Lincoln papers

HAVANA, Ill. — Two legal documents written by Abraham Lincoln have turned up in the back room of the Mason County Clerk's office. The papers, dated 1845, were verified as authentic last week. "It's unbelievable, for being folded up for 146 years there were no major tears and the ends weren't dogeared," said William Beard, assistant editor of The Lincoln Legal Papers, a state-funded study of Lincoln's legal practice. "It looks like Lincoln wrote them yesterday." Beard's colleagues sent a fax of the documents to Springfield, where Tom Schultz, a curator with the Illinois Historic Preservation Agency, and retired curator James Hickey, a Lincoln handwriting expert, determined the papers were authentic.

Allen ads

ROME — An Italian supermarket chain is getting an ad boost from Woody Allen. The writer-actor-director plans to make five television commercials for Coop, a string of cooperative supermarkets, said Tamara Palombi, a spokeswoman for the chain. Palombi said she liked Allen's brand of humor and persuaded him to write and direct the spots. He won't appear in them, she said. Italian newspapers Saturday reported that Allen signed a contract Friday that's worth between $1.8 million and $2.7 million.

Bush hospitalized

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — President Bush suffered shortness of breath while jogging at Camp David on Saturday afternoon and was evacuated to Bethesda Naval Hospital for treatment of an irregular heartbeat. A spokesman said the president was "relaxed, comfortable" and in good condition.

Bush

The 66-year-old president was diagnosed as having an atrial fibrillation, or irregular heartbeat. The condition can occur for a variety of reasons and does not necessarily represent a serious threat.

Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the president was alert, stable and had no complaints. He said there was "no indication at this point that he had a heart attack." He said the president's heartbeat was still irregular, however, in initial tests after he reached the hospital.

Bush will take the medication Digoxin for several weeks, Fitzwater said. Digoxin, which is taken orally,

Bond passes

■ Proposition 1 passes with 65 percent of the vote, while Proposition 2 passes with 64.5 percent.

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Midlanders resoundingly said "yes" to both of the school district's bond issues Saturday night.

Election tallies indicated that 65 percent of Midlanders — 7,134 of 10,980 voting — voted in favor of Proposition No. 1 and 64.5 percent — 7,058 of 10,939 voting — backed favor of building the new junior high school in Proposition No. 2.

"I've got something to smile about," said school board trustee Ken Marks. "I will sleep a lot better now knowing that those kids won't be trying to learn in such crowded conditions. Now we will really have something to work on."

"I'm ecstatic," said Joseph Baressi Jr., superintendent of Midland Independent School District. "I am really thankful for these results. I am very appreciative of the parents and folks in the community who worked on passing the bonds."

School board member Adela Marmolejo said Saturday's bond election was successful due to "more citizens getting involved, especially parents and kids."

"Too many people took it for granted that the Oct. 6 bond election would pass. They didn't take those five minutes to get out and vote," Ms. Marmolejo said.

"I am really grateful that we won't be looking at year-round schools," she added. "I attended a seminar about year-round schools in California and I said, 'Please, give us anything but this.'"

Changes cloud care decisions

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

DIFFERENT DIRECTIONS

FOR AGING AMERICANS

As Americans live longer and healthier, and "baby boomers" creep toward retirement age, new and better approaches to long-term medical care are evolving.

IN PART ONE, an examination of the state of nursing homes today, the evolution that brought them this far and the visions that will carry them forward.

Jim Arnold recalls an early December morning when he got out of bed to check on his father.

"Dad couldn't talk. He couldn't say anything. He just kept clenching his chest," his son said.

Hours later at Midland Memorial Hospital, Dr. Gregory Bartha diagnosed that 80-year-old Joe Arnold had suffered a stroke.

In subsequent days, Jim and his wife Suzy; Jim's sister, Pat Benefield; Joe's wife of 60 years, Wilma; and Joe, himself, came to a conclusion that was filled with as much love as tears.

Joe would need nursing-home care.

"We were just so thankful we could bring him to Manor Park," and the Mabee Care Center, Pat said, fighting to hold back tears. "We knew at the time we just weren't able to give him the care he needed."

For some families, changes are permanent.

For others, like Jimmy and June Carter, changes remain unpredictable.

On March 15, the Odessa couple came to Midland to take their daughter Cheryl home from Terrace Gardens Nursing Home — her second such stay in a long-term care setting in two years.

At 38, Cheryl lives with daily hallucinations brought on by an inoperable brain tumor.

While the tumor hasn't spread, high dosages of chemotherapy have taken their toll, according to her father, "killing good cells with the bad."

Diagnosed 10 years ago, Cheryl's life has been a roller coaster ride that has piled up thousands of dollars in medical bills, most of which have been taken care of by the government.

But the money, even the relatively small portion the family pays, is running out, according to her father.

"Health care costs are just rising so fast. Three years ago, a (private-pay) nursing home stay was $39 a day. Now it's $62.

"It's cost us a lot of money," he said. "Insurance has taken care of the doctors and hospitals, but it's just like now, we're doing this and that . . . you look at the end of the week and ask, where did the money go? You just can't bring in enough. Eventually Cheryl may have to go on Medicaid in a nursing home."

Long-term care.

The decisions are tough.

So are the accompanying financial and emotional burdens for millions of American families each day.

In the United States, among the most critical of all long-term care decisions involves nursing-home care — care that can impoverish the elderly as well as their immediate families.

It is estimated that 1.3 million elderly persons reside in nursing homes — 84,000 in Texas — and their numbers are growing, based on federal and private demographic studies.

And that doesn't include an estimated 2.6 million elderly Americans living on their own, who require some form of home-health assistance, relying on skilled nursing and/or personal care to bathe, dress, clean and shop.

It's a phenomenal expense —

Runoff set for MISD's District 6

■ Gary Willis and Jerry Weant are scheduled to meet in a runoff election May 18.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

The school district's most hotly contested race ended with none of the three candidates garnering 50 percent of the votes, resulting in a runoff election in two weeks.

Gary Willis led the balloting in District 6 with 1,142 votes, 46.8 percent of total, Jerry A. Weant pulled in 804 votes, 33 percent, and Lex Crawford 494 votes, 20.2 percent.

After 21 precincts had reported, Willis had 44 percent of the votes, Weant 35 percent and Crawford had almost 21 percent.

Tallying the ballots slowed down following the 21 precinct report due to the number of ballots turned in which needed to be counted by hand.

"We had such a tremendous turnout that we ran out of optical scan ballots in some precincts," said Bettye Calvert, elections administrator. "Everyone got a ballot, they just didn't all get a ballot which could be scanned by machine," she said.

Willis stopped in the elections office shortly after the absentee results were announced. "When I saw that I had 44

Voters put two new faces on city council

■ De Vaughn, Devenport, Faircloth and Castro win their races.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Two new faces — including the first black representative — and the two at-large incumbents were elected to the Midland City Council on Saturday.

The Rev. Michael De Vaughn of District 2, James Devenport of District 1 and at-large incumbents J.D. Faircloth and John Castro each captured their respective races.

Meanwhile, both municipal charter amendment proposals passed.

The day's closest council race took place in District 2, where De Vaughn narrowly defeated Jose Alfredo "Beau" Zertuche by 14 votes.

De Vaughn received 50.8 percent, or 468 votes, of the 922 ballots cast, while Zertuche received 49.2 percent, or 454 votes. Zertuche said he was considering calling for a recount.

A delirious De Vaughn had one comment for the vote that would make him the city's first black councilman: "It's about time."

De Vaughn attributed the win to dedicated campaigners and support from civic groups and churches in east Midland.

BUSH: President suffers shortness of breath increases the strength of the heartbeat while decreasing its rate. It carries no serious side effects.

Bush was expected to be released from the hospital early Sunday morning, said a White House official who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

Fitzwater said there was no contemplation of transferring power to Vice President Dan Quayle. "This was never considered to be that serious; there was never any question of the president losing consciousness and being unable to continue his functions," he said.

The White House went to some lengths to describe the president as alert and able to walk on his own throughout the incident. He walked to the Camp David infirmary, to the helicopter and then into the hospital, aides said.

Bush had dinner with his wife, Barbara, at the hospital and was staying overnight. He joked with aides throughout the episode and asked one aide to put his briefcase on the helicopter so he could work. He even monitored Fitzwater's nationally-televised news conference, and called to interject that he had jogged or walked for about 35 minutes. He described his dinner: steak, salad, mixed vegetables and skim milk.

Fitzwater spoke to reporters in the White House briefing room. He said Bush hoped to leave the hospital on Sunday and perhaps return to Camp David, the mountaintop retreat in Maryland.

Bush jogs a couple times a week, normally about two miles and frequently is accompanied by reporters and others. The president does not jog as frequently as he once did — five miles a day at his peak. He has slowed down in recent years on his doctor's advice.

Fitzwater said there were no advance warnings before the episode, which revealed itself as unusual fatigue and shortness of breath at about 4:20 p.m. He said Bush "mentioned to his Secret Service agents that he thought he should check it out." His doctor recommended Bush be tested further, and the entourage flew to the military hospital on the outskirts of Washington.

"He's in good spirits and ready to get back into the game," Fitzwater said of the president.

Vice President Quayle was at his residence in Washington, hosting an evening reception. His spokesman said the vice president was notified of the president's condition "a few minutes" after the episode occurred.

The 25th Amendment to the Constitution outlines a procedure for presidents to pass power to their vice presidents when they are incapacitated. Quayle and Bush met early in their administration to discuss how they would handle such an eventuality, but never disclosed their thinking. The amendment makes clear that a president can decide to transfer power, but the document is less clear about what would happen is there is uncertainty over whether the president is incapacitated.

Special congressional election heads for runoff

DALLAS (AP) — Two Republicans in Saturday's special congressional election appeared headed for a runoff to determine which would represent the affluent 3rd District.

With 151 of 190 precincts reporting at 10 p.m., Dallas community activist and businessman Tom Pauken had 12,495 votes or nearly 27 percent of the 46,970 votes counted. State Rep. Sam Johnson of Plano had 10,046 votes or 21 percent.

The runoff winner will succeed Republican Steve Bartlett, who resigned to run for mayor of Dallas.

That election was also scheduled Saturday, but a federal appeals court put the balloting on hold while the Justice Department considered redistricting plans to increase minority representation on the Dallas City Council.

Nine Republicans, two independents and a Democrat were on the crowded congressional ballot.

The district has been in GOP hands for at least a generation, and is considered one of the party's safest seats in the country.

Pauken had waged two prior congressional campaigns, narrowly losing in 1978 and 1980 to Democrat Jim Mattox.

Johnson and Bill Hammond, a former state representative, were the only candidates who had held elected office. Hammond had 5,569 votes or 12 percent in incomplete returns.

Other candidates included Republicans Pete Sessions, Dan Branch, David Corley, Robert Lyle, Paul Zane Pilzner and Farrell Ray; Democrat Wayne Putman; and independents Rufus Higginbotham and Mel Richardson.

Sessions got 4,406 votes, or nearly 9 percent, in early balloting.

The would-be members of Congress issued a flurry of position papers and plans on topics including balancing the budget, gun control and abortion.

Sessions, the son of FBI director William Sessions, presented a two-year plan to cut federal spending and balance the budget.

Johnson made an issue of Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock's proposal for a state income tax, while Pauken campaigned on the theme that he had been "standing up" for Dallas residents.

Johnson also ran on his lengthy military service record. The former fighter pilot and Vietnam POW has received awards including two Silver Stars, two Legions of Merit, the Distinguished Flying Cross, Bronze Star with Valor, four Air Medals and two Purple Hearts.

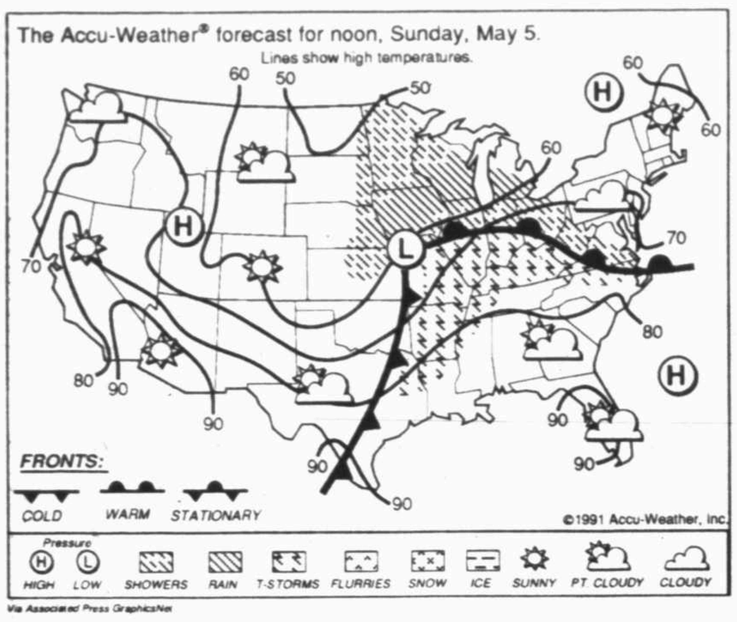
WEATHER SUMMARY



Via Associated Press GraphicsNet

More sun, less heat on way

Staff Report

Today's weather is to be sunny but cooler.

Forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport call for a sunny day and a peak temperature reading in the upper 70s.

Winds are to be northerly at 15 to 20 mph and gusty.

Tonight and Monday, the weather is to be fair. The low temperature is to be in the mid-40s tonight, and the high on Monday is to be in the lower 80s.

Saturday's high 87, after an overnight low was 50.

The record high temperature for May 4 of 103 degrees was set in 1947. The record low for today's date is 39 degrees in 1933.

STATE

There were reports of square hail in Dallas and softball-sized hail near San Angelo Saturday as a low pressure system triggered heavy thunderstorms across the central portion of Texas.

The thunderstorms and torrential rains developed along and ahead of a trough or dry line that extended from the Wichita Falls area south to just east of Del Rio.

Much of Central Texas, from south to north, was placed under tornado and flash flood watches because of the continued threat of bad weather.

West Texas was partly cloudy behind the front, but skies were generally overcast ahead of the system.

Temperatures were in the 60s in the rain but otherwise 70s and 80s. The Rio Grande Plains had highs in the lower 90s.

Forecasters expected Sunday would be less cloudy with seasonal readings in the 70s to 90s.

NATION

Heavy rain fell Saturday in saturated northeastern Louisiana and thunderstorms plagued Texas, Kansas and Missouri.

Residents were evacuated from isolated areas of Ouachita Parish and in parts of Monroe, La.

Strong thunderstorms hit west Texas and hail the size of golf balls fell on the Kimeo and Baileyville communities in north-central Kansas.

Wind gusts up to 60 mph damaged several farm buildings and downed power lines near Clay Center, Kan.

The Associated Press also contributed to this report.

Midland statistics

Today: Mostly sunny but cooler, high in the upper 70s, winds north 15-20 mph and gusty.
Tonight: Fair, low in the mid-40s.

CITY: Two incumbents win re-election

(From 1A)

"We ran a grassroots campaign," he said. "We kept the faith and the Lord blessed us. We were willing to work and the hard work paid off."

Zertuche, who said he would run again, blamed a lack of voter support for him on area festivities luring constituents to parties instead of the polls.

"A recount is not out of the question," he said. "I still have to give a lot of credit to all the volunteers. They all did a wonderful job. We gave it all we had."

The District 2 winner will replace Tony Carrillo, who chose not to run.

Faircloth ran away with the at-large vote, capturing 44 percent, or 5,116 votes, of the 11,630 ballots cast.

Castro edged fellow at-large candidate Hugh G. White, receiving 29.5 percent, or 3,427 votes, compared to White's 26.5 percent, or 3,087 votes.

"For the past two years I have been voting like I felt Midlanders wanted me to vote," Faircloth said for the reason behind his large victory margin. "I got very few complaints at home."

Castro, who spent well into the four-digit range on his campaign, said he was disappointed that his victory margin over White was not larger.

Devenport

De Vaughn

Faircloth

Castro

"I think Hugh White did some work," he said. "He didn't have the financial backing, but he pulled it off."

White said he was pleased with his strong showing in the vote.

"That's not too bad," he said. "I think I did a good job in the campaign. I'm disappointed but that's the way it goes.

"I hope the city does well and everything turns out well for the winners."

Devenport received 51 percent, or 2,126 votes out of 4,171 ballots cast, to defeat Steve Scott, who garnered 49 percent, or 2,045 votes.

"I'm pleased to have won," said Devenport, who will replace Bill Williams, who chose not to seek re-election. "I've lived here a long time and have been concerned about what's happening here."

Scott, who ran a low-profile campaign, appeared bitter over his defeat, blaming it on a local newspaper endorsement of Devenport.

He also attributed the loss on his opponent's campaign spending, which overwhelmed his.

"The guy with the gold makes the rules," Scott said, who lost by only 81 votes.

Two municipal rule changes, one affecting computer transfers and the other dealing with competitive bidding, received resounding voter approval.

Proposition 1, which will allow the city to conduct money transactions electronically instead of by check or warrant, won 80 percent, or 7,794 votes, of the 9,740 ballots cast.

Proposition 2, which will push the bid ceiling up to $10,000 from $5,000, received 52.1 percent, or 5,107 votes, of 9,803 ballots cast.

Under the current charter, the city is required to seeks bids on any purchase of more than $5,000.

The bid ceiling will raised it to $10,000, with a clause allowing that to be increased to whatever ceiling the state has set.

The state now allows a local governmental entity to make purchases of less than $10,000 without entering a bid process. But City Attorney David Reagan said a bill expected to be reviewed by the Texas Legislature this spring would raise that amount to $25,000.

Reagan said the amendment will allow the city, on some purchases, to save time and money by avoiding a bidding process.

The other amendment will allow the city to conduct computer transfers, which also will save time and money, Reagan said.

"It modernizes our ability to handle our funds and it will save the city a lot of money to not have to cut a check every time we make a transaction," he said.

MISD: Runoff scheduled for District 6 percent of the votes then, I doubted it would get up to 50 percent and I thought there would probably be a runoff."

Hightower

Willis said he watched the race results on the late evening television news. "Some of the stations were calling me a winner," he said, "and didn't even mention the runoff."

Weant said he will be gearing up for the May 18 runoff election in District 6. "I will have to reload and start over," he said. "But I was pleased to see there are a lot of concerned citizens out there."

Willis voiced similar sentiments.

"Everyone who voted showed that they care about education," Willis said. "Honestly, I am just as pleased as I can be. All the candidates ran for the position instead of against each other."

Crawford noted that only 2,440 citizens turned out to cast their votes in a district with 8,000 registered voters.

"I hope the people who voted for me will get behind Weant," Crawford said. "I feel like he will support the teachers and the students."

In District 3 Jack Hightower, a former educator and principal garnered 579 votes, 83.4 percent, while his opponent Leon Keller pulled in 115 votes, 16.6 percent.

As the ballots were being counted in the elections office, Hightower and Keller conferred amiably.

After hearing the final results, Hightower said, "It sure was a good race and I feel good about the bond issues passing. Keller also ran a firm, clean campaign. He worked hard and is a gentlemen."

Keller said he was glad that he threw his hat into the ring. "It was one thing that I wanted to do and I enjoyed the experience. It was tough running against Hightower who has 30 years of school experience, but it was a good race and above board. Everyone ran on the issues."

George Staley, the uncontested incumbent in District 5, received 1,179 votes.

In Greenwood, Brooks Smith received 197 votes, 79.1 percent, in Place 7 while his opponent Don Morgan received 52 votes, 20.9 percent.

John Underwood, the unopposed incumbent in Place 6, garnered 170 votes.

Both Smith and Morgan were unavailable for comment.

In Stanton, one incumbent was turned out while another retained his seat and Todd Smith was elected to the vacant Place 4 seat on the Stanton Independent School Board. Smith's 231 votes topped Larry Adams with 214 and Sonny Garza with 162.

In the Place 3 voting incumbent Mike Hall came up 60 votes short of Terry Shanks, who pulled in 283 votes. Tom Glynn got 87 votes in the race.

In Place 5 balloting, incumbent Robert Adkins was re-elected with 287 votes over Mary Jane Gonzalez with 176 and John Anastasio with 144.

Pittman wins MCHD District 5 seat

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Jean Pittman was an easy winner for the District 5 post on the Midland County Hospital District board of directors, capturing almost 75 percent of the vote.

Pittman

Ms. Pittman, a 49-year-old hospital volunteer, pilot and interior designer, attracted 904 votes.

Trailing her were 30-year-old David Mandell, who polled 173 votes for 14 percent of the vote, and 40-year-old Mike Roadcup, who drew 137 votes for 11 percent of the votes cast in that race.

The incumbent, accountant David Porter, did not seek re-election.

In her role on the hospital board, Ms. Pittman promised to be "an effective voice and to make difficult decisions that preserve top-quality healthcare.

"I also pledge to develop creative solutions to indigent care and tax issues that threaten the future of our hospital," she said in a prepared statement.

Ms. Pittman said the voters have "demanded leadership, vision, business sense and compassion" in the hospital's District 5, which includes central and southwest Midland.

As a board member, Ms. Pittman said she would "enthusiastically advocate less expensive, preventative and clinic-based health care for our indigent population."

Additionally, Ms. Pittman said she would ardently support expanding Midland's Memorial Hospital and Health Center's healthcare into "profitable new regional markets.

"But above all, I will aggressively fight to preserve the top quality health care from which we all benefit here at home."

Mandell, a Midland draftsman, said he hopes that Ms. Pittman "can really do a good job" on the board.

"They need some stand-up people on that board," Mandell said. "I hope she does it."

The hospital's board of trustees is an appointed governing board which lends advice to the elected board of directors. The directors regulate the hospital's tax-supported indigent health care services.

The seven-member board of directors, Mandell said, has been "fat and lazy too long."

And if Ms. Pittman can "shake them up, more power to her," he said.

Though Mandell was disappointed with his percentage of the votes, he said that he "did the best I could with the limited funds I had.

"It's very hard to compete against a candidate that clearly was the hospital's choice," Mandell said of Ms. Pittman. "She knew three (hospital) trustees, and I'm sure that had a great impact on her decision to run for office."

Mandell said he was "not bitter" over the election's outcome. "I was outspent four to one" by Mrs. Pittman.

Roadcup, a 40-year-old service technician, said that he was "disappointed" in the election's results.

"I thought more people read the newspaper and more people paid attention to campaign issues," he said. "I really wanted to save the taxpayers money."

Roadcup, who said he ran for office "without any campaign funds," said his friends "campaigned for me like troopers."

Roadcup said he was "befuddled" over his defeat.

"Everybody I talked to complained about taxes being so high, and when a viable plan to reduce the tax burden is shared, people voted against it (by voting for Ms. Pittman) or didn't vote," he said.

Ms. Pittman said she was grateful that Mandell and Roadcup joined her "in presenting a range of ideas and solutions" toward problem-solving and "not simply restating the problem."

In the board's uncontested races, Dr. Stephen Wiesenfeld got 1,674 votes, the Rev. Sylvester Ferguson attracted 196 votes, and Margaret Williams pulled in 496 votes.

Only one of three incumbents re-elected to Odessa council

Staff Report

ODESSA — Only one of three incumbents on the Odessa City Council were re-elected to their posts in Saturday's election.

Re-elected was District 3 Councilman Fred Crawford, who garnered 838 votes for 60 percent of the votes cast in that race. Runners-up were Ray Wyman, who attracted 125 votes for 10 percent of the ballots, and Dan Kalenak, who polled 420 votes for 30 percent of the votes.

Dr. Robert "Bob" Slider won the District 4 race by pulling in 1,507 votes for 61 percent of the votes cast in that race. The incumbent, Omer Bishop, got 976 votes for 39 percent of the votes in the race.

Winning the at-large post was W.R. "Bro" Hill, who drew 3,770 votes for 61 percent of the votes cast in that race.

W.A. "Dub" Kennedy lost his bid for re-election in that race by attracting 1,966 votes for 32 percent of the ballots in that race.

At-large candidate James "J.B." Hardin got 255 votes for 4 percent of the votes in that election, and Lonnie Sigmon scooped up 156 votes for almost 3 percent of the votes cast in the election.

The City Council race was marked by controversy over the recent firing of Odessa City Manager Bill Brown.

Campaign issues included improving the quality of Odessa's drinking water, working on the water reclamation-enhancing project, and attacking the rising crime rate, and diversifying the economy.

HEART: Bush heartbeat irregular; hospitalized in 'good condition'

(From 2A)

Quayle called Bush and spoke with him at 7:20 p.m. White House Chief of Staff John Sununu had alerted both Quayle and National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft before Bush left Camp David.

He said the doctors had indicated that Bush "could be back jogging in a matter of days," if he wishes.

Bush had gone to Camp David directly from Andrews Air Force Base earlier Saturday after returning from a day trip to Ann Arbor, Mich., where he spoke at the University of Michigan in the first in a series of planned college graduation speeches.

Bush, who turns 67 next month, had his last annual physical checkup March 27 and was proclaimed "in excellent health" by his personal White House physician, Dr. Burton Lee.

At the time, Lee said, "There were no surprises at the physical exam. He remains an extraordinarily vigorous man who continues to thrive on a great deal of physical activity and a rigorous, demanding work schedule."

Blankiston's New Gould Medical Dictionary defines atrial fibrillation as "a cardiac arrhythmia" — or an irregular heartbeat. Many people suffer them at some point during their lives. They sometimes present a fluttering feeling in the chest that goes away without the person being aware of anything more than a passing sensation.

A prominent sports doctor said jogging wouldn't cause an irregular heartbeat in someone with a history of running like Bush but that "vigorous exercise might bring out a cardiac abnormality."

"It can happen once and never happen again," said Dr. Lyle Micheli, director of sports medicine at Boston's Children's Hospital. "It can happen at that age just spontaneously. Whether it means there is an underlying problem, I really rather doubt it. Atrial fibrillation is really a benign condition."

Alan Guerci, director of the coronary care unit at Johns Hopkins University, said in most cases atrial fibrillation is not a serious problem. But he said the condition can be caused by heart disease, and he said the president's doctors would probably conduct tests "to make sure that President Bush did not have a heart attack."

"It's just a matter of checking some electrocardiograms periodically, sending some blood tests to the laboratory and waiting for the results of those blood tests," Guerci said. He said the tests would be conducted for about 24 hours.

Dr. Timothy Johnson, ABC News medical editor, said the condition ascribed to Bush affects only the upper chambers of the heart and is "far less serious" than when the lower chambers are involved.

"Usually when you have so-called atrial fibrillation it does affect the pumping of the heart to some degree and that's why there may be shortness of breath, but it does not represent a major problem in the major pumping chambers of the heart, the lower chambers."

BOND: School officials 'ecstatic'

(From 1A)

Baressi noted that the results of Saturday's election was "the direct opposite" of the October election.

"We won by almost two to one, and in the October election we lost by almost two to one," he said.

Baressi attributed Saturday's victory to splitting the bond into two propositions to give the voters a choice, relocating the junior high school to a position which had not generated controversy and appointing an advisory committee which added credibility to the school district's research.

"I want to promise taxpayers that we will do the utmost to see that every dollar spent will be used for the best results possible as far as getting their money's worth and improving academics."

"The people of Midland have always supported education," Marks said, "and I am hopeful that they won't have to deal with another bond election for quite awhile."

By passing both propositions, Midlanders granted an increase of four cents in the debt-service portion of the tax rate. The increase will translate into an additional $1716 on the annual tax bill for a $53,210 homestead. Taxpayers over age 65 will see no increase.

Proposition 1 authorizes issuing $13,375,000 in bonds to fund the construction of Barney Greathouse Elementary School, a new Alternative Program Center and upgrading of 11 elementaries, science lab facilities at both high schools and Lee Freshman High.

Proposition 2 authorizes bonds totaling $10,840,000 to construct and furnish a new junior high in far northwest Midland, west of Loop 250 south of Wadley Avenue.

Fort Worth residents elect their first woman mayor

Associated Press

San Antonio Mayor Lila Cockrell and El Paso Mayor Suzie Azar were defeated at the polls Saturday, while Fort Worth elected its first female mayor.

San Antonio council members Maria Berriozabal and Nelson Wolff will meet May 25 in a runoff to replace Mrs. Cockrell, who has been mayor since 1989.

If elected, Ms. Berriozabal would be the first Hispanic woman to be mayor of a major U.S. city. She received endorsements and campaign contributions from supporters across the country and has the backing of Gov. Ann Richards.

With all 252 precincts reporting, Ms. Berriozabal led with 40,319 votes, or 31 percent, followed by Wolff with 34,075 votes, or 26 percent. Mrs. Cockrell was third in the 11-candidate field with 26,939 votes, or 21 percent.

In Fort Worth, Councilwoman Kay Granger defeated Ben B. Boothe and George McCurley, capturing 13,123 votes, or 61.7 percent, in unofficial final returns. Boothe received 7,139 votes, or 33.5 percent, while McCurley garnered 921 votes or 4.3 percent.

In El Paso, Ms. Azar lagged behind challenger Bill Tilney in early balloting. With all 97 precincts counted, Tilney, a career diplomat, had 27,870 votes to 15,041 votes for Ms. Azar.

Bruce Todd, a county commissioner, and city councilman Robert Barnstone, appeared headed for a runoff in the Austin mayoral race, which featured ex-mobster John Johnson. The winner will succeed Lee Cooke, who is not seeking another term.

With 63 of 141 precincts reporting, Todd held a 47.5 percent to 42 percent edge over Barnstone, or 8,815 votes to 7,792.

The remaining five candidates shared about 10.5 percent of the tally.

Amarillo Mayor Keith Adams defeated two challengers, unemployed handyman R. Michael Hopkins and car salesman Bobby Cash. With all 22 precincts reporting, Adams had 7,521 votes to 652 for Cash and 306 for Hopkins.

Dallas had been scheduled to hold council and mayoral elections under a redistricting plan ordered by a federal judge. But an appeals court put the balloting on hold until the Justice Department could consider the case.

One of the candidates who had hoped to run for Dallas mayor, Bartlett, gave up his 3rd District congressional seat representing affluent North Dallas suburbs.

Swollen ballots slow returns

AUSTIN (AP) — Three hours after the polls closed Saturday, city officials were frantically repunching thousands of computer card ballots, because the original ballots had swollen due to the humidity and jammed vote-counting machines.

City workers were having to repunch about 40 percent of the ballots, officials said.

"They're swollen a little bit because of the humidity and they are getting jammed," city spokeswoman Becky Gadell said.

Austin was hit by heavy thunderstorms from about 5:30 p.m. until after the polls closed at 7 p.m.

By 10 p.m., officials had counted 24 of 141 precincts.

CARE: Picture not expected to improve draining 10 percent of the federal budget — and placing additional strains on state and local programs that are slowly shifting the weight to taxpayers.

Topping the list by far is nursing-home care, which in 1988 cost the nation $43.1 billion, according to the U.S. Health Care Financing Administration.

Government estimates claim costs for home care now range from $25,000 to $30,000 a year. Experts predict that cost could rise to $55,000 by 2018.

Topping the list of major programs supporting nursing-home care is Medicaid, the federally and state-funded program, which directs a third — and growing share — of its budget into proprietary, for-profit settings outside direct government control.

In Texas, Medicaid spending is expected to increase from $3 billion this fiscal year to $5 billion by September 1993. Of that amount, $2 billion will go toward nursing-home care.

At least that's the prediction of state Medicaid Director Dr. Donald Kelly.

"Overall, the strategy of the federal government has been to push (costs) down to the state level, and in some states, down to the county or local level," he said.

In fact, according to the Department of Human Services, cost for nursing-home care in Texas ran $665 million in 1990 compared with $563 million the previous year.

And that picture is not expected to get any better based on current demographics, particularly as the baby-boomer generation joins the ranks of those 65 years of age and older.

It also doesn't take into account modern medicine that has successfully kept alive the so-called very-old, 80-plus generation, which is now 24 times larger then the same age group living in 1900.

Still, most Americans and their loved ones will do whatever, whenever, to prolong their independence, particularly when it comes to going into nursing homes.

Despite changing laws, better enforcement and an ever-growing professional competence, nursing homes remain mired in past practices that have suggested widespread abuse and neglect of the elderly.

Critics at-large say part of the problem is within the industry itself, which has done little to educate the public. Nor has it assisted in weeding out those homes that continue to give many others a bad name.

In turn, some of that blame is thrown back on the media, which home professionals say has concentrated efforts on the negative, rather than the positive.

"Of course, any type of institutional or congregate-care situation carries a stigma. Workers and residents really want to be part of the community, but most (communities) work to shut them out . . . to make them feel different," said Dr. Guy E. Shuttleworth, an expert on institutional care at the University of Texas at Austin.

According to Shuttleworth, it is time to get rid of the dogs. "Drum them out. I have no sympathy for those who exploit human life to make a buck. I don't have a problem with a home making a profit, but when they lose their perspective (of what they're for), shut them down."

Betty Compton, a registered nurse and director of personal care for Midland Presbyterian Homes, which operates Trinity Towers and Manor Park, said she thinks the care today in nursing homes is better than what it was a few years ago.

"I've seen people who were not able to function with family care, who might go into a nursing situation and make a complete turnaround."

Ms. Compton said a lot of it has to do with individual homes. "But I'd say a majority of employees in long-term care truly do love the ones they care for."

Many interviewed for this series suggest another part of the problem is getting people, particularly aides, to do a job that most others would turn down.

It is a job that pays minimum wage. A job that requires someone with a great deal of love, patience and maturity — someone who can handle being subjected to, in some cases, bites, scratches or kicks while providing baths, feeding and diaper changes.

In Midland and other cities, the demands of the job bring with them a high burnout rate, causing staff shortages that in turn prompt longer hours, eventual complaints by relatives, and finally a visit by state authorities, usually the Department of Health.

Good homes operate on an even keel, year-in and year-out.

But many, particularly those depending on Medicaid to pay the bills, perform a daily balancing act — to keep costs down, offering little if any rewards to those who carry the brunt of the load, while attempting to provide quality care.

IN THIS SERIES

Today 5 — For millions of Americans no longer able to care for themselves, the future will include a nursing home stay, but that is not the dreary life sentence it once was. Nursing homes are an industry in evolution and revolution.

Monday 6 — Selecting the proper care setting for an elderly loved one is as individual a decision as the family facing it. But guidelines and the lessons of those who have gone before can prove helpful for those grappling with the serious questions that lie ahead.

Tuesday 7 — Life-care communities integrating independent living with more supervised settings and long-term skilled nursing are one care choice for the '90s. Home health agencies and day care centers are other emerging options to full-time live-in facilities.

Wednesday 8 — For growing numbers of elderly and their families, private payment is no longer an option in seeking care. That means a trip through the federal government's Club Med -- Medicaid and Medicare -- that is no easy exercise.

Thursday 9 — As the Baby Boom generation marches relentlessly toward the geriatric wards of the 21st century, health care-delivery and financing systems are in peril. All approaches to long-term care will likely be stretched to their limits.

LBJ's 'New Society' led to nursing home system

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

If current estimates even approach the magnitude of the problem, the nation's nursing-home industry is in for a jolt during the next 40 years.

That's because experts expect nursing-home populations to quadruple, from 1.3 million to 4.4 million residents — with four out of every 10 older Americans spending some time in a home by 2000.

For centuries, the only care choices for the elderly were relatives, other types of institutions and eventually the poor house, where they would accept whatever help they could get.

"The problem was, those homes weren't regulated and as a result, people would completely give up their independence," said Bob Stokes, the state's ombudsman for the Permian Basin Area Agency on the Aging.

At the turn of the century, Americans, for the most part, paid 90 percent of their medical expenses out-of-pocket, with the federal government and states playing little or no role.

And, even though a few health insurance plans existed at the time, meeting such costs was not nearly as difficult as they are today.

In the 1920s, and again in the 1930s, some members of Congress argued for a national health insurance plan whereby health care — even long-term care — would be granted to all. But nothing came of it.

During the Great Depression of the 1930s, an increasing amount of Americans were unable to pay their medical bills, resulting in the formation of health insurance plans.

The first of these plans were sponsored by hospitals to provide them with a more predictable cash flow. Later, Blue Cross, Blue Shield and other commercial insurance programs evolved and dominated until World War II.

During the war, Congress adopted measures that prohibited employers from increasing wages, but encouraged employer-employee bargaining over non-cash benefits.

It was from such bargaining that health insurance suddenly became one of the most attractive non-cash benefits.

The idea of employee health insurance gained quick acceptance among both union and non-union workers. It has been that way ever since.

Meanwhile, a substantial number of people were still without access to care. They included the unemployed, self-employed, the poor and the elderly.

In 1965, President Lyndon Johnson's "Great Society" movement lifted the responsibility from state and local governments to the federal level with the eventual enactment of Medicare and Medicaid.

Medicaid became the nation's major program of financial support for long-term care. It also gave birth to the nursing-home industry.

"When nursing homes began, people entered this field from other professions to make money. Most of them had no social service background, or for that matter, familiarity with geriatrics — but that's changing," said Dr. Guy E. Shuttleworth, an expert in institutional care at the University of Texas at Austin.

Today, nursing homes represent the third-most regulated industry in the U.S. — behind only handling of hazardous waste and nuclear power generation.

Medicare, the federal health insurance program for the elderly and disabled, was designed for short-term, acute health care and was never intended to provide long-term protection.

Medicare briefly offered catastrophic insurance for a period of a few months, but was repealed by lawmakers in October 1989, following a backlash by lobbyists and other special interest groups.

Together, Medicaid and Medicare marked the first major government intervention in the funding of health services.

Johnson's "Great Society" had signaled a transition from a solely private market to one where both public and private payers influenced health-care costs.

In 1967, Congress offered the first set of regulations providing uniform levels for all types of care. Six years later, other laws were passed governing construction standards for nursing homes, even though many dangerous homes were grandfathered into the law.

During the next 10 years, Congress wrestled with a variety of issues related to the quality of nursing-home care, focusing eventually on comprehensive reforms aimed at further regulating the industry.

That interest became even more acute following a 1984 report by the U.S. Health Care Finance Administration, which suggested easing a number of nursing home requirements, including licensing requirements.

That controversy ignited a new contracted study developed by the Institute of Medicine (IOM) of the National Academy of Sciences, which was completed in 1986.

What IOM found suggested that many homes were providing unsatisfactory care for their patients. It recommended a greater federal role.

IOM's suggestions, combined with others involving national organizations representing nursing-home residents, the nursing-home industry and professionals working in those homes, resulted in new provisions under the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987.

OBRA 87 served as a springboard for today's even more regulated industry, establishing requirements dealing with patient rights, care plans and other provisions revising survey and certification processes as well as penalties and sanctions.

Major sections of the new law went into effect on Oct. 1, 1990, with others expected to be implemented over the next year.

"OBRA was probably one of the most positive things to happen to nursing homes. Now, everything is focused on outcome, as more emphasis is placed on patient care," said John Willis, the state's ombudsman in Austin with the Texas Department of Aging.

Today, nursing homes represent the third-most regulated industry in the U.S. — behind only handling of hazardous waste and nuclear power generation.

Officials seek funds for national sex habits survey

By Faith Keenan
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Federal health officials are seeking $3 million from Congress so they can conduct a pilot study that asks Americans intimate details about their sex lives.

Critics have charged that the project would turn Uncle Sam into a peeping Tom.

The controversy, which has been brewing quietly for two years, is expected to surface in late spring or early summer before a House committee responsible for health spending.

Backers say the aim of the proposed Survey for Health and AIDS Risk Prevalence, or SHARP, is to pinpoint groups whose sexual habits make them high-risk candidates for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, hepatitis-B, gonorrhea, syphilis and other sexually transmitted diseases. The data would help the government target prevention efforts, the supporters say.

Congress and the Bush administration have been uneasy about the sex probe even though it pertains to public health. Supporters in and outside the government predict the funding request will be easily defeated.

In 1989, the House Appropriations Committee nixed a similar request for $11 million to conduct a pre-test and a full survey. The purpose of the pre-test is to refine survey techniques to ensure validity during the full survey.

In its 1990 health funding measure, the committee explicitly barred the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) from starting the study, even though the agency did not seek funds for it.

This year, Rep. William Natcher, D-Ky., chairman of the House Appropriations health subcommittee and a pivotal figure in health spending, has warned officials of the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, which would oversee the project for HHS:

"We consider this potentially a very controversial study which would not be started without congressional approval."

Dr. Duane Alexander, director of the institute, acknowledged that the study is controversial. But he told Natcher: "We also believe it is important . . . and that it can be done with high acceptability from the American public."

Strong opposition has focused on the nature of the questions, and queries on masturbation and childhood sex play have been dropped.

Dr. Joseph Warshaw, chairman of pediatrics at Yale University's School of Medicine who reviewed the survey questions, said opponents fear the government would be "creating a sense that you sanction something by talking about it."

In the pre-test, 2,300 adults, aged 18 through 54, would be selected randomly throughout the country. Individuals could opt not to participate and would be replaced by those who consent. Respondents' confidentiality would be guaranteed.

If the pre-test succeeded, the full survey would include interviews with 20,000 additional individuals nationwide at a cost of $15 million to $20 million.

The proposed survey is more than 50 pages long. Nearly half of the questions focus on an individual's sexual habits over a five-year period. Queries include how many times in the last two weeks a person has had sexual intercourse, what types of sex were engaged in, how many sexual partners a person has had over the five-year period, whether the partners used birth control methods and what kinds, how many times a person experienced orgasm during sex, how the partners met, whether they took drugs during sex.

Other parts of the survey ask about a person's background, living arrangements, adolescent sexual experiences, attitudes about sex, and whether he or she has had a sexually transmitted disease.

Conservative Rep. William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., has called the survey an "intrusive, Orwellian study."

"Only persons who have a desire to share the graphic details of their sexual intimacies, whether real or imagined, will respond," he contended. "Such a limited universe cannot legitimately represent the behaviors of our entire population."

Dannemeyer contends that "the AIDS industry, the homosexual movement and the sex industry would be the primary beneficiaries of the sex study."

He also charges that its results would be used to "liberalize opinions and laws regarding homosexuality, pedophilia (sex with children), anal and oral sex, sex education and teenage pregnancies."

The project's backers, which include the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy, the National Academy of Sciences, and the National Commission on AIDS, say existing data are old and that new information is critical to stem the spread of sexually transmitted diseases.

■ Man phones S.O.S.

PORTLAND, Maine — When fisherman James Clemons' boat started sinking he grabbed his cellular telephone, jumped into a raft and dialed for help.

After abandoning his 45-foot trawler, Net Income, Clemons used the portable phone to call his wife and ask her to look up the number for the U.S. Coast Guard station.

"He said 'I'm on a life raft and the boat is sinking,'" Ann Clemons said. "It was a little bit odd."

Clemons then dialed the Coast Guard, said his boat sank and that he was in a raft with his crewman, Lyman Kennedy. He also asked if they'd send someone to pick them up, 17 miles out to sea.

"We were pretty surprised," said Petty Officer Robert Van Gorden, who took the call Friday morning.

Van Gorden said he issued an urgent marine information broadcast, dispatched two aircraft from the Cape Cod Air Station and a 44-foot vessel. But two fishing vessels arrived first to rescue the two fishermen.

■ Blast probe planned

STERLINGTON, La. — A federal investigation into a fertilizer plant explosion that killed eight people and chased residents from their homes will take three to four months, officials said.

The U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration is trying to determine whether Angus Chemical Co. violated safety standards in Wednesday's blast.

Gov. Buddy Roemer and Rep. Jerry Huckaby of Louisiana toured this small northeast Louisiana town Friday.

Eight people were killed and 123 injured when the plant blew up, releasing toxic gas and sending out shock waves that damaged homes, schools and businesses.

Company officials estimated damage to the plant at $50 million.

Assistant Labor Secretary Gerard Scannel, who met Friday with company and union officials, said the force of the blast was devastating.

■ Report details bombs

WASHINGTON — The Air Force developed and deployed two giant bombs in just 17 days in an effort to destroy hardened Iraqi command bunkers where Saddam Hussein might have been, a defense industry publication said.

The 4,700-pound laser-guided bombs, designated the GBU-28, were dropped by two F-111F fighters on a military bunker complex just north of Baghdad in the last week of February, Aviation Week and Space Technology said in its May 6 edition.

One hit the wrong bunker but the other was on target, creating a huge explosion and reportedly killing a number of senior Iraqi military staff officers, the publication quoted Air Force officials as saying.

An Air Force spokeswoman, Capt. Sylvia Freeman, confirmed the development of the GBU-28, but could not provide details of the program.

■ Endeavour door open

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — NASA's brand-new space shuttle, Endeavour, traveled partway across the country atop a modified jet with one of its doors open, but nothing was damaged, NASA said Saturday.

The $2 billion spaceship, strapped to the top of a Boeing 747, left Rockwell International's shuttle assembly plant in Palmdale, Calif., on Friday morning.

Officials discovered the open door on Endeavour after the jet landed at Biggs Army Air Field near El Paso, Texas, later Friday.

The small door, located on the side of the shuttle, covers a handle that controls two windows above the crew's cabin. Ground crews would push the handle to open the windows for astronauts to crawl through in the event of an emergency.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokeswoman Barbara Schwartz said it was not known whether the door was simply never latched or whether it popped open in flight.

Endeavour remained at Biggs on Saturday because of bad weather in central Texas. Weather permitting, it was to continue on to Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio on Sunday and then to its new home at Kennedy Space Center.

■ Philanthropist dies

NEW YORK — George T. Delacorte, the founder of Dell Publishing Company and a philanthropist whose gifts became Central Park landmarks, died early Saturday at his Fifth Avenue apartment. He was 97.

Delacorte grew up in New York and raised a family of six children, developing a special attachment to Central Park.

■ Judge Spellman dies

MIAMI — U.S. District Judge Eugene P. Spellman, an 11-year veteran of the bench who was known for innovative sentences and supporting social causes, died Saturday at age 60.

Spellman, who had cancer, was absent from the bench only a week before his death.

Spellman is survived by his wife, Robin, and sons Michael and James.

STATE IN BRIEF

■ Doctor faces charges

HUNTSVILLE — An Idaho psychiatrist appealing the revocation of his license because of allegations that he had sex with three women patients has been hired by the Texas prison system.

The psychiatrist, Dr. Jospeh Leggett, started work May 1, assigned to the Diagnostic and Goree units prison officials confirmed Friday. He is a former medical director at Hospitals in Casper, Wyo., and Coeur D'Alene, Idaho.

Both facilities where he now works house only men.

■ Rape case debated

DALLAS — A campus judicial board's determination that a student at Southern Methodist University raped an acquaintance has sparked a debate about whether campus judicial systems are equipped to try serious crimes.

A sophomore was found guilty of rape last week by the school's judicial board, according to the campus newspaper, The Daily Campus. The board is composed of students, faculty and one administrator.

The sophomore was accused of raping a female student after a drunken fraternity house bash last fall. The judicial board has recommended expulsion, but the accused student is appealing the decision.

■ Shot kills suspect

AMARILLO — A 30-year-old man was fatally shot by an Amarillo police officer who was trying to keep the man from assaulting a woman at a downtown nightclub early Saturday.

The officer arrived at the nightclub shortly after 1 a.m. and became involved in a struggle with Foubert Lawrence Harris, Amarillo Police Lt. Gene Clouette said.

During the struggle, the officer, whose name was not released, fired three shots at Harris.

Harris was pronounced dead upon arrival at Northwest Texas Hospital, Clouette said.

Witnesses disputed the police report, saying that Harris did not fight with the officer and that the shooting was racially motivated. Harris was black. The officer is white.

A crowd gathered following the shooting and pelted police with rocks and bottles, KVII-TV reported.

The officer has been placed on administrative leave with pay, pending an investigation.

AP Laserphoto

Laleh, a dark-haired 20-year-old Kurd, sits beside a local rebel commander at a frontline position near Rowanduz, Northern Iraq, last month. Laleh joined the Kurdish guerrillas after Iraqi troops massacred her entire family. Now she lives for revenge.

ROWANDUZ, Iraq (AP) — Laleh, a dark-haired 20-year-old, joined the Kurdish guerrillas after Iraqi troops massacred her entire family. Hama Ali, a well-known Kurdish stage actor, joined the rebels a few months ago "because I believe in freedom."

These are the pesh merga — the name means "those who face death" — the fighters struggling for an autonomous homeland in northern Iraq.

Laleh, barely taller than the AK-47 assault rifle she carries, is dwarfed by the mustachioed guerrillas in their distinctive baggy trousers and colored turbans.

"She's fought in three battles and proved she's as tough as any of the men," said Kawa Shawkar, a guerrilla comander.

"The soldiers rounded up all my family, shot the men and raped the women, because one of my brothers was a guerrilla," Laleh said. She escaped because she was not at home.

"I joined the pesh merga to avenge my family. What else could I do?" she said.

Most of the fighters have similar stories to tell.

Hama Ali, who gave up a flourishing acting career to take to the hills, said he finally believed that he had to take a stand for his people.

WORLD IN BRIEF

■ Mother Teresa helps

DHAKA, Bangladesh — Nobel laureate Mother Teresa arrived Saturday with sacks of milk powder and biscuits for victims of the deadly storm that ravaged Bangladesh.

"I have come here to give my love and care to the suffering people. It's good to share the suffering with them," said the 80-year-old Roman Catholic nun.

On Sunday, she is scheduled to visit areas damaged by the cyclone, possibly with Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif, a Foreign Ministry official said.

Mother Teresa arrived from Calcutta, just across the border in India, where she runs a worldwide organization of more than 400 homes for the orphaned, poor, sick or dying. She won the Nobel Peace prize in 1979.

She set up a branch of her Missionaries of Charity in Bangladesh in 1972 and last visited in 1988 after a flood that killed 1,400 people. More than 125,000 people were killed by last week's storm.

■ Blast issues toxic gas

MEXICO CITY — A series of explosions at a chemical plant in Veracruz state released a toxic cloud that sickened at least 500 people and contaminated the local water supply, Red Cross officials said on Saturday.

Another 1,600 people had to evacuate their homes in the densely populated area around the plant in Cordoba, 60 miles from the gulf coast port city of Veracruz, said Victor Hugo Lopez, head of the local Red Cross.

They spent an entire day in makeshift shelters before most of them were allowed to return early Saturday afternoon.

"A total of 1,591 people were evacuated. By now most of them were allowed to go back home," Red Cross dispatcher Rafael Brenis said in a telephone interview late in the day. "Only about 200 remain in two shelters, and they'll be permitted back pretty soon."

Brenis said army troops were brought out to help evacuate residents on the south side of Cordoba, a city with a population of about 300,000, when a fire broke out at the plant at 1:10 p.m. Friday.

■ Cardinal reinterred

ESZTERGOM, Hungary — Tens of thousands of Hungarians paid homage Saturday to the late Roman Catholic Cardinal Jozsef Mindszenty, an opponent of communism who was buried in his homeland 16 years after dying in exile.

The faithful, standing in drenching rain, filled the giant square in front of the cathedral of Esztergom, where Mindszenty was dragged off by Communist police 43 years before and never allowed to return.

He had only served as cardinal for three years when he was sentenced to life in prison on Feb. 8, 1949, after a show trial. He spent the rest of his life in prison or exile.

■ Object passes airliner

LONDON — The Civil Aviation Authority said Saturday it is investigating a report that a missile hurtled past an Alitalia airliner as it flew over southern England with 57 passengers.

Although the plane was flying over a military firing range when the incident occurred on April 21, the Ministry of Defense said the anti-tank missiles used there could not have achieved the 22,000-foot altitude reported.

Alitalia Capt. Achille Zaghetti reported seeing an object that he described as a missile, 3 yards long, cylindrical and light brown, traveling toward him about 1,000 feet above the aircraft.

The airliner was being tracked by the London Air Traffic Control Center at West Drayton, which picked up the object on radar after it had passed the jet.

■ Kurd, leaders to talk

TEHRAN, Iran — Iraq's Kurds will demand international guarantees for an autonomous homeland in northenr Iraq when they resume talks on the issue Monday with Iraqi leaders in Baghdad.

The Kurds are at odds with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein over the need for international guarantees, and there also are reports of differences over how to split oil revenues.

Kurdish officials announced on April 24 that Saddam had agreed in principle to grant expanded autonomy to the 3.5 million Iraqi Kurds.

■ Conversion rejected

LONDON — Two Muslim leaders who witnessed Salman Rushdie's conversion to Islam now say the religious change cannot be accepted because the author has not withdrawn "The Satanic Verses," a newspaper reported Saturday.

The two leaders of London's Central Mosque, accompanied by dozens of British Muslim scholars, reversed their decision following violent protests from some hardline worshipers, The Independent reported.

The protests have prevented Sheik Gamal Manna Solaiman and Sheik Hamed Khalifa from leading traditional Friday prayers since Rushdie's conversion in December.

Hesham El-Essawy, chairman of the Islamic Society for the Promotion of Religious Tolerance, who also witnessed Rushdie's conversion, said the two leaders had agreed to change their position under "tremendous pressure from a fanatical minority."

El-Essawy spoke to Rushdie on Thursday and said the author's response to the news had been: "It's God who knows whether I'm a Muslim or not," The Independent said.

Rushdie has been in hiding since Feb. 14, 1989, when the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini senteneed him to death for alleged blasphemy of Islam in his novel "The Satanic Verses."

Riley, Knicks talk

NEW YORK (AP) — Pat Riley, the winningest coach in NBA playoff history, acknowledged Saturday that he was contacted by the New York Knicks concerning their head coaching vacancy.

Riley

Riley, an NBA analyst for NBC, said during halftime of the Seattle-Portland playoff game that he talked to Knicks president Dave Checketts.

Bob Costas, appearing with Riley on the halftime show, asked Riley, "You've told them you're willing to think about thinking about it?"

"Yes," Riley said.

Bo gets burned

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Kansas City Royals started the season by unloading Bo Jackson, so sponsors of a Royals baseball card series decided to unload their Bo cards as well.

Jackson

About 350,000 of the cards were destroyed Friday in an Armco Steel plant furnace.

And baseball memorabilia collectors disagreed over the value of the cards that survived the mass burning.

The cards are part of a series featuring Kansas City Royals players and coaches. The cards are handed out by police and sheriff's deputies who point out a safety tip on the back. Bo's advice was to "say no to drugs."

Strike the Gold all rosy

AP Laserphoto

Jockey Chris Antley atop Kentucky Derby-winning mount Strike the Gold.

Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Strike the Gold won the Kentucky Derby Saturday, thanks to the winning instinct of trainer Nick Zito and the winning move of jockey Chris Antley.

First, Zito convinced owner B. Giles Brophy to break away from Calumet Farm and buy the colt when it appeared the son of Alydar would go elsewhere.

"I don't want to lose this horse," Zito told Brophy last year. Brophy and two partners took the hint, and Zito had his wish.

That gave Antley the chance to break wide of the field and find the way to his biggest victory on a horse the numbers said should be a sprinter, not a champion in the biggest event in racing.

Sensing a victory-denying traffic jam ahead of him at the top of the stretch, Antley found a hole and took Strike the Gold six horses wide. It was the path to a 1¾-

MHS, Lee prep for playoffs

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

It is nothing new for high school baseball fans in Midland to have a team to follow as the state Class 5A playoffs begin.

Both Midland High and Midland Lee have seen postseason action in the previous five years. But never have the two advanced out of district play in the same season — until 1991.

As District 4-5A champion Lee and league runner-up MHS prepare for Friday's bi-district openers, it marks the first time two teams from the same 4-5A city have entered the postseason in the same season.

■ Final district statistics/3B

But that fact begs the question "can these cross-town rivals be happy the other team has been so successful?"

A few answers:

"I think it's kind of neat. I don't remember any other sport since I've been here where it happened. Of course, I wish we'd finished the other way around, but we've been playing together all our lives and now we all get to go to the playoffs," said senior MHS first baseman Tyler Beard.

"I'm really happy for them. Most of those guys we played with in Little League. I think it proves there are good baseball players in Midland. When we were playing in the fall leagues, some of the people from other towns were really getting on us and saying we were no good," said Lee's Shane Greeley, a senior shortstop for the eight-ranked Rebels.

"At the beginning of the season everyone knew Lee was going to be a strong team. I think it's nice both of us got in because I have some friends over there.

Sledge, McGee lead MCC

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

For people in positions of command it's often lonely at the top. But Dennis Sledge and Mac McGee will have plenty of company close at hand when they put their one-stroke lead on the line in the final round of the 20th annual Midland Country Club Invitational Partnership today.

Sledge, the tournament director, and McGee put together a two-under-par 70 Saturday in the two-man, low-ball event and took command of the championship flight with a two-day total 139. But nine teams remain in the championship chase, and only five strokes separate the pack, from top to bottom.

"This field is always strong," Sledge said. "Last year (Kelly) Cox and (Allen) Waddell came from about six strokes back to win it, and someone could do something like that again this year."

In fact Cox and Waddell could do it again. The two-time defending champions combined for back-to-back 71's and a 142 tally that leaves them just three shots behind the leaders.

And there are five teams bunched in between those past winners and the current leaders.

Steve Earsley and Charlie Snuggs used a pair of 70's to take a share of second place along with Michael Michalka and Lynn Conine, whose peak-and-valley 68 Saturday gave them a 140 total as well as a tie for the best round of the tourney.

"We made a couple of long putts, then missed a couple of short ones," Michalka said after a six-birdie, three-bogey round. "We had a chance to have a really good round, but we bogeyed a couple of holes into the wind.

"It was a real roller-coaster round," he said.

"It's been an up-and-down two days," Conine agreed. "Three times today we missed three-foot putts, then made long ones to make up for them.

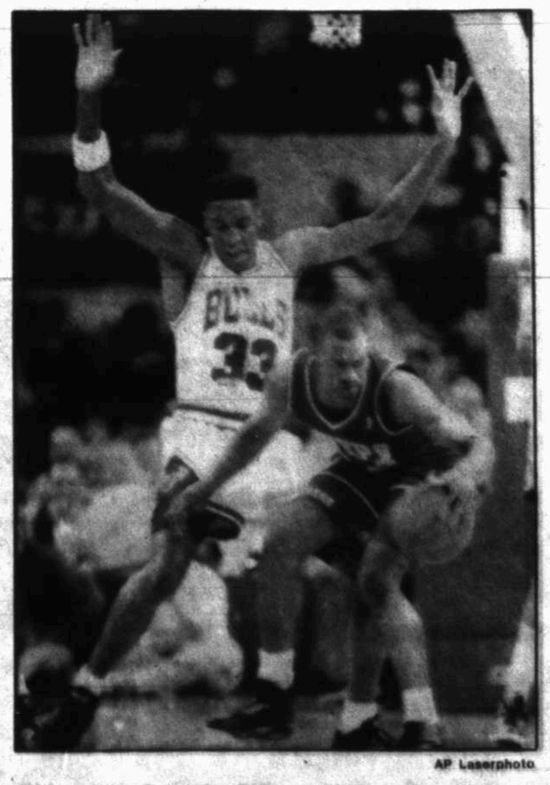
Bulls win, Blazers advance



AP Laserphoto

Chicago's Scottie Pippen, left, scored 24 in the Bulls' second round playoff win over Philadelphia Saturday.

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Great defense turned into potent offense for the Chicago Bulls in a romp over the Philadelphia 76ers.

With a relentless, hands-in-your-face defense and an offense led by Michael Jordan and Scottie Pippen, the Bulls beat the 76ers 105-92 Saturday in a game that wasn't that close.

Except for a 34-point effort by Charles Barkley, the Bulls were in command of the opening game of their best-of-7 second-round playoff series that continues in Chicago Stadium Monday night.

The Bulls opened a 20-point lead in the first quarter, let it slip to 10 late in the first half, then quickly went up by 23 in the third quarter to put it beyond reach.

"I thought we were in control after the first quarter," said Jordan, who led the Bulls with 29 points. "There were spurts and Barkley made some good plays, but it never affected our tempo or momentum. People don't respect our defense because we are known as a one-man team, but we trapped them and we made them take tough shots."

Pippen, who had 24 points, discounted the fact the 76ers had defeated the Bulls three times in four regular season games.

"The playoffs are a different level, the regular season doesn't mean that much," said Pippen, who first guarded Barkley, then guarded Ron Anderson, who has hurt the Bulls in the past but was held to 8 points.

"Our offense was sparked by our defense in the first quarter," coach Phil Jackson said. "It's a credit to Michael, Scottie and Horace Grant. Bill Cartwright got us going from the post and their defense had to sag and gave us other opportunities.

"The key was the good job we did defensively on (Hersey) Hawkins and Anderson."

Hawkins, with 10 points, was the only other 76ers starter in double figures. Andre Turner scored 11 and Manute Bol 10, but they came in the final quarter when thme reserves were on the floor.

"The Bulls defense was very active from the start," 76ers coach Jim Lynam said. "You have to give them a lot of credit. They played an outstanding collective defense. We weren't able to adjust to their aggressive defense. Everybody was off except Barkley."

Witt fans 13 Tigers as Rangers down Detroit, 6-5

Associated Press

DETROIT — Julio Franco hit a tie-breaking home run off Jerry Don Gleaton in the ninth inning as the Texas Rangers beat the Detroit Tigers, 6-5.

Bobby Witt struck out 13, one short of his career high, before tiring in the eighth inning. Witt, who walked six and gave up five hits, left with a 5-3 lead, the bases loaded and two outs. Pinch-hitter Dave Bergman tied the game with a two-run single off Rich Gossage (3-0).

Franco then homered with two outs in the ninth off Gleaton (1-1), Franco's third hit of the game. Gossage finished with a hitless ninth.

Texas took a 2-0 lead in the second on consecutive RBI singles by Jeff Huson and Jack Daugherty. Juan Gonzalez, who had three hits, hit a two-run homer in the third for a 4-0 lead.

Detroit got a run in the bottom of the inning on Milt Cuyler's triple and Tony Phillips' RBI groundout and Trammell hit a run-scoring groundout in the fifth.

Mario Diaz hit a run-scoring single for Texas in the eighth for a 5-2 lead and Deer hit an RBI single in the eighth to start Detroit's three-run rally.

AL Roundup

Indians 20, Athletics 6

OAKLAND, Calif. — Chris James drove in nine runs with two homers and two singles, breaking Cleveland's club record for RBIs and leading the Indians to a rout over Oakland.

James hit three-run homers in the first and second innings, an RBI single in the fourth and a two-run single in the eighth. He grounded out in his other at-bat in the sixth, and left the game after the eighth.

James broke the team record of eight RBIs, done twice by Earl Averill in 1930 and matched by Pat Seery in 1945 and Bill Glynn in 1954. The major league record for RBIs is 12 by Jim Bottomley in 1924 and the American League record is 11 by Tony Lazzeri in 1936.

Twins 7, Brewers 4

MILWAUKEE — Mark Guthrie limited Milwaukee to three hits over six innings and Greg Gagne homered and doubled twice as the Minnesota Twins ended the Brewers' four-game winning streak.

Guthrie (1-2) entered Saturday's game with a 16.88 ERA. Steve Bedrosian gave up two-run homers in the ninth to Greg Vaughn and Rick Dempsey. Chris Bosio (3-3) was the loser.

Mariners 3, Yankees 2

SEATTLE — Pete O'Brien had three RBIs, including a two-run homer in the second inning, as the Seattle Mariners beat the New York Yankees 3-2 Saturday night in a game that almost erupted into a brawl in the first inning.

The game got off to a tense start in the first after Yankees starter Chuck Cary threw a pitch close to Ken Griffey Jr.'s chin. On the next pitch, Griffey swung and his bat sailed passed Cary's right foot almost to second base.

When Griffey walked out to retrieve his bat, he exchanged heated words with Cary and both benches and bullpens emptied. No punches were thrown and no players were ejected. The umpires warned both players after they pointed at each other when Griffey struck out to end the first.

O'Brien ended a string of 18 Seattle scoreless innings by homering off Cary (1-3) with one out in the second after Tracy Jones walked to lead off the inning. It was O'Brien's third homer of the season.

O'Brien gave the Mariners their third run with a single in the sixth after singles by Griffey and Jay Buhner.

Red Sox 4, White Sox 0

CHICAGO — Tom Bolton and three relievers combined on a five-hitter and the Boston Red Sox beat the Chicago White Sox for their fifth victory in six games.

Mike Greenwell hit a two-run double and Tony Pena homered off Melido Perez (1-1) in sending Chicago to its fourth consecutive loss.

Angels 6, Orioles 3

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Dave Winfield and Lance Parrish, both breaking out of long slumps, drove in two runs each as the California Angels chased Jeff Robinson in the first inning and beat the Baltimore Orioles.

Winfield's two-run double matched his RBI total his previous 42 at-bats and keyed a five-run first. Parrish singled to drive in another first-inning run and added his fourth home run of the season in the sixth.

Mark Langston (2-1) allowed five hits and three runs in seven innings.

Home runs work magic for Giants

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Mackey Sasser and Mark Carreon tied the game with consecutive pinch home runs in the ninth inning and Howard Johnson won it with a two-run homer in the 12th as the New York Mets beat San Francisco 6-4 Saturday, sending the Giants to their fifth straight loss.

It was the first time since 1986 that a team hit consecutive pinch homers, and the first time a National League team did it in 16 years.

Johnson homered with two outs into the Mets' bullpen in right field against Mike LaCoss (1-3). Dave Magadan walked with one out and Rick Cerone grounded into a force play before Johnson hit his fifth home run of the season and fourth career homer off LaCoss.

Rookie Pete Schourek (2-0) worked two innings for the victory.

John Burkett gave up two runs and seven hits in seven innings before being replaced by Jeff Brantley, the loser in the All-Star game last season.

Sasser led off the ninth with a homer to right field and Carreon followed with a homer to left to make it 4-4. It was Carreon's third pinch home run of the season and increased his all-time club record to eight.

John Fredrick hit six pinch homers for Brooklyn in 1932 for the most in one season. Carreon and Danny Heep share the Mets record with four.

The last time a team hit consecutive pinch homers was Oddibe McDowell and Darrell Porter of Texas on Sept. 1, 1986, against Boston. It last happened in the NL on July 23, 1975, when Lee Lacy and Willie Crawford did it for Los Angeles against St. Louis.

Padres 6, Expos 5

MONTREAL — Tony Gwynn drove in his third run with his third hit, a single in the 13th inning that led the San Diego Padres past Montreal and ended the Expos' four-game winning streak.

NL Roundup

Fred McGriff homered for the third straight game to put the Padres ahead in the 11th, but Ivan Calderon tied with a home run in the Expos' half.

In the 13th, Bip Roberts led off with a single against loser Jeff Fassero, making his major league debut. Tony Fernandez sacrificed and Gwynn followed with an RBI single.

Rich Rodriguez (1-0) pitched two innings for the victory.

Reds 3, Cardinals 1

CINCINNATI — Barry Larkin and Chris Sabo hit solo homers and Jack Armstrong extended his mastery of St. Louis with six strong innings as the Cincinnati Reds beat the Cardinals.

Armstrong (2-1) has won all three of his career starts against the Cardinals, allowing just two earned runs in 21 innings. The right-hander gave up four hits in six innings Saturday and struck out six.

Astros 8, Pirates 3

PITTSBURGH — Luis Gonzalez hit a two-run triple as the Houston Astros scored five runs in the second inning off previously unbeaten John Smiley and beat the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Mark McLemore, who came into the game with four hits in 44 at-bats this season, went 3-for-4 with an RBI and Jimmy Jones (3-1) allowed three runs and eight hits in five innings. Jim Clancy pitched four innings of hitless relief for his first save as the Astros ended a three-game losing streak.

Braves 4, Cubs 2

ATLANTA — David Justice broke a fifth-inning tie with a two-run double as the Atlanta Braves beat Rick Sutcliffe for the eighth time in nine decisions, defeating the Chicago Cubs 4-2 on a rainy Saturday night.

Sutcliffe (1-3) made the 300th start of his career as Chicago lost for the 10th time in 13 road games. It was Atlanta's third consecutive victory.

The game was delayed in starting for 2 hours, 7 minutes and there was another 35-minute delay in the sixth inning.

DERBY: Gold's rider forewarns Cordero

length victory over the gelding Best Pal before the usual roaring throng at Churchill Downs, including Desert Storm commander Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf.

"When we went outside, I thought I had it won at that point," Antley said. "Near the quarter pole, I knew I had it won. He was three or four lengths behind the field but I was grinning all the way."

Antley sensed Strike the Gold was the horse of the moment even before he hit the home stretch.

On the backstretch, he told Angel Cordero, who was riding Quintana: "I've got the horse today."

There was an omen of things to come earlier in the program when Brophy's Thirty-Six Red, also trained by Zito, won the Churchill Downs Handicap. Thirty-Six Red finished ninth in last year's Derby.

"How much greater than this does it get for one guy on one day," said Brophy, who besides racing horses sells Holstein cattle all over the world. "I think I have the best trainer, the best jockey and the best horse going."

Strike the Gold was the third choice in the odds and the victory in an unspectacular 2:03 over a fast track maintained several Derby jinxes.

Hansel, 5-2, was the 12th consecutive beaten favorite, finishing 10th.

Spectacular Bid was the last winning favorite in 1979 and he was also the last champion 2-year-old of the previous year to win the Derby. Fly So Free, second choice at 3-1, was the 1990 juvenile champion — but fifth on Saturday.

Best Pal was trying to become the first gelding to win the Derby since Clyde Van Dusen in 1929, and the first California-bred winner since Decidedly in 1962.

Mane Minister, a 60-1 shot, finished third, 1¾ lengths behind Best Pal and a head in front of Green Alligator, a member of the mutuel field. The last field horse to win the Derby was Canonero II in 1971.

Zito certainly had Strike the Gold finely tuned and Antley certainly knew what to do with the pulsing, pounding colt beneath him. Known as "Boyfriend" for his playful manner around the barns, Strike the Gold turned into a tiger in the stretch.

Strike the Gold, also owned by William J. Condren and Joseph M. Cornacchia, carried 126 pounds. His second straight stakes victory and only his third win in eight career starts was worth a mutuel payoff of $11.60, $6.20 and $5.40, and his share of the purse of $905,800 was $655,800.

Best Pal, ridden by Gary Stevens, paid $6.40 and $5.40. Mane Minister, ridden by Alex Solis, returned $25.60.

Strike the Gold broke cleanly in the middle of the pack. He was on the rail by the time the field of 16 3-year-olds passed the finish line for the first time and powered into the first turn.

Strike the Gold followed Best Pal down the backstretch, saving ground on the rail. On the turn, Antley found a hole that enabled him to shoot Strike the Gold outside for the stretch run and avoid the traffic, which on the first Saturday in May at Churchill Downs often resembles rush hour in Times Square.

A Manhattan cabbie couldn't have done it better.

Strike the Gold, 10th at the half-mile pole, was sixth with a quarter-mile to go and second, a half-length behind pace-setting Sea Cadet, with an eighth remaining.

Just inside the eighth pole, Strike the Gold shot to the lead past a staggering Sea Cadet, the colt with no tail, who struggled home eighth.

While Antley was giving expert guidance to Strike the Gold from his back, Zito was giving moral support to his colt.

The trainer stood in his box during the entire race shouting: "Show me the way. Show me the way."

As Strike the Gold moved wide through the stretch toward victory, Brophy and Zito stood in the stands and yelled, "Come on, Boyfriend," then thrust their hands in the air as the colt crossed the finish line first.

Strike the Gold's victory came on the heels of a slow workout last Sunday.

NBA: Portland finally buries fiesty Seattle

(From 1B)

Despite his fine effort, Barkley said, "This was bad execution basketball. It was embarrassing, but they played well in all areas. We played bad. We have to play better and be ready for Game 2."

Cartwright finished with 14 points, 12 in the first quarter, and Grant had 12, giving the Bulls four starters in double figures.

The Bulls took an 8-2 lead, then outscored the 76ers 11-4, with Pippen, Cartwright and Jordan leading the charge for a 19-6 lead. Pippen and Cartwright kept pouring it on as they helped Chicago build a 34-14 margin.

A three-point play by Barkley and a 3-point goal by Anderson cut it to 34-20 at the quarter.

Barkley hit two free throws to open the second quarter and 3-point goals by Barkley and Hawkins helped the 76ers pull within 40-29, but the Bulls scored six quick points, four by Jordan, making it 46-29.

The 76ers closed to 52-42 with 1:36 left in the second quarter, but Pippen scored three points and Jordan hit a pair of free throws with 5.9 seconds left. The Bulls then trapped Rickey Green, got the ball back and Jordan scored with one-tenth of a second left for a 59-42 halftime lead.

Pippen hit a 3-pointer to open the second half, extending what turned out to be a 17-4 run that began in the first half, as the Bulls took a 69-46 lead with 8:50 to go in the third period.

It was 83-63 after three quarters, with the reserves playing for both teams in the final period.

Trail Blazers 119, Sonics 107

PORTLAND, Ore. — The Portland Trail Blazers returned to their basic strengths, defense and rebounding, to beat Seattle and finally eliminate the SuperSonics from the playoffs.

Terry Porter had 23 points, Clyde Drexler added 22 and Porter had 11 assists as the Blazers won the best-of-5 series 3-2 to advance to a second-round matchup against Utah. Game 1 of that series will be Tuesday night at Portland.

The Sonics, trying to become the first No. 8 seed to win a playoff series, beat Portland twice in Seattle to force Saturday's deciding game. But the Sonics never challenged seriously after the second quarter on Portland's homecourt, where the Blazers have lost only five times this season.

Portland led by 22 in the second quarter and 20 at halftime.

Midland Angels still winless on road at 0-8

Staff Report

EL PASO — The road woes of the Midland Angels continued here Saturday night in an 8-1 Texas League loss to the El Paso Diablos.

Midland is now 0-8 in road games this year and now have lost four in a row and 13 of their last 15 games.

Meanwhile, El Paso owns a six-game winning streak as the Diablos have won 12 of 13 games at home this year.

El Paso got a sterling seven inning, three-hit performance from starting pitcher Jeff Schwarz (2-2). Schwarz struckout seven Angels and was touched for only one run, a seventh inning home run by Daryl Sconiers, his fourth of the year.

Dave Czajkowski pitched two innings of hitless relief to close out the game as the Angels went down quietly.

El Paso's John Jaha, the Texas League's leading hitter, raised his average 20 points to .474 with four hits. However, he didn't add to his home run lead (9) or his RBI lead (39).

Diablo leadoff hitter Dave Jacas scored three times and hit a solo home run. Shortstop Jim Tatum homered for the second time in three games off the Angels.

Jacas, Rueben Escalera and Shon Ashley all had two hits in the Diablos' 13-hit attack.

Other than Sconiers, the only Midland hits, both singles, came from Kevin Flora and Mark Howie.

Midland starting pitcher Todd James took the loss. It was his third consecutive outing that he failed to get a win after opening the season with victories in his first two games. James gave up 10 hits in his six innings of work.

El Paso is now 6-2 against the Angels this year and 3-0 on this current homestand. The two teams meet again tonight.

NELSON: Watson four shots out

(From 1B)

get in this position I usually perform well. I like the way I'm playing. But there's no way to go into the last round thinking I'm a deadlock cinch."

Bruce Lietzke, one of five tied for second, agreed.

"I don't see anybody breaking away," he said. "I expect there'll be three, four, five guys with a chance to win with three holes to go. And if you look at the history of this tournament, I think a playoff is a distinct possibility."

Second-round leader Nick Price encountered difficulties with short putts and could do no better than match par 70 on the TPC at Las Colinas.

Price, whose only victory in a nine-year career on the PGA Tour came in the 1983 World Series of Golf, three-putted twice, "and I suddenly had to pull in the reins," he said.

He dropped back into a five-way tie for second at 202 with Phil Blackmar, Mike Sullivan, two-time Byron Nelson winner Bruce Lietzke and Stan Utley.

Sullivan and Blackmar had 66s. Lietzke, using an elongated, 50-inch putter, shot 68, and Utley birdied the last hole for a 69.

Concern speeds relief to others

It has been a deadly week in terms of violent weather and since May has only begun and tornado and hurricane season is here more may be yet to come.

Tuesday's killer cyclone that struck Bangladesh followed by only three days the fury unleashed the previous Friday across six plains states in the United States by at least 70 tornadoes. Those two widely separated storms jolted us back to the realization that for all the convenience modern life holds, modern man is still largely at the mercy of the weather.

Authorities in Bangladesh said as many as 37,000 people were known dead and that the toll could climb as high as 100,000 from the deadly cyclone. Officials said thousands of lives were spared due to the evacuation of 20,000 people from low-lying areas a few hours before the storm struck.

In the earlier storms, at least 29 people died as tornadoes wreaked havoc in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Missouri, Nebraska and Iowa. Other storms also brought hail the size of golf balls and driving sheets of rain to the affected areas.

The one good note out of all the devastation is the way that relief efforts were gearing up to speed sorely needed supplies to the storm victims in the six states in the United States as well as those in Bangladesh. Through the efforts of the American Red Cross and organizations like it, vast amounts of assistance are made available to the victims of natural disasters. But the bottom line is that it is through the donations of caring, thoughtful individuals who support the work of the Red Cross that such relief efforts are possible.

Such giving is one of man's greatest attributes. Perhaps the tendency of man to help relieve the burdens of others is a way of recognizing our own frailties, our own susceptibility to the fury of nature. Through such generosity and compassion we reach our greatest potential as human beings.

Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn, the great Russian-born novelist, once wrote of that selfless spirit the following words:

"The salvation of mankind lies only in making everything the concern of all."

It is that concern and caring that sends relief speeding to the suffering people of Bangladesh and those in this country whose lives were affected by tornadoes, and yet will still bring more generosity when nature turns against man once again.

Rejecting Mexico would be disaster

The United States has seldom if ever enjoyed better relations with Mexico than it does now. Congress should be building on that with every opportunity. But Congress is instead being pushed toward what would be a disaster in U.S.-Mexico relations.

It cannot be emphasized too forcefully that if Congress takes it upon itself to explicitly label Mexico as an unworthy partner for a free-trade agreement, ... the Mexicans, with good reason, are going to consider this an insulting and gratuitous slap in the face — and react accordingly. It will take years to repair the damage. ...

Congress is being pressured to reject fast-track authority by a coalition of labor unions, protectionists and environmentalists. They are parading a scenario of horribles and demands for intrusion in Mexico's sovereign affairs which is quite simply insulting. ...

Mexico is a proud and sensitive country — very sensitive to its larger neighbor which too often treats it with benign neglect and malign insensitivity. If Congress rejects Mexico as a fit partner for free trade, with this record as the reason for rejection, the anti-Americanism it will provoke will poison relations for years.

Coastal development bill should be stopped

Despite Sen. Carlos Truan's filibuster efforts and the opposition of environmental groups, the Texas Senate has approved a coastal development bill that would allow the establishment of coastal conservation districts. The skids seem greased in the House for easier passage; if the bill can't be stopped there, then Gov. Ann Richards should make use of her veto power.

Although the bill applies statewide, its intent clearly is to allow the American General Corp. to form such a district, which would then be able to issue bonds and levy taxes to complete infrastructure projects for a $2.5 billion development the company plans on property it owns on South Padre Island.

The federal government will not make funds available for infrastructure projects on undeveloped barrier island locations, because of valid environmental concerns. The state of Texas should not be in the business of encouraging the use of tax dollars for such purposes either.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, May 5, the 125th day of 1991. There are 240 days left in the year.

On this date:

In 1494, during his second voyage to the New World, Christopher Columbus first sighted Jamaica.

In 1818, the political philosopher Karl Marx was born in Prussia.

In 1821, Napoleon Bonaparte died in exile on the island of St. Helena.

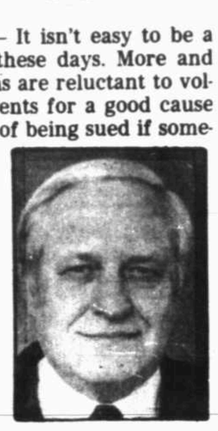
Lawsuits hamper our volunteer spirit

WASHINGTON — It isn't easy to be a point of light these days. More and more Americans are reluctant to volunteer their time or talents for a good cause because they are afraid of being sued if something goes wrong.



Anderson

The Wyoming Legislature had to pass a law to stop cowboys from suing volunteer rodeo clowns for failing to adequately distract the bulls.

In New Jersey, a children's baseball coach was sued by the family of an outfielder who was hit in the eye by a fly ball. Lawyers for the family argued that the boy was a natural shortstop and that the coach had been negligent in putting him in the outfield.

It matters not who wins these suits. Most of them never make it to a trial, except on "L.A. Law." They are settled out of court for undisclosed sums by jittery insurance companies that would rather pay for a settlement than pay for an expensive trial that they might lose anyway.

It doesn't even matter who is right, as long as the lawyers get their cut. And therein lies a big chunk of the problem. The Association of Trial Lawyers of America is one of the most generous political contributors in Washington and that almost guarantees that any legislation to curb the lawsuit-happy trend in America never makes it out of Congress.

One victim of the strong lawyer lobby is a bill to protect volunteers from being sued for their good deeds. One out of two Americans is a volunteer. At a time when the Bush administration is pushing for more Americans to give of their time and talents, lawsuits are putting volunteers at risk. One poll found that one out of every five business people is afraid to volunteer for fear of being sued.

Rep. John Porter, R-Ill., tried to help those nervous points of light with a bill he called the Volunteer Protection Act. It would have held organizations responsible for the actions of their volunteers, but the volunteers themselves couldn't have been sued. The bill has been bottled up in committee for five years and may never reach the floor because the Association of Trial Lawyers doesn't like it.

A similar measure proposed last year by Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., was defeated.

Time and time again, the trial bar crushes legislation it doesn't like with brilliant political maneuvers and handsome campaign contributions. The association, with a membership of 65,000 attorneys, most of whom represent plantiffs, has the ninth largest political action committee in Washington and hires two of the most powerful lobbying firms to champion its causes.

Since many trial lawyers make their money off of victims of various accidents, their goal is to parry anything that limits lawsuits. While their mission of protecting the rights of the injured is noble and necessary, there is a certain amount of pocketbook protecting going on too.

Gordon MacDougall, executive director of the National Coalition for Volunteer Protection, analyzed campaign contributions and voting patterns to figure out what happened to Sen. McConnell's measure to limit suits against volunteers. In the election cycle before the bill came up, the trial lawyers had given $582,000 to the 65 senators who voted against the McConnell amendment. The association gave less than $40,000 total to 32 senators who voted for the McConnell amendment.

The trial lawyers can afford to be generous to protect their interests and those of their clients.

We contacted the Association of Trial Lawyers to talk to them about their aggressive lobbying efforts, but they would not return our phone calls.

GEORGE WILL

Feisty friends, fulfilling work, a strong bullpen

WASHINGTON — In the Middle Ages a particular Pope was so deeply revered that once a year he paraded through Rome's streets wearing a ridiculous hat to discourage excessive veneration. In our children's eyes, we are always wearing such hats, but especially on our 50th birthdays, when we have long ceased to be young and are a long way from being venerable.

Will

When the mail arrived the other day, the Prodigy, a.k.a. Victoria Will, age 10, was amused, with malice. There, just as she had delightedly warned that it soon would be, was a copy of Modern Maturity magazine. That is the monthly publication of the American Association of Retired Persons, which sends it to you as your 50th birthday impends, whether you want the magazine or not. You don't, trust me.

It is full of pictures of gray-haired but sinewy seniors, brimming with energy and banging the kettle drum of their sincerity about the glories of the golden years. They are supposed to reassure you. They don't.

Looking forward from age 50 is no bowl of blueberries but looking back, and distilling lessons from things, is difficult to do without sounding like Polonius when he was loading down Laertes with bromides. However, from among the bric-a-brac of experience, I have plucked a few strategies for living.

For example, I have a telephone-answering machine. I never turn it on. Part of the fun of venturing out and about is to return home to that cold machine and think of all the calls I was able to miss. The world is too much with us anyway without allowing it to ambush us on tape.

Let us hope the world beyond America's borders will be less intrusive for a while. To have been born seven months before Pearl Harbor and to turn 50 two months after Desert Storm is to know the centrality of war in America's modern experience. The jubilation about our most recent war — the biggest parades will be in June; the celebrations are lasting five times longer than the war — suggests we have become a bit too fond of the narcotic of mass experiences.

I began my professional life as what my father was, a college professor, doing philosophy. It has subsequently been my fate, chosen but not planned, to live as a writer in this political city.

Washington often seems dizzied by the rush of little events. If we did not notice them the day they happened, we would never notice we had missed them, so swiftly do they sink beneath the surface of serious history. In Washington I have learned that it is symbolically correct that the Capitol is on the edge of the continent. In a good society, politics is a dignified profession with a vital jurisdiction, but in most lives it is and should be peripheral. Unhappy is the country in which people cannot talk about themselves or their relations with others without recourse to political categories.

We who came to social consciousness in the 1950s acquired, with every breath, the sense of America's vigor, the "glittering in the veins" and the "crush of strength" that Wallace Stevens sensed one night on the Connecticut Turnpike in 1954. It is truly said that ignorance of history makes us libel our own times. America has not done badly in the struggle to achieve that elusive balance of freedom and security that characterizes a society in which the strong may freely strive and the weak need not feel fear.

Boil my experience down and the residue that remains in the pan is this: To be paid for the privilege of writing about the American pageant is bliss. As Henry James lay dying, his hand made writing motions across the sheet that covered him. I hope that will be true of me, but not soon.

Pull the plug on the dying Democratic Party

It's obvious the United States is ready for what used to be called socialized medicine. The Democrats ought to be leading the agitation for it and the fact that they aren't is further evidence suggesting their party is brain dead.

Baker

If it weren't, Democrats would surely be beating the feathers and dust out of George Bush for doing nothing while the country's rickety private health-insurance system totters toward collapse.

Statistics illuminate the political wealth waiting to be mined from the health-care issue: 33 million Americans with no health-insurance coverage at all, millions more afraid to move into better jobs for fear of losing their coverage and ever more insurers confining coverage to the healthiest, which is to say, people who least need it.

More: There's the skyrocketing price of insurance for people who can't get group coverage. For people who can, there are constantly rising costs or constantly shrinking benefits, sometimes both simultaneously.

The anecdotal evidence that this is a dynamite political issue is also compelling. High on the list of Great American Nightmares is catastrophic illness, so called not only because it is hard on body and soul but also because it wreaks catastrophe on a family's financial health.

Even big corporations are starting to cry "Mercy!" Not long ago American Telephone & Telegraph took a strike when it tried to lighten the ever-swelling burden of its employees' health plan. Wherever a new labor contract is being negotiated this spring, there you will find management trying to reduce its commitment to employees' health-care programs.

Large corporations are big mules in Washington. When they hurt, Congress and presidents weep for their suffering, and relief is soon on the way. On health, however, even big business can't expect much from President Bush. Health care is just not a Republican issue.

Democrats' refusal to make it their issue shows how desperately they now need a risk-taking prophet to bring the party back from the dead as Barry Goldwater brought the Republican Party back from the other side in the early 1960s.

Goldwater did the trick by standing for something. "Conservatism," he called it. It may have looked more like old-fashioned, radical Western populism, but whatever it was, it re-introduced ideology into a politics stultified by people who stood mainly for doing only what was necessary to get elected.

The 1992 election ought to be the natural opportunity for Democrats to renew their acquaintance with ideas about governing a country with staggering problems. If reports of President Bush's invincibility are not exaggerated, what an opportunity for some live Democrat to start calling the brethren up from the grave.

A party with nothing to lose can afford the luxury of being a party of ideas. After all these years Democrats could finally stand for something vital. For a national health-care program, for instance, even though it sounds daring and outrageous, having been long stigmatized by the medical lobby as "socialized medicine."

A nation being bankrupted at the hospital might not be so easily scared by the bugaboo word "socialized." Anyhow there are ideas whose time will come, and it's surely better politics, if you're doomed to lose, to stand for those ideas than to try out-Bushing Bush, as Democrats commonly do nowadays, by denouncing taxes and debt.

What a pathetic case the Democrats are when they try to be more Republican than the Republicans, when they cringe before the gun lobby, boast of their hatred for taxes and turn their backs on America's squalor because confronting it might hurt them politically.

Democrats aren't needed for such things. The number of Republicans available for the work is more than adequate. Hey, you Demos, get out of that grave — there's a whole country out here waiting for somebody to stand for something!

We are innocent until proven guilty

I was very disturbed to read the results of your recent poll, indicating that most Midlanders believe that the identity of an alleged rape victim should not be made public. It seems to me that this position is diametrically opposed to the most cherished principle of our American system of justice — that an accused is presumed to be innocent until his guilt is proven in a court of law.

I certainly sympathize with victims of rape. It is a traumatic, life-shattering experience which no one should be made to endure. On the other hand, charges of rape and the attendant publicity and public ridicule can have the same effect on the accused, destroying his career, his reputation and alienating friends and family.

Our sympathy and compassion for the alleged rape victim is commendable, but when carried to extremes, it can undermine the rights of the accused. In demanding that the identity of an alleged rape victim be kept secret, we assume that she is, in fact, a victim, and conversely that the accused is guilty. The result is that public opinion has already convicted the accused before he has had his day in court.

In our rush to comfort and protect the woman allegedly raped at the Kennedy compound, we have totally ignored the plight of the accused. Until his guilt is proven in a court of law, why is he not just as deserving of protection as the alleged victim? Even if he is ultimately exonerated, it will be impossible to undo the hurt, humiliation and damage to his life and career caused by the extensive media coverage to date.

An alleged victim should not be allowed to shine the spotlight of public contempt and ridicule on a fellow citizen while herself taking comfort in the darkness of anonymity. It is only fair that this thing cut both ways. Either divulge the identity of both the alleged victim and alleged assailant, or withhold the names of both until formal charges have been filed, but in any case, treat both equally.

Problem of theft swept under rug

This letter is being written because of the surprising actions of our youth. Recently our bands went through their University Interscholastic League (UIL) competition at Lee High School. During this time the students left their various instrument cases in a designated room and trusted that they would not be bothered. Well, that was a large mistake.

We are realizing that all children are not brought up with the same morals. It is usually common courtesy to leave someone else's property alone. During Midland Fresh man Band's performance for the judges, someone took it upon themselves to raid this equipment room. In his spree, this person took two cornet mutes, two horn mouth pieces, and a large sum of money. Now, you tell me, is this the way children are being raised these days? If so, there is something very seriously wrong with this town. And this is not the first time stealing has gone on in my nine years of being involved with this school system.

This is a warning to all parents who are involved with any school function. Do not count on the band directors, principals or any other person in this school system to watch and help you and your child with locating stolen merchandise. It is just too much trouble.

If anyone has noticed any band equipment which does not belong to your child, please turn it in to your school. Chances are someone needs it. Musical instruments and their equipment are not cheap.

I think it is about time that someone try to do something about all of the stealing going on. It has been swept under the rug long enough. If the band directors and the principals of these schools do not care, why are they in the field of teaching our children? So parents, please take an interest in your children and teach them not to steal. It's not a profitable profession.

We mustn't lower school standards

In response to your Tuesday, April 23 article entitled "GEM program is exclusive, city minority leaders say," I have a daughter in the GEM program and she is in that program only due to meeting the requirements through testing and excelling in her studies.

I think comments such as Ms. Marshall's "I think sometimes we (blacks) are expected to be twice as good as everybody else" are highly uncalled for. I personally resent the implication that anyone that qualifies for any program is not allowed to participate for any reason other than nonqualification. Surely these "leaders" do not want any program qualifications lowered in order to balance quotas set by percentages of population. Surely these "leaders" want the people they represent to raise their standards in order to be above the quotas in any and all programs.

But if these "leaders" simply want all programs to be set on percentages of population we should do it fairly, broken down as follows: 1. percentage of qualified students, 2. percentage of males and females, 3. percentage of race (white, black, Hispanic, Asian, Indian, Native American, etc.; 4. percentage of religion (Catholic, Protestant, Buddhism, Jewish, etc.); 5. percentage of handicapped; 6. percentage of people with certain hair color (blonde, brown, black, red, green, purple, etc.); 7. percentage of people from broken homes.

Yes, we could be really "fair" and go on and on, but should we? We must set standards for all programs and then teach and encourage our children to excel in order to be involved in the program or programs they choose.

Come on "leaders," lead and I will back you 100 percent.

I wish I could find the words to express what is in my heart to all the people who have supported us after our big fire on March 18th. No one will ever know what your gifts and concern have meant to us.

Animals anxiously await new home

Today, April 23, a spade of dirt was turned on Fairgrounds Road. It was the beginning of the construction of our new City Animal Control facility. This has been a much needed project which has been in the mill for a long, long time. City Council members have come and gone while the issues remained in the talking stage. Today with the bid let for construction, the site selected, work began with a completion date set for mid-October.

This letter is a thank you from all the furry creatures who, for whatever reason, end up at Animal Control. The ones who wait there today don't know what a nice place is planned for those who will follow them.

The ideal situation would be no need for an Animal Control, but as long as we have people and animals there will be a need. I know through my involvement with Midland Animal Control, the employees there consider their positions more than a job. The indifference they see to animals leave them with heavy hearts. They know so few will be adopted out, but they also know that the animals who pass through Animal Control will be well cared for as they await adoption or destruction. Spaying and neutering our pets to control the animal population will help these people do their jobs.

Thank you again Midland for providing a new facility for our furry friends who neither vote nor pay taxes.

City's crackdown welcome, overdue

I would like to take this time to thank the City of Midland and the Midland Police Department for taking the time and effort to conduct the crackdown on people not wearing seat belts and children being unrestrained in cars.

If we could get the people in Texas to comply our insurance rates would probably go down and the deaths would decrease. I am a seat belt wearer and would never think of putting my child in the car without buckling her in.

The people who do not buckle up their children and have an accident should be held accountable for their actions. They are the ones that scream that it was the other person's fault for their child's injuries or death.

A ticket for the actions of not buckling up yourself or your child will hit where it hurts the most — the pocketbook. Maybe then will people stop and think about what they are doing when they get into the car and drive.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Politically correct, linguistically wrong

What does "PC" stand for?

If your impulse is to blurt out "personal computer," you have gone software in the head. Those of us with slanguistic Fingerspitzengefuehl, however, know that the initials stand for the most controversial phrase on college campuses today: politically correct.

Safire

Ralph Waldo Emerson held in 1841 that "Whoso would be a man must be a non-conformist." That use of man today, in the sense of "one who possesses what were considered 'manly' virtues, like intellectual independence and moral courage," is rightly taken to be sexist; whoso would be a conformist must be politically correct.

"There is a new McCarthyism that has spread over American college campuses," writes Max Lerner, an old-line liberal. "We call it 'political correctness.'" The new Random House Webster's College Dictionary (the use of Webster in the name of a dictionary is a form of marketing correctness) defines the term as "marked by or adhering to a typically progressive orthodoxy on issues involving especially race, gender, sexual affinity or ecology."

I would edit that definition to denote politically correct as "an adverbially premodified adjectival lexical unit used to attack liberal conformity on sexual, racial, environmental and other voguish issues." (Maybe I should write a dictionary titled "Not Webster's.")

Item: "At the State University at Binghamton," Frank Herron wrote in The Syracuse Herald-Journal in March, "a meeting of a group formed to resist the pressure to conform to 'politically correct' speech was crashed by about 150 students, some carrying sticks."

The first citation I can find for the incendiary phrase dates from a December 1975 statement by Karen DeCrow, then president of the National Organization for Women. She claimed that a dissident faction felt that feminism was only for "white, middle-class, straight women" and insisted NOW was moving in the "intellectually and politically correct direction." The phrase began as an assertion by liberal (progressive, concerned) activists and then was turned into an attack phrase by conservative (right-wing, heartless) passivists.

The first word in the phrase is a "premodifier" — an adverb that modifies and then fuses with an adjective to form a compound modifying a noun. As Quirk, Greenbaum, Leech and Svartvik note in their "Grammar of Contemporary English," such adverb premodifiers often express viewpoints.

The origin is in correct thinking. "Where Do Correct Ideas Come From?" was the title of a 1963 thought by Chairman Mao Zedong, one of those later collected in a little red book that sold in numbers that still make publishers sigh. To dedicated Communists, correct thinking was "the disciplined inculcation of a party line expressed in all forms of social and political intercourse." When it was adopted self-mockingly by conservatives in the United States, it meant usually "one of us." The columnist George F. Will described Irena Kirkland in 1985 as "a life-affirming person and one of Washington's dozen or so Correct Thinkers."

Briefly now to the issue of vocabulary vigilantes who try to enforce "correct" language. Examples of taboo-boos can be found in the list compiled by fellows at the University of Missouri Multicultural Management Program: feminine "can be objectionable to some women"; codger or geezer, "an objectionable reference to a senior citizen"; Jew, "some people find use of Jew alone offensive and prefer Jewish person"; and swarthy, "avoid all unnecessary references to skin color, such as yellow."

The opinions of Lex Irregs are solicited; we'll limit the debate here to specific choices of words rather than diatribes about "correct" subjects and attitudes.

Some words of derision hurt; they should be identified as slurs in at least one sense and avoided. Others — from pert and petite to soulful and wannabe — are getting a bad rap from the hypersensitive. The communication question to be asked is not "Could this possibly offend?" but "Does this get the intended point across?"

All is not well in the turbulent Middle East

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — President Bush's vision of a new era of peace and security in the Middle East as a historic consequence of the swift military defeat of Saddam Hussein and liberation of Kuwait is in grave danger of foundering on the rocks of Arab and Israeli intransigence.

Secretary of State James A. Baker's peace efforts during three trips to the Middle East have been stalemated because neither the Arab nations, nor Israel, nor Iran want the kind of security system that the president envisioned to create lasting peace and stability in the long turbulent region.

None of the Arab nations involved in the war against Iraq, nor Israel, nor Iran want to give up weapons of mass destruction. None want a peace settlement that would be acceptable to all. None want peace at the price of relinquishing the tiniest bit of sovereignty to the United Nations.

The present hardline Israeli government wants to maintain control of Jordan's West Bank territory not just for security or expansionism but because 40 percent of Israel's water supply comes from an aquifer underlying the Jordan River's West Bank.

The autocratic rulers of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and other sheikdoms, as well as Syria and Iran, want to block the spread of democracy in the Middle East. It is likely to take much tougher action to bring about more civilized leadership in those countries than President Bush is likely to undertake, especially on the eve of his re-election campaign.

Most ungrateful of all the Arab nations for America's decisive role in stopping Iraqi aggression is Saudi Arabia's King Fahd. Had it not been for President Bush's swift deployment of massive U.S. forces in Saudi Arabia when Saddam invaded Kuwait, the Iraqi army could, and probably would, have taken over the oil-rich Saudi kingdom.

The first signs of the king's ingratitude were his refusal to allow our troops to practice their Christian or Jewish religion in public and his denial of freedom of movement to our women soldiers in Saudi cities.

The most serious sign that he lacks appreciation for our saving his throne was the king's refusal to participate in a regional peace conference to be sponsored jointly by the United States and the Soviet Union. The king refused primarily because the plan called for participation of moderate Palestinians in discussions for a peaceful settlement of the Arab-Israel conflict. The king adamantly opposed linking the Israel issue with a regional security system, at least until Israel withdraws from the West Bank and all other Arab territory occupied by Israeli forces following the Arab attack in 1967 to destroy the Jewish nation. The Saudi leader's obstruction was a major reason for the failure of Baker's peace mission.

However, the Bush administration placed most of the blame on Israel because it wants to stockpile U.S. military equipment in Saudi Arabia indefinitely to deter future aggression in the Persian Gulf region. The equipment would be sufficient to supply a brigade or division of troops that could be flown to the kingdom ready for action in a matter of days. The Saudi royal regime is stalling on acquiescence. Prince Khaled Ibn Sultan, commander of Arab and Islamic forces in the allied war against Iraq, said no decision has been made about the U.S. request.

The Israeli government wants only one ceremonial peace conference meeting, after which it would talk separately with the Palestinians about limited autonomy for them on the West Bank and with the Arab regimes about normalizing relations with the Jewish state. Baker returned to Washington with the sad conclusion that winning the war against Saddam had not infused the region with a need to put aside old antagonisms and seek the stability of a comprehensive peace.

Meanwhile, Saddam is strengthening his hold on power, rebuilding his military with armaments smuggled into Iraq through Jordan.

We and our responsible allies, such as Britain and France, should tighten the U.N. embargo against Iraq, limiting imports to food and medical supplies and allowing oil exports sufficient to pay for them as well as for reparations and allied war costs. We should also block, preferably with the support of our British and French allies, the shipment of offensive weapons to any of the Middle East nations that refuse to participate unconditionally in a regional peace conference composed of all the U.N. coalition countries which with U.S.-led forces won the war against Saddam.

BASEBALL: Teams to play Friday, Saturday games

(From 1B)

It's something good for Midland," echoed Bulldog pitching ace James Madrid.

"I think it means a lot, especially for Lee. Abilene Cooper and Midland High have been dominating the district for a long time. At least this way, Cooper was knocked out," quipped Rebel center fielder David Sullivan.

Be that as it may, everybody on both teams also realizes they must look out for themsleves, just like they have all season.

Aside from the Midland teams, no other 4-5A squad was able to fare better than .500 in the district season. Not highly-touted and preseason No. 1 Cooper (6-6) or up-and-coming San Angelo (also 6-6). That feat was accomplished in a district where five of the seven teams owned overall records above .500.

As Lee mounted seemingly countless late-inning rallies to claim the district crown with an 18-8 overall record and a 10-2 showing in 4-5A, MHS was posting an equal number of wins considered by preseason prognosticators as upsets, finishing 8-4 in loop play. After a 10-8 win over Fort Worth Southwest Friday, the Bulldogs moved their season record to 13-10.

Now the teams ready for the playoffs, with both beginning their best-of-three series at home. The Rebels host District 3-5A runner-up Lubbock Coronado at 4:30 p.m. Friday at Johnson Field, while the Bulldogs will play 3-5A champ and ninth-ranked Lubbock Monterey at the same time in Angels Stadium.

Playoff Sites, Dates, Times

Bi-District Baseball Playoffs
(Both series best-of-three)

No. 8 Midland Lee Rebels
(18-8, District 4-5A Champions)
vs.
Lubbock Coronado Mustangs
(17-11, District 3-5A Runners-up)

Game 1: Coronado at Lee, 4:30 p.m., Friday, Johnson Field.
Game 2: Lee at Coronado, 2 p.m., Saturday, O'Banion Field, Lubbock.
Game 3 (If necessary): Immediately following Game 2, O'Banion Field, Lubbock.

Midland High Bulldogs
(13-10, 4-5A Runners-up)
vs.
No. 9 Lubbock Monterey Plainsmen
(25-6, 3-5A Champions)

Game 1: Monterey at Midland High, 4:30 p.m., Friday, Angels Stadium.
Game 2: Midland High at Monterey, 1 p.m., Saturday, Lowry Field, Lubbock.
Game 3 (If necessary): Immediately following Game 2, Lowry Field, Lubbock.

Both competitions then head to Lubbock on Saturday, with MHS and Monterey playing a 1 p.m. on Lowry Field while Lee and Coronado play at 2 p.m. on O'Banion Field. Should they be needed, the third games of the two series will immediately follow Saturday's openers.

As for previous meetings between the foes, Lee has swept Coronado in a pre-district doubleheader March 4. The Rebels, who last appeared in the playoffs in 1987, took wins of 12-8 and 8-2 over the Mustangs.

MHS and Monterey split their doubleheader March 5, with the Bulldogs winning 9-6 and the Plainsmen claiming a 10-2 victory.

The MHS-Monterey affair is also a rematch of last year's bi-district round, which the 'Dogs won two games to one with a doubleheader sweep in Lubbock. The rivalry has become heated at times, with MHS winning all five playoff pairings between the two teams, and handing the then fourth-ranked Plainsmen all five losses of their 25-5 season. The Bulldogs also won three straight over Monterey in the 1989 regular season.

MCC: Six teams within three shots

(From 1B)

"I guess we can't complain," he said."

Tied only two strokes back at 141 are three more teams that should make today's final 18-hole excursion interesting. Carl Beach and Phillip Karper, Kenny Thompson and David Burgen, and Chad Williams and Darrell Johnson all have eyes on the top spot.

"I feel good to be just two shots back after the way we played today," said Burgen, who along with fellow Andrews native Thompson held a share of the first-round lead with a 69, but played even Saturday.

"I feel like we have a chance, but we'll need to shoot a 68 because McGee and Sledge are just too strong," Burgen predicted.

"I don't really care about our chances," Thompson claimed. "It's just so nice to be here at such a quality course. This is the best golf course between El Paso and Fort Worth."

Player leads by a stroke at Vegas

LAS VEGAS (AP) — After weathering a first-round storm, Gary Player took advantage of immaculate weather Saturday for a second-round 68 and a one-stroke lead in the $450,000 Las Vegas Senior Classic.

Player followed his opening-round 69 with four birdies and an eagle to lead Bob Charles, Bruce Crampton and Chi Chi Rodriguez by a stroke.

"That was a nice, steady round today," Player said. "This is not a golf course I play very well on, so it's quite a nice surprise."

Player said he usually has difficulty at the 6,810-yard, par-72 Desert Inn course because its greens feature numerous plateaus and severe undulation. For the most part, however, he conquered them.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

MC graduation follows semester's end

By H.A. Tuck

This is Finals Week for the spring semester, followed by the 18th annual Midland College Commencement ceremony on Friday, May 10. The graduation program begins at 7 p.m. in the Al G. Langford Chaparral Center and you are welcome to attend. There are 253 candidates for associate degrees.

Tuck

Speaker for the event will be David L. Smith, executive director of the Abell-Hanger Foundation, which has provided such great support for Midland College over the years. This also will be the final major event for retiring MC president Dr. Jess Parrish.

The date for the graduation was changed. It had been held on Saturday for many years, but was moved to Friday this year to provide more time prior to Mother's Day.

And again, I'm reminded of the little plaque the Financial Aid Secretary has on her desk, "As long as there are final exams, there will be prayers in school!"

Today marks the end of the traditional Spring Student Art Show in the McCormick Gallery. This year's show is a great display of talent in drawing, oils, watercolors, photography, ceramics, mixed media, design, and architecture.

Located in the Allison Fine Arts Building, the gallery is open to the public without charge. Hours today are 1-5 p.m.

This is the end of the McCormick Gallery season. New shows will begin next September. Plaudits go to Dan Buckley, who was in charge of exhibits this season, along with art instructors Jane Becker, John Harmon, and Warren Taylor; fine arts division chair Dr. Stan Jacobs; photo instructor B. Kent Moss; and architecture instructor John Edgar. Their students showed again they have learned their lessons well.

No sooner does Midland College end a session than it begins another. The Spring Interim Session is scheduled to start on Monday, May 13, with 15 classes listed. Students taking interim should wave goodbye to family, friends, loved ones, sleep, and outside distractions through May 30.

Three-hour courses meet from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. Monday through Thursday, with a break for lunch. Spare time will be devoted to reading, writing, preparing for tests and all the other stuff required for a college course. That's the bad news, since the good news is that it's all over in just three weeks!

This is the first time an advance registration system has been used for interim, but more than 150 students already have registered. If you didn't, but want to get more information or learn more about enrolling on May 13, visit the Student Services Office in the Student Center or call 685-4501.

Two regular summer sessions will be held again this year at the comparatively slow pace of about 5 and a half weeks. Summer I begins June 4 and ends July 9, while Summer II starts July 12 and ends Aug. 15. You still attend just four days per week, but for shorter periods each day.

Information about courses being offered then may be obtained from the Student Services Office.

Tall City celebrates art, spring

City comes alive with Cinco de Mayo events, Celebration of Arts

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Those attending Saturday's Celebration of the Arts (COA) discovered a new way to measure their intelligence.

Located on the Midland County Courthouse east lawn, the maze offers those willing to test their IQ a place to walk or run to the nearest exit only to discover it isn't.

The ratings are descriptive. Genius: 1 minute; Wiz: 3 minutes; Bozo: 5 minutes; Space Cadet: 7 minutes; Basket Case: 10 minutes.

Owners Sheila Button and Carol Young of Bothell, Wash., were pleased Saturday afternoon with the numbers of people of all ages who had spent a dollar to try their wits against the canvas walls.

"We've had at least 15 to 20 people in there all the time," Ms. Button said, adding that the maze is handicapped accessible.

With this maze, which weighs 4,000 pounds and takes a day and a half to set up, it doesn't pay to memorize the way through because it changes. Those who went through Saturday morning and returned Saturday afternoon discovered the pattern they thought they knew had changed. And it won't be the same for today's Celebration.

Presented by Arts Assembly of Midland, the COA Festival continues today from noon to 6 p.m. at Midland Center, Centennial Plaza and the courthouse lawn.

Admission is $2 for adults, $1 for children 5 to 17 and free to those under 5. This year's arts and crafts booths feature works by 70 artists and artisans, 29 of whom have not shown in the Midland arts festival before.

Among those new to West Texas events is Carmin Nuccil of Littleton, Colo. Ms. Nuccil is part of a family business called Pee Wee Tee Pee, which sells dress up costumes and play tents. This weekend her parents worked Fort Worth's Mayfest, and Ms. Nuccil and an assistant made their first trip to West Texas.

"I've never been to such an organized show before," said Ms. Nuccil, who traveled 15 hours to get here. "It's a wonderful show."

She had strong feelings about two things she discovered here.

"I couldn't be more happy with the weather," Ms. Nuccil said pointing up to Saturday's azure sky from her location at Centennial Plaza. She suggested that maybe the event needed to be publicized as BYOW — Bring Your Own Water — because drinking Midland water from a tap was such a surprise, she said, laughing.

Sales are no laughing matter for those participating in the celebration, and when asked how well her items were moving, Ms. Nuccil said, "It's going pretty well."

In a business which has traveled as far away as Madison, Wis., Ms. Nuccil said her family is selective about which shows it attends. "There are so many shows out there that we only do the ones that are the most profitable."

Charles Pruitt, this year's Celebration of the Arts distinguished artist, was positive the 1991 show was his strongest one to date.

"This is the best year I've ever had," said Pruitt, who had been kept busy selling his oil paintings and signing the 1991 commemorative poster. "They keep making Celebration of the Arts better each year. Also, the economy is looking up. I can tell that by what I'm selling."

Perhaps the most surprised COA artist this year is Midlander Mary Rasmussen. One of her works was awarded Best of Show at Friday's Preview Party.

"I didn't even see it when I walked into the booth," Ms. Rasmussen said, recalling how she felt when she discov-

Wanted: Person without a past

■ In its quest for police officers without a police record, MPD discovers daily what active imaginations officer applicants do have.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Some job positions are more open to scrutiny than others. But that doesn't stop some "less than desirable" people from applying.

"You get some people who come in here and say they've wanted to be a police officer for a long time and you look at their past and it's atrocious," said Midland Police Sgt. Price Robinson, personnel and recruiting officer.

"Everybody's done something, but we don't want a hellraiser," Robinson said.

Robinson recalled one man who inquired twice about becoming a police officer.

"When I was in detectives I help send this man to the penitentiary twice for sexual assault of a child. He got out of the penitentiary and inquired about applying," Robinson said.

Other questionable applicants are not quite as blatant.

"A person came in and took the written test. He had traffic warrants from DPS (Department of Public Safety) and was arrested when he was taking his physical," Robinson said.

"They think you are not going to find out," Robinson said.

Nevertheless, some folks — and not necessarily criminals — think they can out-fox the police.

"You get a lot of professional applicants. For example, a guy applies in Midland and gets rejected because of a bad employment history. If he wants to apply in Dallas he will rework his employment history and leave off other police departments where he's applied," Robinson said.

But a database maintained by the Texas Association of Police Personnel Officers works to prevent such incidents by recording all applicants of member agencies.

Then there are people who think their shady background shouldn't hinder their aspirations to become a peace officer.

"I got chewed out by a guy who was put in jail for writing hot checks in Austin. He actually got mad we checked him out and found that. 'He said, 'I'm not trying to be the president, I'm trying to be a police officer'," Robinson said.

Other obvious rejections include people who were grossly overweight, past narcotics users, had extremely bad eyesight or a shaky employment history.

"Some people who have a bad employment history — 12 jobs in 12 months — they are just looking for a job not a career. We want people who are career-oriented," Robinson said.

"The ideal person would be someone that has a desire to be a police officer and has applied that to their lifestyle," Robinson said.

Some desirable attributes include someone in good physical condition, self-motivated, a good attitude, reflects well on the department, good decision-making abilities and maturity.

"Maturity plays a big part. As a police officer you are thrust into a whole different world," Robinson said.

Robinson described an ideal candidate as a family person in his or her mid- to late-20s with a

Phone becomes local couple's Frankenstein

■ Practice of inmates placing collect calls from the county jail has a frightening economic ring to it for parents of daughter, niece with incarcerated beaux.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The convenience of the telephone has cost Robert and Joei Randle more than a bit of inconvenience mainly due to the handiness of the collect call.

It seems that their daughter and niece repeatedly accepted telephone calls from two male friends in the Midland County Jail at $1.30 to $1.35 per call through the pay-phone carrier Integretel Inc. of San Jose, Calif.

The calls lasted from one to 55 minutes. After 55 minutes, the Integretel system automatically disconnects the call.

Since the first of the year, the Randles' billing through Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. has reached well over $700 despite the couple's monthly telephone payments of $90 to $100.

"In one month's time, there were 270 (collect calls) at $1.30 to $1.35" per call, lamented Mrs. Randle.

The couple's telephone service has been disconnected. And that particularly concerns her husband since his wife is asthmatic.

"My wife has asthma," Randle said. "If she had an attack, I couldn't get to a phone" quickly. "That phone is a medical necessity."

GARY OTT

Saying good-bye to the 'outlaw' has not been easy

At first, the words cut deep. There was no denying their accuracy, mind you, still, there was a certain sadness that rushed through my body when I heard them.

Ott

The friend looked me square in the eye, and with just a hint of disdain, said, "Boy, you've really shed that ol' outlaw image, haven't you?"

Who, me? I acted offended.

"Look at yourself," he said. "You've become Mr. Wholesome."

I glanced at the mirror. Maybe he had a point.

The hair was shorter than it had been in years and the beard was neatly trimmed. My face was a golden brown, the result of several sessions at a local tanning salon. I was wearing a pair of stylish Bugle Boy slacks and a $50 Ralph Lauren all-cotton shirt, the kind that requires ironing once it has been washed. Wrapped around my neck was an expensive tie made from 100 percent silk. Even the shoes and socks were brand new.

I had to laugh at what I saw.

With a sheepish grin I looked at my friend and said, "Is that really me?"

"Best I can tell, it is," he said, his left eyebrow arched ever-so-slightly in a mocking fashion. "We've all been worried about you."

And talking behind my back, no doubt.

I'm not sure when this "new me" look officially began. It just sorta happened. It certainly wasn't planned. One day I was a slob, the next day I was hanging out in men's clothing stores.

Strange, indeed.

But it did get me to thinking. Am I really ready to become a clean-cut, all-American boy? Is that what I want? To be known as squeaky clean? A goody-goody two shoes?

All my life I've tried to walk a fine line, reaping the benefits of two totally different lifestyles. A part of me longed to be that so-called outlaw, a Hemingway-in-waiting, the creative rogue who lives on the edge of sanity, but who is so good at what he does no one would dare criticize the method in which his great deeds are accomplished.

My choice of heroes would tend to bear out that image. In addition to Hemingway, the ultimate "tragic figure," my list includes such people as Hank Williams Sr., Marlon Brando, Dennis Hopper, James Dean, Judy Garland, George Jones, Janis Joplin, Bobby Layne, Humphrey Bogart and any character who ever appeared in a Tennessee Williams play.

They were geniuses all, but they did it their own way. They broke all the rules. If society said you must behave in a certain manner, they would immediately do an about-face and head in the opposite direction. They marched to a different drummer and delighted in thumbing their noses at anything conventional. And that often included the way they looked and dressed.

They were outlaws. And I wanted to be one, too.

But the other part of me said, "Whoa, big guy. Hang on just a second. You've still got to pay the bills and put food on the table."

In addition to being extremely hard on your health, playing the part of an outlaw does not pay particularly well — at least not until that first great piece of literature you've been working on gets published.

Thus, my dilemma.

I wanted to assume the role of an outlaw, complete with the shabby down-on-his-luck physical appearance, but, at the same time, I desired the conveniences that go with a typical middle-class existence. I wanted to look like a struggling artist but eat like a stately king.

There is an old Kris Kristofferson song that contains the line, "He's a walking contradiction, partly truth and partly fiction." That's what I wanted to be: partly truth and partly fiction.

If nothing else, I figured it would intrigue women. "I must get to know that person," they would whisper to one another. "He's so interesting."

So I tiptoed the fine line.

A part of me desperately tried to live out my outlaw dreams while the other part kept in close contact with reality — a regular job, normal apartment, a semi-balanced checkbook.

By doing so, I could enjoy the advantages of both lifestyles. It meant I was just as comfortable talking to street people as I was with some chairman of the board. I was at times a borderline social outcast. But that had a certain offbeat charm in itself.

It also kept people off-guard. They never knew which part of me would show up. Would it be the carefree rogue or the respectable businessman? Only I would know for sure.

Now all that seems to be changing. Maybe it has something to do with turning 39. Or finally accepting the fact that the Great American Novel is not inside of me begging to burst forth. Perhaps it is a fear of retiring broke someday. But whatever, the outlaw part is fading away, and not so gradually.

A haircut, neatly trimmed beard, new clothes, an artificial tan. It is all happening so fast.

Ernest Hemingway, I fear, is hanging his head in shame.

But isn't Ralph Lauren proud?

college degree. "They make excellent officers," Robinson said.

But before anyone can hit the streets with a badge and gun, a stringent set of criteria must be met.

The basic requirements for the Midland Police Department include being between 21 and 45 years old, having a minimum of 45 college semester credits, and meeting eyesight standards.

Next an applicant must take a 75-question written exam that focuses on reading comprehension, problem solving and decision making. About 60 percent of applicants correctly answer at least 52 questions, the minimum passing score.

An applicant is required to take a physical assessment test made up of a mile and a half run, a minute of push-ups and sit-ups, a body/fat composition measure, and lower back flexibility exam. Potential officers need to perform in the 40 percentile or better for their age group for acceptance.

"A lot of people bomb that mile and a half run," Robinson said. But about 65 percent pass the test altogether.

The next phase is a review by a preliminary interview board. The applicant is first asked five standard questions to test verbal skills.

The board members are free to ask other questions that review the applicant's past such as employment, drug use, education, driving record and legal history. Prior to this review the potential recruit must fill out an extensive personal history statement.

After the interview, a background check is ran to verify information on the personal history statement.

Next, the prospective officer is given a polygraph test to determine "if answers correlate to the personal history statement."

Applicants are then sent to a doctor for a physical exam and a drug screen.

It's off to a licensed psychologist for a psychological examination after that.

"If they pass that, in all likelihood they will be hired," Robinson said.

Out of every 100 people tested in Midland, only about 15 to 20 will make it all the way through, Robinson said.

After passing all the tests, applicants must also attend a 12-week police academy followed by a 14- to 16-week field officer training program.

"Some people are not cut out for police work and end up washing out in the training program," Robinson said.

"It is a good process. If there are ways we can find to improve it, we will," said Robinson, who added that the process is not fool-proof in preventing potential bad police officers.

In Midland, about 150 people enter the testing program annually, Robinson said.

"We are fortunate to get the applicants we do. We get some good ones because of the department and the education requirements."

PHONE: Couple feel victimized by jail system

(From 1C)

More than just blaming her 26-year-old daughter and the niece for accepting the calls, Mrs. Randle faults the jail system for permitting their friends, two brothers, to use the jail telephones so frequently and the telephone company for not absorbing the cost.

"Southwestern Bell is one of the richest companies in the world," said Mrs. Randle. "They could probably write it off as a bad debt.

"I just feel I have been treated unfairly by the telephone company as well as by the jail system — the detention system," said Mrs. Randle, who said she can ill-afford to pay the bill.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter, however, said that the Randle household apparently needs "some discipline at home" and that the daughter and niece should be instructed to decline collect telephone calls from the jail.

"That would stop it," Painter said. "That's their end of the business. They need to handle their family."

Randle, however, suggested that the jail staff should exercise control over prisoners' use of the telephones.

"They have no control over the phones," said Randle, 62. But, "If they don't let the inmates use the phones, they (county officals) could be sued" for violation of constitutional and civil rights. "That's not right."

Mrs. Randle admitted that there might have been some breakdown in communications on telephone use in the household and possibly some abuse of telephone privileges.

And the Randles were assured that the brothers "had done nothing wrong" in using the jail telephones.

Even so, Mrs. Randle said she "wanted the calls to stop. And I know I couldn't pay this bill, and I know that neither my niece nor my daughter could pay the phone bill. Something had to be done."

She and her husband, who works for the city of Midland in waste-water treatment, live on a "very fixed income."

And the overwhelming telephone bill "makes you feel like you've lost control of your life because of the way the telephone system works," Mrs. Randle said.

That system, has "placed people at a disadvantage," she said, because of the telephone's convenience and the ease of charging calls.

"I don't like the present telephone system that says you can't control what goes on in your own home," Mrs. Randle said.

Notwithstanding, an Integretel spokesman in California asserted that "the very fact she has the phone makes it her responsibility.

"It's no different than if you have a car," the Integretel spokesman said, "and you let someone else drive it, and they get into an accident. The car is yours, and it's your responsibility."

And "just because" the telephone bill reaches a certain level that is uncomfortable to the customer, the customer can't declare "Well, it's not my responsibility," the representative said.

At the customer's request, the telephone company can "block" collect calls and third-party calls to telephone numbers at no charge, said Linda Clements-Basham, Southwestern Bell area manager for public relations in Midland.

The telephone company is "empathetic" with the Randles' plight, Mrs. Clements-Basham said. "But, we are (only) the provider of billing."

The brothers were "on the phone non-stop, absolutely non-stop, for about 30 days," she said. "The longest you can call is 55 minutes, and then you are disconnected. They talk 55 minutes, hang up, call back," and talk some more at $1.30 to $1.35 per call.

"It's a sad situation," she said. "We are more than willing to work with them on payment arrangements."

Southwestern Bell, Mrs. Clements-Basham said, has had "a lot of problems with 'the jail deal,'" on collect calls.

The Randle case is not an isolated incident.

The convenience of the telephone for prisoners to use and potentially abuse is a built-in design.

"We have phones arranged for the inmates in the 'tanks' so that they can call their families," Painter said. "They can call their attorneys and stay in touch with people. It's kind of helps them 'get away' — to while away the time. It's nothing that many of the other jails are not doing."

At the former Midland County Jail, a telephone was available on a rotating basis "one day a week" for each tank of prisoners.

"And it got to where we had people that were having family crises," Painter said. "We had people that had a necessity to contact individuals more than just once a week."

The Integretel pay-phone system allows prisoners more liberal use of the jail's telephones.

"It seemed like it was feasible," Painter said. "It would be advantageous for the inmates, and it would give them an opportunity to stay in contact with their families and whatever contacts they needed to make on the outside. I see nothing wrong with it."

ered her award. "I sat down and I was talking to a friend when I looked up. I was very pleased. It's wonderful."

Saturday's activities began with a Run for the Arts and concluded with a street dance.

The event also features continuous live entertainment presented from three stages — Centennial Plaza, Midland Center and the children's stage. In addition, food and drink booths are set up along Centennial Plaza.

"We're not sure about the numbers at this point but we know we're bringing in lots and lots of people, and they are eating more than last year," Kathy Schorr, director of Arts Assembly of Midland said Saturday afternoon.

"We haven't had any major technical problems. And we're delighted with the quality of the performance groups this year."

"I just think it keeps getting bigger and better each year," said Joanie Holt, a past chairman of the festival. "Not only does it give entertainment, it brings in money for our community."

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

TEA to meet with parents

Members of an accreditation team from the Texas Education Agency will meet with Greenwood parents 7 p.m. Monday in the Greenwood High School library.

Team members will conduct interviews of parents who wish to voice their concerns.

The team, which is required by state law to review school districts, will evaluate planning, curriculum, instruction, services to students, instructional resources, personnel, governance, community conditions and physical facilities.

Team places second

A team of three Trinity School students won second place in the Small Schools Academic Decathlon in Coleman recently. Trinity had the only team of juniors in the division with 25 teams competing. The King, as the last of the Great Barnstormers, is drawing large conwds. The team plays baseball games in most of the major league parks.

Feigner keeps the fans amused and externtained with his breezy patter throughout the game. Following the game the "KING" gives a pitching clinic, exhibition if you will of the History of Softball pitching - Deliveries and styles.

ARCO Jesse Owens Games put kids on the right track

Jesse Owens wasn't always an Olympic hero. He was once like a lot of today's youngsters, filled with dreams and ambition, but often missing a way to fulfill those dreams until something motivates them to achieve their goals.

Today, the ARCO Jesse Owens Games are helping put kids on the right track by giving them a way to achieve and, hopefully, the motivation to accomplish their dreams.

The ARCO Jesse Owens Games are open to boys and girls born in the years 1977 through 1984.

District Meet finalists may advance to the Regional Meet in Dallas. National Meet finalists are eligible to apply for a scholarship to be used upon completion of high school. Scholarship awards are not based on athletic ability.

District running, jumping and throwing events will be held at the following location in Midland.

Saturday, May 18 8 a.m. Memorial Stadium
Registration deadline May 10

'T' stands for trouble — and tornadoes

By Lyn Miller

Tornado Watch! Tornado Warning! Thunderstorms and flash flooding imminent!

These words will soon permeate radio and television broadcasting airways during the spring season, that time of year when violent weather is on the increase in the Permian Basin and throughout the state.

Certain precautions can help withstand inclement weather, and the Emergency Management/-Operations Center for the city of Midland urges individuals to learn and practice these safeguards.

Learn the difference between a tornado watch and a tornado warning.

Remember, a tornado watch means that tornadoes and severe thunderstorms are possible. Normal activities may be continued, but residents should remain alert. Should severe weather appear imminent, be prepared to take shelter.

A tornado warning means that a tornado has been detected or spotted, and those persons nearest to the storm area should take shelter immediately, while those farther away should monitor the storm and take cover if threatening conditions increase.

Conduct periodic drills at home to inform each member of the family where to go and what to do during turbulent weather alerts. Provisions should also be taken at the workplace to inform workers of protected areas during a storm.

In homes and small buildings, interior bathroom, hallway or ground floor closet offers protection. Stay way from windows and outside walls. Select the area or areas for you and your family to go, should a tornado threaten. Assemble items, such as a portable radio, several flashlights and fresh batteries, bottled water, extra prescription medications, a first aid kit, as well as blankets and sleeping bags for protection from falling debris and shattering glass.

In high-rise office buildings, the place offering the greatest protection is a small interior room or hallway on the lowest floor. Predesignated shelter areas are provided in schools, nursing homes and hospitals.

Shelter areas are also designated in shopping centers. Do not attempt to take shelter in your parked car.

Remaining in a mobile home or vehicle during a tornado is dangerous. Take shelter in the nearest substantial building or lie flat in a ditch, ravine or culvert with your hands shielding your head. Be aware, however, of possible flooding in low-lying areas.

Do not try to take shelter under a mobile home or car, since either of those can be easily picked up or turned over by destructive winds.

It is not advisable to call 911 emergency number for information on the weather or what to do since that information is not available at that number. In so doing, your call could have serious ramifications by delaying or preventing an emergency call from reaching the 911 operators.

Lyn Miller, an employee at City Hall, coordinates the information for this column.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?
Yes! Our current carrier force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?
Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?
The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carrier's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!

WHY IS NOW THE IDEAL TIME TO WORK FOR SAUDI ARAMCO?

The Saudi Arabian Oil Company (SAUDI ARAMCO) manages a quarter of the world's proven oil reserves and is one of the world's largest producers and exporters of oil and gas. We're always looking for good people, but now our need is more critical than usual. Many of the projects and programs that were being planned for the late 1990s were put on accelerated schedules after the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. We're committed to remaining prepared should we be called upon again to increase oil production to help meet the world's needs. That's why now is the ideal time to work for Saudi Aramco!

Saudi Aramco employs an international work force of approximately 44,000, including 3,000 of North America's finest engineers, computer scientists, financial personnel and their families. Many of these families have worked and resided in Saudi Arabia for over ten years. Right now, there are many opportunities to work in the Middle East. But none can compare with the quality of lifestyle provided by our company communities. We've been doing this since the 1940s, so we know how to take care of American workers and their families. That's why now is the ideal time to work for Saudi Aramco!

Langston Realtors Talk About ...

Nationally recognized corporate director joins company

Joel K. Oldham, III, the corporate Relocation Director for Abide Realtors, Oklahoma's largest residential real estate firm, joined Langston Realtors this week in the new position of Vice President, General Manager.

"I came to Midland three weeks ago as part of a corporate presentation to the ORYX transferees and absolutely fell in love with the city. The enthusiasm and friendliness of the people, the clean, well-tended neighborhoods, your many fine cultural organizations and the total synergism one senses in Midland all told me 'Joel, this is the place to be!'" Oldham said.

"I was also totally impressed with Langston Realtors. Here's a firm that during the past four months has grown from 31 to 46 realtors, is opening the market, and is going great guns ina 'recession' and in a normally slower time of the year for real estate. I really value the opportunity to be a part of such a vibrant, growing company," Oldham added.

Langston

"I've known, worked with and respected Joanne Langston, Langston, Langston Realtors' President, since 1984 when she was President-elect of RELO, an international real estate referral organization. Joanne has a tremendous team: Pat Orseth, Administrative V.P. and Sales Manager, Richard Langston, Corporate Relocation, V.P. and Penny Willhite, who is moving into Director of the Commercial Department and appraising. I'm really looking forward to being a part of that team," Oldham said.

Don Harvey Realtors features home in Green Tree North

Harvey

Family and fun are what this home, located on the second tee box in Green Tree North is all about.

A charming brick walk way leads to the front door which opens into a foyer with a view of the huge formal living and dining rooms. Striking wedgewood blue walls trimmed with white molding are complemented by the high ceilings.

Conveniently located between the formal living room and the cozy den is a wet bar. A brick fireplace located in the den makes it a perfect room for family gatherings on those cool winter nights. While in spring and summer, spacious windows offer a lovely view of the golf course. A door from the leads from the den to the patio area.

Back inside, the first floor of this beautiful two story brick home includes a spacious master bedroom with a lovely bath featuring a garden tub and an extra large separate shower. A large "his and her" walk in closet also in part of the suite.

A dream kitchen with plentiful white washed cabinets, mauve counter tops and delightful touches of wallpaper includes a bar and breakfast area near a large window. Two other windows as well as recessed lighting behind the cabinets make this a bright, cheerful room. The kitchen also includes a built-in range and oven, microwave, dishwasher, disposal, compactor and reverse osmosis system. Adjacent to the kitchen is the utility room which includes built-in cabinets.

A lovely oak-trimmed staircase leads to three other bedrooms and two bathrooms on the second floor.

Two of the bedrooms are joined by a compartmental bath which features a double vanity and lots of built-in cabinets, drawers and a laundry hamper. Both bedrooms have spacious double closets.

Another set of built-in cabinets is conveniently located in the hallway leading to the fourth bedroom which has its own private bath.

Professionally landscaped, both the front and back yards have a sprinkler system. A water well is an added convenience for outside irrigation.

Extra amenities include mini blinds, s moke alarms, and a security system

This home has recently been reduced to only $137,500.

This cozy, sequestered family room spells comfort and relaxation.

From 1-D

Family and friends will enjoy informal dining or just getting together in the breakfast room just off the kitchen where a wall of windows offers a lovely view of the covered patio and lovely landscaped back yard.

Matching wallpaper and wainscoating decorate the breakfast room as well as the formal dining area and the kitchen.

Plantation shutters cover the large windows in the formal dining room as well as the wall of windows in the formal living area. Moldings provide a tasteful touch while ceiling fans increase the home's energy efficiency.

Buily-in bookcases in the formal living area provide a perfect place for that personal library or for displaying collectibles.

High ceilings add to the spacious atmosphere of this four bedroom home which has three full baths.

The master bedroom suite features a beautiful bath with his and her vanities , mirrored walk in closet and large garden tub.

A walk through bath with double vanities joins two spacious bedrooms, while the fourth bedroom has its own bath.

Outside curbed flower beds, a well manicured lawn and brick trimmed sidewalk give the home an inviting appearance.

Other features include a three car rear entry garage, garage door openers, sprinkler system and outside storage.

This home is offered by Re/Max of Midland for the competitive price of $159,000 for quick sale.

Beverly Shilling/Reporter-Telegram

The breakfast room adjacent to the kitchen provides a beatiful view of the covered patio and back yard.

Joel Oldham joins Langston Realtors

From 1-D

Oldham's responsibilities will include Corporate Services, handling third party and REO listings, marketing and management, Langston explained. "Our firm was just fortunate enough to be in the right place at the right time to be able to retain Joel. We are in an aggressive growth program in one of the finest cities in the U.S.; Joel sees that as a winning combination! Plus, I don't think he could turn down being able to drive to work in five minutes and to get on the golf course year round, "Langston added. Because Joel is known and respected by professionals in the relocation field throughout the nation, we are anticipating tremendous expansion in our company's services to corporations and their transferees, "Langston said.

Oldham is a graduate of Texas A &M University. He was a Multi-Million Dollar producer, sales manager, then owner/broker of his own firm, Joel Oldham, Inc, before merging with Abide, Inc., Realtors in 1981. He was a branch manager and trainer with Abide until 1984, when he was appointed Abide's Director of Corporate Relocation. He is an approved instructor for the Oklahoma Real Estate Commission and has served as Chairman of the MLS, Oklahoma Schools /Public Education, Orientation, Education, Membership and Lock Box Committees of the Oklahoma City Metro and Oklahoma City Boards of Realtors. Oldham and his wife, Ellie, will move to Midland the latter part of the month.

Caterer Barbara Christiansen begins preparation of a recipe.

Catered affairs

Text by LINDA ANDERSON

Let's face it, the world is a busy place. Everyone from bosses to families to shop keepers to next-door neighbors can put demands on your time and energy — and sometimes there's not enough of either to go around. At times like these it's nice to know there are caterers who are ready to — well, cater — to your every food service need.

Caterers are professionals who can be hired to provide foods for such events as weddings, family reunions, corporate lunch meetings, birthday parties, anniversary celebrations — in fact, almost any event in which people and food are mixed.

And as food service professionals, caterers and their employees are responsible not only for making and serving memorable meals, they also are in charge of planning the menu, coordinating cooking and serving, setting up, and eventually, cleaning up. In fact, caterers are responsible for all the food preparation chores any cook is responsible for — only done fancier and multiplied several hundred times.

Anyone who has ever attended a catered social function knows how wonderful the food tastes, and how smooth and effortless the service can be; but not many people know the amount of work involved in making such occasions successful.

"Catering is fun if you like to meet a challenge, and after meeting that challenge, feel the reward," said Charlene Bunnell, owner of Foods Fantastic in Midland.

"It's also physically demanding," she added. "It's long hours — that runs a lot of employees off. You have to be a high-energy person."

"It's a very stressful roller-coaster ride," agreed Barbara Christiansen, a caterer with Chez Vous in Midland. "At Christmas you just about physically test everything. Every one (social event) has to be perfect."

"It takes a lot of dedication," said Dominique Chardola, Mrs. Christiansen's partner at Chez Vous. "If you don't like what you do and don't do a good job, you won't stay in business."

"For us, it's been challenging," said Mrs. Christiansen. "We have to like it or we wouldn't stay in it. If you don't like it you need to get out because people's parties are too important."

"And we're having fun, even when we're frustrated and tired," added Chardola.

Catering is largely a learn-as-you-go kind of business, these food professionals said. Chardola received three years of formal training, but his partner, Mrs. Christiansen, learned most of her cooking skills on the job. "I was working as an administrator at Harvard University and baking cakes for people who were leaving the university," she said.

One day "I got a phone call from a woman who asked if I did Baked Alaska, and I lied and said I did," Mrs. Christiansen admitted. "So I read up on it (Baked Alaska) and did it. When I dropped it off, I lied again and told her I did dinner parties. She called about a month later and asked if I'd do a dinner party for 12, and I did."

Mrs. Bunnell, who has a bachelor of design degree from the University of Florida, said she "started this (business) knowing

A BIG MIDLAND WELCOME to Johnnie R. Back, who moved here just in time to celebrate his 94th birthday. He makes his home with his daughter and son-in-law, Mary Ann and Tommy Hale.

In honor of his birthday, Mary Ann hosted a party for 62 guests, including Mr. Back's granddaughter, Mary Tom Hoover, and great-grandson, David Hoover, of Dallas.

The honoree was born in Collin County, Texas, on April 24, 1897. His parnets and their family of 10 children moved to the Texas Panhandle in 1903, settling in Gray County. The move was made by wagon, pulled by mules.

A house was built and also a school, which become the hub of "Back" community, eight miles north of McLean. Land at that time could be purchased for $3.00 an acre.

Mr. Back is an avid Ranger fan and enjoys playing dominoes and typing letters to family and friends.

BUDDING JOURNALISTS — Melissa Ellis, daughter of Nell and Bobby Ellis, has been named the new managing editor of UMTV at the University of Mississippi. She was picked because of her strong leadership qualities, her understanding of the television station's inner workings, her ability to write and the active part she has taken in the station in the past.

In a recent interview in The Daily Mississippian, Melissa revealed many plans she has for the station, but listed "upping viewership" as her No. 1 priority.

Meanwhile, at Texas A&M University, Mack Harrision, son of this columnist and spouse Harry, has been chosen assistant city editor of The Battalion, the student newspaper, for the fall semester.

Since Mark is from a family of writers, we are happy he is carrying on the tradition!

Marilyn McKnight Harrison is society columnist for the Reporter-Telegram.

AT WIT'S END

Sometimes you learn more than you want to know

By Erma Bombeck

It seemed like such an innocent remark. We were watching a basketball game on television and I asked, "What's an illegal defense?"

Bombeck

Five days later, I could have bitten my tongue out. There is no such thing as an innocent question at our house. You don't get an answer. You get a doctoral dissertation on the subject.

My husband pushed the mute button on the TV and turned to me. "Let's back up a bit." (It's like James Michener backing up a bit. I knew I was going to end up hearing how the glaciers formed the earth to make room for a basketball court.)

"You know how an offensive player cannot stand in the lane for three consecutive seconds, don't you? Well, a weak-side defender — which we know as an offensive player on the side of the court away from the ball — has a similar restriction."

"I got it now," I said. "It makes sense. Turn on the sound."

"I haven't explained the illegal defense yet," he said patiently.

I never learn. The day he found the back door open and the furnace roaring was the day we "backed up" to the history of energy beginning with the water wheel and the oxen.

He droned on. "It's not easy for the referee to make the three-feet judgment. He has to look at the hash marks on the base line. Here, let me show you on this piece of paper." He sketched feverishly. "This is the court ..."

My mind drifted. I am probably one of the few women in North America who can explain why cold air blows out of the car heater in winter when you start the car. Not that I get many calls for it. I still have the diagrams.

"However," he continued, "if three or more offensive players position themselves above the top of the foul circle on the weak side, an 'isolation violation' will be called on them. This rule limits ..."

Out of the corner of my eye I could see the players leaving the floor and the final score being flashed on the screen.

As the sound came back to the screen, the late-night news began to unfold. Half to myself I muttered, "How come I never heard of the Kurds until a couple of months ago?"

From the corner I heard a voice say, "Let's back up a bit ..."

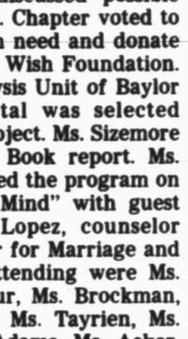
Soil sterilants can ruin home landscape

By Deborah A. Benge



Benge

Controlling unwanted weed growth can make you do something that you may end up regretting. The use of weed-controlling chemicals can be beneficial, but the wrong herbicide can have devastating results on your landscape — and possibly on your neighbor's.

The use of long residual herbicides, commonly referred to as soil sterilants, in the home landscape can be a big mistake because they persist in the soil for a long time. These herbicides are commonly used at oil field, equipment, manufacturing and roadside sites to control unwanted weeds. In locations outside of city limits and far away from landscape and crop areas, soil sterilants have a use — but they have no place in residential areas.

Using a chemical to control plant growth for a prolonged period of time sound good — no more hoeing, mowing or spraying. But long residual herbicides are dangerous because they persist in dry, low organic matter soils for years, unlike the label indicates. The roots of large trees and shrubs grow into the treated soil, damaging or killing valuable landscape plants.

In addition to desirable plants picking up this damaging herbicide, heavy rains and irrigation can wash the herbicide into other areas, resulting in more damaged plants. Some soil sterilants are more water soluble than others, so the danger of the herbicide leaching in the soil varies with the type of herbicide applied.

Winds can also move long residual herbicides from a treated target area to an untargeted area. If a treated area is exposed to gusty winds (so common to the Permian Basin), soil sterilant molecules attached to soil particles will be blown into yards, landscaped beds and vegetable gardens.

Home gardeners often make the mistake of using these total vegetation control herbicides in the alley. This method does a great job of controlling weeds in the alley. But unfortunately it can also kill large shade trees in the backyard.

Many trees have lateral root systems that go beyond the dripline of the tree to mine the soil for water and nutrients. This can sometimes lead them into treated soil areas, where they pick up soil sterilant and translocate it into the tree leaves. The leaves become severely yellowed and gradually drop. Trees that are especially prone to picking up these herbicides include mulberries, elm, pecans, live oak and many others.

Trees that have picked up soil sterilant through the root system will typically show damage just on the side closest to the soil treatment area. Each June or early July, yellowing leaves and leaf drop will begin to show up. Some trees are extremely tough and will tolerate the conditions for several years. Often, limbs will completely die out on the damaged side of the tree.

Soil sterilants also are sometimes used in driveways, along the edge of driveways, fence lines, cracks in paved areas, sand boxes and fallow landscape beds — which can lead to damaging plants.

Not much can be done if a soil sterilant has been used. A trench, at least three feet deep and several feet long, can be dug and lined with heavy plastic or sheet metal. This trench is used to sever and stop roots from growing into treated soil. Another solution is to remove and replace treated soil. With a few soil sterilants, activated charcoal can be mixed with the treated soil to inactivate the herbicide. None of these measures are easy or completely satisfactory.

If you have any doubts about whether a herbicide would be safe for your landscape, call the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Weeds can be controlled in alleys and driveways by using a tank mix of glyphosate and orzyalin.

Deborah Benge is the extension horticulture agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Midland and Ector counties.

Diabetics frequent hypertension victims

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — People with diabetes are twice as likely to develop high blood pressure than the general population, according to researchers at the University of California at San Diego.

The scientists believe that body fat distribution and the presence of extra insulin in the blood, caused by rising levels of glucose, play an important role in the correlation between diabetes and high blood pressure.

"About 2.5 million people in the U.S. have been diagnosed with both hypertension (high blood pressure) and diabetes," noted Ann Setzer of Boehringer Mannheim Corp., maker of a portable meter that allows diabetics to test their blood sugar levels at home.

"If hypertension and blood sugar levels aren't controlled, they can contribute to such devastating complications as heart attack, stroke and kidney and eye disease."

ID system helps

Associated Press

As the weather gets nicer, we all want to be outdoors. That includes older people who have Alzheimer's Disease. At this time of year, many of these people wander away and get lost. Often they cannot communicate, baffling those who want to help them get home.

Safenet is an identification system that assigns a person a number. This number is printed on 50 iron-on clothing labels, two ID cards and is registered with Safenet's 24-hour emergency phone.

If a member of Safenet separates from his caregiver or is unable to communicate with a caring citizen who does not know him, the clothing labels will lead to his identification, and his family or caregiver will be called.

In addition, Safenet includes the Finders Keepers bedroom system, which consists of 4-inch-square, brightly colored signals that are displayed in bedroom windows. In case of fire or illness, police, firefighters or emergency medical personnel will know where to go.

TRAVEL

Traveling with children can be fun, but requires planning

Easier ways for holiday travel with kids

Planning holiday travel over the river and through the woods to Grandmother's house? Prepared parents keep kids occupied and avoid the whiny moments that can ruin anyone's vacation.

Pack crayons and paper in a metal cake tin. Kids can use the tin as a laptop desk when coloring.

Fill a compartmentalized pill container with cereal, raisins and other treats to let little ones snack and entertain themselves by opening and closing lids.

Take the child's play phone along, so he can pretend to talk with people in other cars.

Pack your kid's favorite story tapes and bring along a walk-along tape player for quiet listening.

WASHINGTON — Travel with the kids? Planning can make it enjoyable, says Brigid Cortright, director of Catholic University of America's Children's Education Center.

Mrs. Cortright, who has six children and three stepchildren, recalls trips made when at least five of them were under 7 years old. "With careful planning, it can be fun," she says.

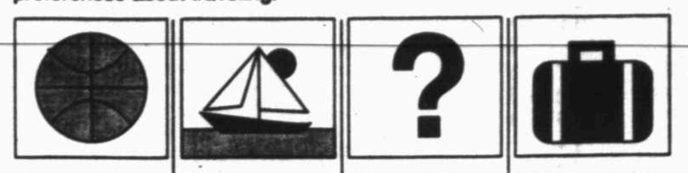
She advises parents to tell the children where they're going, what they'll see and how long they'll be gone. Tell them what to expect when traveling by public transporation or eating in restaurants. Coach them to talk with new people, shaking hands and introducing themselves. Tell them what to look for at attractions and move them through quickly; even young children will enjoy museums if they aren't expected to linger at each exhibit.

If you're driving, start out at about 4 a.m. Most children will sleep for the first four hours of a trip. Break up travel by stopping for a few hours to visit friends or unwind in a park. Make a list of essentials, toys or other amusements to take with you so you don't have to buy them on the road.

She also advises getting a recommendation for a pediatrician at your destination, especially if you're traveling abroad. Your own doctor and the American Academny of Pediatricians are good sources.

What do kids want to do when traveling?

Kids ages 6-12 who were surveyed recently revealed these preferences about traveling.



Do you like to attend sporting events?	Would you like to go to the lake or beach?	Do you like to learn something new while on vacation?	What would you like to pack to bring along on the trip?

Celebrate Cinco de Mayo with spicy pizza

By Carrie White
N.Y. Times News Service

If your family celebrates Cinco de Mayo, feed the celebration with Mexican Pizza.

What makes this pizza Mexican isn't the form but the ingredients. Chorizo, spiced meat, green chilies, olives, onions, hot sauce and Monterey Jack cheese top a basic crust that's oh so simple, and oh so good.

Warning: As the ingredients show, this is a very spicy pizza. If you don't want it quite so intense, substitute any or all of the following for their recipe counterpart — sausage or hamburger for the chorizo; tomato sauce for the El Pato (a hot sauce found at the market that's next to either the Mexican food or tomato sauces); and green, red or yellow peppers for the green chilies.

Though the crust uses yeast — something that scares the dickens out of some folks — this is a very easy main course dinner sure to please those hamburger-french fry eaters.

Our household likes this pizza not only because of its flavor but also because it freezes well. What's left over at the end of the meal is wrapped in tinfoil, labeled and put in the freezer. To reheat, allow to defrost in the refrigerator and pop in the oven at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. (It's a good idea to sprinkle reheated pizza with water before popping it in the oven.) The pizza can also be easily reheated in the microwave oven by covering it with plastic wrap and blasting it for about 4 minutes.

A word of wisdom for first-time pizza makers: Don't be afraid to experiment with the ingredients according to your preferences. And not just the alternatives we suggest above. If you're a poultry fiend, use boiled chicken for the meat. Or maybe even refried beans. Goat cheese would be a super alternative to Monterey Jack cheese. Instead of the olives, use drained corn. Even zucchini would be a delicious addition.

If you're sticking to the Mexican theme, make a salad to accompany the pizza that includes cilantro, jicama, avocado, tomato and some crisp romaine lettuce. Oil and vinegar dress this salad up perfectly and simply.

MEXICAN PIZZA

1 pound chorizo
1 onion, cut in rings
1 can sliced black olives
1 (7-ounce) can whole green chilies, diced in large chunks
1 (8-ounce) can El Pato
2 cups grated Monterey Jack cheese
Pizza dough, recipe follows

Prepare pizza dough as directed in following recipe.

Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Spray round pizza pan with nonstick cooking spray and dust with cornmeal. Press prepared dough into pan, stretching to form. Create lip around outside.

Cook chorizo in skillet. Drain grease and spread on dough with spoon. Spoon El Pato over chorizo. Sprinkle on green chili pieces, black olives and onion rings. Top with grated cheese. Cook 20 minutes. Remove from oven and allow to sit at least 5 minutes. Serves 3 to 4 people.

PIZZA DOUGH

1 package active dry yeast
1 cup warm water
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2½ cups flour of your choice

Dissolve yeast in warm water. Stir in remaining ingredients; beat vigorously for 20 strokes. Let rest about 5 minutes.

There is no charge for exhibitors. For more information or space reservations call Pat Stewart at (903) 636-4303.

DEAR ABBY

Post-prom party raises questions for parents

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our oldest son, "John," is going to his first prom. He is 16½ years old and a junior in high school.

Van Buren

John and three other couples planned to rent a hotel room for a post-prom party, and, of course, drink beer. I suggested to my husband that we should have the kids back to our house for a post-prom party. No. 1: I won't have to worry all night about John and his friends being out and drinking. No. 2: We live five miles from the school where the prom will be held. No. 3: It won't cost us a cent because the kids will pay for their own beer and snacks.

I could keep all of the car keys so no one would have to drive. Also, I could give them all coffee in the morning before they leave.

Well, my husband went nuts! He says I am encouraging the kids to drink.

I tried to explain that this was a special occasion, and they are going to drink anyway. He thinks I am 100 percent wrong in suggesting they come here, and I think I am 100 percent right. Also, I would feel a lot better knowing the kids will be in our house after the prom. — CONCERNED MOTHER

DEAR CONCERNED MOTHER: I vote with your husband. To condone teen-agers drinking beer or any kind of alcoholic beverage in one's home because "they are going to drink anyway" is, in my view, a feeble excuse. Furthermore, providing minors with alcohol is in violation of the law.

If the children were mine, I would insist on hosting the party in my home and providing the snacks, the soft drinks — and the supervision.

DEAR ABBY: For me, the war in the Persian Gulf and its end have brought to mind that fine film "To Kill a Mockingbird." The story was about Atticus Finch, a Southern gentleman, a competent attorney, a good father and husband, a peaceful man. Some might even call him a boring man.

One summer afternoon, a rabid dog came down the street and sent the residents into a panic. Finch came out of his house with a rifle and calmly and expertly killed the beast with one well-placed bullet.

Finch did not smile, strut, raise the rifle, exchange high fives, or in any other way celebrate his accomplishment. An unpleasant task had been thrust upon him, he did what had to be done, he solved the problem, and then went back to the business of being Atticus Finch.

To those who so expertly performed the unpleasant tasks thrust upon you in the Persian Gulf, thank you and God bless you. Accept the appreciation of a grateful nation. We are glad to have you home, and are pained by the memory of those who will not return.

Take a full measure of quiet pride in a job well done. And then, let's all get back to the business of peace. — CHUCK EVANS, ERIE, PA.

DEAR CHUCK: Thank you for a thoughtful letter. And to all the men and women who will NOT return home for many months (or years) due to their commitment to the military, we owe a special debt of gratitude.

CONFIDENTIAL TO WONDERING IN SAN JOSE, CALIF.: No man GETS mean when he drinks. He was mean to begin with — but he managed to cover it up in his more sober moments.

CATERERS: Creating perfect parties takes work, dedication absolutely nothing about catering. I had never worked in food service or hired a caterer.

"In my mind, food should look wonderful and taste as wonderful as it looks — and I thought I could do it better and cheaper" than other caterers.

Mrs. Bunnell started her catering business from her home about six and a half years ago, she said. "The jobs I was doing were too large and kept my house in a total wreck. I needed to have a commercial kitchen and be set up for it."

Some caterers prefer to combine work and home. Cyndy Edens, owner of Special Occasions bridal service, conducts her business from her Midland home. Providing food for special occasions is part of the service she offers.

"I personally have been in the business for four years," Mrs. Edens said. "A friend got me started — she was my business partner. I started out doing wedding cakes."

In catering, planning is the key toward having the perfect party. Since her business is providing bridal service, Mrs. Edens said she first meets with the bride-elect and her mother or her future bridegroom to plan the menu. "We decide what we're going to have. I go over the menu to make sure I have everything, and start working on it not more than the day before the wedding, so it's fresher, so it tastes better."

At Chez Vous, "first we find out specifically as much as we can," about the planned event and the people who are giving it, Mrs. Christiansen said. "It's easy to visit and makes it more fun to cook for somebody you have visited. The menu has to fit the situation. We put the menu together and mail it (to the clients) with a cover letter."

"Getting to know the client is part of the job too," Mrs. Bunnell said.

Although she and her workers can — and sometimes do — provided catered foods for clients who give them only an hour's notice, Mrs. Bunnell said, "it's always nice to know a week ahead of time" so supplies can be ordered and any pre-preparation can be done. She asks clients to at least "please give us 24 hours notice. It can be done in much less time, just not as well."

Because catering is a learn-as-you-go business, recipes and cooking techniques are constantly being collected and adapted.

Mrs. Bunnell has always been interested in cooking. "By the third grade I loved to cook. My recipes come from everywhere — I read cookbooks all the time. A lot of recipes I've had since I was a little girl. I had total freedom in the kitchen because my mother didn't care for the kitchen. I collected recipes from my grandmother and my aunts."

Mrs. Edens said she knew nothing about cooking until she was an adult. "I couldn't boil water then I first got married," she said. "My father-in-law made my wedding cake. My father-in-law is the one who encouraged me to do so much. He was a fantastic cook."

Before she became a caterer, Mrs. Edens spent several years as a houseparent at children's homes, including High Sky Children's Ranch. "I learned to cook in quantity," she said.

Chardola, who was raised in Brittany, France, attended school for three years to learn to be a chef. After his training was completed, "I was a cook in restaurants and hotels," he said. He arrived in Midland in 1982 "with a backpack and 250 bucks. ... I came because of an ad in the paper — it was during the boom years." Locally, he is a chef for the Racquet Club, and has worked as a chef at the Petroleum Club, Anazai, Bistro Lyonal Daury, and five years ago he became a caterer.

One of his original partners in the catering business was Mrs. Christiansen, who had previously been in the business by herself. "It's a lot of work. It's easier with two people to share the burden and work and responsibility."

The caterers agreed that foods should be fresh and made "from scratch" whenever possible.

"I use maybe 30 percent pre-prepared" foods, said Mrs. Edens. "I do try to do everything from scratch. And I still believe in using real butter. If you don't overdo, it's not that bad in cholesterol — and worth every bit of flavor."

"Some things you can make ahead and some things you can't," said Mrs. Christiansen. "Some things taste better if you do."

"Some things are better cooked on site," added Chardola.

"We pride ourselves on not freezing ahead," Mrs. Christiansen said.

"If a product comes in frozen, it stays frozen until we need it," Chardola said. "If a product comes in fresh, it's used fresh."

Caterers' services are hired for many different-sized events, and for many different-sized crowds. "We've done Septemberfest for 800 to 1,000," said Mrs. Christiansen. "We did Clayton William's announcement for governor — that was about 2,000."

"We did a sit-down dinner for 400," Chardola said.

"Sit-downs are tough," added Mrs. Christiansen. "They are all plated, all hot, all guaranteed. We did a sit-down dinner for 250 people ... with five courses and one oven."

At Foods Fantastic, "we tend to do a lot of corporate catering," Mrs. Bunnell said, and many of her clients learn about her business by word of mouth. "It amazes me that we continue to get that kind of business.

"We can do the latest (food trends), but I don't know that my customers want 'the latest.' Most men want to be able to recognize what they are eating, and be familiar with it (and how it tastes)."

Her catered events also include fund-raisers for 600 people; gift bags for four; open houses for 15 to 20 people; and corporate lunches for 10 to 70 people.

But even the most enjoyable events have to end — and that means the least enjoyable part of the evening: cleaning up. When an event is catered by a professional, the clean-up is part of the service.

Time spent in cleaning up depends on the event just concluded, Mrs. Bunnell said. For a recent fund-raiser for 500, about six hours were spend in clearing tables, washing dishes and utensils, and cleaning kitchen. China, crystal and silver had to be counted and returned. "When you're going off-premises, and you have to haul everything, cleaning up takes a long time," she said.

'Are you kidding? Cook at home? I go home, take a shower and jump in bed.'

— Chef Dominique Chardola of Chez Vous Catering

Often, leftovers are donated to local agencies, including Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children and the soup kitchen.

Catering is a full-time occupation, and sometimes caterers' families get in on it. Mrs. Edens likes to experiment with new recipes, and when she does, her family is the first to sample the new dish. Recently, Mrs. Edens said, "I experimented with German chocolate brownies. They seemed to have gone over real well, especially with my husband."

Catering also is a group effort, and the professionals are proud of the work done by their employees. "We both are very attached to the people who work with us," Mrs. Christiansen said. "If they were not around it would not be the same."

"They are like family," added Chardola.

When the long hours are over and caterers go to their own homes, what do they cook for their families?

Mrs. Bunnell said she is making lighter meals at home. "Of late, I cook simple foods at home — salads, vegetables, potatoes or pasta ... fresh fruit, meats."

"I have kids, so I cook kid food," said Mrs. Christiansen. "I don't eat the kinds of things people expect you to eat," adding that pizza is a crowd-pleaser at her house. "I don't cook fancy for my kids, but I will for my husband — but my husband will eat anything."

As far as cooking at home goes, Chardola said, "Are you kidding!? Cook at home!? I go home, take a shower and jump in bed."

At home, he said, "My wife cooks for me."

Property Tax Protest and Appeal Procedures

The law gives property owners the right to protest actions concerning their property tax appraisals. You may follow these procedures if you have a concern about:

* the value placed on your property;
* exemptions that may apply to you;
* cancellation of agricultural appraisal;
* whether your property is taxable;
* which local governments should be taxing your property; or
* you think the appraisal district has done something else that adversely affected you

Informal Review: If you have a question concerning your property value, you are welcome to visit informally at 4631 Andrews Highway, Midland, Texas or by telephone at (915) 699-4991. One of our staff appraisers will go over our records with you.

Review by the the Appraisal Review Board: If you can't resolve your problem informally with the appraisal district staff, you may have your case heard by the appraisal review board.

The appraisal review board (ARB) is an independent board of citizens that reviews problems with appraisals and other concerns listed above. They have the power to order the appraisal district to make the necessary changes to solve problems. If you file a written request for an ARB hearing (called a notice of protest) before the deadline, the ARB will set your case for a hearing. You'll receive written notification of the time, date and place of the hearing. The hearing will be informal. You and the appraisal district representative will be asked to present evidence about your case. The ARB will make its decision based on the evidence presented. You can get a copy of a protest form from the appraisal district office at Midland Central Appraisal District 4631 Andrews Hwy. P.O. Box 908002 Midland, Texas 79708-8002.

Note: You shouldn't try to contact ARB members outside of the hearing. The law requires you to sign an affidavit saying that you haven't done so before the ARB hears your case.

Review by the District Court: After it decides your case, the ARB must send you a copy of its order by certified mail. If you're not satisfied with the decision you have the right to appeal to district court. If you choose to go to court, you must start the process by filing a petition within 45 days of the date you receive the ARB's order. If the appraisal district has appraised your property at $1,000,000 or more, you must file a notice of appeal with the chief appraiser within 15 days of the date you receive the ARB's order.

More information: You can get more information by contacting your appraisal district at Midland Central Appraisal District 4631 Andrews Hwy. Midland Tx. You can also get a pamphlet describing how to prepare a protest from the appraisal district or from the State Property Tax Board, 4301 Westbank Drive, Building B, Suite 100, Austin, Texas 78746.

Deadline for filing protests with the ARB

(the deadline is postponed to the next business day if it fall on a weekend or holiday)

Usual deadline:
Late protests (if you miss the usual deadline for good cause. Good cause is some reason beyond your control, like a medical emergency. The ARB decides whether you have good cause.)	On or before May 31 (or 30 days after a notice of appraised value was mailed to you, whichever is later).
Special deadlines:	Before the day the appriasial review board approves records for the year. Contact the appraisal district for more information.
Change of use (if the appraisal district has informed you that you are losing agricultural appraisal because you changed the use of your land)	Before the 30th day after the notice of the determination was mailed to you.
ARB changes (if the ARB has informed you of a change that increases your tax liability and the change didn't result from a protest you filed)	Before the 10th day after the notice of the determination was mailed to you.

If you believe the appraisal district or ARB should have sent you a notice and did not, you may file a protest until the day before taxes become delinquent (usually February 1). The ARB decides whether it will hear your case based on evidence about whether a required noteice was mailed to you.

Expo '91 can save managers time, expense

What is the most effective way to quickly survey a wide variety of business products and services?

A trade show!

What is the drawback to most trade shows? They usually require the time and expense of an out-of-town trip.

Not so with Business Expo 91, set for Tuesday, May 7, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. in Midland Center.

First, Expo 91 is right here in Midland. Sixty exhibitors will be showing everything from computers to sound systems to advertising specialties to business signs.

Secondly, it won't cost a dime to attend.

"Your business card is your admission ticket," says Malcolm Outlaw, chair of the Midland Chamber's Business Council. Outlaw and show chair Mark Lancaster have worked the past six months with a committee to ensure the show's success.

"We're targeting the business person who is searching for new ways to improve their productivity and gain a competitive edge," says Outlaw. "People who should attend are office managers, business owners, purchasing agents and secretaries -- anyone who is faced with buying products and services."

Touring the show floor should take less than an hour. Expo 91 will be open during the lunch hour as well as after 5 p.m., when the Expo 91 Business After Hours Mixer begins.

According to Lancaster, the trade show setting gives the consumer an advantage.

"If you're just looking, you can control how much time you spend with a potential vendor," says Lancaster. "If you find something of interest you can get a full demonstration or brochures without waiting for material to arrive in the mail or for a representative to schedule a visit. It's a very time-effective way to keep up with what's available in the marketplace."

Running simultaneously with the trade show is a program of business-oriented seminars, each about 50 minutes in length.

These include "Do's and Don'ts of Personnel Management," at 10 a.m., "Legal Aspects of Small Business," at 11 a.m., "Accounting and Tax for Small Business," at 1 p.m., and "Protecting Your Business," at 2 p.m.

Now you know what it's like to be a business without a Yellow Pages ad.

There's one moment in the buyer-seller relationship found only in the Yellow Pages: when someone, mind made up and money in hand, turns to the Southwestern Bell Yellow Pages to find exactly what they want. Did we say one moment? It's a scene repeated more than 10 million times a year in Midland alone.* Which is exactly what you want.

Chamber names small business person of year

The Business Council of the Midland Chamber of Commerce has named Van Folger as the 1991 Small Business Person of the Year.

Folger owns Folger's Superstore, employing 40 people in his Midland facility.

During the downturn in the Midland economy, Folger emphasized buying market share and expanding into new markets by way of increased advertising and installation of an 800 number for customers living outside of Midland. Folger's now has #1 market share in TV, VCR, home audio and car audio and is #2 in appliance market share in Midland.

When Folger purchased the business from Bill Hester in 1973 it was strictly sales and service of Magnavox brand stereos and televisions. Different brands were added and video movie rentals and rent-to-own departments started in 1982. After the move to the current location, appliances were added in 1986. In February, 1990 the movie rental business was sold in order to make room for new categories. In May of this year, the computer, home office department will be opened.

According to Folger, market penetration in Odessa is high enough to preclude the necessity of a store there. An annual Odyssey promotion, pulls business in from as far away as Hobbs and Jal, N.M. The last research study results showed market penetration being number one in all electronics categories and #4 in appliances in Odessa. All of the above brings added dollars to Midland's economy.

The Midland Chamber salutes Van Folger and his successful business and community involvement in the Tall City.

Small Business: Building America's Future

By Dr. Jerry Lee Jones
Midland College

This year's Small Business Week theme is "Small Business: Building America's Future." The importance of small business to America's economy will be recognized throughout the nation at Small Business Week activities.

America's small firms employ six of every ten workers, provide the majority of new jobs, and produce more than 50 percent of the nation's goods and services.

More than 20 million Americans own a small business; and the rest of us benefit from their ingenuity, enterprise and hard work. Small business deserves much of the credit for the economic well-being of our communities and our country.

President Bush recently said that the importance of small business "cannot be overstated." He said that "by testing thousands of new ideas, products, and processes in the marketplace, they are inventing America's future."

Consider this: Small business owners create two out of every three new jobs, are responsible for most job training, employ about half of the nation's private sector workforce, and are the major employers of younger, older and female workers. Over half the inventions we take for granted came from small companies, such as the zipper, the artificial heart valve, the pacemaker and insulin.

Small business is also helping to put a dent in America's foreign trade deficit, contributing about 20 percent of total U.S. exports. In addition, smaller manufacturers are suppliers to larger industrial companies, which are important exporters.

Small business men and women remain America's pioneers. The development of new enterprises depends on many factors: hopes, dreams, hard work, ambition, and often, 12-18 hour work days. The small business men and women of America truly follow a great heritage. They are building America's future,

Small Business "Vital Statistics"

* More new small businesses start each year (about 1 million) than the population of the ten states.
* The number of black-owned firms has grown five times faster than the U.S. population from 1980 to 1987.
* The number of small businesses (20 million) is about four times larger than the farm population of the U.S.
* The number of women-owned firms (4.6 million) is greater than the number of children born in the U.S. each year.

Business Council assists growing, established firms

The Business Council of the Midland Chamber of Commerce was formed to support entrepreneurship and expansion of small business. Small business, as defined by the Small Business Administration, is a company with 500 or less employees. This includes most of Midland's businesses, from the small start-up enterprise to the larger, mature firm.

The Business Council's program of work consists of educational programs, trade show, recognition of outstanding performance and forums for Midland's small businesses. The Council provides new start-up businesses with its "Starting a Business in Midland, Texas." The Council does not have quick answers for business problems but can direct business owners to organizations such as Midland College for in-depth training and assistance.

The Expo Committee, with Chair Mark Lancaster and Publicity Chair Trish Kile, coordinates "Expo 91 -- Midland on the Move" a trade show for small businesses to showcase their products and services.

The Retail Committee, co-chaired by Jack Sherman and Don Byerly, conducted a sales training rally last fall and assisted the Tourism Department in Midland Sales Days.

The Recognition Committee, chaired by Garth Wright, identifies businesses worthy of recognition such as business persons of the year.

The Business Council works with the Tourism Committee of the Chamber to determine and encourage businesses and/or attractions which will complement the Midland area as a tourist destination. These include operations such as bed and breakfast establishments, RV parks and western dinner-on-the-range caterers.

MHCC honors four Midland entrepreneurs

Four outstanding members have been recognized by the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

As part of the upcoming Small Business Week, the chamber announced its Hispanic Businessman and Hispanic Businesswoman of the Year, along with Member of the Year and Corporate Member of the Year.

Businessman is Alfred Morales, who owns and operates Casita Gerardo with his wife Velma.

"I can't believe it. But I'm very thankful to the chamber and to all my friends," he said of the honor. The San Antonio native did not start out to be a restaurateur.

After graduating from Midland schools, he joined the military and served in Vietnam. After the service, he earned a bachelor of science degree from Sul Ross State University and taught in the Midland Independent School District for eight years.

Then, as he put it, "My wife and I decided to become entrepreneurs." After eight years running his restaurant, Morales said the best advice for success he can offer is "For the owner or one of the owners to be there as much as possible.

Polly Vargas, Hispanic Businesswoman of the Year, said she was "really honored and surprised to be selected."

She and her husband, Ruben, own and operate Trendy Tees in Midland Park Mall. She noted that, though the casual wear shop opened two years ago, she and her husband have had their own retailing business for 10 years. The couple operated a computer portrait system that they took to school fairs, and to the mall during Christmas, Mother's Day and other special occasions.

"I've learned about business through experience," said the mother of two. "And I've learned through my husband Ruben. We've worked into this together."

Her husband runs the DECA program at Midland High School. The secret of their success, she said, is merchandising the store as a specialty shop, not merely a T-shirt store, and offering variety and customer service. Of the store, she said, "it's a lot of hard work, but it's fun."

Member of the Year Celia Morales has been involved with the chamber since it was founded six years ago. As she points out, "I've been involved with every committee the chamber's had." Among the committees she has served on are the All-Male Fashion show and the anniversary/installation banquet.

"It's an honor for me (to be named Member of the Year)," she said. "It's been rewarding to see the chamber grow from a handful of members to over 300."

Corporate Member of the Year was Clayton W. Williams Jr. Companies. Clayton Williams, the head of the group of companies, said that he is very proud of the honor. "I've always thought it was important to be a good citizen and participate in the community. I'm particularly proud to be selected by the Hispanic Chamber. I've supported them for a number of years."

Elvia Hernandez, president of the chamber, said the company was selected because it was one of the first corporate members, has supported all its projects, and that "Clayton has given of his money and his time."

The four winners, who will be honored at a May 10 luncheon at the Plaza Club, will compete on the state level this July at the Texas Association of Mexican-American Chambers of Commerce convention in Lubbock. The state winners will compete on the national level at the U.S. Hispanic Chambers of Commerce convention in Chicago this September.

> "I've learned about busines through experience. And I've learned through my husband Ruben. We've worked into this together."

WHEN YOUR TARGET IS THE PERMIAN BASIN

The Permian Basin is an oil and gas producing empire of 100,000 square miles with an oil well for every square mile. Comprised of 54 counties in Southeast New Mexico and West Texas this far flung industry. accounts for roughly 20 percent of the nation's total oil production.

Yet. a long standing problem has been the lack of a single newspaper to serve the thousands of companies and over 40,000 workers involved in exploration, land, production, drilling, oilfield service and supply, pipelines and construction, refining, and transportation.

But beginning May 12, The Permian Basin Oil Report, published weekly by the Midland Reporter-Telegram, will become the information source for the Permian Basin oil industry.

Packed with information and articles about oil and gas people, products, companies, issues, events, drilling, exploration, and production, the Oil Report will appear each Sunday as a section of the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Additionally, it will be mailed to every producer, operator and oilfield service company throughout the Permian Basin.

If the Permian Basin is your target market, the Permian Basin Oil Report is the way to reach it.

Pump prices

NEW YORK — Gasoline prices rose again in the week ended Tuesday, the seventh increase in the last eight weeks, the American Automobile Association said. The average nationwide price for a gallon of self-service regular unleaded gasoline was $1.138, up 1.9 cents for the week, the association said.

The price has increased 5.8 cents since March 5.

Gasoline prices historically rise as the weather gets warmer, and there has been added price pressure as the U.S. supply has shrunk to 205 million barrels recently, which the government considers a minimal level.

Womenews

At last! A newspaper section for women's news, and secure enough to call itself Womenews.

No doubt, the concept will make many women shudder. Particularly, women who work in newsrooms familiar with the now virtually extinct practice of loading up so-called women's pages with wedding announcements, sewing tips, bridge club news and anything else that wasn't considered "real news."

The Chicago Tribune's new section, Womenews, which debuted Sunday, instead, recognizes that there is news that appeals specifically to women and has designed a snappy section to wrap around it.

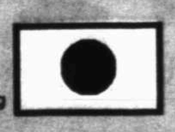
Research clearly shows newspapers are losing women readers. One study indicates that the number of women who read a paper four days out of five declined 26 percent between 1982 and 1987. Tribune Associate Editor Colleen Dishon, who created Womenews, says that's because information of special interest to women is tucked away in feature sections or not covered at all.

Her premier edition of Womenews features stories about opening adoption files, women in the military, women into caving, and outrageous quotes from Oprah.

Notable is a full-page of classifieds for beauty shops, maid service, florists, nannies and stores that deliver panty hose.

Ms. Dishon isn't expecting most newspapers to follow her lead. "I don't see any great move to do this."

Japan exports



HOUSTON (AP) — Japan-based Toshiba International Corp. is planning to build electric motors in Houston for export to Japan.

The export is believed the first involving a Japanese company in Houston, Toshiba Vice President Drew Johnston said.

The electronics firm has about 720 employees at its Houston operation and the new production, expected to begin about Aug. 1, will require a 200,000-square-foot addition to its plant.

John Paul Pitts/ Reporter-Telegram

The Fina refinery at Big Spring will soon be competing in the fuel marketplace with natural gas. Fina and Lone Star gas have announced a joint venture to market CNG in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Fina, Lone Star form CNG venture

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

The momentum for compressed natural gas (CNG) picked up this week as Fina corp. and Lone Star Gas Co. annouced their intentions to jointly develop the first public complessed natural gas refueling facilities in the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex.

It will be the second public CNG refueling facility in the state. Texaco and Southern Union Gas Co have installed a public CNG station in Austin, and a partnership composed of Houston Entex, Houston Pipeline, Vista Group Inc. and Natural Fuels of Denver are set to open one in Houston.

Rick Hagar, a spokesman for Fina, said the Dallas-Fort Worth project could be the start of a statewide move to open public CNG refueling stations. "We will see how it goes here, and if it is successful we will move out into other locations."

He said Fina hopes to have the first facility installed this year, and expects to have four to six stations in operation within the new two years. He also noted that Fina would entertain partnerships with other gas companies in other areas of the state.

The first Fina location will probably be determined by its proximity to a fleet of commercial vehicles which have been converted to CNG. He noted that most of the vehicles at DFW Airport have been coverted to CNG as well as many United Parcel Service trucks.

While there are a number of private CNG refueling stations in the Metroplex for fleets and government vehicles, they are closed to the public.

"There is a state law that requires fleet owners to have 30 percent of their vehicles converted to alternate fuels by 1992," said Hagar.

In a press statement, Fina President and CEO Ron W. Haddock said: "The use of natural gas as a transportation fuel has several advantages, and we believe the time is right to offer the choice to our customers."

David Biegler, chairman and CEO of Lone Star Gas, said, "The major obstacle to widespread use of natural gas as a transportation fuel has been the lack of an infrastructure. Fina and Lone Star plan to begin to eliminate that obstacle."

Cost of the refueling station is estimated at $250,000 for compression, dispenser and storage, which is about the

Consumer outlook gloomier

■ Consumer expectations are not as bright as they were following the Persian War, according to a survey.

N.Y. Times News Service

American consumers' outlook on the economy has turned gloomier after the initial euphoria following the Persian Gulf war, a survey shows.

The New York-based Conference Board said Tuesday that its consumer confidence index dropped 1.9 points to 79.2 in April, after rising nearly 22 points in March.

The monthly data is based on a reading of 100 taken in 1985, considered an "average" level of consumer confidence. The information comes from surveys sent to 5,000 households nationwide.

Fabian Linden, executive director of the business research organization, said that consumers' expectations dropped slightly in April after jumping in March.

"After the euphoria following the war, people realized there were problems they had to contend with here at home," Linden said.

Linden said that consumers appear most concerned about jobs. Four times as many respondents said that jobs were "hard to find" as those who said jobs were "plentiful," he said.

With a 6.8 percent national unemployment rate, he said "people aren't going to go out and spend money" until they feel more secure about their jobs.

In the Pacific states — Alaska, California, Hawaii, Oregon and Washington — the index dropped to 93.2 from 100.3 in March. The confidence level in the region and in the Mountain states was the highest in the nation, but it was far below the 126.1 of a year ago.

"Things are definitely not rosy," said John Golisch, a partner at Arthur Andersen & Co. in Los Angeles. "While the housing market has picked up a little bit, car sales and retail sales are down. Take a look at what states and cities are doing:

Energy Appreciation Week gets underway

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The Permian Basin will honor the petroleum industry with the sixth annual Energy Appreciation Week.

The week gets underway today with services at area churches.

The fourth annual PBPA Golf Tournament will be Monday at Mission Dorado Country Club. The tournament will be a four-man scramble, shot gun start with tee time at 1 p.m.

Thursday, Denise Bode, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, will be the keynote speaker at the Energy Appreciation luncheon. It will be at the Holiday Inn Country Villa beginning at noon.

Preparation for the "Blowout" will begin Friday at the American Legion Woods Post 19, when cookers begin setting up.

The Blowout gets underway at 11 a.m. Saturday when the gates open to the public. The Blowout will feature a cookoff in brisket, fajitas, ribs and showmanship. A barbecue plate luncheon, costing $6 for adults and $3 for children and senior citizens, will begin at noon. Judging in the cookoff will begin at 2 p.m.

Entertainment gets underway at 1 p.m. and will include music, dancing and the annual "World's Ugliest Roughneck Contest" sponsored by the Midland Reporter-Telegram. The contest is open to both men and women.

Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, recalled that Energy Appreciation Week got its start in 1986. "It was started when people out here were not only feeling bad but doing poorly; we had just suffered the greatest fall in crude prices in the history of the oil business, from around $28 to below $10 in the space of a few months.

"Charles Perry, (then) president of the PBPA, determined that we should do something in appreciation of the industry and also to instill some optimism in the group. We came up with Energy Appreciation Week."

Hoffa's son wants to be teamster president

Associated Press

DETROIT — Before sitting down for a recent interview, labor lawyer James P. Hoffa proudly pointed out a portrait of his famous father hanging on the walls of a Teamsters union office.

Hoffa

At a separate news conference at his law offices, he made sure a drawing of the former union leader was prominently displayed before the television cameras.

The 49-year-old Hoffa knows Jimmy Hoffa's face and name stir memories of a time when the Teamsters were 2 million members strong with vast power. And as he attempts a bid for the office held by his controversial father, he envisions turning the labor group, now with 1.6 million members, into the national force the elder Hoffa built before his imprisonment in 1967 and disappearance eight years later.

Some Teamsters members argue Hoffa isn't qualified for the top job and is unfairly using his father's name to provoke sentimental feelings among the rank and file. Others contend Hoffa would make a fine president because he's a skillful lawyer with a lifetime of exposure to the union.

Hoffa, though, may not even get the chance unless a federal judge orders the union's court-appointed trustees to set aside what Hoffa calls technicalities. Teamsters rules require that candidates for elected office serve at least two years in a union craft.

Hoffa has worked as an administrative assistant to Lawrence Brenan, head of the 70,000-member Michigan Joint Council 43 of the Teamsters, since April 1990, in addition to his law practice.

But Hoffa said he's also paid Teamsters dues for 22 years and served as a union attorney, negotiating contracts, settling grievances and defending discharged

Expo '91 gives area businesses exposure

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The Midland Chamber of Commerce is joining in the celebration of National Small Business Week with its annual Business Expo '91, called "Midland on the Move."

The expo, featuring 60 exhibitors, will be Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. at the Midland Center. All booths have been sold. The expo will also feature a hospitality room just outside the main exhibition hall, and several local radio stations are planning live remote broadcasts from Midland Center. Representatives of Private Industry Council, Midland College and Small Business Administration will also have representatives at the expo.

Malcolm Outlaw, chairman of the Business Council, said exhibitors "range from computer and communications companies with state of the art equipment to a company with innovative promotional items."

Outlaw said he expects 800 to 900 people to attend the expo, which is free. "Admission is by business card, or your boss's business card," he said, adding that he hopes to get a good representation of secretaries and business managers as well as general managers or chief executives.

Outlaw pointed out that the expo is good exposure for exhibitors. "We suspect that exhibitors will have exposure, through ads, mailings and the people visiting the expo, to just about everyone in Midland." He also observed that "there are a lot of businesses in Midland that people don't know are here."

In addition to the exhibitions, there are four seminars scheduled for Tuesday: "Dos and Don'ts of Personnel Management" at 10 a.m.; "Legal Aspects of Small Business" at 11 a.m.; "Accounting and Tax for Small Business" at 1 p.m., and "Protecting Your Business" at 2 p.m.

Big Oil revamping credit policies

NEW YORK (AP) — Some big oil companies have been erasing the difference between cash prices and credit prices in their service stations, but that doesn't necessarily mean consumers are getting a break.

Mobil Corp. announced this week that cash and credit prices would be the same at its company-owned and -operated stations, saying it was encouraging independent businesses that operate under the Mobil brand name to follow suit.

Chevron Corp. recently did the same thing and said all of the stations went along. Texaco Inc. is trying such an arrangement in parts of the Midwest and Southwest.

Exxon Corp. and Amoco Corp. said they intend on maintaining the type of pricing that came into vogue about a decade ago, with cash purchases costing less than credit card purchases.

The theory is that cash purchases are easier to process, so customers who pay cash should not have to absorb such costs as billing the customers who use credit cards.

As much of the industry changes its pricing, the impact on motorists depends on which way the prices get moved.

"Obviously, it is convenient for consumers if the credit price is going to be brought down to the cash price," said Edwin S. Rothschild, energy policy director for Citizen Action, a consumers group in Washington. "The question is what does this mean — is the credit price going down to the cash price, or is the cash price going up to the credit price?"

Rothschild, a vocal critic of the industry, said "when a major company does something like this, it's not for the benefit of the public."

Oil companies say pump prices are set by local gas stations and vary from market to market.

The oil companies that are getting rid of the price differential are hoping to increase their market share. Those that do not say that they want to keep offering discounts to cash-paying customers, though they may also be trying to hang onto money they make by tacking service charges onto the credit-card purchases, some service stations believe.

Enron Corp. sees 8 percent increase in earnings

HOUSTON (AP) — Despite troubled natural gas prices, Enron Corp. is reporting first-quarter earnings of $109 million, an 8 percent gain over the $101 million the company made in same period a year ago.

Revenues for the January-March period were $3.6 billion, compared to $3.1 billion last year, the Houston-based natural gas company reported Tuesday.

Earnings per share amounted to $2.03, compared to $1.88 in the first quarter of 1990.

"Enron's earnings in the first quarter of 1991 reflect strong operating income growth despite extremely low natural gas prices," Kenneth L. Lay, chairman and chief executive officer.

Teaching dealers new way to sell used cars

By Ken Kusmer

MARION, Ind. (AP) — Jim DeVoe's down-home, deep voice and pot belly exude friendliness. He's also pretty smart, with an MBA under his belt. And he's good with numbers, having worked in commercial loans for a big Chicago bank.

The question is: Would you buy a used car from this man?

So many people have that used-car dealer DeVoe is now selling his sales techniques to others.

Every month, dozens of dealers nationwide travel to this General Motors Corp. factory town to hear the successful 46-year-old native Hoosier explain how they can make money selling used cars to customers with bad credit.

The three-day course outlines DeVoe's "buy here-pay here" philosophy, a trade practice by which dealers provide the financing for customers the banks have turned away.

"The car dealers today are having plenty of trouble, and they need extra help," said DeVoe, who owns a Chevrolet-Cadillac dealership.

THEY ARE conditions that make buy here-pay here all the more attractive, DeVoe said.

He said as many as half of all car customers have some flaw in their credit profile that gets them rejected by banks — perhaps they've missed a loan payment or spent too little time in a community or on a job.

Dealerships can set up their own lending operations that can finance a car purchase by these customers without as great a risk as a bank faces, DeVoe said.

He gives this example involving a car selling for $2,800: After taxes and a $300 downpayment, a $2,500 loan may be needed. If the borrower doesn't pay, the bank may get as little as $300 when the recovered car is resold and be stuck with a $2,200 loss.

Using that same example: A dealer, who may have paid only $1,000 for the car to begin with, has only a $700 risk after taxes and downpayment. With the car recovered and resold, even at $300, his potential loss is only $400.

With a paying borrower, the bank will profit from interest on the loan, but the dealer gets interest plus the $1,800 profit on the car at the time of the sale, DeVoe said.

While customers get to buy a car when all seems lost, they also pay dearly for the privilege.

Interest rates many car dealers charge are well above market rates. Devoe said financing — with consumer loan-type rates as high as 25 percent — is structured so the customer makes weekly or bi-weekly payments for one to three years on cars ranging in cost from $2,995 to $5,995.

DEVOE, AN MBA from Indiana University who worked in commercial loans for Continental Illinois Bank & Trust in Chicago, has been selling cars for more than two decades. He got his big break at his father's dealership in Marion.

DeVoe was attending a meeting in 1978 when another dealer told him about the buy here-pay here plan and how it sold a lot of extra cars. The idea became more appealing a year later when a recession began to set in.

DeVoe says an initial $19 newspaper ad grossed $8,000. As cash flow grew, DeVoe's dealership graduated from cheaper cars and low sales volume to better cars and more profits.

"We had to reinvent the wheel one spoke at a time during those 10 years. My God, there's a lot to learn and a lot of mistakes to be made," he said.

He started sharing those experiences with other dealers in his Auto Credit Seminars beginning in 1986. He estimates more than 400 dealer organizations and more than 2,500 dealers have attended them.

For a $6,295 fee, a dealership can send as many employees it wants, can return at any time and gets start-up support. A tour of the local GM stamping plant is thrown in for free.

RON TONKIN, former president of the National Automobile Dealers Association, said he was skeptical when he he first attended DeVoe's program two years ago. But he says he now has nine buy here-pay here lots at his 10 dealerships in the Portland, Ore., area. It took him 18 months to break even, but now he's seeing profits.

"Anybody that is contemplating going into this, I would definitely recommend they go to DeVoe's school," Tonkin said.

DeVoe took his buy here-pay here concept a step further last year when he created J.D. Byrider Systems, a national buy here-pay here company with 20 dealer franchises from Wilmington, Del. to Greeley, Colo.

Franchisees pay a $29,000 fee, a 3 percent royalty fee and 2 percent for advertising.

"With our experience in the business, many of the dealers could use more support, more training, field men, marketing programs done for them, better operations manuals, and so we feel like there's a big potential in franchising," DeVoe said.

Continental suffers $195 million quarterly loss

HOUSTON (AP) — Continental Airlines is reporting a loss of $195 million for the first quarter of 1991, due largely to low passenger loads and the continued effects of the Persian Gulf War.

Continental reported this week that revenues for the quarter ending March 31 were $1.263 billion, up slightly from the $1.258 billion a year ago when the company reported a $21 million quarter profit.

Continental officials said the 1990 results included some $70 million in special items, which consisted primarily of litigation settlement proceeds.

Houston-based Continental Airlines Holdings Inc., the carrier's parent company, will announce its first-quarter earnings soon, the company said. Last month, the holding company reported record losses of $2.2 billion for the fourth quarter of 1990.

Art Kent, spokesman for both the holding company and the carrier, said the figures for the holding company were delayed because accounting changes made during the last quarter created a more complicated report.

"At the end of 1990, we did a considerable amount of cleaning of our books and reporting of annual results. One of the results of that... (is) it exacerbates the accounting process," he said.

"The holding company financial people have not finished consolidating the figures for all of the subsidiaries of the holding company," Kent said. "Since we had finished the financial work on the airlines and since the airlines is what most people are interested in....we released it."

Continental Airlines Holdings filed Dec. 3 for protection from creditors in federal bankruptcy court, saying it was overwhelmed by its debts and fuel prices that surged in the wake of problems in the Persian Gulf.

Rick Shuyler, vice president-finance and chief financial officer for Continental Airlines Holdings, said the carrier's losses were in line with the rest of the industry, which has been burdened by the national economic recession, fare competition and the lingering effects from the Gulf War.

"The Gulf War had a significant restraining effect on worldwide travel, but by the end of the quarter we saw a resurgence in demand," Shuyler said.

Frontier craft lives at saddle shop

By John Flores

KINGSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The 825,000 acres of South Texas brush country the King Ranch occupies can be tough on anything that moves — man, mule or machine.

Capt. Richard King was a rough and tumble man who knew he and his men would require nothing less that topnotch equipment in 1853 when he made the deal for what would become the largest independently owned ranch in the world.

King hired craftsmen to make and repair saddles, chaps and riding gear for himself and his cowboys. These items were made by hand, and many still are. The shop has changed locations a few times since the old days — it's now located in the Ragland Building in downtown Kingsville — but the workmanship and the reputation remains high, said Anthony Strubhart, general manager of the King Ranch Saddle Shop.

"Including customers from the United States and Texas, we send catalogs to Germany, France, Japan. I could go on all day on the countries where we have customers," Strubhart said. The shop's catalog sales account for 85 to 90 percent of total sales, with about 20,000 names on the mailing list, he added.

Located at the corner of Sixth Street and Kleberg Avenue in Kingsville, the shop is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday during the summer. It offers a wide range of items, from saddles and boots to leather handbags for women, shaving kits, checkbooks, wallets, belts, hats and jewelry.

Strubhart said saddles and other custom items can take between six to eight weeks to deliver to the customer. Regular orders take one week. With 34 employees, the Saddle Shop produces about 200 items per week, he said. Each item comes with the King Ranch Warranty — an unconditional guarantee for one year against any defects in materials or workmanship.

Remodeled at a cost of $1.2 million, the 13,500-square-foot, two-story brick-and-granite building — equipped with an elevator and air-conditioning — symbolizes the spirit of restoration King Ranch planners say they hope will inspire the owners of other buildings along Kleberg Avenue.

When Strubhart led workmen to the project to remodel the 86-year-old Ragland Building, he estimated it would take him close to a year to complete. But the King Ranch wanted it done in six months.

"We did it in eight," Strubhart said, smiling. Now Strubhart oversees the operation from a slightly different perspective, as a non-sweating manager with a spacious office and a hawk's eye view of the town.

While the rest of the world and its products go toward automation, the King Ranch holds fast to the legacy of the handmade saddle.

The Santa Gertrudis bulls developed at the King Ranch weigh up to 2,500 pounds. While helicopters and trucks have largely replaced horses in rounding up cattle, mounted cowboys are still needed. Saddles are still essential equipment.

Beto Maldonado, 61, worked on the ranch 50 years before retiring from cattle operations last year.

"They put me on the payroll when I was 10 years old," he said. "I worked with cattle on the ranch all my life."

"We would have to halter break the bulls. We'd get all our supplies from the saddle shop for the longest time; halters and ropes. We've been dealing with the saddle shop for as long as I can remember," he said.

Stephen J. "Tio" Kleberg, vice president for agribusiness of King Ranch, Inc., said sales at the Saddle Shop have been brisk.

The move to the Ragland Building has increased walk-in business, he said.

"We hope to help increase commerce in the community. So far the sales have been excellent. We (the King Ranch) are probably one of the Saddle Shop's best customers in repairs and new saddles."

Robert Salas, 40, is a saddlemaker at the shop, where he started working n 1972. He builds and repairs saddles on the ground floor inside the shop. Customers can watch him while he works, using hand tools and a leather-sewing machine.

"I learned this from my father-in-law and brother-in-law," Salas said. "I started doing repair work and then began to build saddles. Most of the saddles take about 56 hours and I make about 20 per year. The repair work is another story — it takes up most of my time."

Many riders prefer to have saddles repaired rather than buy new ones because a good saddle can last a lifetime. Salas takes pride in his work; each saddle bears his name.

"I stamp my initials and the day work was started, along with the King Ranch brand," Salas said. "These saddles, in 25 years, they can still be in good shape. I might repair a saddle four or five times before the owner finally orders a new one.

"The saddles haven't changed too much over the years. I work in the same style as years before. These have a special horn, made to pull a heavy bull. Some people want a saddle made with fiberglass, but I use Ponderosa pine with rawhide. I don't get any complaints."

Odessans find freedom through growing pecans

By Jeanette Krizak

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Realizing his career was keeping him from a simpler life he craved in the country, Rick Eicher ditched his oil field job almost 10 years ago to try his hand at the pecan business.

Just a couple of acres of pecan trees in his north Ector County back yard eventually grew into Gardendale Pecan Processing and Mercantile. The plant is about 10 miles north of Odessa on Farm Road 554.

Gone are the day when Eicher was on call 24 hours a day as an oil field safety director, leaving little time to spend with his wife, Connie, and his children, Jessica, 11, and Rick, 13.

"I was on call seven days a week, 24 hours a day. I averaged 70 hours a week, I'm told," the 38-year-old Eicher said. "The oil patch served me well, but it was Connie's dream to have a business out here in the country."

The dream became a mutual one. Eicher, who holds two bachelor's degrees, gradually let go of his oil career because he discovered the good life might not lie in a fat paycheck.

"My goal was to be in a managerial position for a drilling firm. But I was living to work, not working to live. You've got to enjoy life more," he said. "This is the most freedom I've experienced in my life."

The Eichers began selling Texas' favorite nut about eight years ago, and three years later acquired the equipment they needed to grow, shell and process hundreds of pecans — from irrigation hoses to machines that crack, shell, and sort pecans.

Eicher supervises the shelling and inspecting of the pecans while Mrs. Eicher keeps the business' financial records.

"It was really hard the first couple of years. I hadn't had any business training — at least not any practical experience," Mrs. Eicher said.

"I like the independence of it, of setting your own goals," she said. "The business is something we do together. When we have planning sessions, the kids sit in on those."

Because the Eichers don't have the means to grow all of their pecans, they buy pecans from anyone who offers them. Most of the processed nuts are sold retail to the public.

The business shelled about 70,000 pounds of pecans last season, but they grew only about 11,000 pounds, Eicher said.

The pecans are sold at $4.50 per pound for pecan halves, $4.25 for large pieces and $4 for pecan chips.

The Eichers set their own hours at the business, usually full days during the fall and winter months when pecans are plentiful, but half-days in spring and summer. Holiday gift-giving and baking keep business brisk in November and December, Eicher said.

Recently the Eichers came to the aid of R. Spencer Pratt's Fudge Factory in Nauvoo, Ill., by selling him 600 pounds of the sought-after nut. The company was having difficulty finding pecans it could afford, a problem face by other pecan-related businesses because of the sparse 1990 crop.

The Brenham-based Blue Bell Ice Cream plant recently announced that the pecan shortage might threaten production of favorite flavors such as Butter Pecan and Pralines and Cream.

"We've been short on pecans this year all the way through the pecan belt," Eicher said. "I thought about calling Blue Bell to help them, but I don't have enough supply for them."

The "pecan belt" extends from Georgia into Central and West Texas, he said.

"We didn't have rainfall, and last year we had an early freeze and a late freeze," Eicher said. "There's not going to be many pecans to carry over to the (1991) holidays."

Extreme West Texas weather sometimes make the pecan business riskier than Eicher would like.

"Mother Nature brought us a hail storm once. In 15 minutes, I saw $7,500 worth of pecans hit the ground," he said.

The only other pecan processing plant in the county is Pal's Pecans of Gardendale.

Tom Fulton, 25, operates the plant for his aunt and uncle, Pal and Virginia Dozier of Balmorhea.

"It's a pretty good market for pecans. Especially at Thanksgiving and Christmas," Fulton said. "But last year was not a good year for pecans after a hot summer with very little water."

Pal's began on a small scale, with just one pecan cracker, but grew into a full-scale plant when more people came looking to shell their pecans, he said. The business' prices mirror those at the Eichers' plant — about $4 a pound.

"We have customers from New York to Alaska that we send pecans to," Fulton said.

Fulton sometimes puts in 12-hour days running Pal's plant, but like the Eichers, he'll take the easygoing pace of working and living in Gardendale over Odessa or Midland.

Dean of Wall Street analysts leaves The Big Apple

By Stefan Fatsis

NEW YORK (AP) — In a cramped office across from the landmark Trinity Church, Perrin Long fills one of his five pipes with a pinch of Hickory brand tobacco from a stained yellow pouch.

Through a cloud of smoke, the dean of Wall Street analysts recalls the days when brothels in lower Manhattan took reservations, retired cops hand-delivered securities and relationships were built on a handshake, good will and who you knew.

The 1980s changed that. Wall Street isn't a men's club anymore. And it will change in one more way when the outspoken Long leaves the fold for a quieter job outside the financial industry's hub.

Long, 63, was the first analyst to monitor the performance of Wall Street's brokerage houses. Fifteen years after he wrote a report on a whim about Merrill Lynch & Co., he remains the most widely quoted and among the most influential analysts in the business.

"He's an interesting Wall Street gadfly, always tweaking the industry in what he thought was the appropriate way," said Jeffrey Lane, vice chairman of Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co.,

Cherubic, avuncular and a little eccentric, Long bears little resemblance to the no-nonense, numbers-crunching business school graduates who populate the business today.

"The old Wall Street was more gentlemanly. Principles counted for more, relationships counted for more. The new Wall Street goes from one deal to the next," Long said in his 8-by-12 office stacked with old prospectuses and 10 years' worth of Barron's newspapers.

Long's old-school thinking and homespun vocabulary — "You bet! Anytime, boy!" he cries at the end of phone conversations, often after telling a racy joke — make him a throwback to that bygone era.

He returns every phone call he gets in the order he gets them — 40 to 50 from reporters every day. He visits about 75 brokerage firms around the country each year, is cozy with their executives and even owns some of their stocks — a practice banned at most firms today as a conflict of interest.

"I put my money where my mouth was," Long said. "It would be in my interest to always be positive. I'm not. I've written negative research reports about Merrill and others."

Long has been married to his second wife, Margro, for 17 years and has two children from a previous marriage, but he's a one-man operation on Wall Street. He started Perrin Long Inc. in 1977 after getting laid off by two firms during a period of industry cutbacks.

Since then, he has worked out of Lipper Analytical Securities Corp., which has provided an office, telephone and word processor, and printed his reports. Whenever Long is quoted in the press, Lipper's name is attached.

But on April 15, Long started a new job as stock-research director at First of Michigan Corp. in Detroit, where he will manage a small staff analyzing second-tier Michigan companies. Asked why he's leaving Wall Street, Long replied: "Why not? We all become stale if we stay in one place too long."

Long said he wants to help train rookie analysts, much in the way he has helped explain issues to reporters. "My mother used to say you've got to make time for younger people," he said.

The son of a Baltimore doctor whose birth certificate identified him as "Baby Long," Long was an ambulance corps driver in Italy and the Far East during World War II before graduating from the University of Michigan with a degree in geography.

He was stationed in Germany during the Korean War, then took his first job in the securities industry as a $25-a-week clerk for the Boston firm H.C. Wainwright & Co., where he stayed until 1970.

Long was then hired as an institutional stock salesman for E.F. Hutton & Co. in charge of Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire. "There weren't many institutions up there, but what the hell, I traveled a lot," he said.

He moved to New York for Hutton in 1973 but was fired two years later during a wave of cutbacks. He took a job at Faulkner, Dawkins & Sullivan and was axed again when it was bought out. Finally, Long started his own operation.

On a Sunday in 1976, after typing up that first report on Merrill, Long was told by his boss that he couldn't write about a competing firm. Long persuaded him otherwise, and his observations about the securities industry were an instant success.

Few Wall Street companies were publicly owned at the time. But as stock prices and trading volume began rising in the post-recession late-1970s, interest in securities firms soared. The industry exploded with the bull market of the 1980s; Long said brokerage stocks rose 265 percent from August 1982 to July 1983.

While everyone listens to Long, he's isn't necessarily loved. His relationship with industry leader Merrill Lynch has been icy for years. Merrill spokesman Fred Yager wished Long well and praised his contributions, but said top executives wouldn't be willing to talk about him.

3M awarded $107 million in tape patent case

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Johnson & Johnson says it will appeal a federal arbiter's $107 million ruling that it willfully infringed on 3M Co.'s patents for a fiberglass medical casting tape.

Former federal Magistrate Janice Symchych ruled Tuesday that Johnson & Johnson copied 3M's Scotchcast Plus in order to produce a nearly identical fiberglass tape that unfairly competed with 3M's.

But Jeffrey Leebaw, a Johnson & Johnson spokesman, maintained that the New Brunswick, N.J.-based company's synthetic casting products had been on the market before the 3M patents were issued.

"We strongly disagree with the decision," Leebaw said. "There never was any intent to willfully infringe any patents and we will vigorously appeal the decision."

3M spokesman Mark Fenner said the Maplewood-based company is pleased with Symchych's order, which also enjoins Johnson & Johnson from marketing the involved products.

Symchych set damages at $53,636,348, but she said the willful infringement warranted doubling the amount.

The five-month trial, which centered around a tape that quickly immobilizes broken bones, included claims of industrial espionage. Philip Stegora, a former 3M technician, was convicted in federal court of trying to sell 3M's slippery resin secret in 1986.

Symchych found Johnson & Johnson used 3M's trade secret to create an indistinguishable product. She said Johnson & Johnson was able to market its product earlier than it otherwise could have by using samples of Scotchcast Plus that Stegora had sent before the product was released by 3M.

"3M's research and development scientists created and steadily improved upon a whole new generation of fracture immobilization products," she ruled.

Japan official wants country to import rice

DALLAS (AP) — Japan should break the impasse at the world trade talks by agreeing to import rice, a Japanese lawmaker said.

Kabun Muto, a Japanese congressman and former trade minister, said Tuesday he disagrees with Japanese Prime Minister Kaifu's strategy of waiting out the impasse in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, or GATT, talks in Brussels.

"My opinion is the Japanese should be the one to take the initiative," said Muto, a member of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party.

If Japan agrees to import five percent of the 13 million tons of rice it consumes each year, the European Community should cut its food export subsidies and the United States should review some of its import restrictions, Muto told a group of Dallas area business leaders.

Japanese law bans rice imports on the premise that Japan must be self-sufficient in its staple food. Japan's powerful and heavily subsidized farm lobby says it cannot compete with cheaper rice imports.

James Hershey of the Houston-based U.S. Rice Council said Muto's remarks were "very significant" because, until recently, his party was staunchly against rice imports.

"This is very encouraging to see the issue can be discussed rationally with Japanese politicians," Hershey said.

Muto said few other Japanese leaders would express the same opinion.

"It is rare to find a person who would roundly talk things like I do," Muto said. "This is still politics. But eventually you have to resolve this problem."

members. He vows to fight the trustees' rejection of his candidacy in court and at the union's July convention in Orlando, Fla.

A federal court had appointed trustees to rid the union of organized crime influence and conduct democratic elections as part of a 1989 settlement of a government racketeering lawsuit against the labor group.

Friends and relatives said Hoffa never has contemplated a future other than with the Teamsters.

"You have to understand that living with James (R.) Hoffa meant living with the union," said his sister, Barbara Crancer, an administrative law judge in St. Louis. Crancer recently won a federal court order directing the government to prepare an index of FBI files on Hoffa's disappearance.

"Our usual Sunday was to go for a drive with the family in the car. And invariably we would end up with my dad stopping by a picket line," added Hoffa, who bears very little resemblance to his often-boisterous father in appearance and mannerisms.

"This was back in the late '40s or early '50s," Hoffa said. "And he would stop and there would be a picket line going on and often times a fire barrel going. The family would get out and talk with the fellows who were on strike and visit with them. That was a regular occurrence."

Ron Rocha, a truck driver who presides over Teamsters Local 70 in Oakland, Calif., remembered meeting the Teamsters president and his son.

While Jimmy Hoffa presided over the union and over Detroit Local 299 in the 1960s, son James Hoffa worked as a driver and loader in the local while attending school, Rocha recalled.

The younger Hoffa earned a bachelor's degree in economics from Michigan State University in 1963 and a law degree from the University of Michigan law school in 1966.

It was during that time that the elder Hoffa was on the losing end of a longstanding feud with U.S. Attorney General Robert Kennedy.

Hoffa went to prison in 1967 for jury tampering and mail fraud. The younger Hoffa helped his father continue at the Teamsters helm by carrying correspondence between union headquarters and the Lewisburg, Pa., federal prison in which Hoffa was incarcerated.

During the second year of his prison term, Hoffa turned over leadership of the union to Frank Fitzsimmons. Hoffa was freed in 1971 after his sentence was commuted by President Nixon.

The younger Hoffa has traveled to union meetings across the country seeking support in his bid for Teamsters president. If elected, he said he promises to step up union organizing and become active in local activities. He also proposes putting an age limit on the international executive board to bring in new leaders.

Backers have ordered thousands of "Friends of Hoffa" Teamsters hats and jackets.

Fred Gegare, president of Local 75 in Green Bay, Wis., said his retired members reminisce fondly about when Jimmy Hoffa filled the 500-seat Bay Theater twice in one day on a visit to the city.

Gegare said he supports Hoffa's son because "he's an intelligent, well-advised labor law attorney."

Mike Bain, president of 4,000-member Local 614 in Bloomfield Hills, said he's rounding up support because Hoffa's father was president of Local 299 when Bain joined it as a teen-ager.

Critics argue that a household name doesn't promise presidential material.

Ken Paff, national organizer for the dissident Detroit-based Teamsters for a Democratic Union, said the race really is between Ron Carey, the reform candidate his group favors, and R. V. Durham, the choice of outgoing Teamsters President William McCarthy.

Paff said Hoffa's place when members talk about the December elections is "zero. The guy's not eligible."

Stephen Brill, author of the 1978 book, "The Teamsters," said Carey rouses the membership more effectively.

"I'd be very surprised after all these years if what the Teamsters do is turn back the clock by electing someone with no discernible qualifications except that his last name is Hoffa," Brill said.

Hoffa says neither he nor his wife, Virginia, and sons David, 21, and Geoffrey, 19, are spooked about the mystery surrounding Jimmy Hoffa, who was abducted outside a suburban Detroit restaurant in 1975.

The elder Hoffa was believed killed because of a threat to reveal ties between the Teamsters and organized crime.

Survey says economy in recession

Associated Press

The nation's purchasing managers reported Wednesday that their monthly survey showed that the economy remained in a recession in April, although with a slight improvement in new orders, production and deliveries.

The National Association of Purchasing Management said its index of economic activity rose to 42.1 percent in April from 40 percent in March. It was the third consecutive month in which the indicator rose from the previous month.

But economists said the improvement was virtually insignificant because the economy remained sluggish. A reading below 50 percent indicates that the manufacturing economy is declining, while a reading above 50 indicates expansion.

The purchasing managers' report is considered an important economic indicator because it is based on a survey of managers from a wide range of industrial companies.

It is the first important indicator each month of how the economy performed in the previous month.

"Although the manufacturing sector and the overall economy are still declining, the rate of decline lessened for the third consecutive month," said Robert J. Bretz, director of corporate purchasing at Pitney Bowes Inc. and chairman of the purchasing managers' business survey committee.

same cost for gasoline tanks and pumps at a service station. The high pressure compressors which compress natural gas to approximately 3,000 psi will allow customers to fill their CNG tanks in about three minutes, or the same length of time it takes to fill a gasoline tank.

To facilitate conversion of gasoline vehicles to dual fuel CNG vehicles, Lone Star will build a central conversion facility where the public can bring their car to be converted to CNG at a cost of $2,000 to $2,400.

Owners of CNG vehicles will then be able to purchase compressed natural gas at the Fina facility for about 70 cents per gallon. "This is a significant savings over gasoline and we think it will serve as an incentive to get many vehicle owners to convert," said Hagar, who noted that reformulated gasoline would also play a role as an alternative fuel.

He noted that the arrangement with Lone Star was advantageous to both parties because it would allow Fina to deliver its own natural gas production from South Texas, East Texas and Louisiana to refueling stations through the Lone Star pipeline system.

"There are a lot of alternate fuel possibilities out there, but CNG is here now and ready to go." Hagar said the high cost of conversion and the lack of a refueling infrastructure were the two prime factors now holding back CNG as an alternate fuel.

raising taxes. It's still pretty tough out there."

The economists said the key to economic recovery is job creation.

"The more jobs you create, the more discretionary spending there is," Golisch said.

Nancy Sidhu, vice president and economist for Security Pacific National Bank, expects employment to increase gradually after housing and other sectors improve. But she said unemployment is likely to rise this summer before starting to decline in the last quarter of the year.

Consumers also had more negative view on current business conditions in April than in March. While 11.5 percent of those surveyed described business conditions as "good," nearly 36 percent of them labeled them "bad."

About 25 percent of the respondents expect business conditions to improve over the next six months, but less than 10 percent fear conditions will worsen. These readings were similar to those in March following the war's end.

Other results of the survey showed that more people in April than in March planned to buy a car in the next few months. But fewer people reported that they planned to buy a home or a major appliance in April.

PBPA: Oil appreciation

(From 1G)

Since its start in 1986, the week has expanded to include the golf tournament, luncheons with prominent speakers from across the country, and the Blowout.

Spannaus noted that "I don't think the general economics of the oil and gas industry have changed that much (since 1986). Prices are still very unstable. And we had hoped, although we weren't in favor of any major conflict, that a conflict would reeducate the public that oil is still extremely important to the security of this country. The Persian Gulf war, unfortunately, hasn't done much good in that respect. We're going to have to fall back on the only thing that's ever gotten the public's attention, and that's a shortage of gasoline.

"We continue to have a surplus of crude on the world market; it's not that we don't have oil available, this country does not have the total ability to produce oil or gasoline stocks from available supplies. U.S. refinery capacity is extremely limited; even at 100 percent, we are not able to produce all we need; that's why we have to import petroleum products.

"The oil business is still depressed; we have even more disincentives from the government than we did in 1985-196, that are hindering our ability to recovery. The attitude of the public remains that oil and gas people are trying to become J.R. Ewings, rich-overnight types, and that we're totally unfair in our pricing. Another thing that hurts (the industry) is that the unwritten policy of the federal government is cheap energy, regardless of its source. Until we can change that attitude in both the administration, Congress and the public, the oil and gas industry will have a difficult time recovering from its depressed state."

More black students find future in entrepreneurship

N.Y. Times News Service

Charnada Cardell and Devon Briggs have always believed that financial independence lies in business ownership.

With that in mind, the Clark Atlanta University juniors formed Positive Vibrations two years ago and turned it into a successful business that makes and sells Afrocentric products.

In the last six months, the company has done between $35,000 and $40,000 in retail and wholesale business. Its main retail site is a pushcart at an Atlanta-area mall.

Ms. Cardell, 22, and Briggs, 25, are representative of an emerging breed of black college students seeking financial empowerment by getting a jump on the competition.

"I have never liked limitations," said Briggs. "Owning our own business has open-ended potential from being a one-spot vendor to an international business."

The number of college business owners nationwide is on the rise. As the recession forces corporations to downsize — reducing the number of jobs available for graduates — students and educators are recognizing entrepreneurship as a career option.

Another reason, according to Nancy Flake, director of Howard University's small business development center in Washington, is that students see examples of blacks becoming frustrated as they reach the "glass ceiling" in corporate America.

This trend is especially important to the development of black businesses.

"Having our young people look to business ownership as opposed to trying to be good employees is critical to the growth and development of the black community," said Thomas W. Dortch Jr., cofounder of the Georgia Association of Minority Entrepreneurs.

Black business ownership not only creates more job opportunities in those communities, but it "it taps a seriously neglected talent pool," he said.

Blacks typically lag behind other minorities in forming businesses because they aren't exposed to entrepreneurial activity by family members, said economist Thomas D. Boston, who coauthored a study on black businesses. They also suffer from lack of access to capital.

Ms. Flake noted, "More young people are hearing the buzz words — 'economic empowerment' — and it's really opening their minds as to how we are going to achieve that working for someone else."

She said she would to see successful black entrepreneurs lecture at black colleges and provide scholarships and internships. Also on her agenda is a possible link with other black universities with similar programs.

Programs that encourage entrepreneurship can boost black economic power, "I'm not saying to go out and immediately start a business, but those kinds of programs are valuable because they instill in students a perspective of entrepreneurship," Dr. Boston said.

Family encouragement was a plus for 21-year-old M. Kasim Reed, a Howard University senior from Atlanta. At 16, Reed formed The Reed Group, a venture capital company. One of his first ventures was a personalized jewelry business financed in part with a $500 loan from his mother.

"It has always been a family concept to be owners," said Reed, whose father, Junius, runs a management consulting business. "I realized that my generation's burden was to (further) break the economic barrier."

He projects that 1991 sales for The Reed Group will range between $50,000 and $75,000.

Predominately black institutions such as Clark Atlanta and Howard are nurturing young entrepreneurs like Reed. Both schools plan to or have already turned a spotlight on business ownership and have fostered businesses including jewelry-making, T-shirt sales, financial planning, food delivery, moving and storage, and real estate management.

"Entrepreneurship is an idea whose time seems to have come," said Edward Irons, dean of Clark Atlanta's graduate school of business. "This is an alternative. Many youngsters will go into corporate America and stay five years or longer, always with the view that at some point they can come out and be their own bosses."

Howard has taken a lead in emphasizing entrepreneurship and may create an institute on entrepreneurship. A small business development center is already open on campus.

Some students' enterprises are thriving.

Jeff Brice Jr., an MBA student at Clark Atlanta, runs a lucrative music video and film production business with two partners in North Hollywood, Calif. Last year, Brice Productions had revenues of $500,000, he said.

Brice, 29, had once considered a career in veterinary medicine, but decided to take another direction in which he could develop broadly marketable skills. The attraction of business ownership was strong.

"Business is like a war," he said. "I like planning strategy and implementing an agenda."

But like anyone starting a business, finding sources of capital and developing a sound business plan are paramount. Even before the crisis in the banking and savings and loan industries, lenders were wary about loans to young, inexperienced borrowers.

So some would-be entrepreneurs have become more resourceful, tapping into savings or borrowing from friends and family.

The younger years are usually considered the best time for one to test the entrepreneurial waters. Frank Hoy, who teaches entrepreneurship at Georgia State University, tells his students to start now, if possible.

"They should start before they graduate," he said. "When are they ever going to have less to lose? If they wait until they have a mortgage, children in braces or in college, things are a lot more risky."

Dr. Hoy said the success rate for college ventures is about the same as those begun by older entrepreneurs. Not all make money — or some just make enough to supplement other income — and many fail.

But at least, hopefully, some lessons have been learned.

Owning one's own business can instill self-confidence, solid money management skills, aggressiveness and a sense of stick-to-itiveness.

Even if a student decides to spend time in corporate America, that early experience is still beneficial.

"We're finding that larger companies like employees to have the entrepreneurship experience or courses," Dr. Hoy said. "They want someone who can be independent enough to introduce a new project or to run a division that is some distance away from headquarters."

NIE has been a wonderful learning tool for my fifth grade class. Learning the different aspects of the paper, such as cutlines, the five W's of a sentence, datelines, etc., has made reading the newspaper fun for them.

Using the newspaper for different areas of the curriculum has also made learning fun. The children have enjoyed such activities as, finding the main idea of stories, locating different verb tenses, and comparing prices.

We have thoroughly enjoyed using the newspapers and are grateful we had the opportunity. Thank you, Clarence and Kerry Scharbauer III, for sponsoring our newspapers.

'Nunsense' is about having fun

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

A small practical joke led to another which then grew into a successful off Broadway play for composer and lyricist Dan Goggin.

"A friend as a joke gave me a mannequin dressed as a Dominican nun," Goggin said. "I was working on a show and the show photographer and I decided it would be fun to make a greeting card. It was a joke, and the thing just took off like wildfire."

Composer Dan Goggin comes to Midland this week for Midland Community Theatre's opening night production of his musical "Nunsense."

Goggin enlisted the aid of a friend, actress Marilyn Farina, who worked as a dental assistant to pose for Mother Superior.

"She started making appearances in card stores as this Mother Superior. It was so funny, and she was so funny that we built a little cabaret act around her. The cabaret worked so well it led to the show itself."

And the show, awarded the 1986 Outer Critic's Circle awards for Best Musical, Best Book and Best Music, led Goggin to all parts of the United States and to foreign shores.

"We have over 300 productions running around the world," Goggin said. "It's been translated into 10 languages. We're now in our sixth year in New York, and we're working on a movie deal, now."

This month, he's also coming to Midland. He's not alone.

Nonsense comes to the Yucca Theatre stage, downtown, May 10 through June 8 when Midland Community Theatre produces "Nunsense," the story of five nuns who stage a variety show to raise money to bury their sisters who were accidentally poisoned by Sister Julia, who had tried a recipe for vichyssoise from the book "Cooking with the BVM (Blessed Virgin Mary)."

Storyteller spins Irish tales

Tunes from a Celtic harp complement performance

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Time was when the world was quieter and man walked a less hurried pace. Then it was on the Emerald Isle that the weaver of tales and the strummer of tunes was held in high regard as he spoke of fairies and kings, of things both foolish and wise.

It is still possible to journey into hushed yesterdays filled with little people and hear tunes strummed on the brass strings of a Celtic harp, long ago vanished into the pages of Irish history, when Patrick Ball brings his storytelling and his harp to Midland's Celebration of the Arts today for three performances.

"Irish stories tend to be a genre of their own," Ball said in a recent interview. "A lot of times if you look at fairy tale books, you'll find a motif which is duplicated in many different countries. You'll hear the same story told by Spaniards, Russians and a lot of times in China as well. But Ireland has a whole cosmology of strange supernatural creatures and though their might be some similarity in the plot, the fact that these certain fairy creatures are so unique in their character makes Irish folk lore distinctive."

Ball, who has a master's degree in Irish history, finds the most "intriguing" thing about Irish history hides in its origin.

"There is a place in a great distant past where history fades into mythology, and scholars are always fighting about whether some invasion of Ireland is mythical or whether it actually happened, whether these legendary people really existed. That, to me, is a fascinating aspect of Irish history."

He attributes the variety of fairy creatures in Ireland to the "Irish imagination."

Ball, himself a man who lives near the sea, came close to winding up in the wrong business.

"The most significant thing that happened to me was not getting into law school," Ball said. "All my relatives were lawyers and judges, and so needless to say I was supposed to be a lawyer, too. But, I wasn't very keen on the idea so I applied to the most difficult law schools, and happily I didn't succeed, so I had to find something else to do."

He had studied Irish history at the University of California at Davis. Since he also had an Irish background, he chose to pursue a master's in Irish history at Dominican College, California. When he graduated, he said, "Of course, I found myself unemployed. It's not something that most people find a great use for."

Ball passed over the choice of studying for a doctorate degree to take a year off and hitch-hike around the United States. His travels took him to North Carolina's Penland School, a craft school in the Blue Ridge Mountains run by a relative, where he worked for 18 months.

"I didn't learn very much in the way of crafts, but I spent a lot of time listening to the old storytellers in the mountains. When I finished working at the school, I traveled to Ireland and stayed there about 6 or 8 months. That's where I began to become interested in Irish folk tales."

When he ran out of money, he returned to the United States and began telling the stories he had heard in Ireland.

"It was the only job that I could find which I enjoyed, and as it turned out, it harmonized with Irish history."

Around a year later, Ball was telling his tales at a festival when he met someone who would expand his talents.

"I met a man (Jay Witcher) who had revived the making of old Celtic harps, and these are the harps that were played in Ireland about 1,000 years ago. People had abandoned the instrument in Ireland about 200 years ago, and this man was the first person to begin to make them again.

"I thought that if I could learn how to play one of these ancient harps, it would complement the telling of the old stories."

He was in just the right company to be able to walk away with a harp.

"I happened to be there with the girlfriend of my best friend, who was rich. I said, 'Wouldn't it be nice to have one of those.' So she bought one. That's how I got my first harp. I must admit I did pay her back. And he (his best friend) didn't mind at all." Ball paused before adding, "If she hadn't been there, I don't know if I would have bought one."

Not until he began learning how to play the harp did Ball become grateful for being "forced to play the piano" when he was between the ages of 8 and 10.

"I didn't like it at the time. It was probably the best thing that ever happened to me because I understood enough music to learn to play this harp."

A Celtic harp has fewer strings than a pedal harp, and it is strung with brass wire.

"You play it with your fingernails, and there are no pedals," Ball said. "I think it makes the fingernails themselves tougher. If you play too long and too vigorously, the fingernails get a little bit sore where they attach to the finger.

"These harps are strung very, very tightly, and as big as they are, they really aren't that loud. When I tour, of course, we use amplification, but it's still a sound and a music which came from a time which was quieter, and most people are accustomed to listening to music at much louder volumes than is necessary, so this harp takes a little bit of getting used to. It's powerful, but it's also very delicate sounding."

In the beginning, Ball's interest in playing the harp was limited to providing accompaniment music for the stories he told.

"I began to want to learn more melodies and compositions, and there are very, very few teachers of this instrument because there are very, very few players. One man gave me some lessons with the injunction don't play like me. I had to pretty much learn it by myself. It is an ancient instrument of Ireland, but the tradition of mastery of the instrument was lost when people stopped playing it."

Ball, who has five solo instrumental albums on the Fortuna Records label and one soundtrack album on the Windham Hill label, plays mostly music composed by

PARTY: A gala opening night party is planned Friday

is planning a gala opening night which includes cocktails, a buffet catered by Oceans Seafood and the opportunity to meet Goggin. Tickets are $75 per couple.

This is not a MCT membership show, but members may buy a certain number of discounted tickets. Tickets to the general public are priced at $12 and $15 and may be purchased through Theatre Midland's box office, 682-4111.

A Midland connection helped bring Goggin to the Midland production for opening night. Midlander J.C. Pareti Sr. is the father of Joey Pareti who handles the merchandising end of "Nunsense," which, of course, includes greeting cards.

A 1969 graduate of Midland High School, Pareti Jr. also has a sister, Mary Alice Aday, who lives in Midland and teaches at Trinity School and a nephew, Matthew Dennis, who is a volunteer at MCT.

Pareti Jr., who comes from a Neiman Marcus retail background, spent the past 14 years of his career life in cosmetics working as an educator and training director for such companies as Chanel, Erno Lazlo and Lancome. He first met Goggin seven years ago when Goggins had written an industrial show for Lazlo. At the time, "Nunsense" was not the hit it is today.

"I don't think he ever thought 'Nunsense' was going to go anywhere," Pareti said. "We became friends and stayed in touch. He's always said to me, 'I'd like you to be involved in the show some way,' and I've always said, 'I don't know how to tap dance. I don't sing. And I don't want to live in New York. So, what could I do?' "

Last year, Pareti faced "burnout" in his field.

"I became rather tired of being transferred around. I traveled some 40 odd weeks a year. I decided I wanted to do something different."

Pareti has discovered, he said, "Show biz is a lot like the cosmetics business — that's show biz, too, in a sense. Rather than promoting a company's line, I'm promoting a show."

He's pleased with the career change.

" 'Nunsense' is a happy show. It makes people smile. In today's world, we don't have enough of that. It brings a lot of joy to people, and it's real nice to be marketing a product that brings such a smile to people's faces."

He's also learning how to direct a play. Goggin and Pareti have spent much of April in California setting a new production, "A One Way Ticket to Broadway," starring Joanne Worley.

"It's a perfect opportunity for him to work on the show from scratch, see the whole mechanics of putting it together because he has always worked in the marketing end," Goggin said.

"I love it so far," Pareti said. "I think it's real exciting. It's very much like what I did as a trainer and educator for these companies. I, in essence, directed them. I didn't know it. It's almost a natural for me."

Goggin traces his theatrical background back to his childhood.

"I had been a singer, and I used to play the organ everyday at mass. I would sing at church everyday. I got more and more involved in music, and as I got in high school, I was very encouraged to keep up the music," Goggin said.

After attending the University of Michigan, Goggin went to New York and landed a role in the Broadway play "Luther" starring Albert Finney.

"I was real lucky when I went to New York," he said. "I had worked for about three months as a temporary typist. They were holding auditions for 'Luther,' and I went and auditioned, and I got the job. I must say the first job was easy. After that it got harder. I just happened to be in the right place at the right time."

Goggin put together a folk duo with another "Luther" cast member. The two toured for around five years.

"Toward the end of that touring I started writing. Actually, my whole life since I've been working, one thing has kind of lead to another. It's not like I sit down and said, 'Okay, I'm going to stop singing and start writing.' One step leads to another."

He discovered industrial shows meant "real good money.

"It doesn't make you famous, but it certainly pays the bills, and it's great experience."

Goggin said his philosophy of life can be summed up in a few words — "Life is short so let's have a good time." It was this philosophy which inspired his musical "Nunsense."

"Life should be a good time, and I think 'Nunsense' helps to bring that to people. You don't have to be Catholic to enjoy it. It really has nothing to do with religion. It's about people in funny situations creating a real fun time."

Creating that good time in Midland are Marilyn Bassinger, Reverand Mother of the Little Sisters of Hoboken; Martha Fentem, Sister Hubert; Renee Spicer, Sister Amnesia; Jo Richards, Sister Robert Anne; and Amy Stice, a newcomer to MCT's stage, is Sister Mary Leo. Don Bachmann is the director and musical direction is by Darryl Knapp. Choreographer for the production is Jan Collerd.

"My favorite review that I got was from the Cleveland Plain Dealer where the woman said that 'Nunsense' has absolutely no redeeming social value unless you believe (the late) Norman Cousins who says laughter can cure all ills. And then she ended, 'If that's the case, 'Nunsense' will make doctors obsolete.' "

Goggin counts himself lucky.

"The fascinating thing about working in the theater, to me, is what some people do as a hobby, we get paid for," he said. "It's hard, but it's fun. I feel extremely fortunate to be able to do something that is as enjoyable as this.

"Working with something like 'Nunsense' is doubly fun. The piece itself is funny. You make people laugh. It spreads through the whole company in people's attitudes. It's a nice way to work. I think the good spirit around the show makes it seem like not that much work."

HARP: Ireland's taste in music changed

(From 1H)

Turlough O'Carolan, a 17th and 18th century blind Irish harp player.

Ball, who also recorded the music for Cher's telling of the story "The Ugly duckling," feels there are several reasons why the Irish abandoned the wire-strung harp.

"The music that was played on the wire-strung harp was traditionally the ancient music of Ireland when Ireland was a Celtic place, and by that time Ireland had been colonized by the English so it was no longer a Celtic place. Their taste in music changed, and they wanted to play other types of music.

"Also, the harp players in Celtic Ireland were a very privileged bunch of people. Once they had achieved the status of a harper, they didn't have to do any work but play the harp so they had nothing to endanger their long fingernails. By the time the harp players in Ireland were changing their strings, they no longer had this privileged position and often had to work, and so their fingernails were in jeopardy. They began to play strings that didn't require fingernails."

Now considered one of the premier Celtic harp players in the world today, Ball travels the world with his 32-string, 4 and a half foot tall Maple wood Celtic harp, weighing 27 pounds not including its carrying case, which brings the weight up to 60 pounds.

'Anybody that looked at it, would recognize it as a harp, but the sound of it is very distinctive. It's very bright and clear and sounds like something out of the past."

In the past 11 years, Ball has made several trips to Ireland, including living there and in England with his wife, Susan, an oil painter and British subject. They now live in the United States. He said he initially became interested in Irish stories because of the way people told them.

"Irish stories are famous for rhythm, for word play. When I tell the stories, I try to tell them the way I heard them."

The problem Ball and others who want to preserve this custom face is the decline in storytellers, especially those who tell the old folk tales.

"You're always going to have somebody who will be happy to tell you a story, but they are not always the old folk tales.

"There is one youngish man who tells stories in the old way, and he believes that there are no storytellers left, and the tradition is completely broken. I tend to think that there are some storytellers left around, but the circumstances have changed so much that storytelling is all but gone from there.

"Everybody has a television or a radio, and people don't rely on each other for their entertainment as much as they used to. People used to go to each others' houses regularly to sing or dance or play instruments or tell stories, and now it seems like they lead more isolated lives. I mean they're still very, very social, but I think the sense of community and reliance on each other is a little bit less."

While mourning the passing of certain Irish traditions, Ball points out that Ireland was a "desperately" poor country where there still exists a lot of poverty.

"The people who were the best storytellers and the ones who listened were very frequently very, very poor and illiterate. So when we lament the passing of this tradition, from their standpoint, they may think they've exchanged it for better times."

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Club celebrates week of music

The Musicians Club of Midland, a member of the National Federation of Music Clubs, is celebrating National Music Week May 5-12. Theme for this year is "Music: Is It for Everyone?"

This year is the 68th Annual National Music Week, sponsored by the National federation of Music Clubs.

Mrs. Glenn L. Brown of Stanton is the National Federation of Music Clubs president.

National Music Week was first observed in 1924, with 425 cities and towns participating. In a letter from the White House, president George Bush wrote, "If a nation's wealth can be measured by its artistic treasures, then American is indeed wealthy. National Music Week calls our attention to the rich musical heritage of our Republic. The National Federation of Music Clubs upholds this tradition of celebrating American music each year through its programs and this special week of activities highlighting the musical arts."

"The Musicians Club in Midland has been participating in furthering the objectives of National Music Week by creating an understanding and appreciation of the value of music in the community," said a release from the local club.

Members of the Club Chorus recently sang in Opera in the Park, presented by Midland Opera Theater. Many perform in nursing homes throughout the year and support of the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale was showin this month through a contribution from The Musicians Club.

Pamela Bristol is the local club president. Chairman for the National Music Week is Lou Nelle George.

Book review set Monday

ODESSA — Pat Halberstadt is presenting a book review at the Presidential Museum, 622 N. Lee St., at 11 a.m. Monday.

A brunch will follow her review.

The topic of her review will be Randolph Hearst. Admission to the book review and brunch is $12.50. For reservations call 1-332-7123.

Student on music tour

Nancy Cunningham, the daughter of Midlanders Mike and Jackie Cunningham, is among the cast of Country Caravan on tour.

Cunningham

Country Caravan recently opened this year's season tour with two performances in Florida, and is set to tour Texas and New Mexico.

Produced annually by the Creative Arts Department at South Plains College, this country music celebration has entertained audiences for 15 summers. Some 45 students auditioned in October for a part in the show. Once the show is cast, the next step is to mold the talent into a professional level show.

Miss Cunningham, who is 21, sings in the traditional country style with a high energy and is the featured solo on Patty Loveless' "On Down the Line" and bluegrass favorite "Blue Moon of Kentucky."

Miss Cunningham has performed madrigals and classical chamber music. She won first runner-up at a Nacogdoches summer country music festival last year. This win encouraged her to study country music at South Plains College. She also put together a band for the July 4 celebration in Midland and performed several poplular country songs.

When she earns her degree this next year, Miss Cunningham plans to move to Nashville, Tenn., to pursue a career in country music.

ODESSA — The annual Globe Renaissance Fair closes today in the courtyard of the Globe Theatre, 2308 Shakespeare Road.

This family fair brings to the Permian Basin traditional Renaissance games, puppets, food and handicrafts. Fourteenth century costumed lords and ladies, knights and dames will host the fair which features jousting, feats of bravery and archery, food and drink booths and handmade arts and crafts.

Benefit dance planned

RANKIN — Dance under the stars to the music of Jody Nix and the Texas Cowboys Thursday at the Dub Day Arena and Rodeo Grounds.

Admission is $5. The dance begins at 8 p.m. and runs until midnight. In the evnet of rain, it will be held in the Rankin Park Building.

All proceeds go to benefit Trace Gipson, a 6-year-old leukemia patient facing a bone-marrow transplant.

Concert to close series

Barry Coggins closes out the Museum of the Southwest's House Concert Series Saturday.

Coggins

The Dallas-based singer and songwriter, who play guitar, will perform his own compositions in addition to those by other Texas songwriters.

Joseph and Theresa, Midland folk artists, will join Coggins on some songs.

The 8 p.m. concert will be held in the Thomas Gallery of the Turner Mansion. The museum will open at 8 p.m. so that the audience can enjoy the museum's exhibitions and have refreshments.

Tickets available at the Museum Shop are $7 for members and $9 for non-members prior to the concert. Tickets at the door are $1 higher. Tickets may be reserved in advance by calling 683-2882.

Coggins' latest album is "Swimming in the Sky," which was preceded by "One Man Singing" and "Lady of the Lake."

He has appeared in Midland at Cody Cattle Co., Eden and The Bar.

A graduate of the University of North Texas, Coggins is active in community service in Dallas giving time to Meals on Wheels and Arts for the People, an artistic recreational thearpy service for emotionally and mentally disturbed patients. He also is an avid fan of all the Dallas sports teams.

Coggins, who is the son of a retired Air Force colonel, attended kindergarten in Greece. He has three brothers, one of whom is a singer and guitarist, another is an artist and the third is a computer programmer.

Ugly Duckling planned

"The Ugly Duckling" is being presented at 1 p.m. May 19 at Midland Center, 105 N. Main St.

"Rabbit, Deer, Beaver, Ostrich, Duckling and the other charming forest animals come to life as a young boy, who has run away from home, is lost in the enchanted forest," said a release from DPSOA Ladies Auxiliary. "He is befriended by the mysterious, wise, old Woodsman who, through the story of 'The Ugly Duckling,' shows him that being beautiful inside is what makes you beautiful outside,"

Final concert slated

The Thouvenel String Quartet performs its final Chamber Music Series Concert of the season at 2:30 p.m. today in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium, Midland College.

SUNDAY, MAY 5, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Seize an opportunity to make extra money this summer and you could have a nice little nest egg tucked away by September. Although business relationships are likely to be sensitive in the fall, final results will be pleasing! A close associate comes through for you when the chips are down. Repay a financial favor. Family members will applaud your efforts to provide for their future. A romance that starts out slowly will suddenly accelerate.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: chef James Beard, comedian Michael Palin, actress Tina Yothers, movie star Tyrone Power.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Seven of ♠

It is important to have a structure for opening leads, and to abide by it. Most common is the lead of fourth best. By subtracting the fourth-best card from 11, the opening leader's partner can work out how many cards higher than the one led are in the remaining three hands. Once dummy becomes visible, the leader's partner can then determine the location of the high cards in the unseen hands by this formula. How important that can be is highlighted by this hand.

Sitting South was a recent Russian emigre, Votmai Tinkinov, who had soon impressed club members with his ability to make speedy, if misguided, decisions. Here, his rebid of one no trump with a weak doubleton and a ruffing value was decidedly inferior—we would have preferred a raise to two spades despite the poor trumps, which would have resulted in North declaring three no trump. With South playing the hand, dummy's king of clubs was exposed to attack at the opening gun.

West made a winning decision in choosing a club for the opening salvo. Declarer played low from dummy and East had no problem. Applying the Rule of 11 left four cards higher than the seven in the other three hands, and that defender could count three in hand and one in dummy. Unless the lead was top-of-nothing, declarer held no card higher than the seven. Therefore, East followed with the three, and a surprised West won the first trick. West continued with the queen of clubs, and the defenders took four club tricks and the king of spades for a one-trick set.

Without a fourth-best lead and the Rule, East would not know what to do at the first trick. Were East to play either the jack or the nine, the contract would be fulfilled. There is no entry to the West hand for another club lead, and declarer would lose no more than three club tricks and a spade.
