3 dead, 11 missing in storm

LIVINGSTON (AP) — Polk County officials resumed the search today for 11 people missing after a fierce weekend storm that drowned at least three people and scattered anglers at a fishing tournament on Lake Livingston.

"We have about four or five boats out today that started looking about 7:30 this morning," said Capt. Chuck Staton with the Polk County Sheriff's Department. "They're just looking. It's just a matter of time before the bodies float up, if there are any bodies."

Authorities were using boats and helicopters in the search. As many as 31 persons were unaccounted for following the Saturday afternoon storm, but only 11 were reported missing today, he said. Thousands of people had turned out for the bass fishing tournament and a sailing race on the lake, located north of Houston.

"We're not saying they've drowned," Staton said of the missing people. "We're trying to contact them at this time."

Efforts to contact family members of missing persons were fruitless over the weekend because of downed telephone lines, Staton said. The fierce winds and choppy waters on Lake Livingston swamped dozens of boats and sent people either swimming or running for cover.

The drowning victims were identified as Vera Mae Brisbon, 57, of Houston, and Thomas Wayne Baty, 38, of Apple Springs.

Mrs. Brisbon was sailing near Lake Livingston Dam with her husband, Norman, and James and Alvina Smith of Shepherd. The boat and the three passengers were still missing today, Staton said.

Baty drowned after trying to rescue his son, Staton said.

And on Lake Steinhagen 50 miles to the east, Austin Corbin, 50, of Beaumont drowned when his boat

Oil prices jump $3 a barrel

NEW YORK (AP) — A recent strong rally in oil futures prices picked up momentum in early trading today, pushing prices to levels more than $3 a barrel higher than they were less than three weeks ago.

Analysts said heavy demand for gasoline and short supplies of the light crude used to make it helped bolster the surge, along with technical factors and a generally bullish attitude in the market.

"The market is in a corrective rally, which remains intact," said John H. O'Connell, an analyst at Refco, Inc. Commodities. "I think (the collapse of) crude prices was overdue, when it got down to less than $10. Now it's settling out."

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for June delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the main U.S. grade of crude, sold for as much as $16.80 for a 42-gallon barrel before slipping back to $16.69 by noon EDT. That was up 53 cents from the closing price on Friday, when the June contract settled above $16 for the first time since the $16.01 close on Feb. 14.

Prices had been hovering mainly at levels between $11 and $14 per barrel between March and April, before picking up earlier this month.

The June contract, which closed at $13.34 on April 30, broke through $14 to $14.73 on May 2, and passed the $15 mark, at $15.21, on May 7. June contracts for refined products were also sharply higher in today's morning trading.

Unleaded gasoline stood at 55.50 cents a gallon, up from 54.38 cents Friday; leaded gasoline was 55.55 cents, up from Friday's 54.41-cent close; and heating oil also rose, to 45.30 cents from 44.54 cents Friday.

Yahoooooooo!

Police officer Sam Voss from Denton twirls his rope as he gets ready to lasso a calf during the ribbon-roping competition at the Texas Police Officers Association Rodeo Sunday afternoon at the Rodeo Bowl. Ribbon roping was one of 10 rodeo events that featured as many as 250 police officers from all over the state. The two-day show was Big Spring's first police association rodeo and it attracted several hundred spectators Saturday and Sunday. The proceeds from the rodeo will benefit the Rainbow Project and the Northside Community Center.

Aid on way for kids shocked in school hostage episode

COKEVILLE, Wyo. (AP) — Cokeville Elementary School principal Max Excell told churchgoers Sunday that the school would be closed this week and that psychologists and social workers would meet today to discuss how to help the 150 schoolchildren and adults who were held in a classroom where a homemade gasoline bomb exploded Friday.

The explosion started a fire that forced many to flee in panic. Seventy-nine people were hurt during the takeover. Excell said among those offering aid were psychologists who worked with survivors and relatives of some of the 21 people killed in the massacre at the McDonald's in San Ysidro, Calif. Also as part of the therapy, groups of children who were involved are being taken back to the classroom.

Authorities, meantime, continued to delve into the background and motives of David and Doris Young, who were demanding $300 million ransom when the bomb exploded accidentally.

The couple, who lived in this tiny southwestern Wyoming ranching community seven years ago, apparently selected Cokeville, a community of 550 people, to press their demands because it has a high percentage of Mormons and because it is isolated, officials said.

JaNene Nostaja, the school custodian whose 11-year-old daughter, Angie, also was held hostage, said today on the "CBS Morning News" that initially, both she and her daughter were nervous about returning to the school.

"At first we were both afraid Friday, but we talked about it, and we prayed about it, and we came back to the school yesterday as a family. I feel better, I feel comfortable," she said, adding, "Yes, I do believe that this is a safe little school and we are safe to come back here."

The couple figured that if the government wouldn't meet their demands, the Mormon church might have done so, said Excell.

While no information was forthcoming from autopsies performed on the couple, Excell said the bomb, which exploded when Mrs. Young apparently released the trigger accidentally, only partially detonated.

"There were seven blasting caps that didn't go off," said the principal, who acted as a mediator between authorities and the Youngs.

"They (the caps) were attached to powder that would have exploded like a grain elevator," said Excell, who spoke to the congregation at the Cokeville Mormon meeting house.

However, Lincoln County investigator Earl Carroll said it was not known how much more serious the explosion could have been.

South Africa raids guerrilla targets in three countries

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South African soldiers and warplanes struck hundreds of miles inside black-ruled Botswana, Zimbabwe and Zambia today to raid alleged African National Congress targets. At least three people were reported killed.

Army chief Lt. Gen. A.J. Liebenberg said the early morning attacks were completed successfully, but would not give details about casualties or damage. It was the most far-flung offensive by South Africa, which previously limited such raids to one country at a time.

The ANC, outlawed in South Africa, is the major black guerrilla group fighting apartheid, "the system of forced racial separation that empowers 5 million whites to rule 24 million voteless blacks."

In Zambia, two South African warplanes struck a refugee camp near the capital of Lusaka, said President Kenneth Kaunda who condemned the attacks as "cowardly, criminal and unforgivable acts of aggression."

He told a news conference a Zambian and a Namibian were killed and at least nine people were injured, but would not elaborate.

Lusaka is nearly 1,000 miles from the South African border.

Kaunda said last month he had information that South Africa planned military attacks on Zambia.

Liebenberg said the target in Lusaka was an ANC operations center and information office.

In Botswana, helicopter-borne South African soldiers stormed a housing complex outside the capital of Gaborone, setting off explosives and firing into the buildings, authorities said. One man, a soccer player in his 20s, was killed and three others, including a Botswana soldier, were injured. Gaborone is a few miles north of the South African border.

President Quett Masire said he was appalled that Pretoria had ordered the attack while being engaged in talks with his government.

The helicopters also dropped pamphlets over the city, saying "South African troops have carried out an attack against houses used by the ANC in your country." The pamphlets also said the attackers "regard the people of Botswana as our friends."

Last June, South African troops raided Gaborone and killed more than a dozen people.

In Zimbabwe, South African troops bombed and fired machine guns at the ANC offices in the capital of Harare and an ANC house in a suburb of Ashdown Park, government officials said.

"Cabinet ministers are at the scene and a statement from (the) government will be issued later," government spokesman Justin Nyoka told The Associated Press.

Hospital postpones press conference

A 9:15 press conference this morning to discuss the proposed acquisition of Malone-Hogan Hospital by National Healthcare, Inc. was postponed, said hospital administrative secretary Norma Gressett.

National Healthcare executive officers scheduled to attend the conference were temporarily grounded in Alabama because of stormy weather, said Malone-Hogan head administrator Wayne Brannon.

Storm

sank with him and three women aboard. The women were rescued, but Corbin's body wasn't found until Sunday afternoon, Tyler County game warden Bob Rawls said.

Witnesses told Jasper County Game Warden Raymond Kosub that a tornado hit the boat carrying Corbin and spun it in circles before it capsized.

Polk County Sheriff Ted Everitt said there was plenty of warning in the Lake Livingston area before the storm hit.

"They should have seen it (the storm) coming," said Polk County Sheriff Ted Everitt. "If they had just looked at the sky they would have had enough warning. I could see it coming for quite a while before it got here. When that sky gets black, you need to get off this lake."

Would-be rescuers leaped into the lake almost immediately after the storm hit, witnesses said.

"They went out in boats when the storm was still here to see if they could rescue or pull anyone in," Gloria Crale said. "It was absolutely astonishing to see how many people are heroes when they don't have to be."

About 10 power boats and two sailboats were recovered Sunday, and three people were rescued off an island, authorities said.

About 180 fishermen were in the bass tournament, and hundreds of other boaters were out on Lake Livingston, which is about 30 miles long and seven miles wide, authorities said.

Witnesses said winds as fierce as 90 mph whipped the lake's waters into waves up to 10 feet high.

In Galveston, at least 138 people were rescued off 65 vessels Saturday, said Lt. Mike Walter, operations officer for the U.S. Coast Guard group in Galveston. Of those rescued, 56 were plucked from the water, he said.

Petty Officer David Weitzel said the last three boats that were reported missing from Galveston Bay had returned with the last one coming in at 6:40 p.m. Sunday.

The severe weather that lashed Texas Saturday also tore off part of a motel roof and damaged several Confederate Air Force planes in Laredo, and uprooted trees and flattened barns in other areas, authorities said.

High winds also hit the business district of Killeen in Central Texas, lifting the roof off a cement mixing company and damaging fire department vehicles across the street, officials said.

Nuke missions warned

WASHINGTON — A space shuttle accident at Cape Canaveral could send radiation toward Disney World and cause 202 cancer deaths if an atomic-powered satellite is involved, according to a "most probable" scenario of such an incident.

Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., whose Energy and Commerce energy conservation subcommittee is investigating the risk posed by future shuttle missions carrying such satellites, said Sunday the government should not launch any nuclear missions until public health and safety can be assured.

Cocaine traffic to go up

WASHINGTON — The volume of cocaine smuggled into the United States could more than double this year while economics and the quantity of home-grown marijuana are expected to force shipments to drop by almost a third, a U.S. Customs Service official says.

The U.S. Customs Service estimates that 275,000 pounds of cocaine will be brought into the country in 1986, compared with 130,000 pounds in 1985, said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who released the government figures on Saturday.

Marijuana smuggling, meanwhile, is expected to drop to an estimated 22 million pounds, compared with 30.6 million pounds last year.

Medical help offered

COKEVILLE, Wyo. — Psychologists who helped traumatized survivors after the 1984 massacre near San Diego have offered to come to this isolated town to help its children deal with the horror of a hostage crisis that left two extortionists dead.

The Cokeville Elementary School principal told churchgoers Sunday that the school would be closed this week and that psychologists and social workers would meet today to discuss how to help the 150 schoolchildren and adults who were held in a classroom when a homemade gasoline bomb exploded Friday.

The explosion started a fire that forced many to flee in panic. Seventy-nine people were hurt during the takeover.

181 hurt in derailment

CHESAPEAKE, Va. — Cars on a train powered by a vintage steam engine suddenly rolled over after it derailed in the Great Dismal Swamp Wildlife refuge, injuring 181 of the 1,000 people aboard, passengers said.

A Boy Scout leader who was on the 24-car Norfolk & Western train said it seemed as if "everything was coming at us" after it derailed Sunday afternoon.

Five people were critically injured and two others were in serious but stable condition. Most of the others were released after treatment.

Pre-dawn raids

Air strikes remind resident of civil war

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — South African soldiers attacked a house and office of the African National Congress guerrilla group today in an early morning assault that sounded like "rolls of thunder" and reminded one resident of Zimbabwe's civil war.

There was no immediate information on how the attacking force had reached Harare, which is located about 300 miles north of Zimbabwe's border with South Africa.

South Africa said its army units struck in neighboring Botswana and warplanes attacked an ANC site in Zambia, as well.

It was the first time South African forces raided the Zimbabwe capital since the white-ruled British colony of Rhodesia became independent as black-governed Zimbabwe in April 1980.

Prime Minister Robert Mugabe of Zimbabwe supports the ANC and its armed effort to end domination of South Africa by the white minority.

The South African raiders struck an ANC office in the heart of Harare and a house used by the guerrilla group in the suburb of Ashdown Park.

An ANC official who spoke on condition he not be identified denied reports that any members had been taken prisoner by the attackers. He said the ANC had been tipped off about the attack, that no one was killed or injured.

Residents of Ashdown Park said they were awakened by the sound of "bombs going off and machine gun fire for about 10 minutes."

"It was like rolls of thunder," said a resident who spoke on condition he not be identified. "It was just like the war again."

About 40,000 black nationalist guerrillas fought a bloody seven-year war for Zimbabwe's independence, sometimes attacking targets inside the capital.

Government spokesman Justin Nyoka told The Associated Press, "Cabinet ministers are at the scene and a statement from government will be issued later."

The strike against a two-story building on Angwa Street in the heart of Harare's business and shopping center evidently was aimed at the ANC's main headquarters on the top floor.

Windows were smashed, rubble was strewn on the street below and high explosives appeared to have been used against the brick walls. Police cordoned off both the office building and the house in Ashdown Park and kept reporters away.

The ANC official said members of the organization who lived at the Ashdown Park house were moved after the warning that South Africa was planning an attack.

The former ANC representative to Zimbabwe, Joe Gqabi, was killed by unknown gunmen in August 1981 at the Ashdown house. Zimbabwe blamed that killing on South Africa.

Soviets reject damages

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union rejected West Germany's call for reparations for the nuclear accident in the Ukraine, and a Soviet official indicated for the first time that fallout from the disaster had spread from the Black Sea to the Baltic.

On Sunday, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda published letters from readers offering shelter, money and free labor to aid victims of the April 26 accident at the Chernobyl atomic power plant.

A U.S. doctor brought to the Soviet Union to treat radiation cases has said 13 people died after the explosion and fire in the plant's No. 4 reactor, and official Soviet media have reported that 92,000 people were evacuated from a "danger zone" within 18 miles of the power station.

China returns plane

HONG KONG (AP) — China today agreed to return to Taiwan a cargo plane and two crewmen who were flown to China by a pilot who defected, a Chinese official said. He said the transfer would take place in Hong Kong.

Zhang Ruipu, head of the Chinese delegation that conducted the first face-to-face talks with Taiwan, told a news conference the two delegations would meet Tuesday to work out details of the turnover of the Boeing 747.

He said the plane, flown to the southern Chinese city of Canton by pilot Wang Hsi-chueh, 56, on May 3, will be flown to Hong Kong by a crew from China's state-run airline, the Civil Aviation Administration of China.

Rebels down plane

KHARTOUM, Sudan — Rebels shot down a military plane near the southern town of Rumbek, killing a district governor and seven other people, the Sudan News Agency reported.

The news agency said the plane was hit Sunday by a SAM-7 missile fired by the Sudan Peoples' Liberation Army as the passengers were viewing efforts to evacuate residents of the town, which was recaptured from rebels earlier this month.

The agency said the victims included Makour Deshgai, governor of the Lakes district that includes Rumbek, a town located 580 miles south of Khartoum.

Aquino sees no threat

MANILA, Philippines — President Corazon Aquino today said she sees no immediate threat from ousted ruler Ferdinand E. Marcos, and that she would rather concentrate on restoring the crippled economy than worry about him.

In an interview with The Associated Press four days before her first trip into the provinces since taking office on Feb. 25, Mrs. Aquino also said the military's concern for her safety has prevented her from mingling with the people who put her in power.

Europe takes steps to forestall bombing at sea

LONDON (AP) — Police in Britain and six other countries today scrutinized passengers and searched cars, buses and trucks before allowing them onto ships crossing the North Sea or English Channel in an effort to forestall a possible terrorist bombing at sea.

Security was increased after the Paris-based International Police Organization, or Interpol, warned it had information that a Middle East group with ties to Libya planned to put a car loaded with explosives on a vessel and blow it up at sea in retaliation for last month's American bombing of Libya.

"There is no specific threat to a specific port, but what we do have is a heightened awareness of the possibility of vessels as potential targets," said Paul Condon, assistant chief constable of Kent, who was in charge of the British operation.

He called the operation a "sensible precaution against the background of international terrorism."

Police said they had tightened security at 27 ports in Britain, Belgium, France, the Netherlands, Denmark, Norway and Sweden, and on the ferries, cargo ships and hovercraft that cross the North Sea and English Channel 350 times a day.

At the Kent port of Dover, used by 17 million passengers a year, police said that the alert could last all summer.

Police at Dover's Eastern Docks inspected every vehicle and swept under them with mirrors before they were driven on or off the ferries. Backpackers were asked if strangers had given them parcels to take on board.

"It is a bit nerve-wracking," said a spokeswoman for Townsend Thoresen Car Ferries Ltd. at Dover.

"The police are everywhere but it is better for us, knowing that they are here. Everything that comes and goes is checked, but it has caused no holdups at all," she said.

A Times of London reporter at Dover said: "We found no delays or any public unhappiness at the measures."

The British Defense Ministry confirmed that explosives experts were on standby.

Condon said 200 police officers with guns, dogs and explosive detectors, as well as a unit that specializes in fighting political subversion had been sent to the British ports to board ferries to Calais, Boulogne-Sur-Mer, Ostend, Hook of Holland, Esbjerg, Oslo, Goteborg and other ports.

Assad says Syria stopped efforts to win freedom for U.S. hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — Syrian President Hafez Assad says his country halted its efforts to win the release of American and French nationals being held hostage in Lebanon following the U.S. attack on Libya and because of U.S. charges that Syria was involved with terrorists.

He said that in the wake of the April 15 bombing raid on Libya and other U.S. political acts, the small groups holding the hostages broke off contacts that were aimed at winning their release.

"No one can do anything when the U.S. administration is carrying the hammer of war," Assad said in an interview published Sunday in The Washington Post. "It is very difficult to handle the question of the hostages in isolation from the U.S. political stands."

Assad took strong exception to statements by U.S. officials who said Syria appears to have supported terrorism.

Speaking of the renegade Abu Nidal Palestinian group, he said, "Abu Nidal is not in Syria. ... He does not operate anything in Syria. There is an office doing cultural and political work among the Palestinians, but those who are in Syria have nothing to do with terrorist acts."

He said no terrorist actions would be allowed from Syrian soil. He further said that "the CIA has a hand in every terrorist organization in the world."

He also said the U.S. bombing of Libya "produced much hatred" against the United States in Arab and Third World countries.

President Reagan, pressed by reporters, said this month that he would consider ordering air strikes against Syria if the country was supporting terrorists. But Assad said he would not be intimidated by criticism of his government.

"I don't think that I made any statement threatening the United States, while American officials and President Reagan himself daily throw verbal bombs at us," he said. "In my assessment, American officials are these days talking too much and more than is useful."

On other subjects, Assad said the tensions between his country and Israel appear to be lessening despite recent reports those tensions were growing. He also said Syria doesn't plan to get more deeply involved in Lebanon, where his government has an estimated 30,000 to 40,000 troops.

Israeli leaders agreed with that assessment Sunday, but renewed charges that Syria is behind recent terrorist attacks in Europe and the Middle East.

"I believe the escalation was rather in the domain of rhetoric, than in the domain of military preparedness and we have tried our very best to de-escalate the situation," Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres said.

"We have declared very clearly that Israel does not intend to attack Syria, and that we do not believe that Syria is ready or able to do it right away," he added.

Peres, appearing on the CBS-TV program "Face The Nation," also discounted a recent buildup of new weaponry by Israel and Syria along their border.

"On the Golan Heights, where we have partial agreements, both Syria and ourselves are keeping those agreements completely and without any complaints," Peres said.

Dominican election tally suspended

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Military officers took to the airwaves to urge calm after the governing party's candidate claimed he won the presidential election despite nearly complete returns showing him in second place.

Jacobo Majluta's claim of victory, made at a news conference Sunday night, came a few hours after the Central Elections Board suspended without explanation the tallying of results from Friday's election.

In a move throwing the entire political process into question, Majluta asked for a recount and demanded that two members of the three-man board step down.

In its last total made public Sunday, the elections board gave Joaquín Balaguer, 78, of the center-right Social Christian Reform Party, a lead of 35,450 votes over Majluta, 51, of the center-left Dominican Revolutionary Party. With 92 percent of the voting districts reporting, Balaguer had 799,968 votes, or 40.04 percent, to Majluta's 764,500 votes, or 38.26 percent, the board said.

Juan Bosch, 76, of the leftist Dominican Liberation Party, had 351,749 votes, or 17.61 percent. The rest of the votes went to candidates of three minor parties.

The vote count for president, vice president, 30 senate and 120 deputy seats in congress, and 98 mayor and 612 city council seats was to resume this morning.

The incumbent, Salvador Jorge Blanco, was not seeking re-election to a four-year term.

At his news conference, Majluta claimed his own computer tallies showed him with a 3,000-vote lead over Balaguer, with approximately 90 percent of the voting districts recorded.

Also, he said more than 100,000 potentially valid votes were rejected or put on hold, and that thousands of Dominicans were denied their right to vote.

Congress looks ready to reform

Representatives of the special interests who have ganged up against President Reagan's No. 1 domestic goal, tax reform, have funny looks on their faces. It looks as if it's going to happen.

After being portrayed as being in disarray, the Senate Finance Committee voted a few days ago 20-0 in favor of a tax reform bill crafted by its chairman, Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore. It's a promising blend of an average tax cut of 6.2 percent to every taxpayer and only two brackets, instead of as many as 15 now in the code. The lower rates would be financed by closing off $50 billion in tax loopholes so dear to the hearts of special interests.

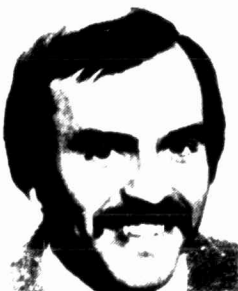

The White House has expressed general approval of the landmark measure, as has Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan. Even though it still must be debated on the Senate floor and the outcome reconciled with the considerable differences in the version approved last year by the Democratic-controlled House, most of the elected movers and shakers in Washington are enthusiastic about the chances of overhauling the federal tax code.

Besides drastically lowering tax rates, the committee bill would remove 6 million poor people from the tax rolls entirely. Still to be determined, however, is the impact on the overall economy of financing such reforms by eliminating deductions for the Individual Retirement Account and for the capital gains tax break. The IRA is considered vital for encouraging savings and the lower tax on capital gains is seen as an important incentive for investments.

And homebuilding leaders claim that the proposal to scale back real estate tax shelters would lead to heavy unemployment, fewer housing starts, and sharply reduced value of rental properties.

Since the plan is designed to be "revenue neutral," the big challenge facing Congress now is to fashion a tax reform plan that is as fair all around as possible. It won't be easy, but it looks doable.

Steve Chapman

Tax reform offers equity to many

Back when the supply-side movement for lower tax rates was getting started, it was hard to believe it would ever amount to much. By Washington standards, it was too radical, growing not out of pressing political needs but abstract and somewhat avant-garde economic theory. In the halls of government, the movement was consigned to ridicule or oblivion.

Today, however, the supply-siders' victory is almost complete. The evidence is contained in the Senate Finance Committee's tax reform bill.

Five years ago, it was an achievement to get the maximum tax rate on individual income reduced from 70 percent to 50. This bill, constructed by a senator who used to say he liked the tax code just as it was, slashes the latter rate by almost half, to a startling 27 percent. With just two brackets, the lower one subject to a 15 percent rate, it stops just short of the ultimate supply-side scheme, a flat-rate tax.

This bill reflects the ascendance of the once-ridiculed notion that a robust economy depends on a tax code that preserves the incentive for people to work and invest. In practice, that means low marginal rates. Besides lowering personal rates, it cuts the top corporate rate from 46 percent to 33.

To keep total revenue from falling, the lower rates have to be made up by measures to broaden the tax base. In the Finance Committee bill, as in the previous incarnations of tax reform, that translates into fewer tax breaks for individuals and corporations, and a higher overall burden for business. Fair enough. What's not so fair is that the changes in deductions go into effect six months before the rates are cut — an underhanded tax increase.

As an effort to make the tax code simpler and fairer, the bill has plenty of flaws. It preserves the tax-free status of employee fringe benefits like health and life insurance, keeps the deduction for most state and local taxes and leaves an array of government benefits untaxed. On the corporate side, it imposes a 20 percent minimum tax to prevent businesses from taking full advantage of unwieldy tax breaks that the committee has carefully protected.

The bill also reverses the trend toward a consumption-based tax code. The major change is ending tax-deductible contributions to individual retirement accounts for anyone covered by a company pension plan. This might be excused on populist grounds except for the decision to keep the exclusion for 401(k) plans, which differ from IRAs mainly in that their funds may be withdrawn for purposes besides retirement and that they require company sponsorship. IRAs may be used most by the well-to-do, but at least they are available to everyone.

But the senators did muster the nerve to close or at least narrow a few deserving loopholes, by eliminating the deduction for state and local sales taxes, restricting personal interest deductions, scrapping the investment tax credit and limiting deductions for business meals and entertainment to 80 percent of their cost.

For the unjustified tax breaks that remain, the senators provided a partial remedy — the low top rate. A deduction that once reduced the taxpayer's liability by 50 cents on the dollar would now cut it by just 27 cents. This diminishes the incentive of taxpayers to use these deductions and the revenue loss when they are used. A low rate is the next best thing to repeal.

By approving such a drastic cut in the top tax rate, the committee covered a multitude of sins. The bill would do much to discourage wasteful tax dodges and to promote work and investment, thus expanding the economy's productive potential. The result will benefit not just supply-siders but everyone.

Society wrestles with morality of heroic efforts for preemies

By JACK ANDERSON and JOSEPH SPEAR

WASHINGTON — As quietly as a newborn's whimper, a crisis is growing over the issue of "million-dollar babies" — the name sometimes given to premature infants whose short, troubled lives are extended only by fearfully expensive high-technology equipment.

The celebrated cases of Baby Jane Doe, who was badly disabled but kept alive on orders of a court, and Baby Pae, who was given a baboon's heart but died anyway, barely scratched the surface of the complicated controversy.

Eventually, American society will have to come to grips with the ethical, medical and legal questions involved. A dispassionate examination of the issue will soon be available in a new book, A Time to Be Born, a Time to Die, by veteran investigative reporter Rhea Gustaitis and Stanford Medical Center chaplain Ernie W.D. Young. Our associate Les Whitten obtained an advance copy to review.

In some cases, the book reports, a baby is kept alive by heroic high-tech measures until the parents are psychologically ready — and the doctors and hospitals are medically and legally ready. Then the life support system is abruptly disconnected and the baby dies.

Yet in one case a baby almost certainly doomed to a life both brief and painful was kept alive for months, at a cost of $530,409 to the parents and insurers and incalculable mental anguish to the parents.

On rare occasions the gamble pays off, and an infant weighing as little as a pound at birth appears to be growing normally. But because the science of "neo-natology" is so new, no one can predict how many of the 200,000 babies a year placed in intensive care nurseries at a cost of $2 billion will grow into healthy adults.

The contesting parties in the tragic situation are numerous and bellicose: parents who consent to life-support measures without knowing what is involved and later beg the doctors to let their babies die; right-to-life advocates who insist that life be preserved at all costs; doctors who want to let suffering infants die — and others who want to keep them alive; judges, prosecutors and church leaders on different sides of the issue.

And the babies themselves, of course; some cannot be given conventional sedatives, which would kill them, so they are injected with a drug similar to curare that keeps them from ripping out the tubes and needles that keep them alive. Yet they continue to feel the pain caused by the insertions.

In the course of delineating the problem through a series of heart-searing case histories, Gustaitis and Young also point out some potential future developments in this high-tech field. For example:

- Human birth in artificial wombs with both sperm and egg taken from donors. Theories are already evolving for the use of cows and other mammals to provide wombs for human babies.

- Births in space so that generations can travel toward distant stars, with entire families growing up inside spaceships.

- Medical intervention in the earliest fetal stages to change molecular structures and ensure that defects are corrected before a child is born.

- Babies "made to order" in much the way a customer can now choose accessories for a new car.

A BIRD? A SNAIL? SUPER-FUND! Legislation to reauthorize Superfund and keep alive what many in Congress consider the most important environmental law of the decade, is creeping through committees at an agonizingly slow pace. The fund, made up of industry contributions, was designed to pay for the cleanup of hazardous wastes at various steaming, percolating dump sites around the country.

One debate concerns a company's obligation to provide complete information on potentially dangerous chemicals to the health professionals who must make the decisions on cleanups and cost apportionment — even if such information might give away trade secrets to competitors and cost the company millions.

The original House version of the clause covering proprietary information was written by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., who is cool to the reauthorization of a strong Superfund. It would give companies the right to certify their estimate of monetary damages that might arise from disclosure of trade secrets. Under pressure from other members, Dingell has agreed to drop that language. Critics felt that it might have a dampening effect on the health professionals, and keep them from doing their job properly.

DIPLOMATIC DIGEST: Crafty King Hassan of Morocco has hit on a novel lobbying idea for a Moslem ruler: He sends Moroccan Jews on regular visits to Washington to sing the praises of the royal regime to U.S. officials and Jewish leaders. While it's true that Moroccan Jews have traditionally been well treated, they are obviously extremely vulnerable. In other words, they could hardly refuse Hassan's offer of lobbying trips to Washington. Meanwhile, the Jewish community in Morocco is dwindling rapidly. They were 20,000 Jews in the country six years ago; now there are 15,000, mostly elderly. Younger Jews have emigrated to Israel.

NUCLEAR TERRORISM: European terrorists are known to be interested in stealing or blowing up U.S. nuclear weapons. Raids on terrorist hangouts have uncovered maps of U.S. nuclear depots in Western Europe, and Gen. William Dozier, who was kidnapped by Italy's Red Brigade, was grilled at length about the location of NATO nuclear arsenals.

Time to testify in football tiff

By an ANONYMOUS PHOTOGRAPHER

Boy, am I nervous. The United States Football League's antitrust suit against the National Football League has started in court, and I've been given a subpoena to testify about my knowledge of the entire affair.

According to the prosecution, the NFL forced me to cover some of their games, thus giving them free publicity about their league, without covering any USFL teams.

Of course, the flip-side to this argument comes from the defense council for the NFL, who claims that any photos I ran of any NFL teams were out-of-focus, thus putting their league in a bad light, and that I favored the USFL because I did not do them the same injustice.

So now I'm trying to think of the answers that I will give during the trial, as not to put me in a bad light.

I can see it all now. The attorney for the USFL gets to grill me first.

Q. Besides the chance to cover a professional football game, what other benefits did the NFL give you for your coverage of their league?

A. Well, they gave me a ham sandwich and a Coke during halftime, but every pro sports team does that.

Q. So you sold out your professional journalistic ethics for a ham sandwich, eh? No further questions.

Next, the NFL lawyers get their chance to rake me over the coals.

Q. I show you Exhibit R, a photo of one of our games last season that you printed. Tell us, in your expert opinion, is this picture focused properly?

A. It's kinda close to being in focus. But I wasn't feeling too well at the time. I think it was the ham sandwich.

Q. Then answer me this. Why didn't you ever cover any USFL games, taking awful pictures of them, giving them equal space and making them look as bad as you made us?

A. I dunno. I guess because I heard from other photographers that the USFL doesn't serve ham sandwiches.

Afterwards, Judge Wapner, who I hear is trying the case, throws both parties out of the court for being so totally stupid.

But I guess I shouldn't be too nervous for my court appearance. When I get to New York, I hear that I get a free lunch before I testify. I hope it's not ham sandwich.

In 1943, in an address to the U.S. Congress, British Prime Minister Winston Churchill pledged his country's full support in the war against Japan.

In 1964, the State Department disclosed that 40 hidden microphones had been found in the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

In 1987, the Soviet Union ratified a treaty with the United States and Britain banning nuclear weapons from outer space.

Ten years ago: The U.S. Senate created a permanent committee with broad powers to monitor the activities of U.S. intelligence-gathering agencies.

Texas credited with improving textbooks

DALLAS (AP) — In the past, critics have blamed the Texas influence on the textbook industry for "dumbing down" schoolbook writing, but many of those critics now say Texas now is at least partly responsible for a recent improvement in texts.

As the single largest purchaser of textbooks in the country, the state is critical for companies bidding for the right to sell books to the Texas Education Agency.

To make their book one of the five the state adopts in each subject, publishers will update their texts so the copyright is current for Texas, they will add extra features exclusively for the state and, most significant of all, they will write — and change — their books with an eye on what will fly in Texas, according to industry officials and observers.

"Publishers were just about willing to do anything we asked of them as a group," Don Rogers, chairman of the state's most recent textbook adoption committee, told The Dallas Morning News.

In Texas, a new book is bought for every student each year according to a rotating list of subjects. In 1985, for example, the state will buy about 300,000 U.S. history texts — about $6 million worth — and will not buy any more, except to replenish supplies, for six years.

An example of how textbook companies woo the state is the method Scott Foresman, a leading textbook publisher, handled a two-volume U.S. history text.

"Land of Promise," by Carolyn Berkin and Leonard Wood, took Scott Foresman, based in Glenview, Ill., four years and about $1.5 million to develop.

Before the first word was written, Scott Foresman conducted intensive market research in Texas and across the country to see what features were popular in the marketplace.

To get the book adopted in Texas in 1985, the company updated the first edition of "Land of Promise," published in 1963, created a special Texas teacher's edition to accompany it, then traveled extensively across the state to persuade Textbook Committee members and their advisers to adopt it.

The process apparently worked, because industry observers say "Land of Promise" will be the best-selling history book in Texas this year among the individual school districts.

Texas spells out, in more detail than other states, what it wants in a textbook. The TEA lists 32 specific criteria that textbooks must meet. In addition, texts must "present positive aspects of the United States and its heritage" and "shall not contain material which serves to undermine authority."

"The publishers follow those guidelines, and those clearly go to other states," said Mike Hudson, Texas chairman of People for the American Way, a self-styled anti-censorship group.

The TEA, for example, now requires that history books emphasize the influence of economics, so history texts around the country are beginning to reflect that philosophy.

Members of the adoption committee said that influence was evident.

"Texas names what goes into textbooks, I feel," said one committee member, who asked not to be identified. "It works nothing but to our advantage."

Several state school board members expressed concern about publishers' eagerness to please Texas.

Lawyer wants Mexican flag out of city council

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — City officials aren't taking too kindly to an ex-Marine who wants to get rid of the Mexican flag that hangs in this border city's council chambers.

"He might have good intentions, but when he comes up with these remarks, he's completely out of line," Mayor Emilio Hernandez says. "Before every meeting, I ask the audience to stand up and pledge allegiance to the flag. Not the Mexican flag, but our flag. He's been there and he knows."

That hasn't been enough to mollify Oliver Butler, a Marine-turned-attorney who is trying to enlist the federal government in his battle against the eagle-and-serpent banner.

The Mexican flag hangs alongside the U.S. flag, and when Butler first spotted it last month, he took his demand to remove it to the City Council, which refused to budge.

"I served in two wars and I've got sons who served in a war. I just think this country is America, and the only flag that ought to fly in any government office in America is the American flag," he said. "I make an issue of it because I feel that way."

Butler, 59, said he is not motivated by a desire for publicity, and no one involved in the spat has accused him of a cultural bias against Mexico. The issue, he says, is one of patriotism and propriety.

"My whole point is that we are not Mexicans, we are Americans," he said. "The Mexicans are people who live on the other side of the river."

3 wrecks in rural areas injure 2 over weekend

Three separate vehicle accidents outside Big Spring city limits resulted in two persons being treated for minor injuries at Malone-Hogan Hospital's emergency room. Another person was treated for minor injuries and released from Malone-Hogan Clinic.

Clinic nursing director Shirleen Brown said this morning that Robert Muzio Jr., 23, of 1608 Main was treated and released for minor injuries.

According to a Department of Public Safety accident report, Muzio was involved in a single car accident 6:30 a.m. Friday three miles west of Big Spring.

According to the accident report, Muzio fell asleep at the wheel of a car that veered off the road and struck a pole. The car rolled 1/2 time and came to rest on its roof.

Muzio was cited for traveling at an unsafe speed.

Elmer Arville Hestand, 36, of Anson was treated for cuts and bruises and released from Malone-Hogan Hospital's emergency room shortly after midnight Saturday, an emergency room spokeswoman said this morning.

He was cited by the Department of Public Safety for failure to drive in a single lane after his truck tractor semi-trailer slid sideways off FM 669 and overturned in a bar ditch. The accident occurred 22 miles north of Big Spring in Borden County at 8:30 p.m. Friday, according to a DPS accident report.

Other factors contributing to the accident were alcohol and faulty evasive action, according to the report.

A Big Spring woman was treated for minor injuries Friday night and released, an emergency room spokeswoman said this morning.

Shawn McCalister, 21, of 809 E. 14th received injuries while she was a passenger in a car driven by Paula Spears, 20, of 709 Lorilla. The car was traveling southbound on Highway 87, four miles south of Big Spring.

According to a DPS accident report, Spears was traveling behind a vehicle driven by Barbara Holdamph, 49, of Garden City Route Box 168-A. Holdamph slowed to turn at the Jeffrey Road intersection when she was struck in the rear by Spears.

Spears was cited for following too closely. The accident occurred at 9:14 p.m., according to the report.

Child thought cause of fire

A child is suspected of setting a mattress ablaze in the rental house owned by Dr. Loran Warren in the 1700 block of Lancaster Street at about 8 a.m., Fire Chief Carl Dorton said.

The fire was confined to a bedroom but the house sustained minor smoke damage throughout, he said. No one was injured. No damage estimate was available this morning and the names of the occupants were unavailable.

Dear Abby

Three magic words help women with car trouble

DEAR READERS: Three years ago I wrote a column telling women what to do if they have car trouble while they're alone at night. It read (in part): "Turn your emergency blinkers on, or lift the hood to let passers-by know you have car trouble, then sit in your car with the windows rolled up and wait for help."

Then a reader wrote in to say: "Abby, I wouldn't recommend getting out of the car even to lift the hood. I bought an inexpensive reflective banner with large red letters bearing the message 'Please Call Police.' It can be easily secured inside the windshield or the rear window of a car with double-faced tape so the driver doesn't even have to get out of the car. It is highly visible both day and night. This discourages would-be robbers or rapists from attacking because the police could already be on their way." (The 3-foot reusable plastic banner folds up to glove-compartment size.)

The cost is $4 each — postage and handling included. Make your tax-deductible check or money order payable to: WCIL, P.O. Box 66980, Los Angeles, Calif. 90066.

WCIL (Westside Center for Independent Living) is a non-profit organization whose primary purpose is to help disabled people live independently. Please allow four to six weeks for delivery.

DEAR ABBY: I need your help desperately. I have just lost my precious pet — a toy poodle. She was intelligent, sweet and very loving. Her name was Fe-Fe. I had her for nearly 13 years and I can't believe that she is gone. Abby, people just don't understand. She was like a child to me. No mother ever loved her baby more.

Someone told me that you had a helpful suggestion in your column about this very subject. What was it? I break down and cry when people laugh at me and say, "Snap out of it. After all, she was only a dog!" Please help me, Abby. I can't handle this alone.

JACKIE JONES,
LEESBURG, GA.

DEAR JACKIE: You shouldn't have to handle it alone. Ask your vet to recommend a counselor who specializes in "grief and loss therapy." If your vet doesn't know one, consult your local mental health association. There are therapists who specialize in helping people cope with the loss of a loved one, friend, relative or pet. (Yes, losing a pet can be as painful as losing a child.) Many people fall apart after losing their pets and worldly goods in a fire, flash flood or burglary. Get help at once, Jackie, and let me know how you're doing I care.

DEAR ABBY: My 15-year-old daughter wants to entertain her boyfriend in her bedroom. We have ample space in our home for entertaining guests. She claims that all her friends entertain their boyfriends in their bedrooms with the knowledge of their parents.

I feel it's improper and won't allow it. My daughter calls me "old-fashioned"! What do you think?

EDINA, MINN.

DEAR EDINA: Bedroom: a room furnished with a bed and intended primarily for sleeping (Webster's dictionary). Your daughter's boyfriend can sleep at his own home. When he visits your daughter, he should stay in the family room, kitchen or living room. If he needs a room with a bed in it, he should stay home.

Tell your daughter you don't care what her friends do; in your home, you set the rules.

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for pointing out the stupid statements some well-meaning people make concerning adopted children. One of the most stupid is to say — in front of the child — "And this is Alice, John and Jane's daughter. They adopted her, you know." Then all the information about the adoption comes flowing out like water from a fountain. Why can't they just say, "And this is Alice," and leave it at that?

But the worst by far is, "I'll bet you love her like she was your own child." How dare they? She is our own child.

HAD IT WITH DUMMIES

Dr. Donohue

Volleyballer has shoulder aches

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am avid volleyball player. For the past two years I have been experiencing sharp pain on the top of my shoulder joint when spiking the ball, where you have to use a forceful overhead motion. I am very concerned about this because volleyball is an important part of my life. I can't imagine quitting. I play at least two nights a week, play on a travel team, and sometimes have all-day tournaments. It's very competitive. Is there any permanent solution to this problem? — J.D.

I know this answer is late, but I hope you've been following my continuing discussion of joint problems in general, which should have been of some help.

As to pain with overhead arm motions, the problem often results from an impingement syndrome.

The tendons of the upper arm are caught in a vise-like grip between the shoulder bone and its ligaments. Eventually, such a problem will cause pain not only during play but at other times we well.

You are not the run-of-the-mill athlete. Your schedule is intense. You have to take the same approach a professional athlete must if he wants to preserve his career. That begins with resting the injured joint. Continued abuse of those tendons I spoke of can get you into a permanent problem.

During this rest, using an anti-inflammatory drug helps reduce pain and protect the joint. Heat applied regularly is necessary.

I've given you only one possible cause of such pain, and I can't stress too strongly the need to have the joint examined closely by a doctor. Any number of problems, such as calcium deposits, can be complicating yours. The shoulder is one of the more complicated joints in the body. It's a complex arrangement of bones, tendons, ligaments and bursas. A problem might be present in any of those.

If rest, heat and anti-inflammatory drugs do the job, and if your shoulder does become pain free, permitting use, then you must not rush back into the kind of intense activity of the past. I'm sure your coaches will have a series of good shoulder stretch exercises to help you ease the joint back into full use. And even though pain may be absent, you need careful warm-up exercise before play.

Icing the joint after play will help cut down inflammation. Regular efforts to eliminate inflammation will help you return to and maintain the use to which you put your shoulders.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Do you think the mania for jogging will cause a lot of people to have arthritis later in life? — Mrs. Z.D.

I've heard both sides of this story. I haven't made up my mind unequivocally yet.

It seems logical that if running makes a person's joints hurt, and if he continues to run over such pain, that he is probably setting himself up for permanent joint problems later in life. I'm not sure there are a significant number of folks doing that.

The reverse of this is that people who can run without such signals are not in danger of damaging their joints and developing problems. Most joggers are in that category. In between are the people who may have leg pain, but who rest when they do. I'm inclined to the idea that these people aren't hurting their joints.

Focus on the family

The makeup of a strong family

By NAOMI HUNT
County Extension Agent

The family is a fundamental structure of any society, performing essential roles of providing for the economic needs of children and others who cannot support themselves, of training children morally and socially for adult life, and of promoting a sense of belonging and importance for individuals.

The family refers not only to married adults with young children, but also to single parents, widowed persons, never married adults, extended families, and many other distinct forms. The family in Texas is diverse not only in form, but also in ethnic background and culture.

It is threatened by the forces of poverty, unemployment and crime. The family, like other human institutions, suffers from failings such as family violence, divorce, and incarceration of family members.

Families need support in dealing with exceptional members with disabilities, terminal illness, and mental and emotional disorders.

No magic formula exists for creating the "perfect family." But after years of studying families broken by divorce, drug and alcohol abuse, troubled children and family crises, researchers have begun to focus their attention on what makes a family successful.

It starts with family members who are close. They value their family bond, and want to spend time working and playing together.

Members of strong families respect individual differences. They don't expect each other to have the same interests or appearance. Individuals are encouraged in their separate pursuits knowing that the family stands behind them.

Strong families share a basic set of values that provides direction for day-to-day decisions. They are clear about their values, yet tolerant of individual differences and respect the values of others.

Most recent research studies indicate that families with strong values also tend to have a high degree of religious orientation. Parents in strong families take their leadership responsibilities seriously. Mothers and fathers share leadership and both actively teach, lead, guide and discipline, but do not attempt to be peers or friends with their children.

These families tend to face problems openly and realistically. They are flexible in seeking solutions to problems and willing to try something else when a first-try does not work. As a result, strong families are the most capable of adapting to crisis situations.

Strong families have bonds of love that reach out to less effective families, and contribute to many community activities. They help others.

Strong families laugh together. They create and nurture family jokes and patterns of play. They use laughter and teasing for transitions at difficult moments, but do not indulge in hostile or painful kidding.

Evidently, strong bonds of love, lots of caring and sharing, mixed with fun and laughter adds up to strong families.

Now is the time to spray pecans

By DON RICHARDSON
County Extension Agent

The Pecan Nut Casebearer is the number one pest of pecans in West Texas and often are responsible for the complete destruction of an entire crop of nuts.

The pest is a moth that lays its eggs in the late spring on young nutlets which in turn hatch into small white larvae that tunnel into the small nutlet destroying it. It can move from one nutlet to the next in feeding, often destroying the entire cluster.

Timeliness is of the utmost importance in control of this pest. Its activity depends upon daytime temperatures and extension entomologists have been monitoring this for the past several weeks. Based upon this study, the predicted optimum spray date has been determined to be May 24, but in contacting growers and other agents to the south of us, which have earlier peak dates, it appears the casebearer moth has been most active about 4-5 days early this year. If this holds true for Howard County, our best bet to control this pest is predicted for around May 21-22.

Reports from across the state indicate the casebearer may be building up to record levels so a good spray program is highly recommended.

Chemicals recommended for control of this pest include Zolone, Malathion and Thiodan. Mix one ounce of Zolone or Thiodan per five gallons of water for good control; 57 percent Malathion (liquid) may be mixed at 1 1/2 ounces per five gallons of water. Spray the tree thoroughly until run-off occurs. Be sure and include a half teaspoon of dishwashing detergent in the mixture for better application effectiveness. Sevin, once widely used to control casebearer, is not recommended now due to the problem of high aphid buildups after its use.

The application of NZN, a zinc product, applied at the same time in the same mixture with the above chemicals is recommended to control Pecan Rosette, a nutrient deficiency occurring wide-spread in West Texas pecan trees, particularly young trees. Use two teaspoons of NZN with each gallon of water.

Carefully examine the tips of 20 nutlet cluster per tree for greenish-white eggs (pecan nut casebearer). Spray nutlets clusters with the insecticide when egg hatch is occurring. Examine the clusters seven to 10 days after the spray; if eggs are present repeat the insecticide application.

John Pearce and Lydia Vigil prepare for the makeover

After the transformation, Lydia Vigil's hair was wild and glittery.

Lydia Vigil models the newly created "total look."

Cosmetology students create a 'total look'

Twenty-one students competed in the Howard College Cosmetology Department's "After 5 cocktail look," said Judi Smidt, director of Cosmetology.

"The competition allowed the students to use their creative imaginations; their idea of an 'After 5 total look,'" she said. The "total look" included everything from hairstyle and fashion to fingernails. Students could use any props that the model could carry in the door.

John Pearce, cosmetology student, transformed Lydia Vigil, 20, into a new wave seductive vamp in red and white. Pearce's idea of After 5 New Wave Trend placed fifth.

Bailey, a senior at Big Spring High School, is a member of All-Region Choir, Meistersingers and Rhapsody. She received a Division I rating, on a piano entry in a solo and ensemble contest, when she played in the Piano Guild and placed first in the Knox Music Competition.

Bailey performed numbers by Johann Sebastian Bach, Enrique Granados, Eunice Lea Kettering, Rimsky Korsakoff, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart and Domenico Scarlatti. She was assisted by Dana Anderson and Shelly Brasel, who sang Michael W. Smith's song "Friends."

After the recital, Bailey's parents honored her with a reception in the church parlor.

"How come wives always marry husbands?"

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, MAY 20, 1986

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until this evening, you will find it is difficult to work out any problems with others, so make sure you are precise in what you say and listen closely to what is expected of you.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You are being pressured by an outsider who wants you to get into a plan that you do not like. Don't give in.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Your tasks seem unending, but persevere and all works out fine just the same; by tonight they will be solved.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Wait until a better day for entertainment since there are delays connected with them right now. Tonight is fine for romance.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) It is important that you use tact at home and then the conditions will improve before the evening rolls around.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Don't be too anxious about a delay on some important missive since it might not be to your liking.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You may not get the aid you had expected with a new project during the daytime, but by evening the situation will change.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are not certain how to gain a goal, so think of some new way that is much better and get good results.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) It may not be easy to gain the information you need to solve a problem, so persevere and you get it by this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't try to seek favors from a bigwig during the daytime, but you have success in the evening. Be diplomatic.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You may not get the help you need from a higher-up, so be patient and do whatever you like in the evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You are anxious to get into new interests, but it is better to study them further first.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be exact in handling collections and payments so that no trouble ensues later. You know how to become more skillful this evening.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have to be taught to be more patient and to quietly study any situation well before taking any action, just to be on the safe side. One who will do well in whatever requires precision, so slant the education along such lines. Sports are favored here.

B-County netter captures state title

From staff and wire reports
AUSTIN — Crossroads Country athletes made their presence known at the University Interscholastic League meet in Austin this weekend, but it was Borden County tennis player Kelli Williams who fared the best of the lot.

Williams, a junior who was competing at state for the third year, won the girls Class A singles title. In a late night semi-final match Saturday, Williams defeated Kathy Hernandez of D'Hannis 6-2, 6-1. In the championship finals she met Stacy Bessire of O'Donnell, who defeated her in the regional finals. Williams got some revenge by winning 7-5, 6-2, capping off a successful tourney in which she didn't lose a match. In fact she lost only four points in the last five games.

"It was sweet revenge for Kelli," said her coach Bill May of the win over Bessire. "She really came out and turned on the juice." Williams adds the gold medal to the silver and bronze medals she won the previous two years.

In the track and field competition, the Garden City girls finished sixth in the Class A team standings with 28 points. Cayuya won the team title with 56 points.

The 800 meter relay foursome of Dianna Garcia, Michelle Peachack, Carol Hoelscher and Jacque Jost, placed fourth in a time of 1:48.80. The 1600 relay team of Cene Schaefer, Jost, Garcia and Peachack placed third in 4:06.70.

Also in Class A girls competition, Shanna Hale of Grady placed second in the 1600 in a career-best 5:15.60. She finished second to Woodson's Cindy Harper who ran a 5:13.20. Hale defeated Harper in the 3200 on Friday.

In girls Class AA action, Stanton sophomore sprinter Kody Newman finished fifth in the 100 with a 12.80.

In other action, Carlette Guidry won four events to lead Houston Sterling to the girls Class 5A team title.

Sterling piled up 104 points, easily beating runner-up Dallas Carter, which had 58.

The 3A team title went to Refugio with 66 points. Giddings was second with 36.

Hamlin won 2A with 46 points, two better than La Vernia.

Cayuga won the Class A team title with 56 points, eight better than runner-up Paradise.

An afternoon rain at Memorial Stadium caused a long delay in the meet. The final events ended after midnight.

Guidry won the 100-meter dash in 11.5 seconds (matching the 5A state meet record) and the 200 in 23.3. She set a state meet triple jump record of 41 feet, 113 inches, bettering the mark of 41-1/2 set by Meleidy Smith, also of Sterling, in 1983.

Her fourth win came in the long jump, where she leaped 20-4 3/4.

She also ran on Sterling's 400 relay team, which was second to Dallas South Oak Cliff. The winners' 45.4 was a state record.

Two squads from Houston Smiley held the previous record of 45 seconds, set in 1983 and 1985.

Guidry won three events at the state meet last year.

Cynthia Titus of Hamlin set two Class 2A records with a triple jump of 39-7 1/2 and a 23.2 in the 22.

Alison Callicot of D'Hanis was a double-winner, taking the Class A 100 in 12.1 and the 200 in 24.6.

Janice Dziuk of Poth set a Class 2A shot put record at 44-2 1/4.

In boys track action, Derrick Florence of Galveston Ball set a national high school record of 10.1 seconds in the 100-meter dash.

Galveston Ball won the AAAAA title with 62 points. Columbus won AAA with 52 points. Gruver won Cals A with 42 points and Alto won Class AA with 40 points.

Lubbock Estacado won the Class 4A team title Friday night with 40 points.

Flores's time in the 100 broke the 10.18 posted last year by Roy Martin of Dallas Roosevelt.

Florence also won the 200 in 20.5 and anchored Ball's winning team in the 400 relay.

Reuben Reina of San Antonio Jay broke his state meet record in the 3,200 run by clocking 8:58.6 in the 5A event. Reina, who has signed with the University of Arkansas, set the previous record of 9:00.1 here last year.

Plano East's Tim Gargiulo, who ran the 3,200 in 8:53.6 at a regional meet, missed Saturday's final because his team was confused about the schedule.

Alto's Steve Lofton was a triple-winner, taking the Class 2A 100 in 10.7, the 200 in 21.3 and anchoring the Yellow Jackets' winning 400 relay team. The Class 2A 3,200 record fell when Junior Alafa of Paducah covered the distance in 9:33.2, breaking the 9:45.4 mark set by Louis Bluett of Kerens in 1983.

Rockets pound Lakers

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Rockets Coach Bill Fitch knows that a wounded, frustrated and proud team facing elimination is a dangerous foe.

"I'm more frightened of them now than I was a few days ago," Fitch said Sunday after the Rockets crushed the defending champion Los Angeles Lakers 105-95 to take a 3-1 lead in their best-of-seven NBA Western Conference championship series.

A victory by the Rockets in Wednesday's fifth game in Los Angeles, would sidetrack the Lakers from the NBA title round for the first time in five years.

And, it would advance the Rockets to the world championship round for the first time since 1981 when they beat Los Angeles in the first round and eventually lost to Boston in six games.

The winner of the Los Angeles-Houston series will face Boston in the NBA championship series.

Akeem Olajuwon dominated the Lakers for the third straight game, scoring 35 points and leading the charge from the opening tip when he hit his first six shots of the game.

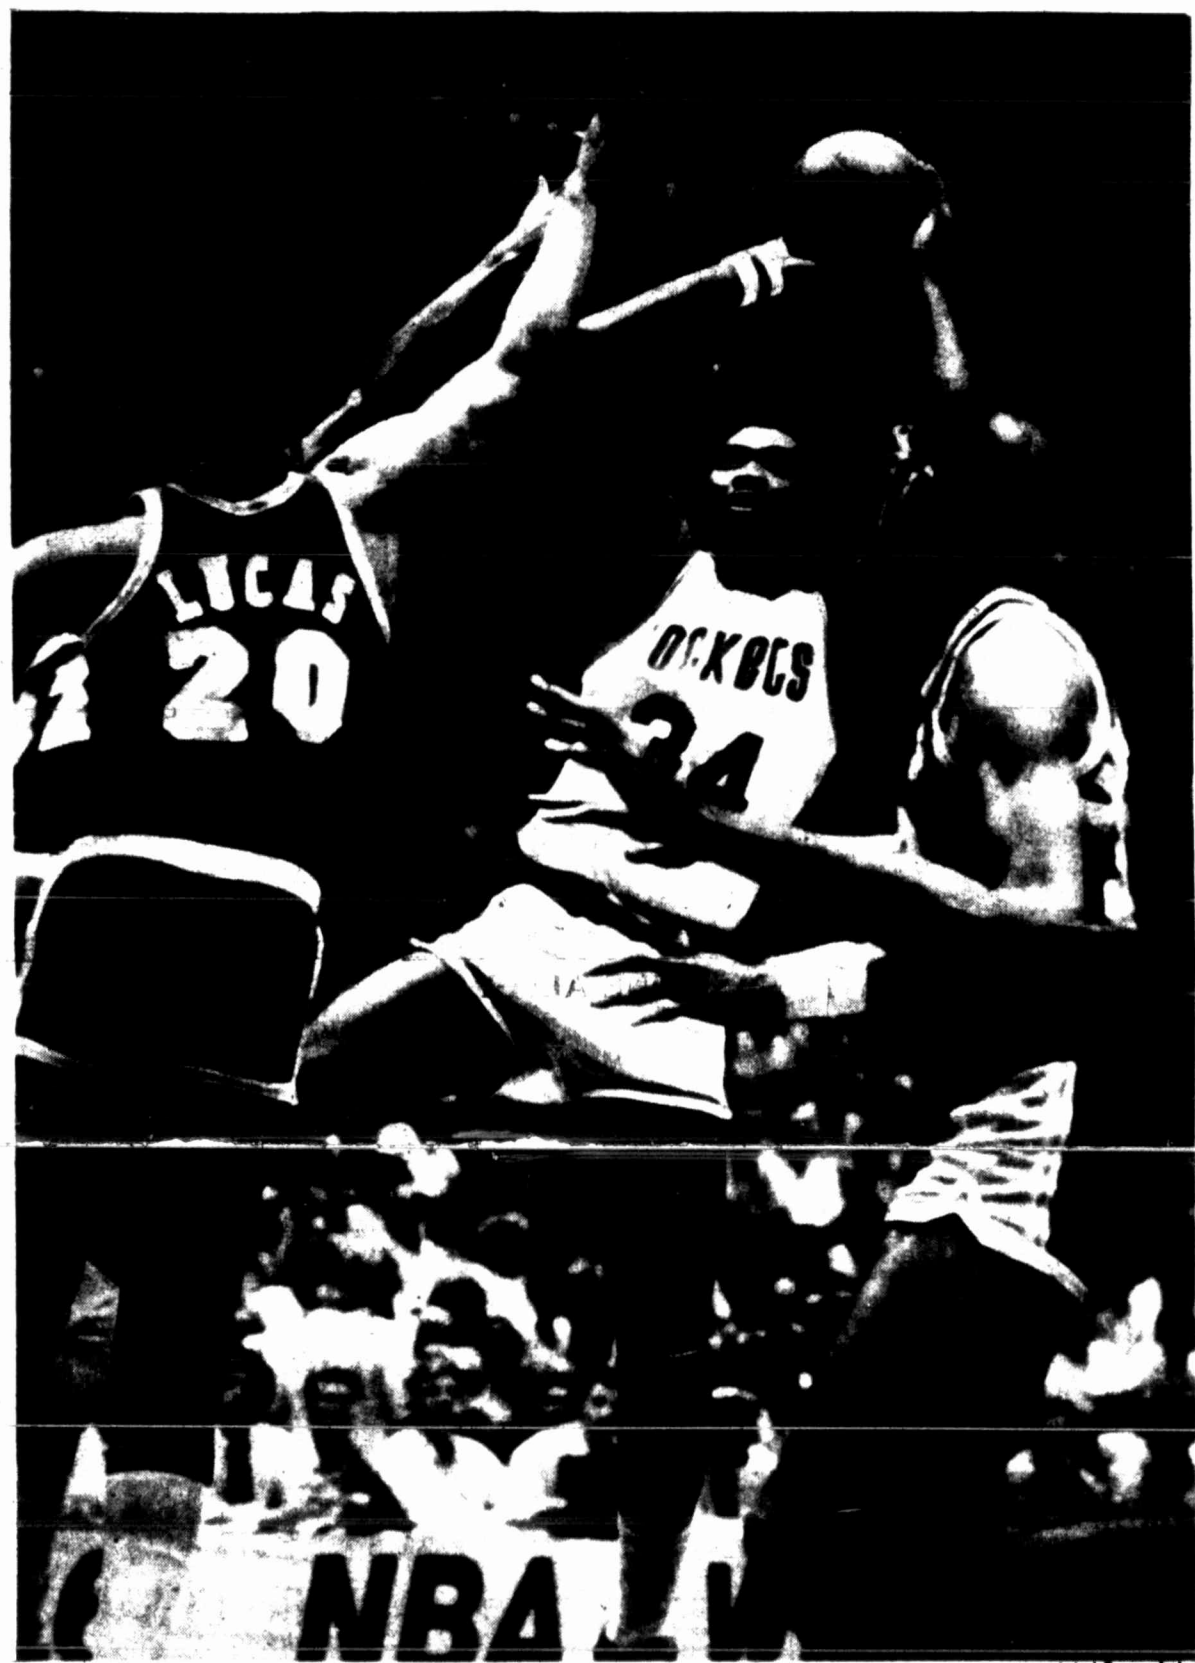

"This one was easier than the other night (Friday's 117-109 victory) but it was rough," Olajuwon said. "I can't count how many times I was on the floor. That must have been their game plan."

"That's usually my best game too if the refs call everything."

The Lakers had won 14 straight games in the Summit until April 6 when the Rockets broke the string and now have beaten the Lakers three in a row at home.

Laker forward James Worthy, who scored 26 points to lead the Lakers, thinks the Rockets' confidence has been building throughout the playoffs.

"Since the series started they've Rockets page 10

Celtics make sweep of hapless Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Larry Bird swished through his final three-point goal as easily as the Boston Celtics swept the Milwaukee Bucks out of the NBA playoffs.

Bird hit five of six three-pointers in Sunday's 111-98 victory that capped the Eastern Conference finals and sent Boston zooming to the NBA championship series for the third consecutive season to face either Houston or the Los Angeles Lakers.

But Bird's four fourth-quarter bombs — while playing guard — devastated the Bucks.

"Larry has got no conscience out there," said Boston guard Danny Ainge, who hit three of five three-point attempts and scored 25 points. "He's our leader and he does it in every way."

"I hope all the other Celtics realize what a privilege it is to play with Larry Bird," said Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson, a former Celtic.

Nelson said Boston, which the Bucks failed to beat all season, was out of this world.

"The Celtics were able to play at a different level than we were throughout the series," he said. "I'm not so sure that Boston isn't just on a different planet than us mere mortal teams. When I'm not rooting for the Bucks, I'm rooting for the Celtics."

The Bucks became the first team in NBA history to be swept out of seven-game playoff series in consecutive years. Last year, the Bucks were eliminated by Philadelphia in four consecutive games.

"It's a frustrating feeling," said Bucks' guard Sidney Moncrief, who played the series with an injured left heel. "You just have to put it out of your mind."

Added Moncrief: "They had too much power all-round, not just inside," where the Celtics' three big men, McHale, Robert Parish and Bill Walton dominated.

Moncrief led Milwaukee with 27 points, and Paul Pressey added 23.

Boston opened the fourth quarter with a 10-2 spurt to take an 89-84 edge with 9:04 left. The comeback was keyed by a four-point play with the Celtics trailing 84-79.

Ainge hit a three-point goal as Milwaukee's Charles Davis fouled Bird. Bird made the free throw to pull the Celtics within a point. Parish dunk gave the Celtics an 85-84 lead with 10:54 left.

Johnson fouled out with 4:42 left and Boston holding a 95-92 lead. The Celtics responded by using Parish, McHale and Walton up front, with Bird moving to guard.

"It kind of surprised me," said reserve forward-center Paul Mokeski of Milwaukee. "Obviously, it was effective."

"It would have worked to our advantage had we hit some outside shots," added Milwaukee forward Terry Cummings, who scored 15 points. "But the shots didn't fall in the fourth quarter."

Immediately after moving to guard, Bird hit two consecutive three-point goals to widen the Celtic lead to 101-92 with 3:28 remaining. Another three-pointer by Bird stretched the lead to 106-94 with 1:40 remaining.

The Celtics led 62-56 after a first half in which three technical fouls were called and one player, Milwaukee reserve guard Ricky Pierce, was ejected.

Pierce was thrown out at 10:17 of the second period when he forearmed Ainge in the head. Later in the second period, Nelson was assessed a technical for arguing an official's call.

In the first period, Milwaukee's Alton Lister and McHale were given technicals after pushing each other with 3:07 left.

The Bucks began the third period with a 13-6 streak to vault into a 71-68 lead with 5:51 remaining on a left-handed running hook by Cummings. But Ainge's seven third-quarter points kept the Celtics close as the Bucks led 82-79 entering the fourth quarter.

Indy starting lineup is very fast

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The fastest starting lineup in auto racing history was completed by a cool George Snider, possibly the best last-minute qualifier in Indianapolis 500 history, and Gary Bettenhausen, burdened by the memory of his father's death here 25 years ago and his own frustration the past four years.

The two veterans were the only qualifiers on Sunday, the last of four days of time trials for next Sunday's race. Headed by two-time winner Rick Mears' record speeds of 217.581 mph for one lap and 216.828 for four laps, the 33 qualifiers averaged 210.358.

The previous record was 208.138 set last year.

"Since I was a little boy, this has been my goal," Bettenhausen, 44, said of his attempts to win the world's most famous auto race. His father, Tony Bettenhausen, drove in 14 500s before he was killed in practice in 1961.

Gary Bettenhausen, who hadn't qualified since 1962, earned a spot in the lineup with a four-lap average of 209.756 mph. As the final qualifier, he bumped 52-year-old Dick Simon, who had qualified at 204.978.

With Simon out, four-time winner A.J. Foyt, 51, became the oldest driver in this year's race.

Snider, a longtime backup driver to Foyt, earned his 21st start with an average of 209.025 mph. He will start the race from the 33rd position.

"I have no formal agreement with A.J., but we do go back to 1965," said Snider, who year after year waits until Foyt is safely in the field before he takes over a backup car. Snider has never finished higher than eighth, but the only time he has missed a race since he came to the Speedway 21 years ago was in 1961, when Foyt sold a car already qualified by Snider to Tim Richmond.

"I'd like to be a full-time racer, but I can't road-race because of my arm," Snider said, referring to a 1975 injury. "Also, I think people don't ask me to drive because they assume I'm going to drive for A.J."

Besides Mears, who won the race in 1979 and 1984, and Foyt, whose victories were in 1961, 1964, 1967 and 1977, the other former winners in Sunday's race will be Johnny Rutherford, Al Unser, Mario Andretti, Tom Sneva and defending champion Danny Sullivan.

Mears and Penske Racing team-mate Sullivan will start on the front row inside of Michael Andretti, Mario Andretti's 23-year-old son and the youngest starter for the team this year.

Rain threatened to wash out Sunday's qualifications, which could have left Simon in the field. But the rain stopped just before noon, and about three hours later, the track was dry enough for qualification runs.

Snider, in one of Foyt's two backup cars, was first in the qualifying line and easily moved into the starting field. Steve Chassey, who drove in the 1983 race, was waved off the track by his crew after two laps.

Then came Gary Bettenhausen, who joined younger brother Tony Jr. in the lineup. That bumped Simon and left Geoff Brabham of Australia as the slowest qualifier at 207.082.

Tony Bettenhausen was the slowest qualifier last year at 204.824.

The only other drivers to start qualification attempts Sunday were rookie Rick Miskiewicz, who managed two laps at only about 203, and veteran Derek Daly of Ireland, who turned in one lap at over 206 before the rain resumed, ending the day's qualifications.

The only question remaining is where Mario Andretti will start the race.

He crashed his qualified Lola in practice last Tuesday, and it was sent back to England for repairs. If it is repaired, he will remain the No. 6 starter.

If it cannot be repaired, he would have to start 33rd in his backup car with every other driver moving up a spot.

Andretti's team expected to make an announcement today.

Simon, the only driver bumped this year, said the end was, in a way, a relief.

"Now we can totally concentrate on Raul's car," he said, referring to his protégé, 28-year-old Raul Boesel of Brazil. "We've been a little divided this month, so in a way this might be the Good Lord's way of saying 'Richard, you've got a chance to win it with one car.'"

Boesel, a second-year driver, qualified on the first weekend at 211.202.

Simon had a first-week qualifying run of 208.935 disallowed because of a technical violation. Sunday's attempt was his third and final chance to make the lineup.

"I checked the weather and I felt it would be best for us to go out when we did," he said. "There was a lot of gambling involved. We decided if the car felt good I would go, and it felt good on the warmup lap. Once I started, since it was my third try, there was nothing I could do."

The four rookie qualifiers were Randy Lanier, Phil Krueger, Roberto Moreno of Brazil and Jacques Villeneuve of Canada.

Villeneuve also qualified two years ago but was injured in a crash during practice and was declared medically unfit to drive in the race.

Pohl gets long-awaited PGA tourney victory

FORT WORTH (AP) — When the PGA sells the film rights, they'll call it "Eight Feet to Glory." It was Dan Pohl's finest hour in nine years on the Tour.

For Payne Stewart, it will be remembered as another Texas tragedy.

With the finesse of a cat burglar, Pohl rolled in a clutch 8-foot par putt on the final green and then dropped a similar birdie putt on the first hole of sudden death to beat Stewart and win the rain-shortened $600,000 Colonial National Invitation Tournament on Sunday.

The nationally televised tournament was Pohl's first victory in a mostly unspectacular career, but the $108,000 paycheck lifted him over the million dollar mark in earnings.

With eight players sharing the lead off and on during the Sunday wrap-up, Pohl trudged through the wind, cold and mud for a 2-under-par 68 and a 54-hole total of 205, 5 under regulation.

Stewart closed with a sparkling, bogey-free 66 and watched in agony as Pohl scrambled to a gallant par 4 on the 434-yard 18th hole to force the playoff.

The sudden death loss was Stewart's second in three years at the par 70 Colonial Country Club course and his third playoff loss in Texas, where he surrendered the Byron Nelson title in 1985, losing a 3-shot lead on the 72nd hole.

Upbeat despite his obvious disappointment, Stewart pointed out that he's finished in the top 10 in nine of the last 13 tournaments and predicted he will indeed win a Texas title before long.

After thunderstorms washed out Saturday's third round, the final 18 unfolded with Howard Twitty and David Edwards tied at 136 and nursing a one-shot lead over Pohl and Bob Tway.

Twitty and Edwards faded from contention on the first four holes Sunday while Pohl, Stewart and first-round leader Gene Sauers dipped 5-under-par to emerge the prime title contenders on the home stretch.

Bogeys at 16, 17 and 18 ruined Sauers' longshot bid while a spectacular charge by Tom Watson ended with a bogey at his 17th hole. Watson closed with a 6-under-par 64 for 207 and shared third place with Bernhard Langer (67) and Bill Rogers (69).

Cardinals drop another one

By The Associated Press
Will the St. Louis Cardinals again be able to recover from their mid-May malaise?

A year ago today, the Cardinals found themselves at their lowest point in the season, 7½ games behind in the National League East. They then went on to win the division, win the pennant and come within two outs of winning the World Series.

Today, the Cardinals are at their lowest point of the 1986 season. They are 10½ games behind New York and have lost five straight games after getting swept in a weekend series in Atlanta.

"We can't get a base hit when we need it," said Manager Whitey Herzog after the Braves beat St. Louis 5-2 Sunday. "Bob Horner hit two home runs and Dale Murphy's RBI single in the seventh inning broke a 2-2 tie and pinned the loss on John Tudor, 3-3."

Expos 8, Padres 3

Hubie Brooks continued his torrid hitting, connecting for a grand slam homer that keyed a seven-run explosion in the first inning and powered Montreal past San Diego.

Reds 7, Pirates 3

Tom Browning, a 20-game winner as a rookie last season, won his first game this year in five decisions as Cincinnati beat Pittsburgh.

Browning, 1-4, gave up six hits in six innings. It was his first victory since Sept. 28 when he became the first rookie to win 20 games in the major leagues in 31 years.

Mets 8, Dodgers 4

George Foster homered twice and drove in four runs, leading New York over Los Angeles.

Foster doubled his home run total this season, connecting for a three-run shot in the first inning off Jerry Reuss and adding a solo blast in the third inning. It marked the 21st time Foster has homered twice in the same game and gave him 23 career home runs at Dodger Stadium, putting him one ahead of Hank Aaron as the all-time leader among visiting players.

Giants 4, Phillies 1
San Francisco third baseman Chris Brown made a diving stop and started a bases-loaded double play in the sixth inning, and the Giants hung on to beat Philadelphia.

Cubs 5, Astros 2

Dave Lopes' two-run double capped a four-run second inning and reliever Guy Hoffman, pressed into service after an injury to starter Scott Sanderson, got the victory by pitching 5 1-3 innings in Houston.

Chicago pinned the loss on Bob Knepper, 7-2, who was trying to become the first eight-game winner in the major leagues.

Sanderson was hit in the knee by a pitch from Knepper with the bases loaded in the second, forcing home the Cubs' first run. Bob Dernier then squeezed home another run and Lopes followed with his double.

Hoffman, 1-1, gave up two runs on four hits for his first NL victory. Lopes also had a single, two walks and a stolen base.

Rangers give Red Sox a break

By The Associated Press
Boston's Steve Lyons and Marty Barrett might have been auditioning for the Keystone Kops with their Keystone Comedy act at second base.

And when the dust had cleared — first at second, then at third — both runners were waved home and the Red Sox had a strange 5-4 victory over the visiting Texas Rangers on Sunday.

AL

In a play that would be considered almost routine for such snake-bit teams of yesteryear as the Daffy Dodgers or the Madcap Mets, Lyons slid into second base from the third-base side of the bag. And who should he find chugging in from the first-base side but Boston teammate Barrett.

Barrett followed Lyons, who took off for third. Seconds later, both were sent home when the throw from Texas right fielder George Wright went through the legs of pitcher Greg Harris and into the dugout.

Lyons started the slapstick proceedings with a one-out single and took second on Harris' errant pickoff throw. Barrett then lofted a fly down the right-field line and Wright made a diving try for the ball.

Yankees 11, Mariners 3

Three New York designated hitters went 4-for-5, including pinch-hitter Gary Roenicke's two-run homer and an RBI single by Ron Hassey batting for Roenicke. Bobby Meacham and Willie Randolph, who had three hits apiece, drove in the tying and lead runs with fourth-inning hits while Don Mattingly extended his hitting streak to 14 games with a single and double in a six-run seventh inning. Roenicke's homer off reliever Lee Guetterman gave the host Yankees a 5-2 lead in the fifth.

Orioles 13, A's 4

Baltimore got most of its offense from one man, Eddie Murray, who drove in seven runs, four with his 14th career grand slam, as the Orioles won for the eighth time in nine games. Murray, with 12 RBIs in his last six games, connected off reliever Jose Rijo to cap a six-run outburst in the seventh inning.

Blue Jays 10, Indians 2

Damaso Garcia drove in four runs with a pair of singles and Ernie Whitt hit a two-run homer as Toronto matched its longest winning streak of the season at three games and extended visiting Cleveland's skid to five in a row and nine of 10.

White Sox 5, Royals 1

Carlton Fisk's three-run homer capped a four-run third inning to lead Floyd Bannister and the White Sox to their fifth consecutive victory. Chicago is 8-2 since Manager Tony LaRussa was given a vote of confidence.

Twins 5, Brewers 3

Kirby Puckett delivered a single and two-run double to back the Twins' pitching of Bert Blyleven as Minnesota snapped a seven-game losing streak. The triumph was Minnesota's first in nine games at Milwaukee County Stadium since Aug. 22, 1984.

Bulls Chairman Jerry Reinsdorf announced the firing early today in a statement, which also hinted the club already was negotiating with his successor.

A source close to the negotiations, who declined to be identified, said the Bulls expect to hire former Philadelphia 76ers star Doug Collins as Albeck's replacement later this week.

In the women's race, Barton County edged Eastern Oklahoma State, 93-81, with Ricks (Idaho) College third with 76 points.

played like they've got a light bulb over their heads," Worthy said. "I'm sure they saw the Dallas series and noticed that we struggled."

"I'm sure that gave them more incentive."

The Lakers haven't trailed 3-1 in any series over the past five playoff seasons.

"It's kind of hard to believe," Worthy said. "We were confident and I think everybody expected us to win. But the way this team (Houston) played late in the season and in the playoffs, you can understand their success."

Magic Johnson fueled a third quarter Laker surge but Houston took the lead at 74-72 with 2:22 left in the period and never trailed again.

"I'm still confident, when they beat us four, that's when there will be no more confidence, that's when I'll head for the beach," Johnson said.

Ralph Sampson scored 12 points for the Rockets but it took two free

"It will be many years before we can be compared to the Lakers," Sampson said. "We're just trying to be the best we can be. We're just thinking about one game and they've got to think farther ahead than that," Sampson said.
