Swindle case leaves prosecutor uncertain

BY PAUL PINKHAM
Staff Writer

Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton has mixed feelings about whether a 22 - year - old Pampa man accused of stabbing two women and setting six house fires last year belongs in the state penitentiary.

Donald Aaron Swindle was scheduled to go to trial this week on an attempted capital murder charge in the Nov. 3 stabbing of a local teenager. Gwendolyn Jones, 14, was stabbed 10 times with a filet knife in an assault authorities believe was intended for her mother, Bertha Holt.

Police have said Swindle allegedly was hired to kill Holt by her estranged husband, Edward Earl Holt, 33, 613 Plains, but stabbed the wrong person when Jones, Mrs. Holt's daughter by another marriage, came home alone. The assailant hid in the bathroom before the attack.

Questions later arose over Swindle's mental competency to stand trial. He was ordered confined to Rusk State Hospital for treatment of mental illness in January after Dr. Watt T. Salmon, an Amarillo psychiatrist, testified Swindle suffered from "schizotypal disorder," a mental disorder classified as psychotic.

However, a second psychiatrist later declared Swindle competent to stand trial.

"I really can't compare this case with any other that's been tried," Hamilton said this morning.

Hamilton and Swindle's attorney, John Warner, met with 223rd District Judge Don Cain in the judge's chambers for about 30 minutes Monday. Hamilton said Monday afternoon, because of his doubts about Swindle's competency, he may request deferred adjudication in the case, a legal remedy he described as similar to probation.

A hearing has tentatively been set for Thursday at 10 a.m.

Hamilton said he is concerned about the case because Swindle, if sentenced to the penitentiary, would not be segregated by his mental ability but by the crime he committed. He said he is not sure that would be appropriate in Swindle's case.

"With a jury it's boom or bust," Hamilton said. "The situation I'm faced with is a real bad one because if the guy was sane he should be sent away forever and if he wasn't sane he shouldn't be sent away forever."

Hamilton said Salmon examined Swindle several times and detailed what he found to be the suspect's problems in a 25 - page report. Conversely, he said, the second psychiatrist, Dr. James E. Johnson, who was required to examine Swindle under the code of criminal procedure, which mandates a second psychiatric opinion, declared the defendant sane in a two - page report. Hamilton indicated he felt Salmon's examination was more thorough.

The staff at Rusk discharged Swindle after finding no signs of incompetency or mental illness, a letter from a Rusk psychiatrist to Gray County court officials states.

"It is my opinion that this patient is not now mentally ill and not in need of hospitalization in a mental hospital for his own protection and welfare and for the welfare and protection of others," the letter from Dr. James A. Hunter, who examined Swindle, says.

Hamilton noted Swindle was "in and out" of the hospital.

Warner filed five motions in district court Friday, one of them seeking to suppress testimony by Johnson because, he claimed, he was not notified of the second psychiatric examination. Warner described all his motions as fairly standard in an attempted capital murder case.

Warner also notified the court Sept. 3 of his intention to use the defense that Swindle was insane at

Unblushing Senate chooses the rose

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Roses are red,
Marigold lovers are blue,
The Senate has spoken,
Other flowers won't do.

Amid a flood of rhyming rhetoric that would make a poet blush, the Senate voted Monday to make the rose America's national flower.

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., was the first member to break into verse, unleashing a 12-verse poem that described his personal route to approval of the joint resolution.

Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, the Louisiana Democrat who sponsored the resolution, responded to Heflin in like spirit:

Roses are red,
Violets are blue,
Helfin should be
A co-sponsor of this bill, too.

Johnston also waxed poetic in his own way in pushing the measure.

"America's infatuation with the rose is at least as old as our republic itself," Johnston said on the Senate floor. "In fact, George Washington, our first president, was also our first rose breeder. One of the varieties he developed, the Mary Washington rose, is still enjoyed today in gardens across the nation."

The resolution was approved without dissent and now goes to the House for consideration.

Here is the full text of Heflin's poem, which he read on the Senate floor:

Roses are red,
Violets are blue,
Why must I choose
Between just these two?

Marigolds and dogwood,
Camellias and more,
All flowers are beautiful
And made to adore.

But today there are deficits,
And farm bills and trade,
Aren't these the subjects
On which decisions should be made?

Still, if on a nation's flower
A few moments we spend,
We might be refreshed and
Come down to Earth again.

Besides, to select a flower
As America's might not be bad.
Because I sure don't want
To make the garden clubs mad.

But all flowers are delicate
Each can refresh and amuse,
And that is the reason
I feel no flower should lose.

Still the rose is universal,
Its support has a strong voice,
So there should be no question
That the rose is the choice.

So let us raise our voice, and
Proclaim with all our power
That the rose is more than beautiful—
It is "America's Flower."

Housing finance corporation okayed by city commission

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners approved a resolution establishing the Pampa Housing Finance Corporation in a special session today.

The commission approved the application and articles of incorporation for the PHFC, which will approve the issuance of tax exempt bonds for multi-family housing projects.

The corporation was established to aid issuance of bonds for the rehabilitation of the Schneider Hotel, but it also can handle similar future projects within the city.

Ken Smith of Dallas, vice president of Schneider, Bernet and Hickman, said the corporation can review housing applications and approve the issuance of tax exempt bonds without any liability or financial obligation to the city for such projects.

The bonds will be paid through the project development, he said.

The PHFC will allow the city to have more control over what the corporation would be used for and to better determine the validity of multi-housing projects in the city, Smith said.

The corporation could insure that projects meet city guidelines, that the projects are needed in the community and that they are desirable projects, he explained.

Smith said the local corporation can more easily approve the issuance of bonds without delays often encountered in going through regional bond corporations.

Commissioner David McDaniel raised questions about the corporation's responsibility to determine the validity of housing projects.

Smith said developers "aren't going to come to you" unless they have already met the guidelines needed to qualify for the tax exempt bonds.

Kathleen Ellison, representative for Fulbright and Jaworski of Houston, said prior determinations on the validity of projects are generally made on whether they meet federal guidelines and qualifications for the tax breaks or tax exempt bonds.

Usually those standards will already have been met before a developer would approach the corporation for approval of the issuance of bonds, she said.

McDaniel asked if the PHFC would have any liability to make certain housing projects meet standards on sanitation and fire safety.

Frank Smith, city finance director, said the city would already have some control, since the projects would have to meet the city codes.

Kenneth Smith said the local corporation would allow the city to review projects more closely and to make certain they meet such standards. The PHFC "would give you more control over projects," he said.

City Attorney Don Lane asked if the city board would eliminate projects using regional boards for approval of bonds.

Smith said it would not, except for multi-housing projects. The PHFC is designed for bonds for multi-housing projects, not for single family dwelling projects.

The resolution approves the sending of the application to the Secretary of State for incorporation, with Mayor Sherman Cowan, Frank Smith and Director of Community Services Nathan Hopson serving as the incorporators.

Ellison said the state probably would approve the application within two weeks. After that, the non-profit corporation can name its board of directors, which will probably be the members of the city commission.

After it is incorporated, the PHFC can issue letters of inducement for the issuance of the bonds, she said.

South Africa hunts guerillas in Angola

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South African soldiers and warplanes swept into Marxist Angola for the second time in 10 weeks to hunt guerrillas fighting for South-West Africa's independence.

The Angolan government was told "not to interfere," with the operation against the South-West African People's Organization that began Monday, said Gen. Constand Viljoen, South Africa's armed forces commander.

"Hopefully it (the strike) will be over within a week," Lt. Gen. Ian Gleason, the army chief of staff, said Monday night on government-controlled television.

South Africa rules South-West Africa, also known as Namibia, in defiance of United Nations demands for the California-sized area's independence. South Africa assumed control of the mostly black territory of 1 million people by a League of Nations mandate after World War I.

In May, two South African soldiers were killed and another was captured in northern Angola. South Africa said they were gathering intelligence on the guerrillas, known as SWAPO, and the African National Congress, which is fighting white rule in South Africa.

Angola said the soldiers were attempting to sabotage an oil installation partly owned by Gulf Oil Corp.

That operation and South Africa's commando raid June 14 against suspected African National Congress members in the capital of Botswana brought worldwide protests, and the United States withdrew its ambassador for three months. Twelve blacks died in the Botswana raid.

Viljoen gave no indication of the size of the force, its targets or how deeply it penetrated into Angola.

The armed forces commander, in a statement from the capital, Pretoria, said the guerrillas planned to bombard military bases and residential areas in northern Namibia with long-range artillery.

SWAPO is not known to have used long-range artillery before.

Gleason said the troops were pursuing 400-800 men who were "well-dispersed" in southern Angola.

South Africa launched its last cross-border strike early in July, killing 57 guerrillas and losing one man, Viljoen said at the time.

SWAPO guerrillas have fought a 19-year guerrilla war for Namibia. South African officials say nearly 10,000 guerrillas and 566 South African soldiers have been killed in that time.

Agricultural energy users file lawsuit against Cabot

A class action lawsuit has been filed in U.S. District Court in Lubbock calling on Cabot Corp. and its subsidiaries to lower natural gas prices and charging that they are monopolizing transmission of gas in the area.

The Texas Agricultural Energy Users Assoc. filed the suit Sept. 9 on behalf of residential users, farmers and commercial users. Delaware-based Cabot, Westar Transmission Co. and Cranberry Pipeline Corp. and Gas Marketing Inc. of Texas were named defendants.

Energas, which entered a contract to purchase gas from Westar in 1983, was named a co-conspirator in the suit, but not a defendant.

"The lawsuit is an effort to have the market prices determined by the free market rather than a predetermined form of pricing, said Jim Elliott of the Hereford law firm of Witherspoon, Akin & Langley.

"We are charging that the defendants violated federal and state anti-trust laws through the restriction of transmission, price fixing and monopolizing the transmission of gas," he said.

Elliot believes that the customers could purchase the gas for $2.70 if it were not for the "conspiracy."

"Westar charges about a dollar more," he said.

The suit also charges that Cabot is refusing to transmit gas from a third party through its lines.

According to Elliott, the suit represents 350,000 purchaser accounts with Energas in the West Texas Transmission system serving one million customers over a two year period. Carson County and Gray County are two of the counties served in the system.

The city of White Deer uses Westar as a back up for its city-owned gas system. However a spokesperson for the city said that because the city has its own wells, it has not purchased gas from Westar recently.

"We're asking that the different classes of customers be certified and that the defendants be found in violation of anti-trust laws," Elliott said, adding that the residents are also seeking an as yet undetermined amount of monitary damages. The monitary damages will be determined as the plaintiffs go through the discovery stage of the lawsuit.

The suit also seeks to void a 1983 contract in which Energas buys all its gas needs through West Texas Transmission.

Scout registration night Thursday

The fun and adventure that boys find in Cub Scouting is very near for hundreds of area boys who want to be Tiger Cubs or Cub Scouts.

School Night for Scouting in Pampa is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Pampa Optimist Club, 601 E. Craven.

Boys and their parents are being invited to come to the registration meeting "to join the Scouts," according to Mike Donnelly, School Night chairman for the Kiowa District of the Boy Scouts of America.

Registration for all boys 7 to 10 years old interested in Tiger Cubs and Cub Scouts will be held at the Thursday night meeting. Representatives from all packs and Tiger groups will be there to register boys in the pack or group closest to the boy's school.

An adult must accompany each boy, Donnelly said. Fees will be collected, applications will be filled out and the programs will be explained.

Donnelly explained that Tiger Cubs are 7 years old, Cub Scouts are 8 through 10 years old, and Boy Scouts are 11 through 18 years old.

City receives safety award

The City of Pampa has earned the American Automobile Association's Pedestrian Safety Citation for its record of two years with no pedestrian fatalities.

The citation is one of 320 top citations to be presented by AAA clubs across the country in the federation's 46th annual Pedestrian Program, announced the Panhandle Plains Auto Club.

More than 2,590 cities and 30 states participated in the AAA survey, which evaluates and recognizes the outstanding pedestrian safety achievements of participating communities made during the previous calendar year.

Since 1937, when AAA began the Pedestrian Safety Program, pedestrian fatalities have declined 48 percent while motor vehicle registration increased 481 percent and the nation's population grew by 84 percent.

BRIDGE WORK COMPLETE—The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation has announced the completion of a project to widen and strengthen this bridge on FM 2375 at the North Fork of the Red River near Lefors. President sets first news conference in six months

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will hold a nationally broadcast news conference tonight, his first formal White House meeting with reporters in three months.

The half-hour session beginning at 8 p.m. EDT in the East Room will be carried by the major television and radio networks.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes had said at the outset of Reagan's second term that the president would hold more frequent news conferences than he did during his first four years, when he held fewer such sessions than any other recent president.

Less than a month after his most recent news conference, held June 18 during the TWA hostage crisis, Reagan unexpectedly underwent surgery to remove a cancerous tumor from his colon. He spent several weeks recuperating, both in Washington and during his August vacation in California, before resuming his Oval Office schedule after Labor Day.

Although Speakes said the question-and-answer sessions would be held every four to six weeks, Reagan stuck to that schedule for only two months, then let three months lapse between news conferences in March and June as a controversy swirled over his visit to the German military cemetery at Bitburg, where Nazi SS troops were buried.

During a brief question period following a White House luncheon Monday for regional editors and broadcasters, Reagan disclosed he has spoken frequently to former President Richard Nixon in preparing for his November summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Reagan said he agreed with Nixon's assessment that "we want peace; the Soviet Union needs peace."

On another subject, Reagan refused to say whether he would veto legislation pending in Congress to protect the U.S. textile industry from foreign imports.

But, a week before he is expected to lay out a new trade policy, the president said he continues to oppose protectionist measures designed to save jobs in one industry, because they only tempt retaliation by foreign governments and cost people jobs in other industries.

"With protectionism, to favor one industry over another, no one ever looks over their shoulder to see the retaliation that throws other people out of their jobs," Reagan said.

"The American farmer knows that most of all," Reagan said. "The easiest way to retaliate is against farm exports."

Swindle

the time of the crime, court records indicate.

Hamilton said a deferred adjudication would be similar to the terms of probation in that if it was violated, Swindle could be sentenced to life in prison on the attempted capital murder charge. The judge probably would order some type of psychiatric counseling in Swindle's case, Hamilton said.

The difference is that there is no finding of guilt with deferred adjudication, he explained. The judgement of the defendant is deferred.

Terms of the deferred adjudication could last up to 10 years, Hamilton said.

Swindle is also charged with aggravated assault in the stabbing of Theresa Bissett, 30, 420 N. Cuyler. Bissett was stabbed in the abdomen on the railroad tracks near Tyng and Russell about a year ago by an assailant dressed in a camouflage suit. Both stabbing victims survived the attacks.

Holt, who is charged with solicitaton of capital murder, is scheduled for docket call Oct. 14 after his case was continued Monday. He could come to trial in October.

Kohl secretary flees W. Germany

BONN, West Germany (AP) — A secretary in the office of Chancellor Helmut Kohl is suspected of spying and has fled to communist East Germany, the chief federal prosecutor's office said today.

It is the first time the Bonn spy scandal has touched the chancellor's office since the affair began early last month with the disappearance of an aide to Bonn's economics minister.

Prosecutor Kurt Rebmann said in a statement said that espionage investigations have been opened against both Herta-Astrid Willner, 45, and her husband, who worked in a foundation associated with a political party that is a member of Kohl's coalition government.

West German radio, quoting Bonn security sources, said the missing secretary may have had access to confidential information about the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative, commonly known as Star Wars, which is a proposed shield against nuclear attack.

The pair sent resignation letters to Kohl and the foundation, saying that they had fled to East Germany, Rebmann said.

He added that the woman failed to return Monday to her job in the internal political section of the chancellor's office. She had been on vacation in Spain and had worked in the chancellor's office for nearly 12 years, according to Rebmann.

The statement from Rebmann's office identified the woman's husband as 59-year-old Herbert Willner.

Rebmann said her husband worked in the Friedrich Naumann Foundation.

League of Women Voters backs water plan

AUSTIN (AP) — The League of Women voters has announced qualified support of a $1.43 billion Texas water plan, a proposal league officials say should bring improved water quality and needed conservation.

However, the League said Monday, the plan falls short on environmental protection and groundwater management.

Regardless, Gov. Mark White quickly hailed the League's endorsement, calling it "vital to the support and passage of this issue."

The League's president, Lois Carpenter of Midland, said the decision to support the plan came after lengthy deliberation.

"It was not easy to decide whether the glass of water provided by the water plan ... is a glass half full or half empty. But we have agreed on half full.

"In our view, the new water plan and the legislative package (that accompanies it) are steps that will move us father down the road toward meeting the state's water development needs," Ms. Carpenter said.

The water plan will be presented to voters on Nov. 5 as two constitutional amendments. Three previous water proposals have been turned down at the polls.

The plan would allow the state to issue $980 million in bonds to fund water projects such as reservoirs, treatment facilities, flood control projects and other work.

The plan also would extend $250 million of the state's credit to insure local water project bonds against default. Another $200 million in state bonds would be used to provide low-interest loans to farmers buying water-saving irrigation equipment.

White and legislative leaders are strongly pushing the plan. It has been opposed as too weak by some environmental groups, including the Audubon Society and the Texas Committee on Natural Resources, although the Sierra Club decided to remain neutral.

Ms. Carpenter said the League decided to endorse the plan despite its faults because, "This represents significant progress."

"But we emphasize that the glass in question still needs to be filled, and we will continue to lobby future legislative sessions for stronger positions, especially in groundwater management and in natural resources protection," she said.

Catherine Perrine of Dallas, the League's water analyst, said it is impossible to predict what voters will think of the plan.

"I haven't the foggiest notion what voters are going to do ... They're very nervous about approving large sums of money. It's just hard to say," she told a news conference.

Besides endorsing the water plan, the League backed two more of the 14 proposed amendments that will be on the Nov. 5 ballot.

Ms. Carpenter said the League favors proposals to give the School Land Board the power to use proceeds from the sale of public school land to acquire other land for the Permanent School Fund, and to create a board to propose reapportionment plans for the state's judicial districts.

The League also said it strongly opposes an amendment to allow the Legislature to require a state agency to obtain approval before spending or making an emergency transfer of any appropriated funds.

"This amendment could cause meddling in the work of our state agencies and it could prevent them from carrying out their legally assigned duties," she said.

Inmates thank officials for lockdown in state prisons

ROSHARON, Texas (AP) — Some inmate gang members within the Texas Department of Corrections thanked officials for a recent lockdown and severe restrictions of 13 prison units, officials say.

"We had inmate gang members coming up to us and saying, 'Thank you, if you hadn't done something we would have been pulled into it,'" said Capt. Steve Holloman of the Texas Department of Corrections' Ramsey I Unit in Brazoria County.

"Gang members told us that if we had not locked them up, 'we would have been given a hit and had to carry it out.' I know some of the guys would have carried the hit out," Holloman said.

Wardens, TDC investigators and guards said that the wholesale confining of one-half of the TDC's 38,000 inmates has short-circuited a bloody gang turf battle that has left eight prisoners dead this month. About 7,000 inmates remained locked in their cells on Monday, prison spokesman Charles Brown said.

However, prison employee involvement in drug trafficking and inmate rackets is a growing problem that may eclipse the gang fighting, officials said.

"Right now, the inmate relations are not all that bad," said Ramsey I Assistant Warden Bruce Thaler. "Our biggest problem is with employees running these narcotics to the inmates. It's scary."

Holloman said the gangs are fighting over control of prison rackets, mostly marijuana and heroin trafficking. Trafficking is made possible by employees who will act as "mules" to bring the drugs inside the prisons, he said.

On Sunday, James Parsons, TDC board secretary, conducted the first public tour of three of the 13 prisons where many inmates have been locked in their cells around the clock.

He inspected the Ramsey I and Ramsey III units and the maximum-security Darrington Unit near Rosharon where three homicides took place last week.

The inmate killings occured a few days after 20 known gang leaders were transferred to Darrington in an attempt to break up the gangs, prison officials said.

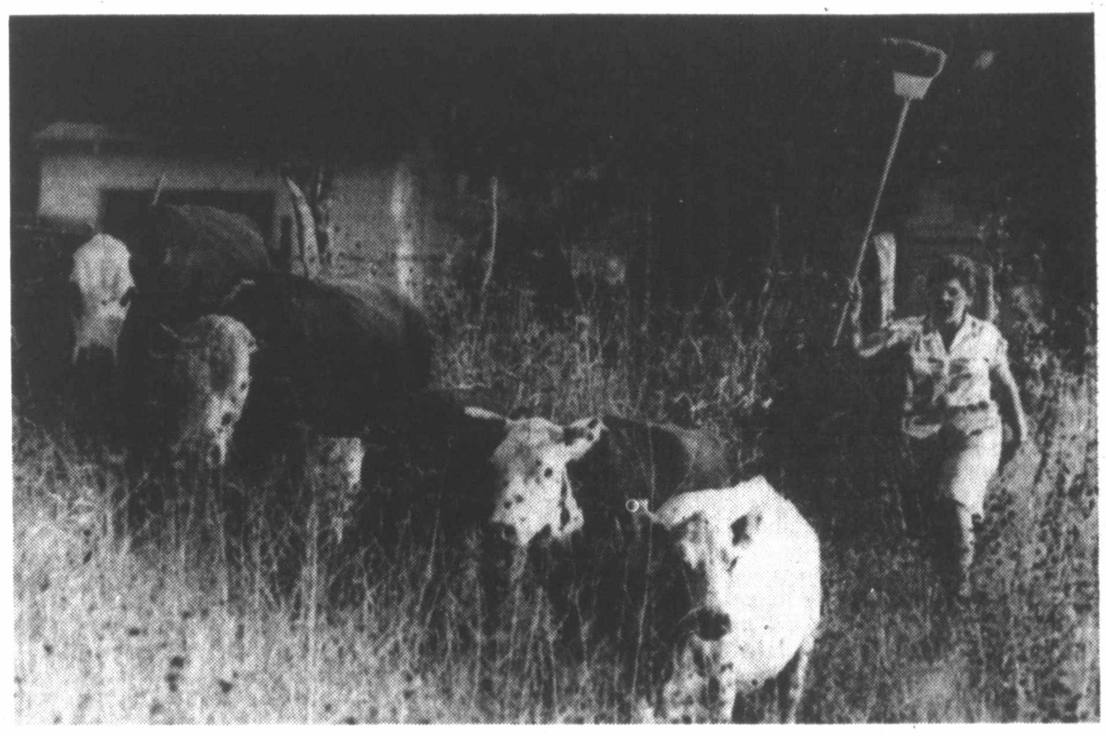

Members of the Texas Syndicate and the Mexican Mafia are pressuring inmate recruits to attack other convicts as an initiation rite, officials said.

New inmate search procedures used at Darrington probably would have prevented the killings, said TDC Capt. Jim Anderson.

"We weren't strip-searching close-custody inmates at the time," he said. "If we were, we probably would have found the knives."

A temporary ban on mail among inmates, ordered by officials, is starting to restrict the movement of convicts involved in the gangs.

TDC is under federal court order to bring overcrowded conditions under control.

Supreme Court justice says not only lawyers should run the government

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor asserts that people who sit back and leave lawmaking strictly to lawyers have no right to complain when they don't like the result.

Ms. O'Connor, the first woman appointed to the Supreme Court, said Monday, "With the proliferation of lawyers and law schools in the United States, many Americans have begun to assume that government may be the exclusive province of the legal profession. Now that's a dangerous assumption."

"To be sure," she told a University of Texas audience, "lawyers are often highly skilled in drafting legislation. Because of that skill — and most lawyers enjoy talking — attorneys often run for and occupy public office.

"But it would be a mistake to conclude from this that only lawyers should serve as members of Congress or of a state legislature or participate in other governmental bodies.

"So, although some of you may have assumed that you have to go to law school to go into politics, I urge you to reconsider your assumption. ... Even if you are not the sort of person who is comfortable debating public issues, you still can and should play an important part in shaping public policy," Ms. O'Connor said.

"As a graduate of this university, you may know far more than any lawyer about the concrete problems of science or psychology or have a far keener insight into human behavior as a result of your study of history or literature," she said.

"If you just keep quiet and still. If you leave legislation entirely to the lawyers, then you will have no right to complain when the laws fail to adapt to technilogical change, do not account for the diversity of human behavior or simply come out in a way you don't like," she said.

As for the Supreme Court, Ms. O'Connor said, "The public rarely notices but even when the Supreme Court rules on a constitutional question, the court often defers to a Legislature in that ruling.

"It is possible, I suppose, that the court could attempt to impose its own values on the state or nation by publishing opinions containing detailed prescriptions for every aspect of a citizen's life. But the court rarely does this and for good reason. Courts enjoy neither the freedom nor the authority to engage in unrestrained and open-ended interpretations of American values."

Adult ratings for records?

Okay, kids, time now for Rate-A-Record, that popular program in which you can help determine which records will be Number One.

Only this year, the judging rules are going to be different. No longer will the albums be judged on their danceability, melody or words. No, we've got a whole new fad: Adult Themes.

Today's contestant is the founding member of Women Who Want to be Housewives and CASE (Citizens Against Sin and Everything else). From Bible Belt, Texas, let's meet Ms. Millie Shoo-fly.

"That's Mrs., buster."

Fine, you know the rules, Mrs. Shoo-fly. As you know, the Parents' Music Resource Center, a group of Washington, D.C., housewives, much like yourself, want to put warning labels on rock records and to rate records according to adult themes — like they do with movies. Your job is to rate the following songs with the following system: G for General audience, M for Mature audience, R for Restricted to nobody under 17 unless an adult listens to the song too and X for Adults only. Shall we begin?

"Yes, lets."

Okay. Our first song involves a woman who invites people to "my house" for some "candy." Mrs. Shoo-Fly, rate that tune.

"Oh, I would have to give it an R. After all, we all know what the 'candy' means. It means sex."

You give it an R. The tune is Rosemary Cloony's 1950's standard "Come On-a My House." Our next songs are country songs.....

"Say no more. Give the songs G ratings. Everyone knows what good Christians and decent family men the country singers are."

A G rating? The songs are "All my Rowdy Friends are Comin' Over Tonight" and "I'm Goin' Huntin Tonight, but I Ain't Takin' No Gun," by that womanizing Bocephus himself, Hank Williams Jr.. The next song is about a man who calls for his pipe and calls for his bowl.

"R. Definitely an R. We can't have talk about drugs in our songs."

That was the nursery rhyme, Old King Cole. This following song, "Get Happy," was made a classic by a woman who died of a drug overdose in 1969.

"Oh, dear. We can't have our young people listening to sinful creatures like her and those hedonistic songs. I'd rate it X. Burn it."

The performer was Judy Garland. The next song concerns virginity and feeling "shiny and new."

"Must be one of our blessed hymns. I'd give it a G."

Madonna's "Like a Virgin." The next song is the current hit by Billy Joel.

"Ban it. He's one of those rock singers, and you know how high the teen suicide rate is."

The song is "Second Wind," which Joel wrote in hopes of discouraging youth from taking their lives. Our next artist was a long-haired bon vivant who was recently immortalized on film.

"Oh, one of those. Probably some unknown from the Sinful 60s. Give it an M."

Okay, M as in Mozart, who was depicted in the film "Amadaus."

Well, Mrs. Shoo-Fly, according to our judges, you didn't get a single answer right. Your rating will have no effect on the record industry, except to wipe out the sales of such wholesome artists as Amy Grant and Katrina and The Waves and to make such disgustingly lewd and sexist performers as Motley Crue, David Lee Roth and Billy Idol even more appealing to young people. But don't worry, that doesn't make you any further off-base than the members of PMRC.

But for being such an inspirational contestant, we have a consolation prize selected especially for you.

"Oh boy. Just what I always wanted, a Wild Week-end with Prince."

Crews working to neutralize river

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Cleanup crews working to neutralize the sulfuric acid that leaked into the Medina River after a train derailment hoped to have the waters stabilized before they merge with the San Antonio River, an Environmental Protection Agency official said Monday.

"Hopefully, it will be neutralized before it merges with the San Antonio River," said Pat Hammack, an EPA spokesman from Dallas.

The two rivers merge about eight miles from the site of the derailment, that sent 21 acid-bearing cars crashing to the riverbanks late Saturday.

About 300 people were evacuated from the immediate area until early Monday.

Officials said they dumped tons of lime into the water to neutralize the acidity.

Hammack said the water was at a pH level of 6.5 to 7, which is about normal. When the spill occurred, sending about 50,000 gallons of acid into the water, the pH level was about 1, he said.

The pH level indicates the acidity of a substance.

The acid created a five mile plume that is moving downstream. Lime is being added to the waters in spots where the acid has not neutralized, he said.

The spill is expected to have minimal effect on area water wells. Those that are tainted, he said, can be treated or flushed out and will be fine, he said.

Livestock that drink from the river aren't expected to be hurt either, he said, adding that the animals may drink the water once but won't return for more.

The Medina, he said, will reclaim itself within six months to a year.

Health department officials stuck with their warning against residents getting into the river for the time being.

TREATMENT FOR STIFF NECK

If you're suffering from a stiff neck, don't wait for it to take care of itself when treatment is available to correct it.

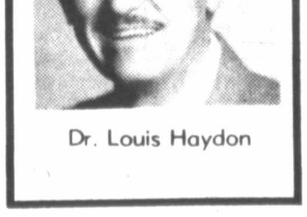

Of all the bones in the spinal column, none are more easily injured or more vulnerable than the seven vertebrae in the neck. None are moved more often. We are constantly turning our heads to look at people and things.

Neck stiffness can have many causes, from sudden and violent accidents to such simple activities as painting a ceiling or just sitting reading a book for a long time. But there's nothing simple about the pain.

A careful examination will reveal the source of the pain and how best to treat it. Any misaligned vertebrae in the spinal column should be properly adjusted so there will be no abnormal pressure on your nervous system. Treatment may also include exercises for the cervical muscles such as gently rotating your head in all directions. This can help restore muscle strength and tone.

GET MORE USE FROM DINING ROOM

When you stop to think about it, you'll realize that many people have what amounts to a "wasted" room or area in their homes—and that is the dining room.

We say "wasted" because many families use this area just once a day, for the evening meal, or at most twice or three times a day.

But with proper furnishings and planning, the dining room—whether it's a separate room, or an area off the living room—can be utilized more beautifully and more fully.

Perhaps you never thought about it, but you might want to make your dining area become, for instance, a charming second sitting room or a study. One way to do this would be by maybe placing your dining table away from the center of the room and adding the necessary furniture while making better use of the space within the room. Out of habit, many people furnish a dining room simply for eating but it can be more than that.

You might think about using your dining area for games, or for work, or for some other use - and furnish it accordingly. We can help you with ideas, and the furniture for this and all other rooms in your home. Stop in.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

'Watchdog' moving to college campus

The self-appointed watchdog of the U.S. press and boardcasting, Accuracy in Media, is about to take on higher education.

Reed Irvine, the founder of the Washington-based group, said he is convinced that there's a liberal slant amoung faculties at major universities, that students are not exposed to a more conservative interpretation of historical fact—and that the liberal bias is reflected in the nation's journalism.

Irvine's plan has a certain cloak-and-dagger quality. Students and retired people will be recruited to register for liberal arts classes. They will call their professors to task when they feel they are being misled.

University faculties are predictably affronted. "An infringement on academic freedom," said Ernest Benjamin, general secretary of the American Association of University Professors, "Injurious to the cause of the university and truth-seeking as we perceive it," said Wilson Smith, chairman of the University of California Academic Council.

But the critics are making the same mistake that Irvine's group too often does. Disagreeable facts, facts that don't jibe with one's own interpretation of things, aren't necessarily wrong.

Accuracy in Media recently scored its most impressive sting in its 16-year role as a media gadfly when it was granted an hour by the Public Broadcasting Service to rebut a PBS television series on Vietnam. It can be argued that public television was overly generous and that Irvine's production lacked professional quality.

But its role as critic and challenger is legitimate is a free society. The press traditionally has considered itself a gadfly. There's nothing wrong with the gadfly having to put up with another gadfly, or with that gadfly being pestered by still another. The free exchange of ideas—with as much access and disclosure as possible—is crucial to informed decision making.

So, professors, take it from the voice of experience. Accuracy in Media, with its $1.7 million annual budget, may have the money, but it has no particular magic. It is as vulnearable to criticism as any other institution.

Criticism isn't censorship; its the very opposite. It wounds only those who don't have an honest rejoinder.

Bad company for Reagan

The free world has named P, W. Botha Villain of the Year. (Mikhail who?) Which is why President Reagan last Monday slapped sanctions on South Africa.

The sanctions, though modest, probably ensure the failure of any congressional move to impose stronger sanctions. Reagan, as the author of the measures, remains for now in control of this country's South Africa policy. In so far as anyone controls it. In so far as there is a policy.

The remarkable thing about the South African questions is the fluency with which outsiders exclaim over its contours. What do Americans know about South Africa? Two things basically: that blacks outnumber whites, but nevertheless whites dominate blacks.

These highly rudimentary data permit congressmen and comentators to prescribe detailed programs for change. The white regime should do (a), (b), (c), (d), and (e), whereupon there would be justice. And if the whites won't budge, we'll do (1), (2), (3), (4), and (5), whereupon they certainly will budge.

Which leads Paul Johnson, writing in the September issue of Commentary magazine - go buy a copy; well worth the $3.25 - to write: "That the United States, the richest country in the world, should deliberately set about destroying the economy of what is in some respects still a developing nation is an absurdity in itself, and a cruel absurdity."

I should explain about Johnson. Twenty-five years ago, he was a fervent socialist - a believer, that is, in social manipulation. He edited Britain's New Statesman magazine. Philosophically Johnson has since then exeeuted a 180 degree turn. No contemporary intellectual observer is shrewder: in partial consequence, I imagine, of his having once been a socialist.

Johnson sees South Africa as a typical African country, with complex racial problems. That is, it isn't just blacks against whites; you've got Zulus (the largest racial group), whites (the second largest, with several sub-groupings like Jews and Portuguese), Xhosa, Coloureds, the North Sotho, the South Sotho, and the Tswana, plus seven other main groups ncluding 780,000 Asians.

On the evidence - alas! - South Africa, though sinful, is not without partially redeeming features. "Only in South Africa have the real incomes of blacks risen very substantially in the last quarter-century."

No other African country has a large black middle class. "Black Africans vote most sincerely with their feet. South Africa is the country where they most want to work and (if open to them) live in." Too, it is "the only African country where (the rule of law and democracy) exists at all."

But here is the main point about disinvestment proposals, which would put South Africa in economic Coventry. Such proposals would have the opposite effect. They would "strengthen both the regime and the South African economy."

If international loans were cut off, the country would develop its own financial industry, as it developed an arms industry and a synthetic-fuel industry. Even if sanctions suceeded, they would simply derive moderate whites into the arms of the die-hards.

How, then, do you destroy apartheid? With capitalism, says Paul Johnson. Apartheid is "ethnic socialism, a system which necessarily involves state interference in every aspect of economic activity." The more capitalism South Africa gets, the better for all, except of course the die-hards.

Back to Washington, D.C., and let's see if we have this thing straight: To fight apartheid, we turn the screws on the South Africa economy? Wait a minute, that doesn't sound quite right. We force the government to intervene more aggressively in the economy, depend more on itself, clamp down on the movement of capital and labor? Hmmm.

When it comes to South Africans so-called policy, somebody in Washington is uninformed if not perverse and willful. Lots of somebodies in fact. So sorry to see the President consorting with them, howsoever reluctantly.

Today in History

A good reason to leave

(This is the seventh in a series of columns from Russia, where our columnist is visiting as part of an American Friendship Force.)

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. - These were my last hours in Leningrad before the midnight train to Moscow, a trip I was dreading with the same fierce anxiety that lurks before a root canal.

A few days earlier, I had taken an overnight train from Lithuania to Leningrad. Had the ride been a movie it would have been entitled "Train to Hell," starring Rory Calhoun, Vincent Price and James Watt.

A couple of days after a root canal, you're fine. A couple of days after a Soviet train ride, Casey Jones is still stoking coal into your boiler.

I decided to spend my last hours in Leningrad down behind my hotel looking at the Gulf of Finland. How often does somebody from Moreland, Ga., have the opportunity to gaze out at the Gulf of Finland?

I enjoyed Leningrad. There is charm here with the city's palaces and canals and art treasures. The Soviets currently are restoring many of the palaces the Nazis destroyed during their unsuccessful 900-days siege of this city during World War II.

Pardon me, I was wondering if the Soviets might not be wise to forget the restoration of the palaces for a time and spend the money on better housing for its citizens.

But what do I know about communism?

As I was gazing out at the gulf, a young Soviet woman walked up to me and asked, "American?"

"How did you guess?" I replied.

We both laughed.

She said her name was Lana. She was quite pretty. She had black hair and delicate white skin. Her English was perfect.

"What city?" she wanted to know.

I noticed she wore a Coca-Cola pin on her Levis jacket. Pins and Levis jackets are quite popular among Soviet young people. They will trade their future firstborn for them.

"Atlanta," I answered her. "It's the home of Coca-Cola."

Visitors to the Soviet Union are warned about young people and the black market. Americans are the favorite target. Young Soviets want your jeans, your cigarettes, the shirt off your back, and especially, your dollars. They will offer an exhange rate as high as three times the official rate, which, of course, is against the law.

Lana seemed to want nothing more than conversation, however. She said she studied meteorology but had not completed her college. She said she was working as a cleric. She said she was 28. She looked 17.

She wanted to know how much money it was possible to make in the United States. The great capitalist spoke:

"In my country," I said, "we have the incentive factor. The harder you work, the more you make. The more you want to succeed, in most instances, the more likely you are to succeed. Some people make millions."

"It is different here," Lana replied, as if I didn't know. "You work for money. We work for an idea."

Gorbachev put it another way. He said the West treasures its money, the Soviet treasures its people.

Replied an English wit: That's correct. The West locks up its money and the Russians...etc.

I asked Lana if she thought she would ever go to America.

"It is not possible now," she answered. "But someday I will go."

"How?" I asked.

"I will marry an American man and whoosh! I will fly away with him to America!"

She looked straight at me with her deep green eyes as she said that.

I checked my watch. Soviet trains always leave on time. I said boodbye to Lana, and whoosh! I headed back to the hotel to pack.

Austria has reason for celebration

By Don Graff

In this year of momentous anniversaries for the post-World War II world, one of special significance should not be overlooked.

It is not one of the dramatic 40ths, such as V-E and V-J days and the dropping of the atomic bombs.

Rather, it was 30 years ago that Austria emerged from a decade of Four-Power occupation as a reunited, independent nation. The mechanism was a treaty between Austria and the four victorious wartime powers, the formal signing of which was observed at a gathering of foreign ministers in Vienna back in May.

But the country's rebirth did not become accomplished fact until several months later, when on Sept. 19, 1955, the last Soviet troops withdrew from Austrian territory.

It is to this day the only such instance of voluntary Soviet surrender of conquered territory. (Soviet forces were pulled out of northern Iran under U.S. pressure in 1946, but under very different circumstances.)

Why the Soviets chose suddenly to pack up and leave is still not completely clear. It certainly had some connection with the then-recent death of Josef Stalin. It is possible, according to one school of thought, that the new leadership, preoccupied with getting its own affairs in order, was hoping to buy a respite in tensions with the West.

According to another view, an independent Austria was being offered as the Soviet quid for which it was hoped the Western quo would be a halt on the rearmament of West Germany within NATO.

Whichever, it can be said with absolute certainty that it would never have come to pass had the Kremlin had the slightest inkling of what was to come in neighboring Hungary just one year later.

And whatever their reasons, the Soviets deserve some thanks for a not-so-small favor. Austria is one of the postwar world's unqualified success stories, but it had to come from very far behind to become such.

A between-wars political and economic basket case, it was an early and not entirely unwilling victim of Nazi Germany. As long as things were going well for the Third Reich, most Austrians went along.

At the end of the war, Austria shared Germany's partitioned fate. Between 1947 and 1954, the occupying powers held nearly 400 meetings, by State Department count, to discuss their charge's future. They could not agree on terms of withdrawal, primarily because of stiff Soviet demands for reparations, forced repatriation of refugees from Soviet-conquered areas and continued stationing of Soviet troops in Austria following a peace treaty.

In early 1955, however, Moscow abruptly abandoned the most extreme demands. A treaty was negotiated and signed within months. The rest is recent history.

Austria, geographically the size of Maine with a population about that of New Jersey, initially had its freedom but not much else. While it pumps some oil from fields near the Hungarian border and mines a mountain of iron ore at Eisenerz, its major resource is Alpine scenery.

But it has made the most of what it has, to the extent that its economy in recent years has been one of the sturdiest in the developed world. It is a mini-economic miracle, in stunning contrast to the dismal circumstances of its communist neighbors.

Witness says assassination of Berg, Lear discussed

SEATTLE (AP) — The Order advised its members to act nicely toward blacks and other minorities, avoid drugs and feign "toothlessness" if discovered by authorities — at a time the white supremacist group was planning to assassinate prominent Jews and commit other violent crimes, a former member testified.

Denver Daw Parmenter II said Monday that the group discussed assassinating television producer Norman Lear, Denver radio talk show host Alan Berg and others with "anti-white views."

Parmenter was to take the stand again today for his third day of testimony in the trial of 10 alleged Order members who are charged with racketeering.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice, of Tyler, was another target for killing, although his name did not come up at the meeting where the assassinations were discussed, Parmenter said. The judge was singled out by Order founder Robert Jay Mathews because of a 1983 housing desegregation ruling in Clarksville, Texas, Parmenter said.

When asked about the testimony Monday evening, Justice said: "I can't comment on that. It would be ill advised."

Parmenter ended his Monday testimony recounting his participation in the July 19, 1984, robbery of a Brink's armored car near Ukiah, Calif., in which $3.6 million was taken. He said he participated in that robbery along with Order founder Robert Jay Mathews and 10 other members.

He said the robbery was accomplished with the help of two Brink's employees in San Francisco, Charles Ostrout and Ronald King.

Ostrout provided the group with a map of the truck's route, pointed out the best place for the robbery and said "he felt there would be a great deal of money," Parmenter said.

The government alleges that robbery and other crimes were intended to finance The Order's planned overthrow of the U.S. government, with the aim of eliminating the influence of Jews and racial minorities.

U.S. District Judge Walter McGovern is hearing the case with an all-white jury of nine women and six men.

Parmenter testified Monday that Scutari, whose code name was "Mr. Black," prepared security regulations banning drug use and ordering members to use pay phones and code names when communicating with one another.

The list advised members to "act like they are normal people" around blacks. And for "Race Traders," a misspelling of "traitors," it said: "Act like they are normal people, no matter how hard it is, their time will come."

For Jews, called "The Enemy," the list instructed: "It is important that the enemy never find out that we exist. If he does, he must think we are toothless."

Parmenter said that he and other Order members met in early June 1984 to discuss killing "All in the Family" producer Lear and Berg.

Also discussed as targets were Morris Dees, the Montgomery, Ala., director of the Southern Poverty Law Center that monitors Ku Klux Klan activities, and Peter Lake, a journalist who infiltrated the Aryan Nations, the Hayden Lake, Idaho-based religious group from which the Order split.

Parmenter said the assassination targets were selected because they were Jewish or were "basically thought to be anti-white."

Lear was named "because he was a Jew, plus all of his programs were thought to be anti-white ... attacking white moral principles," Parmenter said. Dees was included, Parmenter said, because he had had encounters with Louis Beam, a Ku Klux Klan leader in Texas and assistant pastor of the Aryan Nations.

Lear was not in his Los Angeles office late Monday and was unavailable for comment, said his assistant, Maggie Kondo.

As for Lake, "he was considered to be someone we had to get, but he was not considered a priority, so his name was dropped," Parmenter said.

Lake, who had published articles about his induction into the Aryan Nations, was the first government witness Friday. He told reporters after court that he was concerned for his safety and wears a bulletproof vest.

Parmenter last week testified that Order members also discussed assassinating former secretary of state Henry Kissinger, David Rockefeller and the heads of the three television networks.

Another target for killing, he said, was U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Texas. He was not discussed at the assassination meeting, but had been noted by Mathews because of his 1983 desegregation ruling for federally subsidized housing in Clarksville, Texas, Parmenter said.

No target was selected at that meeting in early June 1984, but Berg, an acid-tongued man who sparred verbally with racists, was gunned down in the driveway of his Denver home on June 18. Parmenter said Mathews confessed to him later that he participated in that killing, along with defendants Bruce Carroll Pierce and David Lane, and fugitive Richard Scutari.

Defendant Jean Margaret Craig is also accused by the government of observing Berg's movements and habits before the killing.

Parmenter, 33, of Cheney, said Pierce later said Berg "fell as if the carpet had been pulled out from under him" when he was shot and killed.

Parmenter pleaded guilty in January to racketeering in exchange for a 20-year sentence in a medium-security prison and for a promise to testify at the trial.

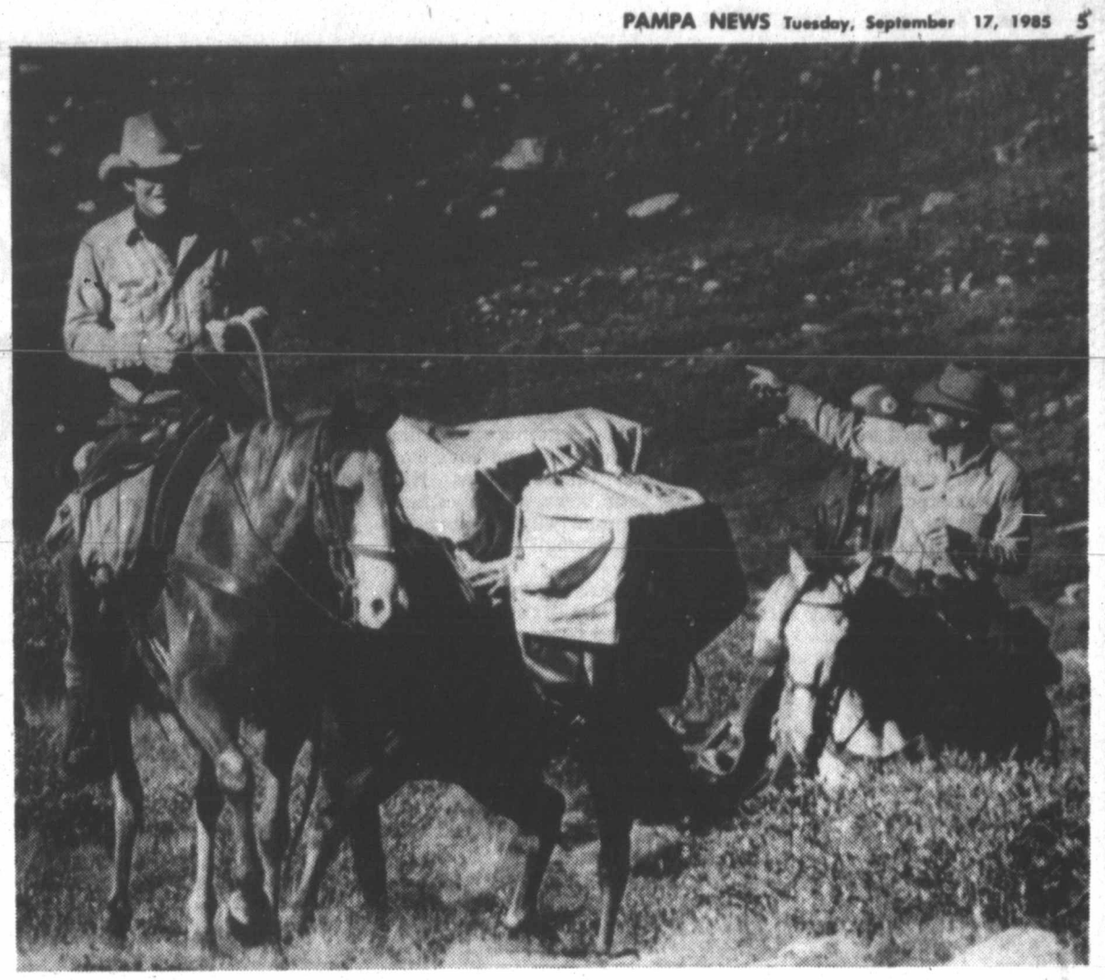

Parmenter and 10 other indictees have pleaded guilty in the case, the most recent, Thomas Bentley, on Friday. Scutari remains at large and the 23rd indictee, David Tate, faces trial in Missouri in the killing of a state trooper.

Storm Fabian surprises forecasters

MIAMI (AP) — Tropical Storm Fabian surprised forecasters by strengthening from a tropical depression in the Atlantic Ocean early today about 375 miles south-southeast of Bermuda after it increased its wind speeds by 20 mph.

At 3 a.m. EDT, Fabian was centered at latitude 27 degrees north and longitude 63.5 degrees west and was expected to continue moving east-northeast around 15 mph for up to 24 hours, said forecaster Gil Clark of the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables.

The highest sustained winds were 55 mph. At 10:30 p.m. Monday, when maximum winds were 35 mph, making the disturbance a depression, forecasters had not expected it to strengthen.

Cable pardons reveal many thefts

AUSTIN (AP) — Officials of Austin Cablevision say that since the new state law has taken effect making theft of cable television service a crime, they've heard a bunch of excuses.

One person who admitted stealing service was so afraid his theft would be discovered that he disconnected it every morning before going to work and reconnected it every night when he got home.

Several others called the cable TV company to say they "woke up one morning" and discovered they were getting pay channels for free.

Kathy Chance, vice president of business affairs for the cable company, said Austin Cablevision's amnesty program expires Sept. 30.

"We've been receiving about 100 calls a day. About a third of the calls are from people who want to pay for the service, a third are from people who want it disconnected and the last third are from people who are just curious and are asking questions," she said.

Under the new law, people caught stealing cable programs can be sent to jail for up to six months and fined up to $1,000. The law does not apply to people who own satellite reception dishes.

Ms. Cance said Austin Cablevision will work with the police theft detail and the county attorney's office to find and prosecute cable thieves once the system's amnesty program ends.

LIFESTYLES

Designer's dreams come true

Peggy Jennings, an Indiana native whose success personifies the American dream, is to have her Signature Collection featured at a trunk showing today and tomorrow at Behrman's. Recognized as Florida's foremost couture designer, with her gowns worn by the governor's wife, Jenning's creations have also been seen by millions on Linda Evans in the more elegant scenes of "Dynasty."

Jennings, brought up on a farm in Loogootee, Ind., entered the fashion world professionally only a few short years ago. Calling upon her mother and sister for help, she first designed a line of five cotton and silk dresses in 1977, then opened a design studio with a friend. Serving as the model as well, she enjoyed some small recognition, but quickly realized that professional business experience was imperative for major success.

Herbert Kosterlitz, a veteran of the fashion business with formal training at Pennsylvania's Wharton School of Finance, prtved to be the catalyst she needed. The two have developed a formidable partnership, she spending full time creating and designing; he handling the production and merchandising ends.

The Peggy Jennings lines are produced today in St. Petersburg, Fla., in a factory that has grown in three years from three to 35 sewing machines. The staff is made up largely of European seamstresses and hand-finishers, putting on the touches they have brought with them from their native France, Poland and Hungary, where sewing is considered an art.

Peggy Jennings' designing style, with the heirloom or nostalgia look, matches her own love of the softly feminine. Antique lace is her signature, trimming the silks, satins and chiffons she buys from European fabric houses. High necks, satin bows, gentle gathers, often trimmed with beading and pearls are among Peggy Jennings features.

Her line has expanded with her success. Where she first concentrated on dresses, now she has included lingerie and many other items in the romantic genre — pillows, quilts, camisoles, tap pants, jogging sweaters, sweat shirts, teddies, slips and more.

Among the items of special interest in the Fall collection are Jennings' exclusive printed silk jacquard in fabric designs commissioned from France. Also included in the print group are floral printed silk and wool challis with coordinated petti point tapestry as well as the black and white herringbone wool challis with a splash of giant red roses.

Cashmere is another of Jenning's favorite fabrics, to be shown in sweater dressing this fall — a blouson hip-tie with six-gore trumpet skirt and high-banded collar is a particular favorite.

Also there is a long pleated skirt in cashmere chiffon with cashmere knit trim hip-band blouson in silk and wool jacquard topped by a cashmere hip-banded Cardigan sweater. And there is the silk and wool jacquard empire silhouette one-piece dress with crushed midriff cumberbunned and lean skirt in silk-lined cashmere chiffon.

PEGGY JENNINGS

The elegant group of dresses and separates for evening revolves around a heavyweight satin back French silk crepe touched with rhinestone buttons and even rhinestone hems.

One of the staples of the collection each season is a group of special occasion clothes all designed in silk georgette with either antique lace or satin trim. The dresses, either one-piece or two-piece, are suitable for weddings and other such important occasions.

Specialist tells of increasing foreclosures

COLLEGE STATION — When a home burns or is flooded, insurance provides protection for the owner, but in foreclosure, the homeowner loses all — initial investment, equity and the house itself.

That's the unfortunate situation in which an increasing number of Texans are finding themselves, says Dr. Jane Perry, a housing specialist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service.

"Appreciation in home value has been stalled by low inflation," she says, "and many homeowners who are forced to sell because they can't make payments find they have to accept much less for their home than they paid for it."

When proceeds from a sale won't cover the original mortgage debt, the owner faces a total loss, the specialist points out. Some pay cash to make up the difference between their selling price and the amount necessary to pay off the mortgage.

Other homeowners walk away from the home, rather than pumping in additional money to pay off the mortgage. In this case, the lender has no recourse but to foreclose," Berry explains.

"Many people bought houses and condominiums when interest rates were high through builder buydowns," says Berry. Builders artificially lowered interest rates for the first few years of the loan by adding the "buydown" costs into home loans, she explains.

As the interest rate and monthly payments increased, some of these homeowners found themselves with lower incomes or without a job, Berry says, resulting in high foreclosure rates in many areas.

"There is no quick-fix in sight," Berry says, "but mortgage lenders are in the process of tightening lending requirements to avoid risky mortgages."

Berry warns prospective home buyers that they will find it more difficult and more costly to secure financing, as the lending industry evaluates buydowns, negative amortization, variable rate mortgages and other "creative" financing devices which have contributed to this rush of foreclosures.

Las Pampas DAR meets

The Las Pampas chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) gathered at the Canteen at Greenbelt Lake recently for lunch and a business meeting opened by Regent Mrs. P.R. Britton.

Members sang the Star Spangled Banner followed by the Pledge of Allegiance led by Mrs. Maryl Jones and the American's Creed, led by Mrs. Jeff Anderson. Mrs. Anderson also presented the National Defense report based on "Freedom: The Most Revolutionary Idea" by Congressman Jack Kemp.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Mrs. Elizabeth Henderson was welcomed as a new member to the chapter.

A program on the constitution was given by Constitution Week chairman, Mrs. Maryl Jones. She reminded members that "we are a republic, not a democracy."

Constitution Week is to be observed Sept. 17-23. Members of the Las Pampas DAR ask all citizens to display the American Flag during that week in observance of this special period honoring the Constitution.

Beauty Briefs

Too much exercise

Exercise in a moderate, steady regime is good for toning muscles and stimulating the whole body. It conditions, but it is not a way to lose weight, as some exercise-salon advertising implies.

By following a balanced diet and overall lower calorie count, weight loss occurs with no exercise at all. The body uses a basic number of calories during ordinary activities.

Eat fewer calories than the body expends, and you lose weight.

Skin cleansing

In summer, soap and warm-water cleansing doesn't leave skin feeling dry because natural oils and moisture are quickly replaced.

In fall, when skin is slower to recover, change to a beauty bar, which is a non-soap cleanser.

Constitution Week Sept. 17-23

Constitution Week commemorates the signing of the Constitution of the United States, says the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR). It is the oldest constitution still in active use in the world today and is the basic document of the United States Government, a government which protects the individual liberties of its citizens.

Dear Abby

Parable of God's care is source of reader comfort

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago I read a lovely parable in your column that moved me so I clipped it to save. Recently I came across a poem with the identical theme. It was obviously inspired by the parable you published. I found the poem even more beautiful than the prose and hope you find it worthy of publication in your column.

GOD'S FOOTPRINTS
by Ken Brown

One night in deepest sleep, I dreamed,
Upon the beach I walked.
The Lord was by my side each step
As quietly we talked.

Then on the sky my life appeared;
Each chapter was serene.
Two sets of footprints in the sand
I saw in every scene.

And then I noticed in some parts
Of discontent and strife,
Just a single pair of footprints
In the worst times of my life.

"Lord, you said you'd walk by me
"In good times and in bad.
"Why then weren't you with me
"When you knew my life was sad?"

"My dearest child," God whispered,
"When you suffered then, I knew;
"The single pair of footprints
"Were those times I carried you."

DEAR ABBY: I am newly married to a woman I'll call Edith. It's the second time around for both of us. Now for the problem:

When we make love, Edith makes me wear an undershirt. Why? Because I have "Gretchen" tattooed on my chest above my heart. (Gretchen was my first wife.)

Edith knew I had Gretchen on my chest when she married me, but it didn't bother her. Now, it's either cover up Gretchen or no lovemaking. I am not used to wearing anything to bed, but unless I want to go right to sleep I have to wear an undershirt.

Is there some way to remove a tattoo? I've had it since I was 20, and now I'm 41.

HENRY IN ELIZABETH, N.J.

DEAR HENRY: There are several techniques available. See a board-certified dermatologist and prepare for some more needling. A bleaching solution can be injected under the skin with a needle. (It's like being tattooed in reverse.)

DEAR ABBY: I have picked up some very helpful safety tips from your column, so I'm submitting one you may want to pass along to your readers.

The subject is grandfather clocks. This type of clock is very top-heavy, so I recommend that anyone who has one or is planning to purchase one, fasten it to the wall so it won't fall over.

Our 2-year-old daughter was opening the door to our grandfather clock when it fell on her and cut her head open. We rushed her to the hospital where she had to have 12 stitches to close the wound. Fortunately, she is young and recovered quickly, but I shudder to think how much worse it could have been.

CINDY CURTIS,
HOQUIAM, WASH.

DEAR CINDY: Thanks for the tip. Parents: One expects a grandfather clock to strike 12, but to prevent it from striking one precious child, anchor it to the wall.

CITY HALL SET ON FIRE — The city hall in Aqua Prieta, Mexico, burns after being set on fire by supporters of the Partido Accion Naional, PAN, Monday afternoon. Growing empty land scam victimizes Jews and Arabs

By MASHA HAMILTON
Associated Press Writer

SAMARIAN HILLS, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Hundreds of Israelis with dreams of owning land bought plots in the Jewish settlement of Kramim. But Kramim doesn't exist.

For the moment, only Palestinians on donkeys traverse the scrub-covered hills, 25 miles northeast of Tel Aviv. There is no trace of development, and there is unlikely to be any soon.

The parcel of land called Kramim in the occupied West Bank was resold over and over by realtors who did not own it. It is one facet of a tangled, widespread scandal in which Jews and Arabs sometimes conspire to defraud, and in which Jewish land-buyers and Palestinians landowners have both been victims.

Former government officials have been implicated, but no charges have been pressed.

The scandal is making headlines in Israel because thousands of Jews were swindled. However, the allegations that Palestinians were defrauded of their land cuts to the heart of debate in Israel over the future of the West Bank.

The argument is between those who believe any means justify the end of settling the land they say God gave the Jews, and those who fear the drive to populate the occupied West Bank will isolate Israel and prevent peace.

"There is a philosophy among many Israeli leaders that fosters this fraud; it says land acquisition in the West Bank is patriotic and should be achieved at any cost," said Meron Benvenisti, a frequent critic of the Israeli government who runs a research center on West Bank development.

The West Bank land rush, supported by Menachem Begin's government, took on a new dimension in 1979 when individual Israelis were allowed to buy land. Previously only the government was authorized to acquire property in the occupied territories.

A government report completed in 1984 but only recently released reveals that the fraud involves as many as 12,500 acres, about 70 percent of all privately acquired land, according to Benvenisti.

Dozens of Jewish and Arab speculators took advantage of several factors: on the Palestinian side, poor record-keeping during Jordanian rule and absentee landowners; on the Jewish side, ideological zeal and the desire for cheap land.

Acting Attorney General Meir Gabai said Palestinians sometimes commit fraud by selling land which they don't own. Sometimes Palestinian and Jewish middlemen obtain forged deeds and sell them.

"People are very frustrated and embittered," said Eli Crystal, an Israeli who paid $5,000 for land in one non-existent settlement.

The Kramim case didn't gain public attention until nearly two years after the realtors began to sell the land, attracting buyers with half-page newspaper advertisements.

One buyer who was cheated took his case to attorney Giora Rubnenko.

City hall set afire in border city

HERMOSILLO, Sonora (AP) — Supporters of the opposition National Action Party set fire to City Hall in the border city of Agua Prieta on Monday to protest the inauguration of a ruling party member as mayor, according to reports received here.

The extent of the damage could not be learned immediately. Telephone calls to the state police, whose offices are located in the Agua Prieta City Hall, and to the local police there were unanswered over a 5-hour period Monday afternoon and evening.

Agua Prieta, located across the border from Douglas, Ariz., was the scene of scattered violence on Election Day, July 7. The National Action Party, or PAN, claimed that the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, stole the mayoralty away through election fraud.

Violence broke out late Sunday when Bernardino Meza Ortiz of the PRI arrived to assume power from outgoing PAN Mayor Leonardo Yanez Varga. The change of mayors was scheduled for 12:30 a.m. Monday.

About 2,500 people blocked the entrance of City Hall, and Meza in turn summoned local police who tried to push the protesters aside, said Quinardo Melendrez, PAN's secretary general in the border state of Sonora.

The protesters responded by burning 13 police cars and rushing into the building where they began burning paper and furniture early Monday, Melendrez said.

Riot police moved in Monday afternoon and evicted several hundred PAN supporters, according to reports received in Hermosillo by the daily newspaper El Imparcial from its correspondent in Agua Prieta.

Calm returned to the city after the riot police appeared and many residents went home, the newspaper said.

Melendrez denied that his party had planned the violence.

"This movement is not headed by the PAN. It is a spontaneous reaction of the people," he said in a telephone interview. "We are against all violence."

PAN, the ruling party's chief electoral opponent, is strongest in Mexico's northern border states.

The newspaper quoted Ernest Salazar, state police chief in Agua Prieta, as saying no arrests had been made, but that authorities were searching for those who touched off the riot.

Salazar blamed the outgoing mayor and other PAN members for having started the riot.

Mrs. Thatcher calls for better relations despite more expulsions

LONDON (AP) — The government ordered six more alleged Soviet spies out of the country, but Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said it was time for Britain and the Soviet Union to put their espionage dispute behind them and concentrate on improving relations.

The six Soviets ordered out of London on Monday join 25 others expelled last week afe4 the defet on ofnthe London chief of the KGB secret police and intelligence organization. Britain says Oleg A. Gordievski, the top KGB official in London, identified all 31 as spies.

Gordievski reportedly had been a double agent for as long as 15 years, and he is believed to have turned over to British officials a long list of Soviet spies.

On Saturday, the Soviets responded to the expulsion of the first group of 25 from London by ordering 25 Britons out of Moscow.

Mrs. Thatcher said in a statement issued in Cairo at the start of a Middle East trip Monday that Britain expelled the six additional Soviets to retaliate for the Soviets' action on Saturday.

However, she added it was time for Britain and the Soviet Union to 'Tget on with the vital task of restoring relations."

"I hope we can draw a line under this frustrating episode," Mrs. T atcher said. "We are ready to take this positive approach and hope that we shall get a constructive response from the Soviet Union."

British-Soviet gelations appeared to have slumped, but a Scottish trade delegation flew to Moscow and a leading British politician was scheduled to go there Tuesday for talks with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

The visit by Denzil Davies, defense spokesman for the socialist opposition Labor Party, was arranged in November when Labor Party leader Neil Kinnock met with Gorbachev in Moscow.

Better relations with the Soviet Union are an important plank in the Labor platform, and it was agreed that Davies should make a follow-up visit at this time for talks on nuclear disarmament.

Labor's foreign affairs spokesman, George Robertson, condemned the latest expulsion of the six Soviets as "plain overkill."

"The Soviet Union was wrong in expelling the Britons, but two wrongs don't make a diplomatic right," he said.

Derek Thomas, Foreign Office political director in charge of East-West relations, called the expulsion of the Britons from Moscow an "unwarranted victimization of innocent people, which the British government is not prepared to accept."

Car bombs deadly weapon in Lebanon's violent scene

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The car bomb has become a fearsome, deadly weapon in a country teeming with warring factions who can easily steal a Mercedes or a BMW, pack it with explosives and aim it at an enemy.

Police Capt. Yousef Bitar says rigging a car bomb in Lpert, said in a recent interview.

In the past month, car bombings have killed more than 150 people and wounded more than 450 in Beirut, the northern port of Tripoli and other cities. Several suicide car bombers, most of them young men and women, have attacked targets in Israel's security zone in southern Lebanon along the Israeli border.

Just as the car bomb symbolized sectarian bloodshed in Northern Ireland in the early 1970s, so autos packed with hundreds of pounds of high explosives, nails, fragmentation shells and other lethal refinements have become the ultimate terror weapon in Lebanon.

For Beirut residents, who have borne the brunt of 10 years of civil war between Christians and Moslems, a Mercedes or a Peugeot parked in the street is a frightening reminder of what the newspapers have called "the war of the car bombs."

Foreigners also fear car bombs, which have been among the most effective weapons against them. Car and truck bombers have hit foreign embassies. On Oct. 23, 1983, trucks loaded with explosivies killed 241 American servicemen and 58 French peacekeepers in two separate attacks.

"Car bombs make this place much worse than the nastiest jungle," said Mohammad Ali Khaidar, 35, manager of a men's clothing store in Moslem west Beirut.

CHALLENGE OF OTHE AIR — Luis Dellinger sits in a single engine training aircraft in Corpus Christi recently. Deaf since birth, Dellinger, now 20, already has mastered several activities and now he is pursuing a private pilot's license. (AP Laserphoto)

Deaf man seeks new challenge in the skies

By SUE FAHLGREN
Corpus Christi Caller-Times

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — To Harriet Dellinger, the sky is the limit when it comes to her son, Lewis. Deaf since birth, Lewis, now 20, already has mastered lip-reading, speech, calf-roping, football, basketball and even snow skiing in the mountains of Utah.

"Lewis can do anything he makes up his mind to do," Mrs. Dellinger said. "Literally, the sky's the limit."

It won't be for long. Lewis is learning to pilot an airplane.

"I feel happy, excited and normal when I'm flying," said Lewis, who has been taking or even the sounds of the plane's engine, Lewis uses paper notes and lip-reading to communicate with his instructor and signal lights to communicate with the control tower.

"It's not really a problem," Lewis said recently as he waited for a lesson at the Nueces County Airport in Robstown. "At first it was very confusing, but now I understand more than I did at first."

His instructor, Mike Bergeron, also was hesitant when he was first approached with the idea. "At first I really wondered if I could do it or not," said Bergeron, 31, a private pilot for a local law firm and part-time instructor. "But I found that Lewis really helped me out a lot in making me understand that he was understanding what I said. A lot of things, I either had to write over and over again or show him what would happen to the plane if he wasn't grasping it," Bergeron said. "But once I figured out how I could teach him, we didn't have any problem."

Lewis became interested in flying as a young child when he would travel back and forth to a special school for the deaf in St. Joseph, Mo.

"I flew in airplanes for a long time," Lewis said. "I used to fly to St. Louis a lot."

Mrs. Dellinger recalled placing her blond-haired, blue-eyed 5-year-old in the arms of stewardesses, who later placed him in the arms of nuns waiting at the opposite terminal. And a month or so later, he would make the journey again.

"We didn't want to send him out of state to school," Mrs. Dellinger said. "It almost broke our hearts. But we felt all along that it would be better for him to be oral. So we would bring him home one month and go to see him another. At that time, there was no public school for the deaf in the area," Mrs. Dellinger said.

A school was started in the early 1960s, but Lewis continued to go to St. Joseph, where he met deaf children from across the country and became an experienced air traveler by the time he graduated from the eighth grade.

Later he transferred to Incarnate Word Academy here and still later to Agua Dulce High School, where he was all-district as a center in football.

Lewis roped calves in junior rodeos with hntering his third year of college.

Lewis has flown with Bergeron for some weeks while studying written material at home. He learned how to make pre-flight checks of the aircraft and navigational assessments from the air. He learned about take-off speeds and wind directions. And he learned about licensing requirements.

"Because of his hearing loss, he's going to have to take two flight tests where a normal student would have to take one," Bergeron said. "He needs to take one with me, as the instructor, and one from a medical flight examiner."

After about a month at both Corpus Christi International Airport and the Nueces County Airport, Lewis soloed in a single-engine, Cessna 150, last July. It is traditional for instructors to cut the back out of a trainee's shirt when he completes his first solo flight. For Lewis, the experience was almost shocking at first. But later, Mrs. Dellinger said he proudly displayed the shirt-turned-banner.

By the end of the week, he was taking the plane on short jaunts to the family ranch in Agua Dulce.

"My brother and his wife were surprised to see me," Lewis said. "I flew around and around."

"We're just so proud of him," Mrs. Dellinger said.

"I think it will be interesting," Lewis said of his flight training. "I'd like to fly from here to anywhere by myself."

Austin writer publishes a girl's guide to sorority rush

By GRACE LIM
Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN (AP) — Playing the game. That is what "Rush: A Girl's Guide to Sorority Success," the book by Austin-born Margaret Ann Rose, is about. Playing the sorority rushing game and winning it.

Rush is a process students go through when they apply for a sorority. Ms. Rose, a third-generation Zeta Tau Alpha at the University of Texas, said she wrote the book after watching many young women not get accepted into a sorority because they did not know how to play the game.

"Too many girls do not know what to expect during rush," said Ms. Rose, 24. "They don't know how important it is to look good."

When Ms. Rose was growing up, her mother was the adviser of the Zeta Tau Alpha chapter at UT. But that didn't give her a big edge over other students when she rushed for a sorority.

"I wouldn't say it was easy for me. I was cut from a sorority. That was disappointing," she said. "But I knew not to pref (express preference) just one sorority. I knew it was important to try to look nice."

In the summer of Ms. Rose's last year at UT, she was rush captain for her sorority. She spent the summer meeting sutdents who were coming to UT and trying to interest them in joining the sorority. "I got to know them and see whether if they were the kind of person we would want to join our sorority.

"Rush was really tough for me being the rush captain. I'm sort of against that whole system of judging other people, but it happens in everyday life," she said. "It happens when you interview. It happens when you have a job and people are deciding whether you get a promotion or not. You are being judged."

Ms. Rose said it was as hard for a freshman to deal with the judging process as it was for her to tell some students that they didn't make the sorority cut.

"I remember some girls I met during the summer who I thought were darling girls," she said. But they didn't receive a bid to join her sorority.

They were cut because they couldn't talk or wore "inappropirate" clothes, or talked about "inappropriate" things, and made bad impressions, Ms. Rose said.

Inappropriate clothes may be defined as "tight and revealing" and inappropriate topics of conversation may be "sex — especially if you've done it or politics — it's boring," according to Ms. Rose's book.

"It's just like interviewing for a job. Not everyone is going to get a job offer," she said. "You have to wear the right interview suit, have the right credentials."

Ms. Rose said many people have a negative picture about sororities, especially at UT where a majority of women students are not in sororities.

"People a lot of times judge organizations and say, 'Well I'm not a member so I have a bad idea about them, and I don't think they are any good.'

"Even though I sound like I'm pushing sororities, I'm really not," she said. "I don't like the judging process."

The good part about sororities are the friends that come with being a sorority sister, Ms. Rose said.

"People want to join a sorority to get a set of friends away from home."

Ms. Rose is third-year law student in Washingon and Lee University in Lexington, Va. She had a summer clerkship in a Houston law firm and has been working on a second book, which will be a novel about campus life and relationships.

Ms. Rose wrote her rush book after she was approached by a New York publishing firm. An editor there had seen a "People" magazine article on rush seminars Ms. Rose was teaching throughout Texas.

Gay community mobilizes to battle AIDS

By LISA LEVITT RYCKMAN
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — In gay communities across the country, everyone knows someone who has died of AIDS, someone who is dying of AIDS or someone who is simply scared to death.

"Some of us have lost more friends than our parents have," said Richard Dunne, executive director of the Gay Men's Health Crisis, the main AIDS agency in New York City. "Nothing in 20th century history has prepared us for this."

Like a nation under siege, the gay community has mobilized, setting up agencies to deal with victims, lobbying officials for money, trying to quiet public fear through education.

Gay men and women have steeled themselves for a backlash of bigotry fueled by the perception of AIDS as a predominantly "gay" disease, although lesbians are not a special risk group.

And as more friends and lovers are diagnosed and die every day, many gay men have changed the way they live, leaving the fast track for a middle ground with less chance of infection. They have taken on the monumental job of caring for the living dead and the worried well, and they have come out of it sadder and stronger.

"Most of us in our 30s have not dealt with death at all, and we're being forced to deal with it very suddenly and very traumatically in a very short time," Dunne said. "There's no overlooking the profound sadness. It's there, there all the time. We worry about our friends, we worry about ourselves."

The figures justify the fear. In San Francisco, cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome are being reported at a rate of two a day, deaths at more than one a day. Since the count began in July 1981, 1,377 cases have been reported in the city, 98 percent of those among gay or bisexual men. More than half of those people have died.

In New York, AIDS is the leading cause of death among men aged 30 to 39. Nationwide, 73 percent of the 12,932 cases reported as of Sept. 2 were in gay men. There have been 6,481 deaths.

In the gay community, they're calling it a war. People who are watching their friends die say they have begun to adopt a combat mentality.

"(Soldiers) are in a war where they're seeing their comrades, their friends, being killed," said Dennis Bursch, a San Francisco realtor who has lost at least a dozen friends to AIDS. "But still they have to go on with what they're doing. So somehow, they build a defense system to insulate themselves from the reality of the deaths. That's what I've had to do."

Others have found it therapeutic to be in the trenches themselves. The GMHC has more volunteers than it can effectively use, Dunne said. Volunteers are the lifeblood of AIDS Project Los Angeles and the backbone of the San Francisco AIDS Foundation.

"I find friends of mine who are not involved, they frequently ask me, 'How do you stand being around this all day?' My response to that is, I don't know how they stand not doing anything about it," Dunne said. "I think when you get involved, it gives you a feeling of control over it to a certain extent."

After Dean Sandmire was diagnosed a year ago, he decided to do what he could for as long as he could. He became an activist in the San Francisco-based Mobilization Against AIDS and helped organize a Memorial Day candlelight vigil in more than 40 countries.

While Sandmire and others seek public attention, some men are just now summoning the courage to seek support and information. Every night somewhere in San Francisco, potential victims gather to discuss their best defense against the killer disease. The program is called STOP AIDS; it is a way for gay men to learn to reduce the risk of exposure and a place for them to vent fears.

Therapists say stress is highest among those who have not been diagnosed, particularly those men who have watched the painful, debilitating death of an AIDS victim.

"All the contagion fear which he suspended to be close to his dying friend comes back," therapist Leon McKusick told a meeting of the American Psychological Association in Los Angeles. "Moreover, he is acutely aware of what AIDS looks like and is petrified of getting it from or giving it to anyone else."

Some men continue to behave as if they are out of the disease's reach.

"We've seen people so freaked out they deny and withdraw, they play harder and they stay away from the agencies dealing with AIDS and their friends who are ill with AIDS," said Tim Wolfred, executive director of the San Francisco AIDS Foundation.

But the vast majority have changed their lives to make survival more likely, Wolfred said. There's more of an emphasis on getting enough sleep, food and exercise and less on promiscuity. Two San Francisco studies show that 75 percent to 80 percent of gay men have opted for a safer sex life, McKusick said.

"The level of monogamy in existing gay relationships has increased. The number of sexual partners has decreased. And the frequency of high-risk sexual activity has decreased," he said.

San Francisco and New York officials point to startling decreases in the rectal gonorrhea rate as evidence that education about safe sex practices is working. Many big-city gay bars and bathhouses have "safe sex" guidelines tacked on the wall. San Francisco closed its bathhouses a year ago.

"That was really the slap across the face that woke people up to the need to change," Wolfred said.

Other homosexuals have been roused by the use of AIDS as a tool for discrimination, particularly by the religious right.

"Many people are becoming galvanized by the crisis and come out to fight the disease and the falsehoods being spread about the disease. Every time the Rev. Jerry Falwell opens his mouth, more people come out of the closet," said Ron Najman, spokesman for the National Gay Task Force, a civil rights group with 10,000 members.

Falwell, the leader of Moral Majority, said at a rally in Ohio in 1983, "Herpes, AIDS, venereal diseases ... are a definite form of the judgment of God upon a society." More recently, he said, "Homosexuals are violating the laws of nature."

AIDS is being used to rekindle a violent anti-gay bigotry that is gaining ever-widening acceptance, said Katy Taylor, a human rights specialist with the New York City Commission on Human Rights.

She recalled an AIDS victim hospitalized after being beaten with a chair leg by a group of men hired by a landlord who wanted him out of the building.

"But instead of just beating someone up, they're now beating someone up and saying, 'You're sick, I think you all should die, you deserve what you got,'" she said. "AIDS has really highlighted the tragedy that the lack of civil rights for gays and lesbians wreaks on a whole community, not to mention the whole city."

In smaller cities, the situation is exacerbated by the lack of support networks. In Fayetteville, Ark., last spring, Paul Cameron, an aide to U.S. Rep. William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., stirred feelings with a speech about AIDS and homosexuality at the University of Arkansas.

"He scared a lot of straight people," said Linda Lovell, a member of the 50-member Gay and Lesbian Action Delegation in the city of 30,000. "He gave out a lot of pamphlets on AIDS that implied that all homosexuals are diseased in some way, that any kind of casual contact could be fatal. He called for a total quarantine for all gay males and talked about regional detention centers."

Subsequent letters to the editor and newspaper ads demanded that gay people be denied access to public facilities, including the swimming pool and library, and suggested they not be hired for restaurant, hospital or child-care work.

"We have tried to hold together under all these attacks," she said. "A lot of people may be concerned about AIDS, but they act as though they're more concerned about homosexuality."

Confidentiality is also a critical issue for the gay community, particularly when it comes to results of the HTLV-III test, which is used to determine who has been exposed to the suspected AIDS virus. Although preliminary estimates indicate that only 5 percent to 20 percent of gay men with the antibodies will develop the disease, homosexuals worry the information could be used against them.

"People cannot afford to lose their health insurance benefits. People will simply disappear, and you will not be able to treat the problem," Najman said.

In California, the Legislature passed laws last year making the test results confidential. But insurance companies, concerned about the staggering costs of treating AIDS patients, are lobbying for access to the information.

With AIDS-related discrimination already a reality for healthy gay men and lesbians, the stigma of a diagnosis can destroy what's left of the victim's life.

"One man went home to visit his family, to let them know, and his brother would not let him be around his nieces and nephews, but made him look through a window into their home to see them at Christmas," said Robert McLane, a counselor at AIDS Project Los Angeles.

But for every story of abandonment, there are those of loving support. Laurie McBride, who heads the Golden Gate Business Association, a group of more than 700 gay businessmen and women in San Francisco, talks about the networks of people who share the 24-hour job of caring for friends with AIDS.

"We recognize that we are responsible for ourselves and are taking it a step further and being responsible for each other. There's tremendous love in our community at this point," she said.

Ex mayor to join race

HOUSTON (AP) — A January gay rights referendum and Mayor Kathy Whitmire's "arrogance of power" is what former Houston Mayor Louie Welch says prompted him to run to the position he held for 10 years.

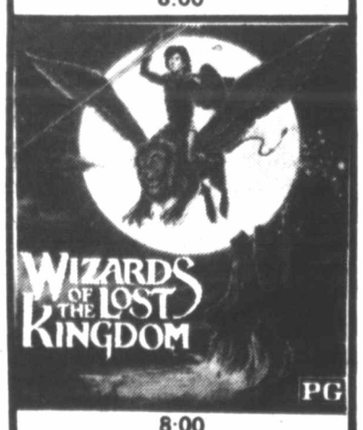

Welch, also former president of the Houston Chamber of Commerce, spearheaded the chamber's controversial oppostion to the job discrimination referendum. Voters rejected the measure by an overwhelming margin.

But the former mayor denies that he is anti-gay. He said if one of his 14 grandchildren were homosexual, "I would still love him. I can't live another person's life, and I wouldn't try to."

"I think that people who parade their sexuality no matter what it is are invading my privacy, and I think it's wrong," Welch said. "But at the chamber we had a number of people who are homosexuals and there was never a question of their talent or their salaries or any discrimination of any kind."

He said Mrs. Whitmire's reaction to the referendum "showed a side that we didn't think was good for Houston — that arrogance of power that said it doesn't matter what 82 percent of the people say because they don't understand.

"And I don't think she understood then, or now, that the issue was not bigotry or hatred or fear. All it was was precisely what the chamber said: We did not by law need to create any new minorities for a political coalition," Welch said.

BRIEF EXPLANATORY STATEMENTS OF PROPOSED

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

GENERAL ELECTION

NOVEMBER 5, 1985

PROPOSITION NO. 1 ON THE BALLOT

Sections 1 and 2 of House Joint Resolution 6 propose a constitutional amendment that would authorize the Texas Water Development Board to issue an additional $980 million of Texas Water Development bonds.

The additional bonds to be issued will be dedicated for deposit in the Texas Water Development Fund, with $190 million of those bond proceeds to be used for water supply loans and facilities acquisition and with $400 million of those bond proceeds to be used for state participation in the acquisition and development of facilities for storage, transmission, transportation, and treatment of water and wastewater. Of the remaining bonds authorized, $190 million will be dedicated for use in water quality enhancement projects, and $200 million will be dedicated exclusively for flood control projects.

The amendment would also allow the legislature to provide for the creation, administration, and implementation of a bond insurance program to which the state pledges up to $250 million of its general credit to insure payment of the principal of and interest on bonds or other obligations issued by political subdivisions of the state for water conservation, water development, water quality enhancement, flood control, drainage, recharge, chloride control or desalinization. Unless authorized to continue by a two-thirds vote of the members of each house of the Legislature, the bond insurance program will expire on the sixth anniversary of the date on which this section becomes a part of the constitution. Bond insurance issued before expiration of the program will not be affected by such expiration.

The amendment would authorize the legislature to create and appropriate money to special funds in the state treasury to make grants, loans, and other financial assistance available to governmental entities for certain enumerated water planning purposes. Also, the legislature would be permitted to extend the benefits of constitutionally approved water projects to nonprofit water supply corporations.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to authorize the issuance of an additional $980 million of Texas Water Development Bonds, to create special water funds for water conservation, water development, water quality enhancement, flood control, drainage, subsidence control, recharge, chloride control, agricultural soil and water conservation, and desalinization, to authorize a bond insurance program, and to clarify the purposes for which Texas Water Development Bonds may be issued."

PROPOSITION NO. 2 ON THE BALLOT

Section 3 of House Joint Resolution 6 proposes a constitutional amendment that would allow the Texas Water Development Board to issue and sell Texas agricultural water conservation bonds in an amount not to exceed $200 million, if authorized to do so by a two-thirds vote of the members of each house of the legislature. The Texas agricultural water conservation bonds would be general obligations of the State of Texas, and would be paid from the first money coming into the state treasury in each fiscal year. The amendment would allow Texas agricultural water conservation bonds to be issued and sold only for four years after the date on which this Act becomes a part of the constitution.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment authorizing the issuance and sale of $200 million of Texas agricultural water conservation bonds."

PROPOSITION NO. 3 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 54 proposes a constitutional amendment that would permit the legislature to authorize a city or town to spend public funds and levy assessments for the relocation or replacement of water laterals on private property if such relocation or replacement is done in conjunction with or immediately following the relocation or replacement of water mains serving the property. Any legislative enactment permitting the expenditure of funds for such purposes would authorize the city or town to fix a lien on the property, with the owners' consent, for the cost of relocating or replacing the water laterals, and would provide that such cost shall be assessed against the property, with repayment by the property owner to be amortized over a period not to exceed five years at the rate of interest set by law. Such liens could not be enforced until after five years from the date the liens were affixed.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to authorize the legislature to enact laws permitting a city or town to spend public funds and levy assessments for the relocation or replacement of water laterals on private property."

PROPOSITION NO. 4 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 21 proposes a constitutional amendment that would authorize the use of the proceeds from the sale of permanent school fund land to acquire other land for the permanent school fund. Currently, the constitution requires that proceeds from the sale of such land be invested in certain bonds and other securities.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment authorizing proceeds from the sale of land dedicated to the permanent school fund to be used to acquire other land for that fund."

PROPOSITION NO. 5 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 89 proposes a constitutional amendment that would enable the legislature to regulate the provision of health care by hospital districts by determining the services the district must provide, by setting requirements a resident must meet in order to qualify for services, and by determining any other relevant provisions necessary for providing health care to residents.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to authorize the legislature to regulate the provision of health care by hospital districts."

PROPOSITION NO. 6 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 6 proposes a constitutional amendment that would enable the State of Texas to enter into an agreement with another state to confine inmates from the state of Texas in penal or correctional facilities of the other state.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to permit state prisoners to be placed in penal facilities of another state pursuant to an interstate agreement."

PROPOSITION NO. 7 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 27 proposes a constitutional amendment that would authorize the commissioners court of Chambers County to divide Chambers County into not less than two and not more than six justice precincts. Under current constitutional law, Chambers County may be divided into not less than two and not more than five justice precincts.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment authorizing Chambers County to be divided into two to six precincts."

PROPOSITION NO. 8 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 9 proposes a constitutional amendment that would grant an additional $500 million in bonding authority to the Veterans' Land Board for the veterans' housing assistance program. Under the current constitution, the Veterans' Land Board is authorized by Article III, Section 49-b-1 to issue and sell not more than $800 million in bonds, $500 million of which may be used for the Veterans' Housing Assistance Fund. This amendment would increase that authorization to permit the issuance and sale of up to $1.3 billion in bonds, $1 billion of which would be used for the Veterans' Housing Assistance Fund. In addition, the amendment would remove the current definition of "veteran" from the constitution and permit the legislature to redefine "veteran" as the changing times and circumstances require.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment providing $500 million in additional bonding authority for the veterans' housing assistance program and changing the definition of those veterans eligible to participate in the veterans' land program and the veterans' housing program by authorizing the legislature by law to define an eligible veteran for the purposes of those programs."

PROPOSITION NO. 9 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 72 proposes a constitutional amendment that would permit the legislature either to enact a statute or to attach a rider to the General Appropriations Act to require prior approval of the expenditure or emergency transfer of any funds appropriated by the legislature to state governmental agencies.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to protect public funds by authorizing prior approval of expenditure or emergency transfer of state appropriations."

PROPOSITION NO. 10 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 19 proposes a constitutional amendment that would authorize the legislature to provide for the issuance of general obligation bonds, the proceeds of which would be deposited in a fund to be known as the farm and ranch finance program fund. The fund would be administered by the Veterans' Land Board and would be used to make loans and provide other financial assistance for the purchase of farm and ranch land. The amount of bonds outstanding at any one time would be limited to $500 million. The principal and interest that becomes due on such bonds in each fiscal year would be paid from amounts remaining in the interest and sinking fund at the close of the prior fiscal year, with the balance due to be appropriated from treasury revenues in the fiscal year when such amounts become due.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment authorizing the issuance of general obligation bonds to provide financing assistance for the purchase of farm and ranch land."

PROPOSITION NO. 11 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 16 proposes a constitutional amendment that would define indictments and informations as instruments charging a person with the commission of an offense, and would delete certain technical requirements as to the form of writs and processes.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment relating to the manner in which a person is charged with a criminal offense and to certain requirements applicable to state writs and processes."

PROPOSITION NO. 12 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 10 proposes a constitutional amendment that would grant the Texas Supreme Court and the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals jurisdiction to answer questions of state law certified from federal appellate courts. In addition, the two courts would promulgate rules of procedure relating to the review of those questions.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment granting the Supreme Court of Texas and the Court of Criminal Appeals of Texas jurisdiction to answer questions of state law certified from a federal appellate court."

PROPOSITION NO. 13 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 14 proposes a constitutional amendment that would create a board with responsibility for the reapportionment of judicial districts, subject to legislative approval. The amendment would provide for the continued power of the legislature to provide for judicial reapportionment, and would provide that reapportionment will be the responsibility of the Legislative Redistricting Board if the Judicial Districts Board fails to make a timely reapportionment. The amendment would provide for the creation of judicial districts smaller than a county in counties where the creation of such districts has been approved by the voters at a general election. The amendment would provide for more than one judge for a judicial district. The amendment would rename supreme judicial districts as courts of appeals districts. The amendment would provide that the jurisdiction and terms of court of district and county courts may be as provided by law. The amendment would provide for the jurisdiction of justice courts, which may have additional jurisdiction as provided by law. The amendment would provide for rules of judicial administration and civil procedure to be promulgated by the Supreme Court, and would provide that the legislature may delegate additional rule making power to the Supreme Court or to the Court of Criminal Appeals. The amendment would provide that courts and judges in existence at the time of its adoption remain in existence until otherwise provided by law.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment providing for the reapportionment of the judicial districts of the state by the Judicial Districts Board or by the Legislative Redistricting Board, and providing for the administration and jurisdiction of constitutional courts."

PROPOSTION NO. 14 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 27 proposes a constitutional amendment that would abolish the office of County Treasurer in Andrews County and transfer the powers and duties of that office to the County Auditor. The amendment would also abolish the office of County Treasurer in El Paso County if, at the statewide election at which this amendment is submitted to the voters, a majority of the voters who vote in El Paso County favor the amendment. The functions of the office of El Paso County Treasurer will be performed by a person employed or designated by the El Paso County Commissioners Court. The amendment also provides for the abolition of the office of County Surveyor in Denton, Randall, Collin, Dallas, El Paso, and Henderson Counties upon approval of such abolition by a majority of the voters who vote on the question at an election called by the commissioners court of the county. If the office of County Surveyor is abolished in any county, the commissioners court may employ or contract with any qualified person to perform the duties of the office.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to provide for:

(1) the abolition of the office of county treasurer in Andrews County and El Paso County;

(2) the abolition of the office of county surveyor in Collin, Dallas, Denton, El Paso, Henderson, and Randall Counties."

U.S. has strategic interest in South Africa

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — South Africa supplies the lion's share of several "strategic" minerals to the United States, but the embattled white minority government has been unable to make that a significant political advantage.

The prevailing view, as expressed in official studies, is that the United States could do without the metals far more easily than any South African government could do without the revenue.

A study by the congressional Office of Technology Assessment last spring urged American businesses to lessen their dependence on South African materials, and some companies have begun looking for alternatives.

South Africans and some U.S. conservatives argue that the racially torn country's resources are too vital for U.S. strategic interests to risk losing, but few predict South Africa would cut shipments to the West.

"Mainly it's an argument they use to scare the Americans," said John Matisonn, editor of the Washington Report on South Africa and observer of that country. "The cost to them would be extraordinary."

South Africa is a principal source for several minerals that are considered vital to the United States, particularly chromium, manganese, vanadium and platinum.

They are used in making steel and super-strong alloys and find their way into products from jet engines and rocketry to heavy machinery, chemicals and automobile emission controls.

TRW Inc., the defense and technology company, has begun working on measures to reduce its use of those metals or locate sources in other countries, an executive said.

"It does buy us some time," if something should disrupt South Africa, said Arden Bement, vice president for technical resources of TRW in Cleveland.

The Heritage Foundation, a conservative research organization with ties to the Reagan administration, concluded in 1981 that a loss of South African supplies would be "catastrophic."

That's not a unanimous judgment.

"It is nothing in the realm of a cataclysmic consequence," said Hans Landsberg, senior fellow emeritus at Resources for the Future, a Washington think-tank, and who served on the OTA study panel.

"There would be inconvenience and cost, but the world is not going to come to an end for us or anyone else because we can't get enough chromium. It's not that important."

In 1984, South African exports to the United States totaled $2.5 billion while U.S. sales there were $2.3 billion. For the first six months of 1985, U.S. imports from South Africa were $1.2 billion, a nearly half-billion dollar decline from the year earlier, largely because of falling sales of Kruggerrand gold coins.

The United States was South Africa's most important trading partner last year. Kruggerrands, which might eventually be banned under President Reagan's newly announced sanctions, and other forms of gold made up over half South Africa's export revenues. U.S. purchases of chromium, manganese and platinum amounted to some $475 million in 1982.

From 1980 to 1983, the United States obtained 55 percent of its chromium, 49 percent of its platinum, 44 percent of its vanadium and 39 percent of its manganese from South Africa. The Commerce Department said South Africa has more than 80 percent of the world's chromium and platinum reserves, 70.8 percent of the manganese and 47.1 percent of the vanadium. It also processes and ships cobalt mined in Zaire and Zambia, supplying 61 percent of U.S. needs.

Cobalt, a highly heat resistant element, is used in jet engines. Vanadium is used in steel alloys which are important for aircraft.

Lance N. Antrim, project director for the OTA study, said South Africa and the Soviet Union account for 94 percent of the world supply of platinum. Together those two countries produced two-thirds of the world's chromium and half its manganese.

If South Africa and neighboring southern African states were to shut off supplies to the United States, Antrim said U.S. defense needs could be provided. The government maintains stockpiles and by law has first right to other sources in a shortage.

Prices would go up if there was a cutoff.

German military hero's statue draws visitors

DETMOLD, West Germany (AP) — More than a million people, most of them West Germans, drive to the central Teutoburg Forest every year to honor the military leader who drove back the Romans nearly two thousand years ago.

The statue of the hero Hermann, located near Detmold 47 miles southwest of Hanover, is one of the country's most popular memorials, says the Bonn Interior Ministry.

With the Nazi past only 40 years old, the notion of honoring military heroes remains a sensitive issue — particularly since neo-Nazis occasionally try to use Hermann as a symbol for their own political goals.

Yet, the man honored here with a copper statue on a stone base (total height: 176 feet) is much more a symbol of German patriotism and national pride.

"Had Hermann not won the battle with his blond hordes ... we would have become Romans," the German poet and patriot Heinrich Heine wrote in 1844.

Hermann, or Arminius as he was called in Latin, liberated most of Germany from the Roman yoke in long-ago 9 A.D. by defeating three legions — 30,000 men — led by Quintilius Varus in battles believed to have taken place in or near the Teutoburg Forest.

Germans generally credit Hermann with preserving their language and culture by limiting Roman expansion to the northeast in what was one of history's great turning points.

The Romans were forced to halt at the Rhine River after losing to Hermann's united German front. The Romans had hoped to conquer Germany as far as the Elbe River, 118 miles east of Detmold.

Following their trouncing by Hermann, the Romans pushed in other directions and in 43 A.D. began the conquest of Britain.

The empire had been shocked by the Germans' strength, and the Roman historian Tacitus respectfully labeled Hermann the "liberator of Germania."

"He attacked the Roman Empire not in its beginnings as other leaders and peoples did, but at the peak of its power, in battles with alternating success, but in total unconquered," Tacitus wrote. This tribute to Hermann is inscribed on the side of the monument at Detmold.

Historians say Hermann was more or less forgotten during the Middle Ages. But he became a major national hero in Germany during the romantic period, and his popularity increased as the idea of German unity developed in the 19th century.

German emigrants to the United States in the last century founded lodges of the Sons of Hermann. In his own country, Hermann had become a favorite subject for poets and writers.

Sculptor Ernst von Bandel said it was hearing one of these stories as a child that inspired him to build a monument to Hermann.

It took him 37 years to finish the 80-ton copper statue of the Teutonic warrior in a winged helmet, raising his sword to the heavens. Kaiser Wilhelm I attended the unveiling ceremonies in 1875, and a plaque marks where he stood.

Literature available at the monument says it was erected as a tribute to German unity — not the aggressive nationalism that Nazi dictator Adolf Hitler championed.

Hitler stood before the monument one day in the 1930s and praised Hermann as a symbol of Aryan superiority.

Youthful neo-Nazis who apparently haven't forgotten the words of the Fuehrer still pay the occasional visit, sometimes smearing nationalistic slogans on the base.

"They come up here on these motorbikes ... They are a shame to their own people," the keeper of the small Ernst von Bandel museum at the site told The Associated Press. He did not want his name used.

Organized gatherings by the neo-Nazis at the monument have been forbidden by local authorities, Siegrun Dobberthien, an employee at the Hermann Memorial Foundation, said.

One of your old hopes will be realized in the year ahead. It's something you have spent a lot of time developing. Your past efforts were not in vain.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Bonds will be strenghtened today with one you've had trouble getting through to previously. Understanding will replace animosity. Major changes are ahead for Virgos in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Conditions will start brightening today and a responsibility that has concerned you will be alleviated. This will be brought about through unusual circumstances.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov.22) Dealing today with people whose track records are familiar to you will work out well. Conversely, you might not be lucky with those about whom you know little.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today you possess qualities associates may lack. This could mean that you can achieve objectives and goals they can't.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your words have great impact on others today. Listeners may not be in agreement with everything you say, but they'll be in accord with your most important points.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Conditions in general look rather promising for you today. Through the benevolence of another, you might share in something you didn't earn.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you're negotiating today, let the other party establish the terms. This person may offer you a better deal than the one you would propose.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Something in which you're presently involved has hidden benefits. As these are revealed today, you will be motivated to work harder.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Social contacts you make today could play significant roles in your future affairs. It's important to make a good impression.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're apt to be in a bit of a serious mood today and this can be to your advantage. Dedicate your efforts to accomplishing something meaningful.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're good today at managing difficult situations for others. However, you might not use these same abilities in handling personal affairs.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Go slowly today in your financial dealings or commercial ventures. All will work to your satisfaction, provided you are patient.

Yankees lose fourth in a row, Jays number now 5

By The Associated Press

Even if it turns out to be a long winter for Brian Fisher, it can't be any longer than that ninth inning.

Fisher, left out to dry with a two-run lead and without a fastball, was shelled for six runs in the ninth as the Cleveland Indians batted around and handed the New York Yankees their fourth straight setback, 9-5, Monday.

The Yankees cut the idle Toronto Blue Jays' magic number to 15 with the loss. New York is now five full games behind. Both teams have 19 to play, three with each other the last weekend of the regular season.

Fisher got the last out in the eighh, then opened the ninth by giving up three straight singles. Out of the dugout came Billy Martin, but he offered no escape for Fisher — just some advice.

"Billy came out yelling," said Fisher. "He wanted me to throw fastballs. But I didn't have my good fastball today."

Fisher, 4-4, faced 10 batters in the inning and had his ERA soar from 2.00 to 2.56.

In other American League games, Baltimore overpowered Detroit 14-7, Seattle dumped Kansas City 5-1, Milwaukee rallied past Boston 5-3, and Texas beat Milwaukee 7-6 in the 11th inning.

Mariners 5, Royals 1

The Royals have lost two of their last three games and their lead in the AL West has shrunk to two games over the California Angels, who were idle Monday.

Mike Moore's five-hitter and a two-run homer by Danny Tartabull carried Seattle. Moore, 15-8, pitched out of a bases-loaded, none-out jam in the ninth.

After Lonnie Smith singled to lead off the ninth, Moore walked George Brett and Hal McRae to load the bases. But he got Frank White on a pop foul to third and Darryl Motley on a pop-up to second. Then he worked a full count on Steve Balboni before gettino0runs, second in the majors. And their total of 194 homers is tops in baseball.

The Orioles' wrecking crew had 19 hits and racked up 41 total bases to break the team record by two as 15 of the first 16 batters eached base off Detroit starter Walt Terrell, who lasted just 2 2-3 innings.

And the Orioles, who had six homers in the game, hit three in a row in the eighth inning, only the fifth time in club history that's happened and the first time since May 8, 1979.

"The fences are reachable in all fields here," said shortstop Cal Ripken, who had four hits, including his 23rd and 24th homers, and drove in three runs to raise his RBI total for the season to 101. "Most of tonight's home runs would have been home runs anywhere, though."

Twins 7, Rangers 6

Gary Gaetti lined a home run over the left-field fence with one out in the 11th inning. After striking out Mark Salas, Greg Harris, 4-4, yielded Gaetti's 18th homer of the year. Frank Eufemia, 4-2, pitched a scoreless 11th inning for the victory.

Slugger Pete O'Brien clouted his 17th home run of the year for Texas, a two-run shot in the first.

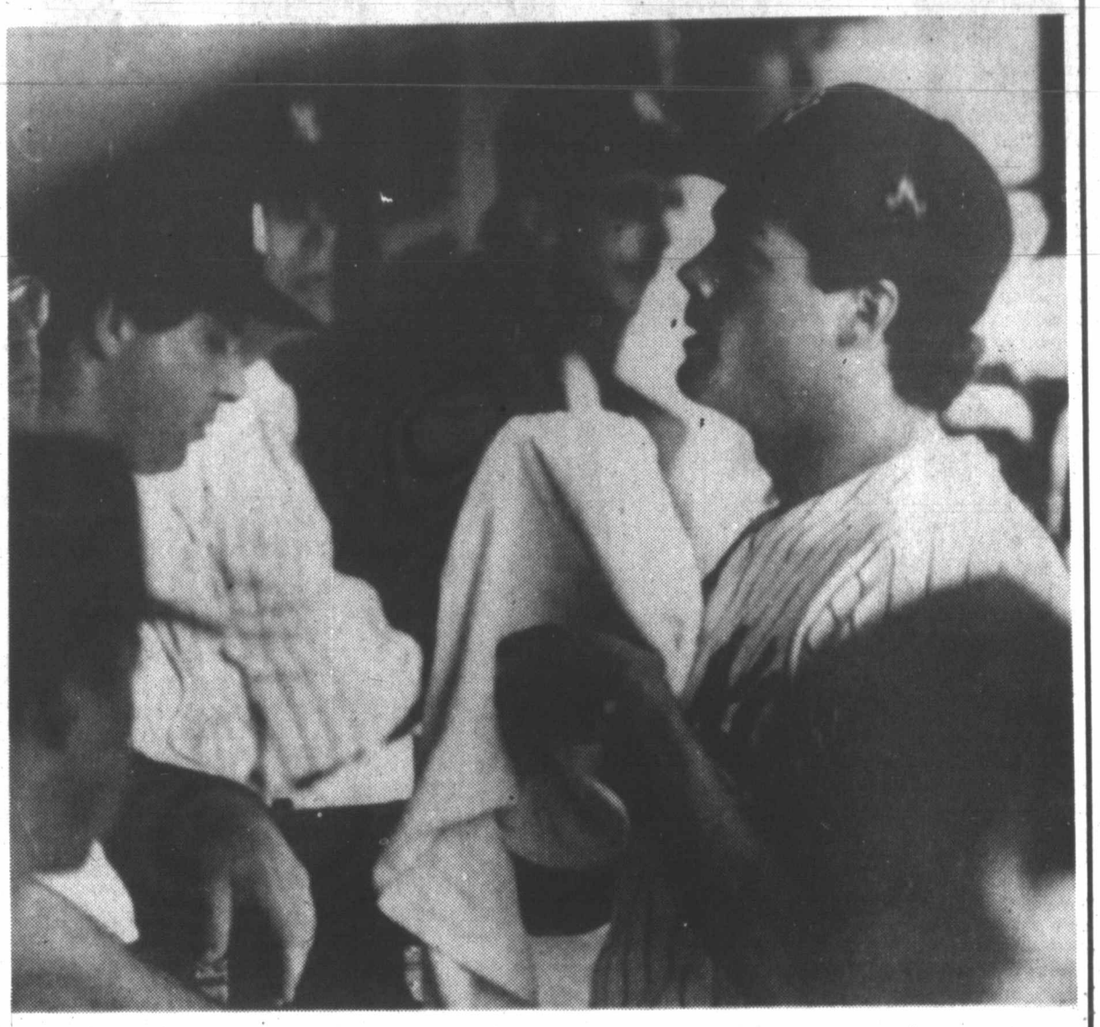

Brewers 5, Red Sox 3

Bob Ojeda balked Ted Simmons home with the winning run in the seventh inning, helping a two-out, three-run rally by Milwaukee. Bob McClure, 4-1, pitched 4 2-3 scoreless innings in relief and gained the victory.

Umpire Steve Palermo "said I started my motion, and I don't think I did," Ojeda said. "I haven't balked a run in in I don't know how many years. ... But that's baseball."

Ojeda later walked Riles and Paul Householder singled Randy Ready home from third. The Brewers, down 3-2, had tied the game earlier in the inning on Ready's double.

Householder homered in the fourth inning, his sixth of the year.

Yankees' pitcher Brian Fisher towels off after being shelled by six runs.

Buccaneers sign Springs

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The Tampa Bay Buccaneers moved to bolster their running game Monday by signing veteran Ron Springs, who was released earlier this month after six seasons with the Dallas Cowboys.

Coach Leeman Bennett said Springs, 29, will be used primarily as a backup for James Wilder in the Bucs' one-back offense, but that at some point Tampa Bay may want to use Springs and Wilder in a two-back attack.

"Not only has Ron Springs been a good football player — and I'm assuming he still is — he's played on a winning team for a number of years. I hope he can give some of our young players direction," Bennett said.

Springs, known as much for his receiving as his running with Dallas, rushed for 2,180 yards and 28 touchdowns for the Cowboys between 1979 and 1984. During that span, he caught 222 passes for 2,029 yards and 10 TDs.

Springs signed his one-year contract with Tampa Bay less than a week after he was convicted of resisting arrest at a topless nightclub in Dallas. He received a year's probation; was fined $2,000 and ordered to pay restitution for a police officer's medical bills.

Bennett had no comment on Springs' conviction or the adverse publicity the running back has received from the case. "I've got to judge a guy on whether or not he can play football," the coach said.

To make room on the roster for Springs, the Bucs waived Melvin Carver, a fourth-year running back from Nevada-Las Vegas.

Gooden hurls two-hit shutout, but Mets still trail Cardinals

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD AP Sports Writer

The New York Mets finally gave Dwight Gooden something besides zeroes to look at on the scoreboard.

The last two times the 20-year-old right-hander pitched, it was 0-0 after nine innings. On Monday night, however, Gooden got nine runs to go with his two-hit shutout against Philadelphia that finally gave him another victory in his fourth start since Aug. 25, when he became the youngest pitcher ever to win 20 games in a season.

"I feel like I have three shutouts in a row, even though the stats don't show it," said Gooden, who extended his scoreless-inning streak to 31, tying him with the Cardinals' John Tudor for the longest in the majors this season.

Despite the victory, the Mets fell one game behind first-place St. Louis in the National League East as the Cardinals swept a doubleheader from Pittsburgh, 8-4 and 3-1.

The only Philadelphia hits off Gooden, who recorded 11 strikeouts, were a fourth-inning double by Mike Schmidt and a ninth-inning single by Jeff Stone.

In other NL games, Montreal dumped Chicago 8-5, Cincinnati edged San Francisco 7-6 in 11 innings, Houston whipped Atlanta 7-2 and San Diego defeated Los Angeles 4-2. Cardinals 8-3, Pirates 4-1

St. Louis victimized last-place Pittsburgh as Tudor won for the 18th time in his last 19 decisions and Willie McGee improved on his league-leading batting average.

Tudor, 19-8, despite having his 31-inning scoreless streak snapped by Bill Almon's grand slam in the fourth inning, breezed to victory in th- ipener as Andy Van Slyke, Terry Pendleton and Tom Herr drove in two runs apiece.

The Pirates, 40 games behind the Cardinals, managed to stay even at 1-1 through seven innings in the second game, but Vince Coleman doubled off Pat Clements, 0-2, and McGee singled in the go-ahead run. McGee, 4-for-9 in the doubleheader to raise his average to .362, later scored on Pendleton's single.

"He's the Most Valuable Player in the league as far as I'm concerned," Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner said of McGee, who stole a base in each game to run his season total to 47. "You look at what he's done with the bat and what he means to them defensively."

The second-game victory went to 26-year-old Pat Perry, his first in the major leagues after spending eight years in the minors. He is unscored upon in two appearances covering six innings since being called up by the Cardinals.

Padres 4, Dodgers 2

San Diego got homers from Carmelo Martinez and Jerry Royster and a strong pitching performance from Eric Show to beat first-place Los Angeles.

With the score tied 1-1 in the seventh, Kurt Bevacqua and Terry Kennedy singled off starter Jerry Reuss, 12-10, before Martinez hit a three-run homer off reliever Ken Howell.

The victory was the first since Aug. 21 for Show, who yielded Pete Rose's record-setting 4,192nd career hit in his previous start.

Astros 7, Braves 2

Houston won its sixth straight game and its 17th in 20 outings as Jeff Heathcock pitched a four-hitter for his first career complete game.

Jose Cruz, Jerry Mumphrey and Denny Walling each hit his seventh homer for the Astros.

Heathcock, 2-1, allowed only three baserunners after Dale Murphy hit his 36th homer for Atlanta in the first inning. Murphy, the major-league leader, has hit exactly 36 homers the last three years.

Joe Johnson, 4-1, was the loser, allowing eight hits in seven innings.

Browns hold off Steelers

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cleveland Browns have finally put a halt to what was becoming a fine, new Cleveland tradition — losing the close ones.

Using an aggressive defense spearheaded by linebackers Chip Banks and Curtis Weathers, and Earnest Byner's steady but functional running, the Browns beat the Pittsburgh Steelers 17-7 Monday night.

That ended a string of close losses that plagued them in their 5-11 season last year, when they dropped nine games they could have won or tied in the final few minutes, and continued in their opening game a week ago, when they blew a 7-point lead with 38 seconds left and wound up losing to St. Louis 27-24 in overtime.

"We really needed this, to take over in the latter stages of the game," said Banks, whose constant pressure on Pittsburgh quarterback Mark Malone disrupted the Steelers offense that had scored 45 points against Indianapolis last week.

Cleveland's fourth straight home win against the Steelers looked for a while like it was going to be a typical last-quarter loss.

The Browns controlled the game for the first three quarters but had just a 10-0 lead on rookie Fred Banks' 17-yard TD reception from Gary Danielson in the second quarter and Matt Bahr's 18-yard third-quarter field goal.

Then, early in the fourth quarter, Pittsburgh's Louis Lipps returned a Jeff Gossett punt 38 yards to the Cleveland 15 — the deepest penetration by far for a team that hadn't gone past the Browns' 35 previously. Two plays later, Malone passed six yards for a touchdown to John Stallworth and Cleveland was quaking.

Enter the Cleveland defense, second in the National Football League statistically last season but maligned for its habit of giving up late scores. That situation popped up again after a Cleveland drive fizzled and the Steelers got the ball on their own 19 with 3:21 left — Browns folding time.

But not on this evening.

On the first play, Weathers, playing for the injured Clay Matthews, sacked Malone at the nine for a 10-yard loss. On the next, he intercepted Malone's pass and returned it nine yards to the 16.

On the next play, Cleveland guard Dan Fike was penalized for illegal motion. But then Byner, who ran for 82 yards in 18 carries, bolted up the middle on a draw play and into the end zone to make it 17-7.

Cleveland's win created an early-season three-way tie at the top of the AFC's Central Division — the Steelers, Browns and Houston Oilers are all 1-1.

Cowboys ponder 'disaster'

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys were off today to ponder their disaster in Detroit while quarterback Danny White nursed a sprained right thumb and wrist.

White is questionable for Sunday's National Football League game against the Cleveland Browns. His thumb was X-rayed on Monday but there was no fracture detected.

White was injured in the first half of Dallas' 26-21 loss to the Detroit Lions Sunday. He left the game with Dallas trailing 26-0. Replacement Gary Hogeboom threw two touchdown passes and ran for another score.

"Danny may practice Wednesday, but doctors will just have to wait and see how he is looking," said Cowboys' spokesman Doug Todd. "Danny is listed as questionable right now."

White, who suffered two interceptions against the Lions and fumbled another time when an offensive lineman stepped on his foot, missed most of the preseason with a separated rib cartilage. He wears a flak jacket to protect the injury.

"Usually a sprained thumb heals fast," said White. "I think it will be OK."

White said he suffered the injury when he hit a Detroit player in the chest with his follow through on a pass.

"By the third quarter it was really hurting," said White.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry wasn't contemplating changing quarterbacks because of the Cowboys' disaster after a 44-14 Monday night victory over Washington.

He said White was his No. 1 quarterback unless injury or a dramatic drop in performance made a change necessary.

"Danny was trying to make something happen," said Landry. "He didn't have much of a chance. When you try to get the offense going sometimes you are going to make mistakes. I don't think I'm going to have to make any changes if I know this team."

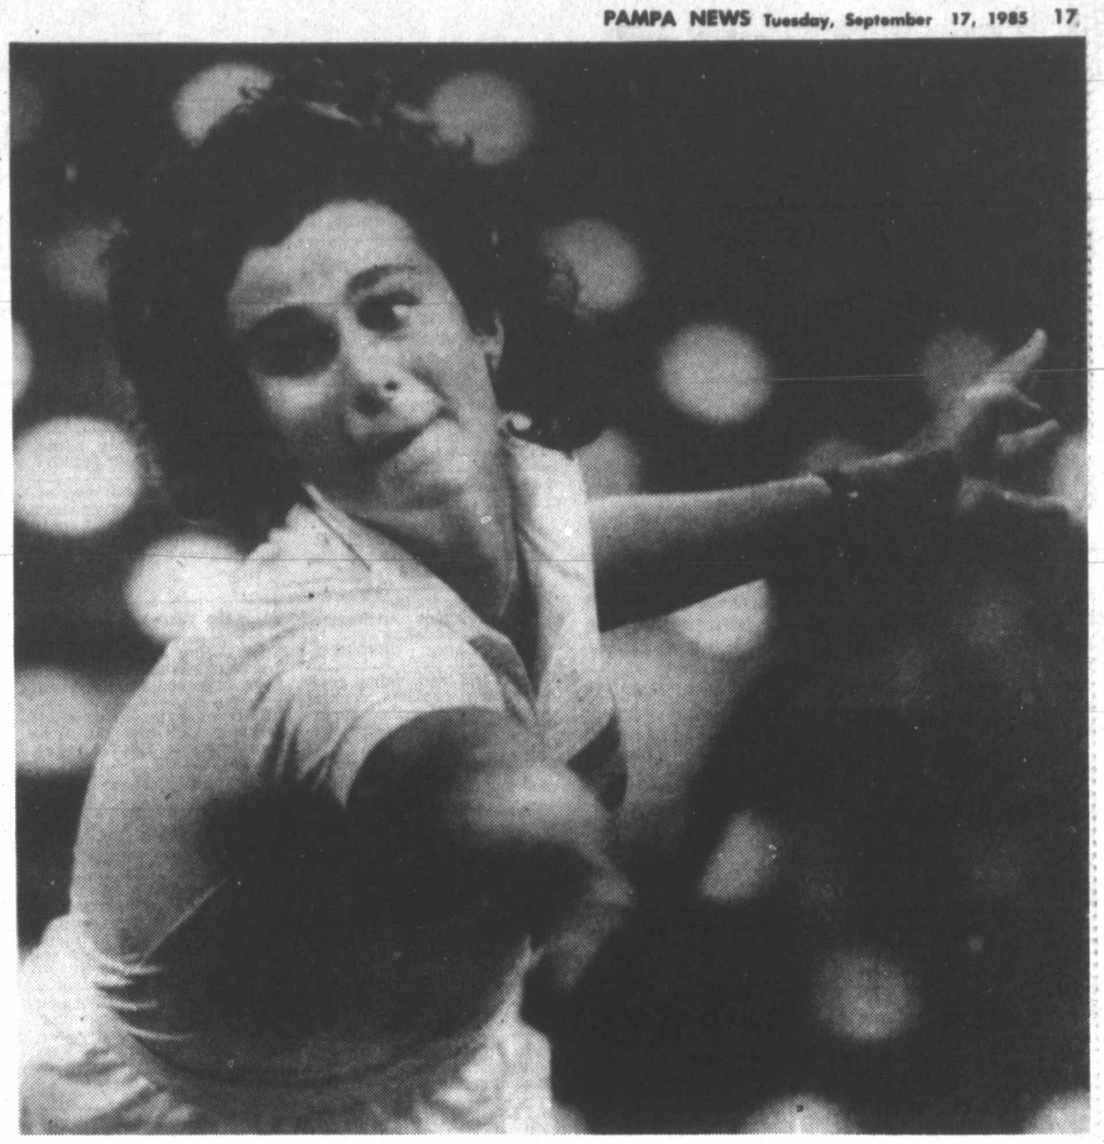

Hogeboom, who had contemplated asking for a trade, was being very low profile.

"I'm taking it week by week and I'm not going to worry about it," said Hogeboom. "Everything is up to Coach Landry and who starts at quarterback is his decision."

White said he knows how Washington quarterback Joe Theismann felt last Monday night when he threw five interceptions.

"Joe said everything that could go wrong did and that's what happened to us against Detroit," White said.

Landry added "White didn't have a lot support Sunday. But he didn't do a lot with the support he had."

AP Schoolboy Poll

Permian, Munday still on top

Odessa Permian and Munday, a pair of defending state champions who have opened the season with two big victories, are near-unanimous selections for the No. 1 ranking in their respective classes in the Associated Press Schoolboy Football Poll.

Both received 25 of 26 first-place votes in the weekly balloting by an AP panel of Texas sports writers and sportscasters.

There has been no change in the No. 1 teams since the season began. The other No. 1 clubs are Tomball in 4A, Hempstead in 3A and Electra in 2A.

Munday's Moguls have outscored two opponents 78-7 to continue its domination of the Class A ranks with a near-perfect 259 points compared to 224 points by No. 2 ranked Union Hill, which got the only other first-place vote.

Permian, the defending 5A co-champion, remained unscored on against two El Paso opponents following last week's 62-0 victory over El Paso Hanks and was near-perfect with a 259-219 edge over No. 2 ranked Conroe.

Houston Yates, which defeated No. 8 Beaumont West Brook, 46-14, retained the No. 3 ranking and Converse Judson blanked San Antonio Highlands 29-0 to hold onto No. 4.

The bottom three teams on the Class 5A list all lost their games last week and dropped out of the rankings. In addition to West Brook's loss to Yates, No. 9 Dallas White lost to Tyler Lee 21-7 and No. 10 Midland Lee lost to Temple, 19-7.

The replacements are No. 8 Temple, No. 9 West Orange Stark and No. 10 Sugar Land Willowridge.

In Class 4A, No. 2-ranked Sweetwater was beaten 18-0 last week by Class 5A Abilene and tumbled to No. 10 on the chart.

Tomball held its top billing in 4A with a 41-0 shutout of New Caney, and Denison moved up from No. 3 to replace Sweetwater.

Hempstead had an open date but had no problem in holding onto its top ranking in 3A by a 20-6 margin in first place votes and a 242-235 point margin over No. 2 ranked Navasota.

There were two losers on the 3A list, including No. 4 Bandera and No. 7 Port Isabel and both dropped ot of the top 10. Van Vleck moved into the No. 9 spot, and Medina Valley, the defending state champion, returned to the rankings as the No. 10 team.

Electra was another near-perfect selection in Class 2A, collecting 24 first place votes and a 258-217 point margin over No. 2-ranked Hamlin.

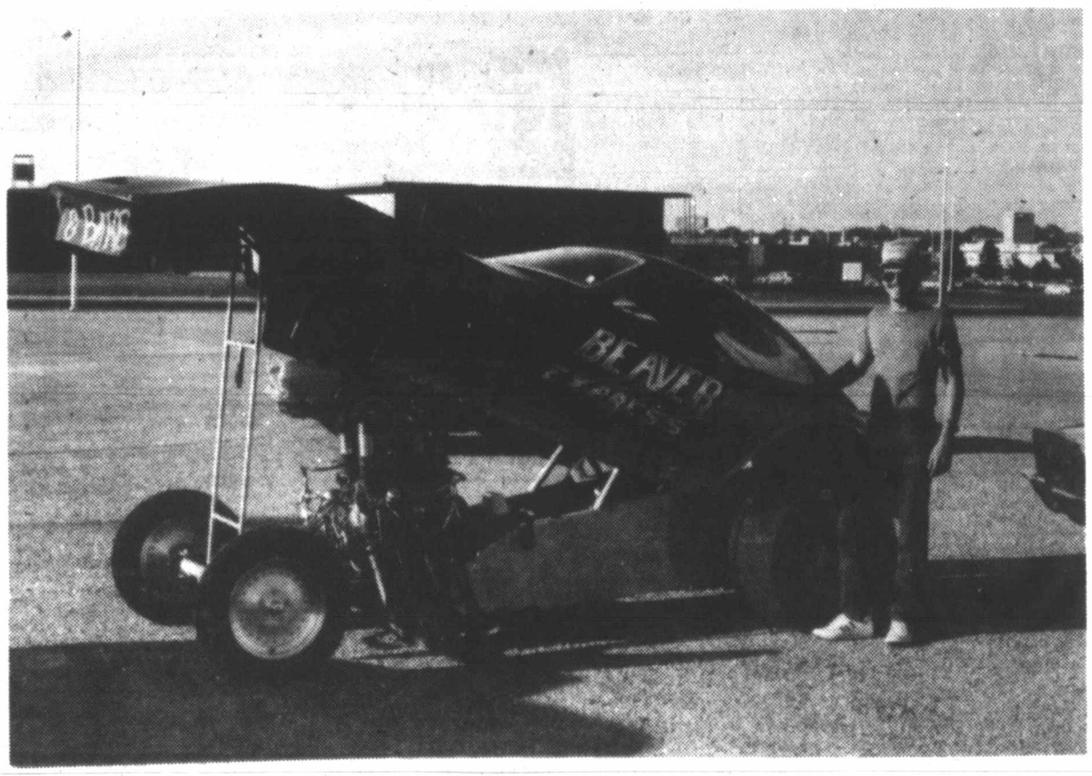

Three ranked teams were losers in 2A, including No. 4 East Bernard, No. 7 Abernathy and No. 10 Grand Saline. East Bernard dropped to No. 8, Abernathy fell to No. 10.

MVC salutes WT's Mayfield

ST. LOUIS (AP) — West Texas State quarterback Tod Mayfield and Southern Illinois safety John Field have won Missouri Valley Conference player-of-the-week honors on offense and defense, it was announced Monday.

Mayfield set a West Texas State school record for completions with 28-for-49 passing that produced 299 yards and two touchdowns in a 12-10 victory over Angelo State. Field, meanwhile, was SIU's defensive standout with 14 unassisted tackles and three assists in a 28-25 loss to Illinois.

First-week MVC honors went to Tulsa quarterback Steve Gage and Wichita State outside linebacker Don Weatherby.

BEAVER EXPRESS — Chuck Kimball and his "Beaver Express" won the Funny Car Division at the Amarillo Dragway last weekend. Kimball's winning time was 8.98 seconds in the quarter-mile, even though it wasn't his fastest recorded time of 8.75. Kimball, along with Jack Curtis of Pampa, have qualified for the Bracket Finals Oct. 11-13 in Green Valley, Tex. Only the top 32 racers (based on season points standings) are invited to the finals.

Longhorns open against Missouri

AUSTIN (AP) — A young Texas football team beset with injuries opens against Missouri on Saturday night, and Texas Coach Fred Akers says his 0-1 opponents should have fire in their eyes.

Missouri fell to Northwestern 27-23 on Saturday, and Akers said, "I think you'll see probably an angry team. I'm sure Missouri is awfully upset right now with what they did, being a prohibitive favorite and really not playing up to their potential.

"I'm sure you're going to see a much more fired up, enthusiastic football team in Missouri."

This Saturday, a crowd of upwards of 70,000 is expected for the 7 p.m., CDT, kickoff at Memorial Stadium. Capacity is 77,809.

Injuries have cut into Texas depth, and Akers told a news conference Monday, "We're going to have a lot of new, young guys out there in important positions."

Akers, in fact, said he could not yet name his starting defensive tackles but freshman Mike Finn was one of four mentioned as a possible player.

Akers also declined to announce his No. 1 quarterback.

Fifth-year senior Todd Dodge and junior Bret Stafford have been running 1-2, and Akers said, "We don't have a set plan for that except that we're going to play more than one ... I want to get some experience early for more than one of them."

"I'd like to have one quarterback that is the starter and a No. 2 quarterback that was close behind and capable of starting or playing at any time, and I think that's what we have," Akers said. "The other way both of them are looking over their shoulder all the time, afraid they might make a mistake. I don't want them to feel they're really under a gun highly competitive quarterback controversy-type thing.

"I don't think that's good for anyone, and we're not going to have it. We will not be grading our quarterbacks play-by-play when they go out there."

Akers did say offensive guard Paul Jetton was not expected to play, and his four top receivers are out with injuries or not at full speed because of injuries.

Former walk-on Peter Pope, who carried only four times for two yards last year, will start at the depleted fullback position, and will be backed up by freshman Darrin Norris. The third-team fullback is Norman Nunn, who is 5-foot-6 and weighs 177 pounds but could play.

A redshirt with no varsity experience, Charles Hunter, will start at tailback.

Asked what effect the Missouri upset loss might have on Texas players, Akers said, "I wish they had won. ... It was kind of a shock. You have to wonder if, in fact, they might have been looking ahead (to Texas). I think they probably were and that can be a big mistake."

Houston leads cup tourney

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — Defending champion Houston holds a 6-stroke lead after 36 holes of play Monday in the Southwest Conference Commissioner' Cup golf championship at Crown Colony Country Club in Lufkin.

The Cougars shot 338, followed by Texas A&M at 344, Arkansas (346), Southern Methodist (356), Rice and Texas Christian at 357, Texas (364), and Baylor and Texas Tech at 367.

Jerry Smith of Baylor and Neal Barfield of Baylor shot a 64 to lead best-ball competition during 18 holes Monday morning. After 18 holes of alternate shot competition in the afternoon, the leaders were Texas A&M's Jorge Coghlan and Roy Mackenzie with a low of 67.

After the morning session, Houston and TCU were tied at 201. Three shots back at 204 in a tie for third were Arkansas and Texas A&M.

HAMILTON JORDAN

CARL YASTRZEMSKI

Names in news

ATLANTA (AP) — Former White House chief of staff Hamilton Jordan, diagnosed as having lymph cancer, has been released from the hospital as doctors evaluate his test results.

Jordan, who served under President Jimmy Carter, will probably begin treatment at the end of the week, said Judy Smith, a spokeswoman at Emory University Hospital. He was in good condition when he was discharged Monday.

Doctors have told Jordan, 40, that his chances for recovery are good.

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Actor Ryan O'Neal apparently failed to maneuver his Rolls-Royce past a parked sportscar and hit its rear fender before driving away, investigators said.

O'Neal and Farrah Fawcett climbed into the 1979 Rolls-Royce on Saturday in front of Spago's restaurant on Sunset Boulevard, said Sheriff's Deputy Lynda Edmonds. As O'Neal left, he reportedly clipped the fender of a parked 1974 Porsche and kept on going.

A misdemeanor hit-and-run complaint would be sought, she said Monday.

Andrea Jaffe, publicist for Miss Fawcett, said the couple would have no comment.

MILTON, Mass. (AP) — A widely circulated photograph of a police officer hugging his injured horse before it was destroyed tugged heartstrings nationwide, including baseball great Carl Yastrzemski's.

The former Boston Red Sox slugger donated an 11-year-old gelding to the Metropolitan District Commission to replace Patrolman Alan R. Keith's horse, Tivoli, that was hit by a drunken driver Aug. 14.

The new horse, Black Jack, is under a one-month trial to see how well he and Keith adapt to one another.

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock songs and music videos should be rated like movies for sexual explicitness, says Susan Akin, the newly crowned Miss America.

"I have a certain love for music and I hate to see the beauty of music destroyed by sexual lyrics," said Miss Akin, of Meridian, Miss.

"The way songs and music now is going, I think sometimes it's really gotten out of hand," she said at a Monday news conference.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Tenor Luciano Pavarotti will be returning to Philadelphia this month to judge 151 finalists in an international voice competition co-sponsored by the singer and the Opera Company of Philadelphia.

The finalists, from 18 countries, were chosen from more than 1,000 singers who began competing more than a year ago.

Pavarotti will help judge the finalists on Sept. 27-30 and Oct. 5. The winners will be announced, and perform, during a concert Oct. 6.

10 arrested in crackdown on Taiwan mob moving into the United States

NEW YORK (AP) — A Taiwan-based crime syndicate linked to narcotics, gambling and murder has spread its global tentacles into the United States and ordered the death of a Chinese-American journalist in California, authorities say.

Since April, three New York City police officers and two FBI agents infiltrated United Bamboo and took "their induction ceremony," which included a blood oath, said John L. Hogan, assistant director of the FBI office here.

He described United Bamboo as "an emerging group" in this country with 15,000 members worldwide.

Court papers filed Monday described United Bamboo as "an international organized crime syndicate active in Taiwan, (the) Philippines, Saudia Arabia, Hong Kong, Japan and the United States."

Ten people linked to United Bamboo were arrested Monday in New York, Houston and Los Angeles on racketeering-related charges, Hogan and U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani told a news conference.

According to the complaint, United Bamboo's main goal "is to generate profits and to protect and expand their political and economic power. In order to accomplish these ends, they engage in narcotics trafficking, murders and gambling."

United Bamboo would "use any type of violence to get a piece of the action in the United States," Hogan said, adding that Monday's arrests "should slow them down for some time."

Giuliani said the syndicate was behind the murder of journalist Henry Liu in Daly City, Calif., on Oct. 15, 1984.

Opponents of the Nationalist regime on Taiwan have claimed Liu was killed at the government's behest. But Hogan said there is no indication that United Bamboo is linked to the Taiwanese government.

United Bamboo originated 28 years ago in Taiwan and the FBI became aware of its activities in this country "about five to seven years ago," Hogan said.

He and Giuliani announced that one of three criminal complaints filed Monday names nine individuals as alleged leaders or members of United Bamboo. It charges them with constituting an enterprise that engaged in "various criminal activities," including the murder of Liu.

FBI agents displayed several weapons seized or purchased from the group by undercover agents, including a submachine gun, an assault rifle and several large caliber pistols and revolvers.

"If you got in their way they'd shoot you," said Hogan.

Besides Liu's murder, the criminal acts allegedly committed by the enterprise included a conspiracy to import more than 600 pounds of heroin, possession of 150 pounds of marijuana and the attempted extortion of protection money from a "future Las Vegas casino," said Giuliani, who did not identify the extortion target.

Woods Petroleum plans staff cutback

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The Oklahoma City-based Woods Petroleum Corp. will reduce its work force by 13 percent to 15 percent by the end of the year.

Robert B. Anderson, company president and chief executive officer, said Monday that most of the estimated 65 jobs will be eliminated by Oct. 1 when Woods closes offices in Midland, Texas, and Lafayette, La.

Woods employs about 400 workers in its oil and gas exploration and production business.

Anderson said 10 to 15 people would lose jobs at Woods' Oklahoma City headquarters.

"When you're drilling fewer wells, you need fewer people," Anderson said. He said Woods will drill about 100 wells this year, fewer than in past years.

Anderson said the firm is having reduced cash flow from lower petroleum prices and less drilling, and the effects of Sunshine Mining Co.'s recent acquisition of Woods for about $300 million.

About 85 percent of Woods' oil and gas production comes from those two areas.

Anderson said Woods will continue to operate an exploration office in Denver and a production office in Casper, Wyo.

Reagan will meet press in a news conference tonight

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will hold a nationally broadcast news conference tonight, his first formal White House meeting with reporters in three months.

The half-hour session beginning at 8 p.m. EDT in the East Room will be carried by the major television and radio networks.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes had said at the outset of Reagan's second term that the president would hold more frequent news conferences than he did during his first four years, when he held fewer such sessions than any other recent president.

Less than a month after his most recent news conference, held June 18 during the TWA hostage crisis, Reagan unexpectedly underwent surgery to remove a cancerous tumor from his colon. He spent several weeks recuperating, both in Washington and during his August vacation in California, before resuming his Oval Office schedule after Labor Day.

Although Speakes said the question-and-answer sessions would be held every four to six weeks, Reagan stuck to that schedule for only two months, then let three months lapse between news conferences in March and June as a controversy swirled over his visit to the German military cemetery at Bitburg, where Nazi SS troops were buried.

During a brief question period following a White House luncheon Monday for regional editors and broadcasters, Reagan disclosed he has spoken frequently to former President Richard Nixon in preparing for his November summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Reagan said he agreed with Nixon's assessment that "we want peace; the Soviet Union needs peace."

On another subject, Reagan refused to say whether he would veto legislation pending in Congress to protect the U.S. textile industry from foreign imports.

But, a week before he is expected to lay out a new trade policy, the president said he continues to oppose protectionist measures designed to save jobs in one industry, because they only tempt retaliation by foreign governments and cost people jobs in other industries.

"The American farmer knows that most of all," Reagan said. "The easiest way to retaliate is against farm exports."
