VOL. 3, NO. 161. WICHITA FALLS, TEXAS, TUESDAY, JANUARY 24, 1922. FIVE CENTS EVERYWHERE

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

By R. N. S.

An editorial on "Too Busy to Improve" was addressed by J. Ogden Armour to his employes as a New Year's message. J. Ogden Armour is the head of the packing industry that admits of a loss of thirty-one million dollars in a year 1921 and yet is hopeful that during 1922 his industry will recoup some of the losses and close the new year with a very satisfactory showing. It is worth while. It should be read by employes everywhere. It should be read by executives everywhere: "When opportunity knocks at your door, do you answer 'I haven't time!'" This is the age old excuse that has kept many a man from making his mark. In its capacity for covering a multitude of short-comings, it has no equal. It's the world's greatest alibi. Whoever admits that he is too busy to improve his methods, has acknowledged himself to be at the end of his rope. And that is always the saddest predicament which any one can get into. For there is a vast difference between being busy and making progress. When we see that clearly, we have gained an important bit of wisdom. The easiest thing some people do, is to keep busy. You have seen the person who is always busy—doing trivial things. Opportunity comes to him as to all others; but he is so occupied with sharpening his lead pencils, reading the mail or attending to other ordinary duties, that he has no time to listen. The routine of his work swallows him up, and he forgets what he is busy for. His favorite idea, and his response to all requests is, 'I haven't time.' The man who makes progress is of a different stripe. He doesn't steal the office boy's work in order to keep engaged. He does not think of his job as something to fill up his time; but as something to accomplish. He has a goal; and he is always thinking, planning and seeking the quickest and best way to attain it. Man must often choose between the trivial and the worth while. When a proposal is put to him by his co-workers, who wish to guide and help him, how easy it is to reply, 'I haven't time.' But that is not the pathway to progress. He should rather say to himself, 'Let's assume that here is opportunity. I must consider carefully what it has to offer. Maybe I'll have to re-adjust my time; perhaps I'll have to change my methods. But I am ready for anything that will help the business.' Whoever reasons and acts thus, cannot go far astray in the business world. The man who is eager to improve, does not ignore requests. When he is asked to do something that he believes to be less important than the things that already occupy his time, he will think the subject through and then prove his point. And 'I haven't time' does not prove it! All of us have time to improve—not only at the suggestions of others, but of our own initiative. All of us wish to improve—for therein lies the greatest pleasure of honest work. All of us can improve—for around all about us are many things on which we may start right now. Here is the most inspiring thought I can bring you at the beginning of a New Year. And, if we are all agreed on this, we can round out 1922 with results which will make us all rejoice." This Armour editorial is appropriate, it is timely and it is reproduced that Record-News readers may have

G.O.P. SOLONS WANT ACTION ON BONUS BILL

Republican House Members Plan to Offer Resolution at Caucus Thursday for Drafting Measure.

Resolution to Provide Measure, When Reported to House, Will Be Continuing Business Unpassed.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23. — Call for a caucus Thursday night of Republican members of the house on the soldier bonus question was issued today. Immediate action on an adjusted compensation bill has been demanded by a group of members who were in the military service during the war.

At the Thursday night conference they plan to offer a resolution instructing the ways and means committee to proceed to the drafting of a bonus measure. The resolution also will provide that when reported to the house the measure is to be the continuing business unpassed. House leaders said no effort would be made at the caucus to instruct the ways and means committee as to how it should provide for the raising of necessary revenue. That question will be determined, it was said, by the committee with the probability that the Republican membership later at a caucus will take a stand on the plan proposed.

Data upon possible new methods of taxation with which to raise funds for a bonus has been prepared by the treasury department, it was said, for the information of congress.

Officials of the treasury said however, that the department would await requests for such information before transmitting it to congress. At the same time it was said that the treasury's position with regard to the advisability of a bonus for veterans of the world war was unchanged, the enactment of compensation legislation under existing conditions being viewed with disfavor.

In the event a bonus bill is enacted, treasurery officials said, some tax would have to be provided to take care of it. Use of the allied debt as a basis for bonus financing was said to be regarded as impractical.

In the opinion of the treasury, high officials said it would cost more to raise the money for a soldier bonus from the sale of bonds based on the debts of the allied nations than it would to float the country's own obligations. For instance, it was explained, should bonds representing Great Britain of approximately $5,000,000 be issued as part of a bonus payment plan, they would have to be sold at a discount by this government because they would be subject to the various forms of taxation, local, state and federal, which would make difficult their compensation with obligation of this government.

FINGER PRINTS PLAY PART IN FATTY'S TRIAL

By Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 23. —Finger prints alleged to have been made on the door of Roscoe C. (Fatty) Arbuckle's room in the Hotel St. Francis, "could have been forged under some circumstances," O. E. Heinrich finger print expert, testified today in the second trial of a manslaughter charges against Arbuckle in connection with Miss Virginia Rappe's death.

"I determined as best I could by experiments that these particular finger prints were not forged, however," Heinrich said.

The prosecution charges that the finger prints indicate that Miss Rappe attempted to escape from the room on the occasion that she was supposed to have been fatally injured by Arbkekle and that he forcibly detained her. Previously Heinrich, who was on the stand most of the day, had testified the finger prints as those of Arbuckle and Miss Rappe. Heinrich's testimony included an experiment in which he placed the print of his own hand on the door and developed with aluminum dust to show the maner in which the other imprints on the door were brought into plain view.

ANTI-REDS OPPOSE INTERVENTION IN RUSSIAN ECONOMICS

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—The executive committee of the conference of the all-Russian constituent assembly —which comprises all Russian democratic parties opposed to bolshevikism and includes former Premier Alexander F. Kerensky—adopted a declaration in connection with the Genoa economic conference to which soviet Russia has been invited, warning against economic intervention in Russia.

The declaration, received by cable from Paris, was made public tonight by Nicholas D. Avksentiev and Prof. Paul M. Milliuvok, the committee's delegates in this country. They previously had issued a statement criticising the invitation to the bolsheviki as a step to "degrede Russia to the state of a colony open to foreign exploitation."

REMEDIES FOR AGRICULTURAL CRISIS SOUGHT

Immediate Relief Must Be Given Farmer, Declare Speakers at National Farm Conference.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Immediate relief must be given farmers in the present agricultural crisis, delegates to the national agricultural conference, which convened here today were told by speakers representing every phase of this industry. President Harding, who opened the conference with an address, Secretary Wallace, farmers and representatives of industries dependent on agriculture, emphasized the seriousness of the situation and suggested remedies.

Remedial measures outlined by the president and subsequently endorsed by many of the speakers included more adequate financial facilities, especially working capital, for the farmer on long time loans to provide for his turnover; extension of the co-operative marketing, buying and loan associations of farmers; development of waterway transportation and power possibilities; more efficient machinery for collecting and distributing market information, including the demand and consumptive outlook; development of the St. Lawrence-Great Lakes waterway project and assurance to agriculture of equality of opportunity with all other industries.

Demand for reduction of freight rates was voiced generally by the farmers and a reduction in retail prices also was suggested as necessary to start increased consumption of farm products.

Depression in agriculture, which speakers declared to be general, is reflected in industries intimately connected with and independent on a prosperous agriculture.

Secretary Wallace, as head of the department of agriculture, outlined the purpose of the conference after President Harding had delivered his address and Representative Anderson of Minnesota, was then made permanent chairman while 12 major committees were appointed to study various problems with the view of submitting recommendations.

The delegates and their families tonight were guests of President and Mrs. Harding at a reception at the White House.

William Jennings Bryan, who was in the audience was called on to speak and he described the conference as one of the most important held in this country in a long time. Agriculture, he said, was in the worst condition in thirty years and he could not see how there could be any general prosperity until the condition of the farmer was improved.

Touching on other questions he declared that the present congress had done more than previous ones, "because I think it's more sacred than other congresses."

Praising the agriculture bloc, he said it was different from other blocs because its members had "acted openly and the others acted secretly."

TARIFF NEEDED FOR LOUISIANA, SAYS GOVERNOR

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Governor John M. Parker of Louisiana, testified before the senate finance committee today that unless adequate protection was provided for sugar and rice, these industries in his state would be wiped out. He added that the same was true of the vegetable oil, livestock and other agricultural interests of the south.

Our bankers will not loan money to farmers unless we protect our farms against the poorly paid, underfed and half-clad laborers of the world," the governor declared. "I have never raised a stalk of cane or a pound of rice in my life, and have no personal interest in any tariff schedule, but as governor of the state, I, of course, have knowledge of affairs on these farms and on this free labor basis, we lose money on sugar at its present price."

Governor Parker told the committee that he had favored a protective tariff for thirty years.

"A protective tariff ought not to be a political issue," he said, "it is Americanism."

CAR LINE MAY GO TO NORTH WICHITA SOON

Prospects of Early Extension Indicated in Letter From Kell to City Water Department.

Fitts Asks Ordinance Which He Believes Would Help in Combatting Whiskey Dispensers.

That the street car service of the Wichita Falls Traction company may be extended across the Wichita river into Scotland addition and the general north Wichita section within a comparatively short time was indicated at a meeting of the city council last night. The matter was brought to the council's attention through the introduction of a letter from Frank Kell, president of the traction company to F. N. Lawton, manager of the city water department.

In this letter Mr. Kell called attention to the fact that a water contract exists between Scotland addition and the city whereby the city is due to refund about $17,500 to the owners of the addition when the city's income from the water contract approximates $4,000 annually. The owners of the addition, however, have expressed the willingness, Mr. Kell stated, to assign this contract to the traction company as their part of the local aid the traction company would have to receive before it could undertake the expense of bridging the river and laying the new tracks into north Wichita.

Would Start Early.

Mr. Kell indicated that if means could be found to hasten the refunding of the money mentioned in the contract the traction company would

BOY FORCED TO PILOT OUTLAW OUT OF AUSTIN

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 23.—Following a sensational escape from local police here Monday afternoon, a man, believed to be George Hawkins, for whom it is said a $1,500 reward is offered, jumped on the running board of a passing car on the main street, and levelling a pistol at the driver, Henry Barber, 15-year-old son of Will G. Barber of San Marcos, a member of the state board of legal examiners, ordered the boy to "drive him out of town."

After nearly seven hours of combing the surrounding country by telephone and telegraph, officers located young Barber at Luling where he said the escaped man quit his car and informed him that he was going to board a passing freight train. He told the lad that a $1,500 reward was on his head. The father of the abducted boy offered a $250 reward for the man's arrest.

CALIFORNIA FRUIT GROWERS ANXIOUSLY EYE THERMOMETER

By Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 23.—California generally had a little warmer weather today.

Residents expressed relief at even a slight recession of Jack Frost and the citrus growers, while welcoming the warmth, were elated that the mercury was rising only gradually.

On whether the thermometer hurries back to normal or returns slowly depends the extent of their crop losses due to the recent frost. Oranges and lemons in southern California were reported tonight as still frozen and even some of the trees were showing effects of the cold weather. Until the fruit is thawed it is impossible to determine its exact condition.

Meanwhile, shipments of oranges to the east have been held up. A state law prohibits the shipment of frozen fruit.

MARTIAL LAW IS EXPECTED IN OKLAHOMA CITY

Governor Robertson Orders Investigation of Conditions in Packing District of City.

By Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Jan. 23.—Imminence of martial law being invoked in Oklahoma City is accepted here generally tonight, due to recent disorders at Packing town, seat of the local packing plant where a strike of the workers has been on for some time and the recent lynching of a negro strikebreaker by alleged union men, together with the burning of another negro strikebreaker and his wife Sunday night.

Seven murder charges were filed this morning by Forest L. Hughes, county attorney, against men held for alleged lynching, January 14 of Lake Brooks, negro worker, employed at the local packing plant since the beginning of the strike. Four of the five white men arrested were identified as members of the butcher workmens union, by union officials. Two are negroes.

An eighth man was arrested at Mart, Texas in connection with the lynching of Brooks.

State and county officials are probing the death of Willis and Mary Hall, negroes, who were burned to death near Packing Town last night. Officers are working on the theory that the couple was beaten and then their home burned, they say. No blame has been fixed. Willis is a packer.

The governor today ordered Adjutant General Charles F. Barrett of the Oklahoma National guard to investigate conditions as reported at Packing Town.

Adjutant General Barrett and Colonel B. H. Markham of the national guard conferred with Ben Dancy, sheriff, and reported they are ready to invoke martial law if the governor issued orders.

IMPETUS GIVEN ARMS PARLEY NEGOTIATIONS

Japs Disclaim Territorial Designs on Russia and Agree to Remove Troops When All Is Orderly.

Negotiations Over Shantung Are Developed to Within Single Issue of Virtual Settlement.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—A sweeping disclaimer of any design against the territorial integrity of Russia, coupled with a pledge to withdraw the Japanese troops stationed in Siberia as soon as orderly conditions are restored, was presented to the arms conference far eastern committee today by the Japanese delegation and was received with a general show of satisfaction by the representatives of the other principal powers.

Formal discussion of the policy was postponed until tomorrow but there was no indication tonight that any of the "big five" delegations would oppose acceptance of today's declaration at its face value, or seriously dispute the plan of continuing, for the present, the Japanese occupation of Siberian soil. The general view was that the whole Siberian problem touched upon today for the first time soon would be disposed of on the basis of the Japanese pledges.

At the same time the long-continued Shantung negotiations also approached their conclusion. At their thirty-first meeting to discuss the subject, the Japanese and Chinese virtually completed an agreement on all of the issues involved except the central question of the Tsing Tao-Esinan Fu railroad, and there were signs of impending developments regarding that. Ma Soo, Washington representative of the unrecognized Chinese government of Canton, announced that a railroad settlement already had been reached.

In connection with the Japanese statement regarding Siberia, it was revealed that the American government had addressed a communication on that subject to Tokio shortly before the arms conference met, and that the Japanese foreign office had replied virtually in the same terms laid down at today's committee meeting by Baron Shidehara. The exact purpose of the American note was not disclosed but it was said to have pointed out that the American forces having been withdrawn from Siberia there was much speculation as to why the Japanese troops remained.

Magnolia Puts Gasoline Up to 21 Cents Monday

A three cent increase in the price of gasoline, moving it from 18 to 20 cents per gallon, was posted by the Magnolia here Monday and was generally followed by independent dealers.

The Magnolia has cut the price twice in the past ten days or two weeks, cutting first from 23 to 20 cents and then to 18. The cuts were generally credited at the time as being due to a local situation and not to general market conditions.

"LETS GET UP A GOLDEN CHAIN OF REMINDERS AND MAKE THIS GREAT CAUSE GO"

To H. N. F., Record News:—

WICHITA FALLS, Texas, Jan. 23.—Enclosed please find my check for $25.00 for the Woodrow Wilson Foundation Fund. I am surprised and pained that this fund seems to go so slowly here. I understand that it is a free-will offering, which puts it up to the hearts and consciences of the folks. That is the way it ought to be, but surely every man that has ever cried, "Hurrah for Wilson!" ought to be willing to concrete his enthusiasm and make it immortal by contributing to this fund. Some of us have cried "Hurrah for Wilson!" with tears in our eyes, and we ought to give at least $10.00. Some of us feel that history will give him a place in the world's beadroll of fame, second to none in this generation. They ought to contribute at least $25.00, "One of these I am which," hence my check.

I don't know how much there is here, but I believe if you would call up a number of prominent men and remind them of this great opportunity, they would send you in a check. I intend to do some of that myself.

If Wichita Falls contributes less than $1000.00 to this great fund, it will be a shame. My own enthusiastic opinion is that long after Wilson's detractors are forgotten the chief archangelic manufacturing jewelers of heaven will be making coronets for this man's immortal brow and in the archives of man golden volumes of praise and eulogy will attest his enduring greatness. Cordially yours,

H. D. KNICKERBOCKER.

P. S.—I nominate Mr. J. A. Kemp, Mr. W. M. Priddy, Mr. Joe Perkins, Mr. Reese Allen and Mr. Walter Cline to double my check and then pass on some nominations to a bunch of their friends to duplicate their example. Lets get up a golden chain of reminders and make this great cause go!

COUNTY MUST PAVE CLAY COUNTY ROAD UNDER CONTRACT

Find Written Agreement Between Commissioners, State Highway Dept. and Potts & Prentice; to Follow Burkburnett paving.

Breaking of Contract Might Cost County Near Half Million in Aid Advanced or Promised by State and Federal Departments.

The road from this city to the Clay county line, the paving of which has been under dispute among members of the commissioners court during the last few weeks, will be paved following the completion of the Burkburnett road, according to an opinion expressed by attorneys and county officials. The statement is based on investigation that has been made as to the agreement entered into by the state and federal officials and the county commissioners court, including Potts and Prentice who have the contract.

Some confusion and difference of opinion has existed in the minds of parties concerned in the dispute regarding the terms of the contract. The original agreement regarding the paving program has been discussed and according to legal opinion the county is legally abligated, according to its terms, to pave the Clay county road.

Substantiated by Records.

The contract on file at the court house, substantiated by the records of the county clerk's office, show that the court entered into a written agreement with the state and federal highway departments to pave the road from this city to the Wilbarger line; from this to Red river; from this city to the Archer county line, commonly known as the Lake road; and from this city to the Clay county line.

The contract was signed by state and federal highway officials and all members of the county commissioners court, which consisted at that time of Judge J. P. Jones, Lee Prescott, H. H. Haynes, E. E. McCluskey and J. S. Fore, commissioners. In its contract with Potts and Prentice, the same roads are specifically mentioned. It has been understood by some that the Clay county road was left out of the original agreement but the copy of the contract on file shows this to have been an error.

Nullifying Action Impossible.

According to the concensus of legal opinion expressed, the contract makes it impossible for the court to now take any nullifying action in the light of the fact that a large part of the agreement had already been carried out. Breaking of the contract at this time, it was said, would release the federal and state highway department from carrying out their part of the agreement. This would mean a loss of $175,000 aid on the Burkburnett road alone and a balance of approximately $50,000 that is due on the Lake and the Wilbarger county line roads that has never been paid. and the return, probably, of a quarter of a million already paid.

The contract says nothing about roads to be paved after the completion of roads specifically mentioned in the agreement and it is presumed that after it is carried out it is optional with the commissioners court as to what highways will be paved.

Might Cost Half Million.

This contract will place the paving of the Clay county stretch, about seven miles, ahead of the paving of three roads in the three precincts outside of Wichita Falls which the county commissioners recently ordered. Two of the three members of the commissioners court who stood solidly for the other program are signatories to the contract, as are the official predecessors in office of all members of the court.

The loss to the county in outside aid would probably amount to a great deal more than the paving of the road in question, one of the cardinal roads, would cost.

FIGHT BREAKS IN SENATE ON DEBT MEASURE

With Provisions Favored by Republicans and Opposed by Democrats, Warm Battle Is in Prospect.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The fight over the allied debt refunding bill broke today in the senate, with Senator McCumber, Republican, North Dakota, in charge of the measure, pleading that the United States "not play the role of Shylock in dealing with the allies" and the Democrats opposing the proposed grant of authority to the debt commission to fix the time when interest payments shall begin.

The first day's consideration of the measure saw only the completion of the opening statement by Senator McCumber as chairman of the finance commission, who was subjected to a rapid cross fire from the minority side. Tomorrow Senator Simmons of North Carolina, ranking Democrat on the finance committee, will open the minority attack and general debate will follow. Republican leaders hope to press the bill to a vote by the end of the week.

Discussion today covered a wide range, including use of proceeds from the refunded bonds to pay the soldier bonus, the ability of the debtor nations to begin paying their interest and the plans of the administration with respect to the sale of some of the refunded obligations in the United States. Pleading for broad authority for the commission in conducting the refunding negotiations, Senator McCumber said, he could conceive of a situation where it might be desirable to agree with a debtor nation to fix the interest rate on bonds high enough to cover during the life of the bonds the accumulated interest.

Such a plan was opposed by Senators Simmons and Lenroot, Republican, Wisconsin. The former said Secretary Mellon had informed the finance committee that President Harding had approved this proposal as a means of making the foreign bonds the more readily saleable in the United States. He added that a serious objection was that if the refunded bonds were sold at par the United States lose all the deferred interest while the purchasers of the bonds would receive it.

Senator McCumber gave it as his opinion that none of the proceeds from the refunded foreign debt would be available for the soldiers bonus until within one year after next July 1, the date on which Republican leaders have said the bonus would be made effective. He thought that congress should provide some form of special taxation to cover bonus payments for the one year and then authorize the sale of a sufficient amount of the bonds to take care of succeeding yearly bonus expenses if the interest from the foreign debt should not prove sufficient. His estimate was that for the first year the bonus would cost $300,000,000.

PARLIAMENT GROUP OPPOSES POLICIES OF LLOYD GEORGE

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—The independent liberals at a meeting in Central hall tonight, definitely placed themselves on record as being opposed to the government of David Lloyd George. Herbert H. Asquith and Viscount Grey of Fallodon, were the principal speakers. Viscount Gladstone, who presided, declared, amid loud cheers, that "we enter the lists and take the field against Mr. Lloyd George and his coalition government."

Mr. Asquith eulogized Viscount Grey as the greatest peacemaker of recent times.

"The return of such a man at such a moment as this to our public life," Mr. Asquith declared, "is the restoration to us of a national asset of incalculable value."

HARDING WAS MONEY GENIUS IN THOSE DAYS

President Waxes Reminiscent and Spins a Tale That Should Go Down in All Economic Primers.

With but $6, "Editor" Harding Took a Friend From Marion to Cleveland and "Took in Sights."

By GEORGE R. HOLMES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Sometimes, in the stress and turmoil of international conferences, treaties, agricultural blocs, tax legislation and other ills that a president of the United States is heir to, Warren G. Harding wishes he could slip back for a little while to the "Good Old Days."

"The Good Old Days" were those when the great American dollar was a power in the land, and a thing to be looked up to and not down upon. The "Good Old Days" were those in which a dollar would buy a dollar watch or twenty fairly good cigars, to say nothing of what it would accomplish in the way of entertainment.

Recently during a fanning bee with "other newspaper men," the president, puffing a sweetly odorous pipe, waxed reminiscent and spun a tale which should go down in all the economic primers of the land. While a great deal of the charm is lost in the re-telling, the story intrinsically is worth much as evidence of what the dollar once would accomplish. Substantially the president told the story as follows:

"This was back in the days when the Marion Star first became affluent enough to afford a reporter. Before that day I had been the editor, the reporter, the advertising man and quite a bit besides.

"Our reporter—let's call him, Bill Jones—was the most ardent admirer of William Shakespeare I've ever seen. I had Shakespearean leanings myself in those days, being particularly partial to Julius Caesar. I've since lost some of my fondness for Caesar, but that is no part of this story.

"At any rate, a noted Shakespearian troupe came to Cleveland one week. Cleveland is about one hundred miles from Marion. Bill yearned to go to Cleveland. He would have gone to Timbuctoo to see Shakespeare creditably acted. I had some yearnings about going myself. So we decided we could make it by a little financial manipulation. We planned to go on Saturday.

"In those days the railroads used to issue passes to proprietors of newspapers. I had one myself, and one for my father. I figured we could get father's pass. O. K.'d over to Bill for this trip, so I sent a request into headquarters to this effect.

MEETING PAYROLL.

"Came along Saturday morning, and the authorization had not come through. We were in somewhat of a fix. After paying off the Star force with the exception of Bill and Jack, the foreman. I had just $16. The foreman's pay was $10. So I went to Jack.

"'Jack,' I said, 'I've got money here to pay you, but I want to go up to Cleveland to see a show. How about letting me give it to you next week?'

"'It looks to me,' he said, 'if you have got money enough to run around to shows you ought to have money enough to pay your help.'

"Well, that made me mad, so I said: 'All right, take it.' But I decided to go anyway.

"I knew all the railroad boys on our division, so we went down to the station and climbed on the train for Cleveland, I with our $6, one pass made out to Warren G. Harding and another George T. Harding, my father.

"HE KNEW ME."

"When the conductor came through I gave him the passes and explained that the authorization had not come through in time for Bill's using my father's pass. He knew me, and it was all right. Everything looked rosy.

"Then we got to Galion, twenty miles away. Galion in those days was the division point. They changed conductors there. When the new conductor came through I repeated my explanation. But it didn't get anywhere.

"'Two-sixty,' said the conductor 'or off you go.'

"There wasn't anything to do but pay it. That left us $3.40, and we landed in Cleveland with $3.40.

"We went straight to the theatre and bought two seats at a dollar apiece. That left us $1.40, and a hundred miles from home.

"I don't think I ever enjoyed a show more. Nor did Bill. We just fairly revelled in that show. We forgot that we had $1.40 and were a hundred miles from home.

THAT BIG DOLLAR.

"Coming out of the theater we started to get something to eat and a place to sleep and get back home.

"Looking for a match or something I poked my finger in my watch pocket. And there, long forgotten, was a one-dollar bill. Never did a bill look so big. It was monumental. That gave us $2.40.

"Well, we went down to an old but very good hotel, and with my heart in my mouth I asked how much it would be for us to spend the night, two in a room. The clerk said a dollar and a half. We took it.

"Next morning we rose, paid our bill, had a substantial breakfast for twenty-five cents apiece, had our shoes shined and purchased the morning papers.

"Then came the question of getting home. We went down to the station, and I said to Bill:

"'There's nothing to it now. You are George T. Harding and that ends it.'

"Well, sir, we went through a-flying. The conductor never glanced at Bill, posing as my father, and we landed in Marion some hours later, still with ten cents.

"There we had gone one hundred miles from home, attended a theater, slept in a good hotel, had breakfast, had our shoes shined and read the news of the world in a leisurely fashion next morning—all for less than $7.

"And those," sighed the president of the United States, "were the Good Old Days."

WEAVER IS RELEASED ON $1000 BOND

Special to The Record News.

GRAHAM, Jan. 23.—W. M. Weaver, former state ranger and now a deputy sheriff, stationed at South Bend, was released tonight on bond charged with assault with intent to murder N. Burton at Oil City Saturday. Weaver was arrested this morning and held at the county jail, until his bond was perfected.

Weaver, who came here from Wichita Falls, several weeks ago and was appointed a deputy sheriff by John W. Saye, sheriff, is alleged to have shot Burton, a drilling contractor at Oil City in the Bunger oil pool. Burton was shot through the hand and arm. According to statements said to have been made by Weaver the shot was fired when he saw Burton reach back as if to get a revolver. The bullet passed through the hand and arm. Burton's condition is not serious.

Sheriff Saye refused to make any statement here today, saying that he had not made a full investigation of the case. He said it was his understanding from what he knew of the case that Weaver had fired thinking Burton was about to fire at him.

W. M. Weaver, arrested at Graham in connection with a shooting case in the oil fields is widely known in this city and county. Up to a few weeks he served as deputy under Sheriff Smith, being stationed at Burkburnett. He was also appointed to the state ranger force while here and served until reductions were made on the force.

Lawyers' Clash Enlivens Court At Shreveport

SHREVEPORT, La., Jan. 23.—One broken umbrella was the single casualty of a near battle this morning between John D. Wilkinson, Shreveport attorney and Huey P. Long also a lawyer and member of the Louisiana public service commission. The encounter occurred in the courtroom over which Judge E. P. Mills was presiding at the time.

Mr. Wilkinson made a pass at Mr. Long saying "here is your answer." Mr. Long brought an umbrella which he was carrying, into play which in some manner was broken. Deputy Sheriff Huckaby and others interfered and separated the combatants. Later Mr. Wilkinson explained to Judge Mills that he had been provoked by a letter which he said Mr. Long had addressed to him following the hearing of the application of the Kansas City Southern railway before the federal district court in New Orleans. Mr. Wilkinson was attorney for the railroad and Mr. Long made the chief argument in the case for the state commission.

Neither combatants made any statement after the affair.

POPE'S BURIAL TO LIKELY BE ON WEDNESDAY

Two American Cardinals Are Not Expected to Reach Rome in Time to Participate in Conclave.

By Associated Press.

ROME, Jan. 23.—The interment of Benedict XV has been tentatively fixed for Wednesday afternoon. The body will lie in state in the Basilica of St. Peters only a day and a half more, according to the present plans. Benedict's wish not to be embalmed necessitates separture from the custom that the pope's body lie in state for three days.

The certificate of the pope's death which was registered today will be entered in the record of the capitol at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. In view howgver, of the late pope's high rank, the mayor himself will make the entry.

Participation of the American cardinals in the conclave, the date for the opning of which has bee definitely fixed for February 2, is still possible, but is received as doubtful by the secretary of state. A cable mesage has been received from Cardinal O'Connell of Boston, announcing that he was taking passage for Rome tomorrow, while Cardinal Dougherty has cabled that he will not reach Philadelphia before Friday.

Monsignor Pizzardo who as acting secretary of state, said today that Cardinal O'Connell had possible chance of reaching Rome in time, providing the conclaves does not choose a new pope on the first ballot, but he thought that Cardinal Dougherty' chances were very poor.

Asked concerning the possibility of postponing the conclave to permit the American cardinals to attend, the secretary replied that the constitution would have to be amended for that purpose, as the conclave must be called within ten days after the death of the pope.

HOOVER WOULD ECONOMIZE IN U. S. INDUSTRY

American Industrial Waste Far Overshadows Saving Provided in Naval Reduction Proposal.

Building and Printing Trades Each Squander $100,000,000 Annually, Announces Mr. Hoover.

By HERBERT COREY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Here is a problem in political mathematics:

"If the United States can save $100,000,000 a year by cutting its navy down to fit a smaller suit of battleships—

"How much can be saved each year by getting rid of the 40 per cent waste in 'American industry?'"

There isn't any answer. No one knows what the answer would be if it were found. No one knows whether the 40 per cent. waste can be cut out. But Secretary Hoover of the Department of Commerce, is trying to do that very thing. Already he has found, as he believes, that

"By the elimination of needless waste in the building industry alone $100,000,000 can be saved each year."

Dollars and Cents Basis

That is just about what is to be saved by the naval reorganization if the navy is reorganized, yet one has heard nothing about it here in Washington. The captains and the kings have had first call on the first page and we have all been listening to the tumult and the shouting. Yet if the current activities in Washington were to be measured on a dollar and cents basis the disarmament conference would rank something as a peanut stand would against a sawmill in real importance to the nation.

Mr. Hoover is an engineer. Every one knows he is good engineer. He made a sizable fortune by being a better engineer than others who competed with him. When he took charge of the Department of Commerce he found that thanks to a hidebound method of procedure which had grown up during the years, the department was making tremendous strides, but it was not getting much of anywhere. Most of the time it put its feet down in the same tracks. An instance of this is in the Bureau of the Census.

Some Two-Year-Old Hash

For weeks past my desk has been littered by the daily output of this bureau. A census is being taken and all sorts of important facts are being gathered. Picking up the top sheet of the morning's grist I discover that it relates to "the classification of the white and colored population of Indiana as of Jan. 1, 1920." Get the date, Jan. 1, 1920, or two years ago. It seems to me that those interested in the white and colored population of Indiana would also like to know how it classified as of Jan. 1, 1922. It certainly seems that those who are interested in business facts would prefer to have them served up fresh and hot, rather than to get a cold dish of two-year-old hash.

Anyhow, that is what Secretary Hoover thinks. He is so arranging matters that in the future the output of the Bureau of the Census will be available to those interested while it is still news and before it becomes ancient history. In other bureaus of the department much the same condition prevailed. Statisticians used to gather the most excellent statistics for the department. Then they were filed away. No one ever heard of them. So far as the business men of the country are concerned few of them were able to get what assistance they needed from the Department of Commerce. The department was all right, but its system was chained to the rails.

Secretary Hoover's Reforms

Hoover is trying to do two important things among many:

First, to provide for the business men of the country a service of up-to-the-minute information on the matters which interest them.

Second, to enlist the co-operation of the business men in order that waste may be cut down.

As an instance of the extent to which avoidable waste enters into the country's business the case of the paving brick manufacturers may be taken. It is hard to see why a brick seven inches long should not be as good a brick to be stepped on by a horse as a brick seven and three-eighths inches long. Yet it happens that there were over sixty standard sizes of paving brick being manufactured. Each brick called for special machinery, and the manufacturers who attempted to carry these sizes in stock found themselves with yards full of more or less dead brick. The addition to the overhead may be seen easily.

"I cannot issue an executive order," Hoover said in effect. "This isn't Germany. But let's get together."

Brick and Printing Wastes

So they did, and after talking it over the paving brick manufacturers decided to cut the number of sizes down to twelve or thirteen. They are now at work on a plan to reduce the number still further. In the printing trades it was discovered that because of the failure to use standard sizes and thicknesses, paper to the value of $100,000,000 is being wasted annually. The United Typothetae have estimated that the printing shops of the country are overequipped from 50 to 150 per cent. The same thing is true in every other industry.

If Secretary Hoover succeeds in furnishing the business men of the United States with the information they need when they need it—which is not being done by any other country in the world—and induces them to co-operate in the ridding themselves of the present enormous loss by preventable waste—

Well, where is the country which can catch us—let alone head us off?

Yeast Best When Ironized

The reason IRONIZED YEAST brings such splendid results is simply this—IRONIZED YEAST stands forth among its host of imitators as the perfected vitamine tonic treatment. It is scientifically correct in every way, containing in highly concentrated form a specially cultured yeast which is grown under the strictest supervision for medicinal purposes—a yeast which is unequalled for its richness in the essential Water Soluble B vitamines. In addition it contains the correct amount of the two other vitamines—Fat Soluble A and Water Soluble C—which are equally important to health.

These three vitamines bring excellent results even if taken alone—but when through a special process they are ironized as in IRONIZED YEAST, these results are secured often in just half the usual time!

READ!

"I am very happy to say that I have found great results from the Three-Day Trial Treatment. I have gained three pounds and my complexion has cleared very noticeably."

"The Three-Day Treatment has worked wonderfully! I have made a good gain in weight and will continue taking Ironized Yeast until I reach normal."

"I have never seen such quick results. The Three-Day Trial has given me an appetite and I am beginning to feel a great deal better already."

WARNING!

Due to the marked superiority of IRONIZED YEAST it is being widely imitated. IRONIZED YEAST is entirely different from ordinary combinations of yeast and iron—or yeast and iron taken separately. Certain types of yeast and iron have absolutely no value medicinally. IRONIZED YEAST, on the other hand, means not only specially cultured yeast and other vitamines, but the special process by which these vitamines are ironized. There is only one IRONIZED YEAST. Insist upon it always—for nothing else can be like it.

Money Back Guarantee

IRONIZED YEAST is sold at all drug stores on a positive guarantee that the first package will bring satisfactory results—or your money instantly refunded.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY HOLDS MEETING MONDAY

Taking for the subject of the lesson, "Bibles and Mission," members of the Woman's Auxiliary of the First Presbyterian church held an interesting meeting at the church Monday afternoon.

Roll call was answered with church and missionary news and Mesdames J. C. Berney and J. A. Kemp assisted with the study program. Devotionals were led by Mrs. Ira Eells.

HEARING ON RATES OPENS MONDAY HERE

The hearing on the complaint of the Wichita Motors company against the Alabama and Vicksburg railway company and other railroads involving alleged discrimination in the matter of freight rates will be continued today before Special Commissioner Oliver of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The hearing opened Monday but it is expected that it will require all of today to obtain the evidence in the case.

The suit for hearing was filed by the local company several months ago. In its petition the company claims that discrimination is being shown by the railroads in the matter of freight rates for motor vehicles. At the hearing Monday the company introduced evidence tending to show that the rate for shipment to New Orleans was considerable higher than from other points more distant.

The local company is asking for $9,000 damages in connection with its suit. Representatives of several railroad companies are in attendance at the hearing.

WILL ABOLISH PASSPORTS AT BORDER MEXICO

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Passport restriction for Americans entering Mexico and Mexicans entering this country from Mexico will be abolished February 1 under executive orders signed by President Harding and by President Obregon, it was learned today at the state department.

The department, it was announced, was advised today by its charge d'Affaires at Mexico City that the executive order had been signed in Mexico City on January 18 to permit Americans on and after Feb. 1 to enter without passports, permits, identity cards or similar documents. President Harding, it was added, had signed a similar executive order here extending the same privileges to Mexicans who enter the United States from Mexico.

PERSHING DECLINES TO ACCEPT AWARD BOARD VOTED HIM

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—General Pershing decilned today to accept a distingnished service cross voted him by the army board of awards which Secretary Weeks had planned to bestow on him at a "surprise party" arranged to take place in the war secretary's office.

The general discovered the secret of the party and went immediately to Mr. Weeks' house where the latter was at lunch, to declare his undeservedness of the honor. Secretary Weeks then decided that the general's wishes should be respected and cancelled his plans for the party.

General Pershing declined the award of the medal of honor for the same exploit concerned in today's presentation. This was an incident occuring when he was a brigadier general in the Philippine islands in 1913. The medal which was to have been awarded him today was in substitute for the medal of honor and was voted by the board in the belief that is was deserved.

WORKS FOR CHILD MUST KEEP WELL

Mothers in a Like Situation Should Read This Letter from Mrs. Enrico

Chicago, Illinois.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a serious trouble. I had tried doctors and all said the same—an operation. At first I only felt the pain on my left side, but later I seemed to feel it on both sides. I am a power sewing-machine operator and have a little girl to support. I work in a tailor shop and that line of work has been very slack this year and I am home part of the time. I do not like to take any chances, so I consulted my friends, and one lady said, 'Take Lydia Pinkham's medicine,' so I did. I have felt better right along and am in good enough health to go to work. I recommend your Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash to all."—Mrs. MARY ENRICO, 459 N. Carpenter St., Chicago.

Often the mother is obliged to support her children and good health is necessary. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is just the medicine you can depend upon. It is a medicine for women's ailments and the relief it brought Mrs. Enrico it may bring to you.

Fashions for Americans

Novelty in the application of trimmings is one of the new features of early spring frocks and suits. For example, a real tailored appearance may be given to a little silk frock by binding it with braid at all possible points, finishing it with stitching, and further embellishing it with self-covered tailored buttons, while a dainty feminine touch will be given to a wool fabric frock or suit by trimming it with organdie, embroidered batiste, etc.

The dress shown in the sketch is one of the silk crepe tailored models so much in favor. The frock was developed in one of the henna shades and trimmed with very narrow black silk braid and black silk covered buttons. Several rows of braid were combined to form the rather wide belt and the cape—detachable, of course—was a straight section of the fabric, bound all around with the braid and simply folded over to form a cruch collar.

The sleeves of this dress are of the bishop type, slit on the underarm from wrist almost to elbow, the opening being braid-bound. The narrow cuff is of braid.

The irregular hem line of this frock is an old-new feature. The uneven hem was introduced several seasons ago and has continued to be popular. Some of the new frocks show skirts that are longer on one side than on the other, some are long back and front and short at sides, while more, perhaps, are long at the sides, with shorter back and front widths, and not a few, even of the separate skirts, are arranged in drapes panels so that a "raggedy" hem line is in evidence. An uneven line at the hem may even be very attractively developed by a sash tied so that one end hangs well below the skirt hem proper.

Certainly Dame Fashion develops many interesting novelties each season. But their charm depends upon the manner in which they are worn. A woman who possesses style may wear anything becomingly, and the woman who hasn't "charm" will make a poor appearance in even the most gorgeous gown—unless it is fshioned and worn properly.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 23.—The State Athletic commission today voted to suspend for thirty days Pinkey Mitchell and his brother-manager, Billy, and Tom Andrews, promoter, for negligence in reporting Pinkey Mitchell in connection with his cancelled bout with Benny Leonard, champion lightweight on the afternoon of Jan. 2.

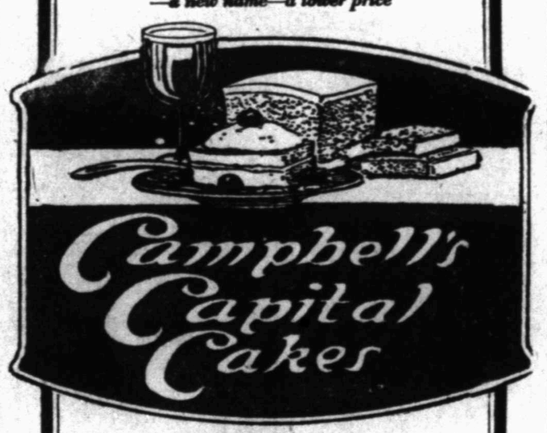

Mitchell was stricken with an inflamed shoulder and the commission should have been advised of it several hours sooner than it was.

Women were called in to aid National Council, the predecessor of the House of Lords, as long ago as 670.

Campbell's Capital Cakes

formerly known as

STONE'S CAKES

They're back to the pre-war figure and are really an exceptional value for the money. We have been looking forward to the day when we could bring our cakes to the old-time price and at last we have reached that time. It is, of course, only by building an immense volume of business that we can sell a high grade cake like Campbell's at this low figure without losing money. However, we feel the public will buy more at the ten-cent price and make it possible for us to continue to give, as we always have given, the best real cake value for the money.

CAMPBELL'S CAPITAL CAKES save the expense and worry of cake baking, and are of greatest purity because only the choicest of materials, including real butter and fine, fresh eggs besides the highest grade flour, sugar and flavoring materials, go into them.

Varieties as follows:

MUSICIANS' CLUB PRESENTS THURLOW LIEURANCE TRIO AT KEMP MONDAY MORNING

Perhaps the most unusual concert of the season and most certainly one of the most enjoyable one the Musician's club has sponsored since its organization took place in the hall room of the Kemp hotel Monday as the initial "Musical Morning" of several which the club expects to give.

The refreshing program and entertainment was offered by Thurlow Lieurance, composer-pianist, Mrs. Thurlow Lieurance, soprano and interpreter of Indian songs and George Tack, flutist.

A large audience left the Kemp Monday morning with a vastly increased knowledge and interest in Indian folk lore and music, together with a deep-seated regard and gratitude for Thurlow Lieurance who has rendered an inestimable service to American music by his careful investigation of aboriginal tribal melodies and through his rare ideality, has saved from oblivion this fast disappearing art.

Admirably adapted is Mrs. Lieurance to interpret these songs which constitute the program, gifted with a voice of unusual sweetness, with a wide range demanded by the nature of the songs, and with an odd appealing quality seldom heard. The charming artist also posesses a rare dramatic ability, visualizing her numbers with a compelling pantomine.

She wore beautiful costumes and trinkets the work of various tribes represented in the songs, which added to the artistic program.

From her opening group, from "Green Timber" including "Wild Bird" and "Where Cedars Rise" to the finale "A Hymn to the Sun God" which was folowed by a home lullaby "The Bird and the Babe" the program held absorbing interest. Mr. Lieurance enhanced his interest by relating the legends inspiring his compositions and other sources from which he drew his inspiration and fascinating material. His skillful accompaniments and the exquisite flute obbligatos of Mr. Tack perfected the artistic touch to the entertainment.

The flute and conspicuous part it played in the life of the Indian was interestingly explained by Mr. Lieurance and flutes of several tribes were exhibited. Mr. Tack proved himself to be an artist of exceptional ability.

It would be difficult to name a favorite number on the program unless it was "By the Waters of Minnetonka" which perhaps being more familiar than the other compositions was a "tiny bit" the favorite, being encored and sung twice by the gracious artist. "In Mirrored Waters" was sung in Sioux dialect, the "Lullaby" from the Pueblocs also being a dialect selection. Several of the compositions were encored until they were repeated, and all of them were graciously received.

Mrs. John W. King, second vice president of the Musician's club in the absence of the president, Mrs. C. F. Spencer, made the opening remarks and introduced the artists.

An invitation was extended the Junior Musicians club of the local junior high and high schools by the senior club, and 120 accompanied by their instructors, Miss Pyle, supervisor of music in the city schools, and Misses Genevieve Goff and Martha Roper, teachers, were in attendance. Large parties from several neighboring towns were also present.

Following the program, an informal reception was held at which the audience was invited to met the artists.

the benefit of the advice it contains.

A report received from Mexico City that representatives of five of the leading America oil companies had reached an agreement with the Mexican government in connection with the production and export taxes on Mexican crude oil could not be confirmed by the New York Times. According to the Times the opinion was that if such was the case the announcement would have to be made by the Mexican officials and the same answer was given at the time the settlement was reached in September, 1921, when the five American oil companies suspended operations for more than two months as a protest against what they were pleased to designate as "confiscatory taxation." This reminds H. N. F. that Colonel W. Francis Wilson, seventy-three years old, veteran oil geologist of London, now in Mexico, as the representative of a syndicate of British capitalists, which is preparing to enter the oil industry on a large scale, has the distinction of being the first man to discover oil in the Aztec country. In an interview Colonel Wilson said: "About fifty years ago I tried to induce eastern capitalists to buy or lease the lands in Mexico which are now giving up vast quantities of oil. It is rather amusing to look back over the days when capitalists and geologists from the East shook their heads and said Mexico was out of the question, so far as petroleum was concerned. Geologists said it was a volcanic country and oil would not be found in paying quantities; that the seepages were merely the result of great seismic disturbances; that it was useless to undertake development, etc. My opinion is that Mexican petroleum deposits have barely been touched. The producing areas are, at present, very limited, but the prospects are good for widening them to a large extent. The areas which former-day geologists said were volcanic are sedimentary, and not volcanic. This theory was not generally believed by men who made a study of Mexican deposits." Colonel Wilson and the geologists of New York City are very far apart. He says the surface of Mexico has just been scratched and that fabulous mineral wealth awaits the developing touch of the driller. They say that the Tampico field has been exhausted. It is to laugh.

Irrigation has worked wonders the world over. Irrigation has worked wonders under Texas skies. Irrigation will work wonders in the vast territory contiguous to Wichita Falls. Conservation of flood waters will some day reclaim hundreds of millions of acres of desert waste in this republic of ours. A Washington correspondent says Uncle Sam is rapidly improving conditions for the Northwest Indians and through the reclamation service irrigated lands are encouraging active practical agriculture among many tribes. Hon. Cato Sells of Texas, commissioner of Indian affairs during the Woodrow Wilson regime, was a champion of reclamation and irrigation and his work speaks for itself. In the building of dams, reservoirs and fluens the labor of Indians is utilized as far as possible. They are not as reliable nor as steady as the white worker, but most of them are willing to work for a part of each year. The Blackfeet Indian project in Teton county, in Northwestern Montana occupies an area larger than the state of Rhode Island, fifty miles square, and this section will soon be irrigated entirely. At present, 150,000 acres have water and produce excellent crops. Much of this land is leased to whites, but Indians are rapidly learning the farming and fruit business. The Flathead Indian irrigation unit comprises land lying in three counties. The central body of the tract is a series of connected valleys protected by mountain ranges and watered by streams flowing inward. The greater part of the tract was once the bed of an ancient lake. Portions of the valley and all the mountain slopes are covered with timber, mainly fir, pine and larch. Irrigation has been practiced for many years. Congress has appropriated money for the purchase from the Flathead tribe, lands suitable for a big bison range. The buffalo number about 460. There are some 70 antelope and 150 elk and a few deer. The whole project contemplates the final irrigation of 152,000 acres of land. The chief products are alfalfa, grain and vegetables. At the extreme northeast of Montana is the Fort Peck Indian reservation, where an irrigation project will change the hay lands and poor farming sections into wealth producing communities. The plan designed will water 160,000 acres. Numerous large reclamation projects in Idaho have been of benefit in encouraging agriculture with small tribes resident in that section. In Northern Washington, the Okanogan irrigation unit on the former Colville Indian reservation has watered an immense area of arid land and the remnant of the tribe now located near Omak, has turned to the useful arts. Some of the Colville Indians produced prize taking apples last summer. In order to develop many thousand acres of waste land in Central Washington another large system is being rushed at present. The dam situated in the Cascade mountains at Rimrock, when completed will be the highest in the world, something like three hundred and fifty feet. A district over one hundred miles long will be benefited and many of the smaller Indian tribes will for the first time have an opportunity to scan the seed catalogues and plant fruitful fields. Further south in Oregon the government is working on a great irrigation plant near the Klamath Lake swamps to store up a sufficient amount of water to make fruitful the vast area of desert in the central part. In due time the Indians will be fully settled on their own irrigated lands. In the west is a vast empire of rich resources in soil, favored climate and the possibilities of the Indians in their truly last stand are more staggering in their magnitude than the imagination can picture. And the many wise red men are awake and assisting Uncle Sam to retrieve his past record of treatment of the Indian of seventy years ago.

PRIVACY AND NEIGHBORLINESS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

(Copyright, 1921, by Frank Crane.)

Myron T. Herrick, the American Ambassador to France, made a speech the other day at a dinner given in Paris to the Marquis de Peralla, Minister of Costa Rica to France, in honor of the latter gentleman's fifty years of diplomatic service in France. In his speech Mr. Herrick said:

"National privacy, like family privacy, in no sense excludes or need even diminish, public service. We may still hold fast to the old English doctrine that our house is our castle and inviolate, but that does not diminish our desire to offer a wide hospitality to our friends, or join our fellow-citizens in public places for the public good. Isolation, exclusiveness, whatever you may call it, is thus a term whose significance lies wholly in the method of its application.

"In their family affairs the people of the United States like to be let alone as much as possible; but there is no goodly undertaking set on foot by their neighbors in which they do not ask to take their share. Monsieur de Peralla instinctively felt this."

With his usual sound sense, Mr. Herrick indicates here the eventual issue and settlement, when it cools, of the hot question which is now boiling throughout the United States. That question is whether we shall, with the irreconcilables, carry to its rigid conclusion the policy of America for Americans, and have nothing to do with other nations except to go out and fight with them once in a while, and to loud the country with taxes between times getting ready to fight, or on the other hand whether we shall adopt some plan of getting along with our neighbors that would be cheaper and more to our mutual advantage.

And the way out, in this question as in most questions, is not to be a triumph of one idea over another, but a compromise between the two. That is to say, we shall not abandon our nationality and merge into a superstate, nor shall we maintain our utter isolation between two oceans bristling with battle fields.

We shall do neither because we shall do a little of both.

We are going to keep on being the United States of America and nothing else. We are going to mind our own business and not meddle with the affairs of other people nor try to regulate them. At the same time, we are going to unite with them enough so that we can get along with them with a minimum of friction.

And the way to do this is quite simple. It is merely to extend the principle of Federation.

The central idea of Federation is that each state is independent and superior in its own concerns and yet is so allied to all the other states as to remove the necessity of being ready to fight them.

To be a good citizen does not imply that one should not maintain his proud position as a member of the Jones family.

In fact, the eventual World Government is not to be a gluey mass of one kind of people, but rather an ordered edifice made up of distinct and independent parts.

To this unity the awkward and quarrelsome world is slowly lumbering.

DUMM AND DUMMER ON BRIAND'S RESIGNATION.

"I'm thinking of a trip abroad to see the ruins of France," confessed Senator Dumm to his colleague Representative Dummer as he came across him in the corner cigar store fumbling with the automatic lighter.

"Why don't you go to see the ruins of the French premiers?" asked Dummer. "There are more of 'em."

"Your reference is, I suppose, to the resignation of Aristide Briand," returned Dumm. "Well, I hate to see Aristide go, but in France the job of a premier is about as secure as the job of a prohibition enforcement officer in America. French cabinets are run by the same set of directions you find on cod liver oil."

"What's them?" asked Dummer.

"Shake well before using," replied Dumm. "Briand was only the late fall and early winter premier, anyhow. They choose them by seasons over there, and it was about time to pick the early spring premier.

"It's too bad," muttered Dummer. "Briand won't mind it," reasoned Dumm. "He's resigned as premier so many times it's become a habit with him. I think he has had the job seven or eight times and passed it up."

"He must be running for the International In-and-Out Championship," suggested Dummer. "From where I sit he reminds me of a man running around in a revolving storm door."

"This time I understand he is very determined to stay out; in fact he may remain out for eight or nine months."

"What did he resign for?" asked Dummer, "I thought the French chamber had given him a vote of confidence only a couple days before."

"That's probably why he quit" informed Dumm. "There is nothing to be regarded with more suspicion than a vote of confidence by a French chamber. Look over the record and see for yourself. As soon as the.... what do you call the members of a French chamber, Dummer?"

"Chambermaids," suggested Dummer.

"Don't be such a goof!" rebuked Dumm. "I think they call 'em deputies. Well, as I was saying, as soon as the deputies have given a premier a vote of confidence they flurry into executive session and take up hammer throwing for distance and accuracy. A vote of confidence in France means about the same thing as the warm handshake which two fighters indulge in in this country just before they start fighting."

"What did they have against Briand anyway?" asked Dummer. "I've seen his pictures in the newspapers and I sort of figured that if anything cost him his job it would be the way he combed his hair."

"You mean the way he didn't comb it, but his hair had nothing to do with it," replied Dumm. "The objection of the chamber to Briand was that he was trying to be reasonable in the negotiations with Great Britain and the United States with regard to disarmament, the German debt, and so forth. The French are suffering from a severe attack of suspicionitis. Every time an automobile backfires in the vicinity of a French government official these days he rushes into the chamber ,says Germany has started a new war, and demands a larger army and navy."

"France was afraid Briand would be a party to some international plan to guarantee France security from attack," continued Dumm.

"Why should France be afraid of that?" asked Dummer.

"France is never satisfied unless she feels insecure. For centuries the French have been trained to live in fear of an invasion. If a Frenchman was put in the position where he had no reason to fear Germany it would make him very unhappy. I'm beginning to think France fears security more than she fears war."

"Did Briand have any outstanding enemies?" asked Dummer.

"His chief opponent was Millerand."

"Miller and who else?" asked Dummer.

"Just Millerand," insisted Dumm. "it's all one word. He and Briand differ, I understand, over the next conference."

"What next conference?" asked Dummer.

"Genoa," snapped Dumm.

"Genoa what?" demanded Dummer.

"Genoa good cigar if you saw one?" replied Dumm, pushing Dummer into the circular-glassed cigar case.

HOW OL' MISTAH BUZZARD WARMS HIS TOES

Often and often had Peter Rabbit wondered how Ol' Mistah Buzzard and all his other feathered friends who had flown away to the far away south at the first hint that Jack Frost was on his way to the Green Meadows spent the long winter. It seemed to Peter that the South must be a very wonderful and very strange place. He was not at all sure that he would like it. It must be very nice not to have to worry about finding enough to eat, and yet—well, Peter did have lots of fun in the snow. It seemed to him that all those little people who went away certainly missed a great deal. Now, Winsome Bluebird had returned from that far away South with the good news that Mistress Spring was not far behind, and Winsome had promised to tell him all the news of Ol' Mistah Buzzard and the other friends.

"You see," began Winsome, "Ol' Mistah Buzzard was born and brought up in the South, where it is always warm, and he just can't stand cold weather. No, sir, he can't stand cold weather. Why, weather that you and I would call comfortable will make him shiver and shake. That is why he wasn't ready to come up with me. Now, I come ahead of Mistress Spring, but Ol' Mistah Buzzard won't start until he is sure that Mistress Spring has been here some time and he will be sure not to have cold feet."

"Cold feet!" cried Peter. Who ever heard of such a thing! Why, I run around on the snow and ice all winter long and I never have cold feet."

"Well, Ol' Mistah Buzzard does," replied Winsome Bluebird, "Yes, sir, he is always complaining about cold feet. You know he hasn't any shoes or stockings like you, Peter, so between his bare feet and his bald head he has, or thinks he has, a great deal to worry about every time there is a cool day and they sometimes have cool days even way down South. Then you will always find Ol' Mistah Buzzard warming his toes."

Peter scratched his head in a funny way. "If you please, Winsome, how does he warm his toes?" asked Peter. "I never see him warming his toes when he is up here. He's always sailing round and round way up in the blue, sky or else sitting on a dead tree in the Green Forest. I've never heard him complain of cold feet or seen him try to warm his toes."

"Of course, you haven't!" replied Winsome. "He doesn't have cold feet then, because it's summer time. It's just as you say, if you don't see him up in the blue, blue sky you are sure to find him on that old dead tree. But down South it is different. If you want to see him there and he isn't way up in the blue, blue sky trying to get nearer to Mr. Sun so as to warm his bald head, why you just look for him on a toe-warmer."

"Peter's eyes seemed to fairly pop out with curiosity. "What's a toe-warmer?" he demanded. "I never heard of such a thing. What does it look like?"

Winsome Bluebird chuckled softly. "Have you ever been up by Farmer Brown's house?" he asked.

Peter nooded.

"Then you've seen that thing on the roof out of which smoke sometimes comes," continued Winsome. Again Peter nooded. "Well," continued Winsome, "if Farmer Brown's house was down South that thing out of which smok comes would be one of Ol' Mistah Buzzard's toe-warmers."

Peter looked sharply at Winsome to see if he really meant what he said. "Doesn't anybody live in those houses down South?" he asked suspiciously.

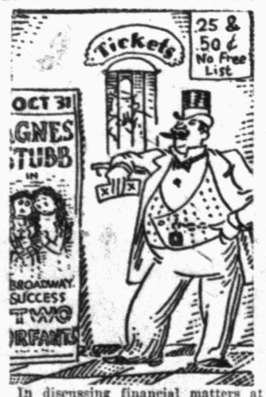

"Of course," replied Winsome. "If they didn't how could Mistah Buzzard warm his toes?"

"And he isn't afraid?" persisted Peter, as if it was very hard to believe.

"Afraid!" cried Winsome. Why, he hasn't anything to be afraid of. Mr. Buzzard is thought a great deal of, a very great deal of, in the South, and no one would hurt him for the world. So every house has a toe-warmer for him, which is very nice for him. And you won't see him back here until it is so warm that he forgets all about cold feet," concluded Winsome Bluebird.

The Daily Story

AN INFANT TRANSGRESSOR

Copyright, 1921, by W. Werner

The suddenness, the unheard of audacity of it, took Mrs. Clammer's breath away. When Lizzie, the chambermaid, came and told her she sank into a chair and called weakly for water.

"When I went into the room, ma'am, the doctor was just going. Mrs. Lovering was near crying and Mr. Lovering acted kind of worried and sorrylike. And the nurse says to me, she says, 'Don't you want to see the baby?' And she uncovered it, and there it lay, a nice, fat, pink baby, as if it owned the house, said the girl.

Incapable for the time being of speech, Mrs. Clammer fanned herself vigorously. She who for twenty-five years had boasted of the order and quiet of her establishment, who had loudly and truthfully proclaimed that children had no place in her noiseless, spotless house, to be taken in like this! Anger got the best of her. She rose and started for the stairs. But in the hallway she stopped.

Young Mr. Lovering stood there, fidgeting nervously with his hat. "I suppose you have heard," he said.

"I have heard," answered Mrs. Clammer coldly.

"It was really unexpected—so soon," stammered Mr. Lovering. "My wife—"

"Couldn't she have gone to the hospital?" demanded Mrs. Clammer.

"She wanted to," eagerly explained Mr. Lovering. "It was all arranged, but the baby wouldn't wait. We had barely time to call the doctor, and—"

Mrs. Clammer sniffed scornfully. She had a very poor opinion of a baby to arrive in such a hurry.

"And I suppose you had no people, no parents or suchlike, to go to, instead of coming to me."

"I have no parents. Neither has my wife," said Mr. Lovering quietly. "And we couldn't get a flat. Don't be angry, Mrs. Clammer. I—I will make it up to you. And—and he's quite a respectable baby, I assure you."

Mrs. Clammer sniffed again. A respectable baby, indeed! Respectable he might be, but no amount of respectability could alter the fact that he was interfering with the peace and comfort of her guests. "Of course, it's too late to do anything now," she said pointedly, "but we can't put up with babies in boarding houses; so you had better make arrangements to go somewhere else as soon as your wife is a little better."

"My dear Mrs. Clammer," said the young man earnestly, "I've been looking ever since we got married. But you know what the present conditions are. As soon as I find a hole big enough to contain my wife, my baby, and myself we'll crawl into it."

"Very well," said Mrs. Clammer, with emphasis, and retired to her chamber to recover from the shock.

Among the boarders, too, the advent of the Lovering baby produced no small sensation.

"The idea!" said Mrs. Brooks Dudley.

"The nerve" said Brooks Dudley.

"Entirely lacking in manners," declared Miss Malvin Casalbeane, the school teacher.

"And in consideration," added Mr. Geoffrey Spindell, the dyspeptic musician, who roomed next the Loverings.

"Never could stand the meowing of a kid," said Charlie Spater, the vaudeville actor.

"Don't ever get any sleep now," peevishly murmured Mrs. Ofey, who lived for her symptoms.

And so it went on. Mrs. Clammer explained that the latest guest had come entirely without her permission and approval; that he and his inquitous parents were in the house merely because she was too tenderhearted to throw them into the street. It was a weakness on her part, of course, but what could she do?

Young Master Lovering meanwhile, instead of repenting his hasty conduct and keeping sedately quiet and self-effacing, set up a terrific howl. Without a trace of compunction for his unlooked-for and unwelcome arrival, he betrayed a lack of respect and consideration for his neighbors that was truly shocking. Regardless of the magnitude of his misdemeanor, he threw his lusty challenge full into the ears of Mrs. Clammer and her guests, and invited them to do their worst.

Two months passed. The atmosphere was charged with low-voiced, grumbling complaints. Mr. and Mrs. Lovering began to wear a hunted look. Then one day Miss Malvina Casalbeane, passing by the Lovering door, met the guilty infant in the arms of his young mother, fast asleep. Miss Casalbeane would have passed on with a cool bow. She had no patience with babies, or with mothers who kept them in boarding houses. But the presumptuous and annoying infant opened a pair of deep blue eyes, gave her a grin, revealing two small rows of soft pink gums, and went to sleep again.

Miss Casalbeane gasped. "Why—why—he's a nice baby! Such a nice baby! Why, I'd—I'd like to kiss him!"

Little Mrs. Lovering smiled. "I'm glad you like him. He's not a very popular baby, I'm afraid."

"Well, you see," apologized Miss Casalbeane, "he was such a surprise. And we—we really didn't know he was such a nice baby." She simply couldn't get over his being such a nice baby and from that day on was his devoted friend.

A few more weeks passed. Whether Miss Casalbean spread the news that he was not such a depraved infant after all or whether, on account of his extreme youth, they decided to forgive his poor judgment and bad taste, one after another of Mrs. Clammers' paying guests began to take an active and lively interest in the Lovering baby. And though he laughed rudely in their faces and pulled their hair and scratched their noses, he rose higher and higher in their esteem. Mrs. Lovering was besieged with offers to take him out for air; to sew little dresses for him; to help with his bath. And just when he seemed thoroughly established in the good graces of the household Mr. Lovering announced that he had discovered a flat. It was a bombshell. Like lightning the news spread that the Loverings were going to move.

"They'll take the baby," said Mrs. Brooks Dudley, mournfully.

"They won't leave him here, worse luck," said Brooks Dudley.

"I'll sure miss the little fellow," said Geoffrey Spindell. "Seems as if I've felt better since that youngster came along."

"Too bad," said Charlie Spatter, the vaudevillian. "Prettiest kid I ever saw."

"I never knew," said Mrs. Ofey, thoughtfully, "that a baby was such a nice thing to amuse oneself with."

Miss Casalbeane put her handkerchief to her eyes and left the room, but Mrs. Clammer wept openly and unashamed.

Rippling Rhymes

By WALT MASON

TAINTED MONEY.

J. Highlow Jigsmith rides in state in his large limousine; he has the price, he pays the freight, he's loaded with long green. Bystanders view him as he goes, and mutter, while they look, "He looms up big and yet he knows that he is but a crook." They sadly murmur as they gaze, "He is the chief of sharks; he got his money swindling jays and rubes and easy marks." The people dwell his deeds upon, and all his deeds they know; they know his record pro and con, and also to and fro. And so whenever he appears, as Bungtown's ope best bet, they dig up from the bygone years the things he would forget. I often think, when sawing wood, at fifty cents a cord, that it is better to be good and gain a small reward. I'd hate to own a stack of brass, and Croesus-like appear, and have men whisper as I pass, the things I'd hate to hear. I often think, while herding ducks, or drinking drugstore fizz, that countless rolls of shining bucks won't buy the best there is. A massive fortune costs too much, and twice too much again, if the possessor gets in Dutch with honest fellow men. J. Highlow rides around in state, in opulence sublime; but had he always traveled straight he'd have a better time.

Ben Neal "Pours It On 'Em;" Kiwanians Install New Officers

Straying afar from the rock-strewn pastures of real estate into the greener, fairer fields of higher education, to cast a halter o'er the head of noble prose and to bridle glorious poetry, Ben Neal, president of the Kiwanis club, last night brought to a close the annual dinner of that organization with a speech that might well have caused remorseful men to exclaim with Wolsey—

"Had I but served my God with half the zeal I served my king, He would not in mine age have left me naked to my enemies!"

Or, in less pendantic language, let us declare that Ben Neal certainly delivered a splendid speech. He spoke at length and said much that was good to hear; nothing that was not. He rode the waters of oratory with an ease and poise that defied calamity. His diction was flawless, his premises sound, his logic irrefutable, his delivery perfect. Ben poured it on 'em; he stayed in there, and pitched!

He had a message to deliver to members of the Kiwanis club and to their friends—the message of love, of human friendship, generosity, forbearance, smypathy—just anything, folk, that serves to make men and women whistle and smile during the day and sleep well o' nights.

Over 200 Attend.

More than 200 members of the club and their guests attended the dinner; attended in the flesh, and made merry in the spirit. Good fellowship, friendliness and neighborliness ruled the evening.

Jim Waggoner, vice-president, served his club as toastmaster and drove a pretty program of entertainment down the stretch to a popular victory. He started the diners in harmonious mastication through the early introduction of the Shrine Chanters, Grover Bullington, Irvan Murchison, Paul Von Allmen and Vaughn Ray; he delighted their artistic sensibilities by calling to their attention a dainty dance by little Miss Rose Marion Art—and surely there is nothing sweeter to watch than a pretty little girl bending and swaying in a dance of childhood?

Engages in Debate.

And then, turning gaily from the beautiful to the nonsensical, Jim Waggoner engaged in debate with C. W. Reid and Walter Curlee regarding the propriety of holding a dance after the dinner. He was finally forced to admit that in the course of his career he had danced professionally before the Queen of England, and that when he had wished to dance also before her royal consort, the queen had exclaimed: "God save the king!"

A duet next, Miss Hazelle Dean and Miss Martha Roper singing "April Showers" while seven graceful girls danced around the tables scattering flowers; and another duet, Miss Roper and "Shino" Cullum, with a "Follies of 1922 Chorus." Shino and Miss Roper sang a song wishing they were "Back in Tennessee"—but everyone else was tickled to death they were at the Kemp hotel with their chorus.

Miss Mildred Martin sang a solo, "Lonesome, That's All." She sang it too well. She has too fine a voice. It wasn't fair. Every diner, masculine and feminine, promptly got all choky and lonesome also. Then, to cheer 'em, she lifted the same glorious voice in a rollicking jazz melody that called attention to the strength and weakness of many Kiwanians present.

Address of Welcome.

Julian Bobo delivered an address of welcome. It was serious. "Bo" meant it to be just that. He preached the philosophy of a "kind word and a sunny smile;" he laid bare the spirit of Kiwanis, and he welcomed everyone present to join in that spirit.

Edgar P. Haney turned loose a powerful perforation on politicians, but while he was doing so enemies treacherously unveiled behind him a gigantic thermometer supposed to register public opinion:

"The heights by great men preached and kept," he quoted, and the mercury ran up the tube to "Bull."

"Were not attained by sudden flight," he continued, "and the mercury touched the top of the thermometer and recorded "Super-Bull." An automobile horn roared, and part of his audience walked out on him—but he finished strong and drew a big hand.

Neal Talks.

And then, as president of the club during 1922, Ben Neal opened the flood gates of oratory and turned loose the rushing waters. Ben put his message across; he drove it home—the homely message of the helping hand. Space will not permit his speech in detail. Suffice it to say that few sermons have ever carried a better message, or one more clearly, sweetly phrased, than Ben's talk to his fellow Kiwanians and friends.

And then they cleared the tables from the Kemp banquet room, and danced. And there is nothing to add except that the attendance prizes, given by William Viner and Dr. O. B. Kiel, were won by Mrs. Paul Von Allmen and Pat Jarratt—while Jack Green "kicked in" with the "silent boosts," after-dinner mints and cigars.

Oh, yes; one thing more. The inaugural ceremony went up in smoke. Bill Viner had something to do with it, but someone "gummed the works" and the flashlight powder flared up at the wrong time, and went out too soon—and hokus-pokus, by gum, it was all over before it started.

YOUNG GIRL IS FOUND IN DOPE STUPOR

Officers conducting the investigation connected with the finding of a 15-year-old-girl on the porch of her home in the factory district, in a dazed condition early Monday morning were inclined Monday night to minimize reports of foul play. The officers said that while the investigation was not complete it is not believed that the girl was drugged by unknown parties after being taken for a ride in an automobile late Sunday.

According to officers the girl came to the down town district Sunday afternoon to obtain medicine for members of her family who were ill. She failed to return as expected and was not seen again by relatives until her return early Monday morning. She is said to have stated that while returning home she was picked up by two men and a woman and asked to take a ride and that she remembered little as to what happened after getting into the machine.

Further investigation in connection with the case will be conducted today.

FLAY HARDING, E. H. GARY AND KANSAS COURT

The present national administration, the Kansas industrial court law and the steel industry as led by E. H. Gary, were flayed by speakers at the mass meeting held at the Labor temple Monday night. In spite of the cold weather the meeting was attended by over a hundred men and women.

Local politics was not discussed at the meeting other than the urging of union labor men to pay their poll tax in order to be prepared to vote in the coming elections. Statements elicited from local leaders after adjournment indicated that the Monday night meeting was to be followed by others in which the local political situation would be discussed and a probable definite action agreed upon regarding the attitude to be taken by local union labor.

John Simmons, R. N. Barnes and T. Cook were the speakers at the meeting Monday night at which G. W. Labaugh presided. Simmons spoke on "Citizenship," and Cook on "Do the Common People Get Representation in the Legislation and If Not, Why Not?"

Barnes, who is vice-president of the Central Trades and Labor council, in a frequently applauded address, spoke on "Radical Labor Legislation." The speaker discussed the national legislation of the present administration, stressing the Esch-Cummings act as being an act unfriendly to labor. During his talk he several times referred to President Harding as "Old Man Hard Times." He declared the Kansas industrial act was the most unfriendly piece of legislation to union labor that has been passed in any state in the history of the United States.

Hugh Nugent Fitzgerald, the brilliant editor of the Wichita Falls Record-News, in commenting on an editorial in the Reporter relative to the West Texas Fair, observes: "Abilene is a thriving Texas town, the chief city lying between Fort Worth and El Paso on the Texas Pacific railroad. Abilene boasts of the West Texas fair. This fair had a small beginning. Business men of Abilene got in behind it. They made it go. They are proud of it. It is a city builder. It is a trade getter. It unites the people of the city and the country. It develops the community as well as the co-operative spirit. It goes without saying that the West Texas fair of 1921 was a financial success. Business men of Abilene and the people of the surrounding country made it so." And the 1922 exposition is going to be a greater success than any previous fair—because, as Mr. Fitzgerald says, the people of Abilene and the Abilene country are going to make it so.—Abilene Daily Reporter.

PETER PAN OF STAGE REPAYS NUN'S KINDNESS BY GIFTS OF ESTATE TO HOUSE POOR ORPHANS

Maude Adams and estate she has given for Orphanage

MAUDE ADAMS PRESENTS HER 300-ACRE LONG ISLAND HOME TO KIDDIES AND CHARITY.

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—Maude Adams, whom thousands learned to love as Peter Pan, has presented her 300-acre estate at Lake Ronkonkoma, L. I., to the Roman Catholic Sisterhood of Our Lady of the Cenacle. In making the gift Miss Adams is showing her gratitude for the comfort and peace she found in their convent in New York City, after a nervous breakdown three years ago, which caused her retirement from the stage.

Though not a Catholic, Miss Adams had gone to the convent a little more than two years ago to spend a few days in retreat. She found there the quiet which she needed, and for the last two years it has been her home during her infrequent visits to New York.

There are two buildings on the property, but it is planned to erect a large building more suitable to their purposes among the rolling hills and scrub oaks on the shore of the lake. It is one of the most picturesque places on Long Island and has long been the resort of motorists who drove many miles to spend a short time on the lake shore. Her gift to the sisterhood is unconditional, and they will not take possession of it until the spring.

Miss Adams spent much of her time at the estate, which was known as "Sandy Girth," and studied there many of the parts in which she later appeared.

The estate is valued at $130,000 and will be used for poor and dependent children.

The order is very popular among Catholic women. The nuns are mostly French and are women of culture and education. Teaching is a part of their work, but most of their efforts are in providing a place of retirement for religious devotion and rest and in setting those who are unhappy and need to spend a time in seclusion. Although most of their work is among Catholics it is not unusual for a Protestant to enter one of their retreats.

SOCIETY WOMEN, TURF ENTHUSIASTS, WHO HAVE THEIR OWN RACING STABLES

For years American society women have taken a very active interest in horse racing and when the spring season opens in the New York district their ranks will be greatly augmented. Mrs. Payne Whitney maintains two turf establishments, one for steeplechasers and one for flat runners. Her horses run under the colors of the Greentree stable. Mrs. C. C. Rumsey also maintains a racing stable, most prized of her thoroughbreds is a 3-year-old named Flint Hill which she bred herself on her farm in Idaho. Mrs. Rumsey (at left) and Mrs. Whitney are shown above.

English Makers of Textile Machines Have Large Orders for Mills for India

(Richard Spillaine in Philadelphia Public Ledger.)

Lancashire has been the center of the textile industry of the world for many years. Today the British are a bit disturbed as to the continuance of its dominance. Conditions that are outgrowths of the war are making it difficult to meet competition. To a certain degree the disorder in the exchanges affects the British exporter as it does the American, the pound sterling ranking high in comparison with the mark, franc, lira, etc.

The Manchester Guardian, the foremost publication in the Lancashire territory and one of the most responsible in Great Britain, says:

"As the months pass the situation of the calico printer and finisher in Lancashire becomes graver and graver. Those who can speak with authority assert it will soon be impossible to carry on. Whilst works in France are at full pressure, many in this country are either on short time or shut down altogether for the time being."

The Guardian touches only one phase of the trouble. India has been the chief market for Lancashire's products. Of all the cotton goods exported from Great Britain, India normally took approximately 60 per cent. In the war period Japan and America took most of this trade away from the British. With the coming of peace the British got it back—not all, but nearly all. But they are not holding it. India has been longing for self-government and for a protective tariff. In the matter of the protective tariff the Indians have been supported vigorously by English interests with textile mills in India.

The more radical of the Indian Nationalists have tried to institute a boycott on British-made goods. It has not been much of a success, but it has hurt Lancashire at this particular time when so many other elements have been against her.

British politicians have a wide reputation for finding a way out when all doors seem closed. Reports from Manchester are that the British spinner in meeting the present problem is proving himself adept in this line also. He is sending representatives to India, as well as to other lands where there are high protective tariff walls, to inquire into the desirability of establishing himself there and escaping the import duty and, possibly, a good part of the heavy British tax of today.

Great Britain has about 50,000,000 spindles. The United States has about 36,000,000. Of these 36,000,000 there are perhaps 21,000,000 in the cotton States and 15,000,000 in the North, principally New England.

The spindleage of Japan, China and India has been increasing much more rapidly, proportionately, than that of either Great Britain or the United States.

The Japanese scoured the world for textile machinery in war days. Out of $15,000,000 of orders placed at one of the machinery exhibitions in Grand Central Palace, New York, the Japanese purchases were $11,000,000. They bought even second-hand machinery wherever they could get it if it was serviceable. Several mills in the Philadelphia territory had all their spindles purchased by the Japanese.

New Yorkers report that English makers of textile machines have large orders for mills to be established in India. That would look as if various of the Lancashire people who sent scouts to Bombay, Calcutta and other centers had acted promptly.

As a matter of fact, Lancashire cannot be justified in its position as the center of the textile industry. Sooner or later the mills must come nearer the raw material. In the United States this is working out gradually. Once there were no mills in the South. All were in New England. Today the spindleage of the South is greater than that of the North. Each year the South goes a bit forward.

India has a considerable cotton crop—about 5,000,000 bales a year of 400 pounds to the bale.

China raises cotton, perhaps 1,000,000 or 1,500,000 bales. It always is a guess as to figures in China. There are no dependable statistics. But there is big mill development in the Shanghai district and some small mills elsewhere. One of the Chinese cotton mills would be a credit to Manchester or Lawrence or Fall River.

Japan is the big figure in textiles in the East. But Japanese mill labor is not so good as that of England or the United States. In the China market—which is considerable—the Japanese have the great advantage of proximity. Were it not for their somewhat arrogant attitude toward the Chinese they might dominate the trade. The British have been firmly established at Shanghai and other ports for a long time and enjoy a large trade. That of America is fair. But the Chinese have mills at Shanghai that are of large capacity.

And from the reports that come from England they are building more.

VARSITY CLUB MAY PROMOTE ATHLETIC CLUB

The next move of the University club, the first organization to propose a junior college for Wichita Falls, is expected to be a Y. M. C. A. or athletic club, according to officials of the club, who expect the initial move in this direction at the luncheon of the organization today.

The advantage of such an organization, those proposing the move point out, are self evident from the fact that unless an individual remains physically fit he can not do his most effective work. Reports from the membership campaign, lead by Raymond Myers and Paul von Allmen are also to be made at the meeting.

A violin solo by Mrs. Jouette Bonner will be the musical feature of the meeting.

BENSON MAKES STATEMENT TO CITY POLICE

Following Investigation and Statement Officers Express Disbelief in Robbery Story.

After an investigation by the police which had extended over three days, officers Monday night expressed the belief that Anto "Tony" Benson, glass worker, was not robbed on Saturday night and beaten again on Sunday night by four masked men as indicated in first reports. Officers refused to state the results of their investigation other than the above.

It is understood that Benson made a signed statement to officers' statements indicated that adreports concerning the supposed hijacking were explained. Officers statements indicated that additional developments are to be expected in the case.

CAR LINE MAY GO TO NORTH WICHITA SOON

be willing to start early work on the street car service degired by citizens living north of the river.

The yearly income to the water department from that section already approximates $3,000, according to Lawton's figures given to the council—and it was the general opinion of the commissioners that the "trade" mentioned by Mr. Kell would be a fine one for the city, if it could be successfully managed. Commissioner Bonner was authorized to go into the matter more in detail with officials of the traction company and to report to the council at its next meeting.

Fitts After Dispensers.

Police Commissioner Fitts, emphasizing the fact that the police daily are having more trouble preventing the sale of bootleg whiskey over bars in so-called "soft drink" shops, asked for the passage of an ordinance that would revoke the permit of any proprietor found guilty of selling intoxicants. After some discussion over the legal phases involved, the matter was left to the discretion of Commissioners Fitts and Bonner and City Attorney Mann, with authority to draw an ordinance and present it for further consideration.

Other Business

Mayor Cline called the council's attention to a plan suggested by "Ma" Burdick, of the Salvation Army, for the construction and maintenance east of the railroad tracks of a "wash house" for the use of many poor families living there. The plan calls for a sheet iron structure with shower baths and dressing rooms at either end, and with stationary tubs for laundry use in the center of the building. It was suggested that the Salvation Army, the city sanitary department and the Civic league would share the expense three ways. No definite action was taken, but every member of the council expressed an opinion favorable to the development of the plan.

Specifications from the city engineer were accepted for the paving of Indiana avenue, from Tenth to Thirteenth streets, and the date of hearing was set for February 13. It was estimated that the total cost to the property owners will be approximately $29,160.

Eleventh Street Paving

A petition for the paving of Eleventh street from Ohio to Grace also was presented to the council, but was tabled until the petition has been more generally circulated among the property owners.

The council voted the payment of $65 to complete the sum of $110 needed for eleven new street lights in the alleys of the business section. Local merchants already have contributed $45 for this purpose.

An ordinance requiring residences and business houses to be numbered and stating the method to be used, the kind of numbers and the duty of the city engineer to designate numbers, was passed on its first reading. It will make very few changes in the present numbering system, the ordinance being introduced largely to avoid confusion at various points where the business and residence sections meet.

"One of Best Vacations I Ever Had," Says Local Chiropractor in Jail

"One of the best vacations I ever had," declared P. L. Myers, local chiropractor, Monday at the county jail at the start of the third week of the 30-day term which he is now serving following conviction last February for alleged practice of the medical profession, in violation of the state law.

"A jail is a good place to find out how many friends you really have," the local chiropractor added pointing to a traveling bag full of letters and communications which he has received since he entered the county bastile.

"I have received something like 175 cards, 75 letters and numerous telegrams. Most of them from people I have known, but a large number from persons in all parts of the southwest who state in their communications that I do not know them but they have heard of my case and they want me to know that they are with me in jail or out."

Receives Many Gifts.

In the room with Myers who has been made a trusty by Sheriff Smith were more substantial indications of esteem. Boxes daily far in excess of the requirements of the inmate for whom they are intended.

"The letters which has touched me most was one from a poor man which inclosed a $5 check to help pay my fine," Myers said, "and those coming from people who believe in chiropractices.

"Understand I am not attempting any criticism of officials who conducted the state's case against me. I could not ask for better consideration than they showed me in the trial of the case and Sheriff Smith's treatment here at the jail.

Is Not Better.

They were merely doing their duty as they saw it and the laws of the state require. I think the law should and will be changed but as long as it remains as it is, chiropractors cannot say that it is officials of the law that persecute them.

"What do I think of jail life? Under the circumstances I can hardly say. I have not been compelled to undergo the same experiences of most of the other prisoners I suppose and for that reason I don't want to make it appear that I was speaking for them. If a jail sentence could mean as much to everybody as it has to me then my advice to everybody would be to get behind the bars for a brief time."

Convicted Year Ago

Myers was convicted last February on his third trial. His first trial resulted in a hung jury, the second in an acquittal and the third on another charge resulted in a conviction with 30 days in the county jail and the maximum fine of $500. Other local chiropractors were tried during the same period. Myers' is the first case in which a jail sentence has been carried out. He started serving his sentence January 7.

LARGE CROWD ENJOYS PLAY AT WICHITA

Coming as a relief from the preceding week of heavy drama, "Johnny Get Your Gun," the Theodore Lorch company's offering for this week, proved a hilarious comedy from beginning to end, and was thoroughly enjoyed by an unusually large audience despite the extremely cold weather, Monday night at the Wichita theater.

The play which was in three acts and prologue, opens with a real movie studio scene in California, where the cowpuncher who is acting as a "stunt" man begins his career which ends in his being transplanted in the fashionable Long Island home of his friend to try and stop the marriage of his friend's sister to a snobbish duke. Here he is given a chance of a lifetime to enlighten the east on the ways of the real wild west.

Theodore Lorch in the part of the hero, Johnny Wiggins, alias Bill Burnham, proved himself a capable comedian as well as a good actor of heavy parts, which he has taken in previous performances. He was ably supported by Miss Cecil Fay as Miss Jordon; by Miss Caroline Morrison in the role of the over-zealous aunt and would-be society queen, and Miss Ida Mantell as the daughter of the fashionable family whom the aspiring aunt wishes to marry into the nobility.

Fred Ware in the part of the Duke of No Moor did exceptionally good work as did Mortimer Martini as Pollitt, the duke's valet.

The play throughout abounds in mirth and humorous situations through which runs two delightful love stories. The entire company is ideally cast.

FUNERAL FOR MRS. SHUMAKE AT CHURCH

Funeral services for Mrs. C. J. Shumake, a pioneer resident of this section who died at her home here early Monday morning, are to be held Tuesday morning at 10:00 from the First Baptist church, according to an announcement.

Three child en survive Mrs. Shumake, C. J. Shumake Jr., Max Shumake and Mrs. J. M. Baber, all of Wichita Falls.

Mrs. Shumake was a charter member of the Baptist congregation at Thornberry, and her devotion to her church, both there and since coming to Wichita Falls was one of the outstanding features of her life.

Among those here from out of town for the funeral are a sister, Mrs. T. O. O'Connor of Alvin, a nephew, Joel Patterson of Hutton, Mrs. Patterson and Mrs. E. D. Wood of Driftwood.

Mrs. Shumake before her marriage was Miss Nettie Hill of Travis county. She was married to C. J. Shumake in May, 1882.

Rev. O. L. Powers, pastor of the First Baptist church, will conduct the service Tuesday. Following will be pallbearers:

INDICT TWO IN ALLEGED HIJACKING

C. G. Adams and Mary Dobson indicted by the grand jury now in session, in connection with the alleged hijacking of Joe Colonna last summer were released Monday under $7,500 bond each for their appearance for trial.

Jack Ross also under indictment for robbery with firearms was arrested Monday and held under $2,500 bond. He is charged with robbing D. Alexander in December of last year. The indictment against the three persons were returned Saturday in the partial report. No announcements regarding the indictments were made until their arrest.

FILE CHARGE AGAINST MAN MONDAY A. M.

A statutory charge was filed Monday against R. W. Wynn, 53-year-old resident of the north side, who was arrested Sunday night by police officers following serious charges made by a 7-year-old resident of that section of the city. Wynne who lives in a shack near the river stoutly denies his guilt.

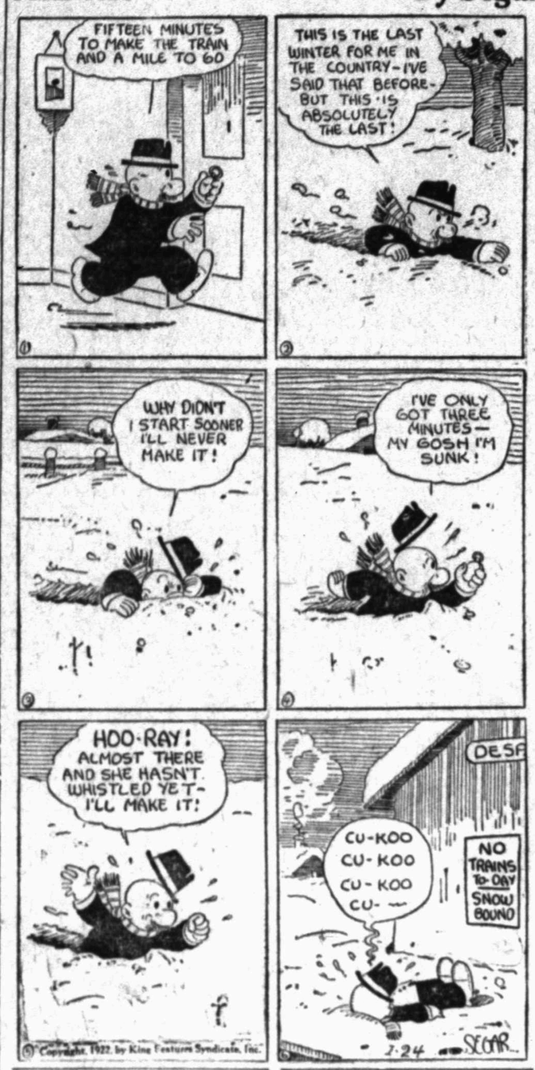

He will be held at the county jail pending action by the grand jury which reconvenes Monday after a recess.

LASKER SHIP SUBSIDY PLAN IS APPROVED

By Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The shipping board today approved chairman Lasker's plan for subsidizing development of a privately owned American merchant marine and it will be presented tomorrow to President Harding, it was announced. The plan is expected to form the basis of a message to congress early in February by the president dealing with the merchant marine.

The subsidy plan, it was explained today, provides for placing a limit on ship operators profits and for direct payments only when reasonable profits have not been realized. The burden of government aid would depend upon indirect assistance, it was added, and administration of the direct payments would be under direction of the secretary of the treasury. The object of the plan, board officials pointed out, is to place American operation of privately owned ships, to which aid would be limited on a par with British operations.

FREEZE LIKELY TO EXTEND TO TEXAS COAST

By Associated Press.
DALLAS, Texas, Jan. 23.—A cold wave preceded by rain and predicted to send the mercury down to 18 or 20 degrees by tomorrow morning struck this section late today. Freezing weather probably will extend all the way to the Texas coast by Tuesday morning, according to the forecast of the Dallas weather bureau.

Amarillo and Oklahoma City reported a temperature of 16 degrees at 7 o'clock tonight. The lowest mark registered here today was 37 and the highest 41.

Thermometer Again Seeks Low Levels

After resting a few hours to gain more strength, that hard-boiled egg, Col. Cold Snap, came rushing back upon the city yesterday afternoon. The thermometer fell to 24 above zero, the north wind returned and there was every indication of "another little stretch" of real winter.

Throughout the railroad area of Wichita Falls lower temperatures were reported as the day lengthened into evening. Snow was falling early in the afternoon at Forgan and Woodward, while colder temperatures also were reported at Amarillo, Childress and Texline.

world might be written around the perennial discussion of dress reform and the protest of the older generation against departures from the established sartorial standards. Yet dress reform, as such, has gotten nowhere. The ardent, goggle-eyed, short haired woman in sensible clothes and square toed shoes never made a dent on the arch producer of breast cancer, the old-fashioned corset. Can any one forget that rugged, ribbed monstrosity which incased our modest grandmothers? Yet that steel-proof cuirass, guaranteed to withstand the most ursine embrace, has given away before the subtle hand of fashion and now the fireside tabbies are having conversational convulsions over the fact that at terpsichorean entertainments the modern girl either parks her stays or merges into the mural decorations. Forsook, why not? The girl is going to indulge in the rythmic exercises of the syncopated toddle and the muscles of the abdominal girdle are a great deal better off unhampered. If one compares the modern figure with the ant-like silhoutte of the early Grover Cleveland period, one cannot but be impressed with the genuine reform which has occurred and now that women are learning the joy of stayless exercise, there is a hope that corsets will become as extinct as bustles. A corsetless age would mean greater attention to diet—for adiposity would mean social oblivion—and the stimulation of exercise to maintain the natural figure. These are accomplishments which direct dress reform never could have brought about any more than it could abolish the voluminous, heel-flapping, dust-collecting, step-impeding skirt. What a hue and cry there was when the hoop skirt, which occupied twenty-eight square feet of floor space, was abandoned by the graceless post bellum vampires; but consider the shock which the knee skirt and the rolled down stocking of mode would have produced. Peradventure yes. If the woman who did her courting in seven ruffled underskirts and a set of ribbed nether garments which enveloped her from vertebrae prominens to tendo achillis, not to speak of a considerable exterior array of light proof garments, was to take one glance at the up-to-the-minute girl whose raiment is a negative pressure above the xipoid cartilage and below the patella, resuscitation would not occur. But which of the two will history say wore the more sensible dress? And are not these abbreviations hygienic, are they not a distinct advance toward a real improvement in dress?"

Marshall Field & Co. of Chicago is one of the largest retail stores in the world. This concern did a net business of 182 million dollars in 1920 and the company made a net profit of 2.39 cents on every dollar for a total return of 6.3 on the capital. Marshall Field is dead but in his life time he was one of the most prominent Republicans of his day. His grandsons are Republicans Managers of his vast business are Republicans. Chairman Fordney is a Republican and the author of the tax law that bears his name. This Chicago concern through its manager denounced the American value plan and this angered Fordney. He said that the Marshall Field company made a profit of 39 hundred per cent on the sale of a knife purchased in Germany for 9.6 cents and sold at retail at $5 and had also made huge profits on other imported articles. Marshall Field company made a statement and the author of the statement shot Fordney and his argument full of holes. "Lest we forget," the reply to Chairman Fordney should be read by Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, who began a crusade against the retailers of the country and closed up like a mouse-trap after a few broadsides of hot facts had perforated his official hide.

Crude oil production in the United States for the week of January 14 averaged 1,430,710 daily, according to figures compiled by the American Petroleum Institute. In the previous week the average was 1,413,450 barrels and in the corresponding week last year the total was 1,230,770 barrels.

Lives of great men all remind us we can make our lives sublime, and by getting in the headlines land in vaudeville some time.

Those coldest-winter-in-history prophets deserve punishment. They should be made to wear some of this scratchy underwear they caused us to buy.

To pass the war debts on to posterity and at the same time to prevent posterity by birth-control would be an awfully dirty trick to play on—somebody!

MONEY MADNESS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

(Copyright, 1921, by Frank Crane.)

Mr. Otto Kahn, in a letter the other day to the committee of American Business Men, used the following language:

"It is sheer folly, and malignant folly at that, to think that it is possible to shackle and hamper business, penalize success, disturb the delicately adjusted machinery of commerce and finance, impede the flow of capital, and interfere with the free play of economic forces, without causing harmful consequences to the country as a whole and to every section and calling."

There is little doubt that ignorance or, what is worse, a lot of positive knowledge that is not soo, concerning business and the making of money, is what ails us.

The inequalities of fortune and success are striking, and the average mind jumps easily to wrong conclusions. It cannot distinguish between what is wrong and what is dangerous. Yet the distinction is vital.

Riches are dangerous, but they are not wrong. In fact, riches constitute the difference between civilization and barbarism.

Capital, as Mr. Babson says, is the world's greatest invention, because without it no other invention would be of much account.

Capital is the principal difference between a prosperous and happy America and a wretched, starving, and desperate Russia.

There are some things inherently wrong. Whiskey is wrong. There is no single good thing about the small pox. Leprosy, lewdness, and lying are intrinsically wrong.

But capital is not.

It is time we got rid of a lot of the childish and silly prejudice against riches. It is every man's duty to be as rich as he can, just as it is every man's duty to be as strong and healthy as he can, because riches mean power just as health means power. It is not the weak, feeble, and unsuccessful people that are the strength of a nation.

And there is nothing unethical in accumulating wealth. It becomes unethical when it is accumulated selfishly and wickedly, and when it is used for wrongful purposes, precisely as intellectual ability and bodily strength may be wicked if they are used by wicked men.

It is the duty of a nation to accumulate wealth. The curse of Holy Writ is not upon those who lay up money, but upon those who lay up money for themselves. The only intelligent object of human labor, either individual or social, is the accumulation of capital.

And there ought to be some means to pound these fundamental truths into the minds of youth.

DOGHILL PARAGRAFS

Fletcher Henstep has been hearing so much about it being good luck to hang a horse shoe up over the door, that he nailed up a big one this morning and has taken his seat near it to await results.

Sile Kildew, while over in the Calf Ribs neighborhood one day this week saw the Blind Man coming down the lane whistling a lively tune. Which made Sile conclude that if a blind man can be cheerful enough to whistle, the balance of us ought to at least be able to sing.

In the malarial sections of our country a citizen deserves a nice burial and a long write-up if he lives to old age.

You can say one thing for nations. Before laying down their lives for profit, they always disguise it as a Great Moral Principle.

DUMM AND DUMMER ON THE BILL TO BAR RACING NEWS

"What're you doing now?" asked Senator Dumm, as he came upon Representative Dummer sitting in a snowbank and struggling with the sporting section of a newspaper.

"I'm trying to read a racing report," returned Dummer. "Lookit this thing!"

Senator Dumm leaned over his shoulder and saw the following:

FAIR GROUNDS, Jan. 12.—The Mulligatawney Handicap was won today by (deleted). (Deleted) was second and (deleted) third. When the barrier went up (omitted by the censor) got off to a flying start, but was soon crowded by (eliminated by postal authorities). At the third furlong pole.....broke through an opening and soon passed (name withheld by Purity League). From that time on (deleted) had the race all to himself. The odds were*

*Until he sees his lawyer the publisher does not think it best to quote the prices.

"It's highly informative, ain't it?" remarked Senator Dumm.

"Well, what does it all mean? Is it a new puzzle contest to promote the circulation of this particular newspaper or what?" asked Dummer.

"It's a result of the agitation in congress to prohibit the newspapers from printing any racing news," explained Dumm. "The bill hasn't been passed, but the editor of your paper is evidently playing it safe in case it should be passed before press time. In the United States today nobody knows in the morning what may be unconstitutional by night."

"What's the idea of prohibiting racing news, anyhow?" asked Dummer peevishly. "Have the horses become too modest to like their names in print or are some of the jockeys afraid the news of how rotten they are riding will get back home to their relatives and friends."

"Don't you know that racing is immoral, vicious, degrading, criminal, and debasing, and that it is responsible for the ruination of thousands of men? Don't you realize that racing sends many a man home to his wife Saturday night with his payroll squandered? Don't you know, Dummer, that the racetrack drives countless hundreds to embezzlement and other dishonesty? Don't you know that it leaves a trail of blighted happiness and saddened firesides?"

"I thought it was the SALOON AND LIQUOR EVIL that did all them things," said Dummer with a blank look.

"That's what the reformers used to say," admitted Dumm, "but now they think racing, smoking, dancing, put and take, and even singing while in the bathtub each has something to do with it."

"I wouldn't be surprised if a law went through one of these days making 'em cut out the practice of giving an extra ride to the goop who grabs a brass ring on the merry-go-rounds," said Dummer. "The horses on these carousels certainly have an evil effect upon the public mind, and any scheme to tempt a man to ride on one more than once must be a menace to the republic, in the opinion of the Blue Law Beaglehounds."

"As I understand it, the proposed bill will prevent any newspaper from publishing any racing results, odds or selections," said Dumm. "Thus it will be impossible for a man to find out in advance what horses are to race."

"As far as that goes it always has been impossible to tell in advance what horses were going to race. Every one I ever bet on showed by the result that he had no intention of racing," returned Dummer.

"It will make it impossible for you to find out except by the aid of a clairvoyant what horse won," continued Dumm.

"And it would be just my luck to have my clairvoyant in the employ of my bookmaker," said Dummer sadly.

Rippling Rhymes

By WALT MASON

JUSTICE IS SLOW.

Augustus Crawfish took a gun, slew his neighbor, Jabez Spry; he doubtless did it just for fun—I know no other reason why. When man has nothing sane to do the time hangs heavy on his hands, and so he kills a friend or two, and later in the dock he stands. And there Augustus took his place, and through long weary weeks was tried—it was a celebrated case—and experts rose and testified; and witnesses in drowsy herds blew into court to have their say, and learned attorneys, who were birds, talked hours and days and weeks away. At last the jury had a chance, and found him guilty of the crime; Augustus, then, it seemed might dance on air at some appointed time. But lo, his learned attorneys saw a misplaced comma in some writ, declared it was a fatal flaw, and pawed the floor and threw a fit. The jurist listened to their burst of eloquence, and took a pen, and wrote, "The judgment is reversed—Augustus must be tried again." The second trial, of snail-like speed, became a chestnut and a bore, and then the jury disagreed, and Crawfish must be tried once more. This Labez Spry has long been dead, long since he closed life's little page; his slayer yet will die in bed of ailments incident to age.

DOZEN MAY BE SENT TO CONFERENCE

Local school and church officials are making efforts to have this city represented by at least a dozen boys next Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the annual Older Boys' conference, to be held at Texas A. & M. college. Superintendent Lee Clark announced that a member of the high school faculty will make the trip as adviser to the boys.

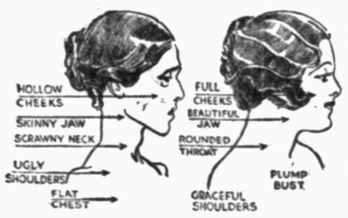

It is understood that one of the local churches will send several delegates to the conference, and an effort will be made to have some of the city's clubs underwrite the expenses of other boy delegates.

Psychiatric Test in Wichita County Schools

Examination of students in the Wichita county rural schools from a psychiatric standpoint began this week, by Dr. C. T. Gray, professor of educational psychology, who has charge of this branch of standard tests in the rural school survey, which has been underway this term in this county. Mathematics and reading courses are used for this part of the examinations.

Though the survey is for the rural schools only, Dr. Gray, it is stated, will apply the tests in some of the Wichita Falls schools some time during his week's stay here. Work in the rural schools which the professor will be unable to complete this week will be finished by County Superintendent Burl Bryant.

Dr. Gray is known nationally for his work with psychological development of education, his text books on this subject being in wide use. These books include, "Use of Labratory Experiments in the Study of Psychology of Reading" and "Variation in the Grades of High School Pupils."

The average grade of many thousand students, all over the country, is used as the standard in grading the pupils. The individual student is judged by his showing with regard to the average grade of this year and class of work.

THE HERALD OF MISTRESS SPRING

Peter Rabbit was sitting in the middle of the dear Old Brier Patch, Jolly round, red Mr. Sun had just begun his daily climb up in the blue, blue sky, and Peter was wondering where he would go and what he would do when he heard a sound that caused him to suddenly sit up very straight ith both ears pointing right up to the sky. Peter held his breath for a minute and then he heard it again. This time he jumped straight up in the air and kicked his heels together for joy. It was just the softest, sweetest whistle! It wasn't merry and it wasn't sad; it was just beautiful. And it seemed to come from everywhere and nowhere—just out of the air.

"Winsome Bluebird!" cried Peter Rabbit. "Oh, it's Winsome Bluebird! I wonder where he is! He sounds a long way off and yet he may be close by. Oh, I do wonder if I'm the first one to hear him!"

"I guess you are, Peter," said a soft voice. "I guess you are, because you see I've just arrived and I came straight to the Old Brier Patch, because I just knew that you would be looking for me and I wanted you to have the pleasure of being the first to see me. Why don't you look up in the little cherry tree over your head, Peter, and say something."

Of course, Peter felt very foolish, and he looked just as he felt, as he saw Winsome Bluebird sitting right over his head. You see that soft, beautiful voice had seemed to come from everywhere, and Peter hadn't been able to tell just where it did come from.

"Oh, Winsome!" he cried. "Oh, Winsome, I'm so glad you've got here at last! I'm so happy I could sing for joy."

"Ho, ho, Peter!" laughed Winsome Bluebird. "Do try it. I should love to hear you sing."

Peter grinned. "Well, any way, if I can't sing I can dance," he cried and right away began the funniest little dance that ever was. Finally he had to stop to get his breath. "There, that's how glad I am!" he cried. "Now tell me all the news, Winsome."

"Oh, I couldn't, Peter. I couldn't tell you all. There's too much to tell and I haven't got time now. You know there are others waiting for me."

"But do tell me if Mistress Spring is most here," begged Peter.

"Of course she is! Don't you know I am her herald I've come all the way up from down south just ahead of her to tell everybody that she is coming. You know that is what a herald is for. I had rather be the herald of Mistress Spring than anything else in all the world. Winsome half lifted his beautiful blue wings as he said this.

"Don't go!" cried Peter. "I guess I know how you feel. It must be perfectly splendid to make everybody glad and happy as you do. I—I wish I could be a herald."

Winsome Bluebird laughed—the sweetest laugh. "I guess you don't need to be a herald to make people glad to see you, Peter," he said. "Besides, you know you can be sort of a herald by telling everybody you meet that I am here."

"That's so!" Peter cried. "That's one reason I like to be the first to see or hear you. It's great fun to see howpleased everybody is when they know that you have arrived. I—I hope nothing will happen to make Mistress Spring late."

LEGION FIGHT FANS GET KICK FROM SMOKER

Three fast boxing bouts, arranged by the athletic committee of Pat Carrigan post, put a kick into the ex-soldier lives of the ex-soldier members of the post at the American Legion hall last night.

In the main event, a six-round exhibition of nasty glove slinging, Kid Byers, of Vernon, Texas, and Battling Knob, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, 128 pounders poured it on one another to the grand and glorious contentment of the fans. Both boys were fast, carried a good kick in each gob of leather and were willing to mix it.

In the opening round the Tulsa battler got away to a slight lead, showing a harder wallop and a better eye for the target at long range. Byers evened it up in the second session with a beautiful uppercut to the jaw that rocked Knob. Both boys finished strong.

The third was a fast draw, and Knob took the fourth round with a shower of overhand rights and lefts one of which started the claret from the Vernon's boxer's bugle.

After a slow draw in the fifth, the two leather pushers cut loose with everything they had in the final canto. It was Byer's round. He more than made up for the wallop in the nose received earlier by jamming a straight left into Knob's mouth with such vehemence that one of the Tulsa boy's teeth, it was later reported, was picked up at Tenth and Brook by a traffic cop.

A draw was the only decision possible.

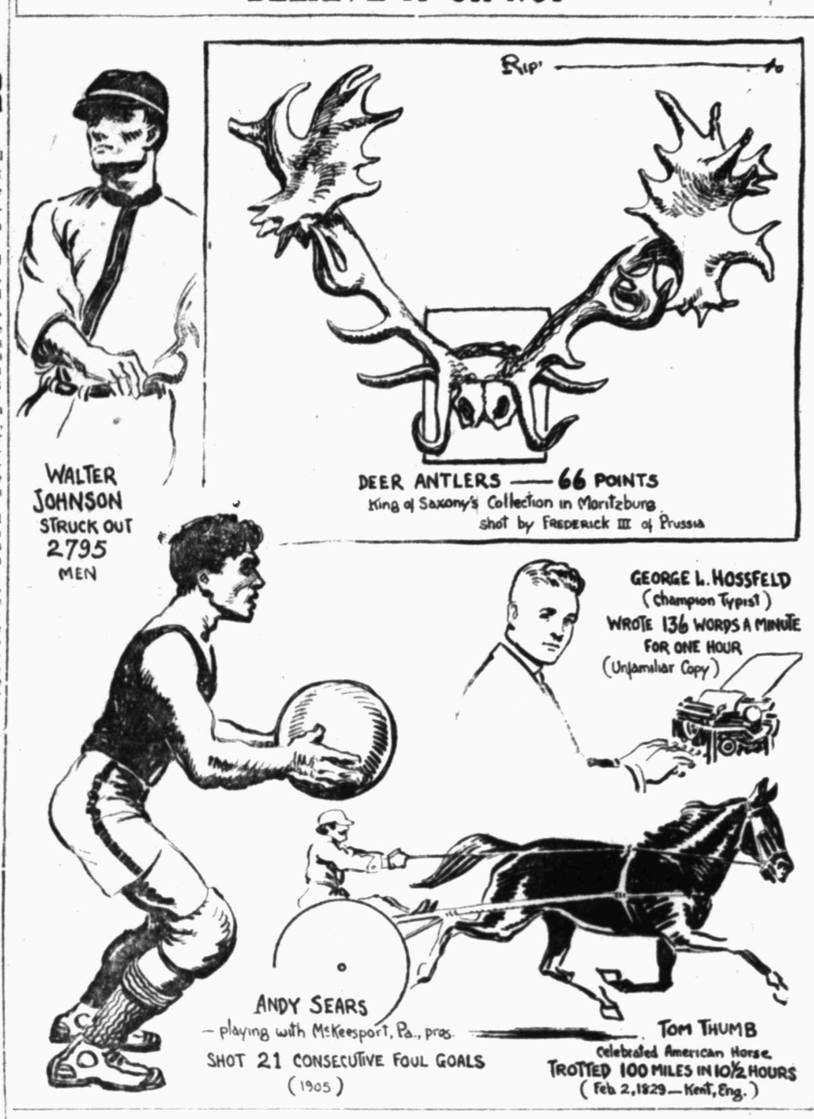

In the semi-final, a four-round go, Blackie Arnett, of Tulsa, shaded Kid Snyder, of Burkburnett, the Oklahoma boy landing by far the greatest number of clean blows. Each battler took a couple of rounds, but Arnett's were won in more decisive fashion.

A preliminary between Kid Levin and Kid Arnett, two paper-weight products of the old Camel Athletic club of this city, was won by the former, whose experience more than offset Barrett's willingness.

Before the main event Delbert Webb, of Vernon, issued a challenge to box any lightweight in Wichita Falls before the local American Legion post at any future date. "Del" declared he had put the skids under Ad Wolgast but frankly admitted that the former champion was 42 years old at the time—and his honesty was vociferously applauded.

Abe Bremen refereed all three events in capable fashion.

HARD GAMES ON CAGE SCHEDULE LISTED TONIGHT

Two tough tangles are on the City Basketball league schedule for tonight, and an evening of excitement is promised the fans who trek to the American Legion hall.

In the opener the Texhoma and North Methodist quintets will face one another. The very fact that these two teams have failed to win thus far is bound to result in a hard-fought game, as neither five is anxious to continue as a "goat."

The second contest, bringing together the heavy, brilliant University club team and the slippery High School cagers, ought to raise the hair on every basketball fan's head. The University club beyond question has the best aggregation of individual stars in the league, while there can be no argument against the statement that the high school has the finest team play that has yet been shown on the local court. Neither team has been defeated, and each will put up a desperate scrap to keep the old flag flying.

The Gaines Motor company team, it was announced yesterday, has strengthened itself considerably by signing up Frank Shaw, former brilliant forward of the high school. Frank has had a little trouble with his studies lately, and is ineligible to play on the high school quintet in games against other high schools. In order not to break up the team play for future high school games, Coach Tate has not been using Frank lately in the league contests, although the speedy blonde forward is eligible for these games. Shaw likes the game, and was tickled to join the Gaines five. He has a fine eye for a basket, is fast on his feet, a good passer, aggressive, and should be a big help to the motor company quintet in its future battles.

It was Sunday at the zoo. "What's the trouble with the fellows?" inquired the orang-outang. "Most of them look as if they'd seen a ghost."

"It's this economy stunt," explained the monkey. "They've decided to transfer the keeper of the elephants to the insect house, and they don't know how to break the news to him."

Home Town Stuff

A nineteen-year-old boy and a seventeen-year-old girl were arraigned before Judge Welch Friday morning. They plead guilty to vagrancy, having been apprehended the day before in a Chillicothe hotel. The Judge read the riot act to the girl, who admitted having run away from home at Electra for the second time. She was sent home. The boy received a fifty dollar fine, which he is lying out in jail at the rate of three dollars per day. Both young people impressed one as brazen criminals.—Quanah Tribune Chief.

Mr. Hawkins of Farwell is here. He is getting up a car load of hogs to ship to California, and will ship from here each Tuesday. As he promises to sell within one cent of Fort Worth top prices, hog raisers all over the country will be interested in his shipments.—Quanah Tribune Chief.

Another man with a statewide reputation as being one of Oklahoma's best livestock judges may be added to the list of judges for the Southwest Oklahoma Livestock show and sale and Tillman County Poultry and Pet Stock show, according to County Agent S. D. Johnson. He recently received a letter from Harry Blake, president of the Shorthorn Breeders' association of Oklahoma, that an effort was being made to influence Waugh Williams, of the Williams & Finnerty stock farms at Marlow and Oklahoma City, to attend the show and sale and judge horses and cattle. Breeders in Wichita and Wilbarger counties in Texas are interested in the show, Johnson reported, after spending Sunday in the counties interviewing livestock men, because of its proximity to their ranches. It is much nearer than the Oklahom. City or Fort Worth, Texas shows and offers many of the inducements that the larger shows do for livestock breeders to attend.—Frederick (Okla.) Leader.

COUNTY CO-OPERATION FORMS KEYNOTE IOWA PARK C. OF C. ANNUAL BANQUET TUESDAY

By H. A. STROUD, Record News Special Correspondent.

IOWA PARK, Jan. 24.—Greater unity for all of Wichita county was the keynote sounded by speakers at the annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce here tonight. One hundred and twenty-five men and women attended the meeting with large representations from Wichita Falls, Burkburnett and Electra present.

Beginning with Mayor W. R. Arnold who made the welcome address speakers plead for more co-operation looking to the advancement of all of Wichita county rather than an individualistic spirit which would seek to better one town or city at the expense of the remainder of the county.

The speakers included Mayor W. R. Arnold, E. J. Pate, E. J. Corriden and J. Frank Clark, president of the Chamber of Commerce all of this city and George Keith, representative of Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce and Sam Spence, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Burkburnett.

Declaring for a "Bigger and Better Iowa Park" for the coming year, President Clark of the Chamber of Commerce, outlined the program of the organization.

The program includes:

More unity and co-operation among the members of the Chamber of Commerce.

Creating better markets for the farmers of this section.

Civic improvements including the extension of the water works system.

Revival of the monthly trade days.

Campaign for the construction of more concrete roads in the county.

Securing a branch hospital for this city, Electra and Burkburnett.

Securing a site and constructing a swimming pool.

A membership campaign to start within a few days and which it is expected will largely increase the present membership.

President Outlines Program.

In outlining the program President Clark spoke briefly on each detail which he declared would receive the consideration of the Chamber of Commerce as an organization during the coming twelve months.

The need of considering the county as a whole in any improvement plans was emphasized by Mayor Arnold in his welcome address. The speaker pointed out the folly of any community trying to better itself without considering surrounding communities.

Farmer and C. of C.

E. J. Pate speaking on the subject "The Relation of the Chamber of Commerce and the Farmer" stressed the advantages that will accrue to farmers when they lend their active cooperation to the Chamber of Commerce organization in their community. He said that better markets would be obtained for the products of the farmers. He pointed out the poultry car exhibition held here last week under the auspicies of the extension department of the Texas A & M. college as exemplifying the work that can be accomplished by a Chamber of Commerce to aid the farmer.

E. J. Corriden, local banker spoke on the subject, "who should belong to the Chamber of Commerce." Declaring that the Chamber of Commerce was the "watch dog of the business man" Mr. Corriden also explained why professional men, farmers and other classes should belong to the organization.

Out-of-Town Speakers.

Sam Spence, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce at Burkburnett told of the work other Chamber of Commerce organizations. He spoke briefly but enumerated the advantages that have accrued to other communities through the active work of commercial organizations.

George Keith said that in the past Wichita county has passed up too many opportunities. He emphasized the advantages that residents will have when the irrigation project is completed. In this connection he said that the wholesale produce company of which he is head, shipped in daily approximately a car of perishable goods. He said that when the irrigation project was completed the county could be shipping out produce in far larger quantities than it now is receiving.

Clyde Milan, Veteran Outfielder, Who Will Manage the Senators

Clyde Milan, newly appointed manager of the Washington American league club, has spent his major league career with the Senators. The veteran was bought from the Wichita club of the Western league in 1907 by Joe Cantillon, then manager of the Washington club. Milan, rated as one of the best outfielders ever to play in the major leagues, has slowed down a bit in the last few years, yet he still is a remarkable player. His fine temperament has made him extremely popular with the fans.

Home Run Baker, New York Yankees Crack Third Baseman and His Bride

J. Franklin (Home Run) Baker, crack third baseman of the New York Yankees, American league champions, was married recently to Miss Margaret Elizabeth Mitchel of Baltimore. There were persistent rumors that he had quit baseball for good, as his bride objected. Baker has denied this and his father-in-law, John A. Mitchell, at whose home the wedding took place, said his daughter was not opposed to Baker continuing in the game.

STATE CLOSES CASE IN TRIAL OF ARBUCKLE

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 24.—The prosecution closed today in the second trial of a manslaughter charge against Roscoe C. (Fatty) Arbuckle, reserving the right to examine witnesses in impeaching of one of its principal witnesses, Zey Prevost, a show girl. The prosecution charges that Miss Prevost made statements in her testimony which conflicted with former testimony.

Adolph Juel and Milton Carlson, finger print experts, were called by the defense in an attempt to refute evidence offered by E. O. Heinrich, a similar expert.

Heinrich testified that finger prints found on a door of Arbuckle's room in the Hotel St. Francis, were those of Arbuckle and Miss Virginia Rappe, whose death was made the basis of the charge against Arbuckle.

Carlson testified that finger prints can be forged beyond the possibility of detection by a layman. The point as raised by the defense that the prints on the St. Francis door could have been forged. The witness said that the prints on the door did not compare with those of Arbuckle and Miss Rappe. Carlson was the last witness today.

Juel testified that he could find "no prints of positive comparison between the police finger prints of Arbuckle and Miss Rappe and those on a door."

The police prints of Miss Rappe were taken after death.

'Round the Sport Circle

WITH JACK VEIOCK

Judge Landis has gone and bit off another large cud for mastication. Hizzoner is out to put a stop to alleged tampering with ball players in the ranks of O. B.

Without the peradventure of a doubt, the venerable high commissioner is dead right. Tampering with players is just about as honorable as grand larceny. And it has been done in both majors and minors. No doubt it is being done even now and will be done again and again.

But right or wrong, putting a stop to it is something else again.

First off a club owner, manager or scout has to be caught with the goods, and in these days of slick dealing catching 'em with the works is no easy matter.

As a rule, someone not directly connected with a club that is after a certain player almost invariably make the first advances to him. That is easily enough arranged. And then, if the player likes the idea of joining out with the team in question, he seeks information on his own account and seldom has trouble getting it.

We're not saying that the grand ole pastime is cluttered up with tamperers or that it is spotted, like a freckled face, with those who would stoop to tamper. Yet as long as there is competition and its a matter of dollars and cents, etc., you can bet there will be business rivalry and—tampering. In short it's somewhat a part of the game.

WE HAVE A SNEAKING SUSPICION THAT SOMEBODY TAMPERED WITH WILL HAYS. A $300,000 tamper is some New Year's gift.

KEARNS SEEKS ANOTHER BOUT FOR DEMPSEY

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey, left here today for New York for a conference with Tex Rickard, in regard to a match for the world's heavy eight champion. Dempsey, Kearns said, is training daily on the coast and is within ten pounds of his fighting weight.

Kearns agrees with Rickard that a return match with Carpentier in this country would not be profitable. If suitable financial inducements were offered, Kearns said, Dempsey could consider meeting the French champion in Europe.

"Tact," said the lecturer, "is essential to good entertaining. I once dined at a house where the hostess had no tact. Opposite me sat a modest, quiet man.

"Suddenly he turned as red as a lobster on hearing his hostess say to her husband, 'How inattentive you are, Charlie! You must look after Mr. Brown better. He's helping himself to everything.'"

LET CONTRACT FOR BUILDING OF HOSPITAL

The main contract for the construction of the city and county addition to the Wichita General hospital was let to the Whitehill Construction company for a consideration of $89,345, at a joint meeting of the city council and county commissioners' court Tuesday. The plumbing and heating contract was awarded to Hoffman & Company for $21,598. The Eugene Ash Electrical company will do the electrical work on a bid of $5,494. The low bid of $5,800 of the Otis Elevator company for the construction of the elevator was also accepted.

The bids total $122,237 with probable addition later through an optional agreement in the main contract. The awarding of the contract follows the action of the city and county several months ago in voting $75,000 bonds each for the construction of the addition to the local hospital.

The joint session also voted to purchase the Hargrave hospital located on Holliday street, near the hospital to be used as a nurse's home. J. P. Jackson of the commissioners' court and W. M. Bonner of he city council were appointed to secure an agreement for the purchase of the property. Based on the amount of hospital contracts awarded, doubt is expressed as to whether there will be sufficient funds left to purchase the property from the bond issues.

The total of the contracts awarded Tuesday was several thousand dollars less than the total of the lowest bids submitted at the previous times bids were opened for the work. On the main contract the Zimmerman Construction company and the J. C. Joplin company also submitted bids which was only slightly more than that of the Whitehill company.

The Swatt Electrical company, the Shroeder Electrical company, and the Dosch Electrical company submitted bids for the electrical work while S. P. Osburne and H. W. Greenway were other bidders for the plumbing and heating contract.
