.

Miss Troyanos sang well, on balance, though she had a hard edge to her sound. She and the stern-sounding Miss Scotto didn't blend well at all in the first act and the second act was much better.

The "Norma" costumes were all new this year, and many changes were made in scenery and lighting. The two huge Stonehenge-type stones were still there, in different positions, in all scenes.

The sold-out evening, with the top ticket price $200, brought the Met a gross of $365,000, the largest since the opening of the building in 1966, when the top ticket price was higher. That night saw the world premiere of "Antony and Cleopatra," an opera that many did not like, on a stage with the turntable not functioning.

All five "Normas" in this fall's schedule are sold out. There will be two more in February. The opera will go on the spring tour.

The opening-night Met audience, as usual, spent its time before the opera and during intermission lining up along railings and stairways and walking around, looking at each other. This year, celebrities were few. Clothing ranged from traditional black tie and long gowns and trendy metallic and silk culottes with tiny cocktail hats to dressy streetwear or yellow cableneck sweaters worn with jeans.

Teachers' workshop to be held in Stanton

STANTON — The Annual Fall Workshop for District XVIII of the Texas Joint Council of Teachers of English will be held in Stanton for the first time this year.

According to John Stiles, the district's general chairman from Stanton High School, approximately 100 teachers of elementary, secondary, college and university levels are expected.

The workshop will begin with registration at 8:30 a.m. Saturday. Pat Mengwasser, TJCTE state president-elect will welcome participants, and John Frazee of The University of Texas of the Permian Basin will present the program.

Dr. Richard J. Murphy, Jr., assistant professor of English at Radford University in Radford, Va., will speak on the characteristics of the complete English teacher.

Dr. Earl C. Nance, assistant professor of sociology at UTPB, will give a sociologist's look at the profession and Dr. James Olson, UTPB associate professor and chairman of the psychology department will discuss coping with stress.

District XVIII includes Midland, Andrews, Borden, Crane, Dawson, Ector, Gaines, Glasscock, Howard, Loving, Martin, Reagan, Upton, Ward and Winkler counties.

The seminar will take place at Stanton High School and two coffee breaks and lunch will be provided.

Airline denies attendant crushed to death

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — World Airways is disputing a Federal Aviation Administration claim that a 24-year-old flight attendant who died during a trans-Atlantic flight on a DC-10 jet was crushed to death by a malfunctioning elevator.

Airline spokesman Michael D. Henderson said Monday that a preliminary autopsy report from London indicated that Karen Williams, a former Miss Oakland, died Sunday of a cardiac arrest and that there was no damage to her internal organs.

Wallace Emory, chief of the FAA's office in Frankfurt, West Germany, had said in a telephone interview that Ms. Williams died of a crushed chest in one of two elevators connecting the main deck and a galley where food is prepared.

In Washington, the National Transportation Safety Board said "preliminary information" indicated Ms. Williams suffered fatal injuries when she became stuck between the top of a service cart and the top of an elevator doorway as she tried to remove the cart.

Ira Furman, a board spokesman, did not reply when asked if the board was aware of the airline's announcement.

Told of the findings, he said what the airline called a "minor degree of asphyxiation" was "not inconsistent" with the board's announcement and he said he would express no opinion on the validity of the autopsy report.

Ms. Williams died aboard World Airways Flight 32 about an hour before landing Sunday at Gatwick Airport south of London. The flight originated from Baltimore-Washington International Airport.

Henderson said officials of the Oakland-based airline did not yet know all the circumstances of Miss Williams' death. He said the autopsy report would be released today in London.

"It doesn't really make sense," said Emory. "The elevator should not operate with the door open. There are a lot of unanswered questions."

Henderson said Ms. Williams was working alone, loading food trays, when "one of the flight attendants in the upper galley heard a yell."

Two doctors among the passengers attended Ms. Williams, Henderson said.

Jury deliberations delay Layton trial

By LISA LEVITT
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jury deliberations in the murder conspiracy trial of former Peoples Temple cult member Larry Layton has been delayed, possibly until Wednesday, because three jurors have come down with the flu.

U.S. District Court Judge Robert Peckham stopped deliberations Monday and ordered the jurors back to the hotel, where they are sequestered, after the three got sick. He said he would check with the ill members to see if perhaps they could meet again as early as this afternoon.

"They appear to have the virus that's been going around this building. Hopefully they will be able to commence after a brief period of rest," the judge said.

Deliberations began late Thursday and have run off and on since then, totaling more than 19 hours.

Layton, 35, is charged with conspiracy to murder Rep. Leo Ryan, D-Calif., and U.S. diplomat Richard Dwyer; and aiding and abetting in Ryan's murder and the attempted murder of Dwyer. He faces a maximum penalty of life in prison if convicted.

Ryan, three journalists and a temple defector died Nov. 18, 1978 in a storm of bullets at a remote jungle airstrip outside the cult's Jonestown, Guyana settlement. Dwyer was wounded in the ambush.

Within hours, the Rev. Jim Jones and 912 cult followers carried out a mass suicide-murder ritual at their encampment.

Government lawyers contend Layton led the ambush.

Layton's lawyers argued that he posed as a defector and went to the airstrip on a suicide mission to kill himself and the other temple members who had decided to leave Jonestown, but he knew nothing of a larger plot hatched by Jones and his lieutenants to kill Ryan.

The jury asked during a Saturday session to review videotapes of the Ryan party's visit to Jonestown before the ambush and to hear a reading of testimony from Ryan aide Jackie Speier.

Ms. Speier, severely wounded in the airstrip attack, was the prosecution's first witness in its three-week presentation. Layton's lawyers, saying the government had failed to prove its case, never called a witness, relying instead on cross-examination and a five-hour final argument by Layton lawyer Tony Tamburello.

Aerial search results in death of investigator

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas (AP) — An aerial search in a borrowed helicopter resulted in the death of a sheriff's investigator when the aircraft crashed, while the two burglary suspects who prompted the search were apprehended by officers on foot.

Federal Aviation Administration investigators today will inspect the site of the helicopter crash that claimed the life of a Comal County sheriff's investigator Ed Murphy, said Texas Ranger Ray Martinez.

Murphy died when the helicopter, borrowed by the sheriff's department from a suburban bank to search for a pair of suspected burglars, hit a pair of high-voltage electric lines as it was taking off Monday near Canyon Lake in Comal County, about 15 miles west of San Marcos, said Comal County Deputy Steve Stapleton.

There was no fire but witnesses told Stapleton the helicopter was flattened by the impact. The pilot, Billy B. Swartzell, is hospitalized at Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio.

A resident of Canyon Lake Forest, a subdivision built on the lake, had reported a burglary and the sheriff's department asked Ken Rice, president of Canyon Lake Bank, for the use of Rice's helicopter to assist in the search, Stapleton said.

Student career group launched

The Uptown Business and Professional Women's Club has sponsored two high school Nike Clubs in Midland. The program is designed to give high school students an opportunity to develop leadership qualities and obtain information on career opportunities which will enable them to choose their work commitment intelligently. Each Club receives the benefit of BPW interest, support and guidance.

The proposed Nike programs scheduled include monthly meetings, analyzing career requirements, and selecting the right college and scholarship information. Other programs will be selected by the individual clubs dependent upon their interest and needs.

Many students graduate from high school and want to know what college is really like. Some of the Uptown young careerist members will be able to assist these young students. The Uptown club is also organizing a Visitation Program to be chaired by Katie Dennedy. This will enable any young student interested in a specific career to observe on-the-job experiences with a B&PW member.

Lee High Nike officers recently elected are Janice Anderson, president; Mary Jo Graves, vice president and Trudy Mason, secretary treasurer. Midland High Nike officers elected are June Adams, president; Leslie Kennedy, vice president; Mona Carroll, secretary and Belinda Adams, treasurer.

The Nike Clubs held a joint chartering July 16. Elena Phelps, Nike chairman and Pam Feist, Uptown president, presented the charters. Bobbie Chesley, District 8 BPW director from Andrews, installed the officers.

Each Nike Club has a high school faculty advisor-sponsor who acts as a liason with the Uptown Club to be sure the Nike Club functions within the policies of the high school. Midland High faculty co-sponsors are Kristi Stewart and Karen Newson. Lee High faculty sponsors are Decimae Dennis, Sarneva Savage and Cynthia Savage.

Any high school student can join the Nike Club. Monthly meetings will be held at the schools. Students wishing more information should contact their high school sponsor or Elena Phelps, Nike chairman at 685-1727.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

When plastic gets sticky

DEAR HELOISE:
I have a problem, a dilemma, a snare;
That causes me to pull out my hair.
The reason for this dismay and despair?
The stickiness of my plastic ware! — Stuck up in Lubbock

+ + +

I checked with the local representative of a nationally known distributor of this type of plastic (storage bowls, containers, tumblers, etc.), who said storage played a very important role in keeping the plastic clean and dry.

Don't store plastics over a stove or near one. The fumes and heat penetrate the cabinets and adhere to the plastic, causing a filmy, sticky coating that's hard to remove — just like what gets on the range hood, etc. Yuck! Store them in a lower cabinet.

She said to wash plastic wear often so this film isn't allowed to build up. Frequent use and washing in hot, sudsy water will eliminate any sticky feeling.

Hope this leaves you "unstuck" in Lubbock. — Heloise

BABY'S BLANKET

Dear Heloise: Keep an old receiving blanket under your toddler's car seat. It can be used for many different things.

In the winter, wrap it around your little one's legs after he's buckled in to keep him nice and warm until the heater warms up.

In summer, spread it over the car seat when leaving your car in a parking lot or other unshaded area. Sun beating down on vinyl can leave it hot enough to cause a serious burn on baby's tender skin.

After removing the blanket from baby's car seat, place it over yours before getting behind the wheel. You have tender skin too.

Keeping it folded under the baby's car seat when it's not in use will minimize the damage done to your car's upholstry by the car seat's metal legs. — Cindy

EASY TOUCHUPS

Dear Heloise: Whenever I repaint a room, I fill a clean, empty fingernail polish bottle with some of the paint for touchups.

This is very helpful for touching up a scratch or nick when hanging a picture, etc.

Just be sure to label the bottle by color code or room. I have several shades of green and it could become confusing. — G.K.

SMELLY PROBLEM

Dear Heloise: I purchased some fabric to make a dress. After the dress was completed and I was pressing the fabric, I noticed a peculiar odor.

I took a sample of the material and washed it, thinking this would take care of the smell. I was sadly mistaken and wonder if you have any idea what I could treat it with.

I'm afraid to wear the dress, as I'm so conscious of the odor. — Theresa Pint

+ + +

Strange how some manmade fabrics retain such a peculiar odor. You might try washing the garment again, adding a little ammonia (a blub, glub) to the wash water this time.

Ammonia has removed strange smells from garments for me, so maybe it will for you. — Heloise

NO MORE TEARS

Dear Heloise: I always had a big fight and lots of tears when it came time to wash my small son's hair.

Not having enough counter space at the sink to lay him down, I came up with a great idea. I just set my adjustable ironing board up at the sink, attach a hose with sprayer to the faucet, and wash away. No water or soap in his eyes!

Just be sure to hang onto that little person so he won't fall off because that ironing board is pretty narrow. — Sue Hirsch

Fueling procedure to begin at Diablo

By STEPHEN FOX
Associated Press Writer

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — Operators of the Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant say they will ignore protesters and "immediately" start preparing the reactor to receive fuel in hopes of starting it up within two weeks.

A federal decision Monday to allow Pacific Gas & Electric to begin loading and low-power testing of the plant sparked renewed pledges of opposition from the Abalone Alliance, a coalition of some 60 anti-nuclear groups. The alliance's attempt to blockade the plant and prevent the fuel loading has resulted in 1,365 arrests in seven days of land and sea assaults on the site. On Monday, 368 people were arrested.

Shortly after the decision by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., a foe of the Diablo plant, filed a petition in federal court to reverse the NRC decision. Brown's petition said the commission "has not satisfactorily resolved the outstanding questions of seismic safety, security, emergency preparedness and Three Mile Island-related safety matters."

The alliance objects to nuclear power as unsafe and says the Diablo plant is particularly dangerous because it is built near an earthquake fault line.

Carl Zichella, a spokesman for the alliance, said of the federal decision, "If there's any change, it's just more determination. We are going to do everything possible to stop this plant before nature does it for us."

Several hundred protesters remained at the site late Monday, their ranks thinned by the many arrests. The blockade had gotten under way early in the day with demonstrators partially blocking Avila Road, which goes past the plant's main gate.

As a mile-long convoy of buses loaded with PG&E workers rolled by, deputies used choke holds on demonstrators to clear the path. No injuries were reported. The demonstrators have had little success with the blockade since the first, day when workers had to be carried out of the plant in helicopters.

Undersheriff Arnie Goble said his men moved into the rugged terrain around the plant to flush protesters out of the wooded areas, where the demonstrators could gain access to the facility's outer fence.

The rising arrest totals brought the Diablo protest near the 1,414 arrests during a May 1977 demonstration at a nuclear plant in Seabrook, N.H.

Despite alliance requirements that protesters undergo eight hours of training in non-violence, San Luis Obispo County sheriff's Sgt. Leon Cole said one of Monday's arrests involved a man carrying "a fully loaded .38 automatic pistol."

Sheriff's officials identified the man as Douglas Winchel, 25, of Vista. An alliance spokesman said Winchel was protesting, but insisted, "He is not one of our people.... He was just hanging out."

Despite the protests, PG&E spokesman Dick Davin said the utility would "immediately" begin the process of preparing the reactor to receive its nuclear fuel.

The NRC's decision will allow PG&E to bring Unit 1 of the $2.3 billion Diablo facility up to 5 percent of capacity. Unit 2 of the twin-reactor plant is not scheduled to be completed for about eight months. Work on the site, on the rugged central California coast midway between Los Angeles and San Francisco, began in 1968.

PG&E officials said the plant would not begin producing electricity before next year.

Board members gave conflicting opinions about chances for the plant to receive permission to operate at full power.

The Rev. Cecil Williams, of San Francisco's Glide Memorial United Methodist Church, is arrested Monday during the continuing blockade at the Diablo Canyon Nuclear Power Plant near San Luis Opisbo, Calif. Hundreds of Abalone Alliance protesters cheered Williams as he addressed the group then saw him led away by police after he and some 30 others refused to clear the way for busloads of workers leaving the facility.

David, the Houston "bubble boy," Monday celebrated his 10th birthday. Here he is seen in a 1978 file photo.

Houston 'bubble boy' spending more time away from hospital

By SHARON HERBAUGH
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — For the first time since his birth 10 years ago, David is spending most of his time at home in a plastic, sterile "bubble" that shields him from disease-causing bacteria.

David, whose last name has never been released at his parents' request, was born without immunity to disease. His body lacks the crucial cells that ward off infection and others that produce antibodies that fight off invading bacteria.

Until this summer, David had spent two weeks at the Texas Children's Hospital and four weeks at home with his parents as part of his annual six-week sojourn away from Baylor University Medical Center.

But Dr. William T. Shearer, David's physician and a professor of immunology at Baylor, has altered the routine to allow the boy to spend more time at home. Shearer said David now spends two weeks at the hospital each year undergoing a battery of tests while his protective "bubble" is being cleaned.

"We feel family life is very important to David's growth and development. At home, David can experience the roles of son, brother and schoolboy, not just a patient in a hospital," Shearer said.

The dark-haired, brown-eyed youngster has lived longer than any of the other 69 known victims of this rare disease that afflicts males.

The notariety attached to his case has caused him to be anxious, so much so that he refuses to be photographed.

Monday — David's 10th birthday — was different from those that preceded it. Although he remained confined to the three-compartment "bubble" where he has been since his birth, he celebrated the occasion at home with his favorite chocolate cake and the latest Star Wars toys from his parents, his 13-year-old sister Katherine and other relatives and close family friends.

But the festivities were tempered by the fact that there is no guaranteed cure that can free David from his bubble.

"There are bone marrow transplants, fetal thymus and fetal liver transplants, but all of those are considered to have somewhat of a high risk. So David's parents have decided that since none of these treatments are risk-free, they will wait and hope that a cure can be found," said Kaylen Fry of the Baylor College of Medicine. The Baylor institution is reponsible for David's care.

Before his birth, doctors determined there was a 50 percent chance that David would be born with severe combined immune deficiency. At the time, he was one of two infants in the United States to be delivered into a totally sterile environment and placed immediately in an isolator, or bubble.

David's mother also said she wanted her son at home in order to provide him with religious training. David was baptized after he was placed in his bubble and will take his first Holy Communion this week.

"One of the reasons we wanted David at home with us was to give him religious training, to share our faith with him. He is our son and this is where he belongs," his mother said.

Like all the toys, clothes, food and other items that enter the bubble, the communion wafer will be irradiated at the hospital and placed in a sterile cylinder before it is consecrated.

Despite his handicap, doctors said, David is growing up like any other boy his age. He soon will be using a telephone hook-up with his fourth grade class that will allow him to participate in spelling bees, read aloud and ask questions. He also will be visited each week by his classmates and receives instruction from a private tutor twice a week.

David has told doctors his favorite subject is math, and he has shown interest in space, having assembled a miniature solar system fashioned out of string and marbles.

He has displayed a talent for art, drawing the characters featured in the "Flintstone" cartoon series to perfection, and is a whiz at the video game "Odyssey," a hospital spokeswoman said.

"He was even in love with Wonder Woman once, but I think he's finally outgrown that," said Hazel Havey, a spokeswoman at St. Lukes' Hospital, part of the Texas Children's Hospital complex where David was born.

Des Moines paper begins TV news

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The Des Moines Register and Tribune Co. has begun regularly scheduled news broadcasts from its newsroom in what the newspaper company says is a first for cable television.

The service, to about 42,000 television viewers, debuted when veteran newsman Jerry Szumski led off the broadcast Monday with an item about a downtown jewelry heist.

Saying the move is "very definitely a way to use our staff more efficiently," Mike Wegner of the newspaper's corporate staff added it is a step toward electronic home newspaper delivery.

Many newspapers across the nation transmit news and advertising over cable channels, and providing locally oriented programming isn't unique. But officials of the Des Moines newspaper say they are the first to originate regularly scheduled newscasts from a newspaper newsroom.

The broadcasts are being carried over the Heritage Cablevision system during two-minute hourly "windows" on the Atlanta-based Cable News Network. Those breaks are provided by CNN for cable systems to provide local programming.

The Register and Tribune broadcasts will be one minute, with the other 60 seconds sold as advertising. The newspaper company and Heritage Cablevision company will divide revenue from advertising sales.

Wegner said officials hope to eventually expand past the one-minute broadcast, though "I don't see us competing at all with commercial television."

The Mason City (Iowa) Globe-Gazette has been using two cable channels for several years, one for 24-hour news display and the other for intermittent local programming.

The local programming orginates in a studio constructed in the newspaper's composing room, said Publisher Gerald Moriarity.

Those broadcasts are delivered through a cable system also owned by Heritage to more than 6,000 subscribers.

"The response has been very favorable," Moriarity said, adding the newspaper has plans to increase broadcasts to about four hours a day.

Prior to the work in Mason City, Moriarity had launched a similar effort at the Ottumwa (Iowa) Courier, with another system operated by Heritage.

In Arizona, the Yuma Daily Sun has assembled a four-channel newscable operation, with one channel for local news, community bulletin boards and other local information. The additional channels have news from The Associated Press and Reuters, as well as classified advertisements.

How Young Millionaires Trade Commodities.

What separates successful commodity traders from the unsuccessful? To work out an authoritative, useful answer, Merrill J. Oster of Commodities magazine went directly to young millionaire traders on various commodity exchanges. These interviews were distilled into 50 clear, concise "rules", then carefully edited into a booklet of unique value to any trader-either experienced or a beginner. Of course, no one can guarantee your success in a commodity trade, but Shearson believes this information is "must" reading. Some of the points it covers are:

- Why are emoitions a trader's worst enemy?
- Should you follow the crowd...or ignore it?
- How can you spot upside breakouts? Downside breakouts?
- When is a bull market a danger sign?
- How can you recognize the start of a bull...or bear...market?
- When is open interest a signal to buy? To sell?

Whether you are already a trader, or thinking of becoming one, this booklet is must reading. For your free copy, just mail the coupon, or call (915) 683-5101. Texas residents, call (800) 592-4663.

Former rock star now home video king

LOS ANGELES (AP) — How does a former TV rock star become a founding father of the home video revolution?

"The same way a former 12-year-old becomes a 20-year-old," says Mike Nesmith, the former Monkee whose now-bearded face can be seen down on the Sunset Strip from a billboard touting his latest creation, not to say passion: a video record called "Michael Nesmith in Elephant Parts."

In the last year videodiscs and videocassettes have became part of the national vocabulary, thanks mostly to a series of Hollywood labor disputes in which these home video products were routinely described as the future of the industry.

But at Nesmith's Pacific Arts Corp. in Carmel, Calif., the future is now — and has been for some time. There are more than 2,000 cassettes out now of "Elephant Parts," an hour's worth of beautifully produced music videos and comedy sketches that can be enjoyed either all at once or piecemeal — much the way you might listen to favorite cuts on an audio album.

Audio albums, in fact, remained Nesmith's business for sometime after the Monkees took the last train to Clarksville back in 1968. But he lost his heart to video shortly after a 1970 encounter with an early version of the videodisc player.

"I thought, 'My gosh, the potential for this artistically is just staggering. I just really want to get into it.'

"But I couldn't do anything about it. There wasn't enough of the technology available at the time that made it even accessible, much less a real business."

Cut to 1976. Nesmith had recorded a ballad called "Rio" and was asked by his European record company to make a clip or video. Television was already a common vehicle for promoting records abroad, but the videos in those days were simply tapes of the musicians performing.

"They assumed that was what I was going to do, but I didn't," Nesmith said. Instead, he enlisted a director friend, Bill Dear, and went ahead with his idea of what music video could be.

Nesmith's basic premise — revolutionary at the time — was that "the images did not have to necessarily literally portray what you were singing about, but should satisfy a craving for a visual image with the music. What I was essentially doing was using the visuals to score music rather than the music to score the visuals."

The result, a dreamy fantasy featuring Nesmith sailing through a starry sky arm-in-arm with two Carmen Miranda-like dancers, astounded the record company executives.

"Everybody stood up in the room and cheered," he recalls. The segment — which is included in "Elephant Parts" — cost about $25,000 and it was only later that Nesmith learned the company was only going to give him $10,000.

"I didn't even ask them how much would I have to spend," he says. But he wasn't the least bit upset: "To me it was the catalyst that kind of pushed me over the edge. Creatively, it was worth hundreds of times that money."

Backed by the video, "Rio" became a No. 1 hit in Australia even though it got no radio airplay. It and a follow-up, "Cruising," also launched Nesmith as a top rock video producer, both for his own tunes and for other performers.

His videos appeared on "Saturday Night Live," "Fridays," "Good Morning America" and various cable networks.

Swit says it is time to move on

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — When hit TV series start to wind down, their stars often turn up in two-hour pilots. That's the way it seems with Loretta and "Cagney and Lacey," a CBS movie on Oct. 8.

Miss Swit stars with Tyne Daley as police officers fighting male chauvinism as well as crime. A natural for a series: crime, action, bizarre characters, feminist angle.

"Maybe 'Cagney and Lacey' could make it as a series, but not with me," says Miss Swit, now in her

10th year as the short-fused Margaret "Hot Lips" Houlihan in "MASH."

"I'm not sure how the scripts could be sustained in quality as a series. Besides, I want to start playing different characters, not the same one week after week."

Miss Swit rejoins "MASH" on Oct. 12, and she vows that this season will be her last.

"It's up to CBS and Fox whether the series will continue, but I'll be leaving," she said. "I could have left at the end of the 1975-76 season, but I was seduced by the material and seduced by the people. Alan (Alda) is simply the greatest, and I'm desperately in love with Harry Morgan, despite his wife.

"It's very seductive to stay on after 10 years of marvelous scripts and the most congenial of people. But, my word, it's time to move on."

While "Cagney and Lacey" may not lead to another series, the television movie affords another, more serious side of Loretta Swit.

Opening lead: Ten of ♡.

Use of the trump suit to prevent the opponents from running their long suit is a common occurrence. But there are other and more elegant ways of utilizing trumps, especially dummy's.

South showed his power by jump-shifting at his second turn. Though North did no more than take a preference, South's hand was good enough for one more try. When his club cue-bid evoked no enthusiasm from his partner, South wisely subsided in game.

After the lead of the ten of hearts, even that contract was by no means secure. If he could not get to dummy, declarer would have to lose a trump, two diamonds and a club. One loser would disappear if either defender had a singleton king of trumps, but that was greatly against the odds. However, declarer was able to manipulate dummy's trumps in such a way that he could guarantee the contract if East held one of the two missing diamond honors—about a 3-to-1 chance.

Declarer won the ace of hearts and gave up on trying to drop the king of trumps. Instead, he led a low trump to the eight. East won the king (it would make no difference if held up) and returned a heart. Declarer ruffed, entered dummy with the ten of trumps and ran the eight of diamonds. West took the king and shifted to a club. Declarer covered with the queen from dummy and won East's king with the ace. He crossed to the queen of trumps, in the process drawing East's last trump, and led the jack of diamonds. Whether or not East covered, declarer would be able to bring in the rest of the diamonds, which limited his losers to one trick in each suit except for hearts.

There are two points in the play worthy of note. Declarer was likely to fail if he tried to drop a singleton king of trumps by first playing the ace, for then he would have only one entry to the table. Also, had declarer led the jack of diamonds the first time he tackled the suit, instead of the eight, East would have to score the queen for a one-trick set because declarer would be forced to win the second diamond finesse in his hand.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Rookie of the Year—1951. Most Valuable Player—1954 and 1965. Most home runs for the year—not once, twice or even three times. But four times. And finally, the number three all-time home run hitter.

Accomplishments like these have gotten Willie Mays into baseball's Hall of Fame.

But newspapers had a lot to do with getting him into America's hearts and minds.

Baseball star, Willie Mays, tries to get a peek at an article about himself. Taken from one of our current TV commercials.

Newspapers nicknamed him the "say hey kid," from his favorite expression. Remember reading about the time he played so hard in the heat, he passed out at Crosley Field? And how about the pictures of him making spectacular catches over his shoulder?

We at Hearst are proud to have had a small part in spreading Willie's fame.

We're in the newspaper business. We publish 13 of them, coast to coast. From the Midland Reporter Telegram to Albany's Times Union and The Knickerbocker News.

But Hearst is a total communications company. We also publish 20 magazines like Good Housekeeping and Cosmopolitan. We're in business publications. And we distribute magazines in 30 countries, in 8 languages.

We publish countless books. Best sellers from Arbor House like "Come Pour the Wine" and from William Morrow like "Rage of Angels." And "The Thorn Birds" and "Ashes in the Wind" from Avon.

We operate 3 television stations and 7 radio stations in major markets like Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Milwaukee. We're even launching cable TV networks.

King Features, home of "Popeye" and "Blondie," is Hearst too. And that's not to mention other industries we're involved in. Like forest products, ranching and real estate.

But basically, if you can read it, watch it or hear it, chances are Hearst is involved in it. We inform you, entertain you, challenge you.

And every day our newspapers bring you the most vocal sports coverage. On a printed page.

Trojans in football hot seat

By The Associated Press

For the third week in a row college football has a new No.1 team.

The Trojans of Southern California replaced Notre Dame at the top of The Associated Press poll today, setting up a 1-2 shootout with runnerup Oklahoma on Saturday in Los Angeles.

Michigan, the preseason leader, was bumped from the top after losing to Wisconsin on Sept.12. And the Wolverines in turn bounced Notre Dame out by trouncing the Irish 25-7 this past weekend.

THAT OPENED the way for Southern Cal and Oklahoma, last week's No.2-3 teams, to move up. USC, a 21-0 winner over Indiana, received 46 of 65 first-place votes and 1,258 of a possible 1,300 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Oklahoma, idle over the weekend, received 15 first-place ballots and 1,203 points. The Sooners return to action against Southern Cal Saturday afternoon in the Los Angeles Coliseum.

Meanwhile, Notre Dame skidded from first place to 13th, while Michigan climbed back into the Top 10, jumping from 11th to seventh. The Wolverines also received a first-place ballot.

Georgia's defending national champions were defeated by Clemson 13-3, ending a 15-game winning streak, and fell from fourth to 17th, while Clemson made the Top Twenty for the first time this season.

PENN STATE, idle last weekend, rose from fifth to third with two first-place votes and 1,092 points, while Texas, a 23-10 victor over North Texas State, jumped from sixth to fourth with one first-place vote and 1,038 points.

Pitt went from seventh to fifth with 978 points following a 38-7 rout of Cincinnati and UCLA vaulted from ninth to sixth with 912 points after trimming Wisconsin 31-13.

Next came Michigan with 903 points, followed by Ohio State with 832, North Carolina with 806 and Alabama with 556. Ohio State, also No.8 last week, beat Michigan State 27-13; North Carolina, up from 10th, crushed Miami of Ohio 49-7 and Alabama, No.12 a week ago, turned back Kentucky 19-10.

THE SCCOND Ten consists of Brigham Young, Mississippi State, Notre Dame, Miami of Florida, Nebraska, Washington, Georgia, Arizona State, Clemson and Southern Methodist. This week also marks the first 1981 appearance for SMU, which walloped Grambling State 59-27.

Taylor, Giants dump Saints, Rogers in first matchup

By The Associated Press

They moved foward, toward each other, tentatively at first. As they came within a yard of each other, forearms were raised. As the arms, at eye-level, made contact, they flailed at each other for a moment.

"Gonna mess you up, pal," said one. "Gonna fix you." And he smiled.

"No way, man," said the other. "Gonna do a job on you." And he smiled back. Then the flailing stopped and they strode, shoulder to shoulder, chatting amiably for a minute or two.

No.1, meet No.2.

IT HAPPENED outside the New York Giants' locker room last Sunday. George Rogers, the No.1 pick in last April's National Football League draft, the "franchise" runner Coach Bum Phillips is counting on to turn New Orleans into a winner, had taken a brief detour out of the Saints' locker room on the way to the team bus. He wanted to say hello to fellow millionaire Lawrence Taylor, the Giants' No.1 choice (No.2 in the draft), their newest star linebacker in a platoon of star linebackers.

They've met before. When Rogers was building a reputation at South Carolina that would culminate in his selection as the winner of the Heisman Trophy, emblematic of the best player in college football, he ran into Taylor, who was starring at North Carolina, developing into what many pro scouts would call the "best available athlete" in the 1981 draft.

The result of that meeting, when they were juniors: it was the last time as a collegian that Rogers failed to rush for 100 yards.

Things don't change much.

Last Sunday, before they met on the concrete runway under the stands at Giants Stadium, they met on the field.

THE WINNER: Taylor. That was Rogers' assessment.

"Yeah, I guess he won the battle this time. Look at the scoreboard." It read: Giants 20, Saints 7. And on the stat sheet, it read: Rogers, 20 carries, 75 yards, no touchdowns, one fumble.

Here's another Rogers assessment: "I had a pretty bad game ... I played lousy."

"I don't think I'm a one-man team by any means. We've got other guys around here that I wish people would talk to. They're the ones who make me go," said Rogers, who would prefer, as impossible at it may be, to fade into the background. He'd rather be treated not like the superstar the Saints hope he'll become but like, say, Jack Holmes, the guy whose job is to open the holes through which Rogers steps.

"Taylor didn't hit me but two or three times today, but I felt him," said Rogers. "He's good. Mighty good. And not just him. They've got a lot of good players on that defense."

Dallas ropes Patriots

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Step aside, Earl. Touchdown Tony is on the loose — and so are the rest of the Dallas Cowboys.

Tony Dorsett, off to the best start of his five-year career in the National Football League, is literally and figuratively running away from three-time rushing champion Earl Campbell of the Houston Oilers and any other challengers he may face.

SO WHAT? he says.

"Leading the league in rushing is fine (he has 423 yards now), but going into the 16th game is when it'll mean something. Right now it means nothing. That's no goal of mine, to lead the NFL in rushing. I just want to be consistent, game in and game out," he says.

Which is what he has been, more so this season than any other.

Which in turn is why the Cowboys are 3-0 three games into the season, and one reason why the New England Patriots, who had hoped to break out of an early-season slump, lost 35-21 Monday night and are 0-3.

Dorsett's 132 yards and 129 yards in his first two games were merely a prelude to the 162 yards he amassed against the Patriots, 75 of them on a second-quarter touchdown run. His total was 54 yards more than the entire New England ground game managed ... and the Patriots had three more carries than Dorsett's 19.

All that yardage was gained before he came limping off the field with about nine minutes to play and the outcome still somewhat in doubt (Dallas led 29-21). He was thrown for a 1-yard loss on his last play of the game. "I twisted the heck out of my right ankle — and when I fell down a guy kneed me in the ribs," he said. "I'm real sore, but I think I can play Sunday" against the New York Giants.

Defensively, the Cowboys pretty much closed down the New England rushing attack (Mosi Tatupu had 63 of their 108 yards). But they permitted Matt Cavanaugh, starting in place of erratic Steve Grogan, plenty of time to search out and find receivers.

Unfortunately for the Pats, four times he found Dallas receivers for interceptions — one in the first period preceding the Cowboys' opening touchdown (Danny White's 28-yard pass to leaping Butch Johnson) and three in the final quarter, two of them leading to Rafael Septien field goals.

The Patriots also fumbled the ball away three times. One was harmless. But a second one, coming the instant Andy Johnson had caught a pass at the Dallas 2-yard line, cost them a shot ata go-ahead touchdown or tying field goal just before halftime. And the third, by Roland James on a Dallas punt, paved the way to White's other touchdown pass, a 1-yarder on a rollout to a wide-open Billy Joe DuPree midway in the third period, the score that put the Cowboys on top 24-21.

Ron Erhardt, the Patriots' coach, was dismayed and infuriated, not so much by the Patriots' mistakes, but by the penalties called against them. All five came in the second half, for 38 yards. One was a holding call which wiped out a 29-yard pass which would have put them near midfield. Instead, the flag pushed them within 7 yards of their own goal line and, on the succeeding play, Cavanaugh, under intense pressure in the end zone, threw the ball away, an intentional grounding penalty resulting in a safety.

ERHARDT, SPICING his complaints with epithets, came very close to saying the Patriots are somehow picked on by the officials. "They threw the ball all night and didn't get called for holding once," he said of the Cowboys. "I'm tired of that always happening to the Patriots. It's always against our side ... It seems every time we got a key play, it got called back."

The Patriots touchdowns came on runs of 4 yards by Don Calhoun in the first quarter, 3 yards by rookie Tony Collins in the second and 38 yards by Tatupu to put them ahead briefly 21-17 in the third.

New England will now have to face the Pittsburgh Steelers, who erupted on Sunday for a 38-10 victory against the New York Jets, the American Conference's other 0-3 team (Washington is the only one in the National Conference).

Erhardt, of course, isn't about to write off this season just yet.

"We're still very much in control of our own destiny," he said in the muted New England locker room. "Sure, we've lost three games, but only one to a team in our division (Baltimore, in the AFC East). We still have seven more with the people we have to beat to get to the top."

Midland High, Lee face stern volleyball tests

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

Midland Lee and Midland High will be looking to stay in the thick of the District 5-5A volleyball race tonight. MHS will be playing on the home floor while Lee will be on the road as the district race heats up heading into the third game of the campaign.

The Purple Pack will host Abilene with the junior varsity to tip off at 6 p.m. with the varsity to follow at 7 p.m.

Coach Linda Jolly's crew opened the season with a victory last Tuesday over Odessa Permian but ran afoul of some rough and tumble Steers Thursday in Big Spring. With a 1-1 district mark, the Pack is one game behind Big Spring and San Angelo.

Abilene brings a 1-1 record into tonight's clash. The victor will stay nipping at the heels of the district leaders, while the loser will be on the outside looking in for the first-half district crown.

Janice Baulch's Rebel squad gained momentum for the district race over the weekend as Lee marched through the field undefeated to capture the Denver City tournament title. Lee won four contests in bringing home its first tournament crown of the year.

The Rebels will be facing a stern test tonight. Lee travels to Abilene to tangle with the Cougars of Abilene Cooper. Cooper, like the Rebs, is 1-1 in district action. Action gets underway at 6 .m. with the junior varsity clash followed by the varsity meeting at 7 p.m.

MTC net meet slated to start Oct.3

The Midland Tennis Club will conduct its 21st annual Fall Tournament Oct. 3 through Oct. 11 and for the second year, the event will be part of the United States Tennis Association/Penn Circuit.

The USTA/Penn Circuit provides young players the opportunity to qualify for the tennis big leagues, the Grand Prix Tour, a world-wide chain of tournaments with links at Wimbledon and the U.S. Open.

Play will begin Oct. 3 with a men's open qualifying tournament. Sixteen survivors will join the 48 internationally ranked players from the circuit for play in the main tournament, which begins Oct. 6 and continues through Oct. 11.

Although the tournament's early matches will be at Midland High Tennis Courts, the finals will be at the Midland Racquet Club, the second year the RC stadium will be the scene of the finals.

The Main tournament will be composed of singles and doubles.

The circuit features many of the higher ranked pro and amateur players in the world and they will be competing for a share of the $7,500 in prize money, but equally as important, they also will be competing for Grand Prix qualifying points.

Brian Gottfried, Dick Stockton and Bill Scanlon are past participants in the tournament and now are world-ranked players.

Last year's winner, Marty Davis, upset No. 10 seeded Brian Teacher in the recent U.S. Open at Flushing Meadows, N.Y. Davis and partner Chris dunk also made it to the round of 16 in the doubles at Wimbledon this year.

Before the introduction of the USTA/Penn Circuit last year, the Midland Invitational was a college dominated event in which many of the top tennis powers in the southwest sent teams and high-ranked individuals. The tournament still retains some of that flavor with several colleges indicating they will send representatives for the qualifying round.

Major sponsor of the tournament is Midland National Bank.

Turnovers cool Upton Co. bragging

By Mike Craver
Sports Writer

It is billed as the game to determine bragging rights for Upton County but it turned into the "turnover game" as Rankin and McCamey battled to a scoreless tie in their annual shootout. The 0-0 tie was the first tie in the series since 1970 — when the score was also 0-0.

Both clubs rushed for over 200 yards but five fumbles inside the Red Devil's 20 stopped the Badgers while two pass interceptions and a fumble wrecked Rankin.

McCamey's David Acosta rushed for 90 yards in 15 carries while Rankin's Dennis Black lugged the pigskin 86 yards. The 86 yards is the lowest output by Black on the year.

ONE BRIGHT spot for Rankin was the punting of Terry Turner. Turner averaged 43.7 yards on seven punts. Turner's father and Rankin head coach Dwayne Turner said, "Terry's punting helped. It got us out of our end of the field several times."

Quarterback Kyle Longley turned in an outstanding performance as he guided Greenwood to its second victory in three outings on the year. Longley threw touchdown passes of 75 and 16 yards to Kit Forshee and ran for another as the Rangers outscored Klondike 32-21. Overall, Longley connected on eight of 15 passes for 203 yards.

Todd Brooks provided the ground attack as he rushed for two touchdowns.

Ranger coach Joe Longley was happy that Greenwood had only one turnover (a fumble) against a tough foe. According to Longley, one area the Rangers will be working on this week will be defense against the ran.

THE OREDIGGERS shredded Greenwood's defense for 252 yards and three touchdowns on the ground. Through the air, Klondike could only generate 32 yards.

Crane's young, light defense was mauled again Friday night as Stanton raced to a 28-6 decision. Stanton rolled up 231 yards on the ground and added 109 more through the air ways.

Ray Flores tallied twice on the ground and quarterback Wally Hazelwood pitched two strikes for the 2-1 Buffs.

Quarterback Jeff Pinkston was the offense for the Golden Cranes as they went down to their third straight defeat. He completed six of 13 passes for 153 yards. Tommy Bishop scored Crane's only TD on a 9-yard gallop.

Keith Brooks opened the first weekend of District 2-AAAA play leading in rushing and scoring. Brook's performance against Snyder didn't hurt his totals any.

Brooks rushed for 151 yards and scored three times as the undefeated Mustangs (3-0) opened district play with a convincing 47-0 win over the toothless Tigers (0-3).

Despite the win, Pony coach Bill Shipman was concerned about too many break downs. He added that the Mustangs had several players out during the week with flu but he still expected the Ponies to be sharper.

DESPITE ALL the acolades for the offense, it was the defense that stopped Snyder cold. Led by linebackers Adam Smith and Marty Slaton along with Brooks and Jaime Gonzales in the seconary, the Ponies held Snyder to 133 total yards on offense.

Lamesa (0-3) made the long journey out West to play Monahans (3-0) and it was a long journey home following the Lobos' 7-0 taming of the Golden Tors.

Lobo quarterback Monte McGuire followed up last week's fine performance by throwing for 146 yards and [illegible]ir touchdowns. Running back [illegible]cky Boysaw did the footwork against Lamesa's defense by rushing for 153 yards on 25 attempts.

Lamesa find it difficult to solve the swarming Lobo defense as the Golden Tornadoes gained only 127 yards of total offense for the night's work.

Reagan County doubled last year's win total Friday when the Owls won their second game of the year. Tailback Gregg Fisher and wingback Brad Armstrong each had two touchdowns as the Owls improved their season mark to 2-1 with a 39-8 win over Iraan.

MIDLAND CHRISTIAN chalked up the second win in its six-man football history with a 39-12 win over Witharral junior varsity.

Quarterback Kirk Hobbs hurled scoring strikes of 30 yards to Jim Crawford, 27 yards to Robbie Powell and 17 yards in guiding the Mustangs to the victory.

Scoring on the ground for the Mustangs were Bubby Ritchie, 9-yard run, Hobbs, 25-yard run and Johnny Belcher, 56-yard run.

UH QB out for season

HOUSTON (AP) — Sophomore quarterback Audrey McMillian will miss the remainder of the 1981 football season with a shoulder separation, University of Houston officials confirmed Monday.

McMillian hurt his right shoulder in the third quarter of Saturday's game against Miami, and will undergo surgery Tuesday, said Cougar head trainer Tom Wilson.

Montreal wins in 17th on Dawson's single

By Associated Press

There is no joy in Mudville ... and Manager Jim Fanning warns there will be no music in Montreal, either, unless the Expos win.

"Casey At The Bat," in this case, was Expos outfielder Andre Dawson, and Monday night he rewrote the classic Ernest L. Thayer poem slightly by not striking out.

In the National League's longest game this year, Dawson's grounder in the 17th inning scored Rodney Scott from third, giving Montreal a 1-0 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

The victory allowed the Expos to keep pace with St. Louis in the race for the National League East's second-season title. The Cardinals, who blanked the Chicago Cubs 2-0 in an afternoon game, lead the Expos by 1½ games. The New York Mets, who beat Pittsburgh 4-3 in 13 innings, trail by 2½ games.

Through 10 innings, Steve Carlton of the Phillies and Ray Burris of Montreal were locked in a pitchers duel. Carlton, who yielded just three hits, fanned 12 to become the NL's all-time strikeout leader with 3,128, replacing Hall of Famer Bob Gibson. Burris also gave up just three hits.

With one out in the 17th, Scott singled and stole second. Reliever Jerry Reed then walked Warren Cromartie and Terry Francona to load the bases.

Dawson followed with a hard grounder to third baseman Mike Schmidt, whose throw to home narrowly missed getting Scott.

Cardinals 2, Cubs 0

Joaquin Andujar and Bruce Sutter combined on a three-hit shutout that helped St. Louis rebound from three straight losses at New York.

Andujar left after he pulled a hamstring muscle in his right leg while batting in the ninth, and Sutter pitched a hitless final inning for his 23rd save.

Darrell Porter and Keith Hernandez each drove in a run for the Cardinals.

Manager Whitey Herzog said he wasn't sure yet whether Andujar would be forced out of his starting rotation, but the pitcher said similar injuries in the past have cost him a great deal of time.

Mets 4, Pirates 3

Mark Lee, Pittsburgh's fifth pitcher, let loose a wild pitch in the 13th inning that allowed John Stearns to score New York's winning run, extending the Mets winning streak to four games.

With one out, Lee walked Stearns, and Ron Gardenhire's single sent the Mets catcher to third. With a 0-2 count on rookie Brian Giles, Lee threw a low and outside pitch that catcher Tony Pena was unable to handle.

Lee Mazzilli drove in a pair of New York runs, one with a single in the eighth that gave the Mets a 3-1 lead. Pittsburgh rebounded with two runs in the top of the ninth on a single by Mike Easler and Johnny Ray's sacrifice fly.

Jason Thompson homered for the Pirates in the second.

Padres 6, Reds 0

Chris Welsh tossed a three-hit shutout, and San Diego scored all six of its runs in the sixth inning to halt Cincinnati's winning streak at four games and drop the Reds three games behind Houston in the NL West.

Singles by Barry Evans, Juan Bonilla, Gene Richards and Luis Salazar drove in runs, and the others scored on a bases-loaded walk by Charlie Leibrandt and a sacrifice fly by Ozzie Smith.

Welsh allowed just one runner to reach second base in pitching only his second shutout. The 26-year-old rookie southpaw, acquired in a preseason deal with the New York Yankees, walked four and struck out three.

Boston continues streak

Stay half-game behind Tigers

By Associated Press

Ralph Houk is having trouble playing the ever-popular game of pennant-race scoreboard. But his Boston Red Sox are having very few problems playing baseball, and that might make Houk's scoreboard watching unnecessary.

The Red Sox stayed a half-game behind the first-place Detroit Tigers in the tight American League East second half race Monday night with a 9-3 romp over the Milwaukee Brewers, who dropped 1½ games off the pace. The victory was Boston's seventh in the last eight games, all at home. The Red Sox are 24-16 in the second season.

"I keep looking at the scoreboard and I don't really know who to root for, Detroit or Baltimore," said Houk, who saw the Tigers beating the Orioles 5-1 on the Fenway Park scoreboard. "But you can be sure I'll be pulling for the Orioles tomorrow."

Houk didn't need to do much managing Monday. He just turned Dave Stapleton, Jim Rice, Jerry Remy, Carl Yastrzemski, Carney Lansford, Tony Perez and Rick Miller loose and each had two hits in Boston's 14-hit attack. Stapleton slammed a homer in the five-run fifth inning and added a single, while knocking in four runs.

"The Red Sox are playing good and when they get hot at Fenway it's double trouble," Milwaukee Manager Buck Rodgers said. "They're high now and we have to break that momentum, hopefully tomorrow night.

"Right now, nothing is disastrous but it does set you back."

The Yankees, who already have qualified for the playoffs by winning the first-half race, had their second-half hopes set back a bit by Rick Waits, who blanked them 5-0. Elsewhere, it was Minnesota 7, Kansas City 2 and California 6, Chicago 3. The Oakland A's game at Toronto was rained out.

Tigers 5, Orioles 1

Milt Wilcox hurled a six-hitter for his first win ever over the Orioles. John Wockenfuss drove in two runs with an RBI single in the fourth and a sacrifice fly in the sixth.

Orioles starter Scott McGregor entered the game with an 11-2 lifetime record against the Tigers. He has a 7-2 record at home this season, with both losses against Detroit.

"I'm a different pitcher than I have been the last four or five years," Wilcox said. "I've changed my approach to pitching with (pitching coach) Roger Craig's help. I've added two new pitches, a forkball and an overhand curve and dropped the change-up which got me into trouble.

"I don't think anybody will laugh at us anymore and say, 'Here come the weaklings,'" Wilcox added. "We have confidence now."

It was the third straight win for the Tigers after five consecutive losses to open their current road trip.

Rangers 4, Rangers 1

Danny Darwin threw a three-hitter, striking out seven. Texas built a 3-0 lead in the fourth on singlel by Bump Wills, Mickey Rivers and Buddy Bell and Pat Putnam's double, and added its final run in the eighth on Al Oliver's RBI single.

"Three days ago I told a couple of players we could still win this thing and they laughed," Oliver said of the Rangers, who are three games out in the AL West. "I think they realize now I was right."

Indians 5, Yankees 0

Rick Waits pitched a six-hitter and Rick Manning had two hits, stole three bases and scored twice for Cleveland. Mike Fischlin contributed a two-run double in the fifth inning.

"I haven't pitched a decent game since the strike," said Waits, who had a 1-5 record with a 9.44 earned run average in the second season before Monday's game. "I have had a lot of sleepless nights. My arm has been sluggish. I can't seem to explain it. I just can't seem to get going. But tonight, my arm felt very strong."

Twins 7, Royals 2

Rookie shortstop Ron Washington, who carried a .205 average into the game, had three hits and two RBI and scored twice as Minnesota moved within 2½ games of the first-place Royals in the West.

"I was just thinking, 'See the ball and hit it,'" said Washington. "I saw it and I hit it. Ever since I joined them, we've been feeling like we could do it," said Washington, who was called up from Toledo on Sept. 4. "It's just a matter of the breaks falling — and tonight they fell. Who knows what can happen?"

Angels 6, White Sox 3

Joe Ferguson's two-run single in the second inning paced the victory, which saw Don Baylor hit his 116th homer as an Angel, setting a team record. California broke a six-game losing streak with the victory, only the Angels' second in the last 16 games.

Sting win

CHICAGO (AP) — Frantz Mathieu scored in the seventh round of a shootout Monday night, lifting the Chicago Sting to a 1-0 victory over the San Diego Sockers and a berth in the Soccer Bowl against the two-time defending North American Soccer League champion Cosmos.

The victory gave Chicago the best-of-three series 2-1. The rubber match in the semifinal series was played before a crowd of 39,623.

Philadephia sale is approved by NBA

CHICAGO (AP) — Businessman Harold Katz says he's a sports enthusiast but he found out in high school he wasn't big enough or good enough to play professional basketball.

So he bought the Philadelphia 76ers franchise, a move approved unanimously Monday by the National Basketball Association Board of Governors.

Katz, 44, played on the hardcourts of south Philadelphia and parlayed his competitive abilities into a multimillion-dollar chain of diet and weight-control centers.

Katz reportedly paid $12 million for the franchise. Along with the price, he inherited a sizeable debt and an expensive payroll.

Former owner F. Eugene Dixon, who reportedly paid $8 million for the team in 1976, cited high costs and low attendance as the reason he agreed this summer to sell the franchise to Katz.

"I'm a sports freak," said Katz. "My 16-year-old son, David, kept telling me, 'Money isn't everything. Go ahead and buy them.' So I did. But I didn't buy the Sixers for an ego trip. I intend to run the team like a business, even though I intend to have fun."

Despite having one of the NBA's best records in recent years, the 76ers have been dripping in red ink due to sagging attendance.

Carlton is all-time NL strikeout leader

MONTREAL (AP) — Left-hander Steve Carlton of the Philadelphia Phillies became the all-time National League strikeout leader Monday night against the Montreal Expos.

The 36-year-old Carlton struck out Larry Parrish in the second inning and Andre Dawson in the third with the bases loaded to raise his total to 3,118 surpassing St.Louis Cardinal Hall of Famer Bob Gibson.

The strikeout moved Carlton, in his 16th season, into fourth place on the all-time strikeout list behind Walter Johnson's 3,508, Gaylord Perry's 3,326 and Nolan Ryan's 3,229.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was little changed today, showing no strong response to continuing declines in interest rates.

Gainers and losers were evenly balanced in the midday tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down .76 at 845.80.

M-A-Com led the active list, off ⅛ at 22⅜. A 525,900-share block of the stock changed hands at 22.

Sunbeam rose ⅜ to 30⅜ on top of an 8¾-point jump Monday, when IC Industries proposed to acquire the company for $32 a share.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks slipped .09 to 67.62. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.50 at 302.29.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 22.54 million shares at noontime, against 17.81 million at the same point Monday.

3 million Britons unemployed

LONDON (AP) — British unemployment may be higher now than during the Great Depression, with 12.4 percent of the work force out of a job this month and grim predictions that the worst is yet to come, officials said Tuesday.

The Department of Employment said 2,998,789 people were unemployed in September — the highest level since detailed records began in 1948.

But officials disclosed that the count was taken 12 days ago, and acknowledged it could have surpassed 3 million by now, giving the economically troubled country its worst jobless toll since the Great Depression of the 1930s.

However, officials said it was impossible to make accurate comparisons because statistics were compiled differently and the working population was much smaller in the 1930s, when there were an estimated 3 million unemployed.

Government spokesmen claimed the rate of increase was slowing down to between 30,000 and 40,000 layoffs a month compared with 81,000 at the beginning of the year.

But Employment Secretary Norman Tebbit, a hard-line Conservative supporter of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's tight monetary policies, warned that the situation will get worse before it gets better.

"Although there are more hopeful signs of increasing industrial efficiency, unemployment is unlikely to begin to fall for some time," he cautioned.

Tebbit, appointed by Mrs. Thatcher last week in a Cabinet shakeup to purge policy critics, stressed that the crisis will not divert the government from its tough policies.

He reiterated Mrs. Thatcher's determination to keep public sector pay hikes down to 4 percent this year, a move that has already stirred widespread discontent among unions pledged to fight her controversial strategy.

Unemployment has climbed every month for the past 16 months. The latest figures show that one of every eight members of Britain's working population is now out of a job amid a daily ritual of business closures and factory layoffs.

The gloomy figures were the second serious blow to Mrs. Thatcher's economic plan in a week.

The government acknowledged Friday that the annual inflation rate went up last month to 11.5 percent, reversing a downward trend with a .6 percent hike over July.

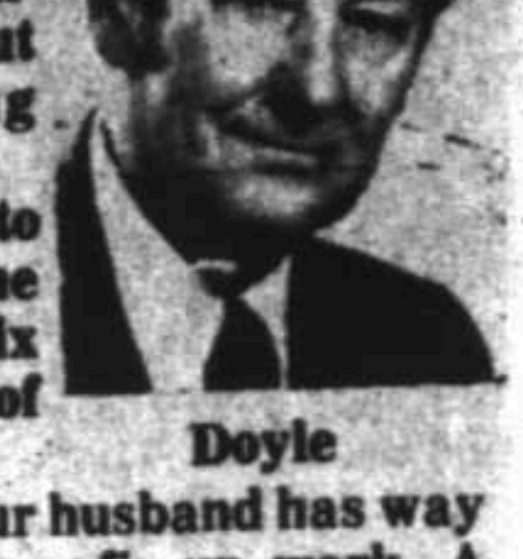
INVESTORS GUIDE

'His and hers' is a mistake

BY BILL DOYLE



Doyle

Q. I am presently making $20,000 a year. I have approximately $4,000 in a regular savings account and $3,500 in a 30-month savings certificate. I am able to save $200 a month. My husband is making $11,000 annually. He has $4,000 in a regular savings account and is saving $100 a month. We are in our late 30s. Our home has a $25,000 mortgage but we have no other outstanding bills.

My husband is very anxious to put money into real estate of the "handyman special" variety, to fix up and sell. What is your opinion of that idea?

A. It's a good idea, provided your husband has way above average skills in handyman fix-up work. A very nice profit can be made buying run-down property, reconditioning and selling it.

These days, when real estate isn't moving fast, because of high interest rates, the success of your husband's venture could very well require patience.

It will also require money, no doubt, more than the $4,000 he has in savings. You don't indicate if you plan to put some of your savings into the fix-up-and-sell deal. My suggestion is that you do.

This column has always held to the theory that finances should be a family affair. I'm well aware that some couples keep their savings and investments separate — "hers and his" — as you seem to be doing. I'm old-fashioned enough to count that as a mistake.

Q. As soon as the new rules allowing every working person to establish an individual retirement account (IRA) become effective on Jan. 1, I plan to open an IRA with a mutual fund. Suppose I choose a fund that is in a "family of funds" and later on decide to move my investment to another fund, within the same "family." What would be my income tax liability at the time of the transfer from one fund to another?

A. None. When you have a tax-sheltered retirement plan, such as an IRA or a Keogh plan for the self-employed, you can move your investment from one mutual fund to another in the same group, without any tax bite. Many mutual fund organizations manage two or more funds, making it easy for you to do what you mention. Technically, they're mutual fund "groups." But the fund industry has been successful in promoting the use of the word "family." That gives mutual fund investments sort of a homey touch.

I hope you understand you can't switch tax-free, from one fund to another, even within the same "family," if you're investment is not in a tax-sheltered plan. If you own shares of XYZ Growth Fund in a regular account and transfer your investment into shares of XYZ Income Fund that's a sale and a new purchase. Your profit or loss on XYZ growth fund would be a capital gain or capital loss for tax purposes.

Q. When you mention mutual funds, as an investment for an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) or any other purpose, you almost always recommend "no-load" funds. Why? Aren't the "load" mutual funds better managed?

A. There is absolutely no evidence that either type of mutual fund is better managed than the other. Long-term records show, in certain years, some load funds were top investment performers; in other years some no-load funds were the best performers. No individual mutual fund, or group of funds, has led the performance pack — year-in and year-out.

The basic difference is that you pay a commission of up to 8.5 percent when you invest in load funds. No-load funds charge no commission. If you put $1,000 into the typical load fund, you pay $85 commission and get $915 worth of shares. When you put $1,000 into a no-load fund, you pay no commission and get $1,000 worth of shares.

With a no-load fund, all your money starts working for you, as soon as you invest. That's naturally a better deal than a load fund.

Reagan and times perfect match

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — If President Ronald Reagan is "laid back," as some critics say of his style, then he is laid back like a fox, says a man who has studied leadership from the times of the Greeks and Romans.

"Reagan can be misunderstood because he makes a tough job look easy," says Eugene Jennings, management professor, author of "Anatomy of Leadership" and adviser to private and public sector leaders.

After a summmer of observing and analyzing the performance and style of Reagan, Jennings reaches a conclusion that probably will give the president a lift as he fights criticism of his values, goals and style.

"He is nearly a perfect match between the man and his times," says the professor, who teaches at Michigan State University.

Jennings observes that all would-be great leaders need such an ideal marriage but that few are so fortunate to achieve it. Without World War II, he observes, Winston Churchill might have died an inconspicuous Lord of the Admiralty and Charles DeGaulle might have been remembered more for his enormous ego than his enormous accomplishments in France.

Jennings contends the near-perfect match creates a momentum of its own that allows the fortunate leaders to paddle easily while others struggle to keep control. Reagan, he claims, is following in the tradition of great leaders in three ways:

1. He has value sense. Values, he suggests, are more important than objectives to great leaders. Great leaders have firm beliefs and communicate them to the people, who then permit greater flexibility on how the objectives are to be obtained. Values are the foundation, says Jennings. In his view, Reagan has a foundation, but Jimmy Carter didn't. Carter worked hard, he says, but "built sandcastles."

2. He has a priority sense. "Reagan covers only those things critical to the execution of his mission," the professor says, adding that "very few great leader scattered their shot and maintained momentum."

Reagan, he says, calls forth one issue at a time for debate, whereas Presidents Carter, Lyndon Johnson and Harry Truman inundated Congress and constituencies. "Reagan never loses control by scattering shot," claims Jennings. The President's priorities are in order, he says.

And when the timing is right — that is, the match between a man and events and attitudes — it can make for great leaders, says Jennings.

Reagan refiguring his spending cuts

BY CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is refiguring his latest round of spending cuts after being told by Republican leaders that it is "not realistically possible" to pass a package that would delay Social Security cost-of-living increases.

As one alternative, congressional leaders are considering delaying next year's installment of the record personal income tax cut enacted just last month.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., and House GOP leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois told Reagan on Monday that his new package of Social Security and other spending cuts would face likely defeat in Congress.

"At the very least it's not an impossible fight, but it's a judgment only the president can make and we'll give him our best professional judgment on his prospects in the Congress," Baker said.

The message was gleaned from a private meeting earlier Monday at which key House and Senate Republicans agreed Reagan should be told that "tinkering with Social Security" was "just not realistically possible," said one participant, who asked not to be identified.

He said the group did not directly suggest that Reagan change his plans but discussed possible alternatives, including:

—Deferring for three months the 10 percent cut in personal income taxes scheduled to take effect on July 1 of next year.

—Cuts in military spending deeper than the $2 billion for 1982 that Reagan has recommended tied to other budget reductions.

—Making no further cuts at this time. Senate Republican Whip Ted Stevens of Alaska suggested last week that Congress should wait until next March until considering any new spending plans.

White House aides said Reagan, who had been reported ready this week to ask for $16.3 billion in cuts for 1982, now is likely to review the situtation and search for a more palatable plan.

"We're going to refigure it with what they told us today," said one White House aide, who asked not to be identified.

However, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan still intends to deliver a nationally televised speech later this week.

Sources said much of the opposition to a new round of cuts centered on Reagan's reported decision to seek a three-month delay in the cost-of-living increases scheduled for next July 1 in Social Security and eight other benefit programs, including veterans' retirement, unemployment compensation, food stamps and school lunches.

"The House people clearly told the Senate people that they didn't think they could get anything through," said one aide, who asked to remain anonymous.

In the Republican-run Senate, the message to Reagan was: "If push came to shove, you might be able to get them through," said one source.

In the Senate on Monday, Republicans who control the Finance Committee postponed drafting a Social Security rescue bill, and several legislators said it was increasingly likely that Congress would pass only a stopgap measure this year to avert a crisis in the program's old-age fund in late 1982.

After huddling with Republicans on the Senate Finance Committee, the chairman, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., said the GOP senators had decided against proceeding with their plans to start fashioning a major Social Security bill this week.

The Democrat-dominated House chose the same course last week.

Meanwhile, Deputy Social Security Commissioner Robert Myers told a House subcommittee Monday that Social Security's 36 million beneficiaries would lose three months' cost-of-living protection against inflation under Reagan's postponement plan.

Myers said the plan calls for calculating inflation after the one-time delay on a 12-month basis, instead of 15, costing retirees an average of $100 by one accounting method.

New York Mayor Ed Koch votes at New York University's Loeb Student Center today during the city's court-delayed primary election.

Koch expected to get dual mayoral nomination

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward Koch is expected today to become the first person ever to get the Republican and Democratic nominations for the city's highest office.

Meanwhile, the City Council's alleged breaking of the 1965 Voting Rights Act has pushed city council races off the ballot which, combined with a forecast of cold, rainy weather, is expected to bring a light turnout in the primary.

A federal court ruled that the city redistricting plan had not received the required clearance under the act from the Justice Department. Blacks and Hispanics claimed the plan sold them short.

Koch, a Democrat, consolidated the endorsements of the Democratic organization in all five city boroughs and the Republican forces in four, an unprecedented move in New York.

On the Democratic side, he faces Brooklyn state Assemblyman Frank Barbaro, his chief opponent, and a former mathmatics teacher. On the GOP ballot he faces Assemblyman John Esposito.

Koch got a big push toward the Republican nomination Monday when the GOP's No. 1 liberal spokesman, former U.S. Sen. Jacob Javits, announced he was voting for Koch, who he characterized as "a crisis mayor who has shown extraordinary ability in redeeming the city and seems the best for what faces us."

Within his own party, Koch was labeled "Reagan's clone" by Barbaro in election eve campaigning. Barbaro also accused Koch of failing to tell voters how badly they will be hit by President Reagan's budget cuts.

An unusually modest Koch predicted victory "by at least a margin of one," and said if he got 55 percent of the vote he would consider it "a landslide."

Other Democratic races include a political comeback try by former U.S. Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, who failed to gain a U.S. Senate seat last year. She faces former Broooklyn Assistant District Attorney Norman Rosen for Brooklyn district attorney.

Interest levels declining

By The Associated Press

Interest rates, stuck near record-high levels for two months, are declining on several fronts amid recent signals the economy could be slipping into recession and the Federal Reserve Board is making more money available.

Many economists expect the trend to continue, and some are predicting rates will tumble even further as the economy continues its listless performance.

The Commerce Department planned today to release its figures on new factory orders for durable goods in August.

Commerce sources said last week that preliminary figures for the current quarter indicate the gross national product — a measure of all goods and services exchanged — continued to fall after declining in the second three months of 1981. Some economists define an "official" recession as two consecutive quarters of declining GNP.

But William C. Freund, senior vice president and chief economist of the New York Stock Exchange said Monday the nation has entered another recession that will last through 1981, though it will be "mild and localized."

Vance voices opposition

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, a surprise ally for opponents of the proposed sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia, says the deal would upset the military balance in the Middle East, violate a 1978 promise to Congress and be "a grave mistake."

Vance's stand, in a letter to assistant Senate Democratic leader Alan Cranston of California, could strengthen the hand of opponents of President Reagan's proposed $8.5 billion sale, which faces a close vote next month in Congress.

Vance, a strong proponent of past arms deals, said delivering five Airborne Warning and Control System planes to the Saudis "would be destabilizing."

Enhancing the range and firepower of 62 U.S.-built F-15 jet fighters, he said, would break the Carter administration's promise to Congress that the planes would not be made more powerful.

"I believe it would be wrong to abrogate that commitment," Vance said. "To do so would undermine our credibility."

Meanwhile, Henry A. Kissinger, Vance's predecessor as secretary of state, said Monday, "I don't think it was a good idea to sell the planes to begin with."

Clements spars with press corps

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Gov. Bill Clements opened a press conference by welcoming newsmen to the new headquarters in Washington of the State of Texas state-federal liaisons office headed by Dary Stone.

Then he fenced with reporters for most of the next 45 minutes over their questions and his answers.

"Governor, I haven't understood a thing you've said during this entire press conference," veteran newswoman Sara McClendon said halfway through the session.

"I wish you'd just back up and start all over. Quit assuming we know more than we know and just tell us, in plain English, who you saw while you've been here, what you told them, and what they told you," she said.

CLEMENTS DIDN'T do that, telling her instead that he'd known her for years and that was the first time he'd ever heard her say she didn't understand what he was trying to say.

He differed with newsmen once over their recollection of a statement he made to another news conference three days earlier, and refused several times to answer other questions.

"My discussion with the president I consider as privileged and if you're asking me to go into that, I'm not going to do it," Clements said at one point.

When a TV newsman asked a second question — after the governor had answered briefly an earlier one — about a suit involving the Tyler, Texas schools and Mexican children, Clements looked at the questioner and said, "You're really hung up on that, aren't you?"

It was something his editors wanted clarification on, the newsman said.

"WHERE ARE you from? Are you from Tyler?" Clements asked.

"Washington," the newsman answered, and the governor smirked, then finally answered.

One questioner led off a question with the name of Mark White, the Texas attorney general who has been involved in a running feud with Clements and is a possible opponent in the 1982 governor's race.

"You ask Mark White about that," Clements interjected. "You're here to talk to me, not Mr. White."

Later, someone else brought up White's name, pointing out that White had spoken earlier Monday of having gotten a letter he called "silly" and "childlike" from Clements concerning White's fight to require evangelist Lester Roloff to obtain state licensing for his homes for children.

"THE ATTORNEY general said that? That's interesting," Clements said, but declined further comment, saying "I'll comment after I get home and see the letter."

Since the letter was written by Clements, the newsman pressed further as soon as the press conference broke up.

"No more questions. The press conference is over," the governor said as he made his way through a hall.

Clements was then asked again about the letter in which he told White that the attorney general had broken his word by continuing to battle the evangelist's operation of his homes without a state license.

"I'm not going to comment on that. You know better than that. You're just trying to get me involved in a big fuss," Clements said before stepping onto an elevator.

CLEMENTS VISITED numerous agencies Monday and "got a good reception," he said, in visits to the departments of agriculture, state, defense and energy and with President Reagan and Vice President George Bush.

His biggest accomplishment, he said, was his meeting Friday with Attorney General William French Smith, in which he got a clear understanding of President Reagan's proposal to give amnesty to hundreds of thousands of illegal aliens in Texas.

Tents may become winter fire traps

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Tents being used to relieve overcrowded Texas prison cells might turn into fire hazards this winter when heaters are added, says a report to the federal judge who ordered major changes in the prisons.

Court-appointed Special Master Vincent Nathan's report said he "is compelled to express his concern that the tents currently in use by the Texas Department of Corrections may represent a serious fire threat."

The tents were set up after U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice ordered an end to triple-celling in TDC prisons. Metal buildings scheduled to be completed in November were to replace the tents.

However, delays have pushed the anticipated completion date back as far as next July. TDC spokesman Rick Hartley says that means 1,660 inmates will sleep in the tents until then.

Nathan questioned whether the tents — aside from the possible fire hazard — "will be suitable for human habitation" in the winter.

Gov. Bill Clements, who has talked up the tents as a sensible and humane solution to overcrowding, told reporters last week that the addition of heaters would make the tents comfortable during the winter.

"I don't think that represents any particuar hardship on the prisoners," Clements said

Hartley said Monday that TDC officials were confident the addition of natural gas heaters would not pose a serious fire hazard. However, Nathan is not convinced and has asked Justice to appoint an expert to take a look at the tents.

Nathan was appointed to monitor TDC's compliance with Justice's orders, which called for sweeping changes in the 30,000-inmate system.

The tents have plywood floors and waist-high walls under the canvas tops. When the tents leak, electrical wiring inside can be dangerously dampened, Nathan said.

"During the course of visits conducted on Sept. 3, 1981, evidence of substantial leakage was noted in tents in the Diagnostic Unit and Ellis Unit," Nathan told the judge.

Inmates in some leaking tents have been given "plastic sheeting" to protect them and their belongings from the rain, he said. However. Hartley said tent tears are quickly repaired when discovered.

In addition to the potential wiring hazard, Nathan said the "plywood construction of these units may produce a particularly serious fire hazard during winter months when heating units of one type or another will be in use."

Nathan also questioned security procedures in tent areas. He said during several inspections he did not see correctional officers posted in the areas, increasing the risk "that inmates will jerryrig or otherwise tamper with wiring in such a way as to increase the risk of fire,"

"It is fair to assume that the use of tents was not within the contemplation of the district court when it made its findings of fact on the subject of fire safety," Nathan said.
